The defaulting claimant's only remedy is to file a petition for writ of mandate or prohibition in the superior court appellate department. Nasir v Sacramento County Office of Dist. Attorney (1992) 11 CA4th 976, 15 CR2d 694 (notice deficient); Baca v Minier (1991) 229 CA3d 1253, 280 CR 810 (same). Courts have equitable powers to set aside a default judgment if the moving party shows good cause, takes quick action to correct the default, and has a meritorious defense. See People v One Parcel of Land (1991) 235 CA3d 579, 286 CR 739. See also U.S. v One Lot of $25,721 in Currency (1st Cir 1991) 938 F2d 1417 (federal courts not divested of jurisdiction of forfeited assets by execution of judgment). For discussion of writs, see chap 42.

A timely filed claim does not open the door to claimants who failed to file or filed late. U.S. v One Urban Lot Located at 1 Street A-1 (1st Cir 1989) 885 F2d 994.

Defendants may not obtain relief from state civil forfeiture proceedings under the automatic stay provision of 11 USC §362(a). In re James (James v Draper) (3d Cir 1991) 940 F2d 46.

With respect to a completed administrative forfeiture, a court has no jurisdiction to review the forfeiture on the merits. See U.S. v Eubanks (11th Cir 1999) 169 F3d 672. The sole inquiry the court can make is whether the prosecution followed the proper procedures for declaring the property forfeited. See Valderrama v U.S. (11th Cir 2005) 417 F3d 1189, 1196. Absent defective notice or improper procedures, a court is foreclosed from reviewing the merits of the forfeiture action. See Matter of Sixty Seven Thousand Four Hundred Seventy Dollars (11th Cir 1990) 901 F2d 1540, 1543.

§57.17 G. Filing of Claim Mandates Initiation of Judicial Proceeding

If a claim is timely filed and served on the prosecuting agency in an administrative forfeiture proceeding, the prosecuting agency must file a petition for judicial forfeiture within 30 days after receipt of the claim; otherwise, it loses the right to maintain custody of the seized property. Health & S C §11488.4(j). The claimant should seek an order for return of property from the court. People v Property Listed in Exhibit One (1991) 227 CA3d 1, 9, 277 CR 672. However, the 30-day time limit of §11488.4(j) is not jurisdictional. The prosecuting agency continues to have the right to bring a judicial forfeiture proceeding within 1 year after the seizure of the property. Health & S C §11488.4(a); People v Property Listed in Exhibit One, supra.

IX. JUDICIAL FORFEITURE

A. Initiating Judicial Forfeitures

§57.18 1. When Judicial Forfeiture Is Required, Even Without Filing of Claim

A judicial forfeiture must always be brought when real property is involved, or when the value of personal property sought to be forfeited exceeds $25,000. Health & S C §11488.4(a), (j). There is no provision preventing a prosecuting agency from electing to initiate a judicial forfeiture for property with a value of less than $25,000, although as a practical matter, this is seldom done, because administrative procedures are much less time-consuming and less costly.

The value of each individual piece of property controls the filing requirements, not the circumstances under which it was seized. See In re One 1985 Nissan (4th Cir 1989) 889 F2d 1317, 1322; Gutt v U.S. (WD Va 1986) 641 F Supp 603. Thus, even if the aggregate value of a defendant's personal property exceeds $25,000, if no one item is worth $25,000 or more, the prosecuting agency can avoid the necessity of judicial forfeiture proceedings by dividing the property into groups or items with a value of $25,000 or less.

Ø Example: If a single arrest results in the seizure of an automobile worth $15,000 and $20,000 in cash, the prosecuting agency may elect to file a judicial forfeiture action for both the cash and the car ($35,000 aggregate value), or two administrative forfeiture actions, one for the car and one for the cash.

The advantage of multiple administrative forfeiture actions is that they allow speedy forfeiture if no timely claim is filed. See Health & S C §11488.4(j). The disadvantage—i.e., if a claim is filed, the prosecuting agency may be faced with litigating two or more civil actions whose factual basis is the same—can probably be eliminated by moving to consolidate the cases.

§57.19 2. Prosecutor Files Petition

The first step in initiating judicial forfeiture proceedings is the filing of a petition for forfeiture by the prosecuting agency. It is unclear what rules apply to the petition. The only rules in the forfeiture statutes concerning petitions are those for the contents of petitions in nonjudicial proceedings, which are description of property; appraised value of property; date and place of seizure or location of any property not seized but subject to forfeiture; violation of law alleged with respect to forfeiture; and instructions for filing a claim, including time limits. Health & S C §11488.4(j).

Ø Note: Former Health & S C §11488.4(i) required compliance with the civil pleading rules of CCP §§420-475. Although the requirement no longer exists, a forfeiture is a civil proceeding, and compliance with the rules of pleading in civil cases appears to be appropriate.

© The Regents of the University of California

§57.20 3. Time for Filing Petition

The petition must be filed "as soon as practicable" after the seizure and in no case more than a year after the seizure. Health & S C §11488.4(a). Unjustified delay between the seizure and the filing of the forfeiture action could result in the setting aside or prevention of the forfeiture. See, e.g., U.S. v $8,850 in U.S. Currency (1983) 461 US 555, 76 L Ed 2d 143, 103 S Ct 2005.

© The Regents of the University of California

§57.21 4. Lis Pendens Must Be Filed When Real Property Is to Be Forfeited

If the subject matter of the forfeiture action is real property, a lis pendens must be filed and recorded with the county recorder in the county in which the property is located. Health & S C §11488.4(a). The lis pendens puts any potential transferee of title on notice of the pending forfeiture action and preserves the prosecuting agency's rights to the property under the forfeiture laws.

© The Regents of the University of California

§57.22 5. Service of Petition

The prosecuting agency must serve the petition on every individual designated in a receipt issued for the property seized. In addition, the agency must serve notices and a claim form "by personal delivery or by registered mail" on all individuals with an interest in the property. Health & S C §11488.4(c). These are the same individuals who must be given notice of a nonjudicial forfeiture. See Health & S C §11488.4(c) and discussion in §57.12.

© The Regents of the University of California

§57.23 B. Response to Petition: Claim

A claim opposing forfeiture must be filed within 30 calendar days after receipt of actual notice of the forfeiture or within 30 calendar days after the date of first publication of notice of forfeiture, if actual notice was not received. Health & S C §11488.5(a)(1). It must be verified by the claimant and state the nature of the claimant's interest in the property. It must be filed in the superior court indicated in the notice, and an endorsed copy served on the prosecuting agency within 30 calendar days after the claim is filed. Health & S C §11488.5(a)(1). (An endorsed or "conformed" copy is one that has been file-stamped by the court clerk. Counsel should bring extra copies when filing the original and have the copies file-stamped by the clerk at that time.) If a claim was already filed in response to earlier administrative notice (see §57.14), no second claim need be filed. Health & S C §11488.4(j). Only a person with standing may oppose forfeiture. See §57.13.

The Judicial Council has approved an official form for the verified claim, Form MC-200, available on the Council's website at http://www.courtinfo.ca.gov/forms.

Ø Note: Filing fees are required if the value of the contested property as set forth in the notice exceeds $5000. Health & S C §11488.5(a)(3).

The result if no claim is filed is default. Health & S C §11488.5(b)(1). See discussion in §57.24 on default.

© The Regents of the University of California

§57.24 C. Procedures When No Timely Claims Filed

When no timely claims have been filed in judicial forfeiture proceedings, the prosecution can obtain an ex parte order of forfeiture, but it must first establish a prima facie case in support of its petition for forfeiture. A prima facie case is made when the prosecution produces enough evidence to permit the fact finder to infer the truth of the facts that must be established to justify the forfeiture. See, e.g., Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v Burdine (1981) 450 US 248, 254 n7, 67 L Ed 2d 207, 216 n7, 101 S Ct 1089. The prima facie case may be shown by affidavits and declarations. CCP §§585(b), 585(d), 2015.5. If a prima facie case is shown, the court must declare the property forfeited. Health & S C §11488.5(d).

© The Regents of the University of California

§57.25 D. Discovery

Pretrial discovery in accordance with standard civil procedure is available to both sides in forfeiture cases. CCP §2017.010; People v 25651 Minoa Dr. (1992) 2 CA4th 787, 3 CR2d 577. Claimants who fail to comply with discovery orders risk having sanctions imposed, which may include striking claims and awarding a default judgment to the seizing entity. See, e.g., U.S. v $49,000 Currency (5th Cir 2003) 330 F3d 371, 375.

© The Regents of the University of California

§57.26 E. Case Settlement

It is often productive for counsel representing a claimant to seek a conference with the prosecutor as soon as forfeiture proceedings have begun. Counsel can discuss the merits of the action and see if the case can be settled without the need to file a petition for forfeiture. Counsel can sometimes bargain for the state to keep some assets and return others to the claimant. When real property is involved, the prosecution may be willing to return the real estate for a cash settlement. Some claimants simply file a claim form and attach to it evidence showing that a valid defense to forfeiture exists. See discussion of defenses in §§57.31-57.32. There is usually no need in a civil action such as this for claimant's counsel to be worried about giving the prosecution defense information, because this type of evidence is ordinarily discoverable in any event if the case proceeds to trial.

F. Judicial Forfeiture Trial

§57.27 1. Relationship of Forfeiture to Related Criminal Case; When Tried Separately as Civil Case

A conviction of one of the offenses specified in Health & S C §11470(f) or (g) is a condition precedent to the forfeiture of all property other than cash or negotiable instruments in excess of $25,000. In addition, the same trier of fact that convicts the defendant must try the issue of forfeiture unless this right is waived by all parties. Health & S C §11488.4(i)(3), (5). Express waiver may be required. See §57.1. But see People v $17,522.08 (2006) 142 CA4th 1076, 48 CR3d 519 (failure to post jury fees or request jury results in waiver); People v Brach (2002) 95 CA4th 571, 578, 115 CR2d 753 (in forfeiture-like proceeding to recover costs of marijuana eradication under Health & S C §11470.1, jury trial was waived by failure to request).

Cases in which the assets sought to be forfeited are cash or negotiable instruments valued at $25,000 or less require that a criminal conviction be obtained before forfeiture can be ordered. Health & S C §11488.4(i)(4).

The practical application of these sections is far from clear. What the statute appears to be saying is this: Determine first whether the forfeiture action is of the type that requires a conviction. If no conviction is required, the forfeiture case is assigned for trial by the presiding judge of the superior court. Health & S C §11488.4(i)(3). If the claimant is also the defendant in a related criminal case, the forfeiture case must be tried in conjunction with the criminal case as a bifurcated action. If the trier of fact acquits the defendant in the criminal case, forfeiture cannot be ordered, so there will be no forfeiture trial. If the trier of fact convicts the defendant of the needed target offense, then the same trier of fact tries the forfeiture case. See, e.g., People v Washington (1990) 220 CA3d 912, 269 CR 668.

If the claimant is not a defendant, but there is a related criminal case, the statute suggests that, if the defendant in the related case is convicted, the same trier of fact in the underlying criminal action tries the forfeiture for the nondefendant/claimant as well as for the defendant/claimant. See Health & S C §11488.4(i)(3). Section 11488.4(i)(3) does not require that the claimant or claimants to the property be convicted; it states that "a defendant" must be convicted. The use of the word "a" suggests that as long as a conviction occurs, the issue of forfeiture must be tried to the same jury, regardless of who the parties to the forfeiture may be.

Advice to prosecutor: In cases that require a criminal conviction and that have claimants other than the defendant, it is incumbent on the prosecutor to notify the claimant of the trial date for the related or underlying criminal case and file the notice with the court. It is highly unlikely that the clerk's office will do this.

Advice to defense counsel: In cases that require a criminal conviction and that have claimants other than the defendant, it is incumbent on defense counsel to meet and confer with counsel for the defendant in the underlying or related criminal case before the criminal case begins.

Ø Note: A forfeiture hearing may be continued on motion of either the prosecution or the defense until after a guilty verdict is rendered. Health & S C §11488.5(e).

© The Regents of the University of California

§57.28 2. Claim in Forfeiture Action Is Inadmissible in Criminal Case

The claim in a forfeiture action is not admissible in the underlying criminal case. Health & S C §11488.5(c)(1). By analogy to confessions, claims are probably admissible to impeach. See People v May (1988) 44 C3d 309, 243 CR 369, discussed in §23.28.

© The Regents of the University of California

§57.29 3. Conduct of Forfeiture Trial

Trial of a forfeiture action is by jury unless it is waived by the parties. Health & S C §11488.5(c)(2). Failure to assert the right to jury trial will result in a finding that the right was waived. People v $17,522.08 (2006) 142 CA4th 1076, 48 CR3d 519. Forfeiture trials have priority over other civil cases. Health & S C §11488.5(c)(1). The forfeiture trial can be set for hearing 30 calendar days after the date a verified claim was filed, or at any time thereafter that is convenient for the parties. Health & S C §11488.5(c)(1).

Forfeiture actions are often associated with a pending criminal action. See §57.27. A forfeiture trial, whether heard by the same jury that heard the related criminal case or alone, resembles a civil case in almost all respects. Forfeiture trials must be conducted under CCP §§607-630 if trial is by jury, and under CCP §§631-636 if trial is by the court. Health & S C §11488.5(e). Unlike criminal trials, forfeiture trials require only 9 of the 12 jurors to agree on a verdict. Further, there is no requirement that jurors agree on which theory of forfeiture supports the verdict. People v Washington (1990) 220 CA3d 912, 269 CR 668.

The burden of proof, however, is that of criminal trials—beyond a reasonable doubt—unless the property in question is cash or negotiable instruments of a value more than $25,000, in which case the burden of proof drops to clear and convincing evidence. Health & S C §11488.4(i). The burden of proof for property subject to forfeiture under Health & S C §11470(a)-(d) (e.g., controlled substances, raw materials and equipment used in production and distribution, containers, and business records) is by a preponderance of the evidence. People v Nazem (1996) 51 CA4th 1225, 1232 n7, 59 CR2d 794.

To support forfeiture, the state has the burden of proving that the owner of the property for which forfeiture is sought consented to its use with knowledge that it would be or was used for a purpose for which forfeiture is permitted. Health & S C §11488.5(d)(1)-(2).

> Ø Note: If standing is disputed, the claimant has the burden of proving standing by a preponderance of the evidence before the government is put to its burden of proof. People v Superior Court (Plascencia) (2002) 103 CA4th 409, 424, 126 CR2d 793.

Under Health & S C §11488.5(e), the trier of fact must find that the property for which forfeiture is sought was used for a purpose for which forfeiture is permitted and that the claimant had actual knowledge that the seized property would be or was used for a purpose for which forfeiture is permitted.

All property found by the trier of fact to be forfeitable is distributed according to Health & S C §11489. Health & S C §11488.5(f). Property not forfeited is released to the claimant unless it is subject to a hold by the Franchise Tax Board. Health & S C §11488.5(g). The court retains unforfeited property that is subject to a hold by the Franchise Tax Board. Health & S C §11488.5(g).

© The Regents of the University of California

§57.30 X. MOTION IN CRIMINAL CASE FOR RETURN OF SEIZED PROPERTY

A criminal defendant who is also a claimant in a forfeiture case may move in the criminal case for the return of the seized property under Pen C §1538.5. Health & S C §11488.4(h). The only ground for the motion is that no probable cause exists to believe that the property is forfeitable under Health & S C §11470(a)-(g). There are several exceptions. No §1538.5 motion can be made if the property is automatically made forfeitable (see §57.9) or is subject to court order of forfeiture or destruction by a provision in Health & S C §§11469-11495. Health & S C §11488.4(h).

If the court finds that there is no probable cause, it orders the return of the property. See People v Superior Court (Brent) (1992) 2 CA4th 675, 3 CR2d 375. If the motion is made after the preliminary hearing, the prosecuting agency may submit the transcript of the preliminary hearing to establish probable cause. Health & S C §11488.4(h). Probable cause in the context of seizing property for forfeiture is determined by the totality of the circumstances. To prevail against a motion for return, the prosecution "must offer some evidentiary basis for inferring a link between the seized property and past or future narcotics activity." People v $47,050 U.S. Currency (1993) 17 CA4th 1319, 1326, 22 CR2d 32. Compare People v $47,050 U.S. Currency, supra (link not established) with People v $48,715 U.S. Currency (1997) 58 CA4th 1507, 1515, 68 CR2d 829 (link established) and People v $497,590 U.S. Currency (1997) 58 CA4th 145, 68 CR2d 185 (link established). See also U.S. v $186,416 U.S. Currency (9th Cir 2009) 590 F3d 942.

If the motion is granted, the prosecutor has 15 days to seek appellate review of the order by filing a petition for a writ of prohibition or mandate. Health & S C §11488.4(h). This 15-day time limit is jurisdictional; failure to file the petition within 15 calendar days forecloses the opportunity to seek review of the order to return. People v Superior Court (Brent), supra.

Ø Note: A prosecutor challenging an order to return property by petition for writ of mandate or prohibition should also request a stay of execution of the order.

XI. DEFENSES TO FORFEITURE

§57.31 A. First Party Claims

A first party claimant (one whose conduct is the basis for the forfeiture) who is the owner of seized property has the following defenses:

- The forfeiture notice was defective. See Baca v Minier (1991) 229 CA3d 1253, 280 CR 810.
- A vehicle for which forfeiture is sought is an "implement of husbandry" as defined in Veh C §36000 (i.e., a vehicle "used exclusively" in "agricultural operations"). Health & S C §11470(e).
- The property was not derived from drug trafficking. See Health & S C §11470(f).
- The property was not used (or intended to be used) to facilitate drug trafficking. See Health & S C §11470(f). Note that, when the state seeks to forfeit real property that has a residence on it on the ground that the land was used to cultivate marijuana for sale, it must prove that the marijuana was sold to persons who do not live on the property. 74 Ops Cal Atty Gen 70 (1991).
- The property was not furnished in exchange for a controlled substance. See Health & S C §11470(f).
- An unreasonable delay occurred between seizure of the property and the initiation of the forfeiture action. U.S. v $8,850 in U.S. Currency (1983) 461 US 555, 76 L Ed 2d 143, 103 S Ct 2005. This may be true even if the initiation of forfeiture proceedings occurs within the statute of limitations for the filing of the petition for forfeiture.
- The 1-year statute of limitations for the filing of a forfeiture petition was violated. Health & S C §11488.4(a). See People v Property Listed in Exhibit One (1991) 227 CA3d 1, 9, 277 CR 672.
- The forfeiture is constitutionally "excessive," in violation of the Eighth Amendment's Excessive Fines Clause. Austin v U.S. (1993) 509 US 602, 125 L Ed 2d 488, 113 S Ct 2801; U.S. v 3814 NW Thurman Street, Portland, Ore. (9th Cir 1999) 164 F3d 1191. See §57.37.
- Duress, necessity, or impossibility was involved. Peisch v Ware (1808) 8 US (4 Cranch) 347, 2 L Ed 643; U.S. v One 107.9 Acre Parcel (3d Cir 1990) 898 F2d 396.
- Entrapment or outrageous government conduct was involved. See U.S. v Certain Lots in Va. Beach (ED Va 1987) 657 F Supp 1062; Flam v City of Miami Beach (Fla Dist Ct App 1984) 449 So2d 367.
- An unlawful search and seizure is the basis of the seizure. One 1958 Plymouth Sedan v Pennsylvania (1965) 380 US 693, 14 L Ed 2d 170, 85 S Ct 1246. But see People v $241,600 U.S. Currency (1998) 67 CA4th 1100, 1103, 79 CR2d 588 (exclusionary rule does not apply to civil forfeitures).

© The Regents of the University of California

§57.32 B. Third Party Claims

Defenses available to the defendant are also available to a third party claimant. There are also several defenses and exemptions available only to an "innocent owner."

The California statutes do not require a person asserting a third party claim to be a bona fide purchaser or encumbrancer for value. See U.S. v A Parcel of Land (1993) 507 US 111, 122 L Ed 2d 469, 113 S Ct 1126 (class of third parties eligible to claim an innocent owner defense includes one who receives the property as a gift). However, a third party claimant who has acquired an ownership interest in property subject to the relation-back rule of Health & S C §11470(h) may not be able to assert the claim unless the interest in the property vested before the beginning of the forfeiture proceedings. See U.S. v Chavez (9th Cir 2003) 323 F3d 1216 (third party claimant could not defeat forfeiture, because her interest did not vest under state law until forfeiture ordered). For discussion of "relation-back" rule, see §57.5.

Third party defenses include the following:

- The third party had no actual or constructive knowledge of facts that would make the property subject to forfeiture when the interest was acquired. Health & S C §11488.5.

  Ø Note: The prosecution has the burden at trial of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that the claimant had knowledge of facts that would make the property subject to forfeiture in all cases except those in which the property in question is cash or negotiable instruments in excess of $25,000. In those cases, the burden drops to clear and convincing evidence. Health & S C §§11488.5(e), 11488.4(i).

- The claimant has a community property interest in a vehicle otherwise subject to forfeiture that requires the driver to have a class C, M1, or M2 driver's license (see Veh C §12804.9) and the vehicle is the only class C, M1, or M2 vehicle available to the defendant's immediate family. Health & S C §11470(e).
- The real property is being used as a family residence or for other lawful purposes. Health & S C §11470(g).

  Ø Note: This exemption does not apply to a family residence bought with the proceeds of specified controlled substance offenses.

- The real property is owned by two or more persons, one of whom had no knowledge of its unlawful use. Health & S C §11470(g).
- The claimant did not receive adequate notice of the proceedings. See Health & S C 11469(j).

§57.33 XII. DEFENSE ATTORNEY PAYMENT FROM PROPERTY SUBJECT TO FORFEITURE

The U.S. Supreme Court has held that assets seized for forfeiture are not insulated from forfeiture on the ground that they have been earmarked to pay for representation in the criminal action. Caplin & Drysdale, Chartered v U.S. (1989) 491 US 617, 105 L Ed 2d 528, 109 S Ct 2646 (Sixth Amendment right to counsel does not preclude forfeiture even if it would render defendant indigent, when state will presumably appoint competent counsel for indigent criminal defendant).

Although some states have insulated funds needed to pay attorney fees from forfeiture, California has not. People v Superior Court (Clements) (1988) 200 CA3d 491, 246 CR 122. Indeed, one court has held that the defendant's assignment to his defense attorney of funds seized for forfeiture when he was arrested was presumptively fraudulent, even though the assignment included only funds found not to be subject to forfeiture. Franchise Tax Bd. v Superior Court (1985) 168 CA3d 970, 975, 215 CR 36.

The trial court may issue pendente lite orders restraining defense attorneys from using monies paid to them by defendants pending a determination of whether the funds are subject to forfeiture as proceeds of the defendant's illegal activity. U.S. v Monsanto (1989) 491 US 600, 615, 105 L Ed 2d 512, 526, 109 S Ct 2657; People v Superior Court (Rishwain) (1989) 215 CA3d 1411, 1415, 264 CR 28. If the court does issue such restraining orders, defense counsel should consider moving for a hearing on probable cause. See U.S. v Monsanto, supra (restraints on use of assets do not violate due process if probable cause exists to believe they are forfeitable); U.S. v Crozier (9th Cir 1985) 777 F2d 1376, 1383 (trial court erred in denying attorney's motion to unfreeze assets without holding hearing). See §57.30.

Closely related to the forfeiture laws are laws requiring reporting of certain large attorney fee payments. Criminal liability for attorneys is possible if the attorney engages in such acts as accepting money with intent to disguise the source of funds, or to disguise criminal activity, or if the attorney handles the money in a manner designed to prevent proper reporting or to impede the IRS. Counsel should note Bus & P C §6149, which purports to create a privilege for written attorney fee contracts within the meaning of Bus & P C §6068(e) and Evid C §952. How this statute will be applied vis-à-vis state or federal subpoenas for information or grand jury proceedings or actions to forfeit attorney fees remains to be seen. For detailed discussion, see Smith, Prosecution and Defense of Forfeiture Cases (1985).

Federal laws can affect state transactions. Many sections of the USA Patriot Act (Pub L 107-56, 115 Stat 272) affect ordinary (nonterrorist) currency and financial transactions. See, e.g., Title III, Subtitle B—Bank Secrecy Act Amendments and Related Improvements, §351 (Pub L 107-56, 115 Stat 272) (suspicious activities). Defense counsel should examine these sections with care.

XIII. CONSTITUTIONAL CONSIDERATIONS

§57.34 A. Fourth Amendment

The fact that property subject to forfeiture may have been seized illegally does not shield it from forfeiture. People v $241,600 U.S. Currency (1998) 67 CA4th 1100, 1113, 79 CR2d 588 (exclusionary rule not applicable to civil forfeiture actions); People v Superior Court (Moraza) (1989) 210 CA3d 592, 598, 258 CR 499, citing John Bacall Imports, Ltd. v U.S. (9th Cir 1969) 412 F2d 586, 588. Illegally obtained evidence, however, cannot be used to sustain a forfeiture. One 1958 Plymouth Sedan v Pennsylvania (1965) 380 US 693, 14 L Ed 2d 170, 85 S Ct 1246; People v One 1960 Cadillac Coupe (1964) 62 C2d 92, 41 CR 290; People v Superior Court (Moraza), supra. If the evidence surrounding the seizure of property is suppressed, it may still be possible to sustain the forfeiture with evidence not subject to suppression. See, e.g., U.S. v U.S. Currency $31,828 (8th Cir 1985) 760 F2d 228 (prosecution established cause for forfeiture with testimony about defendant's drug business despite suppression of physical evidence). In addition, it is permissible for the government to use evidence acquired after the seizure to sustain a forfeiture. People v Superior Court, supra.

Ø Example: Assume that an individual who had been convicted of a drug trafficking violation is arrested within 5 years after the conviction and found to have $20,000 in cash on his person, sufficient cocaine to warrant a possession-for-sale charge, and other evidence of trafficking. The money is seized for forfeiture, and a criminal charge is filed against the individual. A motion to suppress is granted in the criminal case with respect to the controlled substances supporting the criminal charges. The criminal case is subsequently dismissed. Investigation by the prosecuting agency reveals that the individual from whom the cash was seized has not been employed for the previous 5 years, has no independent source of income, and has no explanation for the origin of the cash. The forfeiture action could still be pursued, on the basis of the trafficking conviction, the large amount of cash, and the lack of an explanation for it. The cash could not be suppressed in the forfeiture action, because it is the defendant in the case. The other evidence, the conviction and the unemployment, constitute independent evidence from which the jury could conclude that the cash was proceeds of drug trafficking. Moreover, before the case was tried, the prosecution would be entitled to discovery that could provide additional evidence to be used at trial.

The "good faith" exception to the exclusionary rule (see U.S. v Leon (1984) 468 US 897, 82 L Ed 2d 677, 104 S Ct 3405) applies to forfeiture cases (see U.S. v Real Property at 15324 County Highway E. (7th Cir 2003) 332 F3d 1070). Also, officers may seize and search vehicles in public places without a warrant as long as they have probable cause to believe that the vehicle is subject to forfeiture. See Health & S C §11471; Florida v White (1999) 526 US 559, 564, 143 L Ed 2d 748, 753, 119 S Ct 1555; U.S. v Gaskin (2d Cir 2004) 364 F3d 438, 458. Similarly, items found during the execution of a search warrant may be seized even if not specified in the warrant if there is probable cause to believe the items are subject to forfeiture. See U.S. v Warren (D Kan 2001) 181 F Supp 2d 1232, 1246.

§57.35 B. Fifth Amendment: Self-Incrimination Clause

The Self-Incrimination Clause does not shield revealing income, even if from a criminal source. See U.S. v Turk (9th Cir 1983) 722 F2d 1439. Similarly, courts have held that the Self-Incrimination Clause does not shield a claimant from the requirement that he or she establish standing to bring a claim opposing forfeiture. Mercado v U.S. Customs Serv. (2d Cir 1989) 873 F2d 641; Baker v U.S. (9th Cir 1983) 722 F2d 517. Miranda warnings are not required before questioning about the sources of the seized funds. People v $48,715 U.S. Currency (1997) 58 CA4th 1507, 1518 n10, 68 CR2d 829.

Because forfeiture proceedings are civil actions, the claimant does not have the right not to be called as a witness. Once on the stand, however, the claimant, like any other witness, may assert the privilege against self-incrimination. See McCarthy v Arndstein (1924) 266 US 34, 69 L Ed 158, 45 S Ct 16; U.S. v $250,000 in U.S. Currency (1st Cir 1987) 808 F2d 895; Klein v Superior Court (1988) 198 CA3d 894, 244 CR 226.

If the claimant asserts the privilege against self-incrimination during the discovery process, he or she may be "burdened," resulting in one or more of the following: striking of the claim; permitting the assertion to be revealed and commented on at trial; shifting the burden of going forward or of proof; letting the trier of fact draw adverse inferences; and barring testimony at trial. See Baxter v Palmigiano (1976) 425 US 308, 47 L Ed 2d 810, 96 S Ct 1551; U.S. v Two Parcels of Real Property Located in Russell County (11th Cir 1996) 92 F3d 1123, 1129; U.S. v Ianniello (2d Cir 1987) 824 F2d 203; U.S. v A Single Family Residence (11th Cir 1986) 803 F2d 625; Baker v U.S. (9th Cir 1983) 722 F2d 517; Campbell v Gerrans (9th Cir 1979) 592 F2d 1054; Alvarez v Sanchez (1984) 158 CA3d 709, 204 CR 864; Fremont Indem. Co. v Superior Court (1982) 137 CA3d 554, 187 CR 137; A&M Records, Inc. v Heilman (1977) 75 CA3d 554, 142 CR 390. But see Evid C §913 (no comment allowed on exercise of privilege).

§57.35A C. Fifth Amendment: Double Jeopardy

The Double Jeopardy Clause does not prohibit the government from both punishing a defendant for a criminal offense and forfeiting his or her property for that same offense in a separate civil proceeding. Civil forfeitures do not constitute "punishment" for purposes of the Double Jeopardy Clause. U.S. v Ursery (1996) 518 US 267, 135 L Ed 2d 549, 116 S Ct 2135.

§57.36 D. Sixth Amendment

Forfeiture actions are civil proceedings, so the usual Sixth Amendment protections that apply to a criminal defendant in a criminal case are not available to a forfeiture claimant. Rights that are not available include:

- The right of confrontation (U.S. v 6109 Grubb Rd. (3d Cir 1989) 886 F2d 618);
- The right to the compulsory process of the court (U.S. v $64,000 in U.S. Currency (5th Cir 1984) 722 F2d 239; One 1960 Oldsmobile Convertible Coupe v U.S. (DC Cir 1966) 371 F2d 958);
- The right to be present at trial (see U.S. v $64,000 in U.S. Currency, supra; One 1960 Oldsmobile Convertible Coupe v U.S., supra);
- The right to have assistance of appointed counsel (see People v $30,000 (1995) 35 CA4th 936, 41 CR2d 748; U.S. v $55,518.05 in U.S. Currency (3d Cir 1984) 728 F2d 192; U.S. v One Parcel of Land (ND Ill 1985) 614 F Supp 183).

There are some due process protections. Due process requires the prosecution to give owners of real property notice and an opportunity to be heard before property can be seized. U.S. v James Daniel Good Real Prop. (1993) 510 US 43, 126 L Ed 2d 490, 114 S Ct 492.

The public defender may undertake to defend an indigent in a civil action in a case in which the person is being persecuted or unjustly harassed. Govt C §27706. Because most forfeiture actions do not fit this requirement, public defenders usually do not represent claimants in forfeiture actions.

§57.37 E. Eighth Amendment

The prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment does not apply to a forfeiture action, but the Excessive Fines Clause of the Eighth Amendment does apply if the forfeiture, whether characterized as civil or criminal, is intended at least in part to punish the owner of the forfeited property. Austin v U.S. (1993) 509 US 602, 125 L Ed 2d 488, 113 S Ct 2801; Alexander v U.S. (1993) 509 US 544, 125 L Ed 2d 441, 113 S Ct 2766; U.S. v $100,348.00 in U.S. Currency (9th Cir 2004) 354 F3d 1110, 1119. But see U.S. v Ursery (1996) 518 US 267, 135 L Ed 2d 549, 116 S Ct 2135 (civil forfeiture action and criminal prosecution did not subject property owner to double jeopardy). The ban on excessive fines does not apply to the forfeiture of proceeds traceable to exchanges for controlled substances, i.e., property that is derived directly or indirectly from the illegal activity giving rise to the forfeiture, because such forfeitures can never be excessive as a matter of law. See U.S. v Real Property Located at 22 Santa Barbara Drive (9th Cir 2001) 264 F3d 860, 874; U.S. v Various Computers (3d Cir 1996) 82 F3d 582; U.S. v $21,282 (8th Cir 1995) 47 F3d 972.

The test for excessiveness under the Eighth Amendment has two prongs. First, the forfeiture must be at least partly punitive. U.S. v Bajakajian (1998) 524 US 321, 334, 141 L Ed 2d 314, 118 S Ct 2028. If not, the Eighth Amendment ban on excessive fines does not apply. For example, a proceeds forfeiture is not punitive and is never subject to Eighth Amendment challenge, because it merely takes illicit profits that the criminal had no legal right to possess. See U.S. v Ursery (1996) 518 US 267, 135 L Ed 2d 549, 116 S Ct 2135; U.S. v $21,282 (8th Cir 1995) 47 F3d 972.

Second, if the forfeiture is punitive, it is excessive if it is grossly disproportional to the gravity of the offense it is designed to punish. U.S. v Bajakajian (1998) 524 US 321, 334, 141 L Ed 2d 314, 329, 118 S Ct 2028 (forfeiture of $357,144, entire sum respondent attempted to transport out of U.S., was grossly disproportionate when offense was merely violation of reporting requirement). See also U.S. v $100,348.00 in U.S. Currency (9th Cir 2004) 354 F3d 1110, 1119.

The claimant in the forfeiture action shoulders the burden of demonstrating excessiveness. See U.S. v Ahmad (4th Cir 2000) 213 F3d 805; U.S. v One 1970 36.9' Columbia Sailing Boat (8th Cir 1996) 91 F3d 1053. In addition, an Eighth Amendment challenge cannot be raised by a pretrial motion to dismiss. See U.S. v Funds in the Amount of $170,926.00 (ND Ill 1997) 985 F Supp 810. Finally, the issue of excessiveness is for the court, not the jury. U.S. v Derman (1st Cir 2000) 211 F3d 175.

§58.1 I. OVERVIEW

The various forms of contempt are sometimes discussed in confusing and overlapping language. A contempt sanction may be imposed in one of two different manners: as a criminal prosecution under Pen C §166, or as a summary order under CCP §1209. In this chapter, contempt prosecuted under the Penal Code is referred to as "criminal contempt" and summary contempt orders as "civil contempt." Civil contempt may itself result in two different types of orders: coercive (to have the contemnor perform an act), and punitive (to punish the contemnor). These are referred to as "civil coercive contempt," and "civil punitive contempt." See Colombo v New York (1972) 405 US 9, 30 L Ed 2d 762, 92 S Ct 756; Shillitani v U.S. (1966) 384 US 364, 16 L Ed 2d 622, 86 S Ct 1531; People v Batey (1986) 183 CA3d 1281, 228 CR 787; People v Derner (1986) 182 CA3d 588, 227 CR 344. It should be noted that some discussions of contempt refer to "civil punitive contempt" as criminal contempt because the result is punishment for an offense against the court.

Although the definition of contempt is similar under each statute, the procedures required to find a contempt, and the sanctions that may then be imposed, vary considerably. An attorney familiar with criminal law practice will find little confusion in a criminal contempt prosecution, but the extremely important rules that apply to summary contempt orders may be less familiar.

II. CONTEMPT POWER

§58.2 A. Definition; Inherent and Statutory Authority; Jurisdiction

All courts have the inherent power to ensure that judicial proceedings are conducted in an orderly manner and to punish those who show disrespect or who disrupt the proceedings. This power involves the right to impose sanctions for contempt of court. See Superior Court v County of Mendocino (1996) 13 C4th 45, 57, 51 CR2d 837; People v Gonzalez (1996) 12 C4th 804, 823, 50 CR2d 74; In re McKinney (1968) 70 C2d 8, 10, 73 CR 580. "Contempt is 'an act… committed in or out of [the court's] presence, [that] tends to impeach, embarrass or obstruct the court in the discharge of its duties.'" Lloyd v Superior Court (1982) 133 CA3d 896, 900, 184 CR 467.

The legislature has codified the court's power to find contempt and has both defined and limited that power. See Superior Court v County of Mendocino, supra. The legislature has permitted courts to provide for the orderly conduct of proceedings (CCP §128; see also Pen C §1044) and has set out the various acts and omissions that may constitute civil and criminal contempt (CCP §§1209-1222; Pen C §166). Unless specifically authorized by statute (see CCP 128.5), trial courts lack inherent power to impose sanctions for misconduct in court outside a contempt proceeding. Bauguess v Paine (1978) 22 C3d 626, 638, 150 CR 461; People v Muhammad (2003) 108 CA4th 313, 133 CR2d 308 (no inherent authority for trial court to fine prosecutor for peremptorily excusing jurors because of racial bias).

The legislature has also set forth the precise manner in which the civil contempt power may be exercised, which is limited to imposing a 5-day jail sentence and up to a $1000 fine, generally payable to the court. In addition, if the guilty party violated a court order, he or she may be required to pay reasonable attorney fees and costs. CCP §1218.

Like all other criminal authority, the criminal contempt power is vested in the People, acting through the prosecuting attorney. Criminal contempt is charged and prosecuted just as a misdemeanor offense would be. In re Kreitman (1995) 40 CA4th 750, 755, 47 CR2d 595.

© The Regents of the University of California

§58.3 B. Limitations on Contempt Power

Only a judge may exercise the civil contempt power. It may not be delegated to a commissioner or a referee without statutory authority, and a commissioner may not act as a judge in the contempt action, even by stipulation. Compare Nierenberg v Superior Court (1976) 59 CA3d 611, 130 CR 847, with CCP §708.140(a)(1) and Marcus v WCAB (1973) 35 CA3d 598, 603, 111 CR 101.

Under CCP §1209(b), no speech or publication reflecting on or concerning any court or court officer may be punished as contempt unless it is made in the court's immediate presence, while in session, and in such a manner as to actually interfere with the court's proceedings. This provision was found to be an unconstitutional intrusion by the legislature into the inherent powers of the courts in In re San Francisco Chronicle (1934) 1 C2d 630, 36 P2d 369 (newspaper editor imprisoned for publishing "leaked" story on upcoming California Supreme Court decision; contempt upheld). See In re Michael G. (1988) 44 C3d 283, 295 n10, 243 CR 224.

Lawyers have First Amendment rights, however, when speaking as private citizens. See Lloyd v Superior Court (1982) 133 CA3d 896, 901, 184 CR 467 (contempt citation invalid; lawyer criticized judge in letter to local paper, did not identify himself as lawyer, and was not counsel, party, or witness in case he discussed).

Under CCP §128(f), no contempt order may issue against a county government or county employee for failing to obey a court order, unless the court finds that the county has the resources necessary to obey the order, or that the county can generate the resources without voter approval or incurring additional indebtedness, without liability for failing to perform duties, and without depriving the county of the resources necessary for its reasonable support and maintenance.

In adult proceedings, criminal contempt may not be used to punish a violation of an order granting probation; the court must use the revocation procedure in Pen C §1203.2. People v Johnson (1993) 20 CA4th 106, 24 CR2d 628. Further, by statute, the court may not use contempt to enforce an order requiring the defendant to pay costs of probation. Pen C §1203.1b(d); People v Hall (2002) 103 CA4th 889, 894, 126 CR2d 916. In juvenile delinquency proceedings, criminal contempt may not be used to punish a violation of a court order that is based on noncriminal conduct; the court must use its express contempt power under Welf & I C §213, or the supplemental petition procedure under Welf & I C §777. In re Ricardo A. (1995) 32 CA4th 1190, 1198, 38 CR2d 586. Moreover, if a juvenile is on probation for an offense that does not permit confinement as a penalty, the court may not use its contempt power to impose confinement for a probation violation. In re Francisco S. (2000) 85 CA4th 946, 102 CR2d 514.

© The Regents of the University of California

§58.4 C. Differences Between Criminal and Civil Contempt

Criminal contempt under Pen C §166 is a misdemeanor. Proceedings under §166 are conducted as in any misdemeanor. In re Kreitman (1995) 40 CA4th 750, 755, 47 CR2d 595. The punishment is a maximum of 6 months in jail, a fine up to $1000, or both. See Pen C §19.

Proceedings for civil contempt are of two classes. The first type seeks to preserve the power and vindicate the dignity of the court, and to punish anyone who disobeys the court's orders. This type of contempt is criminal and punitive in nature. The second type consists of actions instituted to preserve and enforce the rights of the parties to suits, and to compel obedience to orders and decrees made to enforce the rights and administer the remedies to which the court has found the parties to be entitled. This type is remedial and coercive in nature; the parties chiefly interested in its prosecution are the individuals whose rights and remedies the proceedings were instituted to protect or enforce, which may sometimes include prosecutors or other government agencies. Morelli v Superior Court (1969) 1 C3d 328, 333, 82 CR 375; Crawford v WCAB (1989) 213 CA3d 156, 165, 259 CR 414.

D. Civil Contempt

§58.5 1. Code of Civil Procedure §1209

Acts or omissions constituting contempt of court are set out in CCP §1209(a):

- Disorderly, contemptuous, or insolent behavior toward a judge while holding court that tends to interrupt the due course of a trial or other judicial proceeding;
- A breach of the peace, boisterous conduct, or violent disturbance that tends to interrupt the due course of a trial or other judicial proceeding;
- Misbehavior in office, or other willful neglect or violation of duty by an attorney, clerk, sheriff, coroner, or other person appointed or elected to perform a judicial or ministerial service;
- Abuse of the court process or proceedings, or falsely pretending to act under authority of an order or process of the court;
- Disobedience of any lawful judgment, order, or process of the court;
- Rescuing any person or property in the lawful custody of an officer, when such custody is pursuant to an order or process of the court;
- Unlawfully detaining a witness or a party to an action while going to, remaining at, or returning from the court where the action is on the calendar for trial;
- Any other unlawful interference with the process or proceedings of the court;
- Disobedience of a subpoena duly served, or refusal to be sworn or answer as a witness, unless the refusal is pursuant to a lawful privilege or immunity;
- Unlawfully failing to attend or serve as a juror after having been summoned;
- While serving as juror, improperly conversing with a party to an action to be tried in the court, or with any other person, in relation to the merits of the action, or receiving a communication from a party or other person in respect to it, without immediately disclosing it to the court; and
- Disobedience of the lawful judgment, order, or process of a superior court by an inferior tribunal, magistrate, or officer, or taking action, contrary to law, in a case, after the case has been removed from the jurisdiction of the inferior tribunal, magistrate, or officer.

§58.6 2. Disobedience of Court Order

Disobedience of a court order may be punished as a contempt only if the order meets several prerequisites. The order must be valid and within the court's power to enter. In re Misener (1985) 38 C3d 543, 213 CR 569; In re Englebrecht (1998) 67 CA4th 486, 498, 79 CR2d 89. The terms of the order must be specific and narrowly drawn and must be set by the court itself. People v Moses (1996) 43 CA4th 462, 468, 50 CR2d 665 (no contempt for violation of visitation order as amplified by parents' agreement). Any ambiguity in the order must be resolved in favor of the alleged contemnor. In re Marcus (2006) 138 CA4th 1009, 1014, 41 CR3d 861; In re Blaze (1969) 271 CA2d 210, 212, 76 CR 551. The order must be in writing and either filed with the clerk or entered in the court's minutes. In re Marcus, supra (oral stipulation and order insufficient); Ketscher v Superior Court (1970) 9 CA3d 601, 604, 88 CR 357.

Of course, the order may not be one for which the legislature has excluded contempt as a sanction for a violation. See, e.g., CCP §128(f) and Pen C §1203.1b(d), discussed in §58.3.

A defendant may challenge the constitutional validity of any trial court order of contempt and may renew that challenge upon appellate review. People v Gonzalez (1996) 12 C4th 804, 50 CR2d 74.

3. Punishment for Civil Contempt

§58.7 a. Civil Punitive Contempt

"Civil" punitive contempt is criminal in nature; it is used to vindicate the dignity of the court and to punish disobedience of its orders. On finding someone guilty of this type of civil contempt, the court may impose a fine of up to $1000 (generally payable to the court), order the contemnor imprisoned for up to 5 days, or both. In addition, if the guilty party violated a court order, he or she may be ordered to pay to the party initiating the contempt proceeding the reasonable attorney fees and costs incurred in connection with the contempt proceeding. CCP §1218. This punishment may be imposed for each separate act of contempt for which a person is found guilty. See Hawk v Superior Court (1974) 42 CA3d 108, 116 CR 713 (affirming 12 of 14 contempt findings).

The rule of Pen C §654, that a person may be punished only once for a single course of conduct, applies to contempt matters. For example, if a witness refuses to answer a series of questions, and makes it clear that he or she will answer no questions about a particular incident, no matter how many questions the witness refuses to answer, the court may punish for only one contempt. Multiple punishment for contempt in this situation would exceed the court's jurisdiction. In re Farr (1976) 64 CA3d 605, 134 CR 595; In re Keller (1975) 49 CA3d 663, 669, 123 CR 223. See also Mitchell v Superior Court (1989) 49 C3d 1230, 1248, 265 CR 144, discussing the number of contempt violations possible under particular facts.

§58.8 b. Civil Coercive Contempt

Civil coercive contempt is used to compel obedience to orders that are designed to enforce the rights of litigants. Penfield Co. v SEC (1947) 330 US 585, 590, 91 L Ed 1117, 1122, 67 S Ct 918. When the contempt consists of willfully refusing to perform an act, the contemnor may be imprisoned until it is performed. CCP §1219(a). However, if the contemnor is no longer able to perform the act required (e.g., the proceeding giving rise to the contempt is no longer pending), the contemnor must be released from restraint. Shillitani v U.S. (1966) 384 US 364, 371, 16 L Ed 2d 622, 627, 86 S Ct 1531; McComb v Superior Court (1977) 68 CA3d 89, 99, 137 CR 233.

Civil coercive contempt can be followed by a criminal contempt action based on the same act; civil punitive contempt may not. People v Derner (1986) 182 CA3d 588, 591, 227 CR 344; People v Lombardo (1975) 50 CA3d 849, 854, 123 CR 755. The courts have construed "civil coercive contempt" broadly in order to allow later criminal actions. For example, in People v Batey (1986) 183 CA3d 1281, 228 CR 787, the contemnor was found guilty of three contempts. The contemnor was sentenced to 5 days in jail for each contempt (with credit given for time already served), and a fine of $3000. The fine was stayed on condition that the contemnor comply with court orders. The court of appeal found that because the contemnor was not required to serve any further time in custody, and because the fine was suspended, the contempt order was coercive, rather than punitive, and thus permitted a later criminal action.

Civil coercive contempt may become penal in nature when it becomes clear that further incarceration will not result in compliance by the contemnor. At that point, further imprisonment is limited by the 5-day maximum for punitive contempt. The standard is whether there is any "substantial likelihood" that continued confinement will accomplish the purpose of the order on which imprisonment is based. If not, the order is punitive and is limited to 5 days. In re Farr (1974) 36 CA3d 577, 111 CR 649. See also discussion in §58.7 of punishment for a single course of conduct.

Civil coercive contempt proceedings may, and often do, arise from criminal proceedings, e.g., witnesses who refuse to be sworn or to testify. See §§58.23-58.26.

§58.9 c. Burden of Proof

In general, the proponent of the contempt has the burden of proving every element necessary to show that contempt occurred. An exception arises in civil coercive contempt actions in which the contemnor's ability to comply with an order is in issue. In that event, the burden of proving inability to comply may constitutionally be placed on the alleged contemnor. Hicks v Feiock (1988) 485 US 624, 637, 99 L Ed 2d 721, 735, 108 S Ct 1423; Maggio v Zeitz (1948) 333 US 56, 75, 92 L Ed 476, 490, 68 S Ct 401. For example, inability to comply with a child support order is an affirmative defense that must be established by a preponderance of the evidence. Moss v Superior Court (1998) 17 C4th 396, 425, 71 CR2d 215. One court has even held that in a criminal contempt action based on failure to pay attorney and witness fees ordered in a family court proceeding, ability to pay is not an element of the contempt if the court finds that the defendant had ability to pay at the time the order was made. In re Ivey (2000) 85 CA4th 793, 102 CR2d 447.

Practitioners are well advised to ask the court to clarify at the beginning of the contempt proceeding whether it will result in a punitive or a coercive order, so counsel will know who has the burden of proof. Counsel should also consider any double jeopardy implications. See §§26.23-26.28, 58.13.

E. Criminal Contempt

§58.10 1. Penal Code §166

Penal Code §166 provides that a person who commits any of the following acts is guilty of contempt of court, a misdemeanor:

- Disorderly, contemptuous, or insolent behavior committed during the sitting of any court, in the court's immediate view and presence, and directly tending to interrupt its proceedings, or to impair the respect due to its authority;
- Behavior similar to the above committed in the presence of any referee, while actually engaged in any trial or hearing, pursuant to the order of any court, or in the presence of any jury while actually sitting for the trial of a cause, or on any inquest or other authorized court proceedings;
- Any breach of the peace, noise, or other disturbance directly tending to interrupt court proceedings;
- Willful disobedience of any process or order lawfully issued by any court;
- Resistance willfully offered by a person to the lawful order or process of any court;
- The contumacious and unlawful refusal to be sworn as a witness; or, when sworn, the refusal to answer any material question;
- The publication of a willfully false or grossly inaccurate report of the proceedings of any court; or
- Presenting to a criminal sentencing court any affidavit or testimony or representation of any kind, verbal or written, in aggravation or mitigation of the punishment to be imposed upon such prisoner, except as provided by law.

§58.11 2. General Intent Crime

The crime of contempt is one of general intent. It is established by showing that the defendant intended to commit the proscribed act, without the additional requirement that the defendant intended "to do some further act or achieve some additional consequence." People v Greenfield (1982) 134 CA3d Supp 1, 4, 184 CR 604. However, a contempt must also be willful, which in the case of a court order encompasses both an intent to disobey the order and a disregard of the duty to obey the order. In re Karpf (1970) 10 CA3d 355, 372, 88 CR 895. On the other hand, attempted contempt is a specific intent crime that can be substantiated using the slight-acts rule. People v Tillotson (2007) 157 CA4th 517, 536, 69 CR3d 42.

In the context of an attorney acting on a client's behalf, the attorney may not be punished for actions taken in good faith on the client's behalf, even if the attorney's conclusions regarding the applicable law are mistaken. See, e.g., People v Gzikowski (1982) 32 C3d 580, 588, 186 CR 339; In re Buckley (1973) 10 C3d 237, 249, 110 CR 121; Smith v Superior Court (1968) 68 C2d 547, 560, 68 CR 1. See also In re Littlefield (1993) 5 C4th 122, 19 CR2d 248.

§58.12 3. Punishment for Criminal Contempt

A charge of contempt under Pen C §166 is prosecuted like any other misdemeanor. See In re McKinney (1968) 70 C2d 8, 10, 73 CR 580. Thus, the defendant has the right to a jury trial regardless of the penalty that may be imposed. People v Earley (2004) 122 CA4th 542, 550, 18 CR3d 694; In re Kreitman (1995) 40 CA4th 750, 755, 47 CR2d 595. See Tracy v Municipal Court (1978) 22 C3d 760, 765, 150 CR 785. Usually, the maximum punishment for a criminal contempt is 6 months in jail or a $1000 fine, or both. Pen C §19. However, the statute contains additional sentencing provisions for specific types of contempts. For example, a person who has previously been convicted of stalking (Pen C §646.9) and who disobeys a court order (Pen C §166(a)(4)) by willfully contacting a victim by telephone, mail, or directly is subject to 1 year in jail or a $5000 fine, or both. Pen C §166(b)(1).

© The Regents of the University of California

§58.13 4. Double Jeopardy

Double jeopardy prohibits prosecution of further criminal charges (including additional contempt charges) based on conduct that previously resulted in the defendant's being placed in jeopardy for criminal contempt or punitive civil contempt. Colombo v New York (1972) 405 US 9, 30 L Ed 2d 762, 92 S Ct 756; People v Lombardo (1975) 50 CA3d 849, 854, 123 CR 755. However, the imposition of sanctions as part of a civil coercive contempt action does not bar later criminal proceedings based on the same conduct as long as the civil coercive contempt is not found to have been penal in nature. People v Batey (1986) 183 CA3d 1281, 1285, 228 CR 787; People v Derner (1986) 182 CA3d 588, 591, 227 CR 344.

III. ATTORNEY CONTEMPT

§58.14 A. Advocacy Versus Respect for Court

Attorney contempt presents the court and counsel with a particularly difficult problem. On one hand, an attorney has a duty to maintain respect for the court and its proceedings. On the other hand, an attorney has the right and the obligation to protect the client's interests and to make assertions that the attorney believes to be correct in a forthright manner. In re Hallinan (1969) 71 C2d 1179, 1183, 81 CR 1; McCann v Municipal Court (1990) 221 CA3d 527, 545, 270 CR 640. A reading of many appellate decisions dealing with this delicate subject discloses a gray area between the proper zeal of aggressive and effective advocacy, and improprieties that amount to aggravated misconduct. In re Grossman (1972) 24 CA3d 624, 629, 101 CR 176. Thus the reviewing courts will scrutinize the record with particularity to see if objective indications of contemptuous conduct exist. See In re Buckley (1973) 10 C3d 237, 110 CR 121; Hawk v Superior Court (1974) 42 CA3d 108, 116 CR 713. As the court in In re Hallinan, supra, wrote:

> An advocate ought to be allowed freedom and latitude both in speech and in the conduct of his client's case. [Citations.] The public interest in an independent bar would be subverted if judges were allowed to punish attorneys summarily for contempt on purely subjective reactions to their conduct or statements.

© The Regents of the University of California

§58.15 B. Warning

When the contempt order is based on "wholly innocuous" words (Gallagher v Municipal Court (1948) 31 C2d 784, 796, 192 P2d 905) or on "language which is in itself not insolent, contemptuous, or disorderly" (In re Hallinan (1969) 71 C2d 1179, 1181, 81 CR 1), the judge must first warn the attorney before taking disciplinary action (In re Buckley (1973) 10 C3d 237, 250, 110 CR 121). This is also so when the conduct complained of consists of any matters not necessarily evident from the record, such as offensive tone, facial expressions, or gestures. Boysaw v Superior Court (2000) 23 C4th 215, 222, 96 CR2d 531; In re Grossman (1972) 24 CA3d 624, 638, 101 CR 176.

However, when the contempt is based on a statement by counsel that is clearly insolent, offensive, or insulting, or that impugns the court's integrity, and as such is contemptuous "on its face," no warning is required before contempt is found. In re Buckley, supra.

© The Regents of the University of California

§58.16 C. Apology

In instances of direct contempt, an apology to the judge "should be given serious consideration," although the effect to be given this mitigating factor lies exclusively in the trial judge's sound discretion. In re Buckley (1973) 10 C3d 237, 257, 110 CR 121; In re Koven (2005) 134 CA4th 262, 274, 35 CR3d 917. After serious consideration, a court may find an apology insufficient to purge an attorney of contempt. In re Koven (2005) 134 CA4th 262, 274, 35 CR3d 917.

Source: Criminal Law/California Criminal Law Procedure and Practice/58 CONTEMPT/§58.17 D. Specific Conduct Constituting Direct Civil Contempt

§58.17 D. Specific Conduct Constituting Direct Civil Contempt

The following acts, when properly recorded, have been held to constitute direct contempt of court:

- Advising a client to disobey a lawful court order. Hawk v Superior Court (1974) 42 CA3d 108, 116, 116 CR 713 (order to produce handwriting exemplar).
- Impugning the court's integrity, either orally or in writing. In re Buckley (1973) 10 C3d 237, 248, 110 CR 121 ("this court obviously doesn't want to apply the law"); Hume v Superior Court (1941) 17 C2d 506, 513, 110 P2d 669 (false charge of court's collusion with Attorney General); Blodgett v Superior Court (1930) 210 C 1, 16, 290 P 293 (false charge of corruption in legal memorandum); In re Shay (1911) 160 C 399, 407, 117 P 442 (letter imputing improper conduct to supreme court justices); In re Koven (2005) 134 CA4th 262, 35 CR3d 917 (allegation that court of appeal "fixed" case because of bias, concealed conflicts, and "conspired" with defendants); In re White (2004) 121 CA4th 1453, 18 CR3d 444 (statements implying that trial court knowingly ignored law and acted out of bias toward prosecution); Hanson v Superior Court (2001) 91 CA4th 75, 78, 109 CR2d 782 (arguing to jury that defendant "has not received a fair trial in this case"); In re Grossman (1972) 24 CA3d 624, 634, 101 CR 176 (false accusations of judge's bias); Gillen v Municipal Court (1940) 37 CA2d 428, 429, 99 P2d 555 (oral statement that opposing counsel won before he started); In re Friday (1934) 138 CA 660, 32 P2d 1117 (objecting to rulings and falsely charging trial judge with improper conduct); Ex parte Ewell (1925) 71 CA 744, 747, 236 P 205 (letter attacking judge); In re Lapique (1915) 26 CA 258, 146 P 690 (affidavit in support of motion for change of venue imputing judge's lack of integrity). But see In re Carrow (1974) 40 CA3d 924, 927, 115 CR 601 ("Your Honor, I submit this trial is becoming a joke" held not to be contempt).

  Ø Note: In this area, the context of the particular statement held by the trial judge to be contemptuous will determine whether the contempt citation will ultimately withstand review. See, e.g., In re Buckley (1973) 10 C3d 237, 250 n16, 110 CR 121 (contempt upheld in context); In re Carrow (1974) 40 CA3d 924, 928, 115 CR 601 (contempt annulled after offending remark reviewed in context).

- Intentionally interjecting personal and prejudicial comments during jury voir dire, in presence of the jury. Hawk v Superior Court (1974) 42 CA3d 108, 119, 116 CR 713 (comment on personal belief in innocence of his client; unsupported allegation that use of peremptory challenge by prosecution amounted to "absolute white racism" and attempt to "systematically exclude minority groups").
- Repeatedly questioning in an area properly objected to, which objections were sustained. 42 CA3d at 126.
- Repeatedly refusing to yield to the court's rulings. 42 CA3d at 130.

  Ø Note: In accord with the rule that violation of an unlawful order cannot be contemptuous, an attorney cannot be sanctioned for making proper arguments and objections, or for standing up when it is proper to do so. Cooper v Superior Court (1961) 55 C2d 291, 10 CR 842 (defense counsel objected to judge's unfavorable comments about defense witnesses to jury during deliberations); Bellas v Superior Court (2000) 85 CA4th 636, 102 CR2d 380 (defense counsel justified in refusing to return juror questionnaires). See also People v Kalnoki (1992) 7 CA4th Supp 8, 12, 9 CR2d 827.

- Defense counsel's refusing to actively participate in defendant's trial, even if counsel is unprepared. People v McKenzie (1983) 34 C3d 616, 627, 194 CR 462 (noting that under such circumstances contempt power "must be exercised with great caution"). See also Oberholzer v Commission on Judicial Performance (1999) 20 C4th 371, 399, 84 CR2d 466 (prosecutor whose inadequate motion for continuance was denied could have been held in contempt for unequivocally refusing to proceed). But see Hughes v Superior Court (1980) 106 CA3d 1, 5, 164 CR 721 (contempt invalid when defense attorney refused to participate in jury selection because he was unprepared owing to his need to prepare another case calendared for trial). See §§20.12, 2.29 on the dilemma of defense counsel unprepared to proceed.

Although an affidavit of disqualification can constitute a contempt (see Lamberson v Superior Court (1907) 151 C 458, 462, 91 P 100 (affidavit to disqualify judge charging corrupt and improper motives); Hallinan v Superior Court (1938) 27 CA2d 433, 438, 81 P2d 254 (affidavit charging dishonesty of presiding judge)), to be contemptuous the affidavit must be presented in an objectionable manner; contain irrelevant, immaterial, or false statements made with bad faith or improper intent; or attack the judge's integrity with defamatory matter. See In re Ciraolo (1969) 70 C2d 389, 74 CR 865; Fine v Superior Court (2002) 97 CA4th 651, 665, 119 CR2d 376.

§58.18 E. Specific Conduct Constituting Indirect Civil Contempt

An attorney's knowing and intentional assistance of a witness to evade service of a subpoena is punishable by contempt. In re Holmes (1983) 145 CA3d 934, 944, 193 CR 790.

Statements made outside a judge's presence may constitute indirect civil contempt (see §58.28), but an affidavit on the statements must be presented to the judge before he or she can proceed on a contempt citation. Ryan v Commission on Judicial Performance (1988) 45 C3d 518, 247 CR 378 (attorney's question about when next judicial election would occur did not constitute contempt). See discussion of the limitations on the contempt power in §58.3. The court in Ryan found that the trial judge should have known or researched the proper contempt procedures.

An attorney cannot be found in contempt for writing a letter to a newspaper criticizing a decision to which he or she was neither a party nor an attorney and that was not currently pending before the court. Lloyd v Superior Court (1982) 133 CA3d 896, 184 CR 467.

F. Specific Conduct Constituting Hybrid Civil Contempt

§58.19 1. Failure to Appear

"Elusive attorneys are a recurring problem in trial courts, particularly in calendar departments." Arthur v Superior Court (1965) 62 C2d 404, 409, 42 CR 441. An attorney's unexplained and unexcused failure to appear in court at the time and place designated may constitute contempt. See, e.g., Seykora v Superior Court (1991) 232 CA3d 1075, 283 CR 857. An attorney cannot be found in contempt of court, however, if duties in one court prevent him or her from appearing in another. In addition, attorneys cannot be required to appear in any particular court without cause. Mowrer v Superior Court (1969) 3 CA3d 223, 230, 83 CR 125.

When counsel fails to appear, the offensive conduct occurs in the presence of the court. When counsel reappears in the courtroom, before he or she may properly be found in contempt, due process requires that he or she be notified of the contempt charge and be given a reasonable opportunity to explain the absence. Arthur v Superior Court, supra. See §58.28 on hybrid civil contempt.

© The Regents of the University of California

§58.20 2. Misrepresentation to Court

A willful misrepresentation to the court can form the basis of a contempt charge. See, e.g., Vaughn v Municipal Court (1967) 252 CA2d 348, 60 CR 575 (attorney made untrue representations to court to obtain continuance). See also In re Aguilar (2004) 34 C4th 386, 394, 18 CR3d 874 (managing attorney whose office failed to appear before supreme court falsely explained he was unaware of date for oral argument); In re Ciraolo (1969) 70 C2d 389, 393, 74 CR 865.

§58.21 3. Failure to Be Ready for Trial

Appointed attorneys in felony cases who state at the time of appointment that they would be ready for trial and who are not ready without good cause may be punished for contempt. Pen C §987.05. The constitutionality of this statute has not been tested. See §20.32.

§58.21A 4. Failure to File Appellate Brief on Time

Willful failure to file the opening brief in a criminal appeal after repeated extensions of time may be punished as contempt. In re Grayson (1997) 15 C4th 792, 64 CR2d 102 ($1000 fine); In re Young (1995) 9 C4th 1052, 40 CR2d 114 (5 days in jail).

Attorneys who fail to provide discovery that has been ordered by the court may be punished for contempt. Pen C §1054.5(b). See In re Littlefield (1993) 5 C4th 122, 131, 19 CR2d 248.

IV. WITNESS CONTEMPT

§58.23 A. In General

Disobeying a subpoena may be punished as contempt. Pen C §§1331, 1331.5; In re Holmes (1983) 145 CA3d 934, 942, 193 CR 790. The subpoena must state that failure to appear is punishable as contempt (In re Garcia (1974) 41 CA3d 997, 116 CR 503), and it must have been personally served (In re Abrams (1980) 108 CA3d 685, 166 CR 749) for the witness to be subject to arrest. See also Pen C §1328d (failure to comply with subpoena may be punished by contempt if properly served under §1328d, but contemnor may not be arrested). If the subpoena was personally served, the court may order the sheriff to arrest the witness and bring that person to court to testify. CCP §§1991, 1993-1997. See also Pen C §881.

If a witness refuses to appear at a preliminary examination after having been properly served with a valid subpoena, the court may incarcerate the witness until the hearing is concluded, for up to 10 days. Pen C §881(b), (d).

When a contempt consists of refusal to obey a court order to testify, the witness may be confined until he or she complies with the order. CCP §1219; McCrone v U.S. (1939) 307 US 61, 83 L Ed 1108, 59 S Ct 685. The witness may not be confined beyond the conclusion of the underlying proceeding unless there are additional reasons for requiring the witness's testimony. In re Farr (1974) 36 CA3d 577, 584, 111 CR 649. Such cases may also be treated as direct contempt (see §58.28) under CCP §1209, or as criminal contempt under Pen C §166. In re Keller (1975) 49 CA3d 663, 670, 123 CR 223. For example, after correctly ruling that a witness is not entitled to claim the privilege against self-incrimination under the Fifth Amendment, a court may find the witness in contempt for continuing to refuse to testify. People v Lopez (1999) 71 CA4th 1550, 1553, 84 CR2d 655. To be valid, however, the written contempt order must specify the underlying facts, such as the claims of the privilege, the court's ruling on the claims, and the appearance and participation of counsel for the witness. In re D.W. (2004) 123 CA4th 491, 500, 20 CR3d 274; see §58.34.

Perjury, standing alone, generally cannot be punished as contempt; the additional element of "obstruction" or interference with the court's performance of its duties must be shown. In re Michael (1945) 326 US 224, 90 L Ed 30, 66 S Ct 78. Therefore, contempt is not necessarily available as a lesser included offense to a perjury charge.

B. Particular Witnesses

§58.24 1. Particular Crime Victims

The victim of a sexual assault or domestic violence crime cannot be imprisoned or otherwise placed in custody for contempt when the contempt consists of refusing to testify about the assault or domestic violence crime, although a fine may be imposed. CCP §1219(b). See §58.35 on mandatory 3-day stay of contempt orders concerning sexual assault and domestic violence victims.

© The Regents of the University of California

§58.25 2. Juveniles

If a witness is under age 16 and refuses to be sworn or to testify, CCP §1219.5(a) prohibits imposing any sanction without a probation officer's report and recommendation. (It is also questionable whether a juvenile could have any sanction imposed for contempt without invoking the juvenile court's jurisdiction under Welf & I C §602.)

© The Regents of the University of California

§58.26 3. Newspersons

The newsperson's shield law (Cal Const art I, §2; Evid C §1070) protects a reporter who was an eyewitness to a public event from testifying to the event seen. Miller v Superior Court (1999) 21 C4th 883, 89 CR2d 834 (television news director could not be held in contempt for refusing to comply with a court order, issued at the request of the prosecution in a criminal case, to produce unpublished parts of a videotaped interview with the defendant). That law must yield, however, to a criminal defendant's federal constitutional right to a fair trial. Delaney v Superior Court (1990) 50 C3d 785, 268 CR 753 (when called as witness by defendant, newspaper reporter who witnessed arrest could be held in contempt for refusing to testify, after trial court ruled that defendant's due process need for relevant information outweighed reporter's interest against disclosure).

A difficult problem arises when a newsperson testifies on behalf of a criminal defendant, but then invokes the shield law on proper cross-examination by the prosecution. In that event, the newsperson's direct testimony may be stricken unless the defendant can show that exclusion of that testimony would deprive him or her of a fair trial, and that his or her right transcends that of the witness under the shield law. If the defendant makes such showings, the testimony of the witness on direct may be received, and the newsperson may be held in contempt of court for refusing to respond to proper cross-examination. Fost v Superior Court (2000) 80 CA4th 724, 95 CR2d 620.

A newsperson must disclose the identity of a source who gave information in violation of a "gag" order only if there is a "substantial probability" of future violations that will impair the defendant's ability to obtain a fair trial. In re Willon (1996) 47 CA4th 1080, 1099, 55 CR2d 245.

V. CONTEMPT PROCEDURES

A. Civil Contempt

§58.27 1. Constitutional Guaranties

Although the statutes pertaining to both punitive and coercive civil contempt are in CCP Part III, titled "Special Proceedings of a Civil Nature," contempt proceedings are said to be criminal in nature, and the procedural rights and safeguards of criminal contempt proceedings also apply to civil contempt proceedings. Safer v Superior Court (1975) 15 C3d 230, 235, 124 CR 174; Gates v Municipal Court (1992) 9 CA4th 45, 56, 11 CR2d 439. These rights include the appointment of counsel if an indigent faces the loss of liberty as a result of the contempt. County of Santa Clara v Superior Court (1992) 2 CA4th 1686, 5 CR2d 7 (indigent father entitled to appointed counsel when facing jail time for failure to pay child support). The one exception is that there is usually no right to a jury trial for civil contempt. Cheff v Schnackenberg (1966) 384 US 373, 377, 16 L Ed 2d 629, 632, 86 S Ct 1523; United Farm Workers, AFL-CIO v Superior Court (1968) 265 CA2d 212, 71 CR 513. However, the federal right to a jury trial applies if the court punishes multiple charges of civil contempt with a jail term longer than 6 months. Codispoti v Pennsylvania (1974) 418 US 506, 41 L Ed 2d 912, 94 S Ct 2687. Thus, if the court desires the option of imposing a sentence longer than 6 months, it must permit the defendant to have a trial by jury; otherwise, the maximum punishment is 6 months. In re Kreitman (1995) 40 CA4th 750, 755, 47 CR2d 595.

§58.28 2. Classification of Civil Contempt to Determine Which Procedures Apply: Direct, Indirect, and Hybrid Contempt

The following civil contempt classifications are merely a semantic device for differentiating contempt that can be adjudicated summarily from contempt that can be adjudicated only after adequate notice and hearing. See Chula v Superior Court (1962) 57 C2d 199, 208, 18 CR 507 (dissenting opinion of Traynor, J.).

Direct contempt. When contempt is committed in the court's immediate view and presence, it is termed direct contempt and may be treated summarily. No formal hearing is required. All that is needed is that an order be made reciting the facts, the person adjudged guilty, and the punishment prescribed. CCP §1211; In re Hallinan (1969) 71 C2d 1179, 81 CR 1; Bobb v Municipal Court (1983) 143 CA3d 860, 870, 192 CR 270. If the alleged contemnor wishes an opportunity to explain his or her conduct, the court should listen. The contemnor, however, has no right to present evidence, and the court need not accept the explanation. In re Baroldi (1987) 189 CA3d 101, 108, 234 CR 286.

Hybrid contempt. Hybrid contempt occurs in the court's presence, but it may be excused by matters occurring outside the courtroom. For example, an attorney's or a witness's failure to appear in court is a hybrid contempt, because the nonappearance occurs in the court's presence but the reasons for it occur out of the court's presence. In re Baroldi, supra. In general, the requirements for finding hybrid contempt are the same as for direct contempt, except that the alleged contemnor must be given an opportunity to establish an excuse for the contemptuous behavior. After giving the contemnor the opportunity to present evidence, the court may punish summarily as long as the court is convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that no valid excuse has been established. In re Stanley (1981) 114 CA3d 588, 591, 170 CR 755.

Indirect contempt. When the contempt is not committed in the immediate presence of the court, or of the judge in chambers, the procedural requirements are more complex, requiring the filing of an affidavit and the holding of a formal hearing. See CCP §§1211-1218. See §58.38 for discussion of indirect contempt.

§58.29 3. Substitution of Hearing Judge

When there is evidence that the trial judge "has become 'personally embroiled' with a lawyer [or party] in the trial, [such] as to make the judge unfit to sit in judgment on the contempt charge," a new and impartial judge must be substituted. Mayberry v Pennsylvania (1971) 400 US 455, 465, 27 L Ed 2d 532, 540, 91 S Ct 499. The court will look at both the conduct of the alleged contemnor and at the judge's response. See In re Buckley (1973) 10 C3d 237, 256, 110 CR 121; In re Carrow (1974) 40 CA3d 924, 927, 115 CR 601. Even if the trial judge is not "personally embroiled," if the contempt adjudication is postponed until the end of the trial, it is preferable to have another judge hear it. In re Carrow, supra. This rule does not apply when the contempt adjudication occurs during the proceedings as a means of ensuring the orderly progress of the trial. In re Buckley, supra; Hawk v Superior Court (1974) 42 CA3d 108, 131, 116 CR 713. However, if another judge does conduct the contempt proceeding, the proceeding will be considered one for indirect contempt. Hanson v Superior Court (2001) 91 CA4th 75, 109 CR2d 782.

§58.30 4. Challenge to Hearing Judge

In cases of direct contempt, the judge in whose presence the contempt is committed has a conditional power to summarily punish the offender. This power is necessary to preserve the integrity of the court and to allow the affronted judge to continue to preside. For this reason, it has been held that disqualification of the judge is not permitted. Gates v Municipal Court (1992) 9 CA4th 45, 52, 11 CR2d 439.

In cases of indirect contempt, however, the rules pertaining to disqualification of a judge under CCP §§170.1, 170.6 apply. Gates v Municipal Court, supra.

§58.31 5. Affidavit for Indirect Contempt

When the contempt is not committed in the immediate view and presence of the court, or of the judge at chambers, an affidavit must be presented to the court or judge of the facts constituting the contempt. CCP §1211. The requirement of filing an affidavit is jurisdictional. Any contempt order made concerning matters not occurring in the court's presence, and not supported by a proper affidavit, is procedurally invalid. Ryan v Commission on Judicial Performance (1988) 45 C3d 518, 532, 247 CR 378.

Without a proper and sufficient affidavit, no indirect contempt may be found or punished. Sorell v Superior Court (1967) 248 CA2d 157, 160, 56 CR 222. The affidavit's insufficiency cannot be cured by presenting proof of contempt at a hearing. In re Cowan (1991) 230 CA3d 1281, 281 CR 740.

However, under CCP §1211.5, if objections to the sufficiency of an affidavit are not made at the time of the hearing, they are deemed waived, and the court may amend the affidavit to correct any defect or insufficiency or to conform to proof. Nonetheless, any amendment must be made at the beginning and not at the end of the hearing. Reliable Enters. v Superior Court (1984) 158 CA3d 604, 204 CR 786, disapproved on other grounds in Mitchell v Superior Court (1989) 49 C3d 1230, 1248 n13, 265 CR 144.

§58.32 6. Hearing

The accused in hybrid contempt cases is entitled to an opportunity to establish an excuse for the contemptuous behavior. In re Martin (1977) 71 CA3d 472, 139 CR 451. In indirect contempt cases, an affidavit must be filed and a formal hearing held. CCP §§1211-1218. No hearing is required in direct contempt cases. CCP §1211. However, better practice is to allow the contemnor the opportunity to be heard. Taylor v Hayes (1974) 418 US 488, 497, 41 L Ed 2d 897, 907, 94 S Ct 2697; Hawk v Superior Court (1974) 42 CA3d 108, 131, 116 CR 713. See also §58.16.

If an affidavit charging indirect contempt has been filed, the proponent of the contempt must present witnesses to prove the contempt beyond a reasonable doubt. The accused is entitled to cross-examine witnesses and to present witnesses in his or her defense. Basically, the rights of the alleged contemnor are the same as those of a criminal defendant, including the right to counsel, except that there is no general right to a jury trial. CCP §1217; Govt C §27706(a); In re Witherspoon (1984) 162 CA3d 1000, 209 CR 67; In re Morelli (1970) 11 CA3d 819, 850, 91 CR 72. There is an exception: Alleged contemnors have the right to a jury trial if the potential jail sentence exceeds 6 months. Mitchell v Superior Court (1989) 49 C3d 1230, 1243, 265 CR 144.

© The Regents of the University of California

§58.33 7. Timing of Order

For attorneys engaged in jury trials, "virtually uniform practice entails deferment of the contempt adjudication or of actual punishment until the jury is discharged." People v Fusaro (1971) 18 CA3d 877, 888, 96 CR 368, disapproved on other grounds in People v Brigham (1979) 25 C3d 283, 292 n14, 157 CR 905. However, if the adjudication is delayed and the contempt is not found and punished immediately, then the court cannot punish the contempt as a direct contempt, and the alleged contemnor is entitled to notice (i.e., a proper affidavit showing a contempt) and a full hearing. Taylor v Hayes (1974) 418 US 488, 497, 41 L Ed 2d 897, 906, 94 S Ct 2697; In re Karagozian (1975) 44 CA3d 516, 523, 118 CR 793. It is, however, permissible to find contempt, impose punishment, and then stay execution of punishment until the end of the trial.

If the court has orally found contempt, the written order (see §58.34) must be filed in a timely manner. Contempt charges have been invalidated owing to delays in filing the written order. See, e.g., In re Easterbrook (1988) 200 CA3d 1541, 244 CR 652, disapproved on other grounds in People v Romero (1994) 8 C4th 728, 744 n10, 35 CR2d 270 (6 days); In re Jones (1975) 47 CA3d 879, 881, 120 CR 914) (8 days).

§58.34 8. Written Order

Direct contempt. An order of direct contempt must recite the acts committed in the court's immediate view and presence during the proceeding that allegedly establish the trial court's jurisdiction to issue the order. In re Grossman (1972) 24 CA3d 624, 631, 101 CR 176. The order must specify that the contemnor's conduct occurred in the count's immediate view and presence, but this may be demonstrated not only by an express declaration to that effect, but also by the recitation of the underlying facts. Boysaw v Superior Court (2000) 23 C4th 215, 221, 96 CR2d 531 (disapproving prior cases strictly requiring an express declaration). If the contempt finding requires a prior warning, the contempt order must specify that such a warning was given. Boysaw v Superior Court, supra.

An order of direct contempt is valid only if it recites facts with sufficient particularity to demonstrate on its face that the contemnor's conduct constituted a legal contempt. In re Grossman (1972) 24 CA3d 624, 633, 101 CR 176. It is not sufficient for the order to contain only the "bare conclusions" of the trial judge. In re Hallinan (1969) 71 C2d 1179, 1182, 81 CR 1. See also Boysaw v Superior Court (2000) 23 C4th 215, 222, 96 CR2d 531; In re Carrow (1974) 40 CA3d 924, 933, 115 CR 601 (conclusionary declaration that remark was made in bad faith held insufficient). Although recapitulation of the exact words constituting the contempt is not mandatory, it is the preferred practice. In re Grossman, supra. The order must set forth the specific facts on which the contempt is based, not conclusions or general characterizations. Failure to set forth specific facts in the written order voids the contempt. In re Littlefield (1993) 5 C4th 122, 138, 19 CR2d 248; In re De La Parra (1986) 184 CA3d 139, 144, 228 CR 864. If the direct contempt is based on violation of a prior order, the written contempt order must describe the prior order with particularity. In re Ringgold (2006) 142 CA4th 1001, 1014, 48 CR3d 507.

It is the written contempt order itself that must specifically set forth the facts constituting the contempt. The order cannot incorporate another document, such as a transcript, but must be sufficient on its face. Hawk v Superior Court (1974) 42 CA3d 108, 125 n16, 116 CR 713.

> Ø Note: The requirements for direct contempt apply to hybrid contempt. In re Stanley (1981) 114 CA3d 588, 591, 170 CR 755.

Indirect contempt. An order for indirect contempt will also not suffice if it merely states a conclusion of law. Thus, mere recitation in an order for indirect contempt that the contemnor violated a court order is insufficient to sustain the contempt. The order must recite a finding that the court has unmistakably found to be true all the facts constituting contempt of the court's authority. Hanson v Superior Court (2001) 91 CA4th 75, 83, 109 CR2d 782.

No nunc pro tunc order. Because a contempt order is final under CCP §1222, the order may not be corrected nunc pro tunc to cure deficiencies in the original order. Bloom v Superior Court (1986) 185 CA3d 409, 412, 229 CR 747, disapproved on other grounds in Boysaw v Superior Court (2000) 23 C4th 215, 221, 96 CR2d 531. Similarly, if a contempt order is found insufficient on review, the matter cannot be remanded to the trial court to correct the order. In re Baroldi (1987) 189 CA3d 101, 111, 234 CR 286; Bloom v Superior Court, supra.

§58.35 9. Mandatory Stay of Execution

If a contempt order is made affecting an attorney or his or her agent, investigator, or anyone acting under the attorney's direction, in the preparation and conduct of any action or proceeding, execution of the sentence must be stayed for 3 judicial days, pending the filing of a petition for extraordinary relief to test the lawfulness of the court's order. CCP §§128(b), 1209(c).

Ø Note: Even if a petition is filed, only a 3-judicial-day stay is required, and thus any further stay must be sought from the reviewing court. If the violation involved conduct proscribed by Bus & P C §6068(b), relating to an attorney's duty to maintain respect due to the courts and judicial officers, however, no stay is required. CCP §§128(b), 1209(c).

If a contempt order is made affecting a public safety employee, acting within the scope of employment, based on the employee's failure to comply with a duly issued subpoena or subpoena duces tecum, execution of the sentence must be stayed pending the filing within 3 judicial days of a petition for extraordinary relief, testing the legality of the court's order. CCP §§128(c), 1209(d). Here again, even if a petition is filed, only a 3-judicial-day stay is required, and thus any further stay must be sought from the reviewing court.

Three-judicial-day stays are also mandatory when the contempt consists of a sexual assault victim's refusal to testify about the assault, or a domestic violence victim's refusal to testify about the domestic violence. CCP §128(d)-(e).

§58.36 B. Criminal Contempt

Contempt charged under Pen C §166 is a misdemeanor and is prosecuted like any other misdemeanor charge. In re Kreitman (1995) 40 CA4th 750, 755, 47 CR2d 595. See generally People v Gonzalez (1996) 12 C4th 804, 816, 50 CR2d 74.

§58.39 VII. REVIEW OF CONTEMPT ORDER

In criminal contempt cases (Pen C §166), normal criminal appellate remedies apply. See, e.g., People v Greenfield (1982) 134 CA3d Supp 1, 184 CR 604. However, the rules on review of civil contempt orders are quite different.

The judgment of a court in civil contempt cases is final and conclusive. CCP §1222. As such, the order is not appealable. CCP §§904.1(a)(1)(B), 904.2(a)(2). In re Buckley (1973) 10 C3d 237, 259, 110 CR 121. Contempt orders that result in a custodial sentence are reviewed by a petition for writ of habeas corpus, while those that result only in a fine are reviewed by a petition for writ of certiorari. Inniss v Municipal Court (1965) 62 C2d 487, 42 CR 594.

Owing to the summary nature of civil contempt, a civil contempt order is not presumed to be correct. Instead, all presumptions must be drawn against the validity of the contempt order. In re D.W. (2004) 123 CA4th 491, 500, 20 CR3d 274; In re Rosen (1973) 31 CA3d 71, 74, 106 CR 757, disapproved on other grounds in Boysaw v Superior Court (2000) 23 C4th 215, 221, 96 CR2d 531. A reviewing court may not presume the existence of matters not specifically set forth in the written order, and the order must be strictly construed to favor the accused. 31 CA3d at 73. See also Corenevsky v Superior Court (1984) 36 C3d 307, 327, 204 CR 165. No presumptions are to be made in favor of the judgment. In re Coleman (1974) 12 C3d 568, 572, 116 CR 381.

In reviewing an adjudication of contempt, the sole question is whether the trial court had jurisdiction to render the judgment under review. In re Buckley (1973) 10 C3d 237, 247, 110 CR 121; In re Holmes (1983) 145 CA3d 934, 941, 193 CR 790. Thus, the reviewing court's responsibility is merely to ascertain whether sufficient evidence was put before the trial court to sustain its judgment and order. The power to weigh the evidence rests with the trial court. New York Times v Superior Court (1990) 51 C3d 453, 459, 273 CR 98. As a general proposition, a reviewing court may not inquire into the reasonableness of a contempt punishment fixed by the trial court within the statutory maximum. People v Fusaro (1971) 18 CA3d 877, 888, 96 CR 368, disapproved on other grounds in People v Brigham (1979) 25 C3d 283, 292 n14, 157 CR 905.

On reviewing contempt orders that result from disobeying protective orders, see §14.26.

§58.40 VIII. REPORT TO STATE BAR

The State Bar must be notified of a final order of contempt imposed against an attorney that may involve grounds warranting discipline. Bus & P C §6086.7(a). See, e.g., In re Riordan (2002) 26 C4th 1235, 115 CR2d 1. The attorney involved must be notified of the referral to the State Bar. Bus & P C §6086.7(c). Of course, even if contempt proceedings are not instituted, the State Bar also may be notified when an attorney engages in misconduct warranting discipline. Bus & P C §6103; People v McKenzie (1983) 34 C3d 616, 627 n5, 194 CR 462. See, e.g., People v Pigage (2003) 112 CA4th 1359, 1376, 6 CR3d 88.
