The aggrieved party in a rescission action is entitled to complete relief, including restitution of all benefits conferred by him or her as a result of the transaction, and any consequential damages (Paragraphs 5, 9) [Civ. Code § 1692]. However, the aggrieved party's recovery may be reduced by any amount that the court deems necessary to justly compensate the other party or to adjust the equities between the parties [Civ. Code § 1692]. Thus, in the situation set out in this complaint, the court may elect to deduct from the money due from the contractor to the owner some or all of the reasonable expenditures of the contractor in preparing to perform the contract that cannot be recouped by the contractor. If the complaint does not allege that the contractor was in any way at fault for the inability to obtain the permit, it would not be equitable to force him or her to bear the entire amount of these losses.

If the owner has received anything of value under the contract from the contractor, he or she must promptly return it on rescinding the contract [Civ. Code § 1691(b)].

through _____,]	)	[Amount demanded _____
Defendant(s)	)	(exceeds or does not exceed) $10,000]
	)	[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

Plaintiff alleges:

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION

1. [Capacity and residence of defendant contractor. See § 104.210, Paragraph 2.]

3. [Contract allegation. See § 104.225, Paragraph 3.]

4. The contract specifically provided that in constructing the _____ [building or improvement] defendant would conform to all applicable building code requirements of the State of California and the City of _____ [name of city in which construction project is located].

5. During and as part of his/her/its performance of the contract, defendant negligently _____ [specify negligent act, e.g., installed sliding glass doors fitted with ordinary pane glass instead of safety glass], in violation of _____ [specify building code provision violated, e.g., Article A, Section 7 of the Building Code of City of _____ (name of city)].

6. Defendant knew or should have known that _____ [specify negligent act, e.g., the installation of sliding glass doors fitted with ordinary pane glass instead of safety glass] was a violation of the Building Code and created an unreasonable risk of serious bodily harm to others, including plaintiff.

7. On or about _____ [date], and as a proximate result of defendant's negligence, plaintiff sustained serious bodily injuries when _____ [describe injury and how it occurred, e.g., he/she accidentally walked into the glass door between the deck and the living room, causing the door to shatter].

8. As a proximate result of the negligence of defendant[s, and each of them], plaintiff was injured in his/her health, strength, and activity, and sustained shock and injury to his/her nervous system. These injuries have caused and will cause plaintiff great mental and physical pain and suffering, all to his/her general damage.

9. As a further proximate result of the negligence of defendant[s, and each of them], plaintiff incurred medical and related expenses [in the sum of $_____][, and will continue to incur medical expenses]. [The full amount of plaintiff's medical expenses is not known to plaintiff at this time, and plaintiff will seek leave to amend this complaint to state this amount when it is known.]

[10. At the time of his/her injuries, plaintiff was _____ (employed or employable) in his/her usual occupation as a _____ (specify occupation, e.g., nurse). As a further proximate result of the negligence of defendant[s, and each of them], and by reason of the injuries suffered by plaintiff, plaintiff was prevented from attending to his/her occupation from _____ (date) to _____ (date), and lost earnings in the amount of $_____. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and alleges that he/she will continue to be prevented from attending to his/her/any occupation for a period in the future, and will thereby lose future earnings. The amount of these future losses is unknown to plaintiff at this time, and plaintiff will seek leave to amend this complaint to state this amount when it is known.)]

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION
(Breach of Contract)

11. Plaintiff realleges and incorporates into this cause of action by reference Paragraphs 1-5 of Plaintiff's First Cause of Action set forth above.

12. The contract specifically stated that plaintiff would conform to all applicable building code requirements of the State of California and the City of _____ [name of city in which construction project is located].

13. Plaintiff's _____ [specify defendant contractor's acts or omissions constituting violation of building code and breach of contract, e.g., failure to install safety glass in the sliding glass doors], in violation of the Building Code, constituted a material breach of the contract.

14. On or about _____ [date or dates], plaintiff demanded in writing that defendant _____ [specify work to be refinished or replaced, e.g., replace the ordinary pane glass in each of the four sliding glass doors in plaintiff's home with safety glass meeting the requirements of the contract and of _____ [specify applicable building code provision, e.g., Article A, Section 7 of the Building Code of City of _____ (name of city)]. Defendant failed and refused and continues to fail and refuse to perform this work.

15. By reason of defendant's breach of the contract, plaintiff has been damaged in the sum of $_____, the amount reasonably expended to pay another contractor to correct defendant's work and make it conform to the contract and the plans and specifications and to the provisions of the Building Code.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

On the FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION:

1. For general damages according to proof;

2. For medical and related damages according to proof;

3. For lost earnings according to proof;

On the SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION:

4. For damages in the sum of $_____;

5. For interest at _____ percent per annum on the sum of $_____ from and after _____ [date];

On ALL CAUSES OF ACTION:

6. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

7. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by an owner against a contractor for negligence and breach of contract. It may be used when the contractor's breach of the contract also constitutes a breach of the contractor's duty of care in performing the construction work contracted for.

[3] Negligence Allegations

The complaint contains allegations of a duty to the plaintiff (Paragraph 6), breach of that duty (Paragraph 5), and injury and damages proximately caused by the breach (Paragraphs 7-10) [see Civ. Code §§ 1714(a), 3333; see also § 104.41[3]].

[4] Damages

In a superior court action that is not a limited civil case, brought to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a)(2)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint, see Ch. 177, Damages .

[5] Contract and Tort Action

A wrongful act committed in the course of a contractual relationship may give rise to both a breach of contract action and a tort action [Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 174-175, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 ; see § 104.41[6]].

A complaint stating both a tort and a contract cause of action should segregate the tort and contract allegations in distinct counts, and be legally sufficient to put the defendant on notice of the multiple theories of liability [Perry v. Robertson (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 333, 340, 247 Cal. Rptr. 74] . For a form of complaint stating a single cause of action for negligent breach of a contract, see § 104.228.

[6] Election of Remedies

Although an injured party may set forth inconsistent or duplicative damages in a complaint, he or she may not actually recover inconsistent or duplicative damages but must elect which items of recovery to accept [Perry v. Robertson (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 333, 340, 247 Cal. Rptr. 74] . This complaint does not allege inconsistent or duplicative damages or theories of recovery, because it seeks tort damages for plaintiff's injuries and lost wages (Paragraphs 8-10) and contract damages for the cost of remedying the contractor's negligent performance (Paragraph 15) [see Walker v. Signal Companies, Inc. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 982, 993, 149 Cal. Rptr. 119 ; Amerson v. Christman (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 811, 823, 68 Cal. Rptr. 378 ; Shell v. Schmidt (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 350, 360, 366 , cert. denied, 359 U.S. 959] . Instead of or in addition to the contract allegation seeking damages for the cost of remedying the negligent performance, plaintiff could add to the First Cause of Action an allegation of damages for the diminution in the value of the construction caused by the contractor's negligent performance [see Sabella v. Wisler (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 21, 29, 27 Cal. Rptr. 689, 377 P.2d 889 ; Stewart v. Cox (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 857, 862-863, 13 Cal. Rptr. 521, 362 P.2d 345] . Plaintiff could not, however, actually recover damages under both of these theories.

Duty to avoid injuring persons or property. Civ. Code §§ 1708, 1714(a)

[Caption. See § 104.250]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity and residence of defendant lender. See § 104.210, Paragraph 2.]

3. Defendant _____ [name of lender] ("lender") provided loans for the construction of _____ [specify project, e.g., a certain residential development situated in _____ (city), _____ County, California, commonly known as _____ (name of development, e.g., "Rooster Rock Estates")], in which plaintiff purchased and has at all times herein mentioned owned _____ [specify interest owned by plaintiff, e.g., a home].

4. Defendant lender acted outside the scope of the activities of a lender of money with respect to this project in that it _____ [specify activities of defendant lender outside the scope of the activities of a lender, e.g., became an active participant in the home construction enterprise with the right to exercise extensive control over the enterprise, received substantial fees for making the loans in addition to interest, and received a 20 percent capital gain for holding title to the property to be developed until the developer was ready to use it].

5. Defendant lender's actions were intended to affect plaintiff significantly in that _____ [specify acts showing such intention, e.g., defendant lender's loan to the developer was made on the condition that a sufficient number of persons make commitments to buy homes and defendant lender arranged for the developer to channel buyers of homes in the development to defendant lender for home loans].

6. Defendant lender knew, or in the exercise of reasonable care should have known, that _____ [specify knowledge with which lender is charged, e.g., the developer was inexperienced and operating on a dangerously thin capitalization and could be driven to cutting corners in construction, that there was an expansive soil problem on the property to be developed, and that the prepackaged plans purchased by the developer required correction].

7. Defendant lender so negligently, carelessly, and unlawfully exercised its control of the development of the project that on or about _____ [date], _____ [specify occurrence causing injury, e.g., the soil under plaintiff's home in the project expanded during a rainstorm and the ill-designed and ill-constructed foundation of the home cracked].

8. As the proximate result of defendant lender's negligence, plaintiff's property was damaged in the sum of $_____.

9. As a further proximate result of defendant lender's negligence, plaintiff suffered the loss of the use of his/her/its property for _____ [specify period], all to plaintiff's damage in the sum of $_____, which is a reasonable amount for the use of plaintiff's property for that period.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For general damages in the sum of $_____;

2. For damages for loss of use of the property in the sum of $_____;

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[Verification, if desired. See § 104.210.]

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint for property damage is for use by the purchaser of a home against the lender who financed construction of the home.

[3] Allegations

The legal theory of recovery against the lender is that the lender's involvement in the construction project was outside the scope of the activities of a lender of money (Paragraph 4), that the lender negligently failed to exercise appropriate control over the project (Paragraphs 6, 7), and that it was thus responsible for defects in the construction that foreseeably led to plaintiff's property damage (Paragraphs 5, 8, 9) [see Civ. Code § 3434; see also Dillon v. Legg (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 728, 733-734, 69 Cal. Rptr. 72, 441 P.2d 912] . For further discussion, see § 104.53.

Plaintiff alleges:

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION

1. At all times herein mentioned, defendant [name, e.g., Sanitary District of City of _____ ("Sanitary District")] was, and now is, a public entity and political subdivision of the State of California, and defendants _____ [names] were, and now are, _____ [specify capacities of individual defendants, e.g., the duly elected, qualified, and acting members of the Board of Directors of defendant Sanitary District], and in doing the things alleged in this complaint were, and now are, acting in that capacity.

2. At all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ [name] was, and now is, _____ [describe capacity of additional individual defendant, e.g., the duly appointed, qualified, and acting administrative officer of defendant Sanitary District], and in doing the things alleged in this complaint was, and now is, acting in that capacity.

3. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and alleges that] [a]t all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ [name of corporation] was, and now is, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, having its principal place of business in _____ County, California.

4. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and alleges that] [a]t all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ [name] was, and now is, a civil engineer licensed to practice in the State of California, and that he/she was, and now is, an officer, director, and agent of defendant _____ [corporation], and in doing the things alleged in this complaint was, and now is, acting in such capacities.

5. At all times herein mentioned, defendants _____ [name of corporation] and _____ [name of civil engineer] were, and now are, the agents, servants, and employees of defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District], and in doing the things herein alleged, were at all times acting in those capacities.

7. At all times herein mentioned, plaintiff was, and now is, a duly licensed California contractor [and a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California and having its principal place of business in _____County, California].

8. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] entered into a written agreement designated "Agreement of Release, Compromise, and Settlement," under which plaintiff agreed to complete the construction of a _____ [describe project, e.g., sanitary sewer collection system] for defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] in accordance with certain plans, specifications, practices, and methods; and defendant [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] agreed, among other things, to do the following: _____ [specify, e.g.,

a. Pay to plaintiff on _____ (date) the sum of $_____, as partial settlement for prior claims by plaintiff against defendant _____ (identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District);

b. Deposit on _____ (date) the sum of $_____ with a mutually agreeable commercial bank paying the highest rate of interest on such deposits, as security for payment to plaintiff of sufficient monies to guarantee plaintiff a net profit of _____ percent for all work performed and to be performed by plaintiff;

c. Pay to plaintiff the sum of $_____ in accordance with a certain progress payment schedule provided for in the agreement; and

d. Furnish to plaintiff, on or before the last day of each month during performance of the agreement and construction of the work, a report of the estimated amount of work completed or acceptable, the materials furnished and delivered by plaintiff on the ground and not used, and the value of such work and materials].

A true and correct copy of the agreement is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit A.

9. Plaintiff performed all conditions, covenants, and promises under the agreement on its part to be performed, until on or about _____ [date], at which time defendants, and each of them, refused, and still refuse, to allow plaintiff to continue to perform the agreement, as alleged below.

10. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] and the other defendants breached the agreement in that _____ [specify conduct constituting breach, e.g., (a) defendants failed and refused, and still fail and refuse, to deposit the sum of $_____, or any sum at all, in a mutually agreeable commercial bank as provided in the agreement; (b) defendants failed and refused, and still fail and refuse, to pay plaintiff the sum of $_____ by the time and in the manner provided by the agreement, or at all, (except the sum of $_____); and (c) defendants failed and refused, and still fail and refuse, to furnish plaintiff with reports of the estimated amount of work completed or acceptable, the materials furnished and delivered by plaintiff on the ground and not used, and the value of the work and materials].

11. Defendants, and each of them, have further breached the agreement in that _____ [specify conduct constituting breach, e.g., they have, without the knowledge and consent of plaintiff, taken possession of and used the sewer collection system, have allowed consumers to tie into the system and use it, and have allowed sewage to flow through the system, all of which has materially interfered with, hindered, and delayed plaintiff's performance and completion of the agreement].

12. Since on or about _____ [date], defendants, and each of them, have further breached the agreement by willfully, wrongfully, maliciously, and oppressively refusing to allow plaintiff to complete its performance under the agreement in accordance with the plans, specifications, methods, and practices set forth in the agreement, or to perform any work whatsoever.

13. As a proximate result of the acts, conduct, and breaches on the part of defendants, as set forth above, plaintiff has suffered expense and damage in the sum of $_____, and loss of profit in the sum of $_____; the total of the monies due and damage to plaintiff is $_____.

14. Prior to the commencement of this action, on or about _____ [date], plaintiff caused to be served on defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] a claim, pursuant to the provisions of Government Code Sections 930, 930.2 and 930.6, for the monies and damages sought in this action in the amount of $_____.

15. On or about _____ [date], defendant [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] rejected the claim in its entirety.

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION
(Injunction)

16. Plaintiff realleges and incorporates into this cause of action by reference Paragraphs 1-13 of plaintiff's First Cause of Action set forth above.

17. The assessed valuation of defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] is less than $_____. _____ [Set forth facts showing public entity's inability to pay plaintiff, e.g., Under the provisions of Health and Safety Code Section 6695, defendant may not levy taxes in excess of $1 on each $100 assessed valuation in any one year, except what is required for the payment of bond principal and interest in that year. Under Health and Safety Code Section 6651 the outstanding bonded indebtedness of defendant, other than for revenue bonds, cannot at any one time exceed 15 percent of the assessed valuation of the real and personal property of defendant, except that if defendant elects to use the County Assessor's tax roll, this outstanding bonded indebtedness cannot at any one time exceed 20 percent of the assessed valuation of the real and personal property of defendant. During the fiscal year _____ (date) through _____ (date), defendant's assessed valuation was $_____; defendant's general obligation bonded indebtedness during the fiscal year was, and still is, in excess of the maximum bonded indebtedness authorized by law. In addition, defendant had, and now has, a revenue bond obligation in the amount of $_____. The maximum amount defendant has available to it, including proceeds from all bond issues and revenues from all taxes for payment of the amount due plaintiff for any judgment that may be rendered in this action is less than $_____].

18. Attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit B is a true and correct copy of the receipts, disbursements, assets, and liabilities of defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] as prepared by _____ [name], Auditor and Controller of the County of _____, State of California. As of the date of the audit, _____ [date], defendant had available for payment to plaintiff the sum of $_____, out of the total of (a) the monies due plaintiff pursuant to the agreement described in Paragraph 8 of plaintiff's First Cause of Action, and (b) the damages claimed by plaintiff herein as a result of defendants' breach of the agreement. Since that date, defendant has expended at least $_____ of those monies. Defendant at this time has available for payment to plaintiff of the monies due plaintiff pursuant to the agreement and the damages claimed by plaintiff herein less than $_____.

19. Defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] is insolvent, has no financial ability to pay its obligations as they mature, and is without financial or legal ability to obtain from any source sufficient funds with which to pay any judgment in favor of plaintiff rendered in this action. Defendant has employed and, unless restrained and enjoined by this court from doing so, threatens to continue to employ contractors other than plaintiff to perform construction work on the _____ [describe project, e.g., sewer collection system] in addition to the work provided for under the agreement between plaintiff and defendant. Defendant has substantially completed an operating _____ [describe project constructed by plaintiff, e.g., sanitary sewer collection system] and any work by other contractors, if performed, is not necessary to its operation or maintenance and is in violation of the agreement between plaintiff and defendant. Defendant's wrongful conduct and threatened wrongful conduct, unless and until it is enjoined and restrained by order of this court, will cause great and irreparable injury to plaintiff and plaintiff will be unable to recover the monies due it under the agreement or to satisfy any judgment that may be rendered in favor of plaintiff in this action.

20. Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law for the injuries, damages, and expenses set forth above, in that defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] is insolvent and has no financial or legal ability to meet its obligations as they mature or to satisfy any judgment that may be entered in favor of plaintiff in this action.

THIRD CAUSE OF ACTION
(Negligence)

21. Plaintiff realleges and incorporates into this cause of action by reference Paragraphs 1-4 and 6-8 of plaintiff's First

Cause of Action set forth above.

22. Plaintiff is informed and believes and alleges that at all times herein mentioned each of the defendants was, and now is, the agent, servant, and employee of each of the remaining defendants, and in doing the things herein alleged was at all times acting in such capacity.

23. At all times herein mentioned, defendants _____ [names of corporation and civil engineer] were, and now are, civil engineers, each individual being licensed to practice in the State of California, and each of them has held himself/herself/itself out to possess the ordinary skill and competence of members of the profession of civil engineering in the County of _____, which is the community in which they work.

24. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] entered into a written agreement designated _____ [specify title of agreement, e.g., "Contract Documents and Specifications for the Construction of a Sanitary Sewer Collection System" ("the Contract Documents and Specifications")], under which plaintiff agreed to _____ [specify plaintiff's general obligations under contract, e.g., construct a sanitary sewer collection system for defendant in accordance with certain plans and specifications amended by the agreement set forth as Exhibit A to plaintiff's First Cause of Action], and defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] agreed to pay to plaintiff the sum of $_____ in the time and manner set forth in the agreement. A copy of the the Contract Documents and Specifications is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit C. The Contract Documents and Specifications were prepared by defendant _____ [civil engineer] and the remaining defendants. Prior to and at the time the Contract Documents and Specifications were prepared and the agreement was entered into by plaintiff and defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District], and at all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ [corporation] was, and now is, the consulting engineer to defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] and defendant _____ [civil engineer] was, and now is, the project engineer on the work performed by plaintiff under the agreement.

25. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff commenced construction of the _____ [specify construction project, e.g., sanitary sewer collection system] pursuant to the Contract Documents and Specifications. During the performance of the work and at all times herein mentioned, defendants were, and are, responsible under the terms of the agreement for the control and progress of the work and the engineering of the _____ [specify construction project, e.g., sanitary sewer collection system], and at all times during the work and all time herein mentioned defendants undertook to control the performance and progress of the work and the engineering of the project.

26. Defendants, and each of them, so carelessly and negligently prepared the Contract Documents and Specifications, so carelessly and negligently controlled and directed the progress of the work, and so carelessly and negligently engineered the _____ [specify construction project, e.g., sanitary sewer collection system] that plaintiff was prevented from receiving and did not receive the monthly progress reports and progress payments required by the Contract Documents and Specifications. The _____ [specify individual items of construction not completed in accordance with agreement or with accepted practices, e.g., sewer lines, sewer covers, and appurtenant fixtures] were in many instances not constructed in accordance with the plans and specifications or in accordance with accepted engineering practices as exercised by members of the civil engineering profession possessing the degree of skill, ability, and learning common to the profession in _____ County, California. As a result of defendant's carelessness and negligence, plaintiff was caused to, and did, suffer the injuries and damages alleged below.

27. As a proximate result of the negligence and carelessness of defendants, and each of them, plaintiff was injured in that plaintiff has not received the monies due him/her/it under the agreement and was, and still is, hindered, delayed, and obstructed in the performance of his/her/its work, all to plaintiff's damage in the sum of $_____.

Plaintiff is informed and believes and alleges that he/she/it has incurred, and will incur in the future, additional damage, injury, and expense. The exact nature, extent, and amount of the damage and injury are not known to plaintiff at this time, and plaintiff will seek leave to amend this complaint to state these things when they are ascertained.

28. As a further proximate result of the negligence and carelessness of defendants, and each of them, plaintiff was prevented from attending to its business as a contractor from on or about _____ [date] to the date of filing of this complaint, and thus lost income and profits. The exact amount of plaintiff's lost income and profits is unknown to plaintiff at this time, and plaintiff will seek leave to amend this complaint to state this amount when it is ascertained.

FOURTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Fraud)

29. Plaintiff realleges and incorporates into this cause of action by reference Paragraphs 1, 3, 4, and 6-8 of plaintiff's First Cause of Action set forth above, and Paragraphs 22-25 of plaintiff's Third Cause of Action set forth above.

30. On or about _____ [date], while plaintiff was engaged in the performance of the Contract Documents and Specifications set forth as Exhibit C to this complaint, and while defendants, and each of them, knew plaintiff was so engaged, defendants falsely and fraudulently, and with the intent to wrongfully interfere with and prevent plaintiff's performance of the agreement and the intent to induce defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] to breach the agreement, represented to defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] that plaintiff's performance was not in accordance with the plans, specifications, methods, and practices provided for in the agreement in, among other things, the following respects: _____ [specify, e.g., a. The plans, specifications, methods, and practices provided for in the agreement required air testing of all sewer lines in the sanitary sewer collection system;

b. Sewer covers constructed by plaintiff under the agreement were not constructed in accordance with the plans, specifications, methods, and practices as provided in the agreement, or in accordance with defendants' directions and instructions as consulting engineers to defendant _____ (identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District);

c. Certain sewer lines and sewer laterals constructed by plaintiff were not constructed in accordance with the plans, specifications, methods, and practices provided in the agreement or in accordance with the instructions of defendants as consulting engineers to defendant _____ (identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District)].

31. The representations so made by defendants were in fact false and known by defendants to be false when made. The true facts were as follow: _____ [specify, e.g.,

a. The plans, specifications, methods, and practices did not require the lines to be tested; defendants had specifically instructed plaintiff only to spot test certain lines and plaintiff had performed the testing procedures as required by the plans, specifications, methods, and practices of the agreement and the instructions of defendants as consulting engineers to _____ (identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District), all of which defendants knew at the time the work was performed and at the time the representations were made by defendants to defendant _____ (identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District);

b. Defendants had willfully and deliberately surveyed and staked certain sewer covers, sewer lines, and sewer laterals in a manner contrary to the written plans and specifications and concealed these acts from plaintiff with the intent to wrongfully interfere with plaintiff's performance under the agreement and to induce defendant _____ (identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District) to breach its agreement with plaintiff].

32. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [civil engineer] falsely and fraudulently represented to defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] and plaintiff that a suspension of work order issued to plaintiff by defendants as consulting engineers to defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] on _____ [date] would be, and was, then rescinded and that plaintiff would be allowed to complete performance of the agreement.

33. The representations made by defendants were in fact false and the true facts were that on _____ [date], defendants wrongfully refused to allow plaintiff to continue performance.

34. The representations, and each of them, were false and known by defendants to be false and were made by defendants in bad faith and with the intent and purpose of cheating and defrauding plaintiff and with the intent to wrongfully interfere with, hinder, delay, obstruct, and prevent performance by plaintiff of the agreement between plaintiff and defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] and to induce defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] to breach its agreement with plaintiff.

35. As a proximate result of the misrepresentations by defendants and wrongful interference with plaintiff's performance of its agreement with defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District], defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] was caused to and did breach the agreement, all to plaintiff's damage in the sum of $_____.

36. At the time the representations were made, plaintiff was ignorant of their falsity and believed them to be true. In reliance on the representations, plaintiff was induced to, and did, incur additional expense, loss, and damage in attempting to complete performance of its agreement with defendant _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District]. Had plaintiff known the true facts, he/she/it would not have taken such action.

37. In making the representations and wrongfully obstructing, hindering, delaying, interfering, and preventing plaintiff's performance of the agreement, defendants acted fraudulently and maliciously with an intent to cause plaintiff injury and were guilty of despicable conduct carried on with a willful and conscious disregard of plaintiff's rights. Plaintiff accordingly demands exemplary and punitive damages against defendants _____ [names].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

On the FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION for breach of contract:

1. For judgment against defendants _____ [identify public entity, e.g., Sanitary District] and _____ [names], each _____ [specify capacity of defendants, e.g., a member of the Board of Directors of the District], and each of them, for the following relief:

a. For damages in the sum of $_____, together with interest on this sum at the legal rate from and after _____ [date];

b. For loss of profits in the sum of $_____, together with interest on this sum at the legal rate from and after _____ [date];

On the SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION for injunctive relief:

2. For an order requiring defendants _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] and _____ [names], each _____ [specify capacity, e.g., a member of the Board of Directors of the District], _____ [name], as _____ [specify capacity, e.g., administrative officer of defendant Sanitary District], _____ [name of corporation], and _____ [name of civil engineer] to show cause, if they have any, why they should not be enjoined as set forth below, during the pendency of this action;

3. For a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction against defendants _____ [identify public entity and other defendants, e.g., Sanitary District and _____ (names), each a member of the Board of Directors of the District; _____ (name), as administrative officer of defendant Sanitary District; _____ (name of corporation); and _____ (name of civil engineer)], enjoining and restraining defendants, and each of them, and their agents, servants, employees, and all persons acting under, in concert, or for them, as follows:

a. From performing any construction, reconstruction, alteration, or addition to the _____ [specify construction project, e.g., sewer collection system of the _____ (name) Sanitary District, except any maintenance, repairs, and/or operation that may be necessary to maintain the system, or any part of it, in its existing condition];

b. From disbursing or expending monies or obligating the _____ [identify public entity defendant, e.g., Sanitary District] to disburse or expend any monies from the _____ [name] Construction Fund, or from any other fund held for the purpose of constructing the _____ [specify construction project, e.g., Sanitary District Sewer Collection System];

On the THIRD CAUSE OF ACTION for negligence:

4. For judgment against defendants _____ [identify corporation] and _____ [identify civil engineer] for the following relief:

a. For general damages in the sum of $_____;

b. For special damages for loss of income and profits according to proof;

On the FOURTH CAUSE OF ACTION for fraud:

5. For judgment against defendants _____ [identify corporation] and _____ [identify civil engineer] for the following relief:

a. For compensatory damages according to proof;

b. For exemplary and punitive damages according to proof;

On ALL CAUSES OF ACTION:

6. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

7. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint for damages and injunctive relief is for use by a contractor against a public entity when the public entity has breached a construction contract and committed other wrongful acts, and is insolvent. It contains causes of action for breach of contract, injunction, negligence, and fraud, naming the public entity, its board of directors and administrative officer, an engineering corporation involved with the project, and an engineer employed by the corporation as defendants (Paragraphs 1-4).

This form is modeled on the complaint filed in West Coast Constr. Co. v. Oceano Sanitary Dist. (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 693, 95 Cal. Rptr. 169 , in which a local sanitary district was enjoined from expending monies from its sewer construction fund during the pendency of an action for breach of contract and various torts by a contractor who had worked on the project.

[3] Allegation of Service of Claim

In the First Cause of Action, Paragraph 14 alleges that plaintiff has served a claim on the public entity for the contract damages claimed. Paragraph 15 alleges that the public entity has rejected the claim in its entirety. A state agency of local entity may include in any written agreement to which it is a party provisions governing the presentation of claims arising out of the agreement [Gov. Code §§ 930, 930.2]. The claims procedure may include a requirement that a claim be presented and acted on before any suit on the claim may be filed [Gov. Code § 930.6; see Gov. Code §§ 945.6, 946 (time for filing suit after filing of claim)].

When a municipality has breached a building contract, a claim for damages must be presented to the city's board of supervisors within one year after the accrual of the cause of action for breach [Gov. Code § 911.2(a); see § 104.212].

[4] Damages for Fraud

Plaintiff's losses flowing from the public entity's breach of the contract and from plaintiff's extra attempts, necessitated by defendant's fraud, to perform the contract (Paragraphs 35, 36), are recoverable in the fraud action, because one who wilfully deceives another with intent to induce the other to alter his or her position to his or her injury or risk is liable for any damages the deceived party suffers as a result [Civ. Code § 1709]. Exemplary or punitive damages are also available in the fraud action based on any fraudulent or malicious conduct of defendants (Paragraph 37) [see Civ. Code § 3294(a)].

[5] Verification of Complaint Seeking Temporary or Preliminary Injunction

A complaint seeking preliminary injunctive relief must be either verified or accompanied by affidavits (or declarations under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) in support of the allegations of the complaint [Code Civ. Proc.§ 527(a)]. If relying on a verified complaint instead of affidavits (or declarations), counsel must plead evidentiary facts that would entitle plaintiff to the relief sought [see E.H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 373, 106 P.2d 1 ; Finnie v. Town of Tiburon (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1, 15, 244 Cal. Rptr. 581] . For discussion, a procedural checklist, and additional forms necessary to obtain a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

If preliminary injunctive relief is not sought, verification of this complaint is not required, but verification of the complaint requires the defendant to file a verified answer in a superior court action other than a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446(a)] and is precluded from making a general denial in a superior court action and in some limited civil cases [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion of the effect that verifying a complaint has on the answer, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[6] Certification re Notice

When a temporary restraining order is sought without formal notice to the opposing party, the applicant or the applicant's attorney is required to certify to the court under oath that he or she (1) informed the opposing party or the opposing party's attorney of the time and place where the application would be made, within a reasonable period of time prior to the application; (2) attempted in good faith to inform the opposing party or the opposing party's attorney but was unable to do so, specifying the efforts made to contract them; or (3) should not be required, for reasons specified, to inform the opposing party or the opposing party's attorney [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)].

An action seeking a permanent injunction is in the jurisdiction of the superior court and is not a limited civil case [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(8), 580(b)(2)].

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by the purchaser of a house against the contractor for damages flowing from a breach of the implied warranty that the house was designed and constructed in a reasonably skillful or workmanlike manner, so as to be reasonably fit for its intended use.

For a form of specific denial for use in defendant's answer when the plans for the project are furnished by the owner, and the contractor faithfully performs the work as specified by those plans, see § 104.254.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges defendant's construction of the house (Paragraph 3), the sale of the house to plaintiff (Paragraph 4), the implied warranty (Paragraph 5), plaintiff's reliance on the warranty (Paragraph 6), defendant's breach of the warranty (Paragraph 7), plaintiff's damages (Paragraph 8), and plaintiff's notice to defendant within a reasonable time after plaintiff discovered the breach (Paragraph 9) [see Com. Code § 2607(3)(A); Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 377-380, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88] .

§ 104.254 Specific Denial by Contractor--No Implied Warranty--Work Performed in Accordance With Purchaser's Plans

[1] FORM Specific Denial by Contractor--No Implied Warranty--Work Performed in Accordance With Purchaser's Plans

Further answering Paragraph _____ of plaintiff's complaint, defendant specifically denies that he/she/it implicitly warranted the house was designed in a skillful and workmanlike manner so as to be fit for its intended use. No such warranty existed, by virtue of the fact that defendant complied with the plans and specifications furnished by plaintiff in constructing the house.

[2] Use of Form

This form of specific denial is for use by a contractor in an answer to a complaint by a purchaser alleging that the contractor breached an implied warranty that the house was designed in a reasonably workmanlike manner [see § 104.253]. It should be used when the contractor followed plans and specifications furnished by the plaintiff in constructing the house. For a skeletal form of answer, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[3] No Implied Warranty When Purchaser Furnishes Plans

When the plans for the project are furnished by the owner, and the contractor faithfully performs the work as specified by those plans, there is no implied warranty that the contractor will supplement the inadequacy of the plans [Sunbeam Constr. Co. v. Fisci (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 181, 184-185, 82 Cal. Rptr. 446] . For further discussion, see § 104.42[3].

This form of complaint for damages based on strict liability in tort is for use by the purchaser of a mass-produced home against the developer who built the home. This complaint may also be modified to allege a strict liability cause of action against a tract developer who, for example, improperly filled and graded the property so that it became unstable [see Avner v. Longridge Estates (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 607, 615, 77 Cal. Rptr. 633] , even if that developer later sold the property to another developer who built the homes [see GEM Developers v. Hallcraft Homes of San Diego, Inc. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 419, 431-433, 261 Cal. Rptr. 626] .

This form of complaint may be used in connection with (1) a defect located on and unique to plaintiff's property, such as a defective heating system; (2) a defect located on common areas of the development, such as an erosion problem [see

Del Mar Beach Club Owners Assn. v. Imperial Contracting Co. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 898, 909-914, 176 Cal. Rptr. 886] ; or (3) even in connection with defects located on another person's property that affect the plaintiff's use of his or her home [see also Stuart v. Crestview Mut. Water Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 802, 811, 110 Cal. Rptr. 543 ; see § 104.44].

[3] Allegations Establishing Strict Liability of Developer

A developer will be strictly liable in tort for damages caused by defects in a construction project only if [see Kriegler v. Eichler Homes, Inc. (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 224, 228-229, 74 Cal. Rptr. 749] :

- The defect occurs in or affects a home (Paragraphs 3, 7);
- The developer is a mass producer of homes (Paragraph 3); and
- The defect makes the home not reasonably fit for its intended use (Paragraphs 4, 9, 10).

The burden is on the plaintiff to establish the defective condition of the product and to prove that the defect proximately caused the plaintiff's injury [Miller v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1973) 8 Cal. 3d 689, 704, 106 Cal. Rptr. 1, 505 P.2d 193] .

For further discussion, see § 104.44[3].

[4] Measure of Purchaser's Damages

The proper measure of damages in an action against a mass developer of homes based on strict liability in tort is the cost of remedying the defects, together with the value of any loss of use of the home during the period of injury (Paragraph 11) [Raven's Cove Townhomes, Inc. v. Knuppe Development Co., Inc. (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 783, 801-802, 171 Cal. Rptr. 334] .

[Caption. See § 104.250.]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity and residence of defendant contractor. See § 104.210, Paragraph 2.]

3. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and [name of landlord] entered into a lease of certain premises described as follows: _____ [set forth street address and legal description]. In the lease, _____ [name of landlord] agreed to construct certain improvements _____ [specify purpose of improvements, e.g., to enable plaintiff to conduct a restaurant business on the premises]. The contract provided that the improvements were to be completed by _____ [date]. A copy of the contract is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit A.

4. On or about _____ [date], _____ [name of landlord] and defendant entered into a contract in which defendant agreed to construct the improvements on the premises described above, and to complete the improvements on or before _____ [date]. A copy of this contract is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit B.

5. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff informed defendant [in writing] that he/she/it was the tenant for whom the improvements were being constructed, and that any significant delay in completing the improvements would adversely affect plaintiff's business beyond the normal disruption associated with construction.

6. Defendant negligently and carelessly failed to commence construction of the improvements, dilatorily proceeded with construction of the improvements, and failed to complete the improvements by the date specified in the contract entered into between defendant and _____ [name of landlord]. As a result, the construction of the improvements was not completed until _____ [date].

7. Plaintiff was unable to operate its business for _____ [specify period, e.g., six months] due to defendant's negligent failure to complete the construction within the time provided in defendant's contract. [Plaintiff suffered additional loss after the business opened because the building was without _____ (specify improvements not completed when plaintiff took possession of premises, e.g., air conditioning and heat for two additional weeks)].

8. As a proximate result of defendant's failure to complete construction by _____ [date], plaintiff was damaged in the amount of $_____ from loss of business and resulting loss of profits.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint alleging negligent interference with prospective economic advantage is for use by a tenant when a contractor fails to timely complete construction on premises rented and used by the tenant to conduct a business.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges the following [see J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 803-808, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60] :

- The plaintiff's claim to the premises (Paragraph 3);
- The defendant's contract to complete the improvements within a specified time (Paragraph 4);
- The defendant's knowledge that a delay would harm the plaintiff (Paragraph 5);
- The defendant's negligence in failing to timely complete the improvements (Paragraph 6); and
- The plaintiff's resulting damages (Paragraphs 7, 8).

[4] Privity Not Required

The tenant of a person who contracts for improvements to the premises occupied by the tenant may sue the contractor for damages to the tenant caused by the contractor's failure to complete the project on time. No privity of contract between the tenant and the contractor is required; the special relationship created by the contractor's working on premises he or she knows to be occupied by the tenant is sufficient to create a duty to the tenant [J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 803-808, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60] .

Defendant(s)	)	(exceeds or does not exceed) $10,000]
	)	[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity and residence of defendant owner. See § 104.210, Paragraph 2.]

2. [Plaintiff's capacity as contractor and principal place of business. See § 104.252, Paragraph 7.]

4. On or about _____ [date], in _____ [city], _____ County,

California, defendant gave plaintiff a soil report on the composition of the soil at a certain construction site located at _____ [street address], _____ [city], California. The report erroneously reported the soil to be _____ [specify the soil composition as given in the report, e.g., coarse sand with clay binder]. A copy of the report is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit A.

5. Defendant knew that the report was mistaken, in that _____ [specify true soil condition, e.g., the soil was coarse sand with minute binder]; and knew that the condition of the soil would largely determine the difficulty and expense of constructing _____ [specify structure plaintiff contracted to construct, e.g., a 300-foot retaining wall] on the soil test site; but defendant failed to disclose to plaintiff the true nature of the soil.

6. Defendant further failed to disclose that _____ [specify other facts concealed, e.g., cave-ins occurred in the test holes drilled to test the composition of the soil and that two landslides had occurred at the construction site during the year previous to the testing].

7. Defendant withheld the information described in Paragraphs 5 and 6 with the intent to defraud and deceive plaintiff and to induce plaintiff to enter into a contract for the construction of the _____ [specify structure, e.g., retaining wall] at the site of the soil tests.

8. Plaintiff, at the time defendant gave him/her/it the soil report, was ignorant of the mistakes in the report and reasonably believed the report to be true. In reliance on the report, and without knowledge of the other facts concealed by defendant, plaintiff was induced to and did enter into a contract for the construction of the _____ [specify structure, e.g., retaining wall] at the site of the soil tests. Had plaintiff known the true facts he/she/it would not have entered into the contract.

9. By reason of defendant's fraud, plaintiff was damaged in the sum of $_____ in that the actual soil conditions at the site necessitated the use of a different method of drilling that exceeded the cost of drilling as planned by plaintiff, based on the soil report, by $_____, including a reasonable profit of $_____, and required the employment of additional workers at the actual and reasonable cost to plaintiff of $_____.

10. Defendant's failure to disclose as alleged in this complaint was done maliciously and oppressively and with intent to defraud plaintiff. Plaintiff therefore is entitled to exemplary and punitive damages.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For compensatory damages in the sum of $_____;

2. For exemplary and punitive damages;

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a contractor in an action for damages caused by an owner's fraud in concealing from the contractor the true condition of the soil at the construction site.

[3] Allegations

The complaint states an action for fraud in that it alleges defendant's suppression of a material fact under circumstances in which he or she was bound to disclose it (Paragraphs 5, 6) [Civ. Code § 1710(3)], defendant's intent to induce reliance (Paragraph 7) and to defraud plaintiff (Paragraph 10), plaintiff's reasonable reliance on defendant's representations (Paragraph 8) [see Van Meter v. Bent Constr. Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 588, 593-596, 297 P.2d 644] , and plaintiff's resulting damages (Paragraph 9) [see Tonkin Constr. Co. v. County of Humboldt (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 828, 832-833, 233 Cal. Rptr. 587 ; Welch v. State (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 546, 555-556, 188 Cal. Rptr. 726] .

[4] Actual and Punitive Damages

Plaintiff's increased construction costs (Paragraph 9) are a recoverable element of damages, since one who wilfully deceives another with intent to induce the other to alter his or her position to his or her injury or risk is liable for any damages the deceived party suffers as a result [Civ. Code § 1709].

The claim for exemplary or punitive damages (Paragraph 10) is also proper. In an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, when it is proven by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant has been guilty of fraud or malice, the plaintiff may recover, in addition to his or her actual damages, damages for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant [Civ. Code § 3294(a); see Civ. Code § 3294(c)(1), (3) ("malice" and "fraud" defined, respectively)].

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity and residence of defendant contractor. See § 104.210, Paragraph 2.]

2. [Capacity and residence of defendant subcontractor. See § 104.210, Paragraph 2.]

3. [Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 104.210, Paragraph 3.]

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff entered into a written contract with defendant

_____ [name of prime contractor] ("prime contractor"), in which defendant prime contractor agreed to build a _____ [specify structure to be constructed, e.g., residence] for plaintiff on land owned by plaintiff and situated at _____ [street address], _____ [city], _____ County, California. As part of the contract, defendant prime contractor agreed to build the _____ [specify structure, e.g., residence] according to certain plans and specifications, copies of which were signed by the parties and by reference made a part of the contract. A true and correct copy of the contract, together with the plans and specifications, is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit A.

5. Defendant _____ [name of subcontractor] ("subcontractor") was supplied by defendant prime contractor with copies of the plans and specifications for the purpose of making a bid to _____ [specify work bid on, e.g., perform electrical work under the contract].

6. Defendant subcontractor submitted a bid to defendant prime contractor contrary to the requirements of the plans and specifications. This bid was accepted by defendant prime contractor without plaintiff's knowledge that the bid was contrary to the requirements of the plans and specifications.

7. Thereafter defendant subcontractor and defendant prime contractor entered into subcontracts both written and oral with each other to perform the work under the contract contrary to the plans and specifications, each well knowing that this was without the consent or knowledge of plaintiff.

8. Pursuant to these agreements defendant subcontractor did proceed to perform the subcontract labor contrary to the requirements of the plans and specifications in that _____ [specify departures from plans and specifications].

9. Defendants prime contractor and subcontractor did the acts and things alleged above pursuant to and in furtherance of the conspiracy and agreement alleged above.

10. By reason of the conspiracy among the defendants to perform the subcontract contrary to the plans and specifications and by reason of the installation in accordance with the conspiracy, plaintiff has been damaged in the sum of $_____, which is the _____ [difference between the value of the structure as constructed and as specified in the contract or reasonable cost to plaintiff to make the structure conform to the plans and specifications (plus the actual and reasonable cost to plaintiff to secure other lodgings during the repair period)].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For damages in the sum of $_____;

2. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

3. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint for damages for conspiracy to defraud the owner is for use by an owner when the prime contractor and the subcontractor or subcontractors have knowingly performed work under the contract contrary to the requirements of the plans and specifications.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges that both the contractor and the subcontractor were aware of the requirements of the plans and specifications, and of their failure to conform to them (Paragraphs 5-7, 9). The owner's remedies are simplified in an action such as this one, since the owner is only required to allege and prove one theory of recovery based on one set of activities.

As an alternative to this action, the owner may sue the contractor for breach or negligent performance of the contract [see § 104.228]. An action naming both contractor and subcontractor as defendants may, however, be useful in a case in which the contractor is insolvent or otherwise judgment-proof.

[4] Measure of Damages

Paragraph 10 sets forth alternative measures of the plaintiff's damages. In an action for fraud, the plaintiff is entitled to recover damages in the amount that will compensate him or her for all the detriment caused by the wrongful conduct of the defendant or defendants, whether it could have been anticipated or not [Civ. Code § 3333].

[5] State Statutes

Admissibility of acts and declarations of conspirator against coconspirators. Evid. Code § 1223

[3. At all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ (name of individual defendant) was the agent and employee of defendant _____ (corporate defendant) and, in doing the things herein mentioned, was acting in the scope of this authority and employment.]

4. Commencing on or about _____ [date], and continuing to the present time, defendant(s) wrongfully and unlawfully _____ [set forth activities that constitute a continuing violation of the license law, e.g., has/have engaged, and continue(s) to engage, in the construction of houses to be sold to the general public without being duly licensed under the Contractors' State License Law of the State of California].

5. Plaintiff is _____ [a licensed contractor or an association of contractors or a consumer affected by the above violation] and seeks relief as authorized by Business and Professions Code Section 7028.4.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For an order requiring defendant(s) to show cause, if any, why he/she/it/they should not be enjoined as set forth below during the pendency of this action;

2. [2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a licensed contractor, an association of contractors, or a consumer affected by the unlicensed person's activities to enjoin an unlicensed person from acting in the capacity of a contractor. The license law (Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq.) authorizes injunctive relief at the request of a licensed contractor, an association of contractors, an affected consumer, a district attorney, or the Attorney General to enjoin an unlicensed person from engaging in any act, practice, or transaction that constitutes a continuing violation of the license law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028.4].

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges (1) the acts of the unlicensed person constituting a continuing violation of the license law (Paragraph 4), and (2) the basis for relief (Paragraph 5). It is not necessary to allege substantial injury [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028.3] or irreparable injury [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028.4].

[4] Verification and Certification Requirements

Certain verification and pleading requirements apply to complaints seeking a preliminary injunctions or temporary restraining orders. In addition, a certificate concerning efforts to notify the opposing party of the time and place of an application for a temporary restraining order must be executed by the party seeking the order, or by his or her attorney, when the order is sought without formal notice to the opposing party [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)-(f)]. For further discussion, see § 104.252.

Application for a permanent injunction against an unlicensed contractor is made to the superior court of the county in which the act, practice, or transaction is alleged to have been committed, or in any other county in which the person maintains a place of business or resides [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7028.3, 7028.4]. The action is not a limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 580(b)(2)].

[1] FORM Allegation to Complaint Against Unlicensed Contractor--Treble Damages and Attorney's Fees and Costs [Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.8]

Because defendant _____ [name of contractor] acted as a contractor within the meaning of Business and Professions Code Section 7026 at all times relevant to this action, but without holding a valid contractor's license as required by Business and Professions Code Section 7028, plaintiff is entitled to treble damages and, if the court in its discretion so determines, attorney's fees and costs incurred in connection with this action, as provided by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1029.8.

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use in a complaint against an unlicensed contractor when the plaintiff's injuries or damages occurred as a result of the provision of services by the contractor for which a contractor's license is required. It may be used by any person suing an unlicensed contractor in such a situation, except a person who holds a contractor's license or a closely related license and is suing for unfair trade practices [Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.8(e)].

When this allegation is used, the prayer should include a request for attorney's fees and costs.

[3] Entitlement to Treble Damages, Attorney's Fees, and Costs

Any unlicensed person who causes injury or damage to another person as a result of providing goods or performing services for which a contractor's license is required will be liable to the injured person for treble the amount of damages assessed, up to $10,000, in a civil action in any court having proper jurisdiction. The court may, in its discretion, award all costs and attorney's fees to the injured person if that person prevails in the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.8(a), (c)].

[1] FORM Notice of Claim for Violation of Statutory Construction Standards--By Owner to Builder [Civ. Code § 910(a)]

NOTICE OF CLAIM

To: _____ [builder's name], Builder
_____ [address]

From: _____ [claimant's name], Claimant
_____ [address]
_____ [phone or fax number, e-mail address, or other preferred method of contact]

Claimant is the owner of residential property located at _____ [address], which was originally purchased by _____ [claimant or _____ (name of original purchaser)] from builder as a new residence. The purchase agreement was with _____ [claimant or _____ (name of original purchaser)] and was signed by builder on _____ [date on or after January 1, 2003].

Claimant hereby alleges against builder the following violation(s) of the construction standard(s) set forth in Civil Code Section 896. The violation(s) relate(s) to _____ [describe claim in reasonable detail sufficient to determine the nature and location, to the extent known, of the claimed violation(s), e.g., water leaking from outside the windows and patio doors on the rear (north side) of the unit causing extensive damage to interior walls and floors. This constitutes a violation of Civil Code Section 896(a)(2), which requires that windows, patio doors, deck doors, and their systems must not allow water to pass beyond, around, or through the window, patio door, or deck door or its designed or actual moisture barriers].

Dated: _____

_____ [signature]
Claimant

[2] Use of Form

This form is a notice of claim for use by a purchaser of a new residential unit (excluding a condominium conversion) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the builder on or after January 1, 2003, and the buyer is seeking to hold the builder responsible for any violation of the statutory construction standards specified in Civ. Code § 896. Those standards generally concern the construction, design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, testing, and observation of construction of new residential units when the purchaser agreement with the buyer was signed by the builder on or after January 1, 2003 [see Civ. Code § 896]. For discussion of the process for resolving claims based on defective construction, see § 104.43.

[3] Notice of Claim Is Mandatory

Before the claimant is entitled to file an action alleging violation of the construction standards, he or she must provide the builder with written notice of the claimant's claim that the construction of his or her residence violates any of the statutory construction standards. The notice has the same force and effect as a notice of commencement of a legal proceeding [Civ. Code § 910(a)].

[4] Contents of Notice

The notice of claim must include all of the following [Civ. Code § 910(a)]:

- The claimant's name, address, and preferred method of contact;
- A statement that the claimant alleges a violation pursuant to Civ. Code § 895 et seq. against the builder; and
- A description of the claim in reasonable detail sufficient to determine the nature and location, to the extent known, of the claimed violation.

If the claimant is a group of homeowners or an association, the notice must identify the claimants solely by address or other description sufficient to apprise the builder of the locations of the subject residences [Civ. Code § 910(a); see Civ. Code § 895(f)].

[5] Delivery of Notice

The notice must be delivered via certified mail, overnight mail, or personal delivery [Civ. Code § 910(a)].

[6] Effect of Notice on Claimant's Right to Seek Other Redress

The notice requirement does not preclude a homeowner from seeking redress through any applicable normal customer service procedure set forth in any contract, warranty, or other builder-generated document. However, if the homeowner requests this form of recourse through such a procedure, the request does not satisfy the statutory notice requirement [Civ. Code § 910(b)].

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a purchaser of a new residential unit (excluding a condominium conversion) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the builder on or after January 1, 2003, and the buyer is seeking to recover damages arising out of, or related to, violation of the statutory construction standards specified in Civ. Code § 896. Those standards generally concern the construction, design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, testing, and observation of construction of new residential units when the purchase agreement was signed by the builder on or after January 1, 2003. For discussion of the statutory construction standards, see § 104.43.

[3] Allegations

To make a claim for violation of the statutory construction standards used to determine the existence of actionable construction defects [see Civ. Code § 896], a plaintiff "... need only demonstrate, in accordance with the applicable evidentiary standard, that the home does not meet the applicable standard. ... No further showing of causation or damages is required to meet the burden of proof regarding a violation of a standard ... provided that the violation arises out of, pertains to, or is related to, the original construction" [Civ. Code § 942].

Because the statutory scheme that governs construction defect litigation requires the homeowner to initiate a statutory pre-litigation procedure, the goal of which is to permit the defendant the opportunity to repair the defect [see Civ. Code §§ 910-938], Paragraphs 5 and 6 of this form include allegations related to that issue.

[4] Damages

The plaintiff is entitled to recover all of the following as damages in an action on a claim based on violation of the statutory construction standards [Civ. Code § 944]:

- The reasonable cost of repairing any violation of the statutory construction standards;
- The reasonable cost of repairing any damages caused by the repair efforts;
- The reasonable cost of repairing and rectifying any damages resulting from the home's failure to meet the standards;
- The reasonable cost of removing and replacing any improper repair by the builder;
- Reasonable relocation and storage expenses;
- Lost business income if the home was used as a principal place of business licensed to be operated from the home;
- Reasonable investigative costs for each established violation; and
- All other costs or fees recoverable by contract or statute.

As to any claims involving a detached single-family home, the homeowner's right to the reasonable value of repairing any nonconformity is limited to the repair costs, or the diminution in the home's current value caused by the nonconformity, whichever is less, subject to the common law personal use exception [Civ. Code § 943(b)].

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Civ. Code § 945.5(a)]--By Builder to Action by Owner for Violation of Statutory Construction Standards--Violation Caused by Unforeseen Act of Nature

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST) SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., FIRST) CAUSE OF ACTION] defendant alleges that:

The violation(s) of the statutory construction standard(s) alleged by plaintiff were caused by _____ [specify unforeseen act of nature, e.g., a storm with winds in excess of 90 miles per hour], which is in excess of the applicable building codes, regulations, and ordinances at the time of original construction.

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense is for use in an answer to a complaint by a purchaser of a new residential unit (excluding a condominium conversion) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the builder on or after January 1, 2003, and the buyer is seeking to recover damages arising out of, or related to, violation of the statutory construction standards specified in Civ. Code § 896. The defense is based on the allegation that the cause of any alleged violation of the statutory construction standards is an unforeseen act of nature, rather than any defective construction on the defendant's part.

[3] Unforeseen Act of Nature

Under the principles of comparative fault pertaining to affirmative defenses, a builder may be excused, in whole or in part, from any obligation, damage, loss, or liability if the builder, general contractor, subcontractor, material supplier, individual product manufacturer, or design professional can demonstrate, in response to a claimed violation, that the violation was caused by an unforeseen act of nature which caused the structure not to meet the standard. "Unforeseen act of nature" means weather condition, earthquake, or manmade event such as war, terrorism, or vandalism, in excess of the design criteria expressed by the applicable building codes, regulations, and ordinances in effect at the time of original construction [Civ. Code § 945.5(a)].

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST) SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., FIRST) CAUSE OF ACTION] defendant alleges that:

The damages allegedly caused by violation of the statutory construction standard(s) alleged by plaintiff were caused by the plaintiff's unreasonable failure to minimize or prevent those damages in a timely manner.

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense is for use in an answer to a complaint by a purchaser of a new residential unit (excluding a condominium conversion) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the builder on or after January 1, 2003, and the buyer is seeking to recover damages arising out of, or related to, violation of the statutory construction standards specified in Civ. Code § 896. The defense is based on the allegation that the owner unreasonably failed to minimize or prevent (in a timely manner) any damages that may have resulted from a violation of the standards.

[3] Unreasonable Failure to Prevent or Minimize Damages

Under the principles of comparative fault pertaining to affirmative defenses, a builder, general contractor, subcontractor, material supplier, individual product manufacturer, or design professional may be excused, in whole or in part, from any obligation, damage, loss, or liability if he or she can demonstrate, in response to a claimed violation, that any damages complained of were caused by the homeowner's unreasonable failure to minimize or prevent those damages in a timely manner, including the homeowner's failure to allow the defendant reasonable and timely access for inspections and repairs. This includes the failure to give timely notice to the builder after discovery of a violation, but does not include damages due to the builder's untimely or inadequate response to the homeowner's claim [Civ. Code § 945.5(b)].

The defense is based on the allegation that the plaintiff (or the plaintiff's agent, employee, subcontractor, independent contractor, or consultant) failed to follow the defendant's or manufacturer's recommendations, or commonly accepted homeowner maintenance obligations [see Civ. Code § 945.5(c)].

[3] Failure to Follow Recommendations

Under the principles of comparative fault pertaining to affirmative defenses, a builder, general contractor, subcontractor, material supplier, individual product manufacturer, or design professional may be excused, in whole or in part, from any obligation, damage, loss, or liability if he or she can demonstrate, in response to a claimed violation, that any damages complained of were caused by the homeowner's, or the homeowner's agent, employee, subcontractor, independent contractor, or consultant, by virtue of their failure to follow the builder's or manufacturer's recommendations, or commonly accepted homeowner maintenance obligations [Civ. Code § 945.5(c); see Civ. Code § 907]. To rely on this defense as it relates to a recommended maintenance schedule, the builder, general contractor, subcontractor, material supplier, individual product manufacturer, or design professional must show that the homeowner had written notice of these schedules and recommendations and that the recommendations and schedules were reasonable at the time they were issued [Civ. Code § 945.5(c)].

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST) SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., FIRST) CAUSE OF ACTION] defendant alleges that:

The action is barred by the provisions of _____ [Civil Code Section 941(a) or Civil Code Section 896(g)].

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense is for use in an answer to a complaint by a purchaser of a new residential unit (excluding a condominium conversion) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the builder on or after January 1, 2003, and the buyer is seeking to recover damages arising out of, or related to, violation of the statutory construction standards specified in Civ. Code § 896. The defense is based on an allegation that the plaintiff's action was filed after the limitation period applicable to the alleged violations has expired. As described below, the statutory scheme governing these construction defect actions specifies different limitation periods for various violations.

[3] Limitation Periods

With certain limited exceptions, any action brought under the statutory scheme governing construction defects in new residential units (excluding condominium conversions) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003, must be filed within 10 years after substantial completion of the residence, but not later than 10 years after the date a valid notice of completion was recorded [see Civ. Code §§ 938, 941]. The four-year statute of limitations specified for patent defects [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1] and the 10-year statute of limitations for latent defects [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15] do not apply to these actions [Civ. Code § 941(d)].

Exceptions to the 10-year limitation period include all of the following:

- Four years for actions alleging improper operation of electrical systems [Civ. Code § 896(f)];

- One year from original occupancy of adjacent unit for actions alleging noncompliance with governmental inter-unit noise transmission standards [Civ. Code § 896(g)(6)];

- Four years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper installation of untreated steel fences and adjacent components [Civ. Code § 896(g)(9)];

- Five years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper application of paint and stains [Civ. Code § 896(g)(10)];

- Two years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper installation of landscaping systems [Civ. Code § 896(g)(12)]; and

- Two years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper installation of dryer ducts [Civ. Code § 896(g)(14)].

"Close of escrow" means the date of the close of escrow between the builder and the original homeowner. If the claimant is an association, "close of escrow" means the later of the date of substantial completion [see Civ. Code § 1351(a)] or the date the builder relinquishes control over the association's ability to decide whether to initiate a claim [Civ. Code § 895(c)].

For further discussion of the applicability of the statute of limitations for actions involving construction defects in new residential units (excluding condominium conversions) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003, see § 104.43[7].

[3] Valid Release

Under the principles of comparative fault pertaining to affirmative defenses, a builder, general contractor, subcontractor, material supplier, individual product manufacturer, or design professional may be excused, in whole or in part, from any obligation, damage, loss, or liability if he or she can demonstrate, in response to a claimed violation, that he or she has obtained a valid release as to the particular violation or violations alleged by the plaintiff [Civ. Code § 945.5(f)].

The use of a valid release as an affirmative defense must be reconciled with Civ. Code § 926, which provides that the builder may not obtain a release or waiver of any kind in exchange for required repair work.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint for damages, penalty, and attorney's fees is for use by a person induced by a contractor to contract for a work of improvement in reliance on false representations. A person who is induced to contract for a work of improvement, including, but not limited to, a home improvement, in reliance on "false or fraudulent representations or false statements knowingly made" is entitled to recover a penalty of $500, plus reasonable attorney's fees, in addition to any damages sustained by him or her by reason of the false statements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7160].

It is not clear from the language of the statute whether both "statements" and "representations" or only "statements" must be knowingly made for the penalty to apply, or how a "statement" differs from a "representation." The allegations of this form are based on false representations knowingly made (Paragraph 5).

This form may also be used in an action to claim the statutory penalty against a solicitor of a work of improvement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7160].

[3] Venue Requirements for Actions Under Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b)

Special venue requirements apply to actions and proceedings that are limited civil cases arising from an offer or provision of goods, services, loans, or extensions of credit intended primarily for personal, family, or household use (excluding obligations subject to the Unruh Act [see Civ. Code § 1812.10] or other specified laws or transactions) [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86 (limited civil cases)]. In such actions, the proper county for trial is the county in which the buyer signed the contract, the buyer resided at the time the contract was entered into, or the buyer resided at the commencement of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b)]. The plaintiff must state facts in the complaint, verified by plaintiff's oath or the oath of his or her attorney, showing that the action has been commenced in the proper court and that the action is subject to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b). Alternatively, these statements may be made in an affidavit or declaration by the plaintiff or his or her attorney, which must be filed with the complaint and served with the summons [Code Civ. Proc. § 396a].

If a complaint or affidavit is not filed as required by these provisions, no further proceedings may be had in the action or proceeding except to dismiss it without prejudice. However, the court may, on such terms as may be just, permit the affidavit or declaration to be filed and served after the filing of the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 396a(a)].

If it appears from the complaint, affidavit, or declaration, or otherwise that the court in which the action or proceeding is commenced is not the proper court, the court must transfer the action or proceeding to a proper court, on its own motion or the defendant's motion, whenever the fact of improper venue appears. The action or proceeding may be kept in the court where it was filed if the defendant consents in writing, or in open court, to venue in that court. The defendant must be represented by counsel at the time this consent is given [Code Civ. Proc. § 396a].

For further discussion and forms relating to venue, see Ch. 571, Venue .

A copy of the note is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit B.

7. The contract and note were, and are, in violation of the provisions of Civil Code Section 1803.2 in that the retail installment contract was not contained in a single document.

8. By reason of defendant's failure to comply with a provision of the Unruh Act, defendant is barred by the provisions of Civil Code Section 1812.7 from recovery of charges imposed in connection with the contract and the promissory note.

9. Plaintiff has demanded of defendant that he/she/it repay to plaintiff the sum of $_____, which is the total of all finance charges imposed on and paid by plaintiff in connection with the contract and the promissory note. Defendant has failed and refused, and still fails and refuses, to repay the sum, and the whole sum remains unpaid.

10. Under Civil Code Section 1811.1, plaintiff is entitled to reasonable attorney's fees and costs incurred and to be incurred in this action on the contract in an amount to be determined by the court.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For the sum of $_____ as recovery of finance charges paid by plaintiff to defendant;

2. For a declaration that defendant is barred from recovery of any such charges;

3. For reasonable attorney's fees in an amount to be determined by the court;

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a consumer in an action for a statutory penalty [Civ. Code § 1812.7] based on a violation of the Unruh Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.) when a contractor sells a home improvement or an addition to a residence and the promissory note is contained in a separate document from the contract. Under the provisions of the Unruh Act, every retail installment contract, with the exception of certain revolving credit transactions, must be contained in a single document that must include, among other things, any promissory note or other evidence of indebtedness between the parties relating to the transaction [Civ. Code § 1803.2(a)]. A creditor who fails to comply with this requirement, or with any other requirement of the Unruh Act, is barred from recovering any finance, delinquency, collection, extension, deferral, or refinance charge imposed in connection with the transaction in which the failure to comply occurred. In such a case, the buyer has a right to recover any such charges paid to the creditor [Civ. Code § 1812.7].

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges the existence of the contract and the promissory note as separate documents (Paragraphs 5, 6), the violation of the Unruh Act (Paragraph 7), plaintiff's payment of finance charges and demand for their return (Paragraph 9), and that plaintiff is entitled to reasonable attorney's fees (Paragraph 10) [see Civ. Code § 1811.1].

[4] Limited Application of Unruh Act to Building Contracts

The provisions of the Unruh Act are expressly made inapplicable to any contract or series of contracts providing for the construction, sale, or construction and sale of an entire residence, including a mobilehome, or all or part of a structure designed for commercial or industrial occupancy, with or without a parcel of real property or an interest in such a parcel; and to any sale of a lot or parcel of real property, including any site preparation incidental to the sale [Civ. Code § 1801.4].

[5] Venue

Proper venue in an action on a contract or installment account under the provisions of the Unruh Act is in (1) the county in which the contract was signed by the buyer, (2) the county in which the buyer resided at the time the contract was entered into, (3) the county in which the buyer resides at the commencement of the action, or (4) the county in which the goods purchased pursuant to the contract have been so affixed to real property as to become a part of the real property [Civ. Code § 1812.10(a)]. Venue in this action is established by the plaintiff's residence at the commencement of the action (Paragraph 1). If the action is brought in the county in which the contract was signed, the county in which the buyer resided at the time the contract was entered into, or the county in which the improvement was constructed, these facts may be added to Paragraph 5.

[6] Subvenue

The proper court location for trial is the location in the county (1) where the court tries Unruh Act cases that is nearest or most accessible to where the contract was in fact signed by the buyer, (2) where the buyer resided when he or she entered into the contract, (3) where the buyer resides at the commencement of the action, or (4) where the goods purchased under the contract have been so affixed to real property as to become part of that real property. Otherwise, any location of the superior court is the proper location for trial [Civ. Code § 1812.10(b); see Code Civ. Proc. § 402].

[7] Affidavit or Declaration Concerning Venue Required

In any action under the Unruh Act, the plaintiff must either (1) file an affidavit or declaration concurrently with the filing of the complaint, stating facts showing that the action has been commenced in a county or judicial district in which proper venue exists for the trial of the action, or (2) state those facts in a verified complaint. These facts cannot be stated on information or belief [Civ. Code § 1812.10(c); Code Civ. Proc. § 396a(a)].

If the plaintiff fails to comply with these requirements, no further proceedings may be had in the action. The court must, on its own motion or the motion of any party, dismiss the action without prejudice. Alternatively, the court may, on any just terms, permit the affidavit to be filed and served on the defendant after the filing of the complaint [Civ. Code § 1812.10; Code Civ. Proc. § 396a].

[8] State Statutes

Buyer's right to damages for willful violation of Unruh Act. Civ. Code § 1812.9

§ 106.11 Common Carriers Defined

Private corporations and persons who own, operate, control, or manage a line, plant, or system for the transportation of people or property, and common carriers, are public utilities subject to control by the Legislature [Cal. Const., art. XII, § 3]. Under the Public Utilities Code, "common carrier" means every person and corporation providing transportation for compensation to or for the public or any portion of the public, except as otherwise provided in Pub. Util. Code § 201 et seq. [Pub. Util. Code § 211]. Everyone who offers to the public to carry persons, property, or messages (except telegraphic messages) is a common carrier of whatever he or she offers to carry [Civ. Code § 2168]. Every common carrier is a "public utility" subject to the jurisdiction, control, and regulation of the Public Utilities Commission [Pub. Util. Code § 216]. The definition of a common carrier includes every "street railroad corporation" and every "passenger stage corporation" that operates within California [Pub. Util. Code § 211(a),(c)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-106 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 106.12

§ 106.12 Carriers' Duty of Care to Passengers

[1] Carrier for Reward

A carrier of persons for reward must use the utmost care and diligence for their safe carriage, must provide everything necessary for that purpose, and must exercise to that end a reasonable degree of skill [Civ. Code § 2100].

This high standard of care does not make a bus company liable for injuries received by a disembarking passenger if the bus fails to stop directly at the sidewalk curb, but stops as close as possible under the circumstances [MacLean v. City & County of San Francisco (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 263, 272, 273 P.2d 698] . In that situation, a carrier is not responsible for injuries received by a passenger who has alighted safely from a bus but is injured by the condition of the street that must be crossed to reach the sidewalk [MacLean v. City & County of San Francisco (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 263, 271, 273 P.2d 698] .

For discussion of particular provisions of Civ. Code § 2085 et seq., which concern the duties and liabilities of common carriers generally, see Ch. 109, Carriers .

[2] Gratuitous Carrier

Carriers without reward are subject to the same rules as employees without reward, except as far as otherwise provided in Civ. Code § 2085 et seq. [Civ. Code § 2089]. For further discussion, see Ch. 109, Carriers .

Safety regulations set forth in Veh. Code § 34500 et seq. are applicable to a bus, schoolbus, youth bus, farm labor vehicle, or general public paratransit vehicle [Veh. Code § 34500(c)]. They are also applicable to a tour bus [Veh. Code § 34500.1].

[2] Schedule Requiring Excessive Speeds Prohibited

No motor carrier may schedule a run, or permit or require the operation of any motor vehicle subject to Veh. Code § 34500 et seq. between points in a period of time that would require the vehicle to be operated at speeds greater than those prescribed by the Vehicle Code [Veh. Code § 34501.3(a)(1)]. A logbook of a driver that reflects a trip between points within a period of time that would have required excessive speed to complete gives rise to a rebuttable presumption that the driver exceeded the lawful speed limit [Veh. Code § 34501.3(b)].

[3] Schedule Requiring Driver to Exceed Maximum Hours of Service Prohibited

A motor carrier is prohibited from scheduling a run, or permitting or requiring the operation of any motor vehicle subject to Veh. Code § 34500 et seq. between points within a period of time that would require the driver of the vehicle to exceed the applicable maximum hours of service [Veh. Code § 34501.3(a)(2); see also Veh. Code §§ 34501 (requiring regulation of hours of service), 34501.2 (statutory requirements for regulations adopted); 13 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1212-1213]. Violation of this provision is punishable by a fine [see Veh. Code § 34501.3(c)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-106 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 106.14

§ 106.14 Passenger Stage Corporation

[1] Defined

A "passenger stage" includes every stage, auto stage, or other motor vehicle used in the transportation of persons, or persons and their baggage or express, or persons or baggage or express, when the baggage or express is transported incidental to the transportation of passengers [Pub. Util. Code § 225].

A "passenger stage corporation" includes every corporation or person engaged as a common carrier, for compensation, in the ownership, control, operation, or management of any passenger stage over any public highway in California between fixed termini, or over a regular route, unless 98 percent or more of the route (measured by total route mileage operated) is exclusively within the limits of a single city or city and county, or the operations consist solely of transporting pupils between their homes and their educational institutions [Pub. Util. Code § 226(a)].

The fact that a metropolitan transit authority is publicly owned rather than privately owned does not place it outside the general category of "common carrier" within the meaning of Pub. Util. Code § 226. Hence, such a transit authority is subject to regulation by the Public Utilities Commission, which has the power to secure the transit authority's compliance with the Commission's safety regulations [Los Angeles Met. Transit Authority v. Public Util. Com. (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 863, 869-870, 31 Cal. Rptr. 463, 382 P.2d 583] .

[2] Excluded Operations

The term "passenger stage corporation" does not include the following:

1. That part of the operations of any corporation or person engaged in the ownership, control, operation, or management of any passenger stage engaged in the transportation of any pupils or students to and from a public or private school, college, or university or to and from activities of those schools when the rate, charge, or fare for transportation is not computed, collected, or demanded on an individual-fare basis [Pub. Util. Code § 226(b)];

2. The transportation of persons between home and work locations or of persons having a common work-related trip purpose in a vehicle having a seating capacity of 15 or less, including the driver; or in a vehicle that is used for ridesharing and has a seating capacity of more than 15 passengers, if the driver files evidence of liability insurance and pays a special fee, and the vehicle passes an annual safety inspection [see Pub. Util. Code § 226(c); see also Veh. Code § 522 ("ridesharing" defined)]. This exemption does not apply if the primary purpose for the transportation is to make a profit [Pub. Util. Code § 226(c)];

3. That part of the operations of any corporation or person engaged in the ownership, control, operation, or management of any medical transportation vehicles, including vehicles employed to transport developmentally disabled persons for regional centers established pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 4620 et seq. [Pub. Util. Code § 226(d)];

4. The transportation of persons ancillary to commercial river rafting, and for the sole purpose of returning passengers to the point of origin of their rafting trip [Pub. Util. Code § 226(e)];

5. Social-service transportation by a nonprofit social-service transportation provider or a locally licensed or franchised for-profit transportation provider under contract with a nonprofit organization, if the vehicle is a dedicated vehicle that does not carry more than 16 persons including the driver, and the services are not offered over regularly scheduled or fixed routes [Pub. Util. Code § 226(f); see Gov. Code § 15985 (public utilities statutes and regulations relating to common carriers do not apply to social-service transportation)]; and

6. Intrastate operations conducted under federal authority to the extent that regulation is preempted by the federal Bus Regulatory Reform Act of 1982 (Pub. L. No. 97-261), as amended [Pub. Util. Code § 226(g)].

§ 106.15 Charter-Party Carriers of Passengers

[1] Defined

The term "charter-party carrier of passengers" means every person engaged in the transportation of persons by motor vehicle for compensation, whether in common or contract carriage, over any public highway in California [Pub. Util. Code § 5360].

The term does not, however, apply to any of the following:

1. Transportation service rendered wholly within the corporate limits of a single city or city and county and licensed or regulated by ordinance [Pub. Util. Code § 5353(a)].

2. Transportation of school pupils conducted by or under contract with the governing board of any school district [see Pub. Util. Code § 5353(b)].

3. Passenger stage corporations between fixed termini over a regular route [see Pub. Util. Code § 5353(c); see also Pub. Util. Code § 1031 et seq.];

4. Occasional transportation services afforded for farm employees [see Pub. Util. Code § 5353(d)].

5. Transportation service rendered by a publicly owned transit system [Pub. Util. Code § 5353(e)].

6. Passenger vehicles that carry passengers on a noncommercial enterprise basis [Pub. Util. Code § 5353(f)].

7. Taxicab transportation services that are licensed and regulated by a city or county that are designed for carrying not more than eight persons excluding the driver [Pub. Util. Code § 5353(g)].

8. Transportation of persons between home and work locations or of persons having a common work-related trip purpose in a vehicle that seats 15 passengers or less, including the driver; or in a vehicle that is used for ridesharing (incidental to the driver's main purpose) and seats more than 15 passengers, if the driver files evidence of liability insurance and pays a special fee, and the vehicle passes an annual safety inspection [see Veh. Code § 522 ("ridesharing" defined)]. This exemption does not apply if the primary purpose for the transportation is to make a profit [see Pub. Util. Code § 5353(h)].

9. Medical transportation vehicles, including vehicles that transport developmentally disabled persons [see Pub. Util. Code § 5353(i)].

10. Transportation services rendered solely within the Lake Tahoe Basin [see Pub. Util. Code § 5353(j)].

11. Subject to Veh. Code § 34507.6 (requiring carrier identification numbers for buses), transportation service provided by the operator of an automobile rental business in vehicles owned or leased by that operator, without charge other than that included in the automobile rental charges, to carry its customers to or from its office or facility where rental vehicles are furnished or returned after the rental period [Pub. Util. Code § 5353(k)].

12. Subject to Veh. Code § 34507.6 (requiring carrier identification numbers for buses), transportation service provided by a hotel, motel, or other place of temporary lodging in vehicles owned or leased by that operator, without charge other than that included in the lodging, between the lodging facility and an air, rail, water, or bus passenger terminal or between the lodging facility and any place of entertainment or commercial attraction, including facilities providing snow skiing, but excluding round-trip sight-seeing service that requires a permit under Pub. Util. Code § 5384(c) [Pub. Util. Code § 5353(l)].

13. Transportation of hot air balloon ride passengers in a balloon chase vehicle from the balloon landing site back to the original take-off site, provided that the balloon ride was conducted by a balloonist who meets specified conditions [see Pub. Util. Code § 5353(m)].

14. Transportation incidental to the operation of youth camps, as defined, provided specified conditions are met [Pub. Util. Code § 5353(n)].

[2] Certificate to Operate Charter-Party Carrier

No charter-party carrier of passengers is permitted to engage in transportation services subject to Pub. Util. Code § 5351 et seq. without first obtaining a certificate that public convenience and necessity require the operation [Pub. Util. Code § 5371]. The certificate requirement does not apply to transit districts, transit authorities, or cities owning and operating local transit systems themselves or through wholly owned nonprofit corporations, nor to certain specialized carriers defined in Pub. Util. Code § 5384 [Pub. Util. Code § 5371].

No charter-party carrier of passengers initially issued a certificate is restricted with regard to point of origin or destination in California [Pub. Util. Code § 5371.1(a)]. This initial certificate is a Class A certificate [see Pub. Util. Code § 5383]. A permit or certificate, or a renewal of a permit or certificate, is effective for three years, unless suspended or revoked by the commission [Pub. Util. Code § 5376]. All other persons who have obtained a certificate operate from a service area determined by the Public Utilities Commission, limited to a radius of 40 air miles from the home terminal [Pub. Util. Code § 5371.2]. This restricted certificate is a Class B certificate [Pub. Util. Code §§ 5371.2, 5383]. A Class C certificate enables charter-party carriers to provide services incidental to commercial balloon operations, commercial river rafting, or skiing when no additional compensation is provided for transportation [Pub. Util. Code § 5383]. If a complaint is made to the Public Utilities Commission that a charter-party carrier is operating without a valid certificate or permit, the Commission may order the carrier to cease and desist from operation until the Commission decides the matter or makes a further order [Pub. Util. Code § 5379.5].

[3] Permit to Operate Charter-Party Carrier

The Public Utilities Commission issues permits to persons, who are otherwise qualified, whose passenger-carrier operations fall into the following categories [Pub. Util. Code § 5384]:

- Specialized carriers who do not hold themselves out to serve the general public, but only provide services under contract with industrial and business firms, governmental agencies, and private schools, or who only transport agricultural workers to and from farms for compensation, or who only conduct transportation services that are incidental to another business. These permits are limited to a 50 mile radius of operation from the home terminal;

- Carriers using only vehicles that seat fewer than 15 passengers and are under 25 feet in length; and

- Carriers conducting round-trip sightseeing tour services.

[1] Defined

A "tour bus" is a bus that is operated by or for a charter-party carrier of passengers, as defined in Pub. Util. Code § 5360, or a passenger stage corporation as defined in Pub. Util. Code § 226, or any highway carrier of passengers required to register with the California Public Utilities Commission pursuant to Pub. Util. Code § 3910 [Veh. Code § 612].

[2] Inspection of Tour Buses

Tour bus operators must comply with the systematic inspection, maintenance, and lubrication services required of all motor carriers. They must also require inspections of each tour bus at least every 45 days, or more often if necessary to ensure safe operation. The tour bus may not be used to transport passengers until any discovered defects are corrected [Veh. Code § 34505].

[3] Administrative Remedies for Safety Violations

If a tour bus operator either (1) fails to maintain any vehicle used in transportation for compensation in a safe operating condition, or fails to comply with the Vehicle Code or safety regulations, and the failure presents an imminent danger to public safety or is consistent enough to warrant remedial action; or (2) fails to comply with required reporting procedures, the carrier's operating authority is subject to suspension, denial, or revocation or other administrative action [see Veh. Code § 34505.1(a); see also Veh. Code § 40000.21(e) (violation of Veh. Code § 34505 as misdemeanor); 13 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1200-1270 (safety regulations)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-106 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 106.17

§ 106.17 General Public Paratransit Vehicles

[1] Defined

A "general public paratransit vehicle" is any motor vehicle that is designed to carry no more than 24 persons and the driver, and that provides local transportation to the general public, including transportation of pupils at or below the 12th-grade level to or from a public or private school or school activity, under the exclusive jurisdiction of a publicly owned and operated transit system through one of the following modes: dial-a-ride, subscription service, or route-deviated bus service. Vehicles used for the exclusive transportation of the handicapped, as defined by Pub. Util. Code § 99206.5, or of persons 55 years of age or older, including any persons necessary to provide assistance to these passengers, are not general public paratransit vehicles [Veh. Code § 336].

However, transportation of attendants, companions, or both traveling together with those individuals who are determined to be eligible for complementary paratransit services in accordance with Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act (42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.) and federal regulations adopted pursuant to the Act, is not sufficient to qualify a vehicle as a general public paratransit vehicle [Veh. Code § 336].

[2] Certificate to Operate General Public Paratransit Vehicle

A person who operates a general public paratransit vehicle must possesses a valid driver's license of the appropriate class endorsed for passenger transportation when operating a vehicle designed, used, or maintained to carry more than ten persons including the driver. The operator must also possess either (1) a certificate issued by the California Department of Motor Vehicles to operate a general public paratransit vehicle, or (2) a certificate issued by the DMV to drive a schoolbus or school pupil-activity bus pursuant to Veh. Code § 12517 [Veh. Code § 12523.5(a)]. An applicant for a certificate must present evidence that he or she has successfully completed a driver-training course consisting of a minimum of 40 hours of instruction within the previous two years [Veh. Code § 12523.5(b)]. An applicant seeking to renew a certificate must present evidence that he or she has received two hours of refresher training during each 12 months of driver's certificate validity [Veh. Code § 12523.5(b)]. An operator must use seat belts, refrain from smoking, and report any accident reportable under Veh. Code § 16000 to the Department of the California Highway Patrol [Veh. Code § 12523.5(d)].

A person holding a valid certificate issued prior to January 1, 1991, is not required to reapply for a certificate to satisfy any additional requirements imposed by 1990 legislation (Stats. 1990, ch. 1360) until the certificate expires or is cancelled or revoked [Veh. Code § 12523.5(e)]. Veh. Code §§ 12517.2, 12517.3, 12517.4, discussed below, were added by that chapter, and are therefore covered by Veh. Code § 12523.5(e).

Applicants for an original or renewal certificate to drive a general public paratransit vehicle (and certain other vehicles) must submit a report of a medical examination of the applicant given not more than two years prior to the date of the application by a physician licensed to practice medicine, a licensed advanced practice registered nurse qualified to perform a medical examination, or a licensed physician assistant. The report must be on a form approved by the DMV, the Federal Highway Administration, or the Federal Aviation Administration [Veh. Code § 12517.2(a)]. Applicants for an original certificate to drive a general public paratransit vehicle (and certain other vehicles) must be fingerprinted by the Department of the California Highway Patrol on a form provided or approved by the DMV for submission to the Department of Justice [Veh. Code § 12517.3(a)].

The certificate to drive a general public paratransit vehicle (and certain other vehicles) is issued only to applicants meeting all applicable provisions of the California Vehicle Code and passing the examinations prescribed by the DMV and the Department of the California Highway Patrol [Veh. Code § 12517.4(a)]. A temporary driver's certificate is issued by the CHP after an applicant has cleared a criminal history background check by the Department of Justice and, if applicable, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and has passed the examinations and meets all other applicable provisions of the Vehicle Code [Veh. Code § 12517.4(b)]. A permanent driver's certificate is issued by the DMV after an applicant has passed all tests and met all applicable provisions of the Vehicle Code. Certificates are valid for a maximum of five years and expire on the fifth birthday following the issuance of an original certificate or the expiration of a renewed certificate [Veh. Code § 12517.4(c)]. In addition, restrictions may be placed on the certificate [see Veh. Code § 12517.4(d), (e)].

[3] Regulation of General Public Paratransit Vehicles

The Department of the California Highway Patrol must inspect each vehicle at least once a year to certify that its condition complies with all provisions of law, including being equipped with a fire extinguisher, first-aid kit, and three-point tie downs for transporting wheelchair passengers [Veh. Code § 34501.8(a)].

Chapter 106 BUSES AND STREETCARS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-106 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 106.18

§ 106.18 Street Railroad

[1] Definition

"Street railroad" includes every railway, and each branch or extension of every railway, operated by any type of power, that is mainly on, along, above, or below any street, avenue, road, highway, bridge, or public place within any city or city and county, together with all real estate, fixtures, and personal property of every kind used in connection with it, and that is owned, controlled, operated, or managed for public use in the transportation of persons or property. It does not include a railway constituting or used as a part of a commercial or interurban railway [Pub. Util. Code § 231]. "Street railroad corporation" includes every corporation or person owning, controlling, operating, or managing any street railroad for compensation within California, or owning, controlling, operating, or managing as a part of or in conjunction with such street railroad any automobile, jitney bus, stage, or auto stage used in the business of transportation of persons or property for compensation over any route [Pub. Util. Code § 232].

[2] Mutual Duties of Streetcars and Automobiles

The duties of a streetcar operator and those of the driver of an automobile that is about to cross the streetcar tracks at an intersection are reciprocal; each is required to approach the intersection with due regard for the right of the other [Wright v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 168, 173, 93 P.2d 135 (streetcar)]. For example, a streetcar operator is required to watch vigilantly for automobiles approaching the tracks and to have the streetcar under control when approaching a street intersection; the fact that a streetcar was not exceeding the speed limit as it approached an intersection does not excuse any negligent operation of the car [Bennett v. Central California Trac. Co. (1931) 115 Cal. App. 1, 12, 1 P.2d 47] .

[3] Right of Action for Overcharging

Any corporation, or its agent or employee, demanding a greater sum of money for fare on the cars of a street railroad than that fixed by law forfeits to the person from whom the sum is received, or who is overcharged, the sum of $200, to be recovered in a civil action against the corporation [Pub. Util. Code § 7814].

[4] Application of Railroad Law Generally

Pub. Util. Code § 7801 et seq., which governs street railroads exclusively, generally concerns such matters as the establishment of rights of way between different street railroad lines, and track construction [see, e.g., Pub. Util. Code § 7806 (municipality's authority to grant rights of way to different railway companies)]. Street railroads are also governed by Pub. Util. Code § 7501 et seq., so far as those provisions are applicable, unless street railroads are specifically excepted [Pub. Util. Code § 7801]. Certain of those provisions relating to injuries to passengers and other persons, are discussed in Ch. 485, Railroads .

10-106 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Court Decisions

[1] Carrier-Passenger Relationship

Common carriers owe a duty of utmost care and vigilance of a very cautious person towards their passengers. Acosta v. Southern California Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 19, 27 ; Rogers v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 414, 417, 289 P.2d 226

Carrier-passenger relationship arises when a passenger enters the vehicle with intent to pay or pays fare or goes to site of departure and carrier's actions indicate acceptance of person as passenger. Gray v. City & County of San Francisco (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 319, 323, 20 Cal. Rptr. 894 ; Lagomarsino v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 388, 395, 158 P.2d 982 ; Sanchez v. Pacific Auto Stages (1931) 116 Cal. App. 392, 396-398, 2 P.2d 845

Carrier-passenger relationship is not sustained when prospective passenger merely stands in indicated area prior to immediate approach of carrier's vehicle. Lagomarsino v. Market S. R. Co. (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 388, 395

Carrier assuming duty of conducting passenger to point of departure creates a carrier-passenger relationship. Sanchez v. Pacific Auto Stages (1931) 116 Cal. App. 392, 396-397, 2 P.2d 845

Carrier slowing down its vehicle to enable some persons to board it establishes carrier-passenger relationship. Hart v. Fresno Traction Co. (1917) 175 Cal. 489, 491, 167 P. 885

Carrier slowing its vehicle to virtual standstill in response to prospective passenger's signal and person starting to board vehicle creates carrier-passenger relationship. Nilson v. Oakland Traction Co. (1909) 10 Cal. App. 103, 109, 101 P. 413

Creation of carrier-passenger relationship by carrier's acceptance of person as passenger can be being implied regardless of whether carrier actually knows of passenger's presence on vehicle. Ivancich v. Davies (1921) 186 Cal. 520, 523-524, 199 P. 784 ; Hellman v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1934) 135 Cal. App. 627, 635, 27 P.2d 946

[2] Buses

Assumption of risk is not shown, and jury is justified in concluding that bus passenger did not have actual knowledge and appreciation of danger involved in resting arm on window sill of bus so as to find that he consented to risk or knew of and appreciated hazard. Rogers v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 414, 418, 289 P.2d 226

Evidence of carrier's custom of stopping bus in crosswalk, even though it tends to show violation of law, is admissible to prove right of passenger who was familiar with custom to rely on its continuance. Fowler v. Key System Transit Lines (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 65, 73, 230 P.2d 339

Passenger assumes known risk of ordinary movements of bus or streetcar. Mudrick v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 724, 733-734, 81 P.2d 950 ; McIntosh v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 90, 96, 59 P.2d 959 ; Tait v. San Francisco (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 787, 793, 300 P.2d 74

Res ipsa loquitur is applicable to passenger injury caused when bus lurched as it rounded curve. McIntosh v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 90, 93-94, 59 P.2d 959 ; Ferrate v. Key System Transit Lines (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 391, 397-398, 331 P.2d 991

Carrier is not liable to prospective passenger who falls while standing on sidewalk marked as bus zone. Kotronakis v. City & County of San Francisco (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 624, 627, 13 Cal. Rptr. 709

Res ipsa loquitur is applicable when bus passengers are injured as result of collision between car and bus. Stewart v. Miranda (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 373, 375, 338 P.2d 941

Res ipsa loquitur is applicable when bus seat breaks and causes injuries to passenger's leg despite absence of unusual streetcar movements or movements of person in seat. Adam v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 535, 538-540, 317 P.2d 642

Res ipsa loquitur is applicable when bus comes to sudden stop after having run into ladders that extended from truck in front of bus. Jacob v. Key System Transit Lines (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 357, 361, 363, 295 P.2d 569

Bus stopping away from sidewalk curb but as close as practical under circumstances does not establish negligence. MacLean v. City & County of San Francisco (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 263, 272, 273 P.2d 698

Carrier is not responsible for injuries to passenger who alights safely from bus but is injured by condition of street that must be crossed to reach sidewalk. MacLean v. City & County of San Francisco (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 263, 271, 273 P.2d 698

Passenger who alights from bus in complete safety and then crosses street where there is no crosswalk assumes responsibility for his conduct. Hill v. Wilson (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 472, 475, 268 P.2d 748

In action by passenger for injuries received from fall caused by sudden stopping of bus, defense of imminent peril is available. Abney v. City & County of San Francisco (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 506, 514, 252 P.2d 654 (bus stopped to avoid hitting child); Dodge v. San Diego Electric Ry. Co. (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 759, 767, 208 P.2d 37 (bus stopped to avoid collision)

When passenger is injured by sudden stopping of bus, appellate court as bound by finding of judge in nonjury case that driver was confronted with choice of either stopping bus or striking car in front of it; issue whether bus driver acted in manner that was reasonably prudent for safety of his passengers is question of fact. Aboudara v. City & County of San Francisco (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 630, 632, 251 P.2d 32

Res ipsa loquitur is applicable when passenger is injured by suitcase falling from luggage rack because of sudden bus movement. Williamson v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 482, 486-488, 177 P.2d 977

Res ipsa loquitur is applicable when bus runs off highway. Lawrence v. Pickwick Stages, N.D. (1924) 68 Cal. App. 494, 498-499, 229 P. 885

[3] Carriers' Duty of Care

Common carriers have duty to exercise utmost degree of care. McBride v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 113, 116, 279 P.2d 966 (railroad accident); Greyhound Lines, Inc. v. Superior Court (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 356, 360, 83 Cal. Rptr. 343 , cert. denied, 400 U.S. 868

Carrier is not insurer of absolute safety of passengers. Rocray v. Pasadena City Lines, Inc. (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 265, 269, 323 P.2d 772

[4] Street Railroads

Refusing to give instruction that riding on steps of streetcar constituted contributory negligence as matter of law is proper when instruction omitted important qualification that conduct might be excused under certain circumstances. Combs v. Los Angeles Railway Corp. (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 606, 609, 177 P.2d 293 , disapproved on other ground in Alarid v. Vanier (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 617, 623-624, 327 P.2d 897

Negligence is not shown when person had no reason to believe safety zone in which he was standing would be within area of overswing of streetcar making turn. Brandenburg v. Pac. Gas & Elec. Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 282, 287, 169 P.2d 909

Carrier is obligated to instruct streetcar motorman to warn any person, whether passenger or not, of danger existing from improper location of safety zone that created foreseeable risk of danger from overswing of turning streetcar. Brandenburg v. Pac. Gas & Elec. Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 282, 286-287, 169 P.2d 909

Streetcar and automobile drivers owe to each other reciprocal duties of care on approaching intersection. Wright v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 168, 173, 93 P.2d 135 ; Aungst v. Central California Trac. Co. (1931) 115 Cal. App. 113, 116, 1 P.2d 56

Res ipsa loquitur is applicable when passenger is injured in collision between two streetcars. Osgood v. Los Angeles etc. Co. (1902) 137 Cal. 280, 283, 70 P. 169 ; Hyman v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 647, 650-651, 107 P.2d 485

Street railway company is liable as principal for all actual damages suffered by passenger from wrongful expulsion by conductor even though conductor was expressly forbidden to act as he did; carrier is not liable for exemplary and punitive damages unless employee's acts were within express or implied authority of employer. Turner v. N. B. & M. R.R. Co. (1868) 34 Cal. 594, 599-600

In passenger's suit for personal injuries caused by sudden swerving of bus to avoid collision with automobile and subsequent overturning of bus, whether bus was in position of imminent danger when driver first saw oncoming car, and whether driver's subsequent conduct constituted negligence, are jury questions. James v. American Buslines (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 273, 276, 244 P.2d 503

Streetcar operator approaching traffic-congested avenue in highly developed area with another streetcar obscuring view of operator is approaching place fraught with peril; operator is required to be constantly on lookout and to use such reasonable precautions as circumstances require. Saphire v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 880, 883, 222 P.2d 956

In passenger's suit for personal injuries caused by sudden application of brakes by streetcar operator to avoid hitting truck that suddenly entered street, jury instruction on sudden emergency doctrine is proper. Bovette v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 860, 863, 179 P.2d 80

Streetcar operator is required to use ordinary degree of care not to injure pedestrian in crosswalk; pedestrian is entitled to rely on streetcar to sound warnings it customarily sounds when approaching point where he walks. Amendt v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 248, 253, 115 P.2d 588

Pedestrian and streetcar have mutual rights to use area of streetcar tracks, and pedestrian is not negligent as matter of law because he crosses streetcar track knowing car is approaching or because he walks in close proximity thereto. Amendt v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 248, 253, 115 P.2d 588

Carrier is liable for streetcar's premature start that caused injury to passenger. Keyser v. San Diego Electric Ry. Co. (1936) 16 Cal. App. 2d 48, 55, 60 P.2d 136

Passenger is negligent when he boards moving streetcar in violation of ordinance and conduct proximately contributes to passenger's injury. Schultheiss v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 525, 527, 54 P.2d 49

Negligence finding is sustained on appeal by evidence that passenger had worked in neighborhood, had taken streetcar for over a year, and knew that rear overhang of car would jut out as it went around curve. Dwyer v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1931) 115 Cal. App. 709, 712, 2 P.2d 468

Streetcar operator is required to be vigilant in watching for automobiles approaching tracks and to have his streetcar under control when approaching street intersection. Bennett v. Central California Trac. Co. (1931) 115 Cal. App. 1, 12, 1 P.2d 47

Fact that streetcar is not exceeding speed limit as it approaches street intersection is not excusing negligent operation of car. Bennett v. Central California Trac. Co. (1931) 115 Cal. App. 1, 12, 1 P.2d 47

Workman whose duty requires him to be on street is not required to look continually for approach of streetcar. Driscoll v. California St. R.R. Co. (1926) 80 Cal. App. 208, 219, 250 P. 1062 (municipal employee excavating between streetcar tracks struck by car); Milosevich v. Pacific Electric Ry. Co. (1924) 68 Cal. App. 662, 672, 230 P. 15 (pipe layer struck by streetcar and killed)

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for damages for personal injuries based on negligence brought by a passenger who was attempting to board the vehicle of a carrier of passengers for reward or a common carrier of passengers.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges: (1) a legal duty on the carrier's part to use the highest degree of care for the passenger's safety pursuant to Civ. Code § 2100 (Paragraphs 4-6); (2) a breach of such duty (Paragraph 6); (3) injury to person proximately caused by such breach (Paragraph 7); and (4) damages (Paragraphs 7-10).

The complaint also alleges the filing of a claim with a public entity and either its total or partial rejection (Paragraphs 11-12). This allegation must be used if the passenger was injured by a vehicle owned and operated by a public transit authority because Gov. Code § 905 requires that such a claim be presented to the appropriate public entity as a prerequisite to filing suit against it.

[4] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[5] Specification of Damages

In an action to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages for anything other than personal injury or wrongful death (for example, property damage) must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)], or an equivalent statement must be included--for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint, see Ch. 177 Damages, , and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115].

[6] Carrier-Passenger Relationship

A carrier of persons for reward must use the utmost care and diligence for their safe carriage, must provide everything necessary for that purpose, and must exercise to that end a reasonable degree of skill [Civ. Code § 2100]. While a carrier of persons for reward is obligated to exercise this high standard of care for the safety of its passengers, it needs to utilize only ordinary care for the safety of nonpassengers [see Amendt v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 248, 253, 256, 115 P.2d 588 (pedestrian); Sanchez v. Pacific Auto Stages (1931) 116 Cal. App. 392, 396, 2 P.2d 845 (station premises)]. It is therefore essential for a plaintiff to allege that he was a passenger of the carrier in order to activate the higher standard of care. The relation of carrier and passenger does not exist where a prospective passenger is merely standing in an indicated area prior to the immediate approach of the carrier's vehicle [Lagomarsino v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 388, 395, 158 P.2d 982] , but it arises when the carrier acts in a way which indicates an acceptance of the person as a passenger [Gray v. City & County of San Francisco (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 319, 323, 20 Cal. Rptr. 894] .

The range of actions by the carrier which can indicate an acceptance of a person as a passenger is wide. Included are actions such as assuming the duty of conducting the person to the point of departure [Sanchez v. Pacific Auto Stages (1931) 116 Cal. App. 392, 396-397, 2 P.2d 845 (helping person across highway)], stopping the vehicle and preparing to immediately recieve a person as a passenger who intends to board the vehicle and is standing alongside the vehicle [Lagomarsino v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 388, 395, 158 P.2d 982] , slowing down the vehicle to enable some persons to board it [Hart v. Fresno Traction Co. (1917) 175 Cal. 489, 491, 167 P. 885] , and slowing a vehicle to a virtual standstill in response to a prospective passenger's signal and the person is in the act of boarding the vehicle [Nilson v. Oakland Traction Co. (1909) 10 Cal. App. 103, 109, 101 P. 413] . Hence, while it is not necessary to allege actual payment of the fare and, furthermore, while the relation of carrier and passenger can be implied [Ivancich v. Davies (1921) 186 Cal. 520, 523-524, 199 P. 784 ; Hellman v. Los Angeles R. Corp. (1934) 135 Cal. App. 627, 635, 27 P.2d 946] , as the four preceding cases indicate it is essential to allege some facts which demonstrate that the operator of the vehicle accepted the person as a passenger in order to activate the high standard of care required of carriers for reward.

§ 106.41 Allegations--Boarding Passenger Injured When Struck by Closing Doors

[1] FORM Allegations--Boarding Passenger Injured When Struck by Closing Doors

1. Defendant _____ [name of carrier], on or about _____ [date], while engaged as a [common] carrier [of passengers for reward], by and through its agents, servants, and employees, stopped one of its _____ [buses or designate other type of vehicle] at the _____ corner of the intersection of _____ and _____ Streets in _____ [city], California, and invited plaintiff, who was then standing at or near that corner, to board the vehicle. Plaintiff accepted the invitation and commenced to board the vehicle at the place provided for persons to board it with the means and intention of paying his fare and being carried by defendant as a passenger for reward. Defendant then and there received the plaintiff as a passenger for reward.

2. Defendant _____ [name of carrier], by and through its agents and employees, then and there negligently and carelessly failed to manage, operate, and control the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle] in a careful and prudent manner with the utmost care and diligence for the safety and welfare of plaintiff as a passenger as he was boarding the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle], in that defendant, acting by and through its agents and employees, negligently, carelessly, and unlawfully caused the doors of the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle] to close and thus to strike plaintiff, and then to open and close rapidly, again striking plaintiff with great force and violence, causing plaintiff to be thrown to the _____ [ground or floor of the vehicle], and thereby injuring plaintiff as alleged below.

[2] Use of Form

These allegations are for use in a complaint in an action by a passenger injured by the closing doors of a bus, streetcar, or other transit vehicle while the passenger was attempting to board the vehicle. The complaint alleges that a carrier is liable for doors closing on a boarding passenger [Rocray v. Pasadena City Lines, Inc. (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 265, 270, 323 P.2d 772 ; Gamwell v. Key System Transit Lines (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 308, 309-310, 294 P.2d 1035] .

§ 106.42 Allegations--Passenger With Special Physical Condition Injured While Attempting to Board Bus

[1] FORM Allegations--Passenger With Special Physical Condition Injured While Attempting to Board Bus

1. Defendant _____ [name of carrier], on or about _____ [date], while engaged as a [common] carrier [of passengers for reward], by and through its agents, servants, and employees, stopped one of its _____ [buses or designate other type of vehicle] at the _____ corner of the intersection of _____ and _____ Streets in _____ [city], California, and invited plaintiff, who was then standing at or near that corner, to board the vehicle. Plaintiff accepted the invitation and commenced to board the vehicle at the place provided for persons to board it, with the means and intention of paying his fare and being carried by defendant as a passenger for reward. Defendant received the plaintiff as a passenger for reward.

2. Plaintiff is, and at that time was, obviously and apparently _____ [blind or sick or aged or very young or crippled or infirm]. Defendant _____ [name of carrier], by and through its agent and employee _____ [name of agent], negligently and carelessly failed to render plaintiff the necessary assistance in boarding the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle]. As a proximate result thereof, plaintiff fell to the _____ [ground or floor of the vehicle], thereby injuring plaintiff as alleged below.

[2] Use of Form

These allegations are for use in a complaint in an action by a passenger with a known special physical condition who was injured while boarding the carrier's vehicle because of the carrier's failure to render the passenger necessary assistance. A carrier is obligated to render necessary assistance, in boarding or alighting, to a passenger who is known to be blind, sick, aged, very young, crippled or infirm [McBride v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 113, 119120, 279 P.2d 966 (crippled passenger's crutches slipped on wet cigar butt lying on train steps)]. In general, a carrier owes a greater degree of care to child passengers than to adult passengers [Mudrick v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 724, 734, 81 P.2d 950 ; *Brizzolari v. Market S. _____

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a public corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California with its principal office for the transaction of business in _____ [city], _____ County, California. At all times herein mentioned, defendant was in the business of operating a public bus transit system in _____ [city], _____ County, California.

2. At all times herein mentioned, defendant owned and operated as part of its business activities a bus bearing California License No. _____. This bus was involved in the accident alleged below.

3. At all times herein mentioned _____ Street and _____ Street were and are intersecting public streets and highways in _____ [city], _____ County, California, and run in a _____ and a _____ direction, respectively.

4. On _____ [date], at about _____ [time], plaintiff was a fare paying passenger on defendant's above described bus which was traveling _____ [direction] on _____ Street _____ [direction] of its intersection with _____ Street.

5. At that time and place, the bus was being operated by one _____ [name] who was the agent and employee of defendant and was operating the bus in the course and scope of his agency and employment.

6. At that time and place, defendant through its agents and employees so negligently owned, operated, and maintained its bus as to cause it to stop suddenly.

7. As a proximate result of the negligence of defendant, as herein alleged, plaintiff was knocked to the floor of the bus, whereby he sustained serious and severe injuries, some of which may be permanent, to various parts of his body, and was rendered sick, sore, and disabled, all to his damage.

8. As a further proximate result of defendant's negligence, as herein alleged, and the injuries sustained by plaintiff, plaintiff was reasonably required to incur, and did incur, expenses for extensive hospitalization, medical attention and treatment, and allied services in a total amount presently undetermined. Plaintiff is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that he will reasonably be required in the future to incur additional expenses for hospitalization, medical care and treatment, and related services.

9. As a further proximate result of defendant's negligence, as herein alleged, plaintiff was rendered unable to engage in his usual occupation of _____ [specify]. Plaintiff is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that he will continue for some time in the future to be unable to pursue his occupation.

10. On _____ [date], plaintiff filed a verified claim with defendant for damages sustained by him as a result of the negligence of defendant as herein alleged. A copy of the claim is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof.

11. _____ [On _____ (date), defendant rejected and denied plaintiff's claim _____ (in full or except as to $_____) or Defendant neither approved nor rejected plaintiff's claim within the time provided by law, and the claim is therefore, under the provisions of Section 912.4 of the Government Code, deemed denied].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. For general damages according to proof for personal injury.

2. For hospital, medical, and allied expenses according to proof.

3. For loss of earnings according to proof.

4. For costs of suit herein incurred.

5. For such other relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for damages for personal injuries based on negligence brought by a passenger who was thrown to the floor when the bus stopped suddenly. A passenger is not required, as matter of law, to anticipate a "sudden" or "violent" jerk that has sufficient force to throw the passenger to the ground [Acosta v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 19, 27, 84 Cal. Rptr. 184, 465 P.2d 72 ; Dempsey v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1943) 23 Cal. 2d 110, 113, 142 P.2d 929] . The form is adapted from the complaint filed in Acosta v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 19, 84 Cal. Rptr. 184, 465 P.2d 72 . In Acosta, the plaintiff sued only the transit district without joining the bus driver. For a complaint which names the driver of the vehicle as well, see § 106.40[1].

The res ipsa loquitur doctrine creates an inference of a carrier's negligence when a passenger is injured in the movement or operation of the carrier's vehicle [Hardin v. San Jose City Lines, Inc. (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 432, 436, 260 P.2d 63 ; Mudrick v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 724, 729-734, 81 P.2d 950 ; Gray v. City & County of San Francisco (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 319, 326, 20 Cal. Rptr. 894] . This doctrine applies to a passenger's injury that is caused when the carrier's vehicle starts with a jerk [McIntosh v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 90, 93-94, 59 P.2d 959 ; Ferrate v. Key System Transit Lines (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 391, 397-398, 331 P.2d 991 ; Kerr v. Key Sys. Transit Lines (1956) 145 Cal. App. 2d 631, 633-635, 302 P.2d 884 ; Freitas v. Peerless Stages, Inc. (1952) 108 Cal. App. 2d 749, 758, 239 P.2d 671] .

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for damages for personal injuries based on negligence brought by a passenger who was thrown about the interior of a bus or other vehicle and then to the floor when the driver negligently collided with an automobile. The res ipsa loquitur doctrine is applicable to a situation where a bus came to a sudden stop after having run into ladders which extended from the truck being driven in front of bus [Jacob v. Key System Transit Lines (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 357, 361, 363, 295 P.2d 569] and to a situation when there was a collision between a car and the bus [*Stewart v. Miranda (1959) 170 Cal. As a result thereof plaintiff sustained injuries as alleged below.

[2] Use of Form

This allegation is for use in a complaint for damages for personal injuries based on negligence brought by a passenger who was thrown about the interior of a bus or other vehicle and then to the floor when the driver negligently collided with another bus or other type of vehicle. Res ipsa loquitur is applicable to a situation where a passenger is injured in a collision between two streetcars [Osgood v. Los Angeles Traction Co. (1902) 137 Cal. 280, 283, 70 P. 169 ; Hyman v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 647, 651, 107 P.2d 485] . Additionally, a passenger injured by concurrent negligence of two carriers is entitled to recover from either or both carriers [Simmons v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1922) 60 Cal. App. 140, 142, 212 P. 641] .

§ 106.51 Allegation--Passenger Thrown About Interior of Cable Car When Obstruction in Cable Slot Caused Sudden Stop

[1] FORM Allegation--Passenger Thrown About Interior of Cable Car When Obstruction in Cable Slot Caused Sudden Stop

On or about _____ [date], at about _____ [time], plaintiff was riding as a fare paying passenger on the aforementioned cable car of defendant City and County of San Francisco. The cable car was proceeding in a generally _____ direction on _____ Street and was crossing tracks maintained by defendant on _____ Street. By reason of the carelessness and negligence of the owners, operators, maintainers, and controllers of the cables, tracks, slots, and other appurtenances of the _____ Street Line and the _____ Street Line, which it crossed, in maintaining the cables, tracks, and appurtenances in a dangerous and hazardous condition, and allowing an obstruction on and in the tracks and slots to obstruct the passage of the cable car, all of which was known to defendants, the cable car came to an abrupt and sudden stop, throwing plaintiff about the cable car and proximately causing him to sustain injuries as alleged below.

This allegation is for use in a complaint for damages for personal injuries based on negligence brought by a cable car passenger who was thrown about the interior of the cable car when it suddenly came to a stop because of obstructions in the cables and tracks. Whether negligence is shown when a cable car suddenly comes to a stop when the rails were clear is a jury question [*Finley v. City & County of San Francisco (1952) 115 Cal. [2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for damages for wrongful death of a passenger brought by entitled persons against a common carrier of passengers for reward, the carrier's employee or agent, and the owner-operator of another vehicle. The action is based on the negligence of carrier's employee and that of the operator of the other vehicle. The complaint alleges:

- The basis for plaintiff's entitlement to bring the action (Paragraph 1) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60 (permitting decedent's surviving spouse, domestic partner, children, and issue of deceased children to bring action without qualification, and permitting others to bring action under specified circumstances and permitting personal representative of decedent's estate to bring action on behalf of entitled persons); for alternative forms of allegations establishing standing to bring a wrongful death action, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions];

- A legal duty of care under Civ. Code § 2100 (Paragraphs 6, 7) and Civ. Code § 1714(a) (Paragraph 8);

- A breach of duty (Paragraph 9);

- The death of the decedent as a proximate result of the breach of duty (Paragraph 10) [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60]; and

- Resulting damages (Paragraphs 11-13) [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.61].

The complaint also alleges the filing and rejection, either total or partial, of a claim with a public entity for use if the passenger was killed by a vehicle owned and operated by a public transit authority (Paragraphs 14-15). Gov. Code § 905 requires that a claim must be presented to the appropriate public entity as a prerequisite to filing suit against it.

For a general form of complaint for a wrongful death action, and allegations setting forth plaintiffs' entitlement to bring a wrongful death action, and for a form of complaint to be filed by the personal representative of the deceased, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions . For discussion and forms regarding claims against public entities, see Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

[3] Wrongful Death; Survival Actions

If the death of a person was caused by the wrongful act of neglect of another, specified entitled persons (or the personal representative of the decedent on their behalf) may maintain a wrongful death action [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60]. In an action under Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60, damages may be awarded that may be just, under all the circumstances of the case, but may not include damages recoverable under Code Civ. Proc. § 377.34 (survival actions) [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.61]. The court must determine the respective rights in an award of the persons entitled to maintain the cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.61]. An action that survives the death of the person entitled to commence the action under Code Civ. Proc. § 377.30 may be joined with a wrongful death actions brought under Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60 if the actions arise out of the same wrongful act or neglect [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.62(a)]. An action under Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60 (wrongful death) and an action under Code Civ. Proc. § 377.31 (survival of pending actions) arising out of the same wrongful act or neglect may be consolidated for trial as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1048 [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.62(b)].

The wrongful death action may be brought against the person whose wrongful act or neglect caused the death [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60], or against the personal representative of the wrongdoer or, to the extent provided by statute, the wrongdoer's successor in interest, if the wrongdoer has died [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.40]. For complete discussion of wrongful death actions and survival actions, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

This form of complaint is for damages for personal injuries based on negligence brought by a passenger who was injured by baggage which fell on him from an overhead rack. Res ipsa loquitur is applicable in the case where a passenger is injured by a suitcase falling from the luggage rack when the bus suddenly returned to its own lane of traffic [Williamson v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 482, 486-487, 177 P.2d 977 ; Prunty v. Allred (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 67, 71-73, 165 P.2d 935] . A bus passenger is not charged with the duty of inspecting baggage when there is no notice that would require the passenger to be on the lookout to protect against such danger [Williamson v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 484, 487, 209 P.2d 146] .

This allegation is for use in a complaint for damages for personal injuries based on negligence brought by a passenger who was injured when a bus seat broke and injured him. Res ipsa loquitur is applicable when a bus seat breaks and causes injuries to a passenger's leg despite absence of any unusual movements of the vehicle or of the person in that seat [Adam v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 535, 538-540, 317 P.2d 642] .

This form of complaint is for damages for injuries based on willful misconduct by a carrier and its agent suffered by a passenger as a result of uncivil conduct by the agent of the carrier for reward toward him [see Civ. Code § 2103].

Plaintiff is entitled to exemplary and punitive damages (Paragraph 9) [see Civ. Code § 3294(a)] if he or she shows that the employee has been guilty of oppression or malice. Although the carrier is liable as principal for all actual damage caused by its employees [see Civ. Code § 2338], the carrier is not liable for punitive damages unless the carrier, as employer, had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee and employed him or her with a conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others or authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct for which the damages are awarded or was personally guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice [Civ. Code § 3294(b); Turner v. N.B. & M. R.R. Co. (1868) 34 Cal. 594, 599-600 (wrongful expulsion by railroad conductor)]. A carrier has a duty to treat passengers with "civility" and give them a "reasonable degree of attention" as required by Civ. Code § 2103 but this does not deny a reciprocal obligation on the part of passengers to use all reasonable care within their power for their own safety or to accord same "civility" to the carrier, its agents, or employees [Dayton v. Yellow Cab Co. (1948) 85 Cal. App. 2d 740, 744, 193 P.2d 959 (fight between cab driver and passenger over fare)].

This form of complaint is for damages based on negligence brought by a passenger against a carrier of persons for reward and its agent in a case where the agent negligently failed to prevent an assault on the plaintiff by a fellow passenger.

The complaint alleges that the plaintiff was a fare paying passenger (Paragraph 6) and that the bus driver or other type of employee negligently permitted plaintiff to be assaulted by a fellow passenger (Paragraph 6), under such circumstances that defendants knew or should have known of the danger and taken steps to prevent the occurrence (Paragraph 7) [see Civ. Code § 2100]. A carrier is obligated to exercise the utmost care to protect passenger from an assault by a fellow passenger, but such liability arises only if the carrier had or should have had knowledge of the conditions from which such wrong could be apprehended [Terrell v. Key System (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 682, 685-688, 159 P.2d 704 ; Hicks v. Scott (1942) 48 Cal. App. 2d 481, 485-486, 120 P.2d 107] . Additionally, the duty of care to protect passengers from an assault by a third person applies to public entities; again, the duty arises when the carrier has, or with the exercise of the utmost care should have, knowledge from which it may reasonably be apprehended that an assault may occur and the carrier, in addition, has the ability, through the exercise of utmost care, to prevent injury [Lopez v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 780, 785, 791, 221 Cal. Rptr. 840, 710 P.2d 907] .

§ 106.59 Allegation--Failure of Driver to Prevent Injury to Passenger by Dog Being Transported in Passenger Area

[1] FORM Allegation--Failure of Driver to Prevent Injury to Passenger by Dog Being Transported in Passenger Area

On or about _____ [date], at about _____ [time], plaintiff boarded defendant _____'s [name of carrier] _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle] to travel to _____ [destination] _____ [and paid the required fare or after having paid the required fare]. Thereafter, defendant _____ [name of bus driver or other type of employee] negligently, carelessly, and wrongfully allowed another passenger to keep his dog on said _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle]. The dog was growling and had nipped at several other passengers before it finally bit plaintiff. As a result, plaintiff sustained injuries as alleged below.

This allegation is for use in a complaint for damages based on negligence brought by a passenger against a carrier of persons for reward and its agent in a case where the agent negligently failed to prevent a dog from biting the plaintiff. Although a carrier has the right to carry dogs in a coach set apart for passengers, the carrier is required to use utmost care. This includes ascertaining the conditions and natural tendencies of the dog and reasonably supervising the dog in relation to the place allotted to the dog and its opportunity to injure with tooth, paw, or body, irrespective of its apparent reputation for having a calm temperament [Westwater v. Southern Pacific Co. (1940) 38 Cal. App. 2d 369, 371-372, 101 P.2d 154 (minor train passenger bitten by dog)].

7. While plaintiff was alighting, defendant _____ [name of bus driver or other type of employee] so negligently operated, maintained, and controlled the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle] that it jerked and suddenly moved forward while plaintiff was in the process of alighting. As a result, plaintiff was caused to be thrown violently about the exit of the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle] and then to the _____ [pavement or ground] immediately below the place where the vehicle had stopped. [2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for damages for personal injuries based on negligence brought by a passenger who was attempting to alight from the vehicle of a carrier of passengers for reward.

[3] Carrier-Passenger Relationship

The relationship between a carrier and a passenger exists throughout the duration of the passenger's carriage, and that period includes the period when the passenger is alighting from the carrier's vehicle [McBride v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 113, 116, 279 P.2d 966] . The carrier must exercise as high a degree of care in affording passengers a reasonable opportunity to alight in safety as in carrying them safely [McBride v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 113, 116, 279 P.2d 966] . Hence, because a passenger is not required, as a matter of law, to anticipate "sudden" or "violent" jerks during the time he is being transported [Acosta v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 19, 27, 84 Cal. Rptr. 184, 465 P.2d 72] , a jury can find that a carrier is liable for starting its vehicle without warning while a passenger is alighting [see Raub v. Los Angeles Terminal Ry. Co. (1894) 103 Cal. 473, 475, 37 P. 374] . Furthermore, the carrier's employees have the duty of ascertaining whether any passengers are attempting to alight before starting the vehicle again after the vehicle has come to a stop where a passenger might properly and conveniently alight [Moeller v. Market S. R. Co. (1938) 27 Cal. App. 2d 562, 565, 81 P.2d 475] .

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for damages for personal injuries based on negligence brought by a passenger who was attempting to alight from the vehicle of a carrier of passengers for reward when he slipped and fell on the steps. A carrier-passenger relationship ceases only after a passenger has alighted safely from the vehicle [Parker v. City & County of San Francisco (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 597, 603, 323 P.2d 108 ; MacLean v. City & County of San Francisco (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 263, 272, 273 P.2d 698] . Thus, a carrier is obligated to keep the steps or vestibules of its cars free from debris or foreign substances other than snow or ice [McBride v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 113, 116, 279 P.2d 966 (alighting train passenger slipped on wet cigar butt)].

§ 106.62 Allegations--Passenger With Special Physical Condition Injured While Attempting to Alight From Bus

[1] FORM Allegations--Passenger With Special Physical Condition Injured While Attempting to Alight From Bus

1. On or about _____ [date], at about _____ [time], plaintiff was a fare paying passenger on one of defendant _____'s [name of carrier] _____ [buses or designate other type of vehicle], which at that time was traveling in a generally _____ direction along _____ [name of street or highway]. While the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle] was stopped at or near _____ [location] to permit passengers to get off, plaintiff commenced to alight.

2. Plaintiff is, and at that time was, obviously and apparently _____ [blind or sick or aged or very young or crippled or infirmed or specify other condition]. Defendant _____ [name of carrier], by and through its agent and employee _____ [name of agent], negligently and carelessly failed to render the necessary assistance to plaintiff in alighting from the _____ [bus or designate other type of ve hicle]. As a proximate result thereof, plaintiff fell to the _____ [ground or floor of the vehicle], thereby injuring plaintiff as alleged below.

[2] Use of Form

These allegations are for use in a complaint in an action by a passenger with a special physical condition which was apparent to the carrier and its employee who was injured while attempting to alight from the carrier's vehicle because of the employee's failure to render the passenger the necessary assistance. A carrier is obligated to render necessary assistance to a passenger known to be blind, sick, aged, very young, crippled, or infirm while they are boarding or alighting [McBride v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 113, 119120, 279 P.2d 966 (crippled passenger's crutches slipped on wet cigar butt lying on train steps)]. Additionally, a carrier owes children who are passengers on its cars a greater degree of care than it owes to adults [Mudrick v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 724, 734, 81 P.2d 950 ; Brizzolari v. Market S. R. Co. (1935) 7 Cal. App. 2d 246, 248, 46 P.2d 783] .

3. [Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 106.40[1], Paragraph 3.]

4. [Agency allegation. See § 106.40[1] , Paragraph 5.]

5. At all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ [name of carrier] owned, operated, maintained, and controlled a certain _____ [e.g., system of buses or designate other type of vehicle] used to transport passengers over, among others, a route _____ [from _____ to _____ or along _____ Street in _____ (city), California].

6. On or about _____ [date], at about _____ [time], plaintiff was a fare paying passenger on one of defendant's _____ [buses or designate other type of vehicle], which at that time was traveling in a generally _____ direction along _____ [name of street or highway]. While the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle] was stopped at or near _____ [location] to permit passengers to get off, plaintiff alighted from the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle].

7. At that time and place, defendant _____ [name of bus driver or other employee] so negligently maintained, operated, and controlled the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle] that it was brought to a stop outside the safety zone delineated and provided for stops of the _____ [buses or designate other type of vehicle] to discharge their passengers. Plaintiff was thus caused to alight from the vehicle in an unsafe place and as a result _____ [was forced to step down into and walk through a slimy, slippery substance on the pavement between the vehicle and sidewalk or slipped and fell into the gutter or slipped and fell into a large hole]. As a proximate result thereof, plaintiff sustained injuries as alleged below.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for damages for personal injuries based on negligence brought by a passenger who was injured as a result of a bus or some other type of vehicle having stopped to discharge passengers in an unsafe area.

[3] Carrier-Passenger Relationship

The general rule is that the relationship between carrier and passenger terminates when the passenger has alighted safely from the carrier's vehicle on a public street and has cleared the vehicle [Brandelius v. San Francisco (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 729, 735, 306 P.2d 432 ; Parker v. City & County of San Francisco (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 597, 603, 323 P.2d 108 ; MacLean v. City & County of San Francisco (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 263, 272, 273 P.2d 698] . That general rule is subject to an important qualification, however. The carrier must discharge the passenger into a relatively safe area, and the carrier-passenger relationship which requires the carrier to exercise the utmost care and diligence for its passengers' safety is not terminated if the passenger is discharged into a dangerous area [Riggins v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 125, 128, 21 Cal. Rptr. 336 ; Parker v. City & County of San Francisco (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 597, 603, 323 P.2d 108] .

A carrier is not liable merely because it stops its bus away from the sidewalk curb where the vehicle nevertheless has been stopped as close thereto as is practical under the circumstances [MacLean v. City & County of San Francisco (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 263, 272, 273 P.2d 698] , but evidence of a carrier's custom of stopping its buses in a crosswalk, even though tending to show violations of the law, is admissible to show a custom established by the carrier and a right of the passenger who was familiar with the custom to rely on its continuance when the passenger falls into a curbside gutter rather than alighting on the crosswalk [Fowler v. Key System Transit Lines (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 65, 73, 230 P.2d 339] . Moreover, a carrier has an obligation to warn any person, whether passenger or not, of the foreseeable risk of danger that exists from the improper location of a safety zone [Brandenburg v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 282, 286-287, 169 P.2d 909 (persons standing in safety zone injured by overswing of turning streetcar)].

§ 106.65 Allegations--Passenger Injured by Passing Automobile When Bus Stopped Outside Safety Zone

[1] FORM Allegations--Passenger Injured by Passing Automobile When Bus Stopped Outside Safety Zone

1. On or about _____ [date], at about _____ [time], plaintiff was a fare paying passenger on one of defendant _____'s [name of carrier] _____ [buses or designate other type of vehicle], which at that time was traveling in a generally _____ direction along _____ [name of street or highway]. While the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle] was stopped at or near _____ [location] to permit passengers to get off, plaintiff alighted from the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle].

2. At that time and place, defendant _____ [name of bus driver or other employee] so negligently maintained, operated, and controlled the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle] that it was brought to a stop outside the safety zone provided for stops of the _____ [buses or designate other type of vehicle] to discharge passengers. Plaintiff was thus caused to alight from the vehicle in an unsafe place and as a result was struck by an automobile which was being negligently and carelessly operated, maintained, and controlled by _____ [name of owner-operator]. As a proximate result of the defendants' negligence in so stopping the bus and in operating the automobile, plaintiff sustained injuries as alleged below.

[2] Use of Form

These allegations are for use in a complaint in an action by a passenger who was discharged into an unsafe area and then struck by a negligently driven automobile. However, a carrier-passenger relationship has ended when a passenger is discharged on to the shoulder of a highway, several feet away from nearest traffic lane [Riggins v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 125, 128, 21 Cal. Rptr. 336] or when a passenger who alights from a bus in complete safety then chooses to cross a street where there is no crosswalk [Hill v. Wilson (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 472, 475, 268 P.2d 748 (passenger assumes responsibility for his conduct)].

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for damages for personal injuries based on negligence brought by a pedestrian who was struck by a bus or other vehicle while crossing a street or highway in a crosswalk. A pedestrian has the right of way while in a crosswalk [Veh. Code § 21950] and all vehicles are prohibited from passing another vehicle that is stopped for a pedestrian in a crosswalk [Veh. Code § 21951]. Additionally, even though a pedestrian has a duty to yield the right of way to vehicles when the pedestrian is outside a crosswalk [see Veh. Code § 21955 (prohibition against pedestrians crossing between controlled intersections outside crosswalk)], this does not relieve the motorist of the duty to exercise due care for the safety of the pedestrian [Veh. Code § 21954].

Plaintiff alleges:

1. At all times herein mentioned, plaintiff was the owner of a _____ [year, make, model], California License No. _____.

2. Defendant _____ [name of transit district], hereinafter referred to as "Transit District," is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a public corporation organized and existing under the laws of California with its principal office for the transaction of business in _____ County, California. At all times herein mentioned, defendant Transit District was in the business of operating a public bus transit system in _____ [city], _____ County, California.

3. The true names and capacities, whether individual, corporate, associate, or otherwise of defendants DOES I through _____ are unknown to plaintiff who therefore sues said defendants by such fictitious names and will seek leave of court to amend this complaint to show their true names and capacities when ascertained.

4. At all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ [name] was the agent and employee of defendant[s] Transit District [and DOES I through X] and, in doing the things hereinafter alleged, was acting within the course and scope of such agency and employment.

5. At all times herein mentioned, defendant[s] Transit District [and DOES I through X] was/were the owners of a bus, California License No. _____

6. At all times herein mentioned _____ Street and _____ Street were and are intersecting public streets and highways in _____ [city] _____ County, California, and run in a _____ and a _____ direction, respectively.

7. On or about _____ [date], at approximately _____ [time], plaintiff was driving his above-described vehicle _____ [direction] on _____ Street near the intersection with _____ Street.

8. At that time and place, defendant _____ [name of agent] was driving the above-described bus _____ [direction] on _____ Street. At that time and place, defendant _____ [name of agent] drove, operated, maintained, and propelled the bus in such a negligent manner as to cause it to collide with and strike the left side of plaintiff's vehicle.

9. As a proximate result of the negligence of defendants, as herein alleged, plaintiff was rendered sick, sore, and disabled, and suffered and sustained injuries to _____ [e.g., his left hand, wrist, forearm and elbow, neck, and to other parts of his body], and has suffered distress in mind and body, pain and mental anguish, and suffering; plaintiff has been damaged thereby.

10. As a further proximate result of the negligence of defendants, as alleged herein, and of the injuries sustained by plaintiff, plaintiff was reasonably required to incur, and incurred, certain expenditures for medical care and attention [, the full amount of which is yet undetermined]. Plaintiff is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that he will reasonably be required in the future to incur additional expenses for medical care and attention.

11. As a further proximate result of the negligence of defendants, as herein alleged, and of the injuries sustained by plaintiff, plaintiff was, now is, and will in the future be prevented from following his usual occupation as a _____ [specify] and has suffered loss of earnings and diminution of earning capacity.

12. Immediately prior to and at the time of the collision, plaintiff's above-described automobile was in good mechanical condition. As a further proximate result of the negligence of defendants, as herein alleged, plaintiff's automobile was damaged and depreciated to the extent of $_____, which sum is a reasonable amount for the necessary repairs to the automobile.

13. On _____ [date], plaintiff filed a verified claim with defendant Transit District for damages sustained by him as a result of the negligence of defendants as herein alleged. A copy of the claim is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof.

14. _____ [On _____ (date), defendant Transit District rejected and denied plaintiff's claim _____ (in full or except as to $_____) or Defendant Transit District has neither rejected nor denied plaintiff's claim and the statutory period provided by law for action on the claim has elapsed; the claim is therefore deemed denied by operation of law].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For general and compensatory damages according to proof.

2. For necessary and reasonable medical expenses according to proof.

3. For loss of earnings and diminution of earning capacity according to proof.

4. For the sum of $_____ for damages to his automobile.

5. For costs of suit herein incurred.

6. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for damages for personal injuries and property damage brought by an automobile driver whose automobile was negligently struck by a transit vehicle. A streetcar operator is required to be vigilant in his watch for automobiles and to have his streetcar under control when approaching street intersections and the fact that the streetcar was not exceeding the speed limit as it approached a street intersection does not excuse any negligent operation of the car [Bennett v. Central Cal. Trac. Co. (1931) 115 Cal. App. 1, 12, 1 P.2d 47] . Additionally, a streetcar operator approaching a traffic-congested avenue in a highly developed area, with another streetcar obscuring the view of operator, has an obligation to be constantly on the lookout and to use such reasonable precautions as the circumstances require [Saphire v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 880, 883, 222 P.2d 956] .

This form is based on the complaint filed in Helfend v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1, 84 Cal. Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61 .

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for damages for personal injuries based on negligence brought by a workman who was struck by a bus or other vehicle while working on or near a street or highway. A laborer on or near a street is required to use lesser quantum of care than a pedestrian [Scott v. City & County of San Francisco (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 887, 889, 206 P.2d 45 (roofer tending kettle of tar struck by streetcar)]. Additionally, a laborer whose duty requires him to be on or near the street is not required to look continually for the approach of a streetcar [*Driscoll v. California St. R.R. Co. (1926) 80 Cal. [2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for damages for personal injuries based on negligence brought by a prospective bus passenger who was injured when he slipped and fell in the defendant's bus depot. A carrier is required to select a reasonably safe station space to receive its passengers [Lagomarsino v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 388, 395, 158 P.2d 982] and it has a duty to inspect its waiting room [Hamilton v. Pacific E. R. Co. (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 598, 604-605, 86 P.2d 829 ; see Gray v. City & County of San Francisco (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 319, 330-331, 20 Cal. Rptr. 894 (dictum)]. However, a carrier is required to exercise only ordinary care to maintain the condition of the station where the passengers are received [Sanchez v. Pacific Auto Stages (1931) 116 Cal. App. 392, 396, 2 P.2d 845 ; see Gray v. City & County of San Francisco (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 319, 329, 20 Cal. Rptr. 894 (carrier's actual or constructive notice of particular physical facts constituting condition dangerous to passengers is a prerequisite to liability when the condition is not created by anaffirmative act of the carrier or its agents)].

§ 106.73 Affirmative Defense--Negligence of Plaintiff--Passenger Failed to Use Hand Bars for Support

AS A [(if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that at the time and place of the injuries herein alleged, plaintiff was not exercising ordinary care, caution, or prudence to prevent himself from falling. The injuries complained of by plaintiff in his complaint, if there were any, were proximately caused by his own failure to utilize the hand support bars which defendant _____ [name] has provided in all of its _____ [buses or designate other type of vehicle] for the safety of its passengers.

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense, raising the issue of plaintiff's negligence, may be set forth in an answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30] to a complaint by a plaintiff for damages based on negligence arising from the operation of a bus or other vehicle. Under comparative negligence, damages awarded to a plaintiff are diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to plaintiff [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] . The negligence of a passenger is shown by the fact that the passenger failed to use the bars provided for hand support [Tait v. San Francisco (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 787, 790, 300 P.2d 74 ; Gerfers v. San Diego Transit System (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 733, 736-737, 272 P.2d 930] .

AS A [(if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that at the time and place of the injuries herein alleged, plaintiff was not exercising ordinary care, caution, or prudence to prevent his injuries. Plaintiff was injured while _____ [e.g., boarding a moving vehicle or riding on the steps of a moving vehicle]. That conduct was in direct violation of _____ [cite or identify statute or ordinance], which was then and there in full force and effect [, and which provides that: _____ (set out relevant portions)]. Therefore, the alleged injuries were proximately caused by the negligence of plaintiff.

This form of affirmative defense, raising the issue of plaintiff's negligence, may be set forth in an answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30] to a complaint by a plaintiff for damages based on negligence arising from the operation of a bus or other vehicle when it is clear that the plaintiff's conduct violated an ordinance or statute and that it was a proximate cause of his alleged injuries. A violation of a statute creates a presumption of negligence [Evid. Code § 669] but violation of the prima facie speed limit does not establish negligence as matter of law [Veh. Code §§ 40830, 40831]. Thus, a passenger is negligent when he is riding on the steps of a carrier's vehicle in violation of an ordinance and such conduct proximately contributes to the injury [Reeves v. Lapinta (1938) 25 Cal. App. 2d 680, 681, 78 P.2d 465 ; Lorry v. Englander Drayage & Warehouse Co. (1930) 108 Cal. App. 116, 119, 291 P. 467] . Additionally, a passenger is negligent when he boards a moving streetcar in violation of an ordinance and that conduct proximately contributed to the injury [Schultheiss v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 525, 527, 54 P.2d 49] .

The injuries alleged by plaintiff in his complaint, if there were any, were proximately caused by his own failure to exercise ordinary caution before starting to cross _____ [name of street or highway]. As a result, plaintiff stepped directly out in front of defendant's _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle]. Thus, the alleged injuries were proximately caused by the negligence of plaintiff.

§ 106.77 Affirmative Defense--Assumption of Risk--Passenger Injured as Result of Ordinary Bus Movements

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Assumption of Risk--Passenger Injured as Result of Ordinary Bus Movements

AS A [(if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that plaintiff was aware and knew of, appreciated, and voluntarily encountered the movements of defendant's _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle] when he boarded it. More particularly, plaintiff was aware and knew of, appreciated, and voluntarily encountered the risk of _____ [e.g., falling or being pushed by other passengers] as a result of the ordinary movements of the vehicle. The injuries complained of by plaintiff in his complaint, if there were any, were caused solely by movements of the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle] which were ordinary and completely capable of being anticipated by passengers riding on the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle] and therefore arose out of the risks assumed by him. Therefore, plaintiff must be denied all recovery for each and every injury allegedly sustained while riding as a passenger on defendant's vehicle.

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense, raising the issue of assumption of risk, may be set forth in an answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30] to a complaint by a plaintiff for damages based on negligence arising from the operation of a bus or other vehicle.

The California Supreme Court has rejected the analysis under which a reasonable implied assumption of the risk bars recovery, but an unreasonable assumption of the risk merely requires apportionment of fault under comparative fault principles [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 306-309, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . Instead, the Court held that the proper distinction is between "primary assumption of risk," involving instances in which the plaintiff's conduct leads to the legal conclusion that the defendant owed no duty of care to the plaintiff, and plaintiff is therefore precluded from recovering any damages, and "secondary assumption of risk," involving instances in which defendant did owe a duty of care, but in which plaintiff's knowing encounter of the risk of injury caused by defendant's breach justifies application of comparative fault principles [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 308-311, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

The Court's discussion of these issues came in cases involving participants in sporting events, and the precise application of the analysis to other types of cases is not yet clear. For complete discussion of assumption of risk, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Imminent Peril--Bus Stopped Suddenly to Avoid Collision

AS A [(if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that at the time and place of the injuries herein alleged, defendant _____ [name of driver] was suddenly and unexpectedly put into an emergency situation not caused in any way by his own fault or carelessness. In order to avoid hitting _____ [an automobile or a truck or a pedestrian or a child or other], defendant _____ [name of driver] was forced immediately and without hesitation to apply the brakes of the _____ [bus or designate other type of vehicle]. The injuries complained of by plaintiff in his complaint, if there were any, were caused solely by this extraordinary situation of emergency. Defendant _____ [name of driver] acted with due care and precaution considering that emergency, and thus was not acting negligently within the scope of his employment. Therefore, plaintiff must be denied all recovery prayed for in his complaint.

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense is based on the doctrine of imminent peril and may be set forth in an answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30] to a complaint by a plaintiff for damages based on negligence arising from the operation of a bus or other vehicle. For example, in a passenger's suit for personal injuries caused by the sudden stopping of a bus, instruction on imminent peril was proper when a child ran into the street and the bus driver stopped the bus to avoid hitting the child [Abney v. City & County of San Francisco (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 506, 514, 252 P.2d 654 ; see James v. American Buslines (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 273, 276, 244 P.2d 503 (question of imminent danger is a jury question); Bovette v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 860, 863, 179 P.2d 80 (instruction to jury on sudden emergency doctrine is proper when only a brief interval of time exists from time of seeing the danger to time of the accident)]. And, in wrongful death action for the death of a five year old girl killed when struck by a motor bus, the bus driver, who without fault was suddenly put in a situation where a collision was imminent, without sufficient time to consider all the circumstances, is excused for omitting some precaution or for making an unwise choice [Burton v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1947) 79 Cal. App. 2d 605, 610, 180 P.2d 367] .

§ 107.11 Action for Cancellation of Instrument

[1] Cancellation

A written instrument, in respect to which there is a reasonable apprehension that if left outstanding it may cause serious injury to a person against whom it is void or voidable, may, on that person's application, be so adjudged and ordered to be delivered up or canceled [Civ. Code § 3412; for discussion of what constitutes serious injury, see § 107.14, below].

The operation of Civ. Code § 3412 has been explained as follows: "Wherever an instrument of writing exists, which has been obtained without consideration, or has become a nullity, or which, if left outstanding, may cause injury to a plaintiff, or may be vexatiously used against him, after the evidence to impeach or invalidate it is lost or may throw a cloud or suspicion over his title, a court of equity will afford relief by ordering it to be delivered up and cancelled" [Wiard v. Brown (1881) 59 Cal. 194, 197] .

To be subect to an action for cancellation, the instrument must appear to be valid [Civ. Code § 3413; for discussion, see § 107.18[4]].

[2] Distinguished From Rescission

An action for cancellation of an instrument should not be begun for the purpose of rescinding the underlying contract. The former action to obtain rescission of a contract by a court has been abolished by enactment of Civ. Code § 1692 and repeal of former Civ. Code §§ 3406-3408 [see Runyan v. Pacific Air Industries, Inc. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 304, 312-313, 85 Cal. Rptr. 138, 466 P.2d 682] . Rescission of a contract is now accomplished unilaterally [see Civ. Code § 1691], and relief based on the rescission may then be sought.

However, a contract (whether oral or in writing) can be canceled by agreement of the parties. To cancel a contract is to abrogate so much of it as remains unperformed. It differs from rescission in that rescission involves the restoration of the parties to their former positions; cancellation of a contract leaves the parties where they are when it is canceled [see Mamula v. McCulloch (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 184, 197, 79 Cal. Rptr. 571] .

The writing which evidences a contract may be the subject of an action for cancellation under Civ. Code § 3412 [see § 107.16, below], and the effect would be to cancel the contract unless that would cause the defendant to suffer a forfeiture [see Ebbert v. Mercantile Trust Co. (1931) 213 Cal. 496, 499-501, 2 P.2d 776 (court of equity as denying cancellation that would cause a forfeiture)]. Forfeiture can be prevented by requiring restoration as a condition of cancellation, in which case cancellation of the writing which evidences the contract would be in effect a rescission and restitution.

[3] In Addition to Restitution

Cancellation of an instrument may be had in an action for restitution [see, e.g., Millar v. James (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 530, 532, 534, 62 Cal. Rptr. 335 (affirming judgment for restitution of real property conveyed in consequence of fraudulent inducement, and for cancellation of plaintiff's deed to defendant)]. A plaintiff seeking restitution on the basis of his unilateral rescission of a contract is entitled to complete relief [see Civ. Code § 1692].

[4] Notice and Offer to Restore Consideration Not Prerequisite to Action

Since an action for cancellation brought under Civ. Code § 3412 is not an action for restitution after rescission under Civ. Code §§ 1689 and 1691, notice and an offer to restore consideration are not required before cancellation of a void instrument may be sought [see Smith v. Williams (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 617, 620-621, 12 Cal. Rptr. 665, 361 P.2d 241] .

§ 107.12 Lost Instruments

If an instrument exists which would be subject to cancellation under Civ. Code § 3412, but it has been lost, it clearly cannot be canceled. However, on proper application the instrument may be adjudged void [Civ. Code § 3412]. An action for this purpose would have to be in rem rather than in personam [see Brown v. Anderson-Cottonwood Irrigation Dist. (1920) 183 Cal. 186, 189, 190 P. 797] .

Civ. Code § 3415 provides for the proof and establishment of a lost instrument, and the compelling of issuance, execution, or acknowledgment of a duplicate. For forms and discussion, see Ch. 356, Lost Papers , and Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments .

The object of an action under Civ. Code § 3415 is the converse of that under Civ. Code § 3412, that is, under the former the object is to establish an instrument, whereas under the latter the object is to annul an instrument.

§ 107.13 Distinction Between Void and Voidable Instruments

[1] Void and Voidable Distinguished

There is a basic distinction between a void instrument and a voidable instrument which affects an action for cancellation.

The words void and voidable have been distinguished thus: void in the strict sense means that an instrument is nugatory and ineffectual so that nothing can cure it, and voidable means that an imperfection or defect can be cured by the act or confirmation of the person who could take advantage of it [Black's Law Dictionary (4th ed)].

An instrument may be described as void if the courts would not enforce it in any event, whereas an instrument which the courts would enforce in the absence of objection may be described as voidable. In most cases the distinction will be that a void instrument is one executed by a person without legal capacity to execute it; a voidable instrument is one which the person executing it was competent to execute but which he executed under circumstances entitling him to repudiate it, the usual circumstances being fraud, duress, menace, undue influence, or mistake.

[2] Effect of Distinction on Action for Cancellation of Instrument

Whether the instrument is void or merely voidable may be crucial to the outcome of an action for cancellation. Where an instrument is voidable, the plaintiff in an action for cancellation of it must offer to restore to the defendant everything of value which the plaintiff has received in the underlying transaction, less damages sustained. That is to say, the plaintiff must rescind a voidable transaction. This is not necessary where the instrument in question is void [see Ebbert v. Mercantile Trust Co. (1931) 213 Cal. 496, 501, 2 P.2d 776 (deduction, for damages actually suffered, from amount of consideration required to be restored); Fleming v. Kagan (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 791, 796-798, 11 Cal. Rptr. 737] . However, if the damages sustained equal or exceed the value of what would have to be restored, the plaintiff need not restore, and need not offer to restore, anything [see Peterson v. Wagner (1921) 52 Cal. App. 1, 12, 198 P. 25] .

Where an instrument is voidable, the plaintiff's action for cancellation of it will be barred unless he acted promptly, after discovering the facts making it voidable, to rescind the underlying transaction [see Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 195, 215, 1 Cal. Rptr. 12, 347 P.2d 12] . By implication from the reasoning in Leeper, there is no necessity to act promptly to rescind a transaction which resulted in a void instrument.

[3] Mistakenly Executed Instrument

The case of mistaken execution has been described as involving a void instrument. The usual case is execution of an instrument which the person executing it did not intend to execute, such as signing a paper which turns out to be a deed but which at the time the signer believed to be something else [see, e.g., Fleming v. Kagan (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 791, 797, 11 Cal. Rptr. 737 (describing such a case in attempting to distinguish void and voidable)]. This kind of case focuses attention on the distinguishing factor where there is no question about competency to execute instruments generally. The issue in such a case is the intent of the person executing the instrument. If he knowingly and voluntarily executed the instrument, recognizing it to be what it purports to be, but did so because of fraudulent inducement, duress, menace, undue influence, or mistake as to a material, underlying fact, the instrument is merely voidable. A mistake as to the nature and effect of the instrument, however, makes the instrument void because there never was any intent to execute it, that is, to become bound by it in the manner and to the extent actually provided in the instrument.

[4] Other Void Instruments

An instrument may be void for many reasons. If it was executed under coercion and without consideration, it is void [see Oswald v. El Centro (1930) 211 Cal. 45, 52, 292 P. 1073 (lease)].

An instrument need not be void ab initio; it can become void because of events after its execution. For example, where the maker of a promissory note gave the payee securities as collateral, and the payee thereafter converted the securities to his own use, the note was not merely voidable but became void because of failure of consideration [see Nichols v. Leach (1931) 114 Cal. App. 545, 550, 300 P. 103] .

The fact that an instrument is void does not necessarily mean that it can be canceled. Agreements of minors are void for want of capacity, but are enforceable after majority unless the minor disaffirms within a reasonable time [see Fam. Code § 6710]. The general rule that a void agreement is not curable by either ratification or estoppel applies where the reason for voidness is illegality or violation of public policy. However, where the events establishing a ground for estoppel occured while the plaintiff was under no disability, the fact that the instrument was executed while he was entirely without understanding [see Civ. Code § 38] will not prevent application of the principle of estoppel, even though the instrument is void [see Dool v. First Nat'l Bank of Calexico (1930) 209 Cal. 717, 725, 290 P. 15 (reversing judgment canceling note executed when plaintiff's decedent was arguably disabled and entirely without understanding on ground of estoppel arising from decedent's subsequent actions); see also Dool v. First Nat'l Bank of Calexico (1930) 107 Cal. App. 585, 589, 290 P. 478 (on same facts, in opinion issued one month after foregoing opinion of Supreme Court, characterizing same note as "not void but voidable" and ratified by maker's subsequent actions; opinion by Supreme Court not cited)].

[5] Effect of Void Instrument on Related Valid Instrument

Where there are two related instruments, one subject to cancellation because it is either void or voidable, and the other enforceable, the court will not necessarily cancel both. In Dool v. First Nat'l Bank of Calexico (1930) 107 Cal. App. 585, 588-589, 290 P. 478 , a promissory note was executed when the maker was disabled, and the note was either void or voidable. Later, when the maker was under no disability, he executed a deed of trust to secure the indebtedness evidenced by the note, and that deed set out a copy of the note. The plaintiffs sought cancellation of both the note and the deed of trust, arguing that the deed of trust was merely incidental to the note. Judgment upholding the deed of trust as a good and valid lien was affirmed on the ground that existence of a note was irrelevant and that it made no difference whether the note in question was void or voidable.

§ 107.14 Possibility of Serious Injury

The reasonable apprehension of serious injury required by Civ. Code § 3412 for cancellation (see § 107.11[1], above) is not limited to pecuniary loss. It may be the alteration of one's position to his prejudice. It is not necessary to allege or prove any pecuniary loss so long as the record indicates there was injury or prejudice resulting. It is sufficient to show that the plaintiff is in a worse position than he otherwise would have been [Turner v. Turner (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 636, 641-642, 334 P.2d 1011 (action for cancellation of father's written consent to marriage of minor son, on ground of fraudulent inducement, and annulment of marriage)].

§ 107.15 Partial Cancellation

Where an instrument is evidence of different rights or obligations, it may be canceled in part and allowed to stand as to the part remaining uncanceled [Civ. Code § 3414].

As a general rule, a person may not affirm a transaction in part and rescind in part; but where an instrument sought to be canceled is separable or divisible and where the circumstances justify a rescission only as to particular matters or particular parties involved in an entire transaction, partial rescission is permissible [see Reina v. Erassarret (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 418, 425-426, 203 P.2d 72] .

§ 107.16 Written Instruments Subject to Cancellation

The following kinds of written instruments appear from the cases to be instruments subject to cancellation in an action under Civ. Code § 3412. This list is not exhaustive but only illustrates the variety of instruments which may be canceled under that section.

- Applications of a contractual nature [see Klombies v. Weeks Poultry Community (1932) 121 Cal. App. 175, 8 P.2d 940 (application to become member of nonprofit cooperative marketing corporation which, if accepted, would bind applicant to contract with corporation for exclusive marketing of applicant's farm products; disapproved on other grounds in Mary Pickford Co. v. Bayly Bros., Inc. (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 501, 521, 86 P.2d 102)].

- Assignments [see Lentz v. Hartman (1941) 43 Cal. App. 2d 609, 111 P.2d 404 (affirming judgment for cancellation of assignment of promissory note and mortgage)].

- Bills of sale for personal property [see Bland v. Kelley (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 116, 158 P.2d 206 (bill of sale for household furnishings sold in connection with sale of real property)].

- Consent to the marriage of a minor child [see Turner v. Turner (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 636, 334 P.2d 1011 (reversing trial court judgment denying relief on complaint for cancellation of father's written consent to minor son's marriage, on ground of fraudulent inducement, and annulment of marriage)].

- Deeds [see Smith v. Williams (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 617, 12 Cal. Rptr. 665, 361 P.2d 241 (trust deeds; ground of fraud); Peterson v. Ellebrecht (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 718, 23 Cal. Rptr. 349 (ground of mental incompetency at time of execution); see also Ch. 184, Deeds].

- Executory contracts for the sale of personal property [see Matlin v. Crescent Commercial Corp. (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 8, 207 P.2d 873 (contract for continuing purchases of beer; judgment for concellation, after quality of beer declined because of governmental war policies affecting grain supplies, affirmed)].

- Leases [see Oswald v. El Centro (1930) 211 Cal. 45, 292 P. 1073 (lease as void because of lack of consideration, violation of public policy, and execution under coercion)].

- Options [see Bard v. Kent (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 449, 122 P.2d 8 (affirming judgment for plaintiff administrator of optionor's estate against optionor's attorney in fact who executed option, for cancellation on ground of revocation by optionor's death when there was no consideration for option)].

- Promissory notes and security instruments [see Fleming v. Kagan (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 791, 11 Cal. Rptr. 737 , (note which maker was fraudulently induced to execute as voidable in hands of all except holder in due course for value before maturity without notice of infirmity or defect; note which maker executed because of fraud and without knowledge of nature of instrument, believing it to be something else, as wholly void); Gardner v. Rubin (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 368, 308 P.2d 892 (note and deed of trust); Lincoln v. Averill (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 335, 117 P.2d 913 (note and chattel mortgage)].

- Reconveyances by a trustee under a deed of trust [see Phelps v. American Mortgage Co. (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 604, 59 P.2d 95 (action by holders in due course of notes secured by deed of trust against trustee and beneficiary)].

- Releases from liability [see O'Meara v. Haiden (1928) 204 Cal. 354, 268 P. 334 (father signing release of liability for personal injuries suffered by son as not bound by release with respect to liability for wrongful death where release executed at time when father did not contemplate son might die from injuries); Union P. Co. v. Zimmer (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 524, 197 P.2d 363 (action for declaratory relief after attempted rescission of release on ground of fraud and mistake)].

- Stock certificates [see Noble v. Learned (1908) 153 Cal. 245, 94 P. 1047 (plaintiff personal representative of estate of owner, defendant personal representative of estate of person who wrongfully obtained possession of certificate; judgment for cancellation of outstanding certificate and issuance of new certificate affirmed); Klinker v. Guarantee Title Co. (1929) 98 Cal. App. 469, 277 P. 177 (certificates void because issue not authorized by permit from Commissioner of Corporations; cancellation ordered on complaint of corporation)].

- Written agreements which purport to be contracts but are not because there was no meeting of the minds [see Patterson v. Clifford F. Reid, Inc. (1933) 132 Cal. App. 454, 23 P.2d 35 ("The instrument here involved is on its face a completed contract [for the sale of real property], signed and executed by all parties thereto. It could be placed upon record at any time by defendants [sellers] or assigned by them to a third party. That such recordation or assignment might cause serious injury to plaintiff [buyer] is not open to question. We are of the opinion that the facts of this case entitle respondent [buyer] to invoke the provisions of [Civ. Code § 3412]")], or agreements obtained by fraud or voidable for other reasons [see California Credit etc. Corp. v. Goodin (1926) 76 Cal. App. 785, 246 P. 121] , or agreements that are void for lack of consideration [see Rottman v. Rottman (1921) 55 Cal. App. 624, 204 P. 46 (affirming judgment for rescission of interspousal agreement for lack of consideration, on wife's complaint praying for declaration that agreement is null and void and for cancellation)].

- Written relinquishment of child for adoption if a parent has been induced by fraud, duress, or undue influence (or other means) to sign the relinquishment [see Brooks v. Los Angeles County Bureau of Adoptions (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 732, 32 Cal. Rptr. 466 ; Fiske v. Director, Dep't of Public Welfare (1951) 107 Cal. App. 2d 31, 236 P.2d 427 (affirming judgment described by court of appeal as "that the relinquishment was not a valid one and that it should be and was ordered canceled and declared void" on ground of mistake resulting from misrepresentation of fact)].

Chapter 107 CANCELLATION OF INSTRUMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-107 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 107.18

§ 107.18 Defenses

[1] Defendant Not Connected With Fraud, Duress, Menace, or Undue Influence

When cancellation of an instrument is sought on the ground of fraud, duress, menace, or undue influence, it is apparently a defense that the defendant was in no way connected with the alleged fraud, duress, menace, or undue influence to which the plaintiff was subjected by another [see Carroll v. Carroll (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 761, 770-771, 108 P.2d 420 (wife who executed note and deed of trust as result of husband's fraud, duress, menace, and undue influence was not entitled to cancellation against other defendants not participating in or having any knowledge or notice of husband's acts)].

[2] Plaintiff's Lack of Equity

Cancellation of an instrument under Civ. Code § 3412 is equitable relief, and it may be denied if the complainant has been guilty of inequitable conduct which contributed to execution of the instrument [see Taylor v. Taylor (1944) 66 Cal. App. 2d 390, 399-400, 152 P.2d 480 (affirming denial of cancellation of joint tenancy deed between spouses when complainant husband had been guilty of unclean hands in contracting void marriage as a result of which deed was executed)].

If the instrument in question is merely voidable rather than void, and the plaintiff has not offered to do equity or has been guilty himself of inequitable conduct, it is appropriate for the defendant to assert the relevant facts in his answer and to ask that the court grant relief on the complaint only on the condition that the plaintiff do equity [see Ebbert v. Mercantile Trust Co. (1931) 213 Cal. 496, 499, 2 P.2d 776] .

[3] Waiver of Right to Rescind Underlying Transaction

If the instrument in question is voidable, rather than void, and it appears that the plaintiff has waived the right to rescind the underlying transaction. The defendant asserting such a waiver has the burden of proving it by evidence that does not leave the matter doubtful or uncertain [see Mobley v. Richfield Oil Corp. (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 406, 410, 128 P.2d 105] .

[4] Instrument Apparently Invalid on Its Face

The Civil Code declares that an instrument, the invalidity of which is apparent on its face, or on the face of another instrument which is necessary to the use of the first instrument in evidence, is not to be deemed capable of causing injury for purposes of Civ. Code § 3412 [Civ. Code § 3413]. The result of this rule is that the plaintiff in an action for cancellation of an instrument under Civ. Code § 3412 must show not only that the instrument is invalid but also that it is apparently valid. If the complaint fails to disclose, either by pleading facts or by exhibiting a copy of the instrument, that the instrument is apparently valid, a demurrer would probably be appropriate [see Hughes v. Beekley (1927) 85 Cal. App. 313, 316, 259 P. 337] . If the instrument is apparently invalid on its face, or if another instrument which is necessary to the use of the first instrument in evidence shows on its face that the first instrument is apparently invalid, this is a matter which may appropriately be asserted in defense.

[5] Availability of Defense by Plaintiff Is Immaterial

It is not a defense to an action for cancellation that, conceding the instrument to be void or voidable, the plaintiff has a defense against any attempt by the holder or anyone else to enforce the instrument. The fact that the plaintiff could, if called to it, defend successfully any lawsuit based on the instrument is immaterial; the plaintiff is entitled to have all controversies arising from the instrument determined in one action for cancellation [Bradley v. Gas Control Co. (1894) 102 Cal. 627, 632, 36 P. 1011] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 107.19 Trial

An action for the cancellation of an instrument is an equitable action. Trial by jury is not a matter of right [see Santa Ana Mortgage & Inv. Co. v. Kinslow (1938) 30 Cal. App. 2d 107, 109-110, 85 P.2d 899] .

If a jury is used, its verdict is advisory only. The court may disregard the verdict and the verdict is not binding unless approved by the court [see Bennett v. Bennett (1919) 41 Cal. App. 537, 539-540, 182 P. 461 (action to cancel deed on ground grantor was insane, feeble, mentally incompetent, and subjected to undue influence, and deed was executed without consideration)].

[2] Evidence of Fraudulent Inducement

In an action for cancellation of an instrument on the ground of fraudulent inducement to execute it, judgment may be given for the plaintiff if there is substantial evidence to support a finding of any one material misrepresentation or concealment of fact, or a finding that there was never any meeting of the minds on the terms of an underlying contract [see Kuhn v. Gottfried (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 80, 84, 229 P.2d 137 (affirming judgment for plaintiffs in action for cancellation of promissory note secured by chattel mortgage on ground of fraudulent inducement)].

PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

§ 107.42 Decisions

[1] Action for Cancellation of Instrument

[a] Nature of Cancellation

Court of equity can provide relief by ordering instrument delivered up and canceled when it was obtained without consideration, or has become nullity, or if left outstanding, may be vexatiously used against plaintiff after evidence to impeach or invalidate it has been lost, or may throw cloud or suspicion over title. Wiard v. Brown (1881) 59 Cal. 194, 197

[b] Distinguished From Rescission of Contract

Action for rescission of contract was abolished by enactment of Civ. Code § 1692 and repeal of former Civ. Code §§ 3406-3408. Runyan v. Pacific Air Industries, Inc. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 304, 312-313, 85 Cal. Rptr. 138, 466 P.2d 682

To cancel contract is to abrogate so much of it as remains unperformed; cancellation of contract differs from rescission, which restores parties to their former positions. Mamula v. McCulloch (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 184, 197, 79 Cal. Rptr. 571 (quoting Young v. Flickinger (1925) 75 Cal. App. 171, 174, 242 P. 516)

In case involving voidable instrument, court must deny cancellation of instrument where cancellation would cause defendant to suffer forfeiture. Ebbert v. Mercantile Trust Co. (1931) 213 Cal. 496, 499-501, 2 P.2d 776

Cancellation of deed is relief in addition to restitution of real property; cancellation appropriate in order to give complete relief as provided for in Civ. Code § 1692. Millar v. James (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 530, 532-534, 62 Cal. Rptr. 335

[2] Damages

In action to cancel deed and marital settlement agreement induced by fraud, damages for pain and suffering is not awardable, whether sought under Civ. Code § 1692 or Civ. Code § 3343; punitive damages are recoverable even when recovery is in form of restitution rather than monetary damages. In re Marriage of McNeill (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 548, 559, 561, 206 Cal. Rptr. 641 (disapproved on other grounds in In re Marriage of Fabian (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 440, 224 Cal. Rptr. 333, 715 P.2d 253)

[3] Default Judgment

Clerk or judge has no authority under Code Civ. Proc. § 585(a) to enter judgment on default of defendant in action for cancellation of instrument arising from rescission of underlying contract. Farrar v. Steenbergh (1916) 173 Cal. 94, 97, 159 P. 707 (construing statutory language substantially equivalent to current statute)

[4] Defenses

Lack of connection with alleged fraud, duress, menace, or undue influence under which plaintiff executed instrument as defense in action forcancellation of note and deed of trust. Carroll v. Carroll (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 761, 770-771, 108 P.2d 420

Cancellation of joint tenancy deed between spouses was properly denied when complainant husband had been guilty of unclean hands in contracting void marriage as a result of which deed was executed. Taylor v. Taylor (1944) 66 Cal. App. 2d 390, 399-400, 152 P.2d 480

Defendant's request in answer that court grant relief only on condition plaintiff do equity is appropriate when instrument in question is voidable rather than void and plaintiff has been guilty of inequitable conduct or refuses to do equity. Ebbert v. Mercantile Trust Co. (1931) 213 Cal. 496, 499, 2 P.2d 776

Defendant has burden of proving defense of waiver of right to rescind for fraud; evidence must not leave matter doubtful or uncertain. Mobley v. Richfield Oil Corp. (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 406, 410, 128 P.2d 105

Requirement that plaintiff in action for cancellation under Civ. Code § 3412 show both apparent validity and actual invalidity of instrument. Hughes v. Beekley (1927) 85 Cal. App. 313, 316, 259 P. 337

Failure to demur to complaint precludes challenge of sufficiency on appeal. Gross v. Needham (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 446, 453-456, 7 Cal. Rptr. 664

Existence of defenses against enforcement of instrument is not defense to action for its cancellation. Bradley v. Gas Control Co. (1894) 102 Cal. 627, 632, 36 P. 1011

[5] Distinction Between Void and Voidable Instruments

Restoration of benefits received is required on part of plaintiff seeking cancellation of voidable instrument, but not if instrument is void. Fleming v. Kagan (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 791, 796-798, 11 Cal. Rptr. 737

Plaintiff in case of voidable instrument is entitled to deduction, for damages actually suffered, from amount of consideration required to be restored to defendant. Ebbert v. Mercantile Trust Co. (1931) 213 Cal. 496, 501, 2 P.2d 776

Restoration of consideration and offer to restore is not required when plaintiff has sustained damages equaling or exceeding value of what would have to be restored. Peterson v. Wagner (1921) 52 Cal. App. 1, 12, 198 P. 25

Action for cancellation of voidable instrument is barred unless plaintiff acted promptly, after discovering facts making instrument voidable, to rescind underlying transaction. Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 195, 215, 1 Cal. Rptr. 12, 347 P.2d 12

Instrument executed under mistake as to nature of instrument being executed is void. Fleming v. Kagan (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 791, 797, 11 Cal. Rptr. 737

Lack of consideration and execution under coercion render lease void. Oswald v. El Centro, Oswald v. El Centro (1930) 211 Cal. 45, 52, 292 P. 1073

Failure of consideraion renders promissory note void (functus officio) and subject to cancellation on complaint of maker. Nichols v. Leach (1931) 114 Cal. App. 545, 550, 300 P. 103

Instrument executed when plaintiff's decedent was arguably disabled and entirely without understanding [see Civ. Code § 38] was not cancelable even though void, where decedent's subsequent actions when he was not disabled established ground for estoppel. Dool v. First Nat'l Bank of Calexico (1930) 209 Cal. 717, 725, 290 P. 15 ; see Dool v. First Nat'l Bank of Calexico (1930) 107 Cal. App. 585, 589, 290 P. 478

Instrument executed when plaintiff's decedent was arguably disabled and entirely without understanding [see Civ. Code § 38] is voidable and ratified by decedent's later execution of trust deed, incorporating note, when he was not disabled. Dool v. First Nat'l Bank of Calexico (1930) 107 Cal. App. 585, 589, 290 P. 478 ; see also Dool v. First Nat'l Bank of Calexico (1930) 209 Cal. 717, 725, 290 P. 15

Notice and offer to restore is not required where plaintiff brings action under Civ. Code § 3412 for cancellation of void instrument rather than under Civ. Code §§ 1689 and 1691 for restitution after rescission. Smith v. Williams (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 617, 620-621, 12 Cal. Rptr. 665, 361 P.2d 241

[6] Lost Instruments

Action to have lost instrument adjudged void is necessarily in rem rather than in personam. Brown v. Anderson-Cottonwood Irrigation Dist. (1920) 183 Cal. 186, 189, 190 P. 797

Lost instrument is subject to order for reissuance under Civ. Code § 3415 even if voidable; object of proceeding is to restore record. Shores v. Withers (1913) 166 Cal. 403, 405, 137 P. 7

[7] Partial Cancellation

Rescission of only part of underlying transaction is permissible and is exception to general rule prohibiting partial rescission, where instrument to be canceled is separable or divisible. Reina v. Erassarret (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 418, 425-426, 203 P.2d 72

[8] Parties

Holder in due course of promissory notes secured by deed of trust is entitled to maintain action for cancellation of reconveyance by trustee. Phelps v. American Mortgage Co. (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 604, 609-610, 59 P.2d 95

Surviving joint tenant is entitled to bring action for cancellation of deed executed by deceased cotenant. Reina v. Erassarret (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 418, 424, 203 P.2d 72

Each of several persons having causes of action against single defendant for cancellation of their several promissory notes on ground of fraud, where notes were executed at different times, did not have community of interest sufficient to justify joinder in one action; each was required to sue separately. Noroian v. Bennett (1919) 179 Cal. 806, 809-810, 179 P. 158

Owner of instrument in question is necessary party in order for court to cancel it. Lawrence v. Long Beach Pleasure Pier Co. (1919) 44 Cal. App. 410, 414, 186 P. 606

Grantee named in deed sought to be canceled was necessary party even though only straw man for real party in interest and expressly exculpated in complaint from participating in fraud of real party in interest. Palmer v. Lantz (1932) 215 Cal. 320, 322, 9 P.2d 821

Person having actual possession of instrument is necessary defendant, even if he or she was not responsible for events making instrument void or voidable. Briscoe v. Guaranty Mortg. Co. (1922) 57 Cal. App. 492, 494, 207 P. 487

Complaint for cancellation which alleges that holder of instrument received it from plaintiff and was to hold it pending further instructions from plaintiff was required to allege that holder intends or threatens to disobey plaintiff's instructions. Fitch v. Bunch (1866) 30 Cal. 208, 214

Purchaser at sale under trust deed of land subject to mortgage was successor in interest of mortgagor and was entitled to maintain action against assignee of mortgage for cancellation of mortgage, on ground of failure of consideration in transaction between mortgagor and original mortgagee, whether or not assignee knew of the defect in transaction when taking assignment. Briggs v. Crawford (1912) 162 Cal. 124, 129-130, 121 P. 381

[9] Possibility of Serious Injury

Injury referred to in Civ. Code § 3412 is not required to be pecuniary loss; showing that plaintiff is in worse position than he or she would otherwise be in is sufficient. Turner v. Turner (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 636, 641-642, 334 P.2d 1011

[10] Trial

Action for cancellation of instrument is equitable action in which trial by jury is not matter of right. Santa Ana Mortgage & Inv. Co. v. Kinslow (1938) 30 Cal. App. 2d 107, 109-110, 85 P.2d 899

Jury verdict, if jury is used, is advisory only, subject to being disregarded by court, and not binding unless approved by court. Bennett v. Bennett (1919) 41 Cal. App. 537, 539-540, 182 P. 461

Substantial evidence supporting finding as to any one material representation or concealment, or finding that there never was any meeting of minds on terms of contract, requires appellate court to affirm judgment for plaintiffs in action for cancellation of promissory note secured by chattel mortgage, on ground of fraudulent inducement. Kuhn v. Gottfried (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 80, 84, 229 P.2d 137

[11] Written Instruments Subject to Cancellation

[a] Contracts

Writing purporting to be contract but not actually contract because of no meeting of minds is instrument subject to cancellation. Patterson v. Clifford F. Reid, Inc. (1933) 132 Cal. App. 454, 457, 23 P.2d 35

Civ. Code § 3412 gives specific remedy for cancellation of contract obtained by fraud, voidable for other reasons, or void. California Credit etc. Corp. v. Goodin (1926) 76 Cal. App. 785, 794, 246 P. 121

Written agreement that is void for lack of consideration is instrument subject to cancellation. Rottman v. Rottman (1921) 55 Cal. App. 624, 631, 633, 634, 204 P. 46

[b] Instruments Involving Children

Written relinquishment of child for purpose of adoption is subject to rescission for cause. Brooks v. Los Angeles County Bureau of Adoptions (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 732, 734, 32 Cal. Rptr. 466

Judgment that relinquishment of plaintiff's child for purpose of adoption was not valid and that it should be and was ordered canceled and declared void was affirmed. Fiske v. Director, Dep't of Public Welfare (1951) 107 Cal. App. 2d 31, 33, 37, 236 P.2d 427

Written consent to marriage of minor child is instrument subject to cancellation. Turner v. Turner (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 636, 641, 334 P.2d 1011

[c] Instruments Involving Personal Property

Chattel mortgage is instrument subject to cancellation. Lincoln v. Averill (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 335, 340, 117 P.2d 913

Executory contract for sale of personal property (beer) is subject to cancellation. Matlin v. Crescent Commercial Corp. (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 8, 11, 207 P.2d 873

[d] Instruments Involving Real Property

Overall effect of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 318, 319, and 328 is that actions relating to either possession of or title to real property, or both, must be commenced within five years from end of possession or seizin of property by claimant or his or her predecessor in interest, unless chain of title includes person who was either minor or insane. Robertson v. Superior Court (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 1319, 1327-1329, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 650 (trial court erred in finding that action under Civ. Code § 3412 can be brought at any time)

Deed is instrument subject to cancellation. Smith v. Williams (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 617, 620-621, 12 Cal. Rptr. 665, 361 P.2d 241 ; Peterson v. Ellebrecht (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 718, 719-723, 23 Cal. Rptr. 349 ; Gardner v. Rubin (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 368, 369-375, 308 P.2d 892

Reconveyance from trustee of deed of trust is instrument subject to cancellation. Phelps v. American Mortgage Co. (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 604, 605, 610, 59 P.2d 95

Bill of sale for household furnishings, sold in connection with sale of real property, is subject to cancellation. Bland v. Kelley (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 116, 117-119, 158 P.2d 206

Lease is instrument subject to cancellation. Oswald v. El Centro (1930) 211 Cal. 45, 46, 52, 292 P. 1073

Option to extend lease is subject to cancellation. Bard v. Kent (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 449, 451-453, 122 P.2d 8

[e] Promissory Notes

Promissory note is instrument subject to cancellation. Fleming v. Kagan (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 791, 796, 11 Cal. Rptr. 737 ; Gardner v. Rubin (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 368, 369-375, 308 P.2d 892 ; Lincoln v. Averill (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 335, 337-340, 117 P.2d 913

[f] Release

Release from liability was executed as result of fraud and mistake; judgment declaring release not valid affirmed in declaratory relief action after attempted rescission. Union P. R Co. v. Zimmer (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 524, 529-533, 197 P.2d 363

Person signing release of liability for personal injuries suffered by his child is not bound thereby with respect to liability for wrongful death where release executed at time when child's death from such injuries was not contemplated. O'Meara v. Haiden (1928) 204 Cal. 354, 358, 361, 268 P. 334

[g] Stock Certificates

Stock certificate is instrument subject to cancellation. Noble v. Learned (1908) 153 Cal. 245, 247-250 ; Klinker v. Guarantee Title Co. (1929) 98 Cal. App. 469, 476, 277 P. 177

[h] Miscellaneous

Application for membership in nonprofit cooperative marketing corporation which, if accepted, would bind applicant to contract with corporation for exclusive marketing of applicant's farm products is instrument subject to cancellation. Klombies v. Weeks Poultry Community (1932) 121 Cal. App. 175, 177-179, 8 P.2d 940 (disapproved on other grounds in Mary Pickford Co. v. Bayly Bros., Inc. (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 501, 521, 86 P.2d 102)

Assignment is instrument subject to cancellation. Lentz v. Hartman (1941) 43 Cal. App. 2d 609, 613-615, 111 P.2d 404 (affirming judgment for cancellation of assignment of promissory note and mortgage)

[3. Plaintiff is ignorant of the names of defendants sued as DOES I through _____, respectively, who are so designated for that reason. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences alleged in this complaint, and that plaintiff's damages as alleged herein were proximately caused by such defendants.)]

4. _____ [Plaintiff is, and at all times herein mentioned was, _____ (entity other than natural person, e.g., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of California) _____ (special capacity, if any, in which plaintiff sues e.g., and duly licensed under the laws of California to engage in the business of banking).]

5. There is in existence a certain written instrument which purports to be _____ [describe generally, e.g., a promissory note]. The form and contents of the _____ [e.g., purported note] are _____ [as set out in the copy of it which is attached to this complaint as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference or as follows: _____ (set out instrument verbatim, following its form as closely as possible)]. The _____ [e.g., purported note] is _____ [in the possession or under the control] of defendant.

6. _____ [Allege facts making instrument void or voidable against plaintiff, e.g., The purported signature of _____ (name) on the _____ (e.g., purported note) is not the signature of _____ (name) and was not placed on the _____ (e.g., purported note) at the direction of _____ (name). Allege such other facts as are necessary to show that plaintiff is the person against whom the instrument is void or voidable where the instrument bears the forged signature of someone other than plaintiff, e.g., By an agreement in writing executed on _____ (date), the validity of which plaintiff does not question in this action, plaintiff assumed all outstanding obligations of _____ (name of person who purportedly signed instrument) arising from the operation by _____ (name) of a certain business known as _____ (business name) between _____ (date), and _____ (date), inclusive.]

7. _____ [Allege facts showing a reasonable apprehension that if left outstanding the instrument may cause serious injury to plaintiff, e.g., If the _____ (e.g., purported note) is left outstanding, plaintiff may be required to pay it or to defend a lawsuit based on it, and by refusing to pay it, plaintiff may be damaged in his/her credit. Defendant has refused to surrender the _____ (e.g., purported note) to plaintiff and has communicated to plaintiff an intention to hold the _____ (e.g., purported note) for payment according to its terms.]

8. _____ [Allege facts establishing a basis for a claim for damages as additional relief, if any, e.g., On _____ (date), before plaintiff discovered that the purported signature of _____ (name) on the _____ (e.g., purported note) is not genuine, plaintiff paid to defendant the sum of $_____ as the installment payment due on that date according to the terms of the _____ (e.g., purported note).]

9. _____ [Allege facts establishing a basis for a claim for exemplary damages, if any, e.g., Defendant transferred the _____ (e.g., purported note) on or about _____ (date), to _____ (name of transferee) for value. Defendant knew at the time of making the transfer that the purported signature of _____ (name) on the _____ (e.g., purported note) is not genuine, but he did not disclose this fact to the transferee. Defendant made the transfer with intent to defraud plaintiff. Plaintiff therefore seeks exemplary and punitive damages.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. That the _____ [e.g., purported note] be declared void.

2. That defendant deliver the _____ [e.g., purported note] immediately to the clerk of the court for cancellation.

3. For damages, in the event that defendant fails to surrender the _____ [e.g., purported note] for cancellation pursuant to the judgment, in the sum of $_____ [monetary value to plaintiff represented by instrument], plus interest thereon from and after _____ [date of execution of instrument], at the rate of _____ [e.g., 7 percent per annum], as compensation and in lieu of cancellation.

[4. For damages in the sum of $_____, plus interest thereon from and after _____ [date], at the rate of _____ (e.g., 7 per cent per annum).]

[5. For exemplary and punitive damages.]

6. For costs of suit herein incurred.

7. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

[a] Complaint

The form of complaint in [1], above, may be used to obtain cancellation of a written instrument as provided in Civ. Code § 3412.

[b] Cross Complaint

With appropriate minor changes in wording, the complaint in [1], above, can be used as a cross complaint to obtain cancellation of an instrument in an action based on the instrument [see Fair Oaks Bank v. Johnson (1926) 198 Cal.

196, 198, 202-203, 244 P. 335 (action to collect on promissory note and foreclose mortgage given as security; cross complaint by defendant for cancellation of note and mortgage on ground of fraudulent inducement to make underlying contract; judgment for defendant cross complainant affirmed)].

If the person who wants an instrument canceled is the defendant in an action for enforcement of the instrument, a cause of action for cancellation should be pleaded by cross complaint. It is error for the court to enter judgment canceling the instrument solely on the basis of the defendant's allegation in defense, in the answer, that the instrument is invalid [see Walker v. Rockwood (1915) 26 Cal. App. 624, 627-628, 147 P. 992 (striking portion of judgment ordering cancellation of promissory note found by trial court to be void, when defendant merely alleged invalidity of note in defense of action for collection); see also Shain v. Belvin (1889) 79 Cal. 262, 263, 21 P. 747] .

Persons having direct beneficial interests in the instrument sought to be canceled are necessary parties to an action for cancellation [see Toomey v. Toomey (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 317, 319, 89 P.2d 634 (minor daughter who was beneficiary of maintenance trust created by property settlement agreement between parents was necessary party to action by wife and mother to annul agreement)].

If the plaintiff has no actual knowledge of beneficial interests not disclosed by the facts of record, it probably is not necessary to look beyond those facts to discover whether there are unknown beneficial interests [see Johnson v. Curley (1927) 83 Cal. App. 627, 629-635, 257 P. 163 (undisclosed assignees of beneficiary were bound by judgment canceling trust deed, even though not made parties to action, when beneficiary appeared and defended, and record did not show that assignees were without knowledge of action; assignees are proper but not necessary parties in such case); Tosi v. Northern Cal. Bldg. & Loan Ass'n (1937) 23 Cal. App. 2d 416, 419, 73 P.2d 286 (owner of real property who executed deed of trust to secure promissory notes executed by someone else was entitled to have notes canceled)].

[a] Elements of Cause of Action

A statement of the facts constituting an instrument's invalidity constitutes a sufficient allegation of a cause of action for cancellation of a void or voidable instrument under Civ. Code § 3412 [see Zakaessian v. Zakaessian (1945) 70 Cal. App. 2d 721, 725, 161 P.2d 677] .

Civ. Code § 3412 contemplates that any written instrument which for any reason is void or voidable and outstanding, and which by reason thereof may result in serious injury or prejudice to the party as to whom it is void or voidable, upon proper application, may be adjudged to be void, and ordered to be delivered up and canceled. All that is required either in pleading or in proof is to show the facts constituting the invalidity of the instrument, whether they involve fraud, duress, accident, mistake, or lack of consideration. If, in other words, the instrument has been procured by fraud, accident, or mistake, the fraud, accident, or mistake should be pleaded; if the instrument is for any other reason void or voidable, the facts showing it to be so, whatever they may be, should be shown [Hironymous v. Hiatt (1921) 52 Cal. App. 727, 731, 199 P. 850 ; see Keele v. Clouser (1929) 101 Cal. App. 500, 502, 281 P. 1073] .

The apparent validity of the instrument must also be alleged [see Civ. Code § 3413; Hughes v. Beekley (1927) 85 Cal. App. 313, 316, 259 P. 337] .

[b] Identity and Capacity of Defendant [Paragraph 1]

If the defendant is not a natural person, the complaint should allege the defendant's identity as an existing entity against which the court's judgment will operate [see Tanner v. Best (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d 442, 445, 104 P.2d 1084] , such as a corporation, a partnership, an unincorporated association, or a governmental agency. A defendant who is a natural person need not be identified as such.

If the defendant is sued in a particular capacity, that is, if liability depends on the defendant having certain obligations because of holding a status (such as executor, trustee, real estate broker, attorney) to which the law attaches special significance, the complaint should allege that capacity [see, e.g., Katleman v. First Nat'l Bank (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 520, 524, 28 Cal. Rptr. 135 (discharged executor not subject to suit in representative capacity)]. If a defendant's capacity is simply that of a private individual, an allegation as to capacity is not necessary.

If the defendant is not a natural person sued in his or her individual capacity, it may be necessary to reflect that fact in the caption. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions .

[c] Venue Facts [Paragraph 2]

Generally there is no requirement to plead facts establishing venue. Such a requirement does exist, however, in certain cases arising from consumer-related transactions [see Civ. Code §§ 1812.10(c), 2984.4(c); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 395(b), 396a(a); for discussion and forms, see Ch. 571, Venue]. Except in those cases, the plaintiff does not have a burden to show that venue is proper; rather, the defendant has a burden, if venue is not proper, to raise an objection and prove the point [see Code Civ. Proc. § 396b].

However, if venue is proper in only one county (usually true only in the case of cancellation of a deed), it is advisable for the complaint to show what county that is. This may be done by an allegation in the paragraph describing the instrument. A separate paragraph devoted to nothing but venue facts is not necessary. In this form, Paragraph 2 sets out a venue fact to illustrate an appropriate place for such an allegation, if it is desired.

[d] Fictitiously Named Defendants [Paragraph 3]

When the plaintiff is ignorant of the name of a defendant, he must state that fact in the complaint, and such defendant may be designated by any name. When such a defendant's name is discovered, the complaint, and any other pleading in which he has been designated by a fictitious name must be amended [Code Civ. Proc. § 474]. For further discussion and appropriate forms, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used (alternative forms of allegations for use under Code Civ. Proc. § 474) and Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings.

[e] Identity and Capacity of Plaintiff [Paragraph 4]

If the plaintiff is not a natural person suing in his own behalf, the complaint should state the identity of the plaintiff and the capacity in which he sues [see [b], above].

If the plaintiff brings the action in a special capacity, the complaint should allege this capacity to show that the plaintiff is entitled to relief, if other facts are true [see Parker v. Bowron (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 344, 351, 254 P.2d 6 (distinguishing standing and capacity to sue)].

If the plaintiff is not a natural person suing in his or her own behalf, it may be necessary to reflect that fact in the caption. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions .

[f] Existence and Custody of Instrument [Paragraph 5]

The complaint must show that the instrument in question actually came into being, that it was in existence at the time the action was begun, and that it was in the possession of, or under the control of, the defendant [see Consolidated Concessions Co. v. McConnell (1919) 40 Cal. App. 443, 445, 180 P. 842] . If the instrument has been lost, it would seem unnecessary to show the custody of it, which is unknown [see 107.12, above].

[g] Description of Instruments [Paragraph 5]

It is advisable to describe the instrument in the complaint as particularly as possible. A copy of it should be exhibited in the complaint if the plaintiff has a copy. Too brief a description may lead the court into describing the instrument incorrectly in the judgment, to the plaintiff's detriment [see Throop v. Weaver (1919) 180 Cal. 335, 336-337, 181 P. 55] .

[h] Apparent Validity and Actual Invalidity of Instrument [Paragraphs 5, 6]

[i] Allegation Required

The complaint must state facts which show both the apparent validity of the instrument [see Civ. Code § 3413] and its actual invalidity [see Hughes v. Beekley (1927) 85 Cal. App. 313, 316, 259 P. 337] .

Since the apparent validity must be on the face of the instrument [see Civ. Code § 3413], apparent validity will be shown by attaching a copy of the instrument as an exhibit or, if a copy is not available, properly describing the instrument as in Paragraph 5 of the form.

Actual invalidity will be shown by alleging facts establishing the instrument as void or voidable, as in Paragraph 6 of the form. The instrument must be void or voidable as to the plaintiff [see Civ. Code § 3412]. This will usually be evident from the facts showing voidness or voidability, but if it is not evident from those facts, additional facts must be alleged. The statement of facts showing the instrument to be void or voidable as to the plaintiff may be too long for one paragraph, and in that case the facts should be stated in separate paragraphs. Paragraph 6 of the form, for example, could be divided into two paragraphs.

[ii] Multiple Theories of Invalidity

It is permissible for the complaint to charge the invalidity of the instrument in question on the basis of two or more theories, such as fraud and lack of consideration, and these should be set out in separate counts [see North Confidence Mining & Dev. Co. v. Morrice (1922) 56 Cal. App. 145, 147, 204 P. 851] .

When two or more theories as to invalidity are set out, it is error for the court to compel the plaintiff to elect one and abandon any other [Tanforan v. Tanforan (1916) 173 Cal. 270, 274, 159 P. 709] .

If two or more grounds for invalidity of the instrument exist, those which are not stated in the complaint will be deemed abandoned. All grounds must be stated in one action; the plaintiff cannot maintain several actions, one on each ground [see Little v. Smith (1920) 47 Cal. App. 8, 12-15, 189 P. 1059] .

[iii] Facts Showing Invalidity

In setting forth a cause of action for the cancellation of an instrument because of menace, fraud, and the like exercised on the person who executed the instrument, the facts relied on, rather than conclusions, should be stated [see Campbell v. Genshlea (1919) 180 Cal. 213, 217, 180 P. 336] .

The statement of grounds on which the invalidity of the instrument is based must be drafted with care. Counsel must be careful to avoid negating the claim of invalidity through a statement of inconsistent facts [see Stromberg v. Tanforan (1920) 50 Cal. App. 1, 5-6, 194 P. 516] .

[iv] Mistake

Courts of equity will not encourage the cancellation or revocation of instruments on the ground of mistake if they appear to have been executed by the complainant without the exercise of reasonable care. Civ. Code § 1577 states the law with reference to mistakes of fact. It limits the mistakes for which relief may be granted to those that are not caused by the neglect of a legal duty [see Mesmer v. White (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 665, 674, 264 P.2d 60 ; see also Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 261, 294, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807, 27 P.3d 702 (construing Civ. Code § 1577 and determining that defendant satisfied requirements for rescission of contract on ground of unilateral mistake of fact)].

If a mistake of fact is the result of a failure to read the instrument, the instrument is voidable if the plaintiff signed without reading because he relied on false representations as to the contents and a confidential relationship existed between plaintiff and defendant [see Kane v. Mendenhall (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 749, 758, 56 P.2d 498 (noting conflict in rules where no confidential relationship exists)], but in general it is probably a neglect of legal duty to fail to read an instrument before signing it, at least for the purpose of determining whether the instrument is voidable on the basis of a mistake of fact.

[v] Mistaken Belief as to Nature of Instrument

An allegation that plaintiff signed the instrument in question under a misapprehension that it was something other than a deed indicates that plaintiff is seeking to cancel a deed that was void [see Smith v. Williams (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 617, 620, 12 Cal. Rptr. 665, 361 P.2d 241] .

[i] Apprehension of Serious Injury [Paragraph 7]

Civ. Code § 3412 requires, before an instrument can be canceled, that there be a reasonable apprehension that the instrument, if left outstanding, may cause serious injury to the plaintiff. A reasonable apprehension of serious injury will usually be apparent from facts alleged elsewhere in the complaint, so that a separate, additional paragraph stating such apprehension would be unnecessary.

Paragraph 7 of the form alleges that the defendant has refused to surrender the instrument in question. Demand and refusal are not prerequisite to maintaining an action, but often the plaintiff will have demanded surrender of the instrument. If so, it is approprate to allege the defendant's refusal.

[j] Claim for Damages [Paragraph 8]

Cancellation alone may not give the plaintiff complete relief. If a compensable loss has been sustained, damages may be awarded as additional relief [see Oswald v. El Centro (1930) 211 Cal. 45, 52, 292 P. 1073 (rental value of property which plaintiff lost because coerced into executing lease)].

[k] Exemplary and Punitive Damages [Paragraph 9]

Exemplary and punitive damages [Civ. Code § 3294] may be recovered if the facts justify an award in an action for cancellation [see Wright v. Rogers (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 349, 368, 342 P.2d 447 ; see also Ward v. Taggart (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 736, 743, 336 P.2d 534] .

For discussion of the availability and restrictions on the pleading of punitive damages, see Ch. 177, Damages .

[5] Prayer

[a] Voiding of Instrument, Delivery, and Damages

Civ. Code § 3412 provides that the instrument may be (1) adjudged void and (2) ordered delivered up or canceled. Both kinds of relief need not be sought or given [see § 107.12].

When the instrument in question, if coming into the hands of a bona fide transferee for value, would render the plaintiff liable to pay money or sustain some other loss, the judgment should protect the plaintiff by ordering, as an alternative to surrender and cancellation of the instrument, that the plaintiff recover from the defendant damages equal to the monetary value of the possible loss, such as the amount of a promissory note [see Loud v. Luse (1931) 214 Cal. 10, 13, 3 P.2d 542] . An appropriate paragraph should be added to the prayer seeking the alternative damages. In the usual case, damages will be in an amount equal to the value of the supposedly valid instrument, as set out in Paragraph 5, and no additional allegations in the complaint will be necessary.

[b] Availability of Relief Consistent With Complaint

The court in a cancellation action may grant any relief consistent with the case made by the complaint and embraced within the issues although not specifically prayed for. The court may grant any monetary relief necessary to do complete equity between the parties [see Wright v. Rogers (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 349, 367-368, 342 P.2d 447] .

The relief granted to the plaintiff cannot exceed that demanded in the complaint if there is no answer, but in any other case, the court may grant the plaintiff any relief consistent with the case made by the complaint and embraced within the issues. The court may impose liability, regardless of whether the theory upon which liability is sought to be imposed involves legal or equitable principles [Code Civ. Proc. § 580(a)].

In a limited civil case, however [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1) (amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less)], the court may not grant relief exceeding $25,000 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 85] excluding attorney's fees, interest, and costs. Nor may the court in a limited civil case grant a permanent injunction except as otherwise authorized by statute, or a determination of title to real property, or declaratory relief except as authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 86 [Code Civ. Proc. § 580(b)].

[c] Injunctive Relief Is Available

When the facts show that unless the holder is restrained from transferring the instrument, he or she may transfer it to the plaintiff's detriment, it would be proper for the court to enjoin transfer pending determination of an action for cancellation [see Ingram v. Smith (1890) 83 Cal. 234, 238, 23 P. 298] . For discussion and forms relating to the assertion of a claim for injunctive relief, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require that any answer also must be verified, if the action is in the superior court and is not a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification also will preclude a general denial except in a limited civil case, and will preclude a general denial even in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion see Ch. 26, Answers .

[7] Jurisdiction

[a] Equitable Case

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action. Because relief under Civ. Code § 3412 is equitable, actions for cancellation will be classified as unlimited civil cases unless they fall within one of the specific categories of actions that are designated as limited civil cases [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(3),(b), 88].

Actions to cancel or rescind a contract are limited civil cases when the relief is sought in connection with an action to recover money or property, not exceeding $25,000 in value, paid or delivered under or in consideration of the contract [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(3)]. In addition, the following cases in equity are designated as limited civil cases, and an action seeking cancellation of an instrument presumably would be a limited civil case if it came within one of these categories [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(b)]:

- Cases to try title to personal property when the amount involved is not more than $25,000.
- Cases when equity is pleaded as a defensive matter in any case that is otherwise a limited civil case.
- Cases to vacate a judgment or order of the court obtained in a limited civil case through extrinsic fraud, mistake, inadvertence, or excusable neglect.

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the paper must state whether or not the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

[b] Instrument Affecting Real Property Outside California

If the instrument in question relates to or affects real property located outside California, that fact does not necessarily deprive a California court of jurisdiction to render a judgment canceling the instrument. For example, a judgment canceling deeds to properties located in Wisconsin has been affirmed when the defendants claiming title through the deeds were California residents [see Tully v. Bailey (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 195, 198-200, 115 P.2d 542] .

[8] Venue

[a] Instrument Not Affecting Title to Real Property

When the instrument in question does not affect the title to real property, it is clear that the action for cancellation is transitory and may be tried in any county where venue for such an action is proper under Code Civ. Proc. § 392 et seq.

See generally Ch. 571, Venue .

[b] Instrument Affecting Real Property

[i] Recorded Contract Affecting Real Property

An action for cancellation of a recorded contract that clouds title to real property is local and must be tried in the county in which the real property is located [see Kejr v. Construction Engineers, Inc. (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 817, 819, 245 P.2d 21] .

[ii] Promissory Note and Deed of Trust

An action for cancellation of a promissory note secured by a deed of trust is transitory. Although an action for cancellation of the deed of trust alone would be local and would have to be tried in the county in which the real property is located, an action for cancellation of both the promissory note and also the deed of trust remains transitory. Trial may be had in any county where a transitory action against the defendant may be tried [see Howe v. Tucker (1933) 219 Cal. 193, 194-195, 25 P.2d 832] .

[iii] Request for Cancellation and Other Relief

When the instrument sought to be canceled relates to or affects real property, venue will be determined by the principal cause of action if other relief is also sought. For example, an action for cancellation of a note or deed of trust is transitory and need not be tried in the county in which the real property subject to the deed of trust is located; an action to quiet title to real property is local and must be tried in the county in which the real property is located [see Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(1)]. If the quieting of title is sought as incidental relief to the cancellation of a deed, the combined actions may be tried in any county where a transitory action against the defendant can be tried. On the other hand, if cancellation of a deed is sought incidentally to quieting title, the combined actions must be tried in the county in which the real property in question is located [see Vaughan v. Roberts (1941) 45 Cal. App. 2d 246, 251-256, 113 P.2d 884] .

[9] Statute of Limitations

The statute of limitations in an action to cancel a deed depends on the underlying relief sought. Based on this rule, the California Supreme Court has held that if the basis for the right to cancel is a right to rescind the contract, the time limits for rescission apply [Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 195, 215, 1 Cal. Rptr. 12, 347 P.2d 12] . Since that case, the statute of limitations for rescission actions has been set at four years from discovery of the facts that entitle the party to rescission [Code Civ. Proc. § 337(3)].

There is also authority stating that if the basis for relief is fraud or mistake, the statute of limitations is the one for actions based on fraud or mistake under Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d). That statute of limitations is three years from discovery of the fraud or mistake [Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 195, 212, 1 Cal. Rptr. 12, 347 P.2d 12 ; Turner v. Milstein (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 651, 659, 230 P.2d 25] . Thus, if the basis of the cancellation action is fraud or mistake, which are bases for rescission [Code Civ. Proc. § 1689(b)(1)], it is not clear whether the statute of limitations is three or four years from the discovery of the facts. If the basis of the action for cancellation is essentially one to recover real property, the five-year statute of limitations for such actions may be applicable [Campbell v. Genshlea (1919) 180 Cal. 213, 218-219, 180 P. 336] . If the basis for relief is one for which there is no specific statute of limitations, such as illegality, the four-year statute of limitations for actions with no controlling statute may be applicable [Moss v. Moss (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 640, 644, 128 P.2d 526] .

The four year limitation period provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 343 applies in seeking cancellation on ground of execution under undue influence [Wade v. Busby (1944) 66 Cal. App. 2d 700, 702, 152 P.2d 754 ; see also Boyd v. Lancaster (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 103, 111, 132 P.2d 214 (action for cancellation based on incompetency of person executing instrument astimely filed less than four years after instrument was obtained from alleged incompetent)].

The overall effect of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 318, 319, and 328 is that actions relating to either the possession of or title to real property, or both, must be commenced within five years from the end of possession or seizin of that property by the claimant or his or her predecessor in interest, unless the chain of title includes a person who was either a minor or insane. In those circumstances, a tolling period not to exceed 20 years is allowed, provided that the action is commenced within no more than five years after the end of the disability [Robertson v. Superior Court (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 1319, 1327-1329, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 650 (in action for cancellation of deed based on ground of mental incompetency at time of execution, court of appeal issued writ of mandate ordering trial court to vacate order overruling demurrer based on statute of limitations grounds)].

PART IV. FORMS

§ 107.61 Allegation--Rescission of Underlying Transaction and Offer to Restore Consideration--Cancellation of Voidable Instrument [Civ. Code § 3412]

[1] FORM Allegation--Rescission of Underlying Transaction and Offer to Restore Consideration--Cancellation of Voidable Instrument [Civ. Code § 3412]

1. The _____ [instrument, e.g., purported note] was executed by plaintiff as the result of a certain _____ [written or oral] agreement between plaintiff and defendant made on _____ [date], for the purpose of _____ [specify purpose of agreement].

2. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff notified defendant in writing that plaintiff thereby rescinded the agreement on the ground that _____ [describe ground for rescission]. _____ [Plaintiff offered in that written notice to restore all consideration which defendant had given, to wit: _____ (describe), on condition that all consideration given by plaintiff, to wit: _____ (describe) be restored to plaintiff or Defendant has given no consideration to plaintiff.]

[OR]

2. By service of this complaint, plaintiff notifies defendant that plaintiff hereby rescinds the agreement on the ground that _____ [describe ground for rescission]. _____ [Plaintiff hereby offers to restore all consideration which defendant has given, to wit: _____ (describe), on condition that all consideration given by plaintiff, to wit: _____ (describe) be restored to plaintiff or defendant has given no consideration to plaintiff].

[2] Use of Form

The allegation in [1], above, should be inserted into the complaint [see § 107.60] if the instrument in question arose from a transaction which the plaintiff is entitled to rescind, making the instrument voidable rather than void.

[3] Necessity of Restoring Consideration Where Instrument Voidable

If an instrument is voidable, the plaintiff in an action for cancellation of it must offer to restore to the defendant everything of value which plaintiff has received in the underlying transaction, less damages sustained. That is to say, plaintiff must rescind a voidable transaction [see Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1691, 1692]. This is not necessary where the instrument in question is void [see Ebbert v. Mercantile Trust Co. (1931) 213 Cal. 496, 501, 2 P.2d 776 ; Fleming v. Kagan (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 791, 796-798, 11 Cal. Rptr. 737 ; Civ. Code § 3412].

If the damages sustained equal or exceed the value of what would have to be restored, plaintiff need not restore, and need not offer to restore, anything [see Peterson v. Wagner (1921) 52 Cal. App. 1, 12, 198 P. 25] . If damages are claimed, then the phrase "less plaintiff's actual damages" should be inserted into the allegation after the description of the consideration given by the defendant.

[1] FORM Allegation--Discovery of Facts Making Instrument Voidable--Cancellation of Voidable Instrument [Civ. Code § 3412]

1. Plaintiff did not know until _____ [date], that _____ [state facts constituting ground for rescission of underlying transaction making instrument voidable], and on that date _____ [describe circumstances under which plaintiff discovered such facts, including explanation for any delay].

[2] Use of Form

The allegation in [1], above, should be inserted into the complaint [see § 107.60] where the instrument in question arose from a transaction which the plaintiff is entitled to rescind, making the instrument voidable rather than void.

[3] Necessity of Rescinding Promptly

Where an instrument is voidable, plaintiff's action for cancellation of it will be barred unless he acted promptly, after discovering the facts making it voidable, to rescind the underlying transaction [see Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 195, 215, 1 Cal. Rptr. 12, 347 P.2d 12] .

[1] FORM Proposed Statement of Decision--Cancellation of Instrument [Civ. Code § 3412]--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	PROPOSED STATEMENT OF DECISION
Defendant.	)

The above-entitled cause came on regularly for trial on _____ [date], in Department _____ of the above-entitled court, the Honorable _____, Judge, presiding without a jury and was tried on that date [and on _____ (state any additional dates)]. _____ [Name] appeared as counsel for plaintiff and _____ [name] appeared as counsel for defendant. _____ [Specify other appearances, if any].

Oral and documentary evidence was introduced on behalf of the respective parties and the cause was argued and submitted for decision. The court, having considered the evidence and heard the arguments of counsel and being fully advised, issues the following statement of decision:

1. A certain written instrument purporting to be _____ [e.g., a promissory note], which is more particularly described below, is _____ [in the possession or under the control] of defendant _____ [name].

2. The form and content of the _____ [e.g., purported note] are _____ [as set out in the copy of it which is attached to this judgment as Exhibit A or as follows: _____ (particular description)].

3. _____ [State fact making instrument void or voidable, e.g., The purported signature of _____ (name) on the _____ (e.g., purported note) is not the signature of _____ (name) and was not placed on the _____ (e.g., purported note) by _____ (name).]

4. If the _____ [e.g., purported note] is left outstanding, there is a reasonable apprehension that plaintiff will be seriously injured in that, among other possible injuries, _____ [e.g., plaintiff may become bound to pay the purported note, plaintiff may be required to defend a lawsuit based on the purported note, and plaintiff may be injured in his credit by refusing to pay the purported note].

5. _____ [Set out any other specific relevant facts.]

6. All of the facts alleged in the complaint and not specifically found above to be true are true.

7. The _____ [e.g., purported note] is void, and plaintiff is entitled to an order by this court that the _____ [e.g., purported note] be delivered to the clerk of the court for cancellation.

8. _____ [Set out any other specific conclusions, such as those involving damages].

[2] Use of Form

The proposed statement of decision in [1], above, may be used as a model for drafting a statement of decision in favor of the plaintiff if the court does not draft the judgment itself.

The language of this statement has been adapted from that decreed for findings of fact and a statement of decision by the Supreme Court in Loud v. Luse (1931) 214 Cal. 10, 3 P.2d 542 .

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	JUDGMENT CANCELING INSTRUMENT

This cause came on regularly for trial on _____ [date], the Honorable _____ [name], Judge, presiding, sitting without a jury. Plaintiff appeared by _____ [name], his attorney, and defendant appeared by _____ [name], his attorney. Evidence, both testimonial and documentary, was presented by _____ [both parties or plaintiff only or defendant only], and the cause having been argued and submitted for decision, and _____ [the court(, on request of _____ (plaintiff or defendant),) having caused its written statement of decision to be made and filed or a statement of decision not having been requested,]

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED AND ADJUDGED _____ [include, if plaintiff must restore anything to defendant: that on plaintiff's depositing with the clerk of this court, within _____ (e.g., thirty) days after the date of entry of this judgment, _____ (describe what plaintiff must restore to defendant), judgment shall be entered] as follows:

1. Defendant _____ [name] shall immediately deliver the written instrument purporting to be _____ [describe instrument to be cancelled with specificity, e.g., a promissory note dated _____ in the amount of $_____, payable to _____ (name) and apparently made by _____ (name)], to the clerk of this court for cancellation, and the clerk shall cancel it upon receiving it and shall thereafter deliver the canceled instrument, or cause it to be delivered, promptly to plaintiff.

2. If defendant _____ [name] fails to surrender the instrument to the clerk within the time provided by law for filing a notice of appeal from this judgment, plaintiff shall have and recover from defendant _____ [name] the sum of $_____ [monetary value to plaintiff represented by instrument], together with interest from _____ [date of execution of instrument], at the rate of _____ [e.g., 7 percent per annum], as compensation and in lieu of cancellation of the instrument.

[3. If plaintiff is entitled to restoration of money or property, add: Defendant _____ (name) shall immediately deposit with the clerk of this court, for _____ (payment or delivery) to plaintiff, _____ (the sum of $_____ or specific property), and the clerk shall thereafter _____ (pay or deliver) it, or cause it to be _____ (paid or delivered) promptly to plaintiff _____ (add, if appropriate: on plaintiff's making the deposit as required above). If defendant _____ (name) fails to make the _____ (payment or delivery) ordered within the time provided by law for filing a notice of appeal from this judgment, plaintiff shall have and recover from defendant _____ (name) the sum of $_____, together with interest thereon from _____ [date], at the rate of _____ (e.g., 7 percent per annum), as compensation and in lieu of the payment or delivery ordered herein.]

[4. If plaintiff is required to restore anything to defendant, add: When defendant _____ (name) has performed the obligations ordered above, the clerk of this court shall deliver, or cause to be delivered, to him/her the _____ (specify) deposited by plaintiff.]

[5. If plaintiff is entitled to damages as additional relief, add: As additional relief, plaintiff shall have and recover from defendant _____ (name) the sum of $_____ as damages.]

[6. _____ If plaintiff is to receive exemplary and punitive damages, add: In addition to the other relief ordered, plaintiff shall have and recover from defendant _____ (name) the sum of $_____ for the sake of example and by way of punishing defendant _____ (name).]

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that the court retains jurisdiction of this cause until the terms of this judgment have been fully complied with or until further order of the court.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that plaintiff shall have and recover from defendant _____ (name) his costs and disbursements herein.
Dated: _____, [date].

_____ [signature]

Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

The judgment in [1], above, may be used as a model for drafting a judgment in favor of the plaintiff if the court does not draft the judgment itself.

The language of this judgment has been adapted from that decreed by the Supreme Court in Loud v. Luse (1931) 214 Cal. 10, 3 P.2d 542 (additional aspect of the language decreed in Loud has been used in the proposed statement of decision set out in § 107.70).

[3] Interlocutory Judgment for Cancellation

In Hatch v. Penzner (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 874, 878, 113 P.2d 295 , the court of appeal affirmed a later judgment after an interlocutory judgment canceling certain conveyances and approved the trial court's retention of jurisdiction for the purpose of enforcing compliance with the judgment of cancellation, on the ground that a court may retain jurisdiction in an equitable action to enforce the original judgment.

[4] Conditional Order for Cancellation

Where the instrument in question is evidence of security for a debt, the plaintiff is entitled to have the instrument canceled, and the debt is valid, if the debt is owed by the plaintiff, the judgment for cancellation may properly impose the condition that the debt be paid [see Ross v. Allen (1927) 82 Cal. App. 758, 761, 256 P. 248 (cancellation of deed given to attorney as security for payment of fee for legal services)]; but if the debt is owed by someone other than the plaintiff, a condition that the debt be paid is improper [see McCain v. Burch (1928) 92 Cal. App. 141, 142-145, 267 P. 748 (cancellation of note and mortgage given to attorney as security for payment of fee for legal services owed by plaintiff's husband)].

[5] Determination of Rights and Obligations Under Instrument

Where the parties have acquired rights and assumed obligations under the instrument sought to be canceled, it is proper, and usually necessary, for the court to determine those rights and obligations when rendering a judgment that the instrument be canceled [see Martin v. Burris (1922) 57 Cal. App. 739, 741, 746, 208 P. 174 (remanding with directions to hear and determine such rights and obligations under canceled contract for joint venture)].

Chapter 108 CAPTIONS AND INTRODUCTIONS
PART I. SCOPE

§ 108.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses and contains forms of captions and introductions commonly used in pleadings and papers in actions and special proceedings. Specifically, it contains a sample caption and introduction for a complaint [see § 108.50] and an answer [see § 108.51], plus other forms of the following parts of a caption:

- Titles of courts [see §§ 108.53 -108.57].
- Titles of cases [see §§ 108.58 -108.75].
- Descriptions of parties [see §§ 108.76 -108.120].
- Descriptions of pleadings and papers [see §§ 108.121 -108.125].

This chapter also includes forms of addresses to courts [see §§ 108.140 -108.142] and introductions [see §§ 108.160 -108.224].

Forms of captions and introductions, some of which are not included in this chapter, are included elsewhere in this set. The reader is advised to consult the subject matter index.

For discussion and forms relating to the content of pleadings, see Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings , Ch. 26, Answers , Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints ,, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 375, Motions to Strike: Pleadings , and Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti-SLAPP.

Chapter 108 CAPTIONS AND INTRODUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-108 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 108.11

§ 108.11 Caption

[1] Required

Every pleading and paper is required to contain a caption setting forth the name of the court and county to which the action is brought, and the title of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111].

[2] Contact Information and Title of Court

Following the name, address, telephone number, fax number, and email address (if available), and state bar membership number of the attorney in the upper left hand corner [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(1)], the caption proper begins with the name of the court and county in which the action is brought and the title of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(a)]. The name or title of the court and county is set forth on or below 31/3 inches from the top of the page at line 8 on the first page of the pleading or other paper [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(3)].

A clerk cannot reject a paper for filing solely on the ground that it does not contain an attorney's or a party's fax number or e-mail address on the first page [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.118(6)].

[3] Title of Case

The title of the case appears below the title of the court and to the left of center on the page [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(4)] and sets forth the names of all the parties to the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.40]. In the title of the case on each initial complaint or cross-complaint, the name of each party must commence on a separate line beginning at the left margin of the page [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(4)]. On any subsequent pleading or paper, it is sufficient in the title of the case to (1) state the name of the first party on each side, with appropriate indication of other parties, and (2) state that a cross-action or cross-actions are involved, if applicable [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(4)].

In a civil action, the party complaining is known as the plaintiff, and the adverse party is the defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 308]. The party prosecuting a special proceeding may be known as the plaintiff and the adverseparty as the defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 1063], although in many special proceedings, particularly those in which the initial pleading is referred to as a petition, the terms petitioner and respondent, respectively, are used.

[a] Description of Parties

[i] On Initial Pleading

In the initial complaint or petition, the names of all parties to the action or proceeding are to be included in the title of the case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.40]. In the title of the case on each initial complaint or cross-complaint, the name of each party must commence on a separate line beginning at the left margin of the page [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(4)]. A party may sue or be sued in any name in which he or she is known and recognized, even if that is an assumed name [Emery v. Kipp (1908) 154 Cal. 83, 84, 97 P. 17 ; Cabrera v. McMullen (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1, 3-4, 251 Cal. Rptr. 34] . When a party is an individual acting on his or her own behalf, and not in a representative capacity, it is sufficient to include the party's name (including at least first and last name and middle name or initial if the name is a common one or likely to be confused with another party). When a party is an individual acting in a representative capacity (e.g., as a guardian ad litem for a minor), a short description to that effect will follow the party's name. If a party is an entity other than an individual (e.g., a corporation), the party's name will be followed by a description of its status.

[ii] Correction of Technical Defect

The omission of a named defendant from the caption is a technical and nonsubstantive defect subject to correction by amendment. Although helpful to the court, the caption is not considered a part of the pleader's statement of claim and is not determinative of the parties to the action or the court's jurisdiction. The court is entitled to consider the allegations of the complaint as well as the title in determining the identity of a party. If the body of the complaint correctly identifies the party or if the proper person actually has been served with process, courts generally will allow an amendment to correct technical defects in the caption [Bell v. Tri-City Hospital Dist. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 438, 445-446, 449, 241 Cal. Rptr. 796] .

[iii] On Subsequent Pleadings

In pleadings subsequent to the initial complaint or petition, it is generally sufficient to state the name of the first party named on each side, followed by the designation "et al." [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.40]. On any subsequent pleading or paper, it is sufficient in the title of the case to (1) state the name of the first party on each side, with appropriate indication of other parties, and (2) state that a cross-action or cross-actions are involved, if applicable[Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(4)]. However, some courts require that all parties also be named in the caption to the answer; counsel is advised to consult local practice in this regard. Further, the names of all parties should be included in a judgment; one reason is that a judgment lien may be lost on a judgment which does not mention all parties since the clerk who records the abstract of the judgment will not index parties not listed in the caption. Counsel is also advised to include in the caption of an order the names of all parties involved in the order; parties to whom the order does not pertain may, however, still be identified by use of "et al."

[4] Number of Case

The number of the case appears to the right of and opposite the title of the case on the first page of the papers filed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(5)]. In the initial complaint or petition, the phrase "NO. _____" should be typed. The number will be stamped on by the clerk when the complaint or petition is filed. That number should be included on all subsequent pleadings and papers.

[5] Description of Pleadings and Papers

Below the number of the case appears a brief statement in capital letters setting forth the nature of the paper (e.g., COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES). Below this, on all complaints and petitions, is a brief statement of the character of the action or proceeding (e.g., Personal Injury and Property Damage). In a case having mutiple parties, any answer, response, or opposition must specifically identify the complaining, propounding, or moving party and the complaint, motion, or other matter being answered or opposed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(6)].

The first page of the first paper filed in a limited civil case must state whether the amount demanded exceeds or does not exceed $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9)]. The caption of every pleading filed in a limited civil case must state the words: "Limited Civil Case" [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)].

For examples, see § 108.121 et seq.

[6] Assigned Judge and Department

Below the description of the pleadings and papers appears the name of the judge and department, if any, to which the case is assigned.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 108.12 Address to Court

Pleadings may begin with an address to the court located below the caption. The address includes the court's name, the appropriate judicial subdivision, and sometimes the name of the particular judge of the court. Generally, an address is not used in a pleading filed in a trial court.Complaints never contain an address. Petitions in special proceedings sometimes contain an address, usually in court printed forms, although there is no requirement than an address be included and the modern practice is to omit it. The address to the appellate court is widely used, however.

§ 108.13 Introduction to Allegations

Although not required by statute, an introductory phrase commonly follows the caption and precedes the body of the pleading. The introduction identifies the pleader. It may also state the nature of the pleading although the simplest forms of introductions (e.g., "plaintiff alleges" in a complaint by a single plaintiff) are those most commonly used by attorneys.

The introduction is located below the caption and address to the court, if any.

This form is a sample caption and introduction for any notice of motion subject to the Civil Law and Motion Rules [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1100 et seq.].

If a case is reclassified by an amended complaint, cross-complaint, amended cross-complaint, or other pleading under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 403.020 or 403.030, the caption must indicate that the action or proceeding is reclassified by this pleading [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(11)]. If a case is reclassified by stipulation under Code Civ. Proc. § 403.050, the title of the stipulation must state that the action or proceeding is reclassified by this stipulation. The caption or title must state that the case is a limited civil case reclassified as an unlimited civil case, or an unlimited civil case reclassified as a limited civil case, or other words to that effect [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(11)].

[3] Applicability of Civil Law and Motion Rules

The civil law and motion rules apply to proceedings in civil law and motion, as defined in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(a), and to discovery proceedings in family law and probate [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1100]. Unless the context or subject matter otherwise require, they also apply to demurrers [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(c)]. "Law and motion" is defined as including any proceedings (1) on application before trial for an order, except for causes arising under the Welfare & Institutions Code, the Probate Code, the Family Code, or Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6, 527.7, and 527.8 (injunctive relief against harassment, gang violence, and violence or threatened violence in the workplace); or (2) on application for an order regarding the enforcement of judgment, attachment of property, appointment of a receiver, obtaining or setting aside a judgment by default, writs of review, mandate, and prohibition, a petition to compel arbitration, and enforcement of an award by arbitration [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(c)].

[4] Format and Content

The first page must specify all of the following immediately below the case number [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110(b)]:

- The date, time, and location, if ascertainable, of any scheduled hearing and the name of the hearing judge, if ascertainable.
- The nature or title of any attached document other than an exhibit.
- The date of filing of the action.
- The trial date, if set.

Documents bound together must be consecutively paginated [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110(c)].

A notice of motion must state in the opening paragraph the nature of the order being sought and the grounds for issuance of the order [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110(a)]. Any paper previously filed must be referred to by date of execution and title [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110(d)].

This court title may be used on a paper filed in a small claims case, that is, one filed in the small claims division of the superior court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 116.210].

Many forms typically used in small claims cases are provided by the Judicial Council as mandatory or optional forms. This caption may be used if no Judicial Council form is applicable or when choosing not to use an optional form.

[2] Use of Form

These are examples of common designations of a California court of appeal. The reference to "DIVISION

_____" is bracketed to indicate it is optional since it would not be correct in a district which does not have more than one division. And, even in a court of appeal in a district with two or more divisions, counsel is not expected to include the division number until notice is received that the cause has been assigned to a particular division.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing case title is for use where there are multiple cross actions. In such a case especially where the caption is lengthy, counsel may prefer, in pleadings and papers subsequent to the complaint, to repeat only the case title that appeared on the initial complaint and underneath add the phrase "and Related Cross Actions."

In the title of the case on each initial complaint or cross-complaint, the name of each party must commence on a separate line beginning at the left margin or the page [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(4)]. On any subsequent pleading or paper, it is sufficient in the title of the case to (1) state the name of the first party on each side, with appropriate indication of other parties, and (2) state that a cross-action or cross-actions are involved, if applicable [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(4)].

[2] Use of Form

Where an appeal is taken in a cause which originated as an adversary proceeding, the designation "and Appellant" is added after the term which described the appealing party (in this example, defendant appealed). The term "and Respondent" is added after the term which described the party opposing the appeal. No designation is added to a party who is neither prosecuting nor opposing the appeal (this may occur where there are multiple cross actions).

[3] Number of Case

The number assigned to the case by the trial court is not used in the appellate court. A new number will be assigned by the appellate court clerk after the record on appeal is lodged and the fees, if any, paid. Until a number is assigned, a blank should be left for insertion of the number.

Petitions for hearing in the Supreme Court should carry the number assigned by the court of appeal, with a blank for insertion of a Supreme Court number if a hearing is granted.

_____ [name of first named party], et al.	))))

It is customary, in pleadings and papers filed subsequent to the complaint, to include by name only the party named first in the complaint or petition and to refer to all others by use of the term "et al." On any subsequent pleading or paper, it is sufficient in the title of the case to (1) state the name of the first party on each side, with appropriate indication of other parties, and (2) state that a cross-action or cross-actions are involved, if applicable [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(4)]. However, some courts require that all defendants be named separately in the answer since a filing fee must be paid by each; counsel is advised to consult local practice. Further, the names of all parties should be included in a judgment; one reason is that a judgment lien may be lost on a judgment which does not mention all parties since the clerk who records the abstract of the judgment will not index parties not listed in the caption. Counsel is also advised to include in the caption of an order the names of all parties involved in the order; parties to whom the order does not pertain may, however, still be identified by use of "et al."

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing case title may be used in papers and pleadings filed after the complaint where a first named party who will be referred to by name has a long and complicated name. The first word or, if the first word is short, the first two words of the name are followed by the term "etc." which is followed by the designation of status, if any, at the end of the name. Thus, "Market Redevelopment and Research Co." becomes "Market etc. Co."

It is suggested, however, that the full name of each party appear in the caption to the judgment and to any order affecting such party.

The foregoing is a description of a party who is an individual doing business under a fictitious business name. The requirement that one who is transacting business in California under a fictitious name file a statement to that effect is applicable to corporations, limited liability companies, and other associations, as well as individuals [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17902], and this description may be modified for use by such entities.

A person transacting business under a fictitious business name may not maintain an action in a California state court on, or on account of, any contract made or transaction had in the fictitious name until a fictitious business name statement has been executed, filed, and published as required by law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17918].

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing description may be used in an action by or against a partnership since a partnership may sue or be sued in the name which it has assumed or by which it is known Code Civ. Proc. § 369.5(a). Where the litigation seeks to adjudicate only the rights or liabilities of partners in their partnership, as opposed to individual capacity, there appears to be no reason to name the individual partners, as is done in §§ 108.88 and 108.89. However, some counsel prefer to do this. Section 108.92 may also be used where one or more partners are to be sued individually in addition to their being sued in their capacity as partners.

The foregoing may be used in a taxpayer's action. Generally there does not appear to be any requirement that a taxpayer's action be brought as a class action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 526a]. A taxpayer's action in the form of a class action would appear to be appropriate, however, although it would compel plaintiff to comply with the various provisions governing class actions [see generally Ch. 120, Class Actions].

To the right of the title of a pleading or paper, there appears the number of the case and, immediately below, a brief designation of the nature of the pleading or other paper. On all complaints and petitions, the character of the action or proceeding must also appear. In a case having multiple parties, any answer, response, or opposition shall specifically identify the complaining, propounding, or moving party and the complaint, motion, or other matter being answered or opposed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(6)]. For descriptions of complaints, see §§ 108.122 -108.124.

In a limited civil case the caption of every pleading must state that the case is a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)].

In the case of a complaint or a petition filed a limited civil case, the first page of the first paper must state whether the amount of damages claimed exceeds or does not exceed $10,000, which affects the amount of the filing fee [Gov. Code § 70613(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9); for an example, see § 108.122].

Generally, an address to the court is not used in a pleading filed in a trial court. Complaints never contain an address. Petitions in special proceedings sometimes contain an address, usually in a court printed form, although there is no requirement that an address be included and the modern practice is to omit it.

The address is flush left, typed all in capitals. It follows the caption and is placed before the introduction.

etc.

[2] Use of Form

The designation "ANSWER TO FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION," "ANSWER TO SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION," etc. is often not used. In such cases the introduction would be only "Defendant answers the allegations of the alleged First Cause of Action, etc.," and then "Defendant answers the allegations of the alleged Second Cause of Action, etc."

Often the introduction is begun as in §§ 108.178 and 108.179, and after answering the First Cause of Action, a designation is made in the center of the page "ANSWER TO THE SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION," after which defendant answers the Second Cause of Action, starting the paragraph numbers again from roman numeral I.

This chapter discusses the intrastate inland carriage of freight and includes forms of complaints against carriers for nondelivery of freight [see § 109.220], delayed delivery of freight [see § 109.221], and loss of or injury to freight [see § 109.222].

This chapter discusses actions for injury, loss, or nondelivery of freight shipped in interstate commerce. It contains a form of complaint for use in an action for injury, loss, or nondelivery of freight shipped in interstate commerce [see § 109.240].

This chapter discusses rates and charges for carrying freight in intrastate commerce and regulation of rates and charges by the California Public Utilities Commission. It includes forms of complaints for recovery by a shipper of overcharges from a public utility common carrier [see § 109.260] and a complaint for collection by a public utility of all or a portion of lawful tariff charges from the consignee of the freight [see § 109.261].

§ 109.12 Intrastate and Interstate Carriage

Congress has power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the states [U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 3]. The Interstate Commerce Act (49 U.S.C.S. § 10101 et seq.), governing the interstate transportation of persons and freight, does not generally apply to the transportation of passengers or property, or to the receiving, delivering, storage, or handling of property wholly within one state [49 U.S.C.S. §§ 10501, 10521]. Generally, the destination intended by the passenger (or shipper) and known to the carrier at the beginning of the trip determines whether or not the carriage is interstate or intrastate [see New York, New Haven & Hartford R.R. Co. v. Nothnagle (1953) 346 U.S. 128, 130, 73 S. Ct. 986, 97 L. Ed. 1500] .

Likewise, the California Public Utilities Act [Pub. Util. Code § 201 et seq.] and Highway Carriers Act [Pub. Util. Code § 3501 et seq.] do not apply generally to interstate carriers [Pub. Util. Code §§ 202, 3506]. California does have, however, requirements for registration of interstate carriers [see Pub. Util. Code § 3901 et seq.].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

11-109 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 109.13

§ 109.13 Regulation by Public Utilities Commission

[1] Carriers as Public Utilities

Private corporations and persons owning, operating, controlling or managing a line, plant, or system for the transportation of people or property, and common carriers are public utilities subject to the control of the legislature [Cal. Const. art. XII, § 3]. Pursuant to this constitutional provision, the legislature has defined every common carrier [see Pub. Util. Code § 211] performing services for the public as a public utility, and if the carrier receives any compensation, it is subject to the jurisdiction of the Public Utilities Commission (PUC) and to the provisions of the Public Utilities Act under Pub. Util. Code §§ 201-2115 [Pub. Util. Code § 216]. For a definition of common carriers under the Public Utilities Code, see § 109.14[1].

[2] Powers of Commission

The PUC has the power to fix rates and establish rules for the transportation of passengers and property by transportation companies, to prohibit discrimination, and to award reparation for the exaction of unreasonable, excessive, or discriminatory charges [Cal. Const. art. XII, § 4]. In addition, the legislature has given the PUC a broad power to supervise and regulate every public utility in the state and to do all things necessary and convenient in the exercise of such power and jurisdiction [Pub. Util. Code § 701]. For a discussion of and forms for use in proceedings before the commission, see Ch. 480, Public Utilities .

[3] Rates

A common carrier is required to file with the PUC, and to print and keep open for public inspection, schedules showing its rates, fares, charges, and classifications for transportation of people and property [Pub. Util. Code § 486]. A common carrier subject to the provisions of Pub. Util. Code § 201 et seq. is prohibited from participating in the transportation of persons or property between points in this state until its schedules of rates, fares, charges and classifications have been filed and published in accordance with the provisions of Pub. Util. Code § 201 et seq. [Pub. Util. Code § 493(a)]. If any common carrier of property transports any property for which it does not have schedules of rates, fares, charges, and classifications on file, in violation of Pub. Util. Code § 493(a), the PUC may establish a just and reasonable charge for the transportation [Pub. Util. Code § 493(b)]. This requirement does not apply to network railroad transportation, which is defined as railroad transportation subject to the Federal Surface Transportation Board pursuant to 49 U.S.C.S. § 10501(a) or (b) [Pub. Util. Code §§ 224.8, 493(c)].

The charges demanded or received by public utilities, as well as the rules made by public utilities pertaining to charges, are required to be just and reasonable. Unjust or unreasonable charges are unlawful [Pub. Util. Code § 451]. The commission is permitted to establish rates or charges for transportation of passengers and freight by railroads and other transportation companies except for network railroad transportation [Pub. Util. Code § 728.5]. The PUC also has power to order reparations for unreasonable, excessive, or discriminatory rates [Pub. Util. Code § 734; see Pub. Util. Code §§ 451-462, 726-738 (rates), 486-496 (tariff schedules); see also §§ 109.100, 109.260, and 109.261].

[4] Other Regulation

A public utility is required to furnish and maintain such facilities as are required to promote safety, health, comfort and convenience of patrons, employees, and the public [Pub. Util. Code § 451]. For regulation of equipment, practices and facilities, see Pub. Util. Code §§ 761-773.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 109 CARRIERS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

11-109 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 109.14

§ 109.14 Common Carriers

[1] Definition

Everyone who offers to the public to carry persons, property, or messages, except telegraph messages, is a common carrier of whatever he or she offers to carry [Civ. Code § 2168]. A common carrier has been defined as one who offers to carry goods (or persons) between certain termini and who is bound to carry for all who tender their goods and the price of carriage [Samuelson v. Public Utils. Comm'n (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 722, 729, 227 P.2d 256 ; see Gomez v. Superior Court (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1125, 1136, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 352, 113 P.3d 41 (roller coasters and similar amusement park rides are common carriers)]. The Supreme Court has concluded that a passenger's purpose in purchasing transportation, whether that purpose is to get from one place to another or to travel for entertainment or sightseeing, does not determine whether the transportation provider is a common carrier under the Civil Code [Gomez v. Superior Court (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1125, 1136, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 352, 113 P.3d 41] .

The common law test of common carriage requires an unequivocal intention to dedicate the property to public use [Talsky v. Public Utils. Comm'n (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 151, 162, 14 Cal. Rptr. 325, 363 P.2d 341] . A common carrier within the meaning of Civ. Code § 2168 has also been defined as any entity that holds itself out to the public generally and indifferently to transport goods or persons from place to place for profit [Samuelson v. Public Utils. Comm'n (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 722, 728-730, 227 P.2d 256 ; Squaw Valley Ski Corp. v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1499, 1508, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 897] . The "public," in this sense, does not necessarily mean everyone all the time; one may be a common carrier even though the nature of the service rendered is so specialized that it is of possible use to only a fraction of the total population [see Squaw Valley Ski Corp. v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1499, 1507-1510, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 897] .

Under the Public Utilities Code, a common carrier means every person and corporation providing transportation for compensation to or for the public or any portion of the public, except as otherwise provided under that Code [Pub. Util. Code § 211]. "Transportation" is defined as taking up persons or property at some point and putting them down at another [City of St. Helena v. Public Utils. Comm'n (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 793, 802, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 713 (wine train not carrier because it provides round-trip excursion, rather than picking up passengers at one location and putting them down at another location)], although the Supreme Court has cautioned that this definition applies only to regulation of a carrier as a public utility and does not necessarily extend to the definition of a common carrier for other purposes [Gomez v. Superior Court (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1125, 1140, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 352, 113 P.3d 41 (roller coasters and similar amusement park rides are common carriers for purposes of heightened duty of care imposed by Civ. Code §§ 2100, 2101)].

Generally, common carriers for purposes of public utility regulation include entities that operate public transportation facilities, such as buses and railroads [see Pub. Util. Code § 211(a), (c)]. The categories of common carriers listed under the Code include railroad corporations (Pub. Util. Code § 232), express corporations (Pub. Util. Code § 219), freight forwarders (Pub. Util. Code § 220), car corporations, highway common carriers (Pub. Util. Code § 213), and cement carriers (Pub. Util. Code § 214.1) [Pub. Util. Code § 211]. "Common carrier" does not include any corporation or person owning, controlling, operating, or managing any recreational conveyance such as a ski lift, ski tow, J-bar, T-bar, chair lift or other such device used primarily while participating in winter sports activities [Pub. Util. Code § 212(c)].

The Public Utilities Code enumerates entities exempted from the common-carrier status [see Pub. Util. Code § 212]. In addition, because federal law gives exclusive jurisdiction to the Federal Surface Transportation Board to regulate rates, classifications, rules, and other specified activities over network railroad transportation [see 49 U.S.C.S. § 10501(a), (b)], the Public Utitilies Code does not apply to those railroads if the Public Utilities Code is in conflict with that federal law [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 224.8, 486, 493, 494]. Network railroad transportation is defined as railroad transportation subject to the Federal Surface Transportation Board pursuant to 49 U.S.C.S. § 10501(a) or (b), which in effect is most intrastate railroad transportation [Pub. Util. Code § 224.8].

However, because these exemptions are provided for the purposes of PUC regulation [see § 109.13], an entity exempt under the Public Utilities Code is not necessarily exempt from common-carrier status under Civ. Code § 2168 for purposes of imposing tort liability. The PUC has observed that a transportation company may be exempt from regulation by the PUC as a common carrier under Pub. Util. Code §§ 211 and 216, but may occupy the status of common carrier for tort liability purposes under Civ. Code § 2168 [see Squaw Valley Ski Corp. v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1499, 1513, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 897] . Therefore, for purposes of imposing tort liability, an entity's common-carrier status is analyzed pursuant to the criteria under Civ. Code § 2168, even if it is exempt from that status under the Public Utilities Code. For example, a ski chairlift operator (exempt under Pub. Util. Code § 212(c)) is considered a common carrier for purposes of Civ. Code § 2168, because it indiscriminately offers that conveyance to the public to carry skiers at a fixed rate across a certain route [Squaw Valley Ski Corp. v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1499, 1508-1514, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 897] . The operator of a skier rope tow conveyance (also exempt under Pub. Util. Code § 212(c)), however, is not, because, unlike a chair lift, a rope tow does not lift the skier off the ground [see Squaw Valley Ski Corp. v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1499, 1507 n.1, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 897] . An amusement ride operator is a common carrier because it transports the public from place to place [Gomez v. Superior Court (2005) 35 Cal. Rptr. 4th 1125, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 352, 113 P.3d 41] .

With that caution in mind, note that the Public Utilities Code exempts highway permit carriers [Pub. Util. Code § 212(d); see Pub. Util. Code § 3515 (definition)]. It also exempts any corporation or person furnishing or otherwise providing transportation by horse, mule, or other equine animal for entertainment or recreational purposes [Pub. Util. Code § 212(e)]. In addition, as already discussed, it exempts entities involved in certain winter sports activities, such as ski facilities [see Pub. Util. Code § 212(c)]. Any integrated intermodal small package carrier that is registered subject to Pub. Util. Code § 4120 et seq. is also exempt [Pub. Util. Code §§ 212(f), 3511(f)].

[2] Duty to Serve Public

A common carrier must, if able to do so, accept and carry whatever is offered, at a reasonable time and place, if it is the kind of item that the carrier is accustomed to carry [Civ. Code § 2169].

[3] Discrimination Prohibited

A common carrier may not give preference in time, price or otherwise to one person over another [Civ. Code § 2170] and may not extend to any corporation or person any privilege or facility in the transportatin of passengers or property except such as are regularly and uniformly extended to all corporations and persons [Pub. Util. Code § 494]. However, a common carrier must always give a preference in time, and may give a preference in price, to the United States and to the state of California [Civ. Code § 2171].

[4] Duty to Follow Time Schedule

All common carriers must start at the time and place announced to the public, unless detained by accident or the elements, or in order to connect with carriers on other lines [Civ. Code § 2172]. Every common carrier of passengers by railroad must establish and give public notice of a scheduled starting time. Except in the case of accident or detention caused by connecting lines, and weather permitting, such carrier must start its trains at or within ten minutes after the scheduled time [Civ. Code § 2170].

§ 109.15 Private Carriers

Private carriers are carriers for hire who do not come within the definition of common carriers. Such carriers are not bound to carry for any reason unless they enter into a special agreement to do so [Samuelson v. Public Utils. Comm'n (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 722, 730, 227 P.2d 256] . A private carrier is not held to the higher standard of care that is imposed on a common carrier by Civ. Code § 2100, but is required only to exercise ordinary care and diligence [see Webster v. Ebright (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 784, 786, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 714] . Private carriers do not have a nondelegable duty to the public and are therefore not vicariously liable for their independent contractors' negligent acts [Hill Bros. Chem. Co. v. Superior Court (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1001, 1006-1010, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 530] . The standard required of common carriers is discussed in § 109.30 et seq. For discussion of the ordinary standard of care, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

§ 109.16 Carriers Without Reward

Carriers without reward are subject to the same rules as employees without reward [see Lab. Code §§ 2850-2853] except as otherwise provided [Civ. Code § 2089]. A carrier without reward who has begun performance of an undertaking must complete it as though a reward were being received, unless it restores the person or thing carried to as favorable a position as before the carrier commenced the carriage [see Civ. Code § 2090]. A carrier of property without reward must use at least slight care and diligence [*Civ. The following sections contain a brief discussion of carriers of passengers. They discuss the duties and liabilities of common carriers to passengers and other persons, and include discussion of some commonly used defenses. They also contain forms of complaints for use in alleging injuries from wrongful ejection from a carrier's vehicle or conveyance [see § 109.200] and for assault and battery by an employee of a carrier [see § 109.201].

11-109 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 109.32

§ 109.32 Standard of Care Owed by Carriers to Passengers

A carrier of persons for reward must use the utmost care and diligence for their safe carriage, must provide everything necessary for that purpose, and must exercise to that end a reasonable degree of skill [Civ. Code § 2100; see Lopez v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 780, 785 n.2, 221 Cal. Rptr. 840, 710 P.2d 907 (applying Civ. Code § 2100 to public entity); see also Civ. Code § 2090 (carrier without reward has duty to complete undertaking as if receiving reward)].

Because common carriers bind themselves to carry safely those whom they take into their vehicles, they owe both a duty of utmost care and the vigilance of a very cautious person towards their passengers. They are responsible for any, even the slightest, negligence and are required to do all that human care, vigilance, and foresight reasonably can do under all the circumstances [Acosta v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 19, 27, 84 Cal. Rptr. 184, 465 P.2d 72 ; Rogers v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 414, 417, 289 P.2d 226] . This duty is one of the "highest degree of care" [Osgood v. Los Angeles etc. Co. (1902) 137 Cal. 280, 281, 70 P. 169 ; Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. v. Lan Franco (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 881, 889, 73 Cal. Rptr. 660 (train and truck collision)].

The fact that a carrier of persons for reward owes them the highest duty of care, however, does not mean that the carrier is an insurer of the absolute safety of the passengers [Lopez v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 780, 791, 221 Cal. Rptr. 840, 710 P. 2d 907] .

In actions against airlines, the higher standard of care imposed by Civ. Code § 2100 may be preempted by the Airline Deregulation Act [49 U.S.C § 41713(b)(1)], in which event the common law standard of care will be applied [Gee v. Southwest Airlines (9th Cir. 1997) 110 F.3d 1400, 1406, 1408 (preempting emotional injury claims against airline stemming from negligent rendition of service and conduct of flight crew, but not as to safety related personal injury or death claims concerning airline operations or maintenance)]. For discussion of the liability of airlines, see Ch. 16, Airplanes and Airports .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Carriage of Persons

11-109 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 109.33

§ 109.33 Duties of Carrier

[1] Passengers With Special Physical Conditions

If a passenger is blind, sick, aged, very young, crippled, or infirm, and the condition is apparent or made known to the carrier, the carrier must render the passenger the necessary assistance in boarding or alighting from its trains or cars [McBride v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 113, 119, 279 P.2d 966 (crippled passenger on crutches slipped on wet cigar butt alighting from train)]. Thus, a carrier owes to children who are passengers on its cars a greater degree of care than it owes to healthy adults [Mudrick v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 724, 734, 81 P.2d 950] . However, this heightened duty only applies where a passenger is injured while boarding or alighting from a train or car. For example, no special duty of care is owed by a rapid transit district to an inebriated passenger who is injured after having safely exited the train, despite the fact that the train operator is aware of the passenger's inebriated condition [McGettigan v. Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 1011, 1020, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 516 (inebriated passenger left standing on platform after exiting BART train later found injured and still on platform)].

[2] Prevention of Assault on Passengers

A carrier owes to the passenger the highest degree of care in refraining from initiating conduct that would jeopardize the passenger's safety [Dayton v. Yellow Cab Co. (1948) 85 Cal. App. 2d 740, 745, 193 P.2d 959] . The rule of utmost care and diligence set forth in Civ. Code § 2100 applies not only to active negligence but also to personal treatment of passengers by the carrier, its agent, or employees while obligations under the contract of carriage are still unfulfilled [Dayton v. Yellow Cab Co. (1948) 85 Cal. App. 2d 740, 744, 193 P.2d 959] .

Carriers are liable for acts of assault on passengers by their employees [Berger v. Southern Pac. Co. (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6, 300 P.2d 170] . Because a contract of transportation implies protection to the passenger against acts of personal violence by the agent or employees of the carrier, a carrier is liable for acts of assault and battery by its employees resulting in injury to those it has agreed to transport on its facilities [Berger v. Southern Pac. Co. (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6, 300 P.2d 170] . The liability extends not only to cases in which the assault was in the line of the employee's duty, but also to those instances when the act was merely that of an individual and entirely disconnected with the performance of the agent's duties [Berger v. Southern Pac. Co. (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 300 P.2d 170] .

The carrier also has a duty to provide the highest degree of care to protect a passenger from the unprovoked assaults of other passengers [Lopez v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 780, 791, 221 Cal. Rptr. 840, 710 P.2d 907] . However, the duty only arises if, in the exercise of the required degree of care, the carrier has or should have knowledge of conditions from which it may reasonably be seen that an assault may occur, and the carrier has the ability to prevent the injury [Terrell v. Key Sys. (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 682, 686, 159 P.2d 704] .

[3] Passengers in Waiting Area

The high degree of care owed by carriers to passengers applies to passengers while they are in transit until they have safely departed from the carrier's vehicle, but it does not apply to a passenger in the carrier's station or waiting area. In that case, the carrier need only exercise a reasonable degree of care for the protection of the passengers [Marshall v. United Airlines (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 84, 86-87, 110 Cal. Rptr. 416 ; see also McGettigan v. Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist. 57 Cal. App. 4th 1011, 1018, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 516 (once inebriated passenger exited train to train platform relationship of carrier-passenger terminated and rapid transit district owed no duty to assist passenger based on existence of special relationship)]. However, the higher degree of care applies to a passenger in a waiting area if he or she has been accepted as a passenger and the carrier assumes the responsibility of conducting him or her to the point of departure [Grier v. Ferrant (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 306, 311, 144 P.2d 631] .

[4] Reciprocal Duty of Civility

A carrier of passengers for reward must give to passengers all such accommodations as are usual and reasonable, must treat them with civility, and must give them a reasonable degree of attention [Civ. Code § 2103]. This duty does not negate a reciprocal obligation on the part of passengers to use all reasonable care within their power for their own safety and to accord the same civility to the carrier, its agents, and its employees [Dayton v. Yellow Cab Co. (1948) 85 Cal. App. 2d 740, 744, 193 P.2d 959 (fight between taxicab driver and passenger over fare)].

[5] Boarding and Alighting Vehicle

A common carrier owes a duty to provide the utmost care and diligence for the safe carriage of its passengers, including the provision of care to passengers boarding the carrier [see Rocray v. Pasadena City Lines, Inc. (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 265, 269-270, 323 P.2d 772] . The carrier also owes a passenger the same high degree of care in affording passengers a reasonable opportunity to alight from the vehicle safely as in carrying the passenger safely [McBride v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 113, 116, 279 P.2d 966 (railroad accident)]. Thus, after a vehicle stops at a point where passengers might properly and conveniently alight, the carrier's employees have the duty of ascertaining whether any passengers are attempting to alight before starting the car [Moeller v. Market St. Ry. Co. (1938) 27 Cal. App. 2d 562, 565, 81 P.2d 475 (disapproved of on other grounds by Scott v. Burke (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 388, 401, 247 P.2d 313)].

With regard to the carrier's duty to keep the steps or vestibules of its cars free from debris or foreign substances other than snow or ice, the general rule is that the carrier must provide safe and convenient means of access to its vehicles and departure from them [McBride v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 113, 117-118, 279 P.2d 966] .

[6] Prohibition Against Overcrowding of Vehicles

A carrier of persons for reward must not overcrowd or overload its vehicle [Civ. Code § 2102]. It must provide every passenger with a seat [Civ. Code § 2185]. In addition, it must not overload its vehicle by receiving and carrying more passengers than its rated capacity allows [Civ. Code § 2185]. But Civ. Code § 2185 does not apply to any city, county, or city and county that operates a transportation system, or to any passenger stage corporation or street railroad corporation as defined in Pub. Util. Code §§ 226 and 232, which is subject to the jurisdiction of the Public Utilities Commission [Civ. Code § 2185].

In cases in which a carrier is not required to comply with Civ. Code § 2185 because it is exempt from its application under Pub. Util. Code § 226 or 232 or otherwise, if all of a carrier's seats are occupied, the carrier and the standing passenger are both required to take greater safety precautions than if the passenger were seated [Kelly v. Santa Barbara Consol. R.R. Co. (1915) 171 Cal. 415, 419, 153 P. 903 ; Sweet v. Los Angeles Ry. Co. (1947) 79 Cal. App. 2d 195, 199, 179 P.2d 824] . However, this greater obligation on the part of the carrier when all seats are occupied seems to be only an extension of the duty to use the utmost care and diligence for the passengers' safety. Therefore, it is not prejudicial error to fail to give a jury instruction on the carrier's duty to provide seats and the greater duty owed when seats are not available if the jury is instructed of the carrier's duty of utmost care and diligence [Gerfers v. San Diego Transit Sys. (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 733, 738-739, 272 P.2d 930] .

[7] Ejectment of Passenger

A common carrier may make rules for conducting business, and may require passengers to conform to them, if they are lawful, public, uniform in their application, and reasonable [Civ. Code § 2 186]. In addition, a common carrier may demand the fare of passengers, either at starting or at any subsequent time [Civ. Code § 2187]. Consequently, a passenger who refuses to pay the fare or to conform to any lawful regulation of the carrier may be ejected from the vehicle by the carrier [Civ. Code § 2188]. However, the ejection must be done with as little violence as possible, and at any usual stopping place or near some dwelling house [Civ. Code § 2188]. After having ejected a passenger, a carrier has no right to require the payment of any part of the passenger's fare [Civ. Code § 2190].

When a common carrier contracts to convey a person, this contract gives rise to a duty to deliver the person to his or her destination, and a breach of this duty may justify tort damages [Sloane v. Southern Cal. Ry. Co. (1896) 111 Cal. 668, 676-677, 44 P. 320 ; Ingham v. Luxor Cab Co. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1051, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 587] . A common carrier that ejects a passenger at a place other than the designated destination violates a common carrier's affirmative duty to prevent harm to its passengers if the ejectment subjects the passenger to reasonably foreseeable injury [Ingham v. Luxor Cab Co. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1051, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 587] . In addition, ejectment of a passenger by a common carrier may be wrongful and actionable even if the ejectment occurs at an apparently safe place and even if no physical force is used to remove the passenger from the carrier [Ingham v. Luxor Cab Co. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1052, 1055, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 587] .

For example, in a case involving a cab driver that repeatedly told a passenger to leave the cab two blocks downhill from the passenger's intended destination, the cab company owed a duty of care not to eject the passenger from the cab there, even though there was no imminent danger at that spot. Because this particular passenger was obviously infirm, it was reasonably foreseeable that the passenger might suffer an injury as a result of having to walk uphill to her intended destination [Ingham v. Luxor Cab Co. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1053-1054, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 587] .

However, the scope of the duty to deliver a passenger to the intended destination may vary depending on the nature of the carrier, because cabs contract to deliver to the passenger's ultimate destination, while carriers such as trains carry passengers only to fixed stations that may only be near the passenger's ultimate destination [see Ingham v. Luxor Cab Co. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1053, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 587] . There may also be an issue of fact as to whether the ejectment was the proximate cause of a subsequent injury to the passenger, or whether the injury was caused instead by the passenger's own subsequent conduct, which may be unreasonable and unforeseeable [see Ingham v. Luxor Cab Co. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1054-1058, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 587] .

[8] Safe Operation and Maintenance of Equipment

A carrier of persons for reward must provide vehicles that are safe and fit for their intended purpose, and any default in this respect is not excused by any degree of care [Civ. Code § 2101].

Although a certain amount of lurching and jerking is inevitable in the lawful operation of a streetcar, bus, or other common carrier, a passenger is not required, as a matter of law, to anticipate a "sudden" or "violent" jerk that has sufficient force to throw the passenger to the ground [Acosta v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 19, 27, 84 Cal. Rptr. 184, 465 P.2d 72] .

A carrier of persons for reward must travel at a reasonable rate of speed, without any unreasonable delay or deviation from the proper route [Civ. Code § 2104]. Although the Public Utilities Commission has the power to fix rates and regulate services of public utilities, local governmental entities still have the power to regulate public utilities with regard to making and enforcing local, police, sanitary, and other regulations other than the fixing of rates [Cal. Const. art. XII, § 8]. Thus, local governmental entities are empowered to establish conditions, regulations, and the speed by which street railroad companies operate streetcars over and across city streets [Wright v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 168, 177, 93 P.2d 135 ; Simoneau v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1913) 166 Cal. 264, 269, 136 P. 544] .

It should be recognized that violating a prima facie speed limit does not establish negligence as a matter of law [Veh. Code §§ 40830, 40831; Hardin v. San Jose City Lines, Inc. (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 432, 439, 260 P.2d 63] . In civil cases, the prima facie speed limit is a factor to be considered with other pertinent factors in determining whether certain conduct was negligent [Hardin v. San Jose City Lines, Inc. (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 432, 439, 260 P.2d 63] .

If a collision occurs, an important jury issue is whether or not the carrier exercised the high degree of care required of common carriers to passengers [see Connor v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 746, 753, 232 P.2d 500 (bus driver not required to maintain lookout for vehicles that might violate law absent notice that might occur)].

§ 109.35 Doctrine of Imminent Peril

The doctrine of imminent peril relates to the standard of care that a person placed in an emergency situation must exercise. The doctrine states that a person who, without being negligent, is suddenly and unexpectedly confronted with peril, arising from either the actual presence or the appearance of imminent danger to that person or others, is not required to use the same judgment and prudence required in the exercise of ordinary care in calmer and more deliberate moments [Leo v. Dunham (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 712, 714, 264 P.2d 1] . For discussion and a form of affirmative defense based on imminent peril, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

A jury instruction on the doctrine of imminent peril was held proper in a passenger's suit for personal injuries caused by the sudden stop of a bus, when the bus driver stopped the bus to avoid hitting a child who ran into the street [Abney v. City & County of San Francisco (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 506, 514, 252 P.2d 654] . The instruction was also held proper in an action brought by a streetcar passenger for injuries incurred because of sudden braking, when the driver applied the brakes to avoid hitting a truck that had suddenly entered the street [Bovette v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 860, 863, 179 P.2d 80] .

In a case in which injuries were caused by sudden swerving of a bus, the question whether the bus was actually in a position of imminent danger when the driver first saw the oncoming car, and the question whether the driver's conduct after discovering the danger constituted negligence, were questions for the jury [James v. American Buslines (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 273, 276, 244 P.2d 503] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Carriage of Persons

11-109 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 109.36

§ 109.36 Carrier-Passenger Relationship

[1] Contract Required

A contract of carriage is a contract for the conveyance of property, persons, or messages, from one place to another [Civ. Code § 2085]. It is necessary to establish such a contract, and thus the relationship of carrier and passenger, in order to activate the carrier's duty of "utmost care and diligence" [see Civ. Code § 2100; Dayton v. Yellow Cab Co. (1948) 85 Cal. App. 2d 740, 743, 193 P.2d 959] .

[2] Commencement and Termination of Relationship

A carrier-passenger relationship customarily arises when a person enters the carrier's vehicle with an intent to pay the fare, or pays the fare, or when the person goes to the site of the vehicle's departure and the carrier's actions indicate an acceptance of the person as a passenger [Gray v. City & County of San Francisco (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 319, 323, 20 Cal. Rptr. 894 ; Grier v. Ferrant (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 306, 310-311, 144 P.2d 631] .

The carrier-passenger relationship ordinarily terminates when the passenger has alighted safely on a public street and has cleared the vehicle [Brandelius v. City & County of San Francisco (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 729, 735, 306 P.2d 432 ; Riggins v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 125, 128, 21 Cal. Rptr. 336] .

B. Carriage of Persons

11-109 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 109.37

§ 109.37 Injury to Nonpassengers

[1] Carrier's Standard of Care

Although a carrier of persons for reward is obligated to exercise the highest standard of care for its passengers' safety, it needs to utilize only ordinary care for the safety of nonpassengers [see Amendt v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 248, 253, 256, 115 P.2d 588 (pedestrian)].

[2] Pedestrians

A pedestrian and a carrier operator have mutual rights to use the street, and each may expect the other to use an ordinary degree of care for the safety of the other [see Amendt v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 248, 253, 115 P.2d 588] . If a carrier knows that its vehicles make a safety zone dangerous it must warn any person, whether prospective passenger or not, of the danger, despite the fact that it had no part in establishing the safety zone in an unsafe location [Brandenburg v. Pac. Gas & Elec. Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 282, 285-287, 169 P.2d 909] .

[3] Persons on Premises

In Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 119, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 , the California Supreme Court held that the proper test to be applied to the liability of the possessor of land pursuant to Civ. Code § 1714 is whether in the management of the property he or she acted reasonably in view of the probability of injury to others. Although the plaintiff's status as a trespasser, licensee, or invitee may, in the light of the facts giving rise to such status, have some bearing on the question of liability, the status is not determinative. Although the Rowland case involved a licensee, the test has been applied in the context of a business invitee [see Beauchamp v. Los Gatos Golf Course (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 20, 25-38, 77 Cal. Rptr. 914] . In cases decided prior to Rowland, courts held that carriers must use ordinary care to select a reasonably safe place to receive their passengers, to maintain the condition of the premises at which passengers are received, and to inspect the premises so that dangerous or defective conditions are discovered [Hamilton v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 598, 604-605, 86 P.2d 829 (inspection); Lagomarsino v. Market St. Ry. Co. (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 388, 395, 158 P.2d 982 (receiving passengers); Sanchez v. Pacific Auto Stages (1931) 116 Cal. App. 392, 396, 2 P.2d 845 (maintaining premises)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 421, Premises Liability .

[4] Workers in Street

When a worker must remain physically in the street amidst moving traffic in order to perform his or her duty, there is no duty imposed on him or her to look out constantly for motor vehicles [Austin v. Riverside Portland Cement Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 225, 237-239, 282 P.2d 69] . For example, a worker is not required to look continually for the approach of a carrier's vehicles [Driscoll v. California St. R.R. Co. (1926) 80 Cal. App. 208, 219, 250 P. 1062] . It is the duty of drivers of vehicles to observe the street laborers and to avoid contact with them [Woods v. Wisdom (1933) 133 Cal. App. 694, 697, 24 P.2d 863] . The street worker is required, however, to exercise ordinary care for his or her own safety [Jones v. Hedges (1932) 123 Cal. App. 742, 751-752, 12 P.2d 111] .

Carriers, like other employers, are generally liable under the doctrine of respondeat superior for the torts of their employees performed within the scope of their employment [see, e.g., Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 967, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676] . For discussion of the carrier's liability for assaults by an employee on a passenger, see § 109.33[2]. No common carrier may require any person (not including an employee) to waive, limit, or qualify any right to recover damages for injury in exchange for a reduction in price or fare for any service offered by the common carrier [*Pub. § 109.42 Res Ipsa Loquitur

[1] Presumption Affecting Burden of Producing Evidence

A significant portion of litigation involving passengers' actions against carriers for injuries received during the operation of the carrier's vehicle involves the applicability of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur. The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur ("the thing speaks for itself") applies when an accident is of such a nature that, in the light of past experience, it can be inferred that the accident was probably caused by negligence, and that the defendant is probably the responsible party [see Newing v. Cheatham (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 351, 359, 124 Cal. Rptr. 193, 540 P.2d 33 ; Ybarra v. Spangard (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 486, 489, 154 P.2d 687] .

The doctrine creates a presumption of negligence when an injured passenger proves that the injury resulted from the movement or operation of the carrier's vehicle [see, e.g., Mudrick v. Market St. Ry. Co. (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 724, 731-732, 81 P.2d 950] . The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence [Evid. Code § 646(b)]. It does not shift the burden of proof from the plaintiff passenger to the defendant carrier [Hardin v. San Jose City Lines, Inc. (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 432, 437, 260 P.2d 63] . Rather, the presumption that it raises shifts the burden of going forward with the evidence to the carrier, which is required to rebut the presumption with evidence sufficient to offset or balance it [Seffert v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 498, 502, 15 Cal. Rptr. 161, 364 P.2d 337] . Despite the very high standard of care imposed on the carrier, the doctrine does not justify a presumption of negligence on the carrier's part merely because a passenger has been injured while on board the carrier's vehicle [Mudrick v. Market St. Ry. Co. (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 724, 731-732, 81 P.2d 950] . Rather, the plaintiff must show that the injury resulted from the movement of the vehicle or from something connected with it or under the control of the defendant [Mudrick v. Market St. Ry. Co. (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 724, 731, 81 P.2d 950] . The passenger need not prove that the movement was unusual in order to justify the application of res ipsa loquitur [Mudrick v. Market St. Ry. Co. (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 724, 730-734, 81 P.2d 950] . For further discussion, see the Ch. 380, Negligence.

On appeal, a passenger plaintiff can rely on the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur to support a judgment in his or her favor even though the passenger offered no jury instruction on the subject and none was given [Rogers v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 414, 418, 289 P.2d 226] .

[2] Doctrine Applicable

The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur has been held applicable to a number of different situations involving injuries to passengers. For example, the doctrine creates an inference of negligence when the passenger proves that the injury resulted from the movement or operation of the carrier's vehicle [Hardin v. San Jose City Lines, Inc. (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 432, 436, 260 P.2d 63 ; Gray v. City & County of San Francisco (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 319, 326, 20 Cal. Rptr. 894] . The passenger need not prove that the movement was unusual in order to justify the application of res ipsa loquitur [Mudrick v. Market St. Ry. Co. (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 724, 730-734, 81 P.2d 950] . Moreover, the fact that the plaintiff participated in the events leading to the accident does not preclude application of res ipsa loquitur if there is evidence that the plaintiff's negligence, if any, was not a proximate cause of the accident [Seffert v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 498, 502, 15 Cal. Rptr. 161, 364 P.2d 337] .

Additional cases in which the doctrine was held to apply involved injuries caused by the following:

- The carrier's vehicle lurched as it rounded a curve [McIntosh v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 90, 93-94, 59 P.2d 959] ;

- The carrier's vehicle ran off the highway [Lawrence v. Pickwick Stages (1924) 68 Cal. App. 494, 498-499, 229 P. 885] ;

- The carrier's vehicle overturned [Seney v. Pickwick Stages (1927) 82 Cal. App. 226, 229, 255 P. 279] ;

- The carrier's vehicle plunged from the highway into a ditch and partially overturned on an embankment [Jianou v. Pickwick Stages Sys. (1931) 111 Cal. App. 754, 756-757, 296 P. 108] ;

- The carrier's streetcar collided with another streetcar [Osgood v. Los Angeles Traction Co. (1902) 137 Cal. 280, 282-283, 70 P. 169 ; Hyman v. Market St. Ry. Co. (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 647, 650-651, 107 P.2d 485] ;

- The carrier's bus collided with an automobile [Silva v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 284, 287-288, 259 P.2d 743] ;

- The carrier's sudden movements caused a suitcase to fall from a luggage rack and strike a passenger [Williamson v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 482, 486-487, 177 P.2d 977 ; Prunty v. Allred (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 67, 71-73, 165 P.2d 935] ; and

- A broken bus seat, in the absence of any unusual movements of the vehicle or of the person occupying the seat [Adam v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 535, 538-540, 317 P.2d 642] .

[3] Doctrine Inapplicable

The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur has been held to be inapplicable when the carrier's vehicle is at a standstill and the passenger's accident did not result from any movement or operation of the carrier's vehicle, for example, when passenger falls down and is injured while boarding or alighting from a stationary vehicle [Gray v. City & County of San Francisco (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 319, 327-328, 20 Cal. Rptr. 894] .

Res ipsa loquitur is invoked only if the necessary evidence is not readily available to the injured party and if the injury occurs under such circumstances that, when tested by ordinary experience and observation, it may be fairly inferred, in the absence of any explanation, that the person charged with negligence has failed to fulfill some obligation that he owed to the injured party when he had exclusive control of the operation of the agency that produced the injury [Williamson v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 482, 486-487, 177 P.2d 977] . Therefore, for example, the doctrine is not applicable if the passenger has full knowledge of and testifies as to the specific act of alleged negligence that has caused his injury or if there is direct evidence as to the precise cause of the accident [Connor v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1922) 189 Cal. 1, 5, 6, 207 P. 378] .

The collateral source rule prohibits any deduction from the payment that the plaintiff would collect from the tortfeasor of any compensation received from a source wholly independent of the tortfeasor [Helfend v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1, 6, 84 Cal. Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61] . The rule is applicable to governmental entities and public employees as well as to all other tortfeasors [Acosta v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 19, 84 Cal. Rptr. 184, 465 P.2d 72 , 25-26, 2 Cal. 3d 19, 84 Cal. Rptr. 184, 465 P.2d 72] . For further discussion of the collateral source rule, see Ch. 177, Damages . PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 109.44 Defenses

[1] Comparative Negligence

A passenger is required to use ordinary care for his or her own safety [Wilson v. City & County of San Francisco (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 273, 277, 344 P.2d 828 (cable car)]. In Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 , the California Supreme Court held that in an action for negligence resulting in injury to person or property, the contributory negligence of the person injured does not bar recovery, but the damages awarded are diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the person recovering. For discussion and forms regarding comparative negligence generally, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

Cases decided prior to Li are instructive in that conduct that constituted contributory negligence is now relevant to determine comparative negligence for the purpose of determining damages. They include the plaintiff's failure to use handrails, and failure to avoid the known overswing of a streetcar while standing in a safety zone [see Tait v. City & County of San Francisco (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 787, 790, 300 P.2d 74 (handrails); Dwyer v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1931) 115 Cal. App. 709, 712, 2 P.2d 468 (streetcar overswing)].

[2] Assumption of Risk

The term "assumption of risk" applies to at least two distinct defenses. The first concerns the situation in which the plaintiff has unreasonably undertaken to encounter a specific risk imposed by defendant's negligence. This represents a type of contributory negligence, and is simply a factor in the overall apportionment of responsibility between the plaintiff and defendant [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824-825, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] . The second category refers to a situation in which a plaintiff agrees to relieve a defendant of an obligation of reasonable conduct toward him or her. This type of assumption of risk is not a form of contributory negligence, but rather a reduction of defendant's duty of care, and is a complete defense [see Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824-825, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] . For further discussion, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

[3] Plaintiff's Violation of Statute

The common law presumption of negligence that arises from an act or failure to act below a statutory standard is codified in Evid. Code § 669. Under common law principles identical to these codified principles, it was held that a passenger was negligent when he rode on the steps of a carrier's vehicle in violation of an ordinance, and his conduct proximately contributed to his injury [see Reeves v. Lapinta (1938) 25 Cal. App. 2d 680, 681, 78 P.2d 465] . Another passenger was held negligent in boarding a moving streetcar in violation of an ordinance when the conduct proximately contributed to his injury [see Schultheiss v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 525, 527, 54 P.2d 49] . For further discussion of the defense of violation of statute, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

[4] Statute of Limitations

The usual two-year (one-year, prior to January 1, 2003) period of limitations applies to actions against carriers based on negligence [Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1; see former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3); Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.14]. If the suit is brought against a public entity that regulates and controls the carrier, the special requirements for presentation of claims against public entities and the period of limitations for those claims must be met [see Gov. Code § 900 et seq.; see also Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act].

§ 109.62 Definitions

[1] In General

Property carried is called freight. The reward, if any, to be paid for its carriage is called freightage. The person who delivers freight to the carrier is called the consignor, and the person to whom the freight is to be delivered by the carrier is called the consignee [Civ. Code § 2110]. Under the Uniform Commercial Code, a "consignee" is defined as the person named in a bill to whom or to whose order the bill promises delivery. A "consignor" is the person named in a bill as the person from whom the goods have been received for shipment [Com. Code § 7102(a)(3), (4)]. For a more detailed discussion of these and other terms used in Division 7 of the Uniform Commercial Code (Com. Code §§ 7101-7603), see Ch. 213, Documents of Title .

[2] Documents of Title

"Documents of title" include bills of lading [see Com. Code § 1201(b)(16)]. A "bill of lading" is a document evidencing the receipt of goods for shipment and is issued by a person engaged in the business of transporting or forwarding goods [Com. Code § 1201(b)(6)]. The bill of lading is the basic shipping instrument apart from the tariff filed by the public utility common carrier, which in effect constitutes the basic contract between the parties [see Kentner Truck Line v. Maier Brewing Co. (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 89, 93, 6 Cal. Rptr. 572] .

For forms and discussion regarding the rights and obligations created by bills of lading under Division 7 of the Uniform Commercial Code (see Com. Code §§ 7101-7603), see Ch. 213, Documents of Title .

§ 109.63 Delivery of Freight

[1] Directions to Carrier

Subject to Com. Code § 7303, which provides immunity for carriers against liabilty for misdelivery in the event the goods are diverted by any of several enumerated parties, a carrier must comply with the directions of the consignor or consignee to the same extent that an employee is bound to comply with those of his or her employer [Civ. Code § 2115]. A carrier must therefore substantially comply with all the directions of the consignor or consignee concerning the service in which the carrier is engaged, except where such obedience is impossible or unlawful or would impose new and unreasonable burdens on the carrier [see Lab. Code § 2856]. For forms and discussion regarding a carrier's duty under Division 7 of the Uniform Commercial Code (Com. Code §§ 7101-7603) to deliver goods covered by a bill of lading, see Ch. 213, Documents of Title .

[2] Place and Manner

Subject to Com. Code § 7303 [see § 109.63[1]], a carrier of property must deliver it to the consignee at the place to which it is addressed in the manner usual at that place [Civ. Code § 2118; see also Ch. 213, Documents of Title]. If there is no usage to the contrary at the place of delivery, freight carried by a railway owned or managed by the carrier may be delivered at the station nearest to the place to which it is addressed. Except for freight carried by sea from a foreign country and subject to Com. Code § 7303, freight carried by means other than railway must be delivered to the consignee or the consignee's agent, personally, if either can be found with reasonable diligence [Civ. Code § 2119].

[3] To Person Entitled Under Document

The bailee must deliver the goods to a person entitled to them under the bill of lading, if that person complies with Com. Code § 7403(b), (c)]. A "person entitled under the document" means the holder in the case of a negotiable bill or the person to whom delivery is to be made by the terms of or pursuant to written instructions under a non-negotiable bill of lading [Com. Code § 7402(a)(9)]. To be entitled to the delivery of the goods, the person claiming them must satisfy the bailee's lien if that is requested by the bailee, or if the bailee is prohibited by law from delivering the goods until the charges are paid. The person claiming the goods, unless one against whom the document confers no right under Com. Code § 7503(a) (person with interest in propriety before issuance of bill of lading), must surrender for cancellation or notation of partial deliveries any outstanding negotiable document covering the goods [Com. Code § 7403(b), (c)]. For a detailed discussion of the rights and obligations under Division 7 of the Uniform Commercial Code [Com. Code §§ 7101-7603] of a person entitled to goods covered by a bill of lading, see Ch. 213, Documents of Title .

[4] Liability for Nonreceipt of Goods

A consignee of a nonnegotiable bill of lading who has given value in good faith, or a holder to whom a negotiable bill has been duly negotiated, who relies on the description in the bill of the goods, or on the date shown in the bill, may recover damages from the issuer of the bill of lading for nonreceipt of the goods. The damages may not be recovered to the extent that the bill of lading indicates that the issuer does not know whether any part or all of the goods in fact were received or conform to the description of the goods [Com. Code § 7301(a)]. For forms and a detailed discussion regarding a carrier's liability under Division 7 of the Uniform Commercial Code [Com. Code §§ 7101-7603] for nonreceipt of goods covered by a bill of lading, and of the circumstances under which a carrier may be immune for misdelivery, see Ch. 213, Documents of Title .

[5] Defenses to Claim of Nondelivery or Misdelivery

A bailee is excused from delivering goods to the person entitled to them under several circumstances enumerated by the Uniform Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 7403(a); see also § 109.63[3]; see generally Ch. 213, Documents of Title].

A bailee who in good faith delivers or otherwise disposes of the goods according to the terms of the document of title, or pursuant to Com. Code §§ 7101-7603, is not liable for such delivery or disposition of the goods. This rule applies even if the person from whom the bailee received the goods had no authority to procure the document or to dispose of the goods and even though the person to whom the bailee delivered the goods had no authority to receive them [Com. Code § 7404; for detailed discussion, see Ch. 213, Documents of Title].

Damages for a breach of a carrier's obligation to deliver freight if the carrier has not converted the freight to its own use are governed by Civ. Code § 3316 [see § 109.220].

In the absence of a contract to carry and deliver goods within a given time, the carrier is bound only to deliver the goods within a reasonable time, and is liable for a delay only when the delay is caused by the carrier's want of ordinary care and diligence [see Civ. Code § 2196; Palmer v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe R.R. Co. (1894) 101 Cal. 187, 194, 35 P. 630] .

[1] Gratuitous Carriers

A carrier of property without reward must use at least slight care and diligence [Civ. Code § 2114; see § 109.16].

[2] Carrier for Reward

A carrier of property for reward must use at least ordinary care and diligence in the performance of all of its duties [Civ. Code § 2114].

[3] Carrier Issuing Bill of Lading

A carrier who issues a bill of lading must exercise the degree of care in relation to the goods which a reasonably careful person would exercise under like circumstances [Com. Code § 7309(a)]. For forms and discussion regarding a carrier's duty of care under Division 7 of the Uniform Commercial Code in relation to goods covered by a bill of lading [Com. Code §§ 7101-7603], see Ch. 213, Documents of Title .

[4] Common Carriers

A common carrier is strictly liable, with certain exceptions, for loss or injury to property transported [see Civ. Code § 2194; BBD Transp. Co. v. Buller (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 124, 128, 122 Cal. Rptr. 357] . These exceptions are caused by: (1) an inherent defect, vice, or weakness or a spontaneous action of the property itself; (2) the act of a public enemy of the United States or of the state of California; (3) an act of the law, or (4) any irresistable superhuman cause [Civ. Code § 2194]. The burden is on the carrier to show that the loss resulted from one of the causes stated as an exception to the general rule [Brignoli v. Seaboard Transp. Co. (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 782, 792, 178 P.2d 445] . Com. Code § 7309(a), which makes a carrier who issues a bill of lading liable for negligence, does not change or affect this rule of strict liability of common carriers [Com. Code § 7309(a)].

A common carrier is liable for its negligence which exposes the property to the cause of the loss, even in the cases excepted from liability without negligence by Civ. Code § 2194 [Civ. Code § 2195].

§ 109.66 Termination of Liability as Carrier

[1] By Delivery

A common carrier's absolute liability for loss or injury is terminated by its delivery of the goods in compliance with Civ. Code §§ 2118, 2119 (see § 109.63[2]) and Civ. Code §§ 2120, 2121 (see § 109.66[2], [3]) [Civ. Code § 2194].

[2] Notice of Arrival

If, for any reason, a carrier does not deliver freight to the consignee or the consignee's agent, personally, the carrier must give notice to the consignee of the arrival of the freight and keep it in safety under the responsibility of a warehouseman until the consignee has had a reasonable time to remove it. The notice may be given by letter if the carrier does not know the place of the consignee's business or residence [Civ. Code § 2120]. If the carrier gives notice under Civ. Code § 2120, the carrier's strict liability for the goods is reduced to that of a warehouseman of ordinary care [see Wilson v. California Cent. R.R. Co. (1892) 94 Cal. 166, 178, 29 P. 861] .

[3] Failure of Consignee to Accept Goods

If the consignee does not accept and remove freight within a reasonable time after the carrier has fulfilled the obligation to deliver or duly offered to fulfill that obligation, the carrier may exonerate itself from further liability by placing the freight in a suitable warehouse in storage on account of the consignee and giving notice of the storage to the consignee [Civ. Code § 2121].

§ 109.67 Limitations on Liability

[1] Agreed Valuation Contracts

Though a common carrier cannot limit its obligations by general notice, they may be limited by special contract [Civ. Code § 2174]. However, a common carrier cannot be exonerated by any agreement from liability for its own gross negligence, fraud, or willful wrong, or that of its agents [Civ. Code § 2175]. "Gross negligence" has been interpreted to mean the want of slight care and diligence [Walther v. Southern Pac. Co. (1911) 159 Cal. 769, 775, 116 P. 51 ; Pratt v. Western Pac. R.R. Co. (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 573, 580, 29 Cal. Rptr. 108] . Although Civ. Code §§ 2174 and 2175 seem to imply that a carrier could be exonerated from ordinary negligence, a common carrier that is not involved in an important public service may enter into a contract to be released from liability for ordinary negligence [Platzer v. Mammoth Mountain Ski Area, (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1253, 1258, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 885 (operating ski lift not considered important public service)]. California courts have upheld reasonable "agreed valuation contracts" which limit the amount of the carrier's liability [Muelder v. Western Greyhound Lines (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 319, 337, 87 Cal. Rptr. 297] . Such contracts are considered as contracts in which the valuation of the property is agreed to for the purposes of fixing transportation charges and measuring the carrier's responsibility, and not as contracts limiting liability [Donlon Bros. v. Southern Pac. Co. (1907) 151 Cal. 763, 769, 91 P. 603] . For forms and discussion regarding contractual limitation of a carrier's liability under Division 7 of the Uniform Commercial Code (Com. Code §§ 7101-7603), see Ch. 213, Documents of Title .

[2] Assent to Limitation of Liability

A consignor or consignee who accepts a bill of lading or written contract for carriage with knowledge of its terms is deemed to assent to any limitation stated therein of the amount of the carrier's liability for loss or injury to property carried in packages, trunks, or boxes when the value of such property is not named, and to any stated limitation to the carrier's liability for loss or injury to live animals carried [Civ. Code § 2176]. Such knowledge may be constructive as well as actual, but the mere acceptance by the consignor of a document containing the terms of limitation of liability does not of itself amount to assent [Curtis v. United Transfer Co. (1914) 167 Cal. 112, 114-115, 138 P. 726 ; Muelder v. Western Greyhound Lines (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 319, 337, 87 Cal. Rptr. 297] .

A member of the public is not bound by a "released value" limitation on liability in a tariff regulation or a receipt, at least when the loss occurs through the carrier's gross negligence, unless the person contracted with knowledge of the limitation and of the existence of an opportunity to purchase higher liability [Muelder v. Western Greyhound Lines (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 319, 336-337, 87 Cal. Rptr. 297 ; but see Hischemoeller v. National Ice & Cold Storage Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 318, 323-329, 294 P.2d 433 (knowledge by plaintiff merchant of tariff limitation on warehouseman's liability as not required)].

[3] Other Limitations on Liability

[a] Baggage

The liability of any common carrier operating over the public highways for loss of, or damage to, any baggage may not exceed $500 for each trunk and its contents, $250 for each valise, suitcase, or traveling bag and its contents, or $250 for each box, bundle or package and its contents. However, liability may exceed these amounts if a higher valuation is declared at the time of the delivery to the carrier, and the carrier assents in writing [Civ. Code § 2205].

The liability of a common carrier by railroad, including a sleeping car company, for loss or injury to property carried in trunks, valises, suitcases, traveling bags, boxes, bundles or packages accepted as a part of or in connection with passenger transportation, is limited to $100 for each trunk and its contents, $50 for each valise, suitcase, or traveling bag and contents, or $10 for each box, bundle, or package and contents, unless the carrier has consented in writing to assume a greater liability [Civ. Code § 2178].

[b] Valuable Items

A common carrier is not responsible for loss or miscarriage of a letter, or package in letter form, containing money, notes, bills of exchange, or other papers of value, unless the carrier is informed at the time of receipt of the value of the contents [Civ. Code § 2177].

A common carrier of gold, silver, platina, or precious stones or imitations; of timepieces, of negotiable paper or other valuable writings; of pictures, glass, or chinaware; of statuary, silk or laces; or of plated ware of any kind, is not liable for more than $50 on the loss or injury of any one package of such articles, unless the carrier has notice, on receipt of the items, by mark or otherwise, of the nature of the freight. Such a carrier is not liable for any package carried, for more that the value of the articles named in the receipt or the bill of lading [Civ. Code § 2200].

A consignor is liable to a motorcarrier for storage or equipment rental charges assessed against the motor carrier by a railroad or steamship company if the charges arise out of a delay caused by the consignor [Civ. Code § 2197(a)(1)].

If the charges arise out of a delay caused by a consignee, the consignee is liable to the motor carrier for the charges [Civ. Code § 2197(a)(2)]. In addition, if the freight is shipped prepaid, the consignee is liable to the motor carrier for the charges when the delay was caused by either the consignor or the consignee [Civ. Code § 2197.5(a)]. These provisions do not, however, affect the rights, duties, and obligations between a railroad or steamship company and a motor carrier [Civ. Code §§ 2197(b), 2197.5(b)].

Loss of or injury to freight carried in interstate commerce by railroad and motor common carriers is generally governed by the Carmack Amendment [49 U.S.C.S. § 11707]. Actions under the Carmack Amendment may be brought in state court, as well as in federal court [see Missouri ex rel. St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (1924) 266 U.S. 200, 208, 45 S. Ct. 47, 69 L. Ed. 247] . Where an interstate shipment is involved [see § 109.12], rights and liabilities of the parties are governed by the applicable federal statutes as interpreted by the federal tribunals [Missouri Pac. R.R. Co. v. Elmore & Stahl (1964) 377 U.S. 134, 137, 84 S. Ct. 1142, 12 L. Ed. 2d 194 ; Bauer v. Jackson (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 358, 369, 93 Cal. Rptr. 43] . Federal law preempts any state common-law action against a carrier acting solely as a common carrier. This is true even when the common carrier is operating on a contract basis [Hughes Aircraft v. North Am. Van Lines (9th Cir. 1992) 970 F.2d 609, 613 (Carmack Amendment preempted state law negligence cause of action)].

The Federal Bills of Lading Act [49 U.S.C.S. § 80101 et seq.] applies to bills of lading issued by common carriers in interstate commerce [49 U.S.C.S. § 80102].

The Interstate Commerce Commission is charged by statute with the duty of executing and enforcing the Interstate Commerce Act contained in 49 U.S.C.S. § 10101 et seq. [49 U.S.C.S. §§ 10101, 10321]. Railroads, motor carriers, and freight forwarders are required to establish, observe, and enforce just and reasonable regulations and practices [49 U.S.C.S. §§ 10701, 10702, 10703]. For example, if a carrier imposes a higher tariff rate on a shipper than the rate determined to be reasonable by the Interstate Commerce Commission, then the shipper may bring an action under 49 U.S.C.S. § 11705(b)(3) against the carrier for damages in the amount of the difference between the rate imposed by the carrier and the rate determined to be reasonable by the Interstate Commerce Commission [*see Reiter v. The Carmack Amendment [49 U.S.C.S. § 11707] to the Interstate Commerce Act [49 U.S.C.S. § 10101 et seq.] is concerned with liability in connection with the transportatin of freight [49 U.S.C.S. § 11707]. It applies to railroads and to motor carriers which are common carriers [see 49 U.S.C.S. §§ 10501, 10730]. The amendment is a codification of the common law rule imposing liability on a carrier without proof of negligence [see Secretary of Agriculture v. United States (1955) 350 U.S. 162, 165 n. 9, 76 S. Ct. 244, 100 L. Ed. 173 ; Missouri Pac. R.R. Co. v. Elmore & Stahl (1964) 377 U.S. 134, 137-138, 84 S. Ct. 1142, 12 L. Ed. 2d 194] . It provides that a carrier is liable for loss and damage to goods delivered to it, unless the loss or damage is caused by an act of God, the public enemy, authority of law, an act or default of the shipper or owner, natural shrinkage, or losses resulting from a defect or vice in the property shipped. The delivering carrier has the same liability as the receiving carrier, for loss or damage throughout the entire route [see 49 U.S.C.S. § 11707].

Both the carrier receiving the goods from the consignor and the carrier delivering the goods are liable for loss or damage throughout the entire route. By preserving the common law rights of a holder of a bill of lading, the Carmack Amendment [49 U.S.C.S. § 11707] continues the common law liability of a connecting carrier [49 U.S.C.S. § 11707; see also Com. Code § 7302 (liability of connecting carrier)].

The carrier is liable for loss of or injury to the property to the lawful holder of a receipt or bill of lading. The carrier is also liable to any person entitled to recover on the receipt or bill of lading [49 U.S.C.S. § 11707].

As provided under the Interstate Commerce Act, the term "carrier" includes a "contract carrier" [see 49 U.S.C.S. § 10102(2)]. Thus, liability applying to a carrier applies to a contract carrier as well [see Hughes Aircraft v. North Am. Van Lines (9th Cir. 1992) 970 F.2d 609, 613] .

A carrier subject to the provisions of the Carmack Amendment [49 U.S.C.S. § 11707] is liable for the full actual loss, damage, or injury to property carried in interstate commerce [49 U.S.C.S. § 11707]. The general measure of damages for loss of property is the value of the property at the time and place at which is should have been delivered [see Illinois Cent. R.R. Co. v. Crail (1929) 281 U.S. 57, 64-65, 50 S. Ct. 180, 74 L. Ed. 699] . The general rule for determining the amount of damages for damaged or injured property is to take the difference between the market value of the property in the condition in which it should have arrived at its destination and the market value of the property as it did arrive [F.J. McCarty Co. v. Southern Pac. Co. (9th Cir. 1974) 428 F.2d 690, 692] . However, these rules do not apply if another rule is shown to be a better computation of actual damages [see Illinois Cent. R.R. Co. v. Crail (1929) 281 U.S. 57, 64-65, 50 S. Ct. 180, 74 L. Ed. 699 ; F.J. McCarty Co. v. Southern Pac. Co. (9th Cir. [Cal] 1974) 428 F.2d 690, 692] .

11-109 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 109.85

§ 109.85 Limitation on Damages

The carrier may limit liability where expressly authorized or required by order of the Interstate Commerce Commission to establish and maintain rates dependent on the value declared in writing by the shipper or agreed on in writing as the released value of the property [49 U.S.C.S. § 11707].

Before a carrier's attempt to limit its liability will be effective, the carrier must do the following [Hughes Aircraft v. North Am. Van Lines (9th Cir. 1992) 970 F.2d 609, 611-612] :

- Maintain a tariff in compliance with the requirements of the Interstate Commerce Commission,
- Give the shipper a reasonable opportunity to choose between two or more levels of liability,
- Obtain the shipper's agreement as to his or her choice of carrier liability limit, and
- Issue a bill of lading prior to moving the shipment that reflects any such agreement.

The carrier has the burden of proving that it has complied with these requirements [Hughes Aircraft v. North Am. Van Lines (9th Cir. 1992) 970 F.2d 609, 612 (carrier met burden when, among other things, shipper had reasonable notice of liability limitation and opportunity to obtain information necessary to making deliberate and well-informed choice)].

This contractual limitation of liability can extend to a shipper's state law tort claims against a carrier [Dictor v. David & Simon, Inc. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 238, 248-249, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 588] .

§ 109.100 Regulation of Carriers by Commission

[1] In General

A common carrier who performs a service for the public or a part of the public for any compensation or payment is a public utility subject to regulation by the Public Utilities Commission and to the provisions of the Public Utilities Act contained in Pub. Util. Code §§ 201-2115 [Pub. Util. Code § 220], and highway common carriers [see Pub. Util. Code § 211]. Generally, the Public Utilities Act applies only to intrastate carriage of freight and not to interstate commerce [Pub. Util. Code § 202]. Any corporation or person owning, controlling, operating, or managing any self-propelled vehicle not operated on rails, used in the business of transportation of property as a common carrier for compensation over any public highway in this state between fixed termini or over a regular route is a highway common carrier. However, passenger state corporations transporting baggage and express on a passenger vehicle incidental to the transportation of passengers are not highway common carriers [Pub. Util. Code § 213]. Being subject to regulation under the Public Utilities Act contained in Pub. Util. Code §§ 201-2115 [Pub. Util. Code § 216], a highway common carrier must obtain a certificate of public convenience and necessity [Pub. Util. Code § 1063] and file tariffs showing its exact rates [Pub. Util. Code § 486]. These carriers are referred to as "certificated" carriers [see Poe, Regulation of Highway Carriers in California, 30 So. Cal. L. Rev. 131, 133 (1957)].

Highway carriers other than public utility highway common carriers are "permitted carriers" and are regulated under the Highway Carriers Act contained in Pub. Util. Code §§ 3501-3809 [see Pub. Util. Code § 3541; see also Poe, Regulation of Highway Carriers in California, 30 So. Cal. L. Rev. 131, 133-134]. This chapter does not cover permitted carriers.

[2] Rates Fixed by Filed Tariffs

Common carriers, and public utilities in general, may not charge, demand, collect, or receive for the transportation of persons or property, or related services, a compensation different than the applicable rates, fares and charges specified in their schedules (tariffs) filed and in effect at the time. No common carrier or public utility may refund or remit in any manner or by any device any portion of the rates, fares, or charges specified in its filed schedules, except on order of the Public Utilities Commission [Pub. Util. Code §§ 494, 532].

[3] Discrimination Prohibited

Discrimination in charges for transportation by any railroad or other transportation company between places or persons, or in the facilities for the transportation of the same classes of freight or passengers within this state is prohibited [see Pub. Util. Code § 461.5, formerly Cal. Const. art. XII, § 21]. No common carrier, or public utility in general, may extend to any corporation or person any privilege or facility in the transportation of passengers or property except such as are regularly and uniformly extended to all corporations and persons [Pub. Util. Code §§ 494, 532].

[4] Long and Short Haul Charges

No railroad or other transportation company, or common carrier subject to the provisions of Pub. Util. Code §§ 201-2115, may charge or receive greater compensation in the aggregate for the transportation of like kind of property for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line or route in the same direction, the shorter being included in the longer distance. Such carriers may not charge a greater compensation for the transportation of like kind of property as a through rate than the aggregate of the intermediate rates. In certain cases, the commission may authorize a carrier to charge rates which do not comply with these requirements [Pub. Util. Code § 461.5].

11-109 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 109.102

§ 109.102 Liability for Payment of Freight

[1] In General

The consignor of freight is presumed to be liable for the freightage. However if the contract between the consignor and the carrier provides that the consignee is to pay the freightage, and the carrier allows the consignee to take the freight, the carrier cannot afterwards recover the freightage from the consignor [Civ. Code § 2137]. The consignee of freight is liable for the freightage if the consignee accepts the freight with notice of the consignor's intention that the consignee should pay the freightage [Civ. Code § 2138].

[2] Natural Increase of Freight

No freightage can be charged on the natural increase of freight [Civ. Code § 2139].

[3] Apportionment

If the freightage is apportioned by a bill of lading or other contract made between a consignor and carrier, the carrier is entitled to payment, according to the apportionment, for as much as the carrier delivers [Civ. Code § 2140]. Even if the freightage is not apportioned in the original contract, if the consignee accepts part of the freight without a specific objection that the rest is not delivered, the freightage must be apportioned and paid as to that part [Civ. Code § 2141].

If a consignee voluntarily receives freight at a place short of the one appointed for delivery, the carrier is entitled to a just proportion of the freightage according to the distance. This rule does not apply if the carrier is ready and willing and offers to complete the transit, in which case the carrier is entitled to the full freightage. It also does not apply if the carrier does not offer completion and the consignee recieves the freight only from necessity. In this case the carrier is not entitled to any freightage [Civ. Code § 2142].

[4] Extended or Faster Carriage

If freight is carried further or more expeditiously than was agreed on by the parties, the carrier is not entitled to additional compensation and cannot refuse to deliver the freight on the demand of the consignee at the time and place of its arrival [Civ. Code § 2143].

A carrier may require freightage, which is the reward to be paid for the carriage of freight [Civ. Code § 2110], to be paid when the carrier receives the freight. If the carrier does not demand the freightage at that time, the carrier may not demand the freightage until it is ready to deliver the freight to the consignee [Civ. Code § 2136].

[1] Carrier-Passenger Relationship

[a] Commencement

Airline's duty to passengers was in force when passenger went to site of departure and airline accepted him as traveler, not just when airplane took off; under California law, flight attendant's negligence in opening overhead compartment, allowing unstable luggage to fall out, is concurrent or contributing cause, not superseding cause, to passenger's negligence in storing luggage in precarious, unstable position. USAir Inc. v. United States Dep't of Navy (9th Cir. 1994) 14 F.3d 1410, 1413

Creation of carrier-passenger relationship by carrier's acceptance of person as passenger as capable of being implied regardless of whether carrier actually knows of passenger's presence on vehicle. *Ivancich v. Carrier-passenger relationship as arising when passenger enters vehicle with intent to pay, pays fare, or goes to site of departure, and carrier's actions indicate acceptance of person as passenger. Lagomarsino v. Market St. Ry. Co. (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 388, 395, 158 P.2d 982

Person who rented limousine and who was abandoned inebriated, clad only in swimsuit, without personal effects or any way to get home, as not stating cause of action for tortious breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing, but may state causes of action for breach of contract (possibly including damages for emotional distress), conversion, and breach of statutory obligations imposed by Civ. Code § 2100, Pub. Util. Code §§ 2106, 5360, 5382. Rogoff v. Grabowski (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 624, 633-634, 246 Cal. Rptr. 185

Liability of common carrier to its passengers under Civ. Code § 2100 "utmost care" standard as same whether carrier is public or private entity. De Vera v. Long Beach Pub. Transp. Co. (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 782, 792, 225 Cal. Rptr. 789

Following accident between common carrier's vehicle and that of third party, carrier as having duty to collect and preserve information concerning other vehicle and its driver for use by passengers in future civil litigation. De Vera v. Long Beach Pub. Transp. Co. (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 782, 795, 225 Cal. Rptr. 789

Carrier as not insurer of absolute safety of passengers. Gray v. City & County of San Francisco (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 319, 323, 20 Cal. Rptr. 894 ; Rocray v. Pasadena City Lines, Inc. (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 265, 269, 323 P.2d 772 ; Troutman v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 183, 185, 185 P.2d 616

Laborer in street as required to use lesser quantum of care than pedestrian. Scott v. City & County of San Francisco (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 887, 889, 206 P.2d 45 (roofer tending kettle of tar struck by streetcar)

Worker whose duty requires him to be on street as not required to look continually for approach of streetcar. Milosevich v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1924) 68 Cal. App. 662, 672, 230 P. 15 (pipe layer struck by streetcar and killed)

[c] Passengers

[i] Assault by Third Person

Duty of care to protect passenger from assault by third person as applicable when carrier has, or with exercise of utmost care should have, knowledge that assault may occur, and carrier has ability, with exercise of utmost care, to prevent injury. Lopez v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 780, 791, 221 Cal. Rptr. 840, 710 P.2d 907 ; Hicks v. Scott (1941) 48 Cal. App. 2d 481, 485-486, 120 P.2d 107

[ii] Boarding Passengers

Carrier as liable when doors close on boarding passenger. Rocray v. Pasadena City Lines, Inc. (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 265, 270, 323 P.2d 772 ; Gamwell v. Key Sys. Transit Lines (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 308, 309-310, 294 P.2d 1035

[iii] Passengers With Special Conditions and Minors

No inconsistency between one jury instruction defining degree of care owed by and to children and another defining duration of passenger-carrier relationship, when jury had to decide if bus driver was under duty to warn 14-year-old boy of possible danger in alighting from bus. Riggins v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 125, 127, 21 Cal. Rptr. 336

Carrier as owing to minor passengers a greater degree of care than it owes to adults. Brizzolari v. Market St. Ry. Co. (1935) 7 Cal. App. 2d 246, 248, 46 P.2d 783

[iv] Transportation of Animals

Carrier as having right to carry dogs in coach set apart for passengers, but carrier as required to use utmost care to ascertain dog's tendency to injure passenger. Westwater v. Southern Pac. Co. (1940) 38 Cal. App. 2d 369, 371-372, 101 P.2d 154

[3] Carrier's Employees

Employees of carrier as required to exercise same degree of care as required of their employer. Moeller v. Market St. Ry. Co. (1938) 27 Cal. App. 2d 562, 566, 81 P.2d 475

Employees of carrier as obligated not to use unreasonable or unnecessary force in ejecting passenger from vehicle; duty of every employee to refrain from committing any assault on any person, whether or not person is passenger. Galloway v. United R.R.s (1921) 51 Cal. App. 575, 577-579, 197 P. 663

[4] Evidence

Evidence of custom admissible for its relevance to issues of negligence and contributory negligence. Fowler v. Key Sys. Transit Lines (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 65, 67-68, 230 P.2d 339 , 37 Cal. 2d 65, 230 P.2d 339 ; Sanchez v. Pacific Auto Stages (1931) 116 Cal. App. 392, 395, 2 P.2d 845

[5] Passenger's Duty of Care

Under California law, passenger's negligence in storing luggage in overhead compartment in precarious, unstable position is not superseded by flight attendant's negligence in opening overhead compartment, allowing unstable luggage to fall out; negligence of each person is concurrent or contributing cause. USAir Inc. v. United States Dep't of Navy (9th Cir. 1994) 14 F.3d 1410, 1413

Passenger as not required as matter of law to anticipate "sudden" or "violent" jerk of sufficient force to throw one to ground. Rogers v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 414, 418, 289 P.2d 226 ; Dempsey v. Market St. Ry. Co. (1943) 23 Cal. 2d 110, 112, 142 P.2d 929 ; McIntosh v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 90, 96, 59 P.2d 959

Fact that carrier of persons for reward is held to highest standard of care as not meaning that passengers are also held to same high standard of care; passenger as required to exercise only ordinary care for own safety. Wilson v. City & County of San Francisco (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 273, 277, 344 P.2d 828

Passenger as not obligated to inspect baggage on luggage rack above head. Williamson v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 484, 487, 209 P.2d 146

[6] Res Ipsa Loquitur

Participation by plaintiff passenger in events leading to accident as not precluding application of res ipsa loquitur if there is evidence that plaintiff's negligence, if any, was not proximate cause of accident. Seffert v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 498, 502, 15 Cal. Rptr. 161, 364 P.2d 337 ; Shaw v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 153, 157, 323 P.2d 391

Res ipsa loquitur presumption of carrier's negligence as shifting burden of going forward with evidence to carrier to provide evidence sufficient to offset or balance it. Seffert v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 498, 502, 15 Cal. Rptr. 161, 364 P.2d 337 ; Hardin v. San Jose City Lines, Inc. (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 432, 436, 260 P.2d 63

Defendants as required to rebut res ipsa loquitur inference of negligence with evidence of equivalently convincing force. Seffert v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 498, 502, 15 Cal. Rptr. 161, 364 P.2d 337 ; Hardin v. San Jose City Lines, Inc. (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 432, 437, 260 P.2d 63

Res ipsa loquitur as capable of being relied on by passenger to support judgment even though passenger offers no jury instruction on subject and none is given. Rogers v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 414, 418, 289 P.2d 226

Doctrine of res ipsa loquitur as not justifying inference of carrier's negligence merely because passenger was injured while on board carrier's vehicle. Mudrick v. Market St. Ry. Co. (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 724, 731-732, 81 P.2d 950

Presumption of carrier's negligence as not applicable when passenger has full knowledge of and testifies as to specific act of negligence that caused injury, or if there is direct evidence as to precise cause of accident. Connor v. Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1922) 189 Cal. 1, 5, 6, 207 P. 378 ; Jorgensen v. East Bay Transit Co. (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 189, 193, 115 P.2d 556

Doctrine of res ipsa loquitur as not justifying inference of carrier's negligence merely because passenger was injured. Rystinki v. Central Cal. Co. (1917) 175 Cal. 336, 344, 165 P. 952 ; Gray v. City & County of San Francisco (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 319, 323, 20 Cal. Rptr. 894

Presumption of negligence arising from res ipsa loquitur as strongest when defendant owes plaintiff highest duty of care, such as that imposed on carrier of passengers. Ammenti v. Los Angeles Metro. Transit Auth.y (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 333, 336, 28 Cal. Rptr. 653 ; Freitas v. Peerless Stages, Inc. (1952) 108 Cal. App. 2d 749, 758-759, 239 P.2d 671

Res ipsa loquitur as inapplicable when passenger falls down and is injured while boarding or alighting from stationary carrier. Gray v. City & County of San Francisco (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 319, 327, 20 Cal. Rptr. 894

[7] Violation of Statute

Whether presumption of negligence is rebutted by violator of statute as determined by whether violator shows that conduct might reasonably be expected of person of ordinary prudence acting under similar circumstances who desired to comply with law. Alarid v. Vanier (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 617, 621-624, 327 P.2d 897

Presumption of negligence arising from act or failure to act below statutory standard as capable of being rebutted, but as conclusive until so rebutted. Satterlee v. Orange Glenn Sch. Dist. (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 581, 588, 177 P.2d 279 ; Combs v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 606, 609, 177 P.2d 293 (cases disapproved on other grounds in Alarid v. Vanier (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 617, 622-624, 327 P.2d 897)

B. Freight
1. Injury, Loss, or Nondelivery in Intrastate Commerce

11-109 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 109.142

§ 109.142 Decisions

[1] Bill of Lading

Bill of lading as basic shipping instrument apart from the tariff filed by public utility common carrier and as effectively constituting basic contract between parties. Kentner Truck Line v. Maier Brewing Co. (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 89, 93, 6 Cal. Rptr. 572

[2] Contraband

Though common carrier bound to accept whatever freight it holds itself out as accustomed to carry under Civ. Code § 2169, such carrier as not bound to accept freight that is illegal to possess or transport and carrier as having right to open and inspect package that it suspects contains contraband. People v. McKinnon (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 899, 914, 103 Cal. Rptr. 897, 500 P.2d 1097

[3] Delay

In absence of contract of carriage, carrier as bound to deliver goods within reasonable time, and as liable for delay only when caused by carrier's want of ordinary care and diligence. Palmer v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe R.R. Co. (1894) 101 Cal. 187, 194, 35 P. 630

Measure of damages for carrier's delay in delivery of freight under Civ. Code § 3317 as applicable only when appropriate, such as when goods are perishable, or they have market for use intended by which their value can be determined. Artists' Embassy v. Hunt (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 371, 374, 320 P.2d 924 (Civ. Code § 3317 as not proper measure of damages for delay in delivery of theatrical properties)

[4] Liability

Civ. Code § 2194 as making inland common carrier of property strictly liable for loss or injury from any cause whatever except for specified exceptions. BBD Transp. Co. v. Buller (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 124, 128, 122 Cal. Rptr. 357

Burden as on carrier to show that loss resulted from one of causes stated in Civ. Code § 2194 as exceptions to general rule of strict liability of carrier. Brignoli v. Seaboard Transp. Co. (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 782, 792, 178 P.2d 445

Overloading of trailer as not constituting "inherent defect, vice, or weakness, or a spontaneous action of the property itself" under Civ. Code § 2914(1) so as to constitute an exception to strict liability of common carrier for loss or injury to property under Civ. Code § 2194. BBD Transp. Co. v. Buller (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 124, 132, 122 Cal. Rptr. 357

If overloading freight is apparent to carrier (driver), carrier as liable notwithstanding negligence of shipper. BBD Transp. Co v. Buller (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 124, 132, 122 Cal. Rptr. 357 ; Albers v. Greyhound Corp. (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 463, 478, 84 Cal. Rptr. 846

Responsibility of carrier as reduced to that of warehouseman by giving consignee notice under Civ. Code § 2120 of arrival of freight not delivered. Wilson v. California Cent. R.R. Co. (1892) 94 Cal. 166, 178, 29 P. 861

[5] Limitation of Liability

A common carrier that is involved only in recreational activities may enter into a contract to be released from liability for ordinary negligence. Platzer v. Mammoth Mountain Ski Area (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1253, 1258, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 885

Consignor's consent to limited liability of carrier is sufficient to limit liability under Civ. Code § 2176 even if is without actual authority when carrier is not on notice of consignor's lack of authority. Morville v. United Parcel Serv. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 552, 555, 192 Cal. Rptr. 779

Airline's liability for loss of baggage was limited by tariff provision to $500 when plaintiff was aware of tariff provision and of availability of additional protection if he disclosed high value and paid additional fee but he deliberately did not disclose value or seek additional protection. Van Steinburg v. Pacific Sw. Airlines (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 842, 844, 160 Cal. Rptr. 612

"Gross negligence" under Civ. Code § 2175 (prohibition on contractual limitation of carrier's liability) as interpreted to mean want of slight care and diligence. Walther v. Southern Pac. Co. (1911) 159 Cal. 769, 775, 116 P. 51 ; Pratt v. Western Pac. R.R. Co. (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 573, 580, 29 Cal. Rptr. 108

"Agreed valuation contracts" as contracts in which valuation of property agreed to for purposes of fixing transportation charges and measuring carrier's responsibility and not as contracts limiting liability. Donlon Bros. v. Southern Pac. Co. (1907) 151 Cal. 763, 769, 91 P. 603

Reasonable "agreed valuation" contracts as upheld in California if shipper has knowledge of terms of limitation and choice of rates and fair opportunity to obtain higher valuation for higher rate. Muelder v. Western Greyhound Lines (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 319, 329-330, 87 Cal. Rptr. 297

Common law as having prohibited contracts exempting common carrier from liability based on ordinary negligence. Muelder v. Western Greyhound Lines (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 319, 329, 87 Cal. Rptr. 297

Rule in Hischemoeller v. Nat'l Ice & Cold Storage Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 318, 325-327, 294 P.2d 433 (warehouseman as entitled to benefit of "released value" limitation contained in tariff, despite lack of knowledge of commercial shipper) as not applicable to member of general public who is customer of grossly negligent carrier, such customer as not bound unless contracted with actual or constructive notice of limitation and opportunity to purchase higher liability existed. Muelder v. Western Greyhound Lines (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 319, 337, 87 Cal. Rptr. 297 (carrier grossly negligent)

"Knowledge" under Civ. Code § 2196 (assent to limitation on liability by acceptance of receipt) as able to be constructive as well as actual, but mere acceptance of document by consignor as not in itself amounting to assent. *Curtis v. 11-109 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 109.162

Where interstate shipment involved, rights and liabilities of parties as governed by applicable federal statutes as interpreted by federal tribunals. Missouri Pac. R.R. Co. v. Elmore & Stahl (1964) 377 U.S. 134, 137, 84 S. Ct. 1142, 12 L. Ed. 2d 194 ; Bauer v. Jackson (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 358, 369, 93 Cal. Rptr. 43

Liability of carrier as governed by Carmack Amendment [former 49 U.S.C.S. § 21(11) (now see 49 U.S.C.S. § 11707)], in which common law rule is codified for loss and damage to goods delivered to it, unless caused by act of God, public enemy, authority of law, act or default of shipper or owner, natural shrinkage, or defect or vice in property shipped. Missouri Pac. R.R. Co. v. Elmore & Stahl (1964) 377 U.S. 134, 137-138, 84 S. Ct. 1142, 12 L. Ed. 2d 194 ; Secretary of Agriculture v. United States (1955) 350 U.S. 162, 165 n. 9, 76 S. Ct. 244, 100 L. Ed. 173

Limitation of liability for interstate shipment as ineffective due to fraud. Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 908, 917, 114 Cal. Rptr. 622, 523 P.2d 662

Before carrier's attempt to limit its liability will be effective, carrier must (1) maintain a tariff in compliance with requirements of the Interstate Commerce Commission, (2) give shipper a reasonable opportunity to choose between two or more levels of liability, (3) obtain shipper's agreement as to his or her choice of carrier liability limit, and (4) issue a bill of lading prior to moving the shipment that reflects any such agreement. Hughes Aircraft v. North Am. Van Lines (9th Cir. 1992) 970 F.2d 609, 611-612

Reasonable cost of shipper's inspection and testing to determine necessity and scope of repairs to machinery damaged in transit as "actual loss," compensable under Carmack Amendment. Carlson Indus. v. E.L. Murphy Trucking Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 691, 697, 214 Cal. Rptr. 331

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant _____ [name of carrier] is, and at all times mentioned herein, was, _____ [allege capacity and residence of carrier, e.g., a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, with its principal place of business in _____ County, California, and doing business as a common carrier of passengers for reward].

2. At all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ [name of driver, conductor, or other agent] was the agent and employee of _____ [name of carrier] and was acting within the scope of his/her authority as such and with the consent and permission of _____ [name of carrier]. Defendant _____ [name of agent] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, _____ [allege residence, e.g., a resident of _____ County, California].

3. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES 1-_____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of said fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that plaintiff's injuries as herein alleged were proximately caused by such wrongful acts.]

4. At all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ [name of carrier] was engaged in business as a common carrier of persons (and freight) for reward and operated a certain _____ [specify type of conveyance, e.g., railroad train] from _____ [location], to _____ [destination].

5. [On or about _____ [date], plaintiff paid to an employee of defendant _____ (name of carrier) at _____ (location), the fare demanded by that employee for a journey aboard defendant _____'s (name of carrier) _____ (specify type of conveyance, e.g., railroad train) from _____ (location) to _____ (destination), and defendants thereby undertook, contracted, and became obliged to accept and carry plaintiff and transport him/her from _____ (location) to his/her destination at _____ (location).]

6. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff boarded defendant _____'s [name of carrier] _____ [specify type of conveyance, e.g., railroad train] at _____ [location] and commenced his/her journey to _____ [destination]. [At all times during the course of this journey, plaintiff conducted himself/herself in an orderly and proper manner and in conformity with all lawful rules of defendant _____ (name of carrier) known to plaintiff.]

7. On or about _____ [date], at about _____ [time], at or near _____ [location] defendants wrongfully, unlawfully, and without regard for their duties and plaintiff's rights ejected plaintiff from the _____ [specify type of conveyance, e.g., railroad train] in that defendant _____ [_____ (name of agent) forcefully put plaintiff off of the _____ (specify type of conveyance, e.g. railroad car), though plaintiff was lawfully and properly on the vehicle or _____ (name of agent) used excessive and unnecessary force and violence in ejecting plaintiff in that _____ (specify, e.g., defendant _____ (name of agent) pushed plaintiff from the steps of the railroad car while the train was moving) or _____ (name of agent) did not eject plaintiff at a usual stopping place or near a dwelling house or allege any combination of the above].

8. As a proximate result of defendants' wrongful conduct, plaintiff was _____ [specify applicable general damages, e.g., hurt and injured in his/her health, strength, and activity, sustaining injury to his/her body and shock and injury to his/her nervous system and person, all of which injuries have caused and continue to cause plaintiff great mental, physical, and nervous pain and suffering. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that such injuries will result in some permanent disability to him/her.) As a result of such injuries, plaintiff has suffered general damages].

[9. As a further proximate result of the wrongful conduct of defendants as alleged above, plaintiff has incurred, and will continue to incur, medical and related expenses.

10. As a further proximate result of the wrongful conduct of defendants as alleged above, plaintiff suffered damages in the amount of

$_____ which he/she paid for a ticket from _____ [location], the point where he/she was expelled from the _____ [specify type of conveyance, e.g., railroad train] to _____ [location], his/her destination, and in the amount of $_____ [specify any damages which proximately resulted from loss of time, e.g., from missing connecting conveyance].

11. [Allege any other special damages proximately resulting from defendants' wrongful conduct, such as loss of wages.]

[12. The acts of defendant _____ (name of agent) were committed without provocation, and with malice and ill will, and with the intent to frighten, oppress, and injure plaintiff and plaintiff is therefore entitled to exemplary and punitive damages from defendant _____ (name of agent).]

[13. Defendant _____ (name of carrier) _____ (authorized or ratified or both) the willful, malicious, and oppressive acts of defendant _____ (name of agent) in that _____ (specify) and plaintiff is therefore entitled to exemplary and punitive damages from defendant _____ (name of carrier).]

[14. On or about _____ (date), plaintiff presented to _____ (name of governmental entity) by _____ (delivering or mailing) a claim to the _____ (clerk or secretary or auditor) for the injuries, disability, losses, and damages suffered and incurred by him/her by reason of the above-described occurrence, all in compliance with the requirements of Section 905 of the Government Code. A copy of the claim is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof.]

[15. On or about _____ (date), _____ (name of governmental entity) _____ (rejected the claim in its entirety or allowed the claim in the amount of $_____ and rejected it as to the remainder or failed to act on the claim within the period of 45 days after its presentation, and the claim was thus deemed rejected, under the provisions of Section 912.4 of the Government Code, at the expiration of the 45 day period, to wit, on _____ [date]).]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For general damages according to proof;

[2. For medical and related expenses according to proof;]

[3. For the cost of a _____ (specify, e.g., train ticket) in the amount of $_____;]

[4. _____ (Specify any other special damages);]

[5. For exemplary and punitive damages;]

6. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

7. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a passenger against a common carrier and its agent to recover damages based on wrongful ejection of the passenger. The action may be based on wrongful ejection of the passenger. The action may be based on an ejection which is wrongful under Civ. Code § 2188 and/or Pub. Util. Code § 7656 (railroad) and which is accomplished either with or without excessive or unnecessary force or violence. The action may also be based on an ejection which is initially proper because the passenger did not pay the fare [Civ. Code § 2188; Pub. Util. Code § 7656] or did not follow lawful regulations of the carrier [Civ. Code § 2188], but is accomplished either in an improper manner with excessive force or violence or at a place not permitted by the statutes [see Civ. Code § 2188; Pub. Util. Code § 7656].

Because this form of complaint is a tort action, the jury may award exemplary damages, at least against the agent [see Gorman v. Southern Pac. Co. (1892) 97 Cal. 1, 7, 31 P. 1112 ; see also Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 908, 921, 114 Cal. Rptr. 622, 523 P.2d 662].

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges in part:

- That defendant carrier is a common carrier of passengers for reward (Paragraph 4);

- When applicable, that plaintiff paid fare (Paragraph 5) [see Civ. Code § 2188; Pub. Util. Code § 7656];

- That defendant wrongfully ejected plaintiff, with excessive force, if applicable (Paragraph 7) [see Civ. Code § 2188; Pub. Util. Code § 7656];

- General damages, including plaintiff's mental suffering (Paragraph 8) [see Sloane v. Southern Cal. Ry. Co. (1896) 111 Cal. 668, 678-684, 44 P. 320] ;

- Other damages proximately caused by wrongful ejection (Paragraphs 9-11), such as medical expenses (Paragraph 9), cost of ticket for transportation from place of expulsion and damages resulting from loss of time (Paragraph 10) [Gorman v. Southern Pac. Co. (1892) 97 Cal. 1, 6, 31 P. 1112] .

The form also includes optional allegations to seek exemplary and punitive damages, where applicable (Paragraphs 12, 13) [Civ. Code § 3294]. In seeking exemplary damages, it is alleged that the acts of the agent of defendant carrier were intentional and malicious [Civ. Code § 3294] and where appropriate that the carrier authorized or ratified the acts [see Warner v. Southern Pac. Co. (1896) 113 Cal. 105, 111-118, 45 P. 187] .

The complaint also alleges the filing of a claim with a public entity and either its total or partial rejection (Paragraphs 14, 15). This allegation must be used if the passenger was injured by a vehicle owned and operated by a public transit authority since Gov. Code § 905 requires that such a claim be presented to the appropriate public entity as a prerequisite to filing suit against it. For discussion and forms relating to claims against public entities, see Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

[4] Wrongful Ejection

A common carrier may eject a passenger from the carrier's vehicle if the passenger refuses to pay the fare or to conform to any lawful regulation of the carrier. This must be done with as little violence as possible and either at any usual stopping place or near some dwelling house [Civ. Code § 2188]. If the carrier is a railroad corporation [see Pub. Util. Code § 230], the conductor and employees of the corporation may, after stopping the train, put any passenger who refuses to pay the fare or to exhibit or surrender his or her ticket out of the train with his or her baggage. This also must be done at any usual stopping place or near any dwelling house and without using unnecessary force [Pub. Util. Code § 7656]. Any common carrier who violates Civ. Code § 2188 or Pub. Util. Code § 7656 may be liable to the passenger for damages [see, e.g., Sloane v. Southern Cal. Ry. Co. (1896) 111 Cal. 668, 44 P. 320] .

In addition, when a common carrier contracts to convey a person, this contract gives rise to a duty to deliver the person to his or her destination, and a breach of this duty may justify tort damages [Sloane v. Southern Cal. Ry. Co. (1896) 111 Cal. 668, 676-677, 44 P. 320 ; Ingham v. Luxor Cab Co. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1051, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 587] . A common carrier that ejects a passenger at a place other than the designated destination violates a common carrier's affirmative duty to prevent harm to its passengers if the ejectment subjects the passenger to reasonably foreseeable injury [Ingham v. Luxor Cab Co. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1051, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 587] .

[5] Allegation of Amounts

In an action to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages for anything other than personal injury or wrongful death (for example, property damage) must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

No claim for punitive damages may state an amount sought regardless of the nature of the case [Civ. Code § 3295(e)].

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint, see Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115].

[6] Punitive Damages

Though the carrier is liable for the actual damages caused by its employee's malicious acts in wrongfully ejecting a passenger, when the act of the employee was within the scope of the employee's general authority, the carrier is apparently not liable for exemplary or punitive damages under Civ. Code § 3294(a) for the acts of an employee unless the employer had advance knowledge of the employee's unfitness, and employed him or her with conscious disregard for the safety or rights of others, or authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct for which punitive damages are awarded, or was personally guilty of malice, fraud, or oppression. With respect to corporate employers, the employer will not be liable for punitive damages for the acts of an employee unless an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee, and employed him or her anyway with conscious disregard of the safety or rights of others, or unless an officer, director or managing agent authorized or ratified the wrongful act of the employee, or personally committed an act of malice, fraud, or oppression [Civ. Code § 3294(b)].

[7] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a passenger for obtaining damages from a carrier of passengers for reward and its agent for assault and battery.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges that: (1) the plaintiff was a passenger on defendant carrier's vehicle [see Grier v. Ferrant (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 306, 310, 144 P.2d 631 (creation of carriage-passenger relationship)] (Paragraphs 5, 6); and (2) agents of defendant carrier violated their duty to plaintiff as a passenger on defendant carrier's vehicle [see Civ. Code §§ 2100, 2103] by assaulting and battering plaintiff (Paragraph 7) with resultant damages to plaintiff (Paragraphs 8-11) [see Civ. Code § 3333; see also Berger v. Southern Pac. Co. (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-8, 300 P.2d 170] .

[4] Carrier's Liability

A carrier is liable for acts of assault and battery by its employees which result in injury to those it has agreed to transport. This liability is not dependent on whether the employee was acting within the scope of the employee's authority, but is based on the broad duty of a common carrier to protect its passengers from assault [Berger v. Southern Pac. Co. (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7-8, 300 P.2d 170] .

[5] State Statutes

Carrier of persons for reward as owing utmost care and diligence for passenger's safe carriage. Civ. Code § 2100

Passengers as required to be treated with civility. Civ. Code § 2103

[6] Decisions

Carrier liable for assault by employee on passenger, even where act is merely that of individual, entirely disconnected from performance of duties. Berger v. Southern Pac. Co. (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-8, 300 P.2d 170

Allegation of carrier-passenger relationship. Grier v. Ferrant (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 306, 310-312, 144 P.2d 631

In action for assault and battery, allegation that plaintiff was accepted as passenger for hire by driver acting within course and scope of employment as agent, servant, or employee of defendant carrier was sufficient without allegation that at time of injury driver and other assailant was acting for defendant carrier. Connell v. Clark (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 941, 944-945, 200 P.2d 26

[and DOES 1 through _____,]	)	[Amount demanded _____
Defendant(s).	)	(exceeds or does not exceed) $10,000]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant is, and at all times herein mentioned was, _____ [allege capacity and residence of defendant, e.g., a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of California with its principle place of business in (_____ (city)) _____ County].

[2. Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 109.200, Paragraph 3.]

3. At all times herein mentioned, defendant was a[n] [inland] common carrier of freight for reward.

4. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [name of city or town], California, _____ [name of consignor of freight] delivered to defendant for shipment property of plaintiff consisting of _____ [describe freight, e.g., ten cartons of books]. Defendant received this freight to be carried safely to _____ [name of city or town], California, for [personal] delivery to plaintiff.

5. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [name of city or town], California, defendant issued and delivered its _____ [specify type, e.g., original straight] bill of lading in which plaintiff was designated as consignee of the freight described above in Paragraph 4 and _____ [name of city or town], California, was designated as the destination of the freight for delivery to the consignee. A true and correct copy of the bill of lading is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof.

6. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff became the holder for value of the bill of lading described above in Paragraph 5, and since that date has been and now is the holder for value of the bill of lading.

7. Defendant did not safely carry and deliver the goods and merchandise pursuant to the provisions of the bill of lading, but in direct violation of the bill of lading failed and neglected to [either carry or] deliver [all of] the freight to _____ [destination], California, and to plaintiff, [but delivered, instead, only a portion of the freight, such protion consisting of _____ (specify, e.g., 100 of the 200 cartons)].

8. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff demanded of defendant [in writing] that defendant deliver to plaintiff [of all] the freight described above, or reimburse plaintiff for the reasonable market value of the freight. [Plaintiff tendered the freight charges and duly endorsed bill of lading to defendant.] Defendant, however, refused plaintiff's demand.

9. Plaintiff's demand was made on defendant after a reasonable time for delivery of the freight by defendant to plaintiff had passed.

10. The value of the freight at _____ [destination], California, on _____ [date on which freight should have been delivered] was $_____. The freightage to which defendant would have been entitled for delivering the freight was $_____.

11. By reason of the failure of defendant to [carry and] deliver the freight to plaintiff, plaintiff has been damaged in the amount of $_____, which is the value the freight would have had on delivery at its destination, deducting the freightage.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. For damages in the sum of $_____;

2. For interest from _____ [date], to _____ [date], at _____ percent [legal rate] on $_____, in the amount of $_____;

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Verification, if desired. See § 109.200.]

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use in an action under Com. Code § 7301 for damages caused by nondelivery or partial delivery of freight brought by a consignee against a common carrier of freight in intrastate commerce. A consignor who has been damaged by nondelivery may adapt this complaint to bring an action based on breach of contract, rather than on Com. Code § 7301, which provides only for an action by the consignee.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges that:

- The consignor delivered the goods to defendant carrier (Paragraph 4).
- Defendant carrier issued a bill of lading (Paragraph 5).
- Plaintiff was the holder for the value of the bill of lading (Paragraph 6) [Com. Code § 7301].
- Defendant carrier failed to deliver the goods as agreed (Paragraph 7).
- Plaintiff demanded delivery of the goods, and, when required by Com. Code § 7403(b), (c), plaintiff tendered freight charges and the bill of lading to defendant (Paragraph 8) [see Com. Code § 7403(b), (c)].

[4] Notice of Claim

Generally, the performance of all conditions which are precedent to the liability of a defendant must be alleged. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 457, plaintiff may satisfy this requirement by stating generally that plaintiff duly performed all the conditions on his or her part [see Byrne v. Harvey (1962) 211 Cal. App. 2d 92, 112-113, 27 Cal. Rptr. 110] . Therefore, if the bill of lading provides that claims for losses must be made to the carrier prior to bringing suit, plaintiff should allege compliance with the requirements of the particular bill of lading.

[5] Damages

If the carrier has not converted the freight, the detriment caused by its breach of an obligation to deliver freight is the value of the freight at the place and on the day it should have been delivered, deducting the freightage to which the carrier would have been entitled had it completed the delivery [Civ. Code § 3316; see also Olcovich v. Grand T. R. Co. (1918) 179 Cal. 332, 335, 176 P. 459] .

[6] Interest

Except as otherwise provided, every person in whom a right to recover damages is vested on a particular day, is entitled to recover interest on the damages from that day if the damages are certain or capable of being made certain by calculation [Civ. Code § 3287]. This provision has been construed to permit interest on claims for loss of a shipment [see Olcovich v. Grand T. R. Co. (1918) 179 Cal. 332, 336, 176 P. 459] .

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a shipper to recover damages for injuries based on delay by a common carrier in delivering freight within California. It is intended for use where the shipper is the consignor and consignee, and there is a contract between the shipper and the carrier which specifies a particular time for delivery. The damages are based on losses incurred due to the delay rather than to direct injury to the freight. The form, however, may be modified for use where the freight is injured. The first count is based on breach of contract, and the second count is based on negligence [Civ. Code § 2196]. If there is no contract provision specifying a time for delivery, counsel for plaintiff may adapt this form to state only a cause of action based on negligence [Civ. Code § 2196].

[3] Allegations

In the first count for breach of contract, the complaint alleges that:

- Plaintiff delivered the property to defendant for carriage (Paragraph 5).

- Plaintiff and defendant entered into a contract for the carriage of the property which contract specified that the property was to be delivered at the destination at or before a certain time (Paragraph 6).

- Plaintiff performed all conditions precedent (Paragraph 7) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 457 (general allegation of performance of conditions precedent as permissible)].

- Defendant's failure to deliver the property within the time allowed by the contract (Paragraph 8).

- Damages as measured under Civ. Code § 3317, or other measure as proper (Paragraph 9) [see Artists' Embassy v. Hunt (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 371, 374, 320 P.2d 924] .

In the second count for negligence, the complaint:

- Incorporates applicable allegations of first count (Paragraph 1).

- Alleges defendants' knowledge of the need for prompt delivery (Paragraph 2).

- Alleges negligence causing late delivery (Paragraphs 3, 4) [see Civ. Code § 2196].

- Alleges damages (Paragraph 5) [Civ. Code § 3317; see also Artists' Embassy v. Hunt (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 371, 374, 320 P.2d 924] .

[4] Condition of Property

Plaintiff generally has the burden of proving that the property was in good condition when it was delivered to the carrier for carriage, when there is no direct proof of an accident resulting in injury to the goods [Merchant Shippers Ass'n v. Kellogg Express & Draying Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 594, 599, 170 P.2d 923 ; Schraeder v. Robinson (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 328, 335, 177 P.2d 788] . However, the burden of proving that the freight was in good condition when delivered to the carrier is not on plaintiff when facts, such a that the goods were open to inspection, raise a presumption that the freight was in good condition [Schraeder v. Robinson (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 328, 335, 177 P.2d 788 (action for death of a race horse caused by carrier's delay)].

[5] Damages

The detriment caused by a carrier's delay in the delivery of freight is deemed to be the depreciation in the intrinsic value of the freight during the delay, and also the depreciation, if any, in the market value thereof otherwise than by reason of a depreciation in its intrinsic value, at the place where it ought to have been delivered and between the day at which it ought to have been delivered and the day of its actual delivery [Civ. Code § 3317]. However, this measure is applicable only where its criterion for measuring damages is appropriate, such as where the goods are perishable, or they have a market for the use intended by which their value can be determined. When the property was not purchased by plaintiff for resale but to be used in performance of a contractual duty or in its business, the measure of damages would be the loss sustained arising from defendant's negligent action, rather than any difference in the value of the property [Artists' Embassy v. Hunt (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 371, 374, 320 P.2d 924 (peculiar value of property to owner under Civ. Code § 3355 as proper measure of damages for delay in delivery of scenery and stage properties to be used in performance of play)].

[6] State Statutes

Common carriers liability for delay in transit. Civ. Code § 2196

Damages for delay in delivery of freight. Civ. Code § 3317

[7] Decisions

Measure of liability of common carrier of merchandise for loss or injury of merchandise as very different from liability for delay in transporting and delivering such merchandise, which liability is only for want of ordinary care and diligence under Civ. Code § 2196. Palmer v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe R.R. Co. (1894) 101 Cal. 187, 193-194, 35 P. 630

Carrier as able to bind itself by contract to deliver goods within given time and in absence of such contract carrier as only bound to deliver goods within reasonable time. Palmer v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe R.R. Co. (1894) 101 Cal. 187, 194, 35 P. 630

Plaintiff as generally having burden of proving property in good condition when delivered to carrier where no direct proof of accident resulting in injury as result of delay. Schraeder v. Robinson (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 328, 335, 177 P.2d 788 (delay)

Burden of proving freight in good condition when delivered to carrier as not on plaintiff when facts raise presumption that freight in good condition such as when goods open to inspection. Schraeder v. Robinson (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 328, 335, 177 P.2d 788 (action for death of race horse caused by carrier's delay)

Where property not purchased by plaintiff for resale but to be used in performance of contractual duty or in plaintiff's business, measure of damages as loss sustained arising from defendant's negligent action rather than any difference in the value of property. Artists' Embassy v. Hunt (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 371, 374, 320 P.2d 924 (Civ. Code § 3355, not 3317, as measure of damages for delay in performance of play)

This form of complaint is for use by a consignor or consignee in bringing an action for damages against a common carrier of freight for reward.

The first count is based on Civ. Code § 2194, which makes a common carrier strictly liable for loss or injury to the freight, with certain excepted causes. The burden is on the carrier to show that the loss resulted from one of the exceptions [Brignoli v. Seaboard Transp. Co. (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 782, 792, 178 P.2d 445] , and if it did, the carrier is liable only for negligence [see Civ. Code § 2195].

The second count is based on negligence under Civ. Code § 2195 and is included in case defendant is able to show that the loss or damage occurred from one of the causes excepted from strict liability in Civ. Code § 2194.

Plaintiff may wish to add a cause of action for breach of contract to this form of complaint.

[3] Statute of Limitations

When it is established that the defendant is an inland common carrier of the freight in question, Civ. Code § 2194 (strict liability) governs. Although ordinarily the defendant's capacity as a common carrier arises out of a contract, the cause of action is not based on the contract, which merely defines the relationship between the parties. Rather, the relationship gives rise to the statutory obligation, and therefore, the action is governed by the three-year statute of limitations of Code Civ. Proc. § 338(a) [see BBD Transp. Co. v. Buller (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 124, 128-129, 122 Cal. Rptr. 357] . Negligent injury to goods is limited by the three-year period of Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c) [see Allred v. Bekins Wide World Van Serv. (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 984, 988-991, 120 Cal. Rptr. 312 (tolling of statute)].

[4] Allegations

The complaint alleges in the first count based on strict liability [see Olcovich v. Grand T. R. Co. (1918) 179 Cal. 332, 335-337, 176 P. 459 ; Civ. Code § 3316]:

- Defendant is an inland common carrier for reward (Paragraph 3) [Civ. Code § 2168].
- The delivery of freight by the consignor to carrier, and the good condition of such freight, where applicable (Paragraph 5).
- The loss of or damage to freight (Paragraph 8).
- Claim to carrier, where applicable (Paragraph 9).
- Damages (Paragraph 10).

The second count:

- Incorporates the essential allegations of the first count (Paragraph 1).
- Alleges that the loss or damage was caused by negligence of defendants (Paragraph 2).
- Alleges that the damages proximately resulted from defendants' negligence (Paragraphs 3, 5).

[5] Damages

The measure of damages for injury to freight in absence of contract provisions, is the depreciation of the goods at the point of destination. Defendant may also be liable for the cost of reconditioning damaged goods, where such reconditioning raises the value of the damaged goods [Olcovich v. Grand T. R. Co. (1918) 179 Cal. 332, 335-337, 176 P. 459] .

Damages for loss of freight are deemed to be the value of the freight at the place and on the date it was to be delivered, minus the freightage to which the carrier would have been entitled on completed delivery [see Civ. Code § 3316].

[6] Interest

In an action for damages to goods, interest should be allowed on the depreciation of market value from the date of delivery of the goods. The fact that the determination of two market values is necessary does not render these damages "uncertain" [Olcovich v. Grand T. R. Co. (1918) 179 Cal. 332, 336, 176 P. 459] .

[7] State Statutes

Liability of common carrier of freight for loss or injury. Civ. Code §§ 2194, 2195

Liability on a through bill of lading. Com. Code § 7302

[8] Decisions

Burden of showing loss resulted from one of exceptions under Civ. Code § 2194 (making defendant liable only for negligence under Civ. Code § 2195) as on defendant. Brignoli v. Seaboard Transp. Co. (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 782, 792, 178 P.2d 445

Action for loss or injury to property by common carrier as based on statute and three-year limitation of former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(1) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(a)) as applicable. BBD Transp. Co. v. Buller (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 124, 128-129, 122 Cal. Rptr. 357

Tolling of statute of limitations for loss or damage to freight. Allred v. Bekins Wide World Van Servs. (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 984, 989-991, 120 Cal. Rptr. 312

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use in recovering damages for loss of or injury to freight shipped in interstate commerce. The complaint may be brought by the consignee or other person who either is the lawful holder of the bill of lading or receipt or is entitled to recovery on the receipt or bill of lading. The complaint is designed to be filed against the carrier who received the goods from the consignor or the carrier who was to deliver the goods to the consignee, but may be adapted, however, to include connecting carriers, if desired. Plaintiff may also add allegations of negligence and breach of contract to this form, if desired.

[3] Allegations

The form alleges the elements necessary for a prima facie case for loss of or injury to the goods, which are [see Missouri Pac. R.R. Co. v. Elmore & Stahl (1964) 377 U.S. 134, 137-138, 84 S. Ct. 1142, 12 L. Ed. 2d 194] :

- Delivery of goods to carrier in good condition (Paragraphs 3, 4).
- Arrival of goods in damaged condition or nondelivery of goods (Paragraph 5).
- The amount of damages (Paragraphs 7, 8).

[4] Time for Bringing Suit

No receiving or delivering carrier liable under the Carmack Amendment [49 U.S.C.S. § 11707] may provide by rule, contract, regulation, or otherwise a period shorter than two years for instituting a lawsuit. This period begins to run from the time that the carrier gives notice in writing of disallowance of a claim [49 U.S.C.S. § 11707].

[5] Written Notice of Claim

The rules of the Interstate Commerce Commission provide that a claim for loss or damage to baggage or loss, damage, injury, or delay to freight, may not be voluntarily paid by the carrier unless the claim is filed in writing [49 C.F.R. § 1005.1]. A receiving or delivering carrier is prohibited from providing a period shorter than nine months for the filing of claims [49 U.S.C.S. § 11707]. Though failure of the plaintiff to give notice of a claim as required by a bill of lading might be considered a matter of affirmative defense, a plaintiff who has given the required notice should probably plead such notice as condition precedent [see § 109.220].

1. Defendant is, and at all times mentioned was, _____ [allege capacity and residence, e.g., a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of California, with its principle place of business in (_____ (city),) _____ County].

2. Defendant is, and at all times mentioned was, a _____ [specify type of certificated carrier, e.g., railroad corporation] carrying freight for the public for compensation and a public utility subject to the provisions of the Public Utilities Act of the state of California.

4. On or about _____ [date], defendant contracted in writing in _____ County, California, to deliver the shipments mentioned herein to plaintiff. The _____ [specify type of contract as applicable, e.g., bill of lading issued by defendant] is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof.

5. On or about _____ [date], at _____, California, plaintiff [through his/her agent] delivered to defendant for transportation by defendant by _____ [specify, e.g., rail] to _____ [city], California _____ [describe freight, e.g., 100 carloads of _____ (specify)].

6. On or about _____ [date], defendant delivered the shipment to _____ [plaintiff or other consignee] at _____ [city], California.

7. Defendant charged, assessed, and collected freight charges for the shipment from plaintiff based on a purported rate of _____ [specify rate charged by defendant, e.g., _____ cents per 100 pounds, per defendant's through rate from _____ (point of origin) to _____ (destination), plus _____ percent of the rate and $_____ switching charge].

8. The correct and applicable rate for the shipment based on defendant's tariff on file with the California Public Utilities Commission was _____ [specify, e.g., _____ cents per 100 pounds, plus _____ percent of the rate, plus $_____, which is a combination rate composed of the following parts: _____ cents per 100 pounds from _____ (point of origin) to _____ (intermediate point) as per Item No. _____ of Freight Bureau, Tariff No. _____, California Public Utilities Commission No. _____; and _____ cents per 100 pounds from _____ (intermediate point) to _____ (destination) as per Item No. _____ of the tariff. Item No. _____ of the tariff authorizes application of a combination of rates when such combination is less than a through published rate].

9. The proper charges for the shipment pursuant to the rate set out in Paragraph 8, above, based on defendant's tariff filed with the Public Utilities Commission, were $_____, including federal transportation tax. Defendant however, charged, assessed and collected from plaintiff, pursuant to the rates set out in Paragraph 7, above, $_____, including federal transportation tax, which sum plaintiff paid to defendant on or about _____ [date]. Defendant thereby overcharged plaintiff in the sum of $_____.

10. As a result of defendant's conduct, as alleged above, plaintiff has been damaged in the sum of $_____, together with interest at the rate of _____ percent per annum on the amount of the overcharge on the shipment.

11. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff demanded [in writing] that defendant pay the $_____ in overcharges to plaintiff, but defendant has refused to pay the overcharges, and defendant owes plaintiff the sum of $_____, no part of which has been paid.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. For damages in the sum of $_____ [amount of overcharges];

2. For interest from _____ [date] to _____ [date] at _____ [ legal rate] percent;

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a shipper against a public utility common carrier of freight for recovering damages for overcharges on an intrastate shipment of freight.

The use of this complaint is an alternative to the common procedure of filing a complaint for reparations with the Public Utilities Commission [Pub. Util. Code § 734] and bringing suit to enforce the commission's order for reparation, if the carrier does not comply [Pub. Util. Code § 735; see § 109.100].

[3] Court Action following Commission's Order

The Public Utilities Commission may order reparation for rates charged in violation of the provisions of Pub. Util. Code §§ 203-2115 [Pub. Util. Code § 734]. This "reparation" includes refunds of charges which violate tariff provisions. If the public utility does not comply with the order for the payment of reparation within the time specified in the order, suit may be filed in a court of competent jurisdiction for recovery of the payment [Pub. Util. Code § 735]. The superior court may not review, revise, annul, or correct an order or decision of the commission [see Pub. Util. Code § 1759].

[4] Actions Originating in Court

An action may be brought in any court of competent jurisdiction against any public utility which does, causes, or permits any prohibited or unlawful act, or which does not do any act required to be done by the constitution, laws of this state, or order or decision of the Public Utilities Commission. The action may be brought by the persons (or corporations) affected thereby for all resulting loss, damages, or injury. If the court finds that the act or omission was willful it may award exemplary damages in addition to actual damages [Pub. Util. Code § 2106]. In cases interpreting the statutes which preceded the current Public Utilities Act [Pub. Util. Code § 201 et seq.], appellate courts have held that the trial courts have concurrent jurisdiction with the commission in all reparation cases which do not involve an exercise of administrative or regulatory power [Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. v. Railroad Com. of California (1931) 212 Cal. 370, 379, 298 P. 991 (referring to §§ 71 A, 71b, and 73a of former Public Utilities Act (now see Pub. Util. Code §§ 734, 735, and 2106))]], and that the shipper is not required to bring a complaint before the commission prior to bringing an action in court in such cases [see California Adjustment Co. v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1918) 179 Cal. 140, 145, 175 P. 682 (action for discrimination in violation of long and short haul clause of constitution (now see Pub. Util. Code § 461.5), as right of shipper within Public Utilities Act § 73a (now see Pub. Util. Code § 2106))].

Complaints for damages resulting from the violation of the provisions of Pub. Util. Code § 494, 532 (charging rates other than those in tariffs) may be filed in a court of competent jurisdiction where concurrent jurisdiction of the cause of action is vested in the courts [Pub. Util. Code § 736]. Since concurrent jurisdiction appears to be vested in the courts under Pub. Util. Code § 2106, it appears that a cause of action for overcharges based on Pub. Util. Code § 494 and Pub. Util. Code § 532 may be brought in an action which originates in the trail court, such as the action in this form. Counsel should consider, however, proceeding by filing a complaint directly with the Public Utilities Commission under Pub. Util. Code § 737.

[5] Allegations

The complaint alleges:

- Defendant's status as public utility common carrier (Paragraph 2) [Pub. Util. Code §§ 211, 216].
- Existence of a contract, such as a bill of lading, for the transportation of the goods (Paragraph 4).
- That defendant received freight and delivered it at agreed destination (Paragraphs 5, 6).
- The rate charged by defendant (Paragraph 7).
- The correct rate based on tariff filed with Public Utilities Commission (Paragraph 8) [Pub. Util. Code §§ 486, 494, 532].
- The amount of the overcharge (Paragraph 9).
- Plaintiff's demand for payment in compliance with bill of lading or tariff and defendant's refusal (Paragraph 11) [see Com. Code § 7309(3)].

[6] Limitation of Action

[a] Time for Filing Action

Complaints filed in court for violations of Pub. Util. Code § 494 and Pub. Util. Code § 532 (rates in tariff as required to be charged) where there is concurrent jurisdiction with the commission over the cause of action must be filed within three years from the time the cause of action accrues. If the claim for damages has been presented to the public utility in writing within the three-year period, the three-year period is extended to include six months from the date notice in writing is given by the public utility to the claimant of disallowance of all or part of the claim [Pub. Util. Code § 736].

[b] Accrual of Cause of Action

Causes of action under Pub. Util. Code §§ 734-737 accrue on the delivery or tender of delivery of the shipment with respect to which the complaint is filed or claim made [Pub. Util. Code § 738].

[7] Damages

The measure of damages for the collection of a rate in excess of the tariff rate is the difference between the rate which was assessed and the applicable rate [Sunset Pac. Oil Co. v. Railroad Co. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 773, 110 Cal. App. Supp. 773, 782, 290 P. 434 (decided under former Public Utilities Act, now see Pub. Util. Code §§ 494, 532); *see also South Tahoe Gas Co. v. _____

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant is, and at all times mentioned was, _____ [allege defendant's capacity and residence, e.g., a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of California, with its principle place of business in (_____ (city),) _____ County].

2. Plaintiff is, and at all times mentioned was, a _____ [specify type of certified common carrier, e.g., highway common carrier] carrying freight for the public for compensation, and a public utility subject to the provisions of the Public Utilities Act of the State of California. At all times herein mentioned, plaintiff was duly certificated by the Public Utilities Commission of the State of California.

4. At various times prior to the filing of this complaint, _____ [name of consignor] delivered to plaintiff at his/her/its place of business located at _____ [address], certain shipments consisting of _____ [describe goods] to be transported to defendant at _____ [city], California.

5. Each of the shipments was subject to and conditioned on a bill of lading duly issued in writing. A statement, which is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof, lists the dates on which the shipments were delivered to defendant, the identifying numbers of the freight bills prepared to cover the transportation charges for the shipments, and the [unpaid] charges on which this complaint is based. The freight bills were delivered to defendant at or near the time each shipment was transported.

6. Plaintiff has complied with all of the terms of the bills of lading which plaintiff was required to perform, including receiving, transporting, and delivering the shipments in accordance with the terms of the bills of lading.

7. Each of the bills of lading provides, among other things, that the _____ [specify person required to pay charges, e.g., consignee and owner] shall pay the freight and average, if any, and all other lawful charges accruing on the property.

[8. Where necessary, if defendant is consignee, allege : Defendant accepted the freight with knowledge that _____ (name of consignor) intended that defendant pay the freightage.]

9. At all times herein mentioned, plaintiff's tariff was duly posted, published, and on file with the Public Utilities Commission of the State of California, and kept open for public inspection as required by law. Plaintiff's tariff [as amended] was in full force and effect at the time of the shipments herein alleged and applied to the transportation services rendered by plaintiff for defendant as described above.

10. The amount of compensation due to plaintiff in accordance with the rates, fares, charges, and classifications in the tariff for the transportation services rendered by plaintiff pursuant to the bills of lading amounts to a total of $_____. The charges for each shipment are set forth in Exhibit A.

[EITHER, if defendant has not paid any of the charges due:]

11. No part of the compensation due to plaintiff by defendant has been paid. Plaintiff has demanded such compensation from defendant, and defendant has refused to pay plaintiff. The sum of $_____ is now due, owing, and unpaid by defendant to plaintiff.

[OR, if defendant was undercharged:]

11. No part of the compensation due to plaintiff by defendant has been paid except the sum of $_____. Plaintiff has demanded the remaining compensation from defendant, and defendant has refused to pay plaintiff. The sum of $_____ [difference between total amount due and amount paid] is now due, owing, and unpaid by defendant to plaintiff.

[OR, if plaintiff has overpaid a refund to defendant:]

11. Defendant paid $_____ to plaintiff as freight charges for the transportation of the above-described shipments. Thereafter, on the dates set forth in Exhibit A, plaintiff refunded $_____ to defendant from the amount paid to plaintiff as freight charges. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff first discovered that the correct charges pursuant to plaintiff's tariff on file with the Public Utilities Commission was the sum of $_____, that the correct amount of the re fund was $_____, and that by mutual mistake of fact plaintiff had erroneously refunded to defendant $_____. Plaintiff demanded that defendant return the $_____ [difference between amount refunded and correct amount of refund] erroneously refunded, but defendant has failed, neglected, and refused to return to plaintiff the amount of $_____ which is now due, owing, and unpaid by defendant to plaintiff.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. For damages in the sum of $_____;

2. For interest from _____ [date], to _____ [date], computed at _____ [legal rate] percent on the sum of $_____;

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use by a public utility common carrier for damages from a consignee for unpaid freightage for intrastate shipments of freight. It may be used by the carrier to recover the total amount of charges due, to recover undercharges, or to recover an improper refund which amounts to undercharges. The form may be adapted for use when someone other than the consignee is liable for payment of the shipping charges.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges that: (1) plaintiff is a public utility common carrier (Paragraph 2) [Pub. Util. Code §§ 211, 216]; (2) a consignor delivered freight to plaintiff for transportation (Paragraph 4); (3) the shipments were subject to bills of lading which provided that plaintiff was to receive, transport, and deliver the shipments and that defendant was to pay the freightage and average (Paragraphs 5-7); (4) plaintiff made the deliveries as required (Paragraphs 5, 6); (5) where necessary, defendant consignee's acceptance of freight with knowledge of consignor's intention that consignee pay freightage (Paragraph 8) [see Civ. Code § 2138]; (6) plaintiff's tariff was on file as required by law (Paragraph 9) [Pub. Util. Code § 486]; (7) the amount of compensation due under the tariff (Paragraph 10) [Pub. Util. Code §§ 494, 532]; and (8) either none of the compensation was paid, the amount paid was an undercharge, or plaintiff mistakenly made an overrefund to defendant which resulted in defendant's being undercharged (Paragraph 11).

[4] Recovery of Lawful Tariff Charges

Complaints for the collection of lawful tariff charges, or any part thereof, by public utilities may be filed in any court of competent jurisdiction [Pub. Util. Code § 737].

[5] Limitation of Action

Complaints by public utility carriers for the collection of lawful tariff charges may be filed within three years from the time the cause of action accrues [see Pub. Util. Code § 738; § 109.260] and not later. However, if a public utility presents its claim or demand in writing within the three-year period to the person from whom the tariff charges are due, the period is extended to include six months from the date a written notice is given to the public utility of refusal to pay all or part of the demand [Pub. Util. Code § 737].

[6] Cross Complaint

If a public utility carrier files an action under Pub. Util. Code § 737 for collection of all or a portion of lawful tariff charges, the person against whom the suit is filed may, within 90 days from the date of service of summons, file any complaint related to the transaction which is the subject of the suit by the public utility, for violation of any provision of the Public Utilities Act (Pub. Util. Code §§ 201-2115) [Pub. Util. Code § 737].

[7] State Statutes

Consignor as presumed liable for freightage and exception. Civ. Code § 2137

Consignee as liable for freightage if accepts freight with notice of intention of consignor that consignee pay. Civ. Code § 2138

Though shipper as presumably consignor and shipper's promise to pay as ordinarily inferred, inference as rebuttable by showing in bill of lading or otherwise that shipper not acting in own behalf, that this fact known to carrier, and that parties intended that consignee assume obligation to pay. PART I. SCOPE

§ 110.01 Scope

This chapter concerns churches and religious groups and discusses forms of organization, tort liability, and civil court jurisdiction over internal controversies. Although this chapter discusses some parts of the Nonprofit Corporation Law (Corp. Code § 5000 et seq.) that are applicable to nonprofit religious corporations; see also Ch. 388, Nonprofit Corporations , for a discussion of other provisions of the Nonprofit Corporation Law that may be applicable.

The chapter contains the following forms:

- Forms of allegations of capacity and residence of incorporated and unincorporated church societies [see §§ 110.50, 110.51].

- Forms of a petition and complaints by church members to resolve property or membership disputes [see §§ 110.52 -110.54].

- Form of complaint for damages for personal injuries against a church and its pastor [see § 110.55].

The chapter also discusses the fiduciary duties of directors and officers of religious corporations pursuant to the Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law (Corp. Code §§ 9110-9690) and contains the following forms:

- Forms of complaints for damages for breach of a director's fiduciary duties [see § 110.56].

- Form of allegation of self-dealing by a director [see § 110.58].

- Forms of affirmative defenses available to directors and officers [see §§ 110.57, 110.59].

- Form of notice of motion and order to permit the filing of an amended pleading to seek punitive damages against a religious corporation [see § 110.70].

- Form of amended complaint [see § 110.71].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-110 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 110.10

§ 110.10 Governing Law

Statutes governing churches and religious organizations generally are contained in Corp. Code § 5002 et seq., the Nonprofit Corporation Law. The Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law, Corp. Code § 9110 et seq., specifically governs nonprofit religious corporations.

The applicability of the Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law to various religious corporations, including those organized or incorporated under the former General Nonprofit Corporation Law, is governed by Corp. Code § 9910 et seq.

Corporations organized and existing under laws governing corporations for charitable or eleemosynary purposes in effect on December 31, 1979 [see former Corp. Code § 10200 et seq.], are governed by Corp. Code § 9110 et seq., when such corporations are organized primarily or exclusively for religious purposes [Corp. Code § 10200].

Corporations sole are governed by Corp. Code § 10000 et seq. of the Nonprofit Corporation Law. Unincorporated nonprofit associations are subject to the provisions of Corp. Code § 18000 et seq. governing unincorporated nonprofit associations.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-110 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 110.11

§ 110.11 Organization

[1] Distinction Between Church as Religious vs. Legal Entity

Churches and religious organizations exist in two separate legal senses. First, they exist as ecclesiastical bodies, generally as members of a larger or general church body. Second, they exist as legal entities organized to govern the temporal affairs of their ecclesiastical counterparts. This distinction is essential to an understanding of the jurisdiction of courts to adjudicate church-related disputes since, as a general constitutional rule, American courts are bound by church decisions in ecclesiastical matters [see discussion under § 110.14[1]] but are not precluded from exercising jurisdiction over civil or property rights involved in a church dispute, even though ecclesiastical matters may be incidentally involved [see discussion under § 110.14[2]].

To govern the temporal affairs of the ecclesiastical body, churches and religious societies may exist as unincorporated nonprofit associations [see [2], below], or as nonprofit religious corporations [see [3], below], or as corporations sole [see [4], below].

[2] Unincorporated Nonprofit Associations

A religious society organized as an unincorporated nonprofit association is subject to the provisions of Corp. Code § 18000 et seq. For discussion of those provisions, see Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs .

[3] Nonprofit Religious Corporations

[a] Definition

A religious society may organize as a nonprofit religious corporation under the Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law [see Corp. Code § 9110 et seq.]. A nonprofit religious corporation is formed by one or more persons [Corp. Code § 9120] primarily or exclusively for any religious purposes [Corp. Code § 9111]. It must not contemplate the distribution of gains, profits, or dividends to its members, although it may carry on business at a profit as an incident to the main religious purpose of the corporation [Corp. Code §§ 9130, 9140].

[b] Powers and Functions

A nonprofit religious corporation has all of the powers of a natural person, including among other enumerated powers, the power to make contracts, to act as trustee, to borrow, make donations or lend money, and to do all other acts necessary or expedient for the administration of its affairs and attainment of its purposes [Corp. Code § 9140].

Except as discussed in § 110.15, the Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law does not contain provisions affecting the spiritual functions of a religious corporation. Incorporation is permitted as a convenience to assist in the conduct of the temporalities of the church. The function and object of the church corporation is to stand in the capacity of an agent holding the title to the property, with power to manage and control the same in accordance with the interest of the spiritual ends of the church. The directors or trustees of the corporation, as such, have no authority whatever over spiritual or ecclesiastical matters that rest purely with the ecclesiastical governing body, such as the presbytery or synod [Wheelock v. First Presb. Church (1897) 119 Cal. 477, 483, 51 P. 841 ; see Samoan Congregational etc. Church in U.S. v. Samoan Congregational etc. Church of Oceanside (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 69, 74-75, 135 Cal. Rptr. 793] . A religious corporation may amend its articles to change its status to that of a public benefit corporation, a mutual benefit corporation, a business corporation, or a cooperative corporation [Corp. Code § 9621].

[4] Corporations Sole

A corporation sole [see Corp. Code § 10000 et seq.] is a corporate form uniquely applicable to religious organizations. It is formed by the bishop, chief priest, presiding elder, or other presiding officer of any religious denomination, society, or church for the purpose of administering and managing the affairs, property, and temporalities of the church [Corp. Code § 10002]. A corporation sole has the same civil rights and duties as other corporations [Roman Catholic Archbishop v. Superior Court (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 405, 411, 93 Cal. Rptr. 338] .

One principal purpose of the corporation sole is to insure continuation of ownership of property dedicated to the benefit of a religious organization which may be held in the name of its titular head. There is also a clear distinction between the corporation sole and the individual who happens to be the current office holder [County of San Luis Obispo v. Ashurst (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 380, 383-384, 194 Cal. Rptr. 5] . Thus, in a case involving a pastor who was allegedly appointed by his predecessor pursuant to an amendment to the corporate articles, the court rejected plaintiff's argument that the requirement set forth in Corp. Code § 10010 that an amendment to the articles be "duly authorized by the religious organization governed by the corporation" was met because there was no evidence of any religious organization other than his predecessor. The statutory scheme makes clear that the chief officer of the corporation sole is not also "the religious organization governed by the corporation" [Berry v. Society of Saint Pius X (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 354, 368-372, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 574 (holding that putative pastor's appointment was ineffective and therefore he had no right to possession of church property in dispute)].

[5] Corporations for Charitable or Eleemosynary Purposes

Pursuant to the Nonprofit Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 5002-10015], every corporation organized or existing under former laws governing corporations for charitable or eleemosynary purposes [Corp. Code §§ 10200-10208] in effect on December 31, 1979, is deemed to be a nonprofit religious corporation and is subject to Corp. Code §§ 9110-9690, if the corporation is organized primarily or exclusively for religious purposes [Corp. Code § 10200]. For a discussion of nonprofit public benefit corporations, see Ballantine and Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 19, Nonprofit Corporations and Organizations , Pt. B (Matthew Bender).

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 110.12 Charitable Immunity

The policy expressed in Civ. Code § 1714(a) that everyone is responsible for the result of his or her willful acts and for injury occasioned to others by his or her lack of ordinary care or skill in managing his or her property or person admits of no exception based on the objectives, however laudable, of the tortfeasor. Charitable immunity, therefore, does not exist in California. A religious society is subject to liability for the torts of its agents [Malloy v. Fong (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 356, 372, 232 P.2d 241] . In determining the existence of a principal-agent relationship between church bodies and religious workers, the court may examine the bylaws and internal rules and regulations of religious organizations [Malloy v. Fong (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 356, 367-368, 232 P.2d 241 ; Stevens v. Roman Catholic Bishop of Fresno (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 877, 883, 123 Cal. Rptr. 171 ; see also discussions under §§ 110.13[2] and 110.20].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 110.13 Separation of Church and State

[1] Establishment of Religion

[a] Federal

The First Amendment, as applied to the states through the Fourteenth Amendment, commands that a state make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof [U.S. Const., amends. I, XIV; Cantwell v. Connecticut (1940) 310 U.S. 296, 303, 60 S. Ct. 900, 84 L. Ed. 1213 ; Woodland Hills Homeowners Organization v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 79, 92, 266 Cal. Rptr. 767] . The Establishment Clause of the First Amendment prevents a state from enacting laws that have the "purpose" or "effect" of advancing or inhibiting religion [Zelman v. Simmons-Harris (2002) 536 U.S. 639, 122 S. Ct. 2460, 153 L. Ed. 2d 604, 614 ; Agostini v. Felton (1997) 521 U.S. 203, 222-223, 117 S. Ct. 1997, 138 L. Ed. 2d 391] . The clause prohibiting the establishment of religion by law was intended to erect a wall of separation between church and state [Everson v. Board of Education (1947) 330 U.S. 1, 8, 15-16, 67 S. Ct. 504, 91 L. Ed. 711] , and to afford protection against three main evils: sponsorship, financial support, and active involvement of the sovereign in religious activity [Woodland Hills Homeowners Organization v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 79, 92, 266 Cal. Rptr. 767] . The First Amendment prohibition of the establishment of religion applies to official disapproval or hostility towards religion, as well as to official condoning of a particular religion or religious belief [American Family v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2002) 277 F.3d 1114, 1120-1121] .

The First Amendment prohibits the use of governmental organs for essentially religious purposes [Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church (1969) 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S. Ct. 601, 21 L. Ed. 2d 658] . The prohibition extends to both legislative [Kedroff v. Saint Nicholas Cathedral (1952) 344 U.S. 94, 120-121, 73 S. Ct. 143, 97 L. Ed. 120] and judicial action [Kreshik v. Saint Nicholas Cathedral (1960) 363 U.S. 190, 191, 80 S. Ct. 1037, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1140] . The First Amendment precludes a civil court from determining for itself who is entitled to hold religious office and from determining whether the religious organization followed its own ecclesiastical rules in anointing one of its leaders [Maktab Tarighe Oveyssi Shah Maghsoudi, Inc. v. Kianfar (9th Cir. 1999) 179 F.3d 1244, 1247-1248 ; see Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich (1976) 426 U.S. 696, 710-711, 49 L. Ed. 2d 151], even when religious issues arise in the course of a civil property dispute [Maktab Tarighe Oveyssi Shah Maghsoudi, Inc. v. Kianfar (9th Cir. 1999) 179 F.3d 1244, 1247-1248] . However, religious organizations are not deprived of all recourse to the protections of civil law available to all others, since that deprivation would raise its own serious problems under the Free Exercise Clause. Courts may play a role in resolving religious property disputes [see Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church (1969) 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S. Ct. 601, 21 L. Ed. 2d 658 ; Maktab Tarighe Oveyssi Shah Maghsoudi, Inc. v. Kianfar (9th Cir. 1999) 179 F.3d 1244, 1248-1250 (court could entertain copyright dispute between two religious bodies); but see Metropolitan Philip v. Steiger (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 923, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 605 (which faction represents "true" church entitled to property is ecclesiastical matter in which civil courts may not meddle)].

Religious activity typically involves expressive speech and, although protected by the First Amendment, as a matter of law, it is subordinate to establishment clause concerns [DiLoreto v. Board of Educ. of Downey Unif. Sch. Dist. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 267, 280, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 791] .

Not every law that confers an indirect, remote, or incidental benefit on a religious institution is constitutionally invalid for that reason alone. Courts must carefully examine any law challenged on establishment grounds to ascertain whether it furthers any of the evils against which the Establishment Clause protects. Primary among those evils are "sponsorship, financial support, and active involvement of the sovereign in religious activity" [Committee for Public Education v. Nyquist (1973) 413 U.S. 756, 771-772, 93 S. Ct. 2955, 37 L. Ed. 2d 948 ; Lemon v. Kurtzman (1971) 403 U.S. 602, 612, 91 S. Ct. 2105, 29 L. Ed. 2d 745 ; Walz v. Tax Commission (1970) 397 U.S. 664, 668, 90 S. Ct. 1409, 25 L. Ed. 2d 697 ; East Bay Asian Local Development Corp. v. State of California (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 693, 705, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280, 13 P.3d 1122] .

The Establishment Clause of the First Amendment is not violated by a law that meets all of the following criteria [Committee for Public Education v. Nyquist (1973) 413 U.S. 756, 772-773, 93 S. Ct. 2955, 37 L. Ed. 2d 948 ; East Bay Asian Local Development Corp. v. State of California (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 693, 705-718, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280, 13 P.3d 1122 ; Rankins v. Commission on Professional Competence (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 167, 177, 154 Cal. Rptr. 907, 593 P.2d 852 ; DiLoreto v. Board of Educ. of Downey Unif. Sch. Dist. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 267, 276, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 791 ; Woodland Hills Homeowners Organization v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 79, 92, 266 Cal. Rptr. 767 ; see Corporation of Presiding Bishop v. Amos (1987) 483 U.S. 327, 335-339, 107 S. Ct. 2862, 97 L. Ed. 2d 273] :

- Has a secular purpose;
- Has a primary effect that neither advances nor prohibits religion; and
- Avoids excessive government entanglement with religion.

This test, although most frequently used in cases involving government allegedly giving preference to a religion, also accommodates the analysis of a claim brought under a hostility to religion theory as well [American Family v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2002) 277 F.3d 1114, 1121 ; Vernon v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1994) 27 F.3d 1385, 1396] .

In analyzing the secular purpose of the government's conduct, the court's analysis focuses purely on purpose and the court will not question the propriety of the means to achieve that purpose or whether the government was correct or even reasonable in the assumptions underlying its actions. The government's act or practice will stumble on this prong only if it is motivated actually and wholly by an impermissible purpose. The reviewing court must be reluctant to attribute unconstitutional motives to government actors in the face of a plausible secular purpose [American Family v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2002) 277 F.3d 1114, 1121] . The nature of a government program's operation may reveal its ostensible secular purpose to be a sham [Winn v. Arizona Christian School Tuition Organization (9th Cir. 2009) 562 F.3d 1002, 1012 ; see McCreary County, Ky v. ACLU (2005) 545 U.S. 844, 862, 125 S. Ct. 2722, 162 L. Ed. 2d 729 (in some cases, government action itself bespoke purpose of program violating Establishment Clause)]. The inquiry as to whether a program's putative purpose is genuine and not merely secondary to a religious objective is undertaken from the perspective of an objective observer, i.e., one who takes account of the traditional external signs that show up in the text, legislative history, and implementation of the statute or comparable official act [McCreary County, Ky v. ACLU (2005) 545 U.S. 844, 862, 125 S. Ct. 2722, 162 L. Ed. 2d 729 ; Winn v. Arizona Christian School Tuition Organization (9th Cir. 2009) 562 F.3d 1002, 1012].

The focus under the "primary effect" prong is on the primary effect of the government's conduct and whether the government action has the principal or primary effect of advancing or inhibiting religion, and the court conducts this inquiry from the perspective of a "reasonable observer" who is both informed and reasonable [American Family v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2002) 277 F.3d 1114, 1122] .

With regard to the "excessive entanglement" prong, governmental actions encouraging political divisiveness along religious lines is not sufficient to constitute excessive entanglement with religion, since government bodies would be at risk any time they took an action that affected potentially religious issues, including abortion, alcohol use, and sexual issues [American Family v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2002) 277 F.3d 1114, 1123] .

The three prong test is ill-suited to evaluating an Establishment Clause challenge to a law that creates an exemption for religious bodies from a neutral law of general application, but it has not yet been modified to accommodate these exemptions [East Bay Asian Local Development Corp. v. State of California (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 693, 706-708, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280, 13 P.3d 1122 , citing Corporation of Presiding Bishop v. Amos (1987) 483 U.S. 327, 334-338, 107 S. Ct. 2862, 97 L. Ed. 2d 273 (exemption of religious organization's secular, nonprofit activities from Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964's prohibition of employment discrimination on basis of religion does not violate establishment clause; unnecessary to decide if different standard should apply when religious exemption challenged under establishment clause); see Texas Monthly, Inc. v. Bullock (1989) 489 U.S. 1, 18, 109 S. Ct. 890, 103 L. Ed. 2d 1 (state religious exemption from generally applicable sales tax on periodicals violates establishment clause)].

For purposes of evaluating aid to schools only the first two factors apply [Mitchell v. Helms (2000) 530 U.S. 793, 120 S. Ct. 2530, 2540, 147 L. Ed. 2d 660 ; Agostini v. Felton (1997) 521 U.S. 203, 222-223, 117 S. Ct. 1997, 138 L. Ed. 2d 391 ; for discussion of freedom of religion in schools, see Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities].

If a statute does not have a clearly secular purpose, consideration of the remaining criteria is unnecessary. Although a statute motivated in part by a religious purpose may meet the secular purpose test, if a statute is entirely motivated by the purpose to endorse or disapprove of religion, it violates the Establishment Clause [Wallace v. Jaffree (1985) 472 U.S. 38, 55-56, 105 S. Ct. 2479, 86 L. Ed. 2d 29 (statute authorizing public school teachers to hold one minute of silence for "meditation or voluntary prayer," with sole express purpose of returning voluntary prayer to schools, is prohibited by First Amendment)].

Thus, the First Amendment does not preclude governmental bodies from regulating secular activities of religious societies [Gospel Army v. City of Los Angeles (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 232, 242-248, 163 P.2d 704 ; see Amer. Mission Army v. City of Lynwood (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 817, 820, 292 P.2d 533 ; cf. Schmoll v. Chapman University (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1440-1442, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 426 (application of California's Fair Employment and Housing Act to church-affiliated university's employment dispute with campus chaplain runs afoul of Establishment Clause)]. Nor does it conflict with the duty of the state under Cal. Const., art. I, § 8, to make reasonable accommodation for an employee to practice the tenets of his or her religion [see Rankins v. Commission on Professional Competence (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 167, 179-180, 154 Cal. Rptr. 907, 593 P.2d 852 (noting, however, that the United States Supreme Court has not passed on the issue of whether or not a state's duty to reasonably accommodate religious practices of employee violates Establishment Clause)].

In the Establishment Clause context, spiritual harm resulting from unwelcome direct contact with an allegedly offensive religious or anti-religious symbol is a legally cognizable injury, which suffices to confer standing [see Vasquez v. Los Angeles County (9th Cir. 2007) 487 F.3d 1246, 1249-1253 (county employee allegedly forced to have daily contact with county seal changed to remove cross alleged legally cognizable injury arising out of his frequent regular contact with seal)].

Government conduct disapproving of or expressing hostility toward religion also violates the Establishment Clause [Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2009) 567 F.3d 595, 599 , reh'g granted, 586 F. 3d 1166 (2009) ; see Lynch v. Donnelly (1984) 465 U.S. 668, 694, 104 S. Ct. 1355, 79 L. Ed. 2d 604 (O'Connor, J., concurring) (government conduct toward religion must be judged in its unique circumstances to determine whether it constitutes endorsement or disapproval of religion)]. The Ninth Circuit has phrased the applicable principle in several ways and used the three terms interchangeably: The state may not disapprove of religion, express hostility toward religion, or inhibit religion [American Family Ass'n v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2002) 277 F.3d 1114, 1121, 1122 ; see also [Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2009) 567 F.3d 595, 599 , reh'g granted, 586 F. 3d. 1166 (2009)]. Disapproval and endorsement are flip sides of the same coin; the same legal tests and underlying First Amendment values apply [Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2009) 567 F.3d 595, 599 , reh'g granted, 586 F. 3d. 1166 (2009). ; American Family Ass'n v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2002) 277 F.3d 1114, 1121, 1122]. Thus, courts apply the three-part test to determine whether government conduct through hostility toward it violates the Establishment Clause, and the Establishment Clause's neutrality mandate applies with equal force [Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2009) 567 F.3d 595, 599 , reh'g granted, 586 F. 3d. 1166 (2009).].

[b] State

An independent constitutional basis for separation of church and state is provided by the California Constitution, which, like the United States Constitution, does not merely proscribe an establishment of religion but forbids all laws respecting an establishment of religion [see Cal. Const., art. I, § 4 (free exercise and enjoyment of religion without discrimination or preference are guaranteed); Fox v. City of Los Angeles (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 792, 796-799, 150 Cal. Rptr. 867, 587 P.2d 663 (city display of lighted cross as action respecting establishment of religion because not position of neutrality)]. Because the California Constitution is a document of independent force, the rights it guarantees are not necessarily coextensive with those protected by the federal constitution [East Bay Asian Local Development Corp. v. State of California (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 693, 718, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280, 13 P.3d 1122 ; American Academy of Pediatrics v. Lungren (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 307, 325, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 940 P.2d 797 ; Raven v. Deukmejian (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 336, 351-355, 276 Cal. Rptr. 326, 801 P.2d 1077] . However, the protection against the establishment of religion in the California Constitution does not create broader protections than those of the First Amendment. The California concept of "a law respecting an establishment of religion" coincides with the intent and purpose of the First Amendment Establishment Clause [East Bay Asian LocalDevelopment Corp. v. State of California (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 693, 718, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280, 13 P.3d 1122 ; see Paulson v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 2001) 262 F.3d 885, 890-891 (California constitution parallels guarantee of First Amendment Establishment Clause prohibiting government from appearing to take position on questions of religious belief)].

Federal cases may supply guidance in interpreting the California constitution's establishment clause, but California courts must independently determine the scope of the clause [Sands v. Morongo Unified School Dist. (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 863, 883, 281 Cal. Rptr. 34, 809 P.2d 809 ; DiLoreto v. Board of Educ. of Downey Unif. Sch. Dist. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 267, 275, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 791] . Cal. Const., art. I, § 4 is possibly more comprehensive than the federal Constitution because it also guarantees that religion may be freely exercised and enjoyed without discrimination or preference [see Cal. Const., art. I, § 4; Fox v. City of Los Angeles (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 792, 796-797, 150 Cal. Rptr. 867, 587 P.2d 663 (city display of lighted cross is forbidden preference even if not discriminatory); see also Lucas Valley Homeowners Assn. v. County of Marin (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 130, 145, 284 Cal. Rptr. 427 (under California Constitution, preference is forbidden even when there is no discrimination)], and because it forbids the Legislature, city, county, or school district to grant anything to or in aid of any religious sect, church, creed, or sectarian purpose [Woodland Hills Homeowners Organization v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 79, 92, 266 Cal. Rptr. 767 ; see DiLoreto v. Board of Educ. of Downey Unif. Sch. Dist. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 267, 275, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 791 (for school district to allow posting of sign on baseball field with Ten Commandments would violate Cal. Const., art. I, § 4)].

California Constitution, art. XVI, § 5, prohibits aid to "any religious sect, church, creed, or sectarian purpose." The determination of whether government conduct violates Cal. Const., art. I, § 4, requires a different analysis from the determination of whether the same conduct contravenes art. XVI, § 5 [Paulson v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 2002) 294 F.3d 1124, 1129 ; see E. Bay Asian Local Dev. Corp. v. California (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 693, 705-710, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280, 13 P.3d 1122 , cert. denied, 532 U.S. 1008 (2001) (analyzing art. I, § 4, by reference to Lemon v. Kurtzman (1971) 403 U.S. 602, 91 S. Ct. 2105, 29 L. Ed. 2d 745 , while analyzing art. XVI, § 5, under separate, state-law framework)]. Art. XVI, § 5, bans any official involvement, whatever its form, which has the direct, immediate, and substantial effect of promoting religious purposes [Paulson v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 2002) 294 F.3d 1124, 1130 ; East Bay Asian Local Dev. Corp. v. California (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 693, 721, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280, 13 P.3d 1122 , cert. denied, 532 U.S. 1008 (2001)] . Art. XVI, § 5, prohibits the government from granting a benefit in any form to any sectarian purpose regardless of the government's secular purpose, unless the benefit is properly characterized as indirect, remote, or incidental [Paulson v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 2002) 294 F.3d 1124, 1130-1131 ; see California Teachers Ass'n v. Riles (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 794, 809-813, 176 Cal. Rptr. 300, 632 P.2d 953 (invalidating state textbook loan program under art. XVI, § 5, even though program was open to students in all nonprofit, nonpublic schools and provided books to eligible students, not to schools, nevertheless unconstitutionally aided sectarian schools because textbooks are critical element in enabling school to carry out its essential mission to teach); Cal. Educ. Facilities Auth. v. Priest (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 593, 116 Cal. Rptr. 361, 526 P.2d 513, 520 (upholding statutory program permitting sectarian and nonsectarian colleges to borrow money at below-market rates for improvements to facilities, so long as facilities were not used for sectarian purposes); Feminist Women's Health Ctr., Inc. v. Philibosian (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 1076, 203 Cal. Rptr. 918, 920-922, 927 (although state law authorized district attorney to dispose of evidentiary fetal tissue by interment, to inter tissue at location where religious memorial ceremony would be held would unconstitutionally enlist prestige and power of state in burial ceremony); County of Los Angeles v. Hollinger (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 154, 34 Cal. Rptr. 387, 388, 392-393 (that Los Angeles County had secular purpose, promoting commerce and tourism, for ordering films of Christian holiday parade from parade association did not prevent contract for films from violating art. XVI, § 5, because making films and county's use of them would provide forbidden, official support for organization and religious subject matter of parade); Frohliger v. Richardson (1923) 63 Cal. App. 209, 218 P. 497, 500 (art. XVI, § 5, bars public aid for restoring California missions, despite undeniable importance of missions to history of California)].

[2] Free Exercise of Religion

[a] Religious Beliefs

Under the Free Exercise Clause of the Federal Constitution, government may neither compel affirmation of a repugnant belief, nor penalize or discriminate against individuals or groups because they hold religious views abhorrent to the authorities [U.S. Const., amends. I, XIV; see Sherbert v. Verner (1963) 374 U.S. 398, 402-403, 83 S. Ct. 1790, 10 L. Ed. 2d 965] . Under the Free Exercise Clause, a church's selection of its own clergy is a core matter of ecclesiastical self-governance with which the state may not constitutionally interfere [Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich (1976) 426 U.S. 696, 717, 96 S. Ct. 2372, 49 L. Ed. 2d 151 (reversing Illinois Supreme Court's determinations regarding several matters of internal church governance because religious controversies are not proper subject of civil court inquiry); Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral of the Russian Orthodox Church in North America (1952) 344 U.S. 94, 116, 73 S. Ct. 143, 97 L. Ed. 120 ; Bollard v. The California Province of the Society of Jesus (9th Cir. 1999) 196 F.3d 940, 944, 947-950 (but finding that ministerial exception to Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964 does not apply to employment decisions regarding lay employees or sexual harassment claim by novice against order and novice's superiors)].

A rationally based, neutral law of general applicability does not violate the right to free exercise of religion even though the law incidentally burdens a particular religious belief or practice [People of Guam v. Guerrero (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 1210, 1215-1216 ; Miller v. Reed (9th Cir. 1999) 176 F.3d 1202, 1206 (DMV can require social security number for driver's license or identification card); see Brunson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1251, 1253-1255, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 710 (DMV can require social security number for driver's license or identification card)]. Thus, a law that is neutral and of general applicability need not be justified by a compelling governmental interest even if the law has the incidental effect of burdening a particular religious practice [Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah (1993) 508 U.S. 520, 531, 113 S. Ct. 2217, 124 L. Ed. 2d 472 ; Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1127-1128] . This is a rational basis review [Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1127-1138] . However, courts impose a strict scrutiny standard in "hybrid situations" in which a law involves not the Free Exercise Clause alone, but in conjunction with other constitutional protections [Miller v. Reed (9th Cir. 1999) 176 F.3d 1202, 1207] .

If the object of a law is to infringe upon or restrict practices because of their religious motivation, the law is not neutral. A law lacks facial neutrality if it refers to a religious practice without a secular meaning discernable from the language or context [Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah (1993) 508 U.S. 520, 533, 113 S. Ct. 2217, 124 L. Ed. 2d 472 ; Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1130] . Apart from the text, the effect of a law in its real operation is strong evidence of its object [Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah (1993) 508 U.S. 520, 535, 113 S. Ct. 2217, 124 L. Ed. 2d 472 (assessing design of ordinance and determining that it was under-inclusive relative to its stated object); Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1130] . However, the Free Exercise Clause is not violated even though a group motivated by religious reasons may be more likely to engage in the proscribed conduct [Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1131 ; see Reynolds v. United States (1878) 98 U.S. 145, 166-167, 25 L. Ed. 244 (upholding polygamy ban though practice was followed primarily by members of Mormon church); cf. United States v. O'Brien (1968) 391 U.S. 367, 88 S. Ct. 1673, 20 L. Ed. 2d 672 (rejecting First Amendment challenge to statutory prohibition of destruction of draft cards though most violators likely would be opponents of war).

A law is not generally applicable when the government, in a selective manner, imposes burdens only on conduct motivated by religious belief [Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah (1993) 508 U.S. 520, 543, 113 S. Ct. 2217, 124 L. Ed. 2d 472 ; Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1134] . The selective manner analysis tests the rules for substantial under-inclusiveness [Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah (1993) 508 U.S. 520, 545, 113 S. Ct. 2217, 124 L. Ed. 2d 472 (challenged ordinances were not of general applicability because each ordinance pursued city's governmental interests only against conduct motivated by religious belief and failed to prohibit nonreligious conduct endangering those interests in similar or greater degree than Santeria animal sacrifice did); Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1135] . A means/end test is not an appropriate test for general applicability, as it adopts an intermediate level of scrutiny, rather than a rational basis test [Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1134] .

While the analysis of legislative history is proper in the equal protection context, the law is unsettled regarding the scope of its consideration in the free exercise arena [Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1131-1134 ; see Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah (1993) 508 U.S. 520, 540-542, 558, 113 S. Ct. 2217, 124 L. Ed. 2d 472 (analysis of legislative history sanctioned as part of free exercise analysis only in nonprecedential section authored by one justice and joined only by one other, with three justices expressing view that such inquiry was inappropriate in free exercise context); San Jose Christian College v. City of Morgan Hill (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1024, 1030 n.4 ; KDM v. Reedsport School District (9th Cir. 1999) 196 F.3d 1046, 1048] .

An independent basis for the free exercise of religion is granted under the California Constitution, which provides that "[f]ree exercise and enjoyment of religion without discrimination or preference are guaranteed" [Cal. Const., art. I, § 4; see East Bay Asian Local Development Corp. v. State of California (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 693, 719-720, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280, 13 P.3d 1122 (exempting property owned by religious entities from landmark status does not violate no-preference provision of free exercise clause of California Constitution, since it satisfies all prongs of test under federal establishment clause and shows that exemption is neither governmental preference for nor discrimination against religion); Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1112, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46]. California courts have typically construed Cal. Const., art. I, § 4 to afford the same protection for religious exercise as the federal Constitution and treat the state and federal free exercise clauses as interchangeable and apply, to both, the compelling state interest test [Brunson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1251, 1255, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 710 ; see East Bay Asian Local Development Corp. v. State of California (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 693, 720, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280, 13 P.3d 1122 (neither history nor language of no-preference clause of California Constitution's free exercise provision supports argument that clause bans governmental accommodation of religion or religious belief in general); see also DiLoreto v. Board of Educ. of Downey Unif. Sch. Dist. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 267, 278-279, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 791 (private party's free exercise rights not abrogated by school district's refusal to post sign containing Ten Commandments)].

[b] Religiously Motivated Conduct

[i] Balancing Test

Although religious belief is absolutely protected, religiously motivated conduct is not [Sherbert v. Verner (1963) 374 U.S. 398, 402-403, 83 S. Ct. 1790, 10 L. Ed. 2d 965 ; Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1113, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46].

Government action burdening religious conduct is subject to a balancing test, in which the importance of the state's interest is weighed against the severity of the burden imposed on religion [Wisconsin v. Yoder (1972) 406 U.S. 205, 214, 92 S. Ct. 1526, 32 L. Ed. 2d 15 ; Snyder v. Evangelical Orthodox Church (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 297, 306, 264 Cal. Rptr. 640] . The greater the burden imposed on religion, the more compelling must be the government interest at stake [Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1113, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46 ; Snyder v. Evangelical Orthodox Church (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 297, 306, 264 Cal. Rptr. 640]. Only the gravest abuses, endangering paramount interest, give occasion for permissible limitation of this freedom [Sherbert v. Verner (1963) 374 U.S. 398, 406, 83 S. Ct. 1790, 10 L. Ed. 2d 965 ; McNair v. Worldwide Church of God (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 363, 374, 242 Cal. Rptr. 823 ; but see Lyng v. Northwest Indian Cemetery Protective Ass'n (1988) 485 U.S. 439, 451, 108 S. Ct. 1319, 99 L. Ed. 2d 534 ; Bowen v. Roy (1986) 476 U.S. 693, 699-701, 106 S. Ct. 2147, 90 L. Ed. 2d 735 (also upholding government action while declining to balance)].

The balancing test has been described as a two-prong test [Snyder v. Evangelical Orthodox Church (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 297, 306, 310, 264 Cal. Rptr. 640 ; Wollersheim v. Church of Scientology (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 872, 886-887, 260 Cal. Rptr. 331] :

- That government seek to protect an important, or even, as some opinions suggest, a compelling, state interest.

- The burden on religious expression must be essential to further that interest.

A government action that passes the balancing test must also meet the further requirements that no action imposing a lesser burden on religion would satisfy the government's interest, and that the action does not discriminate between religions or between religion and nonreligion [Braunfeld v. Brown (1961) 366 U.S. 599, 607, 81 S. Ct. 1144, 6 L. Ed. 2d 563 ; Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1117-1119, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46 ; Snyder v. Evangelical Orthodox Church (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 297, 306, 310, 264 Cal. Rptr. 640] .

Even before application of the balancing test, two criteria must be satisfied to determine whether the activity in question is a religious practice entitled to protection under the free exercise clause. First, the system of thought to which the course of conduct relates must qualify as a religion, not a philosophy, science, or personal preference. Second, the course of conduct must qualify as an expression of that religion and not just as an activity that religious people happen to be doing [Snyder v. Evangelical Orthodox Church (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 297, 306, 264 Cal. Rptr. 640] .

[ii] Actions Against Religious Organizations

Neither the federal nor the state constitution bar an action against a religious organization for fraud, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and restitution for deceiving nonmembers into subjecting themselves, without their knowledge or consent, to coercive persuasion. Compelling state interests in the substantial threat to public safety, peace, or order that fraudulent conduct poses, and the protection of the family institution, justify the marginal burden imposed by tort liability for fraud. Further, judicial sanctioning of tort liability for fraudulent recruitment has as its purpose and effect the advancement of the state's legitimate secular goal of protecting persons from being harmed by fraud, and is nondiscriminatory [Molko v. Holy Spirit Ass.n (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1117-1118, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46].

The protection of a person's good name is a sufficiently important state interest to allow the burden of tort damages to be imposed. Thus, actions of a church or religious organization and its evangelist ministers in the performance of religious activities are subject to liability in tort for defamation, with certain limitations [McNair v. Worldwide Church of God (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 363, 374, 242 Cal. Rptr. 823 (constitutional malice required); for discussion of defamation actions, see Ch. 340, Libel and Slander].

In addition, a pastor may be subject to tort liability for sexually inappropriate and injurious conduct that breaches a fiduciary duty arising out of a confidential relation with a parishioner without offense to the religion clauses in the First Amendment of the United States Constitution and article I, § 4, of the California Constitution. Liability exists if (1) the alleged injurious conduct was not dictated by a sincerely held religious belief or carried out in accordance with established beliefs and practices of the religion to which the pastor belongs, and (2) there is no other reason the issues cannot be framed for the trier of fact in secular rather than sectarian terms [Richelle L. v. Roman Catholic Archbishop (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 257, 273-279, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 601 (but circumstances not present here)].

On the other hand, one court held that application of California's Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA), Gov. Code § 12900 et seq., which prohibits, inter alia, discrimination in employment, to a church-affiliated university's employment dispute with a campus chaplain would run afoul of the Free Exercise Clause, since there was no state interest compelling enough to override the university's interest in deciding how its chaplain can best serve the spiritual needs of the campus community [Schmoll v. Chapman University (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1442-1445, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 426] .

[c] Standing

In order bring an action alleging a violation of First Amendment Free Exercise rights, a plaintiff must have standing, which is governed by Article III of the Federal Constitution [Alaska Right to Life Political Action Comm. v. Feldman (9th Cir. 2007) 504 F.3d 840, 848 (standing is controlling element in definition of case or controversy)]. To satisfy Article III's standing requirements, a plaintiff must show each of the following [Friends of the Earth, Inc. v. Laidlaw Environmental Services (TOC), Inc. (2000) 528 U.S. 167, 180-181, 120 S. Ct. 693, 145 L. Ed. 2d 610 ; Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1119, 1121 (individual pharmacists had standing to challenge administrative rules requiring pharmacies to dispense contraceptives under Free Exercise Clause, when one pharmacist expected to be fired because her religious convictions prohibited her from dispensing contraceptive and her employer told her it would not be able to accommodate her, and second pharmacist alleged she was forced to leave her former job after pharmacy was unable to hire second pharmacist to work at pharmacy that accommodated her religious belief by ensuring there was always another pharmacist on duty, which was farther away from her house for less pay because her religious beliefs did not allow her to dispense contraceptive)]:

- It has suffered an injury in fact that is concrete and particularized and actual or imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical.

- The injury is fairly traceable to the challenged action of the defendant.

- It is likely, as opposed to merely speculative, that the injury will be redressed by a favorable decision.

It does not suffice if the injury complained of is the result of the independent action of a third party not before the court. However, that does not exclude injury produced by determinative or coercive effect upon the action of someone else [Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1121 ; see Bennett v. Spear (1997) 520 U.S. 154, 169, 117 S. Ct. 1154, 137 L. Ed. 2d 281] .

With regard to whether corporations have standing to assert Free Exercise claims, the proper question is not whether corporations have First Amendment rights and, if so, whether they are coextensive with those of natural persons. The question is whether the challenged statute or regulation abridges rights the First Amendment was meant to protect [First National Bank of Boston v. Bellotti (1978) 435 U.S. 765, 776-777, 98 S. Ct. 1407, 55 L. Ed. 2d 707 (refusing to address abstract question whether corporations have full measure of rights individuals enjoy under First Amendment); Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1120 (declining to decide whether for-profit corporation can assert its own rights under Free Exercise Clause and instead examining rights at issue as those of corporate owners)]. A corporation has standing to assert the free exercise right of its owners [Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1120-1122 (corporation had standing to assert Free Exercise claims of its owners, when corporation did not present any free exercise rights of its own different from or greater than its owners' rights, and its injuries were concrete and particularized, actual or imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical and fairly traceable to challenged rules); see EEOC v. Townley Eng'g & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 610, 619-620 & n.15 (because corporation was merely instrument through and by which owners expressed their religious beliefs, it was unnecessary to address abstract issue whether for-profit corporation had rights under Free Exercise Clause independent of those of its shareholders and officers and corporation had standing to assert owners' Free Exercise rights)]. On the other hand, when a Free Exercise ordinarily requires individual participation because a plaintiff must show the coercive effect of a statute or regulation as it operates against the plaintiff in the practice of his or her religion, an organization will not have standing when its members have a diversity of views concerning the statute or regulation [Harris v. McRae (1980) 448 U.S. 297, 321, 100 S. Ct. 2671, 65 L. Ed. 2d 784 ; see also Hunt v. Wash. Apple Adver. Comm. (1977) 432 U.S. 333, 343, 97 S. Ct. 2434, 53 L. Ed. 2d 383] .

In addition to the immutable requirements of Article III, the federal judiciary adheres to a set of prudential principles that bear on the question of standing [Valley Forge Christian Coll. v. Ams. United for Separation of Church and State, Inc. (1982) 454 U.S. 464, 474, 102 S. Ct. 752, 70 L. Ed. 2d 700] . Prudential standing concerns require that courts consider the following [Alaska Right to Life Political Action Comm. v. Feldman (9th Cir. 2007) 504 F.3d 840, 848-849] :

- Whether the alleged injury was more than a mere generalized grievance.

- Whether plaintiffs are asserting their own rights or the rights of third parties.

- Whether the claim falls within the zone of interests to be protected or regulated by the constitutional guarantee in question.

The prudential zone of interest test is not meant to be especially demanding [Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1122 ; see Clarke v. Securities Indus. Ass'n (1987) 479 U.S. 388, 399, 107 S. Ct. 750, 93 L. Ed. 2d 757] . Prudential standing is satisfied unless the party's interests are so marginally related to or inconsistent with the purposes implicit in the challenged statute or regulation that it cannot reasonably be assumed that the government intended to permit the suit [Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1122 (pharmacy and two pharmacists met prudential standing requirements for Free Exercise challenge to administrative rules requiring pharmacies to dispense contraceptive, where they alleged that their conduct was directly regulated by new rules and their constitutional interests were directly infringed by rules); see Ocean Advocates v. U.S. Army Corps of Engrs. (9th Cir. 2005) 402 F.3d 846, 861] .

Chapter 110 CHURCHES AND RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-110 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 110.14

§ 110.14 Jurisdiction

[1] Ecclesiastical Controversies

Civil courts have no jurisdiction over church disputes that are purely ecclesiastical, such as disputes concerning theological controversy, church discipline, ecclesiastical government, or the conformity of church members to a prescribed standard of morals [Watson v. Jones (1872) 80 U.S. 679, 733, 20 L. Ed. 666 ; Higgins v. Maher (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1168, 1170, 258 Cal. Rptr. 757 ; Presbytery of Riverside v. Community Church of Palm Springs (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 910, 919-920, 152 Cal. Rptr. 854]. The exercise of jurisdiction over such ecclesiastical controversies by civil courts violates the First Amendment [Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church (1969) 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S. Ct. 601, 21 L. Ed. 2d 658 ; Wilson v. Hinkle (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 506, 510-511, 136 Cal. Rptr. 731] .

Thus, decisions of proper church tribunals on matters purely ecclesiastical are conclusive and binding on the civil courts, and, although there may be an exception to that rule when such decisions are products of fraud or collusion, the First Amendment prohibits civil courts from inquiring into whether or not the decisions of an ecclesiastical tribunal complied with church laws and regulations [Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich (1976) 426 U.S. 696, 712-713, 96 S. Ct. 2372, 49 L. Ed. 2d 151 ; Korean United Presbyterian Church v. Presbytery of the Pacific (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 480, 497-499, 281 Cal. Rptr. 396 , disapproved on other grounds, Morehart v. County of Santa Barbara (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 725, 744 n.11 ; see Gonzalez v. Roman Catholic Archbishop (1929) 280 U.S. 1, 16, 50 S. Ct. 5, 74 L. Ed. 131].

If a schism, however, has developed within a church, resulting in a dispute as to who holds ultimate authority for congregational or corporate decisions, civil courts may determine which faction is the true or legitimate authority [Rosicrucian Fellowship v. Rosicrucian Fellowship Non-Sectarian Church (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 121, 131-135, 245 P.2d 481 ; Higgins v. Maher (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1168, 1173, 258 Cal. Rptr. 757].

A hierarchical church is one in which individual churches are organized as a body with other churches having similar faith and doctrine, and with a common ruling convocation or ecclesiastical head vested with ultimate ecclesiastical authority over the individual congregations and members of the entire organized church [Concord Christian Center v. Open Bible Standard Churches (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1409, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 412 ; see Kedroff v. St.

Nicholas Cathedral (1952) 344 U.S. 94, 110, 73 S. Ct. 143, 97 L. Ed. 120]. In such a hierarchical church, an individual local congregation that affiliates with the national church body becomes "a member of a much larger and more important religious organization, ... under its government and control, and ... bound by its orders and judgments" [Concord Christian Center v. Open Bible Standard Churches (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1409, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 412 ; see Watson v. Jones (1871) 80 U.S. 679, 722-727, 20 L. Ed. 666]. In contrast, a congregational church is defined as one "strictly independent of other ecclesiastical associations, and [one that] so far as church government is concerned, owes no fealty or obligation to any higher authority" [Concord Christian Center v. Open Bible Standard Churches (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1409, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 412 ; see Watson v. Jones (1871) 80 U.S. 679, 722, 20 L. Ed. 666].

Generally, civil jurisdiction is more limited with respect to hierarchical religious organizations than it is in the case of congregational or independent ones [Concord Christian Center v. Open Bible Standard Churches (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1409, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 412 ; Rosicrucian Fellowship v. Rosicrucian Fellowship Non-Sectarian Church (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 121, 131-133, 245 P.2d 481 ; see also § 110[2][a]]. This rule is referred to as the "ecclesiastical" or "hierarchical rule" [see Concord Christian Center v. Open Bible Standard Churches (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1407, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 412] . In a hierarchical-church dispute between a superior entity (such as a diocese in the Roman Catholic church hierarchy) and a subordinate entity (such as a particular parish), a court must defer to the resolution of a material ecclesiastical issue by the authoritative ecclesiastical body. However, a trial court has power to receive evidence and determine three preliminary issues [see Concord Christian Center v. Open Bible Standard Churches (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1411-1413, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 412] :

- Are the parties hierarchical-church entities, one of which is subordinate to the other?

- What is the authoritative ecclesiastical entity to whose decisions, on ecclesiastical issues, the court must give due deference?

- How has that entity resolved the material ecclesiastical issues?

Material ecclesiastical issues could include not only issues of religious doctrine per se, but also issues of membership, clergy credentials and discipline, and church polity and administration [see Concord Christian Center v. Open Bible Standard Churches (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1411-1413, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 412] .

On the other hand, it has long been the law in California that the identification of a religious body as the true church is an ecclesiastical issue [Metropolitan Philip v. Steiger (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 923, 931 (two factions disputed who was rightful owner of certain church property); Korean United Presbyterian Church v. Presbytery of the Pacific (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 480, 500, 506, 281 Cal. Rptr. 396 , disapproved on other grounds, Morehart v. County of Santa Barbara (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 725, 744 n.11 ; Presbytery of Riverside v. Community Church of Palm Springs (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 910, 922, 152 Cal. Rptr. 854]. If there is a church hierarchy to make the determination and it does make the determination, civil courts are bound by it [Korean United Presbyterian Church v. Presbytery of the Pacific (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 480, 502-503, 505-506, 281 Cal. Rptr. 396 , disapproved on other grounds, Morehart v. County of Santa Barbara (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 725, 744 n.11]. For example, a controversy regarding reaffiliation with the mother church is an example of an ecclesiastical controversy over which civil courts have no jurisdiction, notwithstanding characterization of the issue by one faction as one that only involved interpretation of bylaws (regarding notice of meetings and voting rights), which could be resolved by "application of neutral principles of law" [Vukovich v. Radulovich (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 281, 291-294, 286 Cal. Rptr. 547] .

[2] Civil or Property Rights

[a] Generally

Courts are not precluded from exercising jurisdiction over civil or property rights involved in a church dispute even though ecclesiastical matters may be incidentally involved [Rosicrucian Fellowship v. Rosicrucian Fellowship Non-Secretarian Church (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 121, 133, 245 P.2d 481 ; Wheelock v. First Presb. Church (1897) 119 Cal. 477, 482, 51 P. 841 ; St. Sava Mission Corp. v. Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1368, 273 Cal. Rptr. 340 (appellant failed to suggest why title issue tendered would necessarily require courts to adjudicate ecclesiastical matters)].

In general, when the question presented is whether the property and funds of the church are being handled in accordance with the bylaws and rules of the church corporation, or whether the bylaws and rules are being properly observed by the governing body of the church, persons who are aggrieved (and have standing) may seek redress through a civil action [Providence Baptist Church v. Superior Ct. (1952) 40 Cal. 2d 55, 63-64, 251 P.2d 10 ; Samoan Congregational etc. Church in U.S. v. Samoan Congregational etc. Church of Oceanside (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 69, 76-77, 135 Cal. Rptr. 793]. Courts that are called on to resolve disputes involving church property must not decide questions of religious doctrine, however. Such questions are for the church to resolve. Accordingly, if resolution of a property dispute involves a point of doctrine, the court must defer to the position of the highest ecclesiastical authority that has decided the point. To the extent that the court can resolve a property dispute without reference to church doctrine, the court should apply neutral principles of law. The court should consider sources such as deeds to the property in dispute, a local church's articles of incorporation, the constitution, canons, and rules of the general church, if any, and relevant statutes, including statutes specifically concerning religious property, such as Corp. Code § 9142 [Episcopal Church Cases (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 467, 485, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 275, 198 P.3d 66 ; see § 110.14[2][b] (discussion of Corp. Code § 9142)]. The neutral principles approach is exemplified in the following cases:

- If a court must resolve a property dispute involving a church that is incorporated under Corp. Code § 9110 et seq. (concerning religious corporations; see discussion in § 110.11[3]), and a material fact is that some of the parties disregarded the church's status and structure as a California religious corporation, then the court could resolve the dispute against those parties because of that fact--thus, the court would apply neutral principles of California corporation law--even if those parties contended, and pointed to evidence supporting the contention, that they had acted strictly within the ambit of ecclesiastical rights under the protection of the First Amendment [Iglesia Evangelica Latina, Inc. v. Southern Pac. Latin Am. Dist. of Assemblies of God (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 420, 439-446, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 75 ; accord, Huber v. Jackson (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 663, 677, 683, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 346 (majority of members of Episcopal Church parish were free to disaffiliate from local diocese and national church, but their attempt to take parish-owned real and personal property was unlawful because their purported changes in parish's corporate structure, effected for that purpose, were ultra vires under governing documents of parish, diocese, and national church); New v. Kroeger (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 800, 807, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464 (same)].

- In a dispute between a general church and one of its local churches which had withdrawn from the general church, with respect to the property of the local church, a judgment quieting title to the disputed property in the local church did not deprive the general church of its property without due process of law, when the record indicated that the trial court resolved the dispute by applying principles or rules of law developed for use in all property disputes, whether or not the litigants are religious associations or corporations [Presbytery of Riverside v. Community Church of Palm Springs (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 910, 923-924, 932-933, 152 Cal. Rptr. 854].

However, if the property right determination rests on the determination of which faction constitutes the "true church," and a church hierarchy has determined who is the true church, the civil court must award the property accordingly [Metropolitan Philip v. Basil Steiger (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 923, 931, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 605 (two factions disputed who was rightful owner of certain church property); Korean United Presbyterian Church v. Presbytery of the Pacific (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 480, 502-503, 505-506, 281 Cal. Rptr. 396 , disapproved on other grounds, Morehart v.

Nevertheless, in resolving an internal church property dispute as it affects the rights of majority and minority members, the courts are concerned with the form of internal structure or ecclesiastical government. If the judicatory system consists of a hierarchy or supreme judiciary exercising control over a number of member churches, the decision of such a synod, presbytery, or other supreme council is final and conclusive even though those complaining about that decision might comprise a substantial majority of the individual members [Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich (1976) 426 U.S. 696, 724-725, 96 S. Ct. 2372, 49 L. Ed. 2d 151 ; Wheelock v. First Presb. Church (1897) 119 Cal. 477, 482, 51 P. 841] . For additional discussion of this "ecclesiastical" or "hierarchical rule" [see Concord Christian Center v. Open Bible Standard Churches (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1407, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 412] , see § 110.14[1].

If a church is independently organized and governed by the congregation, such as in the Congregational or Baptist groups, the courts will take cognizance of the rights of the majority of the members [Watson v. Jones (1872) 80 U.S. 679, 724-725, 20 L. Ed. 666 ; Barber v. Irving (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 560, 567, 38 Cal. Rptr. 142] . In either of the foregoing types or organizational structures, however, the courts will enforce the provisions of an express trust concerning the use of the church property even though the terms of the trust are in derogation of the wishes of the majority or the decision of the governing body of a federated church [see Watson v. Jones (1872) 80 U.S. 679, 723, 20 L. Ed. 666 ; see also Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church (1969) 393 U.S. 440, 452, 89 S. Ct. 601, 21 L. Ed. 2d 658 (Harlan, J., concurring); California-Nevada Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church v. St. Luke's United Methodist Church (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 754, 757, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 442 (in absence of express declaration that trust created by local church for governing church was irrevocable, local church was free under state law to revoke trust), disapproved on other grounds, Episcopal Church Cases (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 467, 491-492 ; but see Guardian Angel Polish Nat'l Catholic Church of L.A., Inc. v. Grotnik (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 919, 931, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 552 (church property belonged to general church because decision of local church board severing ties with general church had not been approved by governing church board as required by general church constitution)].

[b] Action for Breach of Corporation's Charitable Trust

[i] Who May Bring Action

The Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law provides that any of the following may bring an action to enjoin, correct, obtain damages for, or otherwise remedy a breach of a trust under which any or all of the assets of the corporation are held [Corp. Code § 9142(a)]:

- The corporation, a member, or a former member asserting the right in the name of the corporation, provided that for the purpose of such an action, Corp. Code § 5170 (derivative actions by members of nonprofit public benefit corporations) will apply.
- An officer of the corporation.
- A director of the corporation.
- A person with a reversionary, contractual, or property interest in the assets subject to such trust.

The fact that the provision allows a corporation to bring an action for breach of trust is somewhat confusing; the corporation, being the trustee, would appear to be the only entity capable of breaching the trust.

[ii] Creation of Trust

Whether the local church has created a trust in favor of the general church is ordinarily a question of fact to be determined by ascertaining the intent of the parties. If the trial court's factual determination is based on conflicting evidence, or at least on evidence giving rise to conflicting inferences, the substantial evidence rule applies and the trial court's determination will not be disturbed on appeal [California-Nevada Annual Conf. of the United Methodist Church v. St. Luke's United Methodist Church (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 754, 764, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 442 , disapproved on other grounds, Episcopal Church Cases (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 467, 491-492 ; Presbytery of Riverside v. Community Church of Palm Springs (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 910, 931, 152 Cal. Rptr. 854].

No assets of the corporation are or may be deemed to be impressed with a trust, express or implied, statutory or at common law, unless and only to the extent that one of the following is true:

- The assets are received by the corporation with an express commitment by resolution of its board of directors to hold the assets in trust [Corp. Code § 9142(c)(1)].

- The articles or bylaws of the corporation, or the governing instruments of a superior religious body or general church of which the corporation is a member, expressly provide that the assets be held in trust [[Corp. Code § 9142(c)(2)] see Korean United Presbyterian Church v. Presbytery of the Pacific (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 480, 509, 281 Cal. Rptr. 396 (bylaws established express trust for superior church body), disapproved on other grounds, Morehart v. County of Santa Barbara (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 725, 744 n.11].

- The donor expressly imposed a trust, in writing, on the assets at the time of the gift or donation [Corp. Code § 9142(c)(3)].

In a hierarchically organized church, the "general church" can impress a trust on a local religious corporation that is a "member" if the governing instruments of that superior religious body so provide [Episcopal Church Cases (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 467, 492, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 275, 198 P.3d 66 , disapproving contrary statement in California Nevada Annual Conf. of the United Methodist Church v. St. Luke's United Methodist Church (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 754, 757, 769-770, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 442]. However, under California trust law, unless a trust is expressly made irrevocable by the trust instrument, the trust is revocable by the settlor [Prob. Code § 15400], and this rule would apply to a trust impressed on property of a local religious corporation [California Nevada Annual Conf. of the United Methodist Church v. St. Luke's United Methodist Church (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 754, 767-768, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 442 , disapproved on other grounds, Episcopal Church Cases (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 467, 492].

The articles or bylaws of the religious corporation or the governing instruments of a superior religious body or general church of which the corporation is a member, that expressly provide for the creation of a trust, can be amended to amend or dissolve the trust, but they cannot be amended to delete or amend provisions stating that the property is irrevocably dedicated to religious, charitable, scientific, or hospital purposes [Corp. Code § 9142(d); see Rev. & Tax Code § 214.01].

[iii] Contract Performance

In any action under Corp. Code § 9142 the court may not rescind or enjoin the performance of a contract unless (1) all of the parties to the contract are parties to the action; (2) no party to the contract has, in good faith and without actual notice of the restriction, parted with value under the contract or in reliance upon it; and (3) it is equitable to do so.

[iv] Disposition of Property

When property is received by a religious corporation covered by Corp. Code § 9110 et seq., from a person directly affiliated with that corporation, and the property was contributed based on an affirmative representation that it would be used for a specific purpose other than the general support of the corporation's activities, but is used in a manner contrary to the specific purpose for which it was contributed, the contributor or any person listed in Corp. Code § 9142(a)(1), (2), or (3) may bring an action if that person notifies the corporation in writing, before the action is brought, that an action will be brought unless the corporation takes immediate steps to correct any improper diversion of funds [Corp. Code § 9143(a)]. A public officer may not bring an action under Corp. Code § 9143 in his or her official capacity, even on behalf of a private person [Corp. Code § 9143(c)].

If it becomes impractical or impossible for the corporation to devote the property to the specific purpose for which it was contributed, or if the directors or members of the corporation in good faith expressly conclude and record in writing that the stated purpose for which the property was contributed is no longer in accord with the policies or best interests of the corporation, the directors or members of the corporation may, in good faith, approve or ratify the use of the property for the general purposes of the corporation, rather than for the specific purpose for which it was contributed [Corp. Code § 9143(b)].

[c] Division Within Religious Society

In cases concerning property right disputes occasioned by a schism or division within the religious society in which the court is called on to decide which faction is entitled to the church property, the court is bound by any rulings of the church tribunal concerning the ecclesiastical matters which affect the controverted property rights [Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich (1976) 426 U.S. 696, 709-710, 96 S. Ct. 2372, 49 L. Ed. 2d 151 ; Korean United Presbyterian Church v. Presbytery of the Pacific (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 480, 502-503, 505-506, 281 Cal. Rptr. 396 , disapproved on other grounds, Morehart v. County of Santa Barbara (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 725, 744 n.11 ; see Guardian Angel Polish Nat'l Catholic Church of L.A., Inc. v. Grotnik (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 919, 927-931, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 552 (general church became owner of local church property following schism because actions of local church board had not been approved by general church as required by general church's constitution), criticized by California-Nevada Annual Conf. of the United Methodist Church v. St.Luke's United Methodist Church (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 754, 771, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 442 (contrary to California corporation law), disapproved on other grounds, Episcopal Church Cases (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 467, 492 ; see also Wheelock v. First Presb. Church (1897) 119 Cal. 477, 482, 51 P. 841] .

The courts are prohibited by the First and Fourteenth Amendments from deciding such cases on the basis of their own interpretation of church doctrine [Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich (1976) 426 U.S. 696, 721, 96 S. Ct. 2372, 49 L. Ed. 2d 151 ; Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church (1969) 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S. Ct. 601, 21 L. Ed. 2d 658] . For example, if the schism resulted from a diversion on the part of a minister from the denominational doctrine, a civil court may not interfere, and the controversy would have to be settled by the church tribunals [Providence Baptist Church v. Superior Ct. (1952) 40 Cal. 2d 55, 63, 251 P.2d 10 ; Wilson v. Hinkle (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 506, 512 n.5, 136 Cal. Rptr. 731] .

Similarly, if the church's governing body determines which faction represents the true church, the civil court must defer to and implement that decision [Korean United Presbyterian Church v. Presbytery of the Pacific (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 480, 502-503, 281 Cal. Rptr. 396 , disapproved on other grounds, Morehart v. County of Santa Barbara (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 725, 744 n.11].

[d] Expulsion of Church Members

In cases concerning the expulsion of church members and removal of pastors, the courts have been reluctant to take jurisdiction unless property rights were affected. Apparently church membership alone is not a sufficient legal interest to invoke the jurisdiction of the courts to contest a wrongful expulsion [Owen v. Board of Directors (1959) 173 Cal. App. 2d 112, 117, 342 P.2d 424 ; see also Maxwell v. Brougher (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 824, 826, 222 P.2d 910 ; Linke v. Church of Jesus Christ (1945) 71 Cal. App. 2d 667, 668-669, 163 P.2d 44] .

However, if the expulsion is not only from church membership but from membership in a corporation which holds and administers the church property, a sufficient property right is involved for the courts to determine the validity of the expulsion [Burnett v. Banks (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 631, 636, 279 P.2d 579 ; see Corp. Code §§ 9310-9353 (rights of members of religious nonprofit corporation generally), 9151(d), 9340 (termination of membership)].

Similarly, if the dispute concerns the removal of a pastor who receives a salary, the emoluments of the office constitute a sufficient property right to invoke civil court jurisdiction. In such a case, the court must look to the usage, custom, rules, and regulations of the organization in deciding whether or not the meeting at which the pastor was removed was properly conducted [Providence Baptist Church v. Superior Ct. (1952) 40 Cal. 2d 55, 61-62 251 P.2d 10] . Even if the removal arises out of a dispute over doctrine or another ecclesiastical question, the court may still properly adjudicate resulting disputes over salary or other property so long as it may do so without attempting to resolve the underlying ecclesiastical controversy [Gipe v. Superior Court (1981) 124 Cal. App. 3d 617, 628, 177 Cal. Rptr. 590] .

[e] Disaffiliation by Hierarchical Church Body

Assuming that persons with standing have duly appeared in an appropriate action for resolution of the dispute between them [see, e.g., Corp. Code § 9418 (declaratory relief action to determine validity of election or appointment of director of religious corporation); see also Classis of Cent. Calif. v. Miraloma Cmty. Church (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 750, 768-769, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 449 (superior entity in hierarchical church organization had standing to sue local church)], a civil court can apply neutral principles of law to decide whether a subordinate entity in a hierarchical church organization--typically, a local church--was successfully disaffiliated from the organization, even when the issue does not involve conflicting claims to property [Classis of Cent. Calif. v. Miraloma Cmty. Church (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 750, 759-761, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 449 (entire congregation, including governing officers, of local church failed in their attempt to disaffiliate it; control of property was not at issue); see New v. Kroeger (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 800, 807, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464 (majority faction in congregation of local church failed in attempt to disaffiliate it; minority faction was properly recognized by superior entity as constituting entire congregation after dissidents affiliated themselves with different church organization; dissidents were legally obligated to relinquish possession of local church's assets and turn over control to remaining loyal congregants)].

The court may determine initially that the parties are related as superior and subordinate entities in a hierarchical church organization, based on the entities' organizational documents and evidence regarding the entities' interaction [Classis of Cent. Calif. v. Miraloma Cmty. Church (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 750, 761-762, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 449] . The court may then determine that an attempt at disaffiliation by the subordinate entity was procedurally ineffective, based on the documents defining the parties' relationship; and the court may give those documents equal status, or even precedence, with respect to Corporations Code sections governing religious corporations [Classis of Cent. Calif. v. Miraloma Cmty. Church (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 750, 763-766, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 449] . The court may further determine that responsive and remedial measures by the superior entity, to prevent or annul the attempted disaffiliation, were legitimate under the applicable organizational documents and therefore also were lawful under the Corporations Code [Classis of Cent. Calif. v. Miraloma Cmty. Church (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 750, 767-768, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 449] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-110 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 110.15

§ 110.15 Director's Standard of Conduct

[1] Good Faith

The director of a religious corporation must perform directorial duties, including duties as a member of any committee of the board on which he or she may serve, in good faith, in a manner he or she believes to be in the best interests of the corporation and with such care, including reasonable inquiry, as is appropriate under the circumstances [Corp. Code § 9241(a)]. The term "good faith" has been used to describe a state of mind denoting honesty of purpose, freedom from intent to defraud, and a general faithfulness to one's duties or obligations [Efron v. Kalmanovitz (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 187, 192, 57 Cal. Rptr. 248] .

[2] Consideration of Religious Purpose and Tenets

The standard of conduct imposed by the Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law differs in two respects from the analogous provisions set out in the Nonprofit Public Benefit Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 5231, 5233, 5237], the Nonprofit Mutual Benefit Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 7231], and the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 309]. First, in addition to the general provisions respecting standards of conduct [Corp. Code § 9241], the director of a religious corporation, in making a good-faith determination, may take into consideration what he or she believes to be the religious purposes of the corporation, as well as applicable religious tenets, canons, laws, policies, and authority [Corp. Code § 9240(c)]. Second, the standard of care required by the Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law is that which is appropriate under the circumstances [Corp. Code § 9241(a)] and not that which an ordinarily prudent person in a like position would use under similar circumstances, required under analogous provisions of the other corporation laws [Corp. Code §§ 309(a), 5231(a), 7231(a)].

These differences derive from the fact that religious corporations often serve as civil vehicles for owning properties and conducting temporal affairs of a somewhat separate religious organization. Thus, the "best interests" of the corporation may be inextricably bound up in religious considerations or in the interests of related religious groups or organizations which a court could not and would not review in determining whether or not a director has performed his or her duties properly.

Additionally, the directors of a religious corporation may have less than full responsibility regarding the conduct of corporate affairs. To the extent that some or even virtually all of such responsibility can conceivably be assigned to others in accordance with religious rules, the manner of performance of a director's duties may well be constrained. Moreover, a director may feel bound by religious rules or by directions of religious authorities in carrying out directorial duties and thus carry out such duties in a manner other than he or she would without such direction [Ballantine and Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 19, Nonprofit Corporations and Organizations (Matthew Bender)].

[3] Reliance on Information Furnished

In performing the duties of a director, a director is entitled to rely on information, opinions, reports, or statements, including financial statements and other financial data, in each case prepared or presented by any of the following sources:

- One or more officers or employees of the corporation whom the director believes to be reliable and competent in the matters presented [Corp. Code § 9241(b)(1)].

- Counsel, independent accountants, or other persons as to matters that the director believes to be within the professional or expert competence of those persons [Corp. Code § 9241(b)(2)].

- A committee on which the director does not serve, that is composed exclusively of any combination of directors, persons described in Corp. Code § 9241(b)(1) (listed above), or persons described in Corp. Code § 9241(b)(2 (listed above), as to matters within its designated authority, if the director believes the committee merits confidence [Corp. Code § 9241(b)(3)].

- Religious authorities and ministers, priests, rabbis, or other persons whose position or duties in the religious organization the director believes justify reliance and confidence and whom the director believes to be reliable and competent in the matters presented [Corp. Code § 9241(b)(4)].

Reliance on information from any of the foregoing sources must be in good faith after reasonable inquiry when the need for such an inquiry is indicated by the circumstances, and without knowledge that would cause such reliance to be unwarranted [Corp. Code § 9241(b)(4)].

These provisions also govern the duties of directors as to any acts or omissions in connection with the election, selection, or nomination of directors [Corp. Code § 9242].

[4] Liability of Directors for Distribution and Loans

[a] Defined

Subject to the general standard of care requirements set out in Corp. Code § 9241, and discussed under [3], above, directors of nonprofit religious corporations may be held jointly and severally liable to the corporation for approving any of the following transactions [Corp. Code § 9245(a)]:

- The making of any distribution.

- The distribution of assets after institution of dissolution proceedings of the corporation, without paying or adequately providing for all known liabilities of the corporation, excluding any claims not filed by creditors within the time limit set by the court in a notice given to creditors under Corp. Code § 9680 and those sections made applicable to Corp. Code § 9245 by Corp. Code § 9680.

- The making of any loan or guaranty contrary to Corp. Code § 9241, thereby constituting a breach of fiduciary duty.

[b] Who May Bring Suit

Suit to enforce liability may be brought by a member's derivative suit against any or all directors liable for the making of any distribution [Corp. Code §§ 5710(b), 9245(b)(1)]. Enforcement of liability for wrongful distribution after institution of dissolution proceedings or for the making of any loan or guaranty contrary to Corp. Code § 9241 may be brought against any or all directors liable by any one or more creditors of the corporation whose debts or claims arose prior to the time of the corporate action, who have not consented to the corporate action, whether or not they have reduced their claims to judgment [Corp. Code § 9245(b)(2)].

[c] Damages

Damages recoverable from a director found liable are the amount of the illegal distribution, or if the illegal distribution consists of property, the fair market value of the property at the time of the illegal distribution, plus interest from the date of the distribution at the legal rate on judgments until paid, together with all reasonably incurred costs of appraisal or other valuation, if any, of the property, or the loss suffered by the corporation as a result of the illegal loan or guaranty, or the loss suffered by the corporation as a result of the illegal loan or guaranty [Corp. Code § 9245(c)].

[d] Subrogation of Rights

Directors found liable under Corp. Code § 9245 are entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the corporation as follows:

- With respect to the making of any distribution, against the members who received the distribution [Corp. Code § 9245(e)(1)].

- With respect to wrongful distribution after institution of dissolution proceedings, against the members who received the distribution [Corp. Code § 9245(e)(2)].

- With respect to the making of any loan or guaranty contrary to Corp. Code § 9241, against the person who received the loan or guaranty [Corp. Code § 9245(e)(3)].

Corp. Code § 9245 provides that any director sued under its provisions may file a cross complaint against the person or persons who are liable to such director as a result of the subrogation set out in Corp. Code § 9245 or may proceed against that person or those persons in an independent action.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-110 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 110.16

§ 110.16 Special Standard Regarding Self-Dealing Transactions

[1] Self-Dealing Transaction Defined

A self-dealing transaction is one to which a religious corporation is a party and in which one or more of its directors has a material financial interest and that does not meet the requirements of Corp. Code § 9243(d)(1),(2),(3), or (4). Such a director is termed an "interested director" [Corp. Code § 9243(a)].

In the event that a director is found liable for self-dealing, he or she will be required to do such things and pay such damages as the court deems fair and equitable, considering any benefit received by the corporation and whether or not such interested director acted in good faith and with an intent to further the best interests of the corporation [Corp. Code § 9243(h)]. Additionally, the court may order the interested director or directors to do any or all of the following [Corp. Code § 9243(h)]:

- Account for any profits made from the transaction and pay them to the corporation.

- Pay the corporation the value of the use of any of its property used in the transaction.

- Return or replace any property lost to the corporation as a result of the transaction, together with any income or appreciation lost to the corporation by reason of the transaction.

- Account to the corporation for any proceeds of sale of such property and pay the proceeds to the legal corporation together with interest at the legal rate.

Additionally, the court may award prejudgment interest to the extent allowed by the Civil Code [Corp. Code § 9243(h); see Civ. Code §§ 3287, 3288]. The court may also in its discretion grant exemplary damages for fraudulent or malicious self-dealing [Corp. Code § 9243(h)].

[2] Transactions Excluded

The following acts are specifically defined as being outside the scope of self-dealing transactions and are therefore governed by the general standard of care discussed above:

- An action of the board fixing the compensation of a director as a director or officer of the corporation or making any loan of money or property to or guaranteeing the obligation of any director or officer [Corp. Code § 9243(b)(1)].

- A transaction that is a part of a public, charitable, or religious program of the corporation if it (a) is approved or authorized by the corporation in good faith and without unjustified favoritism; and (b) results in a benefit to one or more directors of their families because they are in the class of persons intended to be benefited by the program [Corp. Code § 9243(b)(2)].

- A transaction of which the interested director or directors have no actual knowledge and that does not exceed the lesser of one percent of the gross receipts of the corporation for the preceding fiscal year or $100,000 [Corp. Code § 9243(b)(3)].

[3] Avoidance of Liability

[a] Approval Prior to Transaction's Consummation

If a director is shown to have been involved in a self-dealing transaction under Corp. Code § 9243(a), he or she may nevertheless avoid liability by sustaining the burden of proving all of the following:

- That the corporation entered into the transaction for its own benefit or for the benefit of the religious organization.

- That the transaction was fair and reasonable as to the corporation or was in furtherance of its religious purposes at the time the corporation entered into the transaction.

- That prior to authorizing or approving the transaction, the board considered, and in good faith determined after reasonable investigation under the circumstances, that the transaction would be fair and reasonable as to the corporation or that it would be in furtherance of its religious purposes.

- That prior to consummating the transaction, or any part of it, the board of the religious corporation authorized or approved the transaction in good faith by a vote of a majority of the directors then in office without counting the vote of the interested director or directors and with knowledge of the material facts concerning the transaction and the director's or directors' interest in it. Except as mentioned below, action by a committee of the board will not satisfy this requirement [Corp. Code § 9243(d)(3)].

[b] Approval After Transaction's Consummation

Liability may also be avoided after the transaction has been consummated if the interested director sustains the burden of proving the following [Corp. Code § 9243(d)(4)]:

- The transaction was approved by a committee or a person authorized by the board in a manner consistent with the standards prescribed for approval by the board itself.

- It was not reasonably practicable to obtain approval of the board prior to entering into the transaction.

- The board determines in good faith that the person or committee met the same requirements the board would have had to meet in approving the transaction and ratifies the transaction at its next meeting by a vote of the majority of the directors then in office without counting the vote of the interested director or directors.

An interested director may be counted in determining the presence of a quorum at a meeting of the board in which the transaction is authorized, approved or ratified [Corp. Code § 9243(g)].

[c] Approval or Ratification by Members

Liability may also be avoided if the transaction is approved or ratified in good faith by the members other than the directors after notice and disclosure to the members of the material facts concerning the transaction and the director's interest in the transaction [Corp. Code § 9243(d)(2)].

[d] Approval by Attorney General

Liability may also be avoided if the Attorney General, or the court in an action in which the Attorney General is an indispensable party, has approved the transaction either before or after it was consummated [Corp. Code § 9243(d)(1)].

[4] Persons Entitled to Sue for Self-Dealing

An action for damages based on a director's self-dealing may be brought by a director or officer of the religious corporation, any person authorized by corporate bylaws to bring an action, by the corporation itself, or by a member of the corporation, asserting the right in the name of the corporation [Corp. Code § 9243(c)]. Since the Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law itself does not include a provision for bringing a derivative action, the law provides that for the purposes of asserting derivative rights, Corp. Code § 5710 (Nonprofit Public Benefit Corporation) applies [Corp. Code § 9243(c)].

Chapter 110 CHURCHES AND RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-110 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 110.17

§ 110.17 Indemnification of Volunteer Director or Officer

[1] Nonprofit Corporations

[a] Generally

There are several statutes that immunize volunteer offices or directors from liability for any act or omission done within the scope of his or her duties as a board member or officer. Most of these provisions are discussed in Ch. 388, Nonprofit Corporations , which has a form of affirmative defense and forms for proceedings for an order allowing the filing of a complaint or cause of action against the volunteer office or director.

[b] I.R.C. § 501(c)(3), (6) Tax Exempt Corporations

Corp. Code § 5047.5 sets forth general provisions regarding indemnification of volunteer directors. Corp. Code § 5047.5 governs, whether the corporation is organized under Corp. Code §§ 5110 et seq. (nonprofit public benefit corporations), Corp. Code § 7110 et seq. (nonprofit mutual benefit corporations), or Corp. Code § 9110 et seq. (nonprofit religious corporations), when all of the following are true [see Ch. 388, Nonprofit Corporations]:

- The nonprofit corporation bases its federal income tax exemption on I.R.C. § 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(6).
- The claim against the director or officer may also be made directly against the corporation.
- The corporation maintains a general liability insurance policy in the requisite amounts.

[c] Other Tax Exempt Corporations

In the unlikely event that the church, whether organized under Corp. Code §§ 5110 et seq., Corp. Code §§ 7110 et seq., or Corp. Code §§ 9110 et seq., bases its federal income tax exemption on I.R.C. § 501(c)(1) (entities organized under federal law, except a credit union), (4) (civic league), (5) (labor or agricultural organization), (7) (club, recreational association), or (19) (veterans organization), Code Civ. Proc. § 425.15 provides immunity to the volunteer officer or director and requires the person intending to sue the volunteer officer or director first to obtain leave from the court to do so. Code Civ. Proc. § 425.15 is discussed in Ch. 388, Nonprofit Corporations , which also contains a form of petition for obtaining an order allowing the action to proceed against the volunteer officer or director.

[d] Insured Corporations

Regardless of the basis of the corporation's federal income tax exemption, no monetary damages may be obtained from a volunteer officer or director of a public benefit corporation if the corporation has insurance to cover the claim or has made a good faith attempt to obtain insurance [see Corp. Code § 5239, discussed in Ch. 388, Nonprofit Corporations]. Corp. Code § 9247, a similar provision applicable in the case of a church organized as a nonprofit religious corporations, is discussed under [2], below.

[2] Religious Corporations

[a] Non-Liability of Directors and Officers

The specific provisions relating to indemnification of volunteer directors and officers of nonprofit religious corporations are set forth in Corp. Code § 9247. Volunteer directors and volunteer executive officers of nonprofit corporations subject to the Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law (Corp. Code § 9110 et seq.) are not personally liable for monetary damages to third parties caused by the director's or officer's negligent act or omission in the performance of his or her duties as a director or officer committed after January 1, 1988, if all of the following are true:

- The act or omission was within the scope of the director's or officer's duties.
- The act or omission was performed in good faith.
- The act or omission was not reckless, wanton, intentional, or grossly negligent.
- Damages caused by the act or omission are covered by a liability insurance policy issued to the corporation in the form of a general liability policy or a director's or officer's liability policy, or issued to the director or officer personally.

Even if the damages are not covered by a liability insurance policy, the volunteer director or officer will not be personally liable for the damages if the board of directors of the corporation and the person had made all reasonable efforts in good faith to obtain available liability insurance [Corp. Code § 9247(a),(g); see Corp. Code § 9247(b),(c) (definitions)].

To be a "volunteer" within the meaning of Corp. Code § 9247, one must not receive any remuneration whether by way of salary, fee, or other consideration for services rendered. Nevertheless, the payment of per diem, mileage, or other reimbursement expenses to a director or executive officer does not disqualify him or her from being a volunteer [Corp. Code § 9247(b)]. "Executive officer" within the meaning of Corp. Code § 9247 means the president, vice-president, secretary, or treasurer of the corporation, or other individual serving in like capacity, who assists in making corporate policy [Corp. Code § 9247(c)].

[b] Corporate Liability

Corp. Code § 9247 does not eliminate or limit the liability of a director or officer as provided in Corp. Code § 9243 (self-dealing transactions) or 9245 (joint and several liability of directors relating to certain distributions, loans, and guaranties) or in any action or proceeding brought by the Attorney General [Corp. Code § 9247(e)]. Nor does anything in Corp. Code § 9247 limit the corporation's liability for any damages caused by acts or omissions of the volunteer director or officer [Corp. Code § 9247(d)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-110 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 110.18

§ 110.18 Effect of Transactions Involving Interlocking Directorates

The Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law follows the same rule as do the Nonprofit Public Benefit Corporation Law, Nonprofit Mutual Benefit Corporation Law, and General Corporation Law as to transactions involving interlocking directorates. That is, no contract or other transaction between a religious corporation and any corporation, firm, or association having any director in common is either void or voidable because the common director was present at the meeting of the board or a committee of the board when the contract or transaction was authorized, approved, or ratified if [Corp. Code § 9244(a)]:

- Material facts as to the transaction and the common directorship were fully disclosed or known to the board or committee, and that body approved, authorized, or ratified the transaction in good faith by a vote sufficient without counting the vote of the common director; or

- The transaction was either just and reasonable as to the corporation taking into account its religious purposes or furthered the corporation's religious purposes at the time of authorization, approval, or ratification.

Thus, assuming there had not been full disclosure and the contract or transaction is not fair and reasonable as to the corporation in light of its religious aims, an action may be brought for rescission or such remedy as is appropriate, depending on the situation. For further discussion and an illustrative form for such a claim, see Ch. 167, Corporations: Directors and Management .

If the common director is also an "interested director," then Corp. Code § 9243, governing self-dealing transactions, applies, rather than Corp. Code § 9244. In such instance the common director has a more stringent burden of proof in order to uphold the validity of the contract or transaction in question [Corp. Code § 9244(b)].

§ 110.19 Standard of Conduct Regarding Investments

Directors of religious corporations are held to the general standard of conduct, discussed under § 110.15, above, with regard to investing, reinvesting, purchasing, acquiring, exchanging, selling, and managing corporate investments [Corp. Code § 9250; see Corp. Code § 9241]. To provide flexibility with regard to investments, the Corp. Code provides that nothing in the prescribed standards abrogates or restricts the court's power in proper cases to direct or permit a corporation to deviate from the terms of a trust or agreement regarding the making or retention of investments [Corp. Code § 9251]. For further discussion, see Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-110 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 110.20

§ 110.20 Tort Liability

[1] Generally

Everyone is responsible, not only for the result of his or her willful acts, but also for an injury occasioned to another by his or her want of ordinary care or skill in the management of his or her property or person [Civ. Code § 1714(a)]. This policy admits of no exception based on the laudable objectives of the tortfeasor, and applies to churches and religious organizations. The doctrine of respondeat superior also applies to ecclesiastical bodies as it does to other organizations [Malloy v. Fong (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 356, 366, 370, 232 P.2d 241] .

[2] Fraud

A religious organization may be held liable on a traditional cause of action in fraud for deceiving nonmembers into subjecting themselves, without their knowledge or consent, to coercive persuasion [Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1119, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46]. For discussion regarding constitutional restrictions on state-imposed burden on religion, see § 110.13[2]. For further discussion and forms relating to fraud actions generally, see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit .

[3] Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

Deceptions by a religious organization may well constitute an abuse of a relation or position that gives the organization power to damage the plaintiff's interest, and thus give rise to a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Threats of divine retribution, however, are protected religious speech and may not form the basis of a claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress [Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1120, 1122, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46]. For discussion and forms relating to an action for intentional infliction of emotional distress, see Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress .

[4] Negligence

In Nally v. Grace Community Church (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 278, 253 Cal. Rptr. 97, 763 P.2d 948 , cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1007 , a wrongful death action against a church, the California Supreme Court held that the plaintiffs did not meet the threshold requirements for imposing a duty on the church and certain members of its pastoral, nontherapist counseling staff to prevent the suicide of a church member or to refer the member to a professional therapist [Nally v. Grace Community Church (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 278, 299-300, 253 Cal. Rptr. 97, 763 P.2d 948 , cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1007] .

In Nally, there was no special relationship when the defendants provided nonprofessional guidance to another person seeking advice and the defendants had no control over the environment of the individual being counseled [Nally v. Grace Community Church (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 278, 294, 253 Cal. Rptr. 97, 763 P.2d 948 , cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1007] . The Court stated it is inappropriate to impose a duty on nontherapist counselors (that is, persons other than licensed psychotherapists, who counsel others concerning their emotional and spiritual problems) to refer persons to licensed mental health professionals based solely on the foreseeability of suicide. The duty could deter those most in need of help from seeking treatment out of fear that their private disclosures could subject them to involuntary commitment to psychiatric facilities. Additionally, the extension of liability to voluntary, noncommercial, and noncustodial relationships is contrary to the trend in the Legislature to encourage private assistance efforts [Nally v. Grace Community Church (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 278, 283, 297-298, 253 Cal. Rptr. 97, 763 P.2d 948 , cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1007] .

The Court, however, did not foreclose imposing liability on nontherapist counselors who hold themselves out as professionals for injuries related to their counseling activities [Nally v. Grace Community Church (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 278, 300 n. 8, 253 Cal. Rptr. 97, 763 P.2d 948 , cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1007] .

§ 110.21 Punitive Damages Against Religious Corporation or Religious Corporation Sole

No claim for punitive or exemplary damages against a religious corporation or religious corporation sole may be included in a complaint or other pleading unless the court enters an order allowing an amended pleading that includes a claim for punitive or exemplary damages to be filed. The court may allow the filing of an amended pleading that claims punitive or exemplary damages on a motion by a party seeking the amended pleading if, based on the supporting and opposing affidavits presented, the plaintiff has established evidence that substantiates that he or she will meet the clear and convincing standard under Civ. Code § 3294 [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.14; see §§ 110.70, 110.71]. For a general discussion of the availability of punitive damages in tort actions, see Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.40 et seq.

The requirement under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.14 that the plaintiff obtain an order, however, is not intended to affect the party's right to discover evidence on the issue of punitive or exemplary damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.14].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 110.22 Dissolution of Religious Organizations

Civil courts have jurisdiction to dissolve a religious organization's temporal body [Fuimaono v. Samoan Congregational etc. Church of Oceanside (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 80, 84-85, 135 Cal. Rptr. 799 ; see Corp. Code § 9680]. Under the Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law, a religious corporation may dissolve as provided in Corp. Code § 9680. It should be noted that this section does not specifically incorporate the provisions of Corp. Code §§ 6510-6519 providing for involuntary dissolution of a nonprofit public benefit corporation. Rather, the section sets out the means by which a religious corporation may dissolve voluntarily. Two ways it may elect to wind up and dissolve are either by an approval of a majority of all the members [see Corp. Code § 5033 (what constitutes approval of majority of members)] or by approval of the board and approval of the members) [Corp. Code § 9680(b)(1); see Corp. Code § 5034 (defining approval of the members)]. A third way it may elect to wind up and dissolve is by approval of the board alone if any of the following are true:

- The corporation was the subject of an order for relief in bankruptcy.

- The corporation disposed of all its assets and has not conducted any activity for a period of five years immediately preceding the adoption of the resolution electing to dissolve the corporation.

- The corporation has no members.

- The corporation is required to dissolve under provisions of its articles adopted pursuant to Corp. Code § 9132(a)(2)(A)[Corp. Code § 9680(b)(2)].

If a corporation comes within one of the descriptions in Corp. Code § 9680(b)(2), listed above, and if the number of directors then in office is less than a quorum, it may elect to voluntarily wind up and dissolve by any of the following [Corp. Code § 9680(b)(3)]:

- The unanimous consent of the directors then in office.

- The affirmative vote of a majority of the directors then in office at a meeting held pursuant to valid waiver of notice by those directors. The meeting and waivers must comply with Corp. Code § 9211(a)(3), which provides that notice of a meeting need not be given to a director who provided a waiver of notice or consent to holding the meeting or an approval of the minutes of the meeting in writing, whether before or after the meeting, or who attends the meeting without protesting, prior to the meeting or at its commencement, the lack of notice to that director. These waivers, consents and approvals must be filed with the corporate records or made a part of the minutes of the meeting [Corp. Code § 9211(a)(3)].

- The vote of a sole remaining director.

If a corporation elects to voluntarily wind up and dissolve pursuant to Corp. Code § 9680(b)(3), references to the board will be deemed to be to a board consisting solely of those directors or that sole director, and action by the board will require at least the same consent or vote as would be required under Corp. Code § 9680(b)(3) for an election to wind up and dissolve [Corp. Code § 9680(b)(4)].

If necessary for the protection of the assets of the corporation, the superior court of the proper county may take jurisdiction over the winding-up proceeding as provided in Corp. Code § 9680(c). The powers and duties of the directors during the proceeding are set out in Corp. Code § 9680(d).

After determining that all the known debts and liabilities of the corporation have been paid or adequately provided for, the corporation's assets must be disposed of in conformity with its articles or bylaws subject to complying with either the provisions of any trust under which such assets are held [Corp. Code § 9680(e)(1)] or any valid condition requiring return, transfer, or conveyance that occurs or will occur by reason of the dissolution [Corp. Code §§ 6715, 9680(e)(1)]. This disposition must be made by a decree of the superior court of the proper county on petition of any person concerned in the dissolution, with 30 days' notice to the Attorney General [Corp. Code § 9680(e)(2)]. If the Attorney General makes a written waiver of objections to the disposition, a court decree is not required [Corp. Code § 9680(e)(3)].

[1] Separation of Church and State

[a] Generally

To pass scrutiny of U.S. Const., amend. I, primary effect of statute must neither advance nor inhibit religion and must not foster excessive entanglement of government with religion. Estate of Thornton v. Caldor, Inc. (1985) 472 U.S. 703, 708-709, 105 S. Ct. 2914, 86 L. Ed. 2d 557

Statute entirely motivated by purpose to endorse or disapprove of religion without any clearly secular purpose violates U.S. Const., amend. I. Wallace v. Jaffree (1985) 472 U.S. 38, 56, 105 S. Ct. 2479, 86 L. Ed. 2d 29

First Amendment requires governmental neutrality, not advancement or inhibition of religion. Abington School Dist. v. Schempp (1963) 374 U.S. 203, 222, 83 S. Ct. 1560, 10 L. Ed. 2d 844

"Ministerial exception" to Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.) did not bar claim of sexual harassment by novice against Jesuit order and novice's superiors; although ministerial exception insulates religious organization's employment decisions regarding its ministers from judicial scrutiny under Title VII, Title VII applies without constitutionally compelled exception when defendant church is neither exercising its constitutionally protected prerogative to choose its ministers nor embracing behavior at issue as constitutionally protected religious practice. Bollard v. The California Province of the Society of Jesus (9th Cir. 1999) 196 F.3d 940, 947-948

Court could entertain copyright dispute between two Sufi religious organizations, when although parties disputed whether order is hierarchical and whether hierarchical decision was made identifying and investing teacher, resolution of these questions would not necessarily require court to transgress First Amendment boundaries, and when relief was sought for trademark infringement and false designation of origin under Lanham Act (15 U.S.C. §§ 1114, 1125(a)) and tortious conversion of books and materials taken from its possession by defendants when they left plaintiffs' organization, which are susceptible to decision by neutral principals; however, request to enjoin defendants from representing that "the Order ceased to exist with the death of the Forty-First Teacher, and that they are teachers or masters of the Order" cannot be decided by neutral principals. Maktab Tarighe Oveyssi Shah Maghsoudi, Inc. v. Kianfar (9th Cir. 1999) 179 F.3d 1244, 1247-1250

Trial court did not impermissibly intrude into ecclesiastical matters of Sikh temple by finding that temple's bylaws did not specify directors' terms of office, ruling that directors had one-year term pursuant to Corp. Code § 9220(b), ordering election pursuant to Corp. Code § 9418(c) when doing so was secular in purpose, no religious authority had spoken on the issue, and elections had been held in the past, and requiring that record of membership be maintained pursuant to Corp. Code § 9510(a)(3), which ensured fair election and did not result in excessive entanglement with religion. Singh v. Singh (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1264, 1274-1295, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 4

In dispute between two factions of church over who was rightful owner of parish property, question of which faction represents "true" church entitled to property is ecclesiastical matter in which civil courts may not meddle. *Metropolitan Philip v. Establishment and free exercise clauses of U.S. Constitution, Amend. I bar judicial review in lawsuit alleging church-affiliated university modified terms of employment of campus chaplain in violation of Fair Employment and Housing Act, Gov. Code § 12900 et seq. (FEHA); First Amendment guarantees right to religious institution to decide matters affecting ministers' employment free from scrutiny and second-guessing of civil courts. Schmoll v. Chapman University (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 426

[i] Defined

Meaning of "establishment of religion" clause of First Amendment. Everson v. Board of Education (1946) 330 U.S. 1, 15-16, 67 S. Ct. 504, 91 L. Ed. 711

Not any benefit bestowed by government on religion qualifies as establishment. Variety of benefits have been bestowed by government on religious practices, including government paying for chaplains to pray for Congress, presidents proclaiming days of prayer and of thanksgiving to god, hundreds of millions of dollars spent annually to fund chaplains for armed forces and for holy books and supplies used in acts of worship, payment of chaplains by state Legislatures, subsidy of buildings of worship by tax exemption, provisions in draft law exempting from service members of historic Pence Churches, and discrimination in favor of total pacifists upheld even when it appeared as religious discrimination disfavoring conscientious objection to unjust war. Kong v. Scully (9th Cir. 2003) 341 F.3d 1132, 1138-1139

[ii] Court Analysis

In Establishment Clause action based on counties' displays of Ten Commandments on courthouse walls, determination of counties' purpose was sound basis for ruling on complaints, and whether evaluation of counties' claim of secular purpose for ultimate displays could take their evolution into account. Counties' manifest objective could be dispositive of constitutional enquiry, and development of presentation should have been considered when determining its purpose. Thus, trial court properly granted preliminary injunction ordering removal of displays on finding of predominantly religious purpose. McCreary County v. ACLU (2005) 545 U.S. 844, 125 S. Ct. 2722, 2732-2745, 162 L. Ed. 2d 729

Institution's explicit corporate ties to particular religious faith, and fact that it has policies prohibiting any deviation from religious doctrine, are relevant factors in determining whether institution is "pervasively sectarian" and ineligible to receive government funding; such factors are not conclusive, and court's conclusion that such institutions are "religious organizations" is not equivalent to finding that their secular purposes and religious mission are inextricably intertwined. Bowen v. Kendrick (1988) 487 U.S. 589, 620 n.16, 108 S. Ct. 2562, 101 L. Ed. 2d 520

Whether violation of establishment clause due to excessive government-church entanglements has occurred is determined by three part test: (1) statute must have secular purpose, (2) statute's principal or primary effect must be one that neither advances nor inhibits religion, and (3) statute must not foster excessive government entanglement with religion. EEOC v. Fremont Christian School (9th Cir. 1986) 781 F.2d 1362, 1369, 1369 n.2

[iii] Religious Use of Public Property

In Establishment Clause action based on counties' displays of Ten Commandments on courthouse walls, trial court properly granted preliminary injunction ordering removal of displays on finding of predominantly religious purpose. McCreary County v. ACLU (2005) 545 U.S. 844, 858-881

Public elementary school that opened its facilities for public use for specified purposes had no valid Establishment Clause interest in denial of use of facilities to religious group providing activities for children aged six through 12, when group sought only to be treated neutrally and given access to speak about same topics as other groups, when children could not attend without parents' permission so that they could not be coerced into engaging in group's religious activities even though activities were taking place on school grounds but after school hours, and when Establishment Clause jurisprudence does not foreclose private religious conduct during nonschool hours merely because it takes place on school premises where elementary school children may be present. Good News Club v. Milford Central School (2001) 533 U.S. 98, 121 S. Ct. 2093, 150 L. Ed. 2d 151

Federal government's distribution of funds to state and local governmental agencies as part of longstanding school aid program known as Chapter 2, which in turn lend educational materials and equipment to public and private schools, many of which are religiously affiliated, does not violate Establishment Clause, when Chapter 2 has undisputed secular purpose, and neither results in religious indoctrination by government nor defines its recipients by reference to religion. Mitchell v. Helms (2000) 530 U.S. 793, 120 S. Ct. 2530, 147 L. Ed. 2d 660

Denial, by school that lets other groups use facilities after school hours, of religious group's request violates religious group's free speech rights if based on anticipated religious standpoint of meeting; school's allowing use of facilities would not amount to violation of establishment clause. Lamb's Chapel v. Center Moriches (1993) 508 U.S. 384, 390-397, 113 S. Ct. 2141, 124 L. Ed. 2d 352

Display of creche in county courthouse violates establishment clause because it went beyond acknowledgement of Christmas as cultural event and amounted to endorsement of Christian message in banner that was part of display. Allegheny County v. Greater Pittsburg ACLU (1989) 492 U.S. 573, 621, 109 S. Ct. 3086, 106 L. Ed. 2d 472 ; but see Lynch v. Donnelly (1984) 465 U.S. 668, 685-686, 104 S. Ct. 1355, 79 L. Ed. 2d 604 (city's creche display in park did not violate establishment clause); Kreisner v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1993) 988 F.2d 883, 896-898 (city allowing private committee to display biblical scenes in public park with disclaimer that display was privately sponsored and not allied with city did not violate establishment clause)

First Amendment prohibits use of governmental organs for essentially religious purposes. Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church (1969) 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S. Ct. 601, 21 L. Ed. 2d 658

School district did not violate Equal Access Act by denying student Bible club recognition as student association club under district's non-discrimination policy because of club's restriction of membership to Christian students, where requirement that members possess true desire to grow in relationship with Jesus Christ inherently excluded non-Christians, and where district's denial of recognition on that account was consistent with Act, because district's non-discrimination policies were content-neutral. However, to extent club alleged district provided waivers to some groups while denying them to others, and that decision was made on basis of religion or religious content of speech, club raised triable issue of fact. Truth v. Kent School District (9th Cir. 2008) 542 F.3d 634, 643-648

School district's denial of recognition of organization attempting to form Bible club at high school as school-sponsored group was restriction on limited public forum, where members did not seek merely to associate as group, but, instead, sought to associate as school-sponsored group, giving organization access to district funds, additional access to school's property and facilities, and special rights to post materials around school; school district's denial of access to organization based on organization's failure to comply with district's nondiscrimination policy did not violate organization's First Amendment rights, where policy of restricting access to forum based on compliance with its non-discrimination policy was viewpoint neutral and reasonable in light of purposes of forum, and where denial not based on organization's religious viewpoint but on its refusal to comply with non-discrimination policy was not viewpoint discrimination. Truth v. Kent School District (9th Cir. 2008) 524 F.3d 957, 971-973

City's display of six-foot-tall granite monument inscribed with Ten Commandments on grounds of city hall did not violate Establishment Clause, where purpose of monument was primarily secular, where setting of monument suggested little or nothing of sacred, and where there was historic lack of complaints about monument. Card v. City of Everett (9th Cir. 2008) 520 F.3d 1009, 1013-1021

District court did not abuse its discretion in enjoining government from proceeding with land exchange under federal law allowing land in federal preserve on which Latin cross was situated to be transferred to private organization in exchange for parcel of privately owned land located elsewhere in preserve to allow display of cross and ordering the government to otherwise comply with its prior injunction that it not permit display of cross in preserve, where government retained various rights of control over cross and property; method of sale by which federal law transferred property to private buyer was outside normal procedures for transfer of parklands, demonstrating government's unusual involvement in transaction; government's long-standing efforts to preserve and maintain cross led to conclusion that government's purpose was to evade injunction and keep cross in place; and improper governmental endorsement of religion had not ceased. Buono v. Kempthorne (9th Cir. 2007) 502 F.3d 1069, 1081-1086

Forest Service's decision to ban rock climbing on site of cultural, historic, and archaeologically significance to Native American tribe and to public did not violate Establishment Clause, where Establishment Clause did not bar government from protecting historically and culturally important site simply because site's importance derived at least in part from its sacredness to certain groups. Access Fund v. United States Dep't of Agric. (9th Cir. 2007) 499 F.3d 1036, 1042-1046

City's lease with organization to operate homeless shelter violated Establishment Clause, where, although city leased shelter for valid secular purpose of providing shelter to homeless, not to promote religion, lease of shelter had effect of advancing religion because lease provided organization with publicly financed facility in which to spread its religious message by allowing organization to give instruction in and imbuing residents in attendance at chapel service with tenets of Christianity, even assuming attendance at chapel service was voluntary. Community House, Inc. v. City of Boise (9th Cir. 2006) 468 F.3d 1118, 1128-1134

County's policy and practice to prohibit use of public library meeting room for religious worship services (while allowing use for religion-related purposes other than worship) was permissible on ground of preserving intended purpose of that meeting room as limited public forum. Faith Ctr. Church Evangelistic Ministries v. Glover (9th Cir. 2006) 462 F.3d 1194, 1204

Presence of Latin cross on federally owned land in national preserve managed by National Park Service violated

Establishment Clause. Latin cross is preeminent symbol of Christianity and is exclusively Christian symbol and not symbol of any other religion. Cross sits on publicly owned land, Park Service has not opened site to other permanent displays nor are there other displays, religious or otherwise, in area, Park Service previously denied third-party request to erect Buddhist stupa near cross, and federal law prohibited Park Service from spending money to remove cross, so that cross would project message of government endorsement to reasonable observer. Remote location of cross made no difference because national parklands and preserves embody notion of government ownership as much as urban parkland. Reasonable observer would still perceive cross site as public land despite proximity of two private ranches and several corrals within two miles of cross, because reasonable observer would know that location was federally owned and given ratio of publicly owned to privately owned land in preserve and use to which area was put, and less well-informed reasonable observer would still believe or at least suspect cross rested on public land. Lastly, reasonable observer aware of history of cross, such as its placement by private individuals, would still believe government was endorsing Christianity by allowing cross to remain at site, because reasonable observer who was that well-informed would know full history of cross, including that Congress designated cross as war memorial and prohibited use of funds to remove it and Park Service denied similar access for expression by adherent of Buddhist faith, demonstrating government preference for one particular sect or creed including a preference for Christianity over other religions. Buono v. Norton (9th Cir. 2004) 371 F.3d 543, 548-550

School district's policy restricting student religious group's access to student/staff time, school supplies, vehicles, or AV equipment, violated First Amendment, when, while not required to grant student clubs access to these benefits, school had chosen to do so and could not deny access to some groups without compelling government interest that was narrowly drawn to achieve that end, when district's restriction on access to facilities was based purely on religious group's religious viewpoint in violation of First Amendment, and when requiring that district grant religious groups access would ensure neutrality rather than violate Establishment Clause. Prince v. Jacoby (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1074, 1078-1094

Condition imposed by public college on pro-life demonstrators to refrain from religious worship or instruction, was content-based regulation which was not required by Establishment Clause to maintain separation of church and state, since First Amendment does not require public institutions to exclude religious speech from fora held open to secular speakers. Orin v. Barclay (9th Cir. 2001) 272 F.3d 1207, 1215-1216

Any violation of private party's free speech rights under Cal. Const., art. I, § 2 in public school's rejection of sign featuring Ten Commandments and including no mention of party's business, submitted by party in response to fund-raising solicitation for commercial advertisements to be posted on school's baseball field, is outweighed by establishment clause considerations embodied in Cal. Const., art. I, § 4; school district's termination of fund-raising program was also reasonable in response to litigation brought by party. DiLoreto v. Board of Educ. of Downey Unif. Sch. Dist. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 267, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 791

Seventy-five-year lease of college district property to religious congregation is governed by Educ. Code § 81360, not Educ. Code § 82530, and did not violate Establishment Clauses; ordinary commercial lessor prerogatives of district in approving improvements and subleases did not amount to prohibited entanglement. Woodland Hills Homeowners Organization v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 79, 90-95, 266 Cal. Rptr. 767

[iv] Religious Use of Public Funds

Ohio pilot program providing financial assistance to families in any school district under federal court order requiring supervision and operational management of district by state superintendent by providing tuition aid for students in kindergarten through third grade to attend participating public or private school of their parent's choosing, and tutorial aid for students who choose to remain enrolled in public school does not have forbidden effect of advancing or inhibiting religion in violation of Establishment Clause, because it is program of true private choice, by being neutral in all respects toward religion. Zelman v. Simmons-Harris (2002) 536 U.S. 639, 648-653, 662-663, 122 S. Ct. 2460, 153 L. Ed. 2d 604

Federally funded program providing supplemental, remedial instruction to disadvantaged children on neutral basis is not invalid under Establishment Clause when instruction is given on premises of sectarian schools by government employees under program containing safeguards such as those present in New York City's Title I program. Agostini v. Felton (1997) 521 U.S. 203, 117 S. Ct. 1997, 138 L. Ed. 2d 391

Extension of aid under state's vocational rehabilitation program to finance blind student's training at Christian college to become pastor, missionary, or youth director, does not advance religion in manner inconsistent with Establishment Clause of U.S. Const., amend. I. Witters v. Wash. Dept. of Serv. for Blind (1986) 474 U.S. 481, 489, 106 S. Ct. 748, 88 L. Ed. 2d 846

Amendments to Medicare and Medicaid allowing payments for nonmedical care of persons who rejected medical care based on religious beliefs did not constitute establishment of religion in violation of First Amendment, when amendments did not advance religion; delegation of governmental power without standards to institutions identified by their religious rejection of medicine is not unconstitutional establishment of religion. Kong v. Scully (9th Cir. 2003) 341 F.3d 1132, 1137-1141

City's decision not to use tax funds and public employees to provide stage lighting, sound, and other special-event services for events in direct support of religious organizations and specifically for sectarian religious organization's prayer service held in bandshell of public park did not run afoul of First Amendment's proscription against abridging freedom of speech; government could decline to subsidize private religious speech when doing so would violate Establishment Clause and use of general tax revenue to fund religious activity to raise money that could be used to fund religious organization in future, and fact that observer might conclude that expenditure from civic events fund for religious organization would perceive it as state endorsement of religion, were circumstances pointing to Establishment Clause violation if city were to use its resources in way sought by religious organization, and when denial of financial subsidies to religious organizations did not substantially burden Free Exercise rights so as to require court's alteration of its Establishment Clause analysis. Gentala v. City of Tucson (9th Cir. 2001) 244 F.3d 1065

Rejection of use of city funds to cover costs of in-kind services provided by city to local observance of National Prayer Day from fund established by city to encourage civic events was not justified by Establishment Clause, when fund undeniably serves secular interest and does not have primary or principal effect of advancing religion; when support that would be provided by covering costs for observance would be neither substantial nor direct enough to amount to advancement of religion under Establishment Clause; when event was opened to public and fact that it might have been organized for and sponsored by particular religious group did not create Establishment Clause violation; when money from fund is not paid directly to event's sponsors, but are paid to relevant city departments providing services and city maintains control over what services will be covered by fund so that services are incidental benefit that can be provided to religious group without violating Establishment Clause; when allowing religious groups to participate as beneficiaries of otherwise neutral programs fosters nation's commitment to freedom of expression and to religious liberty without raising specter of state-sanctioned or -funded church; when presence of city employees operating lighting and sound equipment did not create city's imprimatur that could be mistakenly interpreted as speech of the city; and when fund's requirement that event acknowledge through event advertising and announcement during event that city has contributed services to event was insufficient to demonstrate that city endorsed National Day of Prayer event as city expression. Gentala v. City of Tucson (9th Cir. 2000) 213 F.3d 1055, 1066-1071

Proposals for issuance of tax-exempt bonds for benefit of religious schools violated Cal. Const., art. XVI, § 5, when pervasively sectarian colleges involved were without doubt controlled by religious creed, church, or sectarian denomination, nature of benefit being provided to school appropriately took into consideration nature of school, and bond financing scheme helped to support or sustain colleges; and when it did not matter that no public funds were used in connection with conduit financing, which allowed schools to finance projects at lower cost than they could through conventional financing, because it was form of aid within meaning of art. XVI, § 5. California Statewide Communities Development Authority v. All Persons Interested etc. (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 877, 893-903, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803

[v] State Support of Religious Views

Father who shared physical custody but did not have legal custody of daughter lacked prudential standing to challenge school district's policy of requiring students, including daughter, to recite Pledge of Allegiance, containing words "under God," as violating daughter's First Amendment rights under Establishment Clause, because it is improper for federal courts to entertain claim by plaintiff whose standing to sue was founded on family law rights in dispute when prosecution of lawsuit could have adverse effect on person, in this case daughter, who was source of plaintiff's claimed standing. Elk Grove Unified School District v. Newdow (2004) 542 U.S. 1, 124 S. Ct. 2301, 2308-2312, 159 L. Ed. 2d 98

Statutes requiring placement of national motto, "In God We Trust," on coins and currency [31 U.S.C. §§ 5112(d)(1), 5114(b)] did not violate Establishment Clause, where national motto and slogan on coinage and currency "In God We Trust" had nothing to do with establishment of religion, but, rather, its use was of patriotic or ceremonial character and bore no true resemblance to governmental sponsorship of a religious exercise. Newdow v. Lefevre (9th Cir. 2010) 598 F.3d 638, 643-645

State statute and school district policy requiring teacher-led recitation of Pledge of Allegiance by students in public schools, and Pledge itself, did not constitute establishment of religion prohibited by United States Constitution, where there was no excessive entanglement with religion, primary effect was neither to advance nor inhibit religion, and Congress' purpose in enacting Pledge was patriotic, not to try to impress religious doctrine upon anyone; where Pledge did not violate Endorsement Test, i.e., did not have purpose or effect of endorsing, favoring, or promoting religion; where recitation of Pledge in public school classroom, which was not compelled, did not unconstitutionally coerce objecting students into affirming belief in God; and where "under God" was added as description of "one Nation" primarily to reinforce idea that U.S. was founded upon concept of limited government, in stark contrast to unlimited power exercised by communist governments. Newdow v. Rio Linda Union Sch. Dist. (9th Cir. 2010) 597 F.3d 1007, 1017-1042

State scholarship tax credit program, granting income tax credits to taxpayers who made contributions to nonprofit organizations awarding private school scholarships to children, some of which restricted availability of scholarships to religious schools, violated Establishment Clause even though state did not directly decide whether particular sectarian organizations would receive program aid, where program lacked religious neutrality and true private choice in making scholarships available to parents, and, although scholarship aid was allocated partially through individual choices of taxpayers, overall program in practice carried with it imprimatur of government endorsement. Winn v. Arizona Christian School Tuition Organization (9th Cir. 2009) 562 F.3d 1002, 1011-1023

Trial court properly dismissed complaint by private mining company alleging that state officials' policy against use in state construction projects of materials mined from area as to which Native American tribes passed resolutions against mining because of area's religious, cultural, and historical significance to these groups, violated its rights under Establishment Clause. Policy had secular purpose of carrying out state construction projects in manner that did not harm site of religious, historical, and cultural importance to several Native American groups and nation as whole. In addition, policy did not advance religion, but rather implemented state department of transportation's decision that state construction projects should be carried out so as not to interfere with tribes' religious practices or destroy religious sites that have historical significance. Further, consulting with tribes in process of evaluating mining company's application to mine materials was not excessive entanglement because tribes were not solely religious in character or purpose but were ethnic and cultural in character as well, and company did not allege that government officials participated in tribes' religious practices, inquired about substance of their religious views, or monitored their religious practices. Cholla Ready Mix, Inc. v. Civish (9th Cir. 2004) 382 F.3d 969, 975-977

Manner in which city structured sale of half acre parcel under Latin cross, which had been part of public park and remained surrounded by park, directly, immediately, and substantially aided sectarian purpose of preserving cross in violation of Cal. Const., art. XVI, § 5, when structure of sale provided financial incentive to maintain cross. Paulson v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 2002) 294 F.3d 1124, 1132

City's sale of half acre parcel under Latin cross, which had been part of public park and remained surrounded by park, which sale solicited non-profit corporations interested in purchasing parcel for purpose of maintaining historic war memorial, did not demonstrate unconstitutional preference and aid to Christian religion, when sale was conducted in publicized and open bidding process and city accepted highest bid, and when open and public bidding process, which could have resulted in sale of property to someone who would have removed cross made strong showing of government's lack of preference of religion in imposing use restriction of maintaining war memorial, which did not conflict with Establishment Clause; further, enhanced demarcation of site as private property rectified any potential appearance of preference for religion. Paulson v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 2001) 262 F.3d 885

Removal of minister as member of city's Human Rights Commission for public comments explicitly condemning homosexuality as sin and implicitly endorsing violence against homosexuals did not violate Establishment Clause by endorsing religious faith that interprets scripture less literally than minister's, when mayor's press releases announcing removal of minister consistently acknowledged minister's right to adhere to his religious faith and stressed secular reasons for removal as being public comments that negatively influenced operation of Commission or suggested justification for actions leading to violence. Lumpkin v. Brown (9th Cir. 1997) 109 F.3d 1498, 1502

Bond financing agreements between public entity and three religiously affiliated, pervasively sectarian schools likely to include religious perspective in their teachings, which expressly prohibited use of bond proceeds for specified religious purposes and provided that funds for projects would not come from government entity but from private sector purchasers of bonds, and that no public entity would have any obligation on bonds in event of default by schools, did not violate Cal. Const., art. XVI, § 5 or First Amendment establishment Clause, where inquiry centered on substance of education provided by three schools, not on their religious character, when whether schools were pervasively sectarian was not controlling factor in determining validity of bond funding program; when each of recipient schools offered broad curriculum in secular subjects and schools' secular classes consisted of information and coursework that was neutral with respect to religion, ensuring that state's interest in promoting intellectual improvement of its residents was advanced through teaching of secular information and coursework, and expression of religious viewpoint in otherwise secular classes would provide benefit to religion that was merely incidental to bond program's primary purpose of promoting secular education. California Statewide Communities Development Authority v. All Persons Interested etc. (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 788, 798-812

Gov. Code §§ 25373(d), 37361(c), which have effect of granting exemption from landmark preservation laws to noncommercial property owned by religious organization that objects to landmark designation and determines in public form that organization would suffer substantial hardship if property were designated historic landmark, are not facially invalid under establishment clause of U.S. Const., amend. I or Cal. Const., art. I, § 4. East Bay Asian Local Development Corp. v. State of California (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 693, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280, 13 P.3d 1122

City's transfer of land that had been city park with memorial to war veterans, including Latin cross, to federal government did not violate First Amendment establishment clause or Cal. Const., art. I, § 4, when in offering to accept transfer of property, nothing in language or explanation of federal policy indicated agreement to keep cross as part of memorial; when transfer to federal government mandated by public vote did not evidence city's advancement of religion; and when there was no excessive entanglement because effect of public vote was termination of city's control and maintenance of property, and donation was not grossly out of norm of reasonable regulation of city parkland inasmuch as donation succeeded in transferring site for continuing use as parkland. Transfer also did not violate Cal. Const., art. XVI, § 5, where city charter authorized transfer of entire site to another public entity and donation for parkland was not gift of public funds, transfer appropriated no public funds for any sectarian purpose, and city offered no financial incentive in donation for federal government to either maintain or remove cross. Paulson v. Abdelnour (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 400, 419-437, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 575

Excessive entanglement of state with religion as result of political entanglement, characterized by potential for political divisiveness based on differences in religious views; abortion is emotionally explosive political issue and appearance of support by state of one side of controversy is improper political entanglement. Feminist Women's Health Center, Inc. v. Philibosian (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 1076, 1091-1092, 203 Cal. Rptr. 918 , cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1052 (district attorney's delivery of fetuses for burial marked by religious memorial service held unconstitutional)

[vi] Invocation Opening Session of Deliberative Body

Nebraska legislature's practice of opening each legislative session with an invocation did not violate the Establishment Clause; when there is an historical tradition of solemnizing sessions of deliberative public bodies with prayer, opening legislative session with prayer does not present real danger of establishing religion, and audience to which prayer was directed were adults and presumably not susceptible to religious indoctrination or peer pressure. Marsh v. Chambers (1983) 463 U.S. 783, 103 S. Ct. 3330, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1019

Opening of school board meetings with sectarian invocation does not violate Establishment Clause, when, although school board conducts business of public schools, school board meeting does not cause heightened concerns regarding children found in school related contexts, when main purpose of a school board meeting is to conduct the business of the public schools, and when plaintiffs are adults who voluntarily attend Board meetings as individuals and in their capacity as officers of teacher's association, and, as adults, are not susceptible to religious indoctrination or coercion, underlying dangers recognized by United States Supreme Court in its decisions prohibiting prayer at school functions. Bacus v. Palo Verde Unified Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ. (C.D. Cal. 1998) 11 F. Supp. 2d 1192

Invocation given at Burbank City Council meeting, ending with expression of gratitude and love "in the name of Jesus Christ" violated Establishment Clause of First Amendment of United States Constitution, and trial court's order granting injunctive and declaratory relief, ordering city to advise anyone conducting prayer as part of City Council meeting that sectarian prayers are not permitted, did not constitute censorship or viewpoint discrimination under Free Speech and Exercise Clauses. Rubin v. City of Burbank (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1194, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 867

[vii] Application of State Employment Laws to Churches or Church-Affiliated Institutions

Applying prohibition against employment discrimination in California's Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA), Gov. Code § 12900 et seq. to church-affiliated university in employment dispute with campus minister runs afoul of Establishment Clause, when application of FEHA to university would foster an excessive government entanglement with religion, in violation of Establishment Clause. Schmoll v. Chapman University (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1440-1442, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 426

[viii] Government Hostility to Religion or Belief

Adoption by city board of supervisor of non-binding resolution in response to directive from Catholic cardinal instructing city's archdiocese that Catholic social services agencies should not place children in need of adoption with gay or lesbian couples, urging cardinal, in his capacity as head of Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith at Vatican, to withdraw directive did not violate Establishment Clause by expressing disapproval of and hostility toward Catholic religion, where board's purpose in criticizing directive was not disapproval of religious doctrine, but rather call for non-discrimination in adoption of children, and it was well within board's secular purview to promote adoptions of children by same-sex couples and denounce discrimination for general welfare of society; where promotion of same-sex adoption, not disapproval or inhibition of Catholic religion, was reasonably understood as primary message conveyed by resolution; and where non-binding resolution did not foster excessive entanglement. Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2009) 567 F.3d 595, 599-608 , reh'g granted, 586 F. 3d. 1166 (2009)

Establishment Clause claim of religious Christian county employee allegedly forced to have daily contact with county seal changed to remove cross was without merit, where county's removal of cross had secular purpose as governmental action taken to avoid potential Establishment Clause violations, reasonable view of removal of cross was as effort to restore neutrality and ensure continued compliance with Establishment Clause rather than hostility to religion, and plaintiff failed to allege excessive entanglement because he alleged only social and political divisiveness. Vasquez v. Los Angeles County (9th Cir. 2007) 487 F.3d 1246, 1254-1258

In action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for violation of Establishment Clause against city and county based on resolution urging Alabama lawmakers to extend hate crimes legislation to include offenses related to sexual orientation, resolution urging local television stations not to broadcast advertising campaigns aimed at "converting" homosexuals, and letter to plaintiffs who had sponsored advertising campaign regarding homosexuality formally disapproving campaign, trial court properly dismissed Establishment Clause claim, when, although resolutions and letter appeared to contain attacks on plaintiffs' religious views, there was also plausible governmental purpose in protecting gays and lesbians from violence; when primary effect of first resolution was denouncement of hate crimes and call for action by Alabama Legislature, and primary effect of second resolution and letter, although aimed directly at plaintiffs and containing statements from which it could be inferred that governmental actors were hostile to religious view that homosexuality is sinful or immoral, read in context as whole, they were primarily geared toward promoting equality for gays and discouraging violence against them; and when even if government's actions encouraged political divisiveness along religious lines, political divisiveness is not sufficient to constitute excessive entanglement with religion. American Family v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2002) 277 F.3d 1114, 1121-1123

Atheist had standing to challenge federal statutes that required inscription of "In God We Trust" on coins and currency [31 U.S.C. §§ 5112(d)(1), 5114(b)], where he alleged, given ubiquity of coins and currency in everyday life, placement of "In God We Trust" on nation's money forced him repeatedly to encounter religious belief he found offensive, and spiritual harm resulting from unwelcome direct contact with allegedly offensive religious (or anti-religious) symbol is legally cognizable injury and suffices to confer Article III standing; and where unwelcome contact with national motto was caused by statutes requiring placement of motto on coins and currency, and was redressable by injunction ordering removal of motto from coins and currency; that his encounters with motto were common to all Americans did not defeat his standing, because he alleged concrete, particularized, and personal injury resulting from his frequent, unwelcome contact with motto. However, the standing to challenge 36 U.S.C. § 302, which merely recognized "In God We Trust" as national motto, but did not authorize or require inscription of motto on any object, where, without 31 U.S.C. §§ 5112 and 5114, motto would not have appeared on coins and currency, and atheist would have lacked unwelcome direct contact with motto giving rise to his injury-in-fact; abstract stigmatic injury resulting from outsider status was insufficient to confer standing, and claims of personal injury caused by refusal of job because of misperception of his activism and inability to obtain elected office were insufficient to establish standing, where he could not show injuries were traceable to defendants, and not to actions of third parties who were not before court. Newdow v. Lefevre (9th

Cir. 2010) 598 F.3d 638, 642-643

Parent of children in state public schools, who asserted interest in being informed about how teachers teach theory of evolution in biology classes, did not have standing to pursue Establishment Clause claim arising out of her offense at discussion of religious views on "Understanding Evolution" website created and maintained by state university museum of paleontology and funded in part by National Science Foundation on ground that website endorsed beliefs holding that religion was compatible with evolutionary theory and disapproving beliefs, such as parent's, to contrary, thereby exposing her to government-endorsed religious messages and making her feel like outsider, where harm asserted by parent to her interest in being informed about teaching of evolutionary theory was too generalized and remote to confer standing against faculty who administered website and developed its content on behalf of museum. Caldwell v. Caldwell (9th Cir. 2008) 545 F.3d 1126, 1131-1133

Religious Christian county employee allegedly forced to have daily contact with county seal changed to remove cross alleged legally cognizable injury arising out of his frequent regular contact with seal sufficient to confer standing to sue. Vasquez v. Los Angeles County (9th Cir. 2007) 487 F.3d 1246, 1249-1253

[c] Free Exercise Clause

[i] Defined

Free exercise of religion clause affords individual protection from certain forms of governmental compulsion; free exercise clause does not require government to conduct its own internal affairs in ways that comport with religious beliefs of particular citizens. Lyng v. Northwest Indian Cemetery Protective Ass'n (1988) 485 U.S. 439, 448-449, 108 S. Ct. 1319, 99 L. Ed. 2d 534

[ii] Court Analysis

Court cannot determine truth of underlying beliefs that lead to religious objections to challenged governmental action and cannot weigh adverse effects of that action on certain persons and compare them with adverse effects of another such action on other persons; without ability to make comparisons, court is unable to say that one form of incidental interference with individual's spiritual activities should be subjected to different constitutional analysis than another. Lyng v. Northwest Indian Cemetery Protective Ass'n (1988) 485 U.S. 439, 449-450, 108 S. Ct. 1319, 99 L. Ed. 2d 534

Plaintiff does not allege hybrid-rights claim entitled to strict scrutiny analysis merely by combining free exercise claim with utterly meritless claim of violation of another alleged fundamental right or claim of alleged violation of a nonfundamental or nonexistent right. Miller v. Reed (9th Cir. 1999) 176 F.3d 1202, 1208

Whether neutrally based statute violates free exercise clause is determined by weighing three factors: (1) magnitude of statute's impact on exercise of religious belief, (2) existence of compelling state interest justifying burden imposed on exercise of religious belief, and (3) extent to which recognition of exemption from statute would impede objectives sought to be advanced by statute. EEOC v. Fremont Christian School (9th Cir. 1986) 781 F.2d 1362, 1367

[iii] Government Interference

Under Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993, federal government could not bar small American branch of Christian Spiritist sect with origins in Amazon Rainforest from receiving communion by drinking sacramental tea, brewed from hoasca, which is plant unique to Amazon region containing hallucinogen regulated under Controlled Substances Act. Practice was sincere exercise of religion, which federal government sought to prohibit on ground Controlled Substances Act barred all use of hallucinogen, and government failed to demonstrate that burden on sect's religious exercise represented least restrictive means of advancing compelling interest in uniform application of Controlled Substances Act. Gonzales v. O Centro Espirita Beneficente Uniao do Vegetal (2006) 546 U.S. 418, 427-437, 126 S. Ct. 1211, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1017

Under State of Washington's Constitution, which has been authoritatively interpreted as prohibiting even indirectly funding religious instruction that will prepare students for the ministry, state could deny students pursuing degrees in devotional theology state scholarship without violating Free Exercise Clause, when nothing in history or text of Washington's Constitution or in operation of scholarship program suggested animus towards religion. Locke v. Davey (2004) 540 U.S. 712, 717-725, 124 S. Ct. 1307, 1311-1315, 158 L. Ed. 2d 1

Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA) is unconstitutional as improper exercise of Congress' remedial or preventive power; stringent test RFRA demands of state laws reflects lack of proportionality or congruence between means adopted and legitimate end to be achieved, and is considerable congressional intrusion into states' traditional prerogatives and general authority to regulate for health and welfare of their citizens. City of Boerne v. Flores (1997) 521 U.S. 507, 117 S. Ct. 2157, 138 L. Ed. 2d 624

Protection that U.S. Const., amend. I provides to legitimate claims to free exercise of religion does not extend to conduct that state has validly proscribed; when drug abuse counselors, discharged after they ingested peyote for sacramental purposes during religious ceremony, were denied unemployment benefits, determination of whether their rights were violated required initial determination of whether their conduct was legal under state law. Employment Division v. Smith (1988) 485 U.S. 660, 672, 108 S. Ct. 1444, 99 L. Ed. 2d 753

Incidental effects of government programs that may make it more difficult to practice certain religions but that have no tendency to coerce individuals into acting contrary to their beliefs does not require government to bring forward compelling justification for its otherwise lawful actions. Lyng v. N.W. Indian Cemetery Prot. Ass. (1988) 485 U.S. 439, 450, 108 S. Ct. 1319, 99 L. Ed. 2d 534

Free exercise clause is written in terms of what government cannot do to individual, not in terms of what individual can extract from government, and it does not require government to conduct its own internal affairs in ways that comport with religious beliefs of particular citizens. Bowen v. Roy (1986) 476 U.S. 693, 699-700, 106 S. Ct. 2147, 90 L. Ed. 2d 735 (administration of food stamps based on social security number of recipients did not violate religious belief of American Indian opposing assignment of number to individual; plurality opinion)

Investigation by state civil rights commission did not violate First Amendment rights of nonprofit private religious school because elimination of prohibited sex discrimination is sufficiently important state interest to warrant investigation, even if only to ascertain whether ascribed religious-based reason was in fact reason for discharge of pregnant teacher. Ohio Civil Rights Comm'n v. Dayton Schools (1986) 477 U.S. 619, 628, 106 S. Ct. 2718, 91 L. Ed. 2d 512

Parents have right to exercise of religion in choice of schooling, including home schooling, for children. Wisconsin v. Yoder (1972) 406 U.S. 205, 92 S. Ct. 1526, 32 L. Ed. 2d 15 ; Peterson v. Minidoka County Sch. Dist. No. 331 (9th Cir. 1997) 132 F.3d 1258

Rules promulgated by state Board of Pharmacy requiring pharmacies to deliver lawfully prescribed Federal Drug Administration-approved medications and prohibiting discrimination against patients did not violate Free Exercise rights of pharmacy and pharmacists by requiring delivery of contraceptive that pharmacy owners and pharmacists claimed was against their religious beliefs, when rules were facially neutral as they made no reference to any religious practice, conduct, or motivation; where rules operated neutrally and did not suppress, target, or single out practice of any religion because of religious content, and fact that rules could affect pharmacists who objected to contraceptive for religious reasons did not undermine their neutrality; when, by adopting means/ends test instead of underinclusiveness analysis for general applicability, district court committed legal error, because means/ends test was, in essence, version of intermediate scrutiny under which regulation had to be substantially related to important governmental objective, which was incorrect level of scrutiny; when, utilizing correct legal standard, new rules were generally applicable because they were not substantially underinclusive because there was no evidence state pursued its interests only against conduct with religious motivation; and when district court failed to give proper weight to rules' distinction between pharmacies and pharmacists by allowing individual pharmacists to refuse to dispense contraceptive on religious ground by making it duty of pharmacy, not pharmacist, to deliver lawfully prescribed drugs, and rules provided for religious accommodation by allowing individual pharmacist to decide whether to dispense particular medication based on pharmacist's religious beliefs and pharmacy to continue to employ that pharmacist by making appropriate accommodations. Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109, 1126-1138

Use of artificial snow, made from recycled wastewater, on mountains sacred to Native Americans did not impose substantial burden on free exercise of their religion in violation of Religious Freedom Restoration Act, when presence of recycled wastewater did not coerce plaintiffs to act contrary to their religious beliefs under threat of sanctions, nor did it condition governmental benefit on conduct that would violate their religious beliefs, as required to establish substantial burden on religious exercise under RFRA. Navajo Nation v. United States Forest Service (9th Cir. 2008) 535 F.3d 1058, 1067-1078

School district's uniform dress policies did not violate students' First Amendment rights to free exercise of their religion by forbidding one student from wearing clothes expressing religious beliefs and forcing another to violate anti-conformity teachings of his religion, when policies did implicate Free Exercise clause because they were valid, neutral, and of general applicability. Jacobs v. Clark County Sch. Dist. (9th Cir. 2008) 526 F.3d 419, 439-440

Decision of Federal Energy Regulatory Commission ("FERC") granting public agency license to operate project for another 40 years hydroelectric did not violate Indian tribe's rights under Religious Freedom Restoration Act ("RFRA"), when substantial evidence supported FERC's finding that relicensing decision did not substantially burden tribe's free exercise of religion, and when, although FERC employed wrong standard for analyzing RFRA claims, error was harmless because FERC's standard was more generous to tribe than standard articulated by Ninth Circuit and tribe failed to demonstrate substantial burden that would meet standard. Snoqualmie Indian Tribe v. FERC (9th Cir. 2008) 545 F.3d 1207, 1213-1215

District court erred in finding that compelling criminal defendant to give blood sample for DNA testing could not violate his rights under either Free Exercise Clause or Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA) despite his allegation that his religious beliefs prevented him from giving blood or providing any other biological fluid, where without determining precise scope of defendant's beliefs, district court erroneously held that his beliefs were not religious; on remand, district court had to determine precise scope of beliefs, whether beliefs were religious, whether religious beliefs were sincerely held, whether his exercise of religion would be substantially burdened by giving up DNA sample, and whether requiring him to give up sample is nonetheless permissible as least restrictive means of furthering compelling governmental interest. United States v. Zimmerman (9th Cir. 2007) 514 F.3d 851, 853-855

City's denial of college's rezoning application from use for hospital to college due to failure to comply with city's application requirements did not deprive college of its First Amendment right to free exercise of religion, when incidental burden of city's zoning ordinance applied throughout entire city and there was not even hint that college was targeted on basis of religion for varying treatment in city's application of ordinance; when language of ordinance revealed no content-based orientation and college presented no evidence city enacted or enforced ordinance as pretext for suppressing expression; and when neither ordinance nor city's application of it imposed serious burden on, affected in any significant way, or substantially restrained college's efforts to gather together for purpose of education and worship. San Jose Christian College v. City of Morgan Hill (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1024, 1030-1033

Exclusion of members of unrecognized Indian bands from permit scheme of Bald and Golden Eagle Protection Act [16 U.S.C. § 668 et seq.] allowing members of federally recognized Indian tribes to apply for permits to possess and transport eagles or eagle parts for religious purposes does not violate Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA) [42 U.S.C. § 2000bb et seq.]. Permit program is least restrictive means of achieving compelling governmental interest of protecting eagles, foreclosing any challenge to government's refusal to increase supply beyond that. Further, permit program does not discriminate facially on basis of religion in any way that harms member of unrecognized band, because they are not excluded because of faith. United States v. Antoine (9th Cir. 2003) 318 F.3d 919, 921-924

Passage by city and county of resolution urging Alabama lawmakers to extend hate crimes legislation to include offenses related to sexual orientation and resolution urging local television stations not to broadcast advertising campaigns aimed at "converting" homosexuals, and letter to plaintiffs who had sponsored advertisingcampaign regarding homosexuality formally disapproving campaign did not violate Free Exercise Clause because there was no "law" respecting establishment of religion at issue, and when challenged government action was neither regulatory, proscriptive, nor compulsory; alleging subjective chilling effect on free exercise rights is not sufficient to constitute substantial burden. Resolutions and letter also did not violate Free Exercise Clause by implicating other constitutional protections as "hybrid" claim, when, as to claim that governmental actors had orthodoxy of belief on subject of homosexuality as to which they could not prescribe, public officials may criticize practices they would have no constitutional ability to regulate so long as there is no actual or threatened imposition of government power of sanction; and when, as to claim for viewpoint discrimination, governmental actors did not impose or threaten prohibitions or sanctions for plaintiffs' viewpoint. American Family v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2002) 277 F.3d 1114, 1124-1125

Public college could not, consistent with First Amendment's free speech and free exercise clauses, impose condition on pro-life demonstrators that they refrain from religious worship or instruction and limit demonstration to secular content. Orin v. Barclay (9th Cir. 2001) 272 F.3d 1207, 1215-1216

Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA) is not unconstitutional as applied to federal law; however, private employer did not violate RFRA by refusing to hire prospective employee for refusal to provide social security number where RFRA does not expressly include private employers within its reach and where federal government compulsion of employers to obtain employees' social security numbers does not make every employer liable under RFRA for violating rights of employees or applicants who object on religious grounds to social security number requirement and does not make private employers government actors. Sutton v. Providence St. Joseph Medical Center (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 826

Veh. Code § 1653.5, (as interpreted prior to 2003 amendment allowing DMV to accept specified identifiers other than social security number under specified circumstances), which requires disclosure of social security number to obtain California driver's license, is valid and neutral law of general applicability and enforcement of it does not violate right to free exercise of religion, since California may regulate drivers' licenses and all applicants for drivers' licenses are required to provide their social security numbers, § 1653.5 is facially neutral and does not have object of burdening religion or more than incidental effect on religious practices or beliefs, and § 1653.5 is rationally related to California's legitimate interests in locating whereabouts of errant parents for purposes of carrying out child support programs, collecting tax obligations, and collecting amounts overdue and unpaid for fines, penalties, assessments, bail, and vehicle parking penalties. Miller v. Reed (9th Cir. 1999) 176 F.3d 1202, 1206-1207 ; Brunson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1251, 1253-1255, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 710

Requiring father, appointed guardian ad litem for son's lawsuit under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, to obtain lawyer does not violate free exercise clause of U.S. Const., Amend. I; right of free exercise does not relieve individual of obligation to comply with valid and neutral law of general applicability because law proscribes (or prescribes) conduct that his or her religion prescribes. Johns v. County of San Diego (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 874, 877

State interest in allowing tort liability for fraud and intentional infliction of emotional distress is important enough to outweigh any burden such liability would impose on organization's religious conduct. Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1119, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46

In prosecution for sale and possession for sale of marijuana, trial court properly excluded reference to Religious Freedom Restoration Act ("RFRA") as not providing defense, when RFRA was unconstitutional and did not trump California statutes prohibiting sale or possession of marijuana for sale, and when trial court properly ruled that reference to RFRA would have had marginal probative value and was substantially outweighed by possibility of misleading jury as to what was in issue and consumption of time. People v. Rubin (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1144, 1147-1148, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 170

In prosecution for sale of marijuana, defendant was not denied fair trial because trial court excluded reference to Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993 [42 U.S.C. § 2000bb et seq.] as defense, when although RFRA prohibited government from substantially burdening exercise of religion unless government could demonstrate burden was in furtherance of compelling governmental interest and was least restrictive means of furthering compelling governmental interest, RFRA was unconstitutional and did not trump state statutes prohibiting the sale or possession of marijuana for sale, and when reference to RFRA would have had marginal probative value and was substantially outweighed by possibility of misleading jury as to what was in issue and consumption of time it would have taken. People v. Rubin (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1144, 1147-1148, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 170

There are circumstances in which tort liability for breach of fiduciary duty may be imposed on pastor for injuries resulting from pastor's sexual misconduct with parishioner without offense to state and federal constitutional religion clauses. However, those circumstances were not present when parishioner failed to allege that pastor's exploitation of her alleged vulnerability arose in context of counseling relationship so that parishioner failed to allege relationship creating fiduciary duty, and when parishioner's claim that depth of her religious faith rendered her vulnerable to pastor could not be adjudicated without reference to nature of her religious beliefs and doctrines of her church. Richelle L. v. Roman Catholic Archbishop (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 257, 273-283, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 601

Citation of vendor for sale of incense without vending license did not raise First Amendment free exercise protections when solicitation of money for incense had no religious connotations, there were no signs indicating use of incense in church or why incense played role in church doctrine or messages, and vendor made no mention of these concerns to prospective purchasers; even if solicitation of donations for incense did merit First Amendment protection, ordinance requiring vending license imposes valid time, place, and manner restrictions, when restriction is content-neutral and no group or message is singled out for restriction; when ordinance is narrowly tailored; and when ordinance provides for ample alternative channels of communication. People v. Foote (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 7, 14-18 , 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 260

School district's rejection of sign proffered by private party containing Ten Commandments in response to district's fund raising campaign did not violate party's free exercise rights under Cal. Const., art. I, § 4, when party's freedom to worship was not inhibited and when private party is not free to impose religious beliefs on children in educational arena; even if rejection of sign was considered to be imposition on free exercise rights, state has compelling interest in acting in accordance with establishment clause strictures. DiLoreto v. Board of Educ. of Downey Unif. Sch. Dist. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 267, 278-279, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 791

No state interest compelling enough to override church-affiliated university's interest in deciding how its chaplain can best serve the spiritual needs of campus community allowed application of California's Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA), Gov. Code § 12900 et seq., to university's employment discrimination dispute with chaplain; application of FEHA to dispute would unconstitutionally burden free exercise of religion by university so that summary judgment for university was proper. Schmoll v. Chapman University (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1442-1444, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 426

Shopping center's ban on leafletting in parking lot is reasonable restriction on time, manner, and place of protected speech and religious expression; however, center could not prohibit all expression; religious expression protected to same extent as political expression. Savage v. Trammell Crow Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1562, 1576, 1580-1581, 273 Cal. Rptr. 302 (extending Robins v. Pruneyard Shopping Center (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 899, 153 Cal. Rptr. 854, 592 P.2d 341 , to nonpolitical expression)

Protection of person's reputation is sufficiently important state interest to allow burden of tort damages to be imposed. McNair v. Worldwide Church of God (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 363, 374, 242 Cal. Rptr. 823

[iv] No Preference

Gov. Code §§ 25373, 37361, which have effect of granting exemption from landmark preservation laws to noncommercial property owned by religious organization that objects to landmark designation and determines in public form that organization would suffer substantial hardship if property were designated historic landmark, do not violate no-preference provision of California Constitution's free exercise clause, Cal. Const., art. I, § 4. East Bay Asian Local Development Corp. v. State of California (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 693, 719-720, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280, 13 P.3d 1122

[2] Civil and Property Rights

[a] Ecclesiastical Issues

Civil courts are prohibited from determining property disputes on basis of their own interpretation of church doctrine. Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich (1976) 426 U.S. 696, 721, 96 S. Ct. 2372, 49 L. Ed. 2d 151 ; Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church (1969) 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S. Ct. 601, 21 L. Ed. 2d 658

Exercise of jurisdiction over ecclesiastical controversies by civil courts violates First Amendment. Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church (1969) 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S. Ct. 601, 21 L. Ed. 2d 658 ; Kreshik v. Saint Nicholas Cathedral (1960) 363 U.S. 190, 191, 80 S. Ct. 1037, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1140 ; Wilson v. Hinkle (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 506, 510-511, 136 Cal. Rptr. 731

Courts prohibited by First Amendment from deciding cases involving ecclesiastical matters on basis of their own interpretation of church doctrine. Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church (1969) 393 U.S. 440, 449, 89 S. Ct. 601, 21 L. Ed. 2d 658

Autonomous power of churches, within their ecclesiastical jurisdiction, to provide for internal law and government. Watson v. Jones (1872) 80 U.S. 679, 728-729, 20 L. Ed. 666

Civil courts have jurisdiction of civil or property rights controversies in religious bodies where ecclesiastical matters are incidentally involved. Providence Baptist Church v. Superior Ct. (1952) 40 Cal. 2d 55, 60-61, 251 P.2d 10 ; In re Metropolitan Baptist Church of Richmond, Inc. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 850, 859-860, 121 Cal. Rptr. 899

General rule that courts will not interfere with ecclesiastical practices of religious societies qualified by rule that civil and property rights may be adjudicated. Rosicrucian Fellowship v. Rosicrucian Etc. Church (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 121, 131, 245 P.2d 481 ; Owen v. Board of Directors (1959) 173 Cal. App. 2d 112, 116, 342 P.2d 424

In attempt by church and its pastor to withdraw from their denominational affiliation with church organizations, trial court properly held that attempt to disaffiliate was ineffective and church organizations properly imposed supervision and control over church and its assets, where trial court correctly determined that organization was hierarchical church as to which civil court was required to defer with regard to its ecclesiastical decisions, and, having found ecclesiastical rule appropriate, trial court appropriately applied it to abstain from making determination as to only one issue, i.e., propriety of revocation of pastor's ministerial credentials, and made its ultimate determinations that church's attempt to disaffiliate had failed and church was therefore subject to organizations' regional supervision and control by weighing evidence adduced at trial in light of neutral principles of civil law, without reference to ecclesiastical rule. Concord Christian Center v. Open Bible Standard Churches (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1409-1416, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 412

Allegation that one was fraudulently induced to become member of church by representation that church's founder had twice risen from the dead as implicating religious beliefs and, thus, not justiciable. Stansfield v. Starkey (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 59, 75, 269 Cal. Rptr. 337

Dismissal of priest is ecclesiastical matter, even if proper church canons were not followed in process; torts of invasion of privacy, defamation, and intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress by bishop and other church hierarchy were beyond jurisdiction of civil courts when they arose from priest-bishop relationship and occurred as inseparable part of process of divestiture of priestly authority. Higgins v. Maher (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1168, 1175-1176, 258 Cal. Rptr. 757

Representation of discharged minister by Labor Commissioner in dispute over severance pay did not violate First Amendment prohibition against state involvement in religious affairs when dispute did not require judicial resolution of any ecclesiastical issues. Gipe v. Superior Court (1981) 124 Cal. App. 3d 617, 628-629, 177 Cal. Rptr. 590

First Amendment severely circumscribes role of civil courts in resolving church property disputes and precludes such courts from exercise of jurisdiction over disputes requiring determination of whether or not there has been departure from doctrine on part of party to dispute. Wilson v. Hinkle (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 506, 510-512, 136 Cal. Rptr. 731

Relevant inquiry in adjudication of property disputes is whether civil court can resolve dispute on basis of neutral principles of law not involving resolution of ecclesiastical issues; if court does not have to resolve doctrinal propriety of church's action to determine who has legal control of property there is no unconstitutional intervention. In re Metropolitan Baptist Church of Richmond, Inc. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 850, 858-860, 121 Cal. Rptr. 899

Church canons are governing disposition of trust fund upon death of archbishop. Johnathan v. Shea (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 328, 331-335, 96 Cal. Rptr. 673

State is constitutionally prohibited from ascertaining truth or error of theological beliefs of religious society. Saint Germain Foundation v. County of Siskiyou (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 911, 916, 28 Cal. Rptr. 393

Decisions by church tribunals on matters such as discipline, faith, ecclesiastical rule, custom, or law are binding in civil court disputes. Owen v. Board of Directors (1959) 173 Cal. App. 2d 112, 116, 342 P.2d 424

[b] Church Rules

Decisions by proper church tribunals on purely ecclesiastical matters are conclusive and binding on civil courts with possible exception when those decisions are products of fraud or collusion, the First Amendment prohibiting inquiry into whether such decisions were arbitrary in sense requiring inquiry into whether tribunal complied with church law and regulations. Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich (1976) 426 U.S. 696, 712-713, 96 S. Ct. 2372, 49 L. Ed. 2d 151 ; Gonzalez v. Roman Catholic Archbishop (1929) 280 U.S. 1, 16, 50 S. Ct. 5, 74 L. Ed. 131

Court action transferring control of cathedral from central church governing body to local governing body breached constitutional guarantee of religious liberty. Kreshik v. Saint Nicholas Cathedral (1960) 363 U.S. 190, 191, 80 S. Ct.

When question is whether church property is handled in accordance with church corporation bylaws and rules or whether these are being properly observed by church governing body, aggrieved person may seek redress through civil courts. Providence Baptist Church v. Superior Ct. (1952) 40 Cal. 2d 55, 63-64, 251 P.2d 10 ; Samoan Congregational etc. Church in U.S. v. Samoan Congregational etc. Church of Oceanside (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 69, 76-77, 135 Cal. Rptr. 793

Jurisdiction of civil courts to decide whether meeting at which salaried pastor was removed was properly conducted according to usage, contracts, and rules of religious society of congregational type. Providence Baptist Church v. Superior Ct. (1952) 40 Cal. 2d 55, 61-62, 251 P.2d 10

Roman Catholic Church's determination of qualifications for prison priests was not entanglement prohibited by establishment clause (in fact state's determination would be entanglement); church's criteria were necessary to allow inmates full and free exercise of their religious rights. Duffy v. State Personnel Bd. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1, 19, 283 Cal. Rptr. 622

Local church that withdrew its affiliation from regional and national bodies, but retained possession of local church property, required to deliver property to general church under express trust theory when canons declared that on dissolution, liquidation, or abandonment, its property would inure to general church. Protestant Episcopal Church v. Barker (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 599, 625, 171 Cal. Rptr. 541

Decision of church congregation designating recipients of church assets on its dissolution not treated as ecclesiastical decision and, thus, trial court properly permitted distribution in accordance with organization's purpose and purpose of property's donors. In re Metropolitan Baptist Church of Richmond, Inc. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 850, 857-860, 121 Cal. Rptr. 899

Removal of plaintiff as church members and as members of church corporation subject to court's power to enjoin in view of property rights involved in corporation question, even though doubt exists as to power of court to enjoin removal from church membership since latter only incidentally involved. Burnett v. Banks (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 631, 637, 279 P.2d 579

Controversies involving only church policy or discipline are improper subjects for judicial determination or review. Maxwell v. Brougher (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 824, 826, 222 P.2d 910

[c] Church Organization

In resolving property disputes, when church body's judicatory system consists of hierarchy exercising control over member churches, decision of highest judicatory body is final and conclusive, even though plaintiffs comprise substantial majority of individual members. Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich (1976) 426 U.S. 696, 724-725, 96 S. Ct. 2372, 49 L. Ed. 2d 151 ; Wheelock v. First Presb. Church (1897) 119 Cal. 477, 482, 51 P. 841

Express trust provisions are enforced by courts whether church's organization is hierarchical or congregational, even though terms of trust are in derogation of wishes of governing body or members of congregation. Watson v. Jones (1872) 80 U.S. 679, 723, 20 L. Ed. 666 ; Presbyterian Church v. Hull Church (1969) 393 U.S. 440, 452, 89 S. Ct. 601, 21 L. Ed. 2d 658 (concurring opinion)

In resolving property disputes, when church is independently organized and governed by its congregation, courts take cognizance of rights of majority of members. Watson v. Jones (1872) 80 U.S. 679, 724-725, 20 L. Ed. 666 ; Barber v. Irving (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 560, 567, 38 Cal. Rptr. 142

Chief officer of corporation sole is not also "the religious organization governed by the corporation"; there is a clear distinction between the corporation sole and the individual who happens to be the current office holder. County of San Luis Obispo v. Ashurst (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 380, 383-384, 194 Cal. Rptr. 5 ; Berry v. Society of Saint Pius X (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 354, 368-372, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 574

[d] Church Factions

In determining which faction of divided church is entitled to church property, First Amendment commands civil courts to decide church property disputes without resolving underlying religious doctrine issues, church polity and church administration. Serbian Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich (1976) 426 U.S. 696, 709-710, 96 S. Ct. 2372, 49 L. Ed. 2d 151

Schism resulting from diversion on part of minister of local church is not within province of civil court to interfere and is matter to be settled by church tribunals. Providence Baptist Church v. Superior Ct. (1952) 40 Cal. 2d 55, 63, 251 P.2d 10

In determining which faction of divided church is entitled to church property, courts are bound by church's rulings regarding ecclesiastical matters affecting controverted property rights. Wheelock v. First Presb. Church (1897) 119 Cal. 477, 482, 51 P. 841

Members of congregational church are not entitled to division of church property on separation from parish. Maxwell v. Brougher (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 824, 827, 222 P.2d 910

[e] Expulsion

Expulsion of members is governed by rules and bylaws of church. Erickson v. Gospel Foundation of Calif. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 581, 587, 275 P.2d 474

Church member's right to inspect membership lists does not constitute sufficient property right to justify civil court interference with expulsion of member. Owen v. Board of Directors (1959) 173 Cal. App. 2d 112, 117, 342 P.2d 424

[f] Rights of Church Corporation

Corporation sole has same civil rights and duties as other corporations. Roman Catholic Archbishop v. Superior Court (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 405, 411, 93 Cal. Rptr. 338

[g] Dissolution

Members of nonprofit religious corporation are not required to exhaust internal procedural remedies before seeking judicial intervention in dissolution of corporation since it is not an administrative body bound by rules governing access to courts. Fuimaono v. Samoan Congregational etc. Church of Oceanside (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 80, 85, 135 Cal. Rptr. 799

Cy pres doctrine applies to distribution of church assets on dissolution of nonprofit religious corporation and requires transfer of those assets to another organization so that original trust purpose can be carried out as nearly as possible. In re Metropolitan Baptist Church of Richmond, Inc. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 850, 857-858, 121 Cal. Rptr. 899

[h] Corporation Sole--Liability for Personal Debts of Office Holder in Religious Organization

Trial court properly denied application for writ of execution against real property of church corporation sole to satisfy personal debts of individual holding office as head of organization when there was no showing that office holder fraudulently conveyed property to corporation sole or that the corporation sole improperly used property against its beneficial interest. County of San Luis Obispo v. Ashurst (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 380, 385, 194 Cal. Rptr. 5

[i] Trusts

Power of courts to enforce trust impressed on church property. Wheelock v. First Presb. Church (1897) 119 Cal. 477, 482, 51 P. 841

Substantial evidence supported trial court finding that local church had created trust in favor of general church, but under California law that trust was revocable absent express declaration to the contrary and local church was entitled to retain ownership of property when it revoked trust and severed its affiliation with general church. California-Nevada Annual Conf. of the United Methodist Church v. St. Luke's United Methodist Church (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 754, 764, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 442 , disapproved on other grounds, Episcopal Church Cases (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 467, 492

Assets of religious nonprofit corporation are impressed with charitable trust to carry out object for which organization was created deriving from express declaration of corporate purpose notwithstanding lack of express declaration of purpose by donors. Samoan Congregational etc. Church in U.S. v. Samoan Congregational etc. Church of Oceanside (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 69, 73-74, 135 Cal. Rptr. 793

Fiduciary nature of relationship between church trustee and church and its members. St. James Church v. Superior Court (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 361, 287 P.2d 387

[j] Charitable Bequests

Bequest to church for use in missionary work is charitable bequest. Estate of Moore (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 737, 742, 33 Cal. Rptr. 427

[k] Zoning

Church is treated same as secular litigant in zoning matters, such as application for conditional use permit. Lucas Valley Homeowners Assn. v. County of Marin (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 130, 143, 284 Cal. Rptr. 427 ; Mumaw v. City of Glendale (1969) 270 Cal. App. 2d 454, 455, 76 Cal. Rptr. 245

Requiring synagogue to maintain attendance log, limiting outdoor activities and music, and requiring site to be used only for events with specific religious content are ordinary conditions to use permit and not setting up any unpermitted entanglement of church and state. Lucas Valley Homeowners Assn. v. County of Marin (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 130, 149-152, 284 Cal. Rptr. 427

[3] Tort Liability

[a] Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

State interest in allowing tort liability for fraud and intentional infliction of emotional distress based thereon is important enough to outweigh any burden such liability would impose on organization's religious conduct. Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1119, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46

Minister, who was terminated from his position as worship director because he was homosexual, was precluded by ministerial exception [see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.20[2][d], for discussion of that rule] from maintaining action against church for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Gunn v. Mariners Church, Inc. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 206, 208, 213-214, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1

[b] Negligence

Nontherapist counselors who counsel others concerning their emotional and spiritual problems have no duty to refer counselees to licensed mental health professionals based on foreseeability of suicide alone. Nally v. Grace Community Church (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 278, 297-300, 253 Cal. Rptr. 97, 763 P.2d 948

Christian Science Church and its members who provided prayer treatment to minor child, who subsequently died of juvenile diabetes, did not owe duty to refer child to conventional medical practitioners after it became reasonably clear Christian Science treatment was ineffective, since child's father made decision to use prayer treatment, and he had legal duty to choose treatment for his child. Quigley v. First Church of Christ, Scientist (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1027, 1034-1035, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 792

Church is liable for negligent maintenance of church building. Fernquist v. San Francisco Presbytery (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 405, 407, 313 P.2d 192

[c] Other Torts

Bylaws and internal rules and regulations of religious organizations are relevant to determination of principal-agent relationship. Malloy v. Fong (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 356, 370-371, 232 P.2d 241 ; Stevens v. Roman Catholic Bishop of Fresno (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 877, 883, 123 Cal. Rptr. 171

Church supervisory body liable for injuries caused by tort of church pastor acting within scope of authority. Malloy v. Fong (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 356, 372, 232 P.2d 241

Minister, who was terminated from his position as worship director because he was homosexual, was precluded by ministerial exception [see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.20[2][d], for discussion of that rule] from maintaining action against church for invasion of privacy based on senior pastor's subsequent, factually specific, denunciation of him to congregation during worship service and to church staff. Gunn v. Mariners Church, Inc. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 206, 216-217, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1

There are circumstances in which tort liability for breach of fiduciary duty may be imposed on pastor for injuries resulting from pastor's sexual misconduct with parishioner without offense to state and federal constitutional religion clauses. However, those circumstances were not present when parishioner failed to allege that pastor's exploitation of her alleged vulnerability arose in context of counseling relationship so that parishioner failed to allege relationship creating fiduciary duty, and when parishioner's claim that depth of her religious faith rendered her vulnerable to pastor could not be adjudicated without reference to nature of her religious beliefs and doctrines of her church. Richelle L. v. Roman Catholic Archbishop (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 257, 273-283, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 601

Dismissal of causes of action based on revealing contents of confessions to church's governing body and to entire congregation was erroneous when record did not support finding that such conduct was engaged in pursuant to church doctrine. Snyder v. Evangelical Orthodox Church (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 297, 307-310, 264 Cal. Rptr. 640 (strongest allegation was that conduct was "consistent with church doctrine, tenets, and practice")

Confinement or isolation that is consented to, even if consent is induced by threats of religious retribution, specifically that confinement is necessary for absolution, is protected religious speech, and church is not liable for false imprisonment. Snyder v. Evangelical Orthodox Church (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 297, 304-305, 264 Cal. Rptr. 640

Dismissal of priest is ecclesiastical matter, even if proper church canons were not followed in process; torts of invasion of privacy, defamation, and intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress by bishop and other church hierarchy is beyond jurisdiction of civil courts when they arose from priest-bishop relationship and occurred as inseparable part of process of divestiture of priestly authority. Higgins v. Maher (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1168, 1175-1176, 258 Cal. Rptr. 757

Actions of church or religious organization and its evangelist ministers in performance of religious activities are subject to liability in tort for defamation, with certain limitations. McNair v. Worldwide Church of God (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 363, 374, 242 Cal. Rptr. 823

Church is liable for personal injuries sustained by member while doing volunteer construction work on church property. Timmons v. Assembly of God Church (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 31, 35, 115 Cal. Rptr. 917

[4] Regulation of Secular Activities of Church

Secular activities of church are within regulatory power of municipality. Gospel Army v. City of Los Angeles (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 232, 242-248, 163 P.2d 704

Injunction against religious organization's and minister's unauthorized practice of medicine not barred by constitutional doctrine of religious freedom or exemption of Bus. & Prof. Code § 2063 when practices went beyond prayer and reliance on religious intervention, and were dangerous and had caused injury, and when patients presented themselves not for religious counselling but for medical treatment. Board of Medical Quality Assurance v. Andrews (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1346, 1354, 1357-1359, 260 Cal. Rptr. 113

Religious foundation's business telephone directory that published advertisements only from those who affirmed particular religious belief in order to strengthen that religious community subject to laws prohibiting discrimination. Pines v. Tomson (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 370, 379-387, 206 Cal. Rptr. 866

Ordinance against advertising fortune-telling enforceable against nonreligious function of minister where ordinance expressly provides that it is not to be construed to prohibit minister from exercising spiritual function of minister who is conforming to rites and practices of his or her church. Allinger v. City of Los Angeles (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 391, 396

Religious freedom does not preclude city from requiring religious group to obtain municipal license to canvass populace within city limits in quest of money or property. Amer. Mission Army v. City of Lynwood (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 817, 819-820, 292 P.2d 533

[5] Securities Liability for Fund Raising Activity

To establish secondary liability under 15 U.S.C. § 78t(a), defendant must have had some means of controlling culpable party and to have participated in culpable activity; neither general council's licensing and promotion of ministers nor bylaw requiring district council approval for local church's fund-raising projects that solicit contributions from nonchurch members are sufficient control to impose secondary liability for alleged fraudulent construction fund share issuance by local church. Kersh v. General Council of Assemblies of God (9th Cir. 1986) 804 F.2d 546, 548-549

Application of rule that allows inaction to constitute sufficient indirect participation to impose control person liability under 15 U.S.C. § 78t(a) is limited to brokerage firm's failure to supervise broker; such liability is not imposed based on control person's inaction when control person did not know that controlled person's actions were unlawful or fraudulent and neither encouraged nor benefited from sale of securities. Kersh v. General Council of Assemblies of God (9th Cir. 1986) 804 F.2d 546, 550, 552

[6] Labor Standards

Minimum wage, overtime, and recordkeeping requirements of Fair Labor Standards Act (29 U.S.C. §§ 201-219) apply to workers engaged in commercial activities of religious foundation when foundation's businesses constitute enterprise engaged in commerce or production of goods for commerce and workers are employees within meaning of Act; application of Fair Labor Standards Act does not violate U.S. Const., amend. I. Tony & Susan Alamo Foundation v. Sec. of Labor (1985) 471 U.S. 290, 295-306, 105 S. Ct. 1953, 85 L. Ed. 2d 278

Application of state minimum wage law is subject to ministerial exception (see Bollard case, below); plaintiff seeking application of that law was "minister" in this context because plaintiff (1) was employed by religious institution, (2) was chosen for that position largely on religious criteria, and (3) performed some religious duties and responsibilities. *Alcazar v. Corporation of Catholic Archbishop (9th Cir. 2010) 598 F.3d 668, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 5356, at *10, 18 (ministerial exception barred plaintiff's claim)

Ministerial exception (see Bollard case, below) barred minister's claims against his church, under federal and state laws, for damages for employment discrimination based on failure to accommodate his disabilities. Werft v. Desert Sw. Annual Conf. of U. Methodist Church (9th Cir. 2004) 377 F.3d 1099, 1104

First Amendment requires "ministerial exception" to employment statute if application of statute would interfere with religious institution's employment decisions concerning its ministers. Bollard v. California Province of the Soc'y of Jesus (9th Cir. 1999) 196 F.3d 940, 946-947 (ministerial exception did not bar claim, under Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964, by former Jesuit novice seeking damages for sexual harassment that drove him out of Jesuit order before he could take vows as priest)

Religious organizations generally are not immune from all governmental regulation of employment relationships. Gargano v. Diocese of Rockville Centre (2nd Cir. 1996) 80 F3d 87, 90

[7] Members' Defenses

Member established privilege of justification mitigating alleged conversion of church documents on ground that taking documents was only way to protect self against harm and harassment by church. Church of Scientology v. Armstrong (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1060, 1072-1073, 283 Cal. Rptr. 917

[8] Nonprofit Public Benefit Corporation

Prior to January 1, 1983 (effective date of Corp. Code § 5342), compliance with formalities of Corp. Code § 5341 was required prior to termination of voting rights of members of nonprofit public benefit corporations by amendment of bylaws; when number of voting memberships sought to be terminated is too large to allow hearing to each member as provided by Corp. Code § 5341(c), some other fair and reasonable procedure is required. Ferry v. San Diego Museum of Art (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 35, 41-46, 225 Cal. Rptr. 258

[9] Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"; 18 U.S.C. § 1961 et seq.)

No RICO claim was stated by persons who alleged nonprofit religious corporations and others had extorted money from them [see 18 U.S.C. § 1951(b)(2) (defining "extortion")] when no threat was alleged and no causal connection existed between defamation, which was basis of threat or coercion element under 18 U.S.C. § 1951(b)(2) and occurred after plaintiffs left church, and payments to church. Stansfield v. Starkey (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 59, 70-71 n.13, 77-78, 269 Cal. Rptr. 337

No RICO claim was stated against nonprofit religious corporations and others when only relief sought was for personal injury, loss of reputation, pain, suffering, and damages for emotional distress, because those are not recoverable under RICO; only damages to business or property are recoverable under RICO. Stansfield v. Starkey (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 59, 70 n.13, 77, 269 Cal. Rptr. 337

[10] Remedies

United Methodist Church was unincorporated association that may be sued by that name, pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 388 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 369.5(a)]. Barr v. United Methodist Church (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 259, 263-265, 153 Cal. Rptr. 322

Injunction is proper remedy for church corporation to restrain unauthorized acts of individual trustee in collecting and withholding rents from church property. St. James Church v. Superior Court (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 361, 287 P.2d 387

[11] Taxation

Imposition of sales and use taxes on sales of religious books, tapes, records, and other merchandise by religious organization does not violate free exercise or establishment clauses of U.S. Const., amend. I. Swaggart v. Calif. Equalization Bd. (1990) 493 U.S. 378, 385-392, 397, 110 S. Ct. 688, 107 L. Ed. 2d 796

Exemption of church property does not violate First Amendment. Walz v. Tax Commission (1970) 397 U.S. 664, 680, 90 S. Ct. 1409, 25 L. Ed. 2d 697

Nonprofit corporation operating home for elderly is entitled to property tax welfare exemption. Fredericka Home v. County of San Diego (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 789, 795 , 221 P.2d 68 ; Fifield Manor v. County of Los Angeles (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 1, 20-23, 10 Cal. Rptr. 242

Property tax welfare exemption applies to YMCA facilities operated pursuant to organization's general religious and charitable purposes. Y.M.C.A. v. County of L.A. (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 760, 767, 221 P.2d 47

Exemption of church property used solely and exclusively for religious worship is applicable to church property incidentally used by other organizations for discussion meetings and social purposes. Fellowship of Humanity v. Co. Alameda (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 673, 698-699, 315 P.2d 394

Property of religious or charitable entity used exclusively for any facility which is incidental to and reasonably necessary for accomplishment of religious or charitable purposes is within property tax church exemption. Serra Retreat v. County of L.A. (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 755, 758, 221 P.2d 59 ; Christward Ministry v. San Diego (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 805, 809, 76 Cal. Rptr. 854

PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-110 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 110.35

§ 110.35 Attorney General Opinions

Pursuant to Civic Center Act (former Educ. Code § 40041), state is permitted to allow public schools to establish "civic center" in public schools; religious organizations entitled to access to those facilities for use during non-instructional hours, so long as organization is charged amount at least equal to school district's direct costs. 76 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 52 (1993)

Program providing voucher to parents for each elementary- and secondary-school-age child for delivery to public or private school of their choice so that school would receive public funds is unconstitutional under establishment clause of U.S. Const., amend. I; private, non-church-operated school offering voluntary religious activities or religion-oriented curriculum is constitutionally able to qualify for voucher funding under certain circumstances. 64 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 61 (1980)

PART IV. FORMS

11-110 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 110.50

§ 110.50 Allegation of Capacity [Corp. Code § 5004] and Principal Place of Business [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]--Church Incorporated in California [Corp. Code §§ 9111, 10002, 10200]

[1] FORM Allegation of Capacity [Corp. Code § 5004] and Principal Place of Business [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]--Church Incorporated in California [Corp. Code §§ 9111, 10002, 10200]

_____ [Specify party, e.g., Defendant] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a _____ [nonprofit corporation organized for religious purposes or corporation sole or corporation for charitable purposes] incorporated under the laws of the State of California and having its principal place of business in [_____ (city),] _____ County, California.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, alleges the capacity and principal place of business of a church incorporated in California and may be included in a pleading in an action or proceeding involving such a body.

[3] Contents

Nonprofit religious corporations, corporations sole, and corporations for charitable or eleemosynary purposes, have capacity to sue and be sued [Corp. Code §§ 5004 (nonprofit corporations), 10007 (corporations sole); see Corp. Code § 10200; for discussion of corporate capacity, see § 110.11[3] -[5]].

Legal capacity need not be specifically alleged in a pleading, since lack of capacity, is usually a matter for objection by the opposing party, which may be asserted by answer or by demurer if it appears on the face of the complaint [Los Angeles Railway Co. v. Davis (1905) 146 Cal. 179, 180-181, 79 P. 865 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10 (grounds for objection), 430.30 (objection by demurrer)]. Nevertheless, the general practice appears to be to include allegations of capacity.

Allegations of the principal place of business of the corporate parties to an action are customarily included with allegations of capacity, although they are ordinarily unnecessary unless venue is to be based thereon [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5 (venue of actions against corporations)]. Complaints need only state the county of defendant's principal place of business for venue purposes [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5].

_____ [Specify party, e.g., Plaintiff] _____ [name of religious society] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a nonprofit unincorporated association having its principal office in _____ [city], _____ County, California.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, alleges the capacity and principal place of business of an unincorporated nonprofit association [Corp. Code § 18020] and may be used in a pleading in an action or proceeding involving such an organization as a party.

[3] Contents

Unincorporated associations have capacity to sue and be sued [Code Civ. Proc. § 369.5(a); for discussion of unincorporated associations, see § 110.11[2]].

Allegations of the principal office of an unincorporated church association are customarily included with allegations of capacity, although they are ordinarily unnecessary unless venue is to be based thereon [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 395.2, 395.5 (venue of actions against unincorporated associations)]. Complaints, however, need only state the county of defendant's principal place of business for venue purposes [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]. For a discussion of allegations of capacity of nonprofit corporations, corporations sole, and charitable corporations, see § 110.50[3].

§ 110.52 Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. § 1085] to Compel Church Organization and Directors to Recognize Petitioner's Election to Board of Directors

[1] FORM Petition for Writ of Mandate to Compel Church Organization and Directors to Recognize Petitioner's Election to Board of Directors

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Petitioner,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	PETITION FOR WRIT OF MANDATE
Respondents.	)

Petitioner, _____ [name], respectfully represents:

1. _____ [Capacity and principal place of business of respondent church. See §§ 110.50[1], 110.51[1]].

2. Respondents _____ [names of members of board of directors or other governing body such as board of trustees] are, and at all times herein mentioned were, the duly elected and acting directors of respondent _____ [name of church corporation or association], hereinafter referred to as respondent Church.

3. On or about _____ [date], petitioner was duly elected and qualified as a member of the board of directors of respondent Church to serve as a director until the next annual meeting of the members of the _____ [corporation or association] and until his/her successor is elected, as provided in the bylaws. By reason of the election and petitioner's immediate acceptance of the office of director, petitioner was and still is entitled to serve as a director and to participate in the management and control of the assets and property of respondent Church. A copy of the bylaws is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference.

4. On or about _____ [date], at a regular meeting of the board of directors of respondent Church, respondent directors _____ [names] voted to expel petitioner from the board of directors and thereafter refused to permit petitioner to participate in the meeting. Since then respondents have continued to deprive petitioner of his/her office as a director of _____ [corporation or association]. The attempted expulsion of petitioner as a director by respondents was ineffective and void in that it was in direct violation of the bylaws, which provide in relevant part: _____ [quote excerpt from bylaws regarding removal of directors]. Petitioner has expressly demanded that respondents recognize his/her right to serve as a director but such demands have been, and still are, refused by respondents.

5. Petitioner does not have a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law in that _____ [state facts showing absence of adequate remedy at law, e.g., the law provides no other remedy to compel respondent to recognize his/her right to serve as director, and the right of the members of respondent Church as expressed in its bylaws to have petitioner whom they duly elected as a director so serve is being frustrated by respondent directors' action herein complained of].

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays:

1. That this court issue an alternative writ of mandate commanding respondents, and each of them, to recognize petitioner as a director or to show cause before this court why petitioner should not be recognized as a director of respondent Church and why a peremptory writ should not issue;

2. That on the return of the alternative writ and the hearing of this application and the return thereto, if any, this court issue its peremptory writ of mandate commanding respondents to recognize petitioner as a director of respondent Church;

3. For costs of this proceeding; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

_____ [typed name]
_____ Attorney for Petitioner [name]

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the petitioner in this proceeding. I have read the foregoing petition and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters which are therein alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]

The form in [1], above, is a petition for a writ of mandate [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1085] to compel a church organization and its directors to recognize petitioner's election to the church's board of directors or other governing body.

Proof of service of a copy of a petition that seeks an alternative writ on each respondent and real party in interest must accompany the petition when it is offered for filing (except when the court, in its discretion and for good cause, has granted the application for the writ ex parte) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107; for discussion of method of serving petition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition]. A supporting memorandum should be filed with the petition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a)(5); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1090, referring to the proceeding as a "motion" and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a), requiring a supporting memorandum to be filed with a motion; for discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities]. If the petition names as respondent a board, court, judge, or other officer acting in a public capacity, it also must disclose the name of any real party in interest [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a)(2)]. In writ proceedings in civil cases (other than family, juvenile, guardianship, and conservatorship cases), every party must comply with the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.208 concerning service and filing of a certificate of interested entities or persons [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.488(a), (b)].

For more detailed coverage of the requirements and procedures governing writs of mandate, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

[3] Allegations

The petition alleges facts showing:

- That petitioner is a beneficially interested party (Paragraph 3) [see Funeral Dirs. Assn. v. Bd. of Funeral Dirs. (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 311, 313, 154 P.2d 39] .

- That proper grounds exist (Paragraphs 3, 4) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1085(a) (unlawful preclusion from office as a ground); see also Corp. Code §§ 303(a), 304 (lawful removal of directors)].

- That petitioner has made a distinct and express demand on respondent to perform the duty sought to be compelled by the writ (Paragraph 4) [see Price v. Riverside Land & Irrigating Co. (1880) 56 Cal. 431, 434] .

- That petitioner has no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law (Paragraph 5) [see Phelan v. Superior Court (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 363, 370, 217 P.2d 951 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1086].

The prayer of the petition requests an award of costs for bringing this special proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 1032].

[4] Jurisdiction

If the petition is filed in a court of appeal or the Supreme Court, rather than a superior court [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10 (original jurisdiction in mandate proceedings)], and could have been filed first in a lower court, it must explain why the reviewing court should issue the writ as an original matter [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a)(1)].

[5] Verification

A petition for a writ of mandate must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a)(4)]. Proof of service on each respondent and real party in interest of a copy of a petition that seeks an alternative writ must accompany the petition when it is offered for filing except when, in its discretion and for good cause, the court has granted the application for the writ ex parte [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107; for a discussion of serving the petition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition]. A supporting memorandum must accompany a petition, but need not repeat facts alleged in the petition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a)(5)]. When no alternative writ is sought, proof of service of a copy of the petition need not accompany the application, but proof of service of a copy of the filed petition must be lodged with the court prior to a hearing or any action by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1088.5].

Code § 9418(c)]

COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated,	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	COMPLAINT FOR PRELIMINARY AND PERMANENT INJUNCTION vs.	)
_____ [names],	)
Defendants.	)

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity and principal place of business of defendant church. See § 110.50[1].]

2. Defendants _____ [names of minority members of church threatening to expel plaintiff] are, and at all times herein mentioned were, members of defendant Church [residing in _____ County, California].

3. Defendant _____ [name of director] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a director of defendant Church [residing in _____ County, California].

4. Plaintiff brings this action on his/her own behalf as a member in good standing of defendant Church corporation, and on behalf of all members thereof, other than those named as defendants in Paragraph 3, above, who are similarly threatened with expulsion from membership in defendant Church corporation as herein alleged. This class is so numerous that it is impracticable to bring them all before this court. There are questions of law and fact of common and general interest to the class, and the claims and defenses of the plaintiff and the defendant are typical of the claims and defenses of the class and the defendant. The plaintiff will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class.

5. Defendant _____ [name of church corporation] holds title to the real and personal property of the Church, for the benefit, use, and enjoyment of all of its members, including plaintiff.

6. The bylaws of the corporation provide for an annual membership meeting for election of directors; no annual meeting has ever been held; two of the three initial directors have resigned from their directorship; there is only one director, _____ [name], remaining, and he/she arbitrarily refuses and neglects to call an annual meeting for the election of directors as required by the bylaws of the corporation. A copy of the bylaws is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference.

7. Plaintiff is informed and believes, and on such information and belief alleges, that _____ [name of director] and the other defendants _____ [will or are conspiring to or have conspired to] attempt to eliminate all competition for the election of the directors of the corporation by holding an unauthorized meeting of a minority of the members and attempting to terminate the membership of plaintiff and the other members of his/her class in the corporation; the bylaws provide that removal of members can only be by vote of the majority of its membership.

8. A fair election cannot be held and a fair decision cannot be reached by an election or a hearing on the issue of expulsion of plaintiff and the other members of his/her class from the corporation in that defendants consist of a minority group of the organization acting in opposition to the majority of the membership; the election ballots are entirely in the hands of defendants, who are hostile to plaintiff and the other members of his/her class. Unless restrained by this court, the defendants will continue to have this meeting and expel plaintiff and the other members of his/her class without a fair and impartial hearing by persons having the authority to set and hear the matter before them.

9. Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law in that, unless restrained by this court, the actions of the defendants will cause plaintiff and the class he/she represents to suffer irreparable injury in that: _____ [specify].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For a preliminary and permanent injunction enjoining defendants, and each of them, from:

a. Calling or conducting any membership meeting without giving prior notice to plaintiff and all of the members as required by the bylaws of defendant corporation; and

b. Expelling plaintiff or any other members from defendant Church corporation in any manner except by vote of a majority of the members of defendant Church corporation after due notice and hearing as required by the bylaws of defendant Church corporation;

2. For an order compelling defendants, and each of them, to call and conduct an annual meeting of all the members of defendant Church corporation for the purpose of electing the directors thereof and conducting any other proper business in the manner provided in the bylaws;

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the plaintiff in the above-entitled action. I have read the foregoing complaint and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters which are alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]

The complaint in [1], above, is designed for use in a class action against a church corporation and its directors and minority members to enjoin the wrongful expulsion of the members of the class and to compel the election of directors. The complaint is based on the facts in Burnett v. Banks (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 631, 279 P.2d 579 .

It is possible that the ousted or about-to-be-ousted minority could be the true church and the majority could be those who have wrongfully usurped church property or offices [see Korean United Presbyterian Church v. Presbytery of the Pacific (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 480, 502-503, 506, 281 Cal. Rptr. 396 , disapproved on other grounds, Morehart v. County of Santa Barbara (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 725, 744 n.11]. In such a case, the allegations of the foregoing form may be modified.

For further discussion of expulsion of church members, see § 110.14[2][d].

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges:

- The existence of an ascertainable class [Wheelock v. First Presb. Church (1897) 119 Cal. 477, 481-482, 51 P. 841] and a well-defined community of interest in the questions of law and fact involved (Paragraph 4) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 382; Daar v. Yellow Cab Co. (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 695, 704, 63 Cal. Rptr. 724, 433 P.2d 732] .

- Facts showing that plaintiff's rights have been violated (Paragraphs 6, 7) and that grounds for issuance of an injunction exist (Paragraphs 8, 9) [see Civ. Code § 3422; Code Civ. Proc. § 526; Burnett v. Banks (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 631, 636-637, 279 P.2d 579] .

[4] Verification

Verification [Code Civ. Proc. § 446] is required if plaintiff seeks a temporary restraining order or a preliminary injunction on a complaint instead of on affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]. If relying on a verified complaint instead of affidavits (or declarations), counsel must plead evidentiary facts that would entitle plaintiff to the relief sought [see E.H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 373, 106 P.2d 1 ; Finnie v. Town of Tiburon (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1, 15, 244 Cal. Rptr. 581] . Otherwise, verification is not required, but verification of the complaint requires the defendant to file a verified answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446] and precludes use of a general denial [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion of the effect that verifying a complaint has on the answer, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[5] Jurisdiction

A class action against a religious organization is in the jurisdiction of the superior court and is not a limited civil action [Cal. Const., art VI, § 10; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86]. On the filing of an action by a shareholder, the superior court tries and determines the validity of any election or appointment of any director of any domestic corporation, or foreign corporation if the election was held or the appointment was made in this state [Corp. Code § 9418(a); see also Corp. Code § 9418(b) (fixing date for hearing; service of notice and complaint)]. The court may determine the person entitled to the office of director or may order a new election to be held or appointment to be made, and direct such other relief as may be just and proper [Corp. Code § 9418(c)].

Moreover, an action seeking permanent injunctive relief is in the jurisdiction of the superior court and is not a limited civil case [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(8), 580(b)(2)].

[1] FORM Complaint for Preliminary [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)] and Permanent Injunction [Civ. Code § 3422; Code Civ. Proc. § 526]--By Unincorporated Church Association [Code Civ. Proc. § 369.5(a)] Against Church Corporation and Directors--To Compel Distribution of Equitable Share of Church Property After Division of Local Church Authorized by Church Tribunal

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [names],	)	COMPLAINT FOR PRELIMINARY AND PER-Defendants.	)	MANENT INJUNCTION

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity and principal office of plaintiff. See § 110.51.]

2. [Capacity and principal place of business of defendant church corporation. See § 110.50.]

3. Defendants _____ [names of directors] are, and at all times herein mentioned were, the duly elected and acting members of the board of directors of defendant _____ [name of church corporation].

4. The _____ [name] is a church tribunal having ecclesiastical control and authority over all _____ [specify denomination or sect] churches in _____ [specify area of control, e.g., Los Angeles County, California]. Such tribunal has authority under the _____ [specify source of authority, e.g., Canons] to approve and authorize the formation of local church associations and organizations subscribing to the tenets, beliefs, and practices of the _____ [specify denomination or sect] Church.

5. Article _____ of the articles of incorporation of the _____ [name of defendant church corporation] provides that _____ [summarize or set forth relevant provisions dealing with church property, e.g., church property owned by the corporation shall be held in trust for the benefit of all members of the church corporation and that in the event that any members constituting at least _____percent of the total membership of the corporation at the time separate from the corporation to form a church or churches approved and authorized by the _____ (name of church tribunal) the property is to be divided, subject to the rights and claims of creditors, equitably between the corporation and such members of the new church or churches on the basis of their respective memberships, as determined by the _____(name of church tribunal)]. A copy of the articles of incorporation is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference.

6. On or about _____ [date], _____ [state facts establishing division of church, e.g.: defendant corporation consisted of _____(number) members. On that date, _____(number) of the members, constituting _____ percent of the total membership of defendant corporation, with the approval of _____ (name of church tribunal), separated from defendant corporation and formed the _____ (name of new church association), plaintiff herein. A copy of the decision of _____ (name of church tribunal) approving and authorizing the formation of plaintiff association is attached as Exhibit B and incorporated by reference. _____ (Name of church tribunal) determined in its decision that the property of defendant corporation should be divided between plaintiff and defendant corporation as follows: _____ (state)].

7. Immediately thereafter an inventory and appraisal of the assets and liabilities of the church corporation was conducted by and at the direction of the _____ [name of tribunal]. The _____[name of tribunal] then determined on the basis of such inventory and appraisal, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit C and made a part hereof, that the distribution to plaintiff of the following described property would constitute an equitable division on the basis of membership; _____ [describe property].

8. Plaintiff is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that the property owned and possessed by defendant _____ [name of church corporation] at the time of the above-described separation, and the value thereof, is as disclosed in Exhibit C. Plaintiff is further informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that such defendant now owns and possesses the property described in Paragraph 7 above and that the transfer of such property to plaintiff would effect an equitable division of the church property based on the respective memberships as required by the above-described articles of incorporation.

9. Defendants, and each of them, have continuously failed and refused to distribute to plaintiff the above-described property, or any of it, in violation of defendant corporation's articles of incorporation and in violation of the trust conferred on defendants thereby.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For an order requiring defendants, and each of them, to show cause, if any they have, why they should not be enjoined as hereinafter set forth, during the pendency of this action;

2. For a preliminary and permanent injunction compelling defendants, and each of them, to transfer and distribute the above-described property to plaintiff;

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use to compel distribution to plaintiff church association of its share of the assets of defendant church corporation where the association members seceded from the corporation, the division of assets is provided for in the corporation's articles of incorporation, and the establishment of the new church association and distribution of assets are authorized and directed by the governing church tribunal. For discussion of property distribution between church divisions, see § 110.14[2].

In addition to asset distribution, the plaintiff church association may pray for costs associated with bringing the action against the defendant church corporation [Code Civ. Proc. § 1026]. Plaintiffs may also recover other costs [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4), (b)].

A nonprofit religious corporation may dispose of all or substantially all of its assets [Corp. Code §§ 9631, 9633]. It may also be wound up or dissolved, or both, in essentially the same manner and with basically the same effect as a nonprofit public benefit corporation, under the Nonprofit Public Benefit Corporation Law [see Corp. Code § 9680 (enumerating sections excepted as inapplicable to a nonprofit religious corporation on dissolution and/or winding up)]. For further discussion of asset distribution on dissolution of a religious organization, see § 110.22.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges:

- Capacity of unincorporated association to sue (Paragraph 1) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 369.5(a); see also §§ 110.50, 110.51].

- Proper venue [see Prob. Code § 17005].

- The authority of the church tribunal to create and approve formation of local churches within its area of control (Paragraph 4).

- The provisions of the articles of incorporation of the church corporation specifying that the corporation holds the church property in trust for the benefit of members and specifying the manner of division of such property in the event some members separate to form a new, approved church (Paragraph 5).

- The separation by plaintiff and the members of the class he or she represents to form a new church approved by the tribunal (Paragraph 6).

- The determination by the tribunal of an equitable division of property (Paragraph 7).

- Defendants' refusal to transfer the property in breach of its trust conferred by the articles of incorporation, justifying injunctive relief (Paragraph 9) [see Civ. Code §§ 2223 (involuntary trustee), 3422(4) (injunction granted when obligation arises from trust); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(7); Prob. Code § 16420(a)(1) (beneficiary may compel trustee to perform obligations of trust); see also Wheelock v. First Presb. Church (1897) 119 Cal. 477, 482-485, 51 P. 841 (discussing trust relationship between church corporation and members in ownership of church property and approving equitable relief in dividing church property)].

[4] Verification

For a discussion of verification requirements, see § 110.53[4].

[5] Jurisdiction

The superior court has jurisdiction over actions to enforce trusts and the actions are not limited civil cases [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10 (residual jurisdiction of superior court); see also Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86 (limited civil cases)].

Moreover, an action seeking permanent injunctive relief is in the jurisdiction of the superior court and is not a limited civil case [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(8), 580(b)(2)].

For a discussion of the jurisdiction of civil courts to hear church disputes involving property rights and dissolution, see § 110.14.

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity and residence of defendant church. See §§ 110.50, 110.51.]

2. Defendant _____ [name of pastor or other person in charge of the building] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, the agent and servant of defendant _____ [name of church], and in doing the things hereinafter mentioned was acting within the scope of such agency and service.

3. [Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES I- _____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of such defendants is negligently responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged and that plaintiff's injuries as herein alleged were proximately caused by such negligence.)]

4. On or about _____ [date], and for some time prior thereto, defendant _____ [name of church] was engaged in the construction of a certain building on certain real property owned by defendant _____ [name of church] and located at _____ [state address and city] in _____ County, California. On that date defendant _____ [name of pastor or other person in charge of building] requested and invited plaintiff to enter the building for the purpose of performing work and labor therein gratuitously and without compensation for the benefit of defendant _____ [name of church].

5. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff entered the aforementioned building, with the knowledge of defendants, for the purpose of performing the work requested of him/her as aforementioned.

6. At that time and place defendants, and each of them, so negligently and carelessly constructed and maintained the building that _____ [describe condition causing injury, e.g., a certain board or plank on which it was necessary for plaintiff to stand, walk, and traverse for the purpose of engaging in the work and labor was caused to, and did, turn and collapse then and there, thereby causing plaintiff to fall therefrom to the floor of the structure].

7. As a proximate result of the negligence of defendants, and each of them, [and of the fall,] plaintiff was caused to and did suffer and sustain serious personal injuries of both a temporary and permanent nature as follows: _____ [describe injuries], all to his/her general damage.

As a further proximate result of the negligence of defendants, and each of them, plaintiff has incurred [and will continue to incur] medical and related expenses.

[In separately numbered paragraphs, set forth any additional special damages, such as loss of wages, or business income, etc., as a proximate result of the negligence.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For general damages;

2. For medical and related expenses;

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[Verification, if desired. See § 110.53[1], [4].]

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is intended for use in an action for damages for personal injuries resulting from the negligent maintenance of a church building or premises [see Fernquist v. San Francisco Presbytery (1957) 152 Cal.

App. 2d 405, 407, 313 P.2d 192] . The complaint is based on the facts in Fernquist v. San Francisco Presbytery (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 405, 313 P.2d 192 .

For a discussion of religious organization liability for tort offenses, see § 110.20.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges the elements of an action for negligence [see Miglierini v. Havemann (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 570, 572, 49 Cal. Rptr. 795] , including:

- Defendant's legal duty of care toward plaintiff (Paragraphs 4, 5) [Civ. Code § 1714 (general duty of care)];
- Defendant's breach of duty by an act or omission (Paragraph 6);
- Injury to plaintiff proximately caused by the breach (Paragraph 7); and
- Damages (Paragraphs 7, 8) [see Hunter v. Freeman (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 129, 133, 233 P.2d 65] .

Allegations of plaintiff's status as an invitee (Paragraphs 4, 5) are desirable to show defendant's awareness of plaintiff's presence on the premises, but they are not essential [Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 112-120, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] .

[4] Specifying Amount of Damages

When an action is brought to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action. The complaint must comply with the caption requirements set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30, and in a limited civil case, the filing fee requirements set forth in Gov. Code § 70613(b) [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint, see Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.40 et seq., and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115].

[5] Jurisdiction

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const. art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)].

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the first paper must state whether or not the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial even in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff

[Verification, if desired. See § 110.53[1], [4].]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a complaint for use in an action for damages for a director's breach of his or her fiduciary duty based on the director's failure to exercise the degree of care required by the Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law with regard to the performance of his or her duties [Corp. Code §§ 9240, 9241; see also discussion in § 110.15]. For a complaint alleging a breach of a director's fiduciary duty when the director was involved in a self-dealing transaction, see § 110.58.

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 1 of the form sets out the possible plaintiffs who have standing to commence an action for a director's breach of fiduciary duty. Corp. Code § 9241 does not specify these plaintiffs [cf. Corp. Code § 9243 (liability of director for self-dealing)]. Presumably, any person with an interest in the corporation, such as a director, officer, or member, would have standing to sue for such a breach. In addition, insofar as a breach of a director's fiduciary duty may be considered a breach of the trust under which the religious corporation's assets are held, Corp. Code § 9142, providing for an action to enjoin, correct, obtain damages for, or to otherwise remedy a breach of the trust, applies. Under that section, the corporation, an officer or director of the corporation, or a person with a reversionary, contractual, or property interest in the assets subject to the trust may bring an action to remedy the breach. A member or former member, who asserts the right in the name of the corporation, is also permitted to sue for breach of trust provided that, for the purpose of such an action, Corp. Code § 5710 will apply.

Paragraphs 3 and 4 allege facts constituting a breach of fiduciary duty (Paragraph 3) and in what manner the director failed to exercise the requisite degree of care (Paragraph 4). In addition, it alleges the damages proximately resulting from the director's breach (Paragraph 5).

[4] Limitation of Actions

Code Civ. Proc. § 359 provides that an action against a director of a corporation to enforce a liability created by law must be brought within three years after the discovery by the aggrieved party of the facts on which the liability was created. A consistent line of decisions has interpreted this section to limit the phrase "liability created by law" to liabilities existing by virtue of an express statute and not arising under the common law [People v. Clauson (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 374, 380, 41 Cal. Rptr. 691] . This interpretive rule may apply to Corp. Code § 9241, which does not by its terms create any liability for a breach of the director's standard of care unlike, for example, Corp. Code § 9243, which does specify by its terms the liability of a director for a self-dealing transaction, or Corp. Code § 9245, which specifies the liability of a director for an illegal distribution or loan.

Therefore, in any case other than an action based on a liability expressly created by statute for which there is no more specific statute of limitations applicable, the period of limitation is probably determined by examining the nature of the underlying action, even though liability will not be imposed unless the action constitutes a breach of the standard of care set out in Corp. Code § 9241 [see, e.g., Southern Counties Thrift Co. v. Rairdon (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 770, 771-772, 118 P.2d 828 (holding that Code Civ. Proc. § 359 did not apply to action against directors for authorizing illegal industrial loans where statute imposing illegality did not impose liability; instead liability for unauthorized act as resting on common law rule rendering agent liable who violates his or her authority to principal's damages)]. For further discussion of limitation of actions, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

[5] Indemnification of Volunteer Director or Officer

Volunteer directors and volunteer executive officers are insulated from personal liability to third parties for negligent acts or omissions committed after January 1, 1988, in the performance of their duties as a director or officer [see Corp. Code § 9247]. For discussion of director and officer indemnification, see § 110.17.

[6] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require that any answer also be verified, if the action is in the superior court and is not a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification also will preclude a general denial except in a limited civil case, and will preclude a general denial even in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[3] Allegations

The form alleges reliance on information furnished by sources, such as those set out in Corp. Code § 9241(b). Except as provided in Corp. Code § 9243 regarding "self-dealing transactions," a director who performs his or her duty in accordance with the statutory standard of conduct, including the right of reliance on others, has no liability based on any alleged failure to discharge his or her obligations as a director.

2. [Allegation of defendant's capacity. See § 110.56, Paragraph 2.]

3. _____ [Allege facts as to contract or transaction between religious corporation and another person, corporation, firm, or association in which defendant has a material financial interest].

4. _____ [Allege materiality of defendant's interest in transaction, e.g., At all times herein mentioned, defendant had a material financial interest in _____ (name of person, corporation, firm, or association), namely: _____(specify, showing materiality of interest, e.g., defendant was a controlling shareholder of _____ (name of person, corporation, firm, or association))].

5. [If appropriate, allege facts showing that the corporation received little or no benefit.]

6. [If appropriate, allege facts showing that the director did not act in good faith nor with any intent to further the best interests of the corporation.]

7. As a proximate result of the aforementioned transaction, _____ [name of religious corporation] has been damaged in that _____ [either defendant profited as a result of his/her interest in the transaction (in the sum of $_____) or it has lost the use of certain property, namely, _____(specify corporate property used in transaction) (the reasonable value of such use being $_____) or it has lost _____ (specify property lost to corporation as a result of transaction) (together with $_____, such sum being _____ (income or appreciation) the corporation would have earned if such property had not been lost or specify any combination of these or any additional or other facts which would entitle corporation to fair and equitable remedy)].

8. [The amount of money and other property due from defendant to _____ (name of corporation) is unknown to plaintiff and cannot be ascertained without an accounting of the _____ (profits or proceeds or specify other property) that defendant has gained by reason of the aforementioned transaction. Plaintiff has demanded an accounting of the transaction from defendant and payment of any sum found to be due and delivery of any property that defendant should in equity return to _____ (name of corporation), but defendant has failed and refused and continues to fail and refuse, to render such an accounting (or allege facts showing that a demand would have been useless).]

9. In doing the things hereinabove alleged, defendant acted _____ [maliciously or fraudulently] in that _____ [specify]. Therefore, defendant is entitled to exemplary damages.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. For an order requiring defendant to account for any profits he/she may have made by reason of the aforementioned transaction and to pay these profits to _____ (name of religious corporation);

2. For an order requiring defendant to pay _____ (name of religious corporation) the reasonable sum for use made of its property in such transaction;

3. For an order requiring defendant to return or replace the above-described property, together with any income or appreciation, lost to _____ (name of religious corporation) by reason of such transaction;

4. For an order requiring defendant to account for any proceeds of the sale of the above-described property lost to the corporation by reason of such transaction and to pay such proceeds to _____ (name of religious corporation), together with interest at the legal rate;

5. For interest on the sum of $_____ from or after _____ [date];

6. For exemplary damages; and

7. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action for actual and punitive damages a corporation has sustained by reason of the defendant director's material financial interest in a transaction the religious corporation has had with another person, corporation, firm, or association. For a discussion of a director's self-dealing transactions, see § 110.16.

[3] Allegations

The form in [1], above, alleges the capacity of plaintiff (Paragraph 1) [Corp. Code § 9243(c)] and defendant (Paragraph 2). Since the Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law itself does not include a provision for bringing a derivative action, the law provides that for the purposes of asserting derivative rights, Corp. Code § 5710 (Nonprofit Public Benefit Corporation) applies [Corp. Code § 9243(c)]. For a form of complaint for use by a person suing in a derivative capacity under the General Corporation Law that may be adapted for use under the Nonprofit Corporation Law, see Ch. 168, Corporations: Derivative Actions

In addition, the complaint alleges facts showing that defendant director had a material financial interest in a transaction between the religious corporation of which he or she was a director and some other person, corporation, firm, or association (Paragraph 3, 4) [Corp. Code § 9243(a)]; and facts showing that the corporation received little or no benefit and defendant did not act in good faith with an intent to further the best interests of the corporation (Paragraphs 6, 7) [see Corp. Code § 9243(h)]. These latter allegations may be included in the complaint, although such facts may also be considered as possible affirmative defenses of the director or as part of the court's equitable power in determining what would be a fair and equitable remedy to the corporation [see Corp. Code § 9243(h)]. For a discussion of self-dealing transactions by directors, see § 110.16.

The complaint also alleges facts showing the damages to the corporation thereby entitling it to a fair and equitable remedy (Paragraph 7, 8) [Corp. Code § 9243(h)]. Without limiting the generality of the court's power to provide the corporation with a fair and equitable remedy, or to take account of the director's good faith, Corp. Code § 9243(h) provides that the court may order the director to (1) account for any profits made from the self-dealing transaction and pay them to the corporation; (2) pay the corporation the value of the use of any of its property used in such transactions; and/or (3) return or replace any property lost to the corporation as a result of such transaction, together with any income or appreciation lost to the corporation by reason of the transaction, or account for any proceeds of sale of such property, and pay the proceeds to the corporation together with interest at the real rate. The complaint also alleges facts showing a fraudulent or malicious violation of Corp. Code § 9243, entitling the court in its discretion to grant exemplary damages (Paragraph 9) [Corp. Code § 9243(h)]. In any claim for exemplary damages, the pleading may not state any amount [Civ. Code § 3295(e)].

The prayer of the complaint requests interest on any award (Paragraph 5). The court may award prejudgment interest to the extent allowed in Civ. Code §§ 3287 and 3288 [see generally Ch. 177, Damages].

For a discussion of punitive damages against religious organizations, see § 110.21.

[4] Jurisdiction

The code provides for an action for damages based on a director's self-dealing to be brought in superior court of the proper county [Corp. Code § 9243(c)]. Corp. Code § 5068 defines "proper county" for the purposes of Corp. Code §§

9110-9690 as the county in which the corporation's principal office in California is located or, if the corporation has no such office, Sacramento County.

[5] Limitation of Actions

An action to remedy an improper self-dealing transaction must be commenced either (1) within two years after written notice setting forth the material facts of the transaction has been filed with the Attorney General in accordance with such regulations, if any, as the Attorney General may adopt, or (2) if no such notice is filed, within 5 years after the cause of action has accrued [Corp. Code § 9243(e)]. For more discussion, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

§ 110.59 Affirmative Defenses to Action for Damages Based on Defendant Director's Alleged Self-Dealing [Corp. Code § 9243]

[1] Approval by Board Prior to Consummation of Transaction

[a] FORM Affirmative Defenses to Action for Damages Based on Defendant Director's Alleged Self-Dealing [Corp. Code § 9243]--Approval by Board Prior to Consummation of Transaction

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

1. The corporation entered into the transaction complained of for its own benefit or for the benefit of _____ [name of religious organization for which corporation was formed].

2. The transaction complained of was fair and reasonable as to the corporation or was in furtherance of the religious purposes of the corporation at the time the corporation entered into the transaction.

3. Prior to consummating the transaction complained of, the board of directors of _____ [name of religious corporation] authorized the transaction in good faith by a vote of the majority of the directors then in office without counting the vote of the defendant director, and with knowledge of the material facts concerning the transaction and the defendant director's interest in the transaction.

4. Prior to authorizing the transaction complained of, the board considered, and in good faith determined after reasonable investigation under the circumstances, that the transaction was fair and reasonable as to the corporation or that it was in furtherance of the religious purposes of the corporation.

[b] Use of Form

The form in [a], above, is for use as an affirmative defense to an action brought under Corp. Code § 9243 to recover for damages based on alleged self-dealing by an interested director. For further discussion of a director's affirmative defense of prior approval, see § 110.16[3][a].

[2] Approval by Committee Authorized by Board to Approve Transaction and Subsequent Approval by Board

[a] FORM

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____(specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

1. The transaction complained of was approved by the _____ [name of committee, e.g., Executive Investment Committee of the Board of Directors], in a manner consistent with the statutory requirements set out in Section 9243(d)(3)(A)-(D) of the California Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law;

2. It was not reasonably practicable to obtain approval of the board of directors of _____ [name of religious corporation] prior to entering into the transaction for the reason that _____ [set out reason such approval would have been impracticable]; and

3. At the first meeting of the board of directors of _____ [name of religious corporation], held subsequent to the consummation of the transaction complained of the board determined in good faith that the _____ [name of committee, e.g., Executive Investment Committee] met the same requirements as the board would have had to meet in approving the transaction. Consequently, at such meeting the board of directors ratified the transaction by a vote of the majority of the directors then in office without counting the vote of the defendant.

[b] Use of Form

The form in [a], above, is for use as an affirmative defense to an action brought to recover for damages based on alleged self-dealing by an interested director. The affirmative defense illustrated is based on prior approval of the transaction by a committee of the board of directors rather than the board itself [Corp. Code § 9243(d)(4)]. For further discussion, see § 110.16[3][b].

[b] Use of Form

The notice of motion in [a], above, is for use by a plaintiff to move to amend the complaint to add a claim for punitive or exemplary damages against a religious corporation or religious corporation sole [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.14, 473]. The form may be modified for use by a cross complainant seeking to file an amended cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 422.10, 425.14].

No claim for punitive or exemplary damages against a religious corporation or religious corporation sole may be included in a complaint or other pleading unless the court enters an order allowing an amended pleading that includes a claim for punitive or exemplary damages to be filed. This limitation, however, is not intended to affect the plaintiff's right to discover evidence on the issue of punitive or exemplary damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.14]. For further discussion of punitive and exemplary damages, see § 110.21.

[c] Supporting Declaration

The notice of motion in [a], above, must be supported by affidavits (or declarations under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.14]. The example of supporting declaration in [a], above, is by the plaintiff's attorney, identifying parts of the record that support the claim for punitive damages. The motion may also be supported by additional or other declarations, given by the plaintiff and potential witnesses, if any, setting forth facts showing that the defendant's conduct was malicious, oppressive, or fraudulent within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3294(c) and, hence, that the plaintiff has established evidence that substantiates that he or she will meet the clear and convincing standard of proof on the claim for punitive or exemplary damages [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.14].

[d] Accompanying Papers

A supporting memorandum must be filed and a copy served with this notice of motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

A motion to amend a pleading must [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1324(a)]:

- Include a copy of the proposed amended pleading [see § 110.71] which must be serially numbered to differentiate it from previous pleadings or amendments,

- State what allegations in the previous pleading, if any, are proposed to be deleted, and where the deleted allegations are located, by page, paragraph and line number, and,

- State what allegations, if any, are proposed to be added to the previous pleading, and where the additional allegations are located by page, paragraph and line number.

A separate declaration specifying the effect of the amendment must accompany the motion [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1324(b)]. The court may deem a motion to file an amendment to a pleading to be a motion to file an amended pleading, and require the filing of the entire previous pleading with the approved amendments incorporated into it [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1324(c)]. An amendment to a pleading must not be made by alterations on the face of a pleading except by permission of the court. All alterations must be initialed by the court or the clerk [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1324(d)].

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Verification, if desired or if original pleading was verified. See § 110.53[1], [4].]

[2] Use of Form

The amended complaint in [1], above, is for use when the court grants a motion allowing the filing of amended pleading that includes a claim for punitive or exemplary damages to be filed against a religious corporation or religious corporation sole [Civ. Code § 3294 (punitive damages permitted); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.14, 473(a) (punitive and exemplary damage claims); for discussion of punitive damages, see § 110.21; for the form for a notice of motion and order granting leave, see § 110.70[1], [2]].

It is suggested that an amended complaint should be executed in the same manner as the original complaint and, hence, if the complaint was verified [see Code Civ. Proc. § 446], the amended complaint should also be verified.

[3] Jurisdiction

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)].

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the first paper must state whether or not the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

§ 112.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses state and federal law prohibiting discrimination in government-funded programs and activities, and contains forms for use in actions involving allegations of such discrimination.

Specifically, this chapter discusses the following state provisions:

- Gov. Code §§ 11135-11139.5, which prohibit discrimination in state-funded programs and activities [see § 112.11];

- Gov. Code §§ 4450-4460, which govern access to public buildings by persons with disabilities [see § 112.12]; and

- Gov Code § 53080, which prohibits discrimination in community youth athletics programs [see § 112.18].

This chapter also covers the following federal legislation, prohibiting discrimination in government-funded programs and activities:

- Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [see § 112.14];

- The Rehabilitation Act of 1973 [see § 112.15[1]];

- Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 [see § 112.15[2]];

- Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 [see § 112.16]; and

- The Age Discrimination Act of 1975 [see § 112.17].

This chapter contains the following forms:

- Complaint for Preliminary and Permanent Injunction for Violation of Gov. Code § 11135 [Gov. Code § 11139] [see § 112.50];

- Complaint in Federal Court for Preliminary Injunction, Permanent Injunction, and Damages, for Violation of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [42 U.S.C. § 2000d] [see § 112.51];

- Complaint in Federal Court for Preliminary Injunction, Permanent Injunction, and Damages, for Violation of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 [29 U.S.C. § 794] [see § 112.52]; and

- Complaint in Federal Court for Preliminary Injunction and Permanent Injunction, for Violation of the Age Discrimination Act of 1975 [42 U.S.C. §§ 6102, 6104] [see § 112.53].

§ 112.10 Governing Law

[1] State Constitution

The state cannot discriminate against, or grant preferential treatment to, any individual or group on the basis of race, sex, color, ethnicity, or national origin in the operation of public employment, public education, or public contracting [Cal. Const., art. I, § 31(a)]. However, nothing in Cal. Const., art. I, § 31, may be interpreted as prohibiting bona fide qualifications based on sex that are reasonably necessary to the normal operation of public employment, public education, or public contracting [Cal. Const., art. I, § 31(c)]. In addition, nothing in Cal. Const., art. I, § 31, may be interpreted as invalidating any court order or consent decree in force as of its effective date [Cal. Const., art. I, § 31(d)]. Lastly, nothing in Cal. Const., art. I, § 31, may be interpreted as prohibiting action that must be taken to establish or maintain eligibility for any federal program, when ineligibility would result in a loss of federal funds to the state [Cal. Const., art. I, § 31(e)].

The remedies available for violations of Cal. Const., art. I, § 31, are the same, regardless of the injured party's race, sex, color, ethnicity, or national origin, as are otherwise available for violations of then-existing California antidiscrimination law [Cal. Const., art. I, § 31(g)].

Cal. Const., art. I, § 31, is self-executing. If any part or parts of it are found to be in conflict with federal law or the federal constitution, it will be implemented to the maximum extent that federal law and the federal constitution permit. Any provision held invalid is severable from the remaining portions [Cal. Const., art. I, § 31(h)].

For these purposes, "state" includes, but is not necessarily limited to, the state itself, any city, county, city and county, public university system, including the University of California, community college district, school district, special district, or any other political subdivision or governmental instrumentality of or within the state [Cal. Const., art. I, § 31(f)].

For these purposes, "racial discrimination" or "discrimination on the basis of race" have the same meaning as "racial discrimination" as defined and used in paragraphs 1 and 4 of Article 1 of Part I of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination as adopted by the United Nations General Assembly and ratified by the United States Senate [Gov. Code § 8315(a)]. The Convention defines "racial discrimination" as any distinction, exclusion, restriction, or preference based on race, color, descent, or national or ethnic origin that has the purpose or effect of nullifying or impairing the recognition, enjoyment, or exercise, on an equal footing, of human rights and fundamental freedoms in the political, economic, social, cultural, or any other field of public life [Gov. Code § 8315(b)]. Special measures taken for the sole purpose of securing adequate advancement of certain racial or ethnic groups or individuals requiring protection as may be necessary to ensure these groups or individuals equal enjoyment or exercise of human rights and fundamental freedoms is not racial discrimination, provided, however, that such measures do not, as a consequence, lead to the maintenance of separate rights for different racial groups and that they are not continued after the objectives for which they were taken have been achieved [Gov. Code § 8315(b)]. To allow the state to assist the federal government in fulfilling its international obligation to pursue a policy to eliminate all forms of racial discrimination in accordance with the Convention as set forth in Gov. Code § 8315(d), the following provisions are used to interpret and implement Cal. Const., art. I, § 31 [Gov. Code § 8315(c)]:

- Cal. Const., art. I, § 31, except as to its prohibition of granting preferential treatment, will not be interpreted as granting an individual a private cause of action to challenge any special measures undertaken for the purpose of securing adequate advancement of those racial groups requiring the protection pursuant to the Convention. Special measures cannot be interpreted as preferential treatment.

- Cal. Const., art. I, § 31, cannot be construed as requiring the government to prove racial discrimination before undertaking special measures for the purpose of securing adequate advancement of those racial minority groups needing that protection pursuant to the Convention.

[2] State Statutes

Statutes prohibiting discrimination in state-funded programs and activities are contained in Gov. Code §§ 11135-11139.5 [see § 112.11]. Statutes that govern access to public buildings by persons with disabilities are contained in Gov. Code §§ 4450-4460 [see § 112.12].

[3] Federal Statutes

Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color, or national origin, in any federally funded program or activity, is found at 42 U.S.C. § 2000d et seq. [see § 112.14].

The Rehabilitation Act of 1973, which prohibits discrimination against disabled persons in programs and activities funded by the federal government, is found at 29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq. [see § 112.15[1]].

Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, which prohibits discrimination against disabled persons in the services, programs, and activities of state and local governments, is found at 42 U.S.C. § 12131 et seq. [see § 112.15[2]].

Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, which prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex in federally funded educational programs and activities, is found at 20 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq. (20 U.S.C. §§ 1687 and 1688 were added in 1988) [see § 112.16].

The Age Discrimination Act of 1975, which prohibits discrimination on the basis of age in federally funded programs and activities, is found at 42 U.S.C. § 6101 et seq. [see § 112.17].

For discussion of procedural issues surrounding federal legislation, such as jurisidiction, removal and absention, and standing, see § 112.13.

[1] Prohibited Discrimination

Gov. Code §§ 11135-11139.5 set forth prohibitions against discrimination in state-funded programs. No person in California may, on the basis of race, national origin, ethnic group identification, religion, age, sex, sexual orientation, color, or disability, be unlawfully denied full and equal access to the benefits of, or be unlawfully subjected to discrimination under, any program or activity that is conducted, operated, or administered by the state or by any state agency, that is funded directly by the state, or that receives financial assistance from the state. Notwithstanding Gov. Code § 11000, this prohibition applies to the California State University [Gov. Code § 11135(a)]. With regard to discrimination on the basis of disability, programs and activities subject to Gov. Code § 11135(a) must meet the protections and prohibitions contained in the relevant provisions of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 and its implementing federal rules and regulations [Gov. Code § 11135(b); see 42 U.S.C. § 12132; for discussion of the application of the American with Disabilities Act to discrimination in state-funded programs and activities, see § 112.15[2]]. Nevertheless, if state laws prescribe stronger protections and prohibitions, state-funded programs and activities will be subject to the stronger protections and prohibitions [Gov. Code § 11135(b)].

As used in Gov. Code § 11135, the terms "race, national origin, ethnic group identification, religion, age, sex, sexual orientation, color, or disability" include a perception that a person has any of those characteristics or that the person is associated with a person who has, or is perceived to have, any of those characteristics [Gov. Code § 11135(f)].

As used in Gov. Code § 11135, "disability" means any mental or physical disability as defined in Gov. Code § 12926 [Gov. Code § 11135(c)]. "Sex" and "sexual orientation" have the same meanings as defined in Gov. Code § 12926(p) and (q) [Gov. Code § 11135(e); for definitions of disability in Gov. Code § 12926, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination].

To improve accessibility of existing technology and increase the successful employment of individuals with disabilities, particularly blind, visually impaired, deaf, and hard-of-hearing persons, state governmental entities, in developing, procuring, maintaining, or using electronic or information technology, either indirectly or through the use of state funds by other entities, must comply with the accessibility requirements of the federal Rehabilitation Act [29 U.S.C. § 794d; for discussion of the Rehabilitation Act, see § 112.15[1]] and regulations implementing it. Any entity thatcontracts with a state or local entity subject to Gov. Code § 11135 for the provision of electronic or information technology or for the provision of related services must agree to respond to, and resolve any complaint regarding accessibility of its products or services brought to the attention of the entity [Gov. Code § 11135(d)].

With respect to access by persons with disabilities to state-funded programs and activities, the focus is on the program or activity in its entirety. Access to the buildings or facilities in which the program or activity is located is one factor to be considered. It is not necessary, however, that every building or facility related to a state-funded program or activity be accessible. Rather, the requirement is that the program or activity, viewed in its entirety, must be readily accessible to disabled persons [Martin v. City of Los Angeles (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 559, 564-566, 209 Cal. Rptr. 301] .

The prohibitions and sanctions imposed by Gov. Code §§ 11135-11139.5 are in addition to any other prohibitions and sanctions imposed by law. They will not be interpreted in a manner that frustrates their purpose or adversely affects lawful programs that benefit the disabled, the aged, minorities, and women. They may be enforced by a civil action for equitable relief, which is independent of any other rights and remedies [Gov. Code § 11139].

Standards for determining which persons are protected by Gov. Code §§ 11135-11139.5, and what practices are discriminatory, are set forth in 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98000 et seq. [see Gov. Code § 11139.5].

[2] Administrative Remedy

Whenever a state agency administering a program or activity that receives state funding has reasonable cause to believe that a contractor, grantee, or local agency has violated the provisions of Gov. Code § 11135, or a regulation adopted to implement that provision, the head of the state agency must notify the contractor, grantee, or local agency of the violation and, after considering all relevant evidence, determine whether there is probable cause to believe that a violation has occurred. If it is determined there is probable cause to believe a violation has occurred, an administrative hearing must be held in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act to determine whether a violation has in fact occurred [Gov. Code § 11136; see Gov. Code § 11400 et seq.; for discussion and forms pertaining to the Administrative Procedure Act, see Ch. 473, Public Agency Adjudication]. If it is determined that a violation has occurred, the administering state agency must take action to curtail state funding in whole or in part to the contractor, grantee, or local agency [Gov. Code § 11137].

[3] Private Actions

Before 1999, there was disagreement about whether a private action was available as a means of enforcing Gov. Code § 11135. In Greater L.A.Council on Deafness v. Zolin (9th Cir. 1987) 812 F.2d 1103, 1113-1114 , the federal Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals read Gov. Code § 11135 to support a private right of action. However, in Arriaga v. Loma Linda Univ. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1556, 1561-1564, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 619 , the court held that there was no private right of action under Gov. Code § 11135.

In 1999, the California Legislature amended Gov. Code § 11139 to provide that Gov. Code § 11135 "may be enforced by a civil action for equitable relief."

PRACTICE TIP:

Available Remedies. Often these cases are not pursued because attorneys are not aware of the remedies available and because they do not have substantial economic damages. In many situations, injunctive relief and/or class action litigation may be more appropriate.

In addition, "government funded programs" are often conducted by both private and public "actors." These programs can involve "state actors" receiving federal funding as well as private actors receiving federal funding. These remedies frequently will be alternative or parallel remedies to other civil rights remedies, especially as they relate to racial discrimination, disability discrimination, and age discrimination. By John H. Scott

Gov. Code § 11139 does not have a venue provision of its own. For venue purposes, a case under Gov. Code § 11139 will be viewed as a tort actions [see, e.g., Wagner v. O'Bannon (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 121, 132, 79 Cal. Rptr. 44] . The venue provision applicable in tort actions will likely be applied in an action under Gov. Code § 11139. Accordingly, such an action must be brought either in the county where the injury occurred or in the county in which the defendants or some of them reside at the commencement of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]. When the defendant is a corporation or association, it may be sued in the county in which its principal place of business is located or where the injury occurred [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]. An action or proceeding against a county, a city and county, a city, or a local agency may be tried in that county, or city and county, or in the county in which that city or local agency is situated [see Code Civ. Proc. § 394].

For a form of complaint to be used in an action for an injunction pursuant to Gov. Code § 11135, see § 112.50. For a discussion of procedures and forms related to injunctions generally, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

§ 112.12 Access to Public Buildings by Persons With Disabilities: Gov. Code §§ 4450-4460

[1] Intent of Law

Gov. Code §§ 4450-4460 govern access to public buildings by persons with disabilities, and are intended to ensure that all buildings, structures, sidewalks, curbs, and related facilities constructed in California by the use of public monies are accessible to and usable by persons with disabilities [Gov. Code § 4450(a)].

[2] Building Standards

The State Architect is required to develop and submit for approval proposed building standards, and develop other regulations for making buildings, structures, sidewalks, curbs, and related facilities accessible to and usable by persons with disabilities [see Gov. Code § 4450(b); see also Health & Safety Code § 18935 et seq. (State Building Standards Code)]. In no case can the State Architect's regulations and building standards prescribe a lesser standard of accessibility or usability than that provided by the Accessibility Guidelines prepared by the federal Access Board as adopted by the United States Department of Justice to implement the federal Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) [Gov. Code § 4450(c); cf. Berkeley Center for Independent Living v. Coyle (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 874, 878-879, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 39 (Department of Housing and Community Development regulation, defining "publicly funded" to not include loans, grants, guarantees, or other assistance from a public agency to finance privately owned buildings, violated Gov. Code § 4450 requirement that all buildings constructed using public funds be accessible to disabled persons)].

Except as otherwise provided by law, buildings, structures, sidewalks, curbs, and related facilities subject to the provisions of Gov. Code § 4450 et seq. or Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq. (access to public accommodations) must conform to the standards of the California Building Standards Code and other regulations for making buildings, structures, sidewalks, curbs, and related facilities accessible to and usable by persons with disabilities that are in effect on the date of an application for a building permit. With regard to buildings, structures, sidewalks, curbs, and related facilities not requiring a building permit, building standards published in the California Building Standards Code relating to access for persons with disabilities and other regulations adopted in accordance with Gov. Code § 4450 in effect at the time construction is commenced are applicable [Gov. Code § 4451(c)]. Until building standards are published in the California Building Standards Code and other regulations are developed by the State Architect and adopted by the California Building Standards Commission under Gov. Code § 4450, buildings, structures, sidewalks, curbs, and related facilities subject to the provisions of Gov. Code § 4450 et seq. or Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq. must meet or exceed the requirements of the ADA [Gov. Code § 4451(d)].

[3] Enforcement

The provisions of Gov. Code § 4450 et seq. are enforced by both of the following entities [Gov. Code § 4453]:

- The Director of the Department of General Services, if state funds are utilized for any project or if funds of other public entities are utilized for the construction of school projects; and

- The governing bodies of the public entity whose funds are utilized, except for the construction of school projects.

The administrative authorities charged with enforcement may grant exceptions from the literal requirements of the applicable building standards or regulations, or permit the use of other methods or materials, but only when it is clearly evident that equivalent facilitation and protection that meets or exceeds the requirements under federal law are thereby secured [Gov. Code § 4451(f)].

The district attorney, the city attorney, or the Attorney General may bring an action to enjoin a violation of Gov. Code § 4450 et seq. [Gov. Code § 4458].

Additionally, any person who is aggrieved or potentially aggrieved by a violation of Gov. Code § 4450 et seq. may seek injunctive relief [Civ. Code § 55; see Health & Safety Code § 19953].

§ 112.13 Procedural Matters Regarding Federal Legislation Prohibiting Discrimination in Government-Funded Programs and Activities

[1] Overview

This chapter discusses the following federal legislation prohibiting discrimination in government-funded programs and activities:

- Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [42 U.S.C. § 2000d et seq.], which prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color, and national origin in federally funded programs and activities;

- The Rehabilitation Act of 1973 [29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.], which prohibits discrimination against disabled persons in federally funded programs and activities;

- Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 [42 U.S.C. § 12131 et seq.], which prohibits discrimination against disabled persons in the services, programs, and activities of state and local governments;

- Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 [20 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq.], which prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex in federally funded education programs and activities; and

- The Age Discrimination Act of 1975 [42 U.S.C. § 6101 et seq.], which prohibits discrimination on the basis of age in federally funded programs and activities.

Aggrieved individuals may bring private actions to enforce each of these federal provisions. Procedurally, such actions have certain issues in common. The following subsections discuss the most important of these procedural issues.

[2] Original Federal Court Jurisdiction

The federal district courts have original jurisdiction of all civil actions arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States [28 U.S.C. § 1331]. Additionally, district courts have original jurisdiction of any civil action authorized by law to be commenced by any person to obtain any of the following remedies [28 U.S.C. § 1343(a)]:

- To recover damages for injury to his or her person or property, or because of the deprivation of any right or privilege of a citizen of the United States, by any act done in furtherance of any conspiracy mentioned in 42 U.S.C. § 1985;

- To recover damages from any person who fails to prevent or to aid in preventing any wrongs mentioned in 42 U.S.C. § 1985 that he or she had knowledge were about to occur and power to prevent;

- To redress the deprivation, under color of any state law, statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of any right, privilege, or immunity secured by the Constitution of the United States or by any Act of Congress providing for equal rights of citizens or of all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States; or

- To recover damages or to secure equitable or other relief under any Act of Congress providing for the protection of civil rights, including the right to vote.

Jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1343(a)(4) (the fourth bulleted item, above) is not limited to actions against state officials or individuals acting under color of state law [Chapman v. Houston Welfare Rights Org. (1979) 441 U.S. 600, 603 n.1, 99 S. Ct. 1905, 60 L. Ed. 2d 508] .

Under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343, the United States District Courts have original jurisdiction over actions brought to enforce the federal legislation prohibiting discrimination in government-funded programs and activities discussed in this chapter.

For further discussion of federal question jurisdiction, and discussion of the jurisdiction of federal courts to hear pendent state claims when an action is brought in federal court, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal . For general discussion of jurisdiction of federal courts under 28 U.S.C. § 1343, see Moore' s Federal Practice, Chapter 104, Specific Grants of Federal Question Jurisdiction, § 104.47 (3d ed. Matthew Bender).

[3] State Court Jurisdiction

Unless Congress confers exclusive jurisdiction on federal courts, state courts competent to exercise it have concurrent jurisdiction to enforce federal law in civil actions [Brown v. Pitchess (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 518, 521, 119 Cal. Rptr. 204, 531 P.2d 772 (42 U.S.C. § 1983 case); Spaulding v. Mingo County Bd. of Educ. (S.D. W. Va. 1995) 897 F. Supp. 284, 288 (Rehabilitation Act case)] .

28 U.S.C. § 1343 confers "original jurisdiction" on the federal district courts. "Original jurisdiction" means the power to entertain cases in the first instance, as distinguished from appellate jurisdiction; it does not mean exclusive jurisdiction [Brown v. Pitchess (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 518, 521, 119 Cal. Rptr. 204, 531 P.2d 772] .

Whether the state court must accept jurisdiction of a federal claim, jurisdiction of which is not exclusively federal, has not been decided. But if the same type of claim arising under state law would be enforced in the state courts, the state courts are generally not free to refuse enforcement of the federal claim [Martinez v. California (1980) 444 U.S. 277, 283 n.7, 100 S. Ct. 553, 62 L. Ed. 2d 481] .

[4] Removal

Except as otherwise provided by an Act of Congress, any civil action brought in a state court, of which the federal district courts have original jurisdiction, may be removed by the defendant or defendants to the federal district court for the district and division embracing the place where the state court action is pending [28 U.S.C. § 1441(a)]. When the federal district court has original jurisdiction founded on a claim or right arising under the Constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States, the case is removable without regard to the citizenship or residence of the parties [28 U.S.C. § 1441(b)]. Therefore, it will generally be possible to remove an action brought in state court on the basis of one of the federal statutes prohibiting discrimination in government-funded programs and activities discussed in this chapter.

PRACTICE TIP:

"Remand" to State Court. Note too the possibility of a motion to "remand" a case to state court. If the plaintiff does not want to be in federal court, there may be the opportunity to dismiss the federal claim, thus depriving the federal court of jurisdiction. This can work successfully if you have alleged, or can allege, parallel or alternative state claims. There are also other procedural arguments that can sometimes defeat removal, for example, whether the motion was timely. By John H. Scott

For discussion and forms relating to removal generally, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal . For additional discussion, see Moore' s Federal Practice, Ch. 107, Removal (3d ed. Matthew Bender), and Moore' s Manual--Federal Practice And Procedure, Ch. 8, Removal from State Courts (Matthew Bender).

[5] Federal Court Abstention

[a] Abstention Involves Postponement of Federal Jurisdiction

The doctrine of abstention may apply to prevent a federal court from exercising jurisdiction over an action while a related action is pending in state court, even though exhaustion of state remedies is not strictly necessary. Abstention does not involve the abdication of federal jurisdiction, but only the postponement of its exercise [England v. Louisiana Medical Examiners (1964) 375 U.S. 411, 416, 84 S. Ct. 461, 11 L. Ed. 2d 440] .

[b] Theories of Abstention

[i] Younger Doctrine

Although there are several different theories of abstention, the most commonly encountered in civil rights cases derive from Younger v. Harris (1971) 401 U.S. 37, 91 S. Ct. 746, 27 L. Ed. 2d 669 [see below], and Railroad Commission of Texas v. Pullman Co. (1941) 312 U.S. 496, 61 S. Ct. 643, 85 L. Ed. 971 [see [ii], below].

Younger v. Harris (1971) 401 U.S. 37, 91 S. Ct. 746, 27 L. Ed. 2d 669 precludes federal courts from interfering with state judicial proceedings when [Martinez v. Newport Beach City (9th Cir. 1997) 125 F.3d 777, 781] :

- There are ongoing state judicial proceedings that implicate important state interests; and
- There is an adequate opportunity in the state proceedings to raise federal questions.

The Younger doctrine has also been applied to state administrative proceedings in which important state interests are vindicated, so long as in the course of those proceedings the federal plaintiff would have a full and fair opportunity to litigate his or her constitutional claim [see Ohio Civil Rights Comm'n v. Dayton Schools (1986) 477 U.S. 619, 627, 106 S. Ct. 2718, 91 L. Ed. 2d 512 ; Cornwell v. California Bd. of Barbering and Cosmetology (S.D. Cal. 1997) 962 F. Supp. 1260, 1269-1271 (African hairstyling business association barred under Younger from seeking injunctive and declaratory relief prohibiting enforcement of Barbering and Cosmetology Act, Bus. & Prof. Code § 7301 et seq., since two members were involved in pending state administrative proceeding and requested relief would require injunction against state proceeding)].

The Younger abstention principle may also apply when there are ongoing state criminal proceedings implicating important state interests and in which there is an adequate opportunity to raise federal questions [see Adam v. Hawaii (9th Cir. 2000) 235 F.3d 1160] . However, a federal court need not abstain if the state judicial proceedings were brought in bad faith [Younger v. Harris (1971) 401 U.S. 37, 53, 91 S. Ct. 746, 27 L. Ed. 2d 669 ; Adam v. Hawaii (9th Cir. 2000) 235 F.3d 1160, 1163 ; Lebbos v. Judges of the Superior Court, Santa Clara County (9th Cir. 1989) 883 F.2d 810, 814] . Further, while a district court may stay an action for damages under the Younger abstention principle, Younger abstention does not support the outright dismissal of an action for damages [Adam v. Hawaii (9th Cir. 2000) 235 F.3d 1160, 1163] .

For further coverage of Younger abstention, see Moore' s Federal Practice, Chapter 122, Abstention Doctrines, § 122.05 (3d ed. Matthew Bender).

[ii] Pullman Abstention

There are three concurrent criteria for Pullman abstention [Pearl Inv. Co. v. City & Cty. of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1985) 774 F.2d 1460, 1463 , cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1170 (1986)] :

- The complaint touches a sensitive area of social policy into which federal courts ought not to enter unless no alternative to its adjudication is open;

- Constitutional adjudication plainly can be avoided if a definitive ruling on the state issue would terminate the controversy; and

- The possibly determinative issue of state law is doubtful.

Federal courts should abstain in cases presenting a federal constitutional issue if constitutional adjudication could be avoided or if the constitutional question could be narrowed by a ruling on an uncertain question of state law. Abstention may be proper to avoid unnecessary friction in federal-state relations, interference with important state functions, tentative decisions on questions of state law, and premature constitutional adjudication. The abstention doctrine does not contemplate, however, that federal courts defer to state adjudication when the state law issues are settled or when the outcome is reasonably uncertain. Abstention is proper only in exceptional cases in which principles of comity and federalism justify postponing the exercise of jurisdiction that Congress conferred on federal courts [Pearl Inv. Co. v. City & Cty. of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1985) 774 F.2d 1460, 1462 , cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1170 (1986)] .

There is no per se civil rights exception to the abstention doctrine. There has been some reluctance, however, to order abstention in cases involving certain civil rights claims, such as those involving voting rights or racial equality [see C-Y Development Co. v. City of Redlands (9th Cir. 1983) 703 F.2d 375, 381 ; see, e.g., Harman v. Forssenius (1965) 380 U.S. 528, 537, 85 S. Ct. 1177, 14 L. Ed. 2d 50 (discriminatory voting law); Griffin v. County School Board (1964) 377 U.S. 218, 229, 84 S. Ct. 1226, 12 L. Ed. 2d 256 (school integration)]. Moreover, federal courts may be reluctant to abstain in civil rights cases in recognition of the fact that abstention can delay the redress of significant constitutional wrongs. Nevertheless, abstention may be proper in a civil rights case to avoid unnecessary interference with an important state program [Pearl Inv. Co. v. City & Cty. of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1985) 774 F.2d 1460, 1463 , cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1170 (1986)] .

In Pullman abstention, when a federal court abstains, in order to allow for state-court clarification of an issue of state law, later adjudication of the federal issues in the case in federal court is not precluded. The federal court retains jurisdiction, but stays proceedings pending a determination of the state issue in state court. The stay in the federal court may be lifted, however, for resolution of the federal issues if the state court has not resolved the entire case.

A litigant has an election to make when the federal court abstains: the party may choose to litigate all issues, including federal issues, in state court, and relinquish the right to return to federal court; or the party may choose to litigate state law issues in state court and reserve the right to return to federal court to litigate the federal issues [England v. Louisiana State Bd. of Medical Examiners (1964) 375 U.S. 411, 419-422, 84 S. Ct. 461, 11 L. Ed. 2d 440] .

For additional discussion of Pullman abstention, see Moore' s Federal Practice, § 122.02 (3d ed. Matthew Bender). For additional discussion of reservations of right to return to federal court in Pullman abstention situations, see Moore' s Federal Practice, § 122.07 (3d ed. Matthew Bender).

[6] Applicability of State Law

If a state court entertains a federally created cause of action, the federal right cannot be defeated by the forms of local practice [Felder v. Casey (1988) 487 U.S. 131, 138, 108 S. Ct. 2302, 101 L. Ed. 2d 123] . Under the Supremacy Clause of the federal Constitution (U.S. Const., art. VI, cl. 2), the relative importance to the state of its own law is not material if there is a conflict with a valid federal law. Any state law, however clearly within a state's acknowledged power, that interferes with or is contrary to federal law must yield [see, e.g., Felder v. Casey (1988) 487 U.S. 131, 138, 108 S. Ct. 2302, 101 L. Ed. 2d 123 (state notice-of-claim statute preempted in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action brought in state court)].

An assessment of the applicability of a state law to federal civil rights litigation in state court must be made in light of the purpose and nature of the federal right. The same assessment also applies in federal court litigation, where, because the federal civil rights laws fail to provide certain rules of decision thought essential to the orderly adjudication of rights, courts are occasionally called on to borrow state law [Felder v. Casey (1988) 487 U.S. 131, 139, 108 S. Ct. 2302, 101 L. Ed. 2d 123 ; see Denari v. Superior Court (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1488, 1497-1498, 264 Cal. Rptr. 261 (application of state constitutional right of privacy to discovery in state court action); see also 42 U.S.C. § 1988(a) ("borrowing" provision)].

[7] Venue in Federal Actions

Venue in an action brought under a federal civil rights act that contains its own venue provisions is governed by those provisions. If there is no specific applicable venue provision, the provisions of 28 U.S.C. § 1391 govern venue in an action brought in federal court.

A civil action in which jurisdiction is not founded solely on diversity of citizenship may be brought only in the following jurisdictions [28 U.S.C. § 1391(b)]:

- A judicial district in which any defendant resides, if all defendants reside in the same state;
- A judicial district in which a substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claim occurred or a substantial part of property that is the subject of the action is situated; or
- A judicial district in which any defendant may be found, if there is no district in which the action may otherwise be brought.

A corporate defendant is deemed to reside in any judicial district in which it is subject to personal jurisdiction at the time the action is commenced. In a state with more than one judicial district, and in which a corporate defendant is subject to personal jurisdiction at the time an action is commenced, the corporation is deemed to reside in any district in that state within which its contacts would be sufficient to subject it to personal jurisdiction if that district were a separate state. If there is no such district, the corporation is deemed to reside in the district within which it has the most significant contacts [28 U.S.C. § 1391(c)].

A civil action in which a defendant is an officer or employee of the United States or a federal agency acting in his or her official capacity or under color of legal authority, or an agency of the United States, or the United States, may be brought in any judicial district in which [28 U.S.C. § 1391(e)]:

- A defendant in the action resides;
- A substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claim occurred or a substantial part of property that is the subject of the action is situated; or
- The plaintiff resides if no real property is involved in the action.

Additional persons may be joined as parties to the action in accordance with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and with other venue requirements that would be applicable if the United States or one of its officers, employees, or agencies were not a party [28 U.S.C. § 1391(e)].

[8] Standing to Sue in Federal Court

[a] Case or Controversy Requirement

The general rule in federal court is that plaintiffs must satisfy the case or controversy requirement of U.S. Const., art. III, § 2, as well as judicially created limitations on the right to sue. Accordingly, to have standing, the plaintiffs must do all of the following [Warth v. Seldin (1975) 422 U.S. 490, 499, 95 S. Ct. 2197, 45 L. Ed. 2d 343] :

- Show that they have suffered threatened or actual injuries giving them personal stakes in the outcome sufficient to warrant their invocation of federal court jurisdiction and to justify exercise of the court's remedial powers on their behalf;
- Assert more than generalized grievances; and
- Base their claims to relief on their own legal rights and interests rather than on the legal rights and interests of third parties.

Thus, individuals who could not show concretely that the regulation of others had the consequences of injuring them had no standing, even though the regulation had the purpose and effect of discriminating against minority groups to which they belonged [Warth v. Seldin (1975) 422 U.S. 490, 502-507, 95 S. Ct. 2197, 45 L. Ed. 2d 343 (alleged violation of 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981-1983)].

[b] Standing of Association

An association has standing to bring suit on behalf of its members when [Hunt v. Washington State Apple Advertising Commission, 432 U.S. 333, 343, 97 S. Ct. 2434, 53 L. Ed. 2d 383 (1977) ; California First Amendment Coalition v. Calderon (9th Cir. 1998) 150 F.3d 976, 980] :

- Its members would otherwise have standing to sue in their own right;
- The interests it seeks to protect are germane to the organization's purpose; and
- Neither the claim asserted nor the relief requested requires the participation of individual members in the lawsuit.

Thus, for example, a coalition of print and broadcast journalists had standing as an association to challenge the constitutionality of prison procedures restricting media access to inmate executions [California First Amendment Coalition v. Calderon (9th Cir. 1998) 150 F.3d 976, 980-981] .

§ 112.14 Title VI of Civil Rights Act of 1964

[1] Prohibition Is Against Discrimination in Federally Funded Programs

Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color, or national origin in federally funded programs and activities, is set forth in 42 U.S.C. § 2000d et seq.

"No person in the United States shall, on the ground of race, color, or national origin, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance" [42 U.S.C. § 2000d; see, e.g., Hills v. Gautreaux (1976) 425 U.S. 284, 301, 96 S. Ct. 1538, 47 L. Ed. 2d 792 (Title VI prohibitions applicable to federally assisted public housing programs); Monteiro v. Tempe Union High School Dist. (9th Cir. 1998) 158 F.3d 1022, 1032-1035 (complaint alleging hostile racial educational environment sufficiently alleged cause of action under Title VI)].

Title VI does not reach direct benefit federal programs, such as social security. Rather, Title VI covers "only those situations where federal funding is given to a non-federal entity which, in turn, provides financial assistance to the ultimate beneficiary" [Soberal-Perez v. Heckler (2d Cir. 1983) 717 F.2d 36, 38 , cert. denied, 466 U.S. 929 (1984)] .

For further discussion of Title VI, see J. Cook & J. Sobieski, Civil Rights Actions, PP 17.02-17.14 (Matthew Bender) and Wilcox, California Employment Law, Chapter 40, Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 40.29 (Matthew Bender).

[2] Effectuating Authority

Each federal department and agency empowered to extend federal financial assistance to any program or activity is authorized to effectuate the provisions of 42 U.S.C. § 2000d. Compliance with § 2000d may be effected by the termination or refusal to grant or continue assistance to any recipient, or by any other means authorized by law [42 U.S.C. § 2000d-1]. However, no action may be taken until the department or agency concerned has advised the appropriate person of the failure to comply with § 2000d and has determined that compliance cannot be secured by voluntary means [42 U.S.C. § 2000d-1]. The Department of Justice coordinates the enforcement of § 2000d by the various federal departments and agencies [see Exec. Order No. 12250, 45 Fed. Reg. 72995 (1980)] .

[3] Private Right of Action; Claim for Damages

An individual discriminated against in violation of Title VI has a private right of action [see Guardians Ass'n v. Civil Service Comm'n (1983) 463 U.S. 582, 593-595, 103 S. Ct. 3221, 77 L. Ed. 2d 866 ; Cannon v. Universityof Chicago (1979) 441 U.S. 677, 704-709, 99 S. Ct. 1946, 60 L. Ed. 2d 560] . In cases of intentional violations of Title VI, the full panoply of relief, including compensatory money damages, is available; in cases of unintentional violations, only declaratory and injunctive relief are available [see Guardians Ass'n v. Civil Service Comm'n (1983) 463 U.S. 582, 593-603, 103 S. Ct. 3221, 77 L. Ed. 2d 866] . However, there is no private right of action when the claim is solely based on disparate impact [Alexander v. Sandoval (2001) 532 U.S. 275, 121 S. Ct. 1511, 149 L. Ed. 2d 517 (no private right of action in case alleging disparate impact of state regulations requiring that drivers' license examinations be conducted only in English)].

To state a claim for damages under Title VI, a plaintiff must allege both of the following [Fobbs v. Holy Cross Health System Corp. (9th Cir. 1994) 29 F.3d 1439, 1447 , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1127 (1995)] :

- That the entity involved is engaging in racial discrimination (or other discrimination prohibited by Title VI); and

- That the entity involved is receiving federal financial assistance.

Although the plaintiff must prove intentional discrimination at trial to receive money damages, intent need not be pled in the complaint. Furthermore, the plaintiff need not plead that he or she was an intended beneficiary of the federally funded program in which the defendants are alleged to have participated [Fobbs v. Holy Cross Health System Corp. (9th Cir. 1994) 29 F.3d 1439, 1447 , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1127 (1995)] .

Private actions brought under Title VI were subject to California's one-year statute of limitations for personal injury actions [Taylor v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (9th Cir. 1993) 993 F.2d 710, 712 , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1076 (1994) ; see former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3)]. Effective January 1, 2003, Code Civ. Proc. § 340 was amended and Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1 was added to provide that personal injury actions are now governed by a two-year statute of limitations.

[4] Actions Against a State

A state is not immune under the Eleventh Amendment from suit in federal court for violation of Title VI [42 U.S.C. § 2000d-7(a)(1); Alexander v. Sandoval (2001) 532 U.S. 275, 280, 121 S. Ct. 1511, 149 L. Ed. 2d 517 ; Cholla Ready Mix, Inc. v. Civish (9th Cir. 2004) 382 F.3d 969, 973 ; Miranda B. v. Kitzhaber (9th Cir. 2003) 328 F.3d 1181, 1188-1189] . All legal and equitable remedies are available in a suit against a state to the same extent as in a suit against any other public or private entity [42 U.S.C. § 2000d-7(a)(2)].

The Eleventh Amendment does preclude the adjudication of pendent state law claims against nonconsenting state defendants in federal courts [see Raygor v. Regents of Univ. of Minn. (2002) 534 U.S. 533, 540-541, 122 S. Ct. 999, 152 L. Ed. 2d 27 ; Pennhurst State Sch. & Hosp. v. Halderman (1984) 465 U.S. 89, 106, 104 S. Ct. 900, 79 L. Ed. 2d 67 ; Cholla Ready Mix, Inc. v. Civish (9th Cir. 2004) 382 F.3d 969, 973 ; Ashker v. California Dep't of Corr. (9th Cir. 1997) 112 F.3d 392, 394] . There is an exception when a state official is sued in a personal capacity [see, e.g., Ashker v. California Dep't of Corr. (9th Cir. 1997) 112 F.3d 392, 394-395] .

[5] Claim Based on Hostile Racial Educational Environment

To state a claim of violation of Title VI based on a hostile racial educational environment, the plaintiff must allege all of the following [Monteiro v. Tempe Union High School Dist. (9th Cir. 1998) 158 F.3d 1022, 1033 ; see Racial Incidents and Harassment Against Students at Educational Institutions; Investigative Guidance, 59 Fed. Reg. 11448, 11449 (March 10, 1994)] :

- There is a racially hostile environment;
- The school district had notice of the problem; and
- The district failed to respond adequately to redress the racially hostile environment.

For discussion and a form complaint alleging a hostile racial educational environment, see Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities .

[6] Actions Regarding Employment Practices

Actions regarding employment practices are not permitted under Title VI unless a primary objective of the federal financial assistance is to provide employment [42 U.S.C. § 2000d-3].

§ 112.15 Federal Legislation Prohibiting Discrimination Against Disabled Persons in Government-Funded Programs and Activities

[1] Rehabilitation Act of 1973

[a] Purposes of Act

The Rehabilitation Act of 1973 is set forth in 29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq. The purposes of the Rehabilitation Act include the following [29 U.S.C. § 701(b)(1)]:

- Empowerment of individuals with disabilities to maximize employment;
- Economic self-sufficiency;
- Independence; and
- Inclusion and integration into society.

The federal government is to take a leadership role [29 U.S.C. § 701(b)(2)].

[B] Discrimination Against Disabled Persons Is Prohibited

Under the Rehabilitation Act, no otherwise qualified individual with a disability may, solely by reason of his or her disability, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance or under any program or activity conducted by any executive agency or by the United States Postal Service [29 U.S.C. § 794(a) (frequently referred to as § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act)]. The individual must show that the exclusion, denial, or discrimination was solely because of the disability [Weinreich v. L.A. County Metro. Transp. Auth. (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 976, 978-979 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 971 (defendant had no obligation under Rehabilitation Act to reasonably accommodate plaintiff's financial inability to provide updated recertification of his disability to qualify for reduced fare program, since exclusion from program was not based on disability, but on his financial circumstances and possibility that he did not have qualifying disability)]. Thus, a plaintiff bringing suit under the Rehabilitation Act must show all of the following [Lovell v. Chandler (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1039, 1052 ; Duvall v. County of Kitsap (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1124, 1135 ; Weinreich v. L.A. County Metro. Transp. Auth. (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 976, 978 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 971 ; see also [d], below]:

- Plaintiff is an individual with a disability;
- Plaintiff is otherwise qualified to receive the benefit;
- Plaintiff was denied the benefits of the program solely by reason of his or her disability; and
- The program receives federal financial assistance.

For further discussion of the Rehabilitation Act, see J. Cook & J. Sobieski, Civil Rights Actions, PP 17.24-17.37 (Matthew Bender).

[c] Definitions

[i] "Disability"

In contexts other than employment, the term "disability" has the same the meaning as "disability" in the Americans with Disabilities Act [29 U.S.C. § 705(9)(B); see 42 U.S.C. § 12102].

[ii] "Individual With a Disability"

The term "individual with a disability," for purposes other than employment, means any person who has a disability as defined in the Americans with Disabilities Act [29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(B); see 42 U.S.C. § 12102].

The definition of "individual with a disability" is further refined in the Rehabilitation Act with regard to illegal drug use, contagious diseases and infections, homosexuality, bisexuality, sexual behavior disorders, compulsive gambling, kleptomania, and pyromania. For purposes of certain parts of the Act, and under specified circumstances, these conditions are excluded from the definition [29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(C)-(F)].

[iii] "Program or Activity"

"Program or activity" includes all of the operations of any of the following entities, any part of which is extended federal financial assistance [29 U.S.C. § 794(b)]:

- A department, agency, special purpose district, or other instrumentality of a state or local government;
- A college, university, or other postsecondary institution, or a public system of higher education;
- A local educational agency system of vocational education, or other school system;
- An entire corporation, partnership, or other private organization, or an entire sole proprietorship, if assistance is extended to that corporation, partnership, private organization, or sole proprietorship as a whole, or if the corporation, partnership, private organization, or proprietorship is principally engaged in the business of providing education, health care, housing, social services, or parks and recreation;

- The entire plant or other comparable geographically separate facility to which federal financial assistance is extended, in the case of any other corporation, partnership, private organization, or sole proprietorship; or

- Any other entity which is established by two or more of such entities.

[d] Private Right of Action; Elements of Prima Facie Case

There is a private right of action under 29 U.S.C. § 794 [see Greater L.A. Council on Deafness v. Zolin (9th Cir. 1987) 812 F.2d 1103, 1107] . The remedies, procedures, and rights set forth in Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [42 U.S.C. § 2000d et seq.] are available in an action brought under 29 U.S.C. § 794 [29 U.S.C. § 794a(a)(2); see 29 U.S.C. § 794a(b) (attorney's fees available)]. For discussion of remedies available in Title VI cases, see § 112.14.

To make out a prima facie case under the Rehabilitation Act, a plaintiff must show all of the following [Zukle v. Regents of the University of California (9th Cir. 1999) 166 F.3d 1041, 1045] :

- Plaintiff is disabled under the Act;

- Plaintiff is "otherwise qualified," with or without reasonable accommodation;

- Plaintiff was excluded or discriminated against solely because of his or her disability; and

- Defendant receives federal financial assistance.

With regard to the first element of a prima facie case, the Rehabilitation Act and the Americans With Disabilities Act both require that to be considered "disabled," a person must show that he or she is substantially limited in a major life activity. Thus, for example, a person who achieved considerable academic success, beyond the attainment of most people or of the average person, could not be found to be "substantially limited" in reading and learning, and thus was not entitled to claim the protections afforded to a "disabled" person under the Rehabilitation and Americans With Disabilities Acts [Wong v. Regents of the Univ. of California (9th Cir. 2004) 379 F.3d 1097, 1105-1110] .

With regard to the second element of the plaintiff's prima facie case, the plaintiff bears the initial burden of producing evidence that he or she is "otherwise qualified." This burden includes the burden of producing evidence of the existence of a reasonable accomodation that would enable him or her to meet the eligibility requirements of the program or activity. The burden then shifts to the defendant to produce evidence that the requested accommodation is not reasonable, in that it would require a fundamental or substantial modification of its program or standards. The defendant may also meet its burden by producing evidence that the requested accomodation, regardless of whether it is reasonable, would not enable the plaintiff to meet its eligibility requirements or standards. However, the plaintiff retains the ultimate burden of persuading the court that he or she is otherwise qualified [Wong v. Regents of the Univ. of California (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 807, 816-817 ; Zukle v. Regents of the Univ. of California (9th Cir. 1999) 166 F.3d 1041, 1047] .

29 U.S.C. § 794 does not constitute a congressional waiver of the federal government's sovereign immunity, and thus a private right of action for monetary damages is not available against the federal government [Lane v. Pena (1996) 518 U.S. 187, 191-200, 116 S. Ct. 2092, 135 L. Ed. 2d 486] . States, however, are not immune from suit for a violation of 29 U.S.C. § 794, and the full range of legal and equitable remedies provided for a breach of that section is available in an action against a state [42 U.S.C. § 2000d-7(a)]. States are subject to suit in federal court under section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act if they accept Rehabilitation Act Funds [Vinson v. Thomas (9th Cir. 2002) 288 F.3d 1145, 1151 ; Douglas v. California Department of Youth Authority (9th Cir. 2001) 271 F.3d 812, 820-821 , as amended, 271 F.3d 910] .

The Rehabilitation Act applies to decisions by public agencies regarding zoning [Bay Area Addiction Research and Treatment v. City of Antioch (9th Cir. 1999) 179 F.3d 725, 730] .

[e] Overlap With Disabilities Education Act

In the area of education, the coverage of the Rehabilitation Act overlaps the coverage of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act. A disabled student in preschool, elementary, or secondary educational programs comes within the ambit of both the Rehabilitation Act and the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act [see 20 U.S.C. § 1401(9) (Individuals with Disabilities Education Act applicable to preschool, elementary, or secondary education)]. In essence, the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, when it applies, requires that states receiving federal funds for education of disabled children provide all disabled children with free appropriate public education [20 U.S.C. § 1412(a)(1)(A)]. Cases often combine actions under the Rehabilitation Act and the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act [see, e.g., Alexopulos v. San Francisco Unified School Dist. (9th Cir. 1987) 817 F.2d 551] . For discussion and forms relating to the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, see Ch. 512, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities .

[f] Eleventh Amendment Immunity

Congress validly abrogated the states' Eleventh Amendment immunity under the Rehabilitation Act [see Miranda B. v. Kitzhaber (9th Cir. 2003) 328 F.3d 1181, 1186-1187 ; Clark v. California (9th Cir. 1997) 123 F.3d 1267, 1271] . However, the Ninth Circuit generally does not reach this issue because it has found that states, by accepting federal funds, waived any Eleventh Amendment immunity they might have possessed [Phiffer v. Columbia River Correctional Inst. (9th Cir. 2004) 384 F.3d 791, 792 ; Pugliese v. Dillenberg (9th Cir. 2003) 346 F.3d 937, 937-938 ; Miranda B. v. Kitzhaber (9th Cir. 2003) 328 F.3d 1181, 1186-1187 ; Clark v. California (9th Cir. 1997) 123 F.3d 1267, 1271] .

[2] Title II of Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990

[a] General Prohibition of Title II

Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) is found at 42 U.S.C. § 12131 et seq. 42 U.S.C. § 12132 provides that "no qualified individual with a disability shall, by reason of such disability, be excluded from participation in or be denied the benefits of the services, programs, or activities of a public entity, or be subjected to discrimination by any such entity."

The prohibition of discrimination against individuals with disabilities in Title II of the ADA extends to all actions of state and local governments [see San Diego Unified Port Dist. v. Gallagher (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 501, 504-505, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30 (activity analogous to zoning, such as municipality's allocation of sites for long-term free anchorages, subject to ADA); see also Barden v. City of Sacramento (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 1073, 1074 (city's public sidewalks are service, program, or activity within meaning of ADA and therefore subject to program accessibility regulations); Hason v. Medical Bd. of California (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 1167, 1171-1173 (medical licensing); Bay Area Addiction Research and Treatment, Inc. v. City of Antioch (9th Cir. 1999) 179 F.3d 725, 730-732 (zoning)].

For detailed coverage of Title II of the ADA, see J. Cook & J. Sobieski, Civil Rights Actions, Ch. 15, Discrimination in Public Accommodations (Matthew Bender).

[b] Elements of Prima Facie Case

To make out a prima facie case under Title II of the ADA, a plaintiff must show all of the following [Lovell v. Chandler (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1039, 1052 ; Duvall v. County of Kitsap (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1124, 1135 ; Weinreich v. L.A. County Metro. Transp. Auth. (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 976, 978 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 971 ; see 42

U.S.C. § 12132]:

- The plaintiff is a "qualified individual with a disability" [see [c][i], below (definition)];

- The plaintiff was either excluded from participation in or denied the benefits of a public entity's services, programs, or activities, or was otherwise discriminated against by the public entity; and

- The exclusion, denial of benefits, or discrimination was by reason of the plaintiff's disability.

The individual must show that the discrimination was solely because of the disability [Weinreich v. L.A. County Metro. Transp. Auth. (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 976, 978-979 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 971 (defendant had no obligation under ADA to reasonably accommodate plaintiff's financial inability to provide updated recertification of his disability to qualify for reduced fare program, since exclusion from program was not based on fact or perception that plaintiff had disability, but on possibility that he did not have qualifying disability)].

Because the plaintiff bears the burden of establishing an ADA violation, he or she must establish the existence of specific reasonable accommodations the defendant failed to provide [Memmer v. Marin County Courts (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 630, 633 ; see Weinreich v. L.A. County Metro. Transp. Auth. (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 976, 978 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 971] . Failure to provide accommodation does not violate the ADA if plaintiff's disability does not disadvantage him or her [Memmer v. Marin County Courts (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 630, 633-634 (failure to provide accommodation to visually impaired litigant during pretrial proceedings did not violate ADA when visual disability did not disadvantage litigant in any way)].

To be entitled to injunctive relief, a plaintiff must make a showing that he or she faces a real or immediate threat of substantial injury [Midgett v. Tri-County Metropolitan Transp. Dist. (9th Cir. 2001) 254 F.3d 846 , 850]. When the action seeks injunctive relief against a government agency, the plaintiff must contend with the well-established rule that government is traditionally granted the widest latitude in dispatching its own internal affairs, which bars federal courts from interfering with nonfederal governmental operations in the absence of facts showing the immediate threat of substantial injury [Midgett v. Tri-County Metropolitan Transp. Dist. (9th Cir. 2001) 254 F.3d 846, 850] . However, a plaintiff need not prove an intentional violation of the ADA [see [e], below] to obtain an injunction mandating compliance with its provisions [Midgett v. Tri-County Metropolitan Transp. Dist. (9th Cir. 2001) 254 F.3d 846, 851] .

[c] Definitions

[i] "Qualified Individual With a Disability"

Title II of the ADA prohibits discrimination against a "qualified individual with a disability." The term "qualified individual with a disability" is defined in Title II of the ADA as "an individual with a disability who, with or without reasonable modifications to rules, policies, or practices, the removal of architectural, communication, or transportation barriers, or the provision of auxiliary aids and services, meets the essential eligibility requirements for the receipt of services or the participation in programs or activities provided by a public entity" [42 U.S.C. § 12131(2)]. The term "disability" means [42 U.S.C. § 12102(2)]:

- A physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of the major life activities;

- A record of such an impairment; or

- Being regarded as having such an impairment.

As an example of a case in which the court considered whether the plaintiff qualified as having a physical or mental impairment that substantially limited one or more major life activities, a person who achieved considerable academic success, beyond the attainment of most people or of the average person, could not be found to be "substantially limited" in reading and learning [Wong v. Regents of the Univ. of California (9th Cir. 2004) 379 F.3d 1097, 1105-1110] .

Therefore, the term "qualified individual with a disability" has essentially the same definition under Title II of the ADA as under the Rehabilitation Act [see [1][c][ii], above].

[ii] "Public Entity"

The term "public entity" is defined in Title II as including all of the following [42 U.S.C. § 12131(1)]:

- Any state or local government;

- Any department, agency, special purpose district, or other instrumentality of a state or states or local government; and

- The National Railroad Passenger Corporation, and any commuter authority (as defined in 49 U.S.C. § 24102(3)).

Thus, while § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act [29 U.S.C. § 794(a), discussed in [1], above] prohibits discrimination against disabled persons in federally funded programs and activities, Title II of the ADA prohibits discrimination against disabled persons in the services, programs, and activities of state and local governments.

[d] "Meaningful Access" Requirement

42 U.S.C. § 12132 requires the state to provide "meaningful access" to state services, programs, and activities for the disabled [Hunsaker v. Contra Costa County (9th Cir. 1998) 149 F.3d 1041, 1043 (general assistance applicants failed to show county's pen-and-paper screening test denied them meaningful access to public benefits under ADA though recovered and recovering alcohol and drug addicts were disproportionately identified as false positives by test, requiring them to participate in clinical interviews)].

[e] Intentional Discrimination Required for Action Involving Monetary Damages

If the ADA action is for monetary damages, the plaintiff must show intentional discrimination [Lovell v. Chandler (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1039, 1056 ; Memmer v. Marin County Courts (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 630, 633 ; see Ferguson v. City of Phoenix (9th Cir. 1998) 157 F.3d 668, 674-675 , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1159 (1999)] .

The test for intentional discrimination is deliberate indifference [Lovell v. Chandler (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1039, 1056 ; Duvall v. County of Kitsap (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1124, 1138-1139] . Deliberate indifference requires both (1) knowledge that a harm to a federally protected right is substantially likely, and (2) a failure to act on that likelihood [Lovell v. Chandler (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1039, 1056 ; Duvall v. County of Kitsap (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1124, 1139 , citing City of Canton v. Harris (1988) 489 U.S. 378, 389, 109 S. Ct. 1197, 103 L. Ed. 2d 412] . When the plaintiff has alerted the public entity to the need for accommodation or the need for accommodation is obvious or required by statute or regulation, the public entity is on notice that an accommodation is required, and the plaintiff has satisfied the first element of the deliberate indifference test [Duvall v. County of Kitsap (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1124, 1139] . On receiving a request for accommodation, a public entity must undertake a fact-specific investigation to determine what constitutes a reasonable accommodation. The public entity must gather sufficient information from the disabled individual and qualified experts to determine what accommodations are necessary [Duvall v. County of Kitsap (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1124, 1139 ; Wong v. Regents of the Univ. of California (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 807] . The public entity must give primary consideration to the requests of the disabled individual [28 C.F.R. § 35.160(b)(2)]. The failure to act must be a result of conduct that is more than negligent; it involves an element of deliberateness [Duvall v. County of Kitsap (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1124, 1139-1140] .

By its very terms, facial discrimination, such as in the form of a categorical exclusion of disabled persons from a public program, is "intentional." In the case of facial discrimination, the public entity is, at the very least, deliberately indifferent [Lovell v. Chandler (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1039, 1056] .

[f] ADA and Rehabilitation Act Apply Same Substantive Standards

The ADA and the Rehabilitation Act [see [1], above] apply the same substantive standards except as otherwise provided [see Zukle v. Regents of the Univ. of California (9th Cir. 1999) 166 F.3d 1041, 1045 n.11 (no significant difference in analysis of rights and obligations created by ADA and Rehabilitation Act); Ferguson v. City of Phoenix (9th Cir. 1998) 157 F.3d 668, 673 , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1159 (1999) (by statute, remedies for violations of ADA and Rehabilitation Act are coextensive)]. Furthermore, Title II of the ADA, specifically, 42 U.S.C. § 12133, provides that the remedies, procedures, and rights set forth in 29 U.S.C. § 794a (provision of Rehabilitation Act) shall be the remedies, procedures, and rights applicable in cases under Title II. In cases involving discrimination against disabled persons in contexts other than employment, 29 U.S.C. § 794a, in turn, incorporates the remedies, procedures, and rights provided for in Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. For discussion of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, see § 112.14.

[f.1] Respondeat Superior Liability

When a plaintiff sues directly under either Title II of the ADA or the Rehabilitation Act against a municipality, the public entity is liable for the vicarious acts of its employees [Duvall v. County of Kitsap (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1124, 1141 (municipality includes county)].

[g] Provisions Applicable to Public Transportation Systems

Part B of the ADA, 42 U.S.C. §§ 12141-12150, set forth the provisions applicable to public transportation other than aircraft and specified rail operations. The provisions are quite comprehensive and apply to the major types of transportation systems, such as fixed-route systems, paratransit, demand-responsive systems, and light-rail and rapid-rail systems, as well as the facilities used in providing those services. The prohibited discrimination is broadly defined. Depending on the type of transportation system, the statutes require all of the following [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 12142-12144 (rules for vehicles), 12145-12148 (rules for facilities)]:

- The vehicles used are readily accessible to and usable by individuals with disabilities, including individuals who use wheelchairs;

- The level of services to disabled individuals is comparable to that provided to nondisabled individuals;

- The response time is comparable, to the extent practicable, to that provided to nondisabled individuals; and

- The transportation system, when viewed in its entirety, provides an equivalent level of service to or is readily accessible to and usable by individuals with disabilities.

Part A of the ADA specifically prohibits the Department of Justice from making rules that include any matter within the scope of the authority of the Secretary of Transportation under 42 U.S.C. § 12143 [42 U.S.C. § 12134(a)], which authorizes the Secretary of Transportation to promulgate regulations under Part B. The Secretary of Transportation has the sole authority to issue final regulations to carry out Part B [42 U.S.C. § 12143(b)], and the regulations must establish, inter alia, minimum service criteria for determining the level of services to be required under Part B [42 U.S.C. § 12143(c)]. Thus, a Department of Justice regulation promulgated pursuant to the ADA that requires public entities to make reasonable modifications in policies, practices, or procedures when necessary to avoid discrimination on the basis of disability, unless the public entity can demonstrate that making the modifications would fundamentally alter the nature of the service, program, or activity [28 C.F.R. § 35.130(b)(7)], does not apply to public transportation systems governed by Part B of its own independent force [Boose v. Tri-County Metropolitan Transportation District of Oregon (9th Cir. 2009) 587 F.3d 997, 1001-1002] . Further, the regulation is not incorporated by reference in the Department of Transportation's regulations implementing the ADA and Rehabilitation Act even though the Department of Transportation regulations do not mention reasonable modifications, except to the extent that they require private entities to make them [Boose v. Tri-County Metropolitan Transportation District of Oregon (9th Cir. 2009) 587 F.3d 997, 1002-1005 ; see 49 C.F.R. § 37.5(f)]. The Secretary of Transportation has the sole authority to determine the level of services paratransit systems must provide to be considered "comparable" under the ADA [Boose v. Tri-County Metropolitan Transportation District of Oregon (9th Cir. 2009) 587 F.3d 997, 1005-1006 ; see 42 U.S.C. § 12143(c)(3); 49 C.F.R. § 37.121(b)]. Although the Secretary has apparently decided that paratransit systems should make reasonable modifications to be considered comparable, the Secretary has yet to issue the final rules that would impose such a requirement [Boose v. Tri-County Metropolitan Transportation District of Oregon (9th Cir. 2009) 587 F.3d 997, 1006] .

42 U.S.C. §§ 12161-12165 set forth the provisions applicable to public transportation by intercity and commuter rail. Those rail systems must have at least one passenger car per train that is readily accessible to and usable by individuals with disabilities, including individuals who use wheelchairs [42 U.S.C. § 12162(a); see 42 U.S.C. §§ 12164, 12165 (regulations)].

[h] Eleventh Amendment Immunity Issues

With regard to Eleventh Amendment immunity, the ADA provides: "A State shall not be immune under the eleventh amendment to the Constitution of the United States from an action in Federal or State court of competent jurisdiction for a violation" of the ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12202]. Furthermore, 42 U.S.C. § 12202 states that in a case against a state under the ADA, "remedies (including remedies both at law and in equity) are available for such a violation to the same extent as such remedies are available for such a violation in an action against any public or private entity other than a State."

Title II of the ADA unquestionably is valid legislation under § 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment as it applies to the class of cases implicating the accessibility of judicial services. Congress' chosen remedy for the pattern of exclusion and discrimination of disabled people from courthouses and judicial services, i.e., Title II's requirement of program accessibility, is congruent and proportional to its object of enforcing the right of access to the courts, and is a reasonable prophylactic measure, reasonably targeted to a legitimate end. Thus, an action against a state alleging past and ongoing violations of Title II by denial of access to and the services of the state court system by reason of disability was not barred by the Eleventh Amendment [Tennessee v. Lane (2004) 541 U.S. 509, 124 S. Ct. 1978, 1984-1994, 158 L. Ed. 2d 820] .

Because of the validity of Title II as valid legislation under § 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment, state prisoners can maintain actions against the state for damages for violation of Title II to the extent the state's conduct violates their constitutional rights. Insofar as Title II created a private cause of action for damages against a state for conduct actually violating the Fourteenth Amendment, including, for example, violations of the Eighth Amendment's prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment, Title II validly abrogated state sovereign immunity [United States v. Georgia (2006) 546 U.S. 151, 126 S. Ct. 877, 880-882, 163 L. Ed. 2d 650] .

[i] Punitive Damages

Punitive damages may not be awarded in a private cause of action against a public agency or entity receiving federal grants for failing to provide accommodations for disabled persons, brought under the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. § 12132) and the Rehabilitation Act (29 U.S.C. § 794(a)) [Barnes v. Gorman (2002) 536 U.S. 181, 122 S. Ct. 2097, 2103, 153 L. Ed. 2d 230] .

[j] Prisons and Jails

Title II of the Americans With Disabilities Act applies to the accommodations, services, programs, and activities for prisoners and jail detainees [Pierce v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2008) 519 F.3d 985, 1008 (applying ADA to county jail); see Pa. Dep't of Corr. v. Yeskey (1998) 524 U.S. 206, 209-10, 118 S. Ct. 1952, 141 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1998) ; Lee v. City of Los Angeles, 250 F.3d 668, 691 (9th Cir. 2001)]. However, while regulations promulgated under Title II provide a framework for analyzing ADA claims generally, inmates' rights must be analyzed in light of effective prison administration [Pierce v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2008) 519 F.3d 985, 1010 ; Gates v. Rowland (9th Cir. 1994) 39 F.3d 1439, 1446]. To prevail on a claim that their statutory rights have been violated, inmates must show that the challenged prison policy or regulation is unreasonable [Pierce v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2008) 519 F.3d 985, 1010 ; Gates v. Rowland (9th Cir. 1994) 39 F.3d 1439, 1447]. In ADA cases, the plaintiff bears the burden of establishing the elements of the prima facie case, including the existence of a reasonable accommodation that would enable the plaintiff to participate in the program, service, or activity at issue [Pierce v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2008) 519 F.3d 985, 1011 ; Zukle v. Regents of Univ. of California (9th Cir. 1999) 166 F.3d 1041, 1046]. The public entity may rebut this by showing that the requested accommodation would require a fundamental alteration or would produce an undue burden [see 28 C.F.R. § 35.150(a)(3)]. Determining whether a modification or accommodation is reasonable always requires a fact-specific, context-specific inquiry [Pierce v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2008) 519 F.3d 985, 1011 ; Zukle v. Regents of Univ. of California (9th Cir. 1999) 166 F.3d 1041, 1048]. This analysis permits a court to consider, with deference to the expert views of facility administrators, a detention or correctional facility's legitimate interests, i.e., in maintaining security and order and operating an institution in a manageable fashion, when determining whether a given accommodation is reasonable [Pierce v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2008) 519 F.3d 985, 1011].

[k] Transition Plans

The Code of Federal Regulations requires a public entity to develop a transition plan for achieving the ADA's accessibility requirements [28 C.F.R. § 35.150(d)]. In the event structural changes to facilities will be undertaken to achieve program accessibility, a public entity that employs 50 or more persons had to develop, within six months of January 26, 1992, a transition plan setting forth the steps necessary to complete those changes. The public entity had to provide an opportunity to interested persons, including individuals with disabilities or organizations representing individuals with disabilities, to participate in the development of the transition plan by submitting comments. A copy of the transition plan had to be made available for public inspection [28 C.F.R. § 35.150(d)(1)].

At a minimum, the plan must do all of the following [28 C.F.R. § 35.150(d)(3)]:

- Identify physical obstacles in the public entity's facilities limiting the accessibility of its programs or activities to individuals with disabilities.

- Describe in detail the methods the entity will use to make the facilities accessible.

- Specify the schedule for taking the steps necessary to achieve compliance with the transition plan requirement and, if the time period of the transition plan is longer than one year, identify steps the entity will take during each year of the transition period.

- Indicate the official responsible for implementation of the plan.

Section 35.150(d) was promulgated by the Attorney General pursuant to § 204 of the ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12134], in order to implement § 202 of the ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12132; see 28 C.F.R. § 35.101].The regulations requiring transition plans are not enforceable through a private right of action under the Americans With Disabilities Act. The ADA says nothing about a public entity's obligation to draft a detailed plan and schedule for achieving such meaningful access, nor does it create a private right to such a plan [Lonberg v. City of Riverside (9th Cir. 2009) 571 F.3d 846, 850-852].

The regulations requiring transition plans are not enforceable through a private right of action under the Americans With Disabilities Act. The ADA says nothing about a public entity's obligation to draft a detailed plan and schedule for achieving such meaningful access, nor does it create a private right to such a plan [Lonberg v. City of Riverside (9th Cir. 2009) 571 F.3d 846, 850-852].

§ 112.16 Title IX of Education Amendments of 1972

[1] Prohibition Is Against Discrimination in Education

Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 is set forth in 20 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq. Under Title IX, with certain exceptions, "[n]o person in the United States shall, on the basis of sex, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any education program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance" [20 U.S.C. § 1681(a); see, e.g., Davis v. Monroe County Board of Education (1999) 526 U.S. 629, 646-647, 119 S. Ct. 1661, 143 L. Ed. 2d 839 (recipient of Title IX funds such as school district or board of education may be liable for damages under Title IX based on deliberate indifference to "student-on-student" sexual harassment); Grove City College v. Bell (1984) 465 U.S. 555, 573-575, 104 S. Ct. 1211, 79 L. Ed. 2d 516 (student financial aid program of private college that receives no direct federal assistance, but enrolls students who receive federal educational grants, is subject to Title IX prohibition); but see NCAA v. Smith (1999) 525 U.S. 459, 465-470, 119 S. Ct. 924, 142 L. Ed. 2d 929 (dues payments from recipients of federal funds to NCAA do not render NCAA subject to Title IX)].

Title IX applies to education programs conducted in state prisons, although legitimate penological interests may limit the application of Title IX in that context [see Jeldness v. Pearce (9th Cir. 1994) 30 F.3d 1220, 1224-1230] .

For further discussion of Title IX, see J. Cook & J. Sobieski, Civil Rights Actions, PP 17.15-17.23 (Matthew Bender).

[2] "Educational Institution" Defined

For purposes of Title IX, an educational institution means "any public or private preschool, elementary, or secondary school, or any institution of vocational, professional, or higher education, except that in the case of an educational institution composed of more than one school, college, or department which are administratively separate units, such term means each such school, college, or department" [20 U.S.C. § 1681(c)].

[3] Private Right of Action; Application of Title IX

An individual discriminated against in violation of Title IX has a private right of action [Cannon v. University of Chicago (1979) 441 U.S. 677, 717, 99 S. Ct. 1946, 60 L. Ed. 2d 560] . The private right of action implied by Title IX encompasses claims of retaliation when the funding recipient retaliates against an individual because the individual has complained about sex discrimination [Jackson v. Birmingham Bd. of Ed. (2005) 544 U.S. 167, 125 S. Ct. 1497, 1504-1510, 161 L. Ed. 2d 361] .

A damages remedy is available, at least in cases involving intentional discrimination [Franklin v. Gwinnett County Pub. Schools (1992) 503 U.S. 60, 76, 112 S. Ct. 1028, 117 L. Ed. 2d 208 (equitable remedies of back pay and prospective relief inadequate for female student subjected to continual sexual harassment and abuse by male teacher); see Davis v. Monroe County Board of Education (1999) 526 U.S. 629, 646-647, 119 S. Ct. 1661, 143 L. Ed. 2d 839 (recipient of Title IX funds, such as school district, may be liable to student for damages under Title IX for its own deliberate indifference to "student-on-student" sexual harassment)].

Sexual harassment of a student by a teacher is actionable under Title IX, if an official of the defendant school district who at a minimum had authority to institute corrective measures on the district's behalf had actual notice of, and was deliberately indifferent to, the teacher's misconduct [Gebser v. Lago Vista Independent School Dist. (1998) 524 U.S. 274, 277, 118 S. Ct. 1989, 141 L. Ed. 2d 277] . Similarly, "student-on-student" sexual harassment is actionable if school officials were deliberately indifferent to the harassment, and the school's response to the harassment, or failure to respond, was clearly unreasonable in light of known circumstances [Davis v. Monroe County Board of Education (1999) 526 U.S. 629, 646-647, 119 S. Ct. 1661, 143 L. Ed. 2d 839.] . For further discussion and a form complaint for damages under Title IX for sexual harassment by a teacher or a fellow student, see Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities .

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that Title IX reaches facially neutral policies that have a disparate impact [De La Cruz v. Tormey (9th Cir. 1978) 582 F.2d 45, 50-61 , cert. denied, 441 U.S. 965 (1979) ; see Roberts v. Colorado State Bd. of Agriculture (10th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 824, 832-833 , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1004 (proof of discriminatory intent not required to prove violation of Title IX); but see Cannon v. University of Chicago (7th Cir. 1981) 648 F.2d 1104, 1109 , cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1128 (intentional discriminatory act required for violation of Title IX)].

Title IX also addresses discrimination based on blindness or severely impaired vision. "No person in the United States shall, on the ground of blindness or severely impaired vision, be denied admission to any course of study by a recipient of Federal financial assistance for any education program or activity" [20 U.S.C. § 1684]. But nothing in Title IX may be construed to require any recipient of Federal financial assistance for educational programs or activities to provide any special services to a person because of his or her blindness or visual impairment [20 U.S.C. § 1684].

[4] Exceptions

20 U.S.C. § 1681 sets forth a variety of specific exceptions to its application. Among the exceptions are the following [see 20 U.S.C. § 1681(a)(3)-(9)]:

- An educational institution controlled by a religious organization, if application would not be consistent with the religious tenets of that organization;

- An educational institution whose primary purpose is the training of individuals for United States military service or the merchant marine;

- Any public institution of undergraduate higher education that is an institution that traditionally and continually from its establishment has had a policy of admitting only students of one sex;

- Social fraternities and sororities;

- The Young Men's Christian Association, Young Women's Christian Association, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, and Camp Fire Girls;

- Programs or activities of the American Legion, and of secondary schools or educational institutions, related to Girls State, Girls Nation, Boys State, or Boys Nation, conferences;

- Father-son or mother-daughter activities at educational institutions; and

- Scholarship awards given at beauty pageants.

The exception for undergraduate educational institutions that traditionally and continually from their establishment have had a policy of admitting only students of one sex was undermined by Mississippi University for Women v. Hogan (1982) 458 U.S. 718, 731, 102 S. Ct. 3331, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1090 , in which the United States Supreme Court held that a state university's limitation of enrollment to women violated the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

In addition, Title IX does not bar gender-conscious remedial actions designed to provide equal opportunities to men and women [Neal v. Board of Trustees of California State Universities (9th Cir. 1999) 198 F.3d 763, 770 (Title IX did not prevent university in which males occupied disproportionately high percentage of athletic roster spots from making gender-conscious decision to reduce proportion of spots assigned to men)].

[5] Action Against a State

A state is not immune under the Eleventh Amendment from suit in federal court for violation of Title IX [42 U.S.C. § 2000d-7(a)(1)]. In a suit against a state for violation of Title IX, remedies (including remedies both at law and in equity) are available to the same extent those remedies are available for such a violation in the suit against any public or private entity other than a state [42 U.S.C. § 2000d-7(a)(2)].

[6] Notice and Opportunity to Cure Violation

To sue for money damages for violation of effective accommodation under Title IX, a plaintiff need not give the defendant prelitigation notice of and an opportunity to rectify the specific alleged violation [Mansourian v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal. (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 1095, 1100-1106] . No notice requirement is applicable to Title IX claims that rest on an affirmative institutional decision [Mansourian v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal. (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 1095, 1105 ; see Jackson v. Birmingham Board of Education (2005) 544 U.S. 167, 182, 125 S. Ct. 1497, 161 L. Ed. 2d 361 (high school athletics coach fired in retaliation for complaining about discrimination in athletics funding had private right of action under Title IX and no pre-litigation notice was required in retaliation context)]. Universities' decisions with respect to athletics are easily attributable to the funding recipient and always--by definition--intentional [Mansourian v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal. (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 1095, 1105 ; see Jackson v. Birmingham Board of Education (2005) 544 U.S. 167, 183, 125 S. Ct. 1497, 161 L. Ed. 2d 361] . Athletic programs that fail effectively to accommodate students of both sexes thus represent official policy of the recipient entity and are not covered by a notice requirement [Mansourian v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal. (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 1095, 1105] .

Notice and an opportunity to cure a violation may be an essential precursor to some sexual harassment suits for damages under Title IX [Mansourian v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal. (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 1095, 1103 ; see Gebser v. Lago Vista Ind. Sch. Dist. (1998) 524 U.S. 274, 290, 118 S. Ct. 1989, 141 L. Ed. 2d 277 (in cases that do not involve official policy of recipient entity, damages remedy will not lie under Title IX unless official who has authority to address alleged discrimination and to institute corrective measures has actual knowledge of discrimination and fails adequately to respond)]. Proof of actual notice is required only when the alleged Title IX violation consists of an institution's deliberate indifference to acts that do not involve official policy of the recipient entity [Gebser v. Lago

Vista Ind. Sch. Dist. (1998) 524 U.S. 274, 290, 118 S. Ct. 1989, 141 L. Ed. 2d 277] . In sexual harassment cases, the deliberate failure to curtail known harassment, rather than the harassment itself, constitutes the intentional Title IX violation [Mansourian v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal. (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 1095, 1104 ; see Davis v. Monroe County Bd. of Educ. (1999) 526 U.S. 629, 641, 119 S. Ct. 1661, 143 L. Ed. 2d 839 (plaintiff could hold county board of education liable for its own decision to remain idle in face of known student-on-student harassment in its schools)]. When the official policy is one of deliberate indifference to a known overall risk of sexual harassment, notice of a particular harassment situation and an opportunity to cure it are not predicates for liability [Mansourian v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal. (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 1095, 1104 ; see Simpson v. Univ. of Colo. Boulder (10th Cir. 2007) 500 F.3d 1170] .

§ 112.17 Age Discrimination Act of 1975

[1] Purpose of Act

The Age Discrimination Act of 1975 is set forth in 42 U.S.C. § 6101 et seq. The purpose of the Act is to prohibit discrimination on the basis of age in programs or activities receiving federal financial assistance [42 U.S.C. § 6101].

[2] General Prohibition

Except as otherwise provided, "no person in the United States shall, on the basis of age, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under, any program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance" [42 U.S.C. § 6102].

[3] Application of Act

The term "program or activity" is defined very broadly as "all the operations of" the entity receiving federal funds [42 U.S.C. § 6107(4)]. However, the Act limits the ultimate beneficiaries of federal funds to which the Act applies [see 42 U.S.C. § 6107]. The Act applies to any of the following, any part of which is extended federal financial assistance [42 U.S.C. § 6107]:

- A department, agency, special purpose district, or other instrumentality of a state or local government;

- The entity of such state or local government that distributes such assistance and each such department or agency (and each other state or local government entity) to which the assistance is extended, in the case of assistance to a state or local government;

- A college, university, or other postsecondary institution, or a public system of higher education;

- A local educational agency, system of vocational education, or other school system;

- An entire corporation, partnership, or other private organization, or an entire sole proprietorship, if assistance is extended to such entity as a whole, or if the entity is principally engaged in the business of providing education, health care, housing, social services, or parks and recreation;

- The entire plant or other comparable, geographically separate facility to which federal financial assistance is extended, in the case of any other corporation, partnership, private organization, or sole proprietorship; or

- Any other entity that is established by two or more of such entities.

There is no violation of the Act if the program reasonably takes age into account as a factor necessary to its normal operation, or if the program is established under authority of a law that provides benefits or assistance to persons based on their age or establishes criteria for participation in age-related terms [see 42 U.S.C. § 6103(b); see also 28 C.F.R. § 42.711].

There are also exceptions to the Act applicable to employment practices and some apprenticeship training programs [see 42 U.S.C. § 6103(c)]. For example, nothing in the Act modifies the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq., the ADEA) [42 U.S.C. § 6103(c)(2)]. For discussion of the ADEA, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights : Employment Discrimination, and Wilcox, California Employment Law, Chs. 40, 41, 43 (Matthew Bender).

[4] Seeking Compliance With Act

The head of any federal department or agency in receipt of federal funds may seek to achieve compliance with the Act [42 U.S.C. § 6104(a)]. The department or agency head may seek compliance [42 U.S.C. § 6104(a)]:

- By terminating or refusing to grant or continue, assistance under the program or activity involved, to any recipient with regard to whom there has been an express finding on the record, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing, of a failure to comply; or

- By any any other means authorized by law.

The department or agency head's action must be limited in effect to the particular program or activity found to be in violation [42 U.S.C. § 6104(b)]. No action may be taken by the department or agency head until he or she has advised the appropriate person of the failure to comply and has determined that compliance cannot be obtained by voluntary means [42 U.S.C. § 6104(c)].

[5] Administrative Complaint, Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies, and Action in Federal Court

[a] Requirement to Exhaust Administrative Remedies

Any interested person alleging a violation of the Act may file an administrative complaint. The complainant is required to exhaust administrative remedies before filing an action in court. The administrative remedies "shall be deemed exhausted upon the expiration of 180 days from the filing of an administrative complaint during which time the Federal department or agency makes no finding with regard to the complaint, or upon the day that the Federal department or agency issues a finding in favor of the recipient of financial assistance, whichever occurs first" [42 U.S.C. § 6104(f); 28 C.F.R. § 42.736].

[b] District Court Action to Enjoin Violation of Act

Following the exhaustion of administrative remedies, the interested person may bring an action in federal district court to enjoin a violation of the Act [42 U.S.C. § 6104(e)].

The interested person must give notice by registered mail, not less than 30 days before commencement of the district court action, to the Secretary of Health and Human Services, the Attorney General of the United States, and the person against whom the action is directed [42 U.S.C. § 6104(e)(1); see 45 C.F.R. § 90.50(b)(3)(iii) (indicating that 30-day notice is to be given to "the Secretary, the Attorney General of the United States, the head of the granting agency, and the recipient")].

The 30-day notice must state all of the following [42 U.S.C. § 6104(e)(2)]:

- The nature of the alleged violation;
- The relief requested;
- The court in which the action will be brought; and
- Whether or not attorney's fees are being demanded in the event the plaintiff prevails.

No action for injunctive relief may be brought if the same alleged violation by the same defendant is already the subject of a pending action in any court of the United States, or if administrative remedies have not been exhausted [42 U.S.C. § 6104(e)(2)].

A prevailing plaintiff may recover attorney's fees [42 U.S.C. § 6104(e)(1)].

A state is not immune from suit for violation of the Age Discrimination Act of 1975 under the Eleventh Amendment [42 U.S.C. § 2000d-7(a)(1)].

§ 112.18 Prohibition of Discrimination in Community Youth Athletics Programs

[1] Statutory Prohibition; Legislative Intent

No city, county, city and county, or special district, including, but not limited to, a community services district, recreation and park district, regional park district, regional park and open-space district, regional open-space park district, or resort improvement district may discriminate against any person on the basis of sex or gender in the operation, conduct, or administration of community youth athletics programs or in the allocation of parks and recreation facilities and resources that support or enable these programs [Gov. Code § 53080(a)]. It is the Legislature's intent that girls be accorded opportunities for participation in community youth athletics programs on an equal basis, both in quality and scope, to those accorded to boys [Gov. Code § 53080(e)].

[2] Definitions

For purposes of the statutory prohibition, "community youth athletics program" means any athletic program in which youth solely or predominantly participate, which is organized for the purposes of training for and engaging in athletic activity and competition, and which is in any way operated, conducted, administered, supported, or enabled by a city, county, city and county, or special district [Gov. Code § 53080(c)].

For purposes of the statutory prohibition, "parks and recreation facilities and resources" include, but are not limited to, the park facilities including, but not limited to, the following [Gov. Code § 53080(d)]:

- Athletic fields and athletic courts.
- Gymnasiums and recreational rooms.
- Restrooms, concession stands, and storage spaces.
- Lands and areas accessed through permitting, leasing, or other land use arrangements, or otherwise accessed through cities, counties, cities and counties, or special districts.

- Sports and recreation equipment.
- Devices used to promote athletics such as scoreboards, banners, and advertising.
- All moneys used in conjunction with youth athletics.

[3] Establishing Discrimination and Enforcement

In civil actions brought under Gov. Code § 53080 or under other applicable antidiscrimination laws alleging discrimination in community youth athletics programs, courts must consider the following factors, among others, in determining whether discrimination exists [Gov. Code § 53080(f)]:

- Whether the selection of community youth athletics programs offered effectively accommodate the athletic interests and abilities of members of both genders.
- The provision of moneys, equipment, and supplies.
- Scheduling of games and practice times.
- Opportunity to receive coaching.
- Assignment and compensation of coaches.
- Access to lands and areas accessed through permitting, leasing, or other land use arrangements, or otherwise accessed through a city, a county, a city and county, or a special district.
- Selection of the season for a sport.
- Location of the games and practices.
- Locker rooms.
- Practice and competitive facilities.
- Publicity.
- Officiation by umpires, referees, or judges who have met training and certification standards.

In making the determination as to whether the selection of community youth athletics programs offered effectively accommodate the athletic interests and abilities of members of both genders, a court must assess whether the city, county, city and county, or special district has effectively accommodated the athletic interests and abilities of both genders in any one of the following ways [Gov. Code § 53080(g)]:

- The community youth athletics program opportunities for boys and girls are provided in numbers substantially proportionate to their respective numbers in the community.
- When the members of one gender have been, and continue to be, underrepresented in community youth athletics programs, the city, county, city and county, or special district can show a history and continuing practice of program expansion and allocation of resources that are demonstrably responsive to the developing interests and abilities of the members of that gender.

- When the members of one gender are underrepresented in community youth athletics programs, the city, county, city and county, or special district can demonstrate that the interests and abilities of the members of that gender have been fully and effectively accommodated by the present program and allocation of resources [see also Gov. Code § 53080(h) (effective January 1, 2015, city, county, city and county, and special district may no longer rely on Gov. Code § 53080(g)(2) to show they have accommodated athletic interests and abilities of both genders)].

Nothing in Gov. Code § 53080 may be construed to invalidate any existing consent decree or any other settlement agreement entered into by a city, county, city and county, or special district to address gender equity in athletic programs [Gov. Code § 53080(i)]. Gov. Code § 53080 and any ordinances, regulations, or resolutions adopted pursuant to this section by a city, county, city and county, or special district may be enforced against a city, county, city and county, or special district by a civil action for injunctive relief or damages, or both, which is independent of any other rights and remedies [Gov. Code § 53080(j)].

§ 112.37 Decisions

Gov. Code § 11135 supports private right of action. Greater L.A. Council on Deafness v. Zolin (9th Cir. 1987) 812 F.2d 1103, 1113-1114 (decided before 1999 amendment to Gov. Code § 11139)

Man who acted as tester, calling domestic violence shelters stating he was domestic violence victim and needed shelter, lacked standing to sue under Gov. Code §§ 11135, 11139, when although he alleged he had suffered domestic violence in past, it was not at time he made test calls to shelters and he did not allege that when he suffered domestic violence he asked shelters for shelter and was denied, so he was not personally aggrieved. Further, he lacked standing as tester because Gov. Code §§ 11135, 11139 do not provide for standing by party who was not personally injured. Concept that rules are relaxed in matters involving public interest did not apply, because § 11139 contained no suggestion of intent to broaden standing rule, and adoption of relaxed rule of standing applied here would frustrate purpose of § 11139 as specifically prohibiting interpretation that would adversely affect lawful program benefitting women. Blumhorst v. Jewish Family Services of Los Angeles (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 993, 1000-1005, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 474

There is no private right of action under Gov. Code § 11135. Arriaga v. Loma Linda Univ. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1556, 1561-1564, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 619 (decided before 1999 amendment to Gov. Code § 11139)

State-funded programs, viewed in their entirety, must be accessible to disabled persons. Martin v. City of Los Angeles (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 559, 564-566, 209 Cal. Rptr. 301

Municipal court's discretionary referral to traffic school does not constitute program or activity within meaning of Gov. Code § 11135; refusal to appoint interpreter at public expense to assist deaf defendant at traffic school was not violation of Gov. Code § 11135. People v. Levinson (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 13, 16-19 , 203 Cal. Rptr. 426

[2] Access to Public Buildings by Persons With Disabilities: Gov. Code §§ 4450-4460

Department of Housing and Community Development regulation, defining "publicly funded" to not include loans, grants, guarantees, or other assistance from a public agency to finance privately owned buildings, violated Gov. Code § 4450 requirement that all buildings constructed using publicfunds be accessible to disabled persons. Berkeley Center for Independent Living v. Coyle (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 874, 878-879, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 39

[3] Title VI of Civil Rights Act of 1964

University's use of race in its freshman admissions policy was not narrowly tailored to achieve asserted compelling interest in diversity, and violated Equal Protection Clause of Fourteenth Amendment as well as Title VI of 1964 Civil Rights Act and 42 U.S.C. § 1981. Gratz v. Bollinger (2003) 539 U.S. 244, 123 S. Ct. 2411, 2427-2431, 156 L. Ed. 2d 257

Law school's use of race in its admission policy did not violate Equal Protection Clause of federal Constitution or Title VI or 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981 because use of race was justified by compelling state interest in student body diversity, and admissions program was narrowly tailored because Law School engages in highly individualized, holistic review of each applicant's file, giving serious consideration to all ways applicant might contribute to diverse educational environment. Grutter v. Bollinger (2003) 539 U.S. 306, 123 S. Ct. 2325, 2338-2347, 156 L. Ed. 2d 304

In determining whether state has complied with duty to dismantle prior "dual" system of higher education that was racially segregated by law, protection of Title VI extends no further than reach of equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. XIV. United States v. Fordice (1992) 505 U.S. 717, 732, 112 S. Ct. 2727, 120 L. Ed. 2d 575

Individual discriminated against in violation of Title VI has right of action; declaratory and injunctive relief are available in all cases, but monetary damages are available only in cases of intentional violations. Guardians Ass'n v. Civil Service Comm'n (1983) 463 U.S. 582, 593-603, 103 S. Ct. 3221, 77 L. Ed. 2d 866

Title VI prohibitions are applicable to federally assisted public housing programs. Hills v. Gautreaux (1976) 425 U.S. 284, 301, 96 S. Ct. 1538, 47 L. Ed. 2d 792

Complaint by private mining company alleging that state officials' policy against use in state construction projects of materials mined from area as to which Native American tribes passed resolutions against mining because of area's religious, cultural, and historical significance to these groups failed to state claim under 42 U.S.C. § 2000d, when complaint did not allege that company had imputed racial identity and did not explain how company suffered from racial discrimination. Cholla Ready Mix, Inc. v. Civish (9th Cir. 2004) 382 F.3d 969, 977-978

Complaint alleging hostile racial education environment sufficiently alleged cause of action under Title VI. Monteiro v. Tempe Union High School Dist. (9th Cir. 1998) 158 F.3d 1022, 1032

To state claim for violation of Title VI, plaintiff must allege that defendant entity is engaging in racial discrimination and is receiving federal financial assistance. Fobbs v. Holy Cross Health System Corp. (9th Cir. 1994) 29 F.3d 1439, 1447 , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1127 (1995)

Actions under Title VI are subject to one-year statute of limitations under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Taylor v. Regents of Univ. of California (9th Cir. 1993) 993 F.2d 710, 712 , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1076 (1994)

Title VI only applies to non-federal entities receiving federal funding. Soberal-Perez v. Heckler (2d Cir. 1983) 717 F.2d 36, 38 , cert. denied, 466 U.S. 929 (1984)

Punitive damages available in Title VI case. Davision v. Santa Barbara High School Dist. (C.D.Cal. 1998) 48 F. Supp. 2d 1225, 1233

[4] Affirmative Action

Classification based on race is subject to strict scrutiny under equal protection analysis, even when it has "benign" purpose of remedying past societal discrimination against racial minorities. Adarand Constructors v. Pena (1995) 515 U.S. 200, 221-226, 115 S. Ct. 2097, 132 L. Ed. 2d 158

Governmental programs that impose racial classifications for remedial purposes subject to strict scrutiny under equal protection clause. City of Richmond v. Croson Co. (1989) 488 U.S. 469, 493-498, 109 S. Ct. 706, 102 L. Ed. 2d 854

Title VI proscribes only those racial classifications that would violate the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, or the Fifth Amendment. Regents of the University of California v. Bakke (1978) 438 U.S. 265, 284-287, 98 S. Ct. 2733, 57 L. Ed. 2d 750

Fourteenth Amendment permits university admissions programs that consider race for other than remedial purposes; educational diversity is compelling governmental interest that meets demands of strict scrutiny of race-conscious measures. Smith v. University of Washington, Law School (9th Cir. 2000) 233 F.3d 1188, 1201

[5] Rehabilitation Act of 1973

In action under ADA and Rehabilitation Act by paraplegic for failing to maintain appropriate policies for arrest and transportation of persons with spinal cord injuries, trial court properly vacated jury's award of punitive damages as unavailable in suits under § 202 of ADA and § 504 of Rehabilitation Act. Barnes v. Gorman (2002) 536 U.S. 181, 122 S. Ct. 2097, 2103, 153 L. Ed. 2d 230

Rehabilitation Act does not constitute congressional waiver of sovereign immunity; private right of action for monetary damages is not available against federal government. Lane v. Pena (1996) 518 U.S. 187, 191-200, 116 S. Ct. 2092, 135 L. Ed. 2d 486

Rehabilitation Act prohibition of discrimination against disabled persons, applied to teacher with contagious disease; case remanded for findings whether teacher was "otherwise qualified," and whether employer could provide reasonable accomodation. School Board of Nassau County v. Arline (1987) 480 U.S. 273, 284, 107 S. Ct. 1123, 94 L. Ed. 2d 307

Rehabilitation Act extends only to recipients of federal financial assistance, and not to those who may benefit from recipient's use of assistance; commercial airlines are not recipients of federal financial aid given to airports and therefore are not subject to Rehabilitation Act. Department of Transp. v. Paralyzed Veterans of Am. (1986) 477 U.S. 597, 610-611, 106 S. Ct. 2705, 91 L. Ed. 2d 494

Effect on disabled person of state's reduction of annual inpatient state Medicaid coverage did not violate Rehabilitation Act. Alexander v. Choate (1985) 469 U.S. 287, 306-309, 105 S. Ct. 712, 83 L. Ed. 2d 661

Rehabilitation Act protects individuals who can meet all of program's requirements in spite of disability; program is not required to take affirmative action to accommodate disabled. Southeastern Community College v. Davis (1979) 442 U.S. 397, 406, 411, 99 S. Ct. 2361, 60 L. Ed. 2d 980

Jury reasonably found that state department of veterans affairs did not violate Rehabilitation Act by refusing admission to veterans' homes to veteran diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease, where, although veteran was disabled within meaning of Rehabilitation Act and department was public entity receiving federal assistance, and although she met eligibility requirements for admission under state law and regulatory space and resource considerations were not eligibility requirements that had to be taken into account when deciding whether otherwise eligible applicant should have been admitted to home, veteran's estate failed to establish violation of Rehabilitation Act because it could not prove veteran was denied services solely because of her disability, since evidence at trial demonstrated that she was denied admission because of home's lack of resources and space to provide level of care she required. *Estate of Martin v. Hawaii unlawfully discriminated against aged, blind, and disabled people in violation of Rehabilitation Act by excluding them from eligibility for HMO medical coverage under state-sponsored program, when viewing Hawaii's Medicaid program as whole did not alter conclusion that Hawaii categorically discriminated against disabled, disabled did not have meaningful access to public benefits after Hawaii implemented program, Hawaii was not relieved of duty to include disabled in program because inclusion would have fundamentally altered program, and it was not necessary to exclude disabled from program. Lovell v. Chandler (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1039, 1052-1056

Hawaii waived any Eleventh Amendment immunity as to claims under § 504 of Rehabilitation Act by accepting Rehabilitation Act funds, since Congress validly conditioned state's receipt of Rehabilitation Act funding on its consent to waive Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit under § 504 and since Rehabilitation Act is valid exercise of Congress's spending power. Lovell v. Chandler (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1039, 1051

Student failed to prove that college discriminated against her while participating in overseas program on basis of disability in violation of Rehabilitation Act so as to entitle her to equitable relief or damages, when, although college failed to provide her with wheelchair access on number of occasions, college offered ample evidence of having accommodated her disability by hiring two helpers for her, paying for her to fly while others took trains and buses, paying for cot, second wheelchair, and unique shower head built to her specifications, and providing alternative wheelchair-accessible lodgings almost everywhere her class stayed, and college did not necessarily fail to make reasonable modifications simply because some aspects of program did not conform to her expectations, and when evidence indicated she enjoyed many benefits offered by program. Bird v. Lewis & Clark College (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1015, 1020-1021

In Rehabilitation Act action against state department of labor and industrial relations for denial of vocational rehabilitation services, district court erroneously granted state agency summary judgment on ground that agency was entitled to require individual to submit diagnosis of dyslexia from qualified medical professional and he had not done so, when there were genuine issues of fact as to whether individual had dyslexia and whether, if he did, dyslexia was impairment substantially limiting his ability to learn; and when, although agency could require reasonable evidence of disability before providing accommodations, agency relied not on absence of proof that individual was disabled by dyslexia, but on his failure to provide certain kind of proof, i.e., diagnostic "evidence," and agency could not insist on data supporting claim of disability beyond that which would satisfy reasonable expert in field. However, individual could not sue agency in individual capacity to vindicate rights created by Rehabilitation Act under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Vinson v. Thomas (9th Cir. 2002) 288 F.3d 1145

[6] Title II of Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990

Prisoner could maintain action against state for damages for violation of Title II of Americans With Disabilities Act to extent state's conduct violated prisoner's constitutional rights, where insofar as Title II created private cause of action for damages against state for conduct actually violating Fourteenth Amendment, including violations of Eighth Amendment's prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment, Title II validly abrogated state sovereign immunity. United States v. Georgia (2006) 546 U.S. 151, 126 S. Ct. 877, 880151882, 163 L. Ed. 2d 650

Action against state alleging past and ongoing violations of Title II by denial of access to and services of state court system by reason of disability was not barred by Eleventh Amendment, because Title II unquestionably is valid legislation under § 5 of Fourteenth Amendment as it applies to class of cases implicating accessibility of judicial services. Tennessee v. Lane (2004) 541 U.S. 509, 124 S. Ct. 1978, 1984-1994, 158 L. Ed. 2d 820

In action under ADA and Rehabilitation Act by paraplegic for failing to maintain appropriate policies for arrest and transportation of persons with spinal cord injuries, trial court properly vacated jury's award of punitive damages as unavailable in suits under § 202 of ADA and § 504 of *Rehabilitation Act. Proscription of discrimination in public services in Americans with Disabilities Act, 42 U.S.C. § 12132, may require placement of persons with mental disabilities in community settings rather than in institutions, when state's treatment professionals have determined that community placement is appropriate, transfer from institutional care to less restrictive setting is not opposed by affected individual, and placement can be reasonably accommodated taking into account resources available to the state and needs of others with mental disabilities. Olmstead v. L.C. (1999) 527 U.S. 581, 587, 119 S. Ct. 2176, 144 L. Ed. 2d 540

Sight-impaired transit riders could not recover under Americans With Disabilities Act, where public transit service system complied with existing federal Department of Transportation design regulations for train station accessibility; where district court erred by declaring Department of Transportation regulations arbitrary and capricious for considering impermissible factors or for failing to consider needs of persons with severe vision impairments who required information regarding accessible routes; and where transit district was immune from liability under safe harbor provisions of 49 C.F.R. § 37.9 and 42 U.S.C. § 12150. George v. Bay Area Rapid Transit District (9th Cir. 2009) 577 F.3d 1005, 1009-1013

28 C.F.R. § 35.150(d), requiring public entities to develop transition plan for achieving ADA's accessibility requirements, is not enforceable through private right of action under ADA, and district court erred in granting permanent injunction against city in action by individual requiring city to comply with § 35.150(d). Lonberg v. City of Riverside (9th Cir. 2009) 571 F.3d 846, 850-852

In action by paratransit rider under ADA seeking accommodation by rides provided in sedans and taxis rather than buses, Department of Justice regulation requiring public entities to make reasonable modifications in policies, practices, or procedures when necessary to avoid discrimination did not apply to public transportation systems governed by Part B of its own independent force and was not incorporated by reference in Department of Transportation's regulations implementing ADA and Rehabilitation Act even though Department of Transportation regulations did not mention reasonable modifications, except to extent they required private entities to make them, where Secretary of Transportation had sole authority to determine level of services paratransit systems had to provide to be considered "comparable" under ADA, and, although Secretary had apparently decided paratransit systems should make reasonable modifications to be considered comparable, Secretary had yet to issue final rules to impose such requirement. Boose v. Tri-County Metropolitan Transportation District of Oregon (9th Cir. 2009) 587 F.3d 997, 1001-1006

Jury reasonably found that state department of veterans affairs did not violate Americans With Disabilities Act by refusing admission to veterans' homes to veteran diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease, where, although veteran was disabled within meaning of ADA and department was public entity receiving federal assistance, and although she met eligibility requirements for admission under state law and regulatory space and resource considerations were not eligibility requirements that had to be taken into account when deciding whether otherwise eligible applicant should have been admitted to home, veteran's estate failed to establish violation of ADA because it could not prove veteran was denied services by reason of her disability, since evidence at trial demonstrated that she was denied admission because of home's lack of resources and space to provide level of care she required. Estate of Martin v. California Department of Veterans Affairs (9th Cir. 2009) 560 F.3d 1042, 1047-1049

Trial court erred by terminating order in class action regarding mobility- and dexterity-impaired pretrial detainees, where county's failure to accommodate their disabilities prevented them from enjoying number of county's services, programs, activities, and county did not reasonably address various structural barriers, county maintained unreasonable policies and practices in violation of ADA, and county did not posit any legitimate rationale for maintaining inaccessible bathrooms, sinks, showers, and other fixtures in housing areas and common spaces assigned to mobility- and dexterity-impaired detainees or offer explanation or justification for significant differences between vocational and recreational activities available to able and disabled detainees; district court's determination that although county was not in compliance with ADA, county would move toward full compliance was unwarranted given county's track record. Grant of summary judgment under Prison Litigation Reform Act to county on claims for mental and emotional harms caused by ADA violations was error, where PLRA does not apply to claims under ADA and prisoner's injuries were more than de minimis. Pierce v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2008) 519 F.3d 985, 1008-1019

State does not violate ADA when it limits number of people that can participate in Medicaid waiver program providing disabled persons with alternatives to institutionalization in home and community-based care, which cap is expressly contemplated by Medicaid waiver provisions. Arc of Wash. State, Inc. v. Braddock (9th Cir. 2005) 427 F.3d 615, 618-622

Plaintiff with AIDS made out claim under Title II of ADA for disability discrimination by city in denying his request for additional time to clean up his yard to comply with city's nuisance abatement ordinance, when benefit plaintiff sought was to be allowed sufficient time to comply with city's code enforcement activities in manner consistent with his disability. McGary v. City of Portland (9th Cir. 2004) 386 F.3d 1259, 1264-1270

Title II's statutory language does not prohibit injunctive action against state officials in their official capacities. Miranda B. v. Kitzhaber (9th Cir. 2003) 328 F.3d 1181, 1189

Refusal of secretary of state Department of Social and Health Services to offer community-based in-home nursing services to some disabled persons violates Title II of ADA by failing to provide long-term care services currently provided to medically needy disabled persons in integrated settings, unless state can show that providing services in community-based settings would fundamentally alter nature of services it currently dispenses to medically needy Medicaid recipients. Townsend v. Quasim (9th Cir. 2003) 328 F.3d 511, 515-520

Hawaii unlawfully discriminated against aged, blind, and disabled people in violation of Title II of Americans with Disabilities Act by excluding them from eligibility for HMO medical coverage under state-sponsored program, when viewing Hawaii's Medicaid program as whole did not alter conclusion that Hawaii categorically discriminated against disabled, disabled did not have meaningful access to public benefits after Hawaii implemented program, Hawaii was not relieved of duty to include disabled in program because inclusion would have fundamentally altered program, and it was not necessary to exclude disabled from program. Hawaii acted with deliberate indifference and engaged in intentional discrimination entitling plaintiffs to compensatory damages, when Hawaii facially discriminated against disabled and thus was chargeable with notice that federal rights are implicated by such discrimination and modification was required, when by choosing categorically to exclude disabled persons from program, despite knowing some excluded would remain without any coverage, Hawaii failed to act with requisite care to protect rights of the disabled, and when finding of intentional discrimination did not interfere with purpose of statutory limitation on compensatory damages. Lovell v. Chandler (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1039, 1052-1057

City's public sidewalks are service, program, or activity within meaning of ADA and therefore subject to program accessibility regulations. Barden v. City of Sacramento (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 1073, 1074

State prisoners stated claim for violation of Title II based on denial of parole release date due to substance abuse histories, when ADA applies to parole proceedings, including substantive decision making, as activity of public entity falling within ADA's reach; when drug addiction that substantially limits one or more major life activities is recognized disability under ADA and ADA protects individuals who have successfully completed or are participating in supervised drug rehabilitation program and are no longer using illegal drugs, which prisoners alleged; when prisoners alleged they are statutorily eligible for parole and thus that they are otherwise qualified for public benefit they seek, i.e., consideration for parole; and when prisoners alleged they were denied benefit of public program or activity, i.e., consideration for parole, by reason of their disability. Thompson v. Davis (9th Cir. 2002) 282 F.3d 780

Physician sufficiently alleged Title II claims against state medical board for denying his application for medical license for reasons of mental illness, when claims were not barred by Eleventh Amendment immunity since Congress validly abrogated sovereign immunity in enacting Title II, when medical licensing clearly falls within scope of Title II, and when complaint alleges that physician suffers from mental disability and that he had received treatment and was capable of practicing medicine. Hason v. Medical Bd. of California (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 1167, 1171-1173

In action by disabled individuals and disabled rights advocacy organization against hotel, trial court properly ruled that hotel violated ADA Accessibility Guideline 9.4, requiring doors and doorways designed to allow passage into and within sleeping units to have minimum opening of 32 inches, by only providing opening of 28 inches for doorway between sink area which is open to bedroom area and room containing toilet and bathtub/shower in "standard" rooms, where "sleeping unit" implies entirety of individual hotel guest unit when applied to hotel and includes bathrooms, and Congressional reports accompanying passage of ADA made clear that all doors and doorways designed to allow passage into and within all hotel rooms and bathrooms are required to be sufficiently wide to allow passage by individuals using wheelchairs; however, magistrate erred in (1) declining to order injunctive relief because of enormous expense required to modify hotel and near absence of hardship and minimal inconvenience to wheelchair users, where ADA requires newly constructed facilities to be accessible, so magistrate had no discretion, and where defense of structural impracticability did not apply because terrain on which hotel was constructed had no unique characteristics making accessibility unusually difficult to achieve; and (2) ruling that slot change kiosk counters did not violate Guidelines because Guideline 7.2(2) solely requires accessibility to main counter, even though parties agreed that two of four counters violated Guideline, where "main counter" in Guideline 7.2(2) serves only to distinguish main counter at particular station from "auxiliary counter" at same station, and merchant cannot circumvent guideline by declaring one counter to be "main counter." Magistrate also erred in ruling that hotel violated Guideline 5.2 governing accessibility to bar counters, because two of three bars did not have counters complying with Guideline 5.2, where guideline provides for compliance by hotel providing service that is accessible within same area and one bar contained such seating and magistrate failed to determine whether seating was within same area. Placing six of nine pool cabanas on accessible route was reasonable and complied with ADA. Plaintiffs had no standing to challenge noncompliance in employee area of slot change kiosks since neither plaintiff was employee and organization did not allege any of its members were hotel employees or would have occasion to enter working areas of kiosks. Long v. Coast Resorts, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 267 F.3d 918

Severely hearing-impaired individual presented sufficient evidence to create triable issue of fact as to whether refusal to provide videotext display during hearings and trial in his state-court marital dissolution proceeding violated ADA, Rehabilitation Act, and state law for failure to make reasonable accommodation, when individual presented evidence that videotext display was available at time of hearings, when individual had examined court's proposed accommodation, which was assistive listening system, before rejecting it, and presented evidence regarding insufficiency of device, and when individual offered detailed testimony explaining the difficulties he experienced following proceedings; individual also presented sufficient evidence to create triable issue of fact to meet deliberate indifference standard by presenting evidence that superior court ADA coordinator and two other county employees had notice of his need for accommodation and failed despite repeated requests to take necessary action. Duvall v. County of Kitsap (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1124, 1136-1138

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying request for permanent injunction against metropolitan transit system under ADA, when evidence presented by wheelchair-bound plaintiff of wheelchair lift failures on public buses established frustrating but isolated instances of malfunctioning lift service on transit system and that few individual operators have not treated passengers as they are required and trained to do, which at most showed past violations of ADA but did not support inference that plaintiff faced real and immediate threat of continued future violations of ADA in absence of injunctive relief; when transit system's practices and procedures for ensuring ADA compliance further showed that plaintiff did not face threat of immediate irreparable harm without injunction; when fact that transit system was local governmental agency with procedures already in place for monitoring lift performance and ADA compliance militated against federal court mandating substitute procedures of its own design to address same issues; and when trial court's determination that plaintiff had standing to bring ADA action did not require court to conclude plaintiff necessarily demonstrated sufficient fear of immediate and substantial injury to warrant injunction. Midgett v. Tri-County Metropolitan Transp. Dist. (9th Cir. 2001) 254 F.3d 846, 850-851

Medical student raised triable issues of fact in claim for school's failure to make reasonable accommodation under Americans with Disabilities Act based on dismissal from medical school for failure to meet academic qualifications, where dean's denial of student's requested accommodation is not entitled to deference because university failed to present record undisputedly showing that dean investigated proposed accommodation to determine whether school feasibly could implement it or alternative modification without substantially altering school's standards. Wong v. Regents of the Univ. of California (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 807, 817-818, 826

Prisoners' claim that Board of Prison Terms' consideration of prisoners' past substance abuse history as part of its parole decisions violates Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) may be brought as action under ADA and need not be brought as habeas corpus petition, where claim does not necessarily challenge fact or duration of confinement. Bogovich v. Sandoval (9th Cir. 1999) 189 F.3d 999, 1002-1004

Trial court abused its discretion by applying erroneous legal standard to determine whether urgency ordinance forbidding issuance of permits to or operation of new substance abuse clinics, including methadone clinics, located within 500 feet of residential property is likely to violate Americans with Disabilities Act and Rehabilitation Act, where ordinance discriminates on its face against qualified individuals, so that reasonable modifications test did not apply and court should have used significant risk test to analyze alleged threat posed by methadone clinic. Bay Area Addiction Research and Treatment, Inc. v. City of Antioch (9th Cir. 1999) 179 F.3d 725, 733-737

Visually impaired litigant failed to show violation of Americans with Disabilities Act by court's refusal to provide her with helper of her choice during trial, where court offered helper with the ability to observe, to read, and to communicate verbally with her, where litigant never consulted with helper to determine in what ways the helper could or could not assist her, and where allowing litigant to refuse services of court-appointed assistant in favor of one previously deemed vexatious and disruptive litigant would require program to make substantial modifications in way it runs its court system. Memmer v. Marin County Courts (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 630, 633-634

Student dismissed from medical school failed to state cause of action under Americans with Disabilities Act based on learning disability where school's academic decision was entitled to deference, where school gave student accommodations given to every learning disabled student, and where student's requested additional accommodations were not reasonable so that student failed to meet essential eligibility requirements with aid of reasonable accommodations. *Zukle v. In marital dissolution action, in which husband suffered from permanent cognitive disabilities arising from multiple traumatic injuries to his brain's frontal lobes, resulting in neuropsychiatric impairment including short term memory, organization, executive functioning, and concentration, trial court erred in not ruling on husband's request for neuropsychologist as facilitator as accommodation under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.100, where rules of court required court to respond to request for accommodation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.100(e)] and to inform applicant in writing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.100(e)(2)], and tacit denial did neither of those; where nothing in record suggested trial court denied request because husband failed to comply with procedural requirements of Rule 1.100; where no evidence suggested that providing neuropsychologist would have burdened court any differently from appointment of other facilitators, such as readers and certified interpreters for deaf, which Rule 1.100 explicitly contemplated as type of accommodations courts ought to provide; and where nothing in record suggested neuropsychologist assisting husband would have necessarily altered judicial services court provided to public. Appellate court could conclude error was structural without requiring husband to show prejudice. Biscaro v. Stern (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 702, 707-710, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 817

In marital dissolution proceeding, in which wife suffered from bipolar disorder and two forms of cancer, under Cal.

[6A] Title III of Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990

Visually impaired and mobility-impaired woman who depended on electric wheelchair for transportation failed to state claim under Title III of ADA against store and store's landlord, based on claim that she could not traverse long strip of land containing public sidewalk and 10-foot-wide grassy berm to gain access to store. Grassy strip and sidewalk were owned by city; store and landlord did not mow, maintain, or manage grassy strip; and city had exclusive control over design and construction of sidewalk. Further, Title III requires that store and landlord controlling grassy strip of land be subject to liability for failing to build ramp over it, and, according to Department of Justice's regulations implementing ADA, definition of "facility" only included site over which private entity could exercise control or on which place of public accommodation or a commercial facility was located. Pickern v. Pier 1 Imports (U.S.), Inc. (9th Cir. 2006) 457 F.3d 963, 966-968

Wheelchair-bound movie patron and his wife had standing to assert cause of action under Title III of Americans With Disabilities Act based on denial of companion seat to patron's wife during screening of one movie for which they had tickets, even though they continued to patronize same theater and denial of companion seat had not occurred since that incident, when individual refused to vacate available companion seat because companion seat was where he and his son wanted to sit and they did not want to move and theater had policy of not making them move to make companion seats available to companions of disabled patrons, and wrong engendered provided evidence bearing on whether there was real and immediate threat of repeated injury as required by ADA, and when, as consequence of theater's policy, disabled patron could be denied opportunity to attend sold-out film screening, regardless of how early he arrived, provided only single non-companion individual refused to change seats, and since there were only four companion seats in theater, policy denied disabled patron opportunity to sit with his companion equal to that enjoyed by ambulatory patrons. District court properly concluded patron had established claim under ADA by showing: (1) he was disabled as defined by ADA; (2) defendant theater was private entity that owned, leased, or operated place of public accommodation; (3) theater employed discriminatory policy or practice, because plaintiff could not attend movies without his wife as his companion; and (4) theater discriminated against plaintiff based on plaintiff's disability by (a) failing to make requested reasonable modification in policy that was (b) necessary to accommodate plaintiff's disability, by ensuring he could be seated next to his wife or another companion at theater, and requested modification in policy did not fundamentally alter nature of services provided by theater. Injunction ensuring wheelchair-bound patrons can sit next to companions did not result in preferential treatment to disabled, but by ensuring wheelchair-bound patron could sit with spouse or another companion, it merely required theater to make reasonable accommodation to permit wheelchair-bound patron to attend and enjoy theater. Fortyune v. American Multi-Cinema, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 364 F.3d 1075, 1080-1086

District court erred in granting defendants' motion for summary judgment holding that stadium seating plans in movie theaters, which largely resulted in wheelchair-bound patrons being seated in first row, did not violate Title III of ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12182], and regulations promulgated by Department of Justice requiring that movie theaters provide comparable lines of sight for wheelchair-bound and non-wheelchair-bound moviegoers were not entitled to deference. In light of plain meaning of regulation both in general and as understood in movie theater industry, it was not unreasonable for DOJ to interpret "comparable line of sight" to encompass factors in addition to physical obstructions, such as viewing angle, and DOJ's interpretation was entitled to deference. Oregon Paralyzed Veterans of Am. v. Regal Cinemas, Inc. (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1126, 1131-1133

Student failed to prove that college discriminated against her while participating in overseas program on basis of disability in violation of Title III of ADA so as to entitle her to equitable relief or damages, when, although college failed to provide her with wheelchair access on number of occasions, college offered ample evidence of having accommodated her disability by hiring two helpers for her, paying for her to fly while others took trains and buses, paying for cot, second wheelchair, and unique shower head built to her specifications, and providing alternative wheel-chair accessible lodgings almost everywhere her class stayed, and college did not necessarily fail to make reasonable modifications simply because some aspects of program did not conform to her expectations, and when evidence indicated she enjoyed many benefits offered by program. Bird v. Lewis & Clark College (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1015, 1020-1021

[7] Title IX of Education Amendments of 1972

In action by parents alleging unconstitutional gender discrimination in school based on alleged peer-to-peer harassment, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 [20 U.S.C. § 1681(a)] did not preclude action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, where Congress did not intend Title IX to preclude § 1983 constitutional suits. Fitzgerald v. Barnstable School Committee (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 788, 172 L. Ed. 2d 582, 590-595

District court erred in dismissing complaint of school teacher and coach alleging that board of education retaliated against him for complaining about sex discrimination in high school athletic program in violation of Title IX, because retaliation falls within Title IX's prohibition of intentional discrimination on basis of sex, and retaliation against teacher for advocacy of rights of girls' basketball team was discrimination on basis of sex. Jackson v. Birmingham Bd. of Ed. (2005) 544 U.S. 167, 125 S. Ct. 1497, 1504-1510, 161 L. Ed. 2d 361

Title IX regulations prohibiting federally funded education programs from discriminating on basis of gender with respect to employment are valid within Title IX's proscription of gender discrimination in education programs or activities receiving federal financial assistance. *North Haven Board of Education v. The exception to Title IX for undergraduate educational institutions that traditionally and continually have admitted students of only one sex does not shield such institutions from the operation of the Fourteenth Amendment. *Mississippi University for Women v. Private right of action is available under Title IX to challenge sex discrimination in education program receiving federal financial assistance. Cannon v. University of Chicago (1979) 441 U.S. 677, 717, 99 S. Ct. 1946, 60 L. Ed. 2d 560

In class action by female wrestlers against university for money damages for violation of effective accommodation under Title IX based on elimination of women from varsity wrestling team, trial court erred in finding that plaintiffs were required to give defendant prelitigation notice of and opportunity to rectify specific alleged violation, where athletic programs that fail effectively to accommodate students of both sexes represent official policy of recipient entity and are not covered by notice requirement. Trial court erred in granting university summary judgment on ground that record demonstrated history and continuing practice of program expansion for women under Option Two under Title XI, where undisputed facts fell short of demonstrating university's compliance with either facet of Option Two because elimination of women from varsity wrestling team took place in context of overall contraction of female athletic participation opportunities, and university's strategy for sports equality between sexes appears to have consisted of reducing varsity athletics overall and reducing men's participation more than women's participation by using "roster management" to limit size of men's teams, and Title IX explicitly precluded considering such reductions as evidencing program expansion. Further, district court erred in dismissing students' action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for violation of Equal Protection Clause by maintaining athletics program that discriminated on basis of gender on ground that Title IX's enforcement scheme was sufficiently comprehensive to demonstrate that Congress intended to preclude § 1983 claims when it enacted Title IX, because Title IX does not bar § 1983 suits to enforce rights under Equal Protection Clause. Mansourian v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal. (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 1095, 1100-1111

Title IX did not prevent university in which males occupied disproportionately high percentage of athletic roster spots from making gender-conscious decision to reduce proportion of spots assigned to men. Neal v. Board of Trustees of Cal. State Universities (9th Cir. 1999) 198 F.3d 763, 766-773

Title IX applies to state prison education programs, although legitimate penological interests may limit Title IX's application in that context. Jeldness v. Pearce (9th Cir. 1994) 30 F.3d 1220, 1224-1225

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use in state court, by a person who, on the basis of race, national origin, ethnic group identification, religion, age, sex, sexual orientation, color, or disability, has been denied full access to the benefits of, or discriminated against in, a program or activity funded directly by the state or receiving any financial assistance from the state [Gov. Code §§ 11135, 11139]. Gov. Code § 11139 provides for only equitable relief for denial of benefits or discrimination by a state-funded program or activity. The complaint in [1], above, seeks injunctive relief.

[3] Allegations

The complaint in [1], above, alleges all of the following:

- Plaintiff's name, capacity, and residence (Paragraph 1).

- Defendant's capacity and residence, for purposes of establishing venue (Paragraph 2) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395; see also discussion in § 112.11[3] and Ch. 571, Venue].

- An optional allegation as to fictitiously named defendant(s) (Optional Paragraph 3) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 474].

- An optional allegation for use when agents are being sued (Optional Paragraph 4) [see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent].

- Defendants' operation of one or more programs or activities that are funded directly by the state or that receive any financial assistance from the state (Paragraph 5) [see Gov. Code § 11135].

- The protected characteristic of plaintiff that was the basis for the defendants' denial to plaintiff of benefits or defendants' discrimination against plaintiff in the state-funded program or activity (Paragraph 6). The possible protected characteristics are race, national origin, ethnic group identification, religion, age, sex, sexual orientation, color, or disability [Gov. Code § 11135].

- Defendants' denial to plaintiff of full access to the benefits of, and/or unlawful discrimination against plaintiff under, the state-funded program or activity (Paragraph 7) [Gov. Code § 11135].

- That plaintiff's protected characteristic was the basis for the denial of benefits or discrimination (Paragraph 8) [Gov. Code § 11135].

- An optional allegation, that plaintiff demanded that defendants stop the unlawful and discriminatory conduct, that defendants refused, and that there is a need for prompt judicial action to protect plaintiff (Optional Paragraph 9).

- That defendants' actual or threatened unlawful and discriminatory conduct will cause plaintiff great and irreparable injury until enjoined and restrained by an order of the court (Paragraph 10).

- That plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law (Paragraph 11).

[4] Prayer

The prayer in the complaint in [1], above, seeks the following equitable relief:

- A temporary restraining order;

- A preliminary injunction; and

- A permanent injunction.

The complaint does not seek damages because Gov. Code § 11139 provides for only equitable relief.

[5] Attorney's Fees

[a] Optional Prayer for Attorney's Fees

The prayer in the complaint in [1], above, includes an optional prayer for attorney's fees. Gov. Code §§ 11135-11139 do not include a provision regarding attorney's fees. However, in an appropriate case, an award of attorney's fees may be available under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, which provides for awards of attorney's fees in cases resulting in public benefit.

For detailed discussion and forms relating to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.50 et seq.

[b] When Award for Fees Is Appropriate

An award is appropriate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 if all of the following apply [Flannery v. California Highway Patrol (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 629, 634, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 632 ; see Woodland Hills Residents Assn., Inc. v. City Council of Los Angeles (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 917, 935-936, 154 Cal. Rptr. 503, 593 P.2d 200 (important rights include constitutional and statutory rights and encompass cases involving racial discrimination [dicta])]:

- A significant benefit, whether or not pecuniary in nature, has been conferred on the general public or a large class of persons;
- The necessity and financial burden of private enforcement make the award appropriate; and
- In the interest of justice, the fees should not be paid out of the recovery, if any.

[c] Award of Fees Is Within Trial Court's Discretion

The question whether to award fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 is within the trial court's discretion, and the decision to award or deny fees will not be disturbed on appeal absent a showing of abuse of that discretion. However, that discretion may not be exercised whimsically. Reversal is required when there is no reasonable basis for the trial court's ruling, or when the trial court has applied the wrong test to determine if the statutory requirements were satisfied [Flannery v. California Highway Patrol (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 629, 634, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 632] .

[6] Verification

Verification of the complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 446] is required if plaintiff is seeking a temporary restraining order and/or preliminary injunction based on facts alleged in the complaint alone without the use of affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]. Otherwise, verification of the complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)]. However, if the complaint is verified, the defendant is required to file a verified answer in superior court, unless the defendant is a public entity [see Code Civ. Proc. § 446]. Furthermore, whether or not the defendant is a public entity, if the complaint is verified, the defendant is precluded from making a general denial in superior court [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)].

For further discussion of the effect of verifying a complaint, see Ch. 26, Answers . For alternative forms of verification, see Ch. 572, Verification .

Plaintiff alleges:

1. This is an action to recover damages against defendants for violation of 42 U.S.C. § 2000d (Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964), and to obtain a preliminary and permanent injunction to prevent defendants from further violating that statute.

2. This action arises under 42 U.S.C. § 2000d (Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964). The jurisdiction of this Court is predicated on 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343.

3. Plaintiff, _____ [name], is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, a natural person, and a resident of _____ [county], California, [and a citizen of the United States].

4. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, _____ [state capacity and residence of defendant or other basis of venue, e.g., a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of California with its principal place of business in _____ (city), _____ (county), California]. Venue is therefore proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).

[5. A substantial part of the events giving rise to this action occurred in _____ (county), California. Venue is therefore proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).]

[6. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that,) (A)t all times mentioned in this complaint, each defendant was the agent of the other(s), was acting within the course and scope of this agency, and all acts alleged to have been committed by any one of them was committed on behalf of every other defendant.]

7. _____ [Allege facts showing that defendants operate one or more programs or activities that receive federal financial assistance.]

8. _____ [Allege protected characteristic of plaintiff (race color, or national origin) that was the basis for discrimination against plaintiff by defendants.]

9. _____ [Allege facts showing that defendants excluded plaintiff from participation in, denied plaintiff the benefits of, and/or subjected plaintiff to discrimination under, a program or activity receiving federal financial assistance.]

10. _____ [Allege that plaintiff's protected characteristic was the basis for the exclusion, denial of benefits, or discrimination, e.g., (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that) (D)efendants, and each of them, excluded plaintiff from participation in, denied to plaintiff the benefits of, and discriminated against plaintiff in _____ (identify the federally assisted program(s) or activity(ies)) because of plaintiff's (race color, or national origin).]

[11. _____ (Allege, if appropriate, plaintiff's demand that defendants stop the unlawful and discriminatory conduct, defendants' refusal, and the resulting necessity for prompt judicial action to protect plaintiff, e.g., On or about _____ [date], plaintiff demanded that defendants stop the unlawful, discriminatory conduct described above, but defendants refused, and still refuse, to refrain from that conduct)].

12. As a direct and proximate result of defendants' actions, described above, plaintiff has suffered _____ [injury, loss, and/or damage] in that _____ [describe injury, loss, and/or damage].

[13. In acting as is alleged in this complaint, defendants acted knowingly, willfully, and maliciously, and with reckless and callous disregard for Plaintiff's federally protected rights.]

14. As a result of defendants' actions, plaintiff has suffered and will continue to suffer extreme hardship and actual and impending irreparable _____ [injury, loss, and/or damage] in that _____ [state specific and definite facts showing the impending irreparable injury, loss, and/or damage].

15. Plaintiff has no adequate or speedy remedy at law for the conduct of defendants described above, because _____ [explain]. This action for injunctive relief is plaintiff's only means of securing prospective relief.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For a preliminary injunction ordering defendants, and their officers, agents, employees, successors, and attorneys, and all those in active concert or participation with defendants, to refrain immediately and pending the final hearing and resolution of this action from _____ [describe conduct to be enjoined];

2. For a permanent injunction permanently enjoining and restraining defendants, and their officers, agents, employees, successors, and attorneys, and all those in active concert or participation with defendants, from _____ [describe conduct to be enjoined];

3. For compensatory damages, in an amount to be determined according to proof at trial;

[4. For punitive damages, in an amount to be determined according to proof at trial;]

5. For reasonable attorney's fees, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1988;

6. For costs of suit incurred in this action; and

7. For such other and further relief as the Court deems proper.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use in federal court, by a person who, on the basis of race, color, or national origin, has been excluded from participation in, denied the benefits of, and/or discriminated against in a program or activity receiving federal financial assistance [42 U.S.C. § 2000d]. The complaint seeks preliminary and permanent injunctive relief and damages.

Recovery of damages is only available in cases involving intentional violations of Title VI; in cases of unintentional violations, only declaratory and injunctive relief is available [Guardians Ass'n v. Civil Service Comm'n (1983) 463 U.S. 582, 603, 103 S. Ct. 3221, 77 L. Ed. 2d 866] . The complaint in [1], above, is drafted for use in a case involving intentional violations. Although the plaintiff must prove an intentional violation to recover damages, intent need not be pled in the complaint [Fobbs v. Holy CrossHealth System Corp. (9th Cir. 1994) 29 F.3d 1439, 1447 , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1127 (1995)] .

In a case involving only unintentional violations, this form should be altered to remove the prayer for damages.

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 1 of the complaint in [1], above, is an introductory paragraph. The form of complaint goes on to allege all of the following:

- That this action arises under 42 U.S.C. § 2000d (Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964), and that therefore the court has jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343 (Paragraph 2).

- Plaintiff's name, capacity, residence, and United States citizenship (if applicable) (Paragraph 3).

- Defendant's capacity and residence, for purposes of establishing venue (Paragraph 4) [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue proper in district where a defendant resides, if all defendants are from the same state)].

- An optional paragraph (Optional Paragraph 5) identifying a county in which a substantial part of the events giving rise to the action occurred. This paragraph is for use in a case when the plaintiff wishes to establish venue in such county [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue proper in district where a substantial part of the events giving rise to the action occurred)].

- An optional allegation for use when agents are being sued (Optional Paragraph 6) [see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent].

- Defendants' operation of one or more programs or activities receiving federal financial assistance (Paragraph 7) [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000d].

- The protected characteristic of plaintiff that was the basis for the defendants' exclusion of plaintiff, denial of benefits to plaintiff, or discrimination against plaintiff (Paragraph 8). The protected characteristics under Title VI are race, color, and national origin [42 U.S.C. § 2000d].

- Defendants' exclusion of plaintiff from, denial to plaintiff of the benefits of, and/or unlawful discrimination against plaintiff under, the federally assisted program or activity (Paragraph 9) [42 U.S.C.

- That plaintiff's protected characteristic was the basis for the exclusion, denial of benefits, or discrimination (Paragraph 10) [42 U.S.C. § 2000d].

- An optional allegation that plaintiff demanded that defendants stop the unlawful and discriminatory conduct, that defendants refused, and that there is a need for prompt judicial action to protect plaintiff (Optional Paragraph 11).

- That as a direct and proximate result of defendants' actions, plaintiff suffered injury, loss, and/or damage, and a description of the injury, loss, and/or damage (Paragraph 12).

- An optional allegation that defendants acted knowingly, willfully, and maliciously, and with reckless and callous disregard for plaintiff's federally protected rights (Optional Paragraph 13). This optional allegation, if appropriate under the circumstances, would support recovery of punitive damages [see Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 56, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632 (establishing standard for recovery of punitive damages in cases brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983); see also [4][d], below].

- That defendants' actions caused and will continue to cause plaintiff to suffer extreme hardship and actual and impending irreparable injury, loss, and/or damage, and an explanation of the impending irreparable injury, loss, and damage (Paragraph 14).

- That plaintiff has no adequate or speedy remedy at law (Paragraph 15).

[4] Prayer

[a] Injunctive Relief

The prayer in the complaint in [1], above, seeks preliminary and permanent injunctive relief.

[b] Damages

The complaint also seeks damages. The damages prayer should only be used in a case in which the plaintiff will attempt to prove that the violation of Title VI was intentional [see Guardians Ass'n v. Civil Service Comm'n (1983) 463 U.S. 582, 603, 103 S. Ct. 3221, 77 L. Ed. 2d 866] .

[c] Attorney's Fees

The prayer includes a prayer for attorney's fees. 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b) specifically provides for the recovery of attorney's fees in Title VI cases.

[d] Punitive Damages

The law is not settled regarding the availability of punitive damages in actions to enforce Title VI [see Davision v. Santa Barbara High School Dist. (C.D.Cal. 1998) 48 F. Supp. 2d 1225, 1233] (punitive damages available in a Title VI case); but see Moreno v. CONRAIL (6th Cir. 1996) 99 F.3d 782, 788-792 (en banc) (holding, in Rehabilitation Act case, that punitive damages are not available). The complaint in [1], above, includes an optional prayer for punitive damages. In a case where the violation of Title VI was motivated by evil motive or intent, or involved reckless or callous indifference to the plaintiff's federally protected rights [see Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 56, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632 (establishing standard for recovery of punitive damages in cases brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983)], the plaintiff might be able to recover punitive damages. If the facts do not involve evil motive or intent, or reckless or callous indifference to the plaintiff's federally protected rights, the optional punitive damages allegation (Optional Paragraph 13 of the form of complaint) and the optional prayer for punitive damages should not be used.

[5] Jury Demand

The complaint in [1], above, includes a demand for trial by jury. In a Title VI case in which damages are sought, the plaintiff will have a right to a jury trial [U.S. Const., amend. VII]. Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 38 governs demands for trial by jury. Under Rule 38, the demand for trial by jury may be served at any time after commencement of the action and not later than 10 days after service of the last pleading directed to the issue triable by jury. The rule provides further that "[s]uch demand may be indorsed upon a pleading of the party" [Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 38(b)]. Therefore, the demand for trial by jury may be included in the complaint, as is the case in the form of complaint in [1], above.

7. _____ [Allege facts showing that defendants operate a program or activity within the meaning of 29 U.S.C. § 794(b), and that defendants receive federal financial assistance.]

8. _____ [Allege facts describing plaintiff's disability.]

9. Plaintiff is disabled within the meaning of 29 U.S.C. § 794 in that _____ [plaintiff's conditions described above are a (physical and/or mental) impairment that substantially limits one or more of plaintiff's major life activities, and/or plaintiff has a record of a (physical and/or mental) impairment that substantially limits one or more of plaintiff's major life activities, and/or plaintiff is regarded as having a (physical and/or mental) impairment that substantially limits one or more of plaintiff's major life activities].

10. Plaintiff is "otherwise qualified" within the meaning of 29 U.S.C. § 794 in that _____ [explain how plaintiff meets the qualifications, or with reasonable accommodations could meet the qualifications, of the program or activity in which plaintiff was discriminated against].

[11. Defendants failed to provide plaintiff with "reasonable accommodation" within the meaning of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 in that _____ (describe the reasonable accommodations at issue, plaintiff's requests for the reasonable accommodations, and defendants' failure to provide the reasonable accommodations).]

12. _____ [Allege facts showing that defendants excluded plaintiff from participation in, denied plaintiff the benefits of, and/or subjected plaintiff to discrimination under, a program or activity receiving federal financial assistance.]

13. _____ [Allege that plaintiff's disability was the sole basis for the exclusion, denial of benefits, or discrimination, e.g., (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that) (D)efendants, and each of them, excluded plaintiff from participation in, denied to plaintiff the benefits of, and discriminated against plaintiff in _____ (identify the federally assisted program(s) or activity(ies)) solely because of plaintiff's disability.]

[14. _____ (Allege, if appropriate, plaintiff's demand that defendants stop the unlawful and discriminatory conduct, defendants' refusal, and the resulting necessity for prompt judicial action to protect plaintiff, e.g., On or about _____ [date], plaintiff demanded that defendants stop the unlawful, discriminatory conduct described above, but defendants refused, and still refuse, to refrain from that conduct)].

15. As a direct and proximate result of defendants' actions, described above, plaintiff has suffered _____ [injury, loss, and/or damage] in that _____ [describe injury, loss, and/or damage].

[16. In acting as is alleged in this complaint, defendants acted knowingly, willfully, and maliciously, and with reckless and callous disregard for plaintiff's federally protected rights.]

17. As a result of defendants' actions, plaintiff has suffered and will continue to suffer extreme hardship and actual and impending irreparable _____ [injury, loss, and/or damage] in that _____ [state specific and definite facts showing the impending irreparable injury, loss, and/or damage].

18. Plaintiff has no adequate or speedy remedy at law for the conduct of defendants described above, because _____ [explain]. This action for injunctive relief is plaintiff's only means of securing prospective relief.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For a preliminary injunction ordering defendants, and their officers, agents, employees, successors, and attorneys, and all those in active concert or participation with defendants, to refrain immediately and pending the final hearing and resolution of this action from _____ [describe conduct to be enjoined];

2. For a permanent injunction permanently enjoining and restraining defendants, and their officers, agents, employees, successors, and attorneys, and all those in active concert or participation with defendants, from _____ [describe conduct to be enjoined];

3. For compensatory damages, in an amount to be determined according to proof at trial;

[4. For punitive damages, in an amount to be determined according to proof at trial;]

5. For reasonable attorney's fees, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1988;

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use in federal court, by a person who, solely on the basis of disability, has been excluded from participation in, denied the benefits of, and/or discriminated against in a program or activity receiving federal financial assistance [29 U.S.C. § 794]. The form of complaint in [1], above, seeks preliminary and permanent injunctive relief, and damages.

The remedies available in a Rehabilitation Act case are the same as those recoverable in a case brought under Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [29 U.S.C. § 794a(a)(2)]. Therefore, as in Title VI cases, in Rehabilitation Act cases recovery of damages is only available in cases involving intentional violations; in cases of unintentional violations, only declaratory and injunctive relief is available [Guardians Ass'n v. Civil Service Comm'n (1983) 463 U.S. 582, 603, 103 S. Ct. 3221, 77 L. Ed. 2d 866 (Title VI case)] . The complaint in [1], above, is drafted for use in a case involving intentional violations. Although the plaintiff must prove an intentional violation to recover damages, intent need not be pled in the complaint [see Fobbs v. Holy Cross Health System Corp. (9th Cir. 1994) 29 F.3d 1439, 1447 , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1127 (1995)] .

In a case involving only unintentional violations, this form should be altered to remove the prayer for damages.

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 1 of the complaint in [1], above, is an introductory paragraph. The form of complaint goes on to allege all of the following:

- That this action arises under 29 U.S.C. § 794 (Rehabilitation Act of 1973), and that therefore the court has jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343 (Paragraph 2).

- Plaintiff's name, capacity, residence, and United States citizenship (if applicable) (Paragraph 3).

- Defendant's capacity and residence, for purposes of establishing venue (Paragraph 4) [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue proper in district where a defendant resides, if all defendants are from the same state)].

- An optional paragraph (Optional Paragraph 5) identifying a county in which a substantial part of the events giving rise to the action occurred. This paragraph is for use in a case where the plaintiff wishes to establish venue in such county [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue proper in district where a substantial part of the events giving rise to the action occurred)].

- An optional allegation for use when agents are being sued (Optional Paragraph 6) [see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent].

- Defendants' operation of a "program or activity," and defendants' receipt of federal financial assistance (Paragraph 7) [see 29 U.S.C. § 794]. The phrase "program or activity" is defined in 29 U.S.C. § 794(b) to include certain kinds of entities [see § 112.15[1][c][iii]]. This paragraph of the complaint should show that defendants operate a program or activity that falls within that definition.

- A description of plaintiff's disability (Paragraph 8) [29 U.S.C. § 794].

- An allegation that plaintiff's condition amounts to a "disability" within the meaning of the Rehabilitation Act, using the defining language from the Act (Paragraph 9) [29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(B)].

- An allegation that plaintiff is "otherwise qualified" within the meaning of the Rehabilitation Act (Paragraph 10) [29 U.S.C. § 794].

- An optional allegation (Optional Paragraph 11) for use in cases in which it is alleged that defendants failed to provide plaintiff with requested reasonable accomodations. This paragraph describes the reasonable accomodations at issue, plaintiffs requests for the reasonable accomodations, and defendants' failure to provide the reasonable accomodations.

- Defendants' exclusion of plaintiff from, denial to plaintiff of the benefits of, and/or unlawful discrimination against plaintiff under, the federally assisted program or activity (Paragraph 12) [29 U.S.C. § 794].

- That plaintiff's disability was the sole basis for the exclusion, denial of benefits, or discrimination (Paragraph 13) [29 U.S.C. § 794].

- An optional allegation that plaintiff demanded that defendants stop the unlawful and discriminatory conduct, that defendants refused, and that there is a need for prompt judicial action to protect plaintiff (Optional Paragraph 14).

- That as a direct and proximate result of defendants' actions, plaintiff suffered injury, loss, and/or damage, and a description of the injury, loss, and/or damage (Paragraph 15).

- An optional allegation, that defendants acted knowingly, willfully, and maliciously, and with reckless and callous disregard for plaintiff's federally protected rights (Optional Paragraph 16). This optional allegation, if appropriate under the circumstances, would support recovery of punitive damages [see Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 56, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632 (establishing standard for recovery of punitive damages in cases brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983); see also [4][d], below].

- That defendants' actions caused and will continue to cause plaintiff to suffer extreme hardship and actual and impending irreparable injury, loss, and/or damage, and an explanation of the impending irreparable injury, loss, and damage (Paragraph 17).

- That plaintiff has no adequate or speedy remedy at law (Paragraph 18).

[4] Prayer

[a] Injunctive Relief

The prayer in the complaint in [1], above, seeks preliminary and permanent injunctive relief.

[b] Damages

The complaint also seeks damages. The damages prayer should only be used in a case in which the plaintiff will attempt to prove that the violation of the Rehabilitation Act was intentional [see Guardians Ass'n v. Civil Service Comm'n (1983) 463 U.S. 582, 603, 103 S. Ct. 3221, 77 L. Ed. 2d 866 (damages available for intentional violation of Title VI); Kling v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 769 F.2d 532, 534 , rev'd on other grounds, 474 U.S. 936, 106 S. Ct. 300, 88 L. Ed. 2d 277 (1985) (damages available in Rehabilitation Act case)].

[c] Attorney's Fees

The prayer includes a prayer for attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b).

[d] Punitive Damages

The law is not settled regarding the availability of punitive damages in actions to enforce § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act [see Saylor v. Ridge (E.D.Pa. 1998) 989 F. Supp. 680, 690-691 (punitive damages available; citing several district court cases in accord); Burns-Vidlak v. Chandler (D.Hawaii 1997) 980 F. Supp. 1144, 1152 (punitive damages available); see also Pandazides v. Virginia Bd. of Educ. (4th Cir. 1994) 13 F.3d 823, 831-832 (holding that "a full panoply of legal remedies" is available under the Rehabilitation Act, and alluding to the standard for recovery of punitive damages); but see Moreno v. CONRAIL (6th Cir. 1996) 99 F.3d 782, 788-792 (en banc) (punitive damages unavailable)]. The complaint in [1], above, includes an optional prayer for punitive damages. In a case where the violation of Title VI was motivated by evil motive or intent, or involved reckless or callous indifference to the plaintiff's federally protected rights [see Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 56, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632 (establishing standard for recovery of punitive damages in cases brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983)], the plaintiff might be able to recover punitive damages. If the facts do not involve evil motive or intent, or reckless or callous indifference to the plaintiff's federally protected rights, the optional punitive damages allegation (Optional Paragraph 16 of the complaint) and the optional prayer for punitive damages should not be used.

[5] Jury Demand

The complaint in [1], above, includes a demand for trial by jury. In a case in which damages are sought, the plaintiff will have a right to a jury trial [U.S. Const., amend. VII]. Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 38 governs demands for trial by jury. Under Rule 38, the demand for trial by jury may be served at any time after commencement of the action and not later than 10 days after service of the last pleading directed to the issue triable by jury. The rule provides further that "[s]uch demand may be indorsed upon a pleading of the party" [Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 38(b)]. Therefore, the demand for trial by jury may be included in the complaint, as is the case in the form in [1], above.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use in federal court, by a person who, on the basis of age, has been excluded from participation in, denied the benefits of, and/or discriminated against in a program or activity receiving federal financial assistance [42 U.S.C. §§ 6102, 6104]. The complaint in [1], above, seeks preliminary and permanent injunctive relief.

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 1 of the form in [1], above, is an introductory paragraph. The form of complaint goes on to allege all of the following:

- That this action arises under 42 U.S.C. §§ 6102, 6104 (The Age Discrimination Act of 1975), and that therefore the court has jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343 (Paragraph 2).

- Plaintiff's name, capacity, residence, and United States citizenship (if applicable) (Paragraph 3).

- Defendant's capacity and residence, for purposes of establishing venue (Paragraph 4) [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue proper in district where a defendant resides, if all defendants are from the same state)].

- An optional paragraph (Optional Paragraph 5) identifying a county in which a substantial part of the events giving rise to the action occurred. This paragraph is for use in a case where the plaintiff wishes to establish venue in such county [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue proper in district where a substantial part of the events giving rise to the action occurred)].

- An optional allegation for use when agents are being sued (Optional Paragraph 6) [see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent].

- Defendants' operation of a "program or activity," and defendants' receipt of federal financial assistance (Paragraph 7) [see 42 U.S.C. § 6107]. The phrase "program or activity" is defined in 42 U.S.C. § 6107 to include certain kinds of entities [see § 112.17[3]]. This paragraph of the complaint should show that defendants operate a program or activity that falls within that definition.

- Plaintiff's birth date (Paragraph 8). This is necessary to establish plaintiff's age at the time of each of the events alleged in the complaint.

- Defendants' exclusion of plaintiff from, denial to plaintiff of the benefits of, and/or unlawful discrimination against plaintiff under, the federally assisted program or activity (Paragraph 9) [42 U.S.C. § 6102]. The dates of all events should be included to establish plaintiff's age at the time of each event.

- That plaintiff's age was the basis for the exclusion, denial of benefits, or discrimination (Paragraph 10) [42 U.S.C. § 6102].

- An optional allegation that plaintiff demanded that defendants stop the unlawful and discriminatory conduct, that defendants refused, and that there is a need for prompt judicial action to protect plaintiff (Optional Paragraph 11).

- That defendants' actions caused and will continue to cause plaintiff to suffer extreme hardship and actual and impending irreparable injury, loss, and/or damage, and an explanation of the impending irreparable injury, loss, and damage (Paragraph 12).

- That plaintiff has no adequate or speedy remedy at law (Paragraph 13).

- An allegation that plaintiff exhausted his or her administrative remedies (Paragraph 14). The complaint should set forth facts explaining how plaintiff's administrative remedies were exhausted. Exhaustion of administrative remedies can take one of two forms under the Age Discrimination Act: (1) expiration of 180 days from the filing of an administrative complaint, during which time the federal department or agency makes no finding with regard to the complaint, or (2) a finding by the federal department or agency in favor of the recipient of the federal financial assistance, whichever occurs first [42 U.S.C. § 6104(f)].

[4] Prayer

[a] Injunctive Relief

The prayer in the complaint in [1], above, seeks preliminary and permanent injunctive relief.

[b] Damages

Damages are not recoverable under the Age Discrimination Act [see 42 U.S.C. 6104 (providing only for action in federal district court to enjoin violation of Act)].

[c] Attorney's Fees

The prayer includes a prayer for attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 6104(e)(1), which specifically provides for recovery of attorney's fees in an action for injunctive relief under the Age Discrimination Act.

§ 113.11 Nature of Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes

[1] Eradication of Slavery: 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981 and 1982

The post-Civil War civil rights statutes encompass a wide variety of civil rights protections. 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981 and 1982 are recodifications of section 1 of the Civil Rights Act of 1866, which was enacted to implement the objective of U.S. Const., amend. XIII, to eradicate slavery and its incidents [see Tillman v. Wheaton-Haven Rec. Ass'n (1973) 410 U.S. 431, 439-440, 93 S. Ct. 1090, 35 L. Ed. 2d 403] . 42 U.S.C. § 1981 does all of the following:

- It prohibits discrimination in the making and enforcement of contracts;
- It provides for equal rights for all to sue, be parties, and give evidence; and
- It provides for full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of persons and property for all persons.

42 U.S.C. § 1982 prohibits discrimination in the conveyance of real and personal property.

For additional coverage of 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981 and 1982, see*§§ 113.12* and 113.13.

[2] Enforcement of Fourteenth Amendment of United States Constitution: 42 U.S.C. §§ 1983, 1985, and 1986

42 U.S.C. §§ 1983, 1985, and 1986 are recodifications of the Civil Rights Act of 1871, which was enacted to enforce U.S. Const., amend. XIV. 42 U.S.C. § 1983 prohibits any action under color of state law that subjects an individual to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the federal Constitution and laws. 42 U.S.C. § 1985 creates an action for damages resulting from a conspiracy to interfere with civil rights. 42 U.S.C. § 1986 creates a cause of action for damages resulting from a conspiracy prohibited by 42 U.S.C. § 1985, against one who neglected or refused to prevent the injury.

For additional coverage of 42 U.S.C. §§ 1983, 1985, and 1986, see*§§ 113.14*, 113.15, and 113.16, respectively.

[3] Federal Law Governs; Recovery of Fees: 42 U.S.C. § 1988

42 U.S.C. § 1988 provides that in civil rights actions federal law governs; however, when federal law is not suitable, or is not adapted to the object, or is deficient, then the common law, as modified by state law, applies, so long as it is not inconsistent with federal law [42 U.S.C. § 1988(a)].

42 U.S.C. § 1988 also provides for recovery of attorney's fees in certain civil rights actions, including those brought under 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1982, 1983, 1985, and 1986 [42 U.S.C. § 1988(b)]. 42 U.S.C. § 1988 also provides for recovery of expert fees in actions brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 [42 U.S.C. § 1988(c)].

§ 113.12 Equal Rights Under Law: 42 U.S.C. § 1981

[1] Introduction

[a] Equality of Rights

All persons within the jurisdiction of the United States have the same right in every state and territory to make and enforce contracts [see [b], below], to sue, to be parties, to give evidence, and to receive the full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of persons and property as is enjoyed by white citizens; all persons within the jurisdiction of United States are subject to the same punishment, pains, penalties, taxes, licenses, and exactions of every kind, and to no other [42 U.S.C. § 1981(a)]. The phrase "all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States" was specifically intended to encompass aliens [Sagana v. Tenorio (9th Cir. 2004) 384 F.3d 731, 737-738] .

[b] "Make and Enforce Contracts" Defined

The term "make and enforce contracts" includes the making, performance, modification, and termination of contracts and the enjoyment of all benefits, privileges, terms, and conditions of the contractual relationship [42 U.S.C. § 1981(b)]. However, the loss of an opportunity to enter into a contract that is void, i.e., one that neither party could enforce, or one that is voidable by either party, is not cognizable under § 1981 [Addisu v. Fred Meyer, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 198 F.3d

1130, 1137] .

[c] Protection Is Against Impairment by Nongovernmental Discrimination and by Impairment Under Color of State Law

The rights protected by 42 U.S.C. § 1981 are protected against impairment by nongovernmental discrimination as well as impairment under color of state law [42 U.S.C. § 1981(c)].

To be actionable under § 1981, the discrimination must be purposeful [General Building Contractors Ass'n v. Pennsylvania (1982) 458 U.S. 375, 387-388, 102 S. Ct. 3141, 73 L. Ed. 2d 835] .

42 U.S.C. § 1981 applies to discrimination in employment contracts [Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 459-460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295] . For detailed discussion of § 1981 as it relates to employment discrimination, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination .

The amendment of 42 U.S.C. § 1981 to add subsection (c) in 1991 created a cause of action against municipalities [Federation of African-American Contractors v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1996) 96 F.3d 1204, 1210-1214], but did not create an implied right of action against arms of the state under Section 1981 [Pittman v. Oregon (9th Cir. 2007) 509 F.3d 1065, 1067-1074].

[d] Standing Under § 1981

A corporation has standing to bring a 42 U.S.C. § 1981 claim against a defendant that employs the corporation as a contractor, but imposes ethnic discrimination against the corporation's employees [Bains LLC v. ARCO Prods. Co. (9th Cir. 2005) 405 F.3d 764, 770] . Thus, if a corporation either suffers discrimination harm cognizable under § 1981, or has acquired an imputed racial identity, it is sufficiently within the statutory zone of interest to have prudential standing to bring an action under § 1981 [Thinket Ink Information Resources, Inc. v. Sun Microsystems, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 368 F.3d 1053, 1057-1060] .

[2] Prohibited Discrimination

[a] Racial Discrimination

Although 42 U.S.C. § 1981 does not use the word "race," it has been construed to forbid all racial discrimination in the making of private and public contracts [Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 609, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582] .

42 U.S.C. § 1981 is limited in its application to racial discrimination. Section 1981 does not proscribe discrimination on the basis of sex [Jones v. Bechtel (9th Cir. 1986) 788 F.2d 571, 574 ; League of Academic Women v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (N.D. Cal. 1972) 343 F. Supp. 636, 638-639] , or on the basis of religion [see Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 167, 96 S. Ct. 2586, 49 L. Ed. 2d 415] .

The racial discrimination prohibited by 42 U.S.C. § 1981 is discrimination on the basis of ancestry or ethnic characteristics, whether or not the discrimination would be considered racial in terms of modern scientific theory [Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 613, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582] . For example, if an Arab plaintiff can prove that he or she was subjected to intentional discrimination based on the fact that he or she was born an Arab, rather than solely on the place or nation of the plaintiff's origin, or religion, the plaintiff will have stated an action under § 1981 [Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 613, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582] .

42 U.S.C. § 1981 does not prohibit racial discrimination against only nonwhite persons. It explicitly applies to "all persons," and its use of the phrase "as is enjoyed by white citizens" simply emphasizes the racial character of the rights being protected. The broad terms of § 1981 prohibit discrimination in the making or enforcement of contracts against, or in favor of, any race [McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 295-296, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493 ; see Jett v. Dallas Ind. School Dist. (1989) 491 U.S. 701, 731-738, 109 S. Ct. 2702, 105 L. Ed. 2d 598 (Section 1981 action by high school teacher and coach against school district and officials alleging that his removal from athletic director and head coaching positions was motivated by fact that he was white) (plurality opinion)].

42 U.S.C. § 1981 supports an action by all of the following:

- A white plaintiff discriminated against because he or she is in an interracial marriage [Parr v. Woodmen of the World Life Ins. Co. (11th Cir. 1986) 791 F.2d 888, 890] ;

- An action by a white plaintiff retaliated against for advocating the rights of blacks [Liotta v. National Forge Co. (W.D. Pa. 1979) 473 F. Supp. 1139, 1145-1146 , modified, 629 F.2d 903 (3d Cir. 1980) , cert. denied, 451 U.S. 970 (1981)] ; and

- An action by a white plaintiff terminated from a job for associating with a black person [Weaver v. Gross (D.D.C. 1985) 605 F. Supp. 210, 212-213] .

The protections of 42 U.S.C. § 1981 extend to aliens as well as citizens [Graham v. Richardson (1971) 403 U.S. 365, 377-378, 91 S. Ct. 1848, 29 L. Ed. 2d 534] .

To evaluate claims of intentional discrimination under § 1981 when intent is impossible to prove, courts apply a burden-shifting analysis [see McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802-803, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 ; for discussion of the McDonnell Douglas test in employment discrimination context, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination]. Under McDonnell Douglas as adapted to a claim of racial discrimination under § 1981, if the plaintiff satisfies the initial burden of establishing a prima facie case of racial discrimination, the burden shifts to the defendant to prove it had a legitimate non-discriminatory reason for the adverse action [Lindsey v. SLT Los Angeles, LLC (9th Cir. 2006) 447 F.3d 1138, 1144-1145 ; see McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668] . If the defendant meets that burden, the plaintiff must prove that the defendant's articulated reason was merely a pretext for intentional discrimination [Tex. Dep't of Cmty. Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 253, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 ; Lindsey v. SLT Los Angeles, LLC (9th Cir. 2006) 447 F.3d 1138, 1144-1145] . The proof required to establish a prima facie case is minimal and does not even need to rise to the level of a preponderance of the evidence [Lindsey v. SLT Los Angeles, LLC (9th Cir. 2006) 447 F.3d 1138, 1144 ; Chuang v. University of Cal. Davis (9th Cir. 2000) 225 F.3d 1115, 1124 , quoting Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 885, 889] .

Adapting the McDonnell Douglas test to claims of racial discrimination under 42 U.S.C. § 1981, the elements to prove a prima facie case of discrimination are as follows [Lindsey v. SLT Los Angeles, LLC (9th Cir. 2006) 447 F.3d 1138, 1145] :

- The plaintiff belongs to a protected class.

- The plaintiff attempted to contract for services.

- Plaintiff was denied the right to contract for those services.

The Seventh Circuit also requires that the services remained available to similarly situated individuals who were not members of the plaintiff's protected class [Bratton v. Roadway Package Sys., Inc. (7th Cir. 1996) 77 F.3d 168, 176] . However, the Sixth Circuit requires that plaintiff was deprived of services while similarly situated persons outside the protected class were not, and/or plaintiff received services in a markedly hostile manner and in a manner that a reasonable person would find objectively discriminatory [Christian v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (6th Cir. 2001) 252 F.3d 862, 872] . The Ninth Circuit has not yet decided whether to adopt the Sixth Circuit's modification of this element of a prima facie case under § 1981 [Lindsey v. SLT Los Angeles, LLC (9th Cir. 2006) 447 F.3d 1138, 1145 (plaintiff offered clear evidence that similarly situated group of different protected class was offered contractual services denied to plaintiff)].

[b] Alienage Discrimination

42 U.S.C. § 1981 protects against discrimination on the basis of alienage [Sagana v. Tenorio (9th Cir. 2004) 384 F.3d 731, 737-740 ; see Graham v. Richardson (1971) 403 U.S. 365, 377, 91 S. Ct. 1848, 29 L. Ed. 2d 534 ; Takahashi v. Fish & Game Comm'n (1948) 334 U.S. 410, 419-420, 68 S. Ct. 1138, 92 L. Ed. 1478 (42 U.S.C. § 1981 and Fourteenth Amendment on which it rests in part protect all persons against state legislation bearing unequally on them either because of alienage or color); Yick Wo v. Hopkins (1886) 118 U.S. 356, 369, 6 S. Ct. 1064, 30 L. Ed. 220] .

[3] Application to Contracts

42 U.S.C. § 1981 prohibits racial discrimination in the making and enforcement of both private and public contracts [see Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 168, 96 S. Ct. 2586, 49 L. Ed. 2d 415 ; see also 42 U.S.C. § 1981(c) (rights under § 1981 are protected against both impairment by nongovernmental entities and impairment under color of state law)].

In addition to employment contracts, § 1981 has been applied in the context of contracts with private schools to provide children with an education [see Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 175-179, 96 S. Ct. 2586, 49 L. Ed. 2d 415] , and housing contracts that include membership in a local swimming club [see Tillman v. Wheaton-Haven Rec. Ass'n (1973) 410 U.S. 431, 439-440, 93 S. Ct. 1090, 35 L. Ed. 2d 403 (complaint alleged violation of both 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981 and 1982; although case focused on § 1982, Court stressed historical similarity between §§ 1981 and 1982)]. Neither of these cases presented a question of the right of a truly private social organization (an organization not open to the public) to limit its membership or contractual arrangements on racial or other grounds. The contracts in these cases were private only in the sense that they were between private persons and did not involve the direct receipt of public funds [see Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 167-168, 172-173 n.10, 96 S. Ct. 2586, 49 L. Ed. 2d 415 (issue of whether private establishment exemption of 42 U.S.C. § 2000a(e) operates to narrow § 1981 was not considered; if applicable at all, that exemption comes into play only if establishment is not open to public)].

42 U.S.C. § 1981 was also applied in an action on a contract to provide cleanup services at a university construction project. In that case, the fact that the plaintiff was an unlicensed contractor precluded by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031, which bars unlicensed contractors from bringing suit to recover compensation for work requiring a license, from pursuing a claim that he was not properly compensated as were caucasian contractors because that claim directly implicated the statutory proscription against recovery of compensation by unlicensed contractors, but his claims of racial discrimination in the form of derogatory comments on the jobsite and retaliation for complaining about the comments were external to the contract. Further, nothing in § 7031 or § 1981 supported the notion that the defendant was free to discriminate racially against the contractor during performance of the contract simply because he was unlicensed, and his claims that he was treated differently on the basis of race, came within the scope of the protection Congress provided in § 1981 [Holland v. Morse Diesel Internat., Inc. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1443, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 239] .

[4] Remedies

An individual who establishes a cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 is entitled to both equitable and legal relief, including compensatory and, under certain circumstances, punitive damages [Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295] . Damages for emotional distress are available [De Malherbe v. International Union of Elevator Constructors (N.D. Cal. 1977) 438 F. Supp. 1121, 1130] .

When 42 U.S.C. § 1981 is violated by a state actor, the action provided by 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for the deprivation of rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws of the United States provides the exclusive federal damages remedy [Jett v. Dallas Ind. School Dist. (1989) 491 U.S. 701, 735, 109 S. Ct. 2702, 105 L. Ed. 2d 598 (plurality opinion)]. Thus, to prevail on a claim for damages against a local government body, a plaintiff must show that the violation of his or her right to make contracts protected by § 1981 was caused by a governmental custom or policy [Jett v. Dallas Ind. School Dist. (1989) 491 U.S. 701, 735-736, 109 S. Ct. 2702, 105 L. Ed. 2d 598 (plurality opinion)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Section 1981 vs. Title VII. When available, § 1981 is preferable to Title VII of the federal Civil Rights Act of 1964 (regarding unlawful employment practices) [42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.; see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.21[1]] because it does not have a cap on general and punitive damages of $300,000 [see Pavon v. Swift Transp. Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 902, 910-911 (plaintiff who brought claims under Title VII and 42 U.S.C. § 1981 was entitled to recover damages in excess of $300,000 under the § 1981 claim)]. However, § 1981 has certain limitations if you are attempting to sue the state [see Jett v. Dallas Ind. School Dist. (1989) 491 U.S. 701, 109 S. Ct. 2702, 105 L. Ed. 2d 598] . Further, punitive damages are not available against a public entity and it is rare that a jury will award over $300,000 in general damages. Nevertheless, in race-based discrimination cases, the § 1981 cause of action should be pursued in addition to, or instead of, the Title VII remedy. There is no requirement for exhausting administrative remedies in bringing a § 1981 cause of action. In addition, the $300,000 cap on general/punitive damages that exists in Title VII does not exist under the Fair Employment and Housing Act [see Gov. Code § 12960 et seq.]. By John H. Scott

[5] Limitations Period

42 U.S.C. § 1981, itself, does not include a limitations period. Although § 1981 emphasizes the right to contract, it encompasses much more than contractual rights. It includes personal rights to sue and to testify as well as equal rights under all laws. A violation of § 1981 is a fundamental injury to the individual rights of a person. Thus, until the Civil Rights Act of 1991, the state statute of limitations governing personal injury actions applied to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 [Goodman v. Lukens Steel Co. (1987) 482 U.S. 656, 660-662, 107 S. Ct. 2617, 96 L. Ed. 2d 572] .

Since the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1991, the statute of limitations for a cause of action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1981, as amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991, is the four-year statute of limitations set forth in 28 U.S.C. § 1658(a) rather than by the personal injury statute of limitations of the forum state [Jones v. R.R. Donnelley & Sons Co. (2004) 541 U.S. 369, 124 S. Ct. 1836, 1841-1846, 158 L. Ed. 2d 645 ; Thinket Ink Information Resources, Inc. v. Sun Microsystems, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 368 F.3d 1053, 1060-1061] .

Federal law governs when the claim accrues and the limitations period begins to run [Fobbs v. Holy Cross Health System Corp. (9th Cir. 1994) 29 F.3d 1439, 1444 , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1127 (1995) ; Chung v. Pomona Valley Community Hosp. (9th Cir. 1982) 667 F.2d 788, 791] .

When a § 1981 claim is based on an allegedly discriminatory decision, the limitations period begins to run at the time that the defendant notifies the plaintiff of the decision [Fobbs v. Holy Cross Health System Corp. (9th Cir. 1994) 29 F.3d 1439, 1444 , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1127 (1995)] .

State rules regarding tolling of limitations periods apply to claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1981, unless the application of the tolling doctrine would be inconsistent with federal policy underlying the cause of action [see Fobbs v. Holy Cross Health System Corp. (9th Cir. 1994) 29 F.3d 1439, 1444-1445 , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1127 (1995) (California's equitable tolling doctrine could not apply, in part because plaintiff failed to show that application of doctrine would be consistent with federal policy)].

§ 113.13 Property Rights of Citizens: 42 U.S.C. § 1982

42 U.S.C. § 1982 provides that "[a]ll citizens of the United States have the same right, in every State and Territory, as is enjoyed by white citizens thereof to inherit, purchase, lease, sell, hold, and convey real and personal property" [42 U.S.C. § 1982]. Section 1982 bars all racial discrimination, private as well as public, in the sale or rental of property [City of Memphis v. Greene (1981) 451 U.S. 100, 120-122, 101 S. Ct. 1584, 67 L. Ed. 2d 769 ; Jones v. Alfred H. Mayer Co. (1968) 392 U.S. 409, 413, 88 S. Ct. 2186, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1189] .

A private right of action is available to enforce § 1982 [see, e.g., Johnson v. Hale (9th Cir. 1994) 13 F.3d 1351, 1354 (compensatory damages, plus costs and attorney's fees for refusal to rent property to African-American men); Phiffer v. Proud Parrot Motor Hotel (9th Cir. 1980) 648 F.2d 548, 552-553 (damages for lost wages, emotional distress, and humiliation, as well as punitive damages, for refusal to rent office space to black man)].

Punitive damages are available for a violation of § 1982, if the defendant acted "with such conscious and deliberate disregard of the consequences of his actions to others that his conduct is wanton" [Phiffer v. Proud Parrot Motor Hotel (9th Cir. 1980) 648 F.2d 548, 553] .

An action under 42 U.S.C. § 1982 may be brought in state court [see Sullivan v. Little Hunting Park (1969) 396 U.S.

229, 239-240, 90 S. Ct. 400, 24 L. Ed. 2d 386] .

For discussion of 42 U.S.C. § 1982 in the context of housing discrimination, see Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination .

PRACTICE TIP:

Housing Discrimination. Practitioners should be mindful of organizations that exist to make referrals and/or send out "testers" to assist in proving these types of cases. One should also be mindful of parallel state remedies that can be brought in state court or as a pendent cause of action in federal court. By John H. Scott

§ 113.14 Civil Action for Deprivation of Rights: 42 U.S.C. § 1983

[1] Introduction

[a] Statute Provides Private Right of Action

Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983, every person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of a state or territory or the District of Columbia, subjects, or causes to be subjected, a citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction of the United States to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws is liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress.

To seek redress through § 1983, a plaintiff must assert the violation of a federal right, not merely a violation of federal law [Blessing v. Freestone (1997) 520 U.S. 329, 340, 117 S. Ct. 1353, 137 L. Ed. 2d 569 ; San Lazaro Ass'n v. Connell (9th Cir. 2002) 278 F.3d 932, 941] .

It is well established that, under appropriate circumstances, § 1983 provides a private right of action for violations of federal statutes [Maine v. Thiboutot (1980) 448 U.S. 1, 4, 100 S. Ct. 2502, 65 L. Ed. 2d 555] . However, § 1983 relief is available only if (1) the statute creates enforceable rights, and (2) Congress has not foreclosed enforcement in the statute itself [Wilder v. Virginia Hosp. Ass'n (1990) 496 U.S. 498, 508, 110 S. Ct. 2510, 110 L. Ed. 2d 455 ; Groten v. California (9th Cir. 2001) 251 F.3d 844, 848] . To sustain an action under § 1983, the plaintiff must demonstrate that a federal statute creates an individually enforceable right in the class of beneficiaries to which the plaintiff belongs [City of Rancho Palos Verdes v. Abrams (2005) 544 U.S. 113, 125 S. Ct. 1453, 1458, 161 L. Ed. 2d 316] . Even after this showing, there is only a rebuttable presumption that the right is enforceable under § 1983. The defendant may defeat the presumption by demonstrating that Congress did not intend that remedy for a newly created right [City of Rancho Palos Verdes v. Abrams (2005) 544 U.S. 113, 125 S. Ct. 1453, 1458, 161 L. Ed. 2d 316 ; Blessing v. Freestone (1997) 520 U.S. 329, 341, 117 S. Ct. 1353, 137 L. Ed. 2d 569 ; see Smith v. Robinson (1984) 468 U.S. 992, 1012]. Evidence of congressional intent may be found directly in the statute creating the right or inferred from the statute's creation of a comprehensive enforcement scheme incompatible with individual enforcement under § 1983 [City of Rancho Palos Verdes v. Abrams (2005) 544 U.S. 113, 125 S. Ct. 1453, 1458, 161 L. Ed. 2d 316 ; Blessing v. Freestone (1997) 520 U.S. 329, 341, 117 S. Ct. 1353, 137 L. Ed. 2d 569 ; see Middlesex County Sewerage Authority v. National Sea Clammers Ass'n (1981) 453 U.S. 1, 19-20, 101 S. Ct. 2615, 69 L. Ed. 2d 435] .

A statute creates a right enforceable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 if all of the following are true [Wilder v. Virginia Hosp. Ass'n (1990) 496 U.S. 498, 509, 110 S. Ct. 2510, 110 L. Ed. 2d 455 ; see Groten v. California (9th Cir. 2001) 251 F.3d 844, 848 (12 U.S.C. § 3351(a), providing for issuance of temporary appraiser licenses, creates right enforceable under § 1983); Legal Services of Northern California v. Arnett (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 135, 138-141 (Older Americans Act of 1965 (OAA) [renamed as Community Service Senior Opportunities Act by P.L. 109-365 § 501], 42 U.S.C. § 3001 et seq., which established program of federal grants for state and community social services designed to assist needy older persons, created no rights enforceable under § 1983 by nonprofit legal services provider that lost bid to provide legal services to elderly with OAA funds)]:

- The statute was intended to benefit the plaintiffs;

- The statute imposes a binding obligation on the government unit rather than merely expressing a congressional preference for a certain kind of conduct; and

- The interest asserted by the plaintiff is not so vague or amorphous that it is beyond the competence of the judiciary to enforce.

PRACTICE TIP:

Overview of § 1983 Actions. For purposes of a historical perspective, "beginners" should read Monroe v. Pape (1961) 365 U.S. 167, 81 S. Ct. 473, 5 L. Ed. 2d 492 and Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 . These are both landmark cases that refer extensively to the Congressional record and the historical context in which the post-Civil War Civil Rights statutes were passed. Notably, before Monroe v. Pape the federal courts created major obstacles to the enforcement of the Constitution through § 1983. Since the expansion of civil rights litigation in the 1960s and 1970s, the United States Supreme Court has created and expanded the doctrine of "qualified immunity" [see [11][b], below] (together with the right to an interlocutory appeal) to significantly limit § 1983 actions. A rhetorical question should be posed: does the Constitution exist to protect the people from the government or the government from the people? By John H. Scott

PRACTICE TIP:

Traps for the Uninitiated. Section 1983 litigation has many potential traps for the uninitiated. States and state entities are entitled to 11th Amendment immunity. Although cities and counties cannot assert qualified immunity as a defense [see [11][b], below], the doctrine of respondeat superior may not be relied on to establish municipal liability. Most § 1983 cases attempting to establish municipal (Monell) liability fail at the summary judgment stage. Defense counsel will often suggest to a jury that any verdict against their individual defendants is "coming out of their pocket"--notwithstanding the fact that California law, in general, requires public entities to indemnify employees acting within the course and scope of their employment [see Gov. Code § 825]. These are all factors to carefully consider before taking the plunge into § 1983 litigation. By John H. Scott

[b] Plaintiff Must Allege That Defendant Acted Under "Color of State Law"

To state a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, a plaintiff must allege that the defendant acted under color of state law to deprive the plaintiff of a right secured by the federal Constitution or by federal law [Stone v. City of Prescott (9th Cir. 1999) 173 F.3d 1172, 1174 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 870 ; see Gomez v. Toledo (1980) 446 U.S. 635, 640, 100 S. Ct. 1920, 64 L. Ed. 2d 572 ; see also [4], below].

For forms of complaint for damages and injunctive relief for deprivation of rights under color of state law pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983, see*§§ 113.50, 113.51*, and 113.52.

[c] Plaintiff Must Show Causation

A 42 U.S.C. § 1983 plaintiff must show causation, that is, that the defendant's act or acts caused the injuries of which the plaintiff complains [see Mt. Healthy City School Dist. Bd. of Educ. v. Doyle (1977) 429 U.S. 274, 285-286, 97 S. Ct. 568, 50 L. Ed. 2d 471 ; Estate of Brooks v. United States (9th Cir. 1999) 197 F.3d 1245, 1247-1248 ; see also Texas v. Lesage (2000) 528 U.S. 18, 120 S. Ct. 467, 145 L. Ed. 2d 347 (when plaintiff challenges discrete governmental decision as based on impermissible criterion and it is undisputed government would have made same decision regardless, there is no cognizable injury warranting relief under § 1983)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Causation. In many instances, where the "proximate cause" standard used to apply, the change in California law to "legal cause" (the substantial factor test) should now apply. In addition, the causation analysis may vary depending on the constitutional right at stake and the theory of liability. The Johnson v. Duffy definition is generally accepted [Johnson v. Duffy (9th Cir. 1978) 588 F.2d 740, 743-744] . Although there are some cases that have adopted the proximate cause (but for) test, these cases are dated or suspect.

Of many potential remedies, courts often prefer to shift the burden of proof regarding causation to a defendant when the destruction of evidence by a defendant will prejudice the plaintiff's ability to prove liability. The issue of causation traditionally is left for the jury to decide. Although this issue often should be a barrier to summary judgment, courts are increasingly willing to grant summary judgment on the basis that there is insufficient evidence to prove causation--particularly as to municipal or supervisory defendants. By John H. Scott

[2] Purpose and Scope

The primary purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 are compensation and deterrence for violations of federal rights committed by persons acting under color of state law [Howlett v. Rose (1990) 496 U.S. 356, 358, 110 S. Ct. 2430, 110 L. Ed. 2d 332 ; Pitts v. County of Kern (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 340, 348, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 823, 949 P.2d 920] . In addition, 42 U.S.C. § 1983 serves several other purposes [Monroe v. Pape (1961) 365 U.S. 167, 173-174, 81 S. Ct. 473, 5 L. Ed. 2d 492 (overruled on other grounds in Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 663, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611); Williams v. Horvath (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 834, 841, 129 Cal. Rptr. 453, 548 P.2d 1125] :

- It overrides certain kinds of state laws;
- It provides a federal remedy if state law is inadequate; and

- It provides a federal remedy if the state remedy, although adequate in theory, is not available in practice.

Section 1983 is to be accorded a sweep as broad as its language [Felder v. Casey (1988) 487 U.S. 131, 139, 108 S. Ct. 2302, 101 L. Ed. 2d 123 (damages and injunctive relief available)].

42 U.S.C. § 1983 does not create any substantive rights; it merely serves as the procedural device for enforcing substantive provisions of the Constitution and federal statutes. Thus, one may not claim a violation of § 1983, because § 1983, by itself, does not protect anyone from anything [Chapman v. Houston Welfare Rights Org. (1979) 441 U.S. 600, 617-618, 99 S. Ct. 1905, 60 L. Ed. 2d 508 ; Crumpton v. Gates (9th Cir. 1991) 947 F.2d 1418, 1420] .

[3] Elements of Cause of Action

The elements of a cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 are as follows [Parratt v. Taylor (1981) 451 U.S. 527, 535, 101 S. Ct. 1908, 68 L. Ed. 2d 420 (overruled on other grounds in Daniels v. Williams (1986) 474 U.S. 327, 330-331, 106 S. Ct. 662, 88 L. Ed. 2d 662); Crumpton v. Gates (9th Cir. 1991) 947 F.2d 1418, 1420 ; Venegas v. Wagner (9th Cir. 1987) 831 F.2d 1514, 1518] :

- A violation of rights protected by the Constitution or created by federal statute;
- Caused;
- By conduct of a "person";
- Acting under color of state law.

For a related jury instruction for use in state court on the essential factual elements of a claim for violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983, see Judicial Council Of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 3000 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions.

In addition, the plaintiff must be "a citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof" [42 U.S.C. § 1983; see Inyo County v. Paiute-Shoshone Indians of the Bishop Committee of the Bishop Colony (2003) 538 U.S. 701, 123 S. Ct. 1887, 1892-1894, 155 L. Ed. 2d 933 (as sovereign, Native American tribe did not qualify as "person" for purposes of suing county officials under § 1983); Martinez v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1373, 1382 (Mexican citizen, who was in Mexico at time of events in question, could not bring § 1983 action); Crumpton v. Gates (9th Cir. 1991) 947 F.2d 1418, 1420 (child, whose injury and cause of action arose at birth, was a person within meaning of § 1983)].

[4] Color of Law

[a] In General

A cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 requires that the individual causing the deprivation of rights act under color of a statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of a state or territory or the District of Columbia [42 U.S.C. § 1983].

The "color of law" requirement of § 1983 is equivalent to the "state action" requirement of U.S. Const., amend. XIV [Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co. (1982) 457 U.S. 922, 928-929, 102 S. Ct. 2744, 73 L. Ed. 2d 482 ; Rendell-Baker v. Kohn (1982) 457 U.S. 830, 838, 102 S. Ct. 2764, 73 L. Ed. 2d 418] .

[b] Conduct of Government Officials

Conduct performed by government officers or employees, acting as such, usually meets the color of law requirement. Moreover, the color of law requirement is met regardless of whether the officials or employees acted in accordance with or in abuse of their authority [see Monroe v. Pape (1961) 365 U.S. 167, 172, 81 S. Ct. 473, 5 L. Ed. 2d 492 (cause of action stated under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against police officers for unconstitutional search and arrest) (overruled on other grounds in Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 663, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611)].

The actions of a government officer or employee are under color of law if they are in some way related to the performance of official duties [see Huffman v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1054, 1058 , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1038 (1999) (intoxicated off-duty sheriff's deputy did not act under color of law when he shot another bar patron over a personal dispute); Johnson v. Knowles (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 1114, 1117-1120 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 996 (California Assemblyman's membership on county Republican party central committee did not derive from his status as member of Assembly, and therefore did not constitute action under color of state law); Van Ort v. Estate of Stanewich (9th Cir. 1996) 92 F.3d 831, 838 , cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1111 (1997) (police officer did not act under color of law when he committed robbery while off duty and not purporting to act as police officer)].

A government officer or employee who is pursuing his or her own goals and is not in any way subject to control by the public employer does not act under color of law, unless he or she purports or pretends to do so. Thus, for example, a police officer who engages in a confrontation for personal reasons unrelated to law enforcement, and who does not purport or pretend to be an officer, does not act under color of law [Huffman v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1054, 1058 , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1038 (1999) ; see Gritchen v. Collier (9th Cir. 2001) 254 F.3d 807 (police officer's threat to sue citizen who filed complaint against officer for defamation was not action under color of state law; mere fact that state statute enables officer to file defamation action is insufficient to make it state action); Melendez v. City of Los Angeles (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1, 16-17, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 469 , cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1001 (off-duty police officers working as private security guards without city approval were not acting under color of state law)].

Whether a public defender acts under color of law in a particular context depends on the nature of duties he or she performs. The public defender is serving the traditional and primary role by advancing the undivided interests of the client, an essentially private function, traditionally filled by retained counsel, for which state office and authority are not needed. A public defender does not act under color of law when performing a lawyer's traditional functions, such as entering pleas, moving to suppress evidence, objecting to evidence at trial, cross-examining witnesses, and making closing arguments [Polk County v. Dodson (1981) 454 U.S. 312, 319-325, 102 S. Ct. 445, 70 L. Ed. 2d 509] . A public defender acting in the traditional role of an attorney, although employed by a state agency, is not, as a matter of law, a state actor [Miranda v. Clark County (9th Cir. 2003) 319 F.3d 465, 469 (en banc)]. However, a public defender performing administrative functions in the allocation of resources within the office is a state actor [Miranda v. Clark County (9th Cir. 2003) 319 F.3d 465, 469-471 (en banc)].

[c] Private Conduct

Private individuals and private entities are not normally liable for violations of most rights secured by the federal constitution [Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co. (1982) 457 U.S. 922, 936, 102 S. Ct. 2744, 73 L. Ed. 2d 482 ; Morse v. North Coast Opportunities (9th Cir. 1997) 118 F.3d 1338, 1340] . Further, as a general rule the state's failure to prevent harm inflicted by a private actor does not give rise to a cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Garcia v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 728, 739, 268 Cal. Rptr. 779, 789 P.2d 960 ; Kathleen R. v. City of Livermore (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 684, 699, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 772] , although there are two exceptions to the general rule--the "special relationship" exception [see [h], below] and the "danger creation" exception.

However, private conduct that can be fairly attributed to the state is considered to meet the color of law requirement of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Rendell-Baker v. Kohn (1982) 457 U.S. 830, 838, 102 S. Ct. 2764, 73 L. Ed. 2d 418 ; Morse v. North Coast Opportunities (9th Cir. 1997) 118 F.3d 1338, 1340] . What is fairly attributable is a matter of normative judgment. No fact can function as a necessary condition across the board for finding state action; nor is any set of circumstances absolutely sufficient, because there may be countervailing reasons against attributing activity to the government [Brentwood Academy v. Tennessee Secondary School Athletic Ass'n (2001) 531 U.S. 288, 295-296, 121 S. Ct. 924, 148 L. Ed. 2d 807] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Private Hospitals and Private Prisons. Attorneys should note the private hospital and private prison cases. This issue often arises when a mental patient has been civilly committed "under color of state law" and deprived of liberty in a private hospital that contracts with a public entity for that purpose. Because of the emergence of private prisons, it is foreseeable that there will be increased litigation on the "state action" issue, especially as to "independent contractors" and other "agents." Many § 1983 issues remain to be decided as it relates to the private prison industry. Counsel should take note of Correctional Services Corp. v. Malesko (2001) 534 U.S. 61, 122 S. Ct. 515, 151 L. Ed. 2d 456 , in which the United States Supreme Court held that there is no private right of action for damages against private entities acting under color of federal law in finding that Bivens does not allow recovery against a private corporation operating a halfway house under a contract with the federal Bureau of Prisons. By John H. Scott

Four distinct tests for determining when the actions of a private individual meet the color of law requirement have been articulated as follows [Kirtley v. Rainey (9th Cir. 2003) 326 F.3d 1088, 1092 ; Johnson v. Knowles (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 1114, 1118 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 996] :

- The joint action test [see [d], below];
- The public function test [see [e], below];
- The state compulsion test [see [f], below]; and
- The governmental nexus test [see [g], below].

Satisfaction of a single test is sufficient to establish that a private entity was a state actor, so long as no countervailing factor exists [Lee v. Katz (9th Cir. 2001) 276 F.3d 550, 554 ; see Brentwood Academy v. Tennessee Secondary School Athletic Ass'n (2001) 531 U.S. 288, 304, 121 S. Ct. 924, 148 L. Ed. 2d 807 (when relevant facts show pervasive entwinement or nexus, implication of state action not affected by fact that facts might not loom large under different test); see also Kirtley v. Rainey (9th Cir. 2003) 326 F.3d 1088, 1092] .

[d] Joint Participation with State

When private individuals act jointly with state officials in performing a prohibited act, the conduct is deemed to meet the color of law requirement [Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co. (1982) 457 U.S. 922, 941-942, 102 S. Ct. 2744, 73 L. Ed. 2d 482 (invoking state-created judicial attachment procedures that required only ex parte application was sufficient joint participation with state officials to meet color of law requirement); Burton v. Wilmington Parking Authority (1961) 365 U.S. 715, 723-725, 81 S. Ct. 856, 6 L. Ed. 2d 45 (state's leasing of public property to private party in building dedicated to public use made state joint participant and rendered discriminatory acts by private party state action under U.S. Const., amend. XIV); Jensen v. Lane County (9th Cir. 2000) 222 F.3d 570, 574-576 (psychiatrist who has undertaken complex and deeply intertwined process with county and its employees, evaluating and detaining individuals believed to be mentally ill, is state actor); Sable Com. of California v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. (9th Cir. 1989) 890 F.2d 184, 188-189 (telephone company's repeated requests to law enforcement agents to take action to trigger procedure that would violate customer's First Amendment rights was joint participation with state)]. Entwinement between a private entity and a public body will support a conclusion that an ostensibly private organization ought to be charged with a public character and judged by constitutional standards [Brentwood Academy v. Tennessee Secondary School Athletic Ass'n (2001) 531 U.S. 288, 298-302, 121 S. Ct. 924, 148 L. Ed. 2d 807 , (nominally private character of not-for-profit statewide secondary school athletic association overborne by pervasive entwinement of public institutions and public officials in its composition and workings)].

[e] Performance of Public Function

When private individuals perform functions or exercise powers that are traditionally the exclusive prerogative of the state, the color of law requirement may be met [see Blum v. Yaretsky (1982) 457 U.S. 991, 1005, 102 S. Ct. 2777, 73 L. Ed. 2d 534 ; Rendell-Baker v. Kohn (1982) 457 U.S. 830, 842, 102 S. Ct. 2764, 73 L. Ed. 2d 418] .

One power the United States Supreme Court has recognized as traditionally exclusively sovereign is the power to conduct elections for public officials [Flagg Bros., Inc. v. Brooks (1978) 436 U.S. 149, 157-158, 98 S. Ct. 1729, 56 L. Ed. 2d 185] .

A second situation in which the Supreme Court has found a private entity to have taken over a traditionally governmental role was in a case when a corporation, the Gulf Shipbuilding Corporation, performed all the necessary municipal functions in the town of Chickasaw, Alabama, which it owned [Marsh v. Alabama (1946) 326 U.S. 501, 506, 66 S. Ct. 276, 90 L. Ed. 265 ; see also Flagg Bros., Inc. v. Brooks (1978) 436 U.S. 149, 158-159, 98 S. Ct. 1729, 56 L. Ed. 2d 185 (discussing Marsh); but see Hudgens v. NLRB (1976) 424 U.S. 507, 96 S. Ct. 1029, 47 L. Ed. 2d 196 (privately owned shopping center does not perform a traditionally governmental role)].

The Ninth Circuit has found a public function in the regulation of free speech by a private entity on public land which is a public forum, that the entity has leased from a municipality, and as to which the municipality retains little, if any, power over the private entity's free speech policies [Lee v. Katz (9th Cir. 2001) 276 F.3d 550, 554-556 (leased land was freely accessible public forum through which people pass on their way to shows, concerts, games, and restaurants and was gathering place for public events)]. On the other hand, a street festival organizer given non-exclusive powers over a traditional public forum does not, in the absence of other facts, become a state actor when the state maintains the ultimate power to regulate activities in the forum [Lee v. Katz (9th Cir. 2001) 276 F.3d 550, 556] .

Management and internal rules of a private political party are not powers traditionally exclusively reserved to the state, and, absent a compelling state interest, political parties are entitled to organize themselves, conduct their affairs, and select their leaders in the manner they think best, without any interference from the state [San Francisco County Democratic Cent. Comm. v. Eu (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 814 , aff'd, 489 U.S. 214 (1989) ; see Johnson v. Knowles (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 1114, 1119 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 996 (removal of gay members of Republican party county central committee not action under color of state law because, although they were elected by public ballot, they were elected to private positions within party, not public positions); but see Terry v. Adams (1953) 345 U.S. 461, 73 S. Ct. 809, 97 L. Ed. 1152 (blacks could not be excluded from preprimary election of Texas' Jaybird Democratic Party); Smith v. Allwright (1944) 321 U.S. 649, 660, 64 S. Ct. 757, 88 L. Ed. 987 ("state delegation to a party of the power to fix the qualifications of primary elections is delegation of a state function that may make the party's action the action of the state")].

[f] State Compulsion of Encouragement

If the state has exercised coercive power or has provided significant encouragement to a private action, that action may be considered conduct under color of law [see Blum v. Yaretsky (1982) 457 U.S. 991, 1004, 102 S. Ct. 2777, 73 L. Ed. 2d 534 ; see also Johnson v. Knowles (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 1114, 1119-1120 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 996 (Cal. Elec. Code § 7413, allowing removal of county central committee member for supporting other-party candidates, did not compel or encourage Republican party county central committee to remove two members on basis of sexual orientation and did not convert committee members' action into action under color of state law)].

[g] Governmental Nexus

An action will be considered to be under color of state law if there is a "sufficiently close nexus between the State and the challenged action of the regulated entity so that the action of the latter may be fairly treated as that of the State itself." However, the mere fact that a private actor is regulated by the state does not by itself convert its action into that of the state [Jackson v. Metropolitan Edison Co. (1974) 419 U.S. 345, 350-351, 95 S. Ct. 449, 42 L. Ed. 2d 477 ; see Johnson v. Knowles (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 1114, 1120 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 996 (fact that California regulates political parties' county central committees did not convert action of committee into state action); McMahon v. Lopez (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 829, 837-838, 245 Cal. Rptr. 172] .

The actions of a nominally private actor may be under color of law if the actor is "entwined with government policies" or when government is "entwined in [its] management or control" [Evans v. Newton (1966) 382 U.S. 296, 299, 301, 86 S. Ct. 486, 15 L. Ed. 2d 373 ; see Brentwood Academy v. Tennessee Secondary School Athletic Assoc. (2001) 531 U.S. 288, 121 S. Ct. 924, 148 L. Ed. 2d 807, 816-823 (association of Tennessee schools, incorporated to regulate athletic competition among state's public and private secondary schools, was state actor); but see Nat. Collegiate Athletic Ass'n v. Tarkanian (1988) 488 U.S. 179, 194 n.14, 109 S. Ct. 454, 102 L. Ed. 2d 469 (NCAA, which acted on behalf of several hundred institutions from several different states, was not a state actor)].

[h] Special Relationship Between State and Victim

Injuries inflicted by a private party may give rise to liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 when a "special relationship" exists between the state and the victim. The special relationship is essential, and without it there is no cause of action under § 1983, even if the state is aware of the danger to the victim [see DeShaney v. Winnebago County Dep't of Social Servs. (1989) 489 U.S. 189, 198-202, 109 S. Ct. 998, 103 L. Ed. 2d 249 ; Buenavista v. City and County of San Francisco (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1168, 1175, 255 Cal. Rptr. 329] .

Although the contours of what constitutes a special relationship between a public entity, acting through its officials, and its citizens are indistinct, the determining factor is the exercise of coercion, dominion, or restraint by the state over the victim. No special relationship has been found when the state has not taken the victim into custody or otherwise assumed responsibility for his or her welfare [see DeShaney v. Winnebago County Dep't of Social Servs. (1989) 489 U.S. 189, 198-202, 109 S. Ct. 998, 103 L. Ed. 2d 249 (specifically rejecting more expansive view of special relationship in Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dep't (9th Cir. 1988) 855 F.2d 1421, 1425)] .

The state may, however, be responsible for a private-party attack when the victim is incarcerated or is an involuntarily committed mental patient or foster child [Buenavista v. City and County of San Francisco (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1168, 1175, 255 Cal. Rptr. 329] .

[i] State Funding and Regulation

Receipt of public funds alone is generally not sufficient state involvement to meet the color of law requirement [see Rendell-Baker v. Kohn (1982) 457 U.S. 830, 840, 102 S. Ct. 2764, 73 L. Ed. 2d 418 (state funding of private school did not make school's decisions to discharge employee actions under color of law); Polk County v. Dodson (1981) 454 U.S. 312, 321-322, 102 S. Ct. 445, 70 L. Ed. 2d 509 (public defender's performance of traditional lawyer functions was not conduct under color of law even when he was employed by state)].

Similarly, the mere fact that a business is subject to regulation by the state is generally not sufficient state action to meet the color of law requirement [see Blum v. Yaretsky (1982) 457 U.S. 991, 1003-1004, 102 S. Ct. 2777, 73 L. Ed. 2d 534 (extensive state regulation of nursing home did not make home's decisions to discharge and transfer Medicaid patients state action under U.S. Const., amend. XIV); Rendell-Baker v. Kohn (1982) 457 U.S. 830, 841-842, 102 S. Ct. 2764, 73 L. Ed. 2d 418 (regulation of private school did not make school's decisions to discharge employee actions under color of law); Moose Lodge No. 107 v. Irvis (1972) 407 U.S. 163, 176-177, 92 S. Ct. 1965, 32 L. Ed. 2d 627 (state regulation of liquor licensing did not make private club's discriminatory conduct state action under U.S. Const., amend. XIV); see also Johnson v. Knowles (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 1114, 1118 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 996 (county central committees of political parties are private actors, not public agencies, even though regulated by state); Mathis v. Pacific Gas and Elec. Co. (9th Cir. 1989) 891 F.2d 1429, 1431 (extensive state regulation of utility did not infuse its conduct with state action); McMahon v. Lopez (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 829, 837-838, 245 Cal. Rptr. 172 (extensive state regulation of private hospital did not bring its action under color of law)].

[5] Rights, Privileges, and Immunities Protected

[a] All Rights Guaranteed by Constitution and Laws of United States Are Protected

42 U.S.C. § 1983 makes unlawful the deprivation of any right, privilege, or immunity secured by the United States Constitution or laws [42 U.S.C. § 1983; see Baker v. McCollan (1979) 443 U.S. 137, 146-147, 99 S. Ct. 2689, 61 L. Ed. 2d 433 (failure of plaintiff to meet threshold requirement of showing deprivation of right secured by Constitution and laws); Stone v. City of Prescott (9th Cir. 1999) 173 F.3d 1172 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 870] . For example, the right of a party not to have a state or a political subdivision of a state impair its obligations of contract is protected by U.S. Const., art. I, § 10, cl. 1, and a deprivation of that right may give rise to a cause of action under § 1983 [So. Cal. Gas Co. v. City of Santa Ana (9th Cir. 2003) 336 F.3d 885, 887] . However, plaintiffs suing under § 1983 must demonstrate that a statute confers an individual right. Thus, a federal agency's regulations can never create individual rights enforceable through 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Save Our Valley v. Sound Transit (9th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 932, 935-944] .

By its terms, § 1983 is not limited to traditionally protected characteristics such as race or religion. Instead, it protects against deprivation of all the rights guaranteed by the Constitution or laws of the United States, including those guaranteed by the due process clause, the privileges and immunities clause, and the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment [Monroe v. Pape (1961) 365 U.S. 167, 170-172, 81 S. Ct. 473, 5 L. Ed. 2d 492 (overruled on other grounds in Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 663, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611); see Moreland v. Las Vegas Metro. Police Dep't (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 365, 370 (protection of Fourteenth Amendment's due process clause extends to governmental actions that deprive one of life, liberty, or property interest of constitutional magnitude)].

By its own terms, 42 U.S.C. § 1983 protects only violations of federal law. Thus, there can be no § 1983 claim based solely on a violation of state law [see Ybarra v. Bastian (9th Cir. 1981) 647 F.2d 891, 892] .

[b] When State Compact Becomes Basis for Action

A state compact becomes transformed into federal law, and may be the basis for an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, when all of the following are true [Cuyler v. Adams (1981) 449 U.S. 433, 440, 101 S. Ct. 703, 66 L. Ed. 2d 641 ; Ghana v. Pearce (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 1206, 1208 (Interstate Corrections Compact is not federal law for § 1983 purposes)]:

- It falls within the scope of the Constitution's compact clause;
- It has received congressional consent; and
- Its subject matter is appropriate for congressional legislation.

However, § 1983 is not a general cause of action reaching all conduct of public officers or those acting under color of law. Violation of a specific constitutional or statutory right must be identified and adequately pleaded [see Conn v. Gabbert (1999) 526 U.S. 286, 290-293, 119 S. Ct. 1292, 143 L. Ed. 2d 399 (search of attorney under warrant while client testifies before grand jury not deprivation of right to practice profession in violation of U.S. Const., amend. XIV and not actionable under § 1983); Buckey v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1992) 968 F.2d 791, 794 , cert. denied, 506 U.S. 999 (mere negligence and self-aggrandizing motives are not actionable under § 1983)].

[c] Constitutional Deprivations Involving Defamatory Conduct or Speech

For a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 case to be based on defamatory conduct or speech, the plaintiff must allege and prove that defendants deprived him or her of a property or liberty interest [Paul v. Davis (1976) 424 U.S. 693, 709-711, 96 S. Ct. 1155, 47 L. Ed. 2d 405] . This has become known as the "stigma-plus" test [Miller v. Cal. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (9th Cir. 2004) 355 F.3d 1172, 1178 ; Am. Consumer Publ'g Ass'n v. Margosian (9th Cir. 2003) 349 F.3d 1122, 1125 ; Cooper v. Dupnik (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 1520, 1532 , rev'd on other grounds, 963 F.2d 1220, 1235 n.6 (9th Cir. 1992) (en banc)]. A person's interest in his or her reputation alone is not a liberty or property interest protected by the Fourteenth Amendment and cognizable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [WMX Techs., Inc. v. Miller (9th Cir. 1999) 197 F.3d 367, 373-378 ; Johnson v. Barker (9th Cir. 1986) 799 F.2d 1396,1399] . Allegations involving defamatory public statements allegedly injuring a business reputation are not sufficient to satisfy the requirement that a constitutionally protected property interest must be at stake [WMX Techs., Inc. v. Miller (9th Cir. 1999) 197 F.3d 367, 373-378] .

The stigma-plus test requires that the defamation be accompanied by an injury directly caused by the government, rather than an injury caused by the act of some third party in reaction to the government's defamatory statements [Am. Consumer Publ'g Ass'n v. Margosian (9th Cir. 2003) 349 F.3d 1122, 1125 ; WMX Techs., Inc. v. Miller (9th Cir. 1996) 80 F.3d 1315, 1320 , appeal dismissed on other grounds, 104 F.3d 1133 (9th Cir. 1997) (en banc)].

To support a claim under § 1983, the state action complained of must alter or extinguish a right or status previously recognized by state law [Johnson v. Barker (9th Cir. 1986) 799 F.2d 1396, 1399] .

A physician's allegation that a press release stating the facts of his arrest for marijuana cultivation damaged his professional reputation and medical practice, without more, failed to state a cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Higginbotham v. King (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1045-1047, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 114] .

[d] Examples of Violations to Which Statute Applied

With regard to constitutional violations, the cases reflect broad and varied use of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 to enforce civil rights. A few examples include the following:

- An action for damages against a mental hospital official who repeatedly and without grounds refused to release a mental patient [O'Connor v. Donaldson (1975) 422 U.S. 563, 573 n.8, 95 S. Ct. 2486, 45 L. Ed. 2d 396 (constitutional right to freedom)].

- An action against prison officials for deliberate indifference to serious medical needs [Estelle v. Gamble (1976) 429 U.S. 97, 104, 97 S. Ct. 285, 50 L. Ed. 2d 251 (Eighth Amendment protection against cruel and unusual punishment)]. For discussion and forms relating to the civil rights of prisoners, see Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

- An action by a public employee for deprivation of the property right to continued employment [Logan v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 116, 125-126, 185 Cal. Rptr. 878 (constitutional right to due process of law)].

- An action based on the use of excessive force during a personal seizure [Graham v. Connor (1989) 490 U.S. 386, 397, 109 S. Ct. 1865, 104 L. Ed. 2d 443 (Fourth Amendment requires that police use only such force as is objectively reasonable under circumstances); Tennessee v. Garner (1985) 471 U.S. 1, 11, 105 S. Ct. 1694, 85 L. Ed. 2d 1 (when officer has probable cause to believe suspect poses threat of serious physical harm to officer or others, it is not constitutionally unreasonable to prevent escape by using deadly force); Robinson v. Solano County (9th Cir. 2002) 278 F.3d 1007 (pointing gun at suspect's head was excessive force when none of factors justifying use of force were present); Forrett v. Richardson (9th Cir. 1998) 112 F.3d 416, 420-421 , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1049 (to prevent escape of felony suspect, police officer may use deadly force only when necessary to prevent escape and when suspect poses threat of serious harm to officer or others)]. For discussion and forms relating to civil rights actions arising from illegal searches and seizures, see Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.310 et seq.

✹ A clearly established constitutional due process right not to be subjected to criminal charges on the basis of false evidence deliberately fabricated by the government [Devereaux v. Abbey (9th Cir. 2001) 263 F.3d 1070, 1074-1075] .

✹ An action based on an arrest without probable cause in violation of the Fourth Amendment [Dubner v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2001) 266 F.3d 959, 964 ; Knox v. Southwest Airlines (9th Cir. 1997) 124 F.3d 1103, 1107 ; Kennedy v. Los Angeles Police Dep't (9th Cir. 1989) 901 F.2d 702, 706] . For discussion and forms relating to civil rights actions arising from illegal searches and seizures, see Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.310 et seq.

✹ An action arising from the removal of children from their parents' custody in the middle of the night, based on the constitutional right to live together without government interference, an essential liberty interest protected by the Fourteenth Amendment's guarantee that parents and children will not be separated by the state without due process of law except in an emergency [Wallis v. Spencer (9th Cir. 1999) 202 F.3d 1126, 1136-1137] .

✹ An action based on injury or death of a patient in a state mental hospital [Youngberg v. Romeo (1982) 457 U.S. 307, 321, 102 S. Ct. 2452, 73 L. Ed. 2d 28 (safety of patient is protected liberty interest)].

✹ An action against prison officials based on injury or death of a prisoner caused by prison staff or another prisoner [Farmer v. Brennan (1994) 511 U.S. 825, 835-840, 114 S. Ct. 1970, 128 L. Ed. 2d 811 (prison officials' duty not to be deliberately indifferent to possibility of assaults on inmates by other inmates); Whitley v. Albers (1986) 475 U.S. 312, 318-322, 106 S. Ct. 1078, 89 L. Ed. 2d 251 (constitutionality of use of force during prison riot depends on whether force was applied in good faith effort to maintain or restore discipline or maliciously and sadistically for very purpose of causing harm)].

✹ An action by a public employee based on violations of the employee's First Amendment rights for being a whistleblower [Waters v. Churchill (1994) 511 U.S. 661, 114 S. Ct. 1878, 128 L. Ed. 2d 686 ; Rankin v. McPherson (1987) 483 U.S. 378, 107 S. Ct. 2891, 97 L. Ed. 2d 315 ; Connick v. Myers (1983) 461 U.S. 138, 103 S. Ct. 1684, 75 L. Ed. 2d 708 ; Pickering v. Bd. of Educ. (1968) 391 U.S. 563, 88 S. Ct. 1731, 20 L. Ed. 2d 811] .

✹ An action by a public employee based on violations of the employee's right to procedural due process [Gilbert v. Homar (1997) 520 U.S. 924, 117 S. Ct. 1807, 138 L. Ed. 2d 120 ; Cleveland Bd. of Educ. v. Loudermill (1985) 470 U.S. 532, 105 S. Ct. 1487, 84 L. Ed. 2d 494 ; Arnett v. Kennedy (1974) 416 U.S. 134, 94 S. Ct. 1633, 40 L. Ed. 2d 15] .

✹ An action against police officers and a towing company for violation of the constitutional right to due process by impounding a car without giving advance notice, and unconstitutionally seizing the car [Clement v. City of Glendale (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1090, 1093-1096].

- A due process right of limited post-conviction access by a prisoner to evidence used to convict him [Osborne v. District Attorney's Office (9th Cir. 2008) 521 F.3d 1118, 1128-1132].

- An action alleging unconstitutional gender discrimination in schools based on peer-to-peer harassment [see Fitzgerald v. Barnstable School Committee (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 788, 172 L. Ed. 2d 582, 590-595 (Title IX of Education Amendments of 1972 does not preclude action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 alleging unconstitutional gender discrimination in schools based on peer-to-peer harassment)].

[e] Statute Not Applied to Remedy Certain Violations

Although the scope of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 is extremely broad, it will not be applied to remedy violations of statutes in which Congress has foreclosed enforcement in the enactment itself, or of statutes that do not create enforceable rights, privileges, or immunities within the meaning of § 1983 [Wright v. Roanoke Redev. and Housing Auth. (1987) 479 U.S. 418, 423, 107 S. Ct. 766, 93 L. Ed. 2d 781] .

When Congress has not explicitly foreclosed enforcement of a statute in the enactment itself, the courts look at three factors when determining whether a particular statutory provision gives rise to a federal right [Blessing v. Freestone (1997) 520 U.S. 329, 340, 117 S. Ct. 1353, 137 L. Ed. 2d 569 ; Wilder v. Virginia Hospital Ass'n (1990) 496 U.S. 498, 509, 110 S. Ct. 2510, 110 L. Ed. 2d 455 ; San Lazaro Ass'n v. Connell (9th Cir. 2002) 278 F.3d 932, 941-942 ; see Golden State Transit Corp. v. Los Angeles (1989) 493 U.S. 103, 105-108, 110 S. Ct. 444, 107 L. Ed. 2d 420] :

- Whether Congress intended that the provision benefit the plaintiff.

- Whether plaintiff has demonstrated that the right assertedly protected by the statute is not so vague and amorphous that its enforcement would strain judicial competence.

- Whether the statute unambiguously imposes a binding obligation on the state.

[f] Criminal Procedure Issues

In the area of criminal procedure, the trend is to look to the specific guarantees of the Bill of Rights, rather than the more generalized language contained in earlier cases construing the Fourteenth Amendment. Thus, an allegation of a constitutional deprivation, for purposes of an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, is more firmly grounded on a specific provision of one of the first 10 amendments, than on an alleged violation of "substantive due process" [see Albright v. Oliver (1994) 510 U.S. 266, 271-273, 114 S. Ct. 807, 127 L. Ed. 2d 114 (no cause of action based on asserted substantive due process right to be free from criminal prosecution except on probable cause; rather, cause of action had to be based on Fourth Amendment rights); see also Larson v. Neimi (9th Cir. 1993) 9 F.3d 1397, 1400 (action based on false arrest properly based on Fourth Amendment rather than substantive due process)].

A plaintiff may not maintain a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 if success on that claim would necessarily imply the invalidity of a prior criminal conviction [Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 486-487, 114 S. Ct. 2364, 129 L. Ed. 2d 383 ; Cunningham v. Gates (9th Cir. 2002) 312 F.3d 1148, 1153 ; Sanford v. Motts (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1117, 1119 ; cf. Weilburg v. Shapiro (9th Cir. 2007) 488 F.3d 1202, 1205-1207 (challenge to extradition procedures would not implicate validity of underlying conviction); Ove v. Gwinn (9th Cir. 2001) 264 F.3d 817, 823 (validity of convictions for driving under influence not affected by legality of blood draws as to which plaintiffs brought § 1983 claim)]. The rule in Heck applies to a state prisoner seeking damages for unconstitutional deprivation of good-time credits, so long as the alleged constitutional violation would, if established, imply the invalidity of the deprivation of good-time credits [Edwards v. Balisok (1997) 520 U.S. 641, 648, 117 S. Ct. 1584, 137 L. Ed. 2d 906 ; Nonnette v. Small (9th Cir. 2002) 316 F.3d 872, 875] . However, a prisoner who seeks damages only for being subjected to unconstitutional procedures, without implying the invalidity of or seeking damages for the resulting loss of good-time credits, may proceed under § 1983 without first invalidating the disciplinary proceeding [Edwards v. Balisok (1997) 520 U.S. 641, 645-646, 117 S. Ct. 1584, 137 L. Ed. 2d 906 ; Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 482-483, 114 S. Ct. 2364, 129 L. Ed. 2d 383 ; Nonnette v. Small (9th Cir. 2002) 316 F.3d 872, 875 n.3]. In addition, excessive force used after an arrest is made does not destroy the lawfulness of the arrest [Sanford v. Motts (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1117, 1120 ; see also Simpson v. Thomas (9th Cir. 2008) 528 F.3d 685, 691-696 (Heck v. Humphrey does not create rule of evidence exclusion and may not be used to bar evidence in § 1983 claim for excessive force)].

The standard of liability required to impose § 1983 liability on police officers for failure to disclose material, exculpatory evidence to prosecutors is whether the officers acted with deliberate indifference to or reckless disregard for an accused's rights or for the truth in withholding evidence from prosecutors [Tennison v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2009) 570 F.3d 1078, 1087-1090]. Suppression of Brady material violates due process irrespective of the good faith or bad faith of the prosecution [Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 87, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 ; Tennison v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2009) 570 F.3d 1078, 1088]. Mere negligence is not sufficient. However, the plaintiff is also not required to show that the officers acted in bad faith [Tennison v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2009) 570 F.3d 1078, 1088-1090].

[6] Plaintiff's Standing

[a] No Standing to Assert Rights of Third Party

A plaintiff generally lacks standing to assert the rights and interests of a third party in an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. For example, a white plaintiff does not have standing under that statute solely for the purpose of vindicating the rights of minorities who have suffered from racial discrimination [see Maynard v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 1396, 1402-1403 (relying on Halet v. Wend Inv. Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 672 F.2d 1305, 1307-1309)] . However, a white plaintiff does have standing under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for the purpose of vindicating his or her right to be free from retaliation for aiding or associating with minorities [see Maynard v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 1396, 1404] . A white plaintiff also has standing to assert a claim of discrimination based on mistaken racial identity [Estate of Amos v. City of Page (9th Cir. 2001) 257 F.3d 1086, 1093-1094] .

[b] Standing Issue Should Be Resolved Before Reaching Merits of Claim

The question of whether a party has standing to assert a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 should be resolved before reaching the merits of the claim [Steel Co. v. Citizens for a Better Environment (1998) 523 U.S. 83, 93-102, 118 S. Ct. 1003, 140 L. Ed. 2d 210 ; Moreland v. Las Vegas Metro. Police Dep't (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 365, 369 ; see Byrd v. Guess (9th Cir. 1998) 137 F.3d 1126, 1131 , cert. denied, 525 U.S. 963 (failure to demonstrate Fourth Amendment standing precludes claim regardless of potential merits)].

[c] Separate Justiciability Inquiries Are Required

In City of Los Angeles v. Lyons, the United States Supreme Court held that a plaintiff lacks standing to obtain injunctive relief for past exposure to illegal conduct alone [City of Los Angeles v. Lyons (1983) 461 U.S. 95, 111, 103 S. Ct. 1660, 75 L. Ed. 2d 675] . The federal circuit courts have generally interpreted Lyons to require separate justiciability inquiries for damages and injunctive relief [see, e.g., Hodgers-Durgin v. De La Vina (9th Cir. 1999) 199 F.3d 1037, 1040-1042 ; Coleman v. Watt (8th Cir. 1994) 40 F.3d 255, 259 ; Wagshal v. Foster (D.C. Cir. 1994) 28 F.3d 1249, 1251-1252 , cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1004 (1995) ; Henschen v. City of Houston (5th Cir. 1992) 959 F.2d 584, 587] .

[d] Survival Actions

In a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action, the survivors of an individual killed as a result of an excessive use of force may assert a Fourth Amendment claim on that individual's behalf if the relevant state's law authorizes a survival action [Moreland v.

Las Vegas Metro. Police Dep't (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 365, 369 ; Smith v. City of Fontana (9th Cir. 1987) 818 F.2d 1411, 1416-1417 , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 935 ; see 42 U.S.C. § 1988(a)]. The party seeking to bring a survival action bears the burden of demonstrating that a particular state's law authorizes a survival action and the plaintiff meets that state's requirements for bringing a survival action [Moreland v. Las Vegas Metro. Police Dep't (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 365, 369 ; Byrd v. Guess (9th Cir. 1998) 137 F.3d 1126, 1131 , cert. denied, 525 U.S. 963] . Survival actions are governed in California by Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60, which authorizes causes of action to be brought by a decedent's personal representative or any of a defined list of persons, including the decedent's spouse, domestic partner, children, or heirs.

Additionally, the survivors of a person killed by law enforcement officers, including parents and children, may assert a Fourteenth Amendment substantive due process claim based on the related deprivation of their liberty interest arising out of their relationship with the decedent [Moreland v. Las Vegas Metro. Police Dep't (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 365, 371 ; Byrd v. Guess (9th Cir. 1998) 137 F.3d 1126, 1133-1134 , cert. denied, 525 U.S. 963 ; Curnow v. Ridgecrest Police (9th Cir. 1991) 952 F.2d 321, 325 , cert. denied, 506 U.S. 972 (1992)] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Estate Cases. In death cases it is necessary to name the "Estate" of the decedent as a party in order to have standing to seek punitive damages. In some cases the Estate may be able to assert additional damage claims. The law is unsettled with respect to whether the Estate can seek damages for the pain and suffering suffered by the decedent from the time of the injury until the time of death. The mechanics for setting up an Estate may vary depending on the circumstances. The survival action maintained by heirs is based on the deprivation of the constitutional right to familial association grounded primarily in the Fourteenth Amendment. The law is also unsettled as to whether the Fourteenth Amendment test should apply to the heirs as opposed to, for example, the Fourth Amendment test in police cases or the Eighth Amendment test in prison death cases. In addition, there may also be some confusion as to which Fourteenth Amendment test to apply.

Attorneys should also keep in mind the potential conflict of interest that may exist between heirs and situations in which heirs who are "necessary parties" choose not to participate in the litigation. By John H. Scott

[7] Defendants

[a] Persons Subjecting Others to Deprivation of Rights

Every person who subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen or other person within the jurisdiction of the United States to a deprivation of federal rights may be liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

A person "subjects" another to the deprivation of a constitutional right if he or she performs an affirmative act, participates in another's affirmative act, or omits to perform an act legally required of him or her, and that omission causes the deprivation about which the complaint is made. Moreover, personal participation is not the only predicate for liability. Anyone who "causes" any citizen to be subjected to a constitutional deprivation is also liable. The requisite causal connection can be established not only by some kind of direct personal participation in the deprivation, but also by setting in motion a series of acts by others that the actor knows or reasonably should know would cause others to inflict the constitutional injury [Johnson v. Duffy (9th Cir. 1978) 588 F.2d 740, 743-744] .

A government official may be liable for the acts of another person, such as a subordinate; however, there can be no liability if the other person commits no violation [see Forrett v. Richardson (9th Cir. 1998) 112 F.3d 416, 421 , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1049 (former police chief and city not liable for violation of Fourth Amendment rights when liability hinged on conduct of police officers, and officers did not violate plaintiff's rights)]. In addition, members of a governing board cannot be vicariously liable for the conduct of employees [Weisbuch v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1997) 119 F.3d 778, 781 (allegations that members of county board of supervisors refused to overrule decisions of employees rejected as basis for § 1983 liability, because allowing such allegations would permit end run around Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 , discussed in [c], below)].

Any person who is implicated by concerted action or conspiracy with another person who is acting under color of law may be held liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Briley v. State of Cal. (9th Cir. 1977) 564 F.2d 849, 858 (acting in concert); Gillibeau v. City of Richmond (9th Cir. 1969) 417 F.2d 426, 430 (conspiracy)]. Further, private citizens may be liable under § 1983 if they invoke or enforce constitutionally defective state laws [Smith v. United Trans. Union Local No. 81 (S.D. Cal. 1984) 594 F. Supp 96, 99,].

However, a person cannot be held liable under § 1983 because of membership in a group without a showing of individual participation in unlawful conduct [Jones v. Williams (9th Cir. 2002) 286 F.3d 1159, 1163 ; Chuman v. Wright (9th Cir. 1996) 76 F.3d 292, 294] . Thus, for example, a jury instruction that bases liability on membership in a group, such as a group of police officers, and does not require individual liability is improper [Jones v. Williams (9th Cir. 2002) 286 F.3d 1159, 1163-1166 ; Chuman v. Wright (9th Cir. 1996) 76 F.3d 292, 295] . Further, simply because a police officer remains armed during a search does not make the officer liable for violations occurring during the search unless the plaintiff can show that the officer was an integral participant in unlawful conduct, such as destruction of property [Jones v. Williams (9th Cir. 2002) 286 F.3d 1159, 1166-1167] .

[b] Officials in Personal Capacity

[i] Imposition of Personal Liability

State and local government officials may be sued in their personal, or individual, capacity under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [see Kentucky v. Graham (1985) 473 U.S. 159, 165-167, 105 S. Ct. 3099, 87 L. Ed. 2d 114 ; Briley v. State of Cal. (9th Cir. 1977) 564 F.2d 849, 856 ; M.J. Brock & Sons v. City of Davis (N.D. Cal. 1975) 401 F. Supp. 354, 360] . However, a plaintiff cannot bring an action under § 1983 against a state official in his or her individual capacity to vindicate rights created by Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act or section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act [Vinson v. Thomas (9th Cir. 2002) 288 F.3d 1145, 1156 ; for general discussion of Title II of the ADA and section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act, see Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities, § 112.15]. Such a personal-capacity suit seeks to impose personal liability on a government official for actions that he or she takes under color of state law. An official-capacity suit, on the other hand, generally represents only another way of pleading an action against the entity of which the officer is an agent [Kentucky v. Graham (1985) 473 U.S. 159, 165-167, 105 S. Ct. 3099, 87 L. Ed. 2d 114] .

To establish personal liability of an official, it is enough to show that the official, acting under color of state law, caused the deprivation of a federal right [Kentucky v. Graham (1985) 473 U.S. 159, 166, 105 S. Ct. 3099, 87 L. Ed. 2d 114 ; see Redman v. County of San Diego (9th Cir. 1991) 942 F.2d 1435, 1446-1447 , cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1074 (1992)] .

[ii] Availability of Damages

To recover monetary damages against an individual defendant in a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action, a plaintiff must show how the deliberate indifference or the affirmative actions of each defendant caused a constitutional violation [Leer v. Murphy (9th Cir. 1988) 844 F.2d 628, 633-634] .

An award of damages against an official in his or her personal capacity can be executed only against the official's personal assets. By contrast, an award of damages in an official-capacity suit enables the successful plaintiff to look to the government entity itself to satisfy the judgment [Kentucky v. Graham (1985) 473 U.S. 159, 165-166, 105 S. Ct. 3099, 87 L. Ed. 2d 114] .

Punitive damages are also available against an official in a personal-capacity suit [Kentucky v. Graham (1985) 473 U.S. 159, 167 n.13, 105 S. Ct. 3099, 87 L. Ed. 2d 114] .

[iii] Personal Immunity Defenses

A government official in a personal-capacity suit may, depending on his or her position, be able to assert personal immunity defenses, such as objectively reasonable reliance on existing law [Kentucky v. Graham (1985) 473 U.S. 159, 166-167, 105 S. Ct. 3099, 87 L. Ed. 2d 114 (defense unavailable in official-capacity action)]. However, the fact that the entity that employed individuals may be immune from suit does not preclude an action for damages against the individuals in their personal capacity [Cerrato v. San Francisco Community College Dist. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 968, 972 (community college district's immunity under U.S. Const., amend. XI, did not protect individual defendants)].

[c] Local Governments

[i] Liability Generally

Municipalities and other local governing bodies are "persons" within the meaning of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 690, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 ; Lynch v. San Francisco Housing Authority (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 527, 542 (housing authority subject to suit, rather than immune as arm of state, at least on record on demurrer)]. However, neither a municipality nor a supervisor can be liable under § 1983 when no injury or constitutional violation has occurred [Jackson v. City of Bremerton (9th Cir. 2001) 268 F.3d 646, 653-654 , citing City of Los Angeles v. Heller (1986) 475 U.S. 796, 799, 106 S. Ct. 1571, 89 L. Ed. 2d 806] . Further, local governments are not responsible for the constitutional infringements of their employees under a theory of respondeat superior [Monell v. New York City Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 691, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 ; Pitts v. County of Kern (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 340, 348, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 823, 949 P.2d 920 ; County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (Peters) (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1166, 1171, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 860] . Nevertheless, local governing bodies may be sued under § 1983 for monetary, declaratory, or injunctive relief when the actions alleged to be unconstitutional implement or execute a policy statement, ordinance, regulation, or decision officially adopted and promulgated by that body's officers [Monell v. New York City Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 694, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 ; Brass v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2003) 328 F.3d 1192, 1198 ; Henry v. County of Shasta (9th Cir. 1997) 132 F.3d 512, 517 , cert. denied, 525 U.S. 819 (1998) (post-event evidence admissible to prove existence of municipal defendant's policy or custom, and may be highly probative with regard to that inquiry)]. At least two routes can lead to the conclusion that a municipality has inflicted a constitutional injury [Gibson v. County of Washoe (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 1175, 1185-1186] :

- The plaintiff can show that the municipality itself violated someone's rights or that it directed its employee to do so [Board of County Comm'rs of Bryan County v. Brown (1994) 520 U.S. 397, 404, 117 S. Ct. 1382, 137 L. Ed. 2d 626] , or, in limited situations, the plaintiff can demonstrate that the municipality is responsible for a constitutional tort committed by its employee, even though it did not direct the employee to commit the tort [Board of County Comm'rs of Bryan County v. Brown (1994) 520 U.S. 397, 406-407, 117 S. Ct. 1382, 137 L. Ed. 2d 626 ; City of Canton v. Harris (1989) 489 U.S. 378, 387, 109 S. Ct. 1197, 103 L. Ed. 2d 412] .

- The plaintiff can allege that through its omissions the municipality is responsible for a constitutional violation committed by one of its employees, even though the municipality's policies were facially constitutional, the municipality did not direct the employee to take the unconstitutional action, and the municipality did not have the state of mind required to prove the underlying violation, but the plaintiff must show that the municipality's deliberate indifference led to its omission and that the omission caused the employee to commit the constitutional violation [City of Canton v. Harris (1989) 489 U.S. 378,

The liability of a local government entity such as a school district under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 may be premised on any of the following three theories [Lytle v. Carl (9th Cir. 2004) 382 F.3d 978, 982 ; Webb v. Sloan (9th Cir. 2003) 330 F.3d 1158, 1164] :

- An employee acted pursuant to an expressly adopted official policy.
- An employee acted pursuant to a longstanding practice or custom.
- An employee acted as a final policymaker.

Local governments may also be sued when their actions infringe on rights pursuant to governmental custom made by their lawmakers or by those whose edicts or acts may fairly be said to represent official policy [Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 690-694, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 ; County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (Peters) (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1166, 1172-1178, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 860 (in setting policies regarding release of persons from jail, sheriff acted in capacity of state official rather than policymaker for county); Haskins v. San Diego County Dept. of Public Welfare (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 961, 973, 161 Cal. Rptr. 385 (county not liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 when injury, if any, was caused by simple negligence rather than official policy)].

When the policy or custom identified by the plaintiff is one of inaction, such as a failure to train employees, the plaintiff must show that the policy amounts to deliberate indifference to the plaintiff's constitutional rights [City of Canton v. Harris (1989) 489 U.S. 378, 392, 109 S. Ct. 1197, 103 L. Ed. 2d 412 ; Estate of Amos v. City of Page (9th Cir. 2001) 257 F.3d 1086, 1094 ; Plumeau v. School Dist. No. 40 (9th Cir. 1997) 130 F.3d 432, 438 ; Oviatt By and Through Waugh v. Pearce (9th Cir. 1992) 954 F.2d 1470, 1474 ; for a related jury instruction on § 1983 public entity liability for failure to train in a state court action, see Judicial Council Of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 3009 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions].

Because local government officials sued in their official capacities are "persons" within the meaning of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 690, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611] , a judgment against a local government official in his or her official capacity imposes liability on the entity that he or she represents, provided the local entity received notice and had an opportunity to respond to the charges [Brandon v. Holt (1985) 469 U.S. 464, 471-472, 105 S. Ct. 873, 83 L. Ed. 2d 878] . Thus, a suit against a governmental officer in an official capacity is equivalent to a suit against the government itself, and the standards applicable in such suits under Monell must be met [Larez v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1991) 946 F.2d 630, 646-648] .

For related jury instructions on municipal liability on a claim for violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 in an action in state court, see Judicial Council Of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 3007, 3008 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions.

[ii] Liability for Single Decision

Municipal liability may be imposed for a single decision by municipal policymakers because even a single decision by that body unquestionably constitutes an act of official government policy [Pembaur v. Cincinnati (1986) 475 U.S. 469, 480, 106 S. Ct. 1292, 89 L. Ed. 2d 452 ; Hammond v. County of Madera (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 797, 801] . Municipal liability will not result, however, from a single isolated wrongful act of a city employee not authorized to make city policy [City of Oklahoma City v. Tuttle (1985) 471 U.S. 808, 813-814, 105 S. Ct. 2427, 85 L. Ed. 2d 791 ; see City of St. Louis v. Praprotnik (1988) 485 U.S. 112, 130-131, 108 S. Ct. 915, 99 L. Ed. 2d 107 (official did not possess authority to establish employment policy and thereby subject city to liability) (plurality opinion)].

The doctrine of ratification as a basis for municipal liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 originated in a decision by a plurality of the United States Supreme Court stating that if the authorized policymakers approve a subordinate's decision and the basis for it, their ratification would be chargeable to the municipality because their decision is final. However, to establish municipal liability based on ratification, a plaintiff must prove the existence of an unconstitutional municipal policy [City of St. Louis v. Praprotnik (1988) 485 U.S. 112, 127-128, 108 S. Ct. 915, 99 L. Ed. 2d 107 ; see Haugen v. Brosseau (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 857, 875] . The plaintiff must show that the triggering decision was the product of a conscious, affirmative choice to ratify the conduct in question [Haugen v. Brosseau (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 857, 875 ; Gillette v. Delmore (9th Cir. 1992) 979 F.2d 1342, 1347 , citing Pembaur v. City of Cincinnati (1986) 475 U.S. 469, 480-481, 106 S. Ct. 1292, 89 L. Ed. 2d 452] .

[iii] Liability for Systemic Injuries

A local governing body is liable for systemic injuries that result not so much from the conduct of any single individual but from the interactive behavior of several government officials, each of whom may be acting in good faith. Knowledge that the official policy is constitutionally infirm may not be necessary to establish liability [Chalmers v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 762 F.2d 753, 758] .

[iv] No Municipal Liability for Failure to Overrule Unconstitutional Act of Subordinate

Municipal liability does not result from the mere failure of a policymaker to overrule the unconstitutional discretionary act of a subordinate [Gillette v. Delmore (9th Cir. 1992) 979 F.2d 1342, 1347-1348 , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 932 (1993)]. A municipality may be liable, however, if an official policymaker ratifies a subordinate's decision by approving both the decision and the basis for it [St. Louis v. Praprotnik (1988) 485 U.S. 112, 126-127, 108 S. Ct. 915, 99 L. Ed. 2d 107 ; Hammond v. County of Madera (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 797, 802-803 ; see, e.g., Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1525-1535 (city could be held liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for sex discrimination based on alleged inadequate investigation of plaintiff police officer's sexual harassment charge against fellow officer, because police chief ratified decision to close investigation by approving it after reviewing case file revealing grossly inadequate investigation)].

[d] State Governments

[i] Eleventh Amendment Immunity Generally

The Eleventh Amendment of the United States Constitution bars suit against a state or an arm of the state in federal court unless the state has waived its immunity, or unless Congress has exercised its power under the Fourteenth Amendment to override that immunity [Will v. Michigan Dep't of State Police (1989) 491 U.S. 58, 63-69, 109 S. Ct. 2304, 105 L. Ed. 2d 45] . The State of California has not waived its Eleventh Amendment immunity with respect to claims brought under § 1983 in federal court, and § 1983 was not intended to abrogate a state's Eleventh Amendment immunity [Brown v. Cal. Dep't of Corr. (2009) 554 F.3d 747, 752 ; Dittman v. California (9th Cir. 1999) 191 F.3d 1020, 1025-1026].

Congress, in enacting 42 U.S.C. § 1983, did not override the states' Eleventh Amendment immunity. Therefore, absent state consent, Eleventh Amendment immunity bars a suit against a state or an arm of the state in federal court under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Will v. Michigan Dep't of State Police (1989) 491 U.S. 58, 66, 109 S. Ct. 2304, 105 L. Ed. 2d 45 ; Lynch v. San Francisco Housing Authority (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 527, 532, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620 (housing authority not state agency entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity); see Dittman v. State of California (9th Cir. 1999) 191 F.3d 1020, 1025-1026 , cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1261 (2000) (State of California Acupuncture Committee is arm of state and cannot be sued under § 1983); Franceschi v. Schwartz (9th Cir. 1995) 57 F.3d 828, 831 (California municipal court is arm of state); Kirchmann v. Lake Elsinore Unified School District (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1098, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 289 (California school districts are arms of state); Eason v. Clark County School District (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1137, 1140-1144 (Nevada school district was immune as arm of state)].

In deciding whether an entity may invoke Eleventh Amendment immunity, courts inquire into the relationship between the state and the entity in question. If the state is the real, substantial party in interest, it is entitled to invoke its sovereign immunity from suit, even though the entity and not the state is the named party [Regents of Univ. of California v. Doe (1997) 519 U.S. 425, 429-431, 117 S. Ct. 900, 137 L. Ed. 2d 55] . A private entity that is an independent contractor with the state is not entitled to sovereign immunity in an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Del Campo v. Kennedy (9th Cir. 2008) 517 F.3d 1070, 1075-1080 (private corporation contracted with district attorney to run bad check diversion program was not entitled to sovereign immunity)].

Sheriffs act on behalf of the state when performing law enforcement activities. Accordingly, California sheriffs when performing law enforcement activities are absolutely immune from prosecution for asserted violations of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Venegas v. County of Los Angeles (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 820, 828-839 ; see Bougere v. County of Los Angeles (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 237, 241-248, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 711 (sheriff was carrying out law enforcement function in setting policies pertaining to placement of inmates at county jail and therefore was acting as state official immune from § 1983 liability)]. On the other hand, district attorneys carry out county functions when engaging in employment-related actions and are not entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity [Ceballos v. Garcetti (9th Cir. 2004) 361 F.3d 1168, 1182-1185] .

The Eleventh Amendment does not bar an action to enforce a consent decree entered into by state officials [see Frew v. Hawkins (2004) 540 U.S. 431, 124 S. Ct. 899, 903-906, 157 L. Ed. 2d 855 (federal court's enforcement of consent decree entered into by state officials concerning Medicaid not barred by Eleventh Amendment)].

Suits under § 1983 against individual officers in their individual capacity for violations of the Constitution do not implicate sovereign immunity [Miranda B. v. Kitzhaber (9th Cir. 2003) 328 F.3d 1181, 1190] .

[ii] Factors to Consider Whether Agency Is Immune

To determine if a governmental agency is an arm of the state for purposes of invoking Eleventh Amendment immunity, the Ninth Circuit considers the following five factors [Eason v. Clark County School District (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1137, 1141 ; Hale v. State of Arizona (9th Cir. 1993) 993 F.2d 1387, 1399 , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 946 ; Mitchell v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (9th Cir. 1988) 861 F.2d 198, 201 , cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1081 (1989)] :

- Whether a money judgment would be satisfied out of state funds;
- Whether the entity performs central governmental functions;
- Whether the entity may sue or be sued;
- Whether the entity has the power to take property in its own name or only in the name of the state; and
- The corporate status of the entity.

California courts have examined these five factors identified by the Ninth Circuit, and also other factors identified by courts throughout the federal system [Lynch v. San Francisco Housing Authority (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 527, 533-534, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620] .

[iii] States and State Officials Are Not "Persons"

Neither states nor state officials sued in their official capacities are "persons" within the meaning of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 when sued for damages. Therefore, neither the state nor arms of the state can be sued for damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 in either federal or state court [Will v. Michigan Dep't of State Police (1989) 491 U.S. 58, 63-64, 71, 109 S. Ct. 2304, 105 L. Ed. 2d 45 ; Pitts v. County of Kern (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 340, 348, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 823, 949 P.2d 920 (California district attorney acts on behalf of state, not as county policymaker, in preparation for and prosecution of criminal violations of state law, and when establishing policy and training employees in those areas); County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (Peters) (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1166, 1172-1178, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 860 (policies of Los Angeles County Sheriff's office regarding release of persons from jail were not policies of county since sheriff acted in capacity as state official rather than local policymaker for county); Rossco Holdings v. State of California (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 642, 661, 260 Cal. Rptr. 736 , cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1080 (1990) (California Coastal Commission not a "person")]. In addition, both the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands and its officers and the Commonwealth Port Authority (CPA) and its officers are not "persons" who can be sued under § 1983 [DeNieva v. Reyes (9th Cir. 1992) 966 F.2d 480, 483 (Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands); Aguon v. Commonwealth Port Authority (9th Cir. 2003) 316 F.3d 899, 901-904 (CPA)].

Although state officials literally are "persons," a suit against a state official in his or her official capacity is not a suit against that official as an individual, but rather is a suit against the official's office, and as such, is not different from a suit against the state itself. Thus, a state official sued in an official capacity is not a person who may be sued under § 1983 [Will v. Michigan Dep't of State Police (1989) 491 U.S. 58, 70-71, 109 S. Ct. 2304, 105 L. Ed. 2d 45 ; Garcia v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 728, 739, 268 Cal. Rptr. 779, 789 P.2d 960 ; see Coeur d'Alene Tribe v. Idaho (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 1244, 1250, 1255] .

PRACTICE TIP:

State Cannot Be Sued Under § 1983. As noted above, the State cannot be sued for damages under § 1983 because it is not a "person." There is authority for the proposition that it was Congress's intent, in passing the Fourteenth Amendment, to allow citizens to sue States because the Fourteenth Amendment followed the Eleventh Amendment. Before the Monell decision [Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 ; see [c][i], above], cities and counties were not considered "persons." The Will decision [Will v. Michigan Dep't of State Police (1989) 491 U.S. 58, 109 S. Ct. 2304, 105 L. Ed. 2d 45] was a five to four vote and thus is vulnerable to being overturned--depending on the future makeup of the Supreme Court. By John H. Scott

The phrase "official capacity" is best understood as a reference to the capacity in which the state officer is sued, not the capacity in which that officer inflicts the injury [Hafer v. Melo (1991) 502 U.S. 21, 26-27, 112 S. Ct. 358, 116 L. Ed. 2d 301] . State officials, sued in their individual capacities, are "persons" within the meaning of § 1983. The Eleventh Amendment does not bar such suits, nor are state officers absolutely immune from personal liability under § 1983 solely by virtue of the "official" nature of their acts [Hafer v. Melo (1991) 502 U.S. 21, 30-31, 112 S. Ct. 358, 116 L. Ed. 2d 301] .

[iv] Injunctive or Declaratory Relief Is Appropriate Against State Official

Although U.S. Const., amend. XI precludes suit against the state regardless of the relief sought, a complaint for injunctive or declaratory relief may lie against a state official in his or her official capacity [see Will v. Michigan Dep't of State Police (1989) 491 U.S. 58, 71 n.10, 109 S. Ct. 2304, 105 L. Ed. 2d 45 ; Kentucky v. Graham (1985) 473 U.S. 159, 166-167, 167 n.14, 105 S. Ct. 3099, 87 L. Ed. 2d 114 ; Doe v. Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory (9th Cir. 1997) 131 F.3d 836, 839 (when sued for prospective injunctive relief, state official in official capacity is considered "person" for § 1983 purposes); Coeur d'Alene Tribe v. Idaho (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 1244, 1251-1252, 1255 ; but see Nat'l Private Truck Council v. Oklahoma Tax Com. (1995) 515 U.S. 582, 588-590, 115 S. Ct. 2351, 132 L. Ed. 2d 509 (state officials may not be enjoined from collecting state taxes under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 if plaintiff has adequate remedy at law)].

[e] Federal Agencies and Officials

42 U.S.C. § 1983 applies only to persons acting under color of state law; therefore, it does not reach the actions of federal agencies and officials acting under color of federal law [Wheeldin v. Wheeler (1963) 373 U.S. 647, 650, 83 S. Ct. 1441, 10 L. Ed. 2d 605 ; Daly-Murphy v. Winston (9th Cir. 1987) 837 F.2d 348, 355] . Nevertheless, violations by federal agents of constitutional rights while acting under color of federal authority provide a different basis for a federal cause of action for damages [see, e.g., Davis v. Passman (1979) 442 U.S. 228, 242-244, 99 S. Ct. 2264, 60 L. Ed. 2d 846 (federal right of action for damages for violation of Fifth Amendment due process clause); Bivens v. Six Unknown Fed. Narcotics Agents (1971) 403 U.S. 388, 395, 91 S. Ct. 1999, 29 L. Ed. 2d 619 (violation of U.S. Const. amend. IV as basis for cause of action)]. Such actions are commonly known as Bivens actions.

The United States Supreme Court has allowed a Bivens action to redress a violation of the equal protection component of the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment [Ashcroft v. Iqbal (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1948, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 ; see Davis v. Passman (1979) 442 U.S. 228, 99 S. Ct. 2264, 60 L. Ed. 2d 846 (1979)] . However, the Court has not found an implied damages remedy under the Free Exercise Clause and has declined to extend Bivens to a claim sounding in the First Amendment [Ashcroft v. Iqbal (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1948, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 ; Bush v. Lucas (1983) 462 U.S. 367, 103 S. Ct. 2404, 76 L. Ed. 2d 648]. In the limited settings in which Bivens applies, the implied cause of action is the federal analog to suits brought against state officials under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Ashcroft v. Iqbal (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1948, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 ; Hartman v. Moore (2006) 547 U.S. 250, 254, n.2, 126 S. Ct. 1695, 164 L. Ed. 2d 441 ; cf. Wilson v. Layne (1999) 526 U.S. 603, 609, 119 S. Ct. 1692, 143 L. Ed. 2d 818].

In Bivens actions government officials may not be held liable for the unconstitutional conduct of their subordinates under a theory of respondeat superior [Ashcroft v. Iqbal (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1948, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 ; see Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 691, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 (no vicarious liability for municipal "person" under 42 U.S.C. § 1983); Robertson v. Sichel (1888) 127 U.S. 507, 515-516, 8 S. Ct. 1286, 32 L. Ed. 203 (public officer or agent is not responsible for misfeasances, position wrongs, nonfeasance, negligence, or omissions of duty of subagents or servants or other persons properly employed by or under officer or agent, in discharge of official duties); Dunlop v. Munroe (1812) 11 U.S. 242, 3 L. Ed. 329, 7 Cranch 242, 269 (federal official's liability only results from official's own neglect in not properly superintending discharge of subordinates' duties)]. A supervisor's mere knowledge of a subordinate's discriminatory purpose does not amount to the supervisor's violating the Constitution. Absent vicarious liability, each government official, title notwithstanding, is only liable for his or her own misconduct. Because vicarious liability is inapplicable to Bivens and § 1983 suits, a plaintiff must plead that each government-official defendant, through the official's own individual actions, has violated the Constitution [Ashcroft v. Iqbal (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1948-1949, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868].

The factors necessary to establish a Bivens violation vary with the constitutional provision at issue. When the claim is invidious discrimination in contravention of the First and Fifth Amendments, the plaintiff must plead and prove that the defendant acted with discriminatory purpose [Ashcroft v. Iqbal (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1948, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 ; Church of Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. Hialeah (1993) 508 U.S. 520, 540-541, 113 S. Ct. 2217, 124 L. Ed. 2d 472 (First Amendment); Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 240, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 (Fifth Amendment). A showing of purposeful discrimination requires more than intent as volition or intent as awareness of consequences. It requires that plaintiff show that a decision maker undertook a course of action because of, not merely in spite of, the action's adverse effects upon an identifiable group [Ashcroft v. Iqbal (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1948-1949, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (to state Bivens claim based on violation of clearly established right, plaintiff had to plead sufficient factual matter to show government officials adopted and implemented policies not for neutral, investigative reason, but for purpose of discriminating on account of race, religion, or national origin); Personnel Administrator of Mass. v. Feeney (1979) 442 U.S. 256, 279, 99 S. Ct. 2282, 60 L. Ed. 2d 870 (1979)] .

However, there is no private right of action for damages against private entities acting under color of federal law [

Correctional Services Corp. v. Malesko (2001) 534 U.S. 61, 122 S. Ct. 515, 151 L. Ed. 2d 456 (Bivens does not allow recovery against private corporation operating halfway house under contract with federal Bureau of Prisons)]. In addition, the United States Supreme Court has shown an inclination to limit the extent of actions against federal agencies and officials if other remedies exist [see Wilkie v. Robbins (2007) 551 U.S. 537, 127 S. Ct. 2588, 2597-2604, 168 L. Ed. 2d 389 (rancher did not have Bivens claims against officials of Bureau of Land Management, because of variety of administrative and judicial remedies to redress injuries, and no new remedy to redress injuries collectively on theory of retaliation for exercising property rights); Schweiker v. Chilicky (1988) 487 U.S. 412, 421, 108 S. Ct. 2460, 101 L. Ed. 2d 370 (social security disability recipients could not sue for violation of due process rights when benefits were wrongfully terminated, because existence of remedial program consisting of award of back benefits was sufficient to preclude Bivens action); Bush v. Lucas (1983) 462 U.S. 367, 388, 103 S. Ct. 2404, 76 L. Ed. 2d 648 (no Bivens remedy for employee of National Aeronautics and Space Administration fired after making public remarks critical of employer, because Civil Service Reform Act of 1978, providing extensive review of employment decisions via Merit Systems Protection Board, was sufficient to foreclose implied action for money damages); Carlson v. Green (1980) 446 U.S. 14, 18-19, 100 S. Ct. 1468, 64 L. Ed. 2d 15 (express limitation on creation of Bivens claim can be found when Congress has provided alternative remedy it explicitly declares to be substitute for recovery directly under federal Constitution and views as equally effective); Western Radio Services Co. v. United States Forest Service (9th Cir. 2009) 578 F.3d 1116, 1119-1125 (lessee of national forest land did not have Bivens claim against Forest Service officers, where, because claims against officers were based on Forest Service actions or inactions, remedies available to lessee under Administrative Procedure Act constituted adequate alternative, existing process to new and freestanding remedy in damages); Libas Ltd. v. Carillo (9th Cir. 2003) 329 F.3d 1128, 1130-1131 (importer did not have Bivens claim against customs officials for imposition of excess import duties on bales of cotton, when Congress established remedial scheme for importers to challenge classification of goods which ultimately entitles importers that prevail to refund of all excess duties paid with interest, and when Congress expressly exempted customs officers from suit under federal Tort Claims Act); Moore v. Glickman (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 988, 993 (because Congress explicitly extended some employment rights to Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) county employees while withholding others, exclusion of ASCS employees from procedures of the Civil Service Reform Act for resolution of retaliation claims cannot be characterized as inadvertent and court was precluded from implying Bivens remedy); Brazil v. U.S. Dep't of Navy (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 193, 198 , cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1103 (1996) (denying Bivens claim to civilian employee of Navy because Title VII provides exclusive judicial remedy for claims of discrimination in federal employment); Bricker v. Rockwell Int'l Corp. (9th Cir. 1993) 22 F.3d 871, 878 (denying Bivens claim to employee at Hanford Nuclear Reservation because administrative procedures included grievance procedure with arbitration as final step, and opportunity to file formal complaint); Berry v. Hollander (9th Cir. 1991) 925 F.2d 311, 313 (denying Bivens claim to Veterans Administration physician because he was subject to regulations of Department of Medicine and Surgery); Kotarski v. Cooper (9th Cir. 1989) 866 F.2d 311, 312 (administrative remedies available under Civil Service Reform Act to probationary employee, although discretionary, adequate to preclude Bivens claim)].

On the other hand, the Ninth Circuit has held that the Federal Tort Claims Act is not the exclusive remedy for constitutional violations committed by officers and employees of the Public Health Service [Castaneda v. United States (9th Cir. 2008) 546 F.3d 682, 687-701] , and that there is no subject matter jurisdiction bar in the jurisdictional limitation provision of the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 [8 U.S.C. § 1252], or amendments to that provision enacted in the REAL ID Act of 2005 [Pub. L. No. 109-13, div. B, § 106, 119 Stat. 231, 310-11], to a Bivens action based on the alleged false arrest and detention of a resident alien for deportation by an officer of the former INS [see Sissoko v. Rocha (9th Cir. 2006) 440 F.3d 1145, 1154-1164] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Indemnifying Federal Employees. A Bivens action can only be asserted against federal employees in their individual capacities. The federal government generally will not indemnify individual employees who suffer a Bivens judgment. Some federal agencies have guidelines for deciding whether or not to indemnify employees. Attorneys should pursue a Federal Tort Claim in addition to, or in lieu of, a Bivens claim. Judgment in a Federal Tort Claims Act (FTCA) action bars recovery against individual employees

[28 U.S.C. § 2676]. State law determines the elements of the cause of action, but federal law determines the scope of the United States' immunity [28 U.S.C. § 2674]. Certain intentional torts are excluded under the FTCA unless based on the conduct of "investigative or law enforcement officers" of the United States [28 U.S.C. § 2680(h)]. By John H. Scott

The defense of qualified immunity [see § 113.14[11][b], above] is available to defendants in Bivens actions [see, e.g., Ashcroft v. Iqbal (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1947-1954, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (plaintiff failed to plead to state claim of unconstitutional discrimination against federal officials entitled to assert defense of qualified immunity)]. In the context of determining whether there is a violation of clearly established right to overcome qualified immunity, purpose rather than knowledge is required to impose Bivens liability on the subordinate for unconstitutional discrimination. The same holds true for an official charged with violations arising from his or her superintendent responsibilities [Ashcroft v. Iqbal (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868].

[f] Indian Tribes

Because the United States Constitution does not restrict actions by tribal governments, a plaintiff in an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 cannot succeed in a claim against tribal police officers for deprivation of constitutional rights to the extent the officers were acting under color of tribal law [Bressi v. Ford (9th Cir. 2009) 575 F.3d 891, 895]. Tribal officers have authority to investigate violations of state and federal law by any person within the reservation, and when they discover violations, they may detain the violators in order to deliver them to state or federal authorities [Bressi v. Ford (9th Cir. 2009) 575 F.3d 891, 895 ; see Ortiz-Barraza v. United States, 512 F.2d 1176, 1180 (9th Cir. 1975)].

A roadblock on a public right-of-way within tribal territory, established on tribal authority, is permissible only to the extent the suspicionless stop of non-Indians is limited to the amount of time, and the nature of inquiry, that can establish whether or not they are Indians. When obvious violations, such as alcohol impairment, are found, detention on tribal authority for delivery to state officers is authorized. But inquiry going beyond Indian or non-Indian status, or including searches for evidence of crime, are not authorized on purely tribal authority in the case of non-Indians [Bressi v. Ford (9th Cir. 2009) 575 F.3d 891, 896-897]. Thus, tribal officers who are authorized to enforce state as well as tribal law, and proceed to exercise both powers in the operation of a roadblock, will be held to constitutional standards in establishing roadblocks [Bressi v. Ford (9th Cir. 2009) 575 F.3d 891, 897-898].

[8] Intent

No specific intent to deprive a person of a federal right is necessary to create liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Monroe v. Pape (1961) 365 U.S. 167, 187, 81 S. Ct. 473, 5 L. Ed. 2d 492 (overruled on other grounds in Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 663, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611)].

Rather, the plaintiff in a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action must prove a violation of the underlying constitutional or statutory right. The mental state required to prove the violation varies depending on the nature of that right [see, e.g., County of Sacramento v. Lewis (1998) 523 U.S. 833, 118 S. Ct. 1708, 1716-1717, 140 L. Ed. 2d 1043 (in substantive due process challenge to executive action, threshold question is whether behavior of governmental officer is so egregious or outrageous that it may fairly be said to shock contemporary conscience); Daniels v. Williams (1986) 474 U.S. 327, 330-336, 106 S. Ct. 662, 88 L. Ed. 2d 662 (due process clause not implicated by official's negligence); Arlington Heights v. Metro. Housing Corp. (1977) 429 U.S. 252, 265, 97 S. Ct. 555, 50 L. Ed. 2d 450 (invidious discriminatory purpose required for claim of racial discrimination under Equal Protection Clause); Estelle v. Gamble (1976) 429 U.S. 97, 105, 97 S. Ct. 285, 50 L. Ed. 2d 251 (deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious illness or injury sufficient to constitute cruel and unusual punishment under U.S. Const., amend. VIII); Porter v. Osborn (9th Cir. 2008) 546 F.3d 1131, 1136-1142 (in urgent situation of kind involved here, involving due process right to familial association claim, established standard is whether police officer acted with purpose to harm plaintiffs' decedent without regard to legitimate law enforcement objectives); Bingue v. Prunchak (9th Cir. 2008) 512 F.3d 1169, 1174-1178 (police officers involved in all high-speed chases entitled to qualified immunity under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 unless plaintiff can prove officer acted with deliberate intent to harm); Onossian v. Block (9th Cir. 1999) 175 F.3d 1169, 1171-1172 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1004 ("shocks the conscience" standard of Lewis applies when innocent bystander injured in high-speed police chase); Caballero v. City of Concord (9th Cir. 1992) 956 F.2d 204, 206 (inquiry under U.S. Const., amend. IV, is whether officer's actions were objectively reasonable in light of circumstances, without regard to underlying intent or motivation)].

[a] State Statute of Limitations Applies

42 U.S.C. § 1983 does not contain its own statute of limitations. Therefore, under the borrowing provision of 42 U.S.C. § 1988(a), the state statute of limitations applies [Knox v. Davis (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1009, 1012-1013 ; Cabrera v. City of Huntington Park (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 374, 379 (state law determines statute of limitations for § 1983 actions)]. The statute of limitations for an action under § 1983 is that which the state provides for personal injury torts [Wallace v. Kato (2007) 549 U.S. 384, 127 S. Ct. 1091, 1094, 166 L. Ed. 2d 973 ; Owens v. Okure (1989) 488 U.S. 235, 249-250, 109 S. Ct. 573, 102 L. Ed. 2d 594 ; Wilson v. Garcia (1985) 471 U.S. 261, 279-280, 105 S. Ct. 1938, 85 L. Ed. 2d 254] . Thus, federal and California courts have applied the one-year limitations period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3) to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 actions brought in California [see Azer v. Connell (9th Cir. 2002) 306 F.3d 930, 935-936 ; see Knox v. Davis (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1009, 1012-1013 ; Ellis v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1999) 176 F.3d 1183, 1188-1189 ; Trimble v. City of Santa Rosa (9th Cir. 1995) 49 F.3d 583, 585 ; McDougal v. County of Imperial (9th Cir. 1991) 942 F.2d 668, 672-673 ; City of Huntington Park v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1297].

Effective January 1, 2003, Code Civ. Proc. § 340 was amended and Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1 was added to provide that personal injury actions are now governed by a two-year statute of limitations. However, California's two-year statute of limitations does not apply retroactively [Maldonado v. Harris (9th Cir. 2004) 370 F.3d 945, 955 ; see Jones v. Blanas (9th Cir. 2004) 393 F.3d 918, 927 (appropriate limitations period remained one year in this case and district court applied correct limitations period)]. Thus, any cause of action that was more than one-year old as of January 1, 2003, would be barred under the previous one-year statute of limitations [Canatella v. Van De Kamp (9th Cir. 2007) 486 F.3d 1128, 1132-1133] .

Rather than applying different state statutes of limitations to § 1983 claims based on an evaluation of the varying factual circumstances and underlying legal theories, a simple, broad characterization of all such claims as personal injury actions is appropriate [see Wallace v. Kato (2007) 549 U.S. 384, 127 S. Ct. 1091, 1094, 166 L. Ed. 2d 973 (statute of limitations for action under § 1983 is that which state provides for personal injury torts); TwoRivers v. Lewis (9th Cir. 1999) 174 F.3d 987, 991 (for § 1983 actions, federal courts borrow statute of limitations applicable to personal injury claims in forum state); Plumeau v. School Dist. No. 40 (9th Cir. 1997) 130 F.3d 432, 438 (same)]. This characterization minimizes the risk that the choice of a state statute of limitations would not fairly serve the federal interests vindicated by § 1983 [Wilson v. Garcia (1985) 471 U.S. 261, 266-270, 276, 105 S. Ct. 1938, 85 L. Ed. 2d 254 ; see discussion of the borrowing provision of 42 U.S.C. § 1988 in*§ 113.17[1]*].

When state law provides multiple statutes of limitations for personal injury actions, courts considering 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claims should borrow the general or residual statute for personal injury actions [Owens v. Okure (1989) 488 U.S. 235, 249-250, 109 S. Ct. 573, 102 L. Ed. 2d 594 ; see Reed v. United Transport. Union (1989) 488 U.S. 319, 325-327, 334, 109 S. Ct. 621, 102 L. Ed. 2d 665 (drawing analogy between 29 U.S.C. § 411(a)(2) claims (union members' First Amendment rights), 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claims, and state personal injury claims)].

Note that when the action is filed in federal court, because the underlying cause of action is federal, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 3 provides the rule for when the action "commences" for purposes of the statute of limitations and Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 6(a) governs how to compute the time for purposes of Rule 3 [Sain v. City of Bend (9th Cir. 2002) 309 F.3d 1134, 1136-1138] .

[b] Issues Relating to Tolling

[i] State Law Governs

Questions closely related to the limitations period, such as tolling, are also governed by state law, unless application of state law would defeat the goals of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Hardin v. Straub (1989) 490 U.S. 536, 538-544, 109 S. Ct. 1998, 104 L. Ed. 2d 582 ; see Wilson v. Garcia (1985) 471 U.S. 261, 269, 276, 105 S. Ct. 1938, 85 L. Ed. 2d 254 ; TwoRivers v. Lewis (9th Cir. 1999) 174 F.3d 987, 992 ; Martinez v. Gomez (9th Cir. 1998) 137 F.3d 1124-1126] . However, federal law determines whether an amendment to a state tolling provision while a § 1983 action is pending applies retroactively [TwoRivers v. Lewis (9th Cir. 1999) 174 F.3d 987, 991-993] .

[ii] Minority or Insanity Statute

Code Civ. Proc. § 352(a), which tolls the limitations period during a plaintiff's minority, or for one who is insane, applies to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [May v. Enomoto (9th Cir. 1980) 633 F.2d 164, 166-167 ; City of Huntington Park v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1297-1300, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 68] .

Code Civ. Proc. § 352(b), which makes the tolling provision for a plaintiff's minority or insanity inapplicable to actions for which a claim is required to be presented to a defendant public entity, does not apply to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 because § 352(b) was not intended to apply to such actions [see City of Huntington Park v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1297-1300, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 68] .

[iii] Imprisonment Statute

Code Civ. Proc. § 352.1(a), which tolls, for up to two years, the limitations period for a person "imprisoned on a criminal charge, or in execution under the sentence of a criminal court for a term less than for life," applies to toll the limitations period in a § 1983 action [Martinez v. Gomez (9th Cir. 1998) 137 F.3d 1124, 1126] . Code Civ. Proc. § 352.1(a) only applies to § 1983 actions to the extent they are for recovery of damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 352.1(c)]. In addition, Code Civ. Proc. § 352.1(a) applies to an action brought by an inmate serving a life sentence with the possibility of parole [Martinez v. Gomez (9th Cir. 1998) 137 F.3d 1124, 1126] .

The literal language of Code Civ. Proc. § 352.1(a) does not cover a civil detainee [Jones v. Blanas (9th Cir. 2004) 393 F.3d 918, 927-928 (statute does not cover claim of civil detainee under Sexually Violent Predators Act)]. However, California's equitable tolling doctrine operates to toll a statute of limitations for a claim asserted by a continuously confined civil detainee who has pursued his or her claim in good faith [Jones v. Blanas (9th Cir. 2004) 393 F.3d 918, 928-930] .

[iv] Civil Action Prohibited Against Peace Officer When Criminal Charges Pending

Gov. Code § 945.3 also applies to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 actions [see Cabrera v. City of Huntington Park (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 374, 379 ; Trimble v. City of Santa Rosa (9th Cir. 1995) 49 F.3d 583, 585] , and provides as follows:

> No person charged by indictment, information, complaint, or other accusatory pleading charging a criminal offense may bring a civil action for money or damages against a peace officer or the public entity employing a peace officer based upon conduct of the peace officer relating to the offense for which the accused is charged, including an act or omission in investigating or reporting the offense or arresting or detaining the accused, while the charges against the accused are pending before a superior court.

Any applicable statute of limitations for filing and prosecuting these actions must be tolled during the period that the charges are pending before a superior court [Gov. Code § 945.3].

For purposes of Gov. Code § 945.3, an "accusatory pleading charging a criminal offense" includes a notice to appear or citation to a person charged with a misdemeanor [see Pen. Code § 853.6(a)], even though it is subject to supersession by the filing of a complaint, or to defeasance through prosecutorial inaction [Schmidlin v. City of Palo Alto (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 728, 749-753, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 365].

Under Gov. Code § 945.3, criminal charges are "pending" from the time the charges are filed with a court [Cabrera v. City of Huntington Park (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 374, 379] until the date of judgment [Trimble v. City of Santa Rosa (9th Cir. 1995) 49 F.3d 583, 585] , or until they are dismissed by the prosecutor [see Schmidlin v. City of Palo Alto (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 728, 746-761, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 365 (notice to appear inferentially served on criminal defendant, who later filed § 1983 action against officer, at time of his release commenced tolling under § 945.3, and criminal complaint was filed well within statutory 25 days, so that tolling period for § 1983 action continued through final disposition of charges by dismissal by prosecutor)]. Further, misdemeanor charges are "pending before a court" under § 945.3 when a criminal defendant is directed to appear before the court on specified charges by service upon the defendant of a notice to appear [see Pen. Code § 853.6(a)], regardless whether that notice is ever filed with a court [Schmidlin v. City of Palo Alto (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 728, 756, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 365].

[v] Statute Tolled by "Discovery Rule"

As a matter of federal as well as state law, the statute of limitations is generally tolled by the "discovery rule," under which the statute only begins to run once a plaintiff has knowledge of the "critical facts" of the injury, which are that the plaintiff has been hurt and who inflicted the injury [United States v. Kubrick (1979) 444 U.S. 111, 120 n.2, 122, 100 S. Ct. 352, 62 L. Ed. 2d 259 ; Bibeau v. Pacific Northwest Research Foundation (9th Cir. 1999) 188 F.3d 1105, 1108 , amended, 208 F.3d 831 (2000)] . The plaintiff must be diligent in discovering the critical facts, so that a plaintiff who did not actually know that his or her rights were violated will be barred from bringing a claim after the running of the statute of limitations, if the plaintiff should have known in the exercise of due diligence [Bibeau v. Pacific Northwest Research Foundation (9th Cir. 1999) 188 F.3d 1105, 1108 , amended, 208 F.3d 831 (2000)] .

[c] Accrual of Cause of Action

Federal law, rather than state law, governs the question when a particular cause of action accrues [Canatella v. Van De Kamp (9th Cir. 2007) 486 F.3d 1128, 1133] . Under federal rules conforming in general to common-law tort principles [see Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 483, 114 S. Ct. 2364, 129 L. Ed. 2d 383 ; Carey v. Piphus (1978) 435 U.S. 247, 257-258, 98 S. Ct. 1042, 55 L. Ed. 2d 252] , it is the standard rule that accrual occurs when the plaintiff has a complete and present cause of action, i.e., when the plaintiff can file suit and obtain relief [Wallace v. Kato (2007) 549 U.S. 384, 127 S. Ct. 1091, 1095, 166 L. Ed. 2d 973 ; Bay Area Laundry and Dry Cleaning Pension Trust Fund v. Ferbar Corp. of Cal. (1997) 522 U.S. 192, 201, 118 S. Ct. 542, 139 L. Ed. 2d 553] . Thus, for example, a plaintiff suing for false arrest could have filed suit as soon as the allegedly wrongful arrest occurred, which subjecting him to the harm of involuntary detention, so the statute of limitations would normally commence to run from that date [Wallace v. Kato (2007) 549 U.S. 384, 127 S. Ct. 1091, 1095, 166 L. Ed. 2d 973] . However, the running of the statute of limitations on false imprisonment, which is analogous to false arrest, is subject to a distinctive rule, which is that limitations begin to run against an action for false imprisonment when the alleged false imprisonment ends [Wallace v. Kato (2007) 549 U.S. 384, 127 S. Ct. 1091, 1095-1096, 166 L. Ed. 2d 973 , citing 2 H. Wood, Limitation of Actions § 187d(4), p. 878 (4th rev. ed. 1916); see also 4 Restatement (Second) of Torts § 899, Comment c (1977); A. Underhill, Principles of Law of Torts 202 (1881)]. False imprisonment ends once the victim becomes held pursuant to process, such as when he or she is bound over by a magistrate or arraigned on charges. Thereafter, unlawful detention forms part of the damages for the distinct tort of malicious prosecution, which remedies detention accompanied by wrongful institution of legal process rather than the absence of legal process [Wallace v. Kato (2007) 549 U.S. 384, 127 S. Ct. 1091, 1096, 166 L.

Ed. 2d 973 (false imprisonment ended when legal process was initiated against plaintiff, and statute would have begun to run from that date, but for its tolling by reason of petitioner's minority)].

Further, the claim accrues when the plaintiff knows or has reason to know of the injury which is the basis of the action [Canatella v. Van De Kamp (9th Cir. 2007) 486 F.3d 1128, 1133 Azer v. Connell (9th Cir. 2002) 306 F.3d 930, 936 ; Knox v. Davis (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1009, 1013 ; TwoRivers v. Lewis (9th Cir. 1999) 174 F.3d 987, 992] .

Because federal, not state, law determines when a civil rights claim accrues, California's single publication rule does not apply to § 1983 claims by its own force. However, courts have employed the single publication rule's logic to hold that once that standard is met, a single publication gives rise to only one cause of action [Canatella v. Van De Kamp (9th Cir. 2007) 486 F.3d 1128, 1133-1134] . In the case of publication on the Internet, a website, not a particular URL, is the touchstone for the single publication rule analysis [Canatella v. Van De Kamp (9th Cir. 2007) 486 F.3d 1128, 1135] .

A claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, that if successful would necessarily imply the invalidity of a conviction in a pending criminal prosecution, does not accrue so long as the potential for a conviction in the pending criminal prosecution continues to exist. Further, a § 1983 action alleging illegal search and seizure of evidence on which the criminal charges are based does not accrue until the criminal charges have been dismissed or the conviction overturned, to avoid the potential for inconsistent determinations on the legality of the search and seizure in the civil and criminal cases [Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 486-487, 114 S. Ct. 2364, 129 L. Ed. 2d 383 ; Harvey v. Waldron (9th Cir. 2000) 210 F.3d 1008, 1014-1015] . On the other hand, an action that would impugn an anticipated future conviction is not subject to the rule in Heck v. Humphrey, i.e., that it cannot be brought until that conviction occurs and is set aside. If a plaintiff files a false arrest claim or any other claim related to rulings that will likely be made in a pending or anticipated criminal trial before the plaintiff has been convicted, the court has the power to stay the civil action until the criminal case or the likelihood of a criminal case is ended. If the plaintiff is ultimately convicted, and if the stayed civil suit would impugn that conviction, Heck requires dismissal; otherwise, the civil action will proceed, absent some other bar to suit [Wallace v. Kato (2007) 549 U.S. 384, 127 S. Ct. 1091, 1098-1100, 166 L. Ed. 2d 973] . However, § 1983 actions, unlike the tort of malicious prosecution which Heck took as its model, sometimes accrue before the setting aside or even before the existence of the related criminal conviction. Assuming that the Heck bar takes effect when the later conviction is obtained, whether the statute of limitations on the once valid cause of action is tolled as long as the Heck bar subsists is governed by state law [see Wallace v. Kato (2007) 549 U.S. 384, 127 S. Ct. 1091, 1098-1100, 166 L. Ed. 2d 973 (no Illinois statute or case provided tolling under comparable circumstances and Court would not adopt federal tolling rule to that effect)].

[d] Continuing Violation

The continuing violations doctrine permits a plaintiff to sue for all discriminatory acts that occurred during the limitations period, even if the policy or other event giving rise to the discrimination occurred outside the limitations period [Committee Concerning Community Improvement v. City of Modesto (9th Cir. 2009) 583 F.3d 690, 701 ; Cherosky v. Henderson (9th Cir. 2003) 330 F.3d 1243, 1247] . The continuing violation theory applies to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. It allows a plaintiff to seek relief for events outside of the limitations period [Knox v. Davis (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1009, 1013] . To constitute a continuing violation, the alleged discriminatory acts must be related closely enough and one or more of the acts must fall within the limitations period; mere continuing impact from past violations is not actionable [Knox v. Davis (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1009, 1013] . When the action is based on an allegation of a discriminatory pattern or practice, plaintiff must show that a pattern or practice of discrimination creates an ongoing violation. However, discrete discriminatory acts will not create a pattern of discrimination without more. Pattern-or-practice claims cannot be based on sporadic discriminatory acts; rather, they must be based on discriminatory conduct that is widespread [Committee Concerning Community Improvement v. City of Modesto (9th Cir. 2009) 583 F.3d 690, 701 ; Cherosky v. Henderson (9th Cir. 2003) 330 F.3d 1243, 1247] . The statute of limitations runs separately from each discrete act. Acts falling outside of the limitations period are time barred and not actionable under a continuing violations doctrine, even when they are related to acts that are timely alleged [AMTRAK v. Morgan

(2002) 536 U.S. 101, 122 S. Ct. 2061, 2072, 153 L. Ed. 2d 106 ; RK Ventures, Inc. v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2002) 307 F.3d 1045, 1050, 1061 (defendant's discrete action in withdrawing settlement offer in nuisance abatement action was actionable as only act occurring within limitations period)]. However, in assessing whether acts occurring within the limitations period are actionable, the court may look to pre-limitations period events as evidence of an illegal motive [AMTRAK v. Morgan (2002) 536 U.S.101, 122 S. Ct. 2061, 2072, 153 L. Ed. 2d 106 ; RK Ventures, Inc. v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2002) 307 F.3d 1045, 1062] .

In determining when an act occurs for statute of limitations purposes, the court looks at when the "operative decision" occurred and separates from the operative decisions inevitable consequences that are not separately actionable [RK Ventures, Inc. v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2002) 307 F.3d 1045, 1058] .

[10] Survival of Actions

42 U.S.C. § 1983 is silent on the question of whether an action survives the death of the person whose rights were violated. Therefore, state law governs that issue, unless the survival law of the forum state is inhospitable to federal law or inconsistent with the purposes of federal law [Robertson v. Wegmann (1978) 436 U.S. 584, 588, 98 S. Ct. 1991, 56 L. Ed. 2d 554 ; County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (Schonert) (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 292, 300-303, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 441, 981 P.2d 68 ; see 42 U.S.C. § 1988(a)].

In California, a § 1983 claim survives, and the personal representative or successor in interest of the victim may bring the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.20 et seq.; see Byrd v. Guess (9th Cir. 1998) 137 F.3d 1126, 1131 , cert. denied, 525 U.S. 963 ; Ochoa v. Superior Court (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 159, 173-174, 216 Cal. Rptr. 661, 703 P.2d 1] .

To maintain a survival action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, a plaintiff must allege his or her representative capacity in the complaint or introduce evidence that he or she is in fact the successor in interest of the decedent [Byrd v. Guess (9th Cir. 1998) 137 F.3d 1126, 1131 , cert. denied, 525 U.S. 963 (trial court properly dismissed complaint when decedent's wife and mother failed to allege representative capacity and to introduce evidence that they were decedent's successors in interest)].

Under California's survival statutes, the prohibition against recovery of damages in a survival action for pain and suffering [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.34] applies to actions brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (Schonert) (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 292, 308, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 441, 981 P.2d 68 (death unrelated to cause of action; court expressed no opinion on whether preclusion of pain and suffering damages under California's survival law would be inconsistent with policies underlying federal civil rights law in situations in which asserted constitutional deprivation caused the death)].

[11] Defenses

[a] Absolute Immunity

[i] Provides Complete Defense

An absolute immunity provides a complete defense from suit. It generally applies to officials whose special functions or constitutional status require that level of protection [Harlow v. Fitzgerald (1982) 457 U.S. 800, 807, 102 S. Ct. 2727, 73 L. Ed. 2d 396 (absolute immunity applies to legislators in their legislative capacities); see also [ii]-[viii], below].

[ii] Immunity of Legislators

State and regional legislators are entitled to absolute immunity from liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for their legislative activities [see Tenney v. Brandhove (1951) 341 U.S. 367, 372, 71 S. Ct. 783, 95 L. Ed. 1019 (state legislators); Lake Country Estates v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency (1979) 440 U.S. 391, 402-406, 99 S. Ct. 1171, 59 L. Ed. 2d 401

(regional legislators)]. Local legislators are also absolutely immune from suit under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for their legislative activities [Bogan v. Scott-Harris (1998) 523 U.S. 44, 49, 118 S. Ct. 966, 140 L. Ed. 2d 79 ; San Pedro Hotel Co. v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 470, 476 (city councilman entitled to absolute immunity for voting or persuading colleagues to vote one way or another on approval of loan of federal housing funds administered by city)]. Legislative activities do not include an administrative (as opposed to legislative) termination of an employee [Bechard v. Rappold (9th Cir. 2002) 287 F.3d 827] .

School board members, however, are not entitled to absolute immunity [see Wood v. Strickland (1975) 420 U.S. 308, 321-322, 95 S. Ct. 992, 43 L. Ed. 2d 214] .

[iii] Immunity of Judges

Federal and state judges are absolutely immune from liability for damages for violating the constitutional rights of others when acting within the scope of their duties [see Stump v. Sparkman (1978) 435 U.S. 349, 355, 98 S. Ct. 1099, 55 L. Ed. 2d 331 (judicial immunity); Martinez v. Newport Beach City (9th Cir. 1997) 125 F.3d 777, 780 (state court judge who denied petition to expunge record acted in judicial capacity and was absolutely immune)].

There are only two exceptions to the absolute immunity of judges: (1) nonjudicial actions, and (2) actions that, though judicial in nature, are taken in the complete absence of all jurisdiction [Mireles v. Waco (1991) 502 U.S. 9, 11-12, 112 S. Ct. 286, 116 L. Ed. 2d 9] . Whether an act is judicial depends on the following [Mireles v. Waco (1991) 502 U.S. 9, 11-12, 112 S. Ct. 286, 116 L. Ed. 2d 9 ; Franceschi v. Schwartz (9th Cir. 1995) 57 F.3d 828, 830-831 ; see Nunez v. Davis (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 1222, 1229 n.3 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1115 (2000) (judge not entitled to absolute immunity in action involving firing of court administrator, since hiring and firing of court personnel is nonjudicial act for absolute immunity purposes)]:

- The nature of the act itself;
- Whether it is a function normally performed by a judge; and
- Whether the parties are dealing with the judge in his or her official capacity.

The scope of a judge's jurisdiction is construed broadly [Franceschi v. Schwartz (9th Cir. 1995) 57 F.3d 828, 830 ; Rosenthal v. Justices of the Supreme Court of California (9th Cir. 1990) 910 F.2d 561, 565-566 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1087 (1991)] . Because it is the nature of the function performed, rather than the identity of the actor performing it, that determines immunity, a judge's direction to another to carry out an order does not transform an action from judicial to executive [Mireles v. Waco (1991) 502 U.S. 9, 12, 112 S. Ct. 286, 116 L. Ed. 2d 9] . Thus, for example, a judge was absolutely immune from liability for suit for alleged use of excessive force by police officers bringing a public defender into the courtroom pursuant to the judge's order [Mireles v. Waco (1991) 502 U.S. 9, 12-13, 112 S. Ct. 286, 116 L. Ed. 2d 9 ; see Franceschi v. Schwartz (9th Cir. 1995) 57 F.3d 828, 831 (court commissioner absolutely immune from liability for actions pertaining to setting bail, issuing and reactivating bench warrant, and transferring case to another judge); 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b) (judicial officer not liable for costs in action against officer for act or omission in judicial capacity unless action is clearly in excess of officer's jurisdiction)].

Judicial immunity is extended to others who perform functions closely associated with the judicial process because their judgments are functionally comparable to those of judges, that is, they also exercise discretionary judgment as part of their function [Duvall v. County of Kitsap (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1124, 1133-1134 ; Moore v. Brewster (9th Cir. 1996) 96 F.3d 1240, 1244 ; see Antoine v. Byers & Anderson, Inc. (1993) 508 U.S. 429, 436, 113 S. Ct. 2167, 124 L. Ed. 2d 391] . The lynchpin of both judicial and quasi-judicial immunities is that the acts in question are an integral part of the judicial process [Greater Los Angeles Council on Deafness v. Zolin (9th Cir. 1987) 812 F.2d 1103, 1108] .

[iv] Immunity of Prosecutors

Federal and state prosecuting attorneys are absolutely immune from liability for damages for violating the constitutional rights of others when acting within the scope of their duties [see Imbler v. Pachtman (1976) 424 U.S. 409, 427, 96 S. Ct. 984, 47 L. Ed. 2d 128 (prosecutorial immunity)]. Absolute immunity for prosecutors is warranted for the following reasons [Burns v. Reed (1991) 500 U.S. 478, 485, 111 S. Ct. 1934 ; Imbler v. Pachtman (1976) 424 U.S. 409, 423-425, 96 S. Ct. 984, 47 L. Ed. 2d 128 ; Milstein v. Cooley (9th Cir. 2001) 257 F.3d 1004, 1007] :

- To allow prosecutors to focus their energies on prosecuting, rather than defending lawsuits.

- To enable prosecutors to exercise independent judgment in deciding which suits to bring and conducting them in court.

- To preserve the criminal justice system's function of determining guilt or innocence by ensuring that triers of fact are not denied relevant (although sometimes conflicting) evidence because of prosecutors' fear of suit.

- To ensure fairness to defendants by enabling judges to make rulings in their favor without the subconscious knowledge that the rulings could subject the prosecutor to liability.

When the official claiming immunity is a prosecutor, courts will examine the nature of the function performed, not the identity of the actor who performed it, in deciding whether absolute immunity is available [Kalina v. Fletcher (1997) 522 U.S. 118, 127, 118 S. Ct. 502, 139 L. Ed. 2d 471 ; Burns v. Reed (1991) 500 U.S. 478, 486, 111 S. Ct. 1934, 114 L. Ed. 2d 547 ; Forrester v. White (1988) 484 U.S. 219, 229, 108 S. Ct. 538, 98 L. Ed. 2d 555 ; Milstein v. Cooley (9th Cir. 2001) 257 F.3d 1004, 1008 ; Morley v. Walker (9th Cir. 1999) 175 F.3d 756, 759] . The prosecutor bears the burden of showing that immunity is justified for the function in question [Burns v. Reed (1991) 500 U.S. 478, 486, 111 S. Ct. 1934, 114 L. Ed. 2d 547 ; Milstein v. Cooley (9th Cir. 2001) 257 F.3d 1004, 1008] . The prosecutor's intent plays no role in the analysis [Milstein v. Cooley (9th Cir. 2001) 257 F.3d 1004, 1008] .

Generally, state prosecutors are absolutely immune from liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for conduct intimately associated with the judicial phase of the criminal process [Imbler v. Pachtman (1976) 424 U.S. 409, 430-431, 96 S. Ct. 984, 47 L. Ed. 2d 128 ; Pitts v. County of Kern (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 340, 350, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 823, 949 P.2d 920] . Immune conduct includes (1) initiating a prosecution, (2) presenting the state's case, and (3) participating in a probable cause hearing [Burns v. Reed (1991) 500 U.S. 478, 487, 111 S. Ct. 1934, 114 L. Ed. 2d 547 ; Pitts v. County of Kern (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 340, 350, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 823, 949 P.2d 920 ; see Kalina v. Fletcher (1997) 522 U.S. 118, 129-131, 118 S. Ct. 502, 139 L. Ed. 2d 471 (prosecutor not entitled to absolute immunity in executing certification for determination of probable cause in filing charges against accused, since neither federal nor state law required prosecutor to make certification, which could have been made by any competent witness); Herb Hallman Chevrolet v. Nash-Holmes (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 636, 643 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 870 (prosecutors entitled to absolute immunity for performing advocate's role after initiation of grand jury proceedings, when prosecutors had probable cause under state law to initiate proceedings)]. In addition, absolute immunity protects quasi-judicial conduct such as (1) maliciously initiating a prosecution; (2) using perjured testimony at trial; and (3) suppressing material evidence at trial [Imbler v. Pachtman (1976) 424 U.S. 409, 430, 96 S. Ct. 984, 47 L. Ed. 2d 128 ; Genzler v. Longanbach (9th Cir. 2004) 384 F.3d 1092, 1097] .

Prosecutors have absolute immunity for decisions to prosecute or not to prosecute [Roe v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1997) 109 F.3d 578, 583] . Furthermore, a prosecutor is absolutely immune for acts undertaken in preparing for the initiation of administrative or judicial proceedings or for trial, including professional evaluation of the evidence assembled by the investigative agency against the accused [Bradley v. Medical Board (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 445, 456, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 (deputy Attorney General absolutely immune when consulting with physician in preparing to amend administrative accusation presented to Medical Board of California against another physician)].

Absolute immunity for prosecutors extends to certain administrative activities as well, including a failure to disclose impeachment material due to: (1) a failure properly to train prosecutors, (2) a failure properly to supervise prosecutors, or (3) a failure to establish an information system containing potential impeachment material about informants [Van De Kamp v. Goldstein (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 855, 172 L. Ed. 2d 706, 714-718] .

State prosecutors also have absolute immunity for parole recommendations because parole decisions are a continuation of the sentencing process [Brown v. Cal. Dep't of Corr. (2009) 554 F.3d 747, 750-751].

However, although a state prosecutor is entitled to absolute immunity for participation in a probable cause hearing, he or she is entitled to only qualified immunity for giving legal advice to the police in the investigative phase of a criminal case [Burns v. Reed (1991) 500 U.S. 478, 492-496, 111 S. Ct. 1934, 114 L. Ed. 2d 547] . Similarly, in the investigative phase of a criminal case, if a state prosecutor performs investigative functions normally performed by a detective or police officer, the prosecutor, like a detective or police officer, is entitled to only qualified immunity [Buckley v. Fitzsimmons (1993) 509 U.S. 259, 272-276, 113 S. Ct. 2606, 125 L. Ed. 2d 209 ; see Genzler v. Longanbach (9th Cir. 2004) 384 F.3d 1092, 1098-1104 (deputy district attorney and investigator were only entitled to qualified immunity in meeting with and interviewing witness because it was investigative function)]. Moreover, a state prosecutor is entitled to only qualified immunity when making statements to the press at a press conference [Buckley v. Fitzsimmons (1993) 509 U.S. 259, 276-278, 113 S. Ct. 2606, 125 L. Ed. 2d 209] . When a prosecutor seeks a material witness warrant in order to investigate or preemptively detain a suspect, rather than to secure the suspect's testimony at another's trial, the prosecutor is entitled at most to qualified, rather than absolute, immunity [al- Kidd v. Ashcroft (9th Cir. 2009) 580 F.3d 949, 957-964].

Prosecutorial absolute immunity has been applied to social workers performing certain quasi-prosecutorial functions in connection with the initiation and pursuit of juvenile dependency proceedings [see Meyers v. Contra Costa County Dep't of Soc. Serv. (9th Cir. 1987) 812 F.2d 1154, 1157 , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 829 (1988) ; Alicia T. v. County of Los Angeles (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 869, 881, 271 Cal. Rptr. 513] .

Prosecutorial absolute immunity has also been applied to state and local officials who filed proceedings to revoke a foster care license, as well as to other officials who performed investigative functions in connection with the initiation of the license revocation proceedings [see Gensburg v. Miller (1994) 31 Cal. App. 4th 512, 521-525, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 97] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Effect on Immunity of Independent Investigation. There is a line of cases that stand for the proposition that police officers, complainants, and/or investigators may be sued for "malicious prosecution" with some exceptions. This is often an extension of a false arrest case when criminal prosecution was terminated in favor of the defendant [see, e.g., Awabdy v. City of Adelanto (9th Cir. 2004) 368 F.3d 1062, 1066-1070 (because former city councilman properly alleged defendants engaged in malicious conduct with purpose of depriving him of his constitutional rights to free speech and equal protection, he stated claim for malicious prosecution under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 with regard to alleged First and Fourteenth Amendment violations)]. Generally, prosecutors enjoy absolute immunity and the damages are deemed to be cut off if the decision to prosecute is based on an "independent investigation." However, the prosecutor only enjoys qualified immunity when acting as an investigator. It is important to determine early on whether the District Attorney conducted an independent investigation before prosecuting the case. By John H. Scott

[v] Immunity of Executive Branch Officials

Executive branch officials, when participating in a federal administrative agency's adjudicative process, are entitled to absolute immunity because they perform functions comparable to those of judges and prosecutors [see Butz v. Economou (1978) 438 U.S. 478, 512-513, 98 S. Ct. 2894, 57 L. Ed. 2d 895 ; see also [iii] and [iv], above (immunity of judges and prosecutors)]. However, members of a prison discipline committee who are not professional hearing officers, as are administrative law judges, but are merely prison employees, whose coworkers lodge charges against inmates, are not entitled to absolute immunity [see Cleavinger v. Saxner (1985) 474 U.S. 193, 206-207, 106 S. Ct. 496, 88 L. Ed. 2d 507] .

State parole board officials are absolutely immune from suits by prisoners for actions taken when processing parole applications [Brown v. Cal. Dep't of Corr. (2009) 554 F.3d 747, 750-751 ; Bermudez v. Duenas (9th Cir. 1991) 936 F.2d 1064, 1066].

[vi] Immunity of Members of State Medical Board

Members of a state medical board are absolutely immune but only when their actions are judicial or closely associated with the judicial process, such as acts occurring during the disciplinary hearing process including holding hearings, taking evidence, and adjudicating [Mishler v. Clift (9th Cir. 1999) 191 F.3d 998, 1009] .

[vii] Immunity of Witnesses

All witnesses, including police officers, who give testimony at a criminal trial, have absolute immunity from civil suits for perjury brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 by the person convicted in the criminal suit [Briscoe v. Lahue (1983) 460 U.S. 325, 335-336, 103 S. Ct. 1108, 75 L. Ed. 2d 96] . The purpose of the immunity is to encourage witnesses to come forward and speak freely in court by relieving the potential defendant of any fear he or she will later have regarding the burden of litigating the propriety of his or her conduct as a witness [Briscoe v. LaHue (1983) 460 U.S. 325, 335-336, 103 S. Ct. 1108, 75 L. Ed. 2d 96 ; Paine v. City of Lompoc (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 975, 980] . Denying immunity on summary judgment compromises the reasons for the protection accorded court appearances, by subjecting the defendant to the rigors and distractions of standing trial even if he or she is ultimately found not liable on testimonial immunity grounds [Paine v. City of Lompoc (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 975, 980] .

The same absolute immunity applies to witnesses who render perjured testimony in court at adversarial pretrial hearings [Holt v. Castaneda (9th Cir. 1987) 832 F.2d 123, 127 , cert. denied, 485 U.S. 979] . Witness immunity also extends to conspiracies to commit perjury [Paine v. City of Lompoc (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 975, 981 ; Franklin v. Terr (9th Cir. 2000) 201 F.3d 1098, 1101 ; Cunningham v. Gates (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 1271, 1291] . However, witness immunity does not extend to complaining witnesses, that is, individuals whose allegations serve to bring about a prosecution [Malley v. Briggs (1986) 475 U.S. 335, 106 S. Ct. 1092, 89 L. Ed. 2d 271 ; Paine v. City of Lompoc (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 975, 981 n.2 ; Harris v. Roderick (9th Cir. 1997) 126 F.3d 1189, 1198-99 (police officer witnesses not entitled to absolute witness immunity for perjured grand jury testimony that brings about wrongful prosecution)]. The immunity also does not shield nontestimonial conduct [Paine v. City of Lompoc (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 975, 981 ; Cunningham v. Gates (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 1271, 1291 (fabricating evidence)]. Further, there is no immunity from liability for conspiratorial conduct not inextricably tied to testimony [Paine v. City of Lompoc (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 975, 981-983 (immunity does not shield out-of-court, pretrial conspiracy to engage in nontestimonial acts such as fabricating or suppressing physical or documentary evidence or suppressing identities of potential witnesses); Franklin v. Terr (9th Cir. 2000) 201 F.3d 1098, 1102] .

[viii] Immunity of State Workers in Child Welfare Proceedings

A family social service worker has absolute immunity only for the discretionary, quasi-prosecutorial decisions involved in the initiation and pursuit of child-dependency proceedings to take custody away from parents because they are prosecutorial in nature, except as to a claim the social worker fabricated evidence during an investigation or made false statements in a dependency petition affidavit that the social worker signed under penalty of perjury, because those actions are not similar to discretionary decisions about whether to prosecute [Beltran v. County of Santa Clara (9th Cir. 2008) 514 F.3d 906, 908 , overruling Doe v. Lebbos (9th Cir. 2003) 348 F.3d 820]. Courts distinguish between a social worker's activities performed as an advocate within the judicial decision-making process, a function for which there is common law absolute immunity, and other actions taken by a social worker. The courts look to functions that enjoyed absolute immunity at common law in 1871, when Congress codified § 1983, not to the relation of the action to a judicial proceeding [Miller v. Gammie (9th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 889, 897] .

Unless the social worker's activity has the requisite connection to the judicial process, only qualified immunity is available [Miller v. Gammie (9th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 889, 898 ; Meyers v. Contra Costa County Department of Social Services (9th Cir. 1987) 812 F.2d 1154, 1157-1158] . Thus, beyond those functions historically recognized as absolutely immune at common law, a social worker only has qualified immunity [Miller v. Gammie (9th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 889, 897] . Examples of functions for which a social worker has only qualified immunity may include decisions and recommendations as to the particular home where a child is to go or as to the particular foster parents who are to provide care [Miller v. Gammie (9th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 889, 898], detaining a child before dependency proceedings and referring the child for a medical sexual abuse examination without a court order or parental consent [Doe v. Lebbos (9th Cir. 2003) 348 F.3d 820, 825 , overruled on other grounds in Beltran v. County of Santa Clara (9th Cir. 2008) 514 F.3d 906, 908-909] , or conducting investigations [Beltran v. County of Santa Clara (9th Cir. 2008) 514 F.3d 906, 908].

The official claiming absolute immunity has the burden of justifying it. Establishing that justification is a two-step process [Harlow v. Fitzgerald (1982) 457 U.S. 800, 812-813, 102 S. Ct. 2727, 73 L. Ed. 2d 396 ; see Greater Los Angeles Council on Deafness v. Zolin (9th Cir. 1987) 812 F.2d 1103, 1108-1109] :

- The official must show that the responsibilities of the office embrace a function so sensitive that a total shield of liability is required; and

- The official must demonstrate that he or she was discharging the protected function when performing the act for which liability is asserted.

[b] Qualified Immunity

[i] Conduct to Which Qualified Immunity Applies

Officials and employees of local, state, and federal governments may claim a qualified immunity from 42 U.S.C. § 1983 actions. Qualified immunity is immunity from suit, not merely a defense to liability [Mitchell v. Forsyth (1985) 472 U.S. 511, 525-527, 105 S. Ct. 2806, 86 L. Ed. 2d 411 ; see V-1 Oil Co. v. Smith (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 854, 856-857 (appellate court exercised jurisdiction over appeal of denial of summary judgment motion in Bivens action because denial of qualified immunity is appealable final decision suitable for interlocutory review)].

Qualified immunity protects government officials performing discretionary functions insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known [Harlow v. Fitzgerald (1982) 457 U.S. 800, 818, 102 S. Ct. 2727, 73 L. Ed. 2d 396 ; Bradley v. Medical Board (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 445, 456, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 ; see Brewster v. Board of Education of Lynwood Unified School Dist. (9th Cir. 1998) 149 F.3d 971, 977 , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1018 (1999) (since probationary teacher's First Amendment rights and procedural due process rights were not clearly established, school officials were entitled to immunity)]. Ministerial acts are not shielded by qualified immunity, which protects only actions taken pursuant to discretionary functions [Groten v. California (9th Cir. 2001) 251 F.3d 844, 851 ; F.E. Trotter, Inc. v. Watkins (9th Cir. 1989) 869 F.2d 1312, 1314] .

In neither a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action nor a Bivens action will a supervisor be held strictly vicariously liable for the actions of subordinates under a theory of respondeat superior [Ashcroft v. Iqbal (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1948, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 ; al- Kidd v. Ashcroft (9th Cir. 2009) 580 F.3d 949, 964-965]. However, direct, personal participation is not necessary to establish liability for a constitutional violation, and supervisors can be liable for the actions of their subordinates for any of the following [al- Kidd v. Ashcroft (9th Cir. 2009) 580 F.3d 949, 965 ; Larez v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1991) 946 F.2d 630, 646]:

- Setting in motion a series of acts by others, or knowingly refusing to terminate a series of acts by others, which they knew or reasonably should have known would cause others to inflict constitutional injury.

- Culpable action or inaction in training, supervision, or control of subordinates.

- Acquiescence in the constitutional deprivation by subordinates.

- Conduct that shows a reckless or callous indifference to the rights of others.

The mere assertion of a vague constitutional right will not defeat a qualified immunity defense. Rather, the contours of the right must be sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand that what he or she is doing violates that right [Anderson v. Creighton (1987) 483 U.S. 635, 640, 107 S. Ct. 3034, 97 L. Ed. 2d 523 ; Brewster v. Board of Education of Lynwood Unified School Dist. (9th Cir. 1998) 149 F.3d 971, 977 , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1018 (1999) ; Liston v. County of Riverside (9th Cir. 1997) 120 F.3d 965, 975 ; Bradley v. Medical Board (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 445, 456, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 ; see Wilson v. Layne (1999) 526 U.S. 603, 119 S. Ct. 1692, 1699-1701, 143 L. Ed. 2d 818 (although allowing media representatives to accompany law enforcement officers in execution of warrant in private home violated U.S. Const., amend. IV, right was not clearly established at time of search, so officers were entitled to qualified immunity); Sorrels v. McKee (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 965, 970 (existence of binding precedent holding unconstitutional prison policy requiring inmates to pay for publications received would clearly establish law and qualified immunity defense would fail, and unpublished decisions of district courts may inform qualified immunity analysis); Lytle v. Wondrash (9th Cir. 1999) 182 F.3d 1083, 1086-1089 (since it was not patently unreasonable for school administrators to conclude that First Amendment did not protect teacher's conduct in prosecuting lawsuit against district and individuals, right was not clearly established and administrators were entitled to qualified immunity)].

The rationales for qualified immunity for public officials are not applicable to private parties [Wyatt v. Cole (1992) 504 U.S. 158, 166, 112 S. Ct. 1827, 118 L. Ed. 2d 504 ; Franklin v. Fox (9th Cir. 2002) 312 F.3d 423, 444 ; Ellis v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1999) 176 F.3d 1183, 1191] . Moreover, mere performance of a governmental function does not entitle a private person to qualified immunity, especially when the person performs the job without government supervision or direction [Richardson v. McKnight (1997) 521 U.S. 399, 408-409, 117 S. Ct. 2100, 138 L. Ed. 2d 540] . Thus, for example, prison guards who are employees of a private prison management firm are not entitled to qualified immunity from a § 1983 suit by prisoners [Richardson v. McKnight (1997) 521 U.S. 399, 407-412, 117 S. Ct. 2100, 138 L. Ed. 2d 540] . Similarly, a private contractor responsible for processing city parking tickets, and subject to limited direct supervision by the city, is not entitled to assert qualified immunity in a § 1983 action [Ace Beverage Co. v. Lockheed Information Management Services (9th Cir. 1998) 144 F.3d 1218, 1219-1220] . And, a firm that conducted radiation experiments and research at a state prison for a decade was not entitled to qualified immunity [Bibeau v. Pacific Northwest Research Foundation (9th Cir. 1999) 188 F.3d 1105, 1111-1112 , amended, 208 F.3d 831 (2000)] .

When a defendant asserts qualified immunity as a defense, the court must undertake a two-step analysis [Liston v. County of Riverside (9th Cir.1997) 120 F.3d 965, 975 ; Neely v. Feinstein (9th Cir. 1995) 50 F.3d 1502, 1507 ; Bradley v. Medical Board (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 445, 456, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 ; see Knox v. Southwest Airlines (9th Cir. 1997) 124 F.3d 1103, 1107 (three-part test, including identification of specific right allegedly violated); V-1 Oil

Co. v. Smith (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 854, 857 (same)]:

- Was the law governing the official's conduct clearly established?
- Under that law, could a reasonable officer have believed the conduct was lawful?

The questions in the qualified immunity test are questions of law, though the latter question may require factual determinations as well [Nunez v. Davis (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 1222, 1227 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1115 (2000) ; Romero v. Kitsap County (9th Cir. 1991) 931 F.2d 624, 627 ; Bradley v. Medical Board (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 445, 456 n.10, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483] .

Since Saucier v. Katz (2001) 533 U.S. 194, 121 S. Ct. 2151, 150 L. Ed. 2d 272 [discussed in [iii], below], a qualified immunity analysis begins with the threshold question of whether, based on the facts taken in the light most favorable to the party asserting injury, the conduct violated a constitutional right. If no constitutional right was violated, the court need not inquire further. If a constitutional violation occurred, the second inquiry then becomes whether the actor could nevertheless have reasonably but mistakenly believed that his or her conduct did not violate a clearly established constitutional right. This inquiry, focusing first on the underlying constitutional issue, is intended to assist courts to dispose of insubstantial suits at an early stage of litigation and to encourage courts to set forth principles becoming the basis for a holding that the right is clearly established [Jackson v. City of Bremerton (9th Cir. 2001) 268 F.3d 646, 651] .

The Saucier procedure should not be regarded as an inflexible requirement. While the sequence set forth there is often appropriate, it should not be regarded as mandatory. Judges of district courts and courts of appeals should be permitted to exercise their sound discretion in deciding which of the two prongs of the qualified immunity analysis should be addressed first in light of the circumstances in the particular case at hand [Pearson v. Callahan (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 808, 172 L. Ed. 2d 565, 576-581] .

Claims of excessive force are to be judged under the Fourth Amendment's "objective reasonableness" standard. Specifically with regard to deadly force, it is unreasonable for a police officer to seize an unarmed, nondangerous suspect by shooting him or her dead. However, when the officer has probable cause to believe the suspect poses a threat of serious physical harm, either to the officer or to others, it is not constitutionally unreasonable to prevent escape by using deadly force [Brosseau v. Haugen (2004) 543 U.S. 194, 125 S. Ct. 596, 598, 160 L. Ed. 2d 583 ; Graham v. Connor (1989) 490 U.S. 386, 388, 109 S. Ct. 1865, 104 L. Ed. 2d 443 ; Tennessee v. Garner (1985) 471 U.S. 1, 11, 105 S. Ct. 1694, 85 L. Ed. 2d 1] . Qualified immunity shields an officer from suit when the officer makes a decision that, even if constitutionally deficient, reasonably misapprehends the law governing the circumstances he or she confronted [Brosseau v. Haugen (2004) 543 U.S. 194, 125 S. Ct. 596, 599, 160 L. Ed. 2d 583] .

A general constitutional rule already identified in case law may apply with obvious clarity to the specific conduct in question, even though the action in question has not previously been held unlawful [United States v. Lanier (1997) 520 U.S. 259, 271, 117 S. Ct. 1219, 137 L. Ed. 2d 432 (quoting Anderson v. Creighton (1987) 483 U.S. 635, 640, 107 S. Ct. 3034, 97 L. Ed. 2d 523); Devereaux v. Abbey (9th Cir. 2001) 263 F.3d 1070, 1075] . Precedent directly on point is not necessary to demonstrate that a right is clearly established. If the unlawfulness is apparent in light of preexisting law, the standard is met. Further, even if there is no closely analogous case law, a right can be clearly established on the basis of common sense [Devereaux v. Abbey (9th Cir. 2001) 263 F.3d 1070, 1075 ; Giebel v. Sylvester (9th Cir. 2001) 244 F.3d 1182, 1189] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Qualified Immunity. Given the expanding nature of qualified immunity, together with the knee jerk interlocutory appeal brought in most cases, one should think long and hard before embarking on a § 1983 lawsuit. Most § 1983 cases ultimately become fee driven by the time the case returns from the court of appeal for trial. It is not unusual for the attorneys' fees for a prevailing plaintiff at trial to exceed the jury verdict. This is illustrative of a phenomenon that is common to § 1983 litigation, i.e., public officials are often making political decisions, as opposed to business decisions, when it comes to settling these cases. After all, it is not their money. That may explain why Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 68 (settlement offers) is not relied on very frequently by defendants. It is an offer of judgment and therefore an admission of liability. By John H. Scott

PRACTICE TIP:

Immediate Interlocutory Appeals of Rulings on Qualified Immunity. Immediate interlocutory appeals of rulings on qualified immunity are routinely taken in § 1983 cases and is a rapidly expanding area of the law. There is an opportunity (1) to bring a motion to certify such appeals as frivolous in the district court, and (2) to bring a motion to dismiss such appeals for lack of jurisdiction. There is a built in delay that comes from interlocutory appeals. It provides a defendant with the opportunity to get at least four bites of the apple when raising the qualified immunity defense. In other words, it can be raised on a motion to dismiss or motion for summary judgment (first bite), an interlocutory appeal before trial (second bite), again at trial (third bite), and on an appeal from trial (fourth bite) [see Thompson v. Mahre (9th Cir. 1997) 110 F.3d 716 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 967] . Notably, principles of stare decisis do not necessarily apply and judges can find qualified immunity after trial based on the same facts which resulted in a denial of qualified immunity before trial. Qualified immunity can be avoided by proving municipal liability or seeking injunctive relief. By John H. Scott

[ii] Burden of Pleading and Proof

The defendant in an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 bears the burden of pleading qualified immunity as an affirmative defense [Harlow v. Fitzgerald (1982) 457 U.S. 800, 815, 102 S. Ct. 2727, 73 L. Ed. 2d 396 ; Gomez v. Toledo (1980) 446 U.S. 635, 640, 100 S. Ct. 1920, 64 L. Ed. 2d 572 ; Benigni v. Hemet (9th Cir. 1988) 879 F.2d 473, 479] .

If the defendant raises the affirmative defense of qualified immunity, the initial burden is on the plaintiff to show that the rights allegedly violated were clearly established at the time that the official acted [Siegert v. Gilley (1991) 500 U.S. 226, 232, 111 S. Ct. 1789, 114 L. Ed. 2d 277 ; Nunez v. Davis (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 1222, 1229 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1115 (2000) ; Knox v. Southwest Airlines (9th Cir. 1997) 124 F.3d 1103, 1107 (if plaintiff fails to allege violation of clearly established law, court need not even reach other issues regarding qualified immunity); Ram v. Rubin (9th Cir. 1997) 118 F.3d 1306, 1310 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1045 (1998) ; Romero v. Kitsap County (9th Cir. 1991) 931 F.2d 624, 627] . The plaintiff must offer more than general, conclusory allegations that the defendant violated a constitutional right. To support a judgment, the plaintiff must show that the particular facts of his or her case support a claim of violation of a clearly established right [Sweaney v. Ada County, Idaho (9th Cir. 1997) 119 F.3d 1385, 1388-1389 (parent did not have clearly established federal constitutional right to strike her child with belt on public school grounds on date deputy filed report with prosecuting attorney)].

However, absence of authority directly on point is not fatal to a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim; a right is clearly established if the only reasonable conclusion from binding authority is that the disputed right existed [Sweaney v. Ada County, Idaho (9th Cir. 1997) 119 F.3d 1385, 1389 ; Blueford v. Prunty (9th Cir. 1997) 108 F.3d 251, 255] . Rather, if the only reasonable conclusion from binding authority is that the disputed right existed, even if no case had specifically so declared, officials are on notice of the right and not qualifiedly immune if they acted to offend it [Blueford v. Prunty (9th Cir. 1997) 108 F.3d 251, 255]. To determine that the law was clearly established, the court need not look to a case with identical or even materially similar facts [Hope v. Pelzer (2002) 536 U.S. 730, 739-741, 122 S. Ct. 2508, 153 L. Ed. 2d 666 ; Serrano v. Francis (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1071, 1077 ; Flores v. Morgan Hill Unified Sch. Dist. (9th Cir. 2003) 324 F.3d 1130, 1136-1137] . The standard is fair warning, i.e., when the contours of the right have been defined with sufficient specificity that a state official had fair warning that the conduct deprived a victim of rights, the official is not entitled to qualified immunity [Serrano v. Francis (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1071, 1077 ; see also Hope

v. Pelzer (2002) 536 U.S. 730, 740 n.10, 122 S. Ct. 2508, 153 L. Ed. 2d 666 (object of "clearly established" immunity standard is not different from "fair warning")].

If the occasion has not risen for the Ninth Circuit to reach a question, the court may draw clearly established law from other circuits [Prison Legal News v. Lehman (9th Cir. 2005) 397 F.3d 692, 701-702 ; see Jacobs v. City of Chicago (7th Cir. 2000) 215 F.3d 758, 767 (finding violation of clearly established law when there was such clear trend in case law that recognition of right was only matter of time)].

If the plaintiff succeeds in meeting the initial burden of showing that clearly established rights were violated, the burden shifts to the defendant to prove that his or her conduct was reasonable even though it might have violated the law [Romero v. Kitsap County (9th Cir. 1991) 931 F.2d 624, 627 ; see Nunez v. Davis (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 1222, 1229-1230 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1115 (2000) ; Neely v. Feinstein (9th Cir. 1995) 50 F.3d 1502, 1509 ; Shoshone-Bannock Tribes v. Fish & Game Comm'n (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 1278, 1285] . The reasonableness of the official's conduct is a question of law for the court, at least when the underlying facts are undisputed [see Neely v. Feinstein (9th Cir. 1995) 50 F.3d 1502, 1509 ; Shoshone-Bannock Tribes v. Fish & Game Comm'n (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 1278-1286 (issue of reasonableness of defendant's conduct, although ultimately question of law, may require fact finding)]. If there is a material dispute as to the facts, the case must proceed to trial, before a jury if one is requested [LaLonde v. County of Riverside (9th Cir. 2000) 204 F.3d 947, 953] .

[iii] Resolution by Summary Judgment

Immunity questions should be resolved at the earliest possible stage in litigation [Saucier v. Katz (2001) 533 U.S. 194, 121 S. Ct. 2151, 2156, 150 L. Ed. 2d 272] . In an appropriate case, entitlement to qualified immunity may be determined as a matter of law by the trial court on a motion to dismiss, motion for summary judgment, or motion for directed verdict [Thorsted v. Kelly (9th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 571, 575] . A court required to rule on the issue of qualified immunity must consider as the initial inquiry the threshold question of whether, taken in the light most favorable to the party asserting the injury, the facts alleged show the official's conduct violated a constitutional right [Saucier v. Katz (2001) 533 U.S. 194, 121 S. Ct. 2151, 2156, 150 L. Ed. 2d 272] . If no constitutional right would have been violated were the allegations established, there is no necessity for further inquiries concerning qualified immunity; on the other hand, if a violation could be made out on a favorable view of the parties' allegations, the next sequential step is to determine whether the right was clearly established. This inquiry must be undertaken in light of the specific context of the case and not as a broad general proposition. The relevant dispositive inquiry in determining whether a right is clearly established is whether it would be clear to a reasonable official that his or her conduct was unlawful in the situation he or she confronted [Saucier v. Katz (2001) 533 U.S. 194, 121 S. Ct. 2151, 2156, 150 L. Ed. 2d 272] .

On summary judgment, the judge may appropriately determine not only the currently applicable law, but whether that law was clearly established at the time a particular incident occurred. If the law at that time was not clearly established, an official could not reasonably be expected to anticipate subsequent legal developments, nor could he or she fairly be said to know that the law forbade conduct not previously identified as unlawful. Until this threshold immunity question is resolved, discovery should not be allowed [Harlow v. Fitzgerald (1982) 457 U.S. 800, 818-819, 102 S. Ct. 2727, 73 L. Ed. 2d 396 ; see Butz v. Economou (1978) 438 U.S. 478, 504, 98 S. Ct. 2894, 57 L. Ed. 2d 895 ; Procunier v. Navarette (1978) 434 U.S. 555, 561-562, 98 S. Ct. 855, 55 L. Ed. 2d 24 ; Wood v. Strickland (1975) 420 U.S. 308, 321-322, 95 S. Ct. 992, 43 L. Ed. 2d 214 ; Ward v. County of San Diego (9th Cir. 1986) 791 F.2d 1329, 1333 , cert. denied, 483 U.S. 1020] .

However, a plaintiff bringing an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against a government official in which the official's improper motive is a necessary element cannot be required to adduce clear and convincing evidence of an improper motive to defeat the official's motion for summary judgment based on qualified immunity [Crawford-El v. Britton (1998) 523 U.S. 574, 590-592, 118 S. Ct. 1584, 140 L. Ed. 2d 759] . Rather, the trial court must exercise discretion to ensure that officials are not subjected to unnecessary, burdensome discovery or trial proceedings, by requiring the plaintiff to put forward specific, nonconclusory factual allegations establishing an improper motive causing cognizable injury to survive a prediscovery motion for dismissal or summary judgment [Crawford-El v. Britton (1998) 523 U.S. 574, 596-598, 118 S. Ct. 1584, 140 L. Ed. 2d 759] .

The court should deny summary judgment based on qualified immunity if under the plaintiff's version of the facts the officer could not reasonably believe his or her conduct was lawful, or if there is a question of fact on which that determination turns [Knox v. Southwest Airlines (9th Cir. 1997) 124 F.3d 1103, 1108 (denial of summary judgment affirmed when triable issue of fact existed as to whether officers had probable cause to arrest); Curnow v. Ridgecrest Police (9th Cir. 1991) 952 F.2d 321, 325 , cert. denied, 506 U.S. 972 (1992)] . The question is whether a reasonable officer could have believed his or her conduct was lawful, in light of clearly established law and the information the officer possessed [Knox v. Southwest Airlines (9th Cir. 1997) 124 F.3d 1103, 1108] .

On a motion for summary judgment, where there have not yet been factual findings by a judge or jury, courts are required to view the facts and draw reasonable inferences in the light most favorable to the party opposing the summary judgment motion. In qualified immunity cases, this usually means adopting the plaintiff's version of the facts. However, if there is undisputed evidence contradicting the plaintiff's version of the facts, such as a videotape of the events, so that no reasonable jury could believe the plaintiff's version of the facts, a court should not adopt that version of the facts for purposes of ruling on a motion for summary judgment [Scott v. Harris (2007) 550 U.S. 372, 127 S. Ct. 1769, 1774-1776, 167 L. Ed. 2d 686] .

If the district court enters an order denying the defendant's motion for dismissal or summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds, the official is entitled to bring an immediate interlocutory appeal of that ruling [Crawford-El v. Britton (1998) 523 U.S. 574, 118 S. Ct. 1584, 1597, 140 L. Ed. 2d 759 ; Johnson v. Jones (1995) 515 U.S. 304, 313, 319, 115 S. Ct. 2151, 132 L. Ed. 2d 238 ; Knox v. Southwest Airlines (9th Cir. 1997) 124 F.3d 1103, 1105 (qualified immunity is immunity from suit, not just defense to liability, and district court's denial of qualified immunity on legal grounds is final decision subject to interlocutory appeal)]. The appellate court has jurisdiction over an interlocutory appeal from denial of qualified immunity when the appeal focuses on whether the defendants violated a clearly established law given undisputed facts; the court does not, however, have jurisdiction over an interlocutory appeal focusing on whether there is a genuine dispute about the underlying facts [Knox v. Southwest Airlines (9th Cir. 1997) 124 F.3d 1103, 1107] .

When it has jurisdiction, the appellate court reviews de novo a denial of summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds [Knox v. Southwest Airlines (9th Cir. 1997) 124 F.3d 1103, 1105 ; Curnow v. Ridgecrest Police (9th Cir. 1991) 952 F.2d 321, 323 , cert. denied, 506 U.S. 972 (1992)] .

[iv] Injunctive and Declaratory Relief Unaffected

Qualified immunity is a defense to liability for damages only and does not bar actions for declaratory or injunctive relief [American Fire, Theft & Collision Managers v. Gillespie (9th Cir. 1991) 932 F.2d 816, 818] .

[v] Qualified Immunity for Private Citizens

A private party acting jointly with state agents to deprive constitutional rights may be liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co. (1982) 457 U.S. 922, 941, 102 S. Ct. 2744, 73 L. Ed. 2d 482] .

The United States Supreme Court held that private citizens acting under a state replevin statute were not entitled to qualified immunity, since extending qualified immunity to private parties in that situation has no bearing on whether public officials are able to act forcefully and decisively in their jobs or on whether qualified applicants enter public service [Wyatt v. Cole (1992) 504 U.S. 158, 167-168, 112 S. Ct. 1827, 118 L. Ed. 2d 504] . However, courts have since, on occasion, found private citizens performing governmental functions or assisting public officials in their performance of governmental functions to be qualifiedly immune [see, e.g., Warner v. Grand County (10th Cir. 1995) 57 F.3d 962, 964-967 (private citizen requested by sheriff's department to conduct strip searches of female detainees); Sherman v. Four County Counseling Center (7th Cir. 1993) 987 F.2d 397, 405 (private facility treating patient pursuant to court order); Bradley v. Medical Board (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 445, 461, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 (private citizens assisting employees of California Medical Board investigating physician for improperly prescribing drugs)].

The question is whether the private individual performs a unique government function at the request of a state official who enjoys qualified immunity [Warner v. Grand County (10th Cir. 1995) 57 F.3d 962, 965 ; Bradley v. Medical Board (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 445, 461-462, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483] . The rationale is that when the state requests that a private citizen serve as its agent, if the private citizen is not permitted to raise the shield of qualified immunity, he or she might reject requests to aid state officials in performing governmental functions, which would, in turn, constrain state officials' agility in performing such functions, frustrate the government's investigatory power, and limit the state's ability to service the public good. Furthermore, it would be anomalous to deny qualified immunity to a private party performing a government function pursuant to state order or request, when a public official would receive immunity if he or she or performed the same task [Warner v. Grand County (10th Cir. 1995) 57 F.3d 962, 967 ; Bradley v. Medical Board (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 445, 461-462, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483] .

[c] "Good Faith" and State-Law Immunities Not Defenses

A municipality may not assert the good faith of its officers or agents as a defense to liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Owen v. City of Independence (1980) 445 U.S. 622, 638, 100 S. Ct. 1398, 63 L. Ed. 2d 673] , nor may it raise as a defense an immunity granted to municipalities under state law [Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 695 n.59, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 ; Morrison v. Jones (9th Cir. 1979) 607 F.2d 1269, 1273 , cert. denied, 445 U.S. 962 (1980)] .

[d] Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel

If the plaintiff has already had a full and fair opportunity to litigate his or her federal constitutional claim in state court, principles of res judicata and collateral estoppel may bar any subsequent action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on the same claim, even though the state court's ruling on the constitutional issue may have been erroneous. The doctrine of collateral estoppel may preclude relitigation in a civil action of issues decided in a prior criminal proceeding [Allen v. McCurry (1980) 449 U.S. 90, 104, 101 S. Ct. 411, 66 L. Ed. 2d 308 ; McCutchen v. City of Montclair (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1138, 1144, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95] .

Thus, for example, a state court's adverse ruling on a criminal defendant's motion to suppress evidence allegedly seized in violation of the Fourth Amendment collaterally estopped the defendant from bringing a subsequent action in federal court under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on the allegedly illegal search and seizure [see Allen v. McCurry (1980) 449 U.S. 90, 96-105, 101 S. Ct. 411, 66 L. Ed. 2d 308 ; Takahashi v. Bd. of Trustees of Livingston (9th Cir. 1986) 783 F.2d 848, 850 , cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1182 ; see also 28 U.S.C. § 1738 (full faith and credit); but see McDonald v. West Branch (1984) 466 U.S. 284, 288, 292, 104 S. Ct. 1799, 80 L. Ed. 2d 302 (arbitration awards not subject to 28 U.S.C. § 1738, and federal court should not afford res judicata or collateral estoppel effect in § 1983 action to award in arbitration proceeding brought pursuant to collective bargaining agreement)].

A finding of probable cause to hold a criminal defendant over for trial is considered a final determination on the merits and may collaterally estop the defendant from relitigating a probable cause issue in a subsequent § 1983 suit [Haupt v. Dillard (9th Cir. 1994) 17 F.3d 285, 289 (finding of probable cause to hold defendant for trial collaterally estopped litigation in subsequent § 1983 action of issue of probable cause to arrest)]. However, there may not be such collateral estoppel if the probable cause issue at the preliminary hearing was not the same as the probable cause issue in the § 1983 case [see Morley v. Walker (9th Cir. 1999) 175 F.3d 756, 759-761 (collateral estoppel did not preclude litigation of probable cause to arrest when plaintiff alleged that prosecutor misstated and omitted evidence at preliminary hearing); McCutchen v. City of Montclair (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1138, 1144-1146, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95 (finding of probable cause to hold defendant for trial did not have collateral estoppel effect in § 1983 case on issue of probable cause to arrest, because evidence at preliminary hearing was not the same as evidence available to arresting officer)].

A criminal conviction estops a defendant from relitigating facts necessarily established in the criminal proceeding. Thus, a criminal defendant convicted of marijuana cultivation was collaterally estopped from raising in a civil rights action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 the issue of whether the arresting agency attempted to deprive the defendant of a fair criminal trial by influencing witnesses and jurors with a false press release. Defendant had ample means, including voir dire of the jury, which his attorney in the criminal trial did, and a motion for change of venue, which defendant did not make, to vindicate his right to be tried by an impartial jury in the criminal proceeding [Higginbotham v. King (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1044, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 114] .

Moreover, a state court judgment has claim preclusive effect in a subsequent federal suit under § 1983, regarding federal issues the litigant could have raised in the state court proceedings, but did not [Migra v. Warren City School Dist. Bd. of Education (1984) 465 U.S. 75, 83-85, 104 S. Ct. 892, 79 L. Ed. 2d 56 (court suggested that when federal and state law claims are sufficiently intertwined, plaintiff can preserve right to federal forum for federal claims by informing state court of intention to take federal claims to federal court following state litigation)].

Federal courts will also give preclusive effect to non-judicially reviewed state administrative decisions in a subsequent civil action under § 1983, if the courts of the state would give preclusive effect to such decisions and if the state agency provides the parties with an adequate opportunity to litigate the issues [see Miller v. County of Santa Cruz (9th Cir. 1994) 39 F.3d 1030, 1032-1034 , cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1160 (1995) (state Civil Service Commission decision had binding effect in subsequent action under § 1983 arising out of firing of public employee)]. However, when the state administrative action being challenged in a § 1983 action is not the result of a quasi-judicial hearing, and therefore plaintiff may not seek a writ of administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, issue preclusion does not apply [McDaniel v. Board of Education of the Mountain View School Dist. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1618, 1621-1622, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448] .

For detailed discussion of res judicata and collateral estoppel, see Ch. 491, Res Judicata .

[e] Post-Deprivation Remedy for Procedural Due Process Claim

If a state actor negligently deprives a person of a minor property interest through a "random and unauthorized" act, the state's provision of an adequate post-deprivation remedy satisfies the constitutional requisite of procedural due process [Parratt v. Taylor (1981) 451 U.S. 527, 541-544, 101 S. Ct. 1908, 68 L. Ed. 2d 420 (overruled on other grounds in Daniels v. Williams (1986) 474 U.S. 327, 330, 106 S. Ct. 662, 88 L. Ed. 2d 662)].

However, the Parratt doctrine is inapplicable if the plaintiff alleges a violation of a substantive due process right [Wood v. Ostrander (9th Cir. 1989) 879 F.2d 583, 588-589 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 938 (1990) ; Smith v. City of Fontana (9th Cir. 1987) 818 F.2d 1411, 1415 , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 935] .

[12] Exhaustion of State Remedies Not Required

The federal remedy provided by 42 U.S.C. § 1983 is supplementary to state remedies, and any state remedies need not be first sought and refused before the federal one is invoked [Patsy v. Florida Board of Regents (1982) 457 U.S. 496, 516, 102 S. Ct. 2557, 73 L. Ed. 2d 172 ; Monroe v. Pape (1961) 365 U.S. 167, 183, 81 S. Ct. 473, 5 L. Ed. 2d 492 (overruled on other grounds in Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 663, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611)].

The fact that a plaintiff may have a state forum available, or that there are state procedures the plaintiff could use, does not mean that the federal court cannot or should not decide the case [Snyder v. Altman (C.D. Cal. 1978) 444 F. Supp. 1269, 1270] .

The rule that exhaustion is not required is equally applicable to contractual and administrative remedies [Smith v. United Trans. Union Local No. 81 (S.D. Cal. 1984) 594 F. Supp 96, 99] .

42 U.S.C. § 1983 does not create substantive rights, but merely provides a remedy for the violation of rights conferred by the Constitution or other statutes [Maher v. Gagne (1980) 448 U.S. 122, 129 n.11, 100 S. Ct. 2570, 65 L. Ed. 2d 653 ; Chapman v. Houston Welfare Rights Org. (1979) 441 U.S. 600, 618, 99 S. Ct. 1905, 60 L. Ed. 2d 508] . Therefore, there is no automatic federal jurisdiction when a plaintiff files a § 1983 claim. Rather, the court must look to the underlying substantive right that was allegedly violated to determine whether that right was conferred by the Constitution or by a civil rights statute [Maher v. Gagne (1980) 448 U.S. 122, 129 n.11, 100 S. Ct. 2570, 65 L. Ed. 2d 653] .

Typically the underlying substantive right provides the federal court with jurisdiction; however, there are some instances in which this is not the case [see, e.g., Chapman v. Houston Welfare Rights Org. (1979) 441 U.S. 600, 603, 608, 612-623, 99 S. Ct. 1905, 60 L. Ed. 2d 508 (federal district court lacked jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1343(a)(3),(4) to adjudicate claim premised on § 1983 that state welfare regulation was invalid due to conflict with Social Security Act)].

California courts have concurrent jurisdiction with federal courts over § 1983 actions [Ochoa v. Superior Court (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 159, 173, 216 Cal. Rptr. 661, 703 P.2d 1 ; Brown v. Pitchess (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 518, 522-523, 119 Cal. Rptr. 204, 531 P.2d 772] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Filing in Federal vs. State Court. Courts increasingly rely on summary judgment, qualified immunity, and interlocutory appeals to prevent 42 U.S.C. § 1983 cases from being decided by juries. Unless an attorney is ready, willing, and able to participate in a barrage of motions to dismiss, summary judgment, and appeals, it may be a wiser choice to pursue available state remedies. Attorneys should take a close look at whether Civ. Code § 52.3 (enacted in 2000, regarding law enforcement officers as not depriving individuals of constitutionally protected rights, privileges, and immunities) allows for a private cause of action. There may not be an opportunity to obtain attorneys' fees with most state remedies. The advantages of federal court may include a court house that is more conveniently located, a more diverse jury pool, and the saving of court costs (e.g., jury fees, court reporter/court fees, etc.). On the other hand, in state court you do not need a unanimous verdict. In addition, there are usually fewer hoops to jump through to get to trial in state court (compare Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 26 requirements, pre trial conference requirements, etc.). In general, it seems that state court judges are often less inclined to grant summary judgment. In federal court the case is initially assigned to a judge. In state court, the judge who will ultimately try the case may not be known until the day of trial. By John H. Scott

PRACTICE TIP: Removal of Case to Federal Court. Although a § 1983 case may be filed in state court, more often than not they are removed to federal courts by the defendants. There does exist the option of initially filing in federal court and dismissing pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 41(a) before a defendant has made an appearance. However, if this tactic is used as a means to "shop" for a federal judge and you then file your § 1983 case in state court, on removal to federal court the rules require you to notify the court of the earlier filing. Under those circumstances the case should be reassigned to the judge assigned in the original filing. Federal claims can be dismissed under Rule 41 and usually district court judges will remand the remaining state claims to state court--particularly if it is at the early stages of litigation. If there are no federal claims, and no diversity jurisdiction, a lawsuit filed in state court cannot be removed. By John H. Scott

[14] Damages

[a] Compensatory Damages

The basic purpose of an award of damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 is to compensate a person for injuries caused by the deprivation of rights [Memphis Community School Dist. v. Stachura (1986) 477 U.S. 299, 307, 106 S. Ct. 2537, 91 L. Ed. 2d 249 ; Carey v. Piphus (1978) 435 U.S. 247, 254-257, 98 S. Ct. 1042, 55 L. Ed. 2d 252] .

In that 42 U.S.C. § 1983 creates a species of tort liability, the level of damages is ordinarily determined according to principles derived from the common law of torts [Memphis Community School Dist. v. Stachura (1986) 477 U.S. 299, 305-306, 106 S. Ct. 2537, 91 L. Ed. 2d 249] . Tort damages are designed to provide compensation for the injury caused to the plaintiff by the defendant's breach of duty. Accordingly, compensatory damages may include not only out-of-pocket loss and other monetary harms, but also such injuries as impairment of reputation, personal humiliation, and mental anguish and suffering [Memphis Community School Dist. v. Stachura (1986) 477 U.S. 299, 306-307, 106 S. Ct. 2537, 91 L. Ed. 2d 249] . Although mental and emotional distress is compensable, neither the likelihood of that injury nor the difficulty of proof justifies awarding compensatory damages without actual proof of injury [Carey v. Piphus (1978) 435 U.S. 247, 262-264, 98 S. Ct. 1042, 55 L. Ed. 2d 252 (action based on denial of procedural due process)].

Abstention principles applicable to actions for injunctive or declaratory relief [see Younger v. Harris (1971) 401 U.S. 37, 45-54, 91 S. Ct. 746, 27 L. Ed. 2d 669 , discussed in [15], below] apply to actions at law for damages as well. A determination while a state proceeding is pending that a federal plaintiff's constitutional rights have been violated would have the same practical effect as a declaration or injunction on pending state proceedings [Gilbertson v. Albright (9th Cir. 2004) 381 F.3d 965, 968] . For abstention to apply, each of the following must be true [Gilbertson v. Albright (9th Cir. 2004) 381 F.3d 965, 975] :

- The proceeding must be pending when the federal action is filed;

- The proceeding must be in the nature of a judicial proceeding implicating important state interests akin to those involved in criminal prosecutions; and

- The proceeding must afford the federal plaintiff an adequate opportunity to present federal constitutional challenges.

However, federal courts should not dismiss actions in which damages are at issue. The damages actions should be stayed until the state proceedings are completed [Gilbertson v. Albright (9th Cir. 2004) 381 F.3d 965, 968] .

When the plaintiff has suffered no injuries, no compensatory damages can be awarded. The abstract value or importance of the constitutional right of which the person was deprived may not form the basis for damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Memphis Community School Dist. v. Stachura (1986) 477 U.S. 299, 308-310, 106 S. Ct. 2537, 91 L. Ed. 2d 249] .

Although the "value" of the infringed right may not entitle the plaintiff to damages, nominal damages may be awarded as an appropriate means of vindicating rights whose deprivation has not caused actual, provable injury [see Carey v. Piphus (1978) 435 U.S. 247, 266-267, 98 S. Ct. 1042,55 L. Ed. 2d 252 ; see also Memphis Community School Dist. v. Stachura (1986) 477 U.S. 299, 308 n.11, 106 S. Ct. 2537, 91 L. Ed. 2d 249] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Nominal Damages. Although nominal damages are available, they are a trap for the unwary since an award of nominal damages will rarely be an appropriate basis for an award of attorneys' fees as a prevailing party [see § 113.17[2]]. Practitioners should always object to a nominal damage instruction. You are better off asking a jury to award $100.00 as opposed to $1.00 in cases when there are no economic damages and no permanent injuries. By John H. Scott

[b] Punitive Damages

The purpose of punitive damages is to punish the defendant for willful or malicious conduct and to deter others from similar behavior. Punitive damages are only available in a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action on the showing of the requisite mental state [Memphis Community School Dist. v. Stachura (1986) 477 U.S. 299, 306 n.9, 106 S. Ct. 2537, 91 L. Ed. 2d 249] . For recovery of punitive damages, the defendant's conduct must be motivated by evil motive or intent, or must involve reckless or callous indifference to the federally protected rights of others. This threshold applies even when the underlying standard of liability for compensatory damages is one of recklessness [Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 56, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632] .

The decision to impose punitive damages is generally within the exclusive province of the jury [see Kennedy v. Los Angeles Police Dep't (9th Cir. 1990) 901 F.2d 702, 707] . However, defendants are entitled to a directed verdict on the issue if the evidence and its inferences, considered as a whole and viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, can reasonably support only a verdict denying punitive damages [Ward v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 1991) 967 F.2d 280, 286] .

Furthermore, the due process analysis employed by the United States Supreme Court in Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 15-17, 111 S. Ct. 1032, 113 L. Ed. 2d 1 , applies to actions brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and any award of punitive damages must be the product of procedures that meet those due process requirements [Morgan v. Woessner (9th Cir. 1993) 997 F.2d 1244, 1254-1260 , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1033 (1994) (remanding for trial court to review using Haslip analysis, and to record reasons for amount of eventual award)].

With regard to the reasonableness of the amount of punitive damages, the Ninth Circuit has looked to California law for guidance [see Bouman v. Block (9th Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d 1211, 1234 , cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1005] . However, a California court of appeal has held that the California rule requiring that a punitive damages award be supported by evidence of a defendant's financial condition [see Adams v. Murakami (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 105, 110, 114-115, 284 Cal. Rptr. 318, 813 P.2d 1348] is a substantive limitation that cannot be applied to limit the federal punitive damages remedy under § 1983. Instead, California courts must apply the federal rule that requires the defendant, rather than the plaintiff, to introduce evidence of the defendant's financial condition if the defendant seeks to limit the amount of the punitive damages award on that basis [see Chavez v. Keat (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1406, 1413-1416, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72] .

Punitive damages may be recovered against a government official sued in his or her individual capacity [Kentucky v. Graham (1985) 473 U.S. 159, 167 n.13, 105 S. Ct. 3099, 87 L. Ed. 2d 114] . Punitive damages may not be recovered against a municipality [Jefferson v. City of Tarrant (1997) 522 U.S. 75, 79, 118 S. Ct. 481, 139 L. Ed. 2d 433 ; City of Newport v. Fact Concerts (1981) 453 U.S. 247, 271, 101 S. Ct. 2748, 69 L. Ed. 2d 616] . However, no federal policy prohibits a city from paying punitive damages on behalf of an employee held liable for punitive damages in a § 1983 case, if it finds its employee acted without malice and it is in its best interests to pay. In making this determination, the city is not bound by the jury's finding regarding good faith of the city employee [Cornwell v. City of Riverside (9th Cir. 1990) 896 F.2d 398, 399 , cert. denied, 497 U.S. 1026] .

For detailed discussion of the rules governing punitive damages under California law, see Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.40 et seq.

PRACTICE TIP:

Punitive Damages. There is a potential conflict that exists if the same attorney is representing multiple defendants who are exposed to punitive damages. The potential "malpractice" may provide another source of payment for a punitive damage award. Practictioners should also distinguish state law from federal law as it relates to punitive damages. For example, under California law there is a "clear and convincing" test.Under federal law the "preponderance of evidence" test applies. For state claims in California the plaintiff has the burden of introducing evidence of the defendant's "net worth" and ability to pay. In federal court the plaintiff is not obligated to do so. If the case is not bifurcated it is possible that the issue of punitive damages in a § 1983 case could go to a jury without any evidence being introduced regarding a defendant's "net worth" or ability to pay. By John H. Scott

[15] Injunctions

There are certain limitations on the sorts of injunctions that may be issued in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 actions.

Younger v. Harris (1971) 401 U.S. 37, 91 S. Ct. 746, 27 L. Ed. 2d 669 precludes federal courts from issuing an injunction that would interfere with state judicial proceedings, when (1) there are ongoing state judicial proceedings that implicate important state interests, and (2) there is an adequate opportunity in the state proceedings to raise federal questions [Martinez v. Newport Beach City (9th Cir. 1997) 125 F.3d 777, 780] . The Younger doctrine has also been applied to state administrative proceedings in which important state interests are vindicated, so long as in the course of those proceedings the federal plaintiff would have a full and fair opportunity to litigate his or her constitutional claim [see Ohio Civil Rights Comm'n v. Dayton Schools (1986) 477 U.S. 619, 627, 106 S. Ct. 2718, 91 L. Ed. 2d 512 ; Baffert v. Cal. Horse Racing Board (9th Cir. 2003) 332 F.3d 613, 617-622 ; Cornwell v. California Bd. of Barbering and Cosmetology (S.D. Cal. 1997) 962 F. Supp. 1260, 1269-1271 (African hairstyling business association barred under Younger from seeking injunctive and declaratory relief prohibiting enforcement of Barbering and Cosmetology Act, Bus. & Prof. Code § 7301 et seq., since two members were involved in pending state administrative proceeding and requested relief would require injunction against state proceeding)]. However, a federal court need not abstain if the state proceedings were brought in bad faith [Younger v. Harris (1971) 401 U.S. 37, 53, 91 S. Ct. 746, 27 L. Ed. 2d 669 ; Lebbos v. Judges of the Superior Court, Santa Clara County (9th Cir. 1989) 883 F.2d 810, 814] . For additional discussion of Younger abstention, see Moore' s Federal Practice, Ch. 122, Abstention Doctrines, § 122.05 (3rd ed. Matthew Bender).

A court may not grant injunctive relief in a § 1983 action against a judicial officer for an act or omission in the officer's judicial capacity unless a declaratory decree was violated or declaratory relief was unavailable [42 U.S.C. § 1983].

Neither federal nor state courts may enjoin collection of state taxes in an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 if the plaintiff has an adequate legal remedy under state law (for example, a suit for refund of improper taxes) [see Nat. Truck Council v. Okla. Tax Com. (1995) 515 U.S. 582, 588-590, 115 S. Ct. 2351, 132 L. Ed. 2d 509] .

[16] Evidence

Actions brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 alleging discrimination through a pattern or practice require plaintiffs to show that actions of the defendants had a discriminatory impact and defendants acted with an intent or purpose to discriminate based upon plaintiffs' membership in a protected class [see Committee Concerning Community Improvement v. City of Modesto (9th Cir. 2009) 583 F.3d 690, 702-703 ; Lee v. City of Los Angeles, 250 F.3d 668, 686-87 (9th Cir. 2001)] . When the challenged governmental policy is facially neutral, proof of disproportionate impact on an identifiable group, such as evidence of gross statistical disparities, can satisfy the intent requirement when it tends to show that some invidious or discriminatory purpose underlies the policy [Committee Concerning Community Improvement v. City of Modesto (9th Cir. 2009) 583 F.3d 690, 703 ; see Village of Arlington Heights v. Metro. Hous. Dev. Corp. (1977) 429 U.S. 252, 264-266, 97 S. Ct. 555, 50 L. Ed. 2d 450 ; Hazelwood School Dist. v. United States

(1977) 433 U.S. 299, 307-308, 97 S. Ct. 2736, 53 L. Ed. 2d 768] . Gross statistical disparities alone may constitute proof of a practice of discrimination and relieve plaintiffs from their burden of showing intent to discriminate, but only in the rare case will impact alone will be sufficient to invalidate a challenged government action [Committee Concerning Community Improvement v. City of Modesto (9th Cir. 2009) 583 F.3d 690, 703 ; see Village of Arlington Heights v. Metro. Hous. Dev. Corp. (1977) 429 U.S. 252, 266, 97 S. Ct. 555, 50 L. Ed. 2d 450 (absent evidence of very stark statistical disparities, impact alone is not determinative, and court must look to other evidence)].

In addition to statistical evidence showing discriminatory impact, other factors to be considered in determining whether there is evidence of intent or purpose to discriminate include the historical background of the decision, the sequence of events leading up to the decision, and any relevant legislative or administrative history [Village of Arlington Heights v. Metro. Hous. Dev. Corp. (1977) 429 U.S. 252, 267-268, 97 S. Ct. 555, 50 L. Ed. 2d 450 ; Committee Concerning Community Improvement v. City of Modesto (9th Cir. 2009) 583 F.3d 690, 703] . If there is no evidence of intentional discrimination, the court assumes the challenged actions were not based on discrimination and must inquire only whether the actions were rationally related to a legitimate governmental interest [Committee Concerning Community Improvement v. City of Modesto (9th Cir. 2009) 583 F.3d 690, 703 ; Hispanic Taco Vendors of Washington v. City of Pasco (9th Cir. 1993) 994 F.2d 676, 680] .

§ 113.15 Conspiracy to Interfere with Rights: 42 U.S.C. § 1985

[1] Conspiracy to Deprive Persons of Equal Protection Rights

[a] Cause of Action for Damages; Elements

If two or more persons in any state or territory conspire to or go in disguise on the highway or on the premises of another for the purpose of depriving, either directly or indirectly, any person or class of persons of the equal protection of the laws, or of equal privileges and immunities under the laws, or for the purpose of preventing or hindering the constituted authorities of any state or territory from giving or securing to all persons within that state or territory the equal protection of the laws, the party so injured or deprived has a cause of action for recovery of damages occasioned by the injury or deprivation, against any one or more of the conspirators [42 U.S.C. § 1985(3)].

In the case of a conspiracy under § 1985(3), if one or more persons engaged in the conspiracy does, or causes to be done, any act in furtherance of the object of that conspiracy, whereby another is injured in his or her person or property, or deprived of having and exercising any right or privilege of a citizen of the United States, the party injured or deprived has an action for the recovery of damages occasioned by that injury or deprivation, against any one or more of the conspirators [42 U.S.C. § 1985(3)]. Vicarious liability can be imposed on a defendant in an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3) [Scott v. Ross (9th Cir. 1998) 140 F.3d 1275, 1284 , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1033 (1999)] .

42 U.S.C. § 1985(3) does not create substantive rights; it merely provides a remedy for the rights it designates [see United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners v. Scott (1983) 463 U.S. 825, 833, 103 S. Ct. 3352, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1049] . Thus, unless there has been a violation of a substantive federal or state civil rights statute or constitutional provision, no cause of action exists [see Caldeira v. County of Kauai (9th Cir. 1989) 866 F.2d 1175, 1182 , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 817 (failure to prove violation precluded finding of conspiracy to commit violation); Bartling v. Glendale Adventist Medical Center (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 961, 972, 229 Cal. Rptr. 360 (same)].

Section 1985(3) applies to private conspiracies aimed at interfering with rights constitutionally protected against private, as well as official, encroachment [United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners v. Scott (1983) 463 U.S. 825, 832-833, 103 S. Ct. 3352, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1049] .

To succeed in an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3), the plaintiff must allege and prove the existence of both of the following elements [United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners v. Scott (1983) 463 U.S. 825, 828-829, 103 S. Ct. 3352, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1049 ; Griffin v. Breckenridge (1971) 403 U.S. 88, 102-103, 91 S. Ct. 1790, 29 L. Ed. 2d 338 ; see Scott v. Ross (9th Cir. 1998) 140 F.3d 1275, 1284 , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1033 (1999)] :

- A conspiracy for the purpose of depriving, directly or indirectly, any person or class of persons of the equal protection of the laws, or of equal privileges and immunities under the laws; and

- An act in furtherance of the conspiracy, whereby a person is injured in his or her person or property or deprived of a right or privilege of a citizen of the United States.

The conspiracy can be inferred from conduct and need not be proved by evidence of an express agreement [Scott v. Ross (9th Cir. 1998) 140 F.3d 1275, 1284 , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1033 (1999) ; Ward v. EEOC (9th Cir. 1983) 719 F.2d 311, 314 , cert. denied, 466 U.S. 953 (1984)] .

Conspiracies may also be alleged and proven under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [see United Steelworkers of America v. Phelps Dodge Corp. (9th Cir.) 865 F.2d 1539 , en banc, cert. denied, 493 U.S. 809 (1989) (conspiracy under § 1983); Fonda v. Gray (9th Cir. 1983) 707 F.2d 435 (same)]. Such § 1983 conspiracies must be distinguished from the sort of conspiracies actionable under 42 U.S.C. § 1985. Plaintiffs often allege and seek to prove conspiracies under § 1983 to establish action under color of law on the part of private parties who conspire with state actors. The requirements of § 1985 do not apply to such § 1983 conspiracies.

PRACTICE TIP:

Conspiracy Claims. Courts tend to be skeptical of civil conspiracy claims brought against government defendants. However, courts are much more willing to allow the government to pursue criminal or civil conspiracy claims against others. Under some circumstances it may be helpful to refer to criminal conspiracy cases to persuade a judge that you have enough evidence to go to a jury on a § 1983 or a § 1985 conspiracy claim. By John H. Scott

[b] Class-Based Invidiously Discriminatory Animus

The language requiring intent to deprive another of equal protection, or of equal privileges and immunities, means that there must be some racial, or otherwise class-based, invidiously discriminatory animus behind the conspiracy. The conspiracy must aim at a deprivation of the equal enjoyment of rights secured by the law to all [United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners v. Scott (1983) 463 U.S. 825, 835, 103 S. Ct. 3352, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1049 ; Griffin v. Breckenridge (1971) 403 U.S. 88, 102, 91 S. Ct. 1790, 29 L. Ed. 2d 338] .

The requirement of a class-based, invidiously discriminatory animus implies that the actors chose a particular course of action at least in part because of, not merely in spite of, its adverse effects on an identifiable group. Some activities may be such an irrational object of disfavor that, if targeted, and if they also happen to be engaged in exclusively or predominantly by a particular class of people, an intent to disfavor that class can readily be presumed [Bray v. Alexandria Clinic (1993) 506 U.S. 263, 270, 113 S. Ct. 753, 122 L. Ed. 2d 34] .

This principle reflects a determination that some groups require special assistance in protecting their civil rights [DeSantis v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (9th Cir. 1979) 608 F.2d 327, 333] .

Groups warranting protection from conspiracies under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3) are not limited to those based on racial or otherwise suspect classifications [Life Ins. Co. of North America v. Reichardt (9th Cir. 1979) 591 F.2d 499, 505] . Thus, for example, the following entities have been found to constitute protected classes under § 1985(3):

- Female purchasers of disability insurance [Life Ins. Co. of North America v. Reichardt (9th Cir. 1979) 591 F.2d 499, 505] ;

- Dissident political groups engaging in lawful activities [Stevens v. Rifkin (N.D. Cal. 1984) 608 F. Supp. 710, 724] ; and

- Religious groups [Diem v. City and County of San Francisco (N.D. Cal. 1988) 686 F. Supp. 806, 809-810 ; Molko v. Holy Spirit Ass'n (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1126, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46 , cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1084 (1989)] .

On the other hand, a protected class under § 1985(3) is more than just a group of individuals who share a desire to engage in conduct that an alleged violator disfavors [see Bray v. Alexandria Clinic (1993) 506 U.S. 263, 269, 113 S. Ct. 753, 122 L. Ed. 2d 34 (women seeking abortions do not qualify as protected class); Portland Feminist Women's Health Ctr. v. Advocates for Life (9th Cir. 1994) 62 F.3d 280, 283-285 (women seeking abortions not a protected class, though abortion clinic could state cause of action against abortion protesters under "hindrance clause" of 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3) for conspiring to prevent city police officers from maintaining access to clinic)]. Entities denied protected status under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3) include all of the following:

- Indigents represented by public defenders [Glover v. Tower (9th Cir. 1983) 700 F.2d 556, 558] ;

- Police, as victims of anti-police bias [Canlis v. San Joaquin Sheriff's Posse Comitatus (9th Cir. 1981) 641 F.2d 711, 720 , cert. denied, 454 U.S. 967] ;

- Homosexuals [DeSantis v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (9th Cir. 1979) 608 F.2d 327, 333] ;

- State prisoners [Nakao v. Rushen (N.D. Cal. 1982) 542 F. Supp. 856, 859] ; and

- Individuals holding unpopular historical views [McCalden v. California Library Ass'n (9th Cir. 1990) 955 F.2d 1214, 1223 , cert. denied, 504 U.S. 957 (1992) ("holocaust revisionists")].

[c] Intracorporate Conspiracy Exception Not Applicable

The intracorporate conspiracy exception, under which a corporation or enterprise cannot conspire with its agents acting within the scope of their employment, does not apply to civil rights conspiracies, whether the conspirators are a private business or a public entity [see Washington v. Duty Free Shoppers (N.D. Cal. 1988) 696 F. Supp. 1323, 1326-1327 (private business); Diem v. City and County of San Francisco (N.D. Cal. 1988) 686 F. Supp. 806, 809-810 (public entity)].

The intracorporate conspiracy exception arose in the antitrust context, and its rationale does not apply in the civil rights arena, in which a real danger exists from the collaboration among agents of a single business to discriminate. Agreements to discriminate between a business and its employees threaten exactly the group danger at which conspiracy liability is aimed [Washington v. Duty Free Shoppers (N.D. Cal. 1988) 696 F. Supp. 1323, 1326-1327] .

[2] Conspiracy to Prevent Officer From Performing Duties

A conspiracy is actionable under 42 U.S.C. § 1985 if two or more persons in any state or territory [42 U.S.C. § 1985(1)]:

- Conspire to prevent, by force, intimidation, or threat, any person from accepting or holding office, trust, or place of confidence under the United States, or from discharging any duties thereof;

- Conspire to induce by like means any officer of the United States to leave any state, district, or place where his or her duties as an officer are required to be performed;

- Conspire to injure the officer's person or property on account of the lawful discharge of the duties of his or her office or while he or she is engaged in the lawful discharge of the office; or

- Conspire to injure the officer's property so as to molest, interrupt, hinder, or impede the officer in the discharge of official duties.

This action does not require an intent to deprive someone of equal protection of the law, and proof of a class-based animus is not necessary [see Kush v. Rutledge (1983) 460 U.S. 719, 724-725, 103 S. Ct. 1483, 75 L. Ed. 2d 413] .

42 U.S.C. § 1985(1) applies exclusively to federal officers [Canlis v. San Joaquin Sheriff's Posse Comitatus (9th Cir. 1981) 641 F.2d 711, 717-718 , cert. denied, 454 U.S. 967 (not applicable to county sheriff)].

[3] Conspiracy to Obstruct Justice Through Intimidation

If two or more persons in any state or territory conspire to deter, by force, intimidation, or threat, any party or witness in any court of the United States from attending that court, or from testifying in any matter pending therein freely, fully, and truthfully, or conspire to injure the person or property of that party or witness on account of his or her having so attended or testified, or conspire to influence the verdict, presentment, or indictment of any grand or petit juror in any such court, or conspire to injure the person or property of that juror on account of any verdict, presentment, or indictment lawfully assented to by the juror, or for being or having been a juror, the conspiracy is actionable under 42 U.S.C. § 1985 [42 U.S.C. § 1985(2)].

Proof of a class-based animus is not required for this sort of action under § 1985(2) [Kush v. Rutledge (1983) 460 U.S. 719, 726-727, 103 S. Ct. 1483, 75 L. Ed. 2d 413] .

To establish a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(2), the plaintiff must show a conspiracy between two or more persons to deter a witness by force, intimidation, or threat from attending court or testifying freely in any pending matter, resulting in injury to the plaintiff [David v. United States (9th Cir. 1987) 820 F.2d 1038, 1040 ; see Dooley v. Reiss (9th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 1392, 1396 , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1038 (allegations of perjury and concealment of evidence fail to state claim for relief in that they do not show attempt to influence juror by force, intimidation, or threat)].

If an action is based on allegations of witness intimidation, it must be shown that the litigant was hampered in being able to present an effective case; an intimidated witness who is not a party to the action in which he or she was intimidated can show no injury under § 1985(2) [David v. United States (9th Cir. 1987) 820 F.2d 1038, 1040] .

To be actionable, the conspiracy must result in overt acts done in furtherance of the conspiracy that are the cause of the plaintiff's injuries. A mere allegation of conspiracy without factual specificity is insufficient to support a claim [Sanchez v. City of Santa Ana (9th Cir. 1990) 936 F.2d 1027, 1039 , cert. denied, 502 U.S. 957] .

Further, if two or more persons conspire for the purpose of impeding, hindering, obstructing, or defeating, in any manner, the due course of justice in any state or territory, with intent to deny to any citizen the equal protection of the laws, or to injure the citizen or his or her property for lawfully enforcing, or attempting to enforce, the right of any person, or class of persons, to the equal protection of the law, that conspiracy is actionable under 42 U.S.C. § 1985 [42 U.S.C. § 1985(2)]. This type of action under § 1985(2) requires an intent to deprive someone of equal protection of the law, which is best proved by demonstration of a class-based animus [Guzman v. Van Demark (C.D. Cal. 1987) 651 F. Supp. 1180, 1185-1186 ; see Kush v. Rutledge (1983) 460 U.S. 719, 724-725, 103 S. Ct. 1483, 75 L. Ed. 2d 413] .

[4] Conspiracy to Interfere With Voting

If two or more persons conspire to prevent, by force, intimidation, or threat, any citizen who is lawfully entitled to vote from giving his or her support or advocacy in a legal manner, toward or in favor of the election of any lawfully qualified person as an elector for President or Vice President, or as a member of Congress of the United States, or conspire to injure any citizen in person or property on account of that support or advocacy, that conspiracy is actionable under 42 U.S.C. § 1985 [42 U.S.C. § 1985(3)].

This type of action does not require an intent to deprive a person of equal protection of the law, and proof of a class-based animus is not necessary [see Kush v. Rutledge (1983) 460 U.S. 719, 724-725, 103 S. Ct. 1483, 75 L. Ed. 2d 413] .

[5] Limitations Period

The one-year limitation period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3) applied to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3) [McDougal v. County of Imperial (9th Cir. 1991) 942 F.2d 668, 673-674] . The cause of action accrues when the primary injury occurs, not on the last overt act of the conspiracy [see Venegas v. Wagner (9th Cir. 1983) 704 F.2d 1144, 1146] . Effective January 1, 2003, Code Civ. Proc. § 340 was amended and Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1 was added to provide that personal injury actions are now governed by a two-year statute of limitations.

§ 113.16 Neglect to Prevent Conspiracy to Interfere with Rights: 42 U.S.C. § 1986

Every person who has knowledge that any of the wrongs mentioned in 42 U.S.C. § 1985 are conspired to be done [see § 113.15], and are about to be committed, and who has the power to prevent or aid in preventing the commission of those wrongs, but neglects or refuses to do so, and the wrongful act is committed, will be liable to the party injured, or to his or her legal representatives, for all damages caused by that wrongful act, which the person by reasonable diligence could have prevented. Any number of persons guilty of that wrongful neglect or refusal may be joined as defendants. If the death of any party is caused by any such wrongful act and neglect, the legal representative of the deceased may bring an action for the benefit of any survivors to recover damages not exceeding $5,000 [42 U.S.C. § 1986].

A cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1986 requires that there be a valid claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1985 [Trerice v. Pedersen (9th Cir. 1985) 769 F.2d 1398, 1403 ; Washington v. Duty Free Shoppers (N.D. Cal 1988) 696 F. Supp. 1323, 1327] .

An action under 42 U.S.C. § 1986 must be commenced within one year after the cause of action has accrued [42 U.S.C. § 1986; RK Ventures, Inc. v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2002) 307 F.3d 1045, 1058] .

§ 113.17 Application of State Law and Attorney's Fees: 42 U.S.C. § 1988

[1] Applicability of Common Law

In cases brought under 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1982, 1983, 1985, and 1986, and in certain other civil rights actions, the courts are to apply the laws of the United States, so far as the laws of the United States are suitable to carry the civil rights laws into effect. In all cases in which the laws of the United States are not adapted to the object, or are deficient in the provisions necessary to furnish suitable remedies and punish offenses against law, the common law, as modified and changed by the constitution and law of the forum state, so far as they are not inconsistent with the federal Constitution and laws, is extended to and governs the district courts in the trial and disposition of the cause [42 U.S.C. § 1988(a) (frequently referred to as the "borrowing provision")].

Although § 1988(a) only refers to application of state law in federal courts, the Supreme Court has applied the provision to a 42 U.S.C. § 1982 case in state court [see Sullivan v. Little Hunting Park (1969) 396 U.S. 229, 240-241, 90 S. Ct. 400, 24 L. Ed. 2d 386 ; see also Felder v. Casey (1988) 487 U.S. 131, 137, 108 S. Ct. 2302, 101 L. Ed. 2d 123] .

The question whether state law is inconsistent with the federal Constitution or laws focuses on the purpose and nature of the federal right involved. In a § 1983 case, the question is whether the state law is inconsistent with the purposes of § 1983 [see Felder v. Casey (1988) 487 U.S. 131, 139, 108 S. Ct. 2302, 101 L. Ed. 2d 123 (holding state notice of claim requirement to be inapplicable to § 1983 action)].

[2] Attorney's Fees

[a] Availability of Attorney's Fees

[i] Court Has Discretion

In any action or proceeding to enforce a provision of 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1982, 1983, 1985, or 1986 (or other specified federal statutes), the court, in its discretion, may allow the prevailing party [see § 113.17[2][b]], other than the United States, a reasonable attorney's fee as part of costs [42 U.S.C. § 1988(b)]. A prevailing party in an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 should ordinarily recover an attorney's fee unless special circumstances could render such an award unjust [Democratic Party of Wash. State v. Reed (9th Cir. 2004) 388 F.3d 1281, 1285-1286 ; Bauer v. Sampson (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 775, 785 , quoting Newman v. Piggie Park Enters., Inc. (1968) 390 U.S. 400, 402, 88 S. Ct. 964, 19 L. Ed. 2d 1263] . There is a two-pronged test for determining when special circumstances exist [Democratic Party of Wash. State v. Reed (9th Cir. 2004) 388 F.3d 1281, 1285] :

- Whether allowing attorneys' fees would further the purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1988 [see § 113.17[2][a][ii]]; and

- Whether the balance of the equities favors or disfavors the denial of fees.

In awarding an attorney's fee in any action or proceeding to enforce 42 U.S.C. § 1981, the court, in its discretion, may include expert fees as part of the attorney's fee [42 U.S.C. § 1988(c)].

[ii] Purpose of Statute

The purpose of 42 U.S.C. § 1988 is to ensure effective access to the judicial process for persons with civil rights grievances [Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 429]. However, an attorney who represents himself or herself in a successful civil rights action is not entitled to attorney's fees [Kay v. Ehrler (1991) 499 U.S. 432, 435-438, 111 S. Ct. 1435, 113 L. Ed. 2d 486] , whether the attorney is a plaintiff or a defendant in the civil rights action [see Elwood v. Drescher (9th Cir. 2006) 456 F.3d 943, 946-948 (Kay applied to preclude attorney's fee award to attorney who successfully represented himself as defendant in action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983)]. The United States Supreme Court appears to have held that attorney's fees awards in civil rights claims are precluded for all pro se litigants [see Elwood v. Drescher (9th Cir. 2006) 456 F.3d 943, 947 , citing Kay v. Ehrler (1991) 499 U.S. 432, 435-438, 111 S. Ct. 1435, 113 L. Ed. 2d 486] .

[iii] Judicial Officer Not Liable for Fees

In an action brought against a judicial officer for an act or omission taken in the officer's judicial capacity, the officer cannot be held liable for any costs, including attorney's fees, unless the officer's action was clearly in excess of the officer's jurisdiction [42 U.S.C. § 1988(b)].

[iv] "Merit Fees" and "Fees on Fees"

Attorney's fees may be awarded under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 not only for successful litigation of the underlying merits of the action ("merits fees"), but also for fees incurred in successfully litigating an application for merits fees ("fees on fees") [Thompson v. Gomez (9th Cir. 1995) 45 F.3d 1365, 1366 ; Clark v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1986) 803 F.2d 987, 992] . However, like merits fees, an award of fees for fee litigation may be reduced proportionately to the extent that the fee litigation is unsuccessful [see Thompson v. Gomez (9th Cir. 1995) 45 F.3d 1365, 1367-1368 ; see also [c][ii], below

].

[v] Fees on Appeal

Attorney's fees may be awarded under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 for all representation on appeal, including work performed in defending or challenging a fee award, if plaintiff prevails [Bernardi v. Yeutter (9th Cir. 1991) 951 F.2d 971, 976 ; Cabrales v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1991) 935 F.2d 1050, 1053] . If the plaintiff is partially successful on appeal, attorney's fees are awarded only for claims successfully defended on the merits [see Larez v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1991) 946 F.2d 630, 649] .

A denial of attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 is reviewed on appeal for abuse of discretion, elements of legal analysis and statutory interpretation are reviewed de novo, and factual findings underlying the decision are reviewed for clear error [Native Village of Venetie IRA Council v. Alaska (9th Cir. 1998) 155 F.3d 1150, 1151-1152] .

[vi] Interest on Fees

Interest on the amount of attorney's fees awarded may be ordered, accruing from the time that services were rendered, to compensate for the delay in receipt of the fees [Spain v. Mountanos (9th Cir. 1982) 690 F.2d 742, 747-748] .

[vii] Consideration of Fees Appropriate Only in Post-trial Proceeding

Consideration of attorney's fees is strictly the province of the court in post-trial proceedings. It is error to inform or instruct the jury as to the plaintiff's possible recovery of attorney's fees [Brooks v. Cook (9th Cir. 1991) 938 F.2d 1048, 1050-1053] .

Moreover, the trial court retains discretion under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 to deny fees when a post-judgment motion unfairly surprises or prejudices the affected party [White v. New Hampshire Dep't of Empl. Sec. (1982) 455 U.S. 445, 454, 102 S. Ct. 1162, 71 L. Ed. 2d 325 ; Board of Admin. of Cal. Public Employees' Retirement System v. Wilson (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 967, 974, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477] .

[viii] Statute Controls Only What Losing Defendant Must Pay

42 U.S.C. § 1988 controls only what the losing defendant must pay; it does not affect what the prevailing plaintiff must pay his or her attorney. Thus, § 1988 does not interfere with the enforceability of a contingent-fee contract between the plaintiff and his or her attorney [Venegas v. Mitchell (1990) 495 U.S. 82, 90, 110 S. Ct. 1679, 109 L. Ed. 2d 74] .

42 U.S.C. § 1988 attorney's fees are awardable in cases litigated in California state courts under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. California courts follow federal standards for determining fee awards under § 1988 [Board of Admin. of Cal. Public Employees' Retirement System v. Wilson (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 967, 974, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477 ; EWAP, Inc. v. City of Ontario (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1108, 1113, 223 Cal. Rptr. 422] .

A plaintiff who wins a state battery claim but loses a federal claim for violation of civil rights under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 by use of excessive force based on the same conduct may not obtain an award of attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, since every battery under state law does not result in a constitutional violation [McFadden v. Villa (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 235, 237-242, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 80 ; see Mateyko v. Felix (9th Cir. 1990) 924 F.2d 824, 828 , cert. denied, 502 U.S. 814 (1991) (fees denied to plaintiff who lost federal civil rights claim and won state negligence claim); Russo v. State of New York (2d Cir. 1982) 672 F.2d 1014, 1022-1023] . On the other hand, a plaintiff who succeeds on both a state and federal claim based on the same legal theory or core of common facts may be awarded attorney's fees even if no damages are awarded on the federal claim [see Allen v. District of Columbia (D.C. 1986) 503 A.2d 1233, 1236-1237

(court found in favor of plaintiff on both state and federal claims but awarded no damages on federal claim); Hall v. Western Production Co. (10th Cir. 1993) 988 F.2d 1050, 1055-1056 (jury found for plaintiff on federal age discrimination and state breach of contract claims but awarded no damages for age discrimination)].

A state court action for malicious prosecution following dismissal from an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 is not expressly preempted by 42 U.S.C. § 1988. The provision for an award of attorney's fees to a prevailing defendant under 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b) does not support an inference that Congress intended to occupy the entire field of relief to defendants who prevail on § 1983 actions not brought in good faith, particularly when the standard for a prevailing defendant's entitlement to attorney's fees under federal law, that is, that the action is brought frivolously, is lower than that for defendants to prevail in a subsequent action for malicious prosecution. The higher standard required to proceed with an action for malicious prosecution defeats a claim that the malicious prosecution action is preempted [Del Rio v. Jetton (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 30, 33-37, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 712] . For discussion of malicious prosecution actions, see Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution .

PRACTICE TIP:

Entitlement to Fees. Under certain circumstances, a Plaintiff may be deemed a prevailing party and entitled to fees under § 1988 if he or she succeeds on a state law claim based on the same legal theory or a core of common facts as a § 1983 claim. However, this depends on the Plaintiff succeeding in some way on a federal claim or a federal claim not being adjudicated at all [McFadden v. Villa (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 235, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 80] . In McFadden, the court of appeal reversed an award of attorneys' fees based on a state law battery claim because the jury found no civil rights violation. The trial court awarded fees because an excessive force claim under state law is evaluated by federal civil rights standards [Edson v. City of Anaheim (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1269, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614] . The result in McFadden (jury found battery under state law but no civil rights violation) could possibly have been avoided by a motion to reconcile the verdicts. Otherwise, the inconsistent verdicts could warrant a new trial. By John H. Scott

[b] Prevailing Party

[i] Plaintiff

A plaintiff is considered a prevailing party, and may recover attorney's fees, if he or she succeeds on any significant issue in litigation that achieves some of the benefit sought in bringing the suit [Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 433 ; see Sokolow v. County of San Mateo (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 231, 243, 247-248, 261 Cal. Rptr. 520 (amount of award may be less if plaintiff achieved only limited success)].

The plaintiff must be able to point to a resolution of the dispute that changes the legal relationship between himself or herself and the defendant [Texas Teachers v. Garland School Dist. (1989) 489 U.S. 782, 792, 109 S. Ct. 1486, 103 L. Ed. 2d 866] . Additionally, the plaintiff must personally benefit from the relief [Rhodes v. Stewart (1988) 488 U.S. 1, 4, 109 S. Ct. 202, 102 L. Ed. 2d 1 (plaintiff prisoners not prevailing parties because one had died and other had been released from custody before judicial determination)]. Thus, a plaintiff who succeeds in obtaining a court order incorporating an agreement that includes relief the plaintiff sought in the lawsuit is not a mere catalyst; the plaintiff is a prevailing party for attorney's fees purposes [Labotest v. Bonta (9th Cir. 2002) 297 F.3d 892, 893] .

Even if there is a causal link between the litigation and the defendant's subsequent acts, the plaintiff is not the prevailing party unless he or she receives a direct benefit from the acts [Hewitt v. Helms (1987) 482 U.S. 755, 763-764, 107 S. Ct. 2672, 96 L. Ed. 2d 654 (prisoner's suit caused prisonto promulgate regulations to prevent treatment complained of, but prisoner did not personally benefit from regulations because he had been released)]. In short, a plaintiff prevails if actual relief on the merits of the claim materially alters the legal relationship between the parties by modifying the defendant's behavior in a way that directly benefits the plaintiff [Farrar v. Hobby (1992) 506 U.S. 103, 111, 113 S.

Ct. 566, 121 L. Ed. 2d 494] . However, the requirement of Farrar, that the plaintiff obtain "relief on the merits," does not necessarily mean that the plaintiff must obtain an adjudication of liability. In one case, for example, a plaintiff who obtained an enforceable stipulated judgment requiring a city to make alternations to a public facility to comply with handicap access laws was the prevailing party for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1988, even though the city did not admit liability [see Kilgour v. City of Pasadena (9th Cir. 1995) 53 F.3d 1007, 1010-1011] .

Furthermore, the relief need not be judicially decreed to justify an award of attorney's fees. If a lawsuit produces voluntary action by the defendants that affords the plaintiffs all or some of the relief sought, such as a monetary settlement or a change in conduct that redresses the plaintiffs' grievances, the plaintiffs are deemed to have prevailed despite the absence of a formal judgment in their favor [Hewitt v. Helms (1987) 482 U.S. 755, 760-761, 107 S. Ct. 2672, 96 L. Ed. 2d 654] . Such voluntary action by the defendant is sometimes referred to as "catalytic relief." However, to qualify as a "prevailing party" under § 1988, a party must obtain a "judicially sanctioned" change in the legal relationship of the parties, so that the catalyst theory no longer applies to § 1988 [Bennett v. Yoshina (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1097, 1100-1101 (9th Circuit precedents to contrary overturned), citing Buckhannon Board and Care Home, Inc. v. West Virginia Department of Health and Human Resources (2001) 532 U.S. 598, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Fees in "Catalytic Relief" Cases. Since the United States Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit have effectively eliminated the "catalytic effect" as a basis for a fee award under § 1988 [see Buckhannon Board and Care Home, Inc. v. West Virginia Department of Health and Human Resources (2001) 532 U.S. 598, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855 ; Bennett v. Yoshina (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1097, 1100-1101] , defendants can avoid exposure to attorneys' fees in cases based on injunctive relief by simply "voluntarily" changing policies before a court grants the sought after injunctive relief. By John H. Scott

Even unadjudicated claims can support an award of attorney's fees under § 1988, so long as the claims are substantial and were not alleged solely to support the fee award [see Maher v. Gagne (1980) 448 U.S. 122, 130-133, 100 S. Ct. 2570, 65 L. Ed. 2d 653 ; Native Village of Venetie IRACouncil v. Alaska (9th Cir. 1998) 155 F.3d 1150, 1152-1153 ; Hoopa Valley Tribe v. Nevins (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 657, 661 , cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1055 (1990)] .

The prevailing-party inquiry does not necessarily turn on the magnitude of the relief obtained. A plaintiff who wins only an award of nominal damages may be a prevailing party under § 1988, so long as the plaintiff receives some tangible benefit other than the nominal damages. However, a purely technical victory may be so insignificant as to be insufficient to support an award of attorney's fees [see Texas State Teachers Ass'n v. Garland Independent School Dist. (1989) 489 U.S. 782, 792, 109 S. Ct. 1486, 103 L. Ed. 2d 866 (giving example of obtaining judgment declaring regulation unconstitutionally vague but without evidence that plaintiffs were adversely affected by regulation)]. If a court chooses to award fees after a judgment for only nominal damages, it must point to some way in which the litigation succeeded, in addition to obtaining a judgment for nominal damage [Mahach-Watkins v. Depee (9th Cir. 2010) 593 F.3d 1054, 1059] . A court should consider three factors in determining whether a plaintiff succeeded in some way beyond the judgment for nominal damages [Mahach-Watkins v. Depee (9th Cir. 2010) 593 F.3d 1054, 1059] :

- The difference between the amount recovered and the damages sought, which in most nominal damages cases will disfavor an award of fees.
- The significance of the legal issue on which the plaintiff claims to have prevailed.
- Whether the plaintiff accomplished some public goal.

Although a party may "prevail" by obtaining a judgment for nominal damages, a trial court may abuse its discretion in awarding attorney's fees based on nominal damages in a case in which the plaintiff sought compensatory damages [see Farrar v. Hobby (1992) 506 U.S. 103, 114-116, 113 S. Ct. 566, 121 L. Ed. 2d 494 ; Romberg v. Nichols (9th Cir. 1995) 48 F.3d 453, 455 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 943] . In one case, for example, a judgment that awarded the plaintiffs nominal damages of $1.00, but failed to produce any other tangible results for the plaintiffs, was held to be insufficient to support an award of attorney's fees, even though the plaintiffs were technically "prevailing parties" [see Romberg v. Nichols (9th Cir. 1995) 48 F.3d 453, 455 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 943] . In another case, on the other hand, an award of attorney's fees was held not to be an abuse of the trial court's discretion, even though the plaintiff was awarded only nominal damages, because the litigation achieved tangible results in that it exposed the defendant police department's unconstitutional policy of using excessive force in making arrests, and the city later changed the policy, at least in part because of the lawsuit [see Wilcox v. City of Reno (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 550, 554-557] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Attorneys' Fees and Nominal Damages. Thus, a "nominal damage" jury instruction is a trap because a $1.00 verdict will normally not meet the "prevailing party" threshold for entitlement to an award of attorneys' fees. By John H. Scott

A declaratory judgment is sufficient to support an award of attorney's fees under § 1988 if the proper standard is otherwise met [see Rhodes v. Stewart (1988) 488 U.S. 1, 3, 109 S. Ct. 202, 102 L. Ed. 2d 1] . Further, an original prevailing party who later defends a consent decree against collateral attack in a separate action is eligible for a fees award under § 1988 [San Francisco NAACP v. San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist. (9th Cir. 2002) 284 F.3d 1163, 1166-1168] . Moreover, a plaintiff who succeeds inobtaining a preliminary injunction can be deemed a prevailing party for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1988, even though the plaintiff did not recover other relief sought in the lawsuit [Watson v. County of Riverside (9th Cir. 2002) 300 F.3d 1092, 1095-1096] .

A plaintiff who obtains a preliminary injunction but is denied a permanent injunction after a dispositive hearing on the merits is not entitled to attorney's fees as a prevailing party. A final decision on the merits denying permanent injunctive relief ordinarily determines who prevails in the action for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b) [Sole v. Wyner (2007) 551 U.S. 74, 127 S. Ct. 2188, 2193-2197, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1069, 1076-1079] .

The prevailing plaintiff should ordinarily recover attorney's fees unless special circumstances render such an award unjust [Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 429 ; see Kilgour v. City of Pasadena (9th Cir. 1995) 53 F.3d 1007-1012 (trial court finding of "special circumstances" justifying denial of attorney's fees was not supported when evidence was conflicting as to whether matter would have been settled in as timely a fashion had plaintiff not filed suit)]. The fact that the case was resolved on independent state grounds is not a special circumstance justifying denial of attorney's fees under § 1988. A fee is appropriate if the plaintiff prevails on a state law claim based on a common nucleus of operative facts with a substantial federal claim [Hewitt v. Joyner (9th Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d 1561, 1571-1572 , cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1073 (1992)] .

For purposes of awarding attorney's fees in actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, the term "prevailing party" may include labor unions, corporations, nonprofit organizations, and Indian tribes [see Native Village of Venetie IRA Council v. Alaska (9th Cir. 1998) 155 F.3d 1150, 1152 n.1].

[ii] Defendant

A prevailing defendant in a civil rights action may recover attorney's fees only if the suit was vexatious, frivolous, or brought to harass or embarrass the defendant [Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 429 ; Herb Hallman Chevrolet v. Nash-Holmes (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 636, 645 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 870 ; Bemis v. Edwards (9th Cir. 1995) 45 F.3d 1369, 1375 ; Benigni v. Hemet (9th Cir. 1989) 879 F.2d 473, 480 ; Gill v. Hughes (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1312-1313, 278 Cal. Rptr. 306] . An action is not frivolous if the plaintiff survives dismissal motions and a motion for directed verdict. On the other hand, the fact that the case does not reach the jury does not necessarily mean that it was frivolous [see Brooks v. Cook (9th Cir. 1991) 938 F.2d 1048, 1054-1055] . Furthermore, the fact that a trier of fact does not believe the plaintiff's version of the facts is insufficient reason to consider a case frivolous [Brooks v. Cook (9th Cir. 1991) 938 F.2d 1048, 1055] .

Massive fee awards against plaintiffs who continue to trial are contrary to Congress's goal of promoting vigorous prosecution of civil rights violations [Sanchez v. City of Santa Ana (9th Cir. 1990) 936 F.2d 1027, 1041 , cert. denied, 502 U.S. 957] .

[c] Amount of Award

[i] Determination of Lodestar

After it determines that the plaintiff is the prevailing party, the trial court must make a determination of what fee is reasonable [see Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 429-430]. The initial estimate of a reasonable attorney's fee is properly calculated by multiplying the number of hours reasonably expended on the litigation times a reasonable hourly rate [Blum v. Stenson (1984) 465 U.S. 886, 888, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 ; Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 433]. The product of the multiplication of the hours reasonably expended times a reasonable hourly rate is frequently referred to as the "lodestar figure."

If the plaintiff fails to prevail on a claim that is distinct in all respects from a successful claim, the hours spent on the unsuccessful claim should be excluded from the calculation of the lodestar figure. Further, the court may exclude hours that were not reasonably expended or that were not properly documented [Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 433-434, 440].

Attorney's fees are calculated according to the prevailing market rates in the relevant community [Blum v. Stenson (1984) 465 U.S. 886, 895, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 (no distinction made between private and nonprofit counsel)]. The burden is on the fee applicant to produce satisfactory evidence that the requested rate is in line with that prevailing in the community for similar services by lawyers of reasonably comparative skill, experience, and reputation [Blum v. Stenson (1984) 465 U.S. 886, 895 n.11, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891] . Once the applicant has met this burden, the resulting fee is presumed to be reasonable [Blum v. Stenson (1984) 465 U.S. 886, 897, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Consider Contingency Fee Arrangement. An attorney might consider entering into a contingency fee retainer agreement that allows him or her to obtain a percentage of the settlement/judgment in addition to attorneys' fees awarded. However, there are ethical considerations. The risk of pursuing a § 1983 action may warrant this kind of agreement (especially in Prison Litigation Reform Act cases) [see [g], below]. In general, retainer agreements should provide for the attorney to receive a percentage of the ultimate settlement/judgment, or court awarded fees, whichever is greater. By John H. Scott

PRACTICE TIP:

If Possible, Negotiate Attorneys' Fees Independent of Damages Claim. For ethical reasons, an attorney should not negotiate his or her attorney fee first. This creates an ethical dilemma as there is the risk that an attorney will be "bought off" at the expense of his or her client. The better approach is to first negotiate a settlement for your client with an understanding that attorneys' fees will be resolved pursuant to a fee petition or subsequent negotiations. Often such agreements will include a "high-low" provision that sets both a ceiling and a floor for a subsequent award of attorneys' fees. By John H. Scott

[ii] Adjustment of Lodestar

Once the lodestar fee has been determined, the amount may be increased or decreased on the basis of certain factors in the case that are not already reflected in the lodestar [Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 434].

The most critical factor in determining the reasonableness of a fee award is the degree of success obtained [Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 436]. If the plaintiff achieves only limited success, the lodestar figure should be reduced, unless the limited success is already reflected in the lodestar by the omission of time spent on unsuccessful claims [see Farrar v. Hobby (1992) 506 U.S. 103, 114-116, 113 S. Ct. 566, 121 L. Ed. 2d 494 ; Corder v. Gates (9th Cir. 1991) 947 F. 2d 374, 378 ; see also Thompson v. Gomez (9th Cir. 1995) 45 F.3d 1365, 1367-1368 (reduction of award for fees incurred in fee litigation proper to extent fee litigation is unsuccessful)]. Conversely, a successful result is reflected in the right to fees as prevailing party, and does not justify a further increase over the lodestar, even if the court determines that the litigation benefited a large class of needy people [Blum v. Stenson (1984) 465 U.S. 886, 900, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891] .

If recovery of monetary damages is the purpose of the litigation, the court is required to give primary consideration to the amount of damages awarded as compared to the amount sought. If the disparity is great, the court may award low fees or no fees at all. If a plaintiff recovers only nominal damages because of the failure to prove an essential element of the claim for monetary relief, the only reasonable fee is usually no fee at all [Farrar v. Hobby (1992) 506 U.S. 103, 114-116, 113 S. Ct. 566, 121 L. Ed. 2d 494 ; see Romberg v. Nichols (9th Cir. 1995) 48 F.3d 453, 455 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 943 (judgment awarding plaintiffs nominal damages of one dollar, but failing to produce any other tangible result for plaintiffs, was insufficient to support award of attorney's fees)].

If the plaintiff prevails against some but not all defendants sued on claims arising from a common core of facts, it is within the discretion of the court to reduce the lodestar to reflect limited success [see Corder v. Gates (9th Cir. 1992) 947 F.2d 374, 378-380] . However, no reduction is required if the court determines that the full lodestar amount is a reasonable fee under the circumstances [see Rivera v. City of Riverside (9th Cir. 1985) 763 F.2d 1580, 1582 , aff'd, 477 U.S. 561, 106 S. Ct. 2686, 91 L. Ed. 2d 466 (1986)] .

An upward multiplier may be appropriate to reflect the risk inherent in the contingent nature of the fee. Enhancing a fee award for contingent risk is permissible if two prerequisites are met. First, the plaintiff must establish that without an adjustment for risk, he or she would have faced substantial difficulties in finding counsel in the local or other relevant market. Second, any enhancement for contingency must reflect the difference in market treatment of contingent fee cases as a class, rather than the riskiness of any particular case [Bernardi v. Yeutter (9th Cir. 1991) 951 F.2d 971, 975 ; see Pennsylvania v. Delaware Valley Citizens' Council for Clean Air (1987) 483 U.S. 711, 730-731, 107 S. Ct. 3078, 97 L. Ed. 2d 585 (plurality opinion approving one-third increase); Fadhl v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 649, 650 (2.0 multiplier in San Francisco market); Bouman v. Block (9th Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d 1211, 1236 , cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1005 (remand for consideration of Los Angeles market)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Availability of Multiplier. Since 1992 it has become virtually impossible to get a multiplier as a prevailing party in a § 1983 case [see City of Burlington v. Dague (1992) 505 U.S. 557, 112 S. Ct. 2638, 120 L. Ed. 2d 449] . On the other hand, it is still possible to obtain a multiplier in state court on a Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) claim [see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.20] or a claim for fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. However, this is becoming increasingly difficult [see, e.g., Flannery v. Prentice (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 572, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 809, 28 P.3d 860] . By John H. Scott

An increase based on the novelty and difficulty of the questions presented is inappropriate because this factor should be reflected in the amount of hours included in the lodestar calculation. Similarly, a high quality of representation should be reflected by a high hourly rate, and does not justify a further increase, except, perhaps, in a rare, exceptional case [Blum v. Stenson (1984) 465 U.S. 886, 898-899, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891] .

[iii] Trial Court's Findings

The trial court must provide a concise but clear explanation of its reasons for the amount of an attorney's fee award. If it has made an adjustment of the lodestar figure, the court should make clear that it has considered the relationship between the amount of the fee awarded and the results obtained [Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 437 ; see Gates v. Deukmejian (9th Cir. 1992) 987 F.2d 1392, 1398] .

In the case of a voluminous fee application, however, the court is not required to set forth an hour-by-hour analysis [Gates v. Deukmejian (9th Cir. 1992) 987 F.2d 1392, 1399] .

[d] Apportionment Among Defendants

If a plaintiff prevails against multiple defendants, the attorney's fees awarded may be apportioned among the defendants under certain circumstances. Apportionment is required if it is possible to make a reasonable allocation of the attorney time that was expended in pursuing each defendant [see Woods v. Graphic Communications (9th Cir. 1991) 925 F.2d 1195, 1206 ; Sable Communications of California v. Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. (9th Cir. 1989) 890 F.2d 184, 194] .

Apportionment based on the respective amount of damages awarded against each defendant is not appropriate [Corder v. Gates (9th Cir. 1991) 947 F.2d 374, 383] .

[e] Effect of Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

A court may not award attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 when it lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the underlying civil rights claim. Furthermore, when a civil rights action under § 1983 is dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the defendant is not deemed to have prevailed on the merits and is therefore not a "prevailing party" within the meaning of § 1988 [Branson v. Nott (9th Cir. 1995) 62 F.3d 287, 292-293 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1009 ; see [b], above, for discussion of "prevailing party"].

[f] Effect of Settlement Offer

42 U.S.C. § 1988 does not embody a general rule prohibiting settlements conditioned on the waiver of attorney's fees. However, § 1988 might prohibit fee waivers in three specific situations [Evans v. Jeff D. (1986) 475 U.S. 717, 739-741, 106 S. Ct. 1531, 89 L. Ed. 2d 747 ; Willard v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1986) 803 F.2d 526, 527 ; Bernhardt v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 862, 865-866] :

- Section 1988 might bar a governmental unit from implementing a statute, policy or practice precluding the payment of attorney's fees in settlements of civil rights cases.

- A district court might be required to disapprove a fee waiver that was part of a vindictive effort to deter attorneys from representing plaintiffs in civil rights suits.

- An action might lie if it were shown that fee waivers have had the effect, in the aggregate and in the long run, of shrinking the pool of lawyers willing to represent plaintiffs in civil cases, thereby constricting the effective access to the judicial process for persons with civil rights grievances which § 1988 was intended to provide.

Under Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 68, a defendant may offer to allow judgment to be taken against him or her, with costs then accrued. If the offer is refused and the plaintiff subsequently fails to obtain a judgment more favorable than the offer, the plaintiff must pay the costs incurred by the defendant after the making of the offer [Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 68].

The United States Supreme Court has held that attorney's fees are included within the term "costs," as used in Rule 68 [Marek v. Chesny (1985) 473 U.S. 1, 9-10, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1] . Therefore, if a defendant makes a Rule 68 settlement offer and does not specify that attorney's fees are included in the amount of the offer, the plaintiff may accept the offer and then seek to recover attorney's fees by a subsequent motion [see Marek v. Chesny (1985) 473 U.S. 1, 6-7, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1 ; Erdman v. Cochise County, Arizona (9th Cir. 1991) 926 F.2d 877, 879-881] .

In a case when the specific offer accepted by plaintiff provides that the plaintiff is entitled to "costs now accrued and reasonable attorney fees as determined by the court," the plaintiff is not precluded from recovering attorney's fees subsequently incurred in litigating the application for attorney's fees. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that such language in a settlement offer does not clearly and unambiguously cut off the plaintiff's right under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 to recover attorney's fees later incurred in litigating the attorney's fee award [see Holland v. Roeser (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 501, 503-504 ; see also Erdman v. Cochise County, Arizona (9th Cir. 1991) 926 F.2d 877, 880 (waiver or limitation of right to attorney's fees under § 1988 in connection with settlement must be clear and unambiguous)].

If the plaintiff rejects a Rule 68 settlement offer and then fails to obtain a judgment more favorable than the offer, the plaintiff will not be able to recover attorney's fees for work after the offer, and will have to pay the defendant's costs accrued subsequent to the offer [Marek v. Chesny (1985) 473 U.S. 1, 5-12, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1] . However, the plaintiff, in that case, is not required to pay the defendant's attorney's fees accrued after the offer, unless the plaintiff's case is shown to be frivolous or groundless [see Crossman v. Marcoccio (1st Cir. 1986) 806 F.2d 329, 333-334 , cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1029 (1987)] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Rule 68 Offers. The general rule is that a Rule 68 offer that includes "costs" also includes attorneys' fees. When such an offer is made, and rejected, it is good practice to notify your opponent in writing that the offer was rejected, in part, because the attorneys' fees and costs (may have) equaled or exceeded the amount of the offer. In those situations a subsequent verdict or judgment that is less than the Rule 68 offer should not prevent your ability to claim attorneys' fees as a prevailing party. It is also very important that the plaintiff fully understand the significance and consequences of rejecting any Rule 68 offer. Thus, this should be in writing. By John H. Scott

[g] Effect of Prison Litigation Reform Act

The Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA), when it applies, imposes significant limits on the recovery of attorneys' fees in cases brought by prisoners. Under the PLRA, attorneys' fees may not be awarded under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 unless the amount of the fee is proportionately related to the court ordered relief, or the fee was directly and reasonably incurred in enforcing the relief [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(d)(1)]. In addition, the PLRA caps the hourly rates recoverable by attorneys [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(d)(3)]. For further discussion of the PLRA, including its restrictions on recovering attorneys' fees, see Chapter 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights, § 114.28[6].

[h] Attorney's Collection of Fees

42 U.S.C. § 1988 vests the right to seek attorney's fees in the prevailing party, not the prevailing party's attorney. Attorneys therefore lack standing to pursue their fees [Evans v. Jeff D. (1986) 475 U.S. 717, 730-732, 106 S. Ct. 1531, 89 L. Ed. 2d 747 ; see Venegas v. Mitchell (1990) 495 U.S. 82, 88, 110 S. Ct. 1679, 109 L. Ed. 2d 74 ; Pony v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2006) 433 F.3d 1138, 1142 ; Churchill Vill., L.L.C. v. GE (9th Cir. 2004) 361 F.3d 566, 579 ; United States ex rel. Virani v. Jerry M. Lewis Truck Parts & Equip., Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 89 F.3d 574, 577 ;

Willard v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1986) 803 F.2d 526, 527] . Once the prevailing party exercises the right to receive fees, the attorney's right to collect them vests, and the attorney may then pursue them on his or her own. However, unless and until the party exercises this power, the attorney has no right to collect fees from the non-prevailing party, and the non-prevailing party has no duty to pay them [Pony v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2006) 433 F.3d 1138, 1142 ; United States ex rel. Virani v. Jerry M. Lewis Truck Parts & Equip., Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 89 F.3d 574, 577] .

A plaintiff bringing suit under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 cannot assign the right to seek attorney's fees to his or her attorney. A putative assignment of the right to attorney's fees to an attorney is invalid because the right to seek attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 is a substantive cause of action that cannot be transferred contractually [Pony v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2006) 433 F.3d 1138, 1142-1145] .

§ 113.34 Decisions

[1] Equal Rights Under Law: 42 U.S.C. § 1981

Law school's use of race in its admission policy did not violate Equal Protection Clause of federal Constitution or Title VI or 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981 because use of race was justified by compelling state interest in student body diversity, and admissions program was narrowly tailored because Law School engages in highly individualized, holistic review of each applicant's file, giving serious consideration to all ways an applicant might contribute to diverse educational environment. Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 123 S. Ct. 2325, 2338-2347, 156 L. Ed. 2d 304

University's use of race in its freshman admissions policy was not narrowly tailored to achieve asserted compelling interest in diversity, and violated Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment as well as Title VI and 42 U.S.C. § 1981. Gratz v. Bollinger (2003) 539 U.S. 244, 123 S. Ct. 2411, 2427-2431, 156 L. Ed. 2d 257

When 42 U.S.C. § 1981 is violated by state actor, action provided by 42 U.S.C. § 1983 provides exclusive federal damages remedy. Jett v. Dallas Ind. School Dist. (1989) 491 U.S. 701, 735, 109 S. Ct. 2702, 105 L. Ed. 2d 598 (plurality opinion)

State statute of limitations governing personal injury actions is applicable to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1981. Goodman v. Lukens Steel Co. (1987) 482 U.S. 656, 660-662, 107 S. Ct. 2617, 96 L. Ed. 2d 572

42 U.S.C. § 1981 may be invoked in cases of discrimination against identifiable classes of persons who are treated differently solely because of their ancestry or ethnic characteristics. Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 613, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582

Discriminatory intent required to support claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1981. General Building Contractors Ass'n v. Pennsylvania (1982) 458 U.S. 375, 391, 102 S. Ct. 3141, 73 L. Ed. 2d 835

42 U.S.C. § 1981 prohibits discrimination in making or enforcement of contracts against, or in favor of, any race. McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 295-296, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493

42 U.S.C. § 1981 reaches private conduct, and prohibits racial discrimination in admissions policies of private schools. Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 167-175, 96 S. Ct. 2586, 49 L. Ed. 2d 415

42 U.S.C. § 1981 affords federal remedy against discrimination on basis of race in private employment. Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 459-460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295

Protections of 42 U.S.C. § 1981 extend to aliens. Graham v. Richardson (1971) 403 U.S. 365, 377-378, 91 S. Ct. 1848, 29 L. Ed. 2d 534

District court properly dismissed action under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 alleging employment discrimination on basis of race against state employment department, because § 1981 does not contain cause of action against states or arms of states. Pittman v. Oregon (9th Cir. 2007) 509 F.3d 1065, 1067-1074

Hawaiian private, non-profit K-12 schools that received no federal funds did not violate 42 U.S.C. § 1981 by preferring Native Hawaiians in its admissions policy, where non-Hawaiian applicant established prima facie case by showing that schools consider applicants' Hawaiian ancestry or lack thereof in making admissions decisions, schools specified their remedial admissions policy as non-discriminatory rationale for their decisions, and plaintiff could not show that rationale was pretextual because manifest imbalance existed in K-12 educational arena in Hawaii with Native Hawaiian falling at bottom of spectrum in almost all areas of educational progress and success and schools advanced curriculum specially tailored to students of Native Hawaiian descent, admissions policy did not unnecessarily trample rights of students with no Hawaiian ancestry or create absolute bar to their advancement, and admissions policy did no more than necessary to correct manifest imbalance suffered by students of Native Hawaiian ancestry. Doe v. Kamehameha Schools/Bernice Pauahi Bishop Estate (9th Cir. 2006) 470 F.3d 827, 835-849

Hotel's placing of smaller bar mitzvah event in main ballroom, instead of African-American organization's annual fashion show and luncheon, which had been held in main ballroom for previous three years, and placing of fashion show and luncheon in much smaller ballroom, showed prima facie case of discriminatory treatment in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1981. Plaintiff was member of protected class, plaintiff attempted to contract with defendant for use of main ballroom for fashion show, plaintiff was denied right to contract for those services, and desired services were made available to similarly situated group of different protected class. Although hotel articulated legitimate, nondiscriminatory business reasons for it decision, plaintiff presented genuine issue of fact that hotel's reasons were pretext for discrimination. Lindsey v. SLT Los Angeles, LLC (9th Cir. 2006) 447 F.3d 1138, 1144-1153

Allegation by corporation owned entirely by Sikh shareholders that its contract with defendant was terminated due to effects of racial discrimination gave it standing under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 even though not all of its drivers were Sikhs, when even non-Sikh drivers testified that they were treated poorly by defendant's employee based on their association with what employee saw as Sikh company. Further, jury verdict awarding $1.00 in nominal damages and punitive damages was proper when jury found that defendant had discriminated against corporation because of race, it caused $50,000 loss by breaking its contract with corporation, and it deserved to be punished for its racial discrimination to extent of $5 million. Although corporation was terminated by defendant's manager who did not know that corporation's principals and most of its drivers were Sikhs and based termination on safety violations, jury could have concluded that routine or debatable safety violations were flagged because of racial animus. Bains LLC v. ARCO Prods. Co. (9th Cir. 2005) 405 F.3d 764, 770-772

Trial court erred in dismissing action under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 on ground that § 1981 does not apply to Commonwealth of Northern Marianna Islands' immigration laws, when immigration authority did not necessarily deal with rights and duties of persons in jurisdiction after entry had taken place, and covenant by which Commonwealth negotiated permanent political union with United States provided that, with a few exceptions, all laws in existence at time of covenant's passage applied and Commonwealth agreed to be bound by dictates of Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendments and statutes enforcing them. However, temporary worker's Fourteenth Amendment equal protection challenge to Commonwealth's nonresident worker's legislation failed under rational basis review or intermediate scrutiny because he did not carry his burden to show that legislation was not closely related to Commonwealth's important government goals, and due process challenge failed because there is no fundamental right to pursue work. Sagana v. Tenorio (9th Cir. 2004) 384 F.3d 731, 740-743

Complaint by private mining company alleging that state officials' policy against use in state construction projects of materials mined from area as to which Native American tribes passed resolutions against mining because of area's religious, cultural, and historical significance to these groups failed to state claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1981. Complaint did not allege that company had imputed racial identity and did not explain how company suffered from racial discrimination. Cholla Ready Mix, Inc. v. Civish (9th Cir. 2004) 382 F.3d 969, 977-978

Minority-owned technology services contractor certified by United States Small Business Administration as firm owned and operated by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals, eligible to receive federal contracts under SBA's business development program possessed constitutional standing because it alleged concrete and particularized harm traceable to defendant and if successful in its claims, its injury would be redressed by damage award; because it had acquired imputed racial identity since to receive governmental benefits, corporation was required to be certified as corporation with racial identity; and because corporate plaintiff alleged direct racial discrimination based on its status as SBA-certified minority-owned business and race of its shareholders, which easily brought corporation within zone of interest protected by 42 U.S.C. § 1981. Thinket Ink Information Resources, Inc. v. Sun Microsystems, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 368 F.3d 1053, 1057-1060

Trial court properly dismissed complaint by African-American professional basketball player, brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1981, based on punishment imposed on him after altercation with his coach, alleging that black basketball players are punished more frequently and severely than white players and have less favorable termination and compensation clauses in their player contracts; arbitration award annexed to complaint showed that punishment was motivated solely by player's misconduct. Sprewell v. Golden State Warriors (9th Cir. 2000) 231 F.3d 520, 528

Plaintiffs of Arabic descent failed to state claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 based on store's refusal to sell them Levi jeans, when store had race-neutral policy of refusing to sell Levis to dealers, plaintiffs were aware of that policy, and plaintiffs intentionally misrepresented themselves as ultimate consumers when they were in fact agents of dealers; plaintiffs attempted to enter into voidable contractual relationship, which is not cognizable under § 1981. Addisu v. Fred Meyer, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 198 F.3d 1130, 1137-1141

Plaintiff private school's allegation that defendant corporation terminated plaintiff's participation in federal student loan guarantee program because plaintiff primarily taught minority and inner-city students sufficiently stated claim of racial discrimination under 42 U.S.C. § 1981. Parks School of Business v. Symington (9th Cir. 1995) 51 F.3d 1480, 1487-1488

In California, 42 U.S.C. § 1981 actions were governed by one-year period of limitations of former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3). Fobbs v. Holy Cross Health System Corp. (9th Cir. 1994) 29 F.3d 1439, 1444 , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1127 (1995) . Note: Effective January 1, 2003, Code Civ. Proc. § 340 was amended and Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1 was added to provide that personal injury actions are now governed by a two-year statute of limitations

42 U.S.C. § 1981 supports action by white plaintiff discriminated against because he or she is in interracial marriage. Parr v. Woodmen of the World Life Ins. Co. (11th Cir. 1986) 791 F.2d 888, 890

Federal law governs when claim accrues under 42 U.S.C. § 1981. Chung v. Pomona Valley Community Hosp. (9th Cir. 1982) 667 F.2d 788, 791

42 U.S.C. § 1981 applies to discrimination against individuals of American Indian descent. Scott v. Eversole Mortuary (9th Cir. 1975) 522 F.2d 1110, 1112-1113

Unlicensed contractor was not precluded by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031, which bars unlicensed contractors from bringing suit to recover compensation for work requiring license, from pursuing nominal damages, emotional distress damages, and punitive damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 based on claims of racial discrimination in form of derogatory comments on jobsite and retaliation for complaining about comments, since claims were external to contract to provide cleanup services at construction project and since plaintiff alleged discrimination during functioning contractual relationship despite fact that he could not enforce compensation terms of contract; contractor's claims that he was not properly compensated as caucasian contractors were, however, is barred, since those claims directly implicated § 7031 proscription against recovery of compensation by unlicensed contractors. Holland v. Morse Diesel Internat., Inc. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1443, 1449-1453, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 239

[2] Property Rights of Citizens: 42 U.S.C. § 1982

42 U.S.C. § 1982 protects against actions that treat black property owners differently from white property owners, by actions that depreciate value of property owned by blacks in manner different from property owned by whites, or by actions that restrict access to homes owned by black owners, thereby hampering them in use of their property. City of Memphis v. Greene (1981) 451 U.S. 100, 122-123, 101 S. Ct. 1584, 67 L. Ed. 2d 769

42 U.S.C. § 1982 prohibits discrimination on basis of race in sale or rental of property, including discrimination by private owners as well as by public authorities. Jones v. Alfred H. Mayer Co. (1968) 392 U.S. 409, 421, 88 S. Ct. 2186, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1189

Action under 42 U.S.C. § 1982 may be brought in state court. Sullivan v. Little Hunting Park (1969) 396 U.S. 229, 239-240, 90 S. Ct. 400, 24 L. Ed. 2d 386

42 U.S.C. § 1982 supported action for compensatory damages, plus attorney's fees and costs, for refusal to rent property to African-American men. Johnson v. Hale (9th Cir. 1994) 13 F.3d 1351, 1354

Damages for lost wages, emotional distress, and humiliation, as well as punitive damages, awarded in § 1982 action for refusal to rent office space to black man. Phiffer v. Proud Parrot Motor Hotel (9th Cir. 1980) 648 F.2d 548, 552-553

[3] Civil Action for Deprivation of Rights: 42 U.S.C. § 1983

[a] Elements of Cause of Action

Elements of cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 are (1) violation of rights protected by Constitution or created by federal statute, (2) caused, (3) by conduct of a "person," (4) acting under color of state law. Parratt v. Taylor (1981) 451 U.S. 527, 535, 101 S. Ct. 1908, 68 L. Ed. 2d 420 (overruled on other grounds in Daniels v. Williams (1986) 474 U.S. 327, 330-331, 106 S. Ct. 662, 88 L. Ed. 2d 662)

Indian tribe suing under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, attempting to assert communal fishing rights reserved to it as sovereign, by treaty it entered into with United States, is not person that could assert treaty-based fishing rights under § 1983. Tribe's treaty-based rights did not give rise to individual actions cognizable under § 1983, because individual members of tribe sought to vindicate communal, rather than individual rights. Skokomish Indian Tribe v. United States (9th Cir. 2005) 401 F.3d 979, 987-988

Complaint by private mining company alleging that state officials' policy against use in state construction projects of materials mined from area as to which Native American tribes passed resolutions against mining because of area's religious, cultural, and historical significance to these groups failed to state claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Company treated its § 1983 claim as independent, substantive claim and did not state viable claim that defendants violated its federal rights. Cholla Ready Mix, Inc. v. Civish (9th Cir. 2004) 382 F.3d 969, 978

Claimants who were denied SSDI and SSI failed to state claim against state defendants under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, because assuming defendants acted under color of state law, which court doubted, claimants failed to allege deprivation of procedural due process. Claimants have constitutionally protected property interest in receiving disability benefits, but failed to make showing they were denied adequate procedural protections because they have not been deprived of procedural due process until they exhaust their administrative remedies; only then could court determine whether they were deprived of adequate process. Kildare v. Saenz (9th Cir. 2003) 325 F.3d 1078, 1085-1086

To recover under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, plaintiff must be "a citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof;" Mexican citizen, who was in Mexico at time of events in question, could not bring § 1983 action. Martinez v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1373, 1382

In action by pretrial detainee for violation of civil rights based on arrest on probable cause for rape and later release, trial court properly granted summary judgment to defendants, when liberty interest at stake, i.e., alleged constitutional right to speedy confirmation of officers' probable cause determination by use of laboratory testing, was not fundamental right objectively deeply rooted in history and tradition, so that individual sheriff's deputies did not violate any of plaintiff's constitutional rights, and county, its policies, customs, and practices regarding DNA testing did not deprive plaintiff of constitutional right or amount to deliberate indifference of constitutional right in view of undisputed testing backlog and county's reasonable priorities for DNA testing. Jimenez v. County of Los Angeles (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 133, 141-143, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 553

Homeowners failed to allege cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on city's failure to provide notice of appeal rights in notice advising homeowners that backyard playhouse was nonconforming structure, when city rescinded notice of violation, revamped its procedure for issuing orders, and provided extensive appeal and hearing process; and when homeowners did not show city threatened to remove playhouse in future or would do so without proper notice, did not produce sufficient evidence to show they suffered damages, and did not show city had official policy depriving homeowners of due process notice. Homeowners were not entitled to abstract trial on constitutionality of past actions of some city employees that caused no damage. Levy v. City of Santa Monica (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1252, 1260, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 507

[b] Color of Law

Statewide association incorporated to regulate interscholastic athletic competition among public and private secondary schools could be regarded as engaging in state action in enforcing rule against member school, when association included most public schools located within the state and acted through their representatives, drew its officers from public schools, was largely funded by their dues and income received in their stead, and historically was seen to regulate in lieu of state board of education's exercise of its own authority; and when degree of entwinement with association down from state board of education and up from member public schools supported conclusion that ostensibly private organization ought to be charged with public character and judged by constitutional standards. Brentwood Academy v. Tennessee Secondary School Athletic Ass'n (2001) 531 U.S. 288, 294-305, 121 S. Ct. 924, 148 L. Ed. 2d 807

Physician who contracts with state to provide medical services to prison acts under color of state law when treating inmates; fact that physician is independent contractor does not alter analysis; physician's function within state system, not precise terms of employment, determines whether his or her actions can fairly be attributed to state. West v. Atkins (1988) 487 U.S. 42, 55-57, 108 S. Ct. 2250, 101 L. Ed. 2d 40

"Color of law" requirement of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 is equivalent to "state action" requirement of U.S. Const., amend. XIV. Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co. (1982) 457 U.S. 922, 928-929, 102 S. Ct. 2744, 73 L. Ed. 2d 482

Receipt of public funds alone is generally not sufficient state involvement to meet color of law requirement. Rendell-Baker v. Kohn (1982) 457 U.S. 830, 840, 102 S. Ct. 2764, 73 L. Ed. 2d 418

State funding of private school did not make school's decisions to discharge employee actions under color of law. Polk County v. Dodson (1981) 454 U.S. 312, 321-322, 102 S. Ct. 445, 70 L. Ed. 2d 509

Private parties who conspire with judge to deprive another of constitutional rights act under color of state law within meaning of 42 U.S.C. § 1983, notwithstanding that judge would be immune from liability. Dennis v. Sparks (1980) 449 U.S. 24, 27-32, 101 S. Ct. 183, 66 L. Ed. 2d 185

Challenged activity may be under color of law if it is "entwined with government policies" or when government is "entwined in [its] management or control." Evans v. Newton (1966) 382 U.S. 296, 299, 301, 86 S. Ct. 486, 15 L. Ed. 2d 373

In § 1983 action by non-Indian challenging roadblock set up and maintained by tribal officers on state highway crossing reservation, district court erred in dismissing claims based on tribal immunity, where officers were acting under color of state law once they departed from, or went beyond, inquiry to establish plaintiff was not Indian, and where material issues of fact existed as to whether they violated plaintiff's constitutional rights when they stopped and questioned him at roadblock. Bressi v. Ford (9th Cir. 2009) 575 F.3d 891, 895-898

In action by members of motorcycle gang who were asked to either leave annual festival or remove vests with gang insignia by city police officer providing security services to festival, festival association was not state actor for purposes of liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, where running festivals is not traditional municipal function; where city required permit, showing city retained control of park, provided security services, and billed festival for its security services; and where there was no showing that security activity was dominant or even major purpose of festival association and no indication city played dominant role in controlling actions of organization or content of festival. Villegas v. Gilroy Garlic Festival Ass'n (9th Cir. 2008) 541 F.3d 950, 955-956

Plaintiff's allegation that company that had obtained permit to use public space for event and its employees acted in concert with public defendants was insufficient to establish joint action to allege that private defendants acted under color of state law by removing political activist from space in violation of her First Amendment rights, where there was no evidence private defendants did anything more than summon police, and merely complaining to police did not convert private party into state actor. Dietrich v. John Ascuaga's Nugget (9th Cir. 2008) 548 F.3d 892, 899-900

Police officer's mistake while intending to deploy Taser device holstered near her firearm, instead drawing and firing her service weapon, killing arrestee sitting handcuffed in back of patrol car who was yelling and kicking back window of patrol car, was seizure within meaning of Fourth Amendment, and mistake was governed by Fourth Amendment reasonableness analysis, for which appellate court remanded to district court. Torres v. City of Madera (9th Cir. 2008) 524 F.3d 1053, 1055-1057

In action by estate of individual restrained by police based on his death while in police custody, for use of excessive force in violation of his Fourth Amendment rights, district court properly granted summary judgment to officers and county, where relying on undisputed facts that individual was trespassing and acting aggressively and refused to drop pen in his hand that was aimed at officers, and officers never drew their weapons or used pepper spray on him, district court properly concluded that use of force was proportionate and reasonable; and where, because officers did not use excessive force in violation of Fourth Amendment, estate's § 1983 claims against county also failed. Gregory v. County of Maui (9th Cir. 2008) 523 F.3d 1103, 1106-1109

County jail commander involved in automobile accident with plaintiff while off duty acted under color of state law when he invoked his law enforcement status to keep others from interfering with his assault on plaintiff after accident, when, although he did not have authority of peace or police officer, he pretended to act in performance of his official duties and his actions had purpose and effect of discouraging bystanders from interfering; and when he invoked his governmental status by saying he was a "cop" and telling bystanders to stay back. Anderson v. Warner (9th Cir. 2006) 451 F.3d 1063, 1067-1070

Attorney hired to represent Los Angeles county in civil rights suit acted under color of law in accessing civil rights plaintiff's juvenile court file without notifying him and without obtaining authorization from juvenile court and using confidential records in file to cross-examine him at his deposition in underlying civil rights action, because attorney was retained to represent state entities and their employees in litigation, and she inspected file in course of representation, and used her status to gain access to file; her role was analogous to state prosecutor rather than public defender, because she acted on behalf of state rather than as its adversary. Gonzalez v. Spencer (9th Cir. 2003) 336 F.3d 832, 834

Sister of man arrested for robbery on her instigation and her son, who translated for his mother and other witnesses to police officer who arrested his uncle, were not state actors, when single request to police, without more, was not sufficient to establish claim against mother or son as private actors, there was no evidence officer knew man was innocent of robbery, and finding of concerted action could not be found on record in this case. Peng v. Hu (9th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 970, 980

Lobbying efforts by privately owned and operated energy corporation were not attributable to state of Montana or any other government entity so as to constitute action under color of law, when company's efforts to influence passage of legislation by lobbying state legislators bore no characteristics rendering company's actions fairly attributable to state because company, in successfully lobbying for deregulation of state power industry, influenced state, rather than reverse, and when company's lobbying was an exercise of its lawful First Amendment right to petition government, which was countervailing reason against attributing company's activity to state. Single Moms, Inc. v. Montana Power Company (9th Cir. 2003) 331 F.3d 743, 746-749

State-appointed guardian ad litem in child custody action did not act under color of state law for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1983, where guardian's two primary roles under statutory scheme as advocate for child's best interests and independent source of information for court regarding circumstances of dispute were not traditional or exclusive governmental function, so as to make public function test inapplicable; where, although guardian is appointed, compensated, subject to qualification, and regulated by state, clearly indicated intended benefits flow directly to child in whose interests the guardian must act and guardian acts independently in providing information to court, so joint action test was not satisfied; where although guardian's investigatory and reporting function was performed pursuant to law, role was independent of court edict or oversight and guardian, although reporter of facts, functioned as witness so compulsion test not satisfied; and where guardian was appointed by state actor, paid by state, and subject to regulation by state law, when guardian reports to court, she reported as independent investigator and when guardian acted as advocate of child, she occupied role distinct from court before which she advocated, so nexus test did not apply. Kirtley v. Rainey (9th Cir. 2003) 326 F.3d 1088, 1092-1095

Administrative head of county public defender's office, acting solely as agency's administrative head, responsible for allocating office's finite resources, was state actor in promulgating alleged policy subjecting each client to polygraph test and allocating resources of office according to result of that test and in policy of assigning least-experienced attorneys to capital cases without providing any training. Miranda v. Clark County (9th Cir. 2003) 319 F.3d 465, 469-471 (en banc)

Daughter who visited father in jail to try to get him to confess to 20-year-old murder did not act under color of state law, when there was no evidence of conspiracy or joint action between daughter and prosecutor, since father offered no evidence that daughter made repeated requests or solicited prosecutor's input on types of questions she should ask her father, and it was undisputed that jailhouse visit was daughter's idea, not state-initiated effort to use her to extract her father's confession. Although interview and its subsequent use against father at trial violated Sixth Amendment rights, government did not sufficiently insinuate itself into daughter's jailhouse visit to transform her private actions into ones fairly attributable to state. Further, to extent father claimed his daughter was responsible for one prosecutor's facilitation of visit or trial prosecutor's use of his jailhouse silence against him at trial, he failed to show daughter proximately caused his injuries sustained as a result of actions of prosecutors. Franklin v. Fox (9th Cir. 2002) 312 F.3d 423, 444-445

Trial court properly dismissed 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action against reporter and newspaper for which he worked, based on coverage of objectionable search of plaintiff's ranch, when reporter did not perform any government function or engage in any joint action with humane society that was executing search warrant, so that reporter and newspaper were not state actors, but reporter was private spectator, photographing and videotaping search independently and for his and newspaper's own purposes. Brunette v. Humane Society of Ventura County (9th Cir. 2002) 294 F.3d 1205, 1210-1214

Private entity's regulation of speech on land leased from municipality was action under color of state law supporting action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, when leased land functioned as freely accessible public forum through which people pass on their way to shows, concerts, games, and restaurants and is also gathering place for public events, and when municipality retained little, if any, power over private entity's speech policies. Lee v. Katz (9th Cir. 2001) 276 F.3d 550, 554-557

Police officer who threatened to sue citizen for defamation after citizen filed complaint against officer did not act under color of state law when officer's decision to file defamation action was not subject to control of police department for which he worked, pursuing private litigation did not abuse his position or authority as police officer, and defamation suit was personal and would seek recovery of damages that officer would keep if successful, and when existence of state statute enabling police officers to sue citizens for defamation was not sufficient to make action under it state action. Gritchen v. Collier (9th Cir. 2001) 254 F.3d 807

Private psychiatrist who provides contract services to county in detention and examination of individuals as possible mental patients, and who signed orderdetaining plaintiff for evaluation, could be sued under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for action under color of state law under close nexus/joint action test, where psychiatrist and county through its employees have undertaken complex and deeply intertwined process of evaluating and detaining individuals believed to be mentally ill and danger to themselves or others, since there is significant consultation with and among various mental health workers, both county and private, and private group of which psychiatrist is part helps to develop and maintain mental health policies of county facility at which plaintiff was detained. Jensen v. Lane County (9th Cir. 2000) 222 F.3d 570

Private employer was not liable in Bivens action for violation of applicant's First Amendment rights for refusing to hire applicant because of applicant's refusal to provide social security number, when private employer was not engaging in governmental or state action. Sutton v. St. Joseph Providence Medical Center (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 826, 844

To state claim under § 1983, plaintiff must allege that defendant acted under color of state law to deprive plaintiff of right secured by federal Constitution or by federal law. Stone v. City of Prescott (9th Cir. 1999) 173 F.3d 1172, 1174 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 870

Private corporation that guaranteed student loans under federal program did not act under color of state law for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 in terminating plaintiff private school's participation in program, because state was not involved in decision to terminate plaintiff's participation; benefits of defendant's programs flowed to students and not to the state; defendant's function was not exclusive prerogative of state, because federal law allowed either state or private organization to guarantee loans; and state did not compel defendant's actions. Parks School of Business v. Symington (9th Cir. 1995) 51 F.3d 1480, 1486

Private towing companies are potentially liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for towing of automobiles. Soffer v. City of Costa Mesa (9th Cir. 1986) 798 F.2d 361, 364

Actions of court-appointed guardian do not constitute action under color of state law when guardian was not acting in concert with state or as its agent. Taylor v. First Wyoming Bank, N.A. (9th Cir. 1983) 707 F.2d 388, 389-390

One acting in concert with person acting under color of law may be held liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Briley v. State of Cal. (9th Cir. 1977) 564 F.2d 849, 858

One conspiring with person acting under color of law may be held liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Gillibeau v. City of Richmond (9th Cir. 1969) 417 F.2d 426, 430

Private citizens may be liable under § 1983 if they invoke or enforce constitutionally defective state laws. Smith v. United Trans. Union Local No. 81 (S.D. Cal. 1984) 594 F. Supp 96, 99

Prison officials' alleged orchestration of gang fight did not violate substantive due process rights of correctional officer injured in helping to quell fight under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, where there was no state action restraining him from acting on his own behalf. O'Dea v. Bunnell (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 214, 219-225, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 684

Mother failed to state claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for violation of minor son's right to substantive due process based on son's unlimited access to Internet at public library, when special relationship exception to general rule that state's failure to prevent harm inflicted by private actor does not give rise to cause of action under § 1983 did not apply since library did not exercise pervasive control over minors, much less restrain their freedom to act on their own behalf by allowing them to freely use library computers, and when danger creation exception did not apply, even if plaintiff's harm was foreseeable, since library did not affirmatively place minor in position of danger by allowing unsupervised use of computers linked to Internet; further, it was not policy of library to provide minors with obscene pornography. Kathleen R. v. City of Livermore (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 684, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 772

Meaning of "under color of state law" required by 42 U.S.C. § 1983 is misuse of power, possessed by virtue of state law and made possible only because wrongdoer is clothed with authority of state law. Lebbos v. State Bar (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 656, 664, 211 Cal. Rptr. 847

In action by parents alleging unconstitutional gender discrimination in school based on alleged peer-to-peer harassment, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 [20 U.S.C. § 1681(a)] did not preclude action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, where Congress did not intend Title IX to preclude § 1983 constitutional suits. Fitzgerald v. Barnstable School Committee (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 788, 172 L. Ed. 2d 582, 590-595

Rancher did not have Bivens claims against officials of Bureau of Land Management, because rancher had variety of administrative and judicial remedies to redress his injuries, and Supreme Court would not create new Bivens remedy to redress injuries collectively on theory of retaliation for exercising his property rights. Wilkie v. Robbins (2007) 551 U.S. 537, 127 S. Ct. 2588, 2597-2604, 168 L. Ed. 2d 389

District court properly dismissed Bivens action against United States Post Office postal inspectors, alleging criminal prosecution in violation of First Amendment for retaliation for plaintiff's criticism of postal service, on grounds that plaintiff failed to plead and show absence of probable cause for pressing underlying criminal charges. Although as general matter First Amendment prohibits government officials from subjecting individual to retaliatory actions, including criminal prosecutions, for speaking out, showing of no probable cause is element of claim of retaliatory prosecution under Bivens. Hartman v. Moore (2006) 547 U.S. 250, 126 S. Ct. 1695, 1702-1707, 164 L. Ed. 2d 441

Individual who had obtained state-law restraining order had no constitutionally protected property interest in having police enforce restraining order when they had probable cause to believe it had been violated. Thus, complaint under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 alleging town violated Due Process Clause because its police department had official policy or custom of failing to respond properly to complaints of restraining order violations and tolerated nonenforcement of restraining orders by its police officers, which resulted in murder of plaintiff's children by her estranged husband, and that town's actions were taken willfully, recklessly, or with such gross negligence as to indicate wanton disregard and deliberate indifference to plaintiff's rights, failed to state claim. Town of Castle Rock v. Gonzales (2005) 545 U.S. 748, 125 S. Ct. 2796, 2802-2810, 162 L. Ed. 2d 658

Although Telecommunications Act of 1996 [see 47 U.S.C. § 332(c)(7)] creates individually enforceable rights, Congress did not mean judicial remedy expressly authorized by § 332(c)(7) to coexist with alternative remedy available in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action, because Act adds no remedies to those available under § 1983 and limits relief in ways § 1983 does not. City of Rancho Palos Verdes v. Abrams (2005) 544 U.S. 113, 125 S. Ct. 1453, 1458-1462, 161 L. Ed. 2d 316

Summary judgment on claim for damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 in favor of stateuniversity, which undisputedly considered race of applicants to program to which African immigrant of Caucasian descent applied and from which he was rejected, was proper when government showed it would have rejected applicant regardless of his race, since there was no cognizable injury warranting relief under § 1983. Texas v. Lesage (1999) 528 U.S. 18, 120 S. Ct. 467, 145 L. Ed. 2d 347

Attorney failed to state 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim for violation of right to practice profession under Fourteenth Amendment, based on search of attorney while clienttestified before grand jury; although liberty component of Fourteenth Amendment's Due Process Clause includes some generalized due process right to choose one's field of private employment, right is subject to reasonable government regulation. *Conn v. For § 1983 case to be based on allegation of defamation, plaintiff must allege and prove that defendants deprived him or her of property or liberty interest. Paul v. Davis (1976) 424 U.S. 693, 709-711, 96 S. Ct. 1155, 47 L. Ed. 2d 405

Alleged coercion of confession that he sexually abused 3-year-old child during interrogation of 14-year-old boy at his school stated claim for violation of Fifth Amendment to support claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against police officer who obtained confession, even though statements were never used against plaintiff at trial, where statements were used against him in affidavit filed in support of information charging him with child molestation, pretrial arraignment and bail hearing, and pretrial evidentiary hearing to determine admissibility of his confession; and where prosecutor's separate decision to rely on statements did not serve, as matter of law, as superseding cause precluding police officer's liability, because police officer eliciting incriminating statements from criminal suspect could reasonably have foreseen that coerced confession would be used against suspect and would lead to suspect's detention. Stoot v. City of Everett (9th Cir. 2009) 582 F.3d 910, 922-927

In § 1983 action based on arrest and prosecution of police officers for allegedly planting gun on suspect, after jury verdict in favor of plaintiffs, trial court properly refused to grant defendants' motion for judgment as matter of law based on substantial evidence from which jury could have concluded officers were arrested without probable cause, violating their Fourth Amendment rights, where evidence produced by defendants did not compel conclusion that only conclusion reasonable jury could have drawn was that probable cause existed to charge officers with filing false report, committing perjury, and conspiring to do so; it was entirely within jury's prerogative to find more credible officers' version of facts surrounding arrest, and jury was entitled to disregard defendants' account of incident, which was fraught with unreasonable inferences, discrepancies, and material omissions. Harper v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1010, 1022-1024

Warrantless entry by state parole officer and county deputy sheriff into plaintiffs' home, which commenced when parole officer put his foot in door opening and, together with deputy, began pushing against door in attempt to open it, was unconstitutional and could not be justified as search for parolee in what might have been parolee's residence, where information deputies had about residence of parolee at moment they began entry did not give them probable cause to search residence for him because information suggesting parolee might have resided there was several years old, uncorroborated by available sources, and contradicted by two more recent pieces of information. However, deputies did not violate plaintiffs' Fourth Amendment rights by entering residence, where one deputy briefly entered residence and other deputy went to stand in doorway, only after they heard altercation and woman screaming inside residence, when there was objectively reasonable basis for concluding there was immediate need to protect persons inside home from serious harm. Deputy's protective sweep to look around for parolee also did not violate plaintiffs' Fourth Amendment rights, where at least one plaintiff consented to sweep and neither objected; however, deputy's opening of drawer as part of sweep violated Fourth Amendment rights by exceeding both consent given and limits of lawful protective sweep incident to in-house arrest. Cuevas v. De Roco (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 726, 731-735

42 U.S.C. § 233(a), providing that remedy against United States provided by Federal Tort Claims Act ("FTCA") for damage for personal injury, including death, resulting from performance of medical, surgical, dental, or related functions by any commissioned officer or employee of Public Health Service while acting within scope of office or employment, is exclusive of any other civil action or proceeding by reason of same subject matter against officer or employee whose act or omission gave rise to claim, did not establish Federal Tort Claims Act as exclusive remedy for constitutional violations committed by officers and employees of Public Health Service in failing to provide plaintiff's decedent adequate medical attention while in their custody, resulting in his death, and did not preclude Bivens cause of action against them, where § 233(a) did not expressly establish FTCA as substitute remedy for Bivens, and where no special factors present in instant action precluding Bivens relief. Castaneda v. United States (9th Cir. 2008) 546 F.3d 682, 687-701

In § 1983 action for violation of First and Fourth Amendment rights by man arrested for threatening police officers based on confrontation with two officers, district court erred in granting summary judgment to defendants based on causation issues arising from criminal complaint against him, where there was no probable cause for arrest to arrest him because he did not threaten officers with violence, where evidence supported finding of retaliatory animus in his arrest, and where invocation of work product privilege by prosecutor who issued criminal complaint rendered relevant evidence concerning the prosecutor's decision to prosecute unavailable so that no presumption of prosecutorial independence arose and man did not need to rebut it. Beck v. City of Upland (9th Cir. 2008) 527 F.3d 853, 862-870

Under special circumstances of case, right to due process of law prohibited state from denying prisoner reasonable post-conviction access to biological evidence for purpose of further DNA testing, where biological evidence was used to secure his conviction of kidnapping and sexual assault, DNA testing was to be conducted using methods unavailable at time of trial and far more precise than methods that were then available, and new methods were capable of conclusively determining whether prisoner was source of genetic material, testing could be conducted without cost or prejudice to state, and evidence was material to available forms of post-conviction relief. Prisoner's confession during parole proceedings did not necessarily trump materiality of physical evidence or right to obtain post-conviction access to evidence. Osborne v. District Attorney's Office (9th Cir. 2008) 521 F.3d 1118, 1128-1142

Because there was very little by way of legitimate government interest in ordering tow without notice to owner of inoperable car parked in parking lot in violation of valid planned non-operation certificate, rather than giving owner notice and opportunity to avoid cost and hassle of having to deal with towed vehicle, police officer violated owner's due process rights by ordering of towing of car without attempting to notify owner before government could tow and impound it. Clement v. City of Glendale (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1090, 1093-1096

Seventy-five minute detention at scene was unreasonably long and violated Fourth Amendment rights of plaintiffs detained for driving around middle school in truck displaying large, graphic photographs of first-term aborted fetuses on sides of truck with accompanying security vehicle, where, although brief detention to investigate possible Vehicle Code violations was warranted, neither Cal. Pen. Code § 626.8 nor search for other code provisions that might have been violated justified deputy sheriffs in detaining plaintiffs for 75 minutes while sheriffs tried to find some basis for charging them. Plaintiffs also raised genuine issue of material facts as to whether deputies violated their Fourth Amendment rights by improperly searching security vehicle, where there was conflicting evidence as to how many times deputies entered vehicle or whether they had consent and, absent consent, search was improper. Center for Bio-Ethical Reform, Inc. v. Los Angeles County Sheriff Dept. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 780, 795-798

Police failure to obtain or to attempt to obtain arrest warrant during twelve-hour standoff with plaintiff, after which plaintiff emerged and submitted to arrest, constituted cognizable violation of his civil rights under § 1983, where, although situation was not without danger, police had sufficient resources and time after probable cause was established to obtain arrest warrant. Fisher v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 2007) 509 F.3d 952, 958-968

In action on behalf of class of foreign nationals arrested and detained without being advised of their right to have consular officer notified as required by Article 36 of Vienna Convention on Consular Relations [April 24, 1963, 21 U.S.T. 77, 100-101, 569 U.N.T.S. 261], district court properly found that Article 36 did not create private of action or corresponding remedies under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, where Article 36 conferred legal rights and obligations on states that were party to Convention to facilitate and promote consular functions, including protecting interests of detained nationals and for that purpose detainees had right if they wanted for consular post to be notified of their situation, but right to protect nationals belonged to states and no private right was unambiguously conferred on individual detainees such that they could pursue it through § 1983. Cornejo v. County of San Diego (9th Cir. 2007) 504 F.3d 853, 855-864

Mother of arrestee who died in custody, alleging violation of Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments based on police officers' conduct while her son was in custody, failed to present evidence to defeat summary judgment on claim for false arrest based on officer's alleged lack of probable cause to believe arrestee had committed crime because alleged motivation for arrest was failure to produce identification on officer's request. Undisputed facts showed there was probable cause to arrest him because his behavior and appearance created fair probability he had committed crime by being under influence of controlled substance and his behavior warranted belief he had violated other provisions of state penal code. Claim for excessive force in violation of Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments also did not survive summary judgment. Use of control hold to secure him before his arrest did not constitute excessive force, it was objectively reasonable for officers to position him on his stomach for approximately 90 seconds, and officers exercised objectively reasonable care in monitoring him even if they did not notice that he had rolled onto his back or that he stopped breathing; decision not to perform CPR did not constitute excessive force. Fourth Amendment did not require officers to provide what hindsight revealed to be most effective medical care for arrested suspect, and officers promptly summoned necessary medical care by requesting ambulance. Tatum v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2006) 441 F.3d 1090, 1094-1100

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to police officers and city in plaintiff's § 1983 action for unlawful arrest, excessive force, and malicious prosecution, where officers had probable cause to arrest because they had probable cause to believe he was trespassing and shopping center would want to prosecute or have him removed and prudent person would have believed he was trespassing. Blankenhorn v. City of Orange (9th Cir. 2007) 485 F.3d 463, 470-475

One provision of Medicaid Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(10), requiring states to provide nursing facility services to eligible individuals, created individual right enforceable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Provision revealed congressional intent to create individualized right because it was phrased in terms of individuals benefitted, and provision set forth explicitly what nursing facility services must be offered, and availability of state administrative procedures did not foreclose right. However, another provision, 42 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(17), requiring states to use reasonable standards in setting Medicaid eligibility, did not create individual right. This provision was not framed in terms of individuals benefitted, and even if it were, right it would create was too vague and amorphous for judicial enforcement. Watson v. Weeks (9th Cir. 2006) 436 F.3d 1152, 1159-1163

Former city councilman stated claim for malicious prosecution under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 with regard to alleged First and Fourteenth Amendment violations by alleging that other council members, police officer, and city manager engaged in malicious conduct with purpose of depriving him of his constitutional rights to free speech and equal protection, when although state criminal trial court held him to answer on embezzlement charge after preliminary hearing, he met lack of probable cause requirement because federal district court that dismissed § 1983 action erred by not affording him opportunity to rebut or overcome prima facie finding of probable cause because among ways plaintiff can rebut prima facie finding ofprobable cause is by showing criminal prosecution was induced by fraud, corruption, perjury, fabricated evidence, or other wrongful conduct undertaken in bad faith, which he alleged, and when plaintiff's contentions that defendants conspired to deprive him of his First Amendment free speech rights by unlawfully interfering with his campaign for reelection and his right to equal protection under Fourteenth Amendment by intentionally causing district attorney to bring unfounded action against him because of racial animus towards Arab Americans stated claim for malicious prosecution under § 1983. However, district court properly dismissed claim that defendants intended to deprive plaintiff of his Thirteenth Amendment rights, when it was beyond doubt plaintiff would not be able to prove defendants had him prosecuted to coerce him to remain in employment of city until he worked off debt because that assertion was directly contrary to his factual allegation that defendants were trying to end his official service to city by defeating his reelection efforts, and had he been convicted of embezzling public funds, state could have fined or incarcerated him without violating Thirteenth Amendment. Awabdy v. City of Adelanto (9th Cir. 2004) 368 F.3d 1062, 1066-1072

Bivens action against Internal Revenue Service agents based on IRS audits of partnerships and assessment and collection of partnership taxes failed to state claim for relief for violation of plaintiffs' rights to procedural due process, substantive due process, and conflict-free representation under Fifth Amendment and access to courts under First Amendment, because Bivens action does not lie when there is comprehensive federal program with extensive statutory remedies for federal wrongs and Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 and general provisions of Internal Revenue Code, if properly invoked by plaintiffs, gave them comprehensive and meaningful remedies for harms they allegedly suffered as result of assessment and collection actions. Adams v. Johnson (9th Cir. 2004) 355 F.3d 1179, 1183-1188

Noncustodial grandparents acting as de facto parents to grandchildren who were dependents of juvenile court failed to state claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for violation of substantive due process right to family integrity and association with grandchildren and by placing grandfather's name on California Child Abuse Central Index, when grandparents had no constitutional right to visit grandchildren when children were dependents of juvenile court and child protective services and biological mother agreed visitation should cease, and when grandparents failed to show loss of recognizable property or liberty interest in conjunction with injury to their reputation from placement of grandfather's name on index, failing to satisfy "stigma-plus" test required to support claim for defamation under § 1983. Miller v. Cal. Dep't Soc. Servs. (9th Cir. 2004) 355 F.3d 1172, 1175-1179

Plaintiff who was arrested and charged with trespassing after speaking before city council failed to show nexus between exercise of First Amendment rights and prosecution, when although there was false statement in detective's report about her entering room against orders of law enforcement officer, plaintiff failed to present evidence to contradict detective's statement that he was unaware of plaintiff's statements or her history of criticizing city and its officials. Plaintiff also failed to present sufficient evidence to create triable issue of fact on allegation that as matter of official policy, practice, or custom, city issued or caused to be issued false police reports to secure arrest of persons who criticized city council, when although she presented evidence that city council had practice of circulating among council members police reports pertaining to council's critics and council shared informal complaints about "gadflies" and "loonies" who made comments at council meetings, council member who testified to these matters stated that to his recollection none of four critics whose police reports he received had ever been prosecuted. Karam v. City of Burbank (9th Cir. 2003) 352 F.3d 1188, 1194-1195

Nationwide direct-mail marketing company failed to state claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for defamation against officials of state attorney general's office based on statements to media during attorney general's investigation of company, when company had no constitutionally protected interest in maintaining positive state of mind among employees, and when even if company had protected property interest in existing orders, it alleged only that customer canceled order in reaction to statements, not that allegedly defamatory statements directly caused any injury to constitutionally protected liberty or property interest. Am. Consumer Publ'g Ass'n v. Margosian (9th Cir. 2003) 349 F.3d 1122, 1126

In sex abuse investigation, police officer did not violate plaintiff's right to be free from prosecution based on information officer knew or should have known was false, when despite officer's use of overbearing tactics in interviewing children, plaintiff failed to show by independent evidence that officer knew or should have known his interview tactics would yield false information, and when, although officer carelessly handled facts and investigation, plaintiff did not point to any facts showing officer knew plaintiff was innocent and record proved otherwise. Gausvik v. Perez (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 813, 816-817

Police officer did not violate plaintiff's right to be free from prosecution for sexual abuse charges based on false evidence, when plaintiff's confession was not coerced so it was reasonable for officer to continue investigation and daughters' initial failure to corroborate plaintiff's confession was not sufficient for officer to cease investigation, and officer's conduct with plaintiff's daughters was not so coercive and abusive that he knew or should have known he would receive false information. Cunningham v. City of Wenatchee (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 802, 811-812

Federal Department of Transportation disparate impact regulation, prohibiting recipients of federal funds from taking actions having effect of discriminating on basis of race, does not create individual federal right enforceable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Even if regulation could create right enforceable under § 1983, disparate-impact regulation did not create such right, because regulation was promulgated by Department of Transportation based on authority granted it by Congress in Title VI, creating right to be free from intentional discrimination based on race and authorizing federal agencies to effectuate those provisions by issuing rules, regulations, or orders of general applicability, but not authorizing federal agencies to create new rights, so that disparate-impact regulation could not create new right, it could only effectuate right already created by § 601. Section 601 does not create right sought to be enforced to be free from racially discriminatory effects. Save Our Valley v. Sound Transit (9th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 932, 935-944

Alleged policy of public defender's office to administer polygraph tests to clients and then if client failed examination, as determined by subjective assessment of polygraph examiner, to conduct minimal investigation and provide limiteddefense, while falling short of complete denial of counsel, is policy of deliberate indifference to requirement that every criminal defendant receive adequate representation, regardless of innocence or guilt in violation of core guarantee of Sixth Amendment. Allegation that county had policy of assigning least-experienced attorneys to capital cases without providing any training, stated claim for callous indifference to defendant's constitutional rights by alleging deliberate pattern and policy of refusing to train lawyers for capital cases known to county administrators to exert unusual demands on attorneys. Miranda v. Clark County (9th Cir. 2003) 319 F.3d 465, 469-471

County prosecutor's advice to state motor vehicles investigator to obtain warrant and conduct search raised no genuine issue of material fact suggesting his actions violated plaintiff's right to protection against unreasonable search and seizure or constitutional due process rights, when advice did not subject plaintiff to unreasonable search and seizure, and when even if warrant was illegal, advice to obtain it did not encroach on plaintiff's rights. There was also no genuine issue of material fact that investigator violated plaintiff's due process rights by failing to follow state administrative procedures for tax assessment and collection before filing criminal tax charges, since neither state nor federal constitutional law required those procedures as prerequisite to criminal proceeding. Plaintiff failed to establish genuine issue of material fact that any Fourth Amendment violations at hands of city police officers who assisted state police department in conducting search, when plaintiff failed to show that officers knew or should have known of defects of search warrant issued without probable cause or that their conduct was otherwise unlawful. Finally, plaintiff failed to make prima facie case against sheriff who openly disliked plaintiff, when plaintiff failed to show that sheriff engaged in any state action that violated plaintiff's constitutional rights, since even if sheriff encouraged state investigator to investigate plaintiff, there was no evidence he did so to retaliate for plaintiff's First Amendment activities. Butler v. Elle (9th Cir. 2002) 281 F.3d 1014, 1021-1023, 1027-1028

Medi-Cal providers could not maintain actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 to enjoin California's Department of Health Services from withholding payments, when plaintiffs could not establish they were intended beneficiaries of Medi-Cal's single state agency requirement, 42 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(5), and regulations interpreting it so as to create enforceable right, since single state agency requirement is structural programmatic requirement facilitating federal oversight of state Medicaid programs. San Lazaro Ass'n v. Connell (9th Cir. 2002) 278 F.3d 932

Trial court erroneously dismissed claim for unlawful arrest because plaintiff could not prove identity of arresting officers, when city's practice of not identifying actual arresting officers on arrest report seems deliberately designed to frustrate efforts of potential plaintiffs in false arrest cases to establish lack of probable cause, and plaintiff did everything she could to identify arresting officers so that burden shifted to city to provide some evidence that arresting officers had probable cause for warrantless arrest, which burden city failed to meet; and when record did not support probable cause to believe plaintiff had violated California law. Dubner v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2001) 266 F.3d 959, 968

Trial court properly dismissed claim that constitutional rights were violated by having blood drawn by people not qualified under state law, when plaintiffs failed to allege blood tests were unreasonable and not taken in accordance with medical practices but focused solely on qualifications. Ove v. Gwinn (9th Cir. 2001) 264 F.3d 817

In § 1983 claim based on prosecution for sexual abuse of foster children, trial court properly granted defendants' motion for summary judgment, when plaintiff did not show that defendants continued their investigation of him despite the fact they knew or should have known he was innocent; when allegation that interviewer disbelieved child's initial denial and continued with aggressive questioning of child and could not, without more, support deliberate-fabrication-of-evidence claim, even if allegations were amply supported by evidence. Devereaux v. Abbey (9th Cir. 2001) 263 F.3d 1070

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to defendants on plaintiff's § 1983 claim for use of excessive force by police officers, when use of force was reasonable under circumstances described by one officer, and plaintiff did not set forth specific facts disputing officer's version of events to show force used was unreasonable or she sustained actual injuries; further, since plaintiff alleged that strip search was not conducted by arresting officers, but by two other unnamed officers, arresting officers were not liable for any constitutional injury that may have resulted from strip search; however, plaintiff alleged sufficient facts in complaint to state claim that bus driver was both subject to Fourth Amendment and violated her Fourth Amendment right by alleging facts from which one could permissibly infer that driver summoned police and supervisor, not for independent purpose, but as governmental employee acting with intent to assist agency and county in administering their policy of preventing plaintiff from riding bus without proper identification, since if battery report was false, driver unreasonably caused police to take plaintiff into custody in violation of her Fourth Amendment right to be free from unreasonable seizure of her person; complaint also adequately stated claim against officers for violation of plaintiff's Fourth Amendment right to be free from unlawful seizure based on warrantless misdemeanor arrest allegedly not supported by probable cause to believe arrestee has committed crime, when facts raised inference that officers arrested plaintiff based on driver's unexamined charge without independently investigating battery claim. Arpin v. Santa Clara Valley Transportation Agency (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 912

Nolo contendere plea to charge of resisting arrest did not necessarily imply validity of police officer's punching plaintiff so as to preclude action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, when nothing in plaintiff's testimony identified act of which she was convicted as being resistance to officer's punch and nothing in record identified punch as arrest or stated basis for plea and defendants failed to meet burden to establish their defense by showing what the basis was; and when validity of conviction was unaffected by showing that officer used excessive force. Sanford v. Motts (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1117

Deficient and ineffectual police search for runaway driver involved in motor vehicle accident is not actionable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 as deprivation of substantive due process rights, when state is generally not liable for its omissions in failing to protect individual from danger; when driver was never in custody of state so that no special relationship was created and police did not exercise "de facto custody" over driver by exercising geographic control over surrounding area of accident; and when state did not affirmatively place driver in dangerous situation sincepolice arrived after accident had occurred and driver had disappeared, and there was no affirmative act by police leaving driver in more dangerous position than one in which they found him. Estate of Amos v. City of Page (9th Cir. 2001) 257 F.3d 1086

12 U.S.C. § 3351(a), requiring states to allow real estate appraiser not licensed in state to engage temporarily in business of appraising if three requirements met, creates right enforceable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, when § 3351(a) was intended to benefit private individuals because it focuses on individual appraiser and his or her license, § 3351(a) unambiguously imposes binding obligations on states by using mandatory term "shall" when describing requirement that states recognize out-of-state license, and interest in right to issuance of temporary license is not so vague or amorphous that it is beyond competence of judiciary to enforce. Groten v. California (9th Cir. 2001) 251 F.3d 844, 848-849

Alumnus of state university had no constitutionally established right to frequent university campus and library and could be properly excluded from campus based on allegations of stalking female students, when whatever right alumnus had to be on campus must be balanced against right of university to exclude him, and university may preserve such tranquility as facilities' central purpose requires. Souders v. Lucero (9th Cir. 1999) 196 F.3d 1040, 1043-1046 , cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1067 (2000)

Plaintiffs may not found 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim on U.S. Const., amend. X, which is neither source of federal authority nor font of individual constitutional rights. Stone v. City of Prescott (9th Cir. 1999) 173 F.3d 1172, 1175 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 870

Municipal liability created by California under Gov. Code § 815.2 does not expand remedies available under federal law; 42 U.S.C. § 1983 is express federal damages remedy that may not be expanded by state law. Medrano v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 1499, 1505 , cert. denied, 508 U.S. 940 (1993)

County's decision to rezone property deprived landowner of protected property interest; landowner was entitled to constitutional due process before deprivation. Harris v. County of Riverside (9th Cir. 1990) 904 F.2d 497, 503-505

In Ninth Circuit, claim of malicious prosecution is not generally cognizable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 if remedy is available under state law; exception exists when malicious prosecution is conducted with intent to deprive person of equal protection of laws or to otherwise subject person to denial of constitutional rights. Usher v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1987) 828 F.2d 556, 561-562

Use of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 to enforce another federal statute is foreclosed if remedial devices in that statute are sufficiently comprehensive to suggest that they are exclusive. Almond Hill School v. United States Dep't of Agriculture (9th Cir. 1985) 768 F.2d 1030, 1035

Adjustment of future rents under mobilehome rent control precludes damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 if adequate to prevent constitutional injury by compensating for previous excessively low rent ceilings; therefore, landlord must exhaust administrative remedies by seeking future rent adjustment with local rent control board before pursuing § 1983 claim; however, unreasonable costs in form of administrative and attorney's fees, imposed on landlords seeking rent increases, may be basis of § 1983 claim, when costs are part of government effort to deliberately flout established law, such as by deliberately obstructing legitimate rent increases, or when landlord suffers confiscation as a result of such costs. Galland v. City of Clovis (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 1003, 1020-1041, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 711, 16 P.3d 130

Contracts that nonprofit corporation providing foster family agency and group home foster care services for dependent minors with county did not give it reasonable expectation of entitlement to continued foster children placements and thus protected property interest in continued funding from county, enforceable in action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, where corporation's interest in contracts could have been taken away for something less than cause and at county's convenience, so that lack of permanence defeated claim it was deprived of its constitutionally protected property rights without due process of law, and Adoption Assistance and Child Welfare Act did not create individual rights enforceable under § 1983. Benn v. County of Los Angeles (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 478, 489-500, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 563

Environmental services company sufficiently alleged and provided reasonable inferences from allegations and documents subject to judicial notice of violation of equal protection as class of one to constitute cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on negligence and careless management by air pollution control district of pollutant emissions testing programs and policies so as to result in company not being allowed to do testing because it did not meet testing certification requirements, when company alleged it was treated differently from other similarly situated persons; difference in treatment was intentional; and there was no rational basis for difference in treatment. Genesis Envtl. Servs. v. San Joaquin Valley Unified Air Pollution Control Dist. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 597, 604-608, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 574

Developer's action for deprivation of due process, equal protection, and just compensation in inverse condemnation under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against city and county based on regulations severely limiting development of land was not ripe for adjudication when there was no final decision on applications for annexation of parcel by city, zoning variances, and building permit. Long Beach Equities v. County of Ventura (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1016, 1041-1042, 282 Cal. Rptr. 877

If government entity, acting under guise of otherwise reasonable measure, attempts to exact illegal concessions from builder or to zone builder's property such that it loses utility, conduct constitutes incursion into landowner's rights of such magnitude as to deny justice and fairness guaranteed by U.S. Const., amends. V and XIV, and landowner has action under § 1983. Griffin Homes v. Superior Court (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 991, 1000, 280 Cal. Rptr. 792

Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (20 U.S.C. § 1400 et seq.) establishes enforceable substantive right to free appropriate public education; plaintiff alleging systematic denial of free appropriate public education caused by illegal allocation of funds can pursue that action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. White v. State of California (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 452, 461-471, 240 Cal. Rptr. 732

[d] Plaintiff's Standing

Question whether party has standing to assert claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 resolved before reaching merits of claim. Steel Co. v. Citizens for a Better Environment (1998) 523 U.S. 83, 93-102, 118 S. Ct. 1003, 140 L. Ed. 2d 210

In challenging nuisance abatement ordinance, night club owners did not have standing to assert equal protection claims on behalf of its former patrons for damages or for declaratory relief, when damages paid to night club owners would not redress former patrons' injuries, and when owners had sold club and did not intend torevive business so that they no longer had requisite close relation to patrons to establish third-party standing. However, owners had standing under § 1983 to pursue their First Amendment and equal protection damages claims in their own right, because city-defendant's efforts were designed to prevent them from playing music of their choice so that their free expression claims did not rest on right of their patrons to listen to rap or hip hop music, and because owners were direct targets of city's alleged racial discrimination due to their association with African-American patrons and city's efforts were aimed at forcing owners to discriminate against members of protected class. Finally, owners had no standing to seek declaratory relief, because they had sold business and were no longer subject to challenged ordinance. RK Ventures, Inc. v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2002) 307 F.3d 1045, 1055-1056

Estate of white decedent had standing to bring claim for violation of decedent's equal protection rights by police selectively withholding protective services from decedent because they believed he was Native American by refusing to search for decedent after he left scene of motor vehicle accident, under policy not to search for runaway drivers because city believes most runaway drivers are Native Americans who bolt to Navajo reservation after accident and call police shortly thereafter, reporting car as stolen, but city does search for runaway drivers when they have reason to believe they are white, when decedent was allegedly direct target of discrimination based on mistaken racial identity, and fact that he was white does not make discrimination or resulting injury less direct, so that for purposes of standing, decedent should be viewed as police officers allegedly viewed him, as Native American. Estate of Amos v. City of Page (9th Cir. 2001) 257 F.3d 1086

Organization holding erotic art exhibition and trade show had standing to allege claims under § 1983 against officials of California Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control for attempting to prevent exhibition by threatening liquor licensees whose facilities organization rented to hold exhibition. LSO, Ltd. v. Stroh (9th Cir. 2000) 205 F.3d 1146, 1152-1156

Survivors of person killed by law enforcement officers, including parents and children, may assert Fourteenth Amendment substantive due process claim based on deprivation of their liberty interest arising out of their relationship with decedent. Moreland v. Ridgecrest Police (9th Cir. 1991) 952 F.2d 321, 325 , cert. denied, 506 U.S. 972 (1992)

White plaintiff does not have standing under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 solely for purpose of vindicating rights of minorities who have suffered from racial discrimination; however, white plaintiff does have standing under § 1983 for purpose of vindicating his or her right to be free from retaliation for aiding or associating with minorities. Maynard v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 1396, 1402-1404

[e] Pleading

Appellate courts should not establish heightened pleading or proof requirements regarding improper motive in constitutional tort cases against individual defendants. Crawford-El v. Britton (1998) 523 U.S. 574, 118 S. Ct. 1584, 140 L. Ed. 2d 759

Federal court not permitted to apply heightened pleading standard more stringent than usual pleading requirements of

Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 8(a), in civil rights cases alleging municipal liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Leatherman v. Tarrant County Narcotics and Coordination Unit (1993) 507 U.S. 163, 164-169, 113 S. Ct. 1160, 122 L. Ed. 2d 517

Allegations of bad faith not required for cause of action against public official under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Gomez v. Toledo (1980) 446 U.S. 635, 639-642, 100 S. Ct. 1920, 64 L. Ed. 2d 572

District court erred in applying heightened pleading statute to complaint under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 involving right to petition governmental bodies immune from liability under Noerr-Pennington doctrine, where heightened pleading standard should only be applied when Federal Rules of Civil Procedure so require, and Rules did not require heightened pleading standard for these claims. Empress LLC v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2005) 419 F.3d 1052, 1055-1056

Heightened pleading standard does not apply to constitutional tort claims in which improper motive is element; thus, coroner's reckless or intentional falsification of autopsy report that plays material role in false arrest and prosecution of individual can support claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and Fourth Amendment. Galbraith v. County of Santa Clara (9th Cir. 2002) 307 F.3d 1119, 1121-1127

In case of pro se plaintiff in § 1983 case, court must construe pleadings liberally, to afford plaintiff benefit of any doubt, and must give plaintiff leave to amend complaint unless it is absolutely clear that deficiencies of complaint could not be cured by amendment. Karim-Panahi v. Los Angeles Police Dep't (9th Cir. 1988) 839 F.2d 621, 623 ; Eldridge v. Block (9th Cir. 1987) 832 F.2d 1132, 1135-1136

To maintain survival action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, plaintiff must allege his or her representative capacity in complaint or introduce evidence that he or she is in fact decedent's successor in interest. Byrd v. Guess (9th Cir. 1998) 137 F.3d 1126, 1131 , cert. denied, 525 U.S. 963

State courts required to apply federal law in determining whether complaint pleads cause of action under § 1983 sufficient to survive general demurrer; such complaints must be construed liberally, and dismissal requires appearance of certainty that plaintiff would not be entitled to relief under any set of facts that could be proven. Thorning v. Hollister School Dist. (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1598, 1609-1610, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 91

Federal law, rather than state law, determines whether complaint sufficiently pleads cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Bach v. County of Butte (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 554, 563, 195 Cal. Rptr. 268

[f] Defendants

State officials, sued in their individual capacities, are "persons" within meaning of 42 U.S.C. § 1983; Eleventh Amendment does not bar such suits, nor are state officers absolutely immune from personal liability under § 1983 solely by virtue of "official" nature of their acts. Hafer v. Melo (1991) 502 U.S. 21, 30-31, 112 S. Ct. 358, 116 L. Ed. 2d 301

Eleventh Amendment bars suit against state or arm of state in federal court unless state has waived its immunity, or unless Congress has exercised its power under Fourteenth Amendment to override that immunity. *Will v. Municipality may be liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for failure to train its employees, when failure amounts to deliberate indifference to constitutional rights of people coming into contact with the employees, and when there is close, causal nexus between failure and injury sustained. City of Canton v. Harris (1989) 489 U.S. 378, 388-391, 109 S. Ct. 1197, 103 L. Ed. 2d 412

Municipal liability under § 1983 attaches when deliberate choice to follow course of action is made from among various alternatives by official or officials responsible for establishing final policy with regard to subject matter in question. *Pembaur v. Municipalities are not immune from § 1983 action on basis of good faith of their employees. Owen v. City of Independence (1980) 445 U.S. 622, 651, 100 S. Ct. 1398, 63 L. Ed. 2d 673

Municipalities are subject to suit under § 1983; they are not, however, subject to respondeat superior liability; liability of municipalities must be based on implementation or execution of policy, statement, ordinance, regulation, or decision officially adopted and promulgated by municipality's officers, or by custom of municipality. Monell v. Dep't of Social Services (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 690-691, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611

Although federal officials are not subject to suit under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, federal officials are subject to suit directly under the Constitution for violations of constitutional rights. Bivens v. Six Unknown Fed. Narcotics Agents (1971) 403 U.S. 388, 395, 91 S. Ct. 1999, 29 L. Ed. 2d 619

District court properly granted summary judgment to county on claims that county had constitutionally impermissible policy, practice, or custom violative of plaintiff's rights, where plaintiff failed to allege any facts supporting claim by failing to point to no express county policy or custom and providing no evidence showing even inference that such procedure existed. The district court also properly granted summary judgment to county on claim of inaction by county by conducting inadequate training and supervision of its prosecutors in securing bench warrants, where plaintiff failed to provide any facts indicating either what training practices were employed by county at time of alleged constitutional violation, or what type of constitutionally-mandated training was lacking. Waggy v. Spokane County Wash. (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 707, 713-714

Lessee of national forest land did not have Bivens claim against Forest Service officers, where, because claims against officers were based on Forest Service actions or inactions, remedies available to lessee under Administrative Procedure Act constituted adequate alternative, existing process to new and freestanding remedy in damages. Western Radio Services Co. v. United States Forest Service (9th Cir. 2009) 578 F.3d 1116, 1119-1125

In Bivens action against tribal officers based on roadblock across state highway, at which they stopped plaintiff, who was non-Indian, district court correctly determined there was no issue of fact as to officers' status as federal actors in operating roadblock, despite presence of federal Customs and Border Patrol agents on scene, where no federal agents were consulted for initiation of the roadblock, and where merely referring suspected federal law violations to appropriate authorities was not tantamount to acting under color of federal law. Bressi v. Ford (9th Cir. 2009) 575 F.3d 891, 898

In § 1983 action based on arrest and prosecution of police officers for allegedly planting gun on suspect, there was substantial evidence to support jury's determination that violations of plaintiffs' constitutional rights were result of official policy set by police chief, where jury reasonably could have concluded that chief's telephonic statements to district attorney, in which chief expressed confidence in informant and pressured district attorney to file criminal charges without complete or fully corroborated investigation, were indicative of official policy whereby city impliedly or tacitly authorized, approved, or encouraged illegal conduct by its police officers, and where chain of command of task force investigating police corruption reported regularly to chief and jury was entitled to believe chief's expressions as official policymaker accurately reflected direction and quality of task force investigation, which was to ready cases for filing of charges as quickly as possible, with or without probable cause. The jury also could have supported their determination of official policy from chief's failure to take remedial steps after officers were acquitted on all charges related to arrest and it became clear task force investigation was flawed. Jury also had ample support for proposition that judgment of prosecutor who caused complaint to be filed may have drawn legal conclusion that probable cause existed was based almost entirely on police investigation adjudged to be deficient by jury. Harper v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1010, 1024-1027

District court properly granted summary judgment to city and police department in action by political activist based on removal of her from public space in violation of her First Amendment rights, where plaintiff did not point to any portion of city's municipal code prohibiting or restricting person's exercise of First Amendment rights as matter of city policy, and where actions of single police officer on one day, without more, could not establish custom, policy, practice, or procedure by police department and defendants submitted affidavit from chief of police that police department had no such custom, policy, practice, or procedure to exclude private citizens exercising their First Amendment rights from specially permitted areas, and plaintiff failed to rebut that evidence. Dietrich v. John Ascuaga's Nugget (9th Cir. 2008) 548 F.3d 892, 900

Although private towing company that towed owner's car in violation of her due process based on actions of police officer who ordered tow without notice to owner could not claim qualified immunity because that defense is not available to private defendants in § 1983 actions, tow company could assert good faith defense, where tow was authorized by police department, conducted under close police supervision and appeared to be permissible under both local ordinance and state law, and where constitutional defect, i.e., lack of notice to owner, could not have been observed by towing company at time when tow was conducted and there was no easy way for towing company to know whether owner had been notified. Towing company did not waive its good faith defense, because it asserted in its answer and motion for summary judgment that its employees were acting under apparently lawful direction and authority of city and officer, which was sufficient to put plaintiffs on notice towing company intended to raise good faith defense. Clement v. City of Glendale (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1090, 1097

District court erred in granting summary judgment to city for police officer's use of deadly force in fatally shooting plaintiffs' decedent while he remained seated in car with his seatbelt fastened and unarmed, where, although city's official policy governing use of lethal force by police officers did not violate Fourth Amendment's requirements, and no rational finder of fact could decide that city violated plaintiffs' decedent's constitutional rights by failure to train its officers, plaintiffs presented genuine issue of material fact as to their interpretation of city's history of discipline and training and its relevance to allegedly unconstitutional longstanding use of deadly force in situations in which objective facts did not support use of force. Price v. Sery (9th Cir. 2008) 513 F.3d 962, 966-973

In mother's action against city under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on fatal shooting of son by police officer, city was not liable for failure to properly train officers on use of deadly force, for ratification of conduct of officer who fatally shot son, for failure to properly supervise and control its officers, or for failure to render medical aid to son, where no constitutional violation occurred, and where there was no evidence that any failure to render aid was pursuant to city policy or custom and municipality could not be liable under respondeat superior theory. Long v. City & County of Honolulu (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 901, 907

Dismissal of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim against city based on police officers' arrest and search of plaintiff was error, where, as to arrest, jury could reasonably find city had policy of training officers to make trespass arrests where probable cause did not exist, policymakers in police department had implemented policy of making unconstitutional arrests at location of arrest, and city policies were moving force behind officers' violation of plaintiff's constitutional rights; and where, as to search, reasonable jury could find city had implemented policy of permitting unreasonable searches, officers were aware of policy, and policy was moving force behind officers' violation of constitutional rights. However, grant of summary judgment to police supervisor was proper, where no reasonable trier of fact could find supervisor had any personal involvement in incident, since he was not aware of arrest or search until after they were completed, nor could reasonable trier of fact find sufficient causal connection between supervisor and officers' unconstitutional actions based on his enforcement of station policy. Edgerly v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2007) 495 F.3d 645, 657-661

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to city in § 1983 action for unlawful arrest, excessive force, and malicious prosecution, where evidence of failure to train single officer was insufficient to establish city's deliberate policy. However, summary judgment in favor of police chief was improper, where chief approved personnel evaluations of officer involved despite repeated and serious complaints against him for use of excessive force, which, together with expert testimony regarding ineffectiveness of discipline of officer for those complaints, could have led rational fact finder to conclude that chief knowingly condoned and ratified actions by officer that chief reasonably should have known would cause constitutional injuries like ones plaintiff may have suffered. Blankenhorn v. City of Orange (9th Cir. 2007) 485 F.3d 463, 484-486

In action against city and city officials by plaintiffs who were attacked by private individuals in course of Mardi Gras celebrations sponsored by private businesses, based on change in police enforcement policy that allegedly violated plaintiffs' Fourteenth Amendment right to due process by affirmatively placing them in position of enhanced danger, trial court properly granted defendants summary judgment, when, because city had no constitutional duty to protect plaintiffs against violence from members of riotous crowd, its failure to do so did not constitute violation of Due Process Clause; and when plaintiffs failed to offer evidence defendants engaged in affirmative conduct enhancing dangers plaintiffs exposed themselves to by participating in Mardi Gras celebration. Police department's decision to switch from more aggressive to more passive operation plan was not affirmative conduct placing plaintiffs in danger, because it did not place them in any worse position than they would have been in had police not come up with any operational plan whatsoever. Johnson v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2007) 474 F.3d 634, 638-641

Wife of county jail inmate who suffered from congestive heart failure and who died in custody as result of cardiac arrest presented sufficient evidence to create triable issue regarding county's liability for her husband's death. Complaint raised genuine issue of triable fact regarding whether county medical facility staff acted with deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs in violation of Eighth Amendment, since evidence created triable issue of fact regarding whether county's policy of relying on medical professionals without training them how to implement proper procedures for documenting, monitoring, and assessing patients for medical instability within confines of medical facility amounted to deliberate indifference, as to which policy of hiring trained medical professionals did not insulate county from municipal liability as matter of law. Further, evidence created triable issue regarding whether county's failure to implement policy for responding to fall of medically unstable patient, policy providing for prompt medical assessment if patient refused necessary treatment, and transfer policy directing staff immediately to transfer patients no longer medically stable, amounted to deliberate indifference to inmate's constitutional rights. Lastly, evidence created triable issue as to whether county's policy deficiencies were moving force behind inmate's death. Long v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2006) 442 F.3d 1178, 1185-1190

There was no subject matter jurisdiction bar in jurisdictional limitation provision of Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 or amendments to provision in REAL ID Act of 2005 and district properly exercised jurisdiction over Bivens action based on violation of Fourth Amendment rights by false arrest and detention of resident alien for deportation by officer of former INS. Sissoko v. Rocha (9th Cir. 2006) 440 F.3d 1145, 1154-1164

District court erred in dismissing § 1983 action against county, which was based on actions of district attorney in retaliating against former sheriff's office investigator, when district attorney had final policymaking authority and, under Nevada law, was final policymaker for county when he decided not to prosecute former investigator's cases, and other than adopting nonprosecution policy, district attorney's conduct was as county policymaker. Botello v. Gammick (9th Cir. 2005) 413 F.3d 971, 978-979

Civil rights plaintiff who had been arrested for violating state's privacy law presented sufficient evidence of city's policy or custom to overcome city's motion for summary judgment, when plaintiff submitted declaration of law enforcement expert opining that police department's "self-training" program, which assigned responsibility to individual officer for keeping abreast of recent court decisions involving law enforcement, amounted to "failure to train" police officers about enforcement of suspected violations of privacy law, which could amount to city's deliberate indifference to unlawful arrests. Johnson v. Hawe (9th Cir. 2004) 388 F.3d 676, 686

In kindergarten teacher's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action for retaliation based on previously successful lawsuit against district, trial court properly denied school district's motion for judgment as matter of law contending that because school board was only authorized policymaker and teacher had not shown any retaliatory action taken by board, there was no basis for district liability, when superintendent and assistant superintendent had final policymaking authority and there was sufficient evidence to support jury's conclusion that district violated teacher's First Amendment right of access to courts by assistant superintendent's acts of retaliation or ratification of retaliatory acts of others. Lytle v. Carl (9th Cir. 2004) 382 F.3d 978, 982-987

Trial court erroneously granted summary judgment in arrestee's municipal liability claim in action against police chief for arrest under state's privacy act in violation of Fourth Amendment rights, on basis that plaintiff set forth no evidence to support establishment of policy or custom which police chief followed in arresting him. Declaration of law enforcement expert submitted by arrestee opining that police department's self-training program, which assigned responsibility to individual officer to keep abreast of recent court decisions involving law enforcement, amounted to failure to train police officers about enforcement of suspected violations of privacy act created genuine issue as to whether self-training amounted to deliberate indifference. Johnson v. Hawe (9th Cir. 2004) 382 F.3d 944, 953-954

District court properly granted summary judgment on jail detainee's municipal liability claim against county, when district court concluded there was no policy, custom, or practice to support detainee's causes of action for use of excessive force and deliberate indifference to serious medical need and detainee made no distinct arguments on appeal directly challenging conclusion or presented evidence that through its omissions county should have been held responsible for alleged constitutional violations of its employees. Lolli v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2003) 351 F.3d 410, 415

There was no basis to assert liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against county based on social worker's violation of rights of custodial father and child in child dependency proceedings, when father and child plaintiffs provided no evidence that social worker was final decisionmaker or acted with deliberate indifference to their constitutional rights or sufficient evidence that county failed adequately to train its social workers or, had county failed to train, failure deliberately caused deprivation of their constitutional rights. Doe v. Lebbos (9th Cir. 2003) 348 F.3d 820, 831 , overruled on other grounds in Beltran v. County of Santa Clara (9th Cir. 2008) 514 F.3d 906, 908-909

City and police department were properly dismissed from action based on police officer's shooting of criminal suspect, when, although officer was not entitled to qualified immunity, suspect based liability of city and police department on ratification of officer's conduct because of city's and department's failure to discipline officer for her use of deadly force, and suspect failed to demonstrate that decision by city and department was product of conscious, affirmative choice to ratify officer's conduct. Haugen v. Brosseau (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 857, 874-875

Importer did not have Bivens claim against customs officials for imposition of excess import duties on bales of cotton, when Congress established remedial scheme for importers to challenge classification of goods, which ultimately entitles importers that prevail to refund of all excess duties paid with interest, and importer pursued and obtained relief under this scheme, and when Congress expressly exempted customs officers from suit under federal Tort Claims Act. Libas Ltd. v. Carillo (9th Cir. 2003) 329 F.3d 1128, 1130-1131

Neither Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands and its officers nor Commonwealth Port Authority and its officers are "persons" who can be sued under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Aguon v. Commonwealth Ports Auth. (9th Cir. 2003) 316 F.3d 899, 901-904 ; DeNieva v. Reyes (9th Cir. 1992) 966 F.2d 480, 483

Actions of California sheriff could be attributable to county for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1983; Los Angeles County Sheriff acts as final policymaker for Los Angeles County in establishing and implementing policies and procedures for safekeeping of inmates in county jail, so that district court properly denied county's motion to dismiss, subjecting county to § 1983 liability as person acting under color of state law, in an action based on beating death of pretrial detainee held in special gang unit. Cortez v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2002) 294 F.3d 1186, 1187

In action by widow under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on death of her husband from heart attack while detained in county custody, trial court erroneously granted county summary judgment, when there was evidence from which jury could properly conclude that county itself violated husband's rights under the constitution because county's policies and procedures regarding medical evaluations of incoming detainees violated husband's constitutionally protected right to receive medical care while in county's custody, and when there was evidence from which jury could properly conclude that county's failures to act caused its employee to violate his rights and those failures amounted to deliberate indifference. Gibson v. County of Washoe (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 1175, 1187

District court properly refused to give plaintiff's proposed jury instructions allowing police officers to be held liable for unlawful conduct including destruction of property during search of house without showing of individual participation in unlawful conduct, when house was not under officers' exclusive control because of presence of residents in living room, albeit handcuffed and forced to remain on couch, and when jury had instructions permitting it to find liability for individual officers adequately covering idea of liability for members of searching team. Further, district court properly refused to instruct jury that simply because officer remains armed during search, officer is participant and therefore liable for violations, when evidence did not indicate that officers who simply remained outside were integral participants in destruction of personal property and manner in which house was searched. Jones v. Williams (9th Cir. 2002) 286 F.3d 1159

Exoneration of individual officer of charge of excessive force precludes municipal liability for alleged unconstitutional use of such force; however, city could be held independently liable for arrest without probable cause and deprivation of liberty without due process based on arresting man and holding him on twin brother's warrants, when alleged deprivations were not suffered as result of actions of individual officers but as result of collective inaction of police department. Fairley v. Luman (9th Cir. 2002) 281 F.3d 913

County sheriff's department acts for county rather than state when investigating crime, and therefore county is subject to liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for violations of civil rights during investigation of crime, since county sheriff acts as final policymaker for county; thus, trial court properly denied county summary judgment in § 1983 action against county and two county sheriff's department deputies for violation of civil rights during investigation of murder and sexual assault by manipulating witness into giving false identification, failing to test physical evidence, and ignoring exculpatory evidence. Brewster v. Shasta County (9th Cir. 2001) 275 F.3d 803

Because plaintiff's Fourth Amendment right to be free from excessive force was not violated by police officer's conduct in arresting her for interfering with arrest of her son at barbecue in public park, there was no basis on which to find either city or police chief liable under § 1983. Jackson v. City of Bremerton (9th Cir. 2001) 268 F.3d 646, 653-654

Evidence introduced by plaintiff at trial that it was common practice in the police department to have complainants sign citizen's arrest forms and then fill in names of arrestees and their offenses later and testimony suggesting officers were instructed to use citizen's arrest forms in this way was sufficient to allege practice by city and require determination of liability of chief of police in his official capacity. Dubner v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2001) 266 F.3d 959

Complaint alleging false arrest and imprisonment did not state claim against county transportation agency, sheriff's department, or county for violation of Fourth Amendment rights, when complaint did not even contain bare allegation that arrest was pursuant to official policy, conduct, or practice of public entity defendants. Arpin v. Santa Clara Valley Transportation Agency (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 912

Trial court erroneously granted summary judgment on claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 by severely hearing-impaired individual that denial of his request for videotext display during hearings in marital dissolution proceeding resulted from a custom or policy of county, when individual established he was denied requested accommodation based on decisions of county's policy-makers, and it was clear from record that before September 1995 it was county's custom and practice not to accommodate hearing-impaired individuals with videotext display at public hearings; however, summary judgment was appropriate as to three members of Board of Commissioners who did not become aware of request for accommodation until after county had arranged to provide videotext display at his future court hearings. Duvall v. County of Kitsap (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1124, 1141-1142

Estate of white driver who ran away from scene of motor vehicle accident, alleging that city has policy not to search for runaway drivers because city believes most runaway drivers are Native Americans who bolt to Navajo reservation after accident and call police shortly thereafter, reporting car as stolen, but city does search for runaway drivers when they have reason to believe they are white, sufficiently alleged that city maintained policy amounting to deliberate indifference to decedent's constitutional rights and that policies were moving force behind constitutional violation. Estate of Amos v. City of Page (9th Cir. 2001) 257 F.3d 1086, 1094-1095

State of California is not "person" for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and therefore was not proper defendant to § 1983 action by out-of-state real estate appraiser alleging deprivation of right under 12 U.S.C. § 3351(a) and Fourteenth Amendment to apply for temporary and reciprocal real estate appraiser license. Groten v. California (9th Cir. 2001) 251 F.3d 844, 851

Trial court properly dismissed county as defendant in action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on prolonged detention of federal detainee in county jail (1) when county held detainee only so long as directed by United States Marshals Service and acted under Pen. Code § 4005(a), which requires county sheriff to keep prisoner committed to county jail by process or order issued under federal authority until discharged, (2) when there was no allegation that county failed to follow either instructions of Marshals Service or mandates of § 4005(a), and there was no allegation that § 4005(a) itself is unconstitutional, and (3) when county was without authority to bring detainee before federal magistrate judge. Estate of Brooks v. United States (9th Cir. 1999) 197 F.3d 1245, 1247-1249

County not liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for acts of prosecutor for prosecution of advocates of legalized marijuana, when prosecutor's supervisor made initial decision to prosecute and prosecutor could not decide unilaterally to drop case so that prosecutor lacked final policymaking authority to initiate or terminate prosecutions, and when plaintiff presented no triable issue of fact as to whether there was ratification of prosecutor's acts or deliberate indifference. Christie v. Iopa (9th Cir. 1999) 176 F.3d 1231, 1234-1241 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 928

For municipality to be liable in civil rights action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, allegedly unconstitutional action must implement policy officially adopted by municipality. Scofield v. City of Hillsborough (9th Cir. 1988) 862 F.2d 759, 765

In action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against county based on erroneous wage garnishments and levy on plaintiff's savings account because county family support agency confused plaintiff's name, birthdate, and Social Security number with another man who owed delinquent child support and agency's neglect in failing to contact Franchise Tax Board to correct its mistake, trial court erred in granting motion for judgment on the pleadings in favor of county in absence of evidence that agency procedures were state mandated or county initiated, when at that stage in proceedings, complaint on its face and undeveloped factual record did not permit trial court to rule, as matter of law, that family support agency was state actor, making county free from liability under § 1983 based on Eleventh Amendment immunity, nor could trial court properly decide whether family support agency was policymaker for county, making county liable under § 1983. *Hernandez v. County is not liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for actions of sheriff's office in detaining person after bond posted, on warrant that office allegedly should have known did not apply to person, when sheriff acted in capacity of state official rather than local policymaker in promulgating policies and acts at issue in action. *County of Los Angeles v. [h] Limitations Period

Statute of limitations on § 1983 claim of false arrest commenced to run when plaintiff appeared before examining magistrate and was bound over for trial, rather than when charges against him were ultimately dropped; state law provided limitations period of two years, and since more than two years elapsed between that date and filing of suit, even leaving out period before plaintiff reached his majority, action was time barred. *Wallace v. Questions closely related to limitations period, such as tolling, are governed by state law, unless application of state law would defeat goals of 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Hardin v. Straub (1989) 490 U.S. 536, 538-544, 109 S. Ct. 1998, 104 L. Ed. 2d 582

When state law provides multiple statutes of limitations for personal injury actions, courts considering 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claims should borrow general or residual statute for personal injury actions. Owens v. Okure (1989) 488 U.S. 235, 249-250, 109 S. Ct. 573, 102 L. Ed. 2d 594

Characterization of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 actions as tort actions for purposes of choosing applicable statute of limitations minimizes risk that choice of statute of limitations will not fairly serve federal interests vindicated by § 1983. Wilson v. Garcia (1985) 471 U.S. 261, 266-270, 276, 105 S. Ct. 1938, 85 L. Ed. 2d 254

Claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 filed in 2005 based on California State Bar's publication of summary of plaintiff's disciplinary history were barred by California's one-year, rather than two-year, statute of limitations because cause of action was more than one year old as of effective date of two-year statute of limitations (January 1, 2003), where limitations period began to run plaintiff saw summary in print version of bar journal in 2000, and plaintiff knew or should have known that same summary appeared on Internet website per Bar's previously stated policy to post electronic version of Bar journal on its website; and where single publication gave rise to only one cause of action. Canatella v. Van De Kamp (9th Cir. 2007) 486 F.3d 1128, 1132-1136

In action alleging discrimination against predominantly Latino neighborhoods based on ethnicity or race by city's failure to provide adequate municipal services and to bring neighborhoods into city, with regard to continuing violation doctrine, district court correctly concluded plaintiffs had not shown existence of pattern or practice of discrimination but rather ongoing harm resulting from earlier discrete decisions. However, reenactment of master tax sharing agreement within limitations period preserved claim that exclusion chilled plaintiff's annexation attempts and district court erred in dismissing agreement as merely automatic renewal of past action, where agreement expressly altered some terms of former agreement and retained other terms, so that it was not merely inevitable consequence of earlier agreements. Although plaintiffs could not challenge earlier agreements, they could use those events as evidence to establish motive and to put their timely-filed claims in context. Committee Concerning Community Improvement v. City of Modesto (9th Cir. 2009) 583 F.3d 690, 701-702

Section 1983 claim based on alleged use of excessive force in making arrest in 1995, filed in 2000, was barred by one-year statute of limitations. Plaintiff did not allege he was imprisoned until 1997, so statute was not tolled by imprisonment, neither equitable tolling nor equitable estoppel applied, he did not provide advance notice of his claims to defendants before filing suit in 2000 so allowing lawsuit to proceed would have prejudiced defendants, and he did not claim to have been ignorant of applicable limitations period. However, claim based on alleged use of excessive force in making arrest in 1997, also filed in 2000, was not barred by one-year statute of limitations, because of statutory tolling, when he was in prison from his arrest in 1997 until August 1999, limitations period for claims based on 1997 incident began running on his release, and ended in August 2000, and he filed lawsuit in June 2000. Guerrero v. Gates (9th Cir. 2006) 442 F.3d 697, 705-707

Where substantive due process violation claim of landlords' association rested on provisions of rent control ordinance in effect since 1979, not on substantive amendments enacted in 2002 altering effect of ordinance on association, its 2004 complaint was filed well beyond California's two-year statute of limitations for § 1983 claims. Further, claim by one landlord that enforcement of rent ceilings for benefit of wealthy tenant was irrational was time-barred because rent ceiling was in effect continuously since 1979 and not substantively altered in 2002. Action Apt. Ass'n v. Santa Monica Rent Control Opinion Bd. (9th Cir. 2007) 509 F.3d 1020, 1026

Although civil detainee under Sexually Violent Predators Act could not invoke Code Civ. Proc. § 352.1(a), which tolls limitations period for person imprisoned on criminal charge, trial court erred in failing to apply equitable tolling. Court found that to deny detainee same benefit disability tolling provision afforded to his criminally confined cellmates would yield arbitrary result that two individuals housed in same penal facility under same or similar conditions would have differing access to courts based solely on difference in label. Further, detainee alleged conditions of confinement that would have made filing of lawsuit practically impossible even for trained attorney. Jones v. Blanas (9th Cir. 2004) 393 F.3d 918, 927-930

In action by parents based on death of son at facility maintained by county, parents were not barred by statute of limitations under doctrine of equitable tolling, even though parents filed action after expiration of limitations period, when state tort claim and claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 were predicated on same wrong, so that district court should have applied California's three-pronged test to determine whether parents were entitled to equitable tolling during pendency of administrative proceedings under state's tort claims act. Defendants did not waive statute of limitations, when county's notice rejecting administrative claim, although ambiguous, did not make statement revealing intention to waive statute of limitations for § 1983 claims, and defendants were not estopped from raising statute of limitations, when parents were represented by attorney, who should have been aware that six-month period referred to in rejection notice applied only to claims under state tort claims act and to extent counsel relied on rejection notice as giving parents six months from rejection of their state tort claim to file § 1983 action, such reliance was not reasonable. Lucchesi v. Bar-O Boys Ranch (9th Cir. 2003) 353 F.3d 691, 694-697

California landowner's § 1983 claims against county, county planning department, and county employees, for violations of First Amendment free expression rights and Fourteenth Amendment equal protection and procedural due process rights with regard to county actions in relation to his use of his land were time barred, except claims as to actions county had allegedly delayed and had not yet taken action on at time complaint was filed, when in California, applicable limitations period was one year and discrete discriminatory acts are not actionable when time barred even when they related to acts as to which action was timely filed, and landowner alleged number of discrete acts on county's part, each of which allegedly violated his constitutional rights, and all of which, except those acts as to which county had not yet taken action, occurred outside of one-year statute of limitations period. However, landowner could use time-barred acts as evidence to establish motive and put timely filed claims in context. Carpinteria Valley Farms, Ltd. v. County of Santa Barbara (9th Cir. 2003) 334 F.3d 796, 800-801

Action against city under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 filed two years to the day after alleged injury was timely filed under state statute of limitations prescribing two year period from time of injury, when although one of years was a leap year, trial court erroneously chose to apply state statute of limitations in state Tort Claims Act rather than statute of limitations for personal injuries and limitations period under personal injury statute did not expire until date plaintiffs filed their complaint. Sain v. City of Bend (9th Cir. 2002) 309 F.3d 1134, 1139-1140

Although nuisance abatement hearing began during limitations period, city commenced abatement action before limitations period when police chief sent letter to plaintiffs and their counsel giving formal notice of abatement of public nuisance or when city Examiner's Office sent letter to city and plaintiffs advising them of commencement date and format of hearing. City's continued prosecution of action within limitations period was not actionable because it was inevitable consequence of earlier initiation of abatement proceeding; however, withdrawal of settlement offer during limitations period was discrete act, which was actionable. RK Ventures, Inc. v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2002) 307 F.3d 1045, 1058

In action filed more than two years after seizure of medical laboratory's funds for alleged Medicaid fraud, based on alleged warrantless search of medical laboratory premises and seizure of papers and payments in violation of Fourth Amendment due process rights, trial court erred in holding that claims were barred by California's then one-year statute of limitations, since laboratory was entitled to equitable tolling, when by timely filing and diligently pursuing action in state court to challenge withholding, laboratory provided all defendants adequate notice; when there was no prejudice to defendants because they were on notice of possibility of federal court suit from time first state court suit was filed, and they could not plausibly claim prejudice in gathering or preservation of evidence because much of evidence relevant to federal suit was same as presented in state suits; and when laboratory acted reasonably and in good faith in waiting to file federal court complaint until defendants repeatedly refused to comply with orders in state litigation and state administrative and judicial proceedings were concluded. Azer v. Connell (9th Cir. 2002) 306 F.3d 930, 935-938

Action by attorney suing California Department of Corrections for denying her legal visitation and mail privileges with her inmate-husband and all other inmates was barred by one-year statute of limitations, where cause of action accrued when she received letter informing her of permanent and complete suspension of visiting and mail privileges as attorney in January 1996, but did not file her action until July 1997; continuing violation doctrine is inapplicable because attorney failed to establish that new violation occurs each time she is denied visitation or mail privileges; subsequent and repeated denials of privileges with her clients is merely continuing effect of original suspension. Knox v. Davis (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1009

Trial court erroneously dismissed complaint on grounds that statute of limitations had run, when claim, that if successful would necessarily imply invalidity of conviction in pending criminal prosecution, does not accrue so long as potential for conviction in pending criminal prosecution continues to exist, and § 1983 action alleging illegal search and seizure of evidence on which criminal charges are based does not accrue until criminal charges have been dismissed or conviction overturned and evidence was essential element of crime of which plaintiff in § 1983 action was charged, and when plaintiff brought § 1983 action was filed less than three years after charges against him were dismissed, within statutory period. Harvey v. Waldron (9th Cir. 2000) 210 F.3d 1008, 1012-1016

Trial court properly dismissed prisoner's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action based on alleged violation of Eighth Amendment for failure to treat leg injury, as time barred under retroactive application of Code Civ. Proc. § 352.1, which limits tolling of limitations periods to two years for prisoners incarcerated for less than life. Fink v. Shedler (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 911, 914-916 , cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1117 (2000)

Federal law, rather than state law, governs question of when particular cause of action accrues. Fink v. Shedler (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 911, 914 , cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1117 (2000) ; TwoRivers v. Lewis (9th Cir. 1999) 174 F.3d 987, 991 ; Cabrera v. City of Huntington Park (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 374, 379

California prisoner's action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on forcible taking of blood and urine samples during arrest was timely filed under tolling provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 352.1, despite amendment of that statute during prisoner's incarceration to limit tolling period to two years. Ellis v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1999) 176 F.3d 1183, 1188-1191

Federal and California courts have applied one-year limitations period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3) to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 actions brought in California. Ellis v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1999) 176 F.3d 1183, 1188-1189 ; Trimble v. City of Santa Rosa (9th Cir. 1995) 49 F.3d 583, 585 ; McDougal v. County of Imperial (9th Cir. 1991) 942 F.2d 668, 672-673 ; City of Huntington Park v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1297, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 68 . Note: Effective January 1, 2003, Code Civ. Proc. § 340 was amended and Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1 was added to provide that personal injury actions are now governed by a two-year statute of limitations.

Amendment to state tolling provision while prisoner's § 1983 action was pending did not apply retroactively so as to bar prisoner's action, and trial court erred in dismissing action as time barred. TwoRivers v. Lewis (9th Cir. 1999) 174 F.3d 987, 993-997

Gov. Code § 945.3, which tolls statute of limitations under certain circumstances during pendency of criminal charges, applies to § 1983 actions. Cabrera v. City of Huntington Park (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 374, 379 ; Trimble v. City of Santa Rosa (9th Cir. 1995) 49 F.3d 583, 585

Under borrowing provision of 42 U.S.C. § 1988(a), state statute of limitations applies in § 1983 actions. Cabrera v. City of Huntington Park (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 374, 379

Code Civ. Proc. § 352.1(a), which tolls, for up to two years, limitations period for person "imprisoned on a criminal charge, or in execution under the sentence of a criminal court for a term less than for life," applies to toll limitations period in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action for damages. Martinez v. Gomez (9th Cir. 1998) 137 F.3d 1124, 1126

Statute of limitations in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action is not equitably tolled during pendency of state court proceeding arising out of same situation, when plaintiff had not acted in good faith by stringing out state proceedings until forced to brink of trial, and then abandoning those proceedings to initiate federal proceedings on precisely same claim. Bacon v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1988) 843 F.2d 372, 374-375

Code Civ. Proc. § 352(a), which tolls limitations period during plaintiff's minority, or for one who is insane, applies to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. May v. Enomoto (9th Cir. 1980) 633 F.2d 164, 166-167

Notice to appear on specified misdemeanor charges inferentially served on defendant at time of his release commenced tolling of civil rights action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against law enforcement officers based on alleged use of excessive force during his arrest under Gov Code § 945.3, and criminal complaint was timely filed after service of notice to appear so that tolling period continued through final disposition of charges, so that civil rights complaint under § 1983 filed within one year under then-applicable statute of limitations was timely. Schmidlin v. City of Palo Alto (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 728, 746-761, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 365

Applicable statute of limitations for civil rights actions brought in California under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 is former one-year statute of limitations for personal injury actions provided in former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1 (providing for two-year statute of limitations for personal injury actions)]. Section 1983 limitations period is not tolled by pursuing remedies under state Tort Claims Act [see Gov. Code §§ 945.4 (requiring notice of claim to public agency before action can be brought against it), 945.6 (requiring filing of civil action within six months of agency's rejection)], since plaintiff does not have to file under Act before initiating § 1983 action. Thus, failure to assert § 1983 claim within one year of arrest on which claim was based barred claim. Limitations period was not tolled under doctrine of equitable tolling, when, even if plaintiff mistakenly believed satisfaction of Tort Claims Act was required before filing § 1983 action, he waited more than three and one half years after denial of Claims Act application before filing. McMahon v. Albany Unif. Schl. Dist. (2003) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1275, 1291-1293, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184

Plaintiff's attempt to amend original complaint to include § 1983 action was barred by statute of limitations; although amended complaint may relate back to filing of original complaint and avoid bar of statute of limitations, recovery sought must be based on same general set of facts. Newton v. County of Napa (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1551, 1563-1565, 266 Cal. Rptr. 682

[i] Survival of Actions

State law governs issue of survival of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 actions, unless survival law of forum state is inhospitable to federal law or inconsistent with purposes of federal law. Robertson v. Wegmann (1978) 436 U.S. 584, 588, 98 S. Ct. 1991, 56 L. Ed. 2d 554 ; County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (Schonert) (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 292, 300-303, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 441, 981 P.2d 68

In 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action, survivors of individual killed as a result of excessive use of force may assert Fourth Amendment claim on that individual's behalf if relevant state's law authorizes survival action. Moreland v. Las Vegas Metro. Police Dep't (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 365, 369 ; Smith v. City of Fontana (9th Cir. 1987) 818 F.2d 1411, 1416-1417 , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 935

In California, 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim survives, and personal representative or successor in interest of victim may bring the action. Byrd v. Guess (9th Cir. 1998) 137 F.3d 1126, 1131 , cert. denied, 525 U.S. 963 ; Ochoa v. Superior Court (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 159, 173-174, 216 Cal. Rptr. 661, 703 P.2d 1

[j] Absolute Immunity

Prosecutors were entitled to absolute immunity from claim of failure to provide potential impeachment information about jailhouse informant who testified against plaintiff at his murder trial that informant had previously received reduced sentences for providing prosecutors with favorable testimony in other cases, at least some prosecutors in district attorney's office knew about favorable treatment, office had not provided plaintiff's attorney with that information, and prosecution's failure to provide attorney with potential impeachment information had led to his erroneous conviction, where absolute immunity extended to claims prosecution failed to disclose impeachment material due to failure properly to train prosecutors, failure properly to supervise prosecutors, or failure to establish information system containing potential impeachment material about informants. Van De Kamp v. Goldstein (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 855, 172 L. Ed. 2d 706, 714-718

When official claiming immunity is prosecutor, courts will examine nature of function performed, not identity of actor who performed it, in deciding whether absolute immunity is available. Kalina v. Fletcher (1997) 522 U.S. 118, 127, 118 S. Ct. 502, 139 L. Ed. 2d 471

Prosecutor has only qualified immunity for investigative functions normally performed by detective or police officer; prosecutor has only qualified immunity when making statements to press at press conference. Buckley v. Fitzsimmons (1993) 509 U.S. 259, 272-278, 113 S. Ct. 2606, 125 L. Ed. 2d 209

Judges have no absolute immunity for nonjudicial actions, and for actions that, though judicial in nature, are taken in complete absence of all jurisdiction. Mireles v. Waco (1991) 502 U.S. 9, 11-12, 112 S. Ct. 286, 116 L. Ed. 2d 9

Prosecutors absolutely immune in initiating prosecution, presenting state's case, and participating in probable cause hearing; prosecutors entitled to only qualified immunity for giving legal advice to police in investigative phase of criminal case. Burns v. Reed (1991) 500 U.S. 478, 487, 111 S. Ct. 1934, 114 L. Ed. 2d 547

Public defender not immune from liability in action brought by criminal defendant who alleges that public defender conspired with state officials to deprive plaintiff of civil rights. Tower v. Glover (1984) 467 U.S. 914, 916, 104 S. Ct. 2820, 81 L. Ed. 2d 758

All witnesses, including police officers, who give testimony at criminal trial, have absolute immunity from civil suits for perjury brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 by person convicted in criminal suit. Briscoe v. Lahue (1983) 460 U.S. 325, 335-336, 103 S. Ct. 1108, 75 L. Ed. 2d 96

Absolute immunity generally applies to officials whose special functions or constitutional status require that level of protection. Harlow v. Fitzgerald (1982) 457 U.S. 800, 807, 102 S. Ct. 2727, 73 L. Ed. 2d 396

Executive branch officials, when participating in federal administrative agency's adjudicative process, are entitled to absolute immunity because they perform functions comparable to those of judges and prosecutors. Butz v. Economou (1978) 438 U.S. 478, 512-513, 98 S. Ct. 2894, 57 L. Ed. 2d 895

Judges are absolutely immune from liability for damages for violating constitutional rights of others when acting within scope of their duties. Stump v. Sparkman (1978) 435 U.S. 349, 355, 98 S. Ct. 1099, 55 L. Ed. 2d 331

State prosecutors are absolutely immune from liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for conduct intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process. Imbler v. Pachtman (1976) 424 U.S. 409, 430-431, 96 S. Ct. 984, 47 L. Ed. 2d 128

School board members are not entitled to absolute immunity. Wood v. Strickland (1975) 420 U.S. 308, 321-322, 95 S. Ct. 992, 43 L. Ed. 2d 214

Legislators are entitled to absolute immunity from liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for their legislative activities. Tenney v. Brandhove (1951) 341 U.S. 367, 372, 71 S. Ct. 783, 95 L. Ed. 1019

Prosecutor was entitled to absolute immunity because she was acting as criminal prosecutor when she secured warrant for arrest of plaintiff, who was initially arrested on harassment charges while serving part of his sentence after conviction on sex offense on community placement, and arrested again day after he was released pursuant to bench warrant issued due to his failure to progress in his court-imposed sexual deviancy treatment program, where prosecutor's motion for bench warrant applying law to facts alleged in supporting affidavits signed by witnesses essentially constituted initiation of new judicial proceedings against plaintiff for violating the terms of his community placement and not investigative act. Waggy v. Spokane County Wash. (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 707, 711-713

In action based on arrest of husband and wife for murder they did not commit, district attorney was entitled to absolute immunity for decision to charge them with murder and not release them, despite anonymous tips that they had not committed murder, but was not entitled to absolute immunity for advising officers to add book murder charges, because record did not support finding of absolute immunity. Ewing v. City of Stockton (9th Cir. 2010) 588 F.3d 1218, 1232-1234

In Bivens action based on plaintiff's arrest and detention under federal material witness warrant against former United States Attorney General, alleging the Attorney General unlawfully used federal material witness statute [18 U.S.C. § 3144] to investigate or preemptively detain him by promulgating policy by which FBI and DOJ would use federal material witness statute as pretext to arrest and detain terrorism suspects about whom they did not have sufficient evidence to arrest on criminal charges but wished to hold preventatively or to investigate further, Attorney General was not entitled to absolute immunity, where, although decision to seek material witness warrant to secure witness's testimony at trial is usually sufficiently related to judicial proceedings to be protected by absolute prosecutorial immunity, when prosecutor seeks material witness warrant to investigate or preemptively detain suspect, rather than to secure his testimony at another's trial, prosecutor is entitled at most to qualified, rather than absolute, immunity. al-Kidd v. Ashcroft (9th Cir. 2009) 580 F.3d 949, 957-964

Child protective services officer was not entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity for his alleged inclusion of false statements in affidavit seeking order to remove suspected child abuse victim from home and into protective custody, where alleged misrepresentation fell outside scope of absolute immunity afforded caseworkers, and where family's right to be free from judicial deception in securing removal order was clearly established at time of alleged misrepresentations to court. Greene v. Camreta (9th Cir. 2009) 588 F.3d 1011, 1033-1036

In former prisoner's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 complaint against, inter alia, former California Attorney General, in which he alleged he was wrongfully imprisoned for additional 19 months after California appellate court overturned statute under which he was incarcerated and Attorney General breached his alleged duties to monitor whether his sentence was void under invalidated statute and to take steps to effectuate his release, Attorney General was entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity, where claims fell within scope of his duties as criminal prosecutor. Cousins v. Lockyer (9th Cir. 2009) 568 F.3d 1063, 1068-1069

In action by former prisoner premised on failure to release her per terms of plea agreement, trial court properly granted prosecutor absolute immunity to prosecutors who participated in her parole hearings, where parole decisions were continuation of sentencing process. Trial court also properly granted parole board members absolute immunity from liability for actions taken while processing parole applications. Brown v. Cal. Dep't of Corr. (2009) 554 F.3d 747, 750-751

Although California Constitution authorized governor to review state parole board's decision granting, denying, revoking, or suspending parole of person sentenced to indeterminate term on conviction of murder [Cal. Const. art. V, § 8(b)], former governor who erroneously twice reversed parole board's grant of parole to plaintiff, who had been convicted of conspiracy to murder, was entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity even though he erroneously extended his authority to review parole decisions, where governor's review of parole decisions regarding prisoners convicted of murder was functionally comparable to judge's role, and where, given close relationship between murder and conspiracy to commit murder, governor's review of parole decisions involving person convicted of conspiracy to commit murder was not clearly outside scope of his jurisdiction. Miller v. Davis (9th Cir. 2008) 521 F.3d 1142, 1145-1148

Social worker who investigated whether mother was abusing her son and supervisor who filed child dependency petition were not entitled to absolute immunity in mother's action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 after dependency petition was denied, claiming much of information in three-page statement of facts included in petition was falsified, where social workers conducting investigations have no absolute immunity; and where, although social workers have absolute immunity when they make discretionary, quasi-prosecutorial decisions to institute court dependency proceedings to take custody away from parents, they are not entitled to absolute immunity from claims that they fabricated evidence during investigation or made false statements in dependency petition affidavit they signed under penalty of perjury, because those actions are not similar to discretionary decisions about whether to prosecute. Beltran v. Santa Clara County (9th Cir. 2008) 514 F.3d 906, 908-909

In § 1983 action alleging wrongful conviction against district attorney and chief deputy by man released on granting of petition for habeas corpus after serving 24 years in prison for murder, district attorney and deputy were not entitled to absolute immunity based on allegations they failed to develop policies and procedures and failed to adequately train and supervise their subordinates, to fulfill their constitutional obligation of ensuring that information regarding jailhouse informants was shared among prosecutors in their office, as result of which prosecutors did not share critical Brady impeachment information about jailhouse informant with defense counsel, where challenged conduct was administrative and not prosecutorial in function. Goldstein v. City of Long Beach (9th Cir. 2007) 481 F.3d 1170, 1172-1176

In action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against judge based on alleged resentencing to harsher sentence in violation of plaintiff's double jeopardy protection, judge was entitled to absolute immunity, when, although under state law, judge did not have jurisdiction to modify sentence after plaintiff had begun serving it, judge was immune from personal liability for sentencing party to greater punishment than authorized by law. Sadoski v. Mosley (9th Cir. 2006) 435 F.3d 1076, 1079

In action by housing corporation against city and city council members based on city council's failure to approve low income housing project, which approval was required by Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act, city council members were entitled to absolute legislative immunity, when, in actions and votes on council, council members were elected representatives acting on legislative decision affecting substantial area. Affordable Hous. Dev. Corp. v. City of Fresno (9th Cir. 2006) 433 F.3d 1182, 1193

Prosecutors were not entitled to absolute immunity for allegedly retaliating against former sheriff's office investigator by refusing to prosecute any case from school police department, by whom former investigator had become employed, in which former investigator did any investigation, when before adopting nonprosecution policy, prosecutors retaliated against him by telephoning school police department trying to sabotage his job prospects, which had no connection to judicial process, and when demands that he be barred from participating in any aspect of any investigation were not intimately tied to judicial process, but, rather, were administrative function; however, decision not to prosecute his cases and communication of decision was intimately tied to judicial process and entitled to absolute immunity. Botello v. Gammick (9th Cir. 2005) 413 F.3d 971, 975-978

In action under 42 U.S.C. §§ 1983 based on investigation and prosecution of plaintiff for homicide, trial court properly denied motion of deputy district attorney and investigator for summary judgment on grounds of absolute immunity, when investigator was engaged in police-type investigative work, not quasi-judicial advocacy, when he met with key witness at which he allegedly urged her to lie and when he performed other work associated with prosecution; and when there was sufficient evidence to support conclusion that deputy district attorney was actively directing investigator throughout his work on case. However, supervisory employees in district attorney's office were entitled to absolute immunity, when their conduct allegedly violating plaintiff's rights was closely related to prosecutorial decisions in trial phase and involved advocacy intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process. Genzler v. Longanbach (9th Cir. 2005) 410 F.3d 630, 637-644

District attorney and deputy district attorney were entitled to absolute immunity to extent second search warrant sought evidence to prosecute crimes charged in indictment, because their review of warrant before submission was intimately associated with judicial process, when probable cause had been established by grand jury and prosecutors' actions were directed at upcoming trial. Investigator was entitled to absolute immunity for his reliance on second search warrant to gather evidence for prosecution, because investigator gathering evidence one month after indictment was filed to prepare prosecutor for trial was engaged in advocacy function intimately associated with judicial process and was entitled to same immunity afforded prosecutor. However, defendants were not entitled to absolute immunity to extent collateral investigation into whether plaintiff-company in civil rights action was permeated with fraud went beyond any legitimate preparation to prosecute one company owner for any crime in removal of storage tank or for other crimes charged in indictment. KRL v. Moore (9th Cir. 2004) 384 F.3d 1105, 1110-1115

State board of medicine, state board of professional discipline, individual members and counsel of both boards, and executive director of board of medicine were functionally comparable to judges and prosecutors and accordingly entitled to protections of absolute immunity for their quasi-judicial and quasi-prosecutorial acts in denying plaintiff reinstatement of her physician assistant's license which were directly related to their adjudicatory function and ultimate resolution of disciplinary dispute; allegation that avoided protections of immunity involved board of medicine's billing statement sent to plaintiff's counsel for costs and fees incurred with respect to public records request, because billing practices of board were not sufficiently comparable to judicial or prosecutorial functions to be accorded protections of absolute immunity. Olsen v. Idaho State Board of Medicine (9th Cir. 2004) 363 F.3d 916, 922-929

District attorney engaging in retaliatory employment-related actions based on deputy district attorney's exercise of First Amendment free speech rights was not immune under Eleventh Amendment, when district attorney was carrying out functions of county, not state. Ceballos v. Garcetti (9th Cir. 2004) 361 F.3d 1168, 1182-1185

District court properly dismissed § 1983 claims against state legislators based on enactment of legislation deregulating state power industry, because legislators have absolute immunity against civil suit for legislative acts. Single Moms, Inc. v. Montana Power Company (9th Cir. 2003) 331 F.3d 743, 750

Members of Maui County Council were not entitled to absolute legislative immunity in denying conditional use permit to allow use of beachfront property as commercial wedding venue, when, although act of voting to deny permit was formally legislative in character, weighing in favor of legislative immunity, it did not in itself decide issue; decision was ad hoc based on circumstances of particular case that did not effectuate policy or create binding rule of conduct because it affected only single permit and single parcel of land; very limited impact of conditional use permit as affecting only few individuals rather than public at large weighed against absolute immunity; and in denying single application for permit, Council did not change Maui's comprehensive zoning ordinance or policies underlying it, nor did it affect county's budgetary priorities or services county provides to residents. Kaahumanu v. County of Maui (9th Cir. 2003) 315 F.3d 1215, 1219-1224

County commissioners were not entitled to absolute legislative immunity for firing administrative assistant, when predominant circumstances surrounding termination suggested that it involved ad hoc decisionmaking rather than formulation of policy, since decision was not made in accordance with legislative requirements of state law, fact that his duties continued to be performed by other employees suggested that decision was not policy decision that position was no longer necessary, and commissioners terminated him several months before end of fiscal year and immediately escorted him from building and directed him not to return; and when decision initially affected only individual employee rather than large number of people, since resolution terminating position occurred 17 months after termination, so that decision to terminate employee appeared to have been made separately from decision to terminate position, which affected all county citizens. Bechard v. Rappold (9th Cir. 2002) 287 F.3d 827

County prosecutor who appended to bail revocation motion his own sworn affidavit reciting allegedly false and suspect allegations of plaintiff's ex-wife without investigation was not entitled to absolute immunity, where he stepped outside prosecutorial role and into role of witness when he personally attested to truth of facts in affidavit. Prosecutor was also not entitled to absolute immunity as witness when he functioned as witness in ex parte rather than adversarial proceeding, atwhich plaintiff did not enjoy protections of adversary process, so as to be analogous to "complaining witness." Cruz v. Kauai County (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 1064, 1067-1068

Trial court did not err in denying summary judgment by determining that complaint contained some allegations against some individual police officer defendants who had testified in previous § 1983 action that would not be shielded by absolute immunity accorded to police witnesses, when complaint alleged nontestimonial conduct and conspiratorial conduct not inextricably tied to testimony; however, trial court should have granted summary judgment where record, fully developed after close of discovery, was entirely devoid of specific evidence connecting defendants to nontestimonial conspiracy to fabricate or suppress physical or documentary evidence or to suppress identities and testimony of other officers or civilian eyewitnesses to plaintiff's arrest. Paine v. City of Lompoc (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 975

Judge was absolutely immune from liability in action based on judge's alleged refusal to accommodate hearing impairment of litigant, when all of judge's actions in relation to claim were rulings on motions denying request for videotext display, and when ruling on motion is normal judicial function, as is exercising control over courtroom while court is in session; court ADA coordinator and court administrator was not entitled to summary judgment that she had absolute quasi-judicial immunity in refusing requests for videotext display, when type of decision-making authority exercised appeared to raise issue of material fact as to whether she was acting in administrative rather than quasi-judicial capacity. Duvall v. County of Kitsap (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1124, 1133

State prosecutors were not absolutely immune for following acts: (1) knowingly obtaining false statements from witness for purposes of prosecution; (2) filing false crime report; (3) investigation after filing false report and before empaneling grand jury; and (4) making statements to media. Prosecutors were entitled to absolute immunity for (1) securing grand jury indictment; (2) reprosecuting via information after dismissal of indictment; (3) securing arrest warrant when prosecutors themselves did not personally swear to facts in criminal complaint; and (4) opposing reappointment of defense counsel. Milstein v. Cooley (9th Cir. 2001) 257 F.3d 1004

Although acts of members of state medical board closely associated with judicial process were entitled to absolute immunity, responding to inquiry from another state verifying practice of neurosurgeon was not. Mishler v. Clift (9th Cir. 1999) 191 F.3d 998, 1008

Prosecutors engaged in prosecutorial functions intimately associated with judicial phase of criminal process are absolutely immune. Morley v. Walker (9th Cir. 1999) 175 F.3d 756, 759

Judge not entitled to absolute immunity in action arising from firing of court administrator for conduct that was protected speech under First Amendment; hiring and firing of court personnel is nonjudicial act. Nunez v. Davis (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 1222, 1229 n.3 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1115 (2000)

Prosecutors entitled to absolute immunity for performing advocate's role after initiation of grand jury proceedings, when prosecutors had probable cause under state law to initiate proceedings. Herb Hallman Chevrolet v. Nash-Holmes (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 636, 643 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 870

Prosecutors have absolute immunity for decisions to prosecute or not to prosecute. Roe v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1997) 109 F.3d 578, 583

Judge loses absolute immunity only when he or she acts in clear absence of jurisdiction or performs act that is not judicial in nature. Schucker v. Rockwood (9th Cir. 1988) 846 F.2d 1202, 1204 , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 995

Social services worker entitled to absolute immunity in acting in quasi-prosecutorial role in child dependency proceedings. Meyers v. Contra Costa County Dep't of Soc. Serv. (9th Cir. 1987) 812 F.2d 1154, 1157-1158 , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 829

Prosecutor's exercise of independent judgment regarding existence of probable cause is rebuttable presumption; unless presumption is overcome, arresting officer is insulated from liability for harm suffered after prosecutor initiated formal prosecution. Smiddy v. Varney (9th Cir. 1986) 803 F.2d 1469, 1471

California sheriffs conducting criminal investigations and acting as state agents with final policymaking authority over complained-of actions act on behalf of state when performing law enforcement activities and are absolutely immune from liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 under Eleventh Amendment. Venegas v. County of Los Angeles (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 820, 828-839

In action against county by county jail inmate who received threats against his life by other inmates due to his national ancestry, ethnicity, origin, and race, and who, despite his repeated requests to be moved to another facility, suffered injuries inflicted by inmates when jail employees refused to move him, sheriff was carrying out law enforcement function in setting policies pertaining to placement of inmates at county jail and therefore was acting as state official so that county was immune from § 1983 liability. Bougere v. County of Los Angeles (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 237, 241-248, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 711

State Bar, its officials, and its employees are absolutely immune from liability in civil rights actions arising out of their conduct of attorney disciplinary and admission proceedings. Rosenthal v. Vogt (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 69, 76, 280 Cal. Rptr. 1

Social workers are absolutely immune from 42 U.S.C. § 1983 suits alleging improper removal of minor from parental home based on suspicion of child abuse, and instigation of dependency proceedings. Alicia T. v. County of Los Angeles (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 869, 881, 271 Cal. Rptr. 513

Prosecutor is protected by absolute immunity that extends beyond conducting trial or hearing, and includes actions that must be taken before initiation of prosecution. Lebbos v. State Bar (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 656, 665-666, 211 Cal. Rptr. 847

Allegation of conspiracy between prosecutor and others to file and pursue unfounded charges is not sufficient to overcome prosecutorial immunity. Bach v. County of Butte (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 554, 567, 195 Cal. Rptr. 268

[k] Qualified Immunity

Although 13-year-old student's Fourth Amendment right was violated when she was subjected to search of her bra and underpants by school officials acting on reasonable suspicion she had brought forbidden prescription and over-the-counter drugs to school, because there were no reasons to suspect drugs presented danger or were concealed in her underwear, however, officials who ordered and conducted unconstitutional search were entitled to qualified immunity from liability, where there was reason to question clarity with which right was established. Safford Unified School Dist. v. Redding (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 2633, 174 L. Ed. 2d 354

In Bivens action by citizen of Pakistan, who was arrested on criminal charges in United States in wake of the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks and detained by federal officials, former Attorney General and former Director of Federal Bureau of Investigation were entitled to qualified immunity as to allegations they adopted unconstitutional policy subjecting him to harsh conditions of confinement on account of his race, religion, or national origin, where complaint did not plead factual matter that, if taken as true, stated claim that defendants deprived him of his clearly established constitutional rights by failing to plead sufficient facts to state claim for purposeful and unlawful discrimination. Ashcroft v. Iqbal (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1947-1954, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868

Saucier procedure should not be regarded as mandatory; police officers who arrested plaintiff without warrant and without exigent circumstances were entitled to qualified immunity because their entry into his home did not violate clearly established law, where when entry occurred, "consent-once-removed" doctrine had gained acceptance in lower courts and officers were entitled to rely on those cases, even though their own Federal Circuit had not yet ruled on "consent-once-removed" entries, so that unlawfulness of officers' conduct was not clearly established. Pearson v. Callahan (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 808, 172 L. Ed. 2d 565, 576-581

Deputy sheriffs were entitled to qualified immunity for search of home under warrant, even though suspects had moved three months earlier and residents were of different race from suspects, where orders to residents to get out of bed unclothed and stand for one to two minutes, in context of lawful search, were permissible and perhaps necessary to protect safety of deputies and there was no allegation deputies prevented residents from dressing longer than necessary to protect their safety. Los Angeles County v. Rettele (2007) 550 U.S. 609, 127 S. Ct. 1989, 1992-1994, 167 L. Ed. 2d 974

Police officer's attempt to terminate dangerous high-speed car chase that threatens lives of innocent bystanders does not violate Fourth Amendment, even when it places fleeing motorist at risk of serious injury or death. Thus, in summary judgment motion in § 1983 action against law enforcement officer based on high-speed chase with plaintiff in which officer applied push bumper to rear of plaintiff's vehicle, resulting in plaintiff losing control of vehicle and crashing, officer was entitled to qualified immunity, where, with regard to factual issue whether plaintiff was driving in such fashion as to endanger human life, plaintiff's version of events was so utterly discredited by record that no reasonable jury could have believed him, and court should have viewed facts in light depicted by videotape of events; and where officer did not violate Fourth Amendment even though officer's decision to terminate car chase by ramming his bumper into plaintiff's vehicle constituted seizure, because officer's actions were reasonable. Scott v. Harris (2007) 550 U.S.372 , 127 S. Ct. 1769, 1774-1779, 167 L. Ed. 2d 686

In § 1983 action against police officer for use of excessive force in shooting suspect in back as he attempted to flee scene, officer was entitled to qualified immunity, when she made decision that, even if constitutionally deficient, reasonably misapprehended law governing circumstances she confronted, and when officer's actions fell in hazy border between excessive and acceptable force, and case law did not clearly establish that her conduct violated Fourth Amendment. Brosseau v. Haugen (2004) 543 U.S. 194, 125 S. Ct. 596, 598-600, 160 L. Ed. 2d 583

Federal Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms agent who executed invalid search warrant was not entitled to qualified immunity, because given that particularity requirement is set forth in text of federal constitution, no reasonable officer could believe that warrant that plainly did not comply with requirement was valid and warrant was so facially deficient in failing to particularize place to be searched or things to be seized that executing officer could not reasonably presume it to be valid, because agent himself prepared invalid warrant, he could not argue he reasonably relied on magistrate's assurance that warrant contained adequate description of things to be seized and was valid, and because guidelines of petitioner's own department placed him on notice he might be liable for executing manifestly invalid warrant. Groh v. Ramirez (2004) 540 U.S. 551, 124 S. Ct. 1284, 1293-1294, 157 L. Ed. 2d 1068

Alabama prison guards who handcuffed prisoner to "hitching post" for refusing to work or disrupting work squad were not entitled to qualified immunity, when attachment of prisoner to hitching post under circumstances alleged violated Eighth Amendment by knowingly subjecting prisoner to substantial risk of physical harm, to unnecessary pain caused by handcuffs and restricted position of confinement for 7-hour period, to unnecessary exposure to sun, to prolonged thirst and taunting, and to deprivation of bathroom breaks creating risk of particular discomfort and humiliation; and when violation was so obvious that Supreme Court Eighth Amendment cases gave guards fair warning that their conduct violated Constitution, and in light of binding Eleventh Circuit precedent, Alabama Department of Corrections regulation

(ADOC), and Department of Justice report informing ADOC of constitutional infirmity in its use of hitching post, guards' conduct violated clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Hope v. Pelzer (2002) 536 U.S. 730, 122 S. Ct. 2508, 2515-2519, 153 L. Ed. 2d 666

In Bivens action alleging use of excessive force against military police officer who arrested demonstrator on federal military base while Vice President of United States was giving public speech, officer was entitled to summary judgment on claim of qualified immunity, when circumstances of case disclosed substantial grounds for officer to have concluded he had legitimate justification for acting as he did, since officer did not know full extent of threat posed by demonstrator or how many other persons there might be who, in concert with demonstrator, posed threat to security of Vice President, and there was no clearly established rule that would prohibit using the force officer did to accomplish objectives of protecting Vice President by securing demonstrator and restoring order. Saucier v. Katz (2001) 533 U.S. 194, 121 S. Ct. 2151, 150 L. Ed. 2d 272

Although allowing media representatives to accompany law enforcement officers in execution of warrant in private home violated federal constitutional rights under U.S. Const., amend. IV, so that Bivens and 42 U.S.C. § 1983 actions were cognizable, law enforcement officers executing warrants were entitled to qualified immunity since right was not clearly established at time of execution of warrants. Wilson v. Layne (1999) 526 U.S. 603, 614-618, 119 S. Ct. 1692, 143 L. Ed. 2d 818 ; Hanlon v. Berger (1999) 526 U.S. 808, 809-810, 119 S. Ct. 1706, 143 L. Ed. 2d 978

To determine immunity, court must accept allegations in plaintiff's complaint as true. Kalina v. Fletcher (1997) 522 U.S. 118, 122, 118 S. Ct. 502, 139 L. Ed. 2d 471 ; Buckley v. Fitzsimmons (1993) 509 U.S. 259, 261, 113 S. Ct. 2606, 125 L. Ed. 2d 209 ; Morley v. Walker (9th Cir. 1999) 175 F.3d 756, 759

The rationales for qualified immunity for public officials are not applicable to private parties. Wyatt v. Cole (1992) 504 U.S. 158, 166, 112 S. Ct. 1827, 118 L. Ed. 2d 504 ; Franklin v. Fox (9th Cir. 2002) 312 F.3d 423, 444 ; Ellis v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1999) 176 F.3d 1183, 1191

Official seeking immunity bears burden of demonstrating that immunity attaches to particular function. Burns v. Reed (1991) 500 U.S. 478, 486, 111 S. Ct. 1934, 114 L. Ed. 2d 547 ; Morley v. Walker (9th Cir. 1999) 175 F.3d 756, 759

Qualified immunity protects all but those who are plainly incompetent or knowingly break law. Anderson v. Creighton (1987) 483 U.S. 635, 639-640, 107 S. Ct. 3034, 97 L. Ed. 2d 523

Qualified immunity is immunity from suit, not merely defense to liability; although denial of Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 12(b)(6) motion is not ordinarily appealable, denial of such motion based on claim of immunity is appealable before final judgment under collateral order doctrine. Mitchell v. Forsyth (1985) 472 U.S. 511, 525-527, 105 S. Ct. 2806, 86 L. Ed. 2d 411 ; Morley v. Walker (9th Cir. 1999) 175 F.3d 756, 759

Qualified immunity protects government officials performing discretionary functions insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Harlow v. Fitzgerald (1982) 457 U.S. 800, 818, 102 S. Ct. 2727, 73 L. Ed. 2d 396

Municipality not entitled to qualified immunity from liability by asserting good faith of municipal officials as defense. Owen v. City of Independence (1980) 445 U.S. 622, 638, 100 S. Ct. 1398, 63 L. Ed. 2d 673

District court properly denied summary judgment brought by police officers regarding whether they were entitled to qualified immunity in action alleging officers violated plaintiffs' decedent's Fourth Amendment rights by entering and searching apartment, using unreasonable force, and intentionally or recklessly provoking confrontation and fatally shooting plaintiffs' decedent, where there were genuine issues of fact regarding whether officers violated plaintiffs' decedent's Fourth Amendment rights, and those unresolved issues of fact were also material to proper determination of reasonableness of officers' belief in legality of their actions. Espinosa v. City & County of San Francisco (2010) 598 F.3d 528, 533-539

Law enforcement officers accused of failing to investigate accident allegedly caused by perpetrator's drunk driving or to make arrest due to race of victim, which was Korean, and that of perpetrator, which was Micronesian, like officers, were not entitled to qualified immunity, where, although individuals do not have constitutional right to have police arrest others who have victimized them, plaintiff's equal protection claim was that officers exercised discretion in deciding whom to arrest in racially discriminatory fashion, and diminished police services offered to plaintiff did not satisfy government's obligation to provide services on non-discriminatory basis; and where right to non-discriminatory administration of protective services was clearly established. Ae Ja Elliot-Park v. Manglona (9th Cir. 2010) 592 F.3d 1003, 1006-1009

In action against police officers based on officers' warrantless entry into plaintiffs' home, arrest of husband and wife, and tasing of wife, police officers were entitled to qualified immunity on claim of use of excessive force in tasing of wife, where, although Taser stun was serious intrusion into core of interests protected by Fourth Amendment and wife's actions were not serious crime, there was no Fourth Amendment violation because there was risk to immediate safety of officers and officers had important interest in obtaining immediate control, so that force used against wife was reasonable. Further, even if officers had used excessive force, it would not have been clear to any reasonable officer at time that use of Taser in situation they confronted was constitutionally impermissible. Mattos v. Agarano (9th Cir. 2010) 590 F.3d 1082, 1085-1090

In action alleging excessive force against police officer based on his deploying Taser against plaintiff during traffic stop for seatbelt infraction, police officer was not entitled to qualified immunity, where force used was excessive because Taser constituted intermediate, significant level of force that had to be justified by strong government interest compelling employment of that force, and plaintiff did not pose immediate threat to officers or bystanders despite his unusual behavior so there was no substantial government interest in using significant force to effect plaintiff's arrest for minor misdemeanor violations and intermediate level of force employed by officer was excessive in light of governmental interests at stake; and where reasonable officer in those circumstances would have known it was unreasonable to deploy intermediate force. Bryan v. McPherson (9th Cir. 2010) 590 F.3d 767, 772-782

Police officers were entitled to qualified immunity in connection with their decision not to release husband and wife who had been arrested for murder, despite anonymous tips that they had not committed murder, where anonymous tips, standing alone, were entitled to little weight, no witness who was willing to identify himself identified real murderer, and officers had multiple identifications of wife and one weak identification of husband; and where there was no similar case in which constitutional violation was found, and plaintiffs did not establish that given conflicting evidence officers possessed, only plainly incompetent officer or one intent on knowingly violating the law would have concluded probable cause had dissipated. Ewing v. City of Stockton (9th Cir. 2010) 588 F.3d 1218, 1231-1232

Police officer was entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action by 14-year-old boy accused of sexual abuse by 4-year-old child, brought after charges were dismissed, where, although child's statements were not sufficiently reliable to establish probable cause to seize plaintiff and officer could not rely solely on uncorroborated, inconsistent statements of very young child to establish probable cause to arrest plaintiff, reasonable officer in his position could have believed that statements by child established probable cause, given that he personally interviewed child and determined she was credible before he seized plaintiff. However, officer was not entitled to qualified immunity for claim that he coerced confession from plaintiff in violation of Fifth Amendment, where at time of interrogation, officer was on notice under clearly established law that if he failed to provide plaintiff with appropriate Miranda warnings or physically or psychologically coerced statement from him, use of confessions could ripen into Fifth Amendment violation. Stoot v. City of Everett (9th Cir. 2009) 582 F.3d 910, 918-922, 927-928

In Bivens action based on plaintiff's arrest and detention under federal material witness warrant, against former United States Attorney General, alleging that Attorney General developed, implemented and set into motion policy or practice under which FBI and DOJ would use material witness statute to arrest and detain terrorism suspects about whom they did not have sufficient evidence to arrest on criminal charges but wished to hold preventively or to investigate further, Attorney General was not entitled to qualified immunity, where plaintiff's Fourth Amendment rights were violated because material witness arrest was seizure without suspicion of wrongdoing and material witness statute was not used for its intended purpose, and, although at time no case had squarely confronted question of whether misuse of material witness statute to investigate suspects violated federal constitution, plaintiff's right not to be arrested as material witness in order to be investigated or preemptively detained was clearly established. al- Kidd v. Ashcroft (9th Cir. 2009) 580 F.3d 949, 964-973

Indian tribal officers were entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action based on their actions in arresting and citing plaintiff for state law violations at roadblock, where probable cause supported arrest and citation of plaintiff for state law violations in refusing to show his driver's license and refusal to obey lawful order of officer, and where even if roadblock were to be determined unconstitutional and stop was determined to be unlawful and to taint probable cause for the arrest, this principle was not clearly established law at time of arrest. Bressi v. Ford (9th Cir. 2009) 575 F.3d 891, 898-899

Police officers were entitled to qualified immunity, where officers could constitutionally detain occupants of home during probation compliance search, and where, assuming probationer was at home, plaintiffs were detained during legal search of their home, detention was not violation of their clearly established constitutional rights, Sanchez v. Canales (9th Cir. 2009) 574 F.3d 1169, 1173-1175

Police officers were not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action based on their entering plaintiff's house without warrant because they believed he was in or on brink of diabetic coma, arresting him without probable cause, and using excessive force, where officers had no objectively reasonable basis to believe there was medical emergency or other immediate risk to life or limb; officers did not have probable cause to believe plaintiff had been driving under influence of alcohol and immediate entry was necessary to obtain evidence of his blood alcohol content before alcohol in his bloodstream metabolized based on uncorroborated statement by witness had she been involved in extremely minor car accident with plaintiff, she smelled alcohol on his breath, and he appeared intoxicated; and where contours of both emergency and exigent circumstances exceptions to warrant requirement were clearly established at time of entry. However, officer who did not participate in entry into home was entitled to qualified immunity, where officer waited in yard interviewing witness and did not participate in unconstitutional search in any fashion. Officers were also not entitled to qualified immunity with respect to unlawful arrest claim based on arrest inside plaintiff's home, where arrest within his home violated his Fourth Amendment rights by arrest without warrant without emergency or exigent circumstances and law was clearly established, but officers were entitled to qualified immunity with respect to effectuating citizen's arrest for hit-and-run accident, because although they violated plaintiff's Fourth Amendment rights because they did not have sufficient independent probable cause to arrest for hit-and-run, requirement that police officer establish independent probable cause before taking individuals into custody solely on basis of citizen's arrest was not clearly established. Officers were not entitled to qualified immunity on claim that they employed excessive force in executing arrest inside his house, where it was clearly established that use of drawn firearms as excessive force in effecting seizure as violation of Fourth Amendment was clearly established, and officers were fully aware at all times plaintiff did not pose threat to anyone, officers outnumbered plaintiff, he was unarmed, and any putative crime officers might have been investigating was misdemeanor. Hopkins v. Bonvicino (9th Cir. 2009) 573 F.3d 752, 762-777

In action by two men who served nearly 13 years in state prison for murder of which both were declared factually innocent by courts, alleging that police officers withheld exculpatory evidence and manufactured and presented perjured testimony during investigation and prosecution of plaintiffs, district court properly denied officers' motion for summary judgment on basis of absolute and/or qualified immunity, where Brady imposed duty on police officers as well as prosecutors to disclose exculpatory evidence, and evidence indicated that officers acted with reckless indifference to plaintiffs' due process rights, and placing notes regarding witness's statements in police file did not fulfill their duty to disclose exculpatory information to prosecutor. Officers were not entitled to qualified immunity for delay in disclosing confession by another man to murder, where inspectors received Mirandized confession by someone who had been named by reliable witness, known to officers, who recounted events surrounding murder in detail, and whose account contradicted that of prosecution's witnesses, so that it would have been clear to reasonable officer that such material should have been disclosed to defense. Issues of fact precluded summary judgment on issue of whether inspectors were entitled to qualified immunity with respect to their request for reward from Secret Witness Program to encourage witnesses to come forward with information about murder, about which they never notified district attorney or defense, where evidence regarding reward was not undisputed, and inspectors' placement of request in their file did not satisfy their obligation to disclose evidence to district attorney. Tennison v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2009) 570 F.3d 1078, 1087-1090

In action by mother and child for violation of Fourth Amendment rights based on in-school seizure and two-hour interrogation of child without warrant, exigent circumstances or parental consent by child protective services officer and law enforcement officer, officers were entitled to qualified immunity, where, although Fourth Amendment rights were violated by seizure and interrogation, Ninth Circuit precedent did not clearly establish that in-school seizure of student suspected of being victim of child sexual abuse could be subject to traditional Fourth Amendment protections, and where, applying the lesser "special needs" standard that officers incorrectly thought applied, their actions were not so clearly invalid as to strip them of immunity. However, child protective services officer was not entitled to qualified immunity on claim under Fourteenth Amendment premised on his decision to exclude mother from her daughters' physical examinations to determine whether they had been sexually abused as violating mother's substantive due process right to be there for her children and daughter's right to have their mother there when they faced potentially traumatic events, where parents and children maintained clearly established familial rights to be with each other during potentially traumatic medical examinations unless there was valid reason to exclude family members from exam room during medical procedure, and mother was ordered to leave premises entirely, depriving her of any opportunity to comfort her children even after examinations had been completed, and mother's and daughter's rights were clearly established at that time. Greene v. Camreta (9th Cir. 2009) 588 F.3d 1011, 1030-1033, 1036

Sheriff's officer who removed child from mother's and stepfather's home without warrant and placed her in protective custody based on interview with child after she had returned home after running away was entitled to qualified immunity on claim that he violated non-custodial father's associational rights, where existing case law referred only to removal of a child from custody of its parent, court had previously not defined type of custody, and custody was commonly thought of as referring only to "physical" custody, so that reasonable officer would not have known that failure to contact non-custodial father, who did not have physical custody, was clearly unlawful. Burke v. County of Alameda (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 725, 733-734

In action against city, mayor and city council members alleging violation of First Amendment rights based on ejection of plaintiff from two city council meetings, mayor and council members were entitled to qualified immunity, where chair had great discretion in enforcing reasonable rules for orderly conduct of meetings, and, although discretion was not unlimited and rules could not be enforced in order to suppress particular viewpoint, plaintiff was ejected after giving Nazi salute in protest of chair's enforcing time limitations and in support of disruption that had just occurred in back of meeting room, not on account of any permissible expression of point of view; and where, even if court was to hold plaintiff's First Amendment rights were violated, it would not have been clear to reasonable person in mayor and council's position ejection was unlawful, given difficult circumstances and threat of disorder presented by disruptions. Further, plaintiff's refusal to comply with ejection order established probable cause for his arrest, where even if ejection violated his rights, there would have been no basis for reasonable police officer to believe he was defying anything other than lawful order. Norse v. City of Santa Cruz (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 697, 699-700

Police detective and deputy district attorney were not entitled to qualified immunity in pretrial detainee's action based on detective's forcefully extracting DNA sample from detainee, with approval of deputy district attorney, to put sample in cold case data bank, after he was shackled and chained to metal bar, without warrant or court order authorizing taking of sample, and despite fact that detainee was not under any suspicion of a crime for which DNA sample might have been justified, where forcible taking of DNA sample violated detainee's clearly established Fourth Amendment rights, and law enforcement officers could not conduct suspicionless search on pretrial detainee for reasons other than prison security, and where Fourth Amendment right was clearly established at time of search and no reasonable detective or prosecutor could have thought search was justified under law at time of search. Friedman v. Boucher (9th Cir. 2009) 568 F.3d 1119, 1124-1132

In former prisoner's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 complaint against former director of California Department of Corrections and warden of prison in which he was incarcerated, in which he alleged he was wrongfully imprisoned for additional 19 months after California appellate court overturned statute under which he was incarcerated and officials breached their alleged duties to monitor whether his sentence was void under invalidated statute and to take steps to effectuate his release, officials were entitled to qualified immunity, where prisoner could not show that any federal constitutional right that may have been violated by officials was clearly established in law, because prisoner offered no decisional, statutory, or other legal basis to suggest that reasonable official standing in officials' shoes would have had any way of knowing that by failing to personally check all California appellate court decisions for changes in law, failing to apply those changes to individual inmates statewide, and then failing to contact appropriate sentencing courts, official was violating prisoner's constitutional rights. Cousins v. Lockyer (9th Cir. 2009) 568 F.3d 1063, 1069-1071

In § 1983 action arising out of nighttime search and seizure, denial of qualified immunity to city and two deputy sheriffs on scope of search warrant to cover evidence of gang affiliation and all firearms and firearms-related items was error, where, although warrant may have been overbroad, deputies could reasonably defer to review of warrant by deputy district attorney and judge, and they reasonably relied on approval of warrant by deputy district attorney and judge. Millender v. County of L.A. (9th Cir. 2009) 564 F.3d 1143, 1148-1151

Police officers were entitled to qualified immunity on claims of unlawful detention and arrest of plaintiff, where officer had reasonable suspicion to order plaintiff to step out of his car after finding plaintiff asleep at wheel of car in parking lot, because to officer, who had 80 hours of training in drug influence recognition, facts taken together amounted to reasonable suspicion that plaintiff was under influence of illegal stimulants, and officer could legally detain plaintiff by ordering him out of his vehicle to further investigate; where, in considering totality of circumstances, plaintiff's innocent explanations for his odd behavior could not eliminate suspicious facts from probable cause calculus for arrest, and objective facts known to officer when he ordered plaintiff out of his car, together with information officer obtained after plaintiff was out of his car, could have led reasonable officer confronted with same situation to believe probable cause existed to arrest plaintiff; where officers' impoundment of plaintiff's car for its safekeeping was reasonable under community caretaking doctrine. However, officer was not entitled to qualified immunity regarding pat-down search of plaintiff as violating Fourth Amendment because officer's only justification for pat-down search was conclusory reference to "officer safety," and officer failed to allege specific facts establishing reasonable suspicion that plaintiff was armed and dangerous and at the time of pat-down, it was clearly established that every pat-down was unreasonable unless supported by officer's reasonable suspicion that person to be frisked was armed and dangerous. Ramirez v. City of Buena Park (9th Cir. 2009) 560 F.3d 1012, 1020-1025

In action by residents of house shared with couple who operated house of prostitution, district court erred by denying police officer who obtained and executed search warrant, where officer's belief that probable cause existed to search home was not unreasonable, given police investigation indicating that business operated out of house served as house of prostitution; and where, although better warrant application would have explicitly stated that in officer's investigative experience, she knew that owners of prostitution houses often kept evidence of illegal businesses, including money from businesses, in their homes, officer's affidavit was not so lacking in indicia of probable cause as to render reasonable officer's belief in existence of probable cause unreasonable. Johnson v. Walton (9th Cir. 2009) 558 F.3d 1106, 1110-1112

In action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 alleging police officers lacked probable cause to arrest plaintiff on suspicion of passing counterfeit bill, officers were entitled to qualified immunity, where it was not clearly established that evidence beyond tender of counterfeit bill was required for probable cause, and, assuming tender was enough to establish probable cause, officers' belief that bill was fake was reasonable, because bill looked odd and lacked many modern security features. Rodis v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2009) 558 F.3d 964, 968-971

District attorney and members of district attorney's office were properly denied qualified immunity for actions taken in alleged retaliation against assistant district attorney in violation of his First Amendment rights, where assistant district attorney had personal constitutional interest in his own speech and in his attorney's interview with newspaper, where allegations demonstrated that assistant district attorney's First Amendment rights were violated with respect to both his own comments and his attorney's statements on his behalf to press, and where his rights were clearly established with respect to speech pursuant to his official employment duties and with respect to his attorney's speech to press. Eng v. Cooley (9th Cir. 2009) 552 F.3d 1062, 1067-1076

Deputy sheriff was not entitled to qualified immunity for violating plaintiffs' Fourth Amendment rights by entering and searching their home without warrant to look for parolee who did not live there, where plaintiffs' constitutional rights were clearly established at time of violation, because police could search residence for parolee without warrant only if their belief that parolee lived there was based on equivalent of probable cause, which deputy did not have, and, although there was inconsistency in language court used then to describe standard for deputy's behavior, however standard was described, his conduct fell well below it. Cuevas v. De Roco (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 726, 735-736

Detectives who arrested plaintiff without probable cause were not protected by qualified immunity, where in light of arguably suggestive photo array, witness's merely comparative identification six weeks after shooting, lack of direct evidence that plaintiff was member of gang, lack of physical evidence tying plaintiff to shooting, fact that plaintiff did not attempt to flee when detectives approached him, and lack of evidence third male passenger in car acted in concert with shooter with conscious disregard for human life, material issue of fact existed as to whether reasonable officer would have relied on information in detectives' possession without further verification. However, detective who was told by another detective that witness had identified plaintiff from photo array and who, because he was not shown witness's written statement on photo array, believed witness had positively identified Torres, was entitled to qualified immunity, where reasonable officer in his position would have believed he had probable cause to arrest plaintiff. Torres v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2008) 548 F.3d 1197, 1210-1212

In action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 by parents for violation of their Fourteenth Amendment due process right to associate with their son, who was killed by defendant police officer, appropriate standard of culpability to apply to conduct of police officer was whether officer's behavior met shocks-the-conscience standard by showing that he acted with purpose to harm plaintiffs' decedent for reasons unrelated to legitimate law enforcement objectives, where approximately five-minute altercation between plaintiffs' decedent and officer that ended in plaintiffs' decedent's shooting was fast paced, quickly evolving and escalating, prompting repeated split-second decisions. Because standard was clearly established at time of shooting, facts suggesting that officer's own conduct created and agitated escalating situation and his reactions were disproportionate to situation he faced were more relevant to district court's determination on remand whether officer was entitled to qualified immunity or whether plaintiffs could show officer's purpose was to harm plaintiffs' decedent for reasons unrelated to legitimate law enforcement objectives. Porter v. Osborn (9th Cir. 2008) 546 F.3d 1131, 1136-1142

In action by owners of assisted living facilities for elderly for violation of First Amendment rights by state officials, owner's pursuit of administrative appeal of fine levied against one facility, legislative lobbying efforts to acquire license for another boarding home facility, advocacy related to his interpretation of building codes that would have permitted another facility to be grandfathered out of sprinkler installation requirements, statement to press after license revocation, and pursuit of both administrative review and court-ordered stay of summary revocation of his license fell within First Amendment's protection of rights of regulated entities to free speech and to petition for redress of grievances, and defendants, who were state officials, were not entitled to qualified immunity, where relevant law was clearly established at time of alleged violation. CarePartners LLC v. Lashway (9th Cir. 2008) 545 F.3d 867, 876-884

Although it was clear sheriff's deputies could not apply time, place, or manner restriction on speech to plaintiffs' activities in driving around middle school in truck displaying large, graphic photographs of first-term aborted fetuses on sides of truck and in security vehicle by detaining them under Cal. Pen. Code § 626.8, prohibiting disruptive entry onto school grounds, without advancing any significant state interest by doing so, deputies could have made reasonable mistake in believing § 626.8 applied to plaintiffs' conduct and thus advanced significant state interest, entitling them to qualified immunity, where there was no case law determining whether § 626.8 applied to circumstances deputies faced, and where there was some question whether heckler's veto consideration applied when target audience consisted of children, so that court could not conclude law was sufficiently clear that reasonable officer would know it was unlawful to request plaintiffs to cease driving their truck around area. However, deputies were not entitled to qualified immunity on Fourth Amendment issues raised by detention of plaintiffs and search of security vehicle, where, as to detention, it was overly long, deputies' constitutional duty to act diligently and pursue means of investigation likely to confirm or dispel their suspicions quickly was clearly established on date of detention, and it should have been readily apparent to reasonable officer that Cal. Pen. Code § 626.8 provided no basis for detention; and where, as to search, deputies acted under authority of Cal. Veh. Code § 2806 and case law clearly warned that police could only search vehicle under § 2806 when there was reasonable cause to believe inspection could uncover evidence of either potentially dangerous conditions or more serious code violations, and entering vehicle to turn on lights was not likely to provide information about either. Center for Bio-Ethical Reform, Inc. v. Los Angeles County Sheriff Dept. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 780, 793-794, 798

Although police officers violated plaintiff's First Amendment rights by arresting him, impounding his van and forcing him to remove political messages painted on van, they were entitled to qualified immunity, where in no case had court held on identical or closely comparable facts that speech was protected by First Amendment, because in May 2004, when officers acted, what might previously have been understood as relatively harmless talk might, in immediate aftermath of September 11, have been understood to constitute real threat; further, caller who alerted police to presence of van was clearly worried by language on van and by threat it or its owner might pose, and there was evidence police captain and sergeant felt van and its owner were making true threat, so that court could not conclude that at time of incident, all reasonable officers would have concluded that speech was protected by the First Amendment. Fogel v. Collins (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 824, 833-834

In § 1983 action for violation of First and Fourth Amendment rights by man arrested for threatening police sergeant and chief of police based on confrontation with them, sergeant and chief were not entitled to qualified immunity, where man was arrested in retaliation for his speech without probable cause; where, as to sergeant, reasonable official in his position would have understood that arresting individual in retaliation for protected speech was constitutionally impermissible and would have known that warrant application and criminal complaint were objectively unsupported by probable cause; and where, as to chief of police, who did not sign or prepare police report, criminal complaint, or declaration submitted to secure warrant, it should have been clear to him there was no probable cause to arrest yet he failed to do anything to stop process that led to arrest, but instead abetted it and threatened chamber of commerce members when they attempted to get involved. Beck v. City of Upland (9th Cir. 2008) 527 F.3d 853, 870-872

Although towing of car without notice to owner violated her due process rights, police officer who ordered towing was entitled to qualified immunity, where officer did not violate owner's clearly established right, where constitutional requirement at issue, i.e., that pre-towing notice be given before car with valid planned non-operation certificate could be removed from parking lot matching owner's address, was not clearly established at time of officer's actions, because, although due process generally requires notice before government may deprive citizen of property, case law recognizes many exceptions, and courts had never before held municipalities must always notify vehicle owners before towing. However, private towing company that actually towed vehicle could not assert qualified immunity because that defense is generally not available to private defendants in § 1983 lawsuits. Clement v. City of Glendale (9th Cir. 2008) 518

F.3d 1090, 1096

Highway patrol officer, deputy district attorney, and investigator employed by different county's district attorney's office were qualifiedly immune in action by partnership under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on their preparation, review and execution of one search warrant even though Ninth Circuit previously held both warrants lacked probable cause, violating plaintiffs' Fourth Amendment rights, where all defendants reasonably relied on warrant because reasonable minds could have viewed warrant as facially valid; although highway patrol officer and deputy district attorney were similarly entitled to qualified immunity for second warrant, which expanded temporal scope of first warrant, investigator was not, where, given his leadership role in overall investigation, investigator acted unreasonably when he relied on second warrant without first ensuring warrant was facially valid, because reasonable officer making such inquiry would have concluded that discovery of ledger and several checks predating allegedly fraudulent activity by five years did not provide sufficient probable cause to search for documents. KRL v. Moore (9th Cir. 2008) 512 F.3d 1184, 1189-1193

Police officer involved in high-speed chase was qualifiedly immune in § 1983 action by driver of car sideswiped by officer in course of chase, where intent to harm standard applies to all high-speed police chases, and officer did not act with requisite intent, even though his decision to join pursuit may have been ill-advised as well as his execution, because poor judgment alone in high-speed chase did not violate Fourteenth Amendment. Bingue v. Prunchak (9th Cir. 2008) 512 F.3d 1169, 1174-1178

Police officer who was called to home of plaintiff's son after son shot at departing party guests and who fatally shot son was entitled to qualified immunity in mother's action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for use of allegedly excessive deadly force, where officer's conduct met objective reasonableness standard because prior to taking fatal shot, officer had observed son's agitated behavior, heard him threaten to shoot police, observed him carrying 22-caliber rifle, and knew he had previously shot at car full of people and wounded two people in car earlier that night, so that when fellow officers radioed that son was yelling threats at them and then radioed that son was shooting at them, officer had probable cause to believe son posed an immediate danger to officers; and where there were multiple eyewitnesses and report that fairly accurately recorded SWAT team's activities on night of son's death. Long v. City & County of Honolulu (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 901, 905-907

Police officer who arrested female schoolteacher for allegedly molesting female student was qualifiedly immune from teacher's § 1983 action and entitled to summary judgment, where officer had probable cause for arrest based on student's allegations of teacher's misconduct against her, and his experience and special training in dealing with sexual abuse of children and advanced interviewing in evaluating student's story. John v. City of El Monte (9th Cir. 2007) 505 F.3d 907, 910-913

State secretary of state was entitled to qualified immunity for threatened criminal prosecution of owners of websites offering voters mechanisms for vote swapping and vote exchange, where, although he violated their First Amendment rights, application of First Amendment doctrine to vote swapping was not clearly established at time. Porter v. Bowen (9th Cir. 2007) 496 F.3d 1009, 1018-1026

Police officers were not entitled to qualified immunity for arrest and search of plaintiff, where officers did not have probably cause for arrest for trespass and reasonable officer would not have believed he had violated or was about to violate statute, and there was no probable cause to believe he had violated any other statute; and where reasonable jury could find officers strip searched plaintiff and violated his Fourth Amendment rights, because they did not have reasonable suspicion for search based on minor trespass, and no reasonable officer could have believed police station search as described by plaintiff at trial to be lawful. Edgerly v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2007) 495 F.3d 645, 651-657

State highway patrol officer was not entitled to qualified immunity in parents' action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on officer's unauthorized chase and shooting of their son, which were in violation of department policy, when, on facts presented by parents and disciplinary report of highway patrol department itself, no officer acting reasonably in circumstances could have believed he could use deadly force to apprehend son. Adams v. Speers (9th Cir. 2007) 473 F.3d 989, 993-994

Employees of district attorney's office and county and police officer and city were not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action by attorney based on judicial deception, based on wiretap interception of phone call from client to his office and then concealment of wiretap through "handoff" procedure, by which investigative unit that obtained wiretap order and conducted surveillance transmitted information to another unit without expressly stating delivering unit obtained information via wiretap, which executes arrest after observing illicit conduct to obtain independent probable cause, where attorney alleged facts showing that individual defendants violated his Fourth Amendment rights, pursuant to official policy, custom, or practice of city and county of Los Angeles, and contours of Fourth Amendment right against judicial deception were clearly established. Whitaker v. Garcetti (9th Cir. 2007) 486 F.3d 572, 581-582

Police officers were entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action for unlawful arrest, where officers had probable cause to arrest because they had probable cause to believe he was trespassing and prudent person would have believed he was trespassing; and where, even absent probable cause, law was not clearly established because there was no state case law specifically holding that previous, relatively recent, banishment from private property could not serve as requisite request to leave under trespassing statute. Officers were not entitled to qualified immunity as to excessive force claim, where there were genuine issues of material fact regarding use of gang tackling, use of hobble restraints, and one officer's punching, and state of law was clearly established at time of arrest and gave arresting officers sufficiently fair notice their conduct could have been unconstitutional. Blankenhorn v. City of Orange (9th Cir. 2007) 485 F.3d 463, 475-481

State troopers were not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action based on their pulling plaintiff over on suspicion of having invalid license plates and then doing a pat-down search in which troopers allegedly used excessive force, where no reasonable officer could have concluded that individual suspected of license plate violation posed threat that would justify slamming him against hood of a car; plaintiff did not take swing at officers, nor did officers detect suspicious bulges or metallic glints on his person; plaintiff did not resist officers or flee; removal of 20 to 25 pens and pencils from plaintiff's person did not mean he posed immediate threat as pens and pencils have legitimate, non-violent uses; use of force was not justified because plaintiff carried firearm in his car because they were unaware of fact when they forced him onto hood of their car and he was well away from his vehicle and unable to access weapon; plaintiff was neither threatening nor physically abusive and even if he was adamant in his belief that he was not required to register his vehicle with state, which was mistake of law, attitude did not justify deliberate infliction of pain. Although troopers claimed they feared for their safety based on prior experiences with plaintiff, they pointed to no facts justifying such fear. Further, reasonable officer would have known that use of force here was excessive. Winterrowd v. Nelson (9th Cir. 2007) 480 F.3d 1181, 1183-1186

Police officer was not entitled to qualified immunity in action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for use of allegedly unreasonable and excessive force, where force used by officer was severe, crime committed was minor, danger to officer was minimal as was risk of flight, and there were many less abusive means through which officer could have accomplished his objective, so that weighing severity of force used against governmental interests at stake, facts at issue demonstrate that officer's actions were unreasonable, violating plaintiff's Fourth Amendment rights; and where reasonable officer in officer's position would have known his conduct constituted excessive force. Davis v. City of Las Vegas (9th Cir. 2007) 478 F.3d 1048, 1053-1058

Law enforcement officer was entitled to qualified immunity because plaintiff failed to establish violation of Fourth Amendment rights by officer's obtaining warrant and seizing still camera without probable cause, where, although federal court was not bound by state court's finding that probable cause did not exist because it occurred in case state filed against plaintiff and officer lacked privity with state, warrant provided substantial basis for conclusion plaintiff had violated state law and evidence of violation was in his office. There was probable cause to seize still camera because affidavit provided substantial basis for believing it constituted or contained evidence of alleged crime. Further, officer was entitled to qualified immunity in his defense of claim that he retaliated against plaintiff for filing lawsuit against county and another officer, where, although searching office and seizing materials to chill or silence plaintiff demonstrated retaliation in violation of First Amendment, plaintiff was not required to plead absence of probable cause to state claim for retaliation, and plaintiff stated all elements necessary for retaliation claim, right to be free of police action motivated by retaliatory animus but for which there was probable cause was not clearly established at time of search. Skoog v. County of Clackamas (9th Cir. 2006) 469 F.3d 1221, 1229-1235

In 42 U.S. C. § 1983 action based on county law enforcement officers seeking and obtaining enhancement of bail after plaintiff was arrested on domestic violence charge, district court properly found that officers were entitled to qualified immunity, where plaintiff failed to establish triable issue of fact regarding whether his bail was unconstitutionally excessive because he failed to adduce evidence of reason for or motive behind enhancement of bail. Plaintiff could not demonstrate that officers were actual and proximate cause of bail enhancement, and law at time was not clearly established such that reasonable peace officer officers' position would have understood that conduct violated Eighth Amendment. Galen v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2006) 468 F.3d 563, 569-576

Police detective was entitled to qualified immunity on plaintiff's claims of excessive force and illegal arrest, when, despite government's concession of lack of probable cause so that arrest was unconstitutional, reasonable officer in detective's position would have believed he had probable cause to arrest plaintiff and use force in doing so based on particularized facts known by officers at time of encounter. Other detectives were entitled to qualified immunity, when although Fed. R. Crim. P. 41(d) required federal officers, absent exigent circumstances, to deliver warrant at outset of search and detectives commenced search after receiving telephonic confirmation but before physical delivery of warrant, officers were not federal officers. Further, even if Rule 41 applied to search, at that time failure to serve warrant at outset of search was not clearly established constitutional violation. Lastly, reasonable officer in detective's position would not have been on notice that plaintiff's girlfriend's consent to search apartment they shared was in any way involuntary. Burrell v. McIlroy (9th Cir. 2006) 464 F.3d 853, 857-859

In defending against motion for summary judgment on his Bivens claims, 11-year-old boy raised genuine issues of material fact regarding whether federal and state police officers' conduct violated his constitutional rights by alleging that individual defendants used excessive force when they pointed gun at his head and pointed guns at him for duration of incident involving arrest of both his parents, and that they subjected him to unreasonable detention. Reasonable officer would have known that force used against him violated his constitutional rights, and, further, detentions of child raised particular concerns to be assessed with other circumstances, and totality of circumstances supported conclusion that not only was boy's detention unreasonable, but reasonable officer would have known 11-year-old child who was unarmed, barefoot, vastly outnumbered, and not resisting arrest or attempting to flee should not have been kept in handcuffs for 15 to 20 additional minutes. Tekle v. United States (9th Cir. 2006) 457 F.3d 1088, 1094-1100

Police officer was entitled to qualified immunity in action alleging deprivation of mother's substantive due process rights based on his intervention in child custody and visitation dispute between parents, because no deprivation of constitutional right was alleged. Although mother, as non-custodial parent with court-ordered visitation rights, had liberty interest in companionship, care, custody, and management of child, it was lesser in magnitude than that of parent with full legal custody, and deprivation of mother's liberty interest in custody over child of single week period in long-running custody dispute did not rise to level of federal constitutional violation. Officer's actions were not conscience shocking as matter of law, because his interpretation of visitation order and decision to transfer child to father was objectively reasonable. Mother also failed to allege procedural due process violation by alleging lack of pre-deprivation hearing, because no pre-deprivation hearing was required before mother could be deprived of week of visitation and available state procedures were sufficient to satisfy requirements of due process. Brittain v. Hansen (9th Cir. 2006) 451 F.3d 982, 987-1002

In Bivens action based on violation of Fourth Amendment rights by false arrest and detention of resident alien for deportation by immigration officer on his arrival back in United States, officer was not entitled to qualified immunity. Officer had no basis for detaining plaintiff nor could she maintain she reasonably could have so believed at time given that immigration judge and BIA held plaintiff was not arriving alien as defined by INA, applicable regulations, and case law, and officer took plaintiff into custody under authority of expedited removal statute under which detention was valid only if plaintiff was arriving alien. Even if officer discovered at time that plaintiff's legalization applications were fraudulent, she could not have used information to remove him without breaking law. Further, under circumstances, it would have been clear to reasonable immigration officer that detaining plaintiff would violate his Fourth Amendment rights. Sissoko v. Rocha (9th Cir. 2006) 440 F.3d 1145, 1164-1168

Trial court properly denied motion for summary judgment by two deputy sheriffs asserting qualified immunity, when deputies learned that plaintiff was on parole and had outstanding arrest warrant only after searching and detaining him and existence of parole condition or outstanding bench warrant did not retroactively justify arrest and search. In addition, officers did not have reasonable suspicionbased on plaintiff's nervous behavior in high crime area. Plaintiff's constitutional rights when deputies conducted suspicionless search and seizure were clearly established and unlawfulness of deputies' conduct was apparent in light of preexisting law. Moreno v. Baca (9th Cir. 2005) 431 F.3d 633, 638-643
