In 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action based on murder and attempted murder of mother and father after they warned police that they could be harmed by next door neighbor based on allegations that neighbor had molested their daughter, police officer was not entitled to qualified immunity, when officer violated constitutional rights because his affirmative actions placed family in situation of danger greater than they would have faced had he not acted at all and he acted with deliberate indifference to family's safety by failing to recognize obvious consequences of his actions, and when constitutional right violated by officer's conduct was clearly established at time of events. Kennedy v. Ridgefield City (9th Cir. 2005) 411 F.3d 1134, 1141-1145

Because deputies did not exceed constitutional limits on use of deadly force when they shot plaintiff, and because, even if their actions did violate plaintiff's constitutional rights, reasonable law enforcement officer in their position at time would not have known that shooting plaintiff was violation of clearly established law, deputies were entitled to qualified immunity. Blanford v. Sacramento County (9th Cir. 2005) 406 F.3d 1110, 1114-1119

District court properly denied qualified immunity to county officials who had applied for and executed search warrant by invading home in early morning, when there was no exigency because nothing in record indicated officers had reason to believe plaintiff would resist or flee or that plaintiffs would be armed, so they had no reason not to identify themselves before giving orders to plaintiffs; when officers stated no fact justifying their batteries of plaintiffs; when affidavit applying for search warrant could not be purged of lies and still be sufficient to justify issuance of warrant; and when there was no immunity for conspiracy to violate rights by lying to magistrate. Baldwin v. Placer County (9th Cir. 2005) 405 F.3d 778, 781-782

Police officers who seized "truckloads" of personal property, including numerous motorcycles and piece of concrete, for sole purpose of proving Hells Angels was gang, and deputy sheriff who instructed them to do so, were not entitled to qualified immunity, when seizure was unreasonable execution of search warrants in violation of Fourth Amendment, and at time searches were carried out, law was sufficiently clear to put reasonable officer on fair notice conduct was unlawful. Further, shooting dogs at residences was unreasonable seizure and unreasonable execution of search warrants in violation of Fourth Amendment, when exigent circumstances did not exist at either residence, as officers had one week to consider options and tactics available for encounter with dogs but failed to develop realistic plan for incapacitating dogs other than shooting them, and unlawfulness of conduct would have been apparent to reasonable officer at time officers planned for serving search warrants. San Jose Charter of the Hells Angels Motorcycle Club v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 2005) 402 F.3d 962, 971-978

In action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for violation of Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments based on repossession of automobile, police officers were entitled to qualified immunity because there was no violation of constitutional right, when officers were summoned to scene after breach of peace was in progress, officers heard conflicting stories as to whether repossessor had taken effective possession of car before breach, and both parties insisted on citizen's arrest of other party, and officers had little means to resolve dispute over possession of car at scene. Further, officers were entitled to qualified immunity because they could not have known they were violating plaintiffs' clearly established constitutional rights, when officers could not have determined at what point in middle of repossession they deprived plaintiff of her property without due process of law. Meyers v. Redwood City (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 765, 770-774

District court properly granted summary judgment to prison officials on basis of qualified immunity on claim that ban on non-subscription bulk mail and catalogs violated inmates' First and Fourteenth Amendment rights, because officials' actions did not violate clearly established law. Further, district court properly denied prison officials' motion for summary judgment based on qualified immunity regarding claim that department's policy for handling third-party legal materials violated constitutional rights, because court was required to accept as true allegations that prison officials applied policy so as to discriminate against plaintiff on basis of content of legal materials. Prison Legal News v. Lehman (9th Cir. 2005) 397 F.3d 692, 701-703

In civil rights action based on arrest under state's privacy law, police chief was not entitled to qualified immunity, when arrest based on videotaping of police chief's communications on his police radio was not violation of privacy law, and law was sufficiently established so that chief reasonably should have known that he had no lawful basis to arrest plaintiff. Johnson v. Hawe (9th Cir. 2004) 388 F.3d 676, 681-685

District attorney was entitled to qualified immunity in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action based on his approval of search warrant, when although highway patrol officer's affidavit did not constitute probable cause to seize documents over 10-year period and district attorney's approval of invalid warrant led directly to search that violated plaintiffs' Fourth Amendment rights, approval of search warrant was reasonable. Investigator was not entitled to qualified immunity because investigator had greater responsibility for ensuring warrant was not defective and no reasonable officer could have concluded that discovery of 1990 ledger and several checks showed that plaintiff had been primarily engaged in fraudulent activity since 1990; fact that judge and prosecutor approved warrant does not make investigator's reliance on it reasonable. District attorney and investigator were entitled to qualified immunity based on another search warrant, because although reasonable official with knowledge of background of private citizen on whose accusations affidavit was partially based may have questioned citizen's reliability, highway patrol officer's affidavit indicated that he and investigator investigated and corroborated many of citizen's statements regarding alleged dumping with eyewitness whose reliability was not challenged by plaintiffs, and investigator had no role in preparation of search warrant or its execution. KRL v. Moore (9th Cir. 2004) 384 F.3d 1105, 1115-1118

Police officers who conducted parole search of home of gang member's girlfriend and their infant son while gang member was in custody were not entitled to qualified immunity, when warrantless search of girlfriend's home was unconstitutional because officers did not have reasonable grounds to believe gang member lived or was present at residence, and officers conducted search in unreasonable and harassing manner. Officer in training was entitled to qualified immunity, because he did not participate in search of home but remained behind house throughout, which was reasonable under circumstances. Officer who aimed gun at five-week-old infant not entitled to qualified immunity on claim of use of excessive force, when no reasonable officer could have believed that pointing gun at baby was reasonable during course of non-exigent and unconstitutional search. Motley v. Parks (9th Cir. 2004) 383 F.3d 1058, 1065-1072

Police chief was not entitled to qualified immunity in action by arrestee for violation of Fourth Amendment rights, for his arrest for violation of state's privacy act, when it was clearly established under state law at time of arrest that recording police officer in performance of his public duties was not violation of privacy act, and it was unreasonable for police chief to believe otherwise. Further, because police chief could not have had reasonable expectation of privacy in communications by others over police radio dispatch system, which was basis for privacy act arrest, arrest violated Fourth Amendment right to be free of arrest without probable cause. Johnson v. Hawe (9th Cir. 2004) 382 F.3d 944, 948-953

In action by development company under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, alleging that two employees of California Regional Water Quality Control Board subjected them to selective and overzealous regulatory oversight in violation of their constitutional rights to equal protection and substantive due process, district court properly granted summary judgment in favor of employees on ground of qualified immunity as to all claims but one, when there was no triable issue of material fact that constitutional violation had been committed. However, because development company presented evidence that one employee may have been motivated by personal animus, appellate court reversed grant of summary judgment as to "class of one" equal protection claim against that employee. Squaw Valley Development Co. v. Goldberg (9th Cir. 2004) 375 F.3d 936, 943-950

Federal Park Service employees were entitled to qualified immunity in Bivens action based on denial of march permit to protestors without concomitant promise on their part not to engage in civil disobedience and dispersal of prayer service that began as alternative to march, when before opinion of Ninth Circuit in reversing federal convictions involving same parties and same facts, contours of constitutional right violated by defendants' denial of permit were not sufficiently clear that reasonable official would have understood that what he was doing violated that right; and when as to dispersal of prayer service, although location restriction on prayer service was unconstitutional because dispersal of prayer service due to refusal to retreat to designated First Amendment area was not sufficiently narrowly tailored, law at time of events in question was not sufficiently clear that reasonable official would understand that what he was doing violated that right because although defendants were wrong in their assumption that terminating prayer service was narrowly tailored response to threatened governmental interests, their error was not unreasonable given law as clearly established at time. Galvin v. Hay (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 739, 745-757

In action by black inmate alleging claim for denial of equal protection by alleging that during three prison lockdowns resulting from racially related violence involving black inmates, he was not allowed to resume his prison job on critical-worker status until after similarly situated inmates of other races were, defendants were entitled to qualified immunity. While it was well-established that racial discrimination in assignment of prison jobs is unconstitutional, it was not clearly established that such race-based differentiation was unconstitutional in context of prisonwide lockdown instituted in response to gang- or race-based violence. Walker v. Gomez (9th Cir. 2004) 370 F.3d 969, 974-978

On motion for summary judgment based on official immunity, district court is not required or even allowed to assume challenged factual allegations in plaintiff's complaint are true, irrespective of evidentiary support, if defendant makes properly supported motion for summary judgment based on official immunity that would, on motion for summary judgment in any other civil case, require plaintiff to produce evidence in opposition. Thus, in § 1983 action based on falsification of evidence by district attorney and district attorney investigator leading to plaintiffs' convictions for murder, as to which California state court granted plaintiffs' habeas corpus petitions, because federal district court misunderstood evidentiary standard in granting defendants' motions for summary judgment based on official immunity by not ruling on admissibility of plaintiffs' evidence at summary judgment, but simply assuming factual allegations in complaint were true without regard to whether they had evidentiary support, appellate court vacated district court's ruling and remanded for further proceedings. District court's misunderstanding of evidentiary standard may have led it to be more restrictive in discovery it allowed plaintiffs than it would have been if it had properly understood standard, and court may have led plaintiffs to seek to discover and introduce less evidence they otherwise would have. Butler v. San Diego Dist. Attorney's Office (9th Cir. 2004) 370 F.3d 956, 961-964

In action by arrestee against county and deputy sheriff, trial court erred in finding deputy had qualified immunity and granting defendants summary judgment, when, if plaintiff's version of facts were believed, he was arrested without probable cause, arrest was accomplished by violence, and continuing restraint used excessive force, all in violation of Fourth Amendment. Further, on plaintiff's version of facts, reasonable officer would know arrest would be unlawful under circumstances, but trial court, relying on defendants' statement of fact, decided several disputed issues of fact, including nature of plaintiff's conduct before police came, knowledge deputy had of any conduct justifying arrest, and information given deputy as to effect of handcuffs on plaintiff, and trial court omitted any findings as to violence of arrest as alleged by plaintiff. Wall v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2004) 364 F.3d 1107, 1110-1112

In Bivens action against F.B.I. agent for arrest without probable cause in violation of Fourth Amendment based on agent's allegedly causing brother of national fugitive to be arrested under warrant agent allegedly knew was for fugitive under one of his aliases, trial court properly denied agent qualified immunity, when plaintiff presented evidence that in light of facts and circumstances confronting agent, agent actually knew that warrant applied to fugitive, not to plaintiff, which district court found presented genuine issue of material fact and knowingly arresting wrong person pursuant to facially valid warrant issued for someone else violates rights guaranteed by Fourth Amendment, and when no reasonable officer would believe that he or she is entitled knowingly to arrest wrong person pursuant to faciallyvalid warrant officer knows was issued for someone else. Lee v. Gregory (9th Cir. 2004) 363 F.3d 931, 934-936

In § 1983 action by public school special education teacher against school and district officials based on refusal to renew her contract, which teacher alleged was in retaliation for her exercise of First Amendment rights, magistrate judge erred in holding, despite jury verdict in teacher's favor, that teacher's supervisor and her supervisor's supervisor were entitled to qualified immunity. Jury was properly instructed as to showing required of defendants and given appropriate list of factors to consider in making this determination, and jury's verdict in teacher's favor necessarily reflected finding that any disruption her comments might have aroused was outweighed by her interest in free expression, so that magistrate judge should only have found defendants were protected by qualified immunity if it was quite clear jury reached seriously erroneous result, and jury's finding could not possibly be deemed seriously erroneous because of strong interest in allowing teacher to express herself and school district presented little evidence of disruption or other actual injury. Further, magistrate judge erred in concluding teacher's First Amendment rights were not clearly established. Settlegoode v. Portland Public Schools (9th Cir. 2004) 362 F.3d 1118, 1125-1129

District attorney and supervisory employees of district attorney's office were not entitled to qualified immunity on deputy district attorney's claim of adverse employment actions in retaliation for his exercise of his First Amendment free speech rights, when employee's speech addressed matter of public concern and employee's interest in expressing himself outweighed government's interests in promoting workplace efficiency and avoiding workplace disruption, when employee's First Amendment rights were clearly established, and when officials' retaliatory acts were not objectively reasonable. Ceballos v. Garcetti (9th Cir. 2004) 361 F.3d 1168, 1172-1182

United States Park Police officers were qualifiedly immune in Bivens action based on their refusal to issue permit to protestors without protestors agreeing they would not engage in civil disobedience, when, although they were mistaken on law under First Amendment, law on issue was not clearly established at time defendants determined to impose condition. Officers were also entitled to qualified immunity on claims based on their dispersal of prayer service to " First Amendment" area rather than allowing protestors to remain in area they chose despite absence of on-site audience because of significance of area itself, when, although requirement for protestors to use " First Amendment area" did burden speech to substantially greater degree than needed to achieve government's purposes thus violating protestors' First Amendment rights, law of "ample alternatives" in absence of audience was not clearly established at time officers imposed requirement. Galvin v. Hay (9th Cir. 2004) 361 F.3d 1134, 1139-1151 , amended by 374 F.3d 739

Trial court properly found police officers entitled to qualified immunity in action alleging violations of Fourth Amendment based on warrantless entry into home to check on welfare of occupant and alleged failure to knock and announce their presence as they entered, when "emergency aid" exception to warrant requirement was applicable so that officers did not violate constitutional right, because officers had reasonable grounds to believe there existed immediate need for their assistance, search was not motivated by intent to arrest or to seize evidence, and officers had reasonable basis for associating potential emergency with house. Martin v. City of Oceanside (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1078, 1081-1084

FBI agent was entitled to qualified immunity in action by motorcycle association based on search warrant and subsequent federal administrative subpoena for items seized in execution of search warrant and alleged disclosure of subpoenaed items to public, when reasonable expectation of privacy in documents was substantially reduced by lawful seizure of documents by local police officials under earlier search warrant and privacy interest in seized documents was not substantial enough to require notice and opportunity to contest administrative subpoena, so that agent's subsequent search of documents resulted in no constitutional deprivation. Hell's Angels Motorcycle Corp. v. McKinley (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 930, 933-934

District court did not err in its determination that prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity because prison inmates had no clearly established right to receive commercial bulk mail at time officials rejected Green Lantern comic book subscription for inmate. Bahrampour v. Lampert (9th Cir. 2004) 356 F.3d 969, 976-977

Police officers were not entitled to qualified immunity on claims of false arrest and excessive force based on arrest of divorcing husband under protection order, when there was no viable reading of order pursuant to which husband was in violation so that officers had no objective basis to arrest him for violating order, and when any reasonably competent officer would have ascertained terms of protection order before arresting husband for failing to comply with it. Beier v. City of Lewiston (9th Cir. 2004) 354 F.3d 1058, 1065-1072

In action by relatives of police officer based on shooting of officer by fellow police officers alleging violation of slain officer's Fourth Amendment rights and of due process clauses of Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments, defendant officers were not entitled to summary judgment on issue of qualified immunity, when objective reasonableness of officers' conduct in using deadly force case turned on their mistake of fact with regard to slain officer's status as police officer and purpose at scene on night of slaying, and whether their mistake of fact was reasonable depended on which version of facts were accepted by jury. Wilkins v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 2003) 350 F.3d 949, 954-956

Federal prison warden and food services administrator were entitled to qualified immunity on inmate's claim that requiring him to apply for prison food program to receive kosher meals violated his rights to religious freedom, when inmate did not challenge constitutionality of program and could not demonstrate that he was excused from applying because uncontroverted evidence indicated that application may not have been futile, when requiring prisoner to file standardized application before receiving kosher meals could not be said to violate his First Amendment rights, and when rather than failing to investigate and answer inmate's complaints about food program prison officials promised to work with him, once he filed proper form, to ensure problems he had with program were addressed. Resnick v. Adams (9th Cir. 2003) 348 F.3d 763, 767-772

In claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 related to proceedings based on child neglect and sexual abuse, in which court found child dependent of court and ordered custodial father to participate in family reunification plan, as result of which child remained out of his custody until he completed reunification services, county social worker was entitled to qualified immunity for claims based on social worker detaining child before dependency proceedings and referring her for medical sexual abuse examination without court order or parental consent, when maintaining child in temporary protective custody pending her detention hearing did not violate father's or child's constitutional rights because social worker had reasonable cause to believe child was neglected or abused and therefore in imminent danger and she complied with relevant California law regarding removal and detention of children when there were allegations of abuse or neglect; and when, although social worker violated child's right to privacy and father's right to guide, rear, and protect child by referring child for intrusive sexual abuse examination without parental consent or court order, it would not have been clear to reasonable social worker in her position that her action was unlawful. Doe v. Lebbos (9th Cir. 2003) 348 F.3d 820, 826-831 , overruled on other grounds in Beltran v. County of Santa Clara (9th Cir. 2008) 514 F.3d 906, 908-909

Police officer was entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action based on underlying sexual abuse investigation, on claim of deliberate fabrication of evidence, when despite officer's use of overbearing tactics in interviewing children, plaintiff failed to show by independent evidence that officer knew or should have known his interview tactics would yield false information, and when although officer carelessly handled facts and investigation, plaintiff did not point to any facts showing officer knew plaintiff was innocent and record proved otherwise. Officer was also entitled to qualified immunity on Sixth Amendment claim of violation of plaintiff's right to compulsory process by using interview tactics making children recall misinformation, because officer did not deliberately fabricate the evidence; on Fourth Amendment claim, because, although portions of officer's affidavit in support of probable cause were exaggerated or inaccurate, officer had probable cause without considering inaccurate portions because officer had knowledge based on reasonably trustworthy information that plaintiff had committed criminal offense; and on claim of violation of Due Process Clause of Fourteenth Amendment by failing to preserve and gather exculpatory evidence, because plaintiff's evidence did not prove officer's bad faith. Gausvik v. Perez (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 813, 816-818

Police officer was entitled to qualified immunity on plaintiff's claim of coercive investigation of sexual abuse claims, when interrogation did not undermine plaintiff's free will, because, while interrogation lasted eight hours, officer did not refuse to give plaintiff break for food or water and never yelled or used violence or threat of violence, continuing to question plaintiff after plaintiff claimed he was innocent did not constitute coercion, officer's suggestion that plaintiff's cooperation could lead to treatment rather than prison was not coercive, officer's statement that he had put people in prison did not contribute to undermining plaintiff's free will, and denial of plaintiff's request to call therapist was not coercive or unconstitutional because there is no constitutional right to call therapist during investigation. Arrest did not lack probable cause because plaintiff's confession, coupled with daughter's allegations, gave officer probable cause, officer's interviews of plaintiff's daughters were not so coercive that he knew or should have known he would receive false information so as to violate plaintiff's right to be free from prosecution based on false evidence, and allegations of officer's failure to preserve or collect potential exculpatory evidence were not specific or compelling enough to show bad faith. Cunningham v. City of Wenatchee (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 802, 810-812

Prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity on inmate's claim under Fifth Amendment Takings Clause that inmate was required to foreswear his statutory right to accrued net interest on his trust account and his due process right to be free of unauthorized deductions from his account to maintain prison employment failed, where utter lack of precedent and standards was dispositive that law concerning unconstitutional condition predicated on procedural due process claim in prison setting was not clearly established. However, prison administrators failed to establish legitimate goal for retaliating against inmate by terminating his prison employment for refusing to sign waiver, because while they undoubtedly had interest in recouping costs and maintaining efficient prison system, interest did not extend to avoiding limits placed on them by state Legislature and failing to provide constitutionally adequate procedural protections, so that prison administrators unconstitutionally retaliated against inmate for refusing to waive his right to accrued net interest and to consent to use of unauthorized deductions, inmate was entitled to summary judgment on unconstitutional retaliation claim, and officials were not entitled to qualified immunity on claim. Vance v. Barrett (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1083, 1088-1094

Prison official conducting disciplinary hearing that resulted in disabled inmate's being housed in segregated housing unit not suitable for disabled inmate was entitled to qualified immunity on inmate's claim of denial of due process for refusal to call inmate's witnesses because law at time of alleged constitutional violation was not clearly established, when, although at time it was clearly established that inmate facing disciplinary proceedings should be allowed to call witnesses, court had never before addressed contours of initial component of inmate's claim whether disabled inmate's freedom from restraint in facility not designed for disabled persons may, as matter of law, constitute protected liberty interest, and official did not have fair warning that his levying of punishment via failing to allow live witness testimony would deprive inmate of his constitutional right to be free from this type of restraint. Serrano v. Francis (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1071, 1080-1081

District court properly denied IRS agent qualified immunity on claim that agent used excessive force in handcuffing plaintiff in search of her residence under warrant to search building for evidence of income tax violations, because agent's conduct violated Fourth Amendment and reasonable agent in his position would have known that it did. Agent grabbed plaintiff by her arms, forcibly threw her to ground, and, twisting her arms, handcuffed her, after plaintiff loudly asked several times to see search warrant; plaintiff did not pose safety risk and made no attempt to leave property, and agent was investigating income tax related crimes, which, although felonies, are nonviolent offenses; plaintiff passively resisted handcuffing, but need for force, if any, was minimal at best. However, as to claim that detaining plaintiff in handcuffs during search was unlawful, totality of the circumstances did not justify her detention in that manner and agent violated Fourth Amendment because plaintiff was not serious impediment to search or threat and she made no attempt to flee, but, except for overly tight handcuffing that occurred during first 30 minutes, before court's holding it had not been clearly established that conduct would violate plaintiff's constitutional rights, so agent was entitled to qualified immunity as to that portion of claim. Meredith v. Erath (9th Cir. 2003) 342 F.3d 1057, 1060-1064

District properly denied police officer's motion for summary judgment based on qualified immunity in claim arising from traffic stop, when unlawful traffic stop, even if not racially-motivated, may give rise to § 1983 violation and under plaintiff's version of facts, which court must accept as true at summary judgment stage of litigation, there was no reasonable suspicion for officer to detain him; and when right not to be stopped without reasonable suspicion was clearly established. However, trial court properly granted summary judgment on issue of officer's qualified immunity with regard to arrest of plaintiff, when, although plaintiff was arrested for expired license violation, not for purpose of verifying outstanding felony warrant, and arrest for expired license violation violated Veh. Code § 12801.5(e), prohibiting arrest of motorist over 16 solely on belief person is unlicensed driver, and law was clearly established at that time, reasonable officer could have believed plaintiff's detention for verification of warrant was lawful in light of clearly established law and information officer possessed. Bingham v. City of Manhattan Beach (9th Cir. 2003) 341 F.3d 939, 946-953

Police officer was entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action on claim of excessive force, in which plaintiff claimed that conduct of officer, inter alia, rendered him paraplegic during high speed car chase and its aftermath, which ensued after plaintiff and another man committed armed robbery of bank, when even though plaintiff was not actively resisting arrest when officer pulled him from car, force applied to remove him was patently reasonable and commensurate with what was needed, there was no indication to officer that plaintiff had suffered debilitating back injury, and need to quickly restrain plaintiff by removing him from car and handcuffing him was paramount; and when officer reasonably could have believed that his conduct was lawful under the circumstances. Johnson v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2003) 340 F.3d 787, 791-794

Police officer was not entitled to qualified immunity for shooting criminal suspect in violation of his Fourth Amendment rights, when use of deadly force violated suspect's Fourth Amendment rights as articulated in United States Supreme Court decision [Tennessee v. Garner (1985) 471 U.S. 1, 105 S. Ct. 1694, 85 L. Ed. 2d 1] because although officer had reason to believe suspect had committed drug crimes and burglary, which are serious offenses, under Garner officer did not have probable cause to believe suspect committed crime involving infliction or threatened infliction of serious physical harm, officer did not demonstrate objectively reasonable fear about potential weapon to justify her use of deadly force, officer did not offer any evidence to support claim that suspect posed significant risk of death or serious bodily injury to her, other people involved in incident, or fellow officers, and possibility of dangerous high-speed chase did not justify officer's use of deadly force; and when officer's mistake about requirements of Fourth Amendment was unreasonable and she had fair warning her conduct deprived suspect of constitutional right. Haugen v. Brosseau (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 857, 862-874

Police officer was entitled to qualified immunity in action based on his search of protester's back pack and his arrest, because, although officer's conduct violated protester's Fourth Amendment rights since officer had only reasonable suspicion but not probable cause to search or arrest, reasonable officer in same situation could have believed that circumstances carried enough weight to create probable cause when there was at least some individualized suspicion and law did not provide him clear guidance as to how much weight he could give explosively hostile circumstances of Nazi parade in making his probable cause assessment. Graves v. City of Coeur D'Alene (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 828,

840-848

Police officer was entitled to qualified immunity and summary judgment in § 1983 claim against him by man he arrested for robbery based on man's grabbing of land title documents from his sister, after which police were called, when officer was sent to house for domestic dispute, undisputed evidence established that family members were upset and angry, and there were language barriers between officer and witnesses; when, although there were factual disputes, including whether man in fact threatened force to obtain documents from his sister, dispute was not material to what officer knew at time of arrest, at which time officer had interviewed sister via her son, who was acting as interpreter, and she gave detailed account of incident, which, so far as officer knew, was corroborated, since he relied on son's translation of witnesses' testimony as well; when victim alleged that force or threat of force existed, so it was important for officer to err on side of safety for victim to prevent further violence and allow parties to cool down; when sister provided sufficiently detailed facts regarding incident to support finding that probable cause to arrest existed and officer also interviewed two more witnesses present during altercation; when inconsistencies in officer's testimony as to incidental facts were to be expected when different people were called on to remember startling events, and they were not material and did not establish that officer fabricated evidence; and when even if officer was mistaken about existence of probable cause to arrest, his mistake was objectively reasonable and he was entitled to qualified immunity. Peng v. Hu (9th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 970, 975-980

Prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity in prisoner's claim for violation of his due process rights by failing to have prison official other than one who made initial decision to withhold allegedly obscene material mailed to him review decision, when, although officials violated prisoner's due process rights because right to two-level review was established as general proposition, officials could have reasonably believed their own conduct did not violate his rights because they were acting under provisions of consent decree that did not clearly require type of appeal to which prisoner was constitutionally entitled. Krug v. Lutz (9th Cir. 2003) 329 F.3d 692, 698-699

School district officials were not entitled to qualified immunity for their alleged response or lack of response to complaints of student-to-student anti-homosexual harassment, which allegedly denied students equal protection, where students were members of identifiable class for equal protection purposes because they alleged discrimination on basis of sexual orientation, where defendants believed that under district policies harassment of any kind would not be tolerated, but there was evidence plaintiffs were harassed for years and defendants failed to enforce policies to protect them so that plaintiffs were treated differently, and there was sufficient evidence to raise inference of deliberate indifference as to each of administrator defendants. There was also evidence that defendants failed to adequately train teachers, students, and campus monitors about policies prohibiting harassment on basis of sexual orientation and that defendants inadequately communicated anti-harassment policies to students despite defendants' awareness of hostility toward homosexual students, and in some cases despite plaintiffs' requests to do so. Law was clearly established during relevant period because defendants were officers of state who had fair warning they could not accord homosexual and bisexual students less protection on account of students' sexual orientation.

Flores v. Morgan Hill Unif. Sch. Dist. (9th Cir. 2003) 324 F.3d 1130, 1134-1138

Administrative coroner and chief medical examiner were not entitled to qualified immunity based on 1993 termination of contract with private company to provide services for city's indigent dead, when it was clearly established in 1993 that state employees could not cause termination of two-year for-profit government contract in retaliation for contracting party's exercise of his First Amendment rights to speak out on matter of public concern, and when there was ample evidence from which jury reasonably could have concluded state employees caused termination of contract in retaliation for company president's whistle blowing. Rivero v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2002) 316 F.3d 857, 863-867

When viewed in light most favorable to non-moving party, there was enough evidence for reasonable jury to conclude that reasonable police officers who conducted investigation leading to arrest and jailing of plaintiff on rape charges, which were later dismissed, would not have acted as officers did in arresting him based on canine alert, eyewitness identifications, and his resemblance to general physical description, so that district court properly submitted issue of qualified immunity to jury and entered judgment on its verdict. Grant v. City of Long Beach (9th Cir. 2002) 315 F.3d 1081, 1088-1090

In 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action by father implicated in 20-year-old murder by his daughter, police detectives were entitled to qualified immunity on claim of lack of probable cause to arrest, when on its face, evidence available to police before arrest was reasonably trustworthy and sufficient for reasonable officer to conclude there was probable cause to arrest, and when plaintiff did not raise any issue of material disputed fact regarding reasonableness of detectives' belief in their probable cause to arrest him. Daughter was entitled to qualified immunity on claim of conspiracy to deprive father of his constitutional rights based on arrest without probable cause, when father failed to provide any evidence that detectives conspired to violate his constitutional rights, and when because officers had probable cause to arrest him, his claim against his daughter with regard to probable cause fails; even if probable cause did not exist, father offered no evidence to support finding daughter engaged in any sort of conspiracy with detectives that could expose her to liability. Prosecutor and police officer in charge of jail were entitled to qualified immunity on claim of violation of Sixth Amendment rights based on daughter's visit to him in jail to try to get him to confess, when although it is now matter of clearly established law in Ninth Circuit that facilitation of interrogation such as that provided by prosecutor is unlawful, at time prosecutor acted, official may have reasonably believed opposite to be true, and when, police officer, possessing information he had, that suspect's daughter wanted to visit him and she was to be treated as any other witness, he reasonably could have believed that arranging for non-visiting hours visit, service jail often provided to out-of-town visitors, did not violate suspect's Sixth Amendment rights. Franklin v. Fox (9th Cir. 2002) 312 F.3d 423, 437-444

In action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 by family and estate of inmate who was killed by his cellmate, alleging violation of Eighth Amendment in that correctional officers were deliberately indifferent by double-celling plaintiffs' decedent with inmate who killed him, trial court erred in denying correctional officers summary judgment based on qualified immunity from suit, when information available to them did not make it clear that inmate who killed plaintiffs' decedent would harm him such that no reasonable officer could have agreed to allow them to be celled together. Ford v. Ramirez-Palmer (9th Cir. 2002) 301 F.3d 1043, 1048-1053

Lead law enforcement officers who executed search pursuant to defective warrant did not enjoy qualified immunity, when warrant was facially defective because it provided no description of evidence sought and did not refer to or incorporate application or affidavit and officer did not cure flaw by conversation with residents of searched home because he lacked authority to amend warrant, when invalid warrant deprived residents of means to be on lookout and challenge officers who might have exceeded limits imposed by magistrate, and when permitting officers to expand scope of warrant by oral statements would broaden area of dispute between parties in subsequent litigation. However, line officers were entitled to qualified immunity, when line officers were not required to read warrant, and line officers acted reasonably because they were told warrant had been obtained and learned through advance briefing what items could be seized. Ramirez v. Butte-Silver Bow County (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 1022, 1026-1028 , aff'd sub nom Groh v. Ramirez (2004) 540 U.S. 551, 124 S. Ct. 1284, 157 L. Ed. 2d 1068

Police officer was not entitled to qualified immunity, as matter of law, for seizing individual based on civil dispute, when facts alleged showed that officer violated plaintiff's right not to be arrested in absence of probable cause to believe plaintiff had committed crime, and that right was clearly established and would be known to reasonable officer in these circumstances. Stevens v. Rose (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 880, 884-885

In action based on police officer's shooting and killing of suspect, officer was entitled to qualified immunity, when deceased's estate failed to make out claim of violation of constitutional rights based on use of excessive force, since deceased actively, violently, and successfully resisted arrest and physically attacked officer and tried to turn officer's gun against him, and posed imminent threat of injury or death to officer and under the circumstances, reasonable officer would perceive substantial risk that deceased would seriously injure or kill him; none of officer's supposed errors before fight occurred could be deemed intentional or reckless, much less unconstitutional, provocations causing deceased to attack him. Billington v. City of Boise (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 1177, 1185, 1191

Prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity on prisoner's claim that prison policy prohibiting prisoners from receiving publications as gifts violated First Amendment, when although two unpublished district court opinions held policy unconstitutional, no published cases held policy or similar policies constitutional, it was entirely reasonable that prison officials could have thought that policy would pass constitutional muster and policy's illegality was not so obvious that any prison official involved in enforcing it should have known he or she was breaking the law, and unpublished court opinions showed only that law was in process of becoming established. Sorrels v. McKee (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 965, 970-972

State motor vehicles investigator was not entitled to qualified immunity in action based on investigator's affidavit submitted in support of issuance of search warrant against plaintiff in criminal tax proceedings, when plaintiff made sufficient showing of judicial deception by investigator and failures and omissions were material and warrant was issued without probable cause. Butler v. Elle (9th Cir. 2002) 281 F.3d 1014, 1023-1026

County prosecutor was entitled to qualified immunity in action based on allegedly false statements in affidavit supporting motion to revoke plaintiff's bail based on statements made to prosecutor by plaintiff's ex-wife, when although plaintiff neither alleged nor offered evidence that prosecutor knew ex-wife's allegations were false, he did support claim that prosecutor submitted affidavit in reckless disregard of its falsity so as to present case that his Fourth Amendment rights were violated sufficient to survive summary judgment. Cruz v. Kauai County (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 1064, 1068-1070

State gaming control officer was not entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action based on agent's actions in arresting plaintiff for refusing to identify himself, where Ninth Circuit law is clear that police may not, consistent with Fourth Amendment, compel identification during investigatory stop and state statutes authorizing plaintiff's arrest for refusal to identify himself are unconstitutional; where search of plaintiff's shoes for cheating device was unreasonable as it was not incident to lawful arrest; and where reasonable officer in gaming control officer's position would have known that plaintiff had clearly established right not to identify himself and statutes were unconstitutional to extent they allowed plaintiff to be arrested for exercising his rights. Carey v. Nevada Gaming Control Bd. (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 873, 878-882

Police officers who pointed gun at head of apparently unarmed suspect were entitled to qualified immunity where, in 1995, when incident occurred, contours of general principle that pointing gun to head of apparently unarmed suspect during investigation could be violation of Fourth Amendment, especially when individual posed no particular danger so that law was not sufficiently established to override immunity claim. Robinson v. Solano County (9th Cir. 2002) 278 F.3d 1007, 1015-1016

Interim dean of students and security officer of public college were not entitled to qualified immunity against § 1983 claim of violation of First Amendment rights by pro-life demonstrator based on his arrest because of his violation of conditions imposed by dean on demonstration, including condition inconsistent with First Amendment free speech and free exercise of religion clauses that he limit his demonstration to secular content, when demonstrator's First Amendment rights were clearly established, when, as to dean, reasonable public official should have known that permitting him to express his views on abortion only so long as they were not religious in nature violated his First Amendment rights, and when, as to security officer, record was unclear as to whether he asked demonstrator to leave campus because he had violated religion condition or one of inoffensive conditions imposed by dean; however, police officers who arrested demonstrator were entitled to qualified immunity, when undisputed evidence indicated they arrested demonstrator not because of religious content of speech, but because they reasonably believed they had probable cause to arrest him for trespass and failure to disperse. Orin v. Barclay (9th Cir. 2001) 272 F.3d 1207, 1216-1217

Prison officials who allowed prisoner, whose inmate trust account was funded with payments of Veteran's Disability Benefits administered by federal Veterans Administration, to authorize withdrawal from empty account, advance goods and services requested, and then place holds on account until benefits paid back advances in effect allowed him to assign future benefits and then seized them to repay the prison system, in violation of 38 U.S.C. § 5301(a); however, they were entitled to qualified immunity when they reasonably but erroneously believed they were not violating statute, state court cases lent support to their position, and neither Ninth Circuit nor Supreme Court had ruled. Nelson v. Heiss (9th Cir. 2001) 271 F.3d 891

Police officer who conducted coercive, custodial interrogation of criminal suspect being treated for life-threatening, police-inflicted gunshot wounds in hospital emergency room without giving Miranda warnings was not entitled to qualified immunity, when officer's conduct violated suspect's Fifth Amendment and Fourteenth Amendment right against compulsory self-incrimination and those rights were clearly established by law and reasonable officer could not have believed that interrogation comported with Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments. Martinez v. City of Oxnard (9th Cir. 2001) 270 F.3d 852

Police officers were entitled to qualified immunity in § 1983 action alleging excessive force resulting from plaintiff's attempt to interfere with arrest of her son at barbecue in public park, when nature and quality of alleged intrusions in spraying plaintiff's hair with chemical irritant, pushing her to ground to handcuff her, and roughly pulling her up to feet during arrest in what plaintiff conceded was normal handcuffing procedure, and, while plaintiff was yelling at officer, rolling up windows in police car and turning up engine in July heat were minimal, and when plaintiff's interference with son's arrest posed immediate threat to officers' personal safety and ability to control group, so that force applied was reasonable and necessary to control rapidly evolving and escalating situation, and no Fourth Amendment violation occurred. Jackson v. City of Bremerton (9th Cir. 2001) 268 F.3d 646, 650-653

In action alleging discharge of firefighter in retaliation for reporting that fellow firefighters had downloaded large cache of hard core pornographic files on fire station's computers in violation of department policy, trial court correctly denied qualified immunity to defendant fire department commissioners, department chief and deputy chief, when defendants should have been aware that discharging him in retaliation for his truthful whistleblowing violated his constitutionally protected right to free speech, since his speech was matter of public concern protected by First Amendment and interests served by allowing him to express himself about downloading of pornographic material on department's computers outweighed department's interest in promoting workplace efficiency and avoiding workplace disruption; however, appellate court lacked jurisdiction over trial court's denial of qualified immunity on firefighter's claim that defendants violated his right to procedural due process when there were genuine issues of material fact as to whether firefighter received adequate procedural protection, precluding summary judgment on that issue. Finally, defendants were entitled to qualified immunity with respect to firefighter's claim that they violated his right to substantive due process, when because First Amendment explicitly covered claim, First Amendment, not Fourteenth Amendment guaranty of substantive due process, guided analysis of claims. Hufford v. McEnaney (9th Cir. 2001) 249 F.3d 1142

State officials sued in individual capacity for refusal to give out-of-state real estate appraiser proper application materials to apply for temporary and reciprocal appraisal license and not allowing appraiser to apply for licenses he sought were not entitled to qualified immunity since acts alleged are ministerial acts unshielded by qualified immunity, which protects only actions taken pursuant to discretionary functions. Groten v. California (9th Cir. 2001) 251 F.3d 844, 851

Local legislators are not entitled to qualified immunity if they implement their state-created power to indemnify police officers from punitive damage awards in bad faith, when based on prior case law, implementing indemnification procedures in bad faith violates clearly established constitutional right. Navarro v. Block (9th Cir. 2001) 250 F.3d 729

Members of board of elections were not entitled to qualified immunity in action alleging violation of § 1983 by administering pre-election day voter challenge procedures which precluded certain class of voters from voting in election, when procedures employed by board violated fundamental right to vote, right to vote was clearly established at time of election, and reasonable board would have known its actions violated right to vote. Charfauros v. Board of Elections (9th Cir. 2001) 249 F.3d 941

Deputies entering residence to arrest resident on valid out-of-state felony warrant based on delinquencies in child support payments were entitled to qualified immunity, when reasonable officer could believe he could arrest resident on out-of-state warrant since state statutes provide for execution of out-of-state felony warrants within state borders without separate state warrant, when reasonable officer could believe that post-arrest conduct did not violate resident's constitutional rights, and when deputies' conduct during arrest was reasonable. Case v. Kitsap County Sheriff's Dep't (9th Cir. 2001) 249 F.3d 921

Genuine issue of material fact as to whether operation of integrated exercise yards at state prison constitutes deliberate indifference to excessive risk that inmate would be harmed when placed in integrated yard and thus cruel and unusual punishment precluded summary judgment on ground that defendant prison officials and correctional officers are entitled to qualified immunity. Robinson v. Prunty (9th Cir. 2001) 249 F.3d 862

Professor at state university who removed handbills publicizing appearance of former colleague at conference to be held on university campus is not entitled to qualified immunity, when removal of handbills constituted First Amendment violation since handbills were speech, university bulletin boards were public forum and professor removing handbills engaged in viewpoint discrimination because he sought only to silence speech by this particular speaker, and when there was no uncertainty in law at time of alleged conduct. Giebel v. Sylvester (9th Cir. 2001) 244 F.3d 1182

In action against police officer by emotionally disturbed county resident who threatened suicide for use of excessive force, based on being shot in face with lead-filled "beanbag round," without receiving warning and while unarmed, resulting in removal of one eye and lead shot being left implanted in resident's skull, police officer was not entitled to qualified immunity, when, while falling short of deadly force, force used was enough to cause grave physical injury, which is only to be used when strong governmental interest compels employment of so high a degree of force, and when officers were on resident's property to investigate his peculiar behavior in creating disturbance, resident did not pose immediate safety threat in that he responded to officers' instructions, did not attack anyone and threw down potential weapons when ordered to do so, and officer did not make split-second choice to fire, but had decided to shoot when resident came within certain range and fired without command to stop or warning that force would be employed, so that force was excessive compared to governmental interests at stake; court reached its conclusion both under Ninth Circuit test previously articulated in Katz v. United States (9th Cir. 1999) 194 F.3d 962 , and the test as articulated by the Fifth Circuit in Snyder v. Trepagnier (5th Cir. 1998) 142 F.3d 791 , adopted by the United States Supreme Court in Saucier v. Katz (2001) 533 U.S. 194, 121 S. Ct. 2151, 150 L. Ed. 2d 272 , described above. Deorle v. Rutherford (9th Cir. 2001) 272 F.3d 1272

In action by prison inmate under § 1983 for violation of Eighth Amendment based on being wounded by rifle shot fired by correctional officer in course of emergency responses and prison security measures undertaken to control large-scale disturbance in prison yard, trial court erred in failing to grant motions of correctional officers, former warden and former director of corrections department based on qualified immunity, when law governing use of force in prison disturbances was clearly established, i.e., that when prison security measure is undertaken ostensibly for protection of prison officials and inmate population, force is deemed legitimate as long as it is applied in good faith effort to maintain or restore discipline and not maliciously and sadistically for very purpose of causing harm; when, as to correctional officers, inmate failed to present evidence showing that correctional officers acted purposely to injure him, inmate did not present evidence that one correctional officer's failure to act on rumors of violence before disturbance began to make out a case of deliberate indifference to substantial risk of serious harm, since officer's superiors made decision to order release of yard and there is no evidence officer should have done anything differently once decision was made, and inmate's allegations that officer's actions were racially motivated fell short of alleging that officer acted with unconstitutional motive; when, as to director of corrections, inmate presented no evidence to establish how director's alleged actions in promulgating and maintaining policies regarding use of lethal force against prison inmates violating inmate's Eighth Amendment right to be free from cruel and unusual punishment contributed to his injuries, record established constitutional validity of use-of-force policy designed and implemented by director, none of alleged circumstances regarding training, supervision, or discipline of correctional officers supported conclusion that any inadequacy in department of correction's training program led to deliberate violation of Eighth Amendment rights by director; and when, as to former warden, it was warden's duty to implement department's shooting policy as there was no clearly established law prohibiting its use, and warden did not violate rights by creating unsafe and potentially volatile situation by housing inmates of various races and gang affiliations together in general population yard, since he complied with statewide housing practice and had no affirmative duty to change policy. Jeffers v. Gomez (9th Cir. 2001) 267 F.3d 895

Deputy superintendent of school district was not entitled to qualified immunity in action against him by former employees for retaliating against them by demoting them after they alerted Board of Education to his alleged misuse of money and after they complained about his employment evaluation practices, when employees' speech involved matter of public concern, and interests served by allowing them to express themselves outweighed state's interest in promoting workplace efficiency and avoiding workplace disruption; and when there was no evidence of actual disruption caused by their speech or of actual injury to other legitimate interests beyond disruption necessarily accompanying speech. Keyser v. Sacramento City Unified Sch. Dist. (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 741

Board of trustees and employees of community college district were entitled to qualified immunity under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for their actions in terminating plaintiff's employment and barring him from future employment, when it was not well established and unlawfulness would not have been apparent to reasonable community college official that filing derogatory material and/or expunging plaintiff's employment file constituted violation of plaintiff's constitutional rights. Llamas v. Butte Community College District (9th Cir. 2001) 238 F.3d 1123, 1131

Trial court erroneously granted summary judgment to social worker who removed child from home without warrant on grounds of qualified immunity, when material issue of fact existed regarding whether there was reasonable cause to believe, on basis of information in possession of social worker at time of removal, that child faced imminent danger of serious bodily injury sufficient to justify warrantless entry to home and seizure of child. Mabe v. San Bernardino County (9th Cir. 2001) 237 F.3d 1101, 1106-1109

Private psychiatrist acting under color of state law was not entitled to qualified immunity in action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 by individual detained for mental examination on order of psychiatrist, when there was no suggestion that state law had firmly rooted tradition of immunity for doctors asked by government to make decision to commit persons suspected of mental illness nor is there definitive common law history of immunity outside of state to support finding of qualified immunity; when private agency of which psychiatrist is part is engaged in complex administrative task, which cannot be credibly described as discrete public service task; and when threat of distraction created by legal action for private individuals in private firm is insufficient to find qualified immunity. Jensen v. Lane County (9th Cir. 2000) 222 F.3d 570

In action by environmental activists alleging that use of pepper spray during protests constituted excessive and unreasonable force in violation of Fourth Amendment, trial court erred in ruling that sheriff and deputy sheriff who authorized use of pepper spray were entitled to qualified immunity as matter of law, where law concerning use of excessive force was clearly established; even though police use of pepper spray on nonviolent protesters engaged in civil disobedience was unprecedented, sheriff and deputy were aware of law governing its use; essential historical facts as to amount of force used and circumstances that might justify amount of force used were in dispute, as well as facts relating to what sheriff and deputy knew and did when they authorized use of pepper spray. Headwaters Forest Defense v. County of Humboldt (9th Cir. 2000) 211 F.3d 1121, 1140-1143

Justice of peace who issued ex parte order for destruction or donation to city of gaming devices owned by owner of antique business seized after entry without invitation or search warrant and over owner's protests, was absolutely immune from liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, when issuance of ex parte order is function that judge had jurisdiction to perform, even if order was erroneous and consequences may have been injurious, and irrespective of judge's claimed motivation. Harvey v. Waldron (9th Cir. 2000) 210 F.3d 1008, 1012

California Alcoholic Beverage Control officials not entitled to qualified immunity for threatening sanctions, including loss of liquor license, for renting premises to organization for display of erotic art. LSO, Ltd. v. Stroh (9th Cir. 2000) 205 F.3d 1146, 1157-1160

In action against police officers for illegal entry of home without warrant and use of excessive force during and after arrest, district court erroneously granted pretrial order extending qualified immunity to officers on illegal entry claim and erroneously granted judgment as matter of law granting officers qualified immunity on excessive force claim, where district court failed to evaluate facts in light most favorable to plaintiff and erred in resolving disputed issues of material fact, which should have been heard and decided by jury. LaLonde v. County of Riverside (9th Cir. 2000) 204 F.3d 947, 953-962

Police officers not entitled to qualified immunity for violation of strictures of Miranda, where Miranda rights cannot be viewed apart from constitutional right against self-incrimination they protect, and where holding in Miranda is clearly established law; fact that police departments may have trained police to violate Miranda rights does not provide defense for officers. California Attorneys for Criminal Justice v. Butts (9th Cir. 1999) 195 F.3d 1039, 1045-1050 , cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1261 (2000)

School officials were entitled to qualified immunity in action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for unreasonable search of high school student using dog, where, when search occurred, it was not clearly established that use of dog to sniff students in school setting constituted search. B.C. v. Plumas Unified School Dist. (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 1260, 1268

Executive officer of State of California Acupuncture Committee entitled to qualified immunity for refusing to renew acupuncturist's license based on refusal to supply social security number, when officer acted pursuant to duly enacted state statute, and at time of refusal there was no clear case law establishing that issuance of professional license may not be conditioned on licensee's disclosure of social security number, and when state statute did not authorize official conduct patently violative of fundamental constitutional principles. Dittman v. State of California (9th Cir. 1999) 191 F.3d 1020, 1026-1027 , cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1261 (2000)

City officials who told law firm that they would fire law firm serving as city attorney because of political activities of associate attorney at law firm and her family were entitled to summary judgment based on qualified immunity from suit, where associate attorney was in policymaking position with respect to city. Biggs v. Best, Best & Krieger (9th Cir. 1999) 189 F.3d 989, 993-999

Chief medical officer at state prison, during radiation experiments performed on prisoners, entitled to qualified immunity, where actions did not violate constitutional right of prisoners to be free from nonconsensual, nontherapeutic invasion of bodily integrity. Bibeau v. Pacific Northwest Research Foundation (9th Cir. 1999) 188 F.3d 1105, 1112

Physician not entitled to qualified immunity for warrantless forcible restraint and taking of blood sample by needle and urine sample by catheter from arrestee, when it was clearly established at time of arrest that blood and urine tests are searches subject to Fourth Amendment. Ellis v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1999) 176 F.3d 1183, 1191-1192

Doctor who forcibly medicated detainee in jail pending trial entitled to qualified immunity when, although doctor was wrong in interpretation of court order allowing detention of detainee pending return to compentence as allowing forcible medication, he was not unreasonable in interpretation, and reasonable belief that conduct was lawful is sufficient for qualified immunity. Kulas v. Valdez (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 453, 455-456 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1167 (2000)

Lack of case law concerning constitutionality of using dogs to apprehend suspects when policies were formulated establishes qualified immunity for chief of police, trainers, and supervisors who established policies. Chew v. Gates (9th Cir. 1994) 27 F.3d 1432, 1446-1450 , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1148 (1995)

Objective reasonableness of force used, by using police dog to apprehend suspect, precludes finding that conduct violated clearly established law; police officer entitled to qualified immunity. Mendoza v. Block (9th Cir. 1994) 27 F.3d 1357, 1360-1363

Attorney general opinion is not sufficient by itself to establish "clearly established law." Price v. Akaka (9th Cir. 1993) 3 F.3d 1220, 1225-1226 , cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1070 (1994)

Qualified immunity is defense to liability for damages only and does not bar actions for declaratory or injunctive relief. American Fire, Theft & Collision Managers v. Gillespie (9th Cir. 1991) 932 F.2d 816, 818

Although reliance on counsel's advice does not satisfy defendant's burden regarding claim of qualified immunity, it is evidence of defendant's good faith. Lucero v. Hart (9th Cir. 1990) 915 F.2d 1367, 1371

Cities not entitled to qualified immunity; cities cannot be held liable under theory of respondeat superior. Los Angeles Police Protective League v. Gates (9th Cir. 1990) 907 F.2d 879, 889

Police officers not entitled to qualified immunity from arrestee's civil rights suit when they lacked probable cause to arrest. Kennedy v. Los Angeles Police Dep't (9th Cir. 1990) 901 F.2d 702, 706

Denial of claim of qualified immunity is appealable final decision. Merriman v. Walton (9th Cir. 1988) 856 F.2d 1333, 1334-1335 , cert. denied, 491 U.S. 905 (1989)

In 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action arising out of rape and strangulation of state hospital patient by another patient with demonstrated homicidal propensities, in which complaint alleged violation of dead patient's constitutional right to reasonably safe conditions of confinement, denial of summary judgment motion based on qualified immunity was proper, when plaintiffs presented genuine issue of fact regarding defendants' substantial departure from accepted professional standards. Estate of Conners v. O'Connor (9th Cir. 1988) 846 F.2d 1205, 1207-1209 , cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1065 (1989)

In § 1983 action by physician against, inter alia, supervisor employed by California Medical Board based on Board's unsuccessful action to obtain consent of patient for whom physician had written letter under Compassionate Use Act (CUA) regarding patient's use of medical marijuana for attention deficit disorder to release his medical records to Board, supervisor was entitled to qualified immunity, where, notwithstanding passage of CUA, it remained federal crime to possess marijuana and there was no federal exemption for medical marijuana, so that any state law purporting to "legalize" marijuana, even for medical purposes, was not "clearly established"; where no facts were alleged that supervisor disregarded clearly established law in asking patient to consent to release of medical records or in directing Board investigators to issue subpoena in investigation based on park ranger report that physician might be violating law, and after Board medical consultant, after reviewing medical marijuana letter and park ranger report, opined that subpoena was required to determine whether physician was violating law and applicable standard of care in recommending medical use of marijuana; and where, although Court of Appeal reversed, Los Angeles Superior Court found good cause to produce medical records. Bearman v. California Medical Board (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1588, 1594-1595, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 60

Trial court erred in determining that as matter of law search warrant was facially invalid and deputy sheriff was not qualifiedly immune from suit, where strong case could be made that affidavit submitted in support of warrant was sufficient, and, in any case, deputy had qualified immunity from suit because reasonably well-trained officer would not have realized affidavit was defective and reasonably would have relied on warrant issued by magistrate to conduct search. Further, officer had probable cause to arrest plaintiff, where officer properly detained plaintiff while carrying out valid search pursuant to warrant, and, even though district attorney declined to prosecute, there was probably cause to arrest plaintiff and transport him to jail. Wood v. Emmerson (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1506, 1519-1526, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 847

Law enforcement officers were not entitled to qualified immunity in action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 arising from their execution of search warrant, where plaintiff introduced sufficient evidence of alleged facts that if proved showed violation of constitutional right because jury could reasonably conclude that plaintiff, wearing nothing but T-shirt leaving his genitals exposed, was detained outside for approximately one hour despite fact deputies determined within four minutes that neither plaintiff himself nor anything inside his house posed safety threat; and where it should have been clear to any reasonable officer that detention was unlawful. Macias v. County of Los Angeles (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 313, 319-322, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 364

Police were entitled to qualified immunity on claim of use of excessive force to handcuff man arrested for driving under influence in order to obtain blood draw, when even assuming violation of plaintiff's constitutional rights could otherwise be shown, under case law rights purportedly violated were not clearly established. Ritschel v. City of Fountain Valley (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 107, 122-123, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 48

In action by pretrial detainee for violation of civil rights based on arrest on probable cause for rape and later release, sheriff's deputies were entitled to qualified immunity, when there was no constitutional right to speedy laboratory testing to confirm probable cause for arrest and detention or any continuing duty of probable cause investigation. Jimenez v. County of Los Angeles (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 133, 144, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 553

Administrator of 4-H program was entitled to qualified immunity in action for violation of First Amendment free speech rights brought by club members and adult leader who had been suspended while administrator investigated whether members, who participated in making film depicting violent behavior, posed risk of violent behavior, when there was no federal constitutional violation. Adult leader had no part in filmmaking project, so that if administrator punished adult leader at all, punishment was unrelated to any speech or other expressive act by adult leader so that § 1983 claim did not allege violation of adult leader's constitutional right to free speech. As to members who had participated in film, administrator was shown expressive work of art raising concerns about possibility of future violence, and suspended plaintiffs for short period of time while she conducted investigation to determine whether they and other participants in project were threat to others, and temporary suspension did not violate plaintiffs' First Amendment rights. Robbins v. Regents of University of California (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 653, 661-664, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 851

Employees of California Medical Board qualifiedly immune from liability in action arising from investigation of physician, leading to physician's voluntary surrender of license for improperly prescribing drugs. Bradley v. Medical Board (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 445, 457-462, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483

Public officer's unreasonable ignorance that he violated clearly established constitutional right precludes qualified immunity. Conway v. Pasadena Humane Society (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 163, 178, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777

In actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, law enforcement officials have qualified immunity for their actions in investigating cases of alleged child abuse; officer's conduct is judged by objective standard. Elene H. v. County of Los Angeles (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1445, 1453, 269 Cal. Rptr. 783

[l] State-Law Immunities

Municipality may not raise as a defense in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action an immunity granted to municipalities under state law. Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 695 n.59, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 ; Morrison v. Jones (9th Cir. 1979) 607 F.2d 1269, 1273 , cert. denied, 445 U.S. 962 (1980)

State statutory immunity provisions do not apply to federal civil rights action. Guillory v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 1984) 731 F.2d 1379, 1382

Immunity provided by Penal Code § 11172(a) to specified persons who reasonably suspect and report child abuse to authorities provides immunity from claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983; state law defense is applicable to § 1983 claim if not inconsistent with intent and purpose of federal law; Congress impliedly authorized creation of reporting immunity by enactment of Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (42 U.S.C. § 5101 et seq.). Thomas v. Chadwick (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 813, 823-827, 274 Cal. Rptr. 128

[l.1] Sovereign Immunity

Federal court's enforcement of consent decree entered into in action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 by state officials concerning Medicaid was not barred by Eleventh Amendment. Frew v. Hawkins (2004) 540 U.S. 431, 124 S. Ct. 899, 903-906, 157 L. Ed. 2d 855

In action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on behavior of private corporation contracted with district attorney to run bad check diversion program, corporation, as private entity, was not entitled to sovereign immunity. Del Campo v. Kennedy (9th Cir. 2008) 517 F.3d 1070, 1075-1080

42 U.S.C. § 1983 action by student against state university president, members of student election committee and others, seeking declaratory and injunctive relief for university's allegedly unconstitutional infringement of his right to freedom of speech based on spending limit on campaign for student office, was not barred by Eleventh Amendment, where injunctions sought to expunge university records of censure and denial of student senate seat, which could cause student present and future harm. Flint v. Dennison (9th Cir. 2007) 488 F.3d 816, 824-825

In action by unsuccessful candidates for student government positions at University of California Santa Cruz, against university administration, officers of student government, student government election commissioners, and Doe defendants, Eleventh Amendment precluded granting plaintiffs' request for new election because it was not request for prospective relief, but, rather, its purpose was to undo results of election that had already been given effect. Students for a Conservative America v. Greenwood (9th Cir. 2004) 378 F.3d 1129, 1130

[m] Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel

State court judgment has claim preclusive effect in subsequent federal suit under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, regarding federal issues litigant could have raised in state court proceedings, but did not. Migra v. Warren City School Dist. Bd. of Education (1984) 465 U.S. 75, 83-85, 104 S. Ct. 892, 79 L. Ed. 2d 56

Arbitration awards in proceedings brought pursuant to collective bargaining agreements not afforded res judicata or collateral estoppel effect in § 1983 actions. McDonald v. West Branch (1984) 466 U.S. 284, 288, 292, 104 S. Ct. 1799, 80 L. Ed. 2d 302

Doctrine of collateral estoppel may preclude relitigation in civil action of issues decided in prior criminal proceeding. Allen v. McCurry (1980) 449 U.S. 90, 104, 101 S. Ct. 411, 66 L. Ed. 2d 308

Determination of probable cause at preliminary hearing in criminal proceeding did not have collateral estoppel effect in action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 brought after prosecution dismissed charges, when it was apparent from record that evidence presented at preliminary hearing was not same as evidence available to police officer at time of arrest. McCutchen v. City of Montclair (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1138, 1145-1147, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95

[n] Post-Deprivation Remedy for Procedural Due Process Claim

Parratt doctrine applied to deprivations of liberty. Zinermon v. Burch (1990) 494 U.S. 113, 131-139, 110 S. Ct. 975, 108 L. Ed. 2d 100

Parratt doctrine applied to intentional destruction of property; state Tort Claims Act constituted adequate post-deprivation remedy. Hudson v. Palmer (1984) 468 U.S. 517, 530-534, 104 S. Ct. 3194, 82 L. Ed. 2d 393

Parratt doctrine applied to random and unauthorized deprivations, not to losses resulting from application of established procedures. Logan v. Zimmerman Brush Co. (1982) 455 U.S. 422, 435-436, 102 S. Ct. 1148, 71 L. Ed. 2d 265

Adequate post-deprivation remedy provides due process in cases of negligent deprivations of property. Parratt v. Taylor (1981) 451 U.S. 527, 543-544, 101 S. Ct. 1908, 68 L. Ed. 2d 420 , overruled in part, Daniels v. Williams (1986) 474 U.S. 327, 106 S. Ct. 662, 88 L. Ed. 2d 662

Parratt doctrine is inapplicable if plaintiff alleges violation of substantive due process right. Wood v. Ostrander (9th Cir. 1989) 879 F.2d 583, 588-589 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 938 (1990)

Availability of state remedies defeated property owner's claim of denial of procedural due process against county supervisor. Lake Nacimiento Ranch Co. v. County of San Luis Obispo (9th Cir. 1987) 841 F.2d 872, 879 , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 827 (1988)

Substantive due process is violated at moment harm occurs, and existence of post-deprivation state remedy does not have any bearing on whether cause of action exists under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Smith v. City of Fontana (9th Cir. 1987) 818 F.2d 1411, 1415 , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 935 , overruled in part, Hodgers-Durgin v. De La Vina (9th Cir. 1999) 199 F.3d 1037, 1040 n.1

Availability of state tort remedy does not bar due process claim under § 1983 when plaintiff is challenging established state procedure; Parratt rule is only applicable to cases involving random and unauthorized acts. Sanders v. Kennedy (9th Cir. 1986) 794 F.2d 478, 480-482

[o] Exhaustion of Remedies

Exhaustion of state remedies not required before bringing action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Patsy v. Florida Board of Regents (1982) 457 U.S. 496, 516, 102 S. Ct. 2557, 73 L. Ed. 2d 172 ; Monroe v. Pape (1961) 365 U.S. 167, 183, 81 S. Ct. 473, 5 L. Ed. 2d 492 (overruled on other grounds in Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 663, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611)

Rule that exhaustion is not required is equally applicable to contractual and administrative remedies. Smith v. United Trans. Union Local No. 81 (S.D. Cal. 1984) 594 F. Supp 96, 99

[p] Jurisdiction

Trial court has no jurisdiction over purported 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim that consists of collateral attack on prior state-court judgment. Branson v. Nott (9th Cir. 1995) 62 F.3d 287, 291-292 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1009

[q] Concurrent Jurisdiction

State courts exercise concurrent jurisdiction over civil rights actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Ochoa v. Superior Court (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 159, 173, 216 Cal. Rptr. 661, 703 P.2d 1 ; Williams v. Horvath (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 834, 837, 129 Cal. Rptr. 453, 548 P.2d 1125 ; Brown v. Pitchess (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 518, 522-523, 119 Cal. Rptr. 204, 531 P.2d 772 ; County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (Peters) (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1166, 1170, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 860

When concurrent jurisdiction enables plaintiff to bring simultaneous actions in state and federal court, final judgment by first court to decide matter bars other action under res judicata. Weber v. Willard (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1006, 1009, 255 Cal. Rptr. 165

[r] Damages

Punitive damages may not be recovered against municipality. Jefferson v. City of Tarrant (1997) 522 U.S. 75, 79, 118 S. Ct. 481, 139 L. Ed. 2d 433 ; City of Newport v. Fact Concerts (1981) 453 U.S. 247, 271, 101 S. Ct. 2748, 69 L. Ed. 2d 616

Abstract value or importance of constitutional right of which person was deprived may not form basis for damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Memphis Community School Dist. v. Stachura (1986) 477 U.S. 299, 308-310, 106 S. Ct. 2537, 91 L. Ed. 2d 249

For recovery of punitive damages, defendant's conduct must be motivated by evil motive or intent, or must involve reckless or callous indifference to federally protected rights of others; this threshold applies even when underlying standard of liability for compensatory damages is one of recklessness. Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 56, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632

Basic purpose of award of damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 is to compensate a person for injuries caused by deprivation of rights. Carey v. Piphus (1978) 435 U.S. 247, 254-257, 98 S. Ct. 1042, 55 L. Ed. 2d 252

In § 1983 action for false arrest and false imprisonment, trial court properly remitted jury's punitive damages award as violative of Due Process Clause based on jury's nominal damages award of $1 each on false arrest and false imprisonment claims, where trial court found that defendant's conduct in deliberately and illegally withholding relevant information from plaintiff, failing to translate and pressuring her to sign consent-to-search form, and illegally detaining plaintiff at police station was not so reprehensible as to justify punitive damages award because even though jury found defendant acted with reckless disregard for plaintiff's rights, there was no evidence he acted with malice, there was no evidence defendant had acted in same manner on any other occasion, and defendant's conduct did not pose any risk to plaintiff's bodily health or safety. Further, punitive damages award represented ratio of 125,000 to 1, which was considerably in excess of single-digit ratios United States Supreme Court deemed more likely to comport with due process than higher ratios. Mendez v. County of San Bernardino (9th Cir. 2008) 540 F.3d 1109, 1120-1123

In § 1983 action based on arrest and prosecution of police officers for allegedly planting gun on suspect, evidence presented at trial and viewed in the officers' favor justified jury's damages verdict of $5,000,001 for each officer, where record demonstrated that harms suffered by officers were similar in content and quality, where there was no indication jury improperly took other incidents into account and jury had substantial evidence to conclude on one incident-related charges alone officers suffered harm and should be awarded damages, where jury's refusal to find that police chief acted with malice, fraud, or oppression belied argument jury was unduly inflamed, and where, although none of accused officers presented evidence of specific monetary damages, such as medical expenses or lost income, damage awards were not required to be supported by objective evidence. Harper v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1010, 1027-1030

In § 1983 action by plaintiff who was unlawfully detained during search of her home, substantial evidence supported jury's award of punitive damages against police officers, when there was evidence indicating officers had disdain for house and its residents and evidence suggested officers recklessly disregarded plaintiff's constitutional rights under Fourth Amendment. Mena v. City of Simi Valley (9th Cir. 2003) 332 F.3d 1255, 1270

In action under § 1983 for racially discriminatory actions by landlord, trial court properly awarded punitive damages, when records showed landlord's conduct met at least reckless or callous indifference standard and was sufficient to satisfy and uphold court's award. Fair Housing of Marin v. Combs (9th Cir. 2002) 285 F.3d 899

Due process analysis employed by United States Supreme Court in Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 15-17, 111 S. Ct. 1032, 113 L. Ed. 2d 1 , applies to actions brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and any award of punitive damages must be product of procedures that meet those due process requirements. Morgan v. Woessner (9th Cir. 1993) 997 F.2d 1244, 1254-1260 , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1033 (1994)

When individuals acquitted in state criminal proceedings bring 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action based on police violation of Fourth Amendment rights, attorney's fees expended by those individuals in defending themselves in state criminal proceedings are recoverable as compensatory damages. Borunda v. Richmond (9th Cir. 1988) 885 F.2d 1384, 1389-1390

Deterrence of future constitutional violations is important function of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action; remedy is properly tailored to prevent defendant from being required to bear greater economic loss for inflicting injury than for inflicting death. Roman v. City of Richmond (N.D. Cal. 1983) 570 F. Supp. 1554, 1556-1558

[s] Abstention

When related state criminal proceedings are pending, federal court stays rather than dismisses federal civil rights claim for damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Deakins v. Monaghan (1988) 484 U.S. 193, 199-204, 108 S. Ct. 523, 98 L. Ed. 2d 529

Action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for damages as well as injunctive and declaratory relief and damages by land surveyor whose license to survey was revoked and not reinstated by state board of examiners was subject to abstention in light of pending state disciplinary proceeding, when constitutional issues in federal complaint went to heart of opposition to board's action in state proceeding and federal court's decision on merits of claims would have same practical effect on state proceeding as injunction, when ongoing disciplinary proceeding was proceeding of judicial nature implicating important state interest, and when constitutional claims could be litigated in state proceedings, and although monetary relief could not be awarded in ongoing state proceeding, that obstacle was obviated by federal court's staying, rather than dismissing, federal action. Gilbertson v. Albright (9th Cir. 2004) 381 F.3d 965, 982-984

In action by land surveyor under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for money damages for retaliation for surveyor's exercise of First Amendment rights, violation of due process and denial of equal protection, based on revocation of license and refusal to reinstate license after which surveyor appealed to state court of appeals and filed federal action, Younger abstention was not appropriate when, although favorable ruling in federal court on due process and equal protection allegations necessarily would declare ongoing state proceeding to be constitutionally invalid, state administrative proceedings implicated important state interests such as ensuring only competent land surveyors be licensed and state proceedings were ongoing at time federal action was commenced, providing opportunity to litigate due process and equal protection claims, there was no mechanism by which state court could award damages for legitimate claim; and when under First Amendment claim, federal court could award damages for unlawful motivation for license revocation and refusal to reinstate without invalidating either decision, since complaint did not ask that court order reinstatement of his license. Gilbertson v. Albright (9th Cir. 2003) 350 F.3d 1030, 1032-1034

District court properly dismissed claim of nationwide direct-mail marketing company for declaratory relief, i.e., invalidation of state's trade practices statutes and declaration that state lacks jurisdiction to enforce them, under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on Younger abstention, when state has strong interest in protecting its consumers from fraud and in administering its consumer-fraud statutes smoothly, state proceedings were ongoing and had been pending since state attorney general sent notice of unlawful trade practices, and company could raise their federal claims as defenses in state proceeding. District court also properly dismissed, rather than stayed, claims for damages for selective enforcement of trade practices laws in violation of Equal Protection Clause and that state officials' plan to seek higher penalties in court if company did not submit Assurance of Voluntary Compliance was retaliation for company's exercise of First and Fourteenth Amendment rights to court hearing, when ruling that civil enforcement proceeding violated either Equal Protection Clause or First or Fourteenth Amendment would declare ongoing state proceeding to be constitutionally invalid, and when from face of complaint it was clear damages claims were merely incidental to claims for declaratory relief. Am. Consumer Publ'g Ass'n v. Margosian (9th Cir. 2003) 349 F.3d 1122, 1126-1132

Younger abstention required dismissal of horse trainer's § 1983 action to enjoin administrative proceedings resulting in suspension of his license to race horses in California, which he brought against state administrative agency and officials that had ordered suspension, when trainer filed federal action while his state administrative appeal was pending and granting of federal injunctive relief would interfere directly with state administrative proceedings that implicate important state interest of protecting integrity of horse racing; when state proceedings provided adequate opportunity to litigate trainer's constitutional claim by providing sufficient judicial review to constitute adequate forum to litigate federal constitutional issues; and when there was no bad faith or special circumstances to constitute exception to application of Younger abstention. Baffert v. Cal. Horse Racing Board (9th Cir. 2003) 332 F.3d 613, 617-622

District court abused its discretion by dismissing complaint seeking damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 with prejudice under Younger abstention principle, where Younger does not authorize dismissal with prejudice of federal plaintiff's complaint seeking money damages under § 1983, and when precluding plaintiff from arguing merits of claims in federal court contravened § 1983's purpose of providing remedy in situations in which states provide inadequate remedies and in instances in which state remedies, though theoretically adequate, are unavailable in practice, so that even if Younger elements were satisfied, district court was required to stay proceedings. Adam v. Hawaii (9th Cir. 2000) 235 F.3d 1160

[t] Effect of Prior Criminal Conviction

Heck v. Humphrey did not create rule of evidence exclusion and could not be used to bar evidence in § 1983 claim for excessive force by prisoner against guard in which prisoner alleged that guard punched him on entering his cell, where, even if district court determined that prisoner could not file § 1983 lawsuit relating to any injuries stemming from guard's alleged punch based on disciplinary proceeding against prisoner related to incident, prisoner was still entitled to tell jury entire story, including evidence and/or testimony that guard initiated physical confrontation in cell by punching him. Simpson v. Thomas (9th Cir. 2008) 528 F.3d 685, 691-696

Favorable termination rule of Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 114 S. Ct. 2364, 129 L. Ed. 2d 383 applies to civil commitments under California's Sexually Violent Predators Act. However, although claims for damages and declaratory relief were barred, claim for injunctive relief was not barred. Huftile v. Miccio-Fonseca (9th Cir. 2005) 410 F.3d 1136, 1139-1141

Heck v. Humphrey did not apply to bar § 1983 action by attorney based on judicial deception, against employee's of district attorney's office and county, and police officers and city, based on wiretap interception of phone call from client to his office and then concealment of wiretap through "handoff" procedure, by which investigative unit that obtained wiretap order and conducted surveillance transmitted information to another unit without expressly stating delivering unit obtained information via wiretap, which executes arrest after observing illicit conduct to obtain independent probable cause, where seizure conducted pursuant to warrant obtained by judicial deception violated Fourth Amendment, attorney was arrested or charged with or convicted of crime. However, action by former criminal defendants based on same investigation, seeking damages and declaratory relief, was barred by Heck, where criminal defendants challenged search and seizure of evidence on which their criminal charges and convictions were based, and no "belated discovery" exception to Heck applied because some criminal defendants knew about handoff procedure less than eight months after they pleaded guilty, while either was in jail or on parole, and other criminal defendant knew about handoff before they pleaded guilty. Whitaker v. Garcetti (9th Cir. 2007) 486 F.3d 572, 581, 583-585

Challenge to extradition procedures under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 did not implicate validity of underlying conviction. Weilburg v. Shapiro (9th Cir. 2007) 488 F.3d 1202, 1205-1207

Action against police officers under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 alleging use of excessive force was not barred by plaintiff's voluntary guilty plea under Pen. Code § 148(a)(1) to willfully resisting, delaying, or obstructing peace officer in performance of his or her duties, when use of excessive force by police officer at time of arrest is not within performance of officer's duty, and when excessive force may have been employed against plaintiff after he engaged in conduct constituting basis for his conviction, so that § 1983 action neither demonstrated nor necessarily implied invalidity of conviction. Smith v. City of Hemet (9th Cir. 2005) 394 F.3d 689, 695-699

Unavailability of remedy in habeas corpus because of mootness permitted former prisoner to maintain 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action for damages, even though success in that action would imply invalidity of disciplinary proceeding that caused revocation of his good-time credits, when former prisoner had been released from incarceration, so that petition for writ of habeas corpus would have to be dismissed for lack of case or controversy because he fully served period of incarceration he is attacking. Nonnette v. Small (9th Cir. 2002) 316 F.3d 872, 875-877

District court properly concluded that § 1983 claims against police officers and other officials by man convicted of felony murder of cohort, attempted murder of police officers, burglary, and robbery were barred under Heck v. Humphrey [(1994) 512 U.S. 477, 114 S. Ct. 2364, 129 L. Ed. 2d 383] because § 1983 complaint disputed several factual issues state criminal trial jury had already resolved against him. Plaintiff's failure to timely pursue habeas remedies did not take his § 1983 claim out of Heck's purview because he was not akin to person not in custody. Claims by parents of robber who was killed and never tried or convicted were not similarly barred, because although issues necessarily decided at criminal trial of first man were identical to issues in parents' § 1983 claims and trial resulted in judgment on merits, parents were not in privity with criminal defendant during his criminal trial, and felony murder conviction of other man did not on its face foreclose possibility police also contributed to their son's death. Cunningham v. Gates (9th Cir. 2002) 312 F.3d 1148, 1153-1157

In action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on injuries suffered by plaintiff when police officer shot him as the officer and three other officers were trying to transport him to jail following his arrest for driving under influence of alcohol, after plaintiff, despite being in handcuffs and leg restraints, was struggling and threatening officers, as result of which plaintiff pleaded no contest to resisting, delaying, or obstructing officer in performance of officer's duties and then sued city and officer for damages under § 1983, claims were barred under Heck to extent they alleged officer was not entitled to use force at all because plaintiff's resistance justified officers' use of reasonable force in response, but because use of deadly force was not reasonable and conviction for resisting officer in performance of duties did not in itself justify use of deadly force, claims were not barred to extent they challenged officer use of deadly force. Yount v. City of Sacramento (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 885, 893-901, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 787

Civil rights action against sheriff's deputies alleging excessive force necessarily called into question plaintiff's conviction on guilty plea for violating Pen. Code § 148(a)(1) by willfully resisting, delaying, or obstructing deputies in discharge of duty, when plaintiff's refusal to obey lawful order to disrobe and shower and events that led to her injuries were part of unbreakable chain of events. Truong v. Orange County Sheriff's Dept. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1423, 1427-1429, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 450

[u] Ripeness

District court erred in ruling that landowner's timely filed claims of denial of equal protection and procedural due process and for retaliation for exercising First Amendment rights pertaining to residential building permit and polo field application on which county had not yet acted were not ripe for judicial review by determining that gravamen of complaint was "as applied" takings challenge to county's land use policies and requiring final agency decision on polo field application and residential building permit, when constitutional claims pertaining to polo field application and residential building permit were separate claims supported by allegations of discrete constitutional violations rather than "as applied" takings claims, because landowner alleged that county's requirements, conditions, delays, and fees were imposed in retaliation for his exercise of his First Amendment rights to publicly criticize county and access courts, so that he suffered harm and did not have to await further action by county, and when landowner alleged that acts relating to polo field application and residential building permit denied him equal protection of law because they imposed conditions on him not imposed on similarly situated property owners and not justified by conditions on his property, and he alleged he was denied procedural due process because county's decisions regarding his applications had either been delegated to non-governmental entities or been made by biased and unfair decision-makers motivated to retaliate against him. Carpinteria Valley Farms, Ltd. v. County of Santa Barbara (9th Cir. 2003) 334 F.3d 796, 801-802

[v] Evidence

In action alleging discrimination against predominantly Latino neighborhoods based on ethnicity or race by city's failure to provide adequate municipal services and to bring neighborhoods into city, plaintiffs presented evidence of discriminatory impact through statistical and other evidence, which, in turn, created sufficient inference of discriminatory intent to permit them to present their claim of intentional discrimination in exclusion of neighborhoods from master tax sharing agreement to fact finder. However, given lack of disparity in actual access to sewer services, plaintiffs' statistical evidence was insufficient to give rise to inference of discriminatory intent on claim that infrastructure condition, requiring county to install all infrastructure in neighborhood up to city standards before city would permit city voters to consider extending sewer services to neighborhood, was applied in discriminatory way. Committee Concerning Community Improvement v. City of Modesto (9th Cir. 2009) 583 F.3d 690, 702-707

[4] Conspiracy to Interfere with Rights: 42 U.S.C. § 1985

Some activities may be such irrational object of disfavor that, if targeted, and if they also are engaged in exclusively or predominantly by particular class of people, intent to disfavor that class can readily be presumed. Bray v. Alexandria Clinic (1993) 506 U.S. 263, 270, 113 S. Ct. 753, 122 L. Ed. 2d 34

42 U.S.C. § 1985(3) reaches conspiracies motivated by class-based, invidiously discriminatory animus, but not conspiracies motivated by economicor commercial animus. United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners v. Scott (1983) 463 U.S. 825, 830, 838, 103 S. Ct. 3352, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1049

Actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(1) and*(2)* do not require intent to deprive someone of equal protection of law, and proof of class-based animus is not necessary. Kush v. Rutledge (1983) 460 U.S. 719, 724-727, 103 S. Ct. 1483, 75 L.

Ed. 2d 413

Complaint based on refusal of board of medicine, board of professional discipline, individual members and counsel of both boards, and executive director of board of medicine to reinstate physician assistant's license failed to state cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1985 for conspiracy to violate civil rights, because complaint was devoid of discussion of agreement amongst defendants to violate plaintiff's constitutional rights. Further, plaintiff could not amend complaint to cure § 1985 defect, because to state claim for conspiracy under § 1985, a plaintiff must have cognizable claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and plaintiff's § 1983 claims were properly dismissed. Olsen v. Idaho State Board of Medicine (9th Cir. 2004) 363 F.3d 916, 929-930

District court properly entered summary judgment on claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3) contending conspiracy to retaliate against plaintiff for First Amendment activities and to deprive him of federal and state rights, when plaintiff alleged no racial or otherwise class-based invidious discriminatory animus behind defendants' conduct. Butler v. Elle (9th Cir. 2002) 281 F.3d 1014, 1028

Trial court properly dismissed claim of pro-life demonstrator arrested on public college campus during demonstration for violation of his rights under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3), when, although his rights under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 may have been violated by imposition of condition inconsistent with First Amendment free speech and free exercise clauses that he limit demonstration to secular content, nothing in record indicated that any of defendant's actions were motivated by invidiously discriminatory animus. Orin v. Barclay (9th Cir. 2001) 272 F.3d 1207, 1217

African-American professional basketball player failed to state claim for racial discrimination under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3), when arbitration award attached to complaint showed that punishment imposed for attack on coach was motivated solely by player's misconduct. Sprewell v. Golden State Warriors (9th Cir. 2000) 231 F.3d 520, 529

No violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3) was alleged against store that refused to sell Levi jeans to plaintiffs, when plaintiffs, who were of Arabic descent, knew of store's race-neutral policy of refusing to sell Levis to dealers, and intentionally misrepresented themselves as ultimate consumers when they were in fact agents of dealers. Addisu v. Fred Meyer, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 198 F.3d 1130, 1141

Vicarious liability can be imposed on defendant in action under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3). Scott v. Ross (9th Cir. 1998) 140 F.3d 1275, 1284 , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1033 (1999)

Military subordinates have no remedy under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(1) against their military superiors. Miller v. Newbauer (9th Cir. 1988) 862 F.2d 771, 774

Properly pleaded claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(2) must include allegation of racial or class-based animus; plaintiff who pleaded that racial slurs were directed against him adequately pleaded cause of action. Usher v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1987) 828 F.2d 556, 561

To establish claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(2), plaintiff must show conspiracy between two or more persons to deter witness by force, intimidation, or threat from attending court or testifying freely in any pending matter, resulting in injury to plaintiff. David v. United States (9th Cir. 1987) 820 F.2d 1038, 1040

One-year limitation period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3) applied to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3). McDougal v. County of Imperial (9th Cir. 1991) 942 F.2d 668, 673-674 . Note: Effective January 1, 2003, Code Civ. Proc. § 340 was amended and Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1 was added to provide that personal injury actions are now governed by a two-year statute of limitations

Groups warranting protection from conspiracies under § 1985(3) are not limited to those based on racial or otherwise suspect classifications. Life Ins. Co. of North America v. Reichardt (9th Cir. 1979) 591 F.2d 499, 505

42 U.S.C. § 1985(3) reaches purely private conspiracies aimed at depriving persons of constitutionally guaranteed right to travel. Molko v. Holy Spirit Ass'n (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1125-1126, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46 , cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1084 (1989)

[5] Neglect to Prevent Conspiracy to Interfere with Rights: 42 U.S.C. § 1986

Cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1986 requires that there be valid claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1985. Trerice v. Pedersen (9th Cir. 1985) 769 F.2d 1398, 1403 ; Washington v. Duty Free Shoppers (N.D. Cal 1988) 696 F. Supp. 1323, 1327

Action available under § 1986 when police officers conspired to make false representations in effort to cover up facts regarding fatal shooting of arrestee. Bell v. City of Milwaukee (7th Cir. 1984) 746 F.2d 1205, 1255-1260

Cause of action stated under § 1986 when plaintiff alleged that police agreed not to respond to calls for assistance for 15 minutes, allowing vigilantes time to physically assault participants in " Freedom Ride." Peck v. United States (S.D.N.Y. 1979) 470 F. Supp. 1003, 1012-1013

[6] Attorney's Fees Under 42 U.S.C. § 1988

[a] Prevailing Party

Plaintiff who obtained preliminary injunction under First Amendment to allow nude display of artwork, but who was denied permanent injunction after dispositive hearing on motion for summary judgment, was not qualified as prevailing party under § 1988, where preliminary injunction hearing was necessarily hasty and abbreviated eventual ruling on merits for defendants, after both sides considered case fit for final adjudication, superseded preliminary ruling, and final decision rejected same claim she advanced in preliminary injunction motion that state law banning nudity in parks was unconstitutional as applied to expressive, nonerotic nudity. Sole v. Wyner (2007) 551U.S.74, 127 S. Ct. 2188, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1069, 1076-1079

Plaintiff prevails if actual relief on merits of claim materially alters legal relationship between parties by modifying defendant's behavior in way that directly benefits plaintiff. Farrar v. Hobby (1992) 506 U.S. 103, 111, 113 S. Ct. 566, 121 L. Ed. 2d 494

Bank holding company not prevailing party in appeal that held in its favor, when United States Supreme Court vacated judgment on basis of event that mooted controversy before judgment was issued. Lewis v. Bank Corp. (1990) 494 U.S. 472, 483, 110 S. Ct. 1249, 108 L. Ed. 2d 400

To be prevailing party under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, plaintiff must personally benefit from relief. Rhodes v. Stewart (1988) 488 U.S. 1, 4, 109 S. Ct. 202, 102 L. Ed. 2d 1

Even if there is causal link between litigation and defendant's subsequent acts, plaintiff is not prevailing party unless he or she receives direct benefit from acts. Hewitt v. Helms (1987) 482 U.S. 755, 763-764, 107 S. Ct. 2672, 96 L. Ed. 2d 654

Plaintiff is considered prevailing party, and may recover attorney's fees, if he or she succeeds on any significant issue in litigation that achieves some of benefit sought in bringing suit. Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424

Prevailing defendant in civil rights action may recover attorney's fees only if suit was vexatious, frivolous, or brought to harass or embarrass defendant. Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 429 ; Herb Hallman Chevrolet v. Nash-Holmes (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 636, 645 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 870 ; Bemis v. Edwards (9th Cir. 1995) 45 F.3d 1369, 1375 ; Benigni v. Hemet (9th Cir. 1989) 879 F.2d 473, 480 ; Gill v. Hughes (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1312-1313, 278 Cal. Rptr. 306

Although plaintiff obtained only nominal damages in § 1983 action and state wrongful death action, trial court properly awarded attorney's fees, where plaintiff's success in achieving liability verdict was significant, independent of any damage award, even though difference between damages sought and obtained somewhat disfavored award of attorney's fees. Mahach-Watkins v. Depee (9th Cir. 2010) 593 F.3d 1054, 1059-1063

In action by media companies in which district court granted preliminary and permanent injunctions sought by plaintiffs, denial of attorney's fees to plaintiff's under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 was vacated and remanded, where attorney's fees should have been denied only in unusual cases, and where district court's denial of fees did not identify special circumstances rendering award unjust using two-pronged test to determine whether special circumstances existed to justify denying attorney's fees, i.e., whether awarding fees would have furthered purposes of § 1988, and whether balance of equities favored or disfavored denial of fees. American Broadcasting Companies v. Miller (9th Cir. 2008) 550 F.3d 786, 787-788

In § 1983 action for false arrest and false imprisonment, although trial court acknowledged plaintiff was prevailing plaintiff and ordinarily entitled to reasonable attorneys' fee, trial court abused its discretion in denying plaintiff's request for costs and fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 in its entirety, finding that her request was so excessive it shocked the conscience and warranted denial of fees altogether, where jury found in plaintiff's favor on three claims against five parties, and plaintiff won both nominal and punitive damages awards, where there were no special circumstances sufficient to deny fees and costs entirely, and where Ninth Circuit has not adopted "shocks the conscience" standard. Mendez v. County of San Bernardino (9th Cir. 2008) 540 F.3d 1109, 1124-1130

Insurance companies and insurance trade association who sought to bar enforcement of California's Holocaust Victim Insurance Relief Act of 1999 (HVIRA) [Ins. Code § 13800 et seq.], which requires disclosure of information pertaining to Holocaust-era insurance policies written in Europe, were prevailing parties entitled to attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, when plaintiffs obtained all relief they sought, i.e., permanent injunction enjoining enforcement of HVIRA, and when plaintiff prevailed under a fee-generating legal right, i.e., Due Process Clause and Commerce Clause properly cognizable, fee-supporting claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and United States Supreme Court avoided resolution of fee-supporting federal claim. Gerling Global Reinsurance Corp. of America v. Garamendi (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 803, 806-810

Political party that prevailed against state's secretary of state in action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 to eliminate state's "blanket primary" on ground that system was unconstitutional was entitled to attorney's fees for appeal under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, when, although case was atypical because most § 1983 cases are prisoners' and arrestees' claims for damages, atypicality did not make case less suitable for award of fees. Fact that political parties probably had more money than typical § 1983 plaintiffs did not make fees unsuitable because people and entities whose civil rights had been unconstitutionally abridged were generally entitled to fees under § 1988 regardless of ability to pay attorneys. There was nothing wrong with asserting civil rights claim under § 1983 with purpose of obtaining attorneys' fees if claim succeeded. Fee application would not be denied because it did not demonstrate that work done was necessary and had extensive redactions, because court knew work was done and even with redactions application furnished enough information for court to form judgment on whether fees were legitimate and party was entitled to keep work product secret. Democratic Party of Wash. State v. Reed (9th Cir. 2004) 388 F.3d 1281, 1285-1286

Because there was legally enforceable settlement agreement between parties, district court erred when it denied plaintiffs attorney's fees and costs under ADA and 42 U.S.C. § 1988. District court also erred when it denied plaintiffs prevailing party status based on their success in obtaining preliminary injunction preventing defendant developmental services department from releasing development center residents into community placements unless certain conditions were met; however, district court did not err in denying plaintiffs prevailing party status based on their efforts to modify intervenors' permanent injunction. Richard S. v. Dept. of Developmental Services of State of California (9th Cir. 2003) 317 F.3d 1080, 1086-1089

In action by former deputy sheriff alleging county and various individual deputies violated his Fourth, Fifth, and Fourteenth Amendment rights by detaining him and compelling him to write incident report in which he was suspected of using excessive force and as result of which he was terminated, and by refusing to allow him to consult with lawyer or representative of his employee organization before writing report, with deputy's success in obtaining preliminary injunction enjoining county from using report at hearing on his appeal of his termination from sheriff's office, trial court's conclusion that deputy was prevailing party for purposes of award of attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, even though he did not recover other relief sought, was not in error, when claim for permanent injunctive relief was not decided on merits and preliminary injunction was not dissolved for lack of entitlement, but, rather, claim for permanent injunction was rendered moot when employment termination hearing was over, after preliminary injunction had done its job. Further, court's award of fees based on all of time his lawyers spent on case, with exception of time spent by lawyers responding to motions to intervene filed by third parties (which district court denied), not just time allocable to preliminary injunction, was within court's discretion. Watson v. County of Riverside (9th Cir. 2002) 300 F.3d 1092, 1095-1097

Plaintiff who succeeded in obtaining court order incorporating agreement that included relief plaintiff sought in lawsuit, i.e., lifting of sanctions imposed by defendant on plaintiff, which resolved two of three administrative sanctions imposed, was prevailing party for purposes of attorney's fees award under 42 U.S.C. § 1988. Labotest v. Bonta (9th Cir. 2002) 297 F.3d 892, 894-895

Original prevailing party who later defended consent decree against collateral attack in separate action is eligible for fees award under § 1988; however, trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying fees award in light of party's lack of success in its defense of consent decree and fact that some defendants already paid fees to plaintiffs in subsequent collateral attack and should not have been forced to finance both sides of litigation. San Francisco NAACP v. San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist. (9th Cir. 2002) 284 F.3d 1163

In action challenging results of election, plaintiffs were not entitled to attorney's fee award under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 even though state Legislature passed bill while litigation was pending granting new election, when plaintiffs sought award solely on "catalyst theory" and did not obtain material change in their favor through litigation, and catalyst theory is not permissible basis for award under § 1988. Bennett v. Yoshina (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1097, 1100-1101

District court abused discretion in denying attorney's fees to defendant police officer in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action, when officer satisfied high standard for awarding attorney's fees and costs to prevailing defendant under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, by showing that action was groundless. Saman v. Robbins (9th Cir. 1999) 173 F.3d 1150, 1157-1158

District court erred in awarding attorney's fees to defendant prosecutors in action for "defamation-plus" under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, when plaintiff adequately alleged elements of defamation-plus claim; when claim survived motion to dismiss; when state court order had implied that facts supported defamation-plus claim; and when plaintiff cited and relied on specific cases for principle that business goodwill is protected property right in Nevada. Herb Hallman Chevrolet v. Nash-Holmes (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 636, 645 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 870

In finding implied private right of action in Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA), 25 U.S.C. § 1911, court implicitly held that Indian villages' claims under ICWA could be enforced through 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and villages need only show that at least one of their claims fell within remedial scheme of § 1983 and remained sufficiently substantial throughout litigation, to trigger fee-shifting provision of 42 U.S.C. § 1988. Native Village of Venetie IRA Council v. Alaska (9th Cir. 1998) 155 F.3d 1150, 1152-1153

Prevailing plaintiffs include those who have negotiated successful settlements. Wakefield v. Mathews (9th Cir. 1988) 852 F.2d 482, 483

Supplemental award of attorney's fees for work performed in monitoring consent decree was proper when work was performed on behalf of prevailing parties in underlying action. Keith v. Volpe (9th Cir. 1987) 833 F.2d 850, 855-857

Order awarding attorney's fees to plaintiffs as prevailing parties vacated when judgment on merits reversed on appeal. Turner v. McMahon (9th Cir. 1987) 830 F.2d 1003, 1009 , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 818 (1988)

Trial court abused its discretion in awarding fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 to plaintiff who won on state battery claim but lost federal claim for violation of civil rights by use of excessive force based on same conduct, when not every state claim for battery by police officer results in a constitutional violation; when two kinds of claims were treated separately at trial, pleaded separately in complaint, jury received separate instructions and instructions on deprivation of plaintiff's constitutional rights required jury to evaluate defendants' conduct based on standard of reasonable officer in light of totality of circumstances, including severity of crime, and jury was provided with special verdict form in which it had to decide battery claim and civil rights claims individually; and when jury found federal claim was not established and trial judge disregarded verdict in awarding fees because he perceived it as inconsistent, but no authority allowed judge to ignore verdict and award fees. McFadden v. Villa (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 235, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 80

In case brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, in which one plaintiff recovered $3,380 in compensatory damages and $1,000 in punitive damages, and another plaintiff recovered $1,089 in compensatory damages and $250 in punitive damages, trial court properly denied plaintiffs' request for attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988; however, trial court erred in awarding attorney's fees to defendants. Choate v. County of Orange (2000) 86 Cal. App. 4th 312, 322-327, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 339

Plaintiff is prevailing party when relief is preliminary, and lawsuit need not proceed to completion; proper focus is whether plaintiff has been successful, as shown by fact that he or she obtained primary relief sought. McMahon v. Lopez (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 829, 835, 245 Cal. Rptr. 172

Successful ruling during course of litigation was insufficient to justify award of attorney's fees, when ruling is later reversed by legislative action and when trial court explicitly finds that plaintiff's civil rights claims are without merit. Miller v. California Comm'n on Status of Women (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 454, 458-459, 222 Cal. Rptr. 225

[b] Determination of Lodestar

Market rates for paralegals and law clerks, rather than their actual cost to attorney, properly used in calculating compensation for their work as part of fee award. Missouri v. Jenkins (1989) 491 U.S. 274, 284-289, 109 S. Ct. 2463, 105 L. Ed. 2d 229

Court properly awarded attorney's fees for time spent on administrative proceedings to enforce civil rights claim before litigation; even if purpose of that proceeding was not to enforce civil rights law listed in 42 U.S.C. § 1988, fees are appropriate if work product is both useful and of type ordinarily necessary to advance civil rights litigation. North Carolina DOT v. Crest Street Community Council, Inc. (1986) 479 U.S. 6, 15, 107 S. Ct. 336, 93 L. Ed. 2d 188

Initial estimate of reasonable attorney's fee is properly calculated by multiplying number of hours reasonably expended on litigation times a reasonable hourly rate. Blum v. Stenson (1984) 465 U.S. 886, 888, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 ; Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 433

District court's award of attorney's fees to plaintiff in § 1983 action would be remanded to permit district court to make necessary calculations and provide necessary explanations, where, other than stating that plaintiff's fee request was excessive, plaintiff failed to establish requested hourly rate, and hours expended were not justified by issues involved, district court provided no explanation for final number of hours allowed in its lodestar calculation or how it arrived at applicable hourly rate, and failure to provide explanation made meaningful review of its lodestar determinations impossible; and where, although district properly found that plaintiff did not fail to prevail on claims unrelated to claims on which he succeeded, court failed to properly analyze whether plaintiff achieved level of success making hours reasonably expended satisfactory basis for making fee award. McCown v. City of Fontana (9th Cir. 2009) 550 F.3d 918, 922-925

In action against city, police department, and police officers, after most claims were dismissed on summary judgment and remaining issue of excessive force was settled by parties for $20,000, district court erred in awarding plaintiff $200,000 in attorney's fees under § 1988 as reasonable in light of degree of success, overlapping issues involved, and public interest being served by prosecuting difficult case until very eve of trial, where district court provided no other explanation for final number of hours allowed in its lodestar calculation or how it arrived at applicable hourly rate, making meaningful review of its lodestar determinations impossible and requiring remand to permit district court to make necessary calculations and provide necessary explanations; and where, although district court did not abuse its discretion when it treated all claims, successful and unsuccessful, as arising out of common core of facts, it failed to address whether plaintiff achieved level of success making hours reasonably expended satisfactory basis for making fee award. McCown v. City of Fontana (9th Cir. 2008) 550 F.3d 918, 922-925

In § 1983 action against city and other defendants based on seizure and destruction of plaintiff's property without due process, trial court erred in calculating lodestar for award of attorney's fees to prevailing plaintiff under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, where trial court's explanation was insufficient to sustain 25 percent cut in hours based on trial court's assessment of needless duplication; where trial court failed to adequately justify its reduction of time attorney spent performing interviews and investigation; and where, although trial court properly considered difficulty of trying case, rates charged by other attorneys in similar lawsuits, skill of plaintiff's counsel, that plaintiff obtained excellent results and that counsel was to be compensated only if lawsuit was successful, trial court went on to consider impermissible factors to reduce hourly rate, such as how other law firms could have staffed case differently, and erred by applying what appeared to be de facto policy of awarding specific hourly rate to civil rights cases and by double counting reduction in hourly rate for some tasks. Moreno v. City of Sacramento (9th Cir. 2008) 534 F.3d 1106, 1111-1116

In successful retaliation action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 by kindergarten teacher against school district, trial court properly determined and awarded attorney's fees to plaintiff, when court first determined market rate of plaintiff's lawyers by adopting upper range of rates contained in defendant's opposition, given that plaintiff produced no evidence other than rates of her own attorneys; when court properly accepted number of hours submitted by plaintiff's attorneys, but deducted hours for, inter alia, time for new attorney to learn case; and when court multiplied hourly rate for each attorney by number of hours worked and then exercised its discretion to reduce award, given that plaintiff did not prevail on majority of her original claims. Lytle v. Carl (9th Cir. 2004) 382 F.3d 978, 988-989

In awarding attorney's fees against federal defendant pursuant to Equal Access to Justice Act (EAJA) [28 U.S.C. § 2412] and state defendants pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1988 following settlement of class action regarding determination of social security disability benefits claims, trial court erred in lowering hourly rate by unknown amount after finding that portions of fee request were documented inadequately and reflected duplicative efforts and excessive staffing to compensate for unspecified amount of overbilling and poor documentation; trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to reduce award for limited success, when court found that plaintiffs had achieved goal of class action; trial court did abuse its discretion in awarding fees against state defendants under § 1988 at hourly rate prescribed by EAJA rather than at prevailing market rates in relevant community as required by § 1988 without finding that hourly rate was market rate for plaintiffs' lawyers, when fees appeared to be considerably below market rate for some of plaintiffs' lawyers. Sorenson v. Mink (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1140

Attorney's fees may be awarded under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 for fees incurred in successfully litigating application for fees. Thompson v. Gomez (9th Cir. 1995) 45 F.3d 1365, 1366 ; Clark v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1986) 803 F.2d 987, 992

Attorney's fees may be awarded under § 1988 for representation on appeal, including work performed in defending or challenging fee award, if plaintiff prevails. Bernardi v. Yeutter (9th Cir. 1991) 951 F.2d 971, 976 ; Cabrales v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1991) 935 F.2d 1050, 1053

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in calculating attorney's fees award under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, even though there was palpable disparity between relatively small amount of damages ultimately recovered by successful plaintiff under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and very large award of attorney's fees, where amount of damages was only one factor for court to consider, trial court properly made adjustments for related and unrelated claims for both trial and appeal, and trial court properly exercised its discretion by considering and then declining adjustment to lodestar to account for lack of overall success based on number of stated reasons. Harman v. City & County of San Francisco (2007) 158 Cal. App. 4th 407, 419-428, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 750

[c] Adjustment of Lodestar

Adjustment for delay in payment is appropriate in determination of reasonable attorney's fee. Missouri v. Jenkins (1989) 491 U.S. 274, 289, 109 S. Ct. 2463, 105 L. Ed. 2d 229

Once lodestar fee has been determined, amount may be increased or decreased on basis of certain factors in case that are not already reflected in lodestar. Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 434

Financial resources of plaintiff is one factor court must consider in determining amount of attorney's fees to award prevailing defendant. Patton v. County of Kings (9th Cir. 1988) 857 F.2d 1379, 1382

Upward adjustment of attorney's fee is appropriate in contingent fee case as acknowledgment of risk and delay involved in contingent fee arrangement. Clark v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1986) 803 F.2d 987, 991-992 ; Chalmers v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1986) 796 F.2d 1205, 1212-1213, 1215

Attorney's fees not absolutely required to be proportionate to damages awarded. Thorne v. City of El Segundo (9th Cir. 1986) 802 F.2d 1131, 1142-1143

[d] Effect of Contingent Fee Agreement

Attorney's fee provided for in contingent fee arrangement does not serve as ceiling on fees recoverable under 42 U.S.C. § 1988. Blanchard v. Bergeron (1989) 489 U.S. 87, 91-96, 109 S. Ct. 939, 103 L. Ed. 2d 67

District court does not abuse its discretion in finding that 40 percent contingent fee was reasonable because it reflected risk of nonrecovery, in case turning on resolution of difficult question of credibility, even though total statutory fee was approximately one-fourth that amount. Venegas v. Skaggs (9th Cir. 1989) 867 F.2d 527, 534 , aff'd, 495 U.S. 82, 110 S. Ct. 1679 (1990)

Reduction of attorney's fees because attorney's fee under contingency arrangement is less than reasonable hourly rate deprives civil rights attorneys of reasonable compensation. Quesada v. Thomason (9th Cir. 1988) 850 F.2d 537, 543

Failure to award attorney's fees because of contingent fee agreement is abuse of discretion. Hamner v. Rios (9th Cir.

1985) 769 F.2d 1404, 1408

[e] Procedure

Postjudgment request for award of attorney's fees does not constitute motion to alter or amend judgment subject to 10-day timeliness standard of Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 59(e). White v. New Hampshire Dep't of Empl. Sec. (1982) 455 U.S. 445, 452-454, 102 S. Ct. 1162, 71 L. Ed. 2d 325

Denial of attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 is reviewed on appeal for abuse of discretion, elements of legal analysis and statutory interpretation are reviewed de novo, and factual findings underlying decision are reviewed for clear error. Native Village of Venetie IRA Council v. Alaska (9th Cir. 1998) 155 F.3d 1150, 1151-1152

Consideration of attorney's fees is strictly province of court in posttrial proceedings; it is error to inform or instruct jury as to plaintiff's possible recovery of attorney's fees. Brooks v. Cook (9th Cir. 1991) 938 F.2d 1048, 1050-1053

[f] Settlement Offers

[i] Under Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 68

Application of Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 68 (plaintiff rejecting formal settlement offer must pay post-offer costs if he or she fails to obtain judgment more favorable than offer) results in defendant in civil rights action not being liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 for attorney's fees incurred after settlement offer. Marek v. Chesny (1985) 473 U.S. 1, 8-11, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1

[ii] Other Settlement Offers

Attorney lacked standing to assert that county had custom, policy, or practice of settling civil rights cases only on lump sum, including all attorney's fees basis, contradicting federal policy and congressional intent to provide attorney's fees for civil rights victims as manifested in 42 U.S.C. § 1988, and that county's conduct violated Supremacy Clause of United States Constitution [U.S. Const. art. VI, cl. 2]. Because right to seek attorney's fees under § 1988 belongs to clients, not to attorneys, county's alleged policy of settling claims only on lump sum, including all attorney's fees, did not directly deprive attorney of any right. Further, attorney's claim that he would have received greater fees than he actually did absent county's policy was inherently conjectural or hypothetical. Pony v. County of L.A. (9th Cir. 2006) 433 F.3d 1138, 1145-1147

In proceeding to obtain preliminary injunction against county's enforcement of its policy of settling civil rights cases only for lump sum, including all attorneys' fees, plaintiff showed enough evidence to meet burden as to whether county adopted uniform policy or practice that insisted on fee waiver as condition of settlement in civil rights litigation in conflict with federal statute authorizing fees for prevailing parties, including those who prevail by way of settlement. Lump sum policy would preclude payment of statutory attorneys' fees, because after reaching settlement with county plaintiff would no longer be able to petition court for independent fee award. Plaintiff also had at least fair chance of success on free-standing Supremacy Clause challenge based on conflict preemption. Despite dismissal of underlying civil rights action for which plaintiff allegedly could not obtain counsel, given serious questions plaintiff raised concerning county's policy and balance of hardships that tipped strongly in favor of removing obstacle to her obtaining trial counsel, pending her trial, plaintiff was entitled to narrow injunction barring application of county's alleged policy to her case alone. Bernhardt v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 920, 922-932

Because there was legally enforceable settlement agreement between parties, district court erred when it denied

plaintiffs attorney's fees and costs under ADA and 42 U.S.C. § 1988. Richard S. v. Dept. of Developmental Services of State of California (9th Cir. 2003) 317 F.3d 1080, 1086-1088 ; Barrios v. California Interscholastic Federation (9th Cir. 2002) 277 F.3d 1128 , cert. denied, 537 U.S. 820

Pro se plaintiff had standing to bring action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 challenging county's alleged custom, practice, and policy in offering or accepting settlements in federal civil rights cases only for lump sum including attorney's fees by alleging that it deprived her of right to contract with attorney for representation in her civil rights action alleging excessive force, when inability to obtain counsel is concrete and particularized injury is sufficient to establish standing; when plaintiff's general factual allegations that her injury was fairly traceable to county's policy was sufficient to establish causation element required for standing; when, despite speculative nature of plaintiff's claim of redressability, she was entitled to have allegations accepted as true at this stage of litigation; and when plaintiff fell within zone of interests protected by § 1988. Bernhardt v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 862, 869-871

[g] Prison Litigation Reform Act

Section 803(d)(3) of Prison Litigation Reform Act of 1995 (PLRA), 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(d)(3), limits fees that may be awarded to attorneys who litigate prisoner lawsuits; with regard to postjudgment monitoring services, that legislation limits fees for services performed after PLRA's effective date, but not for postjudgment monitoring performed before effective date. Martin v. Hadix (1999) 527 U.S. 343, 361, 119 S. Ct. 1998, 144 L. Ed. 2d 347

42 U.S.C. § 1997e(d), part of Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA), limiting fees to maximum hourly rates and prohibiting payment of fees not "directly and reasonably" incurred in proving violation of prisoners' rights, applies with regard to services performed after PLRA's effective date but not for services performed before effective date. Madrid v. Gomez (9th Cir. 1999) 190 F.3d 990, 994

[h] Awards to Defendants

In action based on setting of bail in state criminal prosecution, district court erred in awarding defendants attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 after granting defendants summary judgment, where fact that plaintiff lost at summary judgment did not render his case per se frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation, and in absence of controlling Ninth Circuit or Supreme Court authority, and given First Circuit's decision that lent support to his argument, plaintiff's perseverance in his suit was not unreasonable. However, district court did not abuse its discretion in holding that continuing litigation of Monell claim after completion of discovery was frivolous, where during discovery plaintiff failed to uncover any evidence indicating that county had policy or practice designed to ensure or resulting in setting of excessive bail, nor did plaintiff uncover any evidence of failure to train officers in proper bail setting procedures. Galen v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2006) 468 F.3d 563, 576-578

After dismissing plaintiff's claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, trial court erred in awarding attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 to defendant-attorney who represented himself, when U.S. Supreme Court's holding in Kay v. Ehrler (1991) 499 U.S. 432, 111 S. Ct. 1435, 113 L. Ed. 2d 486 , precluding attorney's fees award to successful pro se litigants in civil rights claims, applied to pro se defendant-attorney. Trial court also erred in awarding fees to state court judge, when claim against judge was dismissed under alternative grounds of judicial immunity and Rooker-Feldman doctrine, and Rooker-Feldman doctrine was jurisdictional ground for dismissal and precluded awarding of attorneys' fees. Dismissal of claims against other defendants under Younger abstention doctrine similarly precluded fee award, when dismissal signified court declined to exercise jurisdiction, making no comment on merits of the case, and not materially altering legal relationship between parties, so that neither defendant prevailed within the meaning of § 1988. However, dismissal of state Department of Justice (DOJ) based on Eleventh Amendment immunity entitled state to fee award. Dismissal based on Eleventh Amendment immunity was not dismissal for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, but instead rested on affirmative defense. Further, district court's finding of frivolousness was not abuse of discretion, given that plaintiff continued to press her claim against DOJ even after court warned her it appeared to be frivolous and failed to amend her complaint or provide basis for overcoming Eleventh Amendment defense. Lastly, fee request submitted by attorney for state defendants, including DOJ, was not excessive. Elwood v. Drescher (9th Cir. 2006) 456 F.3d 943, 946-949

In action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 by corporation that owned private jet against city and other defendants based on their denial of permission to land jet at municipal airport, district court did not err in awarding defendants attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 after dismissing plaintiff's claims on summary judgment, finding all but two bases of § 1983 claim were frivolous, and granting attorney's fees motion in part for fees and costs incurred in defending against frivolous claims, while denying motion with regard to fees and costs incurred in defending against non-frivolous claims. Plaintiff knew or should have known there was no factual basis for constitutional claims of violations of substantive and procedural due process, equal protection, impermissible burden on interstate commerce, and right to travel at outset of litigation. However, because district court failed adequately to explain how it arrived at amount of its award, appellate court remanded so district court could further elucidate its reasoning. Tutor-Saliba Corp. v. City of Hailey (9th Cir. 2006) 452 F.3d 1055, 1060-1066

District court erred in awarding attorneys' fees to defendant under Equal Access to Justice Act on ground that government was not "substantially justified" in defending Child Pornography Prevention Act, when multiple objective indicia supported reasonableness of government's position, including novelty of issue and government's string of successes in defending Act against constitutional attack, and when reasonable minds could have differed over Act's constitutionality, especially since four sister circuits, district court below, one member of Ninth Circuit panel, and three Ninth Circuit judges dissenting from denial of rehearing en banc all determined Act to be constitutional before Supreme Court ultimately struck two sections as unconstitutional. Gonzales v. Free Speech Coalition (9th Cir. 2005) 408 F.3d 613, 618-621

Trial court erred in awarding defendants attorney's fees after granting them summary judgment, when plaintiff's Fourth Amendment claims raised novel issue whether pretrial restrictions imposed on her as result of her release on own recognizance rose to level of seizure and in view of absence of Ninth Circuit authority on release restrictions issue, court could not say that resolution of argument against plaintiff was obvious or that claims were otherwise frivolous. Rejection of First Amendment retaliation claims, although closer question, also did not support award of attorney's fees when, although plaintiff failed to present evidence establishing genuine issue of material fact on causation element of claims, based on circumstances known to plaintiff at time she filed her complaint and preceding summary judgment proceedings First Amendment retaliation claims were not frivolous, unreasonable, or groundless within meaning of 42 U.S.C. § 1988. Karam v. City of Burbank (9th Cir. 2003) 352 F.3d 1188, 1195-1196

In action by law firm pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983, against former client, school district, members of board of trustees, superintendent and former associate superintendent for violation of First Amendment rights under color of state law and conspiracy to violate rights, based on defendants' alleged reduction of use of plaintiffs' legal services and withdrawal of cases after plaintiffs filed government claim for damages in retaliation for refusal to support political campaigns of two members of board of trustees, trial court properly exercised discretion in granting attorney's fees to other members of board of trustees, where plaintiffs' counsel admitted there was no direct evidence tying them to any claimed violation of civil rights, there was no evidence at trial they had knowledge of alleged wrongdoing by other defendants prior to plaintiffs' submission of government claim, and plaintiffs continued to litigate claims against these defendants after it should have become obvious that claim was frivolous, unreasonable or groundless. Jones & Matson v. Hall (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1596, 1610-1611, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872

[i] Attorney's Collection of Fees

Where prevailing party did not exercise her rights to pursue attorney's fees, but, instead, waived them as condition of settlement with county, former attorney had no standing to pursue attorney's fees merely as result of his position as her former attorney. Further, attorney had no standing under his retainer agreement with prevailing party, whereby she assigned her rights to apply for attorney's fees to him, where putative assignment to attorney was invalid because right to seek attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 is substantive cause of action which cannot be transferred contractually. Pony v. County of L.A. (9th Cir. 2006) 433 F.3d 1138, 1142-1145

[7] State Law Borrowing Provision of 42 U.S.C. § 1988

42 U.S.C. § 1983 is read in harmony with general principles of tort law rather than in derogation of them. Imbler v. Pachtman (1976) 424 U.S. 409, 418, 96 S. Ct. 984, 47 L. Ed. 2d 128

Borrowing provision of 42 U.S.C. § 1988 applied in a 42 U.S.C. § 1982 case in state court. Sullivan v. Little Hunting Park (1969) 396 U.S. 229, 240-241, 90 S. Ct. 400, 24 L. Ed. 2d 386

Question whether state law is inconsistent with federal Constitution or laws focuses on purpose and nature of federal right involved; in § 1983 case, question is whether state law is inconsistent with purposes of § 1983. Felder v. Casey (1988) 487 U.S. 131, 139, 108 S. Ct. 2302, 101 L. Ed. 2d 123

California Tort Claims Act (Gov. Code § 810 et seq.) is not applicable to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 actions. Felder v. Casey (1988) 487 U.S. 131, 138, 108 S. Ct. 2302, 101 L. Ed. 2d 123 (addressing similar scheme under Wisconsin law); Rossiter v. Benoit (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 706, 713, 717, 152 Cal. Rptr. 65

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 113 CIVIL RIGHTS: THE POST-CIVIL WAR CIVIL RIGHTS STATUTES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-113 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 113.35

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 113.35 Law Reviews

[1] Civil Rights Acts, Generally

Sternlight, Compelling Arbitration of Claims Under the Civil Rights Act of 1866: What Congress Could Not Have Intended, 47 U. Kan. L. Rev. 273 (1999)

Davies, Federal Civil Rights Practice in the 1990's: The Dichotomy Between Reality and Theory, 48 Hastings L.J. 197 (1997)

Franklin, The Civil Rights Acts of 1866 Revisited, 41 Hastings L.J. 1135 (1990)

[2] Equal Rights Under Law: 42 U.S.C. § 1981

Note, Dispelling the Myth of Rationality: Racial Discrimination in Taxicab Service and the Efficacy of Litigation under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 , 64 Geo. Wash. L. Rev. 342 (1996)

Moore, Patterson v. McLean Credit Union: Racial Discrimination by Private Actors and Racial Harassment under Section 1981, 20 Golden Gate L. Rev. 617 (1990)

Comment, Historical Reconstruction, Reconstruction History, and the Proper Scope of Section 1981, 98 Yale L.J. 541 (1989)

[3] Property Rights of Citizens: 42 U.S.C. § 1982

Note, Section 1982 and Discrimination Against Jews: Shaare Tefila Congregation v. Cobb, 37 Am. U. L. Rev. 225 (1987)

[4] Civil Action for Deprivation of Rights: 42 U.S.C. § 1983

Gilles, Breaking the Code of Silence: Rediscovering "Custom" in Section 1983 Municipal Liability, 80 B.U. L. Rev. 17 (2000)

Note, Ganging Up on Police Brutality: Municipal Liability for the Unconstitutional Actions of Multiple Police Officers under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 , 21 Cardozo L. Rev. 2087 (2000)

Note, Municipal Liability for Off-Duty Police Misconduct Under Section 1983: The "Under Color of Law" Requirement, 79 B.U. L. Rev. 195 (1999)

Kirst, Constitutional Rights of Bystanders in the War on Crime, 28 N.M. L. Rev. 59 (1998)

Comment, A Need for Uniformity: Survivorship Under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 , 32 Loy. L.A. L. Rev. 221 (1998)

Note, Representing Government Officials in Both Their Individual and Official Capacities in Section 1983 Actions After Johnson v. Board of County Commissioners, 45 U. Kan. L. Rev. 1327 (1997)

Symposium, Section 1983, 72 Chi.-Kent L. Rev. (1997)

Schwartz, Admissibility of Investigatory Reports in§ 1983 Civil Rights Actions --A User's Manual, 79 Marq. L. Rev. (1996)

Note, Malicious Prosecution Claims under Section 1983: Do Citizens Have Federal Recourse, 64 Geo. Wash. L. Rev. 776 (1996)

Beermann, A Critical Approach to Section 1983 With Special Attention to Sources of Law, 42 Stan. L. Rev. 51 (1989)

Kritchevsky, " Or Causes to be Subjected": The Role of Causation in Section 1983 Municipal Liability Analysis, 35 UCLA L. Rev. 1187 (1988)

[5] Conspiracy to Interfere with Rights: 42 U.S.C. § 1985

Comment, The Intracorporate Conspiracy Doctrine and 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3): The Original Intent, 90 Nw. U. L. Rev. 1125 (1996)

Comment, Agreements within Government Entities and Conspiracies under Section 1985(3)--A New Exception to the

Intracorporate Conspiracy Doctrine?, 63 U. Chi. L. Rev. 1139 (1996)

[6] Neglect to Prevent Conspiracy to Interfere with Rights: 42 U.S.C. § 1986

Fisher, Anatomy of an Affirmative Duty to Protect: 42 U.S.C. Section 1986 , 56 Wash. & Lee L. Rev. 461 (1999)

[7] Attorneys' Fees Under 42 U.S.C. § 1988

Note, Washington Courts Get Stingy: Improper Denial of Attorney's Fees Under 42 U.S.C. §§ 1983 and 1988 , 70 Wash. L. Rev. 491 (1995)

Note, The Catalyst Theory of Civil Rights Fee Shifting After Farrar v. Hobby, 80 Va. L. Rev. 1429 (1994)

Comment, Civil Rights Plaintiff's Recovery of Expenses for Experts as Litigation Costs Under 42 U.S.C. Section 1988 , 66 Temple L. Rev. 857 (1993)

Note, Nominal Damages, Nominal Victory: Estate of Farrar v. Cain's Improper Limit on Awards of Attorneys' Fees Under § 1988, 76 Minn. L. Rev. 1251 (1992)

Brand, The Second Front in the Fight for Civil Rights: The Supreme Court, Congress, and Statutory Fees, 69 Tex. L. Rev. 291 (1990)

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 113 CIVIL RIGHTS: THE POST-CIVIL WAR CIVIL RIGHTS STATUTES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-113 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 113.36

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 113.36 Text References

Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 8, Constitutional Law, §§ 814-846 (10th ed. 2005)

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 113 CIVIL RIGHTS: THE POST-CIVIL WAR CIVIL RIGHTS STATUTES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-113 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 113.37-113.49

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

[Reserved]

§§ 113.37[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 113 CIVIL RIGHTS: THE POST-CIVIL WAR CIVIL RIGHTS STATUTES
PART IV. FORMS

11-113 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 113.50

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 113.50 Complaint in Federal Court for Damages for Deprivation of Rights Under Color of State Law Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983--General Form

[1] FORM Complaint in Federal Court for Damages for Deprivation of Rights Under Color of State Law Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983--General Form

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
_____ DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES
_____ [name],	)	(42 U.S.C. § 1983)
Defendant(s).	)
	)
	)

_____

DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

Plaintiff alleges:

1. This is an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 to recover damages against defendant for violation of plaintiff's right _____ [specify the federal constitutional or statutory right violated, e.g., to free speech and to petition for redress of grievances, guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution].

2. The jurisdiction of this Court is predicated on 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343.

3. Plaintiff, _____ [name], is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, a citizen of the United States, and a resident of _____ [county], California.

4. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, _____ [state residence of defendant, or other basis of venue, e.g., a resident of _____ (county), California]. Venue is therefore proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).

[5. A substantial part of the events giving rise to this action occurred in _____ (county), California. Venue is therefore proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).]

6. Defendant was, at all times mentioned in this complaint, _____ [state facts showing defendant's capacity as a government agent, e.g., an agent of the State of California, employed as a California Highway Patrol officer].

7. Defendant was, at all times mentioned in this complaint, acting in the course and scope of _____ [his or her] employment _____ [specify employer, e.g., with the California Highway Patrol].

8. Defendant was, at all times mentioned in this complaint, acting under color of state law.

9. Defendant is sued in _____ [his or her] individual capacity.

10. _____ [Allege facts showing that defendant violated plaintiff's federal constitutional or statutory rights.]

11. _____ [Allege that defendant violated particular constitutional or statutory rights of plaintiff, e.g., In acting as alleged in this complaint, defendant violated plaintiff's right to free speech and to petition for redress of grievances, guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution.]

12. As a direct and proximate result of defendant's actions, described in this complaint, plaintiff has suffered _____ [injury, loss, and/or damage] in that _____ [describe injury, loss, and/or damage].

[13. In acting as is alleged in this complaint, defendant acted knowingly, willfully, and maliciously, and with reckless and callous disregard for plaintiff's federally protected rights.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. For compensatory damages, in an amount to be determined according to proof at trial;

[2. For punitive damages, in an amount to be determined according to proof at trial;]

3. For reasonable attorney's fees, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1988;

4. For costs of suit incurred in this action; and

5. For such other and further relief as the Court deems proper.

_____ [date]

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

Plaintiff _____ [name] hereby demands a jury trial.

_____ [date]

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is a general form for use in federal court in an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. This form may be adapted for use in a wide variety of cases in which a person's federal constitutional or statutory rights have been violated by a person acting under color of state law. This form of complaint seeks recovery of damages, including punitive damages in an appropriate case.

PRACTICE TIP:

Filing § 1983 Actions. Attorneys should see the big picture before filing a § 1983 lawsuit. Section 1983 cases are common, outside of employment discrimination, in the field of civil rights. They are not the kind of cases where one should use a form to file a lawsuit and then discover the unique obstacles and traps unique to the § 1983 litigation. Thus, attorneys should use caution before "jumping" into § 1983 cases. Over the past 20 plus years the United States Supreme Court has made these cases significantly more difficult for plaintiffs to pursue. Attorneys need to know the hurdles and traps at the outset--before looking to a form to draft a complaint. Attorneys should seriously considering alternative state remedies and pursuing them in state court or as pendent claims to a § 1983 cause of action in federal court. By John H. Scott

[3] Allegations

The complaint in [1], above, alleges all of the following:

- That this action arises under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and is for violation of plaintiff's federal constitutional or statutory rights (Paragraph 1).

- That the court's jurisdiction is predicated on 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343 (Paragraph 2).

- Plaintiff's name, United States citizenship, and residence (Paragraph 3). To bring an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, the plaintiff must be "a citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof" [42 U.S.C. § 1983; see Martinez v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1373, 1382 (Mexican citizen, who was in Mexico at time of events in question, could not bring § 1983 action)].

- Defendant's residence, for purposes of establishing venue (Paragraph 4) [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue is proper in district where a defendant resides, if all defendants are from the same state)].

- An optional paragraph (Optional Paragraph 5) identifying a county in which a substantial part of the events giving rise to the action occurred. This paragraph is for use in a case when the plaintiff wants to establish venue in such county [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue is proper in district where a substantial part of events giving rise to action occurred)].

- That defendant was an agent of a government entity, and that defendant was acting in the course and scope of his or her agency (Paragraphs 6 and 7). These allegations establish background facts showing that defendant acted under color of state law.

- That defendant acted under color of state law (Paragraph 8). This is an element of the cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [see, e.g., Crumpton v. Gates (9th Cir. 1991) 947 F.2d 1418, 1420] .

- That defendant is sued in his or her individual capacity (Paragraph 9). An action for recovery of money damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 may be brought against a person acting under color of law, sued in his or her individual capacity. If the suit is brought against the defendant in his or her official capacity, the action is considered to be the same as an action against the government entity employing the defendant, and, therefore, the requirements and limitations of such a suit would apply [see § 113.14[7]].

- Facts showing that defendant violated plaintiff's federal constitutional or statutory rights (Paragraph 10). This may take up several paragraphs, and make up the majority of the complaint. The allegations must be tailored to the constitutional or statutory right at issue, and should satisfy the legal requirements for a showing of a violation of that right.

- An allegation stating the particular federal constitutional or statutory right of plaintiff that was violated (Paragraph 11).

- That as a direct and proximate result of defendant's actions, plaintiff suffered injury, loss, and/or damage (Paragraph 12). This allegation also should describe the injury, loss, and/or damage.

- An optional allegation, that defendants acted knowingly, willfully, and maliciously, and with reckless and callous disregard for plaintiff's federally protected rights (Optional Paragraph 13). This optional allegation, if appropriate under the circumstances, would support recovery of punitive damages [see Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 56, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632 ; see also § 113.14[14][b]].

[4] Prayer

The prayer in the form complaint in [1], above, seeks recovery of compensatory damages. Generally, the full range of compensatory damages recoverable in a tort action is recoverable in an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [see Memphis Community School Dist. v. Stachura (1986) 477 U.S. 299, 305-306, 106 S. Ct. 2537, 91 L. Ed. 2d 249] .

The form of complaint in [1], above, also includes an optional prayer for punitive damages. In a case where the violation of plaintiff's rights was motivated by evil motive or intent, or involved reckless or callous indifference to the plaintiff's federally protected rights [see Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 56, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632] , punitive damages would be recoverable. If the facts do not involve evil motive or intent, or reckless or callous indifference to the plaintiff's federally protected rights, the optional punitive damages allegation (Optional Paragraph 13) and the optional prayer for punitive damages should not be used.

The prayer also includes a prayer for attorney's fees. 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b) specifically provides for the recovery of attorney's fees in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 cases.

[5] Jury Demand

The form of complaint in [1], above, includes a demand for trial by jury. In a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 case in which damages are sought, the plaintiff will have a right to a jury trial [U.S. Const., amend. VII]. Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 38 governs demands for trial by jury. Under Rule 38, the demand for trial by jury may be served at any time after commencement of the action and not later than 10 days after service of the last pleading directed to the issue triable by jury. The rule provides further that "[s]uch demand may be indorsed upon a pleading of the party" [Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 38]. Therefore, the demand for trial by jury may be included in the complaint, as is the case in the complaint in [1], above.

[6] Cross References

For alternative forms of captions and introductions, see Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions

For discussion and forms relating to the format of complaints, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints

For discussion and forms relating to damages and pleading damages, see Ch. 177, Damages

For discussion and forms of jurisdictional allegations for use in federal court, and for discussion and forms relating to removal of actions to federal court, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal

For alternative forms of prayers, see Ch. 420, Prayers

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 113 CIVIL RIGHTS: THE POST-CIVIL WAR CIVIL RIGHTS STATUTES
PART IV. FORMS

11-113 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 113.51

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 113.51 Complaint for Damages and Injunctive Relief for Deprivation of Rights Under Color of State Law Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983--Unlawful Search and Seizure

[1] FORM Complaint for Damages and Injunctive Relief for Deprivation of Rights Under Color of State Law Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983--Unlawful Search and Seizure

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
_____ DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR PRELIMINARY AND PER-
_____ [name],	)	MANENT INJUNCTION, AND DAMAGES
Defendant(s).	)	(42 U.S.C. § 1983)
	)
	)

_____

DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

Plaintiff alleges:

1. This is an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 to obtain injunctive relief and recover damages against defendants for violation of plaintiff's right to be free of unreasonable searches and seizures under the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution.

2. The jurisdiction of this Court is predicated on 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343.

3. Plaintiff, _____ [name], is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, a citizen of the United States, and a resident of _____ [county], California.

4. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, _____ [state residence of each defendant, or other basis of venue, e.g., a resident of _____ (county), California]. Venue is therefore proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).

[5. A substantial part of the events giving rise to this action occurred in _____ (county), California. Venue is therefore proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).]

6. Defendant _____ [name] was, at all times mentioned in this complaint, _____ [state facts showing each defendant's capacity as a government agent, e.g., an agent of the Los Angeles Police Department, employed as a police officer].

7. Defendant _____ [name] was, at all times mentioned in this complaint, acting in the course and scope of _____ [his or her] employment _____ [specify each defendant's employer, e.g., with the City of Los Angeles].

8. Defendant _____ [name] was, at all times mentioned in this complaint, acting under color of state law.

9. Defendant _____ [name] is sued in _____ [his or her] _____ [individual and/or official] capacity.

10. _____ [Allege facts concerning the search and seizure, showing that defendants violated plaintiff's federal constitutional right to be free of unreasonable searches and seizures, e.g., At about _____ (time), on _____ (date), defendants wrongfully and unlawfully (a) entered plaintiff's residence; (b) displayed police badges and identification cards; (c) stated that they were police officers; (d) threatened to strike plaintiff and to place _____ (him or her) under arrest; (e) shoved, struck, and hit plaintiff and subjected _____ (him or her) to a search of _____ (his or her) person; (f) ordered and forced plaintiff to sit and remain in a chair in the residence; (g) searched through the rooms of the residence; (h) damaged various fixtures and furnishings in the process of the search; (i) seized and carried from the premises _____ (describe property, e.g., a personal computer and a box of papers owned by plaintiff); and (j) damaged the _____ (specify property damaged, e.g., plaintiff's personal computer) before the same was returned to plaintiff. Plaintiff did not consent to defendants' entry or subsequent conduct, but protested until

_____ (his or her) protests were overcome by defendants' threats and shows of force. Defendants had no search or arrest warrant, and they did not arrest plaintiff.]

11. In acting as alleged in this complaint, defendants _____ [names] violated plaintiff's right to be free of unreasonable searches and seizures under the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution.

12. As a direct and proximate result of defendants' actions, described in this complaint, plaintiff has suffered injury, loss, and damage, including _____ [describe injury, loss, and/or damage, e.g., loss of liberty, invasion of privacy, emotional distress, pain, suffering, and property damage].

[13. As a result of defendants' conduct, described in this complaint, plaintiff incurred medical expenses in the amount of $_____ (amount)].

[14. As a result of defendants' conduct, described in this complaint, plaintiff incurred property damage in _____ (the amount of $_____ [amount] or an amount to be determined according to proof at trial).]

[15. In acting as is alleged in this complaint, defendants acted knowingly, willfully, and maliciously, and with reckless and callous disregard for plaintiff's federally protected rights.]

16. As a result of defendants' actions, plaintiff has suffered and will continue to suffer extreme hardship and actual and impending irreparable _____ [injury, loss, and/or damage] in that _____ [state specific and definite facts showing the impending irreparable injury, loss, and/or damage, e.g., plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that defendants' investigation of plaintiff is continuing, and that defendants may conduct another unlawful search and seizure of plaintiff's property at any time].

17. Plaintiff has no adequate or speedy remedy at law for the conduct of defendants described above. This action for injunctive relief is plaintiff's only means of securing prospective relief, preventing further unlawful searches and seizures of plaintiff's property.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. For a preliminary injunction ordering defendants, and their officers, agents, employees, successors, and attorneys, and all those in active concert or participation with defendants, to _____ [describe conduct to be required or enjoined, e.g., return the property of plaintiff that was seized on _____ (date), and to refrain immediately and pending final hearing and resolution of this action from further searches and seizures of plaintiff's property without a search warrant and in the absence of exigent circumstances allowing a search without a search warrant under applicable law].

2. For a permanent injunction permanently enjoining and restraining defendants, and their officers, agents, employees, successors, and attorneys, and all those in active concert or participation with defendants, from _____ [describe conduct to be enjoined];

3. For compensatory damages, in an amount to be determined according to proof at trial;

[4. For punitive damages, in an amount to be determined according to proof at trial;]

5. For reasonable attorney's fees, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1988;

6. For costs of suit incurred in this action; and

7. For such other and further relief as the Court deems proper.

_____ [date]

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

Plaintiff _____ [name] hereby demands a jury trial.

_____ [date]

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use in federal court in an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for violation of the plaintiff's right to be free of unreasonable searches and seizures. The complaint seeks recovery of damages, including punitive damages in an appropriate case, as well as injunctive relief.

[3] Allegations

The complaint in [1], above, alleges all of the following:

- That this action arises under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and is for violation of plaintiff's federal constitutional right to be free of unreasonable searches and seizures under the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution (Paragraph 1).

- That the court's jurisdiction is predicated on 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343 (Paragraph 2).

- Plaintiff's name, United States citizenship, and residence (Paragraph 3). To bring an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, the plaintiff must be "a citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof" [42 U.S.C. § 1983; see Martinez v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1373, 1382 (Mexican citizen, who was in Mexico at time of events in question, could not bring § 1983 action)].

- Defendant's residence, for purposes of establishing venue (Paragraph 4) [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue is proper in district where a defendant resides, if all defendants are from same state)].

- An optional paragraph (Optional Paragraph 5) identifying a county in which a substantial part of the events giving rise to the action occurred. This paragraph is for use in a case when the plaintiff wishes to establish venue in such county [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue is proper in district where a substantial part of events giving rise to action occurred)].

- That defendants were agents of government entities, and that defendants were acting in the course and scope of that agency (Paragraphs 6 and 7). These allegations establish background facts showing that defendants acted under color of state law. In cases involving multiple defendants, these allegations should be repeated for each defendant.

- That defendants acted under color of state law (Paragraph 8). This is an element of the cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [see, e.g., Crumpton v. Gates (9th Cir. 1991) 947 F.2d 1418, 1420] . In cases involving multiple defendants, this allegation should be repeated for each defendant.

- That defendants are sued in their individual and/or official capacities, whichever is applicable (Paragraph 9). If only money damages are sought from a particular defendant, that defendant must be sued in his or her individual capacity. If only injunctive relief is sought against a particular defendant, that defendant must be sued in his or her official capacity. If both monetary and injunctive relief are sought against a particular defendant, that defendant must be sued in both his or her individual and official capacities [see § 113.14[7]]. In cases involving multiple defendants, this allegation should be repeated, in the appropriate form, for each defendant.

- Facts showing that defendant violated plaintiff's federal constitutional rights (Paragraph 10). This may take up several paragraphs, and make up the majority of the complaint.

- An allegation stating that defendants violated plaintiff's right to be free of unreasonable searches and seizures under the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution (Paragraph 11).

- That as a direct and proximate result of defendants' actions, plaintiff suffered injury, loss, and/or damage (Paragraph 12). This allegation also should describe the injury, loss, and/or damage.

- An optional allegation stating the amount of medical expenses incurred as a result of the defendants' unlawful search and seizure (Optional Paragraph 13).

- An optional allegation stating the amount of property damages caused by defendants' unlawful search and seizure, or stating that the property damage is in an amount to be established by proof at trial (Optional Paragraph 14).

- An optional allegation, that defendants acted knowingly, willfully, and maliciously, and with reckless and callous disregard for plaintiff's federally protected rights (Optional Paragraph 15). This optional allegation, if appropriate under the circumstances, would support recovery of punitive damages [see Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 56, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632 ; see also § 113.14[14][b]].

- That defendants' actions caused and will continue to cause plaintiff to suffer extreme hardship and actual and impending irreparable injury, loss, and/or damage, and an explanation of the impending irreparable injury, loss, and/or damage (Paragraph 16).

- That plaintiff has no adequate or speedy remedy at law (Paragraph 17).

[4] Prayer

The prayer in the form complaint in [1], above, seeks preliminary and permanent injunctive relief. The prayer also seeks recovery of compensatory damages. Generally, the full range of compensatory damages recoverable in a tort action is recoverable in an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [see Memphis Community School Dist. v. Stachura (1986) 477 U.S. 299, 305-306, 106 S. Ct. 2537, 91 L. Ed. 2d 249] .

The complaint in [1], above, also includes an optional prayer for punitive damages. In a case when the violation of plaintiff's rights was motivated by evil motive or intent, or involved reckless or callous indifference to the plaintiff's federally protected rights [see Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 56, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632] , punitive damages would be recoverable. If the facts do not involve evil motive or intent, or reckless or callous indifference to the plaintiff's federally protected rights, the optional punitive damages allegation (Optional Paragraph 15) and the optional prayer for punitive damages should not be used.

The prayer also includes a prayer for attorney's fees. 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b) specifically provides for the recovery of attorney's fees in § 1983 cases.

[5] Jury Demand

The form of complaint in [1], above, includes a demand for trial by jury. In a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 case in which damages are sought, the plaintiff will have a right to a jury trial [U.S. Const., amend. VII]. Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 38 governs demands for trial by jury. Under Rule 38, the demand for trial by jury may be served at any time after commencement of the action and not later than 10 days after service of the last pleading directed to the issue triable by jury. The rule provides further that "[s]uch demand may be indorsed upon a pleading of the party" [Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 38]. Therefore, the demand for trial by jury may be included in the complaint, as is the case in the complaint in [1], above.

[6] Cross References

For alternative forms of captions and introductions, see Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions

For discussion and forms relating to the format of complaints, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints

For discussion and forms relating to damages and pleading damages, see Ch. 177, Damages

For discussion and forms of jurisdictional allegations for use in federal court, and for discussion and forms relating to removal of actions to federal court, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal

For discussion and forms relating to the procedure and forms required for seeking a temporary restraining order, preliminary injunction, and permanent injunction, see Ch. 303, Injunctions

For alternative forms of prayers, see Ch. 420, Prayers

186 of 186 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 113 CIVIL RIGHTS: THE POST-CIVIL WAR CIVIL RIGHTS STATUTES
PART IV. FORMS

11-113 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 113.52

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 113.52 Complaint for Damages for Deprivation of Rights Under Color of State Law Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983--Claim For Damages Against Local Government Entity

[1] FORM Complaint for Damages for Deprivation of Rights Under Color of State Law Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983--Claim For Damages Against Local Government Entity

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
_____ DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES
_____ [name],	)	(42 U.S.C. § 1983)
Defendant(s).	)
	)
	)

_____

DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

Plaintiff alleges:

1. This is an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 to recover damages against defendant _____ [name of defendant government entity, e.g., County of Alameda] for violation of plaintiff's right _____ [specify the federal constitutional or statutory right violated, e.g., to be free of unreasonable seizures under the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution].

2. The jurisdiction of this Court is predicated on 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343.

3. Plaintiff, _____ [name], is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, a citizen of the United States, and a resident of _____ [county], California.

4. Defendant _____ [name of defendant government entity, e.g., County of Alameda] is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, _____ [allege capacity of defendant government entity, e.g., a county in the State of California, organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, with the capacity to sue and be sued].

5. A substantial part of the events giving rise to this action occurred in _____ (county), California. Venue is therefore proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).

6. Defendant _____ [name of defendant government entity, e.g., County of Alameda] was, at all times mentioned in this complaint, acting under color of state law.

7. _____ [Allege facts describing the violation of the plaintiff's federal constitutional or statutory rights.]

8. Plaintiff [is informed and believes and thereon alleges that he or she] was subjected to a violation of _____ [describe right violated, e.g., her right to be free of unreasonable seizures under the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution], as a result of the customs, practices, and policies of defendant _____ [name of defendant government entity, e.g., County of Alameda].

9. _____ [Describe, on information and belief if appropriate, the customs, practices, and policies of defendant that led to the violation of the plaintiff's rights.]

[10. The policy of _____ (name of defendant government entity, e.g., County of Alameda), described in this complaint, was established on _____ (date) by a decision of _____ (identify policy maker).]

[11. The customs, practices, and policies of defendant _____ (name of defendant government entity, e.g., County of Alameda) described in this complaint amounted to deliberate indifference to the rights of persons, such as the plaintiff, who _____ (describe the class of persons endangered by the defendant's customs, practices, and policies, e.g., paid fines to the county in a timely manner).]

12. As a direct and proximate result of the customs, practices, and policies of defendant _____ [name of defendant government entity, e.g., County of Alameda], described in this complaint, plaintiff has suffered injury, loss, and damage, including _____ [describe injury, loss, and/or damage, e.g., loss of liberty, invasion of privacy, emotional distress, pain, and suffering].

[13. As a result of the customs, practices, and policies of defendant _____ (name of defendant government entity, e.g., County of Alameda), described in this complaint, plaintiff incurred medical expenses in the amount of $_____ (amount)].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. For compensatory damages, in an amount to be determined according to proof at trial;

2. For reasonable attorney's fees, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1988;

3. For costs of suit incurred in this action; and

4. For such other and further relief as the Court deems proper.

_____ [date]

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

Plaintiff _____ [name] hereby demands a jury trial.

_____ [date]

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is a general form of complaint for use in federal court in an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for money damages against a local government entity. The complaint seeks recovery of damages and attorney's fees.

[3] Allegations

The complaint in [1], above, alleges all of the following:

- That this action arises under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and is for violation of plaintiff's federal constitutional or statutory rights (Paragraph 1). This allegation also specifies the right violated.

- That the court's jurisdiction is predicated on 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343 (Paragraph 2).

- Plaintiff's name, United States citizenship, and residence (Paragraph 3). To bring an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, the plaintiff must be "a citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof" [42 U.S.C. § 1983; see Martinez v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1373, 1382 (Mexican citizen, who was in Mexico at time of events in question, could not bring § 1983 action)].

- The name and capacity of the defendant local government entity (Paragraph 4).

- An allegation identifying a county in which a substantial part of the events giving rise to the action occurred (Paragraph 5). This paragraph establishes venue in the federal district encompassing that county [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue is proper in district where a substantial part of events giving rise to action occurred)].

- That defendant acted under color of state law (Paragraph 6). This is an element of the cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [see, e.g., Crumpton v. Gates (9th Cir. 1991) 947 F.2d 1418, 1420] .

- Facts showing the violation of plaintiff's federal constitutional or statutory rights (Paragraph 7). This may take up several paragraphs, and make up the majority of the complaint. The allegations must be tailored to the constitutional or statutory right at issue, and must satisfy the legal requirements for a showing of a violation of that right.

- An allegation, on information and belief if that is appropriate, that plaintiff was subjected to the violation of his or her rights because of customs, practices, and policies of the defendant government entity (Paragraph 8). A plaintiff may recover money damages against a local government entity under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 only if the violation of federal rights was caused by customs, practices, or policies of the government entity [see Monell v. New York City Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 694, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611] .

- A description of the customs, practices, and policies of the defendant local government entity that caused the violation of the plaintiff's federal rights (Paragraph 9).

- An optional allegation that the policy that caused the violation of the plaintiff's federal rights was established on a particular date by a particular policymaker for the defendant local government entity (Optional Paragraph 10) [see Pembaur v. Cincinnati (1986) 475 U.S. 469, 480, 106 S. Ct. 1292, 89 L. Ed. 2d 452 ; Hammond v. County of Madera (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 797, 801] .

- An optional allegation that the customs, practices, and policies of the defendant local government entity amounted to deliberate indifference to the rights of a class of persons of which the plaintiff was a member (Optional Paragraph 11). This is an element of a claim for money damages against a local government entity under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, in cases in which the custom, practice, or policy at issue is one of inaction, such as a failure to train employees [see Plumeau v. School Dist. No. 40 (9th Cir. 1997) 130 F.3d 432, 438 ; Oviatt By and Through Waugh v. Pearce (9th Cir. 1992) 954 F.2d 1470, 1474] .

- That, as a direct and proximate result of defendant's customs, practices, and policies, plaintiff suffered injury, loss, and damage (Paragraph 12). This allegation also should describe the injury, loss, and/or damage.

- An optional allegation stating the amount of medical expenses incurred as a result of the defendant's denial of plaintiff's rights (Optional Paragraph 13).

[4] Prayer

The prayer in the form complaint in [1], above, seeks recovery of compensatory damages. Generally, the full range of compensatory damages recoverable in a tort action is recoverable in an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [see Memphis Community School Dist. v. Stachura (1986) 477 U.S. 299, 305-306, 106 S. Ct. 2537, 91 L. Ed. 2d 249] .

The prayer does not include a prayer for punitive damages. Punitive damages are not recoverable against a local government entity in a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 case [Newport v. Fact Concerts (1981) 453 U.S. 247, 271, 101 S. Ct. 2748, 69 L. Ed. 2d 616] .

The prayer includes a prayer for attorney's fees. 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b) specifically provides for the recovery of attorney's fees in § 1983 cases.

[5] Jury Demand

The form of complaint in [1], above, includes a demand for trial by jury. In a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 case in which damages are sought, the plaintiff will have a right to a jury trial [U.S. Const., amend. VII]. Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 38 governs demands for trial by jury. Under Rule 38, the demand for trial by jury may be served at any time after commencement of the action and not later than 10 days after service of the last pleading directed to the issue triable by jury. The rule provides further that "[s]uch demand may be indorsed upon a pleading of the party" [Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 38]. Therefore, the demand for trial by jury may be included in the complaint, as is the case in the complaint in [1], above.

[6] Cross References

For alternative forms of captions and introductions, see Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions

For discussion and forms relating to the format of complaints, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints

For discussion and forms relating to damages and pleading damages, see Ch. 177, Damages

For discussion and forms of jurisdictional allegations for use in federal court, and for discussion and forms relating to removal of actions to federal court, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal

For alternative forms of prayers, see Ch. 420, Prayers

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 114.syn

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.syn Synopsis to Chapter 114: CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS

§ 114.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 114.02 Cross References

§§ 114.03-114.09 [Reserved]

§ 114.10 Governing Law

[1] Federal Law

[2] State Law

§ 114.11 Effect of Imprisonment on Civil Rights

§ 114.12 Standard of Review of Regulations Affecting Rights of Prisoners

[1] Constitutional Rights

[2] Statutory Rights

§ 114.13 Access to Courts

[1] Constitutional, Statutory, and Other Rights, Generally

[a] Constitutional Right to Access

[b] Statutory Right to Initiate Civil Actions

[c] Prisoner's Right to Attend Court Proceedings; Alternative Arrangements

[d] Correspondence from Court

[e] Right to Receive Fair Notice of Summary Judgment Procedures

[f] Prison Delivery Rule

[2] Access to Counsel or Other Assistance

[3] Access to Law Libraries, Legal Services, and Legal Materials

§ 114.14 Protection Against Cruel and Unusual Punishment

[1] Constitutional Restrictions on Punishment

[a] Unnecessary and Wanton Infliction of Pain Standard

[b] Liability of Prison Officials for Injuries Suffered at Hands of Other Prisoners

[c] Prison Overcrowding

[2] State Statutory Restrictions on Punishment

§ 114.14A Protection Against Use of Excessive Force on Jail Detainee

§ 114.14B Searches of Jail Detainees

§ 114.15 Medical Care

[1] Failure to Provide Adequate Care

[2] Prisoner's Right to Refuse

[a] Constitutional Right

[b] Mentally Disordered Offenders

[c] Sexually Violent Predators

114.16 Exercise

§ 114.17 Equal Protection

[1] Prison Sentence Does Not Deprive Person of Equal Protection of Law

[2] Racial Segregation or Discrimination Is Prohibited

[3] Gender Discrimination May Constitute Equal Protection Violation

§ 114.18 Due Process of Law

[1] Prisoner Has More Restricted Right to Due Process

[2] Specific Situations in Which Prisoner Is Entitled to Some Due Process

[3] When Due Process Protections Are Limited

[4] Due Process and Family Law Matters

[5] Use of Long-Term Involuntary Medication

[6] Process Required in Disciplinary Proceedings

§ 114.19 Good Time Credits

[1] No Constitutional Right to Receive Good Time Credits

[2] Claim for Restoration of Credits Brought as Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus

[3] Worktime Credits

§ 114.20 First Amendment Rights

[1] Freedom of Expression

[a] Reasonable Relation Standard of Review

[b] Stricter Scrutiny Applies When Regulating Outgoing Communications

[c] Reasonable Restrictions on Time, Place, and Manner of Speech

[d] Regulations Limiting Prisoners' Choice of Clothing

[2] Freedom of Religion

[a] Constitutional Standards

[b] Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act of 2000

[3] Right to File Prison Grievances

[4] Retaliation

§ 114.21 Privacy

§ 114.22 Marriage

[1] Constitutional Right to Marry

[2] State Statutory Right to Marry

§ 114.22A Procreation

§ 114.23 Visitation Rights

§ 114.24 Property Ownership

§ 114.25 Correspondence and Mail

[1] Correspondence with Attorney

[2] Other Correspondence and Reading Material

[a] Constitutional Rights

[b] State Statutory and Regulatory Provisions

§ 114.26 Other Rights Under California Statutes

§ 114.27 Prisoners Not Entitled to Certain Civil Rights

§ 114.28 Enforcement of Civil Rights of Prisoners Under 42 U.S.C. § 1983

[1] Generally

[2] Exhaustion of Remedies

[3] Pleading

[4] Damages

[a] Required Proof

[b] Prison Litigation Reform Act

[5] Injunctive Relief

[a] Availability of Injunctive Relief, Generally

[b] Special Requirements Applicable to Prison Release Orders

[c] Provisions Regarding Termination of Prospective Relief

[d] Other Applicable Provisions

[6] Attorney's Fees

[a] Limitation on Recovery of Fees

[b] Source of Payment of Award

[c] Cap on Fees

[d] PLRA Provisions Apply Only to Services Performed After PLRA's Effective Date

[7] Proceeding In Forma Pauperis

§ 114.29 Enforcement of Rights Under Other Statutes

§§ 114.30-114.49 [Reserved]

§ 114.50 Related Matthew Bender Publications

§ 114.51 Federal Constitution

§ 114.52 State Constitution

§ 114.53 Federal Statutes

§ 114.54 State Statutes

§ 114.55 State Regulations

§ 114.55A California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI)

§ 114.56 Decisions

[1] Access to Courts

[2] Protection Against Cruel and Unusual Punishment

[3] Medical Care

[4] Exercise

[5] Equal Protection

[6] Due Process of Law

[7] Good Time Credits

[8] First Amendment Rights

[8A] Fourth Amendment Rights

[9] Privacy

[10] Marriage

[10A] Procreation

[11] Visitation

[12] Property Ownership

[13] Correspondence and Mail

[14] Procedure in Prisoner's Rights Cases, Generally

[15] Class Actions

[16] Exhaustion of Remedies

[17] Pleading

[18] Immunity Defenses

[19] Damages

[20] Injunctions

[21] Attorney's Fees

[22] Declaratory Relief

[23] Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act

§ 114.57 Law Reviews

§ 114.58 Text References

§§ 114.59-114.69 [Reserved]

§ 114.70 Complaint for Damages for Deprivation of Rights Under Color of State Law Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983--Cruel and Unusual Punishment of Prisoner by Use of Excessive Force

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Allegations

[4] Prayer

[5] Jury Demand

[6] Cross References

§ 114.71 Complaint for Damages and Injunctive Relief for Deprivation of Rights Under Color of State Law Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983--Cruel and Unusual Punishment of Prisoner by Provision of Inadequate Medical Care

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Allegations

[4] Prayer

[5] Jury Demand

[6] Cross References

§ 114.72 Declaration of Prisoner for Removal From State Prison to Attend Court Proceedings Affecting Parental or Marital Rights [Penal Code § 2625]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Contents of Declaration

[4] When Judge Must Issue Order

[5] Notice of Proceeding to Prisoner

[6] Cross References

§ 114.73 Order for Removal of Prisoner From State Prison to Attend Court Proceedings Affecting Parental or Marital Rights [Penal Code § 2625]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

Dennis M. Farias
Revision Author n*
John H. Scott
Editorial Consultant n

FOOTNOTES:
(n15)Footnote *.
Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases.

(n16)Footnote **.
John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976.
Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART I. SCOPE

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.01

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses the civil rights of prisoners under the United States and California constitutions, and under California statutes.

The federal civil rights of prisoners are generally enforced by a civil action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [see Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes]. This chapter discusses enforcement of prisoners' civil rights by means of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 actions.

This chapter contains the following forms:

- A complaint for damages for deprivation of rights under color of state law pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on the cruel and unusual punishment of a prisoner because of the use of excessive force [see § 114.70].

- A complaint for damages and injunctive relief for deprivation of rights under color of state law pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on the cruel and unusual punishment of a prisoner because of the failure to provide adequate medical care [see § 114.71].

- A declaration of a prisoner to be removed from prison to attend court proceedings affecting parental or marital rights [Penal Code § 2625; see § 114.72].

- An order for the removal of a prisoner from state prison to attend court proceedings affecting parental or marital rights [Penal Code § 2625; see § 114.73].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawSection 1983 ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART I. SCOPE

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.02

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.02 Cross References

- For a comprehensive procedural guide that chronologically outlines the procedures in a typical civil action brought in a California state court, see Ch. 2, Procedural Guide for Civil Actions .

- For discussion and forms relating to adoptions and termination of parental rights, see Ch. 12A, Adoptions: Termination of Parental Rights .

- For discussion and forms relating to discrimination in government-funded programs and activities, including discrimination against prisoners based on disability, see Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities .

- For discussion and forms relating to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and the other post-Civil War civil rights statutes (42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1982, 1985, 1986, and 1988), see Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

- For discussion and forms relating to employment discrimination, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination .

- For discussion and forms relating to discrimination in business establishments, see Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments .

- For discussion and forms relating to housing discrimination, see Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination .

- For discussion and forms relating to interference with civil rights by threats, intimidation, coercion, or violence, see Ch. 117A, Civil Rights: Interference with Civil Rights by Threats, Intimidation, Coercion, or Violence .

- For discussion and forms of jurisdictional allegations for use in federal court, and for discussion and forms relating to removal of actions to federal court, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal .

- For discussion and forms relating to relief by writ of habeas corpus, see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus .

- For discussion and forms relating to injunctions, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

- For discussion and forms relating to the rights of insane persons, see Ch. 304, Insane and Other Incompetent Persons .

- For further discussion and forms relating to dependency proceedings in juvenile courts, see Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings .

- For discussion of name changes by prisoners, see Ch. 377, Name, Change of.

- For discussion of testing for AIDS-related diseases of persons charged with the commission of certain sex crimes or assaults on officers or emergency personnel, and of mandatory testing of persons convicted of certain sex crimes, see Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.60 et seq.

- For discussion and forms relating to civil rights actions arising from illegal searches and seizures, see Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.310 et seq.

- For discussion and forms relating to actions against public entities and officers based on state law, see Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawSection 1983 ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawConspiracyGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewClearly Erroneous ReviewHabeas Corpus Relief

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART I. SCOPE

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 114.03-114.09

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

[Reserved]

§§ 114.03[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.10

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.10 Governing Law

[1] Federal Law

Federal constitutional provisions that are significant to the civil rights of prisoners include United States Constitution, Amendments I (freedom of speech and religion), IV (searches and seizures), VIII (cruel and unusual punishment), XIV (due process and equal protection), and XIV § 2 (disenfranchisement) [see Legal Services for Prisoners with Children v. Bowen (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 447, 452-464, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 869 (disenfranchisement allowed by section is not limited to felonies at common law)].

42 U.S.C. § 1983 provides a cause of action for violation of federal constitutional or statutory rights. 42 U.S.C. § 1985 provides a cause of action for a conspiracy to violate a person's federal rights. 42 U.S.C. § 1986 provides a cause of action for a failure to prevent a conspiracy to violate a person's federal rights. 42 U.S.C. § 1988 provides for recovery of attorney's fees in civil rights actions. For discussion and forms related to 42 U.S.C. §§ 1983, 1985, 1986, 1988, and the other post-Civil War civil rights statutes, see Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA), 42 U.S.C. § 12131 et seq., which prohibits a public entity from discriminating against a qualified individual with a disability on account of the individual's disability, covers inmates in state prisons [Pennsylvania Dep't of Corrections v. Yeskey (1998) 524 U.S. 206, 208-213, 118 S. Ct. 1952, 141 L. Ed. 2d 215 ; see Armstrong v. Davis (9th Cir. 2001) 275 F.3d 849 (facts established at trial demonstrated that State of California regularly discriminated against disabled prisoners and parolees during parole and parole revocation hearing processes in violation of ADA and Rehabilitation Act); see also Thompson v. Davis (9th Cir. 2002) 282 F.3d 780, 785-787 (Title II applies to parole decisions)]. Thus, prisoners may sue a state for money damages for violations of Title II that also violate constitutional rights. Insofar as Title II creates a private cause of action for damages against states for conduct that actually violates the Fourteenth Amendment, Title II validly abrogates state sovereign immunity [see United States v. Georgia (2006) 546 U.S. 151, 126 S. Ct. 877, 880-882, 163 L. Ed. 2d 650]. For discussion related to Title II of the ADA, see Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities, § 112.15[2].

[2] State Law

State constitutional provisions that are significant to the civil rights of prisoners include California Constitution, Article I, §§ 1 (inalienable rights), 2 (freedom of speech), 4 (freedom of religion), 7 (due process and equal protection), 13 (search and seizure), and 17 (cruel and unusual punishment), and Article II, § 4 (disenfranchisement).

The principal California statutes relating to the civil rights of prisoners are Penal Code §§ 2600 (rights lost during imprisonment), and 2601 (guaranteed rights of prisoners). Penal Code § 2600 sets forth, generally, the extent to which a prisoner is deprived of civil rights during his or her incarceration. Penal Code § 2601 is the principal California statute enumerating the rights of prisoners. The rights of prisoners set forth in § 2601 are fundamental guarantees that may not be infringed on arbitrarily [In re Van Geldern (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 832, 836, 97 Cal. Rptr. 698, 489 P.2d 578 (decided under former Penal Code § 2600, enumerating rights of prisoners)].

Other California statutes relating to the rights of prisoners include Penal Code §§ 636 (privileged conversation of prisoner), 2620-2625 (prisoners as witnesses), 2650-2657 (mistreatment of prisoners), 2670-2680 (organic therapy), 2684-2685 (disposition of insane prisoners), 2690-2692 (temporary removal of prisoners), 2700-2792 (employment of prisoners), 3403 (examination after commitment; care and treatment; confinement beyond term of commitment), 3405-3409 (family planning, birth control, pregnancy, abortions in prisons), 3521-3523 (prisoners' rights as research subjects), 4000-4030 (county jails), 4100-4305 (county industrial farms and road camps), 4350-4351 (blood donations), and 5069 (rehabilitation of injured prisoners); Fam. Code § 7825 (freedom from custody and control of parent convicted of felony); and Lab. Code §§ 3370, 3371 (workers' compensation).

PRACTICE TIP:

No Independent Basis for Damages. Attorneys should note that the California Constitution, with some very narrow exceptions, does not provide an independent basis for a damage claim [see Carlsbad Aquafarm, Inc. v. Department of Health Services (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 809, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87]. However, Civ. Code § 52.1 (regarding remedies for interference with exercise of civil rights) may provide a remedy in some situations, and attorney's fees to the prevailing party. There are significant immunities that exist under California state law. However, they are not insurmountable. By John H. Scott

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsCriminal ProcessCruel & Unusual PunishmentConstitutional LawEqual ProtectionGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsFreedom of SpeechCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsFreedom of Religion

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.11

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.11 Effect of Imprisonment on Civil Rights

A person sentenced to imprisonment in a state prison may during the period of confinement be deprived of only such rights as is reasonably related to legitimate penological interests [Penal Code § 2600 (also requires certain procedures for involuntary administration of psychotropic medication to prisoners); see Payne v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 908, 913, 132 Cal. Rptr. 405, 553 P.2d 565 (although prisoners may forfeit significant rights and privileges that general citizenry enjoys, they retain those basic rights not incompatible with penal institution's operation)].

Although on its face Penal Code § 2600 applies only to state prison inmates, based on equal protection principles the statute has been held to apply to all persons similarly situated, including (1) wards of the California Youth Authority [In re Arias (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 667, 687, 230 Cal. Rptr. 505, 725 P.2d 664], and (2) persons confined in local detention facilities [De Lancie v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 865, 872, 183 Cal. Rptr. 866, 647 P.2d 142].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawPrisoner RightsDiscrimination

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.12

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.12 Standard of Review of Regulations Affecting Rights of Prisoners

[1] Constitutional Rights

Under the federal standard of review, a prison regulation that impinges on the constitutional rights of prisoners must be reasonably related to legitimate penological interests [Shaw v. Murphy (2001) 532 U.S. 223, 121 S. Ct. 1475, 149 L. Ed. 2d 420, 424 ; Turner v. Safley (1987) 482 U.S. 78, 89]. Several factors are relevant in determining the reasonableness of the regulation [Shaw v. Murphy (2001) 532 U.S. 223, 121 S. Ct. 1475, 149 L. Ed. 2d 420, 427 ; Turner v. Safley (1987) 482 U.S. 78, 89-91 (ban on correspondence between inmates in different institutions reasonably related to legitimate security interests)]:

- Whether there is a valid, rational connection between the prison regulation and the legitimate governmental interest put forward to justify it;

- Whether there are alternative means of exercising the right that remain open to prison inmates;

- The impact that accommodation of the asserted constitutional right will have on guards and other inmates and on the allocation of prison resources generally; and

- The absence of ready alternatives.

Although all four factors are relevant to the analysis, the first of the factors constitutes a sine qua non [Morrison v. Hall (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 896, 901 ; Walker v. Sumner (9th Cir. 1990) 917 F.2d 382, 385].

If the prisoner presents sufficient evidence refuting a common-sense connection between a legitimate objective and a prison regulation, the state must present enough counter-evidence to show that the connection is not so remote as to render the policy arbitrary or irrational [Frost v. Symington (9th Cir. 1999) 197 F.3d 348, 357 ; Mauro v. Arpaio (9th Cir. 1999) 188 F.3d 1054, 1060 , cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1018 (2000) , quoting Turner v. Safley (1987) 482 U.S. 78, 89-90]. If the prisoner does not present enough evidence to refute a common-sense connection between a prison regulation and the objective that government's counsel argues the policy was designed to further, presuming the governmental objective is legitimate and neutral, Turner's first prong is satisfied [Frost v. Symington (9th Cir. 1999) 197 F.3d 348, 357 ; see also Thornburgh v. Abbott (1989) 490 U.S. 401, 414, 109 S. Ct. 1874, 104 L. Ed. 2d 459].

The federal standard does not require the regulation to be the "least restrictive alternative" [Turner v. Safley (1987) 482 U.S. 78, 90-91]. This differs from the California standard, which does include a "least restrictive alternative" inquiry [see [2], below].

Although some earlier cases applied a different standard of review based on whether the regulation affects the constitutional rights of nonprisoners [see, e.g., Procunier v. Martinez (1974) 416 U.S. 396, 409, 94 S. Ct. 1800, 40 L. Ed. 2d 224], the distinction was later held to be inappropriate. The Turner standard applies to the review of all prison regulations [Thornburgh v. Abbott (1989) 490 U.S. 401, 413-414, 109 S. Ct. 1874, 104 L. Ed. 2d 459].

Not all prison regulations create constitutionally cognizable liberty interests. For example, California prison regulations governing inmate classification did not create cognizable Eighth or Fourteenth Amendment liberty interests [Myron v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2007) 476 F.3d 716, 718-719 ; see also Sandin v. Conner (1995) 515 U.S. 472, 486, 115 S. Ct. 2293, 132 L. Ed. 2d 418 (prisoner's discipline in segregated confinement did not present type of atypical, significant deprivation in which state might conceivably create liberty interest)]. Further, a California regulation allowing inmates to participate in the publication and distribution of an inmate publication only with the institution head's specific approval did not create a liberty interest importing the Fourteenth Amendment because a prison official's determination that a prisoner may not engage in the publication and distribution of an inmate publication does not present the type of atypical significant deprivation in which a state might conceivably create a liberty interest [Myron v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2007) 476 F.3d 716, 719] . Although prisoners have a right to the provision of proper nourishment while incarcerated, prisoners do not have a right to seek the enforcement of prison regulations regarding food service without a demonstration that the food service violated any of their constitutional or statutory rights [see In re Cannon (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 910, 915-917, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 770].

[2] Statutory Rights

Reviewing a claim that a prisoner's rights under Penal Code § 2600 have been violated requires the following three-step inquiry [In re Arias (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 667, 689-690, 230 Cal. Rptr. 505, 725 P.2d 664]:

- Whether any "rights" are implicated;

- If rights are implicated, whether a "reasonable security" problem (or presumably, under the statutory language of the 1994 amendment to Penal Code § 2600, a "legitimate penological interest") exists that might permit a deprivation of rights under § 2600; and

- The extent to which a deprivation of rights is necessary.

If a restriction is imposed on an inmate's civil rights protected by Penal Code § 2600, the availability of another less restrictive alternative to accomplish the goal of reasonable security weighs against the restriction [In re Grimes (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1175, 1181-1182, 256 Cal. Rptr. 690 ; see In re Stone (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 922, 927, 182 Cal. Rptr. 79 (visitation rights under Penal Code § 2601)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawPrisoner RightsDiscrimination

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.13

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.13 Access to Courts

[1] Constitutional, Statutory, and Other Rights, Generally

[a] Constitutional Right to Access

A prisoner has a constitutional right of access to the courts under U.S. Const., amend. XIV [Bounds v. Smith (1977) 430 U.S. 817, 821, 97 S. Ct. 1491, 52 L. Ed. 2d 72 ; Wolff v. McDonnell (1974) 418 U.S. 539, 556, 94 S. Ct. 2963, 41 L. Ed. 2d 935]. This right encompasses civil rights claims, as well as habeas corpus proceedings [Storseth v. Spellman (9th Cir. 1981) 654 F.2d 1349, 1352 ; see Ex parte Hull (1940) 312 U.S. 546, 549, 61 S. Ct. 640, 85 L. Ed. 1034 (prison may not edit, censor, or delay petitions for writs of habeas corpus)].

To show a denial of the constitutional right of access to the courts, a prisoner must show actual injury [Lewis v. Casey (1995) 518 U.S. 343, 349-355, 116 S. Ct. 2174, 135 L. Ed. 2d 606 ; Vandelft v. Moses (9th Cir. 1994) 31 F.3d 794, 796 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 825 (1995) ; Johnson v. Moore (9th Cir. 1991) 948 F.2d 517, 521]. "Actual injury" is defined as a specific instance in which an inmate was actually denied access to the courts [Vandelft v. Moses (9th Cir. 1994) 31 F.3d 794, 796 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 825 (1995)].

[b] Statutory Right to Initiate Civil Actions

Prisoners have a statutory right to initiate civil actions, subject to a $3 filing fee to be collected by the Department of Corrections and any other fee authorized by law, and subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 391 et seq. (concerning vexatious litigants) [Penal Code § 2601(d)].

[c] Prisoner's Right to Attend Court Proceedings; Alternative Arrangements

Although prisoners do not ordinarily have the right to appear personally in court on civil matters [Payne v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 908, 926-927, 132 Cal. Rptr. 405, 553 P.2d 565], a prisoner, other than one sentenced to death, does have the right to attend court proceedings (1) to terminate his or her parental rights or (2) to adjudicate his or her child a dependent of the court [Penal Code § 2625(a)-(d)]. A proceeding to identify the presumed father, which seeks merely to identify the man who has a legal entitlement to reunification services and/or custody, is neither of these, and the biological father does not have a right to attend the hearing in person [In re Jesusa V. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 588, 599-601, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205, 85 P.3d 2]. In other cases in which the parental or marital rights of a prisoner not under sentence of death are subject to adjudication, the court may order the prisoner's appearance [Penal Code § 2625(e)-(g)].

The prisoner's presence can also be ordered by the trial court in any case where his or her presence is necessary [see Penal Code § 1567] or in any case in which the prisoner is a material witness [Payne v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 908, 924-925, 132 Cal. Rptr. 405, 553 P.2d 565 ; see Penal Code § 2621]. Furthermore, in a civil case in which a prisoner is a defendant, failure to arrange to take the prisoner's testimony, when the court determines that the testimony is required, violates the prisoner's constitutional due process rights [Payne v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 908, 924-925, 132 Cal. Rptr. 405, 553 P.2d 565].

When prisoners do not have a right to appear personally in court, courts are encouraged to devise alternative means to secure prisoners meaningful access to the courts [Hoversten v. Superior Court of San Luis Obispo (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 636, 642, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 ; Wantuch v. Davis (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 786, 792, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 47]. There are several possible means for a court to secure access to the courts for a prisoner [Hoversten v. Superior Court of San Luis Obispo (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 636, 642-643, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 ; Wantuch v. Davis (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 786, 792-793, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 47]:

- Deferring the action until the prisoner is released;
- Appointing counsel for the prisoner;
- Transferring the prisoner to court;
- Utilizing depositions in lieu of personal appearances;
- Holding trial in prison;
- Conducting status and settlement conferences, hearings on motions, and other pretrial proceedings by telephone;
- Propounding written discovery;
- Using closed circuit television or other modern electronic media;
- In child custody or visitation matters, utilizing the services of the family court mediator [see Fam. Code § 3170(a)]; and

- Implementing other innovative, imaginative procedures.

While a trial court may exercise its discretion in determining the appropriate manner by which access is provided, the court must make sure that whatever method is utilized actually provides meaningful access. For example, to the extent that the trial court elected to rely on telephonic hearings to provide an indigent inmate access, the court should have communicated itself, telephonically and/or by letter, with prison personnel to determine what logistical arrangements were necessary to enable an inmate to appear telephonically, and made sure both court staff and prison personnel made those arrangements. Thus, before the court could dismiss the action on the ground that the prisoner failed to appear telephonically at proceedings in the case, the trial court should have found, based on facts in the record, that the prisoner willfully failed to avail herself or himself of the right to appear telephonically [Jameson v. Desta (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 672, 675, 678-684, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 345] .

[d] Correspondence from Court

The right of privacy secured by the California Constitution [Cal. Const., art. I, § 1] prohibits a regulation that permits correspondence from a court to be opened without the prisoner present [In re Short (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 268, 272, 127 Cal. Rptr. 498].

[e] Right to Receive Fair Notice of Summary Judgment Procedures

Under the fair notice doctrine, the district court bears the responsibility of assuring that a pro se prisoner litigant receives meaningful notice of summary judgment procedures and requirements [Solis v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2008) 514 F.3d 946, 951-953 ; Wyatt v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2003) 315 F.3d 1108, 1111 ; Rand v. Rowland (9th Cir. 1998) 154 F.3d 952, 960 (en banc); see Klingele v. Eikenberry (9th Cir. 1988) 849 F.2d 409, 411-412 (district courts are obligated to advise prisoner pro per litigants of Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 56 requirements)]. The court must inform the pro se prisoner of each of the following [Rand v. Rowland (9th Cir. 1998) 154 F.3d 952, 960-961 (en banc)]:

- The right to file counter-affidavits or other responsive evidentiary materials and the fact that the failure to do so might result in the entry of summary judgment against the prisoner.

- The effect of losing on summary judgment.

- That if the pro se prisoner fails to controvert the moving party with opposing counter-affidavits or other evidence, the moving party's evidence might be taken as the truth, and final judgment may be entered against the prisoner without a trial.

[f] Prison Delivery Rule

Under the prison-delivery rule, also referred to as the prison mailbox rule, a self-represented prisoner's notice of appeal in a criminal case is deemed timely filed if, within the relevant period set forth in the California Rules of Court, the notice is delivered to prison authorities pursuant to the procedures established for prisoner mail [Silverbrand v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 106, 110, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 595, 205 P.3d 1047 ; see In re Jordan (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 116, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878, 840 P.2d 983]. The prison-delivery rule also applies to a self-represented prisoner's filing of a notice of appeal in a civil case [Silverbrand v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 106, 113-129, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 595, 205 P.3d 1047].

In federal actions, the mailbox rule, under which a prisoner's notice of appeal is deemed to be filed at the time the prisoner delivered it to the prison authorities for forwarding to the court clerk, applies to a pro se prisoner's § 1983 complaint [Douglas v. Noelle (9th Cir. 2009) 567 F.3d 1103, 1106-1109 ; see Houston v. Lack (1988) 487 U.S. 266, 108 S. Ct. 2379, 101 L. Ed. 2d 245 (mailbox rule applied to prisoner's habeas corpus petition)].

[2] Access to Counsel or Other Assistance

The right of access to counsel is an essential component of the right of access to the courts [Bounds v. Smith (1977) 430 U.S. 817, 822-823, 828, 97 S. Ct. 1491, 52 L. Ed. 2d 72 (prisoners must be provided assistance from persons trained in the law or access to adequate law libraries); see Ching v. Lewis (9th Cir. 1990) 895 F.2d 608, 610 (arbitrary denial of contact visits with attorney violates prisoner's right of meaningful access to courts); In re Grimes (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1175, 1182-1183, 256 Cal. Rptr. 690 (installation of collect-call only telephones unconstitutionally deprived county jail inmates of access to public defenders)].

If a prisoner is a defendant in a civil case and is indigent, due process may in some circumstances require that counsel be appointed [Payne v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 908, 924-925, 132 Cal. Rptr. 405, 553 P.2d 565]. However, conscription of unwilling and uncompensated counsel violates equal protection of the law, so that if pro bono counsel is not available to represent an indigent inmate and if the inmate's appearance in court is not feasible, the court must fashion another remedy [Hoversten v. Superior Court of San Luis Obispo (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 636, 643, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 ; Cunningham v. Superior Court (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 336, 356-357, 222 Cal. Rptr. 854 ; see People v. Ortiz (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 975, 985-986, 275 Cal. Rptr. 191, 800 P.2d 547].

A prisoner has a right to counsel if he or she appeals a criminal conviction that resulted in the prisoner's incarceration [Douglas v. State of California (1963) 372 U.S. 353, 356-357, 83 S. Ct. 814, 9 L. Ed. 2d 811 ; In re Banks (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 337, 343, 93 Cal. Rptr. 591, 482 P.2d 215].

A prisoner does not have a right to retained or appointed counsel in prison disciplinary proceedings [Baxter v. Palmigiano (1976) 425 U.S. 308, 315, 96 S. Ct. 1551, 47 L. Ed. 2d 810].

Prison officials may not unreasonably interfere with legal assistance between prisoners [Wolff v. McDonnell (1974) 418 U.S. 539, 579-580, 94 S. Ct. 2963, 41 L. Ed. 2d 935 ; Johnson v. Avery (1969) 393 U.S. 483, 487-490, 89 S. Ct. 747, 21 L. Ed. 2d 718 ; Brown v. Pitchess (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 518, 524-526, 119 Cal. Rptr. 204, 531 P.2d 772]. However, prison authorities can implement reasonable restrictions on visits between an inmate and an attorney if necessary for prison security [Small v. Superior Court (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1000, 1010, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550].

There is no Sixth Amendment right to law library access when a propria persona criminal defendant is assisted by advisory counsel [People v. Ringo (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 870, 876-877, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 444]. When a criminal defendant has a lawyer acting as advisory counsel, his or her rights of access to courts are adequately protected [People v. Ringo (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 870, 876, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 444].

[3] Access to Law Libraries, Legal Services, and Legal Materials

Prisons must provide prisoners with adequate law libraries or adequate assistance from persons trained in the law [Bounds v. Smith (1977) 430 U.S. 817, 822-825, 97 S. Ct. 1491, 52 L. Ed. 2d 72]. This is not an independent right of prisoners, however; the question is whether the prisoner's right of access to the courts is infringed by any inadequacy of the library or legal assistance [see Lewis v. Casey (1996) 518 U.S. 343, 349-355, 116 S. Ct. 2174, 135 L. Ed. 2d 606].

In addition, prisons must not infringe on prisoners' right of access to the courts by denying items necessary to prepare legal documents [Bounds v. Smith (1977) 430 U.S. 817, 822-825, 97 S. Ct. 1491, 52 L. Ed. 2d 72 (transcripts, paper, pens, notarial services, stamps); Allen v. Sakai (9th Cir. 1994) 48 F.3d 1082, 1089-1090 , cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1065 (1995) (photocopies, ink pens); see Taylor v. List (9th Cir. 1989) 880 F.2d 1040, 1047 (right of self-representation under U.S. Const., amend. VI, includes right of access to law books, witnesses, and other tools necessary to prepare defense)]. This does not guarantee a particular methodology of access, but rather confers the capability of bringing contemplated challenges to sentences or conditions of confinement before the courts [Lewis v. Casey (1996) 518 U.S. 343, 356, 116 S. Ct. 2174, 135 L. Ed. 2d 606] . Prisons must provide the tools the inmates need to attack their sentences, directly or collaterally, and to challenge the conditions of their confinement; impairment of any other litigating capacity is an incidental and constitutional consequence of conviction and incarceration [Lewis v. Casey (1996) 518 U.S. 343, 355, 116 S. Ct. 2174, 135 L. Ed. 2d 606 ; see Lindquist v. Idaho State Board of Corrections (9th Cir. 1985) 776 F.2d 851, 856 (prison library need not contain Pacific Reporter 2d, Shepard's Citations, and other reference books)]. The resources must meet minimum constitutional standards sufficient to provide meaningful, though perhaps not ideal, access to the courts [Lindquist v. Idaho State Board of Corrections (9th Cir. 1985) 776 F.2d 851, 856 (inmates had no right to typewriter to prepare legal documents, where court rules permitted pro se litigants to hand-write their pleadings); compare Allen v. Sakai (9th Cir. 1994) 40 F.3d 1001, 1006 (outright denial of pen to complete notice of appeal deprived inmate of access to courts, where court rules required all handwritten entries on papers to be in black ink without exception)].

The inmate must also show causation, i.e., that official acts or omissions hindered efforts to pursue a non-frivolous legal claim [Lewis v. Casey (1996) 518 U.S. 343, 351, 116 S. Ct. 2174, 135 L. Ed. 2d 606] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsCriminal ProcessAssistance of CounselCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsAccess to Courts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.14

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.14 Protection Against Cruel and Unusual Punishment

[1] Constitutional Restrictions on Punishment

[a] Unnecessary and Wanton Infliction of Pain Standard

Both the federal and state constitutions protect prisoners from cruel and unusual punishment [U.S. Const., amend. VIII; Cal. Const., art. I, § 17]. However, the California Constitution does not provide a private right of action for violation of its cruel and unusual punishment clause [Giraldo v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 231, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371].

A prisoner making a claim of cruel and unusual punishment must allege and prove unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain. This requirement imposes a subjective element on a prisoner's cruel and unusual punishment claim. For example, in a case involving the failure to provide care for a prisoner's serious illness or injury, a "deliberate indifference" standard applies [Estelle v. Gamble (1976) 429 U.S. 97, 104, 97 S. Ct. 285, 50 L. Ed. 2d 251].

Excessive force directed at one prisoner can also establish a cause of action for harm befalling other prisoners [Clement v. Gomez (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 898, 903 n.3 ; see Robins v. Meecham (9th Cir. 1995) 60 F.3d 1436, 1441-1442].

If the security and safety of a prison and its staff in the face of a prison disturbance is involved, a deliberate indifference standard does not adequately account for the competing obligations of the prison administrators, or the hesitancy of courts to apply criticism of the administrators' difficult decisions in hindsight. Therefore, in cases involving security measures in emergency situations, the test is whether force was applied in a good faith effort to maintain or restore discipline, or, on the other hand, with such wantonness as to be tantamount to a knowing willingness to inflict unjustified harm [Whitley v. Albers (1986) 475 U.S. 312, 318-321, 106 S. Ct. 1078, 89 L. Ed. 2d 251 ; Clement v. Gomez (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 898, 903 ; see Wilson v. Seiter (1991) 501 U.S. 294, 297-303, 111 S. Ct. 2321, 115 L. Ed. 2d 271]. This standard necessarily involves a more culpable mental state than that required for excessive force claims arising under the Fourth Amendment's unreasonable seizures restriction. Under the Eighth Amendment, courts look for malicious and sadistic force, not merely objectively unreasonable force [Clement v. Gomez (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 898, 903].

The Whitley standard has been extended to all allegations of excessive force, not merely those resulting from security measures taken in emergency situations [Hudson v. McMillian (1992) 503 U.S. 1, 6-7, 112 S. Ct. 995, 117 L. Ed. 2d 156].

The extent of injury suffered by an inmate is only one factor in determining whether the force used was wanton and unnecessary. Additional factors include all of the following [Hudson v. McMillian (1992) 503 U.S. 1, 7, 112 S. Ct. 995, 117 L. Ed. 2d 156 (prisoner able to maintain claim based on excessive force not resulting in serious injury)]:

- The need for application of force;
- The relationship between that need and the amount of force used;
- The threat reasonably perceived by responsible officials; and
- Any efforts made to temper the severity of a forceful response.

Judges and juries must defer to prison officials' expert judgments [Bell v. Wolfish (1979) 441 U.S. 520, 547, 99 S. Ct. 1861, 60 L. Ed. 2d 447 ; Norwood v. Vance (9th Cir. 2009) 572 F.3d 626, 629-630]. Deference requires that neither judge nor jury freely substitute their judgment for that of officials who have made a considered choice [Whitley v. Albers (1985) 475 U.S. 312, 322, 106 S. Ct. 1078, 89 L. Ed. 2d 251 ; Norwood v. Vance (9th Cir. 2009) 572 F.3d 626, 630]. Additional jury instruction regarding deference is required in cases involving security measures in emergency situations and applying the Whitley test to allegedly excessive force by prison officials [Norwood v. Vance (9th Cir. 2009) 572 F.3d 626, 630].

Under certain circumstances, dangerous prison working conditions can give rise to an Eighth Amendment claim, notwithstanding the fact that the prisoner initially obtained the specific employment assignment through a voluntary application process within the prison system. Once a prisoner is employed and not in a position to direct his or her own labor, the prisoner's supervisors are not free to visit cruel and unusual punishments on the prisoner [Morgan v. Morgensen (9th Cir. 2006) 465 F.3d 1041, 1045-1047] .

For related jury instructions on violation of a prisoner's federal civil rights under the Eighth Amendment for an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 in state court, see Judicial Council Of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 3010, 3011 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions.

PRACTICE TIP:

Qualified Immunity Defense. The defense of qualified immunity should be carefully examined before pursuing an Eighth Amendment claim [see Jeffers v. Gomez (9th Cir. 2001) 240 F.3d 845 ; see also Ch. 113, § 113.14[11][b]]. Notably, courts have been reluctant to apply qualified immunity to cases involving allegations of intentional discrimination based onrace or gender, and many prisons are hotbeds of racism and sexism. By John H. Scott

[b] Liability of Prison Officials for Injuries Suffered at Hands of Other Prisoners

With regard to injuries suffered by a prisoner at the hands of other prisoners, prison officials may be held liable only if two requirements are met. First, the deprivation must be, objectively, sufficiently serious; a prison official's act or omission must result in denial of the minimal civilized measure of life's necessities. In the case of a claim based on a failure to prevent harm, to satisfy this first requirement, the inmate must show that he or she was incarcerated under conditions posing a significant risk of serious harm. The second requirement is that the prison official was deliberately indifferent to inmate health or safety [Farmer v. Brennan (1994) 511 U.S. 825, 834, 114 S. Ct. 1970, 128 L. Ed. 2d 811 ; Hearns v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2005) 413 F.3d 1036, 1040]. To establish this state of mind, the plaintiff must show that the official knew of and disregarded an excessive risk to inmate health or safety; the official must have been aware of facts that could give rise to an inference that a substantial risk of harm existed, and the official must have drawn that inference [Farmer v. Brennan (1994) 511 U.S. 825, 837, 114 S. Ct. 1970, 128 L. Ed. 2d 811].

[c] Prison Overcrowding

Prison overcrowding, when rising to the level of wanton and unnecessary infliction of pain, or when grossly disproportionate to the severity of the crime warranting the imprisonment, may amount to cruel and unusual punishment [Rhodes v. Chapman (1981) 452 U.S. 337, 347, 101 S. Ct. 2392, 69 L. Ed. 2d 59 ; Balla v. Idaho State Bd. of Corrections (9th Cir. 1989) 869 F.2d 461, 470-473].

[2] State Statutory Restrictions on Punishment

California has specific statutory restrictions on the punishment of prisoners. For example, by statute, the person of a prisoner sentenced to imprisonment in the state prison is under the protection of the law, and any injury to the prisoner, not authorized by law, is punishable in the same manner as if the prisoner were not convicted or sentenced [Penal Code § 2650].

No punishment, except as authorized by the Director of Corrections, may be inflicted, and then only by order and under direction of a prison warden [Penal Code § 2651].

An officer found guilty of willful inhumanity or oppression toward a prisoner in his or her care or custody may be fined as much as $4,000, and may be removed from office [Penal Code § 147].

It is unlawful to use in the jails or prisons cruel, corporal, or unusual punishment or to inflict any treatment or allow any lack of care that would injure or impair the health of the prisoner, inmate, or person confined. Punishment by the use of a neck chain, strait jacket, gag, thumb-screw, shower-bath, or the tricing up of prisoners, inmates, or persons confined is prohibited [Penal Code §§ 673 (jails), 2652 (prisons), 2652.5 (neck chains)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsCriminal ProcessCruel & Unusual PunishmentCivil Rights LawSection 1983 ActionsLaw Enforcement OfficialsPrison OfficialsCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsConfinement Conditions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.14A

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.14A Protection Against Use of Excessive Force on Jail Detainee

The Fourth Amendment sets the applicable constitutional limitations for considering claims of excessive force during pretrial detention [Lolli v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2003) 351 F.3d 410, 415 ; Gibson v. County of Washoe (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 1175, 1185-1186]. The court evaluates a pretrial detainee's claim of excessive force under the Fourth Amendment's objective reasonableness standard [Lolli v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2003) 351 F.3d 410, 415]. The "reasonableness" inquiry in an excessive force case is objective: whether the officers' actions are "objectively reasonable" in light of the facts and circumstances confronting them, without regard to their underlying intent or motivation. In considering an excessive force claim, the court balances the nature and quality of the intrusion on the individual's Fourth Amendment interests against the countervailing governmental interests at stake [Graham v. Connor (1989) 490 U.S. 386, 396-397, 109 S. Ct. 1865, 104 L. Ed. 2d 443]. Because the balancing nearly always requires a jury to sift through disputed factual contentions and to draw inferences from them, summary judgment or judgment as a matter of law in excessive force cases should be granted sparingly [Lolli v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2003) 351 F.3d 410, 415-416].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Criminal Law & ProcedureSentencingCruel & Unusual PunishmentCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsSafety

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.14B

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.14B Searches of Jail Detainees

A blanket jail policy requiring strip searches of all arrestees classified for custodial housing in the general population is facially reasonable under the Fourth Amendment, notwithstanding the lack of individualized reasonable suspicion as to the individuals searched, if, for example, the procedures governing the scope and the manner of the searches limits searches to visual inspection, expressly prohibits tactile strip searches, and requires officials to conduct the strip searches in a professional manner and in a place that affords privacy. Because arrestees' use of body cavities as method of smuggling drugs, weapons, and items used to escape custody is an immediate and troubling problem for jail administrators, the policy is reasonable and reasonably related to the legitimate penological interests of the jail in maintaining security for inmates and employees by preventing contraband smuggling [Bull v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2010) 595 F.3d 964, 970-982] .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.15

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.15 Medical Care

[1] Failure to Provide Adequate Care

The failure to provide adequate medical care may be a violation of the prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment when the prisoner has already been tried and sentenced [Estelle v. Gamble (1976) 429 U.S. 97, 104, 97 S. Ct. 285, 50 L. Ed. 2d 251], or a violation of the right to due process of law in the case of pretrial detainees [Frost v. Agnos (9th Cir. 1998) 152 F.3d 1124, 1128-1130].

To establish a constitutional violation, prisoners must satisfy both the objective and subjective components of a two-part test [Wilson v. Seiter (1991) 501 U.S. 294, 298-299, 111 S. Ct. 2321, 115 L. Ed. 2d 271 ; Hallett v. Morgan (9th Cir. 2002) 287 F.3d 1193, 1205]:

- They must prove that prison officials have deprived them of the minimal civilized measure of life's necessities; and
- They must demonstrate that prison officials acted with deliberate indifference.

A showing of mere negligent medical treatment is not sufficient. To show an Eighth Amendment violation, the prisoner must show that there was deliberate indifference to the prisoner's serious medical needs [Estelle v. Gamble (1976) 429 U.S. 97, 104, 97 S. Ct. 285, 50 L. Ed. 2d 251 ; Hallett v. Morgan (9th Cir. 2002) 287 F.3d 1193, 1205 (mere medical malpractice does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment); Wakefield v. Thompson (9th Cir. 1999) 177 F.3d 1160, 1164-1165 ; Ortiz v. City of Imperial (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 1312, 1314]. Prison officials are deliberately indifferent to a prisoner's serious medical needs when they deny, delay, or intentionally interfere with medical treatment [Hallett v. Morgan (9th Cir. 2002) 287 F.3d 1193, 1205 ; Hamilton v. Endell (9th Cir. 1992) 981 F.2d 1062, 1066]. The officials' conduct must constitute unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain before it violates the Eighth Amendment [Estelle v. Gamble (1976) 429 U.S. 97, 104, 97 S. Ct. 285, 50 L. Ed. 2d 251 ; Hallett v. Morgan (9th Cir. 2002) 287 F.3d 1193, 1205].

If a person should have been aware of the risk, but was not, the person has not violated the Eighth Amendment, no matter how severe the risk [Gibson v. Washoe County (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 1175, 1187 ; Jeffers v. Gomez (9th Cir. 2001) 267 F.3d 895, 914]. However, if a person is aware of a substantial risk of serious harm, a person may be liable for neglecting a prisoner's serious medical needs on the basis of either action or inaction [Farmer v. Brennan (1994) 511 U.S. 825, 842, 114 S. Ct. 1970, 128 L. Ed. 2d 811 ; Gibson v. Washoe County (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 1175, 1187].

The prisoner need not prove a complete failure to treat, because access to medical care is meaningless unless the medical staff can render competent care [Ortiz v. City of Imperial (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 1312, 1314 ; Cabrales v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1988) 864 F.2d 1454, 1461 ; see Gibson v. County of Washoe (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 1175, 1187 (to comply with duty not to engage in acts evidencing deliberate indifference to inmates' medical and psychiatric needs, prisons and jails must provide medical staff competent to deal with prisoners' problems)].

The duty to provide medical care encompasses psychiatric needs [Gibson v. County of Washoe (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 1175, 1187 ; Cabrales v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1988) 864 F.2d 1454, 1461 , vac'd, 490 U.S. 1087 (1989) , opinion reinstated, 886 F.2d 235 (9th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1091 (1990)].

A city's failure to train its law enforcement officers or to implement policies on suicide prevention and reporting, and officers' subsequent failure to report an arrestee's suicidal ideation and actions, may result in liability for the city and the officers if their actions amount to a deliberate indifference to the serious medical need of an arrestee [see Conn v. City of Reno (9th Cir. 2009) 572 F.3d 1047, 1054-1065].

For a related jury instruction on violation of a prisoner's federal civil rights related to medical care for an action in state court, see Judicial Council Of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 3012 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions.

California statutory law requires that if a physician employed by the prison system certifies that a particular medical treatment is necessary to prevent serious and imminent harm to a prisoner's health, the order for that treatment may only be modified under strictly prescribed circumstances [Penal Code § 2653].

[2] Prisoner's Right to Refuse

[a] Constitutional Right

Under the federal Constitution, an individual has a significant constitutionally protected liberty interest in avoiding the unwanted administration of antipsychotic drugs [Riggins v. Nevada (1992) 504 U.S. 127, 134, 135, 112 S. Ct. 1810, 118 L. Ed. 2d 479], but the federal due process clause permits the state to treat a prison inmate with a serious mental illness with antipsychotic drugs against his will, if the inmate is dangerous to himself or herself or others and the treatment is in the inmate's medical interest [Washington v. Harper (1990) 494 U.S. 210, 221, 227, 110 S. Ct. 1028,

108 L. Ed. 2d 178]. The Constitution permits the Government involuntarily to administer antipsychotic drugs to a mentally ill defendant facing serious criminal charges to render that defendant competent to stand trial, only if the treatment is medically appropriate, is substantially unlikely to have side effects that may undermine the fairness of the trial, and, taking account of less intrusive alternatives, is necessary significantly to further important governmental trial-related interests [Sell v. United States (2003) 539 U.S. 166, 123 S. Ct. 2174, 2183-2185, 156 L. Ed. 2d 197 ; see also In re Qawi (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1, 15-16, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780, 81 P.3d 224 ; Riggins v. Nevada (1992) 504 U.S. 127, 134, 135, 112 S. Ct. 1810, 118 L. Ed. 2d 479 ; Washington v. Harper (1990) 494 U.S. 210, 221, 227, 110 S. Ct. 1028, 108 L. Ed. 2d 178]. To order involuntary medication to render a defendant competent to stand trial, the court must find the following [Sell v. United States (2003) 539 U.S. 166, 123 S. Ct. 2174, 2185, 156 L. Ed. 2d 197]:

- Important governmental interests are at stake.
- Involuntary medication will significantly further those concomitant state interests.
- Involuntary medication is necessary to further those interests.
- Administration of the drugs is medically appropriate, i.e., in the patient's best medical interest in light of his or her medical condition.

Under the California constitution, prison officials may not force a prisoner to undergo medical treatment involuntarily if the prisoner is competent to refuse treatment, unless treatment is required by prison security or a similar countervailing state interest [In re Qawi (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1, 21-23, 7C ; People v. Kirkland (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 891, 907-908, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 863].

A medication condition of probation or parole may not be equivalent to "forcible administration," but the underlying threat of incarceration renders a medication condition of supervised release sufficiently coercive to implicate the defendant's protected liberty interest under the Fourteenth Amendment [United States v. Williams (9th Cir. 2004) 356 F.3d 1045, 1053-1055 & n.10]. Increased procedural protections are warranted under the federal supervised release statute to protect that liberty interest [United States v. Williams (9th Cir. 2004) 356 F.3d 1045, 1055-1056]. Under the federal statutes, a condition of supervised release ordinarily must be "reasonably related" to one or more of the statutory factors deemed to advance the goals of supervised release [see 18 U.S.C. § 3583(d)(1)]. In light of the significant liberty interest at stake in the context of coerced psychotropic medication, there is a stronger nexus between the need for medication and the goals of supervised release, requiring that the medication condition be "necessary" for the achievement of those goals, not simply "reasonably related" to them [United States v. Williams (9th Cir. 2004) 356 F.3d 1045, 1052-1053, 1057]. While imposition of most terms of supervised release do not require the court to articulate reasons on the record, requiring a defendant to take antipsychotic medications as a condition of supervised release requires an express finding that the condition involves no greater deprivation of liberty than is reasonably necessary for the purposes underlying the supervised release statute [United States v. Williams (9th Cir. 2004) 356 F.3d 1045, 1053, 1056]. The sentencing court must develop a "medically informed" record before imposing a medication requirement [United States v. Williams (9th Cir. 2004) 356 F.3d 1045, 1056-1057]. This applies to antipsychotic medications; the same procedural requirements may not apply to milder forms of psychotropic drugs, such as antidepressants and anxiolytics [In re Luis F. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 176, 186-187, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 174].

A medical condition of probation or parole may also violate a defendant's First Amendment rights as vague and overbroad [see In re Luis F. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 176, 184, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 174 (if medication requirement of probation that minor continue to take all medications prescribed by his doctor were intended to be literally interpreted to subject him to future incarceration for failing to treat his toenail fungus as prescribed by doctor, it would be impermissibly overbroad, unreasonable, and arbitrary, but there was no indication he was taking prescribed medication to treat toenail fungus and no reason to believe order requiring him to "continue" taking prescribed medications would have such broad impact)].

[b] Mentally Disordered Offenders

A prisoner, even one committed under the Mentally Disordered Offender Act (MDO Act) [Pen. Code § 2960 et seq.], has the right to refuse antipsychotic medication unless the prisoner has been adjudicated incapable of refusing the treatment in a hearing held for that purpose [Pen. Code § 2972(g); Welf. & Inst. Code § 5325.2; In re Qawi (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1, 23-28, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780, 81 P.3d 224 ; see Keyhea v. Rushen (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 526, 223 Cal. Rptr. 746 (state violated Pen. Code § 2600 by subjecting prisoners to long-term involuntary medication without judicial determination of competency, assistance of counsel, right to personal appearance, and adherence to procedural requirements delineated in Lanterman-Petris-Short Act)]. Mentally disordered offenders who exercise their rights under the MDO Act to refuse treatment with medication remain subject to commitment and treatment proceedings under Pen. Code §§ 2970 and 2972, even if they are imprisoned after refusing to accept treatment as a condition of parole or after violating parole [People v. Kirkland (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 891, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 863]. However, a person committed to a state mental hospital for treatment following a judicial hearing in which the person is found not guilty by reason of insanity under Pen. Code § 1026 is not entitled to a hearing to determine the person's competency to refuse treatment with antipsychotic medication because a person committed under § 1026 is presumed to be insane and incompetent [In re Locks (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 890, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 495].

A mentally disordered offender who is civilly committed after completing parole can be compelled to take antipsychotic medication in a nonemergency situation only if a court, at the time the offender is committed or recommitted or in a separate proceeding, makes one of two findings: (1) the offender is incompetent or incapable of making decisions about his or her medical treatment; or (2) the offender is dangerous within the meaning of Welf. & Inst. Code § 5300. However, the rights of these offenders to refuse medication can be further limited by State Department of Mental Health regulations necessary to provide security for inpatient facilities [In re Qawi (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1, 9-10, 14-28, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780, 81 P.3d 224].

The right to refuse necessary medical treatment, including antipsychotic drugs, is a liberty interest protected by the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution [Sell v. United States (2003) 539 U.S. 166, 177, 123 S. Ct. 2174, 156 L. Ed. 2d 197]. Although an MDO proceeding is civil, rather than criminal, in nature [People v. Fisher (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1013, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609 ; People v. Robinson (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 348, 350, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52], and it does not implicate all of the constitutional and procedural safeguards afforded to criminal defendants [People v. Fisher (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1013, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609 ; People v. Beeson (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1393, 1407, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 384], due process nevertheless guarantees the right to be present during the presentation of evidence regarding the forcible administration of medication absent personal waiver or demonstrated inability to attend [People v. Fisher (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1013, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609 ; see also In re Qawi (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1, 15, n.4, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780, 81 P.3d 224 ; In re Watson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 455, 461-462, 154 Cal. Rptr. 151 (proceeding to involuntarily commit person with dangerous developmental disability under former Welf. & Inst. Code § 6500.1)]. An attorney's authority to control procedural matters in a civil case does not authorize relinquishment of substantial rights, such as the right to be present, without the client's consent. Thus, for example, the constitutional right to a fair hearing regarding forcible medication of an MDO was violated because he did not personally waive his right to be present and was not unable to attend the hearing [People v. Fisher (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1013-1015, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609].

There is no federal or state constitutional right to jury trial on the question of involuntary psychotropic medication during MDO or LPS commitment [People v. Fisher (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1015, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609 ; see Washington v. Harper (1990) 494 U.S. 210, 110 S. Ct. 1028, 108 L. Ed. 2d 178 (decision by independent medical board to authorize involuntary administration of psychotropic medication satisfied federal substantive and procedural due process guarantees); In re Qawi (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1, 27, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780, 81 P.3d 224 (decision to administer antipsychotic medication may be made by court)]. There is also no California statutory right to a jury [People v. Fisher (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1015-1016, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609].

In the case of the MDO, a forcible medication order must be supported by substantial evidence that either the MDO is incompetent to refuse medical treatment or the MDO is a danger to others within the meaning of Welf. & Inst. Code § 5300 [People v. Fisher (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1016, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609 ; see also In re Qawi (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1, 27, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780, 81 P.3d 224]. Welf. & Inst. Code § 5300 requires a particularized showing that the person is a demonstrated danger and that he or she was recently dangerous [People v. Fisher (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1016, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609 ; see also In re Qawi (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1, 27, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780, 81 P.3d 224]. In the case of an MDO, the commitment offense may establish demonstrated dangerousness, and recent dangerousness consists of violent or threatening acts specified in Welf. & Inst. Code § 5300 within the year prior to the commitment or recommitment [People v. Fisher (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1016, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609 ; see also In re Qawi (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1, 28 n.7, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780, 81 P.3d 224].

[c] Sexually Violent Predators

Persons adjudicated sexually violent predators (SVPs) under the Sexually Violent Predator Act [Welf. & Inst. Code § 6600 et seq.] have the same right to refuse antipsychotic drugs as mentally disordered offenders under the Mentally Disordered Offender Act [see [b], above]. Thus, an SVP can be compelled to take antipsychotic medication in a nonemergency situation only if a court, at the time the SVP is committed or recommitted, or in a separate proceeding, makes one of two findings [In re Calhoun (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1315, 1333-1347, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 315]:

- That the SVP is incompetent or incapable of making decisions about medical treatment; or
- That the SVP is dangerous within the meaning of Welf. & Inst. Code § 5300.

The rights of SVPs to refuse medication can be further limited by State Department of Mental Health regulations necessary to provide security for inpatient facilities [In re Calhoun (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1315, 1322, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 315]. Further, SVPs do not have a common law right to refuse antipsychotic medication [In re Calhoun (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1315, 1347, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 315]. The federal Due Process Clause permits the involuntary medication of a competent SVP with antipsychotic drugs in the absence of an emergency, provided that the treatment is in the SVP's medical interest [In re Calhoun (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1315, 1348-1349, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 315]. Involuntary medication with antipsychotic drugs does not violate an SVP's California constitutional right to privacy [In re Calhoun (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1315, 1350, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 315 ; see Cal. Const., art. I, § 1].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsCriminal ProcessCruel & Unusual PunishmentCivil Rights LawSection 1983 ActionsLaw Enforcement OfficialsPrison OfficialsCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsMedical TreatmentHealthcare LawTreatmentFailures & Refusals to TreatPrisonersHealthcare LawActions Against Healthcare WorkersPrison Officials & Physicians

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 114.16

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

114.16 Exercise

A claim that a prisoner's Eighth Amendment right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment has been violated by denial of adequate exercise is subject to a two part test [Allen v. Sakai (9th Cir. 1994) 48 F.3d 1082, 1087 , cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1065 (1995) ; see Spain v. Procunier (9th Cir. 1979) 600 F.2d 189, 199-200]:

- An objective requirement, in which the prisoner must show that the conduct of the prison officials failed to meet the minimal civilized measure of life's necessities; and

- A subjective component, in which the prisoner must show deliberate indifference on the part of prison officials.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawPrisoner RightsConfinement Conditions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.17

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.17 Equal Protection

[1] Prison Sentence Does Not Deprive Person of Equal Protection of Law

A prison sentence does not deprive a person of equal protection of the law [U.S. Const., amend. XIV; Serrano v. Francis (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1071, 1081 ; see Wolff v. McDonnell (1974) 418 U.S. 539, 566, 94 S. Ct. 2963, 41 L. Ed. 2d 935 (prisoners are protected under Equal Protection Clause from invidious discrimination based on race)]. In addition, sound correctional administration requires that all inmates be treated equally [see Saxbe v. Washington Post (1974) 417 U.S. 843, 849, 94 S. Ct. 2811, 41 L. Ed. 2d 514].

[2] Racial Segregation or Discrimination Is Prohibited

Racial segregation or discrimination is forbidden in prisons and violates the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment [see Lee v. Washington (1968) 390 U.S. 333, 333-334, 88 S. Ct. 994, 19 L. Ed. 2d 1212 ; see also Johnson v. California (2005) 543 U.S. 499, 125 S. Ct. 1141, 1146-1152, 160 L. Ed. 2d 949 (strict scrutiny is proper standard of review for unwritten policy of racially segregating prisoners in double cells in reception centers each time they enter new correctional facility)]. For example, censorship of reading materials for racial content or opinion violated the equal protection clause [see Jackson v. Godwin (5th Cir. 1968) 400 F.2d 529, 535]. In addition, allegations that prison officials disbanded a prison boxing program for racially discriminatory reasons were held to state a cause of action [Moore v. Clarke (8th Cir. 1987) 821 F.2d 518, 519].

However, prison officials may consider racial tensions in maintaining security, discipline, and order, so long as they act in good faith and in particularized circumstances [Lee v. Washington (1968) 390 U.S. 333, 334, 88 S. Ct. 994, 19 L. Ed. 2d 1212 ; Sockwell v. Phelps (5th Cir. 1994) 20 F.3d 187, 191].

Thus, the state's use of race as a dominant factor in making housing assignments during an initial 60-day detention period to determine appropriate permanent housing for prison inmates does not constitute an impermissible racial classification that runs afoul of the Equal Protection Clause because the temporary housing policy is reasonably related to prison administrators' concern for increased racial violence [Johnson v. California (9th Cir. 2003) 321 F.3d 791, 796-807].

PRACTICE TIP:

Living in Prison. Prison officials are not entitled to qualified immunity for running "integrated yards" [see Robinson v. Prunty (9th Cir. 2001) 249 F.3d 862, 866-867 ; see also Ch. 113, § 113.14[11][b]]. Prison gangs are a reality in prison--as are sex, drugs, and violence. Generally speaking, prison gangs are organized along racial lines. Accordingly, violence often occurs when rival gangs, different racial groups, and/or enemies are required to share the same space at the same time. Violence in prisons is foreseeable and often preventable. The equal protection clause may be a better and more appropriate theory to rely on in cases where it appears that blacks or other racial minority groups are being singled out for punishment. Often that "punishment" will be delivered from rival gangs or racial groups as staff intentionally or indifferently participate as catalysts or observers. Attorneys should determine the racial makeup of the prison population and compare it to the racial makeup of prison staff. By John H. Scott

[3] Gender Discrimination May Constitute Equal Protection Violation

Gender discrimination in prisons can also be an equal protection violation. Courts have held that the conditions in men's and women's prison facilities must be comparable, if the men and women are similarly situated [see Pargo v. Elliott (S.D. Iowa 1995) 894 F. Supp. 1243, 1252-1265 , aff'd, 69 F.3d 280 (8th Cir. 1996) , cert. denied, 519 U.S. 831 ; Canterino v. Wilson (W.D. Ky. 1982) 546 F. Supp. 174, 206]. But the conditions need not be identical in men's and women's facilities; the needs and priorities might legitimately differ in the two facilities [see Klinger v. Dep't of Corrections (8th Cir. 1994) 31 F.3d 727, 732 , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1185 (1995)].

Differences in privileges or treatment of inmates resulting from classification based on gender are suspect under the state constitution as well [Inmates of Sybil Brand Inst. for Women v. Los Angeles County (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 89, 99-103, 181 Cal. Rptr. 599].

Furthermore, under California statutory law, all California prisons must provide facilities and programs to female prisoners equal to those provided to male prisoners, unless funding for those programs would deprive the female prisoners of other, preferred facilities or programs [Penal Code § 4029].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawEqual ProtectionGender & SexCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsDiscriminationCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsSegregation

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.18

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.18 Due Process of Law

[1] Prisoner Has More Restricted Right to Due Process

A prisoner is guaranteed due process of law; certain rights and privileges can be restricted or denied only after procedural due process has been satisfied [see U.S. Const., amend. XIV; Burnsworth v. Gunderson (9th Cir. 1999) 179 F.3d 771, 774].

However, although the due process clause protects every person from being deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, a prisoner has a more limited sphere of liberty and property rights than an unimprisoned individual [see Burnsworth v. Gunderson (9th Cir. 1999) 179 F.3d 771, 774 , quoting Ohio Adult Parole Auth. v. Woodard, 523 U.S. 272, 288, 118 S. Ct. 1244, 140 L. Ed. 2d 387 (1998) (O'Connor, J., concurring) ("once society has validly convicted an individual of a crime and therefore established its right to punish, the demands of due process are reduced accordingly")]. Therefore, a prisoner has a more restricted right to due process of law [see Wolff v. McDonnell (1974) 418 U.S. 539, 555-556, 94 S. Ct. 2963, 41 L. Ed. 2d 935 (prisoners possess right to limited procedural due process before prison discipline is imposed); see also [3], below].

[2] Specific Situations in Which Prisoner Is Entitled to Some Due Process

Although the specific due process rights (for example, right to written notice, right to a hearing, or confrontation and cross examination of witnesses) may vary depending on the situation, a prisoner is entitled to some due process of law in the following situations:

- Before a parole revocation [Morrissey v. Brewer (1972) 408 U.S. 471, 482, 92 S. Ct. 2593, 33 L. Ed. 2d 484].

- Before a probation revocation [Gagnon v. Scarpelli (1973) 411 U.S. 778, 782, 93 S. Ct. 1756, 36 L. Ed. 2d 656].

- Before imposition of certain types of discipline in the prison, at least when the discipline imposed would present a dramatic departure from the basic conditions of the prisoner's sentence or would affect the duration of his or her sentence [Sandin v. Conner (1995) 515 U.S. 472, 487, 115 S. Ct. 2293, 132 L. Ed. 2d 418 (placing prisoner in solitary confinement for 30 days for misconduct did not trigger due process rights because it was not dramatic departure from terms of his indeterminate life sentence and would not inevitably affect duration of sentence); Superintendent v. Hill (1985) 472 U.S. 445, 455-457, 105 S. Ct. 2768, 86 L. Ed. 2d 356 (revocation of prisoner's good time credits); Ponte v. Real (1985) 471 U.S. 491, 497-499, 105 S. Ct. 2192, 85 L. Ed. 2d 553 (rights at disciplinary hearing); Wolff v. McDonnell (1974) 418 U.S. 539, 563-572, 94 S. Ct. 2963, 41 L. Ed. 2d 935 (right to counsel-substitute at disciplinary hearing); Burnsworth v. Gunderson (9th Cir. 1999) 179 F.3d 771, 774-775 (increased security classification based on escape conviction not supported by evidence); Bartholomew v. Watson (9th Cir. 1982) 665 F.2d 915, 915-918 (witnesses at disciplinary hearing)], or when the disciplinary action implicates a protected liberty interest in an "unexpected matter" or imposes an "atypical and significant hardship on the inmate in relation to the ordinary incidents of prison life" [Sandin v. Conner (1995) 515 U.S. 472, 484, 115 S. Ct. 2293, 132 L. Ed. 2d 418 ; Serrano v. Francis (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1071, 1078 ; see also Ramirez v. Galaza (9th Cir. 2003) 334 F.3d 850, 860 (if hardship is sufficiently significant, court must determine whether procedures used to deprive liberty satisfied due process)], for which the court, rather than invoking a single standard for determining whether the hardship is atypical and significant, relies on a condition or combination of conditions or factors that requires case-by-case, fact-by-fact consideration [Serrano v. Francis (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1071, 1078 ; Keenan v. Hall (9th Cir. 1996) 83 F.3d 1083, 1089]. Specifically, the court looks to (1) whether the challenged condition mirrored conditions imposed on inmates in administrative segregation and protective custody, and thus comported with the prison's discretionary authority; (2) the duration of the condition and the degree of restraint imposed; and (3) whether the state's action will invariably affect the duration of the prisoner's sentence [Sandin v. Conner (1995) 515 U.S. 472, 486-487, 115 S. Ct. 2293, 132 L. Ed. 2d 418 ; Serrano v. Francis(9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1071, 1078 ; Keenan v. Hall (9th Cir. 1996) 83 F.3d 1083, 1089].

- Before transfer from a state prison to a state mental hospital [see Vitek v. Jones (1980) 445 U.S. 480, 487-489, 493-497, 100 S. Ct. 1254, 63 L. Ed. 2d 552].

- Before denial of visitation rights [Taylor v. Armontrout (8th Cir. 1989) 894 F.2d 961, 963-965 ; Laaman v. Helgemoe (D.N.H. 1977) 437 F. Supp. 269, 322].

[3] When Due Process Protections Are Limited

Due process protections are generally very limited in the following situations:

- Before a transfer from one prison facility to another [see Penal Code §§ 2910, 5080; Olim v. Wakinekona (1983) 461 U.S. 238, 248, 103 S. Ct. 1741, 75 L. Ed. 2d 813 ; Meachum v. Fano (1976)

427 U.S. 215, 224-225, 96 S. Ct. 2532, 49 L. Ed. 2d 451 ; but see Vitek v. Jones (1980) 445 U.S. 480, 489, 100 S. Ct. 1254, 63 L. Ed. 2d 552 (transfer to mental hospital requires due process protections); see also Penal Code § 2911 (for transfer of prisoner from state to federal prison, prisoner must sign consent and may consult with attorney before signing)].

- Before denial of parole [Greenholtz v. Nebraska Penal Inmates (1979) 442 U.S. 1, 12-15, 99 S. Ct. 2100, 60 L. Ed. 2d 668 ; In re McLain (1960) 55 Cal. 2d 78, 85, 9 Cal. Rptr. 824, 357 P.2d 1080 (statutory provisions for granting, suspending, or revoking parole that lack requirement of notice or hearing do not violate due process)].

- Before placing a prisoner in solitary confinement or administrative segregation, if the disciplinary action would not present a dramatic departure from the basic conditions of the prisoner's sentence and would not necessarily affect the duration of his or her sentence [Sandin v. Conner (1995) 515 U.S. 472, 485-487, 115 S. Ct. 2293, 132 L. Ed. 2d 418 (solitary confinement); Mujahid v. Meyer (9th Cir. 1995) 59 F.3d 931, 932 (disciplinary segregation); but see Serrano v. Francis (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1071, 1078-1079 (inmate's disability coupled with administrative segregation in segregated housing unit not designed for disabled persons gave rise to protected liberty interest, because conditions imposed on inmate by virtue of his disability constituted atypical and significant hardship on him)].

In emergency situations, the prison administration may institute a "lockdown" and confine the entire prison population to their cells for all or most of the time, without providing a hearing before or during the lockdown [Hayward v. Procunier (9th Cir. 1980) 629 F.2d 599, 603 , cert. denied, 451 U.S. 937 (1981) (procedural due process not violated by five-month lockdown without hearing following series of killings)].

[4] Due Process and Family Law Matters

Any order concerning child custody and visitation must comport with due process [Hoversten v. Superior Court of San Luis Obispo (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 636, 641, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 ; McLaughlin v. Superior Court (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 473, 483, 189 Cal. Rptr. 479]. Fam. Code § 3100(a) requires the court to grant reasonable visitation rights to an incarcerated parent unless the visitation would be detrimental to the best interest of the child. Limiting parental contact between an inmate and his or her children to a few letters and telephone calls, even if the parent's criminal activity is egregious, should be used only as a last resort [Hoversten v. Superior Court of San Luis Obispo (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 636, 641, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 ; In re Brittany S. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1399, 1407, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50].

[5] Use of Long-Term Involuntary Medication

State officials may not subject prisoners to certain long-term involuntary medication without adhering to the procedural requirements contained in specified provisions of the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act (Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.) [see Keyhea v. Rushen (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 526, 530, 223 Cal. Rptr. 746 ; see also Department of Corrections v. Office of Admin. Hearings (Holmes) (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1100, 1102-1103, 1108-1109, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 473 (when substantive provision of Keyhea injunction conflicts with provision for involuntary commitments under Lanterman-Petris-Short Act, terms of injunction must prevail; permission for involuntary medication of mentally disordered prisoners based on danger to others may be renewed without showing of new threats since medication last approved)].

[6] Process Required in Disciplinary Proceedings

Due process requires procedural protections before a prison inmate can be deprived of a protected liberty interest in good time credits [Wolff v. McDonnell (1974) 418 U.S. 539, 556-557, 94 S. Ct. 2963, 41 L. Ed. 2d 935 ; In re Dikes

(2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 825, 830, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 9]. An inmate facing disciplinary proceedings should be allowed to call witnesses in the inmate's defense when permitting the inmate to do so would not be unduly hazardous to institutional safety or correctional goals [Wolff v. McDonnell (1973) 418 U.S. 539, 566, 94 S. Ct. 2963, 41 L. Ed. 2d 935]. Jail officials need not provide inmates an unfettered right to call witnesses; however, they must make the decision whether to allow witnesses on a case-by-case basis, examining the potential hazards that may result from calling a particular person [Mitchell v. Dupnik (9th Cir. 1997) 75 F.3d 517, 525]. A blanket denial of permission for an inmate to have witnesses physically present during disciplinary hearings is impermissible, even when jail authorities provide for interviewing witnesses outside the disciplinary procedure [Serrano v. Francis (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1071, 1079].

State regulations require that requested witnesses be called unless the official conducting the hearing denies the request because (1) the appearance would endanger the witness, (2) the official determines that the witness has no relevant additional information, or (3) the witness is unavailable [15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3315(e)(1)]. Regulations also require the hearing official to document the reasons for the refusal if the inmate's request for a witness is denied [15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3315(e)(2); see Serrano v. Francis (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1071, 1080 (hearing official's failure to document reasons for refusing to call inmate's witnesses was precisely reason inmate's disciplinary charge and punishment were later vacated and why inmate was removed from administrative segregation)].

However, although an inmate is afforded some due process in disciplinary proceedings, the standard courts apply in reviewing disciplinary proceedings is lower than that applied in reviewing criminal convictions. The requirements of due process in a prison disciplinary action are satisfied if "some evidence" supports the decision by the prison disciplinary board to revoke good time credits. In determining whether the evidentiary standard is satisfied, the relevant question is whether there is "any" evidence in the record that could support the conclusion reached by the disciplinary board. The determination does not require examination of the entire record, independent assessment of the credibility of witnesses, or weighing of the evidence. Provided the record is not so devoid of evidence that the findings of the disciplinary board were without support or otherwise arbitrary, due process does not require courts to set aside decisions of prison administrators [Superintendent v. Hill (1985) 472 U.S. 445, 454-456, 105 S. Ct. 2768, 86 L. Ed. 2d 356 ; In re Dikes (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 825, 830, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 9].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedurePostconviction ProceedingsParoleConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessScope of ProtectionCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsDisciplineCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsTransfersCriminal Law & ProcedureSentencingAlternativesProbationRevocationDue Process

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.19

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.19 Good Time Credits

[1] No Constitutional Right to Receive Good Time Credits

Prisoners do not have a constitutional right to receive good time credits [Sandin v. Conner (1995) 515 U.S. 472, 477-478, 115 S. Ct. 2293, 132 L. Ed. 2d 418 ; Wolff v. McDonnell (1974) 418 U.S. 539, 557, 94 S. Ct. 2963, 41 L. Ed. 2d 935]. However, once a prisoner has been awarded good time credits, the prisoner is entitled to minimal procedural safeguards under the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. XIV to insure that they are not arbitrarily revoked [Wolff v. McDonnell (1974) 418 U.S. 539, 558, 94 S. Ct. 2963, 41 L. Ed. 2d 935].

[2] Claim for Restoration of Credits Brought as Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus

A prisoner's claim for restoration of good time credits is not actionable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, but, instead, must be brought as a petition for writ of habeas corpus [Wolff v. McDonnell (1974) 418 U.S. 539, 554-555, 94 S. Ct. 2963, 41 L. Ed. 2d 935].

[3] Worktime Credits

Pen. Code § 2933(d), as amended in 1995 and relettered in 2009 [see former Pen. Code § 2933(c)], gives the Director of Corrections discretion to decline to restore worktime credits forfeited as a result of serious disciplinary infractions punishable by a credit loss of more than 90 days. Before the 1995 amendment, § 2933 required the Department under most circumstances to restore forfeited credits if the inmate completed a specified period of time free of disciplinary offenses. In response to the 1995 amendment, the Department of Corrections amended its regulations to provide that worktime credit could not be restored for serious disciplinary offenses punishable by a credit loss of more than 90 days, including specified offenses [15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3327(a)(1)].

However, application of former Pen. Code § 2933(c) and the regulations to preclude credit restoration for inmates whose acts of misconduct were committed before the statutory amendment and the promulgation of the regulations violated the ex post facto clauses of the federal and state constitutions [In re Lomax (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 639, 642-648, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220 , citing Weaver v. Graham (1981) 450 U.S. 24, 101 S. Ct. 960, 67 L. Ed. 2d 17 , and Lynce v. Mathis (1997) 519 U.S. 433, 117 S. Ct. 891, 137 L. Ed. 2d 63 ; see In re Winner (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1481, 1486-1488, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 333 (because inmate committed misconduct after amendment of Pen. Code § 2933, no retrospective effect and thus no ex post facto violation)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawPrisoner RightsConfinement ConditionsCriminal Law & ProcedurePostconviction ProceedingsImprisonment

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.20

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.20 First Amendment Rights

[1] Freedom of Expression

[a] Reasonable Relation Standard of Review

Prisoners retain First Amendment rights, though somewhat limited, despite their incarceration [Thornburgh v. Abbott (1989) 490 U.S. 401, 407, 109 S. Ct. 1874, 104 L. Ed. 2d 459 ; Turner v. Safley (1987) 482 U.S. 78, 84].

The reasonable relation standard of review generally applies to regulation of prisoners' First Amendment rights. A regulation limiting prisoners' freedom of expression will be upheld if it is reasonably related to legitimate penological interests [Thornburgh v. Abbott (1989) 490 U.S. 401, 407-414, 109 S. Ct. 1874, 104 L. Ed. 2d 459 ; Turner v. Safley (1987) 482 U.S. 78, 89-91 ; see Shaw v. Murphy (2001) 532 U.S. 223, 121 S. Ct. 1475, 149 L. Ed. 2d 420, 424]. The First Amendment requirement that a regulation be the "least restrictive alternative" is generally not applicable in the prison setting [Thornburgh v. Abbott (1989) 490 U.S. 401, 411, 109 S. Ct. 1874, 104 L. Ed. 2d 459].

For example, a prison regulation limiting prisoners' receipt of hardback books, unless mailed directly from publishers, book clubs, or bookstores, withstood a challenge based on the First Amendment, because it was a rational response to a clear security problem [Bell v. Wolfish (1979) 441 U.S. 520, 550, 99 S. Ct. 1861, 60 L. Ed. 2d 447]. Prison security concerns also justified a prohibition on correspondence between inmates in different institutions [Turner v. Safley (1987) 482 U.S. 78, 91-93]. In addition, prison officials' concerns about coordinated disruptive conduct by prisoners arising out of the conclusions they draw about their fellow prisoners' beliefs, sexual orientation, or gang affiliations based on the outside publications they read justified a regulation allowing officials to ban certain incoming publications [Thornburgh v. Abbott (1989) 490 U.S. 401, 403-417, 109 S. Ct. 1874, 104 L. Ed. 2d 459]. However, a policy of the state Department of Corrections prohibiting receipt by prisoners of standard rate mail, as applied to subscription nonprofit organization mail, impermissibly infringed on the First Amendment rights of both inmates and publishers since it was not rationally related to any legitimate penological interest [Prison Legal News v. Cook (9th Cir. 2001) 238 F.3d 1145, 1151-1152 ; see Morrison v. Hall (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 896, 901-905 (same regulation unconstitutional as applied to prepaid, for-profit, subscription publications)].

[b] Stricter Scrutiny Applies When Regulating Outgoing Communications

A more strict scrutiny is applicable in the case of regulating outgoing communications from prisoners to civilians. In cases of outgoing communications, there must be a closer fit between the regulation and the purpose it serves [Thornburgh v. Abbott (1989) 490 U.S. 401, 412, 109 S. Ct. 1874, 104 L. Ed. 2d 459 ; see Procunier v. Martinez (1974) 416 U.S. 396, 413, 94 S. Ct. 1800, 40 L. Ed. 2d 224 , overruled in part, Thornburgh v. Abbott (1989) 490 U.S. 401, 413-414, 109 S. Ct. 1874, 104 L. Ed. 2d 459].

[c] Reasonable Restrictions on Time, Place, and Manner of Speech

Prison authorities may place reasonable restrictions on the time, place, and manner of communications between prisoners and media representatives, but may not prohibit such contacts [Pell v. Procunier (1974) 417 U.S. 817, 823-824, 94 S. Ct. 2800, 41 L. Ed. 2d 495 ; Johnson v. Stephan (10th Cir. 1993) 6 F.3d 691, 692 ; Mujahid v. Sumner (D. Hawaii 1992) 807 F. Supp. 1505, 1508-1511 , aff'd, 996 F.2d 1226 (9th Cir. 1993)].

Operational realities and security interests permit prison authorities to forbid meetings of prisoners' unions and verbal or written solicitations to join those unions [Jones v. North Carolina Prisoners' Union (1977) 433 U.S. 119, 133-134, 97 S. Ct. 2532, 53 L. Ed. 2d 629].

[d] Regulations Limiting Prisoners' Choice of Clothing

Although prisoners' appearance and choice of personal clothing are aspects of liberty under U.S. Const., amends. I and XIV, and as such are entitled to protection against arbitrary state action, regulations limiting prisoners' choice of clothing are reasonable and not unduly burdensome when based on objectively reasonable security concerns, and are therefore constitutional [In re Alcala (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 345, 368-377, 271 Cal. Rptr. 674)].

Furthermore, prisoners have no statutory right in California to possess and wear personal civilian clothing in prison; a prison warden's deletions of specified types of personal clothing from the list of clothing approved for inmates does not violate prisoners' statutory rights [In re Alcala (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 345, 364-372, 271 Cal. Rptr. 674 ; see Penal Code § 2084 (prisoners must be provided with garments of substantial material and distinctive manufacture)].

[2] Freedom of Religion

[a] Constitutional Standards

Prison authorities may not deny prisoners a reasonable opportunity to exercise the religious freedom guaranteed by U.S. Const., amends. I and XIV [Cruz v. Beto (1972) 405 U.S. 319, 322, 92 S. Ct. 1079, 31 L. Ed. 2d 263 ; see In re Arias (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 667, 684-687, 230 Cal. Rptr. 505, 725 P.2d 664 (construing California statutory provision for religious freedom of persons in custody of youth authority, at Welf. & Inst. Code § 1705, in view of constitutional right of religious freedom established in Cruz)].

Under the First Amendment, prison regulations impinging on the rights of inmates to exercise their religion freely are valid if the regulations are reasonably related to legitimate penological interests [O'Lone v. Estate of Shabazz (1987) 482 U.S. 342, 348-350, 107 S. Ct. 2400, 96 L. Ed. 2d 282].

Under these standards, for example:

- Prison officials did not unconstitutionally infringe an inmate's First Amendment right to the free exercise of religion by requiring him to fill out a standard prison form to receive kosher food [Resnick v. Adams (9th Cir. 2003) 348 F.3d 763, 767-772];

- A prison regulation prohibiting prisoner-led religious services did not violate the First Amendment [Anderson v. Angelone (9th Cir. 1997) 123 F.3d 1197, 1198-1199];

- A jail policy prohibiting certain personal possessions, including rosaries and scapulars, did not violate the First Amendment rights of Roman Catholic prisoners [Friend v. Kolodzieczak (9th Cir. 1991) 923 F.2d 126, 127-128];

- A prison policy prohibiting facial hair did not violate Orthodox Jewish prisoners' First Amendment right to freedom of religion [Friedman v. Arizona (9th Cir. 1990) 912 F.2d 328, 331-332 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1100 (1991)]; and

- A prison regulation banning the wearing of headgear in a prison dining room did not violate the First Amendment rights of Native American prisoners [Standing Deer v. Carlson (9th Cir. 1987) 831 F.2d 1525, 1528-1529].

On the other hand, a policy of subjecting Muslim inmates to discipline for missing work to attend Friday Sabbath services will violate the inmates' religious freedom rights when the policy is not rationally related to a legitimate penological purpose [Mayweathers v. Newland (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 930].

[b] Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act of 2000

Under the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act of 2000 [42 U.S.C. § 2000cc (RLUIPA)], no government may impose a substantial burden in a program or activity receiving federal financial assistance or affecting commerce, on the religious exercise of a person residing in or confined to an institution as defined in 42 U.S.C. § 1997, even if the burden results from a rule of general applicability [see, e.g., Greene v. Solano County Jail (9th Cir. 2008) 513 F.3d 982, 986-988 (jail's policy of prohibiting maximum security prisoner from attending group religious worship services substantially burdened his ability to exercise his religion)], unless the government demonstrates that the imposition of the burden is in furtherance of a compelling governmental interest, and the least restrictive means of furthering that compelling governmental interest [42 U.S.C. § 2000cc-1(a)(1)-(2); see, e.g., Greene v. Solano County Jail (9th Cir. 2008) 513 F.3d 982, 988-990 (there was genuine issue of material fact as to whether total ban on group religious worship by maximum security prisoners at jail was least restrictive means of maintaining jail security, making summary judgment in favor of sheriff inappropriate)]. A violation of the Act may be asserted as a claim or defense in a judicial proceeding [106 P.L. 274, § 4(a)], for which attorney's fees are available under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 [106 P.L. 274, § 4(d)].

The RLUIPA protects prisoners and other institutionalized people from government infringement on their practice of religion [Mayweathers v. Newland (9th Cir. 2002) 314 F.3d 1062, 1065]. It does not exceed Congressional authority under the Spending Clause [Mayweathers v. Newland (9th Cir. 2002) 314 F.3d 1062, 1066-1067]. It also does not violate the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment [Cutter v. Wilkinson (2005) 544 U.S. 709, 125 S. Ct. 2113, 2121-2125, 161 L. Ed. 2d 1020], the Tenth and Eleventh Amendments, the Fourteenth Amendment, or the principle of separation of powers [Mayweathers v. Newland (9th Cir. 2002) 314 F.3d 1062, 1067-1070].

Because federal complaints plead claims, not causes of action or statutes or legal theories, a prisoner's failure to specifically plead in the complaint a violation of RLUIPA does not bar the argument that the district court erred in not analyzing religious exercise claims under RLUIPA, which establishes a more protective standard than the First Amendment [Alvarez v. Hill (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1152, 1156-1159].

[3] Right to File Prison Grievances

Of fundamental import to prisoners is their First Amendment right to file prison grievances [Bruce v. Ylst (9th Cir. 2003) 351 F.3d 1283, 1288]. Without that First Amendment right and the First Amendment right to pursue civil rights litigation in the courts [Schroeder v. McDonald (9th Cir. 1995) 55 F.3d 454, 461 ; see § 114.13], inmates would be left with no viable mechanism to remedy prison injustices [Rhodes v. Robinson (9th Cir. 2004) 380 F.3d 1123, 1130]. Further, because purely retaliatory actions taken against a prisoner for having exercised those rights necessarily undermine those protections, retaliatory actions violate the federal constitution apart from any underlying misconduct they are designed to shield [Rhodes v. Robinson (9th Cir. 2004) 380 F.3d 1123, 1130].

[4] Retaliation

Within the prison context, a viable claim of First Amendment retaliation entails the following basic elements: (1) an assertion that a state actor took some adverse action against an inmate (2) because of (3) the inmate's protected conduct, the action (4) harmed the prisoner, and (5) the action was not narrowly tailored to advance a legitimate correctional goal [Rhodes v. Robinson (9th Cir. 2004) 380 F.3d 1123, 1130].

At the pleading stage, courts do not require a litigant to demonstrate a total chilling of First Amendment rights to perfect a retaliation claim; allegations of a chilling effect are not even strictly necessary to perfect such a claim [Rhodes v. Robinson (9th Cir. 2004) 380 F.3d 1123, 1131] . Any retribution visited upon a prisoner due to a decision to engage in protected conduct is sufficient to ground a claim of unlawful First Amendment retaliation, whether the detriment chills the plaintiff's exercise of First Amendment rights or not [Rhodes v. Robinson (9th Cir. 2004) 380 F.3d 1123, 1131]. An objective standard governs the chilling inquiry; a prisoner does not have to show that his or her speech was actually inhibited or suppressed, but rather that the adverse action would chill or silence a person of ordinary firmness from future First Amendment activities [Brodheim v. Cry (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1262, 1271] . The mere threat of harm can be an adverse action, regardless of whether it is carried out because the threat itself can have a chilling effect. A threat of harm need not be explicit and specific to constitute an adverse action [Brodheim v. Cry (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1262, 1270-1271 (warning to inmate to be careful of what he wrote in grievance forms raised genuine issue of material fact as to adverse action)].

To prevail on a retaliation claim, a prisoner must show that his protected conduct was the "substantial" or "motivating" factor behind the defendant's conduct [Brodheim v. Cry (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1262, 1271] . On a motion for summary judgment, the prisoner need only put forth evidence of retaliatory motive, that, taken in the light most favorable to the prisoner, presents a genuine issue of material fact as to the defendant's intent in taking the adverse action [Brodheim v. Cry (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1262, 1271 (undisputed that correctional officer's warning was motivated by inmate's protected conduct)].

A prisoner also must show that the challenged action did not reasonably advance a legitimate correctional goal [Brodheim v. Cry (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1262, 1271 ; Rhodes v. Robinson (9th Cir. 2005) 408 F.3d 559, 568] . The goal of "prohibiting disrespectful language" does not constitute a legitimate penological goal sufficient to impinge upon a prisoner's First Amendment rights [Brodheim v. Cry (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1262, 1271-1272 (no indication that language in inmate's written complaint posed substantial threat to prison's security and discipline); see Bradley v. Hall (9th Cir. 1995) 64 F.3d 1276, 1280-1281 (correctional regulations prohibiting use of "hostile, sexual, abusive, or threatening language" in formal written grievances impermissibly substantially burdened prisoners' right of access to courts), disapproved on other grounds, Shaw v. Murphy (2001) 532 U.S. 223, 230, 121 S. Ct. 1475, 149 L. Ed. 2d 420] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawPrisoner RightsFreedom of SpeechConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental FreedomsFreedom to PetitionCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsFreedom of Religion

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.21

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.21 Privacy

Prisoners have limited constitutionally protected expectations of privacy [see Hudson v. Palmer (1984) 468 U.S. 517, 526-528, 104 S. Ct. 3194, 82 L. Ed. 2d 393 (prisoners have no expectation of privacy in their cells); United States v. Vallez (9th Cir. 1981) 653 F.2d 403, 406 , cert. denied, 454 U.S. 904 (prisoners have extremely limited Fourth Amendment rights); People v. Loyd (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 997, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 360, 45 P.3d 296 (secretly monitoring and recording inmate's unprivileged jail conversations with visitors to gather evidence did not violate inmate's privacy rights); People v. Collins (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 137, 152-155, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 731 (prison has compelling and uncontroverted interest in preventing introduction into or transporting throughout prison of contraband and in maintaining order in institution, prisoner has very limited reasonable expectation of privacy in regard to search of his person, and there is no requirement that search be supported by either probable cause or reasonable suspicion; relevant inquiry is whether under all circumstances search was reasonable and determination of reasonableness depends on specific facts presented)]. That is not to say, however, that prisoners have no constitutionally protected privacy rights at all.

Prisoners retain some constitutional privacy rights with regard to their bodies [see, e.g., Bell v. Wolfish (1979) 441 U.S. 520, 559-560, 99 S. Ct. 1861, 60 L. Ed. 2d 447 (visual body cavity searches of inmates must be conducted in reasonable manner); Walker v. Sumner (9th Cir. 1990) 917 F.2d 382, 386-388 (to justify forcing inmates to submit to HIV blood tests, prison officials must identify specific penological interests justifying tests, and must demonstrate that those specific interests are the actual bases for tests); Kennedy v. Los Angeles Police Department (9th Cir. 1989) 901 F.2d 702, 710-716 (city's blanket policy subjecting all felony arrestees to visual body cavity searches is unconstitutional)].

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held a regulation requiring male guards to perform random, nonemergency, suspicionless, clothed body searches of female prisoners to be cruel and unusual punishment in violation of U.S. Const., amend. VIII [Jordan v. Gardner (9th Cir. 1993) 986 F.2d 1521, 1525-1531].

In addition, searches conducted for purposes unrelated to security concerns, for punitive purposes only, for example, violate U.S. Const., amend. IV, and may violate U.S. Const., amend. VIII as well [Tribble v. Gardner (9th Cir. 1988) 860 F.2d 321, 323-327]. Moreover, the Fourth Amendment requires suppression of evidence of a prisoner's conversations with a spouse in circumstances that lulled the parties into believing their conversation was confidential [North v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 301, 311-312, 104 Cal. Rptr. 833, 502 P.2d 1305 ; see People v. Hill (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 731, 765, 117 Cal. Rptr. 393, 528 P.2d 1].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawSubstantive Due ProcessPrivacyGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.22

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.22 Marriage

[1] Constitutional Right to Marry

A prisoner's right to marry is a federal constitutional right, and, although not an absolute right, it is subject only to restrictions reasonably related to penological interests [Turner v. Safley (1987) 482 U.S. 78, 94-97].

[2] State Statutory Right to Marry

In California, prisoners also have a statutory right to marry [Penal Code § 2601(e)]. Even if the prospective spouse has been implicated in smuggling contraband into the prison, the Department of Corrections may not prevent the marriage if other alternatives, such as the fiance's submission to a body search, are available to protect prison security [In re Carrafa (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 788, 792-793, 143 Cal. Rptr. 848].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawPrisoner RightsVisitationFamily LawMarriageGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureSearch & SeizureGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.22A

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.22A Procreation

The right to procreate is inconsistent with incarceration [Gerber v. Hickman (9th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 617, 620]. Prisoners may not claim the protection of rights fundamentally inconsistent with their status as prisoners [Gerber v. Hickman (9th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 617, 620 , citing Hudson v. Palmer (1984) 468 U.S. 517, 523, 104 S. Ct. 3194, 82 L. Ed. 2d 393 (prisoners retain only those rights not inconsistent with status as prisoners or with legitimate penological objectives of corrections system)]. Incarceration, by its very nature, removes an inmate from society [Pell v. Procunier (1974) 417 U.S. 817, 822-823, 94 S. Ct. 2800, 41 L. Ed. 2d 495], and a necessary corollary is the separation of the prisoner from his or her spouse, loved ones, friends, family, and children [Gerber v. Hickman (9th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 617, 620]. During the period of confinement in prison, the loss of the right to intimate association, which protects the kinds of relationships attending the creation and sustenance of a family, i.e., marriage, childbirth, raising and education of children, and cohabitation with one's relatives [see Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 618-619, 104 S. Ct. 3244, 82 L. Ed. 2d 462], is part of being imprisoned for conviction of a crime [Gerber v. Hickman (9th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 617, 621]. Although the basic right to marry survives imprisonment [Turner v. Safley (1987) 482 U.S. 78, 96], most of the attributes of marriage, including cohabitation, physical intimacy, and bearing and raising children, do not; incarceration is inconsistent with the vast majority of concomitants to marriage, privacy, and personal intimacy [Gerber v. Hickman (9th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 617, 621 ; see Kentucky Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson (1989) 490 U.S. 454, 460, 109 S. Ct. 1904, 104 L. Ed. 2d 506 (no due process right to unfettered visitation); Block v. Rutherford (1984) 468 U.S. 576, 585-588, 104 S. Ct. 3227, 82 L. Ed. 2d 438 (pretrial detainees have no constitutional due process right to contact visits); Toussaint v. McCarthy (9th Cir. 1986) 801 F.2d 1080, 1113-1114 (denial of contact visits does not violate Eighth Amendment)]. Thus, an inmate has no right to procreate by artificially inseminating his wife [Gerber v. Hickman (9th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 617, 621].

The California constitution or statutes also do not afford a prisoner the right to procreate [Gerber v. Hickman (9th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 617, 623 ; see Penal Code § 2601 (enumeration of rights)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawSubstantive Due ProcessPrivacyGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarriageGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsVisitation

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.23

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.23 Visitation Rights

Visitation is among the First Amendment rights of prisoners. However, the visitation rights of prisoners may constitutionally be limited, for example:

- Restricting noncontact visitation to individuals on an approved visitor list, except qualified members of the clergy and attorneys on official business, including an unlimited number of immediate family members and 10 other individuals the prisoner designates, subject to some restrictions; disallowing minors under 18 unless they are the inmate's children, stepchildren, grandchildren, or siblings, disallowing children when an inmate's parental rights have been terminated, and requiring minors to be accompanied by an adult immediate family member of the child or of inmate or the child's legal guardian; prohibiting an inmate's placing of a former prisoner on the list unless the former prisoner is a member of the inmate's immediate family and the warden has given prior approval; and prohibiting prisoners who commit multiple substance-abuse violations from receiving any visitors except attorneys and members of the clergy bear rational relation to legitimate penological interests [Overton v. Bazzetta (2003) 539 U.S. 126, 123 S. Ct. 2162, 2167-2170, 156 L. Ed. 2d 162];

- Regulations containing a nonexhaustive list of categories of prison visitors who may be excluded does not give prisoners a protected liberty interest in receiving visitors who are not in the listed categories [Kentucky Dep't of Corrections v. Thompson (1989) 490 U.S. 454, 460-465, 109 S. Ct. 1904, 104 L. Ed. 2d 506]; and

- A jail's blanket prohibition against contact visits between pretrial detainees and their family and friends is a reasonable response to legitimate security concerns [Block v. Rutherford (1984) 468 U.S. 576, 585-592, 104 S. Ct. 3227, 82 L. Ed. 2d 438].

Four factors are relevant in deciding whether a prison regulation affecting a constitutional right that survives incarceration withstands constitutional challenge [Overton v. Bazzetta (2003) 539 U.S. 126, 123 S. Ct. 2162, 2168, 156 L. Ed. 2d 162 ; Turner v. Safley (1987) 482 U.S. 78, 89-91]:

- Whether the regulation has a valid, rational connection to a legitimate governmental interest.
- Whether alternative means are open to inmates to exercise the asserted right.
- What impact an accommodation of the right would have on guards and inmates and prison resources.
- Whether there are ready alternatives to the regulation.

Inmates retain the right of reasonable visitation with their children [Hoversten v. Superior Court of San Luis Obispo (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 636, 640, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 ; In re Smith (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 956, 968-969, 169 Cal. Rptr. 564]. Such visitation rights arise from the fact of parenthood and the constitutionally protected right to marry, establish a home, and bring up children [Hoversten v. Superior Court of San Luis Obispo (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 636, 641, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 ; see In re Julie M. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 41, 49, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354]. Interference with a prisoner's right of visitation with his or her children may only be justified by some compelling necessity, such as a parent dangerously abusing a child [Hoversten v. Superior Court of San Luis Obispo (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 636, 641, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 ; In re Smith (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 956, 968-969, 169 Cal. Rptr. 564].

Amendments to existing regulations and any future regulations adopted by the Department of Corrections that may impact the visitation of inmates must do all of the following [Pen. Code § 6400]:

- Recognize and consider the value of visiting as a means to improve the safety of prisons for both staff and inmates;
- Recognize and consider the important role of inmate visitation in establishing and maintaining a meaningful connection with family and community; and
- Recognize and consider the important role of inmate visitation in preparing an inmate for successful release and rehabilitation.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawPrisoner RightsVisitationConstitutional LawSubstantive Due ProcessPrivacyPersonal DecisionsCriminal Law & ProcedurePostconviction ProceedingsImprisonment

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.24

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.24 Property Ownership

Prisoners may allege two different types of constitutional violations involving property ownership: (1) a Fifth Amendment right to just compensation for the "taking" of property; and (2) a Fourteenth Amendment due process right prohibiting prison officials from confiscating property without statutory authorization and process. Although these rights are similar and may arise from the same underlying government action, the protections afforded by each are distinct [Vance v. Barrett (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1083, 1088-1089]. The Fifth Amendment's Takings Clause limits the government's ability to confiscate property without paying for it [Armstrong v. United States (1960) 364 U.S. 40, 49, 80 S. Ct. 1563, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1554]. The Fourteenth Amendment's Due Process Clause requires that the government provide appropriate procedural protections when taking property, with or without compensation [see Cleveland Bd. of Educ. v. Loudermill (1985) 470 U.S. 532, 541, 105 S. Ct. 1487, 84 L. Ed. 2d 494 (Constitution requires constitutionally adequate procedures by which to deprive individuals of property interests)]. An inmate's argument that state officials exceeded their authority goes to the core of a due process claim, so that a takings analysis is logically confined to whether official actions are authorized by statute [Vance v. Barrett (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1083, 1089 (without statutory mandate, prison officials had no authority to confiscate inmates' property)].

A prisoner possesses the right, except as prohibited by Civ. Code § 2225 (concerning proceeds from sale of story of felony by convicted felon), to inherit, own, sell, or convey real or personal property, including written and artistic material produced or created by the prisoner during the period of imprisonment. However, to the extent authorized in Penal Code § 2600, the Department of Corrections may restrict or prohibit sales or conveyances for business purposes [Penal Code § 2601(a)]. In addition, with regard to Civ. Code § 2225, the California Supreme Court held that it is unconstitutional because it facially violates freedom of speech as guaranteed by U.S. Const., Amend. I and Cal. Const., art. I, § 2(a) [Keenan v. Superior Court (Sinatra) (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 413, 435-436, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 40 P.3d 718].

Although California inmates are not allowed to possess money while in prison for security reasons [see 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3006(b)], they have a protected property interest in the interest income earned on inmate trust accounts [Vance v. Barrett (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1083, 1089 n.6 (interest accrued on inmate accounts is constitutionally protected property right); Schneider v. Cal. Dep't of Corrections (9th Cir. 1998) 151 F.3d 1194, 1198-1201 (Department of Corrections' policy of withholding from prisoners interest earned on inmate trust accounts contravenes takings clause of Fifth Amendment); see Schneider v. Cal. Dep't of Corr. (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 716, 720 (under per se takings analysis, California's scheme of depositing interest earned on inmate trust accounts into Inmate Welfare Fund for benefit of entire prison population perpetrated a taking because it appropriated interest earned by accounts and allocated them for public use)]. However, state officials expenses may deduct from inmate accounts expenses incurred in creating and maintaining the accounts [Vance v. Barrett (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1083, 1089 (takings claim failed when inmate did not allege charges to trust account were unreasonable or unrelated to administration of his account)].

Prisoners are entitled to retain federal Social Security benefits that they receive, and may not be required to tender those benefits to the state to help defray the cost of maintaining the state's prison system [Bennett v. Arkansas (1988) 485 U.S. 395, 397-398, 108 S. Ct. 1204, 99 L. Ed. 2d 455].

For discussion and citations related to the remedies available for random and unauthorized deprivations of property by officials acting under color of state law, see Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, §§ 113.14[11][e], 113.34[3][n].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawSubstantive Due ProcessEconomic InterestsConstitutional LawSubstantive Due ProcessScope of ProtectionCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsFreedom of SpeechConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsEminent Domain & TakingsConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.25

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.25 Correspondence and Mail

[1] Correspondence with Attorney

The Supreme Court has approved of prison policies under which mail from attorneys may be opened and inspected, but not read, in the presence of inmates [Wolff v. McDonnell (1974) 418 U.S. 539, 577, 94 S. Ct. 2963, 41 L. Ed. 2d 935].

Prisoners have a statutory right in California to correspond, confidentially, with any member of the State Bar or holder of public office, provided that prison authorities may open and inspect incoming mail to search for contraband [Penal Code § 2601(b)]. Regulations that permit institutional authorities to read letters to and from an attorney to search for "verbal contraband," or to read all "enclosures" in such letters, are invalid [In re Jordan (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 575, 578, 116 Cal. Rptr. 371, 526 P.2d 523 ; In re Jordan (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 930, 934, 103 Cal. Rptr. 849, 500 P.2d 873].

The rationale for allowing confidential correspondence between a prisoner and a member of the State Bar also applies to correspondence with out-of-state attorneys [In re Gonzales (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 459, 463, 260 Cal. Rptr. 506] .

[2] Other Correspondence and Reading Material

[a] Constitutional Rights

Under the First Amendment to the United States Constitution, prisoners have the right to send and receive mail, subject to regulations reasonably related to legitimate penal interests [Thornburgh v. Abbott (1989) 490 U.S. 401, 403-417, 109 S. Ct. 1874, 104 L. Ed. 2d 459 (upholding regulation allowing authorities to ban incoming publications found to be detrimental to prison security); Turner v. Safley (1987) 482 U.S. 78, 91-93 (upholding prohibition on correspondence between inmates in different institutions); Witherow v. Paff (9th Cir. 1995) 52 F.3d 264, 265-266 (upholding Nevada prison regulation permitting cursory visual inspection of contents of outgoing mail to check for offensive or dangerous materials)].

Prisoners also have a Fourteenth Amendment due process liberty interest in receiving notice that their incoming mail is being withheld by prison authorities [Frost v. Symington (9th Cir. 1999) 197 F.3d 348, 353-354] . However, failure to notify a prisoner that mail is being rejected by the prison authorities that is unauthorized and contrary to prison policy constitutes at most negligence and does not state a due process violation under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Sorrels v. McKee (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 965, 973] .

[b] State Statutory and Regulatory Provisions

In California, prisoners have a statutory right to purchase, receive, and read all newspapers, periodicals, and books accepted for distribution by the United States Post Office [Penal Code § 2601(c)(1)]. However, prison authorities may exclude any of the following [Penal Code § 2601(c)(1)]:

- Obscene publications or writings, and mail containing information concerning where, how, or from whom this matter may be obtained [Penal Code § 2601(c)(1)(A)];

- Any matter of a character tending to incite murder, arson, riot, violent racism, or any other form of violence [Penal Code § 2601(c)(1)(B)]; and

- Any matter concerning gambling or a lottery [Penal Code § 2601(c)(1)(C)].

Nothing in Penal Code § 2601(c) may be construed to limit the right of prison authorities to do both of the following [Penal Code § 2601(c)(2)]:

- Open and inspect all packages received by an inmate; and

- Establish reasonable restrictions on the number of newspapers, magazines, and books an inmate may have in his or her cell or elsewhere in the prison at one time.

Except when a communication is a confidential one addressed to an attorney, court, or public official, a prisoner has no expectation of privacy with regard to letters posted by the prisoner [People v. Harris (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 371, 375, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 618 ; People v. Garvey (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 320, 323, 160 Cal. Rptr. 73] . All nonconfidential inmate mail is subject to being read in its entirety or in part by designated employees of the prison before it is mailed for or delivered to an inmate [15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3134].

Other regulations include the following:

- 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3130, which sets forth the California Department of Correction's policy of encouraging correspondence between inmates and persons outside correctional facilities;

- 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3131, which requires each warden to prepare and maintain a plan of operations for sending and receiving mail for inmates housed in the facility, and that correctional staff promptly inform each new inmate regarding departmental regulations and local procedures governing inmate mail [see In re Garcia (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 841, 844, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 357] ; and

- 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3139, which governs correspondence between inmates, requires inmates in separate correctional institutions to obtain the prior approval of the warden of each facility in which the inmates are housed before they may correspond, and allows current inmates to correspond with former inmates with prior approval of the warden, superintendent, or person in charge of the correctional facility if the person was discharged from a facility within the past 12 months.

A prison policy making the warden's approval of correspondence of an inmate with an inmate in a different facility contingent on the other inmate being (1) a member of the inmate's immediate family, (2) the parent of the inmate's child, or (3) a coparty or witness in pending litigation, which otherwise met regulatory requirements regarding interinstitutional correspondence, did not violate the Administrative Procedure Act [In re Garcia (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 841, 844-845, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 357] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawPrisoner RightsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsFreedom of Speech

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.26

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.26 Other Rights Under California Statutes

Prisoners in California have a statutory right to create a power of appointment [Penal Code § 2601(f)].

Prisoners in California have a statutory right to make a will [Penal Code § 2601(g)].

Also, prisoners in California have a statutory right to receive benefits provided for in Labor Code § 3370 (workers' compensation benefits), Labor Code § 3371 (workers' compensation attorney), and Penal Code § 5069 (rehabilitation and retraining services) [Penal Code § 2601(h)].

Under the Sexual Abuse in Detention Elimination Act, prison inmates have the right to be protected from sexual abuse while held in institutions operated by the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation [see Pen. Code § 2635 et seq.].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Estate, Gift & Trust LawPowers of AppointmentEstate, Gift & Trust LawWill ContestsTestamentary CapacityGeneral OverviewWorkers' Compensation & SSDICoverageGeneral OverviewWorkers' Compensation & SSDIBenefit

DeterminationsMedical BenefitsRehabilitationCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsConfinement Conditions

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.27

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.27 Prisoners Not Entitled to Certain Civil Rights

There are certain civil rights and privileges that a prisoner is expressly excluded from holding.

Federal law mandates the suspension of a person's social security benefits if he or she is a convicted felon currently incarcerated in prison [42 U.S.C. § 402(x); see Butler v. Apfel (9th Cir. 1998) 144 F.3d 622, 624-625 (upholding statute as constitutional)].

Under the California constitution, a convicted felon serving a sentence or on parole is not entitled to vote [Cal. Const., art. II, § 4; Elec. Code §§ 2201(c), 2212; Flood v. Riggs (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 138, 155, 145 Cal. Rptr. 573] . However, Cal. Const., art. II, § 4 does not apply to persons on felony probation. When the court suspends imposition of sentence and places a defendant on probation, the defendant has not suffered a conviction for purposes of art. II, § 4. In addition, when the court orders a probationer to serve time in a local facility because either imposition or execution of sentence has been suspended, the probationer has not been imprisoned for the conviction of a felony, but has been confined as a condition of probation. Finally, when by virtue of Pen. Code § 18, a felony offense is punishable by fine or imprisonment in county jail, and the trial court, pursuant to Pen. Code § 17(b)(1), enters judgment imposing something other than imprisonment in state prison, the crime is a misdemeanor for purposes of art. II, § 4. Thus, individuals otherwise qualified to vote who are confined in local jails pursuant to sentences imposed under Pen. Code

§§ 17 and 18 or as a condition of felony probation are entitled to register and vote in elections [League of Women Voters of California v. McPherson (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1469, 1480-1485, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 585] .

Under California statutes, a convict is barred from manufacturing, attempting to manufacture, or possessing certain kinds of weapons [see Penal Code § 4502].

A convict is also barred from inheriting property from one whose death he or she has feloniously and intentionally caused [Prob. Code § 250; see Estate of Kramme (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 567, 574, 143 Cal. Rptr. 542, 573 P.2d 1369 (although husband had intentionally threatened wife's lover with loaded shotgun, he had not intended to shoot anyone and could therefore inherit his wife's property after accidentally killing her); see also Prob. Code §§ 251-253 (related provisions regarding homicides)].

Further, a convict is not entitled to bring an action for the wrongful death of one whom he or she feloniously and intentionally killed, or to benefit from the action brought by the decedent's personal representative [Prob. Code § 258].

Under California statute, no person imprisoned in state prison and under the jurisdiction of the Director of Corrections is allowed to file a petition for change of name pursuant to California law, except as permitted at the discretion of the Director of Corrections [Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(b)]. For discussion of name changes by prisoners, see Ch. 377, Name, Change of.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsWrongful Death & Survival ActionsGeneral OverviewWorkers' Compensation & SSDISocial Security Disability InsuranceEligibilityCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsVotingCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsGeneral OverviewEstate, Gift & Trust LawEstate AdministrationSlayer Laws

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.28

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.28 Enforcement of Civil Rights of Prisoners Under 42 U.S.C. § 1983

[1] Generally

The federal civil rights of a prisoner, with regard to prison conditions, are enforceable by means of an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Preiser v. Rodriguez (1973) 411 U.S. 475, 498-499, 93 S. Ct. 1827, 36 L. Ed. 2d 439] .

On the other hand, if a prisoner seeks to challenge the fact or duration of his or her confinement, based on violations of his or her federally protected rights, that challenge must be made under the federal habeas corpus statute, 28 U.S.C. § 2254 [Preiser v. Rodriguez (1973) 411 U.S. 475, 489-491, 93 S. Ct. 1827, 36 L. Ed. 2d 439] .

An action challenging the constitutionality of the drug sequence a state likely would use to execute a prisoner by lethal injection, rather than challenging the validity of the death sentence, is a type of action that may proceed under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. There is no requirement the claim be raised by petition for writ of habeas corpus [Hill v. McDonough (2006) 547 U.S. ___, 165 L. Ed. 2d 44, 51-54]. Filing an action that can proceed under § 1983 does not entitle the complainant to an order staying an execution as a matter of course. A stay of execution is an equitable remedy [Hill v. McDonough (2006) 547 U.S. 573, 126 S. Ct. 2096, 165 L. Ed. 2d 44, 54] .

Prisoners' actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 have some special characteristics and requirements, which are discussed in this section. For discussion and forms related to 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and the other post-Civil War civil rights statutes, see Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes f.

[2] Exhaustion of Remedies

Generally, in actions brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, exhaustion of state tort remedies, such as the California Tort Claims Act, is not required [Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 480, 114 S. Ct. 2364, 129 L. Ed. 2d 383 (exhaustion of state remedies generally not a prerequisite to action under § 1983); Felder v. Casey (1988) 487 U.S. 131, 140-141, 108 S. Ct. 2302, 101 L. Ed. 2d 123 (state notice-of-claim statutes inapplicable to § 1983 suits); Patsy v. Board of Regents (1981) 457 U.S. 496, 516, 102 S. Ct. 2557, 73 L. Ed. 2d 172 (exhaustion of state remedies should not be required as prerequisite to bringing action under § 1983)].

This is one of the most significant differences between a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action and a habeas corpus petition. To obtain habeas corpus relief, a prisoner must first exhaust available state remedies [Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 480-481, 114 S. Ct. 2364, 129 L. Ed. 2d 383 ; Preiser v. Rodriguez (1973) 411 U.S. 475, 489-493, 93 S. Ct. 1827, 36 L. Ed. 2d 439 ; Ramirez v. Galaza (9th Cir. 2003) 334 F.3d 850, 854] .

However, under the "favorable termination rule," a prisoner suing under § 1983 with regard to the disciplinary process may be required to first invalidate a disciplinary conviction if alleged due process defects in the disciplinary process, if established, necessarily imply the invalidity of the deprivation of the prisoner's good-time credits and that result would decrease the length of the prisoner's confinement [Edwards v. Balisok (1997) 520 U.S. 641, 643-645, 117 S. Ct. 1584, 137 L. Ed. 2d 906 ; Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 478-489, 114 S. Ct. 2364, 129 L. Ed. 2d 383] . The applicability of the favorable termination rule turns solely on whether a successful § 1983 action would necessarily render invalid a conviction, sentence, or administrative sanction that affected the length of the prisoner's confinement [Ramirez v. Galaza (9th Cir. 2003) 334 F.3d 850, 856] . The favorable termination rule does not apply to § 1983 suits challenging a disciplinary hearing or administrative sanction that does not affect the overall length of the prisoner's confinement. When the prison's alleged constitutional error does not increase the prisoner's total period of confinement, a successful § 1983 action would not necessarily result in an earlier release from incarceration, and hence, does not intrude on the heart of habeas jurisdiction [Ramirez v. Galaza (9th Cir. 2003) 334 F.3d 850, 858] .

Furthermore, in § 1983 actions brought by prisoners, there is a special exhaustion requirement. The Civil Rights of Institutionalized Persons Act, as amended by the Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA) in 1996, provides that a prisoner confined in any jail, prison, or other correctional facility may not bring an action with regard to prison conditions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, or any other federal law, until the prisoner has exhausted available administrative remedies [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(a)]. All available remedies must be exhausted; they need not meet federal standards or be "plain, speedy, and effective" [Porter v. Nussle (2002) 534 U.S. 516, 122 S. Ct. 983, 988, 152 L. Ed. 2d 12] . The exhaustion requirement applies to all inmate suits about prison life, whether they involve general circumstances or particular episodes, and whether they allege excessive force or another wrong [Porter v. Nussle (2002) 534 U.S. 516, 122 S. Ct. 983, 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 12] .

The exhaustion requirement in 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(a) applies to prisoners held in prisons operated by private entities such as private corporations as well as to prisoners held in prisons operated by public entities, such as state or local governments or the federal government [Roles v. Maddox (9th Cir. 2006) 439 F.3d 1016, 1017-1018] .

The PLRA does not define "prison conditions." However, the term has been broadly construed [see Roles v. Maddox (9th Cir. 2006) 439 F.3d 1016, 1018 (confiscation of magazines if condition to which PLRA applies); see also Porter v. Nussle (2002) 534 U.S. 516, 532, 122 S. Ct. 983, 152 L. Ed. 2d 12 (PLRA's exhaustion requirement applies to all inmate suits about prison life, whether they involve general circumstances or particular episodes, and whether they allege excessive force or some other wrong)]. The Ninth Circuit and other courts have treated various prisoner claims as challenges to prison conditions requiring exhaustion, ranging from claims of harassment by prison officials [Bennett v. King (9th Cir. 2002) 293 F.3d 1096] , to complaints about the availability of Spanish language interpreters [Castano v. Neb. Dep't of Corr. (8th Cir. 2000) 201 F.3d 1023] , to complaints about the confiscation of magazines [Roles v. Maddox (9th Cir. 2006) 439 F.3d 1016, 1018 (confiscation of magazines is condition to which PLRA applies); see also Preiser v. Rodriguez (1973) 411 U.S. 475, 498-499, 93 S. Ct. 1827, 36 L. Ed. 2d 439 (characterizing confiscation of prisoner's legal materials as condition of prison life); Gibson v. Goord (2d Cir. 2002) 280 F.3d 221 (requiring exhaustion for challenge to accumulation of water in cell and exposure to second-hand smoke); Hartsfield v. Vidor (6th Cir. 1999) 199 F.3d 305 (allegation that prison officials violated prisoner's equal protection rights by treating him more roughly than they treated white inmate concerned prison condition)].

A district court must dismiss an action involving prison conditions when the plaintiff did not exhaust administrative remedies before filing suit but is in the process of doing so when a motion to dismiss is filed [McKinney v. Carey (9th Cir. 2002) 311 F.3d 1198] .

When a prison's grievance procedures are silent or incomplete as to factual specificity required, a grievance suffices if it alerts the prison to the nature of the wrong for which redress is sought. A grievance need not include legal terminology or legal theories, unless they are in some way needed to provide notice of the harm being grieved. A grievance also need not contain every fact necessary to prove each element of an eventual legal claim [Griffin v. Arpaio (9th Cir. 2009) 557 F.3d 1117, 1120-1121].

Administrative remedies must be exhausted even if they do not provide the type of relief sought by the prisoner, such as money damages [Booth v. Churner (2001) 532 U.S. 731, 733, 121 S. Ct. 1819, 149 L. Ed. 2d 958] . The requirement is mandatory when it applies [Rumbles v. Hill (9th Cir. 1999) 182 F.3d 1064, 1066 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1074 (2000)] . For example, federal prisoners suing under Bivens must first exhaust inmate grievance procedures just as state prisoners must exhaust administrative processes before instituting a § 1983 action [Porter v. Nussle (2002) 534 U.S. 516, 122 S. Ct. 983, 988, 152 L. Ed. 2d 12] . Trial courts must dismiss without prejudice prisoner complaints filed before exhaustion [see Terrell v. Brewer (9th Cir. 1991) 935 F.2d 1015, 1019 (proper remedy for failure of prisoner to exhaust Bivens claim is dismissal without prejudice)].

When a prisoner's complaint contains exhausted and unexhausted claims, the court need not dismiss the entire action [Jones v. Bock (2007) 549 U.S. 199 , 127 S. Ct. 910, 923-926, 166 L. Ed. 2d 798 (court rule requiring dismissal of entire action beyond judicial authority)]. When a prisoner files a mixed complaint and wishes to proceed with only the exhausted claims, the court should dismiss the unexhausted claims when the unexhausted claims are not intertwined with the properly exhausted claims. On the other hand, when a prisoner's mixed complaint includes exhausted and unexhausted claims that are closely related and difficult to untangle, dismissal of the defective complaint with leave to amend to allege only fully exhausted claims is the proper approach [Lira v. Herrera (9th Cir. 2005) 427 F.3d 1164, 1169-1176].

A prisoner cannot satisfy the Prison Litigation Reform Act's exhaustion requirement by filing an untimely or otherwise procedurally defective administrative grievance or appeal. Proper exhaustion of administrative remedies is necessary [Woodford v. Ngo (2006) 548 U.S. 81, 126 S. Ct. 2378, 2384-2393 ; 165 L. Ed. 2d 368] .

The prison system's requirements define the boundaries of proper exhaustion [Marella v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2009) 562 F.3d 983, 985 ; see Jones v. Bock (2007) 549 U.S. 199, 218, 127 S. Ct. 910, 166 L. Ed. 2d 798]. In California, an inmate must submit an appeal within 15 working days of the event or decision being appealed. The appeals coordinator is only permitted to reject an appeal if time limits for submitting the appeal are exceeded and the appellant had the opportunity to file within the prescribed time constraints [15 Cal. Code Regs. §§ 3084.6(c), 3084.3(c)(6)]. Section 54100.8.1 of the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation Operating Manual directs the appeals coordinator to ensure that the inmate or parolee had, in fact, the opportunity to file in a timely manner. The prison's regulations explicitly create an exception to the timely filing requirement for an inmate who does not have the opportunity to file in a timely manner [Marella v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2009) 562 F.3d 983, 985 (if inmate who was in hospital and then administrative segregation following knife attack by fellow inmates of which he was complaining was unable to file within 15-day filing period, his failure to file timely would not defeat his § 1983 claim)].

The exhaustion requirement of 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(a) is not jurisdictional [Wyatt v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2003) 315 F.3d 1108, 1116-1119 ; Rumbles v. Hill (9th Cir. 1999) 182 F.3d 1064, 1067-1068 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1074 (2000)] . A plaintiff is not required to plead exhaustion of remedies under § 1997e(a); Section 1997e(a) creates a defense, and defendants have the burden of raising and proving the absence of exhaustion [Jones v. Bock (2007) 549 U.S. 199 , 127 S. Ct. 910, 918-922, 166 L. Ed. 2d 798 (circuit rule requiring prisoner to allege and demonstrate exhaustion in complaint not required by PLRA and crafting and imposing rule exceeded proper limits on judicial role); Wyatt v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2003) 315 F.3d 1108, 1119] . Failure to exhaust nonjudicial nonjurisdictional remedies should be treated as a matter in abatement, subject to an unenumerated Rule 12(b) motion rather than a motion for summary judgment. In deciding a motion to dismiss for a failure to exhaust nonjudicial remedies, the court may look beyond the pleadings and decide disputed issues of fact; if the court concludes that the prisoner has not exhausted nonjudicial remedies, the proper remedy is dismissal of the claim without prejudice [Wyatt v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2003) 315 F.3d 1108, 1119-1120] .

PLRA also does not require that prisoners identify in their initial grievance each defendant they later sue, and exhaustion is not per se inadequate simply because an individual later sued was not named in the grievance. The PLRA requires exhaustion of such administrative remedies as are available [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(a)], but nothing in the statute imposes a "name all defendants" requirement [Jones v. Bock (2007) 549 U.S. 199 , 127 S. Ct. 910, 922-923, 166 L. Ed. 2d 798] .

[3] Pleading

There are special rules regarding pleading in prisoners' civil rights actions brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

In cases brought by prisoners pro se, courts must construe the prisoners' papers liberally [Hughes v. Rowe (1980) 449 U.S. 5, 9-10, 101 S. Ct. 173, 66 L. Ed. 2d 163 ; Eldridge v. Block (9th Cir. 1987) 832 F.2d 1132, 1137 ; see Draper v. Coombs (9th Cir. 1986) 792 F.2d 915, 924 (courts should treat pro se litigants with great leniency when evaluating compliance with technical rules of civil procedure)]. Allegations in the complaint of a pro se prisoner, "however inartfully pleaded," are held "to less stringent standards than formal pleadings drafted by lawyers" [Hughes v. Rowe (1980) 449 U.S. 5, 9, 101 S. Ct. 173, 66 L. Ed. 2d 163 , quoting Haines v. Kerner (1972) 404 U.S. 519, 520, 92 S. Ct. 594, 30 L. Ed. 2d 652] .

Under the Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA), the court must, on its own motion or on the motion of a party, dismiss any action brought with regard to prison conditions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, or other federal law, by a prisoner, if the court is satisfied that the action is frivolous, malicious, fails to state a claim on which relief can be granted, or seeks monetary relief from a defendant who is immune from such relief [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(c)(1); see 28 U.S.C. § 1915A (courts to screen complaints filed by prisoners against governmental entities, officers, or employees)]. The court may dismiss such a claim by a prisoner without first requiring exhaustion of administrative remedies [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(c)(2)].

Another provision of the PLRA provides that any defendant may waive the right to reply to any action brought by a prisoner under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 or other federal law [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(g)(1)]. Notwithstanding any other law or rule of procedure, such a waiver does not constitute an admission of the allegations in the complaint [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(g)(1)]. No relief will be granted to the prisoner plaintiff unless a reply to the complaint has been filed [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(g)(1)]. The court may require any defendant to reply to a prisoner's complaint if the court finds that the plaintiff has a reasonable opportunity to prevail on the merits [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(g)(2)].

PLRA does not require that a prisoner plead and prove exhaustion of administrative remedies, and such a rule promulgated by a court would exceed judicial authority [Jones v. Bock (2007) 549 U.S. 199 , 127 S. Ct. 910, 918-922, 166 L. Ed. 2d 798 (circuit rule requiring prisoner to allege and demonstrate exhaustion in complaint not required by PLRA and crafting and imposing rule exceeded proper limits on judicial role); for discussion of requirement of exhausting administrative remedies under PLRA generally, see § 114.28[2], above].

[4] Damages

[a] Required Proof

The interplay between actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and habeas corpus petitions has given rise to an important limitation on prisoners' actions seeking recovery of damages. To recover damages for allegedly unconstitutional conviction or imprisonment, or for other harm caused by actions whose unlawfulness would render a conviction or sentence invalid, a § 1983 plaintiff must prove that the conviction or sentence has been [Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 486-487, 114 S. Ct. 2364, 129 L. Ed. 2d 383] :

- Reversed on direct appeal;
- Expunged by executive order;
- Declared invalid by a state tribunal authorized to make such determination; or
- Called into question by a federal court's issuance of a writ of habeas corpus.

A claim for damages bearing that relationship to a conviction that has not been so invalidated is not cognizable under § 1983 [Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 487, 114 S. Ct. 2364, 129 L. Ed. 2d 383] . Thus, when a state prisoner seeks damages in a § 1983 suit, the court must consider whether a judgment in favor of the plaintiff would necessarily imply the invalidity of his or her conviction or sentence; if it would, the complaint must be dismissed unless the plaintiff can demonstrate that the conviction or sentence has already been invalidated. But if the court determines that the plaintiff's action, even if successful, will not demonstrate the invalidity of any outstanding criminal judgment against the plaintiff, the action should be allowed to proceed, in the absence of some other bar to the suit [Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 487, 114 S. Ct. 2364, 129 L. Ed. 2d 383] .

[b] Prison Litigation Reform Act

The Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA) added another important limitation on prisoners' actions for damages. No federal civil action may be brought by a prisoner confined in a jail, prison, or other correctional facility, for mental or emotional injury suffered while in custody without a prior showing of physical injury [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(e)]. Section 1997e(e) requires a prior showing of physical injury that need not be significant but must be more than de minimis [Oliver v. Keller (9th Cir. 2002) 289 F.3d 623, 627 (but not importing standard used for Eighth Amendment excessive force claims, which examines whether use of physical force is more than de minimis)]. However, to the extent a prisoner has actionable claims for compensatory, nominal, or punitive damages premised on violations of Fourteenth Amendment rights, and not on alleged mental or emotional injuries, the claims are not barred by § 1997e(e) [Oliver v. Keller (9th Cir. 2002) 289 F.3d 623, 630] .

The limitation of 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(e) is, however, inapplicable to First Amendment claims. The deprivation of First Amendment rights entitles a plaintiff to judicial relief wholly aside from any physical, mental, or emotional injury [Canell v. Lightner (9th Cir. 1998) 143 F.3d 1210, 1213] .

[5] Injunctive Relief

[a] Availability of Injunctive Relief, Generally

Under the Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA), a court may not grant or approve prospective relief regarding prison conditions unless it finds that the relief (1) is narrowly drawn, (2) extends no further than necessary to correct a violation of a federal right, and (3) is the least intrusive means necessary to correct the violation [18 U.S.C. § 3626(a)(1)(A)]. "Prospective relief" means all relief other than compensatory monetary damages [18 U.S.C. § 3626(g)(7)]. "Relief" means all relief in any form a court might grant or approve and includes consent decrees [18 U.S.C. § 3626(g)(9)]. A motion for extension of the court's jurisdiction under a consent decree is prospective relief within the meaning of and governed by the PLRA [Hallett v. Morgan (9th Cir. 2002) 287 F.3d 1193, 1203-1204] .

Before granting prospective relief, a trial court must make the findings mandated by the PLRA, and is required to give substantial weight to any adverse impact on public safety or on the operation of a criminal justice system caused by the relief [18 U.S.C. § 3626(a)(1)(A); Oluwa v. Gomez (9th Cir. 1998) 133 F.3d 1237, 1239 (PLRA provision requiring court to make specific findings before granting prospective relief applied retroactively to pending case involving state prisoner's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim against prison officials alleging refusal to provide religiously mandated diet)].

The PLRA also includes a provision stating that, in a civil action with regard to civil conditions, a court must not order any prospective relief that requires or permits a government official to exceed his or her authority under state or local law or otherwise violates state or local law, unless all of the following conditions are satisfied [18 U.S.C. § 3626(a)(1)(B)]:

- Federal law requires such relief to be ordered in violation of state or local law;
- The relief is necessary to correct the violation of a federal right; and
- No other relief will correct the violation of the federal right.

With regard to preliminary injunctive relief in prison condition cases, the PLRA requires that such relief must be narrowly drawn, extend no further than necessary to correct the harm the court finds requires preliminary relief, and be the least intrusive means necessary to correct that harm [18 U.S.C. § 3626(a)(2)]. The court is to give substantial weight to any adverse impact on public safety or the operation of a criminal justice system caused by the preliminary relief, and must respect principals of comity [18 U.S.C. § 3626(a)(2)]. Preliminary injunctive relief automatically expires 90 days after its entry, unless the court makes certain findings and makes the order final before the expiration of the 90-day period [18 U.S.C. § 3626(a)(2)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Injunctive Relief. Situations where Eighth Amendment cases have been successful often involve claims for injunctive relief. In those situations, qualified immunity may not be asserted and state officials can be sued in their "official" capacities. Although there is a reluctance by courts to become involved in "running" prisons, cases that involve class-wide medical neglect, for example, have often been successful. The Prison Law Office has been particularly successful in bringing these types of cases. By John H. Scott

[b] Special Requirements Applicable to Prison Release Orders

The PLRA includes special requirements applicable to prisoner release orders [18 U.S.C. § 3626(a)(3)]. No court may enter a prisoner release order unless both of the following conditions are satisfied [18 U.S.C. § 3626(a)(3)(A), (C)]:

- A court has previously entered an order for less intrusive relief that has failed to remedy the deprivation of federal rights; and

- The defendant has had a reasonable amount of time to comply with the previous court orders.

In any civil action in federal court with regard to prison conditions, a prisoner release order may be entered only by a three-judge court [18 U.S.C. § 3626(a)(3)(B)], and only if the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that [18 U.S.C. § 3626(a)(3)(E)]:

- Crowding is the primary cause of the violation of a federal right; and
- No other relief will remedy the violation.

The three-judge court may be requested by either a party seeking a prisoner release order or by a federal judge who believes that a prisoner release order should be considered in a case before him or her [18 U.S.C. § 3626(a)(3)(C), (E)].

Certain state or local officials, or governmental units, with responsibilities for prison facilities or prosecution or custody of prisoners, have standing to oppose the imposition or continuation of prisoner release orders [18 U.S.C. § 3626(a)(3)(F)].

[c] Provisions Regarding Termination of Prospective Relief

The PLRA includes provisions regarding the termination of prospective relief [18 U.S.C. § 3626(b)]. In any civil action regarding prison conditions, prospective relief is terminable [18 U.S.C. § 3626(b)(1)(A)]:

- Two years after the date the court granted or approved the relief;
- One year after the date the court denied termination of the relief on a motion; or
- Two years after April 26, 1996, in the case of relief ordered before that date.

Prospective relief is subject to immediate termination if the relief was approved or granted without a finding that the relief is narrowly drawn, extends no further than necessary to correct the violation of federal rights, and is the least intrusive means necessary to correct the violation [18 U.S.C. § 3626(b)(2)].

Prospective relief is not subject to termination if the court makes written findings, based on the record, that prospective relief (1) remains necessary to correct a current and ongoing violation of the federal right, (2) extends no further than necessary to correct the violation, and (3) is narrowly drawn and the least intrusive means to correct the violation [18 U.S.C. § 3626(b)(3)].

Nothing in these provisions prevents a party from moving for an earlier termination of the prospective relief, or from agreeing to an earlier termination of prospective relief [18 U.S.C. § 3626(b)(1)(B), (4)].

[d] Other Applicable Provisions

18 U.S.C. § 3626(c) sets forth provisions governing settlements and consent decrees in cases involving prison conditions.

18 U.S.C. § 3626(d) states that the limitations on remedies in § 3626 do not apply to relief entered by a state court based solely on claims arising under state law.

18 U.S.C. § 3626(e) provides special procedures applicable to motions affecting prospective relief.

18 U.S.C. § 3626(f) includes provisions regarding the appointment of special masters in cases involving prison conditions.

[6] Attorney's Fees

[a] Limitation on Recovery of Fees

The Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA) includes a provision limiting the sorts of prisoner's rights cases in which attorney's fees may be awarded. In an action brought by a prisoner, in which attorney's fees are authorized under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, such fees may not be awarded, except to the extent that both of the following conditions are satisfied [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(d)(1)]:

- The fee was directly and reasonably incurred in proving an actual violation of the plaintiff's rights protected by a statute pursuant to which a fee may be awarded under 42 U.S.C. § 1988; and

- The amount of the fee is proportionately related to the court ordered relief for the violation, or the fee was directly and reasonably incurred in enforcing the relief ordered for the violation.

No fees will be awarded unless the fees were directly and reasonably incurred in proving an actual violation of the prisoner's rights. The plain meaning of "actual violation" excludes a violation that has not been proven in fact, but merely has been asserted. Thus, issuance of a temporary restraining order, without a finding on the merits that the prisoner's rights were violated, will not support an award of fees [Siripongs v. Davis (9th Cir. 2002) 282 F.3d 755, 758] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Effect of PLRA. It is very important to highlight the significance of the PLRA as it relates to Eighth Amendment litigation in particular. By significantly limiting the hourly rate that may be obtained as a prevailing party for attorney's fees and requiring prisoners to exhaust administrative remedies before bringing an action for damages or injunctive relief, there is not much incentive to take these cases unless it is out of the "goodness" in one's heart. In addition, the federal courts have raised the bar so high that it is increasingly difficult to get one of these cases (beyond summary judgment and qualified immunity) to trial. If you are fortunate enough to eventually get an Eighth Amendment case to a jury, the deck is still stacked against you. Nevertheless, there are still many cases that come out of prisons where the facts are so shocking and/or the injuries are so serious that verdicts do occur. By John H. Scott

[b] Source of Payment of Award

The PLRA governs the source of payment of an attorney's fee award. Whenever a monetary judgment is awarded in an action brought by a prisoner, in which attorney's fees are authorized under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, a portion of the judgment (not to exceed 25 percent) must be applied to satisfy the amount of attorney's fees awarded against the defendant [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(d)(2)]. If the attorney's fee award is not greater than 150 percent of the judgment, the excess must be paid by the defendant [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(d)(2)].

The "whenever a monetary judgment is awarded" language of 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(d)(2) caps attorneys' fees incurred for the sole purpose of securing the monetary judgment. By contrast, fees incurred to obtain injunctive relief, whether or not monetary relief was also obtained as a result of those fees, are not limited by this provision. Thus, § 1997e(d)(2) does not cap available fees when an inmate obtains injunctive relief in addition to monetary damages [Dannenberg v. Valadez (9th Cir. 2003) 338 F.3d 1070, 1074-1075] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Nominal Damage Awards. Many Eighth Amendment cases do not have economic damages and result in nominal damage awards. In other words, these cases can be very time consuming and costly with a substantial risk of not getting paid--even if you "win" at trial and get a nominal damage award. By John H. Scott

[c] Cap on Fees

The PLRA caps fees at a maximum hourly rate. In an action brought by a prisoner, in which attorney's fees are authorized under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, no award of attorney's fees may be based on an hourly rate greater than 150 percent of the hourly rate established under 18 U.S.C. § 3006A for payment of court-appointed counsel [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(d)(3)].

Nothing in 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(d) prohibits a prisoner from entering into an agreement to pay attorney's fees in a greater amount, so long as the fee is paid by the individual rather than by the defendant pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1988 [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(d)(4)].

[d] PLRA Provisions Apply Only to Services Performed After PLRA's Effective Date

The PLRA provisions regarding attorney's fees apply with regard to services performed after the PLRA's effective date, but not with regard to services performed before the effective date [Madrid v. Gomez (9th Cir. 1999) 190 F.3d 990, 994 ; see Martin v. Hadix (1999) 527 U.S. 343, 119 S. Ct. 1998, 144 L. Ed. 2d 347, 362 (PLRA limits attorney's fees for postjudgment monitoring services performed after PLRA's effective date but not for postjudgment monitoring services performed before then)].

[7] Proceeding In Forma Pauperis

Under the Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA), a prisoner may not bring a civil action or appeal in forma pauperis if the prisoner has, on three or more occasions, while incarcerated or detained in any facility, brought an action or appeal in a court of the United States that was dismissed on the grounds that it is frivolous, malicious, or fails to state a claim on which relief may be granted [28 U.S.C. § 1915(g)]. This is commonly known as the "three strikes" provision [Andrews v. Cervantes (9th Cir. 2007) 493 F.3d 1047, 1049 ; Andrews v. King (9th Cir. 2005) 398 F.3d 1113, 1116 n.1].

The only exception is if the prisoner is under imminent danger of serious physical injury [28 U.S.C. § 1915(g)]. The exception applies if the danger existed at the time the prisoner filed the complaint [Andrews v. Cervantes (9th Cir. 2007) 493 F.3d 1047, 1053 (prisoner's removal from California prison system after filing complaint was irrelevant to § 1915(g) analysis)]. Once a prisoner satisfies the exception to the three-strikes rule and otherwise qualifies for in forma pauperis status, the district court must docket the entire complaint and resolve all of its claims, without requiring the upfront payment of the filing fee [Andrews v. Cervantes (9th Cir. 2007) 493 F.3d 1047, 1053-1055 (although number of claims in prisoner's suit unquestionably did not allege imminent danger of serious physical injury, complaint as whole should have proceeded IFP if his allegations about danger he faced from contagious diseases met requisite standard)]. A prisoner who alleges that prison officials continue with a practice that has injured the prisoner or others similarly situated in the past will satisfy the ongoing danger standard and meet the imminence prong of the three-strikes exception [Andrews v. Cervantes (9th Cir. 2007) 493 F.3d 1047, 1051-1058 (although at time he filed complaint prisoner already had contracted hepatitis and did not allege he was presently confined with prisoner with another contagious disease, prisoner sufficiently alleged threat of imminent danger of serious physical injury by alleging ongoing policy of not screening inmates for communicable diseases and housing contagious inmates with others without regard to risk they pose)].

"Strikes" are prior cases or appeals, brought while the plaintiff was a prisoner, which were dismissed as frivolous, malicious, or failing to state a claim [Andrews v. King (9th Cir. 2005) 398 F.3d 1113, 1116 n.1]. Not all unsuccessful cases qualify as a strike under § 1915(g). 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g) should be used to deny a prisoner's in forma pauperis status only when, after careful evaluation of the order dismissing an action and other relevant information, the district court determines that the action was dismissed because it was frivolous, malicious, or failed to state a claim. The PLRA does not define "frivolous" or "malicious," nor does it define dismissals for failure to "state a claim upon which relief could be granted." However, a case is frivolous if it is of little weight or importance, having no basis in law or fact [Andrews v. King (9th Cir. 2005) 398 F.3d 1113, 1121 , citing Webster's Third New International Dictionary 913 (1993); see Goland v. United States (9th Cir. 1990) 903 F.2d 1247, 1258 (adopting definition of frivolous)]. A case is also malicious if it was filed with the intention or desire to harm another [Andrews v. King (9th Cir. 2005) 398 F.3d 1113, 1121 , citing Webster's Third New International Dictionary 1367 (1993)]. The phrase "fails to state a claim on which relief may be granted," as used elsewhere in the PLRA, parallels the language of Fed. Rule Civ. Proc. 12(b)(6) [Andrews v. King (9th Cir. 2005) 398 F.3d 1113, 1121 ; see Barren v. Harrington (9th Cir. 1998) 152 F.3d 1193, 1194 (interpreting 28 U.S.C. § 1915(e)(2)(B)(ii) and employing same de novo standard of review applied to Rule 12(b)(6) motions)].

The word "brought" is also not defined in the PLRA. However, in construing a related provision of the PLRA, the Ninth Circuit held that actions are "brought" for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(a) when the complaint is tendered to the district clerk, not when it is subsequently filed [Vaden v. Summerhill (9th Cir. 2006) 449 F.3d 1047, 1050]. The Ninth Circuit has found that this construction of the term "brought" is equally applicable to § 1915(g) [O'Neal v. Price (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 1146, 1152]. Thus, a plaintiff has "brought" an action for the purposes of § 1915(g) when the plaintiff submits a complaint and request to proceed in forma pauperis to the court [see O'Neal v. Price (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 1146, 1152 (two prior actions were "brought" where plaintiff submitted to court complaint and request for in forma pauperis status in both)].

The PLRA also does not define the word "dismissed." The Ninth Circuit has concluded that a district court has "dismissed" a prisoner's case for purposes of § 1915(g) when the court denies the prisoner's application to file the action without prepayment of the filing fee on the ground that the complaint is frivolous, malicious, or fails to state a claim, and thereupon terminates the complaint [O'Neal v. Price (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 1146, 1152-1155]. The PLRA details a court's obligation to dismiss a plaintiff's in forma pauperis complaint in three separate but interrelated provisions [see 28 U.S.C. §§ 1915A, 1915(e)(2), 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(c)]. Read together, these provisions require a district court to dismiss an in forma pauperis complaint when it determines that the complaint meets the statutory criteria. Because the statutes impose a mandatory duty, a district court's termination of an in forma pauperis complaint during the screening process for a reason enumerated in one of the statutes is a dismissal pursuant to the applicable section, even if the district court uses alternative terminology [O'Neal v. Price (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 1146, 1152-1153]. A dismissal without prejudice counts as a strike, so long as the dismissal is made because the action is frivolous, malicious, or fails to state a claim [O'Neal v. Price (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 1146, 1154-1155].

A civil detainee is not a "prisoner" within the meaning of the PLRA [Andrews v. King (9th Cir. 2005) 398 F.3d 1113, 1122]. Thus, for example, dismissals of actions brought while a plaintiff was in the custody of the Immigration and Naturalization Service do not count as "strikes" within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g), so long as the detainee did not also face criminal charges [Andrews v. King (9th Cir. 2005) 398 F.3d 1113, 1121-1122].

When a defendant challenges a prisoner's right to proceed in forma pauperis, the defendant bears the burden of producing sufficient evidence to establish that § 1915(g) bars the plaintiff's in forma pauperis status. Once the defendant has made out a prima facie case, the burden shifts to the plaintiff to persuade the court that 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g) does not apply [Andrews v. King (9th Cir. 2005) 398 F.3d 1113, 1118-1120].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Criminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusExhaustion of RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawSection 1983 ActionsLaw Enforcement OfficialsPrison OfficialsCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsPrison Litigation Reform ActExhaustionCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsPrison Litigation Reform ActJudicial ScreeningCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusCognizable IssuesThreshold Requirements

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.29

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.29 Enforcement of Rights Under Other Statutes

As with claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [see § 114.28[2], above], the Prison Litigation Reform Act ("PLRA") [42 U.S.C. § 1997e et seq.] requires prisoners to exhaust available administrative remedies before bringing claims under the Americans With Disabilities Act and the Rehabilitation Act [O'Guinn v. Lovelock Correctional Center (9th Cir. 2007) 502 F.3d 1056, 1059-1062 ; see 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.; 29 U.S.C. § 794 et seq.].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 114.30-114.49

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

[Reserved]

§§ 114.30[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.50

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.50 Related Matthew Bender Publications

Cook, Sobieski, Civil Rights Actions, Ch. 11, Deprivation of Rights Under Color of State Law--Prisons (Matthew Bender)

Personal Injury--Actions, Defenses, Damages, vol. 22, Prisons, Jails and Reformatories, §§ 1-6 (Matthew Bender)

For related jury instructions regarding civil rights, see Judicial Council Of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI), Series 3000 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureJury InstructionsParticular InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.51

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.51 Federal Constitution

Freedom of speech and religion. U.S. Const., amend. I

Right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures. U.S. Const., amend. IV

Prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment. U.S. Const., amend. VIII

Sovereign immunity of states. U.S. Const., amend. XI

Due process and equal protection clauses, applicable to states. U.S. Const., amend. XIV

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental FreedomsFreedom of ReligionFree Exercise of ReligionConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental FreedomsFreedom of SpeechGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawBill of

RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsCriminal ProcessCruel & Unusual PunishmentConstitutional LawEqual ProtectionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.52

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.52 State Constitution

Inalienable rights. Cal. Const., art. I, § 1

Freedom of speech. Cal. Const., art. I, § 2

Freedom of religion. Cal. Const., art. I, § 4

Due process and equal protection. Cal. Const., art. I, § 7

Freedom from unreasonable searches and seizures. Cal. Const., art. I, § 13

Prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment. Cal. Const., art. I, § 17

Deprivation of right to vote while imprisoned or on parole for conviction of felony. Cal. Const., art. II, § 4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental FreedomsFreedom of ReligionFree Exercise of ReligionConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental FreedomsFreedom of SpeechGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsCriminal ProcessCruel & Unusual PunishmentConstitutional LawEqual ProtectionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.53

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.53 Federal Statutes

Limits on prospective relief regarding prison conditions. 18 U.S.C. § 3626(a)(1)

Jurisdiction of United States District Courts in civil rights cases. 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331, 1343, 1344

Federal habeas corpus remedy. 28 U.S.C. § 2254

Equal rights under law. 42 U.S.C. § 1981

Property rights of citizens. 42 U.S.C. § 1982

Civil action for deprivation of civil rights under color of state law. 42 U.S.C. § 1983

Conspiracy to interfere with civil rights. 42 U.S.C. § 1985

Neglect to prevent conspiracy to interfere with civil rights. 42 U.S.C. § 1986

State law applicable in federal civil rights actions. 42 U.S.C. § 1988(a)

Recovery of attorney's fees in civil rights actions. 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b)

Civil Rights of Institutionalized Persons Act. 42 U.S.C. § 1997 et seq.

Attorney General's institution, and intervention in, actions concerning prisoners. 42 U.S.C. §§ 1997a, 1997b, 1997c, 1997h

Prohibition of retaliation. 42 U.S.C. § 1997d

Suits by prisoners. 42 U.S.C. § 1997e

Prohibition of discrimination by public entities against qualified individuals with disabilities on account of disability. 42 U.S.C. § 12131 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawPractice & ProcedureCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingEqual Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981)General OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingProperty Rights (sec. 1982)General OverviewCivil Rights LawSection 1983 ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawConspiracyGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.54

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.54 State Statutes

Certificate of rehabilitation prevents denial of license because of conviction of crime. Bus. & Prof. Code § 480(b)

Freedom from violence or threat of violence because of protected characteristics. Civ. Code § 51.7

Damages for denial of right provided by Civ. Code § 51.7. Civ. Code § 52(b)

Protection from interference with rights by threats, intimidation, coercion, or violence. Civ. Code § 52.1

Criteria for declaring minor free from custody and control of convicted parent. Fam. Code § 7825

Prisoners eligible for workers' compensation benefits for injury or death. Lab. Code §§ 3370, 3371

Privileged conversation of prisoner. Penal Code § 636

Civil rights of prisoners. Penal Code §§ 2600, 2601

Prisoners as witnesses. Penal Code §§ 2620-2625

Sexual Abuse in Detention Elimination Act. Pen. Code § 2635 et seq.

Mistreatment of prisoners. Penal Code §§ 2650-2657

Prohibition of use of neck chains. Penal Code § 2652.5

Rights related to prisoners' medical care, pregnancy, and abortions. Penal Code §§ 2656, 3405, 3406, 4023.6, 4028; Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 220, 222, 1773, 1774

Organic therapy of prisoners. Penal Code §§ 2670-2680

Disposition of insane prisoners. Penal Code §§ 2684-2685

Temporary removal of prisoners. Penal Code §§ 2690-2692

Employment of prisoners. Penal Code §§ 2700-2792

Examination after commitment; care and treatment; confinement beyond term of commitment. Penal Code § 3403

Family planning, birth control, pregnancy, abortions in prisons. Penal Code §§ 3405-3409

Prisoners' rights as research subjects. Penal Code §§ 3521-3523

County jails. Penal Code §§ 4000-4030

Legislative intent that prisoners be afforded reasonable opportunity to exercise religious freedom. Penal Code § 4027 (persons confined in local detention facilities), Penal Code § 5009 (persons confined in state facilities); Welf. & Inst. Code § 1705 (persons in custody of institution under supervision of the Department of the Youth Authority)

County industrial farms and road camps. Penal Code §§ 4100-4305

Blood donations. Penal Code §§ 4350-4351

Procedure for restoration of rights and application for pardon. Penal Code § 4852.01 et seq.

Rehabilitation of injured prisoners. Penal Code § 5069

Special facilities for incarceration of geriatric inmates and other inmates needing care in long-term skilled nursing facilities. Pen. Code § 6267

Requirements for regulations impacting visitation. Pen. Code § 6400

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawPrisoner RightsFreedom of ReligionCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsMedical TreatmentCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsVisitationCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsGeneral OverviewFamily LawParental Duties &

RightsTermination of RightsInvoluntary TerminationIncarceration

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.55

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.55 State Regulations

Department of Corrections, rules and regulations of the Director of Corrections. 15 Cal. Code Reg. div. 3

Behavior of inmates. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3000 et seq.

State-issued inmate clothing and linen. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3030 et seq.

Inmate work and education. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3040 et seq.

Credits. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3042 et seq.

Inmate food services. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3050 et seq.

Personal cleanliness of inmates. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3060 et seq.

Intake, release, and discharge of inmates. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3075 et seq.

Inmate appeals. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3084 et seq.

Inmate resources. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3090 et seq.

Prison libraries. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3120 et seq.

Inmate mail. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3130 et seq.

Inmate manuscripts. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3150 et seq.

Legal documents of inmates. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3160 et seq.

Visiting. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3170 et seq.

Inmates' personal property. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3190 et seq.

Inmate activities. 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3200 et seq.

General institution regulations. 15 Cal. Code Reg. chap. 1, subchap. 4

Parole. 15 Cal. Code Reg. chap. 1, subchap. 6

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProceduresPostconviction ProceedingsImprisonmentCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsMedical TreatmentCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsEducationCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsAccess to Courts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.55A

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.55A California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI)

For related jury instructions regarding civil rights, including instructions on, for example, the violation of a prisoner's federal civil rights under the Eighth Amendment, see Judicial Council Of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI), Series 3000 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.56

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.56 Decisions

[1] Access to Courts

State law divesting state courts of general jurisdiction of their jurisdiction over damages suits filed by prisoners against state correction officers, including those filed under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and requiring prisoners to pursue claims against state in state's court of claims, which was court of limited jurisdiction in which prisoner would not be entitled to attorney's fees, punitive damages, or injunctive relief, violated federal constitutional Supremacy Clause, where state's policy to shield narrow class of defendants from liability when sued for damages was contrary to Congress' judgment expressed in § 1983 that all persons who violate federal rights while acting under color of state law are liable for damages, and where, having made decision to create courts of general jurisdiction that regularly sit to entertain analogous suits, state was not at liberty to shut courthouse door to federal claims it considered at odds with its local policy. Haywood v. Drown (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 2108, 2114-2118, 173 L. Ed. 2d 920

To show violation of right of access to courts based on inadequate law library, prisoners must show actual injury. Lewis v. Casey (1996) 518 U.S. 343, 349-355, 116 S. Ct. 2174, 135 L. Ed. 2d 606

Prisoners not constitutionally entitled to counsel while in administrative detention and before judicial proceedings are initiated against them. United States v. Gouveia (1984) 467 U.S. 180, 187-192, 104 S. Ct. 2292, 81 L. Ed. 2d 146

Right of access to counsel is essential component of right of access to courts; prisoners must be provided assistance from persons trained in law or access to adequate law libraries. Bounds v. Smith (1977) 430 U.S. 817, 822-823, 828, 97 S. Ct. 1491, 52 L. Ed. 2d 72

Prisoner does not have right to retained or appointed counsel in prison disciplinary proceedings. Baxter v. Palmigiano (1976) 425 U.S. 308, 315, 96 S. Ct. 1551, 47 L. Ed. 2d 810

Prisoner has constitutional right of access to courts under U.S. Const., amend. XIV. Wolff v. McDonnell (1974) 418 U.S. 539, 556, 94 S. Ct. 2963, 41 L. Ed. 2d 935

State and its officers not allowed to abridge or impair prisoner's right to apply to federal court for writ of habeas corpus. Johnson v. Avery (1969) 393 U.S. 483, 486, 89 S. Ct. 747, 21 L. Ed. 2d 718 ; Ex parte Hull (1940) 312 U.S. 546, 549, 61 S. Ct. 640, 85 L. Ed. 1034

Under federal mail box rule, under which pro se prisoner's action was deemed filed at time prisoner delivered it to prison authorities for forwarding to court clerk, state inmate's claim that during cell search during his time at county jail, deputy threw away inmate's religious materials was timely filed, where inmate complied with rule by depositing complaint in locked prison mailbox designated for legal mail within limitations period for claim, and where, because he was not indigent, he was required to deposit complaint in mailbox and could not have handed his legal mail directly to prison official to be mailed; and where declaration or notarized statement that he deposited complaint was unnecessary, because prison's own records showed complaint was sent to district court by registered mail within two-year limitations period. Douglas v. Noelle (9th Cir. 2009) 567 F.3d 1103, 1106-1109

In jail inmate's civil rights action against city, sheriff and deputy sheriffs resulting from his placement in jail's "gang module," district court erred in granting summary to defendants, where neither court nor defendants provided inmate with required fair notice of summary judgment procedure, since district court's instructions contained no instructions regarding either requirements of responding to or consequences of losing on summary judgment and did not alert inmate to fact that failure to file responsive evidentiary materials might result in entry of summary judgment against him and defendants did not provide in separate form as required any notice describing procedural requirements inmate had to meet in countering summary judgment motion or consequences of failing to meet those requirements, including fact that losing on summary judgment would mean effective termination of his case. However, inmate's claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1986 claim was untimely, so that summary judgment was proper. Solis v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2008) 514 F.3d 946, 951-953

State prisoner whose request to attend unrelated civil trial, in which he represented himself, in person was denied by superior court judge, resulting in default judgment against him in civil action, did not state claim for relief under § 1983, when civil claim was unrelated to criminal proceedings and prisoner has no constitutional right of access to courts to litigate unrelated civil claim. As to sheriff, as to whom he was pretrial detainee at time, plaintiff did not allege that reason for sheriff's failure to transport him to civil trial was to punish him and punitive intent could not be inferred from failure to transport. Plaintiff failed to state claim against state court judge who entered default since judge is absolutely immune for judicial acts and entry of default judgment in pending civil case is unquestionably judicial act, and plaintiff could not state claim against Sacramento County Superior Court (or its employees), because such suits are barred by Eleventh Amendment. Finally, plaintiff could not state claim against opposing party's counsel, because opposing counsel was lawyer in private practice not acting under color of state law, and plaintiff's conclusory allegations that lawyer was conspiring with state officers to deprive him of due process were insufficient. Simmons v. Sacramento County Superior Court (9th Cir. 2003) 318 F.3d 1156, 1158-1161

Summary judgment dismissed when magistrate judge served on parties copy of his findings of fact from different case and directed defendants to file summary judgment motion without explaining to pro se prisoner-plaintiff significance of findings, that he intended to take judicial notice of findings in this case or whether or how prisoner could dispute findings in summary judgment process. Wyatt v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2003) 315 F.3d 1108, 1111-1115

28 U.S.C. § 1915(b), provision of Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA), requiring prisoners who file in forma pauperis civil actions to pay full amount of filing fee, allowing for monthly payments for those who cannot pay fee at time of filing, does not violate right of meaningful access to courts, since several provisions of PLRA decrease burden fee requirements place on indigent prisoners and safety-valve provision ensures prisoner cannot be barred from bringing civil action or appeal when prisoner does not have enough money to pay initial fee; however, court cannot dismiss prisoner's case based on failure to pay initial fee when failure to pay is due to lack of funds available to prisoner when payment is ordered. Taylor v. Delatoore (9th Cir. 2002) 281 F.3d 844

28 U.S.C. § 1915(g), a provision of Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA), prohibiting prisoner from bringing civil action or appeal in forma pauperis if prisoner has brought three or more actions dismissed as frivolous, malicious, or failing to state cause of action, unless prisoner is under imminent danger of serious physical injury, does not unconstitutionally infringe prisoner's right of access to courts. Rodriguez v. Cook (9th Cir. 1998) 169 F.3d 1176, 1178-1182

Prison regulations prohibiting disrespectful language by prisoners in grievances held to be violation of prisoners' constitutional right of access to courts. Bradley v. Hall (9th Cir. 1995) 64 F.3d 1276, 1280-1281

Prisons must provide photocopies and ink pens so that prisoners have access to courts. Allen v. Sakai (9th Cir. 1994) 48 F.3d 1082, 1089-1090 , cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1065 (1995)

To show denial of constitutional right to access to courts, prisoner must show actual injury. Vandelft v. Moses (9th Cir. 1994) 31 F.3d 794, 796 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 825 (1995) ; Johnson v. Moore (9th Cir. 1991) 948 F.2d 517, 521

Arbitrary denial of contact visits with attorney violates prisoner's right to meaningful access to courts. Ching v. Lewis (9th Cir. 1990) 895 F.2d 608, 610

Right to self-representation under U.S. Const., amend. VI includes right of access to law books, witnesses, and other tools necessary to prepare defense. Taylor v. List (9th Cir. 1989) 880 F.2d 1040, 1047

Under prison-delivery rule, court of appeal erred in dismissing as untimely notice of appeal by state prison inmate of trial court's dismissal of his medical malpractice lawsuit as barred by statute of limitations, where inmate properly delivered notice of appeal to prison authorities before expiration of 60-day deadline for appealing judgment, even though notice was not received by Superior Court clerk until two days after last day to file notice of appeal had passed. Silverbrand v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 106, 113-129, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 595, 205 P.3d 1047

In hearing held in absence of incarcerated biological father, but in presence of biological father's counsel, juvenile court properly found mother's husband, not biological father, was child's presumed father. Proceeding to declare presumed father was not governed by Pen. Code § 2625(a)-(d), which requires court to order prisoner-parent's temporary removal and production before court when proceeding seeks to terminate parental rights of prisoner under Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 or Fam. Code § 7800 et seq. or to adjudicate child of prisoner dependent child, but by Pen. Code § 2625(e), which gives court discretion whether to order prisoner produced in any other action or proceeding in which prisoner's parental or marital rights are subject to adjudication, and juvenile court did not abuse its discretion in proceeding without biological father's personal attendance at hearing, because when asked what testimony biological father could have provided, counsel's offer encompassed only evidence establishing his threshold qualifications for presumed father status, and court declared that both men or either of them could be found to be presumed fathers, so that testimony became unnecessary, and through his attorney, biological father had opportunity to call witnesses, cross-examine adverse witnesses, and present his own testimony in written form. Under Pen. Code § 2625(d), juvenile court erred in adjudicating child dependent of court without biological father's presence at proceeding or his waiver of that right, but error was harmless when father was not prejudiced by his absence because result would have been the same had he been present. In re Jesusa V. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 588, 599-603, 621-626, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205, 85 P.3d 2

In civil case in which prisoner is defendant, failure to arrange to take prisoner's testimony, when that testimony is required, violates prisoner's due process rights. Payne v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 908, 924-925, 132 Cal. Rptr. 405, 553 P.2d 565

Under U.S. Const., amend. VI, right to absolute privacy in consultation with attorneys is part of right to be represented by counsel in one's defense. In re Jordan (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 930, 941, 103 Cal. Rptr. 849, 500 P.2d 873 ; In re Qualls (1943) 58 Cal. App. 2d 330, 331, 136 P.2d 341

In action by indigent prison inmate against physician for allegedly negligent medical care at correctional facility, trial court abused its discretion by choosing drastic measure of dismissal based on ground prisoner did not appear telephonically at case management conference and subsequent hearing on order to show cause as to whether case should be dismissed, without first determining prisoner had been afforded meaningful access to courts and his failure to appear at required hearings was willful, and on remand, trial court was directed to ensure prisoner was provided meaningful access to courts. Jameson v. Desta (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 672, 678-684, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 345

Trial court abused its discretion in granting summary judgment motion and entering judgment in favor of all defendants without first ensuring indigent pro se prisoner's right to meaningful court access to prosecute bona fide civil claims was being protected, where prisoner vigorously pursued his claim at administrative, trial, and appellate levels to best of his ability, and, despite limitations of his status as prisoner, of which he advised court, consistent and reasonable, albeit often unsuccessful, efforts to effectuate service, to file timely motions and other legal documents, and to appear at hearings; where, when trial court clerk repeatedly declined to file his legal documents for failure to comply with applicable court rules and procedures, despite his good faith efforts to comply, he resubmitted them, often more than once, until they were properly filed; where, when hearings were scheduled, he not only provided notice to opposing counsel when required to do so, he repeatedly requested court orders to permit him to appear telephonically from prison, but it was not clear from record that trial court considered each of his requests and, perhaps not surprisingly, he was more often than not absent from hearings; and where he repeatedly requested in his case management statements and other legal documents that trial court consider his dire need for appointment of counsel to represent him. Apollo v. Gyaami (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1468, 1482-1487, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 127

In propria persona criminal defendant failed to show denial of access to law library and to court, when defendant forfeited the issue by failing to raise it in trial court in timely fashion and failing to request remedy in trial court. Further, defendant had advisory counsel who adequately protecting his rights, cross-examined witnesses, made objections, argued Pen. Code § 995 motion to dismiss information, and made closing argument. Thus, there is no Sixth Amendment right to law library access when propria persona defendant is assisted by advisory counsel. Defendant presented no competent evidence of deprivation of services necessary to provide access to court and made no showing of prejudice. People v. Ringo (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 870, 876-877, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 444

In government tort claim action by prisoner against prison officials, pro se civil complaint should have been deemed filed on date it was properly delivered to prison officials pursuant to prison's established procedures for prisoners' mail, which was within effective statute of limitations, rather than on date it was actually filed by clerk of court, which was after statute had expired. Moore v. Twomey (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 910, 913-918, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 163

Trial court erred in ordering prison to modify visiting area specially constructed for inmate charged with murder to visit with attorney, by removing glass between inmate and counsel, replacing it with wire mesh, by constructing pass-through at bottom of wire mesh for exchange of papers, and by further soundproofing room, when warden's objective in having glass partition and secure mechanism for exchange of papers is to prevent introduction of contraband and thereby protect inmates, staff, and general public from possibility of assault, hostage-taking, and escape. Small v. Superior Court (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1000, 1010-1015, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550

Statutory right under Pen. Code § 2625 for inmate to be present at hearings denying him reunification services with daughter does not equate with due process violation for failure to facilitate inmate's appearance; because inmate had appointed counsel present at hearings to represent his interests, he was afforded requisite due process rights. In re Axsana S. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 262, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 701

In civil cases in which prisoners have no right to appear in court, courts are encouraged to devise alternative means to secure prisoners meaningful access to courts. Hoversten v. Superior Court of San Luis Obispo (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 636, 642-643, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197

Installation of collect-call only telephones unconstitutionally deprived county jail inmates of access to public defenders. In re Grimes (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1175, 1182-1183, 256 Cal. Rptr. 690

Right of privacy secured by Cal. Const., art. I, § 1, prohibits regulation that permits correspondence from court to be opened without prisoner present. In re Short (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 268, 272, 127 Cal. Rptr. 498

[2] Protection Against Cruel and Unusual Punishment

District court erred in requiring prisoner to show significant injury in order to state excessive force claim under Eighth Amendment prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment against corrections officers, where district court erred in giving decisive weight to purportedly de minimis nature of prisoner's injuries; to prevail, prisoner will ultimately have to prove that assault actually occurred and was carried out maliciously and sadistically rather than as part of a good-faith effort to maintain or restore discipline, and, even if he succeeds, relatively modest nature of his alleged injuries would no doubt limit damages he could recover. Wilkins v. Gaddy (2010) -- U.S. --, 130 S. Ct. 1175, 1177-1180, 175 L. Ed. 2d 995

Use of "cut-down" procedure to access prisoner's veins for purposes of lethal injection, under which prison personnel would make 2-inch incision in prisoner's arm or leg, procedure would take place one hour before scheduled execution, and only local anesthesia would be used, and there was no assurance physician would perform or even be present for procedure, which was necessary because due to years of drug abuse, prisoner had severely compromised peripheral veins which were inaccessible by standard techniques for gaining intravenous access such as needle, alleged violation of Eighth Amendment prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment, where prison officials conceded 42 U.S.C. § 1983 would be appropriate vehicle for inmate not facing execution to bring "deliberate indifference" challenge to constitutionality of cut-down procedure if used to gain venous access for purposes of providing medical treatment and there was no reason on face of complaint to treat claim differently solely because prisoner was condemned to die; and where cut-down was not statutorily mandated part of lethal injection protocol, and prisoner was able to present acceptable alternatives for gaining venous access. Nelson v. Campbell (2004) 541 U.S. 637, 124 S. Ct. 2117, 2122-2125, 158 L. Ed. 2d 924

Deliberate indifference standard applied when transsexual inmate was assaulted by another inmate after repeatedly requesting transfer to a different facility because of risk of harm. Farmer v. Brennan (1994) 511 U.S. 825, 834, 114 S. Ct. 1970, 128 L. Ed. 2d 811

Inmate exposed almost continuously to secondary tobacco smoke stated cause of action under Eighth Amendment. Helling v. McKinney (1993) 509 U.S. 25, 35-37, 113 S. Ct. 2475, 125 L. Ed. 2d 22

Prison officer's use of excessive force may constitute cruel and unusual punishment, even when inmate does not suffer serious injury. Hudson v. McMillian (1992) 503 U.S. 1, 7, 112 S. Ct. 995, 117 L. Ed. 2d 156

Deliberate indifference standard applied to Eighth Amendment claims regarding conditions of confinement. Wilson v. Seiter (1991) 501 U.S. 294, 297-303, 111 S. Ct. 2321, 115 L. Ed. 2d 271

Shooting of inmate during attempt to stop prison riot is cruel and unusual punishment if undertaken maliciously and sadistically for very purpose of causing harm. Whitley v. Albers (1986) 475 U.S. 312, 318-321, 106 S. Ct. 1078, 89 L. Ed. 2d 251

Eighth Amendment protects persons convicted of crimes from cruel and unusual punishment; due process clause protects pretrial detainees from being subjected to conditions that constitute punishment; determining whether condition constitutes punishment requires consideration of whether it is reasonably related to legitimate government objective and whether there is proof of intent to punish. Block v. Rutherford (1984) 468 U.S. 576, 583-585, 104 S. Ct. 3227, 82 L. Ed. 2d 438

Overcrowding may amount to cruel and unusual punishment, if amounting to wanton and unnecessary infliction of pain or if grossly disproportionate to severity of crime. Rhodes v. Chapman (1981) 452 U.S. 337, 347, 101 S. Ct. 2392, 69 L. Ed. 2d 59

In action by prisoner for deprivation of exercise during lockdowns as violation of Eighth Amendment, trial court erred in granting summary judgment to prison officials, where cumulative total of the lockdowns amounted to much more than 30 days and facts justifying officials' exercise of discretion remained to be established at trial. Richardson v. Runnels (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 666, 672

In § 1983 action by state prison inmate alleging that he was beaten by his cellmate and prison officer was liable under Eighth Amendment for failing to abate known risk, instructions to jury that it could find for inmate only if jury concluded that officer took action so as to directly cause inmate's injuries misstated law, where direct causation by affirmative action was not necessary and officer could be held liable under Eighth Amendment if he knew inmate faced substantial risk of serious harm and disregarded risk by failing to take reasonable measures to abate it, and where failure to act instruction had foundation in evidence. Error was not harmless, because instructions added extra element to inmate's burden of proof, and because trial court never explained to jury what "deliberately indifferent" meant, despite that they were pivotal words on jury verdict form, and appellate court could not determine whether jury understood "deliberate indifference" to include affirmative act element, so that it could not say verdict would have been same without error. Clem v. Lomeli (9th Cir. 2009) 566 F.3d 1177, 1181-1183

Prisoner sufficiently alleged violation of his Eighth Amendment right to be free from cruel and unusual punishment when corrections officer deprived him of 16 meals over 23-day period to deny officer qualified immunity, where jury could find prisoner suffered sufficiently serious deprivation because food is one of life's basic necessities, and that officer was deliberately indifferent to obvious risk of harm; and where it was clearly established under Eighth Amendment that prison officials were obligated to provide inmates with nutritionally adequate meals on regular basis at time of deprivation of meals and reasonable corrections officer should have known that when inmate could have been fed without risk to officer's safety, as was assumed to be case here, officer could not arbitrarily deny inmate his meals. Foster v. Runnels (9th Cir. 2009) 554 F.3d 807, 812-816

California prison regulations governing inmate classification did not create cognizable Eighth or Fourteenth Amendment liberty interests, when classification of prisoners did not present type of atypical, significant deprivation in which state might conceivably create liberty interest. Further, California regulation allowing inmates to participate in publication and distribution of inmate publication only with institution head's specific approval did not create liberty interest importing Fourteenth Amendment, because prison official's determination that prisoner may not engage in publication and distribution of inmate publication also did not present type of atypical significant deprivation in which state might conceivably create liberty interest. Myron v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2007) 476 F.3d 716, 718-719

Prisoner who was injured by defective printing press in course of his employment in prison print shop stated claim in action pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for violation of Eighth Amendment prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment and for violation of Fourteenth Amendment prohibition of deprivation of liberty without due process by compelling him to work under dangerous conditions, resulting in his injury. Defendants were not entitled to qualified immunity on summary judgment motion, where evidence, viewed in light most favorable to prisoner, showed that supervisor violated prisoner's constitutional right not to be compelled to perform work that endangered his health and caused undue pain, and before injury, contours of right were sufficiently clear that reasonable prison official would or should have understood that compelling inmate to continue operating defective and dangerous prison work equipment would violate Eighth Amendment. Morgan v. Morgensen (9th Cir. 2006) 465 F.3d 1041, 1045-1047

Inmate sufficiently alleged failure-to-protect cause of action against prison personnel, when inmate alleged facts detailing religiously motivated violence and that prison officials knew violence and friction involved differences between prison's Muslim community over religious leadership and services at prison, yet did nothing to remedy situation, and facts that, when accepted as true and construed in light most favorable to inmate, raised inference prison officials created risk and then facilitated attacks against inmate. Inmate also sufficiently alleged cause of action for violation of Eighth Amendment in conditions by alleging serious health hazards in disciplinary segregation yard, including toilets that did not work, sinks that were rusted and stagnant pools of water infested with insects, and lack of cold water even though temperatures in yard exceeded 100 degrees, because in 100 degree plus weather, lack of drinkable water can be dangerous, precluding use of yard. Hearns v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2005) 413 F.3d 1036, 1040-1043

In prisoner's action alleging cruel and unusual punishment, trial court properly denied correctional officer's motion for summary judgment, when prisoner's handwritten declaration under oath in his opposition to officer's motion described vengeful acts of frustrated investigator, identifying officer's unconstitutional purpose and deeds, and to suppose any reasonable person, let alone trained prison officer, would not know that kicking helpless prisoner's genitals was cruel and unusual conduct was beyond belief. Watts v. McKinney (9th Cir. 2005) 394 F.3d 710, 711

Although prisoners have right to be free from sexual abuse, whether at hands of fellow inmates or prison guards, Eighth Amendment's protections do not necessarily extend to mere verbal sexual harassment. Thus, trial court properly dismissed inmate's claim of violation of Eighth Amendment, when guard was in elevated, glass-enclosed control booth where he allegedly exposed himself to inmate, isolated incident lasted for period of no more than 30 to 40 seconds, and guard never physically touched inmate, so that district court properly concluded incident was not sufficiently serious to constitute Eighth Amendment violation. Austin v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2004) 367 F.3d 1167, 1171-1172

District court properly rejected inmate's challenge to lethal injection as authorized and presumptive method of execution in California, based on alleged deficiencies in protocol, when court properly weighed undue delay in balance of equities since inmate was aware of potential for claim when he filed his first federal habeas petition, when Ninth Circuit had previously upheld constitutionality of lethal injection as method of execution, and when inmate failed to show he was subject to unnecessary risk of unconstitutional pain or suffering such that his execution by lethal injection under California's protocol must be restrained. Cooper v. Rimmer (9th Cir. 2004) 358 F.3d 655, 656-659

In inmate's action against prison guard for use of excessive force based on shooting inmate in leg during prison yard fight, guard was entitled to qualified immunity, when, although shooting passive, unarmed inmate standing near fight between other inmates, none of whom was armed, when no inmate was in danger of great bodily harm, would inflict unnecessary and wanton pain and governing law was clearly established at time of shooting, reasonable officer could have believed that shooting one inmate in leg to stop assault that could have seriously injured or killed another inmate was good-faith effort to restore order, and thus lawful. Marquez v. Gutierrez (9th Cir. 2003) 322 F.3d 689

Inmates in cells neighboring cell of two inmates who were fighting failed to establish that prison officials applied pepper spray maliciously and sadistically for purpose of causing harm in breaking up fight, when allegation that officials administered second application of pepper spray was dispensed after sounds of coughing and gagging were heard from cell alone does not lead to inference official used pepper spray maliciously and sadistically for purpose of causing harm, so that officials were protected by qualified immunity. Clement v. Gomez (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 898, 903-904

In class actions by prison inmates alleging violation of U.S. Const., amend. VIII, based on holding of inmates out-of-doors while prison officials searched prison facilities after quelling disturbances, trial court erroneously granted summary judgment to prison officials, when allegations in one action that inmates did not receive protection from elements sufficient to ward off heat-related illnesses, that inmates received inedible food and inadequate drinking water for four days, that inmates did not receive adequate access to toilets to avoid soiling themselves and were not allowed to clean themselves thereafter, and in the other action that inmates were exposed to subfreezing temperatures and lack of access to toilets, were sufficient to state claim under Eighth Amendment. Johnson v. Lewis (9th Cir. 2000) 217 F.3d 726

Prison officers acted with deliberate indifference to inmate's health and safety when inmate was forced to work without protection from asbestos exposure despite supervising officer's knowledge of potential exposure. Wallis v. Baldwin (9th Cir. 1995) 70 F.3d 1074, 1076-1077

Deliberate indifference is question of fact when plaintiff prisoner placed in cell with violent cellmate. White v. Roper (9th Cir. 1990) 901 F.2d 1501, 1503-1506

Complaint alleging unsanitary food handling and polluted water in prison sufficient to state Eighth Amendment claim. Jackson v. Arizona (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 639, 641

Prison overcrowding, requiring double and triple-celling, constituted Eighth Amendment violation. Balla v. Idaho State Bd. of Corrections (9th Cir. 1989) 869 F.2d 461, 470-473

Adequate lighting, plumbing, and fire prevention is required in prisons by Eighth Amendment. Hoptowit v. Spellman (9th Cir. 1985) 753 F.2d 779, 783-784

Eighth Amendment protection against cruel and unusual punishment does not attach unless there has been trial and sentencing; pretrial detainee protected by due process clause of Fourteenth Amendment rather than Eighth Amendment. Ochoa v Superior Court (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 159, 174-175, 216 Cal. Rptr. 661, 703 P.2d 1

There is no private right of action for damages for violation of cruel or unusual punishment clause of Cal. Const., art. I, § 17; thus, trial court properly dismissed claim of male-to-female transgender inmate based on defendants' alleged failure to take action on plaintiff's repeated complaints she was being beaten and raped by her cellmate at state prison. Giraldo v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 231, 253-257, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371

[3] Medical Care

Court of Appeals erred in concluding that prisoner's allegations concerning harm caused him by the termination of his medication to treat hepatitis C were too conclusory to establish for pleading purposes that prisoner had suffered cognizable independent harm as result of removal from hepatitis C treatment program, where Fed. Rule Civ. Proc. 8(a)(2) required only short and plain statement of claim showing pleader was entitled to relief; complaint alleged that decision to remove prisoner from prescribed hepatitis C medication was endangering his life, medication was withheld shortly after he had commenced treatment program that would take one year, he was still in need of treatment for disease, and prison officials were refusing to provide treatment, which was enough to satisfy Rule 8(a)(2); and prisoner bolstered his claim by making more specific allegations in documents attached to complaint and in later filings. Erickson v. Pardus (2007) 551 U.S. 89, 127 S. Ct. 2197, 2197-2200, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1081, 1083-1086

In case of alleged failure to provide adequate medical care to prisoner, question is whether defendants acted with deliberate indifference to prisoner's serious medical needs. Estelle v. Gamble (1976) 429 U.S. 97, 104, 97 S. Ct. 285, 50 L. Ed. 2d 251

In action by pretrial detainee's parents under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against mental health specialist, two sheriff's deputies, and the county, resulting detainee's suicide while in custody, alleging deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs, and county's established policies, its failure to train employees, and its ratification of the officials' illegal actions, district erred in granting summary judgment to mental health specialist on grounds of qualified immunity, where, viewing evidence in light most favorable to parents, rational jury could conclude she was "on notice" of detainee's suicidal condition and actually knew of his depressive, suicidal condition and need for mental health treatment and of risk of harm he faced if denied medical attention, so there was genuine issue of material fact as to whether she was deliberately indifferent to substantial risk of harm to him; and where, in light of her understanding that he was not "out of the woods" yet and of clearly established law at time, reasonable mental health professional could not have thought it was lawful to remove key suicide prevention measures put in place by prior mental health staff member. District court properly granted summary judgment to one deputy, where parents' evidence was insufficient to allow reasonable jury to conclude he knew detainee was subject to substantial risk of serious harm when he moved him to general population, and no evidence raised genuine issue of material fact demonstrating he was subjectively aware of risk to detainee. District court also properly granted summary judgment to other deputy, where record did not include sufficient direct or circumstantial evidence to create genuine issue of material fact as to whether deputy was subjectively aware of substantial risk of harm to deputy and he deliberately ignored that risk. District court did not err in granting summary judgment in favor of county, where, although reasonable jury could conclude custodial and mental health staff were deficient in their implementation of county's written policy because they failed to ensure they had approval of mental health staff before moving detainee, this did not create triable issue of fact on whether county itself was liable for deficiency, and there was no evidence county had longstanding custom or practice of moving detainees from observation cell into general population without consultation with mental health staff or contrary to their recommendations or of longstanding custom or practice of miscommunication between mental health staff and custodial staff, nothing indicated that improper transfers of suicidal inmates happened so frequently that need for corrective measures must have been plainly obvious to policymakers, and there was no material evidence on issue of county's knowledge or obviousness of problem; where parents failed to dispute county's evidence it was not deliberately indifferent to needs of mentally ill pretrial detainees, based on reasonable and well-established written policies for handling detainee mental health needs; where parents failed to adduce evidence that county was on actual or constructive notice of problem with mental health understaffing amounting to constitutional tort, and there was no evidence that alleged understaffing problem led to repeated violations of inmates' constitutional rights or county was aware of and acquiesced in pattern of constitutional violations; and where bare allegation of parents that county was liable for constitutional torts of its employees because it ratified employees' unconstitutional acts was insufficient to create triable issue of fact. Clouthier v. County of Contra Costa (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1232, 1240-1254

District court erred in granting summary judgment and police officers could be liable to children of arrestee who committed suicide while in their custody, where children presented sufficient objective evidence of their mother's objective, serious medical need for reasonable jury to find in their favor; where children presented sufficient circumstantial evidence to create genuine issue of fact regarding officers' subjective awareness of her serious medical need and whether officers responded adequately to situation presented; where children presented sufficient evidence of actual and proximate causation to defeat summary judgment and give rise to jury question whether officers' omissions caused her eventual suicide; and where officers were not entitled to qualified immunity, because it was clearly established that Eighth Amendment protected against deliberate indifference to detainee's serious risk of suicide. With regard to liability of city, children established genuine issue of fact on question of city's failure to train its officers in suicide prevention and identification of suicide risks, that failure to train officers produced highly predictable consequence that police officers would fail to respond to serious risks of suicide and constitutional violations will ensue, and that had city trained its officers, violation of arrestee's constitutional rights could have been avoided; and children also presented sufficient evidence of city's failure to adopt and implement suicide-prevention policies so as to give rise to jury question. However, there was no evidence city should have known or did know that one officer would have been likely to show deliberate indifference in these circumstances and causal link between city's failure to address his deficient performance in other aspects of his job and his failure to respond appropriately here was tenuous at best; further, failure to discipline officers was not separate ground for establishing municipal liability, but, rather, was evidence tending to establish absence of or failure to enforce policy on suicide prevention. Conn v. City of Reno (9th Cir. 2009) 572 F.3d 1047, 1054-1065

Wife of county jail inmate who suffered from congestive heart failure and who died in custody as result of cardiac arrest presented sufficient evidence to create triable issue regarding county's liability for her husband's death. Complaint raised genuine issue of triable fact regarding whether county medical facility staff acted with deliberate indifference to his serious medical needs in violation of Eighth Amendment, since evidence created triable issue of fact regarding whether county's policy of relying on medical professionals without training them how to implement proper procedures for documenting, monitoring, and assessing patients for medical instability within confines of medical facility amounted to deliberate indifference, as to which policy of hiring trained medical professionals did not insulate county from municipal liability as matter of law. Further, evidence created triable issue regarding whether county's failure to implement policy for responding to fall of medically unstable patient, policy providing for prompt medical assessment if patient refused necessary treatment, and transfer policy directing staff immediately to transfer patients no longer medically stable, amounted to deliberate indifference to inmate's constitutional rights. Lastly, evidence created triable issue as to whether county's policy deficiencies were moving force behind inmate's death. Long v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2006) 442 F.3d 1178, 1185-1190

District court erred in adopting magistrate judge's Findings and Recommendation to grant two prison doctors and warden summary judgment motion in inmate's action alleging defendants violated his constitutional rights by being deliberately indifferent to his serious medical needs in violation of the Eighth Amendment as result of treatment he received for fractured thumb. Inmate presented sufficient evidence to have finder of fact decide when first doctor knew of inmate's fractured thumb and his need to have it set and cast and whether care provided by doctor constituted deliberate indifference to inmate's serious medical need. As to second doctor and warden, as prison administrators they would be liable for deliberate indifference if they knowingly failed to respond to inmate's requests for help, and although in answers to interrogatories, both advised they were not aware of inmate's condition until lawsuit, inmate was entitled to inference at summary judgment stage that they received letters he swore he sent to them through institutional mail advising of his fractured thumb and need to see orthopedist. Jett v. Penner (9th Cir. 2006) 439 F.3d 1091, 1096-1099

Parents of inmate being treated for psychological disorders and withdrawal from crystal methamphetamine, who died from combined toxic effect of two prescribed drugs, failed to present triable issue of fact of physician's deliberate indifference to inmate's medical needs in violation of Eighth Amendment and district court property granted summary judgment in favor of physician. Record, viewed in light most favorable to parents, reflected that physician was consistently responsive to inmate's medical needs, and no genuine issue of fact was raised regarding physician's subjective knowledge and conscious disregard of substantial risk of serious injury to inmate. Court would not reach question of whether physician's responses were medically reasonable given inmate's medical condition and background. Toguchi v. Chung (9th Cir. 2004) 391 F.3d 1051, 1058-1060

District court properly dismissed inmate's claim of deliberate indifference to medical need, when there was no medical evidence to support inmate's contention that guard's alleged sexual harassment of inmate by exposing himself to inmate exacerbated inmate's mental health condition or that guard acted intentionally to deny, delay, or interfere with inmate's mental health treatment. Austin v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2004) 367 F.3d 1167, 1172

Diabetic pretrial detainee presented sufficient evidence of officers' deliberate indifference to his medical needs to overcome summary judgment motion, when officers near detainee in holding cell or present when detainee was carried to medical observation cell were on notice of diabetic condition and his need for food, and although there was no direct evidence officers knew risk of harm from diabetes, officers' indifference to detainee's extreme behavior, his obviously sickly appearance, and his explicit statements that he needed food because he was diabetic could easily lead jury to find officers consciously disregarded serious risk to his health. Lolli v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2003) 351 F.3d 410, 418-421

In claim of deliberate indifference to medical needs of prison inmates based on prison officials not allowing inmates in secured housing unit to shower or have medical attention for four hours after administration of pepper spray to neighboring cell to stop two inmates from fighting, officials were not entitled to qualified immunity, when prisoners might be able to show officials were subjectively aware of risk of serious injury when they denied showers and medical attention for the inmates for four-hour period, since officers allegedly took turns stepping outside for fresh air and allegedly coughed and gagged in hall, and since prisoners allegedly made repeated requests for attention, complaining of breathing problems, pain, and asthma attacks, and officers' decision to open yard door and place industrial fan in doorway suggested pepper spray did not entirely dissipate at once and officers may have been aware of condition, and when general law regarding medical treatment of prisoners was clearly established at time of incident and it was also clearly established that officers could not intentionally deny or delay access to medical care. Further, inmates claimed supervisory officials failed to institute adequate prison policies for minimizing effects of pepper spray on bystander inmates. Clement v. Gomez (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 898, 904-906

Trial court erroneously granted summary judgment to county in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action based on death of jail detainee who displayed symptoms of being in manic state, which included being combative and uncooperative, when record demonstrated that county's failure to respond to detainee's urgent need for medical attention was direct result of affirmative county medical screening policy that was deliberately indifferent to his need, based on policy to delay screening if inmate was combative, uncooperative, or unable to effectively answer questions due to intoxication, and there was evidence to support inference that if medical staff had evaluated him, prevented him from entering jail, and directed him to mental hospital, he almost certainly would have received care he needed, rather than face conditions that worsened heart condition leading to his death; and when plethora of circumstantial evidence could lead reasonable jury to infer that county was aware of risk its policies presented. Further, jury could find nurse who was on duty at jail on night of detainee's death was deliberately indifferent to his serious medical needs, that nurse's constitutional violation arguably resulted from omission in county's policy regarding handling of prescription medication by failing to suggest that nurse act on any information that medication might bear, even in event nurse was unable to perform medical evaluation because policy precluded medical evaluations when detainee is uncooperative, combative, or intoxicated, and that this omission was sufficiently likely to result in violation of detainee's right to medical care that county was deliberately indifferent to these needs. However, record did not support conclusion that individual defendant deputies who had contact with detainee after he was admitted to jail were deliberately indifferent to his mental health condition, when there was no evidenced deputies knew of his mental health condition. Gibson v. County of Washoe (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 1175, 1187

District court made extensive factual findings with regard to mental health and dental services and properly concluded that female inmates failed to prove that quality and availability of services fell below minimum required by Eighth Amendment in determining that PLRA prevented district court from granting their motion to extend consent decree. Plaintiffs failed to establish that dental care, including delays in providing treatment and lack of routine teeth cleaning, sanctions imposed by prison officials for self-harm behavior, a handful of incidents in which force was used on mentally ill prisoners in absence of consultations with mental health staff, low staffing levels, or policies with regard to prisoner transfers, mental health segregation, medication management, or Offender Health Plan showed deliberate indifference to prisoners' medical needs. Hallett v. Morgan (9th Cir. 2002) 287 F.3d 1193

Deliberate indifference to medical needs amounts to Eighth Amendment violation only if those needs are serious; serious medical needs exist if failure to treat prisoner's condition could result in further significant injury or "unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain." McGuckin v. Smith (9th Cir. 1992) 974 F.2d 1050, 1059

Even without denial of access to medical and psychiatric help, deliberate indifference to medical needs occurs when psychiatric staff is so inadequate that any psychological illness would go undiagnosed and untreated. Cabrales v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1988) 864 F.2d 1454, 1461

Violation of Eighth Amendment proscription against cruel and unusual punishment based on inadequate medical care requires deliberate indifference to serious medical needs of prisoners; mere negligence in diagnosing or treating medical condition, without more, does not violate prisoner's rights. Hutchinson v. United States (9th Cir. 1988) 838 F.2d 390, 394

Mentally disordered offenders civilly committed after completing parole can be compelled to take antipsychotic medication in nonemergency situation only if court, at time offender is committed or recommitted or in separate proceeding, finds offender is incompetent or incapable of making decisions about his or her medical treatment or offender is dangerous within meaning of Welf. & Inst. Code § 5300. In re Qawi (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1, 9-10, 14-28, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780, 81 P.3d 224

Medical condition of juvenile's probation that he continue to take medications prescribed by physician was not overbroad, where record showed trial court intended medication condition to have narrow scope and condition had to be construed as only requiring him to continue taking medications prescribed by his doctors for depression and social anxiety disorder. Condition did not violate juvenile's constitutional privacy or liberty rights, where there was no factual support that antidepressants and anxiolytics covered by condition would impair his ability to function, would produce wholesale personality changes, or would threaten life-altering side effects, and he reported no troubling side effects from medications; where independent medical input was supplied to satisfaction of juvenile and his family by their own chosen doctors, who had independently prescribed psychotropic medication and would continue, under condition of probation, to determine medically appropriate course of treatment; and where, because he was already taking psychotropic medications for depression and social anxiety disorder and apparently had no objection to continuing to do so, aspect of involuntary administration of unwanted mind-altering drugs did not come into play. In re Luis F. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 176, 184-192, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 174

Appointment by federal district of receiver to provide leadership and executive management of California prison medical health care delivery system with goals of restructuring day-to-day operations and developing, implementing, and validating new, sustainable system to provide constitutionally adequate medical care as soon as practicable, under which receiver was given duty to control, oversee, supervise, and direct all administrative, personnel, financial, accounting, contractual, legal, and other operational functions of the medical delivery component of California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation and to undertake immediate and/or short-term measures designed to improve medical care, did not divest California courts of their constitutional jurisdiction over matters raised through habeas corpus, and receiver was subject to jurisdiction, and both warden having physical custody of inmate and receiver were necessary and proper parties to respond in such actions. In re Estevez (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1445, 1457-1463, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 479

Constitutional right of mentally disordered offender to fair hearing was violated by order authorizing state hospital to forcibly administer psychotropic medication issued at hearing at which he was absent, where he did not personally waive his right to be present and was not unable to attend hearing, but deprivation of his right to be present was harmless beyond reasonable doubt, because his counsel thoroughly cross-examined witness whose testimony was compelling and who testified offender was physically aggressive before medication was administered and he was responding to the medication and offender, who was thereafter present, was given full and fair opportunity to rebut testimony but did not do so. Offender was not denied right to jury trial, because there is no federal or state constitutional or state statutory right to jury trial, and substantial evidence supported trial court's finding that he was danger to others within meaning of Welf & Inst. Code § 5300. People v. Fisher (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1012-1017, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609

[4] Exercise

In inmate's action alleging denial of outdoor exercise during lockdown periods, which were based on inmate violence toward guards, staff, and other inmates, jury instruction correctly stated deliberate indifference standard, but failure to give additional guidance on deference jury was required to give to expert judgment of prison officials rendered instruction incomplete and misleading, which was prejudicial, because if properly instructed, jurors might well have reached different conclusion. Further, prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity, where inmate's constitutional right to outdoor exercise was not absolute and indefeasible and did not trump all other considerations, and officials had substantial reasons for imposing lockdowns in attempting to restore order during series of brutal attacks, including some that were lethal or nearly so; and where great deal of violence took place during outdoor exercise, and, while denying outdoor exercise for extended periods carried some risk of harm, officials' judgment that there was greater risk of harm from allowing outdoor exercise was reasonable. Norwood v. Vance (9th Cir. 2009) 572 F.3d 626, 630-633

Appeals officer's handwritten statement warning inmate to be careful what he writes on grievance forms was sufficient to establish genuine issue of material fact as to whether it constituted adverse action in claim for retaliation for exercise of First Amendment right of filing grievances, where mere threat of harm could be adverse action regardless of whether it was carried out and threat of harm was not required to be explicit and specific to constitute an adverse action; where, despite any disrespectful language by inmate, it was undisputed that warning was motivated by protected conduct; where reasonable person may have been chilled by officer's warning; and where there was no indication that language in written complaint like one filed by inmate posed substantial threat to security and discipline in prison facility. Brodheim v. Cry (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1262, 1269-1273

Trial court erred by terminating order in class action giving pretrial detainees in administrative segregation at county jail limited access to regular exercise, where showing that pretrial detainees in administrative segregation and other restrictive classifications, such as protective custody, were typically afforded, at best, only 90 minutes weekly in space equipped for exercise establish § 1983 violation, and where order requiring inmates in administrative segregation to be permitted exercise at least twice each week for total of not less than two hours per week was necessary to correct current and ongoing violation of federal right and was narrowly drawn and least intrusive means to correct violation. Pierce v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2008) 519 F.3d 985, 1005-1007

Claim of cruel and unusual punishment based on deprivation of exercise requires that prison officials act with deliberate indifference, and fail to meet minimal civilized measure of life's necessities. Allen v. Sakai (9th Cir. 1994) 48 F.3d 1082, 1087 , cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1065 (1995)

[5] Equal Protection

Strict scrutiny is proper standard of review for California Department of Corrections' unwritten policy of racially segregating prisoners in double cells in reception centers for up to 60 days each time they enter new correctional facility. Court would not decide whether policy violated Equal Protection Clause. Johnson v. California (2005) 543 U.S. 499, 125 S. Ct. 1141, 1146-1152, 160 L. Ed. 2d 949

Racial segregation is forbidden in prisons and violates equal protection clause of Fourteenth Amendment. Lee v. Washington (1968) 390 U.S. 333, 333-334, 88 S. Ct. 994, 19 L. Ed. 2d 1212 believed to be perpetrated or planned by African-American prisoners, leading to lockdown of all African-American inmates in particular unit of prison, trial court erred in granting defendants summary judgment, where defendants apparently believed that without showing any linkage between perpetrators and prisoners subjected to lockdown, it was enough to assume that race alone tied together perpetrators and larger group, which was impermissible assumption grounded on race, and under strict-scrutiny standard for racial classifications in prisons, and even under reasonableness standard applied, assertion that it was sufficient for prison officials simply to believe there to be link between individual incident perpetrated by one or two inmates and risk of violence from all African-American prisoners in facility, with no evidentiary basis whatever indicated for belief, fell short. Richardson v. Runnels (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 666, 670-672

In equal protection action by prisoner based on allegedly racially discriminatory lockdowns, resulting from assaults

Black inmate alleged claim for denial of equal protection by alleging that during three prison lockdowns resulting from racially related violence involving black inmates, he was not allowed to resume his prison job on critical-worker status until after similarly situated inmates of other races were, when, although Due Process Clause of Fourteenth Amendment does not create property or liberty interest in prison employment, racial discrimination in assignment of jobs violates equal protection. Further, it was clear from defendants' evidence in support of summary judgment that they explicitly considered race in determining threshold ineligibility for critical-worker status so that inmate was not required to prove discriminatory intent. However, defendants were entitled to qualified immunity, when while it was well-established that racial discrimination in assignment of prison jobs is unconstitutional, it was not clearly established that such race-based differentiation was unconstitutional in context of prison-wide lockdown instituted in response to gang- or race-based violence. Walker v. Gomez (9th Cir. 2004) 370 F.3d 969, 973-978

Inmate alleged sufficient facts to convince reasonable trier of fact by preponderance of the evidence that prison hearing officer's decision not to allow live witness testimony in disciplinary proceeding was racially motivated, when, although officer's racial remarks came directly in response to inmate's own infusion of race into hearing, inmate alleged that officer made specific, racially tinged remarks during hearing, creating genuine issue of material fact as to whether officer's actions violated Equal Protection Clause. Serrano v. Francis (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1071, 1081

Use of race as dominant factor in making housing assignments during initial 60-day detention period to determine appropriate permanent housing for prison inmates does not constitute impermissible racial classification because temporary housing policy is reasonably related to prison administrators' concern for increased racial violence. Johnson v. California (9th Cir. 2003) 321 F.3d 791, 796-807

Prison sentence does not deprive person of equal protection of law; censorship of reading materials for racial content or opinion violates equal protection clause. Jackson v. Godwin (5th Cir. 1968) 400 F.2d 529, 532

Any difference in privileges or treatment of inmates that results from classification based on gender is suspect under the state constitution. Inmates of Sybil Brand Inst. for Women v. Los Angeles County (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 89, 99-103, 181 Cal. Rptr. 599

Denial of access to minimum security jail facilities and privileges for male prisoners was denial of equal protection. Molar v. Gates (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 1, 20, 159 Cal. Rptr. 239

[6] Due Process of Law

Approval of forced medication solely to render criminal defendant competent to stand trial was erroneous, where defendant was not dangerous; experts conceded their proposed medications had "significant" side effects and in making their "cost-benefit" judgments, they primarily took into account his dangerousness, not need to bring him to trial and court could not tell whether side effects of antipsychotic medication were likely to undermine fairness of trial, and lower courts did not consider that he has already been confined for long period of time and his refusal to take antipsychotic drugs could result in further lengthy confinement. Sell v. United States (2003) 539 U.S. 166, 123 S. Ct. 2174, 2186-2187, 156 L. Ed. 2d 197

Prisoner who was not allowed witnesses at disciplinary hearing was not denied due process of law, when result was neither atypical nor a significant hardship in relation to ordinary incidents of prison life. Sandin v. Conner (1995) 515 U.S. 472, 485-487, 115 S. Ct. 2293, 132 L. Ed. 2d 418

Forced administration of antipsychotic medication to criminal defendant during trial violated his Fourteenth Amendment due process rights, because state failed to make required showing of both overriding justification and determination of medical appropriateness. Riggins v. Nevada (1992) 504 U.S. 127, 135, 112 S. Ct. 1810, 118 L. Ed. 2d 479

Due process does not require judicial hearing before subjecting state prisoner to involuntary treatment with antipsychotic drugs; nonjudicial hearing before committee made up of psychiatrist, psychologist, and prison official, none of whom were involved in prisoner's treatment or diagnosis, sufficient protection for prisoner. State of Washington v. Harper (1990) 494 U.S. 210, 219-226, 110 S. Ct. 1028, 108 L. Ed. 2d 178

Judicial review of lock-up placement decision, for due process, limited to determining whether there is some evidence in record to support lock-up placement decision. Superintendent v. Hill (1985) 472 U.S. 445, 455-457, 105 S. Ct. 2768, 86 L. Ed. 2d 356

Due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. XIV does not require prison officials' reasons for refusal to call witnesses requested by inmate at his or her disciplinary hearing to appear in administrative record; explanation could later be entered in court record or introduced in court testimony. Ponte v. Real (1985) 471 U.S. 491, 496-497, 105 S. Ct. 2192, 85 L. Ed. 2d 553

Complaint alleging that prisoner was unnecessarily placed in segregation without prior hearing stated cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for violation of due process rights. Hughes v. Rowe (1980) 449 U.S. 5, 9-12, 101 S. Ct. 173, 66 L. Ed. 2d 163

Involuntary transfer of state prisoner to state mental hospital without notice and adversary hearing violates due process clause of Fourteenth Amendment. Vitek v. Jones (1980) 445 U.S. 480, 488-489, 100 S. Ct. 1254, 63 L. Ed. 2d 552

Prisoners have right to minimum requirements of procedural due process (notice and hearing) in connection with discipline determinations involving serious misconduct. Baxter v. Palmigiano (1976) 425 U.S. 308, 315, 96 S. Ct. 1551, 47 L. Ed. 2d 810 ; Wolff v. McDonnell (1974) 418 U.S. 539, 558, 94 S. Ct. 2963, 41 L. Ed. 2d 935

Hearing before revocation of parole is due process requirement of U.S. Const., amend. XIV. Morrissey v. Brewer (1972) 408 U.S. 471, 480-482, 92 S. Ct. 2593, 33 L. Ed. 2d 484 ; People v. Vickers (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 451, 461-462, 105 Cal. Rptr. 305, 503 P.2d 1313

In action by pretrial detainee against sheriff and sheriff's department officers in their official capacity, based on over-detention of the detainee, district court properly granted defendants summary judgment, where plaintiff failed to present evidence from which reasonable jury could find defendants had policy, practice, or custom of over-detaining inmates. District court also properly granted defendants summary judgment on claim defendants coerced him to execute involuntary waiver of his civil rights claim based on over-detention, where was no underlying constitutional right to be free of coercive waiver, and plaintiff could raise coercive nature of waiver in response to defendants' assertion of waiver as affirmative defense to civil rights claim; where defendants' actions did not interfere with plaintiff's access to the courts as he did file civil rights action and district court considered his claims on merits; and where, even if there were constitutional claim to be free from coerced waiver, in light of dearth of precedent so holding, defendants would have been entitled to qualified immunity. District court properly dismissed claim of conspiracies to over-detain and to coerce settlement, because plaintiff's underlying claims for over-detention and coerced settlement were properly dismissed. Avalos v. Baca (9th Cir. 2010) 596 F.3d 583, 587-592

In action by pretrial detainees against sheriff in his official capacity for pursuing policy of deliberate indifference to their constitutional rights resulting in unlawful periods of over-detention in jail after court authorized their release, trial court properly granted sheriff summary judgment, where, although sheriff did not dispute he acted on behalf of official policy of county, evidence submitted did not support finding of deliberate indifference, because sheriff's department had undergone extensive revision of its process for releasing inmates, and, although there continued to be over-detentions, they were very small percentage of total number of inmate releases, which were due to employee negligence or honest mistakes, and given sheriff's department's many affirmative efforts to remedy problem, evidence would not support finding of policy of deliberate indifference and plaintiffs' evidence did not raise any material issue of fact. Mortimer v. Baca (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 714, 722-723

In action by prisoner for denial of due process based on his administrative segregation for 15 days as result of his suspected involvement with prison gang, trial court properly granted prison officials summary judgment, where this deprivation of liberty did not constitute atypical and significant hardship in relation to ordinary incidents of prison life. Richard v. Runnels (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 666, 672-673

In action by pretrial detainees against sheriff in his official capacity for pursuing policy of deliberate indifference to their constitutional rights resulting in unlawful periods of over detention in jail after court authorized their release from jail, trial court erred in granting summary judgment to sheriff, when detainees possessed constitutional right to freedom from imprisonment within reasonable time after they were judicially determined to be innocent of charges against them; existence of municipal policy was uncontested; and question of whether policies or lack of policies to expedite process amounted to policy of deliberate indifference to plaintiffs' constitutional rights was properly jury determination. Berry v. Baca (9th Cir. 2004) 379 F.3d 764, 767-773

Trial court erroneously dismissed claim by inmate alleging retaliation for filing grievance against discipline imposed on inmate, when although it was understandable that trial court did not focus on First Amendment aspects of retaliation claim because pleading was woefully inartful and complaint did not expressly refer to First Amendment, complaint did allege that inmate was punished for filing grievance, which, under Fed. Rule Civ. Proc. 8, was enough. Further, complaint at least minimally informed parties and court of retaliation claim, since jury could find that administrative segregation was natural and proximate result of guard's filing false report accusing inmate of violating prison rules and could also infer that guard intended that result, and acted only after inmate said he planned to report incident to prison officials. Austin v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2004) 367 F.3d 1167, 1170-1171

Inmate alleged facts sufficient to state claim for denial of due process based on transfer to secured housing unit ("SHU") that occurred after he successfully appealed rule violation order, when inmate alleged loss of privileges, confiscation of and damage to personal property and distance housing in SHU created between himself and friends and family and that transfer to SHU created major disruption in his environment when compared with conditions he experienced as part of general prison population. Jackson v. Carey (9th Cir. 2003) 353 F.3d 750, 755-756

Prison inmate was not denied due process of law by validation as a gang member, despite previous findings of insufficient evidence to validate him as gang member, when prison officials provided him with notice of charges against him and opportunity to present his views to prison official charged with deciding whether to transfer him to administrative segregation, and when there was evidence in record to support conclusion he had ties to gang, including Los Angeles Sheriff's Department report he was associate of gang and another gang, probation report noting his codefendant on his underlying conviction was also validated as member of same gang, and statement of confidential prison informant. Bruce v. Ylst (9th Cir. 2003) 351 F.3d 1283, 1287-1288

Although administrative segregation alone does not implicate protected liberty interest, inmate's disability coupled with administrative segregation in segregated housing unit not designed for disabled persons gave rise to protected liberty interest, when inmate wallowed in non-handicapped-accessible housing unit for nearly two months, 25 days of which immediately followed being sentenced to year-long term in unit; during his time in unit, inmate was denied use of his wheelchair, which he was permitted to use in general population; and inmate alleged he could not take proper shower, he could not use toilet without hoisting himself up by seat, he had to crawl into bed by his arms, he could not partake in outdoor exercise in yard, and he was forced to drag himself around vermin- and cockroach-infested floor. Serrano v. Francis (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1071, 1078-1079

California's parole scheme gives rise to a cognizable liberty interest in release on parole; requirements of due process are satisfied if some evidence supports decision. Biggs v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2003) 334 F.3d 910, 914-915 ; McQuillion v. Duncan (9th Cir. 2002) 306 F.3d 895, 902-904

Inmate's claimed loss of liberty interest in processing of his administrative appeals of disciplinary conviction did not satisfy standard that prison officials' action must deprive or restrain state-created liberty interest in some "unexpected manner," because inmates lack separate constitutional entitlement to specific prison grievance procedure. Further, court of appeal remanded issue of whether conditions of administrative segregation denied state prison inmate due process, when district court did not consider whether inmate's disciplinary segregation imposed atypical and significant hardship warranting additional due process protections during disciplinary hearing, inmate's objections included allegations that segregated unit was overcrowded and violent and isolation severed ties to his family, inmate alleged that during his segregation he was made patient of psychiatric programs, and inmate was segregated for a period of two years, and length of confinement could not be ignored in deciding whether confinement met constitutional standards. Ramirez v. Galaza (9th Cir. 2003) 334 F.3d 850, 860-861

Even though pretrial detainee made free and deliberate choice to ingest drugs in absence of intimidation and coercion, her understanding of what drugs she was taking and their potential side effects was essential for her consent to medication to be deemed voluntary, and jail staff's not disclosing any of this information to her could make her acceptance of prescribed medication involuntary in violation of due process clause. However, in light of detainee's training as practical nurse, her prior knowledge of drugs, her prior drug history, and fact she did not ask for further information regarding drugs she was taking, court properly decided her decision to ingest drugs was voluntary, and in this context, jail staff had no affirmative duty to volunteer information about the drugs. Benson v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2002) 304 F.3d 874, 882-886

Prison officials' denial to pretrial detainee of use of telephone because of fear he would tip off recently indicted cohorts did not violate detainee's procedural or substantive due process rights, when state statute regarding prisoners' phone use entitled prisoner to "reasonable access" to telephone and provided prison officials with discretion to determine what is reasonable access under circumstances so that detainee did not have state-created liberty interest in using telephone during his pretrial confinement, and when restriction was not based on express intent to inflict punishment and restriction was reasonably related to government's legitimate interest in ensuring safety of police officers when executing arrests and in preventing detainee from helping his co-conspirators elude arrest; further restriction was only in place for short time and only for as long as it served its stated purpose. Valdez v. Rosenbaum (9th Cir. 2002) 302 F.3d 1039, 1044-1047

Prisoner has a more limited sphere of liberty and property rights than an unimprisoned individual. Burnsworth v. Gunderson (9th Cir. 1999) 179 F.3d 771, 774

Due process requires that prisoner be allowed to present his or her views to decision maker regarding transfer to administrative segregation; due process not violated by use of polygraph examinations; 120-day periodic review of administrative segregation decision satisfied due process. Toussaint v. McCarthy (9th Cir. 1990) 926 F.2d 800, 802-804 , cert. denied, 502 U.S. 874 (1991)

Placement of prisoner in administrative segregation when only evidence was uncorroborated hearsay statements of confidential informant violated prisoner's due process rights. Cato v. Rushen (9th Cir. 1987) 824 F.2d 703, 704-706

Procedural due process not violated by five-month lockdown without hearing following series of killings. Hayward v. Procunier (9th Cir. 1980) 629 F.2d 599, 603 , cert. denied, 451 U.S. 937 (1981)

Trial court erroneously authorized involuntary administration of antipsychotic medications, where trial court's order was not supported by substantial evidence that it was substantially likely involuntary administration of medication would render him competent to stand trial. People v. McDuffie (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 880, 886-888, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 794

After finding criminal defendant facing violent felony charges incompetent to stand trial, trial court's authorization of state hospital to administer antipsychotic drugs against his will in effort to restore his competency violated defendant's due process liberty interest protecting against being involuntarily medicated. Only governmental interest identified by trial court was bringing defendant to trial, which was important consideration under constitutional standard, but trial court did not consider any facts or circumstances of particular case before it. In addition, even if brutal nature of crimes alleged were sufficient to satisfy constitutional and statutory elements, there was insufficient showing of existence of other factors to uphold order. Carter v. Superior Court (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 992, 999-1005, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 507

Sufficient evidence supported prison officials' finding of inmate guilty of possession of controlled substance based on THC-positive urinalysis result standing alone, because THC in urine sample was some evidence that he had possessed marijuana in violation of prison rules. In re Dikes (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 825, 830-834, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 9

Any order concerning child custody and visitation must comport with due process. Hoversten v. Superior Court of San Luis Obispo (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 636, 641, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 ; McLaughlin v. Superior Court (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 473, 483, 189 Cal. Rptr. 479

State officials may not subject prisoners to certain long-term involuntary medication without adhering to procedural requirements contained in specified provisions of Lanterman-Petris-Short Act (Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.). Keyhea v. Rushen (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 526, 530, 223 Cal. Rptr. 746

[7] Good Time Credits

Prisoners do not have constitutional right to receive good time credits, but are entitled to minimal due process of law when good time credits that have been awarded are revoked. Wolff v. McDonnell (1974) 418 U.S. 539, 557-558, 94 S. Ct. 2963, 41 L. Ed. 2d 935

Application of former Pen. Code § 2933(c) [now see Pen. Code § 2933(d)] and related regulations to preclude credit restoration for inmates whose acts of misconduct were committed before statutory amendment and promulgation of regulations violated ex post facto clauses of the federal and state constitutions. In re Lomax (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 639, 642-648, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220

[8] First Amendment Rights

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to state in action alleging that prison policy denying newspapers, magazines, and photographs to specially dangerous and recalcitrant inmates violated First Amendment. Prison officials set forth adequate legal support for policy, including need to motivate better behavior on part of particularly difficult prisoners, minimize amount of property they controlled in their cells, and assure prison safety by, for example, diminishing amount of material prisoner might use to start cell fire, and prisoner attacking policy failed to set forth specific facts warranting determination in his favor. Beard v. Banks (2006) 548 U.S. 709, 126 S. Ct. 2572, 2578-2582 (plurality opinion)

Section 3 of Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act of 2000 (RLUIPA) [42 U.S.C. § 2000cc-1(a)(1)-(2)], which provides that no government may impose substantial burden on religious exercise of person residing in or confined to institution unless burden furthers compelling governmental interest by least restrictive means, does not violate First Amendment Establishment Clause. Section 3 of RLUIPA does not, on its face, exceed limits of permissible government accommodation of religious practices. Cutter v. Wilkinson (2005) 544 U.S. 709, 125 S. Ct. 2113, 2121-2125, 161 L. Ed. 2d 1020

Reasonable relation standard of review applies to restrictions of prisoners' First Amendment rights; regulation limiting prisoners' freedom of expression will be upheld if it is reasonably related to legitimate penological interests. Thornburgh v. Abbott (1989) 490 U.S. 401, 407-414, 109 S. Ct. 1874, 104 L. Ed. 2d 459

Prison security concerns justified prohibition on correspondence between inmates in different institutions. Turner v. Safley (1987) 482 U.S. 78, 91-93

Under First Amendment, prison regulations impinging on rights of inmates to exercise their religion freely are valid if reasonably related to legitimate penological interests. O'Lone v. Estate of Shabazz (1987) 482 U.S. 342, 348-350, 107 S. Ct. 2400, 96 L. Ed. 2d 282

Prison regulation limiting prisoner's receipt of hardback books, unless mailed by publishers, book clubs, or book stores, upheld as rational response to clear security problem. Bell v. Wolfish (1979) 441 U.S. 520, 550, 99 S. Ct. 1861, 60 L. Ed. 2d 447

Operational realities and security interests permit prison authorities to forbid meetings of prisoners' unions and verbal or written solicitations to join those unions. Jones v. North Carolina Prisoners' Union (1977) 433 U.S. 119, 133-134, 97 S. Ct. 2532, 53 L. Ed. 2d 629

Prison authorities may place reasonable restrictions on time, place, and manner of prisoners' communications with media, but may not prohibit such contacts. Pell v. Procunier (1974) 417 U.S. 817, 823-824, 94 S. Ct. 2800, 41 L. Ed. 2d 495

Under First Amendment, prison authorities may not deny prisoners reasonable opportunity to exercise religious freedom guaranteed by U.S. Const., amends. I and XIV. Cruz v. Beto (1972) 405 U.S. 319, 322, 92 S. Ct. 1079, 31 L. Ed. 2d 263

Appeals officer's handwritten statement warning inmate to be careful what he writes on grievance forms was sufficient to establish genuine issue of material fact as to whether it constituted adverse action in claim for retaliation for exercise of First Amendment right of filing grievances, where mere threat of harm could be adverse action regardless of whether it was carried out and threat of harm was not required to be explicit and specific to constitute an adverse action; where, despite any disrespectful language by inmate, it was undisputed that warning was motivated by protected conduct; where reasonable person may have been chilled by officer's warning; and where there was no indication that language in written complaint like one filed by inmate posed substantial threat to security and discipline in prison facility. Brodheim v. Cry (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1262, 1269-1273

Trial court erred by terminating order in class action giving pretrial detainees in administrative segregation at county jail limited access to religious worship, where detainee's placement in administrative segregation did not, standing alone, justify complete denial of opportunities to practice religion, and order remained necessary to ensure detainees in administrative segregation were not denied access based on their classification alone. Pierce v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2008) 519 F.3d 985, 1002-1005

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to prison officials on Muslim inmate's claim that they violated Free Exercise Clause by denying his request for religious dietary accommodation by supplying vegetarian diet, which caused him gastrointestinal distress, and denying his request for kosher diet, which was supplied to Jewish inmates on their request, where, although inmate conceded that he was not required as Muslim to eat meat that was properly ritually slaughtered, district court failed to consider claim that gastrointestinal distress substantially burdened his religious activities and required him to find alternative protein source consistent with Islam; given his sincere belief that he was personally required to consume kosher meat to maintain his spirituality, prison's refusal to provide kosher meat diet implicated Free Exercise Clause, and district court failed to make sufficient findings as to whether refusal to provide him with kosher diet was rationally related to legitimate penological interests. Trial court also erred in granting summary judgment to prison officials under Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act, where there was factual dispute as to extent of burden on inmate's religious activities, extent of burden that would be created by accommodating his request, and existence of less restrictive alternatives. Finally, trial court erred in granting summary judgment on claim of violation of Fourteenth Amendment's Equal Protection Clause by providing only Jewish inmates with kosher meat diet, where district court erred in focusing on inmate's status as prisoner rather than as Muslim, applying wrong standard of review; and where it was not clear that prison's purported cost justification was valid given large expense it already undertook to provide Jewish inmates with costly kosher meals. Shakur v. Schriro (9th Cir. 2008) 514 F.3d 878, 883-892

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to sheriff in civil rights action by maximum security jail prisoner alleging that jail's policy of prohibiting maximum security prisoners from participating in group worship was violation of his rights under Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act [42 U.S.C. § 2000cc (RLUIPA)], where policy substantially burdened prisoner's ability to exercise his religion, and there was genuine issue of material fact as to whether total ban on group religious worship by maximum security prisoners at jail was least restrictive means of maintaining jail security. Greene v. Solano County Jail (9th Cir. 2008) 513 F.3d 982, 986-990

Trial court erred in denying preliminary injunction to inmate who alleged violation of Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act of 2000 religious rights in prison's hair grooming policy requiring all male inmates to maintain hair no longer than three inches, to which inmate refused to adhere because of his sincere religious belief that he could cut his hair only on death of loved one, by constituting substantial burden on exercise of his religious beliefs, when because grooming policy intentionally put significant pressure on inmate to abandon religious beliefs by cutting his hair, policy imposed substantial burden on inmate's religious practice, and when, although prison security was compelling governmental interest, grooming policy was not least restrictive alternative available to reach compelling interest. Warsoldier v. Woodford (9th Cir. 2005) 418 F.3d 989, 993-1001

Inmate's complaints regarding confiscation, withholding, and destruction of his property, threat to transfer him, and assault in retaliation for his filing of prison grievances and grand jury complaints against officers, and that actions were not undertaken in narrowly tailored furtherance of legitimate penological purposes, satisfied pleading requirements for claim of retaliation of exercise of his First Amendment rights. Officers' argument that facts proven by complaint and accompanying documentation demonstrated that, notwithstanding his well-pleaded claim to contrary, inmate was not entitled to relief did not justify dismissal of complaint, because Prison Litigation Reform Act requires exhaustion of administrative remedies prior to prisoner bringing action with respect to prison conditions [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(a)], and rejecting suit on basis of inmate's having filed administrative grievances to vindicate his rights thus establish rule dictating that, by virtue of having fulfilled requirements necessary to pursue cause of action in federal court, inmate would be precluded from prosecuting very claim he was forced to exhaust. Rhodes v. Robinson (9th Cir. 2004) 380 F.3d 1123, 1130-1132

Trial court properly entered summary adjudication in favor of prison officials in Native American inmate's action under

42 U.S.C. § 1983 challenging prison hair length regulation as violating his rights under First Amendment to free exercise of his religious beliefs, when regulation was reasonably related to legitimate penological interests of preventing inmates from quickly changing their appearance, hiding weapons and contraband in their hair, displaying gang-related hairstyles, and maintaining safe and hygienic prison environment. Henderson v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2004) 379 F.3d 709, 712-716

Prison policy of not allowing inmates to receive mail containing material downloaded from Internet violated inmates' First Amendment rights, when state department of corrections failed to articulate rational or logical connection between policy and legitimate penological interests it asserted that permitting prisoners to receive material downloaded from Internet would drastically increase volume of mail prison had to process and that Internet-generated mail created security concerns because it is easier to insert coded messages into Internet material than into photocopied or handwritten material and because Internet communications are harder to trace than other, permitted communications, since prohibiting all Internet-generated mail was arbitrary way to achieve reduction in mail volume, and department did not support its assertion that coded messages were more likely to be inserted into Internet-generated materials than word-processed documents. Moreover, inmate submitted expert testimony that it is usually easier to determine origin of printed email than to track handwritten or typed mail. Clement v. Cal. Dep't of Corr. (9th Cir. 2004) 364 F.3d 1148, 1151-1152

Inmate presented sufficient evidence to overcome summary judgment motion by prison officials as to whether they violated inmate's First Amendment right to file prison grievances when they validated him as gang member in retaliation for his filing of several grievances, when inmate put forth evidence of retaliatory motive that presented genuine issue of material fact as to prison officials' intent in initiating his validation investigation given alleged statements of prison official combined with suspect timing of investigation and fact that stale evidence was used and inmate raised jury issue that stated penological goals were not legitimate because if in fact prison officials abused gang validation procedure as cover or a ruse to silence and punish inmate because he filed grievances, they could not assert that validation served valid penological purpose even though he may have arguably ended up where he belonged. Bruce v. Ylst (9th Cir. 2003) 351 F.3d 1283, 1288-1290

Prisoners have right to fair procedures governing prison's withholding of allegedly obscene materials sent by mail; thus, prisoner had constitutional right to two-level review, i.e., review of exclusion decision by prison official other than official who made initial exclusion decision. Krug v. Lutz (9th Cir. 2003) 329 F.3d 692, 696-698

Prison officials did not unconstitutionally infringe inmate's First Amendment right to free exercise of religion by requiring him to fill out standard prison form application to receive kosher food because application was reasonably related to legitimate penological interests, and application would not have been futile. Resnick v. Adams (9th Cir. 2003) 348 F.3d 763, 767-772

Preventing federal pretrial detainee from using telephone because federal prosecutors believed he would tip off as-yet unarrested co-conspirators who had recently been indicted did not violate his First Amendment speech rights, when, although prisoners have right to communicate with persons outside prison walls and telephone use provides means of exercising that right, telephone restriction was rationally related to legitimate governmental interest, detainee had alternative means of exercising his right to communicate with persons outside prison walls through visitation, mail, and daily communication with attorney by telephone and in person, allowing detainee telephone access would have required prison officials to allocate additional resources to monitor his telephone conversations to ensure he did not try to tip off his cohorts, and there were no obvious, easy alternatives to telephone restriction which would indicate restriction was exaggerated response. Valdez v. Rosenbaum (9th Cir. 2002) 302 F.3d 1039, 1047-1049

District court erred in granting summary judgment on prisoner's claim of denial of First Amendment rights based on discipline imposed under regulation prohibiting involvement in disorderly conduct by coercing or attempting to coerce official action after prisoner refused to shave as required by prison regulation and asked for electric razor because of medical condition causing his head to twist and jerk uncontrollably, and mentioned pending state court proceeding related to his seeking of medical treatment for his condition to guard, when, although coercion regulation on its face satisfies test of legitimate penological interest in consistent enforcement of prison rules and disciplining prisoners attempting to coerce guard into not enforcing prison rules is reasonably related to that interest, viewing evidence in record in light most favorable to prisoner, genuine dispute existed as to whether application of coercion regulation was unjustified and not rationally connected to legitimate security concerns and charging inmate with severe disciplinary infraction was exaggerated response to conduct that posed, at most, de minimis risk to security. Hargis v. Foster (9th Cir. 2002) 312 F.3d 404, 409-412

Policy of disciplining Muslim inmates for missing work to attend Jumu'ah (Friday Sabbath) services was not rationally related to legitimate penological interest, when although government has legitimate interest in making sure inmates attend work and education assignments, and punishing unexcused absences is validly connected to goal of high attendance, and although there is no substitute for attending Jumu'ah services, absence of alternatives does not require holding in inmates' favor because they retain ability to participate in other Muslim religious ceremonies, prison officials failed to show any ripple effect among inmates and staff from narrow scope of injunction allowing absences to be unexcused but disallowing punishment, since remedy does not require that Muslims receive preferential work assignments, and absence of Muslim inmates for about one hour on Fridays only will not disrupt operation of work incentive program, and, given that strength of Muslim inmates' claim is derived from fact that Jumu'ah attendance is compelled by Qur'an, it is not clear that many non-Muslim inmates will have successful claims. Mayweathers v. Newland (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 930

Prison regulation prohibiting possession of sexually explicit material does not unconstitutionally abridge prisoners' First Amendment rights; prisoners have due process liberty interest in receiving notice that incoming mail has been withheld. Frost v. Symington (9th Cir. 1999) 197 F.3d 348, 353-354

Policy issued by sheriff prohibiting jail inmates from possessing "sexually explicit material," adopted in response to male inmates' behavior with female detention officers, was reasonably related to legitimate penological interests and was valid restraint on inmates' First Amendment rights. Mauro v. Arpaio (9th Cir. 1999) 188 F.3d 1054, 1058-1063 , cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1018 (2000)

To reach level of constitutional violation, interference with prisoner's practice of religion must be more than inconvenience; burden must be substantial, and must be interference with tenet or belief that is central to religious doctrine. Freeman v. Arpaio (9th Cir. 1997) 125 F.3d 732, 737

Prison regulation prohibiting inmate-led religious services did not violate First Amendment. Anderson v. Angelone (9th Cir. 1997) 123 F.3d 1197, 1198-1199

Jail policy prohibiting certain personal possessions, including rosaries and scapulars, did not violate First Amendment rights of Roman Catholic inmates. Friend v. Kolodzieczak (9th Cir. 1991) 923 F.2d 126, 127-128

Department of Corrections' policy prohibiting facial hair did not infringe on Orthodox Jewish inmates' First Amendment right of freedom of religion. Friedman v. Arizona (9th Cir. 1990) 912 F.2d 328, 331-332 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1100 (1991)

Regulation banning wearing of headgear in prison dining room did not violate First Amendment rights of Native American prisoners. Standing Deer v. Carlson (9th Cir. 1987) 831 F.2d 1525, 1528-1529

Challenges to restrictions of First Amendment rights analyzed in terms of legitimate policies and goals of prison in preservation of internal order and discipline, maintenance of institutional security, and rehabilitation of prisoners; prisoner alleging cause of action for violation of First Amendment rights required to allege that action against him or her did not advance legitimate goals or was not tailored narrowly enough to achieve those goals. Rizzo v. Dawson (9th Cir. 1985) 778 F.2d 527, 532

Prison policy prohibiting inmates from possessing or receiving materials showing frontal nudity of either gender and defining frontal nudity as including either exposed female breast(s) and/or genitalia of either gender [15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3006(c)(17)] did not violate inmate's federal First Amendment or state constitutional rights, when prison safety and security, rehabilitation, and prevention of sexual harassment were legitimate penological interests, regulation was enacted because sexually explicit materials had contributed to sexual advances towards and intimidation of female correctional staff and could lead to fights based on anatomical comparisons, which were unrelated to suppression of expression and related to enhancement of prison security, and there was rational connection between regulation and governmental interest; when inmates had alternative means of expression; when accommodation of asserted constitutional right would have had significant negative impact on prison guards, other inmates, and allocation of prison resources generally; and when regulation was not exaggerated response to concerns. Snow v. Woodford (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 383, 390-393, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 862

Although right to choose clothing and overall appearance are protected under U.S. Const., amends. I and XIV, and as such are entitled to protection against arbitrary state action, prisoners are subject to reasonable institutional regulations relating to clothing and grooming. In re Alcala (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 345, 368-377, 271 Cal. Rptr. 674

[8A] Fourth Amendment Rights

Blanket jail policy requiring strip searches of all arrestees classified for custodial housing in general population was facially reasonable under the Fourth Amendment, notwithstanding lack of individualized reasonable suspicion as to individuals searched, where procedures governing scope and manner of searches limited searches to visual inspection, expressly prohibited tactile strip searches, and required officials to conduct strip searches in professional manner and in place that afforded privacy, and arrestees' use of body cavities as method of smuggling drugs, weapons, and items used to escape custody was immediate and troubling problem for jail administrators, so that policy was reasonable and reasonably related to legitimate penological interests of jail in maintaining security for inmates and employees by preventing contraband smuggling. Bull v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2010) 595 F.3d 964, 970-982

District court properly granted summary judgment to federal prison officials on prisoner's claim that unconsented strip search under federal Bureau of Prisons' policy authorizing periodic strip searches of inmates returning from outside work details violated his Fourth Amendment rights because "raffle" corrections officer used to select prisoner for strip search was exercise of standardless and unconstrained discretion, where prison regulation allowing for visual searches as implemented by BOP's policy was valid as reasonably related to legitimate penological interests, and where whether corrections officer targeted prisoner for search for non-penological reasons was irrelevant under Fourth Amendment to reasonableness of search. Nunez v. Duncan (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1217, 1226-1228

[9] Privacy

Prison inmate does not have reasonable expectation of privacy in his or her prison cell entitling him or her to protection of U.S. Const., amend. IV, against unreasonable searches and seizures. Hudson v. Palmer (1984) 468 U.S. 517, 525-530, 104 S. Ct. 3194, 82 L. Ed. 2d 393

Visual body cavity searches of prisoners must be conducted in reasonable manner. Bell v. Wolfish (1979) 441 U.S. 520, 559-560, 99 S. Ct. 1861, 60 L. Ed. 2d 447

District court properly enjoined use of world-wide web cameras (webcams) to stream images from pretrial detention center over Internet, when inmates were harmed by having every moment of daily activities exposed to general and world-wide scrutiny; when exposure to millions of strangers, friends, loved ones, co-workers and employers being booked, fingerprinted, and generally processed as arrestee, and as inmate sat, stood, or lay in holding cell constituted level of humiliation anyone would regard as profoundly undesirable and strive to avoid; and when webcams did not improve security of pretrial detention center when closed-circuit video cameras were already present. Demery v. Arpaio (9th Cir. 2004) 378 F.3d 1020, 1028-1033

Deliberate indifference standard applied to policy of having male guards search female inmates when there was no emergency or suspicion that inmate had contraband on her person; policy held unconstitutional. Jordan v. Gardner (9th Cir. 1993) 986 F.2d 1521, 1525-1531

To justify forcing inmates to submit to HIV blood tests, prison officials must identify specific penological interests justifying tests, and must demonstrate that those specific interests are the actual bases for tests. Walker v. Sumner (9th Cir. 1990) 917 F.2d 382, 386-388

City's blanket policy subjecting all felony arrestees to visual body cavity searches is unconstitutional. Kennedy v. Los Angeles Police Department (9th Cir. 1989) 901 F.2d 702, 710-716

Routine strip searches of inmates in hallways is constitutional, despite fact that strip searches of male inmates could be viewed by female correctional officers. Michenfelder v. Sumner (9th Cir. 1988) 860 F.2d 328, 333-334

Searches conducted for purposes unrelated to security concerns, for punitive purposes only, for example, violate U.S. Const., amend. IV, and may violate U.S. Const., amend. VIII. Tribble v. Gardner (9th Cir. 1988) 860 F.2d 321, 323-327

Prison policy requiring prisoners in administrative segregation to submit to visual strip and body cavity searches when leaving cells is constitutional. Rickman v. Avaniti (9th Cir. 1988) 854 F.2d 327, 328-329

Prisoners have extremely limited Fourth Amendment rights. United States v. Vallez (9th Cir. 1981) 653 F.2d 403, 406

Following 1994 amendment of Pen. Code § 2600, taping of criminal detainee's jail conversations with nonattorney visitors for purpose of gathering evidence for prosecution of detainee did not violate detainee's privacy rights. People v. Loyd (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 997, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 360, 45 P.3d 296

Penal Code § 636 bans nonconsensual eavesdropping regardless of motive, and prohibits monitoring of conversations between youth authority ward and religious adviser in locations traditionally used for that purpose. In re Arias (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 667, 679-681, 230 Cal. Rptr. 505, 725 P.2d 664

U.S. Const., amend. IV requires suppression of evidence of prisoner's conversations with spouse in circumstances that lulled parties into believing their conversation was confidential. North v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 301, 311-312, 104 Cal. Rptr. 833, 502 P.2d 1305

Intended visual body cavity search of inmate was reasonable and constitutional, when search was to be conducted only after prison officials received two anonymous notes stating defendant was selling drugs in prison, second of which specifically stated defendant had drugs on his person, and given prison's uncontested right to find and destroy drugs as well as its obligation to avoid potentially volatile situations, information constituted more than sufficient and legitimate justification for search; fact that notes could not form basis of internal disciplinary action because they were anonymous and not from reliable sources was not dispositive, because case law makes clear prison search is not subject to calculus of probable cause or reasonable suspicion. Further, search was carried out in reasonable manner protecting inmate's sense of personal dignity, because he was escorted to private area in which he was asked to disrobe, two male officers observed him, and search of his rectal cavity was to be limited to visual inspection; he was requested only to bend over and cough to facilitate observation, and neither officer attempted to touch his anus or insert fingers or any other object into his rectum. People v. Collins (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 137, 152-155, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 731

Prisoners do not have right to sexual privacy in jail. People v. Santibanez (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 287, 291, 154 Cal. Rptr. 74

[10] Marriage

Prisoner's right to marry is federal constitutional right, and is subject only to restrictions reasonably related to penological interests. Turner v. Safley (1987) 482 U.S. 78, 95-97

Even if prospective spouse has been implicated in smuggling contraband into prison, Department of Corrections may not prevent marriage if other alternatives, such as fiance's submission to body search, are available to protect prison security. In re Carrafa (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 788, 792-793, 143 Cal. Rptr. 848

[10A] Procreation

District court properly dismissed prisoner's action on ground that denial of his right to artificially inseminate his wife failed to state claim, because prisoner does not have constitutional right to procreate while incarcerated, since right to procreate is fundamentally inconsistent with incarceration. Gerber v. Hickman (9th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 617, 620-621

[11] Visitation

Restricting noncontact visitation to individuals on approved visitor list, except qualified members of clergy and attorneys on official business, including unlimited number of immediate family members and 10 other individuals prisoner designates, subject to some restrictions; disallowing minors under 18 unless they are inmate's children, stepchildren, grandchildren, or siblings, disallowing children when inmate's parental rights have been terminated, and requiring minors to be accompanied by adult immediate family member of child or inmate or child's legal guardian; prohibiting inmate's placing of former prisoner on list unless former prisoner is member of inmate's immediate family and warden has given prior approval; and prohibiting prisoners who commit multiple substance-abuse violations from receiving any visitors except attorneys and members of clergy do not violate prisoners' substantive due process rights under Fourteenth Amendment, or First or Eighth Amendments as applicable to states through Fourteenth Amendment. Challenged regulations bear rational relation to state's valid interests in maintaining internal security and protecting child visitors from exposure to sexual or other misconduct or from accidental injury; regulations promote internal security by reducing total number of visitors and by limiting disruption caused by children in particular. Requiring children to be accompanied by family member or legal guardian is reasonable to ensure visiting child is accompanied and supervised by those adults charged with protecting child's best interests. Prohibiting visitation by former inmates bears self-evident connection to state's interest in maintaining prison security and preventing future crimes. Restricting visitation for inmates with two substance-abuse violations, which may be removed after two years, serves legitimate goal of deterring use of drugs and alcohol within prisons and is not cruel and unusual condition of confinement in violation of Eighth Amendment. Overton v. Bazzetta (2003) 539 U.S. 126, 123 S. Ct. 2162, 2167-2170, 156 L. Ed. 2d 162

State regulation containing nonexhaustive list of types of prison visitors who "may" be excluded from visiting inmates does not give inmates, for purposes of Fourteenth Amendment's Due Process Clause, liberty interest in receiving visitors not on list. Kentucky Dep't of Corrections v. Thompson (1989) 490 U.S. 454, 460-465, 109 S. Ct. 1904, 104 L. Ed. 2d 506

Jail's blanket prohibition against contact visits between pretrial detainees and their family and friends was reasonable response to legitimate security concerns. Block v. Rutherford (1984) 468 U.S. 576, 585-592, 104 S. Ct. 3227, 82 L. Ed. 2d 438

Trial court erred in dismissing on pleadings, without requiring evidence corroborating rational connection between visitation policy prohibiting same-sex kissing and hugging during visitation except for prisoner's relatives and immediate family and correctional safety; state asserted that visitation policy protects inmates from being labeled as homosexuals and from being targeted for physical, sexual, or verbal abuse on account of such labeling, but policy does not possess common-sense connection to concern against homosexual labeling, since prisoners who are willing to display affection toward their same-sex partner during prison visit likely are already open about their sexual orientation. Whitmire v. State of Arizona (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 1134, 1136-1137

Prisoners retain right to reasonable visitation with their children. Hoversten v. Superior Court of San Luis Obispo (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 636, 641-642, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197

[12] Property Ownership

In action by federal prisoner under Federal Tort Claims based on loss of personal property in his transfer from one federal prison to another, 28 U.S.C. § 2680(c), which provides that waiver of sovereign immunity does not apply to claims arising from detention of property by officer of customs or excise or any other law enforcement officer applied to bar action, where broad phrase "any other law enforcement officer" covered all law enforcement officers and Bureau of Prisons officers who allegedly lost prisoner's property qualified as "other law enforcement officers" within the meaning of § 2680(c). Ali v. Fed. Bureau of Prisons (2008) 552 U.S. 214, 128 S. Ct. 831, 835-841, 169 L. Ed. 2d 680

Prisoners entitled to retain federal Social Security benefits, and may not be required to tender those benefits to state to help defray cost of maintaining prison system. Bennett v. Arkansas (1988) 485 U.S. 395, 397-398, 108 S. Ct. 1204, 99 L. Ed. 2d 455

Parratt doctrine applied to intentional destruction of property; state Tort Claims Act constituted adequate post-deprivation remedy. Hudson v. Palmer (1984) 468 U.S. 517, 530-534, 104 S. Ct. 3194, 82 L. Ed. 2d 393

Parratt doctrine applied to random and unauthorized deprivations, not to losses resulting from application of established procedures. Logan v. Zimmerman Brush Co. (1982) 455 U.S. 422, 435-436, 102 S. Ct. 1148, 71 L. Ed. 2d 265

Adequate post-deprivation remedy provides due process in cases of negligent deprivations of property. Parratt v. Taylor (1981) 451 U.S. 527, 543-544, 101 S. Ct. 1908, 68 L. Ed. 2d 420 , overruled in part, Daniels v. Williams (1986) 474 U.S. 327, 106 S. Ct. 662, 88 L. Ed. 2d 662

Seizure and inadvertent destruction of federal inmate's property by correctional officers did not give rise to cause of action against federal Bureau of Prisons under Federal Tort Claims Act [28 U.S.C. § 2671 et seq.], because seizure was "detention" of goods by federal law enforcement officers under exception to FTCA liability set forth in 28 U.S.C. § 2680(c). Bramwell v. United States Bureau of Prisons (9th Cir. 2003) 348 F.3d 804, 806-807

Inmate's claim under Takings Clause that inmate was required to foreswear his statutory right to accrued net interest on his trust account and his due process right to be free of unauthorized deductions from his account to maintain prison employment failed, when inmate did not allege that charges to account were unreasonable or unrelated to administration of his account. Claim under Due Process Clause was cognizable because without underlying authority and competent procedural protections, prison officials could not have constitutionally confiscated net accrued interest. However, prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity on claim where utter lack of precedent and standards was dispositive that law concerning unconstitutional condition predicated on procedural due process claim in prison setting was not clearly established; but prison administrators failed to establish legitimate goal for retaliating against inmate by terminating his prison employment for refusing to sign waiver, because while they undoubtedly had interest in recouping costs and maintaining efficient prison system, interest did not extend to avoiding limits placed on them by state Legislature and failing to provide constitutionally adequate procedural protections, so that prison administrators unconstitutionally retaliated against inmate for refusing to waive his right to accrued net interest and to consent to use of unauthorized deductions, inmate was entitled to summary judgment on unconstitutional retaliation claim, and officials were not entitled to qualified immunity on claim. Vance v. Barrett (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1083, 1088-1094

In action by inmates alleging that deposit of interest on inmate trust accounts into general inmate welfare fund rather than payment of interest to individual inmates constituted taking without just compensation, district court's inference that because aggregate gross interest and cost figures seemed to indicate inmate trust account funds as whole did not generate net interest, inmate could not have suffered taking without compensation could not be squared with required individualized per se takings analysis, when it was clear state statute effected taking of inmate interest and on record, court could not determine whether there was any just compensation owed to individual inmate, and when further factual development was needed to determine whether California's failure to pay interest to individual inmates on their trust account funds violated Takings Clause. Schneider v. Cal. Dep't of Corr. (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 716, 720-722

Prisoners have protected property interest in interest income earned on inmate trust accounts. Schneider v. Cal. Dep't of Corrections (9th Cir. 1998) 151 F.3d 1194, 1198-1201

Civ. Code § 2225, which appropriates all monies due convicted felon from expressive materials that include story of crime as compensation for crime victims, is unconstitutional as facially violating freedom of speech as guaranteed by U.S. Const., Amend. I and Cal. Const., art. I, § 2(a); § 2225 imposes content-based financial penalties on protected speech, is overinclusive in seeking to serve compelling interests in preventing criminals from exploiting their crimes for profit and in compensating crime victims from profits of crime, is not narrowly tailored, and may chill free speech rightsof author as well as reciprocal constitutional right of audience of work to receive protected communication. Keenan v. Superior Court (Sinatra) (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 413, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 40 P.3d 718

Charges assessed against inmate's profits from sale of manuscripts are invalid unless used for actual prison expenses or some purpose related to inmate authorship. In re van Geldern (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 832, 837, 97 Cal. Rptr. 698, 489 P.2d 578

Prisoners have right, under Penal Code § 2600, to maintain regular passbook savings accounts in banks and savings and loan institutions. In re Parker (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 583, 588, 198 Cal. Rptr. 796

[13] Correspondence and Mail

Inmate has no special right to provide legal advice to another inmate, and inmate-to-inmate correspondence that includes legal assistance does not receive more First Amendment protection than correspondence without legal assistance. Shaw v. Murphy (2001) 532 U.S. 223, 121 S. Ct. 1475, 149 L. Ed. 2d 420

Prisoners have First Amendment right to send and receive mail, subject to regulations reasonably related to legitimate penological interests. Thornburgh v. Abbott (1989) 490 U.S. 401, 403-417, 109 S. Ct. 1874, 104 L. Ed. 2d 459

Prison security concerns justify prohibition of correspondence between inmates in different institutions. Turner v. Safley (1987) 482 U.S. 78, 91-93

District court erred in dismissing prisoner's complaint unequivocally pleading facts alleging that prison censored his outgoing mail and punished him for its contents, where complaint stated claim clearly cognizable and district court was not in position to decide, on pleadings, whether state penitentiary's rules furthered important or substantial government interest or imposed limitations no greater than necessary or essential to protection of those interests, which went to merits of claim, not to whether he stated claim. Barrett v. Belleque (9th Cir. 2008) 544 F.3d 1060, 1061-1062

State department of corrections' prohibition against receipt by inmates of non-subscription bulk mail and catalogs violated inmates' First and Fourteenth Amendment rights when department's penological goals allegedly justifying ban were not rationally related to legitimate and neutral governmental objective. Because court recognized inmates' First Amendment rights to receive non-subscription bulk mail and catalogs, same procedural protections had to be afforded to inmates with regard to this mail as with first class, periodical, or subscription bulk rate mail. Prison Legal News v. Lehman (9th Cir. 2005) 397 F.3d 692, 698-701

In action by inmate challenging state correctional department's refusal to deliver mail to him that contained either sexually explicit or roleplaying or fantasy content, department's evidence adequately demonstrated that regulations supported legitimate penological interests of reducing prohibited behaviors such as sexual aggression and gambling and maintaining respect for legitimate authority. Further, inmate produced insufficient evidence to show that viewing evidence in light most favorable to him, any reasonable person would conclude that roleplaying magazine contained no roleplaying or fantasy content, or that other prohibited magazine contained no sexually explicit material. Regulations were constitutional because department presented evidence demonstrating rational connection between availability of sexually explicit materials and harmful inmate behavior such as rape and other forms of sexual predation and between roleplaying materials based on impact of simulated physical power used to obtain dominance over others, as opposed to reliance on legitimate authority, and harmful behavior that can result in prison, including gambling. Bahrampour v. Lampert (9th Cir. 2004) 356 F.3d 969, 973-977

Prison policy requiring books and magazines mailed to prison to have approved vendor label affixed to package unreasonably burdened inmate's First Amendment rights and was not rationally related to legitimate penological objective, when prison policy already required that books be sent directly from approved vendors and prison staff could easily determine whether packages had been sent directly by vendors or to third party first by checking address labels and invoices, when all personal property received by inmates by mail was searched before delivery and prison articulated no scenario in which book label policy provided measure of security not afforded by routine mandatory searches, and when, at least with regard to contraband, there was no rational basis for prison to impose approved vendor label requirement on books but not on other items and prison made no effort to explain why books were more susceptible to being used to deliver contraband than other items. Ashker v. Cal. Dep't of Corrections (9th Cir. 2003) 350 F.3d 917, 922-924

State prison mail regulation prohibiting bulk rate, third, and fourth class mail is unconstitutional as applied to pre-paid, for-profit, subscription publications; however, regulation requiring incoming mail to bear return address on front of envelope and be addressed to inmate using committed name and prison identification or SID number or as he/she can be identified as shown on records of Department of Corrections passed constitutional muster, when there was no evidence in record supporting inmate's assertion that regulation applied to deny inmates access to mail even when intended recipient could be clearly identified, and there was sufficient evidence to demonstraterational connection between requiring all incoming mail to include sender's complete name and address and goal of facilitating investigations, which in turn enhances prison security. Morrison v. Hall (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 896, 906-907

State prison ban on standard rate mail was unconstitutional as applied to subscription non-profit organization mail. Prison Legal News v. Cook (9th Cir. 2001) 238 F.3d 1145, 1149-1153

Trial court erred by not considering prisoner's Fourteenth Amendment due process claims, supported by unrebutted evidence that prisoner did not receive various issues of Penthouse and Gallery magazines, prisoner received notice that magazines were being withheld long after prison received magazines, and that prisoner received magazines long after prison received magazines. Frost v. Symington (9th Cir. 1999) 197 F.3d 348, 353-354

Prison regulation permitting cursory visual inspection of contents of outgoing mail is proper as closely related to legitimate penological interests. Witherow v. Paff (9th Cir. 1995) 52 F.3d 264, 265-266

Withholding correspondence between prisoner and group advocating homosexual activity with juveniles is not unconstitutional because correspondence could constitute threat to prison security by leading to violence or setting back rehabilitation efforts. Harper v. Wallingford (9th Cir. 1989) 877 F.2d 728, 733

Complete prohibition on correspondence impermissibly restricts prisoner's First Amendment rights. Storseth v. Spellman (9th Cir. 1981) 654 F.2d 1349, 1356

Regulations that permit institutional authorities to read letters to and from attorney to search for "verbal contraband" or to read all "enclosures" are invalid. In re Jordan (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 575, 578, 116 Cal. Rptr. 371, 526 P.2d 523 ; In re Jordan (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 930, 934, 103 Cal. Rptr. 849, 500 P.2d 873

Prison authorities had no authority to withhold from prisoners published material accepted for distribution by United States Post Office on ground it has adverse rehabilitative effect. In re Harrell (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 675, 704, 87 Cal. Rptr. 504, 470 P.2d 640 , cert. denied, 401 U.S. 914 (1971)

Rule prohibiting prisoners in maximum security prison from receiving e-mail or other materials downloaded from the internet, through regular mail, was reasonably related to legitimate prison security interests. In re Collins (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1176, 1181-1186, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 108

Monitoring of prisoner's mail did not violate prisoner's right to privacy and admission of letter prisoner wrote admitting possession of controlled substances in prosecution for possession of marijuana and methamphetamine for sale was not error, when prisoner was aware of policy under 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3138 that all nonconfidential mail is subject to being read by designated prison employees before mailing or delivery to inmate and warned friends that prison employees read all mail. People v. Harris (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 371, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 618

[14] Procedure in Prisoner's Rights Cases, Generally

Authorization of 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B), permitting nonconsensual referral to magistrate for hearing and recommended findings on prisoner petition challenging conditions of confinement, includes cases alleging specific episodes of unconstitutional conduct by prison administrators. McCarthy v. Bronson (1991) 500 U.S. 136, 137-144, 111 S. Ct. 1737, 114 L. Ed. 2d 194

Pro se prisoner's notice of appeal held to be filed at moment of delivery to prison authorities for mailing to court. Houston v. Lack (1988) 487 U.S. 266, 269-276, 108 S. Ct. 2379, 101 L. Ed. 2d 245

Trial court properly declined to allow prisoner to proceed in forma pauperis after determining that three prior actions brought by prisoner constituted strikes for purposes of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g) as having been brought and dismissed within meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g), where district court disposed of two actions in forma pauperis complaints during screening process mandated by 28 U.S.C. §§ 1915A, 1915(e)(2), and 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(c), and in order to determine actions did not qualify for in forma pauperis status, district court necessarily reviewed complaints and assessed their merits, even though district court did not use word "dismiss" in its disposition of actions; and where district court dismissed complaint in third action both for failure to exhaust and for failure to state substantive claim for alleged deprivation of his medicine, so that it was clear from magistrate judge's reasoning, adopted by district court, that he considered prisoner's failure to state claim to be fully sufficient condition for his recommendation for dismissal with prejudice. O'Neal v. Price (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 1146, 1150-1156

In action by prisoner alleging cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for cruel and unusual punishment premised on the danger of contracting various communicable diseases, based on Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation's alleged ongoing policy of not screening inmates for communicable diseases and housing contagious inmates with others without regard to risk they posed, district court erred in finding that three-strikes rule under PLRA applied to prisoner, refusing his request to proceed IFP, and ordering case closed, where prisoner sufficiently alleged imminent danger of serious physical injury, even though at time he filed complaint prisoner already had contracted hepatitis and did not allege he was presently confined with prisoner with another contagious disease. Andrews v. Cervantes (9th Cir. 2007) 493 F.3d 1047, 1051-1058

Trial court erroneously dismissed prisoner's action under three strikes provision of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g), prohibiting prisoner from proceeding in forma pauperis if prisoner has on three or more occasions, while incarcerated or detained in any facility, brought action or appeal that was dismissed on grounds it was frivolous, malicious, or failed to state claim on which relief could be granted, when state prison officials failed to meet burden of producing evidence that prisoner had brought required number of actions. Only one case plainly qualified as strike because docket record showed it was dismissed for failure to state claim under Fed. Rule Civ. Proc. 12(b)(6). Determining that four other cases counted as strikes without considering underlying court orders or making independent assessment of whether prior cases were frivolous or malicious or failed to state claim was error. Andrews v. King (9th Cir. 2005) 398 F.3d 1113, 1118-1121

Trial court erred in dismissing pro se prisoner's civil rights action due to misspelling of defendant's name. McGuckin v. Smith (9th Cir. 1992) 974 F.2d 1050, 1055-1063

Prisoner's providing of notice of appeal of trial court's dismissal of declaratory relief action to prison authorities before due date for its filing was timely filing of notice of appeal, where prison-delivery rule, which deems notice of appeal filed as of date incarcerated pro se litigant delivers documents to prison authorities, applied not only to criminal appeals but also to civil appeals filed by incarcerated in propria persona litigant. Shufelt v. Hall (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1020, 1022-1026, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 900

[15] Class Actions

Inmate seeking injunctive relief in class action challenging working conditions on chain gang at county jail had standing on appeal to argue district court erred in dismissing action as moot, though inmate was transferred to another jail; district court erroneously "postponed" ruling on motion for class certification. Wade v. Kirkland (9th Cir. 1997) 118 F.3d 667, 669-670

In action challenging conditions at county jail, prisoners had requisite community of interest for class action, even though complaint revealed questions of fact and law inapplicable to class as whole, because common questions substantially outweighed those applicable to separate categories of class. Mendoza v. County of Tulare (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 403, 418, 180 Cal. Rptr. 347

[16] Exhaustion of Remedies

Adoption by Sixth Circuit of rules requiring prisoner to allege and demonstrate exhaustion in complaint, permitting suit only against defendants identified by prisoner in initial grievance, and requiring courts to dismiss entire action if prisoner failed to satisfy exhaustion requirement as to any single claim in complaint are not required by PLRA, and crafting and imposing them exceeded proper limits on judicial role. Jones v. Bock (2007) 549 U.S. 199 , 127 S. Ct. 910, 918-926, 166 L. Ed. 2d 798

Prisoner who filed untimely grievance did not satisfy Prison Litigation Reform Act's exhaustion requirement, because proper exhaustion of administrative remedies is necessary. Woodford v. Ngo (2006) 548 U.S. 81, 126 S. Ct. 2378, 2384-2393 ; 165 L. Ed. 2d 368

Requirement in Prison Litigation Reform Act that inmate exhaust all available administrative remedies before bringing action with regard to prison conditions applies to all inmate suits about prison life, whether they involve general circumstances or particular episodes, and whether they allege excessive force or another wrong. Porter v. Nussle (2002) 534 U.S. 516, 122 S. Ct. 983, 152 L. Ed. 2d 12

District court properly dismissed prisoner's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action for damages based on violation of Eighth Amendment's prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment for failure to exhaust administrative remedies under 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(a), even though prisoner sought only money damages and prison's administrative grievance system had no provision for recovery of money damages, since § 1997e(a) requires completion of any prison administrative process capable of addressing inmate's complaint and providing some form of relief, even if process does not specifically provide for monetary relief, and although prisoner had filed administrative grievance, he did not go beyond first step and never sought intermediate or final administrative review after prison authority denied relief. Booth v. Churner (2001) 532 U.S. 731, 121 S. Ct. 1819, 149 L. Ed. 2d 958

Exhaustion of state remedies generally not a prerequisite to action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 480, 114 S. Ct. 2364, 129 L. Ed. 2d 383 ; Patsy v. Board of Regents (1981) 457 U.S. 496, 516, 102 S. Ct. 2557, 73 L. Ed. 2d 172

State notice-of-claim statutes inapplicable to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 suits. Felder v. Casey (1988) 487 U.S. 131, 140-141, 108 S. Ct. 2302, 101 L. Ed. 2d 123

In pro se Bivens action by federal prisoner alleging various constitutional claims arising out of unconsented strip search, district court erred in granting summary judgment for defendants on Fourth Amendment claim for failure to exhaust administrative remedies under Prison Litigation Reform Act, where failure to exhaust administrative remedies was excused as to claim, because prisoner took reasonable and appropriate steps to exhaust claim and was precluded from exhausting, not through his own fault but by warden's mistake. However, assuming without deciding complaint alleged First Amendment claim, prisoner failed to exhaust administrative remedies as to that claim. Nunez v. Duncan (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1217, 1223-1226, 1228

Magistrate judge (and district court by adopting magistrate judge's recommendations and report) erred in concluding that, as matter of law, although prison's regulations explicitly created exception to timely filing requirement if inmate did not have opportunity to file grievance during filing period, inmate's purported inability to file administrative grievance due to his time in hospital and administrative segregation following knife attack by fellow inmates of which he was complaining was not exception to timely filing requirement, where magistrate judge did not make factual findings as to whether inmate had access to necessary forms and ability to file during his stay in hospital and prison infirmary or during administrative lockdown. District court also erred in dismissing complaint for failure to exhaust administrative remedies beyond second level of prison appeals system, where inmate was not required to exhaust further levels of review once he had been reliably informed by administrator that no remedies are available. Finally, because order for supplemental briefing injected renewed uncertainty and complexity into summary judgment procedure, previously issued notice did not effectively give inmate fair notice he should have submitted evidence regarding exhaustion of remedies, and on remand, he should be allowed to submit evidence regarding exhaustion of remedies. Marella v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2009) 562 F.3d 983, 985-986

Although inmate properly appealed his grievance through all steps county jail held out, and his failure to specifically grieve deliberate indifference to his medical needs as Eighth Amendment violation did not invalidate his exhaustion attempt concerning his unsatisfactory bunking situation, he failed to exhaust properly, where he did not provide notice of prison staff's alleged disregard of his lower bunk assignments, officials responding to his grievance reasonably concluded that nurse's order for lower bunk assignment solved his problem, and, rather than clarifying situation, inmate repeatedly demanded ladder, so that his grievance did not provide enough information to allow prison officials to take appropriate responsive measures. Griffin v. Arpaio (9th Cir. 2009) 557 F.3d 1117, 1120-1121

Prisoner failed to exhaust administrative remedies under PLRA by failing to timely appeal order barring him from participating in prison special programs under 15 Cal. Code Reg. § 3084.6(c), requiring appeal within 15 working days of order, where order determination did not result in continuing denial of constitutional rights to restart 15-day limitations period each day he was unable to participate in prison special programs, because determination was discrete act adverse to prisoner and limitations period began running against him on that date rather than on date he actually felt effects of order; and where prisoner had ample notice because restriction was presumptively permanent. Ngo v. Woodford (9th Cir. 2008) 539 F.3d 1108, 1109-1111

Prison Litigation Reform Act [42 U.S.C. § 1997e et seq.] requires prisoners to exhaust available administrative remedies before bringing claims under the Americans With Disabilities Act and the Rehabilitation Act. Prisoner did not exhaust remedies by repeated requests to move to bottom bunk due to poor balance resulting from previous brain injury, where lower bunk claims were not equivalent to claims of denial of mental health treatment in violation of ADA and Rehabilitation Act, and where complaint filed with DOJ alleging denial of mental health treatment did not exhaust prison's internal grievance process. O'Guinn v. Lovelock Correctional Center (9th Cir. 2007) 502 F.3d 1056, 1059-1063

PLRA's exhaustion requirement applies with equal force to prisoners held in private prisons; confiscation of magazines was prison condition to which exhaustion requirement applied. Roles v. Maddox (9th Cir. 2006) 439 F.3d 1016, 1017-1018

Prisoner who did not file internal grievance, but did participate in internal investigation regarding same incident, did not exhaust remedies under PLRA, when there was no genuine issue of material fact regarding prisoner's access to grievance process and when, although internal affairs investigation into officer's conduct resulted in adverse action against officer, prisoner did not allege that remedy was available to him through that process, and only potential remedies available to prisoner were through administrative grievance procedure, and he did not initiate or exhaust his administrative remedies through that procedure. Panaro v. City of North Las Vegas (9th Cir. 2005) 432 F.3d 949, 952-953

Appellate court remanded dismissal of prisoner's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 complaint to district court, when district court's dismissal turned on its implicit interpretation of complaint as presenting multiple claims regarding his validation as gang member, and it correlated number of grievances filed within prison system with number of claims within complaint, and did not regard complaint as presenting single due process claim challenging unavailability of evidence used against him and resulting in his placement and retention in administrative segregation. However, prisoner argued that complaint actually presented constellation of due process violations for validation as gang associate and placement and retention in administrative segregation amounting to a single, exhausted claim. District court's consideration was under misapprehension that dismissal of entire action was mandated if complaint was partially defective; if district judge again determined that due process claim consisted of intertwined exhausted and unexhausted claims, proper course of action would be to allow prisoner to amend complaint to refer only to fully exhausted grievance, and to consider on merits whether prisoner stated viable due process claim on basis of fully exhausted grievance. Lira v. Herrera (9th Cir. 2005) 427 F.3d 1164, 1169-1177

Trial court erred in dismissing state prisoner's action based on restrictions of rights after disciplinary action for failure to exhaust administrative remedies because his appeal of disciplinary action was time barred. Prisoner exhausted his appeals because he could go no further in prison's administrative system since no remedies remained available to him.

In addition, exhaustion requirement did not bar subsequent judicial consideration of exhausted administrative appeal denied on state procedural grounds. Ngo v. Woodford (9th Cir. 2005) 403 F.3d 620, 624-631

State prison inmate was not required to first successfully challenge disciplinary conviction in order to challenge procedures used in disciplinary hearing under § 1983, when successful § 1983 challenge would not necessarily shorten length of confinement because there was no showing by state that expungement of conviction that inmate sought was likely to accelerate his eligibility for parole; parole board would still have authority to deny inmate's request for parole on basis of any grounds presently available to it in evaluating request. Ramirez v. Galaza (9th Cir. 2003) 334 F.3d 850, 859

District court properly dismissed prisoner's action involving prison conditions without prejudice when plaintiff did not exhaust administrative remedies before filing suit but was in process of doing so when motion to dismiss was filed. McKinney v. Carey (9th Cir. 2002) 311 F.3d 1198

Exhaustion of administrative remedies under 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(a) is not required when money damages is sole relief sought and remedy is not available through prison's administrative grievance process. Rumbles v. Hill (9th Cir. 1999) 182 F.3d 1064, 1068-1069

Exhaustion requirement in 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(a), effective April 26, 1996, does not apply retrospectively to cases brought before effective date. Bishop v. Lewis (9th Cir. 1998) 155 F.3d 1094, 1095-1096

In § 1983 action by two state prisoners alleging that they were classified as sex offenders in violation of federal constitutional due process and ex post facto guarantees, arguing that classification affected their eligibility for parole, inmates were not required to invalidate classification before bringing suit, because favorable judgment would in no way guarantee parole or necessarily shorten their prison sentences. Neal v. Shimoda (9th Cir. 1997) 131 F.3d 818, 824

District court's dismissal of prisoner's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action for failure to exhaust administrative remedies was improper; court should have granted continuance to afford prisoner opportunity to pursue administrative remedies. Francis v. Marquez (9th Cir. 1984) 741 F.2d 1127, 1128

Trial court properly dismissed inmate's action alleging medical malpractice and failure to furnish adequate medical care for failure to exhaust administrative remedies, when prisoner did not complete administrative process provided by Department of Corrections, and although money damages were unavailable in administrative process, prisoner was required to exhaust administrative remedies before seeking judicial relief because exhaustion requirement furthered important interests of prison autonomy, mitigating damages, application of department expertise, and order in court system. Wright v. State of California (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 659, 664-671, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 92

[17] Pleading

Allegations in complaint of pro se prisoner, "however inartfully pleaded," are held to less stringent standards than formal pleadings drafted by lawyers. Hughes v. Rowe (1980) 449 U.S. 5, 9, 101 S. Ct. 173, 66 L. Ed. 2d 163 ; Haines v. Kerner (1972) 404 U.S. 519, 520, 92 S. Ct. 594, 30 L. Ed. 2d 652

Requirement in Prison Litigation Reform Act that prisoner exhaust available administrative remedies is affirmative defense, and imposing technical pleading requirement would run contrary to liberal approach courts take to pleadings by pro se prisoners. Proper motion to raise failure to exhaust administrative remedies is Rule 12(b) motion rather than motion for summary judgment. Wyatt v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2003) 315 F.3d 1108, 1116-1120

In cases brought by prisoners pro se, courts must construe prisoners' papers liberally. Eldridge v. Block (9th Cir. 1987)

832 F.2d 1132, 1137

Courts should treat pro se litigants with great leniency when evaluating compliance with technical rules of civil procedure. Draper v. Coombs (9th Cir. 1986) 792 F.2d 915, 924

[18] Immunity Defenses

Members of federal prison's discipline committee who hear cases involving inmates charged with rules infractions are entitled to qualified, not absolute, immunity. Cleavinger v. Saxner (1985) 474 U.S. 193, 206-208, 106 S. Ct. 496, 88 L. Ed. 2d 507

Prisoner librarian was entitled to qualified immunity on claim that her refusal to give inmate access to comb-binding machine for inmate's petition for certiorari with United States Supreme Court, as result of which inmate did not timely file petition and it was denied as untimely, violated inmate's right of access to courts, where reasonable prison official would not have believed that denying access to comb-binding machine would have violated his right of meaningful access to United States Supreme Court in light of Supreme Court's flexible rules for pro se filings, which did not require and perhaps did not even permit comb-binding, and librarian was knowledgeable about filing requirements in courts; and where delay in time responding to inmate's request was not unreasonable based on information known to librarian, because request inmate sent to her did not indicate date which petition was due. Phillips v. Hust (9th Cir. 2009) 588 F.3d 652, 655-659

In inmate's action alleging denial of outdoor exercise during lockdown periods, which were based on inmate violence toward guards, staff, and other inmates, prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity, where inmate's constitutional right to outdoor exercise was not absolute and indefeasible and did not trump all other considerations, and officials had substantial reasons for imposing lockdowns in attempting to restore order during series of brutal attacks, including some that were lethal or nearly so; and where great deal of violence took place during outdoor exercise, and, while denying outdoor exercise for extended periods carried some risk of harm, officials' judgment that there was greater risk of harm from allowing outdoor exercise was reasonable. Norwood v. Vance (9th Cir. 2009) 572 F.3d 626, 631-633

Prisoner librarian was entitled to qualified immunity on claim that her refusal to give inmate access to comb-binding machine for inmate's petition for certiorari with United States Supreme Court, as result of which inmate did not timely file petition and it was denied as untimely, violated inmate's right of access to courts, where reasonable prison official would not have believed that denying access to comb-binding machine would have violated his right of meaningful access to United States Supreme Court in light of Supreme Court's flexible rules for pro se filings, which did not require and perhaps did not even permit comb-binding, and librarian was knowledgeable about filing requirements in courts; and where delay in time responding to inmate's request was not unreasonable based on information known to librarian, because request inmate sent to her did not indicate date which petition was due. Phillips v. Hust (9th Cir. 2009) 588 F.3d 652, 655-659

Parole officers were not entitled to absolute immunity from suits arising from conduct distinct from the decision to grant, deny, or revoke parole; thus, officers were not entitled to absolute immunity for actions related to investigation of suspected parole violations, ordering parolee's arrest pursuant to parole hold, and recommending initiation of parole revocation proceedings. Swift v. State of California (9th Cir. 2004) 384 F.3d 1184, 1188-1193

In prisoner's action against correctional officers for retaliation of exercise of his First Amendment rights to file prison grievances and grand jury complaints against officers, officers were not entitled to qualified immunity, when prohibition against retaliatory punishment was clearly established law in Ninth Circuit, infliction of harms other than total chilling effect could establish liability for such conduct, and harms allegedly visited on prisoner in response to his exercise of First Amendment rights went well beyond marginal chilling of his rights. Officers' claim to immunity that it was not clearly established that prisoner had constitutional right to be free from retaliatory conduct that did not chill or deter exercise of constitutional rights was flatly inconsistent with concept of qualified immunity, because officers' argument shifted focus of qualified immunity inquiry from time of conduct to its aftermath and effect, and would make immunity hinge on kind of post hoc judgment doctrine was designed to avoid. Rhodes v. Robinson (9th Cir. 2004) 380 F.3d 1123, 1132-1133

Inmate's claim for damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on alleged conspiracy between governor and others to deny parole to inmates serving life sentences by abusing state statutes that authorized governor to be involved with parole was barred by collateral estoppel to extent he attempted to sue members of Board of Prison Terms. Earlier complaint that was dismissed sought compensatory and punitive damages from individual members of Board for unconstitutionally rescinding inmate's parole date, and present complaint sought same damages for same conduct by some of same defendants. Further, issue was fully and finally litigated when initial damages claim was dismissed due to absolute immunity and inmate had opportunity to appeal, so that earlier dismissal of damages claim was final determination on ground not altered by inmate's subsequent receipt of habeas relief, and district court's determination of issue was necessary to its judgment. However, collateral estoppel did not apply to whether inmate could seek damages against remaining defendants, because not all defendants in present action were members of Board and therefore not entitled to absolute immunity. McQuillion v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2004) 369 F.3d 1091, 1096

In inmate's action against prison guard for use of excessive force based on shooting inmate in leg during prison yard fight, guard was entitled to qualified immunity, when, although shooting passive, unarmed inmate standing near fight between other inmates, none of whom was armed, when no inmate was in danger of great bodily harm, would inflict unnecessary and wanton pain and governing law was clearly established at time of shooting, reasonable officer could have believed that shooting one inmate in leg to stop assault that could have seriously injured or killed another inmate was good-faith effort to restore order, and thus lawful. Marquez v. Gutierrez (9th Cir. 2003) 322 F.3d 689

State parole board officials absolutely immune from suits by prisoners for actions taken when processing parole applications. Bermudez v. Duenas (9th Cir. 1991) 936 F.2d 1064, 1066

Dental department of state prison is part of state Department of Corrections and is therefore rendered immune from 42 U.S.C. § 1983 suit in federal court by Eleventh Amendment. Hunt v. Dental Dep't (9th Cir. 1989) 865 F.2d 198, 200-201

Director of Arizona Department of Corrections not entitled to qualified immunity in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action by prisoners arising out of unreasonable body cavity searches. Vaughan v. Ricketts (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 736, 738-742 , cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1012 (1989)

Absolute immunity of parole officials, when they act to grant, deny, or revoke parole, does not extend to knowing dissemination of false information concerning parolee. Anderson v. Boyd (9th Cir. 1983) 714 F.2d 906, 909-910

[19] Damages

Prisoner could maintain action against state for damages for violation of Title II of Americans With Disabilities Act to extent state's conduct violated prisoner's constitutional rights, where insofar as Title II created private cause of action for damages against state for conduct actually violating Fourteenth Amendment, including violations of Eighth Amendment's prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment, Title II validly abrogated state sovereign immunity. United States v. Georgia (2006) 546 U.S. 151, 126 S. Ct. 877, 880-882, 163 L. Ed. 2d 650

Prisoner's § 1983 action, alleging that prison official charged him with threatening behavior and subjected him to mandatory prehearing lockup in retaliation for prior lawsuits and grievance proceedings against official, which did not challenge his conviction for insolence after disciplinary hearing or subsequent disciplinary action and sought no expungement of misconduct finding, and in which only relief sought was $10,000 in compensatory and punitive damages for physical, mental, and emotional injuries sustained during six days of prehearing detention mandated by charge of threatening behavior attributable to official's retaliatory motive, did not require favorable termination in state courts, when suit could not be construed as seeking judgment at odds with his conviction or with state's calculation of time to be served in accordance with underlying sentence, and prisoner raised no claim on which habeas relief could have been granted on any recognized theory, with consequence that favorable termination requirement was inapplicable. Muhammad v. Close (2004) 540 U.S. 749, 124 S. Ct. 1303, 1304-1307, 158 L. Ed. 2d 32

To recover damages for allegedly unconstitutional conviction or imprisonment, or for other harm caused by actions whose unlawfulness would render a conviction or sentence invalid, a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 plaintiff must prove that conviction or sentence has been reversed on direct appeal, expunged by executive order, declared invalid by state tribunal authorized to make such determination, or called into question by federal court's issuance of writ of habeas corpus. Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 486-487, 114 S. Ct. 2364, 129 L. Ed. 2d 383

Former prisoner's claims against numerous city officials alleging wrongful arrest and malicious prosecution and conspiracy of "bad behavior" in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983, based on two encounters with police, were barred under Heck v. Humphrey. Judgment in favor of plaintiff on those claims would necessarily have implied invalidity of his convictions, he could not show his convictions had already been invalidated, and no exception to Heck's bar applied, since plaintiff's failure to achieve habeas corpus relief was self-imposed by his failure to timely pursue habeas corpus remedies. However, Heck did not bar § 1983 excessive force claim because claim did not necessarily imply invalidity of convictions or sentences, since alleged use of excessive force during arrest did not preclude possibility that plaintiff was still guilty of possession of narcotics. Guerrero v. Gates (9th Cir. 2006) 442 F.3d 697, 703-705

Inmate's successful habeas petition and subsequent release did not render moot claim for damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on alleged conspiracy between governor and others to deny parole to inmates serving life sentences by abusing state statutes that authorized governor to be involved with parole, when construing allegations in complaint as true, as appellate court was required to on review of dismissal under Fed. R. Civ. Pro. Rule 12(b)(6), damages claims remained justiciable, subject to defenses. However, under Heck v. Humphrey, damages claims were not cognizable at time of district court's dismissal for failure to state claim on which relief could be granted, which came after Ninth Circuit's 2002 opinion granting inmate habeas relief, and, therefore, should have been dismissed. McQuillion v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2004) 369 F.3d 1091, 1095, 1097-1098

Under Prison Litigation Reform Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(e), trial court properly dismissed action by prisoner for mental and emotional injury sought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for injuries allegedly suffered during lengthy detainment in jail cell, when prisoner alleged only de minimis physical injury, and when prisoner's deposition testimony portraying his injuries as not serious conflicted with his allegations of serious physical injury; however, prisoner's actionable claims for compensatory, nominal, or punitive damages premised on violations of his Fourteenth Amendment rights, and not on alleged mentalor emotional injuries, are not barred by § 1997e(e). Oliver v. Keller (9th Cir. 2002) 289 F.3d 623, 627-630

42 U.S.C. § 1997e(e), requiring prior showing of physical injury as prerequisite to recovery of damages for mental or emotional injury, is inapplicable to First Amendment claims; deprivation of First Amendment rights entitles plaintiff to judicial relief wholly aside from any physical, mental, or emotional injury. Canell v. Lightner (9th Cir. 1998) 143 F.3d 1210, 1213

[20] Injunctions

Inmate's successful habeas petition and subsequent release rendered moot claim for injunctive relief under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on alleged conspiracy between governor and others to deny parole to inmates serving life sentences by abusing state statutes that authorized governor to be involved with parole, when release extinguished inmate's legal interest in injunction because it would have had no effect on him. Claims of inmate's co-plaintiffs, who were still incarcerated, also failed to state claim for injunctive relief because, assuming co-plaintiffs had protected liberty interest in parole eligibility matters, prospective relief they sought was unattainable in § 1983 proceedings, when bias on part of Governor, Board of Prison Terms, and Attorney General could not be redressed by injunction ordering state officials to comply with state law, but effect of purportedly biased decision resulting in constitutional violation could be considered by federal court if contested in properly exhausted habeas petition, and when co-plaintiffs had alleged nothing to indicate challenged state statutes were facially unconstitutional because Governor had role in parole determinations or for any other reason. Remaining claims for prospective relief also could not proceed, because § 1983 does not vest federal courts with authority to enjoin administration of, or to declare invalid, state laws on grounds they are incompatible with other state laws, much less to rule that state laws are contrary to state Legislature's intent, and because federal court cannot put in place prophylactic rules of its own making when underlying state laws are not themselves contrary to federal law. McQuillion v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2004) 369 F.3d 1091, 1095, 1098-1099

18 U.S.C. § 3626, a provision of Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA), requiring court to make specfic findings before granting prospective relief, applied retroactively to pending case. Oluwa v. Gomez (9th Cir. 1998) 133 F.3d 1237, 1239

[21] Attorney's Fees

Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA) limits attorney's fees for post-judgment monitoring services performed after PLRA's effective date but not for post-judgment monitoring performed before then. Martin v. Hadix (1999) 527 U.S. 343, 360-362, 119 S. Ct. 1998, 144 L. Ed. 2d 347

Because prisoner obtained injunctive relief in addition to money damages and there was no showing that any portion of attorney's fees was incurred for sole purpose of obtaining monetary relief, district court did not err in ruling that no portion of fees was limited to 150 percent of money damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(d)(2). However, because prisoner's causes of action for denial of medical treatment and access to the courts were decided against him by summary judgment, prisoner prevailed against four defendants but was unsuccessful against four others on his claim for retaliation, and prisoner obtained only fraction of damages sought and only part of desired injunctive relief, on record before court of appeal district court's determination that prisoner was entitled to full fees because he prevailed on his principal contention did not properly consider appellee's degree of success in arriving at reasonable fee award. Dannenberg v. Valadez (9th Cir. 2003) 338 F.3d 1070, 1074-1076

In action under Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) [42 U.S.C. § 12101] and Rehabilitation Act (RA) [29 U.S.C. § 794] by class of prisoners challenging California's treatment of disabled inmates and parolees, trial court properly awarded attorney's fees to prevailing plaintiffs for work plaintiffs' counsel conducted in litigating another action before United States Supreme Court that protected plaintiffs' interests in this case by holding that ADA applies to prisoners. District court acted properly in declining to apply Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA) attorney's fees limits to present case, because ADA and RA have their own attorney's fees provisions, which are not limited by PLRA, and district court properly chose not to apply PLRA limits to tertiary 42 U.S.C § 1983 claim that required no additional discovery or witnesses at trial, and arguments supporting it so overlapped with ADA and RA claims as to make discrete time allocation and billing challenging. Finally, district court acted properly in approving various fees and expenses defendants believed were excessive or duplicative, or not properly compensable. Armstrong v. Davis (9th Cir. 2003) 318 F.3d 965, 971-975

District court did not err in awarding attorney's fees for services rendered by prisoner's attorneys in monitoring and enforcing prior judgment and consent decree after effective date of PLRA, when Congress intended in PLRA that plaintiff be entitled to fees incurred in enforcing judgment entered on proof that plaintiff's constitutional rights had been violated, and when in holding that consent decree met requirements of PLRA in face of challenge seeking to terminate consent decree, district court found that decree corrected violations of prisoner's rights; district court did not abuse its discretion by applying PLRA rate cap to fees related to motions for contempt and discovery sanctions and to all fees incurred for attorney's services performed after PLRA's effective date, whether related to merits or postjudgment monitoring; district court adequately explained its reasons and did not abuse its discretion in setting different hourly rate for pre-PLRA postjudgment matters than it had applied in original litigation. However, court erred as matter of law in construing 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(d)(3) and 18 U.S.C. § 3006A in applying baseline hourly rate of $65 for in-court time and $45 for out-of-court time, which are rates actually paid to court-appointed counsel in district, rather than $75 as authorized by § 3006A; trial court also did not adequately explain its substantial reduction in prisoner's attorney's hours, since appellate court could not determine from record basis for court's determination that hours claimed were excessive. Webb v. Ada County (9th Cir. 2002) 285 F.3d 829

Trial court properly denied fees under PLRA to prisoner who had obtained temporary restraining order preventing his execution on complaint alleging that his due process rights were violated during clemency proceedings, when district court never finally adjudicated question of whether prisoner's rights were in fact violated, so that no actual violation of rights was proven. Siripongs v. Davis (9th Cir. 2002) 282 F.3d 755

PLRA provisions apply with regard to services performed after PLRA's effective date, but not for services performed before effective date. Madrid v. Gomez (9th Cir. 1999) 190 F.3d 990, 994

Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 authorizes award of attorney's fees to counsel who initiate proceedings on behalf of prison inmates to vindicate their rights. In re Head (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 223, 226-233, 228 Cal. Rptr. 184, 721 P.2d 65

Possible availability of public defender to conduct litigation on behalf of inmates based on Gov. Code § 27706(g) (discretion vested in public defender to represent indigent pretrial detainee regarding jail conditions) did not justify denial of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. Daniels v. McKinney (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 42, 50-54, 193 Cal. Rptr. 842

[22] Declaratory Relief

Inmate's successful habeas petition and subsequent release rendered moot claim for declaratory relief under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on alleged conspiracy between governor and others to deny parole to inmates serving life sentences by abusing state statutes that authorized governor to be involved with parole, when although in some instances declaratory relief may exist after injunctive relief becomes moot, inmate's claim for declaratory judgment could not proceed here after claim for injunctive relief was rendered moot because judicial pronouncement, as it would relate to inmate, would be advisory opinion, which Constitution prohibits, and when considered in conjunction with claim for damages, declaratory judgment without possibility of prospective effect would be superfluous. McQuillion v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2004) 369 F.3d 1091, 1095

[23] Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act

Summary judgment would have been inappropriate had district court applied Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act's standard prisoner's religious exercise claim rather than First Amendment standard, even though prisoner did not plead RLUIPA violation, where genuine issues of material fact existed as to whether prison officials' restrictions on his religious exercise were least restrictive means of maintaining prison security, and where complaint's omission of citation to RLUIPA did not preclude prisoner from advancing legal arguments based on that statute because complaint and subsequent filings provided appellees with fair notice of claim, even though statute was not cited in complaint itself, because complaint contained factual allegations establishing plausible entitlement to relief under RLUIPA, which satisfied minimal notice pleading requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 8. Alvarez v. Hill (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1152, 1156-1159

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsCriminal ProcessCruel & Unusual PunishmentConstitutional LawEqual ProtectionGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsFreedom of SpeechCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsFreedom of ReligionCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsMedical Treatment

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.57

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.57 Law Reviews

Comment, The Culture of Judicial Deference and the Problem of Supermax Prisons, 51 UCLA L. Rev. 1505 (2004)

Comment, A Prisoner's Right to Religious Diet Beyond the Free Exercise Clause , 51 UCLA L. Rev. 1151 (2004)

Quigley, Symposium: Prison Work, Wages, and Catholic Social Thought: Justice Demands Decent Work For Decent Wages, Even for Prisoners, 44 Santa Clara L. Rev. 1159 (2004)

Comment, Life-Term Inmates' Right to Procreate Via Artificial Insemination: Why So Much Fuss Over the Contents of a Plastic Cup? 33 McGeorge L. Rev. 521 (2002)

Comment, The Prison Litigation Reform Act's Physical Injury Requirement Bars Meritorious Lawsuits: Was It Meant To? 49 UCLA L. Rev. 1655 (2002)

Branham, Of Mice and Prisoners: The Constitutionality of Extending Prisoners' Confinement for Filing Frivolous Lawsuits, 75 S. Cal. L. Rev. 1021 (2002)

Note, Presumed Dangerous: California's Selective Policy of Forcibly Medicating State Prisoners with Antipsychotic Drugs, 35 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 483 (2002)

Comment, State Sovereign Immunity and Stare Decisis: Solving the Prisoners' Dilemma Within the Court, 89 Cal. L. Rev. 1165 (2001)

Branham, Toothless in Truth? The Ethereal Rational Basis Test and the Prison Litigation Reform Act's Disparate Restrictions on Attorney's Fees, 89 Cal. L. Rev. 999 (2001)

Comment, Preventing Summary Judgment Against Inmates Who Have Been Sexually Assaulted by Showing that the Risk Was Obvious, 59 Md. L. Rev. 642 (2000)

Comment, The Price of Civil Rights: The Prison Litigation Reform Act's Attorney's Fee-Cap Provision as a Violation of Equal Protection of the Laws, 73 Temple L. Rev. 759 (2000)

Comment, County Liability for Poor Living Conditions and Inadequate Medical Care in California's County Jails, 33 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 677 (2000)

Comment, Past Wrongs, Present Futility, and the Future of Prisoner Relief: A Reasonable Interpretation of "Available" in the Context of the PLRA, 33 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 713 (2000)

Comment, Slamming the Prison Doors on Media Interviews: California's New Regulations Demonstrate the Need for a First Amendment Right of Access to Inmates, 30 McGeorge L. Rev. 125 (1998)

Comment, Cruel and Unusual Punishment of Female Inmates: The Need for Redress Under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 , 38 Santa Clara L. Rev. 555 (1998)

Tushnet and Yackle, Symbolic Statutes and Real Laws: The Pathologies of the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act and the Prison Litigation Reform Act, 47 Duke L.J. 1 (1997)

Note, Ensuring Meaningful Legal Assistance: The Need for a Jailhouse Lawyer-Inmate Privilege, 18 Cardozo L. Rev. 1569 (1997)

Comment, Inmates' Civil Rights Cases and the Federal Courts: Insights Derived from a Field Research Project in the Eastern District of California, 28 Creighton L. Rev. 1255 (1995)

Comment, The Administration of Psychotropic Drugs to Prisoners: State of the Law and Beyond, 78 Cal. L. Rev. 1243 (1990)

Note, Turner v. Safley: The Supreme Court Further Confuses Prisoners' Constitutional Rights, 22 Loy. L.A. L. Rev. 667 (1989)

Comment, Women and Children First: An Examination of the Unique Needs of Women in Prison, 16 Golden Gate U.L. Rev. 455 (1986)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawPrisoner RightsAccess to CourtsConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental FreedomsFreedom of ReligionFree Exercise of ReligionCriminal Law & ProcedurePostconviction ProceedingsImprisonmentCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsFreedom of ReligionConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental FreedomsFreedom of ReligionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.58

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.58 Text References

Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 1, Contracts, § 58; vol. 7, Constitutional Law, §§ 246-247, 278; vol. 8, Constitutional Law, §§ 823, 825-827; vol. 10, Parent and Child, § 12 (10th ed. 2005)

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 114.59-114.69

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

[Reserved]

§§ 114.59[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART IV. FORMS

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.70

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.70 Complaint for Damages for Deprivation of Rights Under Color of State Law Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983--Cruel and Unusual Punishment of Prisoner by Use of Excessive Force

[1] FORM Complaint for Damages for Deprivation of Rights Under Color of State Law Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983--Cruel and Unusual Punishment of Prisoner by Use of Excessive Force

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
_____ DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name], Defendant(s).	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES
	)	(42 U.S.C. § 1983)
	)

_____

DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

Plaintiff alleges:

1. This is an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 to recover damages against defendant for violation of plaintiff's right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment, guaranteed by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution.

2. The jurisdiction of this Court is predicated on 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343.

3. Plaintiff, _____ [name], is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, a citizen of the United States, and a prisoner, in the custody of the California Department of Corrections, at _____ [name of prison], in _____ [location of prison], California.

4. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, _____ [state residence of defendant, or other basis of venue, e.g., a resident of _____ (county), California]. Venue is therefore proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).

[5. A substantial part of the events giving rise to this action occurred in _____ (county), California. Venue is therefore proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).]

6. Defendant was, at all times mentioned in this complaint, _____ [state facts showing defendant's capacity as a government agent, e.g., an agent of the State of California, employed as a correctional officer at Mule Creek State Prison].

7. Defendant was, at all times mentioned in this complaint, acting in the course and scope of _____ [his or her] employment _____ [specify employment, e.g., as a correctional officer at Mule Creek State Prison].

8. Defendant was, at all times mentioned in this complaint, acting under color of state law.

9. Defendant is sued in _____ [his or her] individual capacity.

10. _____ [Allege facts concerning the infliction of cruel and unusual punishment on the plaintiff by specifying exact acts of excessive force.]

11. In acting as alleged in this complaint, defendant subjected Plaintiff to unnecessary and wanton infliction of physical injury, pain, and emotional distress.

12. In acting as alleged in this complaint, defendant violated plaintiff's right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment, guaranteed by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution.

13. As a direct and proximate result of defendant's actions, described in this complaint, plaintiff has suffered injury, pain, and emotional distress in that _____ [describe injury, pain, and emotional distress, and any other damage suffered by plaintiff as a result of the cruel and unusual punishment].

[14. In acting as is alleged in this complaint, defendant acted knowingly, willfully, and maliciously, and with reckless and callous disregard for plaintiff's federally protected rights.]

[15. Plaintiff exhausted available administrative remedies, by _____ (describe exhaustion of remedies)].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. For compensatory damages, in an amount to be determined according to proof at trial;

[2. For punitive damages, in an amount to be determined according to proof at trial;]

3. For reasonable attorney's fees, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1988;

4. For costs of suit incurred in this action; and

5. For such other and further relief as the Court deems proper.

_____ [date]

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

Plaintiff _____ [name] hereby demands a jury trial.

_____ [date]

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use in federal court in an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for violation of a prisoner's right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment by the use of excessive force. The complaint seeks recovery of damages, including punitive damages in an appropriate case.

[3] Allegations

The form of complaint in [1], above, alleges all of the following:

- That this action arises under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and is for violation of plaintiff's federal constitutional right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment (Paragraph 1).

- That the court's jurisdiction is predicated on 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343 (Paragraph 2).

- Plaintiff's name, United States citizenship, and incarceration (Paragraph 3). To bring an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, the plaintiff must be "a citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof" [42 U.S.C. § 1983; see Martinez v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1373, 1382 (Mexican citizen, who was in Mexico at time of events in question, could not bring § 1983 action)].

- Defendant's residence, for purposes of establishing venue (Paragraph 4) [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue proper in district where a defendant resides, if all defendants are from same state)].

- An optional paragraph (Optional Paragraph 5) identifying a county in which a substantial part of the events giving rise to the action occurred. This paragraph is for use in a case when the plaintiff wishes to establish venue in such county [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue proper in district where substantial part of events giving rise to action occurred)].

- That defendant was an agent of a government entity, and that defendant was acting in the course and scope of his or her agency (Paragraphs 6 and 7). These allegations establish background facts showing that defendant acted under color of state law.

- That defendant acted under color of state law (Paragraph 8). This is an element of the cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [see, e.g., Crumpton v. Gates (9th Cir. 1991) 947 F.2d 1418, 1420] .

- That defendant is sued in his or her individual capacity (Paragraph 9). An action for recovery of money damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 may be brought against a person acting under color of law, sued in his or her individual capacity. If the suit is brought against the defendant in his or her official capacity, the action is considered to be the same as an action against the government entity employing the defendant, and, therefore, the requirements and limitations of such a suit would apply [see Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, § 113.14[7]].

- Facts concerning the infliction of cruel and unusual punishment (Paragraph 10). This may take up several paragraphs, and make up the majority of the complaint.

- An allegation that defendant subjected plaintiff to unnecessary and wanton infliction of physical injury, pain, and emotional distress (Paragraph 11). This is the legal standard for a showing of cruel and unusual punishment by use of excessive force [see Hudson v. McMillian (1992) 503 U.S. 1, 6-7, 112 S. Ct. 995, 117 L. Ed. 2d 156 ; Wilson v. Seiter (1991) 501 U.S. 294, 297-303, 111 S. Ct. 2321, 115 L. Ed. 2d 271 ; Whitley v. Albers (1986) 475 U.S. 312, 318-321, 106 S. Ct. 1078, 89 L. Ed. 2d 251] .

- An allegation that defendant violated plaintiff's right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment, guaranteed by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution (Paragraph 12).

- That as a direct and proximate result of defendant's actions, plaintiff suffered injury, pain, and emotional distress (Paragraph 13). This allegation also describes the injury, pain, and emotional distress, and any other damage suffered by plaintiff. Under the Prison Litigation Reform Act, enacted in 1996, a prisoner may not recover damages for mental or emotional injury without a prior showing of physical injury [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(e)].

- An optional allegation, that defendants acted knowingly, willfully, and maliciously, and with reckless and callous disregard for plaintiff's federally protected rights (Optional Paragraph 14). This allegation, if appropriate under the circumstances, would support recovery of punitive damages [see Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 56, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632] .

- An optional allegation, that plaintiff exhausted available administrative remedies (Optional Paragraph 15). In 1996, the Prison Litigation Reform Act added a requirement that a prisoner must exhaust available administrative remedies before bringing an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 or other federal law [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(a); see also Rumbles v. Hill (9th Cir. 1999) 182 F.3d 1064, 1066 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1074 (2000)] . However, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that exhaustion of administrative remedies under § 1997e(a) is not required if (1) a prisoner's § 1983 claims seek only money damages and (2) the correctional facility's administrative grievance process does not allow for such an award [Rumbles v. Hill (9th Cir. 1999) 182 F.3d 1064, 1068-1069 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1074 (2000)] . This holding conflicts with holdings of courts in other federal circuits [see Perez v. Wisconsin Dep't of Corrections (7th Cir. 1999) 182 F.3d 532, 537-538 (exhaustion mandatory even if administrative process does not provide for remedy sought by plaintiff); Alexander v. Hawk (11th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 1321, 1326 (same)]. The form of complaint in [1], above, therefore, includes an optional allegation regarding exhaustion, for use when exhaustion of administrative remedies is necessary, and/or when the prisoner has in fact exhausted such remedies.

[4] Prayer

The prayer in the form complaint in [1], above, seeks recovery of compensatory damages. Generally, the full range of compensatory damages recoverable in a tort action is recoverable in an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [see Memphis Community School Dist. v. Stachura (1986) 477 U.S. 299, 305-306, 106 S. Ct. 2537, 91 L. Ed. 2d 249] . However, under the Prison Litigation Reform Act, enacted in 1996, a prisoner may not recover damages for mental or emotional injury without a prior showing of physical injury [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(e)].

The complaint in [1], above, also includes an optional prayer for punitive damages. In a case when the violation of plaintiff's rights was motivated by evil motive or intent, or involved reckless or callous indifference to the plaintiff's federally protected rights [see Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 56, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632] , punitive damages would be recoverable. If the facts do not involve evil motive or intent, or reckless or callous indifference to the plaintiff's federally protected rights, the optional punitive damages allegation (Paragraph 14 of the complaint) and the optional prayer for punitive damages should not be used.

The prayer also includes a prayer for attorney's fees. 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b) specifically provides for the recovery of attorney's fees in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 cases.

[5] Jury Demand

The form of complaint in [1], above, includes a demand for trial by jury. In a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 case in which damages are sought, the plaintiff will have a right to a jury trial [U.S. Const., amend. VII]. Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 38 governs demands for trial by jury. Under Rule 38, the demand for trial by jury may be served at any time after commencement of the action and not later than 10 days after service of the last pleading directed to the issue triable by jury. The rule provides further that "[s]uch demand may be indorsed upon a pleading of the party" [Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 38].

Therefore, the demand for trial by jury may be included in the complaint, as is the case in the form in [1], above.

[6] Cross References

For discussion and forms relating to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 generally, see Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes

For alternative forms of captions and introductions, see Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions

For discussion and forms relating to the format of complaints, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints

For discussion and forms relating to damages and pleading damages, see Ch. 177, Damages

For discussion and forms of jurisdictional allegations for use in federal court, and for discussion and forms relating to removal of actions to federal court, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal

For alternative forms of prayers, see Ch. 420, Prayers

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART IV. FORMS

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.71

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.71 Complaint for Damages and Injunctive Relief for Deprivation of Rights Under Color of State Law Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983--Cruel and Unusual Punishment of Prisoner by Provision of Inadequate Medical Care

[1] FORM Complaint for Damages and Injunctive Relief for Deprivation of Rights Under Color of State Law Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983--Cruel and Unusual Punishment of Prisoner by Provision of Inadequate Medical Care

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
_____ DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name], Defendant(s).	)	COMPLAINT FOR PRELIMINARY AND PER-)	MANENT INJUNCTION, AND FOR DAMAGES
	)	(42 U.S.C. § 1983)

_____

DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

Plaintiff alleges:

1. This is an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 to obtain injunctive relief and recover damages against defendants for violation of plaintiff's right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment, guaranteed by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution.

2. The jurisdiction of this Court is predicated on 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343.

3. Plaintiff, _____ [name], is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, a citizen of the United States, and a prisoner, in the custody of the California Department of Corrections, at _____ [name of prison], in _____ [location of prison], California.

4. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, _____ [state residence of defendant, or other basis of venue, e.g., a resident of _____ (county), California]. Venue is therefore proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).

[5. A substantial part of the events giving rise to this action occurred in _____ (county), California. Venue is therefore proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).]

6. Defendant was, at all times mentioned in this complaint, _____ [state facts showing defendant's capacity as a government agent, e.g., an agent of the State of California, employed as Chief Medical Officer at Folsom State Prison].

7. Defendant was, at all times mentioned in this complaint, acting in the course and scope of _____ [his or her] employment _____ [specify employment, e.g., as Chief Medical Officer at Folsom State Prison].

8. Defendant was, at all times mentioned in this complaint, acting under color of state law.

9. Defendant is sued in _____ [his or her] individual and official capacities.

10. _____ [Allege facts concerning plaintiff's medical needs and the defendant's provision of inadequate medical care.]

11. In acting as alleged in this complaint, defendant acted with deliberate indifference to plaintiff's serious medical needs.

12. In acting as alleged in this complaint, defendant violated plaintiff's right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment, guaranteed by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution.

13. As a direct and proximate result of defendant's actions, described in this complaint, plaintiff has suffered injury, pain, and emotional distress in that _____ [describe injury, pain, and emotional distress, and any other damage suffered by plaintiff as a result of defendant's provision of inadequate medical care].

[14. In acting as is alleged in this complaint, defendant acted knowingly, willfully, and maliciously, and with reckless and callous disregard for plaintiff's federally protected rights.]

15. As a result of defendant's actions, plaintiff has suffered and will continue to suffer extreme hardship and actual and impending irreparable _____ [injury, pain, and/or emotional distress] in that _____ [state specific and definite facts showing the impending irreparable injury, pain, and/or emotional distress that plaintiff will suffer].

16. Plaintiff has no adequate or speedy remedy at law for the conduct of defendant described above. This action for injunctive relief is plaintiff's only means of securing prospective relief, preventing defendant from denying plaintiff necessary medical care.

17. Plaintiff exhausted available administrative remedies, by _____ [describe exhaustion of remedies].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. For a preliminary injunction ordering defendant, and defendant's officers, agents, employees, successors, and attorneys, and all those in active concert or participation with defendant, to _____ [describe conduct to be required or enjoined];

2. For a permanent injunction permanently enjoining and restraining defendant, and defendant's officers, agents, employees, successors, and attorneys, and all those in active concert or participation with defendant, from _____ [describe conduct to be enjoined];

3. For compensatory damages, in an amount to be determined according to proof at trial;

[4. For punitive damages, in an amount to be determined according to proof at trial;]

5. For reasonable attorney's fees, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1988;

6. For costs of suit incurred in this action; and

7. For such other and further relief as the Court deems proper.

_____ [date]

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

Plaintiff _____ [name] hereby demands a jury trial.

_____ [date]

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use in federal court in an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for violation of a prisoner's right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment by the provision of inadequate medical care. This form of complaint seeks recovery of damages, including punitive damages in an appropriate case, and injunctive relief.

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use against one defendant, against whom both damages and injunctive relief are sought. If there are more than one defendant in the case, the complaint should be modified in that respect. In adding further defendants, special attention must be paid to the capacity in which each defendant is sued [see Paragraph 9 of the complaint in [1], above]. A defendant must be sued (1) in his or her individual capacity, if only damages are sought against the defendant; (2) in his or her official capacity, if only injunctive relief is sought against the defendant; or (3) in both his or her individual and official capacities, if both damages and injunctive relief are sought against the defendant.

[3] Allegations

The form of complaint in [1], above, alleges all of the following:

- That this action arises under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and is for violation of plaintiff's federal constitutional right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment (Paragraph 1).

- That the court's jurisdiction is predicated on 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343 (Paragraph 2).

- Plaintiff's name, United States citizenship, and incarceration (Paragraph 3). To bring an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, the plaintiff must be "a citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof" [42 U.S.C. § 1983; see Martinez v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1373, 1382 (Mexican citizen, who was in Mexico at time of events in question, could not bring § 1983 action)].

- Defendant's residence, for purposes of establishing venue (Paragraph 4) [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue proper in district where a defendant resides, if all defendants are from same state)].

- An optional paragraph (Optional Paragraph 5) identifying a county in which a substantial part of the events giving rise to the action occurred. This paragraph is for use in a case when the plaintiff wishes to establish venue in such county [see 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue proper in district where substantial part of events giving rise to action occurred)].

- That defendant was an agent of a government entity, and that defendant was acting in the course and scope of his or her agency (Paragraphs 6 and 7). These allegations establish background facts showing that defendant acted under color of state law.

- That defendant acted under color of state law (Paragraph 8). This is an element of the cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [see, e.g., Crumpton v. Gates (9th Cir. 1991) 947 F.2d 1418, 1420] .

- That defendant is sued in his or her individual and official capacities (Paragraph 9). The defendant is sued in his or her individual capacity because damages are sought, and in his or her official capacity because injunctive relief is sought [see Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, § 113.14[7]].

- Facts concerning the plaintiff's medical needs and the defendant's provision of inadequate medical care (Paragraph 10). This may take up several paragraphs, and make up the majority of the complaint.

- An allegation that defendant acted with deliberate indifference to plaintiff's serious medical needs (Paragraph 11). This is the legal standard for a showing of cruel and unusual punishment by provision of inadequate medical care [see Estelle v. Gamble (1976) 429 U.S. 97, 104, 97 S. Ct. 285, 50 L. Ed. 2d 251 ; Wakefield v. Thompson (9th Cir. 1999) 177 F.3d 1160, 1164-1165 ; Ortiz v. City of Imperial (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 1312, 1314] .

- An allegation that defendant violated plaintiff's right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment, guaranteed by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution (Paragraph 12).

- That as a direct and proximate result of defendant's actions plaintiff suffered injury, pain, and emotional distress (Paragraph 13). This allegation also describes the injury, pain, and emotional distress, and any other damage suffered by plaintiff. Under the Prison Litigation Reform Act, enacted in 1996, a prisoner may not recover damages for mental or emotional injury without a prior showing of physical injury [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(e)].

- An optional allegation, that defendants acted knowingly, willfully, and maliciously, and with reckless and callous disregard for plaintiff's federally protected rights (Optional Paragraph 14). This allegation, if appropriate under the circumstances, would support recovery of punitive damages [see Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 56, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632] .

- That defendant's actions caused and will continue to cause plaintiff to suffer extreme hardship and actual and impending irreparable injury, pain, and/or emotional distress, and an explanation of the impending irreparable injury, pain, and/or emotional distress (Paragraph 15).

- That plaintiff has no adequate or speedy remedy at law (Paragraph 16).

- An allegation that plaintiff exhausted available administrative remedies (Paragraph 17). In 1996, the Prison Litigation Reform Act added a requirement that a prisoner must exhaust available administrative remedies before bringing an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 or other federal law [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(a); see Rumbles v. Hill (9th Cir. 1999) 182 F.3d 1064, 1066 , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1074 (2000)] .

[4] Prayer

The prayer in the form complaint in [1], above, seeks preliminary and permanent injunctive relief. The prayer also seeks recovery of compensatory damages. Generally, the full range of compensatory damages recoverable in a tort action is recoverable in an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [see Memphis Community School Dist. v. Stachura (1986)

477 U.S. 299, 305-306, 106 S. Ct. 2537, 91 L. Ed. 2d 249] . However, under the Prison Litigation Reform Act, enacted in 1996, a prisoner may not recover damages for mental or emotional injury without a prior showing of physical injury [42 U.S.C. § 1997e(e)].

The form of complaint in [1], above, also includes an optional prayer for punitive damages. In a case when the violation of plaintiff's rights was motivated by evil motive or intent, or involved reckless or callous indifference to the plaintiff's federally protected rights [see Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 56, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632] , punitive damages would be recoverable. If the facts do not involve evil motive or intent, or reckless or callous indifference to the plaintiff's federally protected rights, the optional punitive damages allegation (Optional Paragraph 14 of the complaint) and the optional prayer for punitive damages should not be used.

The prayer also includes a prayer for attorney's fees. 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b) specifically provides for the recovery of attorney's fees in § 1983 cases.

[5] Jury Demand

The form of complaint in [1], above, includes a demand for trial by jury. In a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 case in which damages are sought, the plaintiff will have a right to a jury trial [U.S. Const., amend. VII]. Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 38 governs demands for trial by jury. Under Rule 38, the demand for trial by jury may be served at any time after commencement of the action and not later than 10 days after service of the last pleading directed to the issue triable by jury. The rule provides further that "[s]uch demand may be indorsed upon a pleading of the party" [Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 38]. Therefore, the demand for trial by jury may be included in the complaint, as is the case in the complaint in [1], above.

[6] Cross References

For discussion and forms relating to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, generally, see Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes

For alternative forms of captions and introductions, see Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions

For discussion and forms relating to the format of complaints, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints

For discussion and forms relating to damages and pleading damages, see Ch. 177, Damages

For discussion and forms of jurisdictional allegations for use in federal court, and for discussion and forms relating to removal of actions to federal court, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal

For alternative forms of prayers, see Ch. 420, Prayers

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART IV. FORMS

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.72

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.72 Declaration of Prisoner for Removal From State Prison to Attend Court Proceedings Affecting Parental or Marital Rights [Penal Code § 2625]

[1] FORM Declaration of Prisoner for Removal From State Prison to Attend Court Proceedings Affecting Parental or Marital Rights [Penal Code § 2625]

[Caption. Same as on papers previously filed in proceeding.]

I, _____ [name], declare:

1. My _____ [parental or marital] rights are subject to adjudication in the above-entitled proceeding now pending before this court in that _____ [specify].

2. I am presently a _____ [prisoner at _____ (name of state prison, county jail or the California Rehabilitation Center) or ward of the California Youth Authority] in _____ [city], _____ County, California.

3. I request that this court order my removal from the above-named facility and my production before this court for the purpose of _____ [specify, e.g., attending trial].

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]

[2] Use of Form

The declaration and request in [1], above, is for use by a person who is a prisoner in the custody of a state prison, county jail, or the California Rehabilitation Center, or who is a ward of the California Youth Authority, to obtain temporary removal from the institution and production before the court in which an action is pending that will adjudicate the prisoner's marital or parental rights [Penal Code § 2625]. The form may be modified for use by a person confined in a state hospital for the care and treatment of the mentally disordered, or in any other public or private treatment facility, following a verdict or finding that the individual was insane at the time of committing an offense, or mentally incompetent to be tried or adjudged to punishment [Penal Code § 2625(a)].

Prisoners who have been sentenced to death do not have the right to attend proceedings in which their parental rights are subject to adjudication [Penal Code § 2625(g)].

[3] Contents of Declaration

The form declaration in [1], above, states all of the following:

- That the prisoner's parental or marital rights are subject to adjudication in a proceeding pending before the court (Paragraph 1).
- The name and location of the institution in which the prisoner is incarcerated (Paragraph 2).
- The prisoner's request that the court order his or her removal from the institution and his or her production before the court (Paragraph 3).

[4] When Judge Must Issue Order

Generally, an order is within the discretion of the judge. However, in any of the following proceedings, on receipt of a statement from the prisoner or his or her attorney indicating the prisoner's desire to be present during the court proceedings, the judge "shall issue" the order for temporary removal [Penal Code § 2625(d)]:

- To declare a minor free from custody and control of his or her parent [Fam. Code § 7800 et seq.];
- To adjudicate a minor dependent child of the court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 300]; or
- To terminate parental rights [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26].

[5] Notice of Proceeding to Prisoner

In any proceeding brought under Fam. Code § 7800 et seq., Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, or Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26, the superior court or a judge of the court must order that notice of the proceeding be transmitted to the prisoner. The notice is served in accordance with Fam. Code § 7881 or 7882 or Welf. & Inst. Code § 290.2, 291, or 294 [Penal Code §

2625(b), (c); see discussion of service requirements in Ch. 12A, Adoptions: Termination of Parental Rights, § 12A.71, and Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, §§ 328.20, 328.47, and 328.171].

No proceedings may be held under Fam. Code § 7800 et seq., Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, or Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26, without the physical presence of the prisoner or his or her attorney, unless the court has before it a knowing waiver of the right of physical presence signed by the prisoner, or an affidavit signed by the warden, superintendent, or other person in charge of the institution or his or her designated representative stating that the prisoner has, by express statement or action, indicated an intent not to appear at proceedings [Penal Code § 2625(d)].

[6] Cross References

For discussion and forms relating to adoptions and termination of parental rights, see Ch. 12A, Adoptions: Termination of Parental Rights

For discussion and forms relating to dependency proceedings in juvenile courts, see Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 114 CIVIL RIGHTS: PRISONERS' RIGHTS
PART IV. FORMS

11-114 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 114.73

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 114.73 Order for Removal of Prisoner From State Prison to Attend Court Proceedings Affecting Parental or Marital Rights [Penal Code § 2625]

[1] FORM Order for Removal of Prisoner From State Prison to Attend Court Proceedings Affecting Parental or Marital Rights [Penal Code § 2625]

[Caption. Same as on papers previously filed in proceeding.]

County of _____ [specify county].

The People of the State of California to the warden of _____ [name of state prison]:

An order having been made this day by me that _____ [name of prisoner] be produced in this court as a party in the case of _____ [title of action or proceeding], you are commanded to deliver _____ [name of prisoner] into the custody of _____ [name] for the purpose of _____ [specify, e.g., attending trial].
Dated: _____

_____ [signature]

Judge

[2] Use of Form

The order in [1], above, is for use to direct the production of a prisoner before the court in which an action is pending that will adjudicate a prisoner's parental or marital rights [see Penal Code § 2625]. The form of the order is specified in Penal Code § 2625(e).

Prisoners who have been sentenced to death do not have the right to attend proceedings in which their parental rights are subject to adjudication [Penal Code § 2625(g)].

A copy of the order is to be transmitted to the person in charge of the prisoner's institution not less than 15 days before the order is to be executed. The order is to be executed by the sheriff of the county in which it is made, whose duty it is to bring the prisoner before the proper court. The sheriff is to keep the prisoner safe, and, when his or her presence is no longer required, to return the prisoner to the facility from which he or she was taken. The expense of executing the order is a proper charge against, and is to be paid by, the county in which the order is made. A prisoner so removed remains in the constructive custody of the person in charge of the prisoner's institution [Penal Code § 2625(e), (f)].

[3] Cross References

For discussion and forms relating to adoptions and termination of parental rights, see Ch. 12A, Adoptions: Termination of Parental Rights

For discussion and forms relating to dependency proceedings in juvenile courts, see Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 115.syn

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.syn Synopsis to Chapter 115: CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION

§ 115.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 115.02 Cross References

§§ 115.03-115.09 [Reserved]

§ 115.10 Governing Statutes

[1] State Statutes

[a] California Fair Employment and Housing Act and Other Laws

[b] Preemption

[c] Actions Independent of FEHA

[2] Federal Statutes

§§ 115.11-115.19 [Reserved]

§ 115.20 California Fair Employment and Housing Act

[1] Unlawful Employment Practices Under FEHA

[2] Employers Subject to FEHA

[a] Scope of Employers and Entities

[b] Private Employers

[c] Parent and Subsidiary Corporations

[d] Religious Entities

[e] Nonprofit Entities

[f] Federal Preemption

[3] Employees Protected by FEHA

[a] Scope of Employees Covered

[b] Family Employees

[c] Independent Contractors

[d] Nonresidents

[4] Employee Personal Liability for Violating FEHA

[a] Supervisor Liablity

[b] Liability for Harassment

§ 115.21 Federal Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Employment

[1] Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964

[2] Americans with Disabilities Act

[3] Age Discrimination in Employment Act

[4] 42 U.S.C. § 1981

§ 115.22 Protected Classifications

[1] Generally

[2] Race and Color Discrimination

[3] National Origin or Ancestry Discrimination

[4] Sex Discrimination

[a] Based Solely on Sex

[b] Based on Same Sex

[c] Based on "Sex Plus"

[d] Based on Sex-Related Traits

[e] Based on Pregnancy

[f] Based on Sexual Affiliation or Orientation

[5] Marital Status Discrimination

[6] Religious Discrimination

[a] General Prohibition of Religious Discrimination

[b] "Religion" Defined

[c] Prima Facie Case

[d] Notice Requirement

[e] Exemptions for Religious Educational Institutions

[7] Age Discrimination

[8] Physical and Mental Disability and Medical Condition Discrimination

[a] Scope of Protection

[b] "Physical Disability" Under FEHA Defined

[i] Definitions

[ii] Broader Protections Than ADA

[c] "Mental Disability" Under FEHA Defined

[i] Definitions

[ii] Broader Protections Than ADA

[d] "Disability" Under ADA Defined

[e] Effect of Inconsistent Disability Claims in Different Proceedings

[f] "Medical Condition" Under FEHA Defined

§ 115.23 Theories of Liability

[1] Generally

[2] Disparate Treatment

[a] Scope and Application

[b] Prima Facie Proof

[c] Rebuttal of Prima Facie Proof

[d] Proof of Pretext or "Mixed Motives"

[e] FEHC Test

[3] Class-Wide or "Pattern or Practice" Discrimination Claims

[a] Generally

[b] Prima Facie Case

[c] Rebuttal of Prima Facie Case

[d] Proof of Pretext

[4] Disparate Impact

[a] Scope and Application

[b] Sequence and Proof

[c] Prima Facie Showing of "Significant" Adverse Impact

[d] Establishing Business Necessity

[e] Establishing "Pretext" or Alternative with Less Adverse Impact

§§ 115.24-115.29 [Reserved]

§ 115.30 Hiring

[1] Selection Criteria

[a] Limitations on Use of Selection Criteria

[b] Objective Versus Subjective Criteria

[2] Recruiting Methods

[a] Advertising

[b] Channeling, Nepotism, and Word of Mouth

[3] Applications and Interviews

[4] Preemployment Testing

[a] Permissible Testing

[b] EEOC Guidelines

[c] Validation of Challenged Tests

[5] Preemployment Medical Examinations

[a] Tests for Functional Limitations

[b] Drug Tests

§ 115.31 Compensation

[1] Theories of Liability

[a] "Substantial Identity" Standard

[b] Comparable Worth

[2] Proof

§ 115.32 Other Terms, Conditions, and Privileges of Employment

[1] "Terms, Conditions, and Privileges of Employment" Defined

[2] Employer Rules and Requirements

[a] Generally

[b] "No-Spouse" Rules

[3] Fringe Benefits

[a] Scope of Protection

[b] "Bona Fide Employee Benefit Plan" Exemption

[c] Health Benefits

[4] Training and Advancement

[a] Training Programs

[b] Promotion and Transfer

[5] Seniority Systems

[a] "Bona Fide Seniority Systems" Exemption

[b] Proof of Discriminatory Seniority System

[6] Family Care and Medical Leave

[a] Governing Law

[b] Permissible Purposes of Leave

[c] Covered Employers and Employees

[d] Amount of Leave Entitlement; Relationship to Pregnancy and FMLA Leave

[e] Notice of Leave

[f] Substitution of Accrued Paid Leave

[g] Continuation of Benefits During Leave

[h] Retention of Seniority and Restoration to Position

[7] Pregnancy Leave

§ 115.33 Retirement or Pension Plans and Benefits

[1] Scope of Protection

[2] Age Discrimination

[a] Mandatory Retirement

[b] Voluntary Early Retirement

[c] Pension Vesting

[3] Sex Discrimination

[a] Contributions and Benefits

[b] Benefit Eligibility

§ 115.34 Discharge and Layoff

[1] Applicable Law

[2] Disparate Treatment

[3] Constructive Discharge

§ 115.35 Accommodation

[1] Physical and Mental Disabilities

[a] Scope of Employer's Duty to Accommodate

[b] Notice to Employer of Disability

[c] Prima Facie Case of Failure to Accommodate Physical and Mental Disabilities

[d] Undue Hardship

[2] Religion

[a] Scope of Employer's Duty to Accommodate

[b] Notice to Employer and Employee's Duty to Cooperate

[c] Prima Facie Case of Failure to Accommodate

[d] Undue Hardship

[3] Pregnancy

§ 115.36 Harassment

[1] Scope of Protection

[a] Acts Constituting Harassment

[b] Loss of Tangible Benefits

[2] Liability for Harassment

[a] Employer Liability for Supervisors and Agents

[b] Employer Liability for Non-Supervisors and Non-Employees

[c] Employer Liability for Punitive Damages

[d] Employee Personal Liability

[e] Indemnification

[3] National Origin Harassment

[4] Racial Harassment

[5] Sexual Harassment

[a] Persons Protected

[b] Types of Sexual Harassment

[i] In General

[ii] "Quid Pro Quo" Harassment

[iii] "Hostile Work Environment" Harassment

[c] Persons Indirectly Harmed by Sexual Harassment

[6] Employer's Obligation to Prevent and Respond to Harassment

[a] Required Steps and Liability

[b] Affirmative Defense

§ 115.37 Retaliation

[1] Opposition to Discrimination

[a] Types of Opposition

[b] Opposition to Employer and Other Persons

[2] Participation in Employment Discrimination Proceedings

[3] Proof of Retaliation

[a] Prima Facie Case

[b] Burden of Proof and Presumptions

[c] Applicants and Former Employees

§§ 115.38-115.49 [Reserved]

§ 115.50 Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[1] Subject Matter Jurisdiction Over FEHA Actions

[2] Subject Matter Jurisdiction Over Title VII, ADA, ADEA, and 42 U.S.C. § 1981 Actions

§ 115.51 Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies

[1] Exhaustion of FEHA Claims

[a] Jurisdictional Requirement

[b] Administrative Agencies

[c] Filing of Complaint, Statute of Limitation, and "Right-to-Sue" Letter

[d] Burden of Proof and Administrative Remedies

[e] Judicial Review of Administrative Decisions

[f] Transfer to Court by Respondent

[g] Actions Not Requiring Exhaustion of Adminstrative Remedies

[2] Exhaustion of Title VII, ADA, and ADEA Claims

[a] Jurisdictional Requirement

[b] Federal Process in Relation to State Agency

[c] Administrative Actions and Remedies

§ 115.52 Civil Actions under FEHA

[1] Statute of Limitations

[2] Venue

[3] Parties Not Named in Charge

[4] Class Actions

[5] Right to Jury Trial

§ 115.53 Workers' Compensation Preemption

§ 115.54 Substantive Defenses

[1] Affirmative Defenses Generally

[2] After-Acquired Evidence

[3] Antiharassment Policy

[4] Bona Fide Occupational Qualification

[a] Scope of Defense

[b] Application to Religion

[c] Application to Sex

[d] Application to Age

[e] Application to Disability or Medical Condition

[5] Business Necessity and Job-Relatedness

[6] Inability to Perform Job or Danger to Health or Safety

[7] Reasonable Factor Other Than Age

[8] Written Release of Claims

§ 115.55 Waiver of Judicial Remedies in Arbitration Clauses

[1] Employment Subject to Arbitration

[2] Requirements for Valid Arbitration Clause

§ 115.56 Judicial Remedies

[1] Scope

[2] Back Pay

[3] Front Pay or Future Lost Earnings

[4] Compensatory Damages

[5] Punitive Damages

[6] Injunctive Relief

[7] Prejudgment Interest

[8] Attorney's Fees

§§ 115.57-115.69 [Reserved]

§ 115.70 Related Matthew Bender Publications

§ 115.71 Federal Constitution

§ 115.72 State Constitution

§ 115.73 Federal Statutes

[1] Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964

[2] Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA)

[3] Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA)

[4] Miscellaneous

§ 115.74 State Statutes

[1] Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)

[2] Miscellaneous

§ 115.75 Federal Administrative Regulations

§ 115.76 State Administrative Regulations

§ 115.77 Decisions

[1] Coverage of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws

[a] Title VII

[b] ADA

[c] ADEA

[d] 42 U.S.C. § 1981

[e] FEHA

[2] Civil Rights Act of 1991

[3] Disparate Treatment

[a] Prima Facie Case

[b] Rebuttal of Prima Facie Case

[c] Pretext or "Mixed Motive"

[4] Class-Wide or "Pattern or Practice" Claims

[5] Disparate Impact

[a] Scope and Application

[b] Prima Facie Case of "Significant" Adverse Impact

[c] Establishing Business Justification

[6] Protected Classifications

[a] Sex

[b] Race or Color

[c] National Origin

[d] Religion

[e] Disability or Medical Condition

[f] Age

[g] Pregnancy

[7] Hiring

[8] Compensation

[9] Other Terms, Conditions, and Privileges of Employment

[a] Employer Rules and Requirements

[b] Fringe Benefits

[c] Training and Advancement

[d] Seniority Systems

[e] Pregnancy Leave

[f] Family Care and Medical Leave

[10] Retirement or Pension Plans and Benefits

[11] Discharge and Layoff

[12] Accommodation

[13] Harassment

[14] Retaliation

[15] Jurisdiction over Civil Actions

[16] Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies

[17] Limitations Periods

[18] Defenses

[19] Waiver of Judicial Remedies in Arbitration Clauses

[20] Judicial Remedies

[21] Preemption

§ 115.78 Administrative Decisions

§ 115.79 Law Reviews

§ 115.80 Text References

§§ 115.81-115.89 [Reserved]

§ 115.90 Complaint for Damages and Preliminary and Permanent Injunction for Violation of Fair Employment and Housing Act--Refusal to Hire [Gov. Code §§ 12940, 12941, 12965]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Allegations

[4] Prayer

[5] Verification

[6] Administrative Prerequisites and Procedural Requirements

[7] Jurisdiction

[8] Cross References

§ 115.91 Allegation for Use in FEHA Complaint--Refusal to Accommodate Employee's or Applicant's Religious Beliefs [Gov. Code § 12940(a), (l)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Allegations

[4] Cross References

§ 115.92 Allegation for Use in FEHA Complaint--Failure to Accommodate Physical or Mental Disability or Medical Condition [Gov. Code § 12940(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Allegations

[4] Cross References

§ 115.93 Allegation for Use in FEHA Complaint--Harassment, and Constructive Discharge Resulting from Harassment [Gov. Code § 12940(j), (k)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Allegations

[4] Liability for Harassment by Supervisors and Coworkers

[5] Constructive Discharge

[6] Cross References

§ 115.94 Allegation for Use in FEHA Complaint--Retaliation [Gov. Code § 12940(h)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Allegations

[4] Cross References

§§ 115.95-115.99 [Reserved]

§ 115.100 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Accommodation Would Cause Undue Hardship [Gov. Code §§ 12926(s), 12940(l), (m)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 115.101 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Bona Fide Occupational Qualification (BFOQ) [Gov. Code § 12940]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 115.102 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Business Necessity [Gov. Code § 12940]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 115.103 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Job-Relatedness [Gov. Code § 12940]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 115.104 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Employee or Applicant Cannot Perform Duties [Gov. Code § 12940(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 115.105 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Employee or Applicant Is Danger to Health or Safety [Gov. Code § 12940(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 115.106 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Waiver of Employment Claims

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 115.107 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Avoidable Consequences

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§§ 115.108-115.119 [Reserved]

§ 115.120 Interrogatories for Employment Law Litigation [Cal. Judicial Council Form No. DISC-002]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

Dennis M. Farias
Revision Author n*
John H. Scott
Editorial Consultant n

FOOTNOTES:
(n19)Footnote *. Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases.

(n20)Footnote . John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976.

Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
I SCOPE

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.01

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses state and federal law prohibiting employment discrimination by private employers. Specifically, this chapter discusses violations of state law under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) (Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.) [see § 115.20].

This chapter also discusses the following federal legislation that prohibits unlawful employment discrimination:

- Title VII of the federal Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VII) (42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.) [see § 115.21[1]].
- The Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA) (42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.) [see § 115.21[2]].
- The Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (ADEA) (29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq.) [see § 115.21[3]].
- The Civil Rights Act of 1866 (42 U.S.C. § 1981) [see § 115.21[4]].

This chapter contains a form of complaint for damages and injunctive relief for unlawful refusal to hire under FEHA [see § 115.90]. This chapter also includes alternative forms of allegations, for use in actions brought under FEHA based on the following:

- Failure to accommodate a person's religious beliefs [see § 115.91].
- Failure to accommodate a disability or medical condition [see § 115.92].
- Harassment [see § 115.93].

- Retaliation [see § 115.94].

This chapter also contains forms of allegations for the following affirmative defenses in FEHA cases:

- Undue hardship [see § 115.100].
- Bona fide occupational qualification [see § 115.101].
- Business necessity [see § 115.102].
- Job-relatedness [see § 115.103].
- Inability to perform job duties [see § 115.104].
- Danger to health or safety [see § 115.105].
- Waiver of employment claims [see § 115.106].
- Avoidable consequences [see § 115.107].

This chapter also includes an illustrative copy of the Judicial Council Form Interrogatories for use in employment law litigation [see § 115.120].

For thorough discussion and forms relating to civil actions under Title VII, the ADA, the ADEA, 42 U.S.C. § 1981, and other federal employment laws, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law (Matthew Bender), and A. Larson & L. Larson, Employment Discrimination (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingEqual Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981)General OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964General Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
I SCOPE

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.02

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.02 Cross References

- For a comprehensive procedural guide that chronologically outlines the procedures in a typical civil action brought in a California state court, see Ch. 2, Procedural Guide for Civil Actions .

- For discussion and forms relating to discrimination in government-funded programs and activities, see Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities .

- For discussion and forms relating to actions under 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981 and 1983, and the other post-Civil War civil rights statutes (42 U.S.C. §§ 1982, 1985, 1986, and 1988), see Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

- For discussion and forms relating to prisoners' rights, see Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

- For discussion and forms relating to discrimination in business establishments, see Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments .

- For discussion and forms relating to housing discrimination, see Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination .

- For discussion and forms relating to interference with civil rights by threats, intimidation, coercion, or violence, see Ch. 117A, Civil Rights: Interference with Civil Rights by Threats, Intimidation, Coercion, or Violence .

- For discussion and forms relating to employers' liability for employees' torts, see Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts .

- For discussion and forms relating to termination and discipline of employees, see Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline .

- For discussion and forms relating to wage and hour disputes, see Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes .

- For discussion and forms of jurisdictional allegations for use in federal court, and for discussion and forms relating to removal of actions to federal court, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal .

- For discussion and forms relating to injunctions, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

- For discussion and forms relating to civil rights actions arising from illegal searches and seizures, see Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.310 et seq.

- For discussion of deprivation of civil rights during an administrative investigation, see Ch. 471, Investigations by Public Agencies .

- For discussion of adjudication of cases before public agencies, see Ch. 473, Public Agency Adjudication .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawConspiracyGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingProperty Rights (sec. 1982)General OverviewCivil Rights LawSection 1983 ActionsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
I SCOPE

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 115.03-115.09

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 115.03[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Governing Law

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.10

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.10 Governing Statutes

[1] State Statutes

[a] California Fair Employment and Housing Act and Other Laws

The principal California legislation prohibiting employment discrimination is the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) (Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.).

FEHA is interpreted and implemented by administrative regulations and guidelines that also provide substantive equal employment opportunity rights [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7285.0 et seq. (FEHA regulations)].

In addition to these statutes and regulations, there are numerous other state statutory and regulatory sources of antidiscrimination law, including the Unruh Civil Rights Acts (Civ. Code § 51 et seq.) [see Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments] and Gov. Code § 11135 (prohibiting discrimination in state departments and agencies). For additional discussion of these laws, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law (Matthew Bender), and A. Larson & L. Larson, Employment Discrimination (Matthew Bender).

The California Equal Pay Act [Lab. Code § 1197.5] prohibits wage discrimination based on sex [see Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes]. For additional discussion of this statute, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law (Matthew Bender).

The California Constitution also protects equal employment opportunity rights [see Cal. Const., art. I, §§ 7, 8], but since its application generally requires "state action" [see Sail'er Inn v. Kirby (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 1, 8, 95 Cal. Rptr. 329, 485 P.2d 529] , it primarily covers public employment. For discussion of the equal employment opportunity rights of public employees, see A. Larson & L. Larson, Employment Discrimination (Matthew Bender).

PRACTICE TIP:

Public Employees. Because cases with public employees can raise both legal and practical issues that often do not arise in the private sector, attorneys should be aware of special considerations that arise in these cases. For example, punitive damages are not available against public employers [City of Newport v. Fact Concerts, Inc. (1981) 453 U.S. 247, 271, 101 S. Ct. 2748, 69 L. Ed. 2d 616 (42 U.S.C. § 1983 case); see Gov. Code § 818]. Further, public employees often have a potential administrative appeal to a Civil Service Commission or a State Personnel Board [see Skelly v. State Personnel Board (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 194, 124 Cal. Rptr. 14, 539 P.2d 774] . These proceedings are usually faster and less expensive than litigation. Sometimes unions will provide representation. It is not unusual for a public employee to be reinstated with back pay. However, general damages and attorneys' fees are not available. The doctrine of res judicata does not ordinarily preclude a public employee from pursuing both internal administrative civil service remedies and those available under FEHA, because those two procedures protect distinct rights: civil service remedies protect the right to continued employment, and FEHA protects the right to be free from invidious discrimination and retaliation for opposing discrimination [George v. California Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1475, 1483-1484, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 431] . But if an employee elects to pursue an administrative remedy and does not like the result, the doctrine of collateral estoppel might preclude a lawsuit if an issue decided in the administrative proceeding eliminates a necessary element of the employee's case [see George v. California Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1475, 1486-1487, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 431] . Note, however, that a public employee need not pursue such administrative remedies before looking to 42 U.S.C. § 1983, Title VII, or FEHA for a remedy. By John H. Scott

[b] Preemption

Because the Legislature, in enacting FEHA, intended to "occupy the field of regulation of discrimination in employment" [see Gov. Code § 12993(c)], FEHA preempts laws banning employment discrimination enacted by any city, county, or other political subdivision of the state, even if the Legislature failed to outlaw discrimination based on the particular characteristic in issue [Delaney v. Superior Fast Freight (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 590, 596-598, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33 (Los Angeles municipal ordinance banning employment discrimination based on sexual orientation preempted)].

However, FEHA does not preempt other state laws, including the common law, that prohibit or restrict employment discrimination [Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 73-82, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373] , unless those provisions provide less protection to the persons covered under FEHA [Gov. Code § 12993(a)]. Furthermore, although an employee must exhaust FEHA administrative remedies before bringing a civil action under FEHA or seeking any remedies provided by FEHA, exhaustion of FEHA administrative remedies is not required before filing a civil action for damages alleging nonstatutory causes of action [Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 82-88, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373] .

[c] Actions Independent of FEHA

The California Supreme Court has held that Cal. Const., art. I, § 8, which provides that no person may be disqualified from entering or pursuing a business, profession, vocation, or employment because of sex, race, creed, color, or national or ethnic origin, sets forth a fundamental public policy against employment discrimination on those grounds, and may be the basis for a tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, independent of FEHA [Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 88-91, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 ; see Blom v. N.G.K. Spark Plugs (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 382, 386-388, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 139] .

However, the reach of Cal. Const., art. I, § 8 is not coextensive with that of FEHA. FEHA prohibits discrimination on a number of bases that are not covered by Cal. Const., art. I, § 8, including disability and age [see Gov. Code §§ 12940, 12941].

The California Supreme Court has held that when a plaintiff relies on a statutory prohibition to support a common-law tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, the common-law claim is subject to statutory limitations pertaining the nature and scope of the statutory prohibition [Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157] . For example, FEHA's prohibition against age discrimination cannot serve as the public-policy source underlying an employee's common-law tort action for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy against an employer who is exempt from FEHA because the employer employs fewer than five persons [Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 121, 130-132, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074 ; see Gov. Code § 12926(d) (employers covered by FEHA)]. In such a case, however, the employee may rely on alternative sources of fundamental public policy in support of the claim of wrongful discharge [Phillips v. St. Mary Reg'l Med. Ctr. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 230-238, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 (although employer was expressly exempt from FEHA, plaintiff alleging race and sex discrimination could rely on Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq., and on Cal. Const., art. I, § 8, as sources of public policy to support claim of wrongful discharge in violation of public policy)]. For discussion of common-law causes of action for wrongful termination, see Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline .

[2] Federal Statutes

The principal federal statutes prohibiting employment discrimination are Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VII) (42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.), the Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA) (42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.), the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (ADEA) (29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq.), and the Civil Rights Act of 1866 (42 U.S.C. § 1981).

Title VII, the ADA, and the ADEA are interpreted and implemented by administrative regulations and guidelines that also provide substantive equal employment opportunity rights [see 29 C.F.R. § 1601.1 et seq. (Title VII guidelines and ADEA regulations); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.1 et seq. (ADA guidelines); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7285.0 et seq. (FEHA regulations)].

In addition to these statutes and regulations, there are numerous other federal statutory and regulatory sources of antidiscrimination law, including the following:

- The Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.);
- The Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974 (38 U.S.C. § 4211 et seq.);
- The Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1994 [38 U.S.C. § 4301 et seq.];
- The Civil Rights Act of 1871 (42 U.S.C. § 1983); and
- Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. § 2000d et seq.).

For discussion of these laws, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law (Matthew Bender), and A. Larson & L. Larson, Employment Discrimination (Matthew Bender).

The federal Equal Pay Act of 1963 [29 U.S.C. § 206(d)] prohibits wage discrimination based on sex. This statute is discussed in Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes . For additional discussion of this statute, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law (Matthew Bender).

The United States Constitution also protects equal employment opportunity rights [see U.S. Const., amends. V, XIV], but since its application generally requires "state action" [see Rendell-Baker v. Kohn (1982) 457 U.S. 830, 837, 102 S. Ct. 2764, 73 L. Ed. 2d 418] , it primarily covers public employment. For discussion of the equal employment opportunity rights of public employees, see A. Larson & L. Larson, Employment Discrimination (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationReconstruction Statutes (secs. 1981, 1983 & 1985)Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964General Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Governing Law

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 115.11-115.19

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 115.11[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Scope of Coverage, Protected Classifications, and Theories of Liability

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.20

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.20 California Fair Employment and Housing Act

[1] Unlawful Employment Practices Under FEHA

FEHA provides that all of the following are unlawful employment practices, unless based on a bona fide occupational qualification or on applicable federal or California security regulations:

- For an employer to refuse to hire or employ a person, or refuse to select the person for a training program leading to employment, because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation [Gov. Code § 12940(a)].

- For an employer to bar or discharge any person from employment, or from a training program leading to employment, because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation [Gov. Code § 12940(a)].

- For an employer to discriminate against any person in compensation, or in terms, conditions, or privileges of employment, because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation [Gov. Code § 12940(a)].

- For a labor organization, because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation, to exclude, expel, or restrict any person from its membership, or to provide only second-class or segregated membership, or to discriminate in the election of officers or in the selection of staff, or to discriminate in any other way against any of its members or against any employer, or against any person employed by an employer [Gov. Code § 12940(b)].

- For a person to discriminate against any person in selection or training in any apprenticeship training program or any other training program leading to employment, because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation [Gov. Code § 12940(c)].

- For an employer or employment agency to print or circulate, or cause to be printed or circulated, any publication, or to make any non-job-related inquiry of an employee or applicant, either verbal or through use of an application form, that expresses, directly or indirectly, any limitation, specification, or discrimination as to race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation, or any intent to make any such limitation, specification, or discrimination [Gov. Code § 12940(d)]. However, this provision does not prohibit an employer or employment agency from inquiring into the age of an applicant, or from specifying age limitations, if the law compels or provides for that action [Gov. Code § 12940(d)].

- For an employer or employment agency to require any medical or psychological examination of an applicant, to make any medical or psychological inquiry of an applicant, to make any inquiry whether an applicant has a mental disability or physical disability or medical condition, or to make any inquiry regarding the nature or severity of a physical disability, mental disability, or medical condition [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(1)]. This provision does not, however, prevent an employer or employment agency from inquiring into the ability of an applicant to perform job-related functions or from responding to an applicant's request for reasonable accommodation [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(2)]. Nor does this provision prevent an employer or employment agency from requiring a medical or psychological examination or making a medical or psychological inquiry of a job applicant after an employment offer has been made but prior to the commencement of employment duties, provided that the examination or inquiry is job-related and consistent with business necessity and that all entering employees in the same job classification are subject to the same examination or inquiry [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(3)].

- For an employer or employment agency to require any medical or psychological examination of an employee, to make any medical or psychological inquiry of an employee, to make any inquiry whether an employee has a mental disability or physical disability or medical condition, or to make any inquiry regarding the nature or severity of a physical disability, mental disability, or medical condition [Gov. Code § 12940(f)(1)]. Notwithstanding this provision, an employer or employment agency may require any examinations or inquiries that it can show to be job-related and consistent with business necessity, or conduct voluntary medical examinations, including voluntary medical histories which are part of an employee health program [Gov. Code § 12940(f)(2)].

- For any employer, labor organization, employment agency, or person, to discharge, expel, or otherwise discriminate against any person because the person has made a report pursuant to Penal Code § 11161.8, which prohibits retaliation against hospital employees who report suspected patient abuse by health facilities or community care facilities [Gov. Code § 12940(g)].

- For any employer, labor organization, employment agency, or person, to discharge, expel, or otherwise discriminate against any person because the person has opposed any practices forbidden under FEHA, or because the person has filed a complaint, testified, or assisted in any proceeding under FEHA [Gov. Code § 12940(h)].

- For a person to aid, abet, incite, compel, or coerce the doing of any of the acts forbidden under FEHA, or to attempt to do so [Gov. Code § 12940(i)].

- For an employer, labor organization, employment agency, apprenticeship training program or any training program leading to employment, or any other person, to harass an employee or applicant, or a person providing services pursuant to a contract, because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, sexual orientation, or age [Gov. Code § 12940(j)].

- For an employer, labor organization, employment agency, apprenticeship training program, or any training program leading to employment, to fail to take all reasonable steps necessary to prevent discrimination and harassment from occurring [Gov. Code § 12940(k)].

- For an employer or other entity covered by FEHA to refuse to hire or employ a person, or to refuse to select a person for a training program leading to employment, or to bar or discharge a person from employment or from a training program leading to employment, or to discriminate against a person in compensation or in terms, conditions, or privileges of employment, because of a conflict between the person's religious belief or observance and any employment requirement, unless the employer or other entity covered by FEHA demonstrates that it has explored any available reasonable alternative means of accommodating the religious belief or observance, including the possibilities of excusing the person from those duties that conflict with his or her religious belief or observance or permitting those duties to be performed at another time or by another person, but is unable to reasonably accommodate the religious belief or observance without undue hardship on the conduct of the business [Gov. Code § 12940 (l)].

- For an employer or other entity covered by FEHA to fail to make reasonable accommodation for the known physical or mental disability of an applicant or employee [Gov. Code § 12940(m)]. However, nothing in FEHA requires an accommodation that produces undue hardship to the operation of an employer or other covered entity [Gov. Code § 12940(m)].

- For an employer or other entity covered by FEHA to fail to engage in a timely, good faith, interactive process with the employee or applicant to determine effective reasonable accommodations, if any, in response to a request for reasonable accommodation by an employee or applicant with a known physical or mental disability or known medical condition [Gov. Code § 12940(n)].

- For an employer or other entity covered by FEHA to subject, directly or indirectly, any employee, applicant, or other person to a test for the presence of a genetic characteristic [Gov. Code § 12940(o)].

- For an employer to adopt or enforce a policy that limits or prohibits the use of any language in the workplace, unless both (1) the language restriction is justified by a business necessity; and (2) the employer has notified its employees of the circumstances and the time when the language restriction is required to be observed, and of the consequences for violating the language restriction [Gov. Code § 12951(a)]. "Business necessity," for this purpose, means an overriding legitimate business purpose such that the language restriction is necessary to the safe and efficient operation of the business, the language restriction effectively fulfills the business purpose it is supposed to serve, and there is no alternative practice to the language restriction that would accomplish the business purpose equally well with a less-discriminatory impact [Gov. Code § 12951(a)].

It is a violation of FEHA to take any of the above actions against a person because of a perception that the person has, or is associated with one who has, any of the protected characteristics [Gov. Code § 12926(m)].

FEHA does not subject an employer to liability for, or prevent an employer from, refusing to hire or discharging an employee with a physical or mental disability, or medical condition, where the employee, because of the disability or medical condition, is unable to perform his or her essential duties even with reasonable accommodations, or cannot perform those duties in a manner that would not endanger his or her health or safety or the health or safety of others even with reasonable accommodations [Gov. Code § 12940(a)(1),(2)].

FEHA's prohibition of age discrimination does not prevent an employer from refusing to employ an individual because of his or her age if the law compels or provides for that refusal. Also, the following employer actions do not, in and of themselves, constitute unlawful employment practices [Gov. Code § 12940(a)(5)]:

- Promotions within existing staff;
- Hiring and promotion on the basis of experience and training;
- Rehiring on the basis of seniority and prior service with the employer; and
- Hiring under an established recruiting program from high schools, colleges, universities, or trade schools.

For FEHA purposes, "age" refers to the chronological age of any individual who has reached his or her 40th birthday [Gov. Code § 12926(b)].

[2] Employers Subject to FEHA

[a] Scope of Employers and Entities

FEHA applies, with regard to certain of its provisions, to all of the following:

- Employers [see Gov. Code § 12940(a),(d)-(h),(j)-(o); see Vernon v. State (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 121-131, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 (state is not joint employer of individual merely because individual's employer enforces allegedly discriminatory safety regulations promulgated by state agency)];
- Labor organizations [see Gov. Code § 12940(b),(g),(h),(j)-(o); see also Gov. Code § 12926(g) ("labor organization" defined)];
- Apprenticeship and training programs [see Gov. Code § 12940(c),(j)-(o)];
- Employment agencies [see Gov. Code § 12940(d)-(h),(j)-(o); see also Gov. Code § 12926(e) ("employment agency" defined); Mathieu v. Norrell Corp. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 1182-1184, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52 (temporary employment agency and its client to which employee assigned are treated as employers for purposes of FEHA liability for sexual harassment and retaliation occurring while employee works for client)]; and
- Persons who engage in sexual harassment or retaliation or who aid or abet employment discrimination [Gov. Code § 12940(h)-(j); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.7; see Vernon v. State (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 131-133, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 (state is not aider or abettor of discrimination merely because plaintiff's employer enforces allegedly discriminatory safety regulations promulgated by state agency)].

[b] Private Employers

California private employers and their agents are covered by FEHA, including individuals, partnerships, associations, corporations, limited liability companies, legal representatives, trustees, trustees in bankruptcy, receivers or other fiduciaries [see Gov. Code § 12925(d)], and nonprofit corporations or associations [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(a)(6); Bohemian Club v. FEHC (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 9, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 (FEHA applies to social and nonreligious nonprofit organizations)], as well as the state, its subdivisions, cities, cities and counties, local agencies, and special districts [see Gov. Code § 12926(d); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(a)(4)].

Private employers are not covered by FEHA unless they employ five or more persons [see Gov. Code § 12926(d); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(a)], except when a discrimination claim involves harassment. In harassment cases, employers are covered if they employ one or more persons [see Gov. Code § 12940(j)]. Public employers are not subject to the five-employee requirement [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(a)(4)].

In construing a similar number-of-employees threshold under federal antidiscrimination legislation [see 42 U.S.C. § 12111(5) (employer with fewer than 15 employees is not subject to ADA)], the United States Supreme Court has held that a shareholder-director of a professional corporation will count as an employee if the individual is subject to the corporation's control, based on all the circumstances of the relationship, including the following factors [Gastroenterology Assocs., P.C. v. Wells (2003) 538 U.S. 440, 123 S. Ct. 1673, 155 L. Ed. 2d 615, 623-627] :

- Whether the corporation can hire or fire the individual or set the rules and regulations of the individual's work;
- Whether and to what extent the corporation supervises the individual's work;
- Whether the individual reports to someone higher in the corporation;
- Whether and to what extent the individual is able to influence the corporation;
- Whether the corporation and the individual intend that the individual be an employee, as expressed in written agreements; and
- Whether the individual shares in the profits, losses, and liabilities of the corporation.

Former provisions making FEHA's provisions on mental disability discrimination inapplicable to private employers with fewer than 15 employees (until January 1, 2000) or 25 employees (until July 26, 1994) have been repealed [see former Gov. Code §§ 12926(d)(2), 12940 (l)(2) (repealed effective January 1, 2000, by 1999 Stats., ch. 592, §§ 3.7, 7.5)].

[c] Parent and Subsidiary Corporations

For purposes of FEHA, a parent corporation is not treated as an employer of its subsidiary's employees unless the two corporations form an "integrated enterprise," based on interrelation of operations, common management, centralized control, and common ownership or financial control [Laird v. Capital Cities/ABC (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 727, 737-741, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454 (centralized control of labor relations is most important factor)].

[d] Religious Entities

FEHA's definition of "employer" generally excludes any religious association or corporation not organized for private profit [Gov. Code § 12926(d); see Gov. Code § 12926.2(a) ("religious corporation" defined); McKeon v. Mercy Healthcare Sacramento (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 321, 325-331, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319, 965 P.2d 1189 (nonprofit religious organization need not be incorporated to qualify for FEHA exemption under Gov. Code § 12926(d))].

Nevertheless, for most purposes a religious association or corporation is treated as an employer subject to the Act with respect to persons employed to perform nonreligious duties at a health-care facility it operates to provide health care not restricted to adherents of the religion that established the association or corporation [Gov. Code § 129626.2(c); but see Gov. Code § 12940(j)(4)(B) (anti-harassment provisions of FEHA inapplicable to religious associations and corporations not organized for private profit)]. Even at such a health-care facility, however, a religious corporation is exempt from the Act in the employment (including promotion) of an individual of a particular religion and in the application of the employer's religious doctrines, tenets, and teachings in any work connected with the provision of health care [Gov. Code § 12926.2(d)].

Notwithstanding any other provision of FEHA, an employer that is a religious corporation may restrict eligibility for employment in any position involving the performance of religious duties to adherents of the religion for which the corporation is organized [Gov. Code § 12922].

In addition to statutory exemptions for religious entities, there is a nonstatutory, constitutionally compelled "ministerial exception" to state and federal civil rights laws [see, e.g., McClure v. Salvation Army (5th Cir. 1972) 460 F.2d 553, 559-561 (Title VII) ; Schmoll v. Chapman Univ. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1442-1444, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 426 (FEHA)] . The ministerial exception reflects a policy, grounded in the First Amendment, that the law should not be construed to govern the relationship of a religious organization and its ministers [Catholic Charities of Sacramento, Inc. v. Superior Court (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 527, 543-544, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 283, 85 P.3d 67] . The exception applies to ministers and to nonordained employees with duties functionally equivalent to those of ministers. Generally, for an employee to be within the scope of the exception, the employee's primary duties must consist of teaching, spreading the faith, church governance, supervision of a religious order, or supervision or participation in a religious ritual and worship [Hope Int'l Univ. v. Superior Court (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 719, 734, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 643] .

In the context of educational duties, application of the ministerial exception depends on the circumstances of the case. The work of teaching religion for a church, as distinct from a school, clearly is within the ministerial exception. Also, if the role of the employee of a school is inherently a religious one, like a campus chaplain, the ministerial exception applies [see, e.g., Schmoll v. Chapman Univ. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1437, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 426] . If the teacher's subject matter is the institution's own religion, the ministerial exception applies, regardless of whether the teacher is ordained or a member of a religious order. Moreover, if the school itself is a seminary (i.e., exclusively preoccupied with religion and the training of a religion's own clergy, as distinct from more general learning) the ministerial exception applies to faculty, ordained or not [Hope Int'l Univ. v. Superior Court (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 719, 734-735, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 643] .

In contrast, if neither the role of the employee nor the subject matter taught by that employee is necessarily religious, the applicability of the ministerial exception is less clear. A teacher of secular subjects at a religious or parochial school ordinarily does not come within the ministerial exception, even though incidentally the teacher may be a member of a religious order [Hope Int'l Univ. v. Superior Court (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 719, 737-740, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 643 (whether nonordained professors of psychology teaching marriage and family counseling were within ministerial exception presented question of fact and could not be resolved on summary judgment)].

[e] Nonprofit Entities

A nonprofit public benefit corporation created to provide health care on behalf of a religious organization under the Nonprofit Public Benefit Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 5110 et seq.] is exempt from the Act with respect to the employment (including promotion) of an individual of a particular religion in an executive or pastoral-care position connected with the provision of health care [Gov. Code § 12926.2(e)].

A nonprofit public benefit corporation that is formed by, or affiliated with, a particular religion and that operates an educational institution as its sole or primary activity generally may restrict employment (including promotion) in any or all employment categories to individuals of a particular religion [Gov. Code § 12926.2(f)(1)]. However, such an employer remains subject to all other antidiscrimination provisions of the FEHA and to the FEHA generally [Gov. Code § 12926.2(f)(2)].

[f] Federal Preemption

FEHA is limited in its application to employers that are subject to any federal law that preempts FEHA. For example, Section 8 of the National Bank Act of 1864 (codified as 12 U.S.C. § 24) grants a national bank the power to dismiss any of its officers "at pleasure," ostensibly granting a national bank immunity from liability for a dismissal that would violate FEHA [12 U.S.C. § 24].

The Bank Act's "at pleasure" provision is inapplicable, however, unless the terminated employee is a bank "officer" meeting all of the following criteria: (1) he or she holds an office created by the board of directors and listed in the bank's bylaws; (2) he or she is appointed by the board of directors, either directly or pursuant to a delegation of board authority set forth in the bylaws; (3) he or she has express legal authority to bind the bank in its transactions with borrowers, depositors, customers, or other third parties by executing contracts or other legal instruments on the bank's behalf; and (4) his or her decision-making authority, however it might be limited by bank rule or policy, relates to fundamental banking operations in such a manner as to affect potentially the public's trust in the banking institution [Wells Fargo Bank v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1082, 1091, 282 Cal. Rptr. 841, 811 P.2d 1025 (setting forth criteria); Ramanathan v. Bank of America (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471 (employee designated "vice president" by bank's board of directors does not qualify as "officer" for purposes of 12 U.S.C. § 24 P 5 unless he or she meets all four criteria)].

The California Supreme Court held that Section 8 of the National Bank Act of 1864 preempts FEHA to the extent the two laws are in conflict. However, the Court also held that the actual scope of Section 8 has been limited since its original enactment in 1864. Reading federal law as a whole, the Court found that the National Bank Act has been impliedly amended by subsequently enacted federal civil rights laws. As impliedly amended by Title VII and the ADEA, Section 8 of the National Bank Act actually grants a national bank only a limited power to dismiss its officers, and that power does not extend to dismissal on the ground of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or age. As so amended, Section 8 preempts FEHA, but only to the extent that FEHA confers on officers of a national bank a right against dismissal on grounds not mentioned in Title VII and the ADEA (for example, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, or marital status) [Peatros v. Bank of America (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 147, 173-175, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 659, 990 P.2d 539 ; see Gov. Code § 12940(a); see also Kroske v. US Bank Corp. (9th Cir. 2005) 432 F.3d 976, 981-989 (12 U.S.C. § 24 does not preempt age-discrimination claims asserted under state laws that substantively mirror provisions of ADEA)].

[3] Employees Protected by FEHA

[a] Scope of Employees Covered

FEHA covers most California employees and to applicants for employment [see Gov. Code § 12940(a) (discrimination in employment, hiring, or selection for training leading to employment prohibited); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7286.5(b) ("employee" defined), (h) ("applicant" defined), 7287.3 (discrimination in considering employment applications prohibited)]. Generally, compensation of some sort is indispensable to the formation of an employment relationship; accordingly, a volunteer worker ordinarily is not an "employee" for FEHA purposes [Mendoza v. Town of Ross (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 625, 634-637, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 452 (trial court properly dismissed FEHA action because plaintiff was unpaid, and complaint made no mention of any health, retirement, or other substantial benefits)].

[b] Family Employees

FEHA does not cover persons employed by a parent, spouse, or child, nor does it apply to persons employed under a special license in a nonprofit sheltered workshop or rehabilitation facility [see Gov. Code § 12926(c); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(b)(2), (3)].

[c] Independent Contractors

FEHA generally does not cover independent contractors [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(b)(1); see Lab. Code § 3353 ("independent contractor" defined, in workers' compensation law)], except that FEHA's protection against harassment extends to independent contractors as well as to employees [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(4), (5)].

[d] Nonresidents

FEHA does not cover claims by employees who are not residents of California, whose employee duties were performed outside the state, and whose injuries occurred outside the state [Campbell v. Arco Marine (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1850, 1852, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 626] .

[4] Employee Personal Liability for Violating FEHA

[a] Supervisor Liablity

A supervisor generally is not personally liable for his or her discriminatory acts under FEHA [Reno v. Baird (1997) 18 Cal. 4th 640, 648, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333 ; see Le Bourgeois v. Fireplace Manufacturing (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1049, 1056-1057, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 660 (supervisor may not be sued individually for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy if basis of cause of action is alleged discrimination under FEHA)]. Similarly, a supervisor or other individual is not personally liable for his or her participation in retaliation prohibited by FEHA [Jones v. Lodge at Torrey Pines P'ship (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1158, 1162-1173, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 624, 177 P.3d 232 (reference to "person" in Gov. Code § 12940(h) does not subject nonemployer individuals to liability for retaliation under FEHA)].

[b] Liability for Harassment

Any employee of an entity subject to FEHA is personally liable for harassment in violation of FEHA perpetrated by the employee, regardless of whether the employer or covered entity knows or should have known of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(3); see § 115.36[2][d]; see also McClung v. Employment Development Dept. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 467, 475-476, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 428, 99 P.3d 1015 (Gov. Code § 12940(j)(3) does not apply retroactively to impose liability on nonsupervisors for conduct predating its enactment effective January 1, 2001); Matthews v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 598, 599-600, 605-606, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 (decided before enactment of Gov. Code § 12940(j)(3); supervisor who has aided or abetted harassment may be held personally liable); Page v. Superior Court (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1206, 1213, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 529 (same)]. For FEHA purposes, a "supervisor" is an individual having the authority, in the interest of the employer, to hire, transfer, suspend, lay off, recall, promote, discharge, assign, reward, or discipline other employees, or the responsibility to direct them, or to adjust their grievances, or effectively to recommend that action, if the exercise of that authority is not of a merely routine or clerical nature but requires the use of independent judgment [Gov. Code § 12926(r); see Chapman v. Enos (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 920, 928-931, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 852 (trial court errs in instructing jury that to be deemed supervisor, individual must be fully accountable and responsible for employee's performance and work product)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationCoverage & DefinitionsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationCoverage & DefinitionsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex

DiscriminationCoverage & DefinitionsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationRacial DiscriminationCoverage & Definitions

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Scope of Coverage, Protected Classifications, and Theories of Liability

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.21

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.21 Federal Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Employment

[1] Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964

Title VII provides that it is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to do either of the following [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)]:

- Fail or refuse to hire or discharge any individual, or otherwise to discriminate against any individual with respect to compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment, because of that individual's race, color, religion, sex, or national origin; or

- Limit, segregate, or classify employees in any way that would deprive or tend to deprive any individual of employment opportunities, or otherwise would adversely affect his or her status as an employee, because of the individual's race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.

Title VII also prohibits retaliation against any person for opposing any practice forbidden or made unlawful by Title VII or for testifying or otherwise participating in a proceeding under Title VII [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(a)]. This protection extends not only to an employee who reports discrimination on his or her own initiative but also to an employee who speaks out about discrimination in answering questions during an employer's internal investigation [Crawford v. Metropolitan Gov't (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 846, 172 L. Ed. 2d 650, 656-659 (employee can "oppose" employer's unlawful practice for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(a) simply by disclosing that practice)].

An aggrieved person may bring a suit under Title VII, after exhausting the administrative remedies, and may recover injunctive relief, and compensatory and punitive damages [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(g)]. The compensatory and punitive damages recoverable under Title VII are limited by statute to a maximum amount that varies depending on the size of the employer [see 42 U.S.C. § 1981a(b); Pavon v. Swift Transp. Co. (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 902, 910-911 ; see also Lansdale v. Hi-Health Supermart Corp. (9th Cir. 2002) 314 F.3d 355, 357-359 (damages limitation of 42 U.S.C. § 1981a(b)(3) does not violate constitutional separation of powers, Seventh Amendment right to jury trial, Due Process clause, or Equal Protection clause)]. The most that is recoverable, against employers with more than 500 employees, is $300,000 [42 U.S.C. § 1981a(b); but see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(e)(3)(B) (in addition to relief authorized by 42 U.S.C. § 1981a, employee claiming discrimination in compensation may recover back pay for up to two years preceding filing of charge of discrimination, if unlawful employment practices that occurred during charge-filing period are similar or related to unlawful employment practices with regard to discrimination in compensation that occurred outside time for filing charge)].

Title VII applies to employers with at least 15 employees [42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b)]. The 15-employee threshold is not, however, a jurisdictional requirement. Rather, it is an element of the plaintiff's claim for relief, and a defendant employer's objection based on the plaintiff's failure to establish that element may be forfeited if not raised in a timely manner [Arbaugh v. Y& H Corp. (2006) 546 U.S. 500, 126 S. Ct. 1235, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1097, 1107-1111] . For discussion of employment practices prohibited by Title VII, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of employers and employees covered by Title VII, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 40 (Matthew Bender).

[2] Americans with Disabilities Act

The Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA) provides generally that no covered entity may discriminate against a qualified individual with a disability in job application procedures; the hiring, advancement, or discharge of employees; employee compensation; job training; or other terms, conditions, and privileges of employment, because of the individual's disability [42 U.S.C. § 12112(a)]. Unlawful "discrimination" includes, among other things, limiting, segregating, or classifying a job applicant or employee in a way that adversely affects the opportunities or status of the applicant or employee because of his or her disability [42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(1)].

The ADA provisions purporting to abrogate the states' Eleventh Amendment immunity to private lawsuits were enacted under Congress's Fourteenth Amendment power [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 12101(b)(4), 12202]. However, the United States Supreme Court has held that Congress exceeded its power, because it subjected states to suit for monetary damages under the ADA without having first identified a pattern of irrational discrimination in employment against the disabled [Board of Trustees v. Garrett (2001) 531 U.S. 356, 121 S. Ct. 955, 148 L. Ed. 2d 866, 878-884] . Nevertheless, the ADA standards applicable to state employers may be enforced by the United States in actions for money damages, as well as by private individuals in actions for injunctive relief [Board of Trustees v. Garrett (2001) 531 U.S. 356, 121 S. Ct. 955, 968 n.9, 148 L. Ed. 2d 866] . A non-employee will lack standing to seek injunctive relief to prevent future discrimination, however, unless he or she is in the process of seeking reinstatement to a former position or seeking work from the state employer [Walsh v. Nevada Dep't of Human Res. (9th Cir. 2006) 471 F.3d 1033, 1036-1037 ; Freitag v. Ayers (9th Cir. 2006) 468 F.3d 528, 547-548] .

The Ninth Circuit has held that individuals, such as supervisors working for employers subject to the ADA, may not be personally liable under the ADA [Walsh v. Nevada Dep't of Human Res. (9th Cir. 2006) 471 F.3d 1033, 1037-1038 (ADA limitation on liability to employers with 15 or more employees, 42 U.S.C. § 12111(5)(a), means that Congress did not intend to impose liability on individuals under ADA)].

For discussion of employment practices prohibited by the ADA, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the scope and application of the ADA, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 40 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Age Discrimination in Employment Act

The Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) protects persons who are at least 40 years old [see 29 U.S.C. § 631(a)]. The ADEA provides that it is unlawful for an employer to do any of the following [29 U.S.C. § 623(a)]:

- Fail or refuse to hire or discharge any individual, or otherwise to discriminate against any individual with respect to his or her compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment, because of the individual's age;

- Limit, segregate, or classify employees in any way that would deprive or tend to deprive any individual of employment opportunities, or otherwise would adversely affect the individual's status as an employee, because of the individual's age; and

- Reduce the wage rate of any employee to comply with the ADEA.

The ADEA also prohibits retaliation against any person for opposing any practice forbidden or made unlawful by the ADEA or for participating in proceedings under the ADEA [see 29 U.S.C. § 623(d); see also Gomez-Perez v. Potter (2008) 553 U.S. 474, 128 S. Ct. 1931, 1935-1936, 1943, 170 L. Ed. 2d 887, 893-894, 902 (29 U.S.C. § 633a(a), ADEA's prohibition of "discrimination based on age" in federal employment, prohibits retaliation based on filing of age discrimination complaint)].

The ADEA provisions purporting to abrogate the states' Eleventh Amendment immunity to private lawsuits [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 623(a)(1), 626(b), (c)(1)] were beyond the Fourteenth Amendment power of Congress [Kimel v. Florida Bd. of Regents (2000) 528 U.S. 62, 120 S. Ct. 631, 145 L. Ed. 2d 522, 547] . Thus, a state employer is immune from an ADEA suit unless the state consents to be sued [see, e.g., Katz v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2000) 229 F.3d 831, 834-835 ; see also Ahlmeyer v. Nevada Sys. of Higher Educ. (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 1051, 1057 (because ADEA provides exclusive federal remedy for age-discrimination claims, state employee may not assert age-discrimination claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983)].

For discussion of employment practices prohibited by the ADEA, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of employers and employees covered by the ADEA, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 40 (Matthew Bender).

[4] 42 U.S.C. § 1981

The Civil Rights Act of 1866 (42 U.S.C. § 1981) provides that all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States have the same right in every state and territory to make and enforce contracts, to sue, to be parties, to give evidence, and to receive the full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of persons and property as is enjoyed by white citizens; and that all persons within the jurisdiction of United States are subject to the same punishment, pains, penalties, taxes, licenses, and exactions of every kind, and to no other [42 U.S.C. § 1981(a)].

42 U.S.C. § 1981 provides an independent but overlapping federal remedy for intentional race discrimination in employment [Miller v. Fairchild Indus. (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 498, 503 , cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1056 (1990)] .

As used in 42 U.S.C. § 1981, the term "make and enforce contracts" includes the making, performance, modification, and termination of contracts, and the enjoyment of all benefits, privileges, terms, and conditions of the contractual relationship [42 U.S.C. § 1981(b)].

The definition of "make and enforce contracts" was added to 42 U.S.C. § 1981 by the Civil Rights Act of 1991 (CRA) [Pub. L. No. 102-166]. The apparent purpose of the provision was to overrule Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 171 , superseded by statute as stated in 553 U.S. 442 , in which the United States Supreme Court had narrowly limited the application of 42 U.S.C. § 1981 to racially discriminatory conduct involving the formation of new contracts and their enforcement. Under Patterson, only discriminatory conduct involving the refusal to enter into an employment contract (i.e., hiring) or the ability to enforce contractual rights was actionable under § 1981, and conduct involving the continuing employment relationship (for example, harassment) was not actionable. The CRA made clear that § 1981 applies to all phases and incidents of the contractual relationship. Thus, for example, a hostile-work-environment claim may be brought under § 1981 [Manatt v. Bank of America (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 792, 797] . If a claim is cognizable under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 by virtue of the CRA's expansion of the scope of § 1981, the claim is subject to the four-year federal "catchall" statute of limitations [see 28 U.S.C. § 1658], rather than any borrowed state statute of limitations [Jones v. R.R. Donnelley & Sons Co. (2004) 541 U.S. 369, 124 S. Ct. 1836, 1841-1846, 158 L. Ed. 2d 645, 652-658 (hostile work environment, wrongful termination, and failure-to-transfer claims)].

42 U.S.C. § 1981 prohibits discrimination based on race [see Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 459-460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295] . Section 1981 also prohibits retaliation on the basis of race, including retaliation against a person for complaining about a violation of another person's rights under the statute [CBOCS W., Inc. v. Humphries (2008) 553 U.S. 442, 128 S. Ct. 1951, 1954-1955, 1961, 170 L. Ed. 2d 864, 869, 877].

Whether § 1981 applies to national origin discrimination is an open question [compare Ortiz v. Bank of America (E.D. Cal. 1982) 547 F. Supp. 550, 568 , aff'd, 824 F.2d 692 (9th Cir. 1987) (individual may assert 42 U.S.C. § 1981 claim based on national origin), with Gradillas v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (D. Ariz. 1975) 407 F. Supp. 865, 867 (claims based solely on national origin not covered by 42 U.S.C. § 1981)]. Generally, however, 42 U.S.C. § 1981 applies if there is a racial component to a national origin claim and racial discrimination is also alleged [see, e.g., Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 613, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582 (United States citizen born in Iraq protected from racial discrimination under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 if proven that he was discriminated against because he was Arab, rather than solely because of his place or nation of origin); Gonzalez v. Stanford Applied Engineering (9th Cir. 1979) 597 F.2d 1298, 1300 (national origin claim by Mexican-American, amended to include claim that discrimination was based on dark skin, is racial discrimination claim covered by 42 U.S.C. § 1981)].

42 U.S.C. § 1981 does not apply to sex, age, or religious discrimination [see Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 167, 96 S. Ct. 2586, 49 L. Ed. 2d 415 (dictum); see also League of Academic Women v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (N.D. Cal. 1972) 343 F. Supp. 636, 639 (42 U.S.C. § 1981 not applicable to sex discrimination)].

42 U.S.C. § 1981 covers private employers [see 42 U.S.C. § 1981(c); Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 172, 96 S. Ct. 2586, 49 L. Ed. 2d 415 ; Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 459-460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295] , as well as local public employers [see 42 U.S.C. § 1981(c); see also Federation of African-Am. Contractors (9th Cir. 1996) 96 F.3d 1204, 1210]. However, § 1981 does not create a private right of action against a state or an agency that acts as an arm of the state [Pittman v. Oregon (9th Cir. 2007) 509 F.3d 1065, 1070-1074]. Also, § 1981 does not cover federal employers, because the federal employment provision in Title VII [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-16] is the exclusive judicial remedy for employment discrimination claims by federal employees [see Brown v. GSA (1976) 425 U.S. 820, 835, 96 S. Ct. 1961, 48 L. Ed. 2d 402] .

For further discussion of 42 U.S.C. § 1981, generally, see Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

For thorough discussion of 42 U.S.C. § 1981, see J. Cook & J. Sobieski, Civil Rights Actions (Matthew Bender). For additional discussion of 42 U.S.C. § 1981, as applied to employment discrimination, see K. Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 40 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment

LawDiscriminationReconstruction Statutes (secs. 1981, 1983 & 1985)Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964General Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Scope of Coverage, Protected Classifications, and Theories of Liability

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.22

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.22 Protected Classifications

[1] Generally

Federal and California equal employment opportunity laws prohibit employment discrimination on the following bases [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2 (Title VII); 29 U.S.C. §§ 623(a), 631(a) (ADEA); 42 U.S.C. § 12112 (ADA); Gov. Code §§ 12926, 12940(a) (FEHA)]:

- Race.
- Color.
- National origin or ancestry.
- Sex.
- Marital status.
- Religion.
- Age (over 40 years).
- Physical and mental disability.
- Medical condition.

FEHA also prohibits discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation [Gov. Code § 12940(a)].

In addition, under FEHA, the protected characteristics include any perception that a person has, or is associated with one who has, any of those characteristics [Gov. Code § 12926(m)].

[2] Race and Color Discrimination

Title VII and FEHA prohibit employment discrimination based on race or color [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2 (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940(a) (FEHA)]. 42 U.S.C. § 1981 also prohibits race discrimination [see Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 168, 174-175, 96 S. Ct. 2586, 49 L. Ed. 2d 415 ; see also CBOCS W., Inc. v. Humphries (2008) 553 U.S. 442, 128 S. Ct. 1951, 1954-1955, 1961, 170 L. Ed. 2d 864, 869, 877 (42 U.S.C. § 1981 also prohibits retaliation on basis of race, including retaliation against person for complaining about violation of another person's rights under § 1981)].

"Race" discrimination involves identifiable classes of persons subject to discrimination solely because of their ancestry or ethnic characteristics [see Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 612-613, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582 (groups such as Arabs, Jews, and Germans are not considered single race); see also Sandhu v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 846, 858, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617 (allegation that plaintiff was subject to discrimination based on being East Indian was sufficient to raise claim of racial discrimination; following reasoning of Al-Khazraji)].

Title VII prohibits discriminatory preference for any group, minority, or majority [see Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158] , and therefore bars race discrimination against white persons as well as black persons [see McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 280, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493] . White persons are also protected under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 [see McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 286-287, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493] .

Employment discrimination based on association with people of a particular race is also prohibited [see Gov. Code § 12926(m) ("race" for FEHA purposes includes perception that person is, or is associated with one who is, member of particular race); Parr v. Woodmen of the World Life Ins. Co. (11th Cir. 1986) 791 F.2d 888, 891 (Title VII) ; see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.9 (FEHA regulation)].

"Color" is rarely treated separately from "race." However, in one case, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), in an enforcement proceeding involving a federal government employer, found unlawful "color" discrimination when an employer gave preference to a "light-complexioned" black applicant with "Caucasian features" over another black applicant who had a "dark complexion" and "Negroid features" [see EEOC Dec. No. 72-0454 (1971)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Race Discrimination. Racial discrimination cases are usually difficult to prove without direct evidence of discrimination or evidence of a pattern of discrimination involving several members of the same racial group. I could write a chapter just on this subject and would title it: "Why White Americans Are Reluctant to Find That One of Their Peers Discriminated Based on Race." This is especially true when the discrimination is covert and masked by pretext. By John H. Scott

[3] National Origin or Ancestry Discrimination

Both Title VII and FEHA prohibit national origin discrimination [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2 (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940(a) (FEHA); see also Gov. Code § 12926(m) ("national origin" and "ancestry" for FEHA purposes include perception that person has, or is associated with one who has, particular national origin or ancestry)]. National origin discrimination also may be covered by 42 U.S.C. § 1981 [see Manzanares v. Safeway Stores (10th Cir. 1979) 593 F.2d 968, 970-972 ; Ortiz v. Bank of America (E.D. Cal. 1982) 547 F. Supp. 550, 568] , particularly if pleadings are drafted carefully to allege a racial component such as dark skin, and also to allege race discrimination [see Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 609, 613, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582 ; Gonzalez v. Stanford Applied Engineering (9th Cir. 1979) 597 F.2d 1298, 1300] .

It generally is not unlawful to discriminate on the basis of citizenship or alienage, and employers may lawfully require employees to be United States citizens, or refuse to hire noncitizens [see Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 92-96, 94 S. Ct. 334, 38 L. Ed. 2d 287] . However, employers may not discriminate against aliens because of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin [Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 95, 94 S. Ct. 334, 38 L. Ed. 2d 287] , and an employer may not use a citizenship requirement as a pretext for national origin discrimination [see Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 92, 94 S. Ct. 334, 38 L. Ed. 2d 287 ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1606.5; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7289.5(f)].

Under the FEHA, it is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to adopt or enforce a policy that limits or prohibits the use of any language in the workplace, unless both (1) the language restriction is justified by a business necessity; and (2) the employer has notified its employees of the circumstances and the time when the language restriction is required to be observed, and of the consequences for violating the language restriction [Gov. Code § 12951(a); see 2001 Stats., ch. 295, § 1 (statutory prohibition against workplace language restriction intended to implement state's constitutional policy against discrimination on basis of national or ethnic origin, while recognizing policy that English is official language of California); see also Cal. Const., art. I, § 8 (policy against discrimination on basis of national or ethnic origin); Cal. Const., art. III, § 6 (policy that English is official language of California)]. "Business necessity," for this purpose, means an overriding legitimate business purpose making the language restriction necessary to the safe and efficient operation of the business, effective as a means of fulfilling the business purpose it is supposed to serve, and the only means of accomplishing the business purpose equally well with a less-discriminatory impact [Gov. Code § 12951(a)].

Employers may deny employment opportunities to illegal aliens or aliens who are not authorized to work in the United States [see Hoffman Plastic Compounds, Inc. v. NLRB (2002) 535 U.S. 137, 122 S. Ct. 1275, 152 L. Ed. 2d 271, 283-284 (federal immigration policy precludes award of back pay for employment discrimination under National Labor Relations Act, 29 U.S.C. § 158(a)(3), to undocumented alien who has never been legally authorized to work in United States)]. In fact, it is unlawful for employers knowingly to hire, recruit, or refer for a fee, unauthorized aliens, or to continue to employ a person who is or becomes an unauthorized alien [see 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(a) (Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986)]. "Unauthorized aliens" are aliens who, with respect to employment at a particular time, are not at that time either (1) lawfully admitted for permanent residence, or (2) authorized to be so employed by the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. § 1101 et seq.) or by the United States Attorney General [see 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(h)(3)]. For a detailed discussion relating to employer sanctions and verification requirements with respect to employment of illegal aliens, see C. Gordon & S. Mailman, Immigration Law And Procedure, Ch. 68 (Matthew Bender).

The California Legislature has declared that all protections, rights, and remedies available under state law, except any reinstatement remedy prohibited by federal law, are available to all individuals regardless of immigration status who have applied for employment, or who are or who have been employed, in California [Civ. Code § 3339(a); Gov. Code § 7285(a); Lab. Code § 1171.5(a)]. Accordingly, for purposes of enforcing state labor, employment, and civil rights laws, a person's immigration status is irrelevant to the issue of liability; in proceedings or discovery undertaken to enforce those state laws, no inquiry may be made into a person's immigration status unless the person seeking to make the inquiry has shown by clear and convincing evidence that the inquiry is necessary in order to comply with federal immigration law [Civ. Code § 3339(b); Gov. Code § 7285(b); Lab. Code § 1171.5(b)].

The Ninth Circuit has ruled that these provisions of California law are not preempted by the federal Immigration Reform and Control Act (IRCA) [see 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(a)(2) (forbidding employers from knowingly employing unauthorized aliens)], at least not when the employer can comply with the IRCA without creating a conflict with California law. There is clearly no conflict between California law and IRCA--and therefore no preemption--when an employer is required to terminate an employee by IRCA and does so in order to comply with that statute. Under those circumstances, the employer can obey both laws because compliance with IRCA provides good cause, as defined by California law, for terminating unauthorized aliens [see Incalza v. Fendi N. Am., Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 479 F.3d 1005, 1010] .

Similarly, California law may impose liability on an employer for discharging an employee, even when the employer claims the discharge is required by the IRCA, when remedies short of discharge are permissible under the IRCA and its implementing regulations [Incalza v. Fendi N. Am., Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 479 F.3d 1005, 1010-1013 (IRCA and regulations authorized employer to place employee on unpaid leave without pay while employee obtained change in work visa to which employee was entitled under federal law)]. It remains an open question, however, whether California law and the IRCA conflict when an employer that is required by federal law to terminate an unlawful alien does so, but for reasons that are unlawful under California law [see Incalza v. Fendi N. Am., Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 479 F.3d 1005, 1010 (identifying issue but resolving case on other grounds)].

[4] Sex Discrimination

[a] Based Solely on Sex

Title VII and FEHA prohibit sex discrimination in employment [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2 (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940(a)-(d),(j) (FEHA)].

"Sex discrimination" is a distinction based on gender [see De Cintio v. Westchester County Medical Center (2d Cir. 1986) 807 F.2d 304, 306-307 , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 825 (1987) (Title VII); De Santis v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (9th Cir. 1979) 608 F.2d 327, 329-330 (Title VII); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.7(a) (construing "sex discrimination" prohibited by FEHA; "sex" as meaning applicant's or employee's gender)]. Both male and female employees are protected [see Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 682, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89 (Title VII)] .

For purposes of FEHA antidiscrimination provisions, "sex" includes, but is not limited to, pregnancy, childbirth, medical conditions related to pregnancy or childbirth, and gender [Gov. Code § 12926(p)]. "Gender" includes a person's gender identity and gender-related appearance and behavior, whether or not stereotypically associated with the person's assigned sex at birth [Gov. Code § 12926(p); Penal Code § 422.56(c)].

Employment decisions that reflect gender-based stereotyping are also unlawful [see Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 250-251 (Title VII) , superseded by statute as stated in 129 S. Ct. 2343]. For example, an employer violated Title VII when it delayed a female employee's promotion based in part on evaluation comments describing her as "macho" and advising her to "take a course in charm school" [Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 234-236 , superseded by statute as stated in 129 S. Ct. 2343]. Similarly, FEHA's prohibition of sex discrimination outlaws gender-based stereotyping, since FEHA defines "sex" as including an employer's perception of an employee's or applicant's identity, appearance, or behavior [see Gov. Code §§ 12926(p), 12940(a)-(d),(j); Penal Code § 422.76]. However, FEHA does not prevent an employer from requiring an employee to adhere to reasonable workplace appearance, grooming, and dress standards that are not precluded by other provisions of state or federal law, so long as the employer allows an employee to appear or dress consistently with the employee's gender identity [Gov. Code § 12949].

PRACTICE TIP:

Gender Based Discrimination. Gender based discrimination cases are usually easier to prove at trial than racial discrimination cases [see [2], above]. There is a good chance that your jury will be at least 50 percent female. In addition, there does not seem to be the same "stigma" attached to gender discrimination in our country as compared to racial discrimination. Misogyny is still alive and well in many workplaces. Notably, many hostile work environment/harassment cases come out of situations where the offending conduct is not "sex" based, but rather, "gender" based. Women can be treated not only as sex objects, but also as inferior employees who are "less than" their male counterparts. This is still true in many fields traditionally dominated by men such as law enforcement, law, medicine, and construction. By John H. Scott

[b] Based on Same Sex

The Supreme Court has unequivocally stated that nothing in Title VII bars a claim of sex discrimination "merely because the plaintiff and the defendant (or the person charged with acting on behalf of the defendant) are of the same sex" [Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Services (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 79, 118 S. Ct. 998, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201 ; see Castaneda v. Partida (1977) 430 U.S. 482, 499, 97 S. Ct. 1272, 51 L. Ed. 2d 498] .

The prohibition against same sex discrimination encompasses sexual harassment if the offending behavior is severe and pervasive, and if the victim is harassed either in a sex-specific way or is exposed to treatment not directed at members of the other sex [Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Services (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 79-82, 118 S. Ct. 998, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201] . Claims of same sex harassment are not limited to instances where the harasser is homosexual, although in such cases, courts and juries could draw a chain of inferences that the harasser's conduct involved explicit or implicit proposals of sexual activity [Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Services (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 80, 118 S. Ct. 998, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201] . Thus, a physical sexual assault constitutes actionable discrimination "because of ... sex" under Title VII; the fact that the assault is also motivated by the victim's sexual orientation (not a protected classification under Title VII) is irrelevant [Rene v. MGM Grand Hotel, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 305 F.3d 1061, 1065-1068 (en banc)].

California courts of appeal have similarly found same sex harassment to be actionable under FEHA [Gov. Code § 12940; see Matthews v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 598, 603, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 ; Mogilefsky v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1409, 1416, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116] . In this context, harassment between members of the same sex can be "because of sex" if it involves an attack on the plaintiff's sexual identity [see, e.g., Singleton v. United States Gypsum Co. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 1561-1563, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 597 (plaintiff's male co-workers used attacks on plaintiff's identity as heterosexual male as tool of harassment)]. Moreover, there is no requirement that the motive for the harassment be sexual in nature. Sexual harassment occurs when sex is used as a weapon to create a hostile work environment [Singleton v. United States Gypsum Co. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 1564, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 597 (harasser's motive was that he was angry with plaintiff for having reported him)].

[c] Based on "Sex Plus"

Employment discrimination based on sex plus another characteristic, such as family responsibilities, is also unlawful [see Phillips v. Marietta Corp. (1971) 400 U.S. 542, 544, 91 S. Ct. 496, 27 L. Ed. 2d 613] . For example, under Title VII an employer may not refuse to hire women with preschool-age children, while at the same time hiring men with preschool-age children, even if the persons hired are predominantly female. Title VII prohibits different hiring policies for such similarly-situated women and men [see Phillips v. Marietta Corp. (1971) 400 U.S. 542, 543-544, 91 S. Ct. 496, 27 L. Ed. 2d 613] .

[d] Based on Sex-Related Traits

An employer may violate Title VII or FEHA by adopting facially neutral employment practices or criteria that in fact fall more harshly on one sex than another [see Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335 n.15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII; "disparate impact" analysis)] . For discussion of the disparate impact analysis, see § 115.23[4].

Thus, employment policies that make distinctions based on traits exclusively or predominantly possessed by one sex, such as minimum height and weight requirements [see Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 331, 97 S. Ct. 2720, 53 L. Ed. 2d 786 (Title VII)] or physical agility tests [see Berkman v. City of New York (E.D.N.Y. 1982) 536 F. Supp. 177 , aff'd, 705 F.2d 584 (2d Cir. 1983) (firefighters)], may be unlawful if they are not job-related. For discussion of the "job-relatedness" defense, see § 115.54[5].

[e] Based on Pregnancy

Employment discrimination based on pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions constitutes sex discrimination under Title VII [42 U.S.C. § 2000e(k); see Auto Workers v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 199, 111 S. Ct. 1196, 113 L. Ed. 2d 158 ("fetal protection" policies that discriminate based on potential for pregnancy constitute intentional sex discrimination under Title VII); 29 C.F.R. § 1604.10(a) (such discrimination is prima facie violation of Title VII); but see AT&T Corp. v. Hulteen (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1962, 173 L. Ed. 2d 898, 906 ("Although adopting a service credit rule unfavorable to those out on pregnancy leave would violate Title VII today, a seniority system does not necessarily violate the statute when it gives current effect [in the calculation of pension benefits] to such rules that operated before the [Pregnancy Discrimination Act, which took effect on April 29, 1979]")].

FEHA also prohibits employment discrimination based on pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical condition [Gov. Code §§ 12926(p), 12945; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.2 et seq. (regulations governing pregnancy discrimination and pregnancy disability leave); see Carr v. Barnabey's Hotel Corp. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 14, 17, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 127] .

In this context, medical conditions "related" to pregnancy and childbirth do not include indirectly related conditions such as a "diagnostic hysterectomy" performed years after childbirth [Williams v. MacFrugal's Bargains-Close-Outs, Inc. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 479, 482-485, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 98 (same analysis applies to FEHA and Title VII)].

An employer's leave policy that differentiates between disabilities caused by occupational injuries and those that occur off the job does not impermissibly discriminate against pregnant employees, so long as it provides at least four months' leave for pregnancy disability [Spaziano v. Lucky Stores (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 106, 110-113, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378 (same analysis applies to FEHA and Title VII); see Gov. Code § 12945(a)].

In addition to prohibiting discrimination, FEHA requires that if an employer has a policy, practice, or collective bargaining agreement requiring or authorizing the transfer of temporarily disabled employees to less strenuous or hazardous positions for the duration of the disability, the employer may not refuse to transfer a pregnant female employee who so requests [Gov. Code § 12945(b)(2)].

[f] Based on Sexual Affiliation or Orientation

Generally, preferential treatment resulting from an ongoing, voluntary, romantic engagement is not sex discrimination under Title VII [see De Cintio v. Westchester County Medical Center (2d Cir. 1986) 807 F.2d 304, 306-307 ; but see King v. Palmer (D.C. Cir. 1985) 778 F.2d 878, 880 (implicitly recognizing Title VII action alleging discrimination premised on voluntary sexual relationship)]. Sex discrimination under Title VII does not include discrimination based on sexual orientation [see De Santis v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (9th Cir. 1979) 608 F.2d 327, 330] .

FEHA, on the other hand, does prohibit discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation [Gov. Code § 12940(a)]. For this purpose, "sexual orientation" means heterosexuality, homosexuality, or bisexuality, and it includes the perception that a person has, or is associated with one who has, a given sexual orientation [Gov. Code § 12926(m),(q)].

Local ordinances prohibiting sexual orientation discrimination in employment have been found to be preempted by FEHA because FEHA occupies the field of employment discrimination [Delaney v. Superior Fast Freight (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 590, 596-598, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33 (decided before FEHA amended to add sexual orientation to list of prohibited bases of discrimination); see Gov. Code § 12993(c)].

Title VII and FEHA do not prohibit employment discrimination against a person on the basis of change of gender [Holloway v. Arthur Andersen & Co. (9th Cir. 1977) 566 F.2d 659, 662 (Title VII)] .

[5] Marital Status Discrimination

FEHA expressly prohibits discrimination based on marital status [Gov. Code § 12940(a)-(d),(j); see Gov. Code § 12940(m) ("marital status" for FEHA purposes includes perception of person's marital status)]. "Marital status" is defined as an individual's state of marriage, non-marriage, divorce or dissolution, separation, widowhood, annulment, or other marital state [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.1(a)]. The prohibition against marital status discrimination is not violated by conduct that is based on an employer's marriage-neutral animus directed against the employee's spouse. For example, denying a promotion to an employee based on the employer's political animus against the employee's spouse does not constitute marital status discrimination. In such a case, the marriage as such is irrelevant to the adverse action taken by the employer. Rather, the employer's focus was the substantive relationship between the employee and a particular other person, whether spouse, partner, or friend [Chen v. County of Orange(2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 926, 939-948, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 786 (if animus toward employee's spouse is not itself unlawful, adverse action based on that animus does not constitute marital status discrimination)].

No federal statute prohibits marital status discrimination, but EEOC guidelines on sex discrimination prohibit rules that forbid or restrict the employment of married women that are not applicable to married men [see 29 C.F.R. § 1604.4(a)]. Such rules constitute "sex discrimination," even if they are not directed against all females, but only against married females, as long as sex is a factor in their application [see 29 C.F.R. § 1604.4(a)].

[6] Religious Discrimination

[a] General Prohibition of Religious Discrimination

Both Title VII and FEHA prohibit employment discrimination based on religion [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2 (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940 (FEHA)]. Not only is religious discrimination in hiring, firing, compensation, and the terms, conditions, and privileges of employment unlawful [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940(a) (FEHA)], but there is an affirmative duty on the employer to accommodate an employee's religious beliefs or observances [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(j) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940 (l) (FEHA)].

[b] "Religion" Defined

Under Title VII, the term "religion" includes all aspects of religious observance and practice, as well as belief [42 U.S.C. § 2000e(j); see Welsh v. United States (1970) 398 U.S. 333, 339-340, 90 S. Ct. 1792, 26 L. Ed. 2d 308] (construing conscientious objector exemption to Universal Military and Training Service Act [50 U.S.C. App. § 456(j)]); United States v. Seeger (1965) 380 U.S. 163, 176, 85 S. Ct. 850, 13 L. Ed. 2d 733 (same); but see Yott v. North American Rockwell Corp. (9th Cir. 1979) 501 F.2d 398, 400 , cert. denied, 445 U.S. 928 (1980) (refusing to hold that conscientious objector cases are similar, since no law requires plaintiff to work for employer that discharged plaintiff).

All forms and aspects of religion, however eccentric, are included in the definition of "religion," unless they cannot be, in practice and with honest effort, reconciled with a businesslike operation [Cooper v. General Dynamics, Convair Aerospace Div. (5th Cir. 1976) 533 F.2d 163, 168-169 , cert. denied, 433 U.S. 908 (1977)] . Thus, for example, all of the following have been held to be protected religious practices:

- Wearing beards [Bhatia v. Chevron U.S.A. (9th Cir. 1984) 734 F.2d 1382, 1383] ;

- Refusal to distribute draft registration materials [American Postal Workers Union v. Postmaster General (9th Cir. 1986) 781 F.2d 772, 775] ;

- Attendance at a spouse's religious conversion ceremony [Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433, 1438-1439] ; and

- Use of peyote [Toledo v. Nobel-Sysco, Inc. (D.N.M. 1986) 651 F. Supp. 483 , rev'd on other grounds, 892 F.2d 1481 (10th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 495 U.S. 948 (1990)] .

Under federal regulations, "religious practices" include moral or ethical beliefs about what is right and wrong that are sincerely held with the strength of traditional religious views [29 C.F.R. § 1605.1; see Philbrook v. Ansonia Bd. of Educ. (2d Cir. 1985) 757 F.2d 476, 482 , aff'd, 479 U.S. 60, 107 S. Ct. 367, 93 L. Ed. 2d 305 (1986) (necessary to differentiate between beliefs held as matter of conscience and those motivated by deception and fraud)].

Even if no religious group espouses such beliefs or the religious group to which the individual professes to belong does not accept those beliefs, the belief may still be a religious belief of the employee or prospective employee [see 29 C.F.R. § 1605.1]. Furthermore, Title VII may also protect atheistic beliefs [see Young v. Southwestern Sav. & Loan Asso. (5th Cir. 1975) 509 F.2d 140, 144] .

"Religious creed," as used in FEHA, includes any traditionally recognized religion, as well as beliefs, observances, or practices that an individual sincerely holds and that occupy in his or her life a place of importance parallel to that of traditionally recognized religions [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.1; see Gov. Code § 12926(o)]. "Religious creed" also includes any perception that a person is a member, or is associated with one who is a member, of a particular religious creed [Gov. Code § 12926(m)]. In determining whether an employee's beliefs constitute a religious creed for FEHA purposes, a court will consider (1) whether the employee's beliefs address fundamental and ultimate questions having to do with deep and imponderable matters, such as the meaning of human existence and the purpose of life; (2) whether the beliefs are comprehensive in nature, consisting of a belief-system as opposed to an isolated teaching; and (3) whether the beliefs include certain formal and external signs, such as teachers or leaders, services or ceremonies, structure or organization, orders of worship or articles of faith, and holidays [Friedman v. Southern Cal. Permanente Med. Group (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 39, 69-70, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 (veganism does not qualify as "religious creed")].

Under FEHA, "religious belief or observance" includes, but is not limited to, an observance such as a Sabbath or other religious holy day, and reasonable time necessary for travel before and after a religious observance [Gov. Code § 12940 (l)].

A religion does not require formal organization or "written form" to be protected by equal employment opportunity laws [see Brown v. Dade Christian Schools (5th Cir. 1977) 556 F.2d 310, 311-312 , cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1063 (1978) (construing 42 U.S.C. § 1981, and determining whether private school's policy of racial discrimination relating to admissions was protected by free exercise clause of U.S. Const., amend. I)].

However, some extreme personal beliefs or tenets may not be protected. For example, one court rejected an employee's claim that he suffered discrimination based on his "personal religious creed" that a cat food contributed to his well-being and work performance [see Brown v. Pena (S.D. Fla. 1977) 441 F. Supp. 1382, 1385 , aff'd, 589 F.2d 1113 (5th Cir. 1979) (employee's "personal religious creed" was mere personal preference beyond parameters of concept of religion protected by Title VII); see also United States v. Seeger (1965) 380 U.S. 163, 176, 85 S. Ct. 850, 13 L. Ed. 2d 733 (construing conscientious objector exemption to Universal Military and Training Service Act [50 U.S.C. App. § 456(j)]; "religious training and belief" excludes merely personal moral code that is "in no way related to ... Supreme Being")].

Religious beliefs that are actually political or social in nature are also not protected. For example, Title VII protection was not extended to an employee alleging religious discrimination based on his membership in the Ku Klux Klan [see Bellamy v. Mason's Stores (E.D. Va. 1973) 368 F. Supp. 1025, 1026 , aff'd, 508 F.2d 504 (4th Cir. 1974) (ideology of Ku Klux Klan was "narrow, temporal and political" and thereby inconsistent with meaning of "religion" as used in Title VII)]. Similarly, Title VII does not protect an employee who, based on his or her religious beliefs, attempts to create a hostile and intolerant work environment by posting demeaning and degrading messages aimed at homosexual coworkers [Peterson v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 358 F.3d 599, 605] .

[c] Prima Facie Case

An employee alleging religious discrimination under Title VII must establish a prima facie case by proving that (1) he or she had a bona fide religious belief, the practice of which conflicted with an employment duty; (2) the employee informed his or her employer of the belief and conflict; and (3) the employer threatened the employee with, or subjected him or her to, discriminatory treatment, including discharge, because of his or her inability to fulfill the job requirements [Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433, 1438 ; see Tiano v. Dillard Department Stores (9th Cir. 1998) 139 F.3d 679, 682-683 (prima facie case includes proof that temporal mandate was part of employee's bona fide religious belief, if employee contends that his or her belief required attendance at particular time and place, such as at particular pilgrimage)].

[d] Notice Requirement

Under Title VII, an employee must notify the employer of his or her religious conflict with his or her employment [see Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433, 1439] . The employee need only give the employer enough information about his or her religious needs to permit the employer to understand the existence of a conflict between the employee's religious practices and the employer's job requirements [see Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433, 1439] . Any greater notice requirement would permit an employer to delve into the religious practices of an employee to determine whether religion mandated the employee's adherence, and neither courts nor employers may make such an inquiry [Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433, 1439] .

[e] Exemptions for Religious Educational Institutions

Under certain circumstances, religious educational institutions may be exempt from the prohibition against religious discrimination under Title VII. There are three exemptions available to religious educational institutions.

One exemption provides that the equal employment provisions of Title VII do not apply to employment by a "religious ... educational institution" of individuals of a particular religion to carry on its activities [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-1(a)]. To meet the requirements of that exemption, the religious characteristics of the school must be weighed against its secular characteristics to show that the school is primarily religious rather than secular, and not merely affiliated with a religious organization [see EEOC v. Kamehameha Sch./Bishop Estate (9th Cir. 1993) 990 F.2d 458, 460 , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 963 ; EEOC v. Townley Engineering & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 610, 613 , cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1077 (1989)] .

Title VII also provides a religious curriculum exemption for religious schools, which provides that it is not an unlawful employment practice for a school "to hire and employ employees of a particular religion ... if the curriculum of such school ... is directed toward the propagation of a particular religion" [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(e)(2)]. Although the statute does not define the terms "curriculum" or "propagate," the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has defined "propagate" as meaning to spread or instill particular religious values, and "curriculum" as being limited to coursework and required school activities [EEOC v. Kamehameha Sch./Bishop Estate (9th Cir. 1993) 990 F.2d 458, 464 , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 963] .

In addition to the two specific exemptions discussed above, Title VII provides that it is not an unlawful employment practice for an employer to hire and employ an individual on the basis of his or her religion in those instances in which religion is a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) reasonably necessary to the normal operation of the particular business [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(e)(1)]. Thus, a religious school might be able to argue that adherence to a particular religion is a BFOQ for teaching at the school. For discussion of the BFOQ defense with regard to religion, see § 115.54[4][b].

In addition to statutory exemptions for religious entities, there is a nonstatutory, constitutionally compelled "ministerial exception" to state and federal civil rights laws [see, e.g., McClure v. Salvation Army (5th Cir.1972) 460 F.2d 553, 559-561 (Title VII) ; Schmoll v. Chapman Univ. (1999) 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 426 (FEHA)] . The ministerial exception reflects a policy, grounded in the First Amendment, that the law should not be construed to govern the relationship of a religious organization and its ministers [Catholic Charities of Sacramento, Inc. v. Superior Court (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 527, 543-544, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 283, 85 P.3d 67] . The exception applies to ministers and to nonordained employees with duties functionally equivalent to those of ministers. Generally, for an employee to be within the scope of the exception, the employee's primary duties must consist of teaching, spreading the faith, church governance, supervision of a religious order, or supervision or participation in a religious ritual and worship [Hope Int'l Univ. v. Superior Court (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 719, 734, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 643] . For further discussion of the ministerial exception, see § 115.20[2][d].

[7] Age Discrimination

The ADEA and FEHA prohibit age discrimination in employment [see 29 U.S.C. § 623 (ADEA); Gov. Code §§ 12940(a)-(d), (j), 12941, 12942 (FEHA)]. A person must be 40 years of age or older to be protected [see 29 U.S.C. § 631(a) (ADEA); Gov. Code § 12926(b), (m) (FEHA; "age" refers to chronological age of any individual who has reached his or her 40th birthday, and "age" includes perception of person's age); Henn v. National Geographic Soc. (7th Cir. 1987) 819 F.2d 824, 827 , cert. denied, 484 U.S.964 (1987) (ADEA; persons less than 40 years old are not protected from age discrimination)].

Effective January 1, 2003, FEHA was amended to repeal a separate provision prohibiting age discrimination [see former Gov. Code § 12941, repealed by 2002 Stats., ch. 525, § 2] and to add age to the regular list of bases of discrimination that constitute unlawful employment practices [see Gov. Code § 12940(a), as amended by 2002 Stats., ch. 525, § 1]. The FEHA amendment eliminated an apparent gap in FEHA's protection that had been identified by the California Supreme Court when it interpreted the former age-discrimination provision as allowing employers to deny educational benefits on the basis of age [see Esberg v. Union Oil (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 262, 269, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 203, 47 P.3d 1069] . The amendment clarifies the Legislature's intent to make FEHA's protection against age discrimination coextensive with the protection provided against other forms of discrimination [see 2002 Stats., ch. 525, § 4]. However, the amendment does not apply to conduct predating January 1, 2003 [Alch v. Superior Court (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 339, 396-400, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 29].

The purpose of the ADEA is to protect a relatively old worker from discrimination that works to the advantage of the relatively young. Therefore, the ADEA does not prohibit an employer from favoring an older employee over a younger one. Thus, even if an employee is over age 40 and therefore covered by the ADEA, he or she is not protected against discrimination in favor of an older employee [Gen. Dynamics Land Sys., Inc. v. Cline (2004) 540 U.S. 581, 124 S. Ct. 1236, 157 L. Ed. 2d 1094, 1103-1104 (employer may provide benefit to employees over age 50, while denying that benefit to employees over 40 but under 50)].

[8] Physical and Mental Disability and Medical Condition Discrimination

[a] Scope of Protection

FEHA expressly prohibits employment discrimination based on physical and mental disability and medical condition [see Gov. Code § 12940(a)-(d),(j); Green v. State (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 254, 260-264, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 165 P.3d 118 (to qualify for protection, employee has burden of establishing his or her ability, with or without reasonable accommodation, to perform essential functions of job)]. In addition, the federal Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) [42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.] prohibits employment discrimination against disabled individuals [42 U.S.C. § 12112(a),(b)(5); see 42 U.S.C. § 12111(8) (to qualify for protection, employee must be able, with or without reasonable accommodation, to perform essential functions of job)].

Federal sources of protection against handicap discrimination also include the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 [29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.], which applies only to federal contractors and recipients of federal funds [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 793, 794], and the Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974 (VEVRAA) [38 U.S.C. § 4211 et seq.], which also covers federal contractors [see 38 U.S.C. § 4212]. For a general discussion relating to the scope and application of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 and the VEVRAA, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Chs. 40 and 41 (Matthew Bender).

Most ADA and FEHA disability claims involve the duty to accommodate a disability. It is also possible, of course, to directly allege discriminatory treatment because of a disability. In such a case, the employer must know of the disability; an adverse action based on the person's performance without knowledge of the disability is not prohibited discrimination [Brundage v. Hahn (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 228, 236-237, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830] . For example, it is not a FEHA violation for an employer to terminate an employee because of reading problems, if the actual diagnosis of a reading disorder is not made until after the termination occurs [Pensinger v. Bowsmith, Inc. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 709, 725, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531] .

[b] "Physical Disability" Under FEHA Defined

[i] Definitions

Under FEHA, "physical disability" includes, but is not limited to, the following [Gov. Code § 12926(k)]:

- Having any physiological disease, disorder, condition, cosmetic disfigurement, or anatomical loss that does both of the following: (1) affects one or more of the following body systems: neurological, immunological, musculoskeletal, special sense organs, respiratory including speech organs, cardiovascular, reproductive, digestive, genitourinary, hemic and lymphatic, skin, and endocrine; and (2) limits a major life activity;

- Any other health impairment not described in the first bulleted item, above, that requires special education or related services;

- Having a record or history of a disease, disorder, condition, cosmetic disfigurement, anatomical loss, or health impairment as described in the first two bulleted entries, above, which is known to the employer or other covered entity;

- Being regarded or treated as having, or having had, any physical condition that makes achievement of a major life activity difficult [see Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 52-53, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874 (employer's belief need not be mistaken for employee to qualify as disabled under "regarded or treated as" prong of definition of disability)]; and

- Being regarded or treated as having, or having had, a disease, disorder, condition, cosmetic disfigurement, anatomical loss, or health impairment that has no present disabling effect but may become a physical disability as described in the first two bulleted entries, above [see Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin

Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 52-53, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874 (employer's belief need not be mistaken for employee to qualify as disabled under "regarded or treated as" prong of definition of disability)].

A physiological disease, disorder, condition, cosmetic disfigurement, or anatomical loss limits a major life activity if it makes the achievement of the major life activity difficult [Gov. Code § 12926(k)(1)(b)(ii)]. Whether a major life activity is limited is to be determined without regard to mitigating measures such as medications, assistive devices, prosthetics, orreasonable accommodations, unless the mitigating measure itself limits a major life activity [Gov. Code §§ 12926(k)(1)(B)(i), 12926.1(c)].

"Major life activity" is to be broadly construed and includes physical, mental, and social activities, and working [Gov. Code §§ 12926(k)(1)(B)(iii), 12926.1(c); see EEOC v. UPS (2005) 424 F.3d 1060, 1070-1077 (monocularity affects major life activities of seeing and working, but because it limits stereopsis and peripheral vision, prohibiting monocular persons from working as commercial delivery drivers is justified under safety-to-others defense)].

FEHA's list of "disabilities" is not restrictive; "physical disability" includes all physical conditions [American National Ins. Co. v. FEHC (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 603, 608, 186 Cal. Rptr. 345, 651 P.2d 1151 ; see, e.g., Nicolini v. County of Tuolumne (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 619, 633-636, 235 Cal. Rptr. 559 (migraine headaches)], including contagious diseases such as AIDS [Raytheon Co. v. FEHC (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1250, 261 Cal. Rptr. 197] and hypersensitivity to tobacco smoke [County of Fresno v. FEHC (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1549-1550, 277 Cal. Rptr. 557] . Physical disabilities include, but are not limited to, chronic or episodic conditions such as HIV/AIDS, hepatitis, epilepsy, seizure disorder, diabetes, multiple sclerosis, and heart disease [Gov. Code § 12926.1(c)].

The FEHA definition of "physical disability" also includes any perception that a person has, or is associated with one who has, a physical disability [Gov. Code § 12926(m)].

"Physical disability" under FEHA specifically excludes sexual behavior disorders, compulsive gambling, kleptomania, pyromania, or psychoactive substance use disorders resulting from the current unlawful use of controlled substances or other drugs [Gov. Code § 12926(k)(6); but see Lab. Code § 1025 (employer with 25 or more employees must reasonably accommodate employee's voluntary alcohol and drug rehabilitation efforts, in absence of undue hardship)].

[ii] Broader Protections Than ADA

The Legislature has enacted a statement of its intent in providing FEHA protection for disabilities. The protection afforded under FEHA is intended to be broader than that afforded under the federal ADA [Gov. Code § 12926.1(a), (c), (d)]. The ADA Amendments Act of 2008 (eff. Jan. 1, 2009) clarified that the ADA's definition of "disability" is to be construed in favor of broad coverage of individuals "to the maximum extent permitted by the terms of" the ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(A); see Pub. L. No. 110-325, § 2, 122 Stat. 3553, 3553-3554 (2008) (rejecting reasoning and standards applied by Toyota Motor Mfg., Ky., Inc. v. Williams (2002) 534 U.S. 184, 122 S. Ct. 681, 151 L. Ed. 2d 615 , superseded by statute as stated in 614 F. Supp. 2d 73 (2009) and Sutton v. United Airlines (1999) 527 U.S. 471, 119 S. Ct. 2139, 144 L. Ed. 2d 450 , superseded by statute as stated in 611 F. Supp. 2d 120 , as incorrectly narrowing broad scope of protection intended to be afforded by ADA)]. Still, FEHA affords broader protection than the ADA. For example, to constitute a physical disability under FEHA, an impairment that limits a major life activity need not pose a "substantial" limitation, as is required under the ADA [Gov. Code § 12926.1(c), (d) (overruling any contrary interpretation in Cassista v. Community Foods (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1050, 1060, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143); see Colmenares v. Braemar Country Club, Inc. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1019, 1028-1031 , Cal. Rptr. 2d 662, 63 P.3d 220 (Gov. Code § 12926.1, added effective January 1, 2001, to clarify existing law; language in Cassista v. Community Foods that may have conflicted with Gov. Code § 12926.1 was dictum and did not accurately reflect California law)]. Thus, under the FEHA an impairment may be found to limit the specific major life activity of "working," if the actual or perceived working limitation implicates either a particular employment or a class or broad range of employments [Gov. Code § 12926.1(c); see Gov. Code § 12926(k)(1)(B)(iii) ("major life activities" under FEHA includes working)]. The ADA Amendments Act of 2008 added "working" to the ADA's nonexclusive list of major life activities [see 42 U.S.C. § 12102(2)(A) (eff. Jan. 1, 2009)]. However, the ADA still requires a substantial limitation on working before an impairment will qualify as a disability under the ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12102(1)(A)].

Under FEHA, regardless of any federal law, whether a condition limits a major life activity is to be determined without regard to mitigating measures such as medications, assistive devices, prosthetics, or reasonable accommodations, unless the mitigating measure itself limits a major life activity [Gov. Code §§ 12926(k)(1)(B)(i), 12926.1(c)]. Similarly, under the ADA, the determination of whether an impairment substantially limits a major life activity must be made without regard to the ameliorative effects of mitigating measures such as (1) medication, medical supplies, equipment, or appliances, low-vision devices (other than ordinary eyeglasses or contact lenses), prosthetics including limbs and devices, hearing aids and cochlear implants or other implantable hearing devices, mobility devices, or oxygen therapy equipment and supplies; (2) the use of assistive technology; (3) reasonable accommodations or auxiliary aids or services; or (4) learned behavioral or adaptive neurological modifications [42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(E)].

The FEHA definition of physical disability, as well as the definition of mental disability, is to be construed so that applicants and employees are protected from discrimination due to an actual or perceived impairment that is disabling, potentially disabling, or perceived as disabling or potentially disabling [Gov. Code §§ 12926(k)(4), (5), 12926.1(b)], and the protection of FEHA extends to persons who are erroneously or mistakenly believed to have any physical condition that limits a major life activity [Gov. Code §§ 12926(k)(4), 12926.1(d)].

If, on the other hand, the ADA definition of "disability" would provide broader protection to disabled individuals than the FEHA definition, then that broader ADA protection is deemed incorporated by reference into, and prevails over any conflicting provisions of, the definitions of mental and physical disability in Gov. Code § 12926(i) and*(k)* [Gov. Code § 12926(l)].

[c] "Mental Disability" Under FEHA Defined

[i] Definitions

Under FEHA, "mental disability" includes, but is not limited to, the following [Gov. Code § 12926(i)]:

- Having any mental or psychological disorder or condition, such as mental retardation, organic brain syndrome, emotional or mental illness, or specific learning disabilities, that limits a major life activity.

- Any other mental or psychological disorder or condition not described in the first bulleted item, above, that requires special education or related services.

- Having a record or history of a mental or psychological disorder or condition described in the first two bulleted items, above, which is known to the employer or other covered entity.

- Being regarded or treated by the employer or other covered entity as having, or having had, any mental condition that makes achievement of a major life activity difficult [see Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 52-53, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874 (employer's belief need not be mistaken for employee to qualify as disabled under "regarded or treated as" prong of definition of disability)].

- Being regarded or treated by the employer or other covered entity as having or having had, a mental or psychological disorder or condition that has no present disabling effect, but that may become a mental disability described in either of the first two bulleted items, above [see Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 52-53, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874 (employer's belief need not be mistaken for employee to qualify as disabled under "regarded or treated as" prong of definition of disability)].

"Major life activity" is to be broadly construed and includes physical, mental, and social activities, and working [Gov. Code §§ 12926(i)(1)(C), 12926.1(c)]. Whether such an activity is "limited" is to be determined without regard to mitigating measures such as medications, assistive devices, or reasonable accommodations, unless the mitigating measure itself limits a major life activity [Gov. Code §§ 12926(i)(1)(A), 12926.1(c)]. A mental or psychological disorder or condition limits a major life activity if it makes the achievement of the major life activity difficult [Gov. Code § 12926(i)(1)(B)].

"Mental disability" under FEHA includes clinical depression and bipolar disorder [Gov. Code § 12926.1(c)]. "Mental disability" under FEHA, however, does not include sexual behavior disorders, compulsive gambling, kleptomania, pyromania, or psychoactive substance disorders resulting from the current unlawful use of controlled substances or other drugs [Gov. Code § 12926(i)]. Alcoholism, however, could be a covered disability under FEHA [see Gosvener v. Coastal Corp. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 805, 813 ; see also Lab. Code § 1025 (employer with 25 or more employees must reasonably accommodate employee's voluntary alcohol and drug rehabilitation efforts, in absence of undue hardship)]. Depending on its severity, posttraumatic stress disorder may meet the definition of a mental disability under FEHA [Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 259, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55 (employee created triable issue as to whether she had mental disability because evidence showed that, after being victim of robbery, she suffered from posttraumatic stress disorder, including anxiety, nervousness, depression, lack of confidence, helpless feeling, humiliation, headaches, teeth-grinding, nightmares, sleeplessness, and panic attacks)].

The FEHA definition of "mental disability" also includes any perception that a person has, or is associated with one who has, a mental disability [Gov. Code § 12926(m)].

[ii] Broader Protections Than ADA

The Legislature has enacted a statement of its intent in providing FEHA protection for disabilities. The protection afforded under FEHA is intended to be broader than that afforded under the ADA [Gov. Code § 12926.1(a), (c), (d)]. The ADA Amendments Act of 2008 (eff. Jan. 1, 2009) clarified that the ADA's definition of "disability" is to be construed in favor of broad coverage of individuals "to the maximum extent permitted by the terms of" the ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(A); see Pub. L. No. 110-325, § 2, 122 Stat. 3553, 3553-3554 (2008) (rejecting reasoning and standards applied by Toyota Motor Mfg., Ky., Inc. v. Williams (2002) 534 U.S. 184, 122 S. Ct. 681, 151 L. Ed. 2d 615 , superseded by statute as stated in 614 F. Supp. 2d 73 (2009) and Sutton v. United Airlines (1999) 527 U.S. 471, 119 S. Ct. 2139, 144 L. Ed. 2d 450 , superseded by statute as stated in 611 F. Supp. 2d 120 , as incorrectly narrowing broad scope of protection intended to be afforded by ADA)]. Still, FEHA affords broader protection than the ADA. For example, to constitute a mental disability under FEHA, an impairment that limits a major life activity need not pose a "substantial" limitation, as is required under the ADA [Gov. Code § 12926.1(c), (d) (overruling any contrary interpretation in Cassista v. Community Foods (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1050, 1060, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143); see Colmenares v. Braemar Country Club, Inc. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1019, 1028-1031 (Gov. Code § 12926.1, added effective January 1, 2001, to clarify existing law; language in Cassista v. Community Foods that may have conflicted with Gov. Code § 12926.1 was dictum and did not accurately reflect California law)]. Thus, under FEHA an impairment may be found to limit the specific major life activity of "working," if the actual or perceived working limitation implicates either a particular employment or a class or broad range of employments [Gov. Code § 12926.1(c); see Gov. Code § 12926(i)(1)(C) ("major life activities" under FEHA includes working)]. The ADA Amendments Act of 2008 added "working" to the ADA's nonexclusive list of major life activities [see 42 U.S.C. § 12102(2)(A) (eff. Jan. 1, 2009)]. However, the ADA still requires a substantial limitation on working before an impairment will qualify as a disability under the ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12102(1)(A)].

Regardless of any federal law, under the FEHA, whether a condition limits a major life activity is to be determined without regard to mitigating measures such as medications, assistive devices, or reasonable accommodations, unless the mitigating measure itself limits a major life activity [Gov. Code §§ 12926(i)(1)(A), 12926.1(c)]. Similarly, under the ADA, the determination of whether an impairment substantially limits a major life activity must be made without regard to the ameliorative effects of mitigating measures such as (1) medication, medical supplies, equipment, or appliances, low-vision devices (other than ordinary eyeglasses or contact lenses), prosthetics including limbs and devices, hearing aids and cochlear implants or other implantable hearing devices, mobility devices, or oxygen therapy equipment and supplies; (2) the use of assistive technology; (3) reasonable accommodations or auxiliary aids or services; or (4) learned behavioral or adaptive neurological modifications [42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(E)].

The FEHA definition of mental disability, as well as the definition of physical disability, is to be construed so that applicants and employees are protected from discrimination due to an actual or perceived impairment that is disabling, potentially disabling, or perceived as disabling or potentially disabling [Gov. Code §§ 12926(i)(4),(5), 12926.1(b)]. Moreover, the protection of FEHA extends to persons who are erroneously or mistakenly believed to have any mental condition that limits a major life activity [Gov. Code §§ 12926(i)(4), 12926.1(d)].

If, on the other hand, the ADA definition of "disability" would provide broader protection to disabled individuals than the FEHA definition, then that broader ADA protection is deemed incorporated by reference into, and prevails over any conflicting provisions of, the definitions of mental and physical disability in Gov. Code § 12926(i) and (k) [Gov. Code § 12926(l)].

FEHA's provisions relating to mental disability apply to any employer or entity that is subject to FEHA generally [see Gov. Code §§ 12926(d), 12940(a)-(f), (j), (m), (n)].

[d] "Disability" Under ADA Defined

Under the ADA, "disability," with respect to an individual, means any of the following [42 U.S.C. § 12102(1)]:

- A physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities of the individual.

- A record of such an impairment.

- Being regarded as having such an impairment. An individual meets this requirement of "being regarded as having such an impairment" if the individual establishes that he or she has been subjected to an action prohibited under the ADA because of an actual or perceived physical or mental impairment, whether or not the impairment limits or is perceived to limit a major life activity [42 U.S.C. § 12102(3)(A)]. However, this requirement does not apply to impairments that are transitory (i.e., with an actual or expected duration of six months or less) and minor [42 U.S.C. § 12102(3)(B)].

Major life activities include (but are not limited to) caring for oneself, performing manual tasks, seeing, hearing, eating, sleeping, walking, standing, lifting, bending, speaking, breathing, learning, reading, concentrating, thinking, communicating, and working [42 U.S.C. § 12102(2)(A)]. Major life activities also include the operation of major bodily functions, including (but not limited to) functions of the immune system, normal cell growth, digestive, bowel, bladder, neurological, brain, respiratory, circulatory, endocrine, and reproductive functions [42 U.S.C. § 12102(2)(B)].

The ADA's definition of "disability" is to be construed in favor of broad coverage of individuals under the ADA, to the maximum extent permitted by the terms of the ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(A)]. The term "substantially limits" must be interpreted consistently with the findings and purposes of the ADA Amendments Act of 2008 [42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(B); see Pub. L. No. 110-325, 122 Stat. 3553 (2008)]. In the ADA Amendments Act of 2008, Congress expressly rejected the reasoning and standards enunciated by the Supreme Court in Toyota Motor Mfg., Ky., Inc. v. Williams [Toyota Motor Mfg., Ky., Inc. v. Williams (2002) 534 U.S. 184, 122 S. Ct. 681, 151 L. Ed. 2d 615 , superseded by statute as stated in 614 F. Supp. 2d 73 (2009)] and Sutton v. United Airlines [Sutton v. United Airlines (1999) 527 U.S. 471, 119 S. Ct. 2139, 144 L. Ed. 2d 450 , superseded by statute as stated in 611 F. Supp. 2d 120], and applied by numerous lower courts, as incorrectly narrowing the broad scope of protection intended to be afforded by ADA [Pub. L. No. 110-325, § 2(a)(4), (5), 122 Stat. 3553, 3553 (2008)]. In particular, Congress rejected the Supreme Court's statements that the terms "substantially" and "major" in the definition of disability under the ADA "need to be interpreted strictly to create a demanding standard for qualifying as disabled," and that to be substantially limited in performing a major life activity under the ADA "an individual must have an impairment that prevents or severely restricts the individual from doing activities that are of central importance to most people's daily lives" [Pub. L. No. 110-325, § 2(b)(4), 122 Stat. 3553, 3554 (2008) (rejecting quoted passages from Toyota Motor Mfg., Ky., Inc. v. Williams, (2002) 534 U.S. 184, 122 S. Ct. 681, 151 L. Ed. 2d 615 , superseded by statute as stated in 614 F. Supp. 2d 73 (2009))]. Congress also expressed its intent that the primary object of attention in cases brought under the ADA should be whether entities covered under the ADA have complied with their obligations, and that the question of whether an individual's impairment is a disability under the ADA should not demand extensive analysis [Pub. L. No. 110-325, § 2(b)(5), 122 Stat. 3553, 3554 (2008)].

An impairment that substantially limits one major life activity need not limit other major life activities in order to be considered a disability [42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(C)]. An impairment that is episodic or in remission is a disability if it would substantially limit a major life activity when active [42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(D)].

The determination of whether an impairment substantially limits a major life activity must be made without regard to the ameliorative effects of mitigating measures such as (1) medication, medical supplies, equipment, or appliances, low-vision devices (other than ordinary eyeglasses or contact lenses), prosthetics including limbs and devices, hearing aids and cochlear implants or other implantable hearing devices, mobility devices, or oxygen therapy equipment and supplies; (2) the use of assistive technology; (3) reasonable accommodations or auxiliary aids or services; or (4) learned behavioral or adaptive neurological modifications [42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(E)(i); see 42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(E)(iii)(II) ("low-vision devices" means devices that magnify, enhance, or otherwise augment a visual image)]. However, the ameliorative effects of the mitigating measures of ordinary eyeglasses or contact lenses must be considered in determining whether an impairment substantially limits a major life activity [42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(E)(ii); see 42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(E)(iii)(I) ("ordinary eyeglasses or contact lenses" means lenses that are intended to fully correct visual acuity or eliminate refractive error); 42 U.S.C. § 12103(1) ("auxiliary aids and services" defined)].

Physical or mental impairment means any physiological disorder or condition, cosmetic disfigurement, or anatomical loss affecting one or more of the following body systems: neurological, musculoskeletal, special sense organs, respiratory (including speech organs), cardiovascular, reproductive, digestive, genito-urinary, hemic and lymphatic, skin, and endocrine. It also includes any mental or psychological disorder such as mental retardation, organic brain syndrome, emotional or mental illness, and specific learning disabilities [45 C.F.R. § 84.3(j)(2)(i) (Department of Health and Human Services regulation issued under Rehabilitation Act of 1973, 29 U.S.C. § 790 et seq.); see 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(h) (EEOC regulation interpreting ADA); see also 42 U.S.C. § 12201(a) (ADA expressly adopts regulations under Rehabilitation Act of 1973); Toyota Motor Mfg., Ky., Inc. v. Williams (2002) 534 U.S. 184, 193-194, 122 S. Ct. 681, 151 L. Ed. 2d 615 (ADA expressly adopts regulations under Rehabilitation Act but does not authorize any agency to issue further regulations interpreting "disability," so persuasive authority of EEOC regulations is less clear)].

All of the following are excluded from the ADA definition of disability [42 U.S.C. § 12211(a), (b)]:

- Homosexuality and bisexuality;

- Transvestism, transsexualism, pedophilia, exhibitionism, voyeurism, gender identity disorders not resulting from physical impairments, or other sexual behavior disorders;

- Compulsive gambling, kleptomania, or pyromania; and

- Psychoactive substance use disorders resulting from current illegal use of drugs.

An individual seeking to establish disability under the ADA must provide affirmative proof as to the effect of the asserted impairment. For example, in the case of a person who can see out of only one eye, a court would require evidence of the person's loss of depth perception and visual field [see Albertson's, Inc. v. Kirkingburg (1999) 527 U.S. 555, 566-567, 119 S. Ct. 2162, 144 L. Ed. 2d 518] . The person must also show that the impairment prevents or severely restricts the use of his or her eyesight compared with how unimpaired individuals normally use their eyesight in daily life [EEOC v. UPS (9th Cir. 2002) 306 F.3d 794, 802-803 , modified, 311 F.3d 1132 (9th Cir. 2002) (monocular individuals were not impaired, since they drove, read, used tools, and played sports)].

[e] Effect of Inconsistent Disability Claims in Different Proceedings

If an employee receives disability benefits (e.g., under workers' compensation or as a Social Security benefit), the employee may be judicially estopped from asserting a subsequent discrimination claim based on allegations that are inconsistent with representations made in obtaining the earlier disability benefits. The doctrine of judicial estoppel precludes a party from asserting a position in a judicial proceeding that is necessarily inconsistent with a position previously successfully asserted by that party in a prior proceeding [Drain v. Betz Lab. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 950, 955-956, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 864 ; see Fredenburg v. Contra Costa County Dep't of Health Servs. (9th Cir. 1999) 172 F.3d 1176, 1179 (judicial estoppel will be applied only if party takes position that, in light of representations made in prior proceeding, is tantamount to knowing misrepresentation or fraud on court)].

For example, an employee who obtains a workers' compensation award on the basis of a sworn statement that he was totally disabled from "any occupation" will be estopped from claiming in a subsequent lawsuit that his employer discriminated against him by not making a reasonable accommodation that would have enabled him to continue working [Drain v. Betz Lab. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 950, 958-960, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 864] . However, if the assertions made in the prior proceeding are not necessarily inconsistent with those made in the subsequent proceeding, judicial estoppel will be inapplicable [see Fredenburg v. Contra Costa County Dep't of Health Servs. (9th Cir. 1999) 172 F.3d 1176, 1179-1180 (prior receipt of California temporary disability benefits (SDI) does not automatically bar employee from establishing that he or she is qualified person with disability under ADA); Nunes v. Wal-Mart Stores (9th Cir. 1999) 164 F.3d 1243, 1246 (neither prior application for nor receipt of California temporary disability benefits (SDI) automatically bars employee from establishing that he or she is qualified person with disability under ADA); Bell v. Wells Fargo Bank (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1382, 1387-1388, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 (plaintiff's prior disability application was susceptible of varying interpretations, not all necessarily inconsistent with allegations of subsequent lawsuit); Prilliman v. United Air Lines (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 962-963, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142 (plaintiff's earlier disability application had been based on inability to perform specific job function and was not clearly inconsistent with position taken in subsequent lawsuit, that plaintiff could have performed different job)].

The pursuit and receipt of Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) benefits does not automatically estop the recipient from establishing that his or her disability is also covered under the ADA. The SSDI program provides benefits to a person with a disability so severe that he or she is unable to do his or her previous work and cannot engage in "any other kind of substantial gainful work which exists in the national economy" [see 42 U.S.C. § 423(d)(2)(A)]. To prevail on an ADA claim, an employee must establish that his or her disability is such that he or she can perform the essential functions of his or her job, at least with "reasonable accommodation" [see 42 U.S.C. § 12111(8)]. Despite the appearance of conflict that arises from the governing statutory language, there are situations in which an SSDI claim and an ADA claim can both be sustained without any factual contradiction. For example, in deciding whether an individual is disabled for SSDI purposes, the Social Security Administration (SSA) does not take into account whether any reasonable accommodations can be made. Hence, an individual might qualify for SSDI under SSA's administrative rules and yet, due to special individual circumstances, remain capable of performing the essential functions of his or her job for ADA purposes. Accordingly, the Supreme Court held that trial courts should not apply any special presumption or judicial estoppel to prevent a claimant for or recipient of SSDI benefits from asserting that he or she is a qualified individual with a disability under the ADA [Cleveland v. Policy Management Sys. Corp. (1999) 526 U.S. 795, 119 S. Ct. 1597, 1600-1603, 143 L. Ed. 2d 966 ; see Lujan v. Pacific Maritime Ass'n (9th Cir. 1999) 165 F.3d 738, 740 (because of different definitions of disability used by different agencies, it is possible for individual to qualify for SSDI benefits and to satisfy ADA's definition of qualified person with disability)].

However, the Supreme Court went on to state that despite the lack of inherent factual conflict between an SSDI claim and an ADA claim, in some cases a factual conflict might exist. For example, a plaintiff's sworn assertion in an application for SSDI benefits that he or she is "unable to work" will appear to negate an essential element of his or her ADA case (that he or she can, with or without reasonable accommodation, perform essential functions of his or her job), at least if the plaintiff does not offer a sufficient explanation. In such a case, summary judgment for the employer would be appropriate if the plaintiff fails to offer sufficient evidence to explain the apparent contradiction that arises out of the earlier SSDI claim. For this reason, when faced with plaintiff's previous sworn statement asserting "total disability," a trial court should require an explanation of any apparent inconsistency with necessary elements of the plaintiff's ADA claim [Cleveland v. Policy Management Sys. Corp. (1999) 526 U.S. 795, 804-807, 119 S. Ct. 1597, 143 L. Ed. 2d 966] .

[f] "Medical Condition" Under FEHA Defined

FEHA also prohibits discrimination based on "medical condition" [see Gov. Code § 12940(a)]. "Medical condition" means a genetic characteristic, or any health impairment related to or associated with a diagnosis of cancer or a record or history of cancer [Gov. Code § 12926(h)]. For this purpose, a "genetic characteristic" is either of the following [Gov. Code § 12926(h)(2)]:

- Any scientifically or medically identifiable gene or chromosome, or combination or alteration of genes or chromosomes, that is known to be a cause of a disease or disorder in a person or his or her offspring, or is determined to be associated with a statistically increased risk of development of a disease or disorder, and that is presently not associated with any symptoms of any disease or disorder; or

- Inherited characteristics that may derive from the individual or family member, that are known to be a cause of a disease or disorder in a person or his or her offspring, or that are determined to be associated with a statistically increased risk of development of a disease or disorder, and that are presently not associated with any symptoms of any disease or disorder.

Aside from genetic characteristics, the only health impairments meant by the term "medical condition" under FEHA are conditions associated with cancer. No other conditions are included, because the Legislature chose to use the word "means" in defining "medical condition," rather than the former words "includes" (until 2001) and "includes, but is not limited to" (until 1994) [see Muller v. Automobile Club of Southern California (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 431, 444-446, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 573] .

For FEHA purposes, a "medical condition" includes any perception that a person has, or is associated with one who has, a medical condition [Gov. Code § 12926(m)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationRacial DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationReligious DiscriminationGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Scope of Coverage, Protected Classifications, and Theories of Liability

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.23

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.23 Theories of Liability

[1] Generally

In general, a plaintiff may establish unlawful discrimination under FEHA, Title VII, the ADA, or the ADEA according to one of two basic theories of liability: disparate treatment or disparate impact. In some circumstances, a plaintiff, either individually or on behalf of a class, may establish liability by proving a "pattern or practice" of disparate treatment by an employer. These theories are discussed in [2]-[4], below.

[2] Disparate Treatment

[a] Scope and Application

Disparate treatment occurs when an employer treats some employees less favorably than others because of their race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or other protected characteristic [Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335-336, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) ; Moran v. Selig (9th Cir. 2006) 447 F.3d 748, 753-755 (disparate treatment in providing health benefits gives rise to Title VII claim only if those benefits are awarded on basis of employment relationship); Mixon v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1317, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884 (FEHA)] . The disparate treatment theory of liability applies to cases arising under most equal employment opportunity laws, including FEHA [see University of Southern California v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1028, 1035, 272 Cal. Rptr. 264 ; Mixon v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1316-1317, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884 ; Ibarbia v. Regents of University of California (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1327, 1328, 237 Cal. Rptr. 92] , Title VII [see McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668] , the ADEA [see Gross v. FBL Fin. Servs., Inc. (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 2343, 174 L. Ed. 2d 119, 127-129 (in disparate-treatment claim under ADEA, plaintiff has burden, pursuant to 29 U.S.C. § 623(a)(1), of proving that age was "but-for" cause of employer's adverse action)], and 42 U.S.C. § 1981 [see De Horney v. Bank of America Nat'l Trust & Sav. Asso. (9th Cir. 1989) 879 F.2d 459, 467-468 ; London v. Coopers & Lybrand (9th Cir. 1981) 644 F.2d 811, 818 ; Tagupa v. Board of Directors (9th Cir. 1980) 633 F.2d 1309, 1312] .

A disparate treatment case requires proof of intent to discriminate [see Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335-336, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) ; Mixon v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1317, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884 (FEHA)] . Intent is established when an employer chooses a particular policy because of, not merely in spite of, its effect on members of a protected class; mere awareness of adverse consequences is insufficient [American Fed'n of State, County, and Municipal Employees v. State of Washington (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1405 (Title VII) ; see Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335-336, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 ; see also West v. Bechtel Corp. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 966, 978-979, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 647 (because foreign government was employer's client and had power to require employer to engage in discriminatory conduct within that foreign country, client's discriminatory intent was not imputed to employer)].

The discussion of burden-shifting [see [b], below] that occurs when a plaintiff uses circumstantial evidence to establish a prima facie case of disparate treatment under Title VII and some other employment-discrimination statutes [see [b]-[d], below] does not apply to a claim brought under the ADEA. Title VII, for example, authorizes a discrimination claim in which an improper purpose was "a motivating factor" for an adverse employment decision, even if other, permissible factors also motivated the decision [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(m)]. The burden-shifting protocol described below thus applies when the employer had "mixed motives" for the adverse employment action that gave rise to a Title VII claim. The ADEA, in contrast, does not authorize mixed-motive age-discrimination claims; rather, the plaintiff must prove by a preponderance of the evidence (which may be direct or circumstantial) that age was the "but-for" cause of the employer's adverse action [29 U.S.C. § 623(a)(1)]. Thus, the burden of proof on an ADEA claim never shifts to the employer to show that it would have taken the adverse action regardless of age [Gross v. FBL Fin. Servs., Inc. (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 2343, 174 L. Ed. 2d 119, 127-129].

[b] Prima Facie Proof

Disparate treatment may be established by evidence of discriminatory intent [see Ledbetter v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. (2007) 550 U.S. 618, 127 S. Ct. 2162, 2167, 167 L. Ed. 2d 982, 990 (central element of disparate treatment is discriminatory intent); see, e.g., Trans World Airlines v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 121, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523 (employment policy of disqualifying airline captains at age 60 violates ADEA); Cordova v. State Farm Insurance Companies (9th Cir. 1997) 124 F.3d 1145, 1148-1149 (Title VII; supervisor's reference to a coworker as "dumb Mexican" hired only because of his minority status); Rosenfeld v. Southern Pacific Company (9th Cir. 1971) 444 F.2d 1219, 1223 (Title VII; express admission that woman denied employment assignment based on belief that women are not physically or biologically suited for assignment); see also Ash v. Tyson Foods, Inc. (2006) 546 U.S. 454, 126 S. Ct. 1195, 1197, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1053 (per curiam) (use of word "boy" to refer to African-American may be evidence of discriminatory intent, depending on circumstances, including context, inflection, tone of voice, local custom, and historical usage)].

However, in most cases such direct evidence is unavailable, and intent can only be established by circumstantial evidence [see Ledbetter v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. (2007) 550 U.S. 618, 127 S. Ct. 2162, 2171, 167 L. Ed. 2d 982, 994 ("In most disparate-treatment cases, much if not all of the evidence of intent is circumstantial."); American Fed'n of State, County, and Municipal Employees v. State of Washington (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1406 (Title VII) ; see also U.S. Postal Service Bd. of Govs. v. Aikens (1983) 460 U.S. 711, 714 n.3, 103 S. Ct. 1478, 75 L. Ed. 2d 403 (Title VII)] . In these cases, a plaintiff has the burden of establishing, by a preponderance of the evidence [see Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 252-253, 256, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (Title VII) ; American Fed'n of State, County, and Municipal Employees v. State of Washington (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1406 (Title VII)] , a prima facie case of employment discrimination by showing all of the following [McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668] :

- That he or she is a member of a protected class;

- That he or she applied and was qualified for a job (or other employment opportunity or benefit) for which an employer was seeking applicants;

- That, despite the plaintiff's qualifications, he or she was rejected; and

- That, after the plaintiff's rejection, the position remained open and the employer continued to seek applicants from persons with the plaintiff's qualifications (or to provide the benefit to other such persons).

A plaintiff need not show, as part of the prima facie case, that similarly-situated employees outside the protected class received the employment terms and conditions sought by the plaintiff [Heard v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1735, 1754, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620] . For example, the fact that an employee over age 40 was replaced by an older employee does not by itself conclusively establish the absence of age discrimination. Although this evidence weighs against an inference that the first employee was terminated based on his or her age, it may be outweighed by other evidence that supports an inference of age discrimination [Begnal v. Canfield & Assocs. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 66, 72-76, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611] .

The above McDonnell Douglas test does not apply if direct evidence of discriminatory intent is available [Trans World Airlines v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 121, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523 ; but cf. Gross v. FBL Fin. Servs., Inc. (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 2343, 174 L. Ed. 2d 119, 127-129 , remanded, 588 F.3d 614 (2009) (under ADEA, plaintiff retains burden of proof to show by direct or circumstantial evidence that age was "but-for" cause of employer's adverse action, 29 U.S.C. § 623(a)(1), and McDonnell-Douglas burden-shifting does not apply)]. Furthermore, it only applies in private, non-class actions [McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 800, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668] .

The requisite degree of proof to establish a prima facie case is minimal since the plaintiff is only required to raise an inference that the discriminatory misconduct occurred [see Messick v. Horizon Indus. (9th Cir. 1995) 62 F.3d 1227, 1229 ; Warren v. City of Carlsbad (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 439, 442 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1171 (1996) ; Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 885, 889 ; but see Ritter v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 454, 457 (vague evidence did not support prima facie case)]. However, if the plaintiff's evidence fails to support such an inference, the prima facie case is not made. Thus, if there is no evidence that the defendant was aware of the plaintiff's membership in the protected class, the plaintiff has failed to make a prima facie case of discriminatory intent. For example, in a case of alleged discrimination on the basis of pregnancy, if the pregnancy was not apparent at the time of the alleged discriminatory act, and the employee had not disclosed it to her employer, she must allege knowledge and present, as part of her prima facie case, evidence from which a rational jury could infer that the employer knew that she was pregnant [Trop v. Sony Pictures Entm't Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1133, 1145-1146, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 144] .

The McDonnell Douglas framework is meant only as a burden-shifting tool and is not a subject on which the jury should be instructed [Heard v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1735, 1758-1759, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620 ; Caldwell v. Paramount Unified School Dist. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 189, 196, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448] . Rather, it is most useful at preliminary stages of the litigation, such as summary judgment and nonsuit, when the shifting burdens of proof and persuasion permit a sequential analysis of the parties' evidentiary offerings. Once the case is submitted to the jury, the McDonnell Douglas framework drops from the picture, and an appellate court will apply traditional standards of review to determine whether substantial evidence supports the jury's verdict [Horsford v. Board of Trs. of Cal. State Univ. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 359, 375-377, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 644] .

The United States Supreme Court has stated that because the prima facie case under McDonnell Douglas was intended as an evidentiary standard, it does not serve as a pleading requirement. Thus, under the notice pleading system that exists in federal court, a plaintiff is not required to plead the elements of the McDonnell Douglas prima facie case in order to survive a motion to dismiss at the pleading stage [Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N.A. (2002) 534 U.S. 506, 122 S.

Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1, 9-10] . Under the federal notice pleading system, a complaint is deemed sufficient if it contains "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief" [Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a) (emphasis added)]. In contrast, California courts operate under a code pleading system (also called a fact pleading system), which requires that a complaint contain a "statement of the facts constituting the cause of action, in ordinary and concise language" [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a) (emphasis added)]. Accordingly, it is unclear whether California courts may or should use the McDonnell Douglas prima facie case to test the sufficiency of a complaint to survive a general demurrer [see Bach v. County of Butte (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 554, 561-563, 195 Cal. Rptr. 268 (rules of pleading in federal court generally differ from rules of pleading in California state courts, but California courts should apply federal standard to determine whether complaint pleads federal civil-rights cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 sufficient to survive general demurrer); Diodes v. Franzen (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 244, 250, 67 Cal. Rptr. 19 ("The federal cases since the adoption of the federal rules are not helpful on the pleading questions in an action brought in a state court in California, because federal cases use 'notice pleading,' whereas California uses 'fact pleading' ")].

[c] Rebuttal of Prima Facie Proof

A McDonnell Douglas prima facie case establishes a rebuttable presumption of unlawful discrimination [Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 254, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (Title VII); see Diaz v. American Telephone & Telegraph (9th Cir. 1985) 752 F.2d 1356, 1359-1361 (Title VII); Mixon v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1318, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884 (FEHA)]. The plaintiff's proof of the prima facie case shifts the burden to the employer to articulate some legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for its challenged action [Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 254-255, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 ; McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668] .

However, the ultimate burden of persuading the trier of fact that the employer discriminated remains at all times with the plaintiff [St. Mary's Honor Center v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 507, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407 (Title VII); Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 253, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (Title VII); Horsford v. Board of Trs. of Cal. State Univ. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 359, 375-377, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 644 (plaintiff in racial discrimination action has burden of proving that plaintiff's race was substantial factor in adverse employment decision); Muzquiz v. City of Emeryville (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1106, 1116-1119, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 579 (once employer raises genuine issue of fact with regard to its legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for its action, entire framework for shifting burdens and presumptions drops from case, and only issue left to decide is whether employee lost his or her job because of discrimination)].

The employer's burden is one of "production" of evidence; it is sufficient if the employer raises a genuine issue of fact about whether it discriminated [see Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 254, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207] . Because the defendant's rebuttal burden is merely one of producing evidence, and because the burden of proof remains at all times with the plaintiff, the defendant's failure to persuade the factfinder that its proffered reason was the true reason for its action does not necessarily compel a judgment for the plaintiff as a matter of law, but it will permit the factfinder to make an inference of discrimination [St. Mary's Honor Center v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 511, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407 (Title VII)].

To rebut the plaintiff's prima facie case of disparate treatment, the employer need only offer a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason or policy for its challenged action. It is not necessary for the employer to negate the possibility that its facially neutral employment practice has a disparate impact; evidence of disparate impact (see [4], below) is not relevant under the McDonnell-Douglas analytical framework for disparate-treatment claims [Raytheon Co. v. Hernandez (2003) 540 U.S. 44, 124 S. Ct. 513, 157 L. Ed. 2d 357, 365-367] .

[d] Proof of Pretext or "Mixed Motives"

Once the employer meets its burden of production, the plaintiff must have an opportunity to prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the employer's "legitimate" reasons were not its true reasons, but were a pretext for discrimination [see Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 253, 256, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (Title VII); McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 804, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (Title VII); see also Rodriguez v. General Motors Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 904 F.2d 531, 533 (42 U.S.C. § 1981)]. The plaintiff may show pretext either directly, by showing that a discriminatory reason more likely motivated the employer, or indirectly, by showing that the employer's proffered explanation is not believable [Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 256, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (Title VII); Noyes v. Kelly Servs. (9th Cir. 2007) 488 F.3d 1163, 1170-1171 ; Mixon v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1318-1319, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884 (FEHA)].

In the view of some courts, once a plaintiff has established a prima facie case, he or she need produce very little evidence of discriminatory motive to raise a genuine issue of fact as to pretext [see McGinest v. GTE Serv. Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1122-1124 (Title VII; racial harassment); Warren v. City of Carlsbad (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 439, 442 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1171 (1996) ; Lindahl v. Air France (9th Cir. 1991) 930 F.2d 1434, 1437-1438 ; see also Noyes v. Kelly Servs. (9th Cir. 2007) 488 F.3d 1163, 1170-1171 (at summary judgment stage, plaintiff need not prove that defendant's proffered nondiscriminatory explanation is false and that intentional discrimination is real reason for defendant's conduct); Messick v. Horizon Indus. (9th Cir. 1995) 62 F.3d 1227, 1231 ; Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 686, 715, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 ("[t]he central issue is and should remain whether the evidence as a whole supports a reasoned inference that the challenged action was the product of discriminatory or retaliatory animus... . Thus, citing a legitimate reason for the challenged action will entitle the employer to summary judgment only when the employee's showing, while sufficient to invoke the presumption [of improper motive], is too weak to sustain a reasoned inference in the employee's favor. That, and not 'pretext,' must be the focus of the judicial inquiry" [emphasis in original])]. However, a minimal showing that is sufficient to make a prima facie case may not be sufficient also to establish pretext. For example, proximity in time between the plaintiff's protected activity and an adverse employment action, although sufficient to raise a prima facie case, does not, without more, suffice also to satisfy the secondary burden borne by the plaintiff to show a triable issue as to pretext [Loggins v. Kaiser Permanente Int'l (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1102, 1112-1113, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 45 ; see also Ritter v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 454, 457 (plaintiff provided insufficient evidence to raise genuine issue of material fact that employer's proffered reasons for its actions were pretextual)].

If the plaintiff's evidence of a discriminatory motive went beyond the McDonnell Douglas presumption, including direct or circumstantial evidence of discriminatory intent, that evidence may also be used to prove pretext, and will almost always suffice to preclude summary judgment for the defendant [Cordova v. State Farm Ins. Cos. (9th Cir. 1997) 124 F.3d 1145, 1150 (Title VII); see Washington v. Garrett (9th Cir. 1993) 10 F.3d 1421, 1433] .

Thus, evidence that the employer's nondiscriminatory explanation of its action is unworthy of credence is one form of circumstantial evidence that is probative of intentional discrimination, and it may be sufficient to support a jury finding of intentional discrimination, depending on the particulars of the case [Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing Prods. (2000) 530 U.S. 133, 139-150, 120 S. Ct. 2097, 147 L. Ed. 2d 105 ; see Chuang v. University of Cal. Davis (9th Cir. 2000) 225 F.3d 1115, 1127] .

However, when the plaintiff presents only a minimal prima facie case and does not supply additional evidence to refute the employer's proffered explanation, summary judgment for the defendant may be appropriate [Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 885, 890 ; King v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 426, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 359 (summary judgment was proper since plaintiff admitted falsifying timecard and offered no substantial evidence that violation of defendant's integrity policy was pretext for disability discrimination)].

Even if the trier of fact disbelieves the employer's proffered reasons, the plaintiff is not necessarily entitled to judgment as a matter of law. The trier of fact is permitted to infer discrimination under those circumstances but is not required to do so, and the plaintiff retains the ultimate burden of proving intentional discrimination [St. Mary's Honor Center v.

Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 507, 511, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407 (Title VII); see Muzquiz v. City of Emeryville (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1106, 1116-1119, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 579] .

A showing that the defendant treated similarly situated employees outside the plaintiff's protected class more favorably would be probative of pretext [Vasquez v. County of L.A. (9th Cir. 2003) 349 F.3d 634, 641 (Title VII)]. However, the plaintiff need not pursue any particular means of demonstrating pretext. For example, although a black plaintiff may prove pretext by showing that he or she was in fact better qualified than a similarly situated white employee [see Ash v. Tyson Foods, Inc. (2006) 546 U.S. 454, 126 S. Ct. 1195, 1197-1198, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1053 ("qualifications evidence may suffice, at least in some circumstances, to show pretext")], he or she may also do so by presenting evidence of the employer's past discriminatory conduct toward the plaintiff [see Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 187-188 (42 U.S.C. § 1981)].

PRACTICE TIP:

"Pretext Plus" Cases. Although a plaintiff should be able to get by summary judgment by establishing a prima facie case along with evidence of "pretext," often this is not the reality. In disparate treatment cases the law requires proof of "intentional" discrimination, although courts have been very reluctant to define exactly what that means. Is proof required that the person discriminating consciously believed he/she was discriminating? Can a person "intentionally" discriminate subconsciously? Put another way, does proof of intentional discrimination require you to prove that the person who discriminated thought he/she was discriminating? It is clear that "intent" can be inferred by circumstantial evidence. However, the courts have never clearly defined exactly what the intent is that we are trying to prove. The reality is that most discrimination is something that is learned--at home, school, or through other forms of cultural conditioning. Many of us are "taught" to discriminate, yet, we are also "taught" that it is politically incorrect to discriminate.

Ironically, defendants may often try to defend discrimination cases by claiming that any discrimination that may have occurred was not "intentional," but rather negligent or accidental. It may be that the law remains "intentionally" ambiguous so that judges and juries have broad discretion to decide these cases. It is not quite as ill defined as the "I know it when I see it" approach to pornography. On the other hand, in a culture where most of us over 40 were "taught" or conditioned to discriminate based on race, many people, including well intentioned judges, have a difficult time confronting their own prejudices and biases. By John H. Scott

Employment decisions may result from a mixture of legitimate and illegitimate considerations ("mixed motives"). For example, an employer might make an adverse employment decision based on a female employee's evaluations that not only criticize her interpersonal skills (a permissible consideration), but also contain comments resulting from sex stereotyping (an impermissible consideration) [see Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 234-235]. Title VII, as amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991 [Pub. L. No. 102-166], provides that a decision based on such mixed motives is an unlawful employment practice [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(m)]. However, an employee's remedies are limited (to declaratory relief, certain types of injunctive relief, and attorney's fees and costs, but not damages, hiring, reinstatement, or promotion) if the employer can demonstrate that it would have taken the same action in the absence of the impermissible motivating factor [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(g)(2)(B); see Metoyer v. Chassman (9th Cir. 2007) 504 F.3d 919, 934 (claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 follows same legal principles as claim under Title VII, so mixed-motive defense does not protect defendant in § 1981 discrimination case from employee's limited remedies delineated under 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(g)(2)(B), but mixed-motive defense is available for retaliation claim brought under § 1981)]. The employer bears the burden of proving that it would have taken the same action in the absence of the impermissible motivating factor, but this burden does not come into play unless the employee has demonstrated (by direct or circumstantial evidence) that the impermissible factor played a motivating part in the employer's action [Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 123 S. Ct. 2148, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84, 93-94 (plaintiff may rely on circumstantial evidence to meet burden of demonstrating impermissible motivating factor)].

[e] FEHC Test

Although, generally, California courts have applied the McDonnell Douglas test in FEHA litigation [see, e.g., University of Southern California v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1028, 1035, 272 Cal. Rptr. 264 ; Mixon v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1317, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884] , the Fair Employment and Housing Commission (FEHC), the agency that enforces FEHA, does not [see DFEH v. Church's Fried Chicken (1987) FEHC Dec. No. 87-18, pp. 11-17].

Under the FEHC test, discrimination is established if a preponderance of all the evidence demonstrates a causal connection between an individual's protected status and an adverse employer action; it need not be shown that the protected status was the sole, or even the dominant, cause of the adverse treatment [DFEH v. Church's Fried Chicken (1987) FEHC Dec. No. 87-18, pp. 10, 12; see Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1425 (age discrimination claim fails under Church's Fried Chicken test when there is no evidence to suggest that age was factor in discharge decisions); Watson v. Department of Rehabilitation (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1271, 1290, 261 Cal. Rptr. 204 (citing Church's Fried Chicken, and stating that applicability of McDonnell Douglas test in FEHA disparate treatment cases is unsettled)].

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that the Church's Fried Chicken test is only applicable in cases before the FEHC, and is not applicable in California courts [Nesbit v. Pepsico (9th Cir. 1993) 994 F.2d 703, 704] .

[3] Class-Wide or "Pattern or Practice" Discrimination Claims

[a] Generally

A "pattern or practice" of employment discrimination occurs when discrimination is an employer's standard operating procedure, the regular rather than the unusual practice [Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 336, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII)] . Intent to discriminate may be inferred from a statistical showing of disparity between protected class members and comparably qualified members of the majority group [Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1249, 1265-1266 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII); see EEOC v. General Telephone Co. of Northwest (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 575 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 950 (1990) (Title VII)].

Pattern or practice claims may be brought by private individuals, or as class actions [see, e.g., Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1480 (en banc), returned to panel, 827 F.2d 439 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 (1989) (Title VII; pattern or practice class action by private individuals); Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1249, 1266, 1267 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII; pattern or practice action by individual plaintiffs and association, later certified as class action); see also Gov. Code § 12961 (FEHA class actions)].

Pattern or practice claims may also be brought by the EEOC, if it has reasonable cause to believe that there is a pattern or practice of discrimination [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-6(a); Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 360, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII)] .

Most courts characterize pattern or practice claims as a type of disparate treatment claim because the ultimate issue is whether intentional discrimination existed [see Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1249, 1266 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII); see also Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335 n.15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII)] . However, pattern or practice claims also have similarities to disparate impact actions [see Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1249, 1266, 1267 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII; both pattern or practice and disparate impact analyses attack employment practices that have systematic adverse effect on members of protected class)]. In fact, plaintiffs in pattern or practice actions typically assert both disparate treatment and disparate impact claims [see, e.g., Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1480 (en banc), returned to panel, 827 F.2d 439 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 (1989)] .

For discussion of procedural requirements for employment discrimination class actions, see § 115.52[4].

[b] Prima Facie Case

A plaintiff's initial burden in "pattern or practice" actions is to demonstrate, by a preponderance of the evidence, a regular procedure or policy of unlawful discrimination [Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 336, 358, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII)]. This may be done by showing a disparity between the position of members of a protected class and the position of comparably qualified majority group members [Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1249, 1267 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII)]. It is not necessary to show that each person in the plaintiff class was a victim of the employer's discriminatory policy [see Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 360, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII)]; rather, the existence of a discriminatory hiring pattern and practice establishes a prima facie case of discrimination against individual class members [see Franks v. Bowman Transportation Co. (1976) 424 U.S. 747, 772, 96 S. Ct. 1251, 47 L. Ed. 2d 444] .

Statistical evidence of disparity is an important source of proof in pattern or practice actions [see Hazelwood School Dist. v. United States (1977) 433 U.S. 299, 307, 97 S. Ct. 2736, 53 L. Ed. 2d 768 (Title VII); Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 339, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII)]. Statistical evidence alone may establish a prima facie case when there are "gross statistical disparities" [Hazelwood School Dist. v. United States (1977) 433 U.S. 299, 307-308, 97 S. Ct. 2736, 53 L. Ed. 2d 768 (Title VII)]. However, statistical evidence is most often bolstered with anecdotal evidence relating specific instances of discrimination [see Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 338, 339, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII); testimony regarding personal experiences tend to bring "cold numbers convincingly to life")].

[c] Rebuttal of Prima Facie Case

If the plaintiff establishes a prima facie case in a "pattern or practice" action, the burden shifts to the employer to rebut the showing [see Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 360, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII)]. To do so, an employer may demonstrate that the plaintiff's proof is either inaccurate or statistically insignificant [see Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 360, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII); Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1249, 1268 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII)]. Thus, an employer may show that an alleged disparity does not exist, or may challenge the integrity of the plaintiff's statistical data and the significance of the results shown [see Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1249, 1268 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII; employer may use alternative statistical analyses)].

The employer's proof not only must raise a genuine issue of material fact concerning the accuracy of the plaintiff's proof, it also must cast sufficient doubt on the proof to cause the trier of fact to conclude that the plaintiff has not proved discrimination by a preponderance of the evidence [Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1249, 1268 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII)]. It is usually not enough merely to point to possible flaws in the plaintiff's statistics, without showing that, if the flaws did not exist, the disparities established by the statistics would be eliminated [see EEOC v. General Telephone Co. of Northwest (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 575, 579-581 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 950 (1990)] .

The employer may also attempt to provide a nondiscriminatory explanation for an apparently discriminatory result [Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 360 n.46, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII); see Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1249, 1266, 1268 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII)]. Although the employer does not have the burden of persuasion on rebuttal, its explanation must cast sufficient doubt on the plaintiff's proof to permit the trier of fact to decline to draw an inference of discrimination [see Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1249, 1269 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII)]. In contrast to the rule in disparate treatment cases generally, a mere articulation of a legitimate nondiscriminatory explanation is not enough to rebut a prima facie showing in a pattern or practice case [see Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1249, 1269 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII)].

[d] Proof of Pretext

In "pattern or practice" actions, a plaintiff's initial proof of discrimination may be sufficient to meet his or her ultimate burden if the employer's rebuttal attempts are inadequate [see Vuyanich v. Republic Nat. Bank of Dallas (N.D. Tex. 1981) 521 F. Supp. 656, 662 , vacated on other grounds, 723 F.2d 1195 (5th Cir. 1984) ; see also Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 253, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (ultimate burden of persuasion remains at all times with plaintiff)]. Thus, if an employer's rebuttal fails, a trial court may conclude that a violation has occurred without any further evidence from the plaintiff [see Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 361, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396] .

However, the plaintiff is free to, and if the employer's rebuttal is sufficiently strong, may have to, introduce evidence to discredit the rebuttal [see Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1249, 1270 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985)] .

[4] Disparate Impact

[a] Scope and Application

The disparate impact theory applies to employment practices and criteria that are facially neutral but, in fact, fall more harshly on one group than another, and cannot be justified by business necessity [Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335 n.15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII)]. The theory may be used to establish liability under most equal employment opportunity laws, including FEHA (for most purposes) [see City and County of San Francisco v. FEHC (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 985-986, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716] and Title VII [see Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 425-426, 430-432, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158] .

The United States Supreme Court has held that the disparate impact theory is available in ADEA cases [Smith v. City of Jackson (2005) 544 U.S. 228, 125 S. Ct. 1536, 161 L. Ed. 2d 410, 416] . However, the scope of disparate impact liability under the ADEA is narrower than under Title VII, because the ADEA permits any "otherwise prohibited" action "where the differentiation is based on reasonable factors other than age" [29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(1)]. For example, the disparate impact attributable to a city's decision to grant larger raises to lower-ranking police officers for the purpose of bringing salaries in line with those of police forces in surrounding cities is based on a reasonable factor other than age. In such a case, therefore, the disparate impact does not support a valid ADEA claim [Smith v. City of Jackson (2005) 544 U.S. 228, 125 S. Ct. 1536, 161 L. Ed. 2d 410, 423] .

The disparate impact theory is inapplicable to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 [see General Building Contractors v. Pennsylvania (1982) 458 U.S. 375, 388-389, 391, 102 S. Ct. 3141, 73 L. Ed. 2d 835 ; Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 247-248, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597] .

A California court held that a disparate impact analysis may not be used to limit the use of salary as a criterion in personnel decisions, as long as it is not a pretext for a decision based on age itself [Marks v. Loral Corp. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 30, 66 (ADEA and FEHA; jury instructed that employer permitted to select lower-paid workers for retention during layoffs)]. However, FEHA was subsequently amended to specifically provide that the use of salary as a criterion when terminating employees may constitute age discrimination if the use of that criterion adversely impacts older workers [Gov. Code § 12941 (expressly rejecting holding of Marks)].

Under the disparate impact theory, a challenged practice must adversely affect a protected group [see Peters v. Lieuallen (9th Cir. 1984) 746 F.2d 1390, 1392 (Title VII); Yartzoff v. State of Oregon, Emp. Div. (9th Cir. 1984) 745

F.2d 557, 559 (ADEA)]. However, a member of the affected group may bring an individual disparate impact claim [see, e.g., Lowe v. City of Monrovia (9th Cir. 1986) 784 F.2d 1407 (Title VII; black applicant for employment alleged that she was not hired because city's employment policy had disparate impact on blacks as a class)]. The theory generally does not apply to "ad hoc" or isolated practices affecting individuals when a protected class is not affected [Peters v. Lieuallen (9th Cir. 1984) 746 F.2d 1390, 1392 (Title VII; theory may be used only in cases involving class-wide application of employment criteria)].

The disparate impact theory applies to "objective" employment practices [see American Fed'n of State, County, and Municipal Employees v. State of Washington (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1406 (Title VII); Zahorik v. Cornell University (2d Cir. 1984) 729 F.2d 85, 95 (Title VII)]. Examples of practices to which the disparate impact analysis has been applied include the following:

- Education and intelligence tests [see Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158] ;

- Grooming rules [see EEOC v. Trailways (D. Colo. 1981) 530 F. Supp. 54, 59] ;

- Minimum height requirements [see Boyd v. Ozark Air Lines (E.D. Mo. 1976) 419 F. Supp. 1061, 1064-1065 , aff'd, 568 F.2d 50 (8th Cir. 1977)] ;

- Prior military service, training, and work experience [see Bailey v. Southeastern Area Joint Apprenticeship Committee (N.D. W. Va. 1983) 561 F. Supp. 895, 911-912] ; and

- Shareholder preference plans [see Bonilla v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 697 F.2d 1297, 1303-1304 , cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1251 (1984)] .

Disparate impact analysis also applies to "subjective" employment practices [Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 991, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (Title VII)], such as separate hiring channels for different types of employees, "word-of-mouth" recruitment, nepotism, and rehire policies [see Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1479 (en banc), returned to panel, 827 F.2d 439 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 (1989)] .

For further discussion of "objective" and "subjective" employment criteria, see § 115.30[1][b].

[b] Sequence and Proof

The disparate impact theory does not require proof of discriminatory intent [see Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335 n.15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII); Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 432, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 (Title VII); Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1427 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII); City and County of San Francisco v. FEHC (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 985, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 (FEHA)]. The proof required and the procedural process is as follows:

- A plaintiff must establish a prima facie case by showing that a specific or particular facially neutral employment practice has a significant adverse impact on members of a protected class [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A)(i) (Title VII); State of Connecticut v. Teal (1982) 457 U.S. 440, 446, 102 S. Ct. 2525, 73 L. Ed. 2d 130 (Title VII) ; Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 425, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (Title VII)].

- The employer then has the burden either (a) to show that there is no disparate impact (by discrediting the plaintiff's statistical showing of adverse impact or by proffering statistics of its own) [see 42 U.S.C. §

2000-2(k)(1)(B)(ii) (Title VII; if employer demonstrates that practice did not cause disparate impact, it need not demonstrate that practice is justified by business necessity); Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1424 (ADEA)], or (b) to prove that the challenged employment practice was job-related, and therefore consistent with business necessity [City and County of San Francisco v. FEHC (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 989, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 (FEHA); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(b); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(e) ("job relatedness" defined); 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A)(i) (Title VII)].

- The burden then shifts back to the plaintiff to show that alternative practices with less adverse impact would also serve the employer's legitimate interest [Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 425, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (Title VII); see also 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A)(ii) (Title VII)].

[c] Prima Facie Showing of "Significant" Adverse Impact

In a disparate impact case, a plaintiff must make a prima facie showing that an employment practice or criterion has a "significant adverse impact" on a protected classification [see State of Connecticut v. Teal (1982) 457 U.S. 440, 446, 102 S. Ct. 2525, 73 L. Ed. 2d 130 (Title VII); Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 425, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (Title VII)].

The meaning of "significant" varies depending on the facts of a case, and among particular courts, but the showing need not rise to the level of "gross disparity" [see Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1249, 1278 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII); see also City and County of San Francisco v. FEHC (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 987, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 (FEHA; statistics showing significant disparity alone may constitute prima facie proof of discrimination under disparate impact theory)].

Title VII, as amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991 [Pub. L. No. 102-166], provides that a plaintiff must demonstrate that each particular challenged employment practice causes a disparate impact. Nevertheless, if the plaintiff can demonstrate that the elements of an employer's decision-making process are not capable of separation for analysis, the process may be analyzed as one employment practice [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(B)(i)].

A plaintiff may use reliable statistical data to show adverse impact [see Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 647-650, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 (Title VII); Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1427 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII)].

Statistical analyses used to show significant adverse impact are generally based on a comparison of labor pools. For example, when analyzing purely objective employment practices or criteria such as tests, the percentage of the protected class members who "pass" is usually compared with the success rate for majority group members ("pass-fail" rate data) [see A. Larson & L. Larson, Employment Discrimination, Ch. 22 (Matthew Bender)].

If a practice or criterion is both objective and subjective, the relevant comparison is between the composition of "at-issue" jobs (that is, those that are alleged to involve discrimination) and that of the qualified population in the relevant labor market [see Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 650-651, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 (Title VII)]. Thus, the mere fact that each employee affected by an employer's practice or policy is also a member of a protected group does not establish a disparate impact. Rather, an employee claiming that the practice or policy has a disparate impact must present evidence of the composition of the employer's entire workforce, to allow a comparison of the adverse impact on the protected group as a whole with the adverse impact on employees not in the protected group [Carter v. CB Richard Ellis, Inc. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1313, 1321-1326, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 519] .

There are several statistical tools that are used to make the foregoing comparisons. For example, the EEOC and the FEHC use an "80 percent rule," in which a selection rate for protected class members that is less than 80 percent of the rate for the group with the highest selection rate is considered to be a significant adverse impact [see 29 C.F.R. § 1607.4D (Title VII); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4 (FEHA; incorporating EEOC's guidelines)].

Other statistical methods include the "standard deviation" standard, which compares the actual rate of selection in a work force with an expected rate of selection [see Hazelwood School Dist. v. United States (1977) 433 U.S. 299, 308 n.14, 97 S. Ct. 2736, 53 L. Ed. 2d 768 (Title VII)], and the "regression analysis," which uses an algebraic formula to isolate the influence of a particular independent variable (for example, sex) on a dependent variable (for example, salary) [see EEOC v. General Telephone Co. of Northwest (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 575, 577 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 950 (1990) (Title VII)]. Some courts rely on simple percentage comparisons without applying any set formula [see Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1272-1273 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1021 (1982) (Title VII); Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 661-662 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 919 (1981) (Title VII)].

For more detailed discussion of various statistical methods used to measure disparity, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender).

[d] Establishing Business Necessity

An employer may rebut a prima facie case of disparate impact by proving that the challenged practice is justified by business necessity [see City and County of San Francisco v. FEHC (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 989, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 ; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(b),(c)].

Under the Title VII "business necessity" standard, an employment practice or criterion with a discriminatory effect is lawful if it has a manifest relationship to the employment in question [Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431-432, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158] . The focus of the business necessity test is "job-relatedness;" an employment practice or criterion must predict, or significantly correlate with, important methods of work behavior that comprise, or are relevant to, the job [Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1430 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII); Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1276, 1278-1280 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1021 (1982) (Title VII); see also City and County of San Francisco v. FEHC (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 989-990, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 (FEHA); 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7286.7(b),(c), 7287.4(e)].

Thus, the employer must show that a practice or criterion such as a preemployment test actually measures the skills, knowledge, or ability required for successful performance of a particular job [see Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1427-1428 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII)]. The greater the adverse impact of a practice or criterion, the higher the correlation required [Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1432 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII); Guardians Ass'n of New York City v. Civil Serv. (2d Cir. 1980) 630 F.2d 79, 105-106 , cert. denied, 452 U.S. 940 (1981) (Title VII)].

Correlation is established by a process called "validation" [Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 662 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 919 (1981) (Title VII)]. Statistical analysis is critical to validation, and several professionally acceptable techniques, including standards developed by the EEOC and the American Psychological Association (APA) Division of Organizational and Industrial Psychology (Division 14), may be used [see Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1430-1432 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII; APA standard); 29 C.F.R. § 1607.14 (EEOC validation guideline)]. For a more detailed discussion of the various validation techniques, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender).

For discussion of the application of business necessity/job-relatedness as a defense under FEHA, see § 115.54[5]. For a form of affirmative defense alleging that a challenged employment practice is justified by business necessity, for use in a civil action under FEHA, see § 115.102. For a form of affirmative defense alleging that a challenged employment requirement is job-related, for use in a civil action under FEHA, see § 115.103.

[e] Establishing "Pretext" or Alternative with Less Adverse Impact

If an employer establishes business necessity, a plaintiff may still prevail by showing that an employment practice or criterion was used as a pretext for discrimination [State of Connecticut v. Teal (1982) 457 U.S. 440, 447, 102 S. Ct. 2525, 73 L. Ed. 2d 130 (Title VII); Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 425, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (Title VII)].

Alternatively, if the employer shows that its practice or criterion was based on legitimate business reasons, the plaintiff may prevail by establishing that the employer has refused to adopt alternative employment practices that would have comparable business utility and less adverse impact [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A)(ii),(C) (Title VII); Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1428 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII); see also Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 425, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (Title VII)]. However, higher costs may justify an employer's decision not to use such alternative procedures [see Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1432 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII)].

The plaintiff has the burden of persuasion that there is a less discriminatory alternative [see Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1285 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1021 (1982) (Title VII)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate ImpactCoverage & DefinitionsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate ImpactProofBurden ShiftingLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate TreatmentCoverage & DefinitionsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate TreatmentProofBurden ShiftingLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate TreatmentProofBurdens of Proof

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Scope of Coverage, Protected Classifications, and Theories of Liability

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 115.24-115.29

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 115.24[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Application of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws to Specific Employment Practices

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.30

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.30 Hiring

[1] Selection Criteria

[a] Limitations on Use of Selection Criteria

FEHA, Title VII, the ADA, and the ADEA provide that it is unlawful to fail or refuse to hire any individual based on membership in a protected classification [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2(a)(1) (Title VII), 12112(a) (ADA); 29 U.S.C. § 623(a)(1) (ADEA); Gov. Code § 12940(a) (FEHA)]. Hiring generally involves the use of various selection procedures, such as tests, training programs, job requirements, and interviews [see 29 C.F.R. § 1607.16(Q)], that consider or measure various employment criteria [see 29 C.F.R. § 1607.2(B)]. Employers have the right to establish such criteria [see Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 430, 434, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158] , but employers may not base hiring decisions on unlawful criteria [see Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 259, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207] . Thus, EEOC regulations, to which the FEHC expressly subscribes [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(a)], prohibit any selection procedure that has an adverse impact on members of any race, sex, or ethnic group, unless (1) the procedure was validated under EEOC regulations [see 29 C.F.R. § 1607.3(A)]; (2) the employer chooses a lawful, job-related alternative [see 29 C.F.R. §§ 1607.3(A), 1607.6(A)]; or (3) validity studies cannot or need not be performed, and the employer uses a procedure that is as job-related as possible and that minimizes adverse impact [see 29 C.F.R. §§ 1607.3(A), 1607.6(B)].

FEHC regulations also generally prohibit any policy or practice that has an adverse impact on employment opportunities, unless the policy is job-related [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(a)]. Specifically, FEHC regulations (1) prohibit discrimination in providing, accepting, and considering employment applications [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.3(c)(1); see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.5 (prohibiting such discrimination with respect to individual over 40 years old)], and (2) require personal interviews to be free of discrimination and subject the entire interview process to review for adverse impact [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.3(d)].

[b] Objective Versus Subjective Criteria

Employment criteria may be either "objective," such as test scores or height and weight requirements [see American Fed'n of State, County, and Municipal Employees v. State of Washington (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1405-1406 (Title VII); Zahorik v. Cornell University (2d Cir. 1984) 729 F.2d 85, 95 (Title VII)], or "subjective" [see Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1479 (en banc), returned to panel, 827 F.2d 439 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII)], such as "attitude" or "supervisory ability."

Objective criteria are usually facially neutral, but they may be unlawful if they have a disparate impact on a protected group [see, e.g., Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431-433, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 (Title VII; minimum education requirement)].

Examples of objective criteria that have been considered by the courts include the following:

- Education requirements [see Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 429-434, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 (Title VII; disparate impact analysis)].

- English fluency requirements [see Garcia v. Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Med. Center (7th Cir. 1981) 660 F.2d 1217, 1222-1226 (Title VII; disparate impact analysis); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1606.6(b)(1) (discrimination based on foreign accent or inability to communicate well in English as national origin discrimination)].

- Experience requirements [see Chrisner v. Complete Auto Trans. (6th Cir. 1981) 645 F.2d 1251, 1263 (Title VII; disparate impact analysis); Spurlock v. United Airlines (10th Cir. 1972) 475 F.2d 216, 219 (Title VII; same); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1607.14(C)(6) (employment experience "job-relatedness" defined); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.0(d) (FEHC regulation; consideration of prior work experience)].

- Height and weight restrictions [see Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 328-334, 97 S. Ct. 2720, 53 L. Ed. 2d 786 (Title VII; disparate impact analysis); Blake v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1979) 595 F.2d 1367, 1373-1386 , cert. denied, 446 U.S. 928 (1980) (Title VII; same); Davis v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1977) 566 F.2d 1334, 1340-1342 , vacated and remanded on other grounds, 440 U.S. 625 (1979) (Title VII; same); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1606.6(a)(2) (users of height and weight requirements expected to evaluate procedures for adverse impact); 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7287.4(d)(2),(3) (FEHC regulation; height and weight restrictions prohibited unless pursuant to permissible defense), 7291.0(b)(1) (FEHC regulation; height and weight standards that discriminate against one sex or the other prohibited)].

Subjective criteria may involve disparate treatment [see Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 439, 445-446 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII)], as well as disparate impact [see Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (Title VII) ; see also Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1482 (en banc), returned to panel, 827 F.2d 439 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII)].

Examples of "subjective criteria" that have been considered by the courts include the following:

- Personality attributes [see Nanty v. Barrows Co. (9th Cir. 1981) 660 F.2d 1327, 1334] .

- Stable employment history, interview success, professional reputation, and the ability to "get along with people" [see Frausto v. Legal Aid Society (9th Cir. 1977) 563 F.2d 1324, 1328] .

- Employer's opinion as to which applicants are "the best for the job" [see Atonio v. Wards Cove

Packing Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1479 (en banc), returned to panel, 827 F.2d 439 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII)].

For a more detailed discussion of objective and subjective employment criteria, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender).

[2] Recruiting Methods

[a] Advertising

FEHA, Title VII, and the ADEA proscribe employment advertisements that indicate any preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination based on a protected classification, except when the classification is a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(b) (Title VII); 29 U.S.C. § 623(e) (ADEA); Gov. Code § 12940(d) (FEHA); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1630.4(a) (under ADA, unlawful to discriminate in advertising)]. EEOC guidelines and FEHC regulations also prohibit discriminatory advertisements [see 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.2(a)(1) (advertisement preferences based on sex and BFOQ defense), 1604.5 (advertisement preference based on sex violates Title VII), 1625.4(a) (violation of ADEA for help wanted notices or advertisements to contain age-related labels); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.9(a)(2) (separation of job listings into sex-based classifications violates FEHA)].

The types of advertisements prohibited are those that, by their expression of preference, effectively inhibit members of a protected classification from seeking employment. Although a person need not actually apply for an advertised job to be aggrieved, a mere casual reader is not aggrieved. A person must show that (1) he or she has a real, present interest in the type of job advertised, and (2) he or she was effectively deterred from applying for the job [see Hailes v. United Air Lines (5th Cir. 1972) 464 F.2d 1006, 1008 (Title VII)].

[b] Channeling, Nepotism, and Word of Mouth

"Channeling" (the use of separate hiring channels for different job categories), nepotism (the practice of giving preference to relatives), and "word-of-mouth" recruiting (incumbent employees inform their friends and relatives about job vacancies) may be unlawful if they have an adverse impact on members of protected classifications [see Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 439, 445-447 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII); Domingo v. New England Fish Co. (9th Cir. 1984) 727 F.2d 1429, 1435 , modified, 742 F.2d 520 (Title VII)].

For example, channeling had a discriminatory impact in a case in which an Alaskan employer recruited unskilled employees from a Filipino-dominated union and Alaskan native villages, but recruited employees for administrative and skilled jobs out-of-state by word of mouth from predominantly white superintendents, foremen, and captains [see Domingo v. New England Fish Co. (9th Cir. 1984) 727 F.2d 1429, 1436 , modified, 742 F.2d 520 (Title VII)].

Courts have observed that nepotism necessarily has an adverse impact on protected classification members when those hiring are white, and word-of-mouth recruiting is discriminatory because of its tendency to perpetuate the all-white composition of the work force [see Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 439, 445 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII); see also Bonilla v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 697 F.2d 1297, 1303 , cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1251 (1984) (Title VII; nepotistic practices that freeze discriminatory status quo are unlawful); United States v. Georgia Power Co. (5th Cir. 1973) 474 F.2d 906, 925 (Title VII; since most incumbent employees were white, word of mouth hiring tended to isolate blacks from "web of information" concerning employment opportunities)].

[3] Applications and Interviews

FEHA prohibits any inquiry that is not job-related, either orally or through use of an application form, expressing, directly or indirectly, any limitation, specification, or discrimination relating to membership in a protected classification, or any intent to make any such limitation, specification, or discrimination [see Gov. Code § 12940(d); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.3(a)(2); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.3(c) (application forms may not discriminate), (d) (interviews may not discriminate)]. However, this prohibition does not prevent an employer or employment agency from inquiring into the age of an applicant, or from specifying age limitations, if the law compels or provides for that action [Gov. Code § 12940(d)].

Inquiries relating to facially neutral criteria such as education, experience, height, weight, veteran status and military discharge, and financial status are subject to analysis under the "disparate impact" theory of liability [see discussion at*§ 115.23[4]*].

EEOC and FEHC regulations expressly prohibit or limit the use of many formerly common preemployment inquiries. Among the types of inquiries prohibited or limited are the following:

- Age-related inquiries (such as "Date of Birth" or "Age") [see 29 C.F.R. § 1625.5 (EEOC will closely scrutinize any such application request); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.5(a) (FEHC regulation limiting inquiries that directly or indirectly identify persons on basis of age)].

- Marital status inquiries [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.4(a) (FEHC regulation limiting marital status inquiries on applications)].

- Physical handicap or medical condition inquiries (for example, "Do you have any particular disabilities?") [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(b)(2) (FEHC regulation prohibiting physical condition inquiries), (3) (FEHC regulation limiting medical history inquiries); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1630.13(a) (limitation on medical examination or inquiries regarding disability under ADA)].

- Pregnancy and family responsibility inquiries [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.9(b)(3) (FEHC regulation limiting childbearing, pregnancy, birth control, or familial responsibilities inquiries)].

- Religious inquiries [see 29 C.F.R. § 1605.3(b)(2) (EEOC regulation limiting religious inquiries); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.4 (FEHC regulation providing that availability inquiries may not be used to determine applicant's religion)].

- Sex-based inquiries (such as "Male..., Female..."; "Mr., Mrs., Miss") [see 29 C.F.R. § 1604.7 (EEOC regulation permitting sex-based inquiries if in good faith and for nondiscriminatory purpose; prohibiting such inquiries that express limitation, specification, or discrimination); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.9(b)(2) (FEHC regulation limiting sex-based inquiries)].

FEHA provides generally that it is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to make any medical or psychological inquiry of an applicant, to make any inquiry whether an applicant has a mental disability or physical disability or medical condition, or to make any inquiry regarding the nature or severity of a physical disability, mental disability, or medical condition [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(1); see Gov. Code § 12940(f)(1) (similar limitation on inquiries employer can make regarding existing employees)]. However, an employer may inquire into the ability of an applicant to perform job-related functions and may respond to an applicant's request for reasonable accommodation [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(2); see Gov. Code § 12940(n)]. Moreover, an employer may make a medical or psychological inquiry of a job applicant after an employment offer has been made but prior to the commencement of employment duties, provided that (1) the examination or inquiry is job-related and consistent with business necessity, and (2) all entering employees in the same job classification are subject to the same examination or inquiry [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(3); see Gov. Code § 12940(f)(2) (employer may require existing employees to undergo job-related inquiries and examinations that are consistent with business necessity)].

For a detailed discussion of these and other preemployment inquiries, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender).

[4] Preemployment Testing

[a] Permissible Testing

Under Title VII, an employer may give, and act on the results of, any professionally developed ability test, unless such a test, its administration, or action on the results, is designed, intended, or used to discriminate because of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h); see also 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(6) (ADA; tests may not screen out disabled individuals, unless job-relatedness and business necessity criteria are satisfied)].

In addition, an employer may not, based on a protected classification, adjust the scores of, use different cutoff scores for, or otherwise alter the results of employment-related tests [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2 (l)].

Furthermore, an employer may not use employment tests that are discriminatory in effect unless the employer shows that a test requirement has a manifest relationship to the employment in question [Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 425, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 ; see Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431-432, 436, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158] .

An employer cannot be compelled by a job applicant to use a preemployment test that would benefit a protected group of which the applicant is a member, if there is substantial evidence that the test has an adverse impact on another protected group [Harris v. Civil Service Comm'n (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1356, 1368, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366] .

Under Title VII, before an employer can discard test results to avoid a disparate impact on minority candidates--an act that would itself constitute intentional race-based discrimination against those who did well on the test--the employer must have a strong basis in evidence to believe it will be subject to disparate-impact liability if it fails to take the race-conscious, discriminatory action of discarding the test results [Ricci v. DeStefano (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 2658, 174 L. Ed. 2d 490, 507-511 (adopting "strong-basis-in-evidence" standard to resolve conflict between disparate-treatment and disparate-impact provisions of Title VII); see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1) (prohibition of disparate treatment); 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k) (prohibition of disparate impact)].

[b] EEOC Guidelines

The FEHC has adopted EEOC guidelines on employee selection procedures [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(a)] that consider preemployment tests to be discriminatory if they have an adverse impact on protected individuals, unless the procedures are validated in accordance with EEOC guidelines, or unless EEOC guidelines on nonvalidated selection procedures are followed [see 29 C.F.R. §§ 1607.2(B), 1607.3(A), 1607.5, 1607.6, 1607.14 (EEOC guidelines); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(a) (FEHC regulation; any test or selection procedure that has an adverse impact on individuals protected by FEHA is unlawful unless policy or practice is job-related), (e) ("job-relatedness" defined); see also 29 C.F.R. §§ 1605.3(a) (EEOC regulation on religious discrimination; scheduling tests or other selection procedures), 1606.6 (EEOC regulation on national origin discrimination; selection procedures)].

[c] Validation of Challenged Tests

An employer must show that a challenged test is job-related, usually by a process called "validation." Validation requires the employer to (1) specify the particular trait or characteristic that the test is being used to identify; (2) determine that the particular trait or characteristic is an important element of work behavior; and (3) demonstrate, by "professionally acceptable methods," that the test is "predictive of or significantly correlated" with the element of work behavior identified [Association of Mexican-Am. Educators v. California (9th Cir. 2000) 231 F.3d 572, 584-590 (en banc) (California Basic Education Skills Test [CBEST] is properly validated for purposes of Title VII); Craig v.

County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 662 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 919 (1981) (Title VII)]. There are several professionally acceptable validation techniques [Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 664 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 919 (1981)] . The American Psychological Association (APA) and the EEOC accept the following basic validation methods: (1) "empirical" or "criterion" validity, (2) "construct" validity, and (3) "content" validity [see Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 247 n.13, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 (42 U.S.C. § 1981); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1607.5, 1607.14 (EEOC guidelines)]. These concepts are esoteric and complex, and generally require the practitioner to consult an industrial psychologist or other validation expert. For a detailed discussion of validation techniques, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender), and A. Larson & L. Larson, Employment Discrimination, Ch. 15 (Matthew Bender).

[5] Preemployment Medical Examinations

[a] Tests for Functional Limitations

FEHA provides generally that it is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to require any medical or psychological examination of an applicant, to make any medical or psychological inquiry of an applicant, to make any inquiry whether an applicant has a mental disability or physical disability or medical condition, or to make any inquiry regarding the nature or severity of a physical disability, mental disability, or medical condition [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(1); see Gov. Code § 12940(f)(1) (similar limitation on inquiries employer can make regarding existing employees)]. However, an employer may require a medical or psychological examination or make a medical or psychological inquiry of a job applicant after an employment offer has been made but prior to the commencement of employment duties, provided that (1) the examination or inquiry is job-related and consistent with business necessity, and (2) all entering employees in the same job classification are subject to the same examination or inquiry [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(3); see Gov. Code § 12940(f)(2) (employer may require existing employees to undergo job-related inquiries and examinations that are consistent with business necessity)]. In any event, FEHA specifically prohibits the direct or indirect testing of an employee or job applicant for the presence of any genetic characteristic [Gov. Code § 12940(o)].

FEHC regulations relating to disability discrimination permit an employer to condition an offer of employment on the results of a preemployment medical examination to determine fitness for the job in question, if the following conditions are satisfied [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(d); see also 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(3); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.14(b) (similar requirements under ADA)]:

- All entering employees in similar positions are subjected to such an examination;

- If the results in the examination would result in disqualification, an applicant or employee may submit independent medical opinions for consideration before final determination on disqualification is made; and

- The results are maintained on separate forms and afforded confidentiality, except that (a) supervisors and managers may be informed of restrictions on the work or duties of disabled individuals and necessary accommodations, and (b) first aid and safety personnel may be informed, when appropriate, that the condition may require emergency treatment.

Both FEHA and the ADA prohibit medical examinations and inquiries until after the employer has made an offer of employment [see Gov. Code § 12940(e)(3); 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(3)]. In effect, these provisions require an employer to complete its nonmedical investigation, including background checks, and make a conditional job offer before subjecting the job applicant to medical examinations and questioning. This statutorily mandated sequence serves in part to enable a job applicant to shield private medical information prior to being hired, unless unable to meet medical requirements; if the applicant is not hired, it also serves to make the true reason for the employer's decision transparent [Leonel v. American Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 702, 708-711] .

Preemployment medical examinations may also raise issues regarding the right to privacy under the California Constitution [see Cal. Const., art. I, § 1]. A job applicant claiming an invasion of privacy must show (1) a legally protected privacy interest, (2) a reasonable expectation of privacy under the circumstances, and (3) conduct by the employer that amounts to a serious invasion of that interest. If these threshold elements are established, the court must then conduct a balancing test, weighing the employer's justification for the conduct in question against the intrusion on the applicant's privacy resulting from the conduct [Leonel v. American Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 702, 712, 714] . For example, as a matter of law, the drawing and testing of blood implicate a legally protected privacy interest. A job applicant who consents to preemployment blood testing has a reasonable expectation that the employer will not retrieve private medical information by performing blood tests outside the ordinary or accepted medical practice regarding general or preemployment medical examinations; an infringement of that reasonable expectation ordinarily would be a serious invasion of the applicant's privacy interest. Whether the testing violates the applicant's right to privacy usually depends on the reasonableness of the applicant's expectations, which requires a court to consider such matters as the customs, practices, and physical setting surrounding the blood tests, with particular emphasis on any notice provided or consent obtained [Leonel v. American Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 702, 712-713] . For detailed discussion of privacy issues, see Ch. 429, Privacy , and K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 50 (Matthew Bender).

[b] Drug Tests

FEHA does not address drug testing, although one California case construing FEHC regulations suggests that drug tests must be applied uniformly [see Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1053, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 (construing 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0)].

The ADA is neutral on blanket drug testing of job applicants, stating that it does not encourage, prohibit, or authorize such tests or making employment decisions based on the results of such tests [see 42 U.S.C. § 12114(d)(2); see also 42 U.S.C. § 12210(b)]. The ADA does expressly allow drug testing of current employees who are former drug abusers [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 12114(b), 12210(b)].

Apart from equal employment opportunity considerations, preemployment drug testing may raise issues regarding the constitutional right to privacy. For discussion of such privacy issues, see Ch. 429, Privacy , and K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 50 (Matthew Bender).

PRACTICE TIP:

Drug Testing. Drug tests involve the Constitutional right to privacy. The Fourth Amendment protection from unreasonable searches and seizures also applies. In addition, there is a line of cases that stand for the proposition that in some jobs/occupations it may be appropriate to test everyone, or randomly conduct drug tests. For example, this may apply to pilots, train engineers, etc. Outside of those areas, the employer must articulate a "reasonable suspicion" before subjecting an employee to a drug test [see National Treasury Employees Union v. Von Raab (1989) 489 U.S. 656, 109 S. Ct. 1384, 103 L. Ed. 2d 685 ; Jackson v. Gates (9th Cir. 1988) 975 F.2d 648, 653 ; Kirkpatrick v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1986) 803 F.2d 485, 490] .

This is an area that will become increasingly active in the future. Drugs seem to be "here to stay" in our culture. In addition, over the last 20 years we are seeing the dwindling away of individual rights in general, and particularly rights of privacy and related Fourth Amendment rights. The preservation of "freedom" and our need for "security" is being used to erode individual rights. This inevitably will impact in the work place as it relates to security issues including drug tests. By John H. Scott

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationEmployment PracticesDischargesLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationEmployment PracticesFailures to HireLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationRacial DiscriminationEmployment PracticesDemotions & PromotionsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationRacial DiscriminationEmployment PracticesFailures to HireLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationRacial DiscriminationEmployment PracticesTesting

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Application of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws to Specific Employment Practices

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.31

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.31 Compensation

[1] Theories of Liability

[a] "Substantial Identity" Standard

Compensation discrimination cases usually involve sex discrimination; the federal Equal Pay Act of 1963 (EPA) [29 U.S.C. § 206(d)] and the California Equal Pay Act [Lab. Code § 1197.5] are the primary sources of protection in such cases. The federal and California Equal Pay Acts are discussed in Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes . For a comprehensive discussion of the scope and application of those statutes, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Chs. 40 and 41 (Matthew Bender).

FEHA and Title VII also prohibit compensation discrimination based on a protected classification, including sex [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940(a) (FEHA); International Union of Electrical, etc. v. Westinghouse Electric Corp. (3d Cir. 1980) 631 F.2d 1094, 1097 , cert. denied, 452 U.S. 967 (1981) (Title VII)]. The ADEA prohibits discrimination in compensation based on age [see 29 U.S.C. § 623(a)(1) (ADEA)].

Like EPA cases, Title VII compensation discrimination cases often involve claims that a plaintiff was denied equal pay for equal work. In such cases, the EPA "substantial identity" standard is used to determine whether the work is "equal" [see Di Salvo v. Chamber of Commerce (8th Cir. 1978) 568 F.2d 593, 596 ; Orr v. Frank R. MacNeill & Son, Inc. (5th Cir. 1975) 511 F.2d 166, 170-171 , cert. denied, 423 U.S. 865 ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1620.27(a) (EEOC guideline; in situations in which jurisdictional prerequisites of both EPA and Title VII are satisfied, any violation of EPA is also violation of Title VII)].

Under the substantial identity standard, jobs need not be identical, only substantially equal [see 29 C.F.R. § 1620.13(a); see also Shultz v. Wheaton Glass Co. (3d Cir. 1970) 421 F.2d 259, 265 , cert. denied, 398 U.S. 905 (EPA; Title VII)]. Actual job performance and content, not job titles, classifications, or descriptions, are determinative. It is the overall job, not its individual segments, that must form the basis of comparison. Because job duties vary so widely, such suits are determined on a case-by-case basis [Gunther v. County of Washington (9th Cir. 1979) 623 F.2d 1303, 1309 , aff'd, 452 U.S. 161, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751 (1981) (EPA)]. For a detailed discussion of the substantial identity standard under the EPA, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender).

Title VII allows compensation differentials if they are authorized by the EPA [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h)]. Thus, a Title VII compensation discrimination claim is subject to EPA affirmative defenses (for example, seniority systems, merit systems, systems that measure earnings by quantity or quality of production, differentials based on any factor other than sex) [see County of Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 168, 171, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751 ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1604.8(b) (EPA defenses available in Title VII wage discrimination proceedings)]. For a detailed discussion relating to EPA affirmative defenses, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender).

[b] Comparable Worth

Title VII sex-based compensation discrimination claims are not restricted to those that can also be brought under the EPA (that is, equal pay for equal work claims) [see County of Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 168, 178-180, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751] . Therefore, a "comparable worth" theory has developed, postulating that such discrimination exists if employees in job classifications occupied primarily by women are paid less than employees in job classifications filled primarily by men, and the jobs are of "equal value" to the employer, although otherwise dissimilar [see American Fed'n of State, County, and Municipal Employees v. State of Washington (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1404 (Title VII)]. Although subject to much debate, most courts have rejected the "comparable worth" theory under Title VII [see American Federation of State, etc. v. Washington (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1405-1408].

[2] Proof

Courts have held that the standard Title VII rules do not govern the allocation of evidentiary burdens in compensation discrimination cases [see Kouba v. Allstate Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 691 F.2d 873, 875 ; but see County of Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 168, 170-171, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751 (reserving judgment on issue)]. Thus, for example, although a Title VII plaintiff alleging sex discrimination generally bears the burden of persuasion at all times as to all issues [see Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 253, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207] , the employer bears the burden under both Title VII and the EPA to show that a compensation differential resulted from a "factor other than sex" [Kouba v. Allstate Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 691 F.2d 873, 875] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationEmployment PracticesCompensationLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationProofBurdens of ProofGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationProofBurdens of ProofEmployee Burdens

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Application of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws to Specific Employment Practices

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.32

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.32 Other Terms, Conditions, and Privileges of Employment

[1] "Terms, Conditions, and Privileges of Employment" Defined

Title VII, the ADA, the ADEA, and FEHA prohibit unlawful discrimination with respect to the "terms, conditions, or privileges of employment" [29 U.S.C. § 623(a)(1) (ADEA); 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2(a)(1) (Title VII), 12112(a) (ADA); Gov. Code § 12940(a) (FEHA)].

FEHC regulations identify fringe benefits, harassment, physical appearance, grooming, dress standards, reasonable discipline, and seniority as matters involving terms, conditions, and privileges of employment [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6].

Federal courts construing Title VII consider terms, conditions, and privileges of employment to include all of the following:

- Preemployment physical examinations [see Norman-Bloodsaw v. Lawrence Berkeley Lab. (9th Cir. 1998) 135 F.3d 1260, 1271-1273 (blacks and females singled out for certain nonconsensual testing done as part of physical examinations)];

- Opportunities for work and promotion, and layoff policies [see United Transp. Union v. Norfolk & W. R.R. Co. (4th Cir. 1975) 532 F.2d 336, 340 , cert. denied, 425 U.S. 934 (1976)] ;

- English-only rules [see Garcia v. Spun Steak Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 1480, 1485] ; and

- Psychological benefits, such as working environment [see Rogers v. EEOC (5th Cir. 1971) 454 F.2d 234, 238 , cert. denied, 406 U.S. 957 (1972) (Title VII)].

Under the ADA, an employer is prohibited from discriminating on the basis of a disability against a qualified individual in regard to such factors as recruitment, hiring, promotion, layoff, termination, rates of pay, job assignment, seniority lists, leaves of absence, sick leave, fringe benefits, selection and financial support for training, and social and recreational activities [29 C.F.R. § 1630.4].

[2] Employer Rules and Requirements

[a] Generally

Employer rules or requirements relating to terms, conditions, and privileges of employment are subject to either "disparate treatment" or "disparate impact" analysis. For example, rules relating to the following have been subject to disparate treatment and disparate impact analysis, as is noted:

- Drug use [see Davis v. City of Dallas (5th Cir. 1985) 777 F.2d 205, 223-225 , cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1116 (1986) (Title VII; disparate impact)];

- Grooming or physical appearance [see Gerdom v. Continental Airlines (9th Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 602, 608 , cert. dismissed, 460 U.S. 1074 (1983) (Title VII; disparate treatment); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(c) (FEHC regulation; grooming rule unlawful when it discriminates on basis enumerated in FEHA and significantly burdens person in his or her employment); but see Gov. Code § 12949 (FEHA does not prevent employer from requiring employee to adhere to reasonable workplace appearance, grooming, and dress standards not precluded by other provisions of state or federal law, so long as employer allows employee to appear or dress consistently with employee's gender identity)];

- Employee bankruptcy [see Bell v. Citizens Fidelity Bank & Trust Co. (6th Cir. 1980) 636 F.2d 1119, 1121 (42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1982; disparate impact)];

- Wage garnishment [see Johnson v. Pike Corp. of America (C.D. Cal. 1971) 332 F. Supp. 490, 494 (Title VII; disparate impact)];

- Nepotism [see Bonilla v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 697 F.2d 1297, 1303 , cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1251 (1984) (Title VII; nepotistic practices unlawful if they perpetuate discriminatory status quo)]; and

- Requirements that only English be spoken at work [see Garcia v. Spun Steak Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 1480, 1485 (Title VII; disparate impact); Jurado v. Eleven-Fifty Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 813 F.2d 1406, 1412 (Title VII; same); Garcia v. Gloor (5th Cir. 1980) 618 F.2d 264, 272 , cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1113 (1981) (Title VII; same); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7289.5(d) (FEHC regulation)].

[b] "No-Spouse" Rules

"No-spouse" rules, prohibiting spouses from working in the same department, division, or facility, may be lawful under FEHA if they are imposed for reasons of supervision, safety, security, or morale [see Gov. Code § 12940(a)(3); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.5(a) (FEHC regulation)].

There is no express Title VII provision governing "no-spouse" rules, but like other employer rules, they are generally subject to "disparate impact" analysis [see Thomas v. Metroflight (10th Cir. 1987) 814 F.2d 1506, 1509 ; Harper v. Trans World Airlines (8th Cir. 1975) 525 F.2d 409, 414] .

[3] Fringe Benefits

[a] Scope of Protection

Neither FEHA nor FEHC regulations define the term "fringe benefits," but according to EEOC guidelines, fringe benefits include medical, hospital, accident, and life insurance; retirement benefits; profit sharing and bonus plans; leaves of absence; and similar benefits [see 29 C.F.R. § 1604.9(a)]. Since they are "terms, conditions, or privileges of employment" [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6 (FEHC regulation)], unlawful discrimination with respect to fringe benefits is generally prohibited [see 29 U.S.C. § 623(a)(1) (ADEA); 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940(a) (FEHA); Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co. (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 362, 365 , cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1255 (1984) (Title VII; prima facie liability if discrimination in health benefits based on gender); see also 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.9(b), 1620.11(b) (EEOC guidelines; sex-based employment discrimination with regard to fringe benefits prohibited); 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7291.1(b)(1), 7292.6(a)(1) (FEHC regulations; FEHA prohibits conditioning availability of fringe benefits on employee's sex or marital status), 7294.2(a) (same; conditioning employment decisions regarding disabled applicant or employee on waiver of any fringe benefit is prohibited)].

[b] "Bona Fide Employee Benefit Plan" Exemption

Fringe benefits, particularly retirement and health benefits, may raise issues regarding age and sex discrimination. The ADEA contains limited exemptions for age- and sex-based benefit differentials [see 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)].

Formerly, the ADEA "bona fide employee benefit plan" exemption allowed employers to observe the terms of bona fide employee benefit plans, such as retirement, pension, or insurance plans, that are not a subterfuge to evade the purposes of the ADEA [see 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2), prior to amendment by Pub. L. No. 101-433; EEOC v. Orange County (9th Cir. 1988) 837 F.2d 420, 421 ; EEOC v. Borden's, Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 724 F.2d 1390, 1395 ; see also Public Employees v. Betts (1989) 492 U.S. 158, 168, 109 S. Ct. 2854, 106 L. Ed. 2d 134 ("subterfuge" defined); United Airlines v. McMann (1977) 434 U.S. 192, 203, 98 S. Ct. 444, 54 L. Ed. 2d 402 (same)].

In 1990, the ADEA exemption was revised by the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act (OWBPA) [see Pub. L. No. 101-433, §§ 101-105]. The OWBPA applies only to benefit plans established, modified, or otherwise affected on or after October 16, 1990 (the date the OWBPA was enacted) [see Pub. L. No. 101-433, § 105(a)]. Now, even if otherwise prohibited by the ADEA, it is not unlawful for an employer to observe the terms of a bona fide employee benefit plan if, (1) for each benefit or benefit package, the actual amount of payment made or cost incurred on behalf of an older worker is no less than that made or incurred on behalf of a younger worker, or (2) the plan is a voluntary early retirement incentive plan consistent with the ADEA's purposes [29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(B); 29 C.F.R. § 1625.10(a)(1)].

A "plan" covered by the ADEA exemption is one that is an integral part of a complex benefit scheme [see EEOC v. Borden's, Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 724 F.2d 1390, 1395] . A "bona fide" plan is one that is genuine and actually pays substantial benefits [Marshall v. Hawaiian Tel. Co. (9th Cir. 1978) 575 F.2d 763, 766 ; see Public Employees Retirement System of Ohio v. Betts (1989) 492 U.S. 158, 166, 109 S. Ct. 2854, 106 L. Ed. 2d 134 ; EEOC v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 1988) 837 F.2d 420, 422 ; EEOC v. Borden's, Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 724 F.2d 1390, 1395 ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1625.10(b) ("bona fide employee benefit plan" defined)].

FEHA provides that its general prohibition against sex and medical condition discrimination does not affect bona fide retirement, pension, employee benefit, or insurance plans that are in accordance with customary and reasonable or actuarially sound underwriting practices [Gov. Code § 12993(b)]. A former FEHA exemption for age-based benefit differentials has been repealed effective January 1, 2003 [see former Gov. Code § 12941(a), repealed by 2002 Stats., ch. 525, § 2].

[c] Health Benefits

FEHA exempts insurance plans that are in accordance with customary and reasonable or actuarially sound underwriting practices [see Gov. Code § 12993(b); but see 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7291.1(b)(1), 7292.6(a)(1) (FEHA prohibits conditioning availability of fringe benefits on employee's sex or marital status), 7294.2(a) (conditioning employment decisions regarding disabled applicant or employee on waiver of any fringe benefit prohibited); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1630.16(f) (permitting health insurance plans to underwrite or classify risks under state law, unless used as subterfuge to discriminate under ADA)].

There is prima facie Title VII liability, however, if discrimination in health benefits is based on gender [see Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co. (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 362, 365 , cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1255 (1984) ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1604.9(b) (EEOC guideline); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.1(b)(1) (FEHC regulation)]. For example, employers may not provide benefits for the spouses or families of employees of one gender if the same benefits are not provided for the spouses or families of employees of the opposite gender [see Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 682-683, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89 ; 29 C.F.R. § 1604.9(d) (EEOC guideline)]. It is not a defense that the cost of health benefits is greater with respect to one sex than another [29 C.F.R. § 1604.9(e) (EEOC guideline)].

Some employers may adopt facially neutral "head of household" rules whereby a married employee may only receive dependent coverage if the employee earns more than 50 percent of the combined income of the spouses [see Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co. (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 362, 364 , cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1255 (1984)] . Although these rules may have a disparate impact on female employees [see Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co. (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 362, 365 , cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1255 (1984) ; 29 C.F.R. § 1604.9(c) (EEOC guideline; benefits based on "head of household" rules as prima facie violation of Title VII); 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7291.1(b)(2), 7292.6(b)(2) (FEHC regulation; "head of household" rules unlawful insofar as they discriminate against one sex or on the basis of marital status)], they are not unlawful if the employer demonstrates legitimate and overriding business justifications for the rule [see Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co. (9th Cir. 1983) 705 F.2d 1492, 1495 , cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1255 (1984) (rule designed to benefit largest number of employees and those with greatest need); but see EEOC v. Fremont Christian School (N.D. Cal. 1984) 609 F. Supp. 344, 351 (Title VII; justification based on religious beliefs not equivalent to business justification necessary to overcome presumption of discrimination)].

Both Title VII and FEHA prohibit discrimination on the basis of pregnancy [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e(k), 2000e-2(a) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12945 (FEHA); but see AT&T Corp. v. Hulteen (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1962, 173 L. Ed. 2d 898, 906 ("Although adopting a service credit rule unfavorable to those out on pregnancy leave would violate Title VII today, a seniority system does not necessarily violate the statute when it gives current effect [in the calculation of pension benefits] to such rules that operated before the [Pregnancy Discrimination Act, which took effect on April 29, 1979]")]. Thus, employers may not treat pregnancy-related conditions less favorably than other medical conditions for benefit purposes [Morgan v. Safeway Stores (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 1211, 1213 (Title VII)]. For example, an employer may not provide maternity benefits for the wives of male employees, but fail to provide them to female employees [29 C.F.R. § 1604.9(d) (EEOC guideline)]. Nor may an employer provide more favorable maternity benefits for female employees than for spouses of male employees [see Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 683-684, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89] .

A distinction made by an employer-provided health-care plan that has a greater adverse impact on certain disabled individuals who require a particular form of treatment than on other persons with the same disability does not discriminate on the basis of disability. For example, if an employer-provided health-care plan provides all employees with the same coverage for infertility treatment, an exclusion of coverage for in vitro fertilization is not a disability-based distinction in violation of FEHA [Knight v. Hayward Unified Sch. Dist. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 121, 134-136, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 287] .

[4] Training and Advancement

[a] Training Programs

FEHA prohibits discrimination in any apprenticeship training program, or any other training program leading to employment, because of membership in a protected classification [see Gov. Code § 12940(c), (l); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(c)(2) (FEHC regulation)].

Title VII and the ADA also prohibit unlawful discrimination in training programs [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2(d), 12112(a),(b)(1)].

Federal cases have held that, under Title VII, an employer may not discriminatorily deny access to training [see Thompson v. Sawyer (D.C. Cir. 1982) 678 F.2d 257, 283] or discriminatorily fail to train an employee adequately [see Shah v. Mt. Zion Hospital & Medical Center (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 268, 271] . One case held that to establish a prima facie case of discriminatory training, a plaintiff must show that he or she was treated differently from other employees and that the employer was aware of the discrimination and failed to remedy it [Shah v. Mt. Zion Hospital & Medical Center (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 268, 271] .

[b] Promotion and Transfer

Title VII does not contain an express provision relating to promotions and transfers. However, Title VII generally prohibits depriving anyone of employment opportunities because of that person's membership in a protected classification [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(2); see also Payne v. Travenol Laboratories (5th Cir. 1982) 673 F.2d 798, 827 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1038 (employer's failure to post notice of promotion openings, together with its reliance on supervisor recommendations and other factors, as discrimination under Title VII)].

The ADA prohibits discrimination in the advancement of disabled employees [42 U.S.C. § 12112(a)], including classifying a disabled employee in a way that adversely affects his or her opportunities [42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(1); see 29 C.F.R. § 1630.4(b) (prohibition against discrimination with regard to upgrading and promotion)].

FEHA, like Title VII, has no provision expressly relating to promotions and transfers. However, FEHC regulations prohibit restricting information on promotion and transfer opportunities to certain employees or classes of employees when the restriction has the effect of discriminating on a basis enumerated in FEHA [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(c)]. The FEHC regulations also require employers to consider bids or other requests for promotion in a manner that does not discriminate on a basis enumerated in FEHA, unless it is pursuant to a permissible defense [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(c)(1)].

Generally, employment practices relating to promotions and transfers may be subject to both "disparate treatment" and "disparate impact" analysis [see, e.g., U.S. Postal Service Bd. of Govs. v. Aikens (1983) 460 U.S. 711, 714-715, 103 S. Ct. 1478, 75 L. Ed. 2d 403 (promotion); Casillas v. United States Navy (9th Cir. 1984) 735 F.2d 338, 342 ; Payne v. Travenol Laboratories (5th Cir. 1982) 673 F.2d 798, 826 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1038 (promotion); Reed v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. (9th Cir. 1980) 613 F.2d 757, 761 (promotion); Peters v. Jefferson Chem. Co. (5th Cir. 1975) 516 F.2d 447, 450 (transfer)].

With respect to promotions, a plaintiff need not prove that he or she applied for promotion and was rejected, if a promotion policy does not require employee application or if promotion is initiated by the employer [see Gifford v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe R.R. Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 685 F.2d 1149, 1154 ; Reed v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. (9th Cir. 1980) 613 F.2d 757, 761] . Moreover, a plaintiff is not required to prove that he or she applied for promotion if application would be futile [see Gifford v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe R.R. Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 685 F.2d 1149, 1154 ; Reed v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. (9th Cir. 1980) 613 F.2d 757, 761] .

EEOC guidelines and FEHC regulations prohibit sex-based lines of progression that adversely affect any employee, unless sex is a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) for the job. Thus, an employer may not prohibit a female from applying for a job labeled "male" or for a job in a "male" line of progression, and vice versa [29 C.F.R. § 1604.3(a) (EEOC guideline); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.1(c) (FEHC regulation); see Wetzel v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (W.D. Pa. 1974) 372 F. Supp. 1146, 1149 , aff'd, 508 F.2d 239 (3d Cir. 1975) , cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1011 (1975) (Title VII; key factor when employees initially hired in jobs that do not have comparable lines of progression is employer's hiring policy, since original assignment in effect determined employee's future chances of promotion)].

[5] Seniority Systems

[a] "Bona Fide Seniority Systems" Exemption

Although FEHA contains no general exemption for seniority systems, it does provide that promotions within existing staff, hiring and promotion on the basis of experience and training, rehiring on the basis of seniority and prior service with the employer, or hiring under an established recruiting program from high schools, colleges, universities, or trade schools do not, in and of themselves, constitute unlawful employment practices [Gov. Code § 12940(a)(5); see 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7295.7, 7295.8 (FEHC regulations)]. However, if candidates for hire have the same record of seniority or prior service with the employer, the employer may not refuse to select one of the candidates because he or she is over the age of 40 years [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.7(b) (FEHC regulations)].

Title VII permits differences in compensation and terms, conditions, or privileges of employment pursuant to bona fide seniority systems, provided that the differentials are not the result of intentional discrimination [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h)]. The ADEA also allows "bona fide seniority systems" as long as they are not intended to avoid the ADEA's purposes, and do not require or permit involuntary retirement based on age [see 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2); 29 C.F.R. § 1625.9(a)(2) (EEOC guideline); Trans World Airlines v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 124, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523] .

Under the Title VII exemption, otherwise neutral, legitimate seniority systems are not unlawful, even if they perpetuate past discrimination [see Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 353-354, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 ("departmental" seniority system)]. The Title VII exemption is not a defense; it is a provision that delineates which employment practices are illegal and thereby prohibited, and which are not [Lorance v. AT&T Technologies (1989) 490 U.S. 900, 908, 109 S. Ct. 2261, 104 L. Ed. 2d 961].

Seniority systems that intentionally discriminate are not "bona fide," however, and are not entitled to protection [see Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 353, 356, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396] .

EEOC guidelines and FEHC regulations prohibit sex-based seniority lists (that is, "male" and "female" lists) if such a practice adversely affects any employee, unless sex is a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) for the job [29 C.F.R. § 1604.3(a) (EEOC guideline); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.1(c) (FEHC regulation)]. Thus, for example, an employer may not prohibit a male scheduled for layoff from displacing a female on a "female" seniority list, and vice versa [29 C.F.R. § 1604.3(a)(2) (EEOC guideline); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.1(c)(1)(B) (FEHC regulation)]. Nor may a seniority system distinguish between "light" and "heavy" jobs if it operates as a disguised form of classification by sex, or creates unreasonable sex-based advancement obstacles [29 C.F.R. § 1604.3(b) (EEOC guideline)].

[b] Proof of Discriminatory Seniority System

Since only seniority systems that intentionally discriminate are not "bona fide" [see Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 353, 356, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII)], it is not enough to show that a seniority system has a discriminatory impact [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(e)(2); Lorance v. AT&T Technologies (1989) 490 U.S. 900, 908-909, 109 S. Ct. 2261, 104 L. Ed. 2d 961 ; Firefighters v. Stotts (1984) 467 U.S. 561, 577-579, 104 S. Ct. 2576, 81 L. Ed. 2d 483 ; American Tobacco Co. v. Patterson (1982) 456 U.S. 63, 65, 102 S. Ct. 1534, 71 L. Ed. 2d 748] . The burden is on the plaintiff to show intent [see Lorance v. AT&T Technologies (1989) 490 U.S. 900, 909, 109 S. Ct.

2261, 104 L. Ed. 2d 961 ; Black Law Enforcement Officers Ass'n v. City of Akron (6th Cir. 1987) 824 F.2d 475, 481] . The basic issue is whether there is intentional discrimination in the establishment or continuation of a seniority system, and the totality of the circumstances should be examined [see Bernard v. Gulf Oil Corp. (5th Cir. 1988) 841 F.2d 547, 555 ; James v. Stockham Valves & Fittings Co. (5th Cir. 1977) 559 F.2d 310, 351-352 , cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1034 (1978)] .

Although a system that has a discriminatory impact is not unlawful, discriminatory impact may be an evidentiary consideration in reaching a finding on intent [see Pullman-Standard v. Swint (1982) 456 U.S. 273, 289, 102 S. Ct. 1781, 72 L. Ed. 2d 66] . Thus, proof that a work force is racially balanced or that it contains a disproportionately high percentage of minority employees may be relevant to determining whether a seniority system intentionally discriminates [see Pullman-Standard v. Swint (1982) 456 U.S. 273, 289 n.18, 102 S. Ct. 1781, 72 L. Ed. 2d 66 ; Furnco Construction Corp. v. Waters (1978) 438 U.S. 567, 580, 98 S. Ct. 2943, 57 L. Ed. 2d 957] .

[6] Family Care and Medical Leave

[a] Governing Law

Both California's Moore-Brown-Roberti Family Rights Act (CFRA) [Gov. Code §§ 12945.1, 12945.2, 19701.3], which is a part of FEHA, and the federal Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 (FMLA) [Pub. L. No. 103-3, codified at 29 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq.; see 29 C.F.R. pt. 825 (FMLA regulations)] require employers with 50 or more employees to grant unpaid family care and medical leave under certain circumstances [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(a),(d); 29 U.S.C. §§ 2611(4), 2612]. As amended in 1993, the CFRA now largely conforms to the FMLA [see Liu v. Amway Corp. (9th Cir. 2003) 347 F.3d 1125, 1132 n.4]. This discussion focuses on the CFRA. For detailed discussion of the FMLA, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender).

It is an unlawful employment practice under FEHA for an employer to refuse to grant a request for family care and medical leave to which an employee is entitled under the CFRA [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(a)], or to refuse to hire, or to discharge, fine, suspend, expel, or discriminate against, any individual because of (1) the individual's exercise of the right to family care and medical leave under the CFRA, or (2) the individual's giving information or testimony regarding his or her own family care and medical leave, or another person's family care and medical leave, in any inquiry or proceeding related to rights guaranteed under the CFRA [Gov. Code § 12945.2 (l); see Dudley v. Department of Transp. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 255, 261-265, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 739 (cognizable cause of action for retaliation in violation of CFRA if employer is covered under CFRA, employee is eligible for and exercises right to CFRA leave, and employee suffers adverse employment action as result)]. However, an employer may terminate an employee who misuses leave and is untruthful about it [McDaneld v. E. Mun. Water Dist. Bd. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 702, 705-708, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 267 (employee who took leave to care for father spent substantial amount of leave time playing golf and working on lawn sprinklers)].

An employee who requests CFRA leave or is on leave has no greater right to reinstatement or to other benefits and conditions of employment than an employee who remains at work [Neisendorf v. Levi Strauss & Co. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 509, 519, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 216 ; see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(c)(1)]. Thus, for example, an employer does not violate CFRA's guaranty of reinstatement by terminating an employee who is unable to return to work at the completion of the maximum available CFRA leave [Neisendorf v. Levi Strauss & Co. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 509, 517-520, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 216] , or by terminating an employee as part of a legitimate workforce reduction [Tomlinson v. Qualcomm, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 934, 939-943, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822] .

[b] Permissible Purposes of Leave

For purposes of the CFRA, "family care and medical leave" means any of the following [Gov. Code § 12945.2(c)(3)]:

- Leave for (1) the birth of a child of the employee, (2) the placement of a child with an employee in connection with the adoption or foster care of the child by the employee, or (3) the serious health condition of a child of the employee [see Marchisheck v. San Mateo County (9th Cir. 1999) 199 F.3d 1068, 1073-1076 (relocating employee's child to keep him or her safe from beatings by other children does not constitute "caring" for child with serious health condition under either CFRA or federal Family and Medical Leave Act)];

- Leave to care for a parent or spouse who has a serious health condition [see Pang v. Beverly Hosp. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 986, 995-999, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 643 (helping parent pack and move to new residence does not constitute "caring" for parent with serious health condition, even if move is made on account of and in order to accommodate parent's serious health condition)]; or

- Leave because of an employee's own serious health condition that makes the employee unable to perform the functions of the position of that employee, except for leave taken for disability on account of pregnancy, child birth, or related medical conditions, which is separately governed by Gov. Code § 12945 [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(o),(s); see also discussion regarding pregnancy leave in [7], below]. The focus in this context is on whether the condition makes the employee unable to perform the specific job assigned to him or her by the employer, as opposed to general job functions. Thus, the fact that an employee can do a similar job for a second employer does not necessarily establish that he or she is not incapacitated from performing the specific job assigned by the first employer [Lonicki v. Sutter Health Cent. (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 201, 214].

For these purposes, a "child" is defined as a biological, adopted, or foster child, a stepchild, or a child of a person standing in loco parentis who is either (1) under 18 years of age, or (2) an adult dependent child [Gov. Code § 12945.2(c)(1)]. A "parent" is defined as a biological, foster, or adoptive parent, a stepparent, or other person who stood in loco parentis to the employee when the employee was a child [Gov. Code § 12945.2(c)(7)].

A "serious health condition" means an illness, injury, impairment, or physical or mental condition that involves either of the following [Gov. Code § 12945.2(c)(8)]:

- Inpatient care in a hospital, hospice, or residential health care facility; or

- Continuing treatment or continuing supervision by a health care provider.

The CFRA permits an employer to require that a request for leave based on a serious health condition be supported by certification, containing specified information, issued by a health care provider [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(j),(k); see also Gov. Code § 12945.2(c)(6) ("health care provider" defined)]. In the case of leave requests based on the employee's own serious health condition, the CFRA provides a procedure by which an employer may challenge the validity of the certification provided by the employee [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(k)(3)]. This statutory dispute-resolution procedure is not mandatory, however, and the employer's failure to use the procedure does not bar the employer from contending in subsequent litigation that the employee did not have a serious health condition that made him or her unable to do the job [Lonicki v. Sutter Health Cent. (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 201, 213].

[c] Covered Employers and Employees

An employer under the CFRA is any person who directly employs 50 or more persons to perform services for a wage or salary, as well as the state, any political or civil subdivision of the state, and cities [Gov. Code § 12945.2(c)(2)].

An employee is not covered by the CFRA unless he or she has more than 12 months of service with the employer and at least 1,250 hours of service with the employer during the previous 12-month period [Gov. Code § 12945.2(a)].

Although employers with 50 or more employees are covered by the CFRA [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(c)(2)(A)], an employer is not required to grant a request for family care and medical leave by an employee if the employer employs fewer than 50 employees within 75 miles of the worksite where the employee is employed [Gov. Code § 12945.2(b)].

[d] Amount of Leave Entitlement; Relationship to Pregnancy and FMLA Leave

The maximum amount of family care and medical leave that an employee may take under the CFRA is a total of 12 workweeks during any 12-month period [Gov. Code § 12945.2(a)].

An employee is entitled to take, in addition to leave provided for under the CFRA, the pregnancy leave provided for in Gov. Code § 12945 if the employee is otherwise qualified for that leave [Gov. Code § 12945.2(s)].

If both parents are employed by the same employer and qualify for leave under the CFRA, the employer need not provide family care leave in connection with the birth, adoption, or foster care placement of a child that would allow the parents leave that totals more than 12 workweeks in a 12-month period [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(q)].

Leave under the CFRA may be taken in one or more periods [Gov. Code § 12945.2(p)]. The FEHC is authorized to adopt regulations relating to the minimum duration for various types of family care and medical leave under the CFRA [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(a); Stats. 1993, ch. 827, § 2]. However, the Legislature has directed the FEHC to allow any employee taking leave under the CFRA to take leave in increments of at least one day for recurring medical treatment certified by a health care provider [see Stats. 1993, ch. 827, § 2].

The FMLA does not supersede any provision of any state or local law that provides greater family or medical leave rights than the rights established by the FMLA [29 U.S.C. § 2651(b)]. However, under the CFRA, leave taken by an employee under the CFRA runs concurrently with any leave taken under the FMLA (except for leave taken under the FMLA for disability on account of pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions). The aggregate amount of leave taken under the CFRA or the FMLA, or both (except for leave taken for disability on account of pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions), may not exceed 12 workweeks in a 12-month period [Gov. Code § 12945.2(s)]. Furthermore, the 12-month period during which 12 workweeks of leave may be taken under the CFRA runs concurrently with the 12-month period under the FMLA and commences on the date that leave taken under the FMLA commences [Gov. Code § 12945.2(p)].

[e] Notice of Leave

If an employee's need for a leave under the CFRA is foreseeable, the employee must provide the employer with reasonable advance notice of the need for the leave [Gov. Code § 12945.2(h)]. If the need for leave is foreseeable due to a planned medical treatment or supervision, the employee must make a reasonable effort to schedule the treatment or supervision to avoid disruption to the operations of the employer, subject to the approval of the health care provider of the person requiring the treatment or supervision [Gov. Code § 12945.2(i)].

To trigger the employee's rights under the CFRA, the employee's notice need not expressly assert rights under CFRA or FMLA, or even mention CFRA or FMLA. However, the employee must state the reason for the requested leave that brings the request within the scope of the CFRA [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(a)(1)]. Thus, for example, a notice on a hospital's preprinted form that an employee was hospitalized and unable to work may be sufficient to inform the employer that the employee might have suffered a serious medical condition under CFRA [Avila v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1237, 1257, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 440]. However, a request for vacation time over the Christmas holiday to visit the employee's ailing parents does not constitute sufficient notice that the employee needs leave to care for the parents and does not trigger the protections of the CFRA [Stevens v. Department of Corrections (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 285, 290-293, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19] .

[f] Substitution of Accrued Paid Leave

Generally, the CFRA does not require the employer to provide paid family care and medical leave [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(d)]. However, an employee taking leave permitted by the CFRA may elect, or an employer may require the employee, to substitute the employee's accrued vacation leave or other accrued time off, or any other paid or unpaid time off negotiated with the employer, for the leave allowed under the CFRA. If an employee takes a leave because of the employee's own serious health condition, the employee may also elect, or the employer may also require the employee, to substitute accrued sick leave during the period of the CFRA leave. An employee may not, however, use sick leave during the a period of leave taken in connection with the birth, adoption, or foster care of a child, or to care for a child, parent, or spouse with a serious health condition, unless mutually agreed to by the employer and employee [Gov. Code § 12945.2(e)].

[g] Continuation of Benefits During Leave

The employer is required to maintain and pay for coverage under a "group health plan" as defined in I.R.C. § 5000(b)(1) for the duration of any leave taken under the CFRA or the FMLA at the level and under the conditions that coverage would have been provided if the employee had continued in employment continuously for the duration of the leave. The continuation of health benefits is not required to exceed 12 workweeks in a 12-month period, commencing on the date that leave taken under the FMLA commences, although the employer is not prohibited from maintaining and paying for coverage under a group health plan beyond 12 workweeks [Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)(1)]. The employer is permitted to recover premiums paid for health benefits provided during family care and medical leave if (1) the employee fails to return to work after the period of leave to which the employee is entitled expires, and (2) the employee's failure to return from the leave is for a reason other than the continuation, recurrence, or onset of a serious health condition that entitles the employee to leave under the CFRA, or for other circumstances beyond the employee's control [Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)(1)].

An employee taking family care and medical leave is also entitled to participate in other employee benefit plans, including life, short-term or long-term disability, or accident insurance, pension and retirement plans, and supplemental unemployment benefit plans, to the same extent and under the same conditions as apply to an unpaid leave taken for any purpose other than family care and medical leave. In the absence of those conditions, the employee continues to be entitled to participate in these plans. In the case of health and welfare employee benefit plans, including group medical, life, short-term or long-term disability or accident insurance, or other similar plans, the employer may, at its discretion, require the employee, as a condition of continued coverage during the leave, to pay premiums at the group rate during the time not covered by any accrued vacation leave, any other accrued time off, or any other paid or unpaid time off negotiated with the employer. However, nonpayment of premiums does not constitute a break in service, for purposes of longevity, seniority under any collective bargaining agreement, or any employment benefit plan [Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)(2)].

In the case of pension and retirement plans, the employer is not required to make plan payments for an employee during the leave period, and the leave period is not required to be counted for purposes of time accrued under the plan. However, an employee covered by a pension plan may continue to make contributions in accordance with the terms of the plan during the period of the leave [Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)(2)].

For any period of family care and medical leave during which an employee is not covered by health benefits under Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)(1), the rules governing other types of employee benefit plans apply to health plans, i.e., the employee is entitled to continue to participate to the same extent and under the same conditions as apply to unpaid leave taken for other purposes, and in the absence of those conditions the employee is entitled to participate, but the employer may require the employee to pay premiums at the group rate [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)(2)].

[h] Retention of Seniority and Restoration to Position

During a family care and medical leave period, the employee retains employee status with the employer, and the leave does not constitute a break in service, for purposes of longevity, seniority under any collective bargaining agreement, or any employee benefit plan. An employee returning from leave returns with no less seniority than the employee had when the leave commenced for purposes of layoff, recall, promotion, job assignment, and seniority-related benefits such as vacation [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(g)].

Generally, the employer is required, on granting the leave request, to provide the employee with a guarantee of employment in the same or a comparable position on termination of the leave [Gov. Code § 12945.2(a); see Gov. Code § 12945.2(c)(4) (definition of "employment in the same or a comparable position")].

However, an employer may refuse to reinstate an employee returning from leave to the same or a comparable position if all of the following conditions apply [Gov. Code § 12945.2(r)(1)]:

- The employee is a salaried employee who is among the highest paid 10 percent of the employer's employees who are employed within 75 miles of the worksite at which the employee is employed.

- The refusal is necessary to prevent substantial and grievous economic injury to the operations of the employer.

- The employer notifies the employee of the intent to refuse reinstatement at the time the employer determines that the refusal is necessary under the previous paragraph.

If the leave has already commenced, the employer must give the employee a reasonable opportunity to return to work following the notice of intent to refuse reinstatement [Gov. Code § 12945.2(r)(2)].

An employee returning from CFRA leave has no greater right to reinstatement or to other benefits and conditions of employment than an employee who remained at work [Neisendorf v. Levi Strauss & Co. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 509, 519, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 216 ; see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(c)(1)]. Thus, for example, an employer does not violate CFRA's guaranty of reinstatement by terminating an employee who is unable to return to work at the completion of the maximum available CFRA leave [Neisendorf v. Levi Strauss & Co. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 509, 517-520, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 216] , or by terminating an employee as part of a legitimate workforce reduction [Tomlinson v. Qualcomm, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 934, 939-943, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822] .

[7] Pregnancy Leave

Although Title VII prohibits pregnancy discrimination [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(k); but see AT&T Corp. v. Hulteen (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1962, 173 L. Ed. 2d 898, 906 ("Although adopting a service credit rule unfavorable to those out on pregnancy leave would violate Title VII today, a seniority system does not necessarily violate the statute when it gives current effect [in the calculation of pension benefits] to such rules that operated before the [Pregnancy Discrimination Act, which took effect on April 29, 1979]")], it does not provide for pregnancy leaves of absence.

Under FEHA, however, pregnant employees have the right to take a leave of absence for a reasonable period of time, not to exceed four months [Gov. Code § 12945(a); see California Federal Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Guerra (1987) 479 U.S. 272, 292, 107 S. Ct. 683, 93 L. Ed. 2d 613 (predecessor of Gov. Code § 12945(a) not preempted by Title VII)]. However, an employer may not require an employee to go on pregnancy leave unless the employer can demonstrate a bona fide occupational qualification, or that the employee is disabled by the pregnancy [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.2(d)].

A "reasonable period of time" is the period during which the employee is disabled on account of pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions [Gov. Code § 12945(a)]. The employee may also use any accrued vacation leave during that period of time [Gov. Code § 12945(a); see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.2(d)(3)(A) (FEHC regulation)].

An employer may require any employee who plans to take a pregnancy leave to give the employer reasonable notice of the date the leave will commence and its estimated duration [Gov. Code § 12945(a); Gov. Code § 12945(b)(2); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.2(d)(3)(B)(1) (FEHC regulation)].

The FEHC has promulgated comprehensive regulations governing pregnancy leaves of absence [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.2(d)(3)]. For a detailed discussion of these regulations, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender).

A female employee who is disabled by pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions may also qualify for leave under the federal Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 (FMLA) [Pub. L. No. 103-3, codified at 29 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq.]. For a thorough discussion of the FMLA, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationEmployment PracticesGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationEmployment PracticesGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationEmployment PracticesGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationNational Origin DiscriminationEmployment PracticesGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationRacial DiscriminationEmployment PracticesGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Application of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws to Specific Employment Practices

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.33

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.33 Retirement or Pension Plans and Benefits

[1] Scope of Protection

Retirement or pension plans are "condition[s] or privilege[s] of employment." Retirement or pension benefits, and the contributions that maintain them, are considered "compensation" [see Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1079, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 (Title VII); Los Angeles, Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 712 n.23, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657 (Title VII)]. For discussion of compensation, see § 115.31. For discussion of "terms, conditions, or privileges of employment," see § 115.32.

FEHC regulations define a "retirement or pension program" as any written plan, program, or policy of an employer that has been communicated to eligible or affected employees and that is intended to provide an employee with income on retirement [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.1(d)].

[2] Age Discrimination

[a] Mandatory Retirement

FEHA requires an employer to permit an employee to continue the employee's employment beyond any retirement date contained in any private pension or retirement plan if the employee, within a reasonable time, indicates in writing a desire to continue working beyond the specified retirement date and can demonstrate the ability to continue working. The employment must continue as long as the employee demonstrates his or her ability to perform the functions of the job adequately and the employer is satisfied with the quality of the work performed [see Gov. Code § 12942; see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7296.0(a) (FEHC regulation; mandatory retirement constitutes age discrimination under FEHA)].

FEHA excepts institutions of higher education [see 20 U.S.C. § 1001 ("institution of higher education" defined)], which may impose a mandatory retirement policy for tenured faculty members who have attained 70 years of age, provided that the institution has a policy permitting reemployment of those individuals on a year-to-year basis [see Gov. Code §

12942(c)(2), (3)]. Thus, the institution of higher education must rehire those tenured faculty members over age 70 on a yearly basis if they are able to establish their competence [Dubins v. Regents of University of California (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 77, 85-86, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336] .

Also, compulsory retirement is allowed for both of the following [Gov. Code § 12942(c)(1)]. see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7296.0(c)]:

- Physicians who attain 70 years of age and who are employed by professional medical corporations that have articles or bylaws providing for compulsory retirement; and

- Employees who (1) have attained the age of 65 years, (2) were employed in a bona fide executive or high policymaking position for the two-year period immediately before retirement, and (3) are entitled to an immediate nonforfeitable annual retirement benefit from a pension, profit-sharing, savings, or deferred compensation plan, or any combination of those plans, that equals, in the aggregate, at least $27,000.

Although the ADEA "bona fide employee benefit plan" exemption protects retirement plans that meet specified requirements, no such plan may require or permit the involuntary retirement of any person covered by the ADEA because of the age of that person [29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(B); see 29 C.F.R. § 1625.9(a)(2) (EEOC guideline); see also Western Air Lines v. Criswell (1985) 472 U.S. 400, 403, 105 S. Ct. 2743, 86 L. Ed. 2d 321 (ADEA as generally prohibiting mandatory retirement)].

Mandatory retirement is expressly permitted under the ADEA with regard to an employee who (1) has attained the age of 65 years; (2) is employed in a bona fide executive or high policymaking position for the two-year period immediately before retirement; and (3) is entitled to an immediate nonforfeitable annual retirement benefit from a pension, profit-sharing, savings, or deferred compensation plan, or any combination of such plans, that equals, in the aggregate, at least $44,000 [see 29 U.S.C. § 631(c)(1)].

[b] Voluntary Early Retirement

EEOC guidelines provide that retirement plans may permit individuals to elect early retirement at a specified age at their own option [see 29 C.F.R. § 1625.9(d)]. Furthermore, incentives to retire early do not constitute discrimination under the ADEA as long as the employee receiving the offer may choose to keep working [Henn v. National Geographic Soc. (7th Cir. 1987) 819 F.2d 824, 828 , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 964] .

Because of the magnitude of a decision to accept early retirement, however, employees must be given a reasonable amount of time to make a considered choice. The amount of time necessary to make such a choice varies depending on the circumstances of each case [see Paolillo v. Dresser Industries (2d Cir. 1987) 821 F.2d 81, 84 (summary judgment improper where plaintiffs were given from less than 1 day to 14 days to make decision); see also Bodnar v. Synpol, Inc. (5th Cir. 1988) 843 F.2d 190, 194 , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 908 (rejecting challenge to plan that gave employees 15 days to accept or reject)].

[c] Pension Vesting

An employer's decision to terminate an employee with a specified length of service because his or her pension is close to vesting does not constitute discriminatory treatment on the basis of age in violation of the ADEA because age and years of service are analytically distinct [Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 609, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338 ; see Kentucky Ret. Sys. v. EEOC (2008) 554 U.S. 135, 128 S. Ct. 2361, 2364-2370, 171 L. Ed. 2d 322 (ADEA; because age and pension status are analytically distinct, state pension plan does not discriminate because of age simply because it (1) lawfully makes age part of conditions of pension eligibility and (2) treats workers differently in light of their pension status)].

However, an employer might be liable under the ADEA if it targets employees with a particular pension status because they are likely to be older, if the employer's motivation to fire an employee is based both on pension status and on age, or if an employee's pension is about to vest because of his or her age, rather than years of service, and the employer fires the employee to prevent vesting [see Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 612-613, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338] . Furthermore, terminating an employee to prevent vesting of pension benefits violates the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) [see 29 U.S.C. § 1140; see also Ingersoll-Rand v. McClendon (1990) 498 U.S. 133, 142-143, 111 S. Ct. 478, 112 L. Ed. 2d 474] .

[3] Sex Discrimination

[a] Contributions and Benefits

Although FEHA generally protects the terms or conditions of any bona fide retirement, pension, employee benefit, or insurance plan if they are in accordance with customary and reasonable or actuarially sound underwriting practices [see Gov. Code § 12993(b)], FEHC regulations interpret FEHA to prohibit (1) requiring unequal employee contributions to fringe benefit plans by similarly situated male and female employees, and (2) establishing different amounts of basic benefits for such employees under fringe benefit plans [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.1(b)(3)].

Under Title VII, an employer may not require female employees to make larger contributions to receive the same monthly pension benefits as male employees simply because women, as a class, live longer than men [see Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1082, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 ; Los Angeles, Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 711, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657] . Nor may a female be paid lower monthly benefits on that basis [see Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1081, 1085, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 (classification of employees on basis of sex as no more permissible at pay-out stage of retirement plan than at pay-in stage)]. Title VII prohibits discrimination with respect to individuals [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)] and, thus, precludes treatment of individuals as simply components of a racial, religious, sexual, or national class. Even a true generalization about a class is an insufficient reason for discrimination against an individual [see Los Angeles Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 707-708, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657] .

[b] Benefit Eligibility

FEHC regulations and EEOC guidelines prohibit pension or retirement plans that, with respect to benefits, establish different optional or compulsory retirement ages based on sex or that otherwise differentiate in benefits on the basis of sex [see 29 C.F.R. § 1620.11(f) (EEOC guideline); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.1(b)(4) (FEHC regulation)].

For example, cases have held that an employer may not maintain a retirement plan that requires female employees to retire at an earlier age than male employees [see Bartmess v. Drewrys U.S.A., Inc. (7th Cir. 1971) 444 F.2d 1186, 1190 , cert. denied, 404 U.S. 939] or that permits female employees to retire with a full pension at an earlier age and with shorter length of service than male employees [see Rosen v. Public Service Electric and Gas Co. (3d Cir. 1973) 477 F.2d 90, 95] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationEmployment PracticesEarly Retirement IncentivesLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationEmployment PracticesPension BenefitsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationEmployment PracticesCompensation

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Application of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws to Specific Employment Practices

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.34

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.34 Discharge and Layoff

[1] Applicable Law

FEHA, Title VII, the ADA, and the ADEA all prohibit discharges and layoffs based on membership in a protected classification [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2(a) (Title VII), 12112(a) (ADA); 29 U.S.C. § 623(a)(1) (ADEA); Gov. Code § 12940(a) (FEHA); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1630.4(b) (EEOC regulations under ADA)]. Although employers may discharge employees for violating work rules [see McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 283, 285, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493] , punitive action must not differentiate on the basis of any protected classification [see EEOC v. Brown & Root (5th Cir. 1982) 688 F.2d 338, 340 (Title VII)].

Under California law, FEHA does not preempt other state laws, including the common law, that govern termination of employment, unless those provisions provide less protection than FEHA [Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 73-82, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373] . Thus, for example, Cal. Const., art. I, § 8, which provides that no person may be disqualified from entering or pursuing a business, profession, vocation, or employment because of sex, race, creed, color, or national or ethnic origin, sets forth a fundamental public policy against employment discrimination, and may be the basis for a cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, independent of FEHA [see Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 89-91, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 ; Phillips v. St. Mary Reg'l Med. Ctr. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 230-238, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 (although employer was expressly exempt from FEHA, plaintiff alleging race and sex discrimination could rely on Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq., and on Cal. Const., art. I, § 8, as sources of public policy to support claim of wrongful discharge in violation of public policy); Blom v. N.G.K. Spark Plugs, Inc. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 382, 386-388, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 139] . In such a non-FEHA wrongful discharge action, exhaustion of the FEHA administrative remedies is not required [Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 88, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Wrongful Termination in Violation of Public Policy. Courts have uniformly held that any wrongful termination based on unlawful discrimination will provide a basis for a wrongful termination lawsuit in violation of public policy. Generally, this is not a preferable remedy, however, since attorneys' fees are not provided for by statute. Nevertheless, it may be an alternative remedy worth pursuing in some cases.

By John H. Scott

[2] Disparate Treatment

Most discrimination cases involving discipline and discharge of individual employees involve "disparate treatment" [see, e.g., Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 252-256, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (Title VII); McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 281-285, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493 (42 U.S.C. § 1981; Title VII); Flowers v. Crouch-Walker Corp. (7th Cir. 1977) 552 F.2d 1277, 1281-1282 (Title VII)]. Cases relating to general work force reductions may involve both "disparate treatment" and "disparate impact" [see, e.g., Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1424-1425 (ADEA)].

In workforce reduction cases involving "disparate treatment," a failure to establish that a plaintiff was replaced by a nonclass member with equal or inferior qualifications "is not necessarily fatal" [Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1421 (ADEA; adapting McDonnell Douglas test)]. Instead, the circumstances of the plaintiff's discharge may give rise to an inference of discrimination [see Kelly v. Stamps.com, Inc. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1088, 1098-1099, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 240 (employer's invocation of right to downsize does not resolve whether employer had discriminatory motive for cutting back its work force or engaged in intentional discrimination when deciding which individual workers to retain and which to release)]. Such an inference does not arise, however, if the plaintiff's position and duties were completely eliminated [see Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1421-1422 (ADEA)]. Nor does it arise if a significant amount of the plaintiff's duties were transferred to others over a period of time prior to discharge [Ewing v. Gill Industries (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 601, 608-613, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 640 (FEHA)].

If discipline or discharge involves a specific offense, a plaintiff may establish a prima facie case of disparate treatment by showing simply that he or she was discharged and that a person who did not belong to the same protected classification was retained under apparently similar circumstances [see EEOC v. Brown & Root (5th Cir. 1982) 688 F.2d 338, 340 (Title VII); Green v. Armstrong Rubber Co. (5th Cir. 1980) 612 F.2d 967, 968 , cert. denied, 449 U.S. 879 (42 U.S.C. § 1981; Title VII)]. If a prima facie case is established, the burden shifts to the employer to articulate a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for its action [Green v. Armstrong Rubber Co. (5th Cir. 1980) 612 F.2d 967, 968 , cert. denied, 449 U.S. 879 (1980)] . If the employer articulates such a reason, the employee must prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, that an employer's articulated reason for the discharge was a pretext for discrimination [cf. Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 253, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207] .

For discussion of the "disparate treatment" and "disparate impact" theories of liability, see § 115.23[2] and*[4]*.

[3] Constructive Discharge

In some cases, a plaintiff may be constructively discharged because of unlawful discrimination. "Constructive discharge" refers to situations in which the law will treat an employee's resignation from his or her employment as equivalent to an involuntary termination. For example, a plaintiff who advances a Title VII hostile-environment constructive discharge claim must show working conditions so intolerable that a reasonable person would have felt compelled to resign. Harassment so intolerable as to cause resignation may be effected through co-worker conduct, unofficial supervisory conduct, or official company acts [Pennsylvania State Police v. Suders (2004) 542 U.S. 129, 124 S. Ct. 2342, 2351-2355, 159 L. Ed. 2d 204, 216-220] .

Under California law, a constructive discharge requires that the plaintiff show that a reasonable person faced with the alleged intolerable working conditions or employer actions would have had no reasonable alternative except to quit, and that the employer had actual, rather than merely constructive, knowledge of the intolerable conditions [Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1248-1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223]. A constructive discharge in violation of a fundamental public policy gives rise to a tort cause of action in favor of the terminated employee [Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1252, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; see Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline].

It is not necessary that the plaintiff have completely resigned from the job. It is sufficient if the plaintiff establishes that, because of intolerable conditions, he or she needed to remove himself or herself from the job and thus was effectively constructively discharged. For example, assuming that the other elements of a plaintiff's claim are established, an employer will not be relieved of liability by the fact that the plaintiff did not actually quit his or her job, but rather took a disability retirement [see Colores v. Board of Trustees (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1316-1318, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347] .

The standard set forth by the FEHC requires that the employer intended to make the employee's working conditions so intolerable that the employee was forced to quit. This intent must be shown by demonstrating either a conscious purpose on the part of the employer, or that the employer knew or should have known that its actions were likely to cause a reasonable employee to quit [DFEH v. Rosenberg (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-09, p. 9; DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 17; DFEH v. County of Madera (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-03, p. 31].

Whatever rule is relied on, a finding of constructive discharge must be based on more than the fact of discrimination [Clark v. Marsh (D.C. Cir. 1981) 665 F.2d 1168, 1173 (Title VII)]. There must be a "continuous pattern of discriminatory treatment" [Satterwhite v. Smith (9th Cir. 1984) 744 F.2d 1380, 1382 (42 U.S.C. § 1981; racial slurs); Valdez v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1043, 1052-1053, 282 Cal. Rptr. 726 (discriminatory promotion system)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Constructive Discharge. Under California law, a constructive discharge can occur without discrimination [see Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022] . Note too that constructive discharge cases are becoming more common and more complex. Often they will arise in a situation where an employee has gone out on a "stress" leave and is pursuing a workers' compensation claim or is on disability leave. Typically, the employee's ability to "return to work" will require some accommodation by the employer and the employee should make an effort to return to work with accommodation. Sometimes this may only involve a transfer. A doctor's recommendation regarding accommodation can be important in these cases. The fact that a physician is requesting certain accommodations that are not granted does not necessarily mean that the employee's decision to resign because of "intolerable conditions" is "reasonable." The employer's failure to accommodate a request by an employee's physician, however, is not necessarily dispositive. In other words, the final analysis is whether the employee's working conditions were so intolerable that he or she was forced to resign. This is subject to the "reasonable person" test and should normally go to a jury if there is evidence of "intolerable" working conditions. By John H. Scott

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationEmployment PracticesDischarges & Failures to HireLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationEmployment PracticesDischarges & Failures to HireLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationEmployment PracticesDischargesLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationNational Origin DiscriminationEmployment PracticesDischargesLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationRacial DiscriminationEmployment PracticesDischarges

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Application of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws to Specific Employment Practices

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.35

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.35 Accommodation

[1] Physical and Mental Disabilities

[a] Scope of Employer's Duty to Accommodate

FEHA requires employers reasonably to accommodate the physical or mental disabilities of any applicant or employee unless the employer can demonstrate that such an accommodation would result in undue hardship to the operation of the business [see Gov. Code § 12940(m); see Nadaf-Rahrov v. Neiman-Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 952, 977, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 190 (employer is liable under Gov. Code § 12940(m) for failing to accommodate employee only if work environment could have been modified or adjusted in manner that would have enabled employee to perform essential functions of job)]. It is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to fail to engage in a timely, good-faith interactive process with the employee or applicant to determine effective reasonable accommodations, if any, in response to a request for reasonable accommodation by an employee or applicant with a known physical or mental disability or medical condition [Gov. Code § 12940(n); see Gov. Code § 12926.1(e) (legislative statement affirming importance of interactive process between applicant or employee and employer in determining reasonable accommodation, as that requirement has been articulated by EEOC in interpreting ADA)]. However, to prevail on a claim that the employer failed to engage in the interactive process, the employee must identify a reasonable accommodation that would have been available at the time the interactive process should have occurred [Scotch v. Art Inst. of Cal.-Orange County (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1018-1019, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 (unless, after litigation with full discovery, employee identifies reasonable accommodation that was objectively available when interactive process should have occurred, he or she has suffered no remediable injury from any violation of employer's duty to engage in interactive process); Nadaf-Rahrov v. Neiman-Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 952, 982, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 190 (employer is not liable under Gov. Code § 12940(n) for failing to engage in interactive process if no reasonable accommodation was possible)].

FEHA's definition of "disability" includes "[b]eing regarded or treated by the employer ... as having, or having had" a qualifying mental or physical condition [Gov. Code § 12926(i)(4), (5), (k)(4), (5)]. The employer's duty under FEHA to accommodate and to engage in a good-faith interactive process to determine reasonable accommodations applies whether the applicant or employee is actually disabled or is "regarded as" disabled [Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 54-62, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874] .

FEHA defines reasonable accommodation as either of the following: (1) making existing facilities used by employees readily accessible to, and usable by, individuals with disabilities; or (2) job restructuring, part-time or modified work schedules, reassignment to a vacant position, acquisition or modification of equipment or devices, adjustment or modifications of examinations, training materials or policies, the provision of qualified readers or interpreters, and other similar accommodations for individuals with disabilities [Gov. Code § 12926(n)]. If more than one effective accommodation is possible, the employer is not obligated to choose the best one or the one requested by the employee; rather, the employer has discretion to choose the least expensive or most convenient effective accommodation [Hanson v. Lucky Stores (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 215, 228, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 487] .

The duty to provide a reasonable accommodation ordinarily does not obligate an employer that has temporarily restructured an employee's position to transform that accommodation into a permanent position once the employee's temporary disability becomes permanent [Raine v. City of Burbank (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1224, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 899 ; Watkins v. Ameripride Servs. (9th Cir. 2004) 375 F.3d 821, 828] . Thus, although reasonable accommodation for an employee with a permanent disability would include job reassignment if a vacant position exists, the employer is not required to create a new position to accommodate that employee [Raine v. City of Burbank (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1227, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 899 (municipal employer not required to reclassify light-duty front-desk position from civilian position to sworn-officer position to accommodate officer whose disability has become permanent)]. In such a case, the creation of a new position just for the employee with a disability would not be a reasonable accommodation--at least when the employer does not regularly offer such assistance--and so would not be required by FEHA, even if creating a new position would not impose an undue hardship on the employer [Raine v. City of Burbank (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1227-1228, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 899] .

When reassignment to a different position is necessary to accommodate an employee, it is not sufficient for the employer simply to advise the employee to check a job listing. Rather, the employer has a duty to take some kind of affirmative action, and the employer is relieved of such a duty only if reassignment would impose an undue hardship on the employer or if there is no vacant position for which the employee is qualified [Spitzer v. Good Guys (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1376, 1388-1390, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 236] .

FEHA does not require an employer to accommodate an employee's medical use of marijuana by waiving the employer's policy requiring negative drug tests for new employees. The Compassionate Use Act of 1996 (Proposition 215) exempts certain medical users of marijuana from criminal liability under two specific California statutes [see Health & Safety Code § 11362.5(d) (providing defense against prosecution under Health & Safety Code §§ 11357, 11358 for person who possesses or cultivates marijuana for medical purposes on recommendation or approval of physician)]. However, marijuana possession remains illegal under federal law, even for medical use [21 U.S.C. §§ 812, 844(a); Gonzales v. Raich (2005) 545 U.S. 1, 26-29, 125 S. Ct. 2195, 162 L. Ed. 2d 1]. Moreover, the Compassionate Use Act is limited in scope: it merely exempts medical users and their primary caregivers from criminal liability under two specified state statutes, and it does not address the rights and obligations of employers and employees. Therefore, Compassionate Use Act cannot be read as requiring employers to accommodate medical marijuana use [Ross v. RagingWire Telecommunications, Inc. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 920, 932-933, 174 P.3d 200].

Title VII does not prohibit disability discrimination or require accommodation. The ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.], which prohibits employment discrimination based on disability [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 12111(2), 12112], the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 [29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.], which applies to federal contractors and recipients of federal funds [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 793, 794], and the Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974 [VEVRAA; 38 U.S.C. § 4211 et seq.], which covers federal contractors [see 38 U.S.C. § 4212], are the principal federal statutes that proscribe discrimination based on disability and require accommodation.

The ADA's definition of "disability" includes "being regarded as having" a qualifying impairment. An individual meets this requirement if he or she has been subjected to an action prohibited under the ADA because of an actual or perceived physical or mental impairment, whether or not the impairment limits or is perceived to limit a major life activity [42 U.S.C. § 12102(3)(A)]. However, this requirement does not apply to impairments that are transitory (i.e., with an actual or expected duration of six months or less) and minor [42 U.S.C. § 12102(3)(B)].

Once an employer becomes aware of the need for accommodation, the ADA imposes a mandatory obligation on the employer to engage in an interactive process with the employee to identify and implement appropriate reasonable accommodations [Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1105, 1114 (en banc), rev'd on other grounds, US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589 ; see US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589, 605-606 (Stevens, J., concurring) (Ninth Circuit's holding that ADA imposes mandatory obligation to engage in interactive process was left undisturbed by Supreme Court's decision); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(o)(3)]. This obligation extends beyond the first attempt at accommodation and continues when the employee asks for a different accommodation or when the employer is aware that the initial accommodation is failing and further accommodation is needed [Humphrey v. Memorial Hosps. Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1137-1138] . However, the ADA requires only reasonable accommodation. For example, an unpaid leave of absence may be a reasonable accommodation if it does not pose an undue hardship on the employer [Nunes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 164 F.3d 1243, 1247] .

On the other hand, an employer ordinarily need not offer an accommodation that would violate the employer's bona fide, established seniority rules (whether those seniority rules were unilaterally adopted by the employer or were the result of collective bargaining). An accommodation that requires violating seniority rules is unreasonable as a matter of law, unless there are special circumstances that make it reasonable in a particular case [US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589, 597-598 (showing that requested accommodation conflicts with employer's unilaterally adopted seniority rules entitles employer to summary judgment, unless employee shows special circumstances making exception to seniority rules reasonable in particular case); Willis v. Pac. Mar. Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 244 F.3d 675, 680-682 (accommodation that would require violation of bona fide seniority system maintained under terms of collective bargaining agreement is per se unreasonable)].

The employee's failure to participate in the interactive process may relieve the employer of the duty to engage in further attempts to identify and implement a reasonable accommodation. For example, if the employee requests an accommodation in the form of a job that, according to the existing medical documentation, he or she is not qualified to perform, the employee's failure to submit documentation of improved medical condition relieves the employer of any further obligation to investigate the appropriateness of the requested accommodation. Similarly, if the employee does not cooperate in skills testing to determine whether he or she is qualified for certain positions, the employer need not engage in a further job search for the employee [Allen v. Pac. Bell (9th Cir. 2003) 348 F.3d 1113, 1116 (ADA)] . The employee's obligation to participate in the interactive process of determining a reasonable accommodation ends when the employer and employee agree on a reasonable accommodation. At that point, the employer must provide the agreed-upon accommodation, and a failure to provide the accommodation will not be excused by an alleged failure by the employee to continue participating in an interactive process [A.M. v. Albertsons, LLC (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 455, 463-464, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 449] .

For more detailed discussion relating to the scope and application of the ADA, the Rehabilitation Act, and the VEVRAA, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Chs. 40, 41 (Matthew Bender).

For a form of allegation of failure to accommodate an employee's physical or mental disability, for use in a civil complaint under FEHA, see § 115.92. For a form of affirmative defense alleging that accommodation of an employee's disability would impose undue hardship on the employer, see § 115.100.

PRACTICE TIP:

Accommodation Issues and Worker's Compensation Claims. Accommodation issues can often interface with a worker's compensation claim. When that occurs it is very important to coordinate with the worker's compensation attorney. In some cases the worker's compensation remedies may be more certain or, in some ways, better than whatever remedy could come out of a discrimination claim. For example, vocational rehabilitation and "future medicals" are remedies that can be of extreme value to persons with career ending injuries that are job related. In addition, it is important to carefully review any settlement agreement in these cases to ensure that a worker's compensation settlement is not "waiving" or "releasing" other claims [see Jefferson v. California Dep't of Youth Authority (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 299, 305-306, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 391, 48 P.3d 423] (general release of all claims in workers' compensation proceeding ordinarily bars subsequent litigation of FEHA claim); but see Claxton v. Waters (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 367, 376, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 246, 96 P.3d 496 (standard language of mandatory preprinted form used in settling workers' compensation claims [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10874] releases only those claims that are within scope of workers' compensation system); see also § 115.54[8]]. On the other hand, it is also important when settling a "discrimination" claim to make sure you are not releasing or waiving (unknowingly) a potential worker's compensation remedy. By John H. Scott

[b] Notice to Employer of Disability

The employee generally bears the initial burden of notifying the employer of the disability, which then triggers the employer's obligation to participate with the employee in an effort to determine a reasonable accommodation [Spitzer v. Good Guys (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1376, 1384-1385, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 236] . The key factor, however, is the employer's knowledge; if an employer knows of an employee's disability, the employer has an affirmative duty to accommodate, even if the employee does not request specific accommodation [Prilliman v. United Air Lines (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 950-951, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142] .

[c] Prima Facie Case of Failure to Accommodate Physical and Mental Disabilities

An employee establishes a prima facie case of failure to accommodate by proving (1) that he or she is qualified for the position (i.e., that he or she can, with reasonable accommodation, perform the essential functions of the job) [see Gov. Code § 12940(a)(1); Green v. State (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 254, 260-263, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 165 P.3d 118 (employee has burden of establishing his or her ability, with reasonable accommodation, to perform essential functions); Quinn v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 472, 480-484, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 914 (plaintiff police officer could not establish prima facie cause of action for failure to accommodate hearing disability because that disability disqualified plaintiff for employment as police officer)], (2) that he or she is disabled within the meaning of FEHA [see § 115.22[8]], and (3) that the employer has failed to accommodate the disability [see A.M. v. Albertsons, LLC (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 455, 465, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 449 (single instance of failure to accommodate may be sufficient to establish violation)]. The burden is then on the employer to produce evidence demonstrating that it has not discriminated, by establishing that the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on its operations, for example [see [d], below]. The employee must then have a fair opportunity to prove that the reason given for failing to accommodate is a pretext for discrimination [County of Fresno v. FEHC (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1553, 277 Cal. Rptr. 557] .

If the employee is disabled, the employee will withstand a motion for summary judgment on the failure-to-accommodate issue unless the employer establishes through undisputed facts that (1) reasonable accommodation was offered and refused; (2) there simply was no vacant position within the employer's organization for which the employee was qualified and that the employee was capable of performing, with or without accommodation; or (3) the employer did everything in its power to find a reasonable accommodation, but the informal, interactive process broke down because the employee failed to engage in discussions in good faith [Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 263, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55] . On the other hand, when the undisputed facts show that the employer's accommodation is reasonable as a matter of law (even if insufficient to permit the employee to retain his or her position), the employee has not established a prima facie case [Gosvener v. Coastal Corp. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 805, 813] .

In a failure-to-accommodate claim under the ADA, an employee with a qualifying disability has the initial burden of showing that the requested accommodation seems reasonable on its face (i.e., ordinarily, or in the run of cases). Once the employee has made this showing, the employer must show special circumstances demonstrating that the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the employer's business [US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 402, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589 ; see 42 U.S.C. § 12112(a),(b)(5)(A)]. The employer's showing typically will be based on case-specific circumstances. However, if the employee's requested accommodation would violate the employer's seniority rules, the employer need not introduce case-specific circumstances. Because ordinarily it would be unreasonable to require a violation of seniority rules, the employer need only establish that the requested accommodation would violate bona fide, established seniority rules. When the employer makes this showing, the burden shifts back to the employee to show case-specific special circumstances that make a violation of seniority rules reasonable in the particular case. If the employee fails to meet this burden, the requested accommodation is unreasonable as a matter of law, and the employer will be entitled to summary judgment [US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 402-406, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589 (same analysis applies whether seniority rules are unilaterally adopted by employer or result of collective bargaining)]. Special circumstances that might make it reasonable to violate seniority rules include cases in which the employer has frequently exercised a retained right to make unilateral changes in the seniority rules, or in which the seniority system already has multiple exceptions [US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 405-406, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589] .

[d] Undue Hardship

FEHA expressly excuses employers from reasonable accommodation if accommodation imposes an undue hardship [Gov. Code § 12940(m)]. The employer has the burden of "demonstrating" that a particular accommodation would produce undue hardship to its operation [see Gov. Code § 12940(m)].

FEHA defines "undue hardship" to mean an action requiring significant difficulty or expense when considered in light of all of the following factors [Gov. Code § 12926(s)]:

- The nature and cost of the accommodation needed;

- The overall financial resources of the facilities involved in the provision of the reasonable accommodations, the number of persons employed at the facility, and the effect on expenses and resources or the impact otherwise of these accommodations on the operation of the facility;

- The overall financial resources of the covered entity, the overall size of the business of a covered entity with respect to the number of employees, and the number, type, and location of its facilities;

- The type of operations, including the composition, structure, and functions of the workforce of the entity; and

- The geographic separateness and administrative or fiscal relationship of the facility or facilities.

In addition, an employer is not liable for refusing to hire or for discharging an employee with a physical or mental disability or medical condition if the employee is unable to perform his or her "essential duties" with reasonable accommodations, or cannot perform them without endangering the health or safety of himself or herself or others, even with reasonable accommodation [Gov. Code § 12940(a)(1),(2); see Gov. Code § 12926(f) (definition of "essential functions"); see also discussion in*§ 115.54[6]*].

The ADA also provides for the defense of undue hardship with respect to its accommodation requirements [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 12111(10) (undue hardship defined), 12112(b)(5)(A) (accommodation required except on showing of undue hardship); see also 29 C.F.R. §§ 1630.2(p) (undue hardship defined), 1630.9(a) (accommodation required except on showing of undue hardship), 1630.15(d) (undue hardship as a defense)].

[2] Religion

[a] Scope of Employer's Duty to Accommodate

FEHA and Title VII require an employer to accommodate an individual's religious beliefs and practices, unless accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the employer [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(j) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940 (l) (FEHA); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(c)(1) (refusal to accommodate is justified only when employer can demonstrate that undue hardship would result from each available accommodation alternative); Toledo v. Nobel-Sysco, Inc. (10th Cir. 1989) 892 F.2d 1481, 1490 , cert. denied, 495 U.S. 948 (1990) (Title VII; employer may prevail without making efforts to accommodate if it shows no accommodation could have been made without undue hardship)]. Failure reasonably to accommodate, absent undue hardship, is an unlawful employment practice [Trans World Airlines v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 74, 97 S. Ct. 2264, 53 L. Ed. 2d 113 (Title VII); 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(b) (EEOC guideline)].

For example, an employer may reasonably accommodate under FEHA by allowing lateral transfers or changes of job assignments [see Cook v. Lindsay Olive Growers (9th Cir. 1990) 911 F.2d 233, 241 ; see also Gov. Code § 12940 (l); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.3(a)].

[b] Notice to Employer and Employee's Duty to Cooperate

Under Title VII, the accommodation duty arises after an employee or prospective employee notifies an employer of his or her need for religious accommodation [see 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(c)(1)]. The burden is then on the employer to undertake initial steps toward accommodation [EEOC v. Townley Engineering & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 610, 614-615 , cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1077 (1989) ; Proctor v. Consolidated Freightways Corp. (9th Cir. 1986) 795 F.2d 1472, 1475 ; Anderson v. General Dynamics Convair Aerospace Div. (9th Cir. 1978) 589 F.2d 397, 401 , cert. denied, 442 U.S. 921 (1979) ; see also Toledo v. Nobel-Sysco, Inc. (10th Cir. 1989) 892 F.2d 1481, 1488 , cert. denied, 495 U.S. 948 (1990) (employer must attempt accommodation before taking adverse action against employee)].

An employee is under no burden to propose specific means of accommodation [see Brener v. Diagnostic Center Hospital (5th Cir. 1982) 671 F.2d 141, 145] . However, the employee does have a duty to cooperate with the measures suggested by the employer [Brener v. Diagnostic Center Hospital (5th Cir. 1982) 671 F.2d 141, 145 ; Yott v. North American Rockwell Corp. (9th Cir. 1979) 602 F.2d 904, 908 , cert. denied, 445 U.S. 928 (1980) ; see 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(c)(2) (factors examined by EEOC to determine whether accommodation offered is reasonable when more than one method of accommodation available that would not cause undue hardship)]. The employee's duty to cooperate arises only after the employer has made its suggestions of possible accommodations, and if the employer does not make an effort to accommodate the employer prior to taking adverse action against the employee, the employee's duty of cooperation does not arise [Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433, 1440-1441] .

If both the employee and the employer propose a reasonable accommodation, the employer is not required to accept the employee's proposal [see Ansonia Bd. of Educ. v. Philbrook (1986) 479 U.S. 60, 68, 107 S. Ct. 367, 93 L. Ed. 2d 305] . However, if the employer's proposal does not eliminate the employee's religious conflict, the employer must either accept the employee's proposal or demonstrate that the proposal would cause an undue hardship [EEOC v. Townley Engineering & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 610, 615 , cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1077 (1989)] .

For further discussion relating to specific religious conflicts that may arise, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender).

For a form of allegation of failure to accommodate an employee's religious beliefs or practices, for use in a civil complaint under FEHA, see § 115.91.

[c] Prima Facie Case of Failure to Accommodate

Under Title VII, a plaintiff may establish a prima facie case of failure to accommodate by pleading and proving that (1) he or she has a bona fide religious belief [see discussion in § 115.22[6]], (2) he or she informed the employer of the belief and that it conflicted with his or her employment responsibilities, and (3) an adverse employment action was taken against the plaintiff because of his or her observance of that belief [see EEOC v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1512 ; Proctor v. Consolidated Freightways Corp. (9th Cir. 1986) 795 F.2d 1472, 1475 ; see also Tiano v. Dillard Department Stores (9th Cir. 1998) 139 F.3d 679, 682-683 (prima facie case includes proof that temporal mandate was part of employee's bona fide religious belief, if employee contends that his or her belief required attendance at particular time and place, such as at particular pilgrimage)].

The burden then shifts to the employer to show that it made good faith efforts to accommodate the employee's religious beliefs [see EEOC v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1512 ; Proctor v. Consolidated Freightways Corp. (9th Cir. 1986) 795 F.2d 1472, 1475 ; Bhatia v. Chevron U.S.A. (9th Cir. 1984) 734 F.2d 1382, 1383 ; Anderson v. General Dynamics Convair Aerospace Div. (9th Cir. 1978) 589 F.2d 397, 401 , cert. denied, 442 U.S. 921 (1979)] .

If the employer's efforts to accommodate were unsuccessful, the employer must demonstrate that it was unable to reasonably accommodate without undue hardship [Proctor v. Consolidated Freightways Corp. (9th Cir. 1986) 795 F.2d 1472, 1475 ; Brener v. Diagnostic Center Hospital (5th Cir. 1982) 671 F.2d 141, 144 ; see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(j); see also EEOC v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1512] .

If the employer shows that it provided reasonable accommodation, however, it need not further show that each alternative accommodation would result in undue hardship [see Ansonia Bd. of Educ. v. Philbrook (1986) 479 U.S. 60, 68, 107 S. Ct. 367, 93 L. Ed. 2d 305 ; Hudson v. Western Airlines (9th Cir. 1988) 851 F.2d 261, 266] .

If the employer does not suggest a reasonable method of accommodation, but the employee does, the employer must establish that the employee's suggestions for accommodation were not feasible [Opuku-Boateng v. State of California (9th Cir. 1996) 95 F.3d 1461, 1469-1472 , cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1228 (1997)] .

[d] Undue Hardship

The burden of proving undue hardship is on the employer [see Bhatia v. Chevron U.S.A. (9th Cir. 1984) 734 F.2d 1382, 1383 (Title VII); Brener v. Diagnostic Center Hospital (5th Cir. 1982) 671 F.2d 141, 144 (Title VII); Anderson v. General Dynamics Convair Aerospace Div. (9th Cir. 1978) 589 F.2d 397, 401 , cert. denied, 442 U.S. 921 (1979) (Title VII)].

To show undue hardship, there must be proof of actual imposition on coworkers or disruption of the work routine [see Peterson v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 358 F.3d 599, 606-608 (accommodation of employee's religious beliefs by allowing employee to post offensive messages directed at homosexual coworkers, or by excluding sexual orientation from employer's workplace diversity program, would constitute undue hardship by inhibiting employer's efforts to attract and retain qualified, diverse work force)]. Merely conceivable or hypothetical hardship, such as "spiritual hardship" [see EEOC v. Townley Engineering & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 610, 615 , cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1077 (1989)] , morale problems or unsubstantiated conclusions that other employees would inundate the employer with requests for shift changes [Opuku-Boateng v. State of California (9th Cir. 1996) 95 F.3d 1461, 1469-1472 , cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1228 (1997)] , or possible increased liability [see Toledo v. Nobel-Sysco, Inc. (10th Cir. 1989) 892 F.2d 1481, 1492 , cert. denied, 495 U.S. 948 (1990)] , is insufficient.

Accommodation requiring the employer to bear more than a de minimis cost constitutes an undue hardship [see Trans World Airlines v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 84, 97 S. Ct. 2264, 53 L. Ed. 2d 113 (costs involving lost efficiency or payment of higher wages were more than "de minimis"); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(e)(1) (EEOC guideline; determination of "de minimis" costs)].

FEHC regulations provide that, in determining undue hardship, the factors that may be considered include, but are not limited to, the following [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.3(b)]:

- The size of the relevant establishment or facility with respect to the number of employees, the size of budget, and other such matters;

- The overall size of the employer or other covered entity with respect to the number of employees, number and type of facilities, and size of budget;

- The type of the establishment's or facility's operation, including the composition and structure of the workforce or membership;

- The type of the employer's or other covered entity's operation, including the composition and structure of the workforce or membership;

- The nature and cost of the accommodation involved;

- Reasonable notice to the employer or other covered entity of the need for accommodation; and

- Any available reasonable alternative means of accommodation.

Title VII permits an employer to operate a bona fide seniority system, provided that differences in treatment of employees under the system are not the result of an intent to discriminate because of religion or other impermissible grounds [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h)]. However, the existence of a seniority system that complies with Title VII does not relieve the employer of the duty to reasonably accommodate its employees' religious beliefs, unless the accommodation cannot be accomplished without disrupting the seniority system or imposing more than a de minimis hardship on the employer [Balint v. Carson City (9th Cir. 1999) 180 F.3d 1047, 1053-1054 (en banc)]. For example, it is an undue hardship to require an employer to accommodate an employee's religious need for time off if the only alternatives are to leave the employer short-handed or to infringe on the seniority system (by requiring a more senior employee to work in violation of his or her right to shift preference under the seniority system) [Trans World Airlines v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 80-81, 97 S. Ct. 2264, 53 L. Ed. 2d 113 (collective bargaining agreement established seniority system); see 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(e)(2)].

For a form of affirmative defense alleging that accommodation of an employee's religious beliefs or practices would impose undue hardship on the employer, see § 115.91.

[3] Pregnancy

FEHA requires employers to make reasonable accommodations, for employees who request them, with the advice of health care providers, for pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions [Gov. Code § 12945(b)(1)].

Also, FEHA requires employers who have a policy, practice, or collective bargaining agreement authorizing or requiring the transfer of temporarily disabled employees to less strenuous or hazardous positions, also to transfer temporarily disabled pregnant employees to less strenuous or hazardous positions for the duration of the disability if the employee so requests [Gov. Code § 12945(b)(2)]. If the employer does not have such a policy, practice, or collective bargaining agreement provision, it is required to transfer a pregnant employee to a less strenuous or hazardous position for the duration of her pregnancy if the employee so requests, with the advice of her physician, and if the transfer can be reasonably accommodated [see Gov. Code § 12945(b)(3)]. However, employers are not required to meet this requirement by creating additional employment that would not otherwise have been created, by discharging any employee, by transferring any employee with more seniority, or by promoting any employee who is not qualified to perform the job [see Gov. Code § 12945(b)(3)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationReasonable AccommodationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationReasonable AccommodationUndue HardshipLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationReligious DiscriminationDefenses & ExceptionsReasonable Accommodation & Undue Hardship

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Application of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws to Specific Employment Practices

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.36

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.36 Harassment

[1] Scope of Protection

[a] Acts Constituting Harassment

FEHA prohibits harassment of employees or applicants based on any classification protected by FEHA [Gov. Code § 12940(j); see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b)(2); DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 12 (sexual harassment as discrimination "because of sex"); DFEH v. County of Madera (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-03, p. 19 (same)]. Federal equal employment opportunity statutes contain no express proscription against harassment, but the Supreme Court has held that harassment based on protected classifications violates Title VII [see Burlington Industries v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 764-765, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 780, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662 ; Harris v. Forklift Systems (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 21-23, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295 ; Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 64-67, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49] .

Harassment includes, but is not limited to [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b)(1)]:

- Verbal harassment (for example, epithets, derogatory comments, or slurs);
- Physical harassment (for example, assault, impeding or blocking movement, or any interference with normal work or movement);
- Visual forms of harassment (for example, derogatory posters, cartoons, or drawings); and
- Sexual favors (for example, unwanted sexual advances that condition an employment benefit on an exchange of sexual favors).

Harassment is generally concerned with the message conveyed to an employee, and therefore with the social environment of the workplace, while discrimination is concerned with explicit changes in the terms or conditions of employment [compare Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1) (making it unlawful for employer "to harass" employee on basis of protected classification) with Gov. Code § 12940(a) (making it unlawful for employer "to discriminate [against employee] in compensation or in terms, conditions, or privileges of employment" on basis of protected classification)]. However, although harassment and discrimination are separate wrongs, they are sometimes closely interrelated and even overlapping, particularly with regard to proof. Thus, in some cases the hostile message that constitutes the harassment is conveyed through official employment actions, and therefore evidence that would otherwise be associated with a discrimination claim can form the basis of a harassment claim [Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749 ("[I]n analyzing the sufficiency of evidence in support of a harassment claim, there is no basis for excluding evidence of biased personnel management actions so long as that evidence is relevant to prove the communication of a hostile message.")].

Employers must take all reasonable steps to prevent harassment [see Gov. Code § 12940(j),(k); see [6], below].

For a form of allegation of harassment, for use in a civil complaint under FEHA, see § 115.93.

[b] Loss of Tangible Benefits

Loss of tangible benefits is not necessary to establish unlawful harassment [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1)]. Thus, hostile or unwelcome sex-linked conduct that deprives an employee of a work environment free of harassment is unlawful, whether or not the conduct also results in the loss of some more tangible employment benefit, such as promotion, a pay increase, or employment itself [DFEH v. Rosenberg (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-09, p. 6; DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 12; see 2 Cal. Code Reg. 7287.6(b)].

Harassment may cause adverse employment decisions and the loss of tangible employment benefits [see, e.g., Bundy v. Jackson (D.C. Cir. 1981) 641 F.2d 934, 948-953] , but it may also be unlawful even in the absence of economic loss if it creates a hostile work environment [Burlington Industries v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 764-765, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 807-808, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662 ; Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 64-67, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49] .

[2] Liability for Harassment

[a] Employer Liability for Supervisors and Agents

Under FEHA, employers are strictly liable for the harassing conduct of their agents and supervisors [State Dep't of Health Servs. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1026, 1040-1041, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441, 79 P.3d 556 (hostile environment sexual harassment); Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 397, 415-416, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457 ; Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 608 n.6, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842] . In this context, a "supervisor" is an individual having the authority, in the interest of the employer, to hire, transfer, suspend, lay off, recall, promote, discharge, assign, reward, or discipline other employees, or the responsibility to direct them, or to adjust their grievances, or effectively to recommend that action, if the exercise of that authority is not of a merely routine or clerical nature but requires the use of independent judgment [Gov. Code § 12926(r); see Chapman v. Enos (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 920, 928-931, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 852 (trial court errs in instructing jury that to be deemed supervisor, individual must be fully accountable and responsible for employee's performance and work product)].

An employer is not liable, however, for off-duty, off-premises harassment by a supervisor if the facts show no sufficient nexus between the supervisor's conduct and his or her employment [Myers v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1403, 1421, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 501 (to avoid strict liability for supervisor's actions under FEHA, harassment must result from completely private relationship unconnected with employment; otherwise, employer is strictly liable for supervisor's actions, regardless of whether supervisor acted as employer's agent); Capitol City Foods v. Superior Court (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 1047-1050, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418] .

Under Title VII, an employer is subject to vicarious liability to a victimized employee for an actionable hostile environment created by a supervisor with authority over the employee. If no tangible employment action is taken against the employee in conjunction with the harassment, the defending employer may raise an affirmative defense, subject to proof by a preponderance of the evidence. The defense comprises the following two necessary elements [Burlington Industries v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 765, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 807-808, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662] :

- That the employer exercised reasonable care to prevent and correct promptly any harassing behavior; and

- That the plaintiff employee unreasonably failed to take advantage of any preventive or corrective opportunities provided by the employer or to avoid harm otherwise.

No affirmative defense is available, however, when the supervisor's harassment culminates in a tangible employment action, such as discharge, demotion, or undesirable reassignment [Burlington Industries v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 765, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 807-808, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662] . Also, a tangible employment action for this purpose occurs when the supervisor threatens the employee with discharge and, in order to avoid the discharge, the employee complies with the supervisor's demands that the employee engage in sexual activity [Holly D. v. Cal. Inst. of Tech. (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1158, 1167-1173] . For further discussion, see § 115.54[3]; see also K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender).

A constructive discharge (i.e., an abusive working environment so intolerable that the employee's resignation qualifies as a fitting response) does not by itself constitute a tangible employment action for this purpose. Thus, if a Title VII plaintiff alleges that he or she was constructively discharged, the employer may assert the Burlington Industries/Faragher affirmative defense unless the employee quit in reasonable response to an employer-sanctioned adverse action that would qualify as a tangible employment action (for example, a humiliating demotion, extreme cut in pay, or transfer to a position in which the employee would face unbearable working conditions) [Pennsylvania State Police v. Suders (2004) 542 U.S. 129, 124 S. Ct. 2342, 159 L. Ed. 2d 204, 216-223] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Watch for Changes in Law. Practitioners should watch for possible changes in California law as it relates to adopting the affirmative defenses announced in Burlington Industries and Faragher. By John H. Scott

[b] Employer Liability for Non-Supervisors and Non-Employees

An employer may be liable under FEHA and Title VII for harassment by non-supervisory employees and non-employees when the employer (or its agents or supervisory employees) knows or should have known of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action [see Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1) (FEHA); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b)(3) (FEHC regulations); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.11(d), 1606.8(d) (EEOC regulations under Title VII); Carter v. California Dep't of Veterans Affairs (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 914, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 223, 229, 235-236, 135 P.3d 637 (2003 amendment of Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1), stating employer is potentially liable when nonemployee sexually harasses employee, declared existing law and may be applied to case pending when amendment was enacted); Freitag v. Ayers (9th Cir. 2006) 468 F.3d 528, 538-539 (correctional institution has legal obligation to take reasonable measures to protect its employees from hostile work environment resulting from sexual harassment by inmates); McGinest v. GTE Serv. Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1119 (Title VII; racial harassment); Folkerson v. Circus

Circus Enterprises (9th Cir. 1997) 107 F.3d 754, 756 (Title VII; dictum regarding sexual harassment by customers); see also Davis v. Monsanto Chemical Co. (6th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 345, 349 , cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1110 (1989) (Title VII; racial harassment); Snell v. Suffolk County (2d Cir. 1986) 782 F.2d 1094, 1104 (same)]. In reviewing cases involving the acts of nonemployees, the extent of the employer's control and any other legal responsibility which the employer may have with respect to the conduct of those nonemployees shall be considered [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1)].

EEOC guidelines provide that in cases involving harassment by non-employees, factors to be considered include the extent of the employer's control, and any other legal responsibility that the employer may have with respect to the non-employee's conduct [see 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.11(e), 1606.8(e)].

[c] Employer Liability for Punitive Damages

Under FEHA, employers are not strictly liable for punitive damages for harassment by their supervisors; employers are liable for punitive damages based on the acts of supervisory employees pursuant to the standard set forth under Civ. Code § 3294(b). Thus, an employer is liable for punitive damages for a supervisor's harassment of a subordinate only if the employer (1) had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the supervisor and employed him or her with conscious disregard for the rights or safety of others; (2) authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct; or (3) was itself guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice [see Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 397, 419-420, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457] .

If the employer's conduct meets the criteria set forth in Civ. Code § 3294(b), the assessment of punitive damages against the employer does not necessarily require an additional showing that the employer itself committed fraud, oppression, or malice [Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1153-1154, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510] . However, to subject a corporate employer to liability for punitive damages in such a case, the conscious disregard, authorization, or ratification must have been performed by an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation [Civ. Code § 3294(b)]. For this purpose, a "managing agent" is a corporate employee who exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in making decisions that ultimately determine corporate policy; the mere power to hire and fire employees is not sufficient to establish such authority [White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 567, 573-577, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944 (determination of managing-agent status is factual determination that must be made on case-by-case basis); see Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749 (supervisor in charge of four of corporation's 20,000 employees did not have kind of discretionary authority over formal corporate policies affecting substantial portion of corporation that would justify awarding punitive damages against corporation for that supervisor's conduct)]. For additional discussion of the standard for imposing punitive damage liability on an employer based on an employee's conduct, see Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts .

Under Title VII, in the punitive damages context, an employer may not be vicariously liable for the discriminatory employment decisions of managerial agents when those decisions are "contrary to the employer's good-faith efforts to comply with Title VII" [Kolstad v. American Dental Ass'n (1999) 527 U.S. 526, 545, 119 S. Ct. 2118, 144 L. Ed. 2d 494] .

[d] Employee Personal Liability

California courts have long held individual supervisors personally liable for sexual harassment under FEHA if they participate personally in the harassment or aid or abet it by failing to investigate or remedy it [Matthews v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 598, 599-600, 605-606, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 ; Page v. Superior Court (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1206, 1213,37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 529 ; but cf. Reno v. Baird (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 640, 645-647, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333 (individual supervisors not personally liable for other forms of discrimination under FEHA)].

Under the 2000 amendments to FEHA, any employee of an entity subject to FEHA is personally liable for harassment in violation of FEHA perpetrated by the employee, regardless of whether the employer or covered entity knows or should have known of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(3); see McClung v. Employment Development Dept. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 467, 475-476, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 428, 99 P.3d 1015 (Gov. Code § 12940(j)(3) does not apply retroactively to impose liability on nonsupervisors for conduct predating its enactment effective January 1, 2001)]. Moreover, the harassing coworker may also be personally liable to the harassment victim under other statutes or tort theories [Carrisales v. Department of Corrections (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1132, 1136-1137, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804, 988 P.2d 1083 (decided prior to enactment of legislation imposing FEHA liability directly on harassing coworker)].

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeal has ruled that supervisors and other employees are not personally liable for violations of Title VII [Miller v. Maxwell's Int'l (9th Cir. 1993) 991 F.2d 583, 587-588 , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1109 (1994)] .

[e] Indemnification

Under Lab. Code § 2802, an employer may be required to indemnify a supervisor for legal costs, including attorney's fees, incurred in successfully defending against a harassment suit brought against the supervisor by a coworker if the conduct giving rise to the suit was within the course and scope of the supervisor's employment [Jacobus v. Krambo Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1100-1104, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425 (course and scope of employment to be determined according to principles of respondeat superior)]. For further discussion of the employer's duty to indemnify employees under Lab. Code § 2802, see Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts .

[3] National Origin Harassment

FEHA expressly prohibits harassment based on ancestry or national origin (or based on a perception that the employee has, or is associated with one who has, a particular ancestry or national origin) [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1); see Gov. Code § 12926(m)].

EEOC guidelines provide that national origin harassment is a violation of Title VII, and an employer has an affirmative duty to maintain a working environment free from such harassment [29 C.F.R. § 1606.8(a)].

Under the EEOC guideline, ethnic slurs and other verbal or physical conduct relating to an individual's national origin constitute harassment when this conduct [29 C.F.R. § 1606.8(b)]:

- Has the purpose or effect of creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment;
- Has the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with an individual's work performance; or
- Otherwise adversely affects an individual's employment opportunities.

[4] Racial Harassment

FEHA expressly prohibits racial harassment (including harassment based on a perception that the employee is, or is associated with one who is, of a particular race) [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1); see Gov. Code § 12926(m)]. To be actionable, however, the harassment must be severe or pervasive; liability cannot be founded on acts of racial harassment that are occasional, isolated, sporadic, or trivial [Etter v. Veriflo Corp. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 457, 466-467, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33] .

A racially hostile working environment also violates Title VII [Snell v. Suffolk County (2d Cir. 1986) 782 F.2d 1094, 1102] . A plaintiff must prove more than a few isolated incidents of racial enmity; casual comments or accidental or sporadic conversation are insufficient [Gregory v. Widnall (9th Cir. 1998) 153 F.3d 1071, 1074-1075 ; Snell v. Suffolk County (2d Cir. 1986) 782 F.2d 1094, 1103] . Allegations of a racially hostile workplace must be assessed from the perspective of a reasonable person belonging to the racial or ethnic group of the plaintiff [see McGinest v. GTE Serv. Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1115]. The daily use of racial slurs and the proliferation of racially derogatory literature has been held to create a racially hostile environment under Title VII [Snell v. Suffolk County (2d Cir. 1986) 782 F.2d 1094, 1103] .

[5] Sexual Harassment

[a] Persons Protected

FEHA expressly prohibits harassment because of sex [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1); see Gov. Code § 12926(m)], which includes sexual harassment, gender harassment, and harassment based on pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(4)(C)].

FEHA also prohibits harassment based on an employee's sexual orientation or on the perception that the employee is, or is associated with one who is, of a particular sexual orientation [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1); see Gov. Code § 12926(m)].

Same-gender sexual harassment, as well as opposite-sex harassment, is prohibited by FEHA [Matthews v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 598, 603, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 ; Mogilefsky v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1409, 1416, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116] . Harassment between members of the same sex can be "because of sex" if it involves an attack on the plaintiff's sexual identity [see, e.g., Singleton v. United States Gypsum Co. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 1561-1563, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 597 (plaintiff's male co-workers used attacks on plaintiff's identity as heterosexual male as tool of harassment)]. Moreover, there is no requirement that the motive for the harassment be sexual in nature. Sexual harassment occurs when sex is used as a weapon to create a hostile work environment [Singleton v. United States Gypsum Co. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 1564, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 597 (harasser's motive was that he was angry with plaintiff for having reported him)].

Although sexual harassment is not expressly proscribed by Title VII, courts have held that sexual harassment violates Title VII [see Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 64-67, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(a) (EEOC guideline)].

[b] Types of Sexual Harassment

[i] In General

Harassment because of sex may take the form of verbal, physical, or visual harassment, as well as unwanted sexual advances [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.1(f)(1) (FEHC regulations)].

Historically, there are two categories of sexual harassment: (1) "quid pro quo" harassment, and (2) "hostile work environment" harassment [Hicks v. Gates Rubber Co. (10th Cir. 1987) 833 F.2d 1406, 1413 (Title VII); Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 607, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA); see Katz v. Dole (4th Cir. 1983) 709 F.2d 251, 254 (Title VII)]. Both types of sexual harassment are discussed in [ii] and [iii], below.

[ii] "Quid Pro Quo" Harassment

"Quid pro quo" harassment occurs when a plaintiff shows, by a preponderance of the evidence, that submission to sexual conduct was made a condition for receiving concrete employment benefits or for the avoiding of job detriment [see Burlington Industries v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 760-763, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 (significant change in employment status, such as hiring, firing, failing to promote, reassignment with significantly different responsibilities, or a decision causing a significant change in benefits); Heyne v. Caruso (9th Cir. 1995) 69 F.3d 1475, 1478 (employer's proffered reasons for its detrimental actions were pretextual); Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 607, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(a) (EEOC guideline on sex discrimination)].

In Title VII "quid pro quo" actions, an employee may establish a prima facie case by a showing that (1) the plaintiff was a victim of a pattern or practice of sexual harassment attributable to his or her employer; and (2) the plaintiff applied for and was denied a benefit, such as a promotion, for which he or she was technically eligible, and of which he or she had a reasonable expectation. If a prima facie case is established, the employer bears the burden of showing, by clear and convincing evidence, that it had legitimate and nondiscriminatory reasons for denying the benefit. If the employer successfully rebuts the prima facie case, the plaintiff must have the opportunity to prove that the employer's purported reasons were pretextual [see Bundy v. Jackson (D.C. Cir. 1981) 641 F.2d 934, 953] .

[iii] "Hostile Work Environment" Harassment

A prima facie case of hostile work environment sexual harassment is established if the plaintiff establishes all of the following [see Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 161, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 ; Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 608, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA); see also EEOC v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1514-1515 (Title VII)]:

- He or she was subject to unwelcome sexual harassment;
- The harassment was based on sex;
- The harassment was sufficiently severe or pervasive so as to alter the conditions of employment and create an abusive working environment; and
- The relationship between the employer and the person or persons committing the acts of harassment is sufficient to impose liability on the employer under principles of respondent superior.

The FEHC uses a similar test, requiring the prima facie showing. The plaintiff must show that the harassing conduct led to the deprivation of an employment benefit or benefits [see DFEH v. Rosenberg (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-09, p. 6; DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 12; DFEH v. Madera County (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-03, p. 19]. FEHC regulations provide that a "discrimination-free workplace" (that is, a workplace free of harassment) is an employment benefit [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(f)(3)].

To establish that harassment is based on sex, a plaintiff must show disparate treatment on the basis of sex; the mere discussion of sex or the use of vulgar language will not be sufficient. Thus, a hostile work environment sexual harassment claim is not established if a supervisor or coworker simply uses crude or inappropriate language in front of employees, makes lewd gestures, or draws a vulgar picture, without directing sexual innuendos or gender-related language toward the plaintiff or toward women in general. For example, the California Supreme Court has held that, in the context of a workplace where comedy writers were paid to create scripts highlighting adult-themed sexual humor and jokes, and where members of both sexes contributed and were exposed to the creative process spawning such humor and jokes, the writers' sexual antics and graphic discussions not aimed at the plaintiff or any other female employee did not contribute to an environment in which men and women were treated disparately [Lyle v. Warner Bros. Television Prods. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 264, 279-282, 286-288, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 2, 132 P.3d 211] .

In determining whether the sexual conduct is sufficiently severe or pervasive to constitute a hostile work environment, the focus is on the perspective of a reasonable person with the same fundamental characteristics as the plaintiff [Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1527 (Title VII); Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 878-879 (Title VII); Lyle v. Warner Brothers Television Productions (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 264, 283-285 ; Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 609-610, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA)]. This inquiry requires careful consideration of the social context in which particular behavior occurs and is experienced by its target [Lyle v. Warner Bros. Television Prods. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 264, 283, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 2, 132 P.3d 211 ("[t]he real social impact of workplace behavior often depends on a constellation of surrounding circumstances, expectations, and relationships which are not fully captured by a simple recitation of the words used or the physical acts performed. Common sense, and an appropriate sensibility to social context, will enable courts and juries to distinguish between simple teasing or roughhousing... and conduct which a reasonable person in the plaintiff's position would find severely hostile or abusive"), quoting Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Servs., Inc. (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 81-82, 118 S. Ct. 998, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201)].

PRACTICE TIP:

"Sex" vs. "Gender." The harassment need not be "sex" based to be actionable. There is a line of cases that stand for the proposition that "gender" based harassment is actionable, for example, in the case of misogyny [see, e.g., Accardi v. Superior Court (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 341, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292 ; Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842] . In other words, women can be harassed because they are not liked. That is different from "sex" harassment that is based on sexual conduct. By John H. Scott

To be actionable, harassment must be sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the plaintiff's employment and create an abusive environment [Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 67, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 (Title VII); Harris v. Forklift Systems (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 21, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295 ; Lyle v. Warner Bros. Television Prods. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 264, 278-279, 283-285, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 2, 132 P.3d 211 ; Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 608-610, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA); see Birschtein v. New United Motor Manufacturing, Inc. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1000-1002, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 (FEHA; co-worker's repeated acts of staring at plaintiff, after plaintiff had complained to management of earlier overt acts of sexual harassment, could qualify as actionable sexual harassment)]. However, the harassment need not be so severe as to be psychologically injurious, to violate Title VII [Harris v. Forklift Systems (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 22, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295] .

Although a single instance of sexual harassment might be sufficient to establish a hostile work environment, the required showing of severity or seriousness of the conduct increases as the number of incidents decreases [Brooks v. City of San Mateo (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 917, 926 (Title VII, FEHA; one incident of sexual harassment of coworker followed by perpetrator's termination by employer was not sufficiently severe to support hostile work environment cause of action)]. Whether an environment is sufficiently hostile or abusive must be judged by looking at all the circumstances, including (1) the frequency of the discriminatory conduct; (2) its severity; (3) whether the conduct is physically threatening or humiliating, or a mere offensive utterance; and (4) whether it unreasonably interferes with an employee's work performance [Harris v. Forklift Systems (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 23, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295 ; see Dee v. Vintage Petroleum, Inc. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 30, 36-37, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 923 (reasonable trier of fact could infer hostile work environment from single racial slur plus other evidence of abuse by plaintiff's supervisor); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(b)]. For a single incident to establish a hostile work environment, it must be severe in the extreme and generally must include either physical violence or the threat of physical violence [Herberg v. California Inst. of Arts (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 142, 151-154, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (as matter of law, display of offensive artwork for 24-hour period does not constitute hostile work environment, since plaintiffs were not physically touched or subjected to any sort of verbal abuse); see Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 163-164, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 (finding of hostile work environment may be based on harassment occurring over seven-day span, if harassing conduct includes violence or threat of violence)]. Thus, simple teasing, offhand comments, and isolated incidents (unless extremely serious) will not amount to discriminatory changes in the terms and conditions of employment [Clark County Sch. Dist. v. Breeden (2001) 532 U.S. 268, 121 S. Ct. 1508, 1510, 149 L. Ed. 2d 509 (per curiam) (as matter of law, Title VII was not violated by single incident in which employee's supervisor and another employee joked about sexual comment attributed to job applicant, when incident occurred during meeting to evaluate job applicants, and employee conceded that reading applicant's comment did not bother or upset her)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Significance of Brooks v. City of San Mateo. Brooks v. City of San Mateo (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 917 may, unfortunately, have added significance. It seems to announce a "one free bite" test. In Brooks, a supervisor grabbed a dispatcher's breast. It was an isolated act and the court determined that it was not sufficiently "severe" to constitute a violation of Title VII. The case also had troubling dicta to suggest that even a rape at the work place by a supervisor might not be sufficiently "severe" to constitute a violation of Title VII. This case seems to stand for the proposition that evidence of "pervasive" conduct is necessary in these cases. After all, we are referring to an "environment" of hostility. The court seems to be saying that one, isolated severe act does not create a hostile environment [but see Little v. Windermere Relocation, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 903, 910-912 (isolated rape can meet severe or pervasive test)]. By John H. Scott

A plaintiff may claim environmental sexual harassment even if he or she was not the object of the harassment, if the harassing conduct permeated his or her work environment. The plaintiff must establish that he or she personally witnessed harassing conduct, and that it was in his or her immediate work environment [Lyle v. Warner Bros. Television Prods. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 264, 283-285, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 2, 132 P.3d 211 (claim by plaintiff who was not object of harassing conduct requires higher showing than claim by target of harassing conduct); Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 610-611, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842] . Moreover, when the plaintiff cannot point to a loss of tangible job benefits, he or she must make a commensurately higher showing that the harassing conduct was pervasive and destructive of the working environment [Lyle v. Warner Bros. Television Prods. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 264, 283-285, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 2, 132 P.3d 211] . For example, the California Supreme Court has held that occasional graphic comments made by male employees about women other than the plaintiff, in the context of a creative workplace focused on generating scripts for an adult-oriented television comedy show featuring sexual themes, would not support a finding that those comments permeated the plaintiff's direct work environment or were pervasive and destructive of that environment [Lyle v. Warner Bros. Television Prods. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 264, 289-292, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 2, 132 P.3d 211] .

The fact that sex-related conduct is "voluntary," in the sense that a plaintiff is not forced to participate against his or her will, is not a defense. The correct inquiry is whether a plaintiff, by his or her conduct, indicated that the alleged sexual advances were unwelcome. Thus, the plaintiff's sexually provocative speech or dress is relevant in determining whether particular sexual advances were unwelcome [see Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 68-69, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 (Title VII); 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(b) (EEOC guideline; EEOC looks at totality of circumstances, including nature of sexual advances and context in which incidents occurred)].

An isolated instance of favoritism on the part of a supervisor toward a female employee with whom the supervisor is conducting a consensual sexual affair ordinarily would not constitute sexual harassment of other employees. However, when such sexual favoritism in a workplace is sufficiently widespread it may create a hostile work environment in which the demeaning message is conveyed to female employees that they are viewed by management as "sexual playthings" or that the way for women to get ahead in the workplace is by engaging in sexual conduct with their supervisors or managers. Such conduct is actionable by any employee, male or female, who finds it offensive and can establish that it is sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter his or her working conditions and create a hostile working environment [Miller v. Department of Corr. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 446, 466, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797, 115 P.3d 77 (that supervisor engaged in consensual sexual affairs with three female employees, each of whom received preferential treatment in workplace, was sufficient to establish prima facie case of hostile work environment for other employees)].

[c] Persons Indirectly Harmed by Sexual Harassment

The EEOC guidelines provide that an employer may also be liable for unlawful sex discrimination against other persons who were qualified for but denied an employment opportunity or benefit granted to someone because of his or her submission to sexual advances or requests for sexual favors [see 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(g)]. To establish a prima facie case, the plaintiff in such an action must show that he or she was entitled to certain benefits or opportunities that he or she did not receive [see Candelore v. Clark County Sanitation Dist. (9th Cir. 1992) 975 F.2d 588, 590] . However, a coworker's consensual romantic relationship with a supervisor has been held not to be sex discrimination under Title VII [see De Cintio v. Westchester County Medical Center (2d Cir. 1986) 807 F.2d 304, 307-308 , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 825 (1987)] .

[6] Employer's Obligation to Prevent and Respond to Harassment

[a] Required Steps and Liability

FEHA requires employers to take all reasonable steps necessary to prevent unlawful harassment from occurring [Gov. Code § 12940(j),(k)]. In addition, FEHA requires employers to provide specified information to employees regarding the illegality of sexual harassment [see Gov. Code § 12950; Myers v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1403, 1421, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 501 (employer's institution of its own grievance procedure does not excuse violation of Gov. Code § 12950)]. Also, an employer having 50 or more employees must provide at least two hours of classroom or other effective interactive training and education regarding sexual harassment to all supervisory employees in California. The training must include [Gov. Code § 12950.1(a); see Gov. Code § 12950.1(c) ("employer" defined for purposes of training requirement)]:

- Information and practical guidance regarding the federal and state statutory provisions concerning the prohibition against sexual harassment;
- The prevention and correction of sexual harassment; and
- The remedies available to victims of sexual harassment in employment.

Although FEHA creates an actionable tort for an employer's failure to take all reasonable steps to prevent unlawful discrimination and harassment [Bihun v. AT&T Information Systems, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 976, 1002, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787 , disapproved in part, on other grounds, Lakin v. Watkins Associated Industries (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 644, 664, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109, 863 P.2d 179] , an employer cannot be held liable to an employee for failing to take reasonable steps to prevent unlawful harassment unless the employee actually suffered harassment [Trujillo v. North County Transit Dist. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 280, 286-289, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 596] . Also, a claim that the training and education required for supervisory employees by FEHA [see Gov. Code § 12950.1(d)] did not reach a particular individual will not by itself result in the liability of the employer to any employee or applicant in any action alleging sexual harassment. Conversely, an employer's compliance with the training and education requirement will not insulate the employer from liability for the sexual harassment of any employee or applicant [Gov. Code § 12950.1(a); see Gov. Code § 12950.1(c) ("employer" defined for purposes of training requirement)].

EEOC guidelines also encourage employers to take measures to prevent sexual harassment [see 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(f)].

Under Title VII, employers who learn of sexual harassment by their employees must take remedial action that is reasonably calculated to end the harassment by imposing sufficient penalties to assure a workplace free from sexual harassment [Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 882 ; see Intlekofer v. Turnage (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 773, 777] . Under the Ellison standard, the remedies must not only be reasonably calculated to end the harassment, but also disciplinary in nature [Intlekofer v. Turnage (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 773, 778-779] . Counseling or admonishing the offender, or assigning the offender to a different shift to avoid contact with the victim, may be an adequate "disciplinary" response, depending on the circumstances of the case [Star v. West (9th Cir. 2001) 237 F.3d 1036, 1039 (employer need not label its actions as "discipline"; what is important is whether those actions are adequate to remedy situation)]. More severe disciplinary measures must be taken if the preceding measures have not put a stop to the harassment [Intlekofer v. Turnage (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 773, 778-779] . No specific remedial options are required, but the remedy must be appropriate to the circumstances of the case, and progressive discipline must be applied until the harassment is stopped [see Intlekofer v. Turnage (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 773, 777-781] . An employer must take remedial action even after the harasser has stopped the harassment of his or her own accord [Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1528-1529] .

[b] Affirmative Defense

In Title VII actions for "hostile environment" harassment by a supervisor, in which no tangible adverse employment action was taken against the employee, an employer may assert as an affirmative defense against liability or damages the fact that it has taken reasonable care to prevent and promptly correct harassing behavior which the plaintiff unreasonably failed to utilize [Burlington Industries v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 762-763, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633, 655 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 807-808, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662, 670] . For further discussion, see § 115.54[3], and Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationHarassmentNational Origin HarassmentLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationHarassmentRacial HarassmentHarassing ConductLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationHarassmentRacial HarassmentHostile Work EnvironmentLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationHarassmentSexual HarassmentCorrection & PreventionLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationHarassmentSexual HarassmentCoverage & DefinitionsSexual Harassment

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Application of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws to Specific Employment Practices

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.37

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.37 Retaliation

[1] Opposition to Discrimination

[a] Types of Opposition

The FEHA, Title VII, the ADA, and the ADEA prohibit retaliation against any person for opposing any practice forbidden or made unlawful by those statutes [see 29 U.S.C. § 623(d) (ADEA); 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981(a), 2000e-3(a) (Title VII), 12203(a) (ADA); Gov. Code § 12940(h) (FEHA); CBOCS W., Inc. v. Humphries (2008) 553 U.S. 442, 128 S. Ct. 1951, 1954-1955, 1961, 170 L. Ed. 2d 864 (42 U.S.C. § 1981 encompasses retaliation claims); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1630.12 (EEOC regulations under ADA); Chen v. County of Orange (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 926, 950, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 786 (FEHA antiretaliation provision does not protect against retaliation for opposing conduct that is not forbidden by FEHA)]. To assert a retaliation claim, the person opposing an employer's unlawful practice need not be a member of the class of persons victimized by that practice [Barker v. Riverside County Office of Educ. (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 821, 824-828 (nondisabled public employee had standing to claim that she suffered retaliation after voicing concerns that employer was not in compliance with Rehabilitation Act and ADA)].

Protected "opposition" includes:

- Complaints or protests to an employer [see Armstrong v. Index Journal Co. (4th Cir. 1981) 647 F.2d 441, 448 (Title VII)], including a complaint about a violation of another person's rights [see CBOCS W., Inc. v. Humphries (2008) 553 U.S. 442, 128 S. Ct. 1951, 1954-1955, 1961, 170 L. Ed. 2d 864, 869, 877].

- Meetings to discuss unlawful employment policies [see Lindsey v. Mississippi Research & Dev. Ctr. (5th Cir. 1981) 652 F.2d 488, 492 (dicta)].

- Refusal to participate in unlawful employment practices [see Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005)

36 Cal. 4th 1028, 1042-1045, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123 (FEHA; refusal to follow supervisor's order to terminate other employee); Tidwell v. American Oil Co. (D. Utah 1971) 332 F. Supp. 424, 436 (Title VII; refusal to falsify minority race applicant's test score)].

- Speaking out about discrimination in answering questions during an employer's internal investigation, even if the employee answering the questions did not report the discrimination on his or her own initiative [Crawford v. Metropolitan Gov't (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 846, 172 L. Ed. 2d 650, 656-659 (employee can "oppose" employer's unlawful practice for purposes of Title VII anti-retaliation provision, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(a), simply by disclosing that practice)].

There is no rigorous requirement of specificity in determining what is "opposition" [see EEOC v. Crown Zellerbach Corp. (9th Cir. 1983) 720 F.2d 1008, 1013 (Title VII)]. However, a "reasonableness" standard has been developed that focuses on the context, rather than the nature, of an employee's act. Under this standard, courts balance the purpose of equal employment opportunity law in protecting reasonable opposition against the legislative desire not to interfere with employer personnel decisions [see Hochstadt v. Worcester Found. for Experimental Biology (1st Cir. 1976) 545 F.2d 222, 231 (Title VII)].

FEHA requires employers to take all reasonable steps necessary to prevent unlawful retaliation from occurring [Gov. Code § 12940(k) (it is unlawful employment practice for employer to fail to take all reasonable steps necessary to prevent "discrimination" from occurring); Taylor v. City of Los Angeles Dept. of Water & Power (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1216, 1239-1240, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 206 (retaliation is form of "discrimination" actionable under Gov. Code § 12940(k)].

For a form for an allegation of retaliation, for use in a civil complaint under FEHA, see § 115.94.

PRACTICE TIP:

Retaliation Generally. It is not unusual for juries to find liability on a retaliation claim while simultaneously finding no discrimination. There are probably interesting sociological and psychological reasons for this phenomenon. Practitioners should advise clients to complain internally to the employer before resorting to litigation. Attorneys must also be mindful of the one year "statute of limitations" to complain to FEHA and generally the 300-day requirement to bring a complaint to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. If the internal complaint is successful and/or results in some kind of resolution, the problem may be solved--at least temporarily. On the other hand, if the treatment of the employee gets worse and/or there is a subsequent adverse employment act, the employer has now created a retaliation case.

The requirement for pursuing a retaliation case is that the employee opposed conduct that he or she reasonably and in good faith believed to be discriminatory, whether or not the conduct is ultimately found to be in violation of the law [Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1028, 1043, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123] . Thus, the employee need not prove that unlawful discrimination did occur. Be prepared to discover that some judges do not understand this. By John H. Scott

Whistleblower Claims for Public Employees. Practitioners should note the possibility of a parallel remedy, for public employees, of a First Amendment/whistleblower claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. The law is well settled that the discrimination prohibited by Title VII is considered a matter of public concern. Thus, retaliation for such complaints may be actionable under § 1983 [see, e.g., Thomas v. City of Beaverton (9th Cir. 2004) 379 F.3d 802, 807-811] . However, as a practical matter, it is much easier to plead and prove a retaliation case under Title VII or FEHA than it is under § 1983. There are a number of hurdles, including qualified immunity, that exist in the § 1983/whistleblower context that do not exist under Title VII or FEHA. For example, to maintain a First Amendment claim under § 1983, a public employee must establish not only that he or she was speaking on a matter of public concern, but also that he or she was speaking as a citizen and not making a statement pursuant to his or her public duties [Garcetti v. Ceballos (2006) 547 U.S. 410, 126 S. Ct. 1951, 1957-1960, 164 L. Ed. 2d 689 (when public employees make statements pursuant to their official duties, they are not speaking as citizens for First Amendment purposes, and Constitution does not insulate their communications from employer discipline); see also Kaye v. Board of Trs. of San Diego County Pub. Law Library (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 48, 56-59, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 456 (discharge of public employee for statements made pursuant to official duties does not violate California free-speech clause, Cal. Const. art. I, § 2(a))]. Thus, attorneys should avoid § 1983 in these situations and rely on Title VII or FEHA remedies. By John H. Scott

[b] Opposition to Employer and Other Persons

An act of opposition must refer to some particular practice by an employer that is allegedly unlawful under equal employment opportunity law [see EEOC v. Crown Zellerbach Corp. (9th Cir. 1983) 720 F.2d 1008, 1008-1014 (Title VII; letter by minority employees addressed to school district protesting affirmative action award to be presented to their employer)]. The employment practice need not be demonstrably unlawful; there need only be a reasonable belief by the objecting person that the employer has engaged in unlawful practices [see Moyo v. Gomez (9th Cir. 1994) 40 F.3d 982, 985 , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1081(1995) (Title VII); EEOC v. Crown Zellerbach Corp. (9th Cir. 1983) 720 F.2d 1008, 1013 (Title VII); Payne v. McLemore's Wholesale & Retail Stores (5th Cir. 1981) 654 F.2d 1130, 1140 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1000 (1982) (Title VII); Sias v. City Demonstration Agency (9th Cir. 1978) 588 F.2d 692, 695 (Title VII); Miller v. Department of Corr. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 446, 476, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797, 115 P.3d 77 (employee's good-faith but mistaken belief that employer's conduct violates FEHA may be shown by reasonable mistake of fact or of law)]. Also, the objecting person need not elaborate to the employer on the legal theory underlying the complaints the objector is making [Miller v. Department of Corr. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 446, 475, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797, 115 P.3d 77] . Indeed, it is not necessary that the objecting employee explicitly inform the employer that he or she believes that a particular practice is discriminatory, so long as the circumstances are sufficient to establish the employer's knowledge that the employee's refusal to engage in the practice is based on the employee's reasonable belief that the practice is discriminatory [Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1028, 1046, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123] .

Under Title VII, opposition to discriminatory conduct by a coemployee is not protected unless the conduct can be legally attributed to the employer [see Silver v. KCA, Inc. (9th Cir. 1978) 586 F.2d 138, 142 (Title VII)] .

An employee may bring a retaliation claim based on opposition to conduct by someone other than the employer if the employee reasonably believes that the conduct is unlawful and attributable to the employer [see Trent v. Valley Elec. Ass'n (9th Cir. 1994) 41 F.3d 524, 527 (Title VII; retaliation for opposition to discriminatory remarks by outside consultant)], or if the employer ratifies or acquiesces in another's harassing conduct when it knew or should have known of the conduct [see Folkerson v. Circus Circus Enterprises (9th Cir. 1997) 107 F.3d 754, 756 (Title VII; dicta regarding sexual harassment by customers)]. However, the opposition must be to the employer's practice of acquiescence. In the absence of such acquiescence, there is no unlawful practice to oppose [Folkerson v. Circus Circus Enterprises (9th Cir. 1997) 107 F.3d 754, 756 (Title VII; no protection for employee discharged for self-help opposition to customer's harassment, where employer had taken reasonable steps to protect her from such harassment)].

[2] Participation in Employment Discrimination Proceedings

FEHA, Title VII, the ADA, and the ADEA also prohibit retaliation against any person because he or she has filed a complaint; made a charge; or testified, assisted, or participated in any investigation, proceeding, hearing, or litigation under those statutes [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-3(a) (Title VII), 12203(a) (ADA); 29 U.S.C. § 623(d) (ADEA); Gov. Code § 12940(h) (FEHA); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1630.12 (EEOC regulations under ADA)].

An employee who files a formal discrimination charge is clearly protected [see Kauffman v. Sidereal Corp. (9th Cir.

1982) 695 F.2d 343, 344-345 (Title VII)]. However, one Title VII case has held that the employee must also reasonably perceive the discrimination as violating Title VII and must at least allege a valid Title VII claim [see Learned v. City of Bellevue (9th Cir. 1988) 860 F.2d 928, 932-933 , cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1079 (1989)] .

Protection does not, however, necessarily require filing formal charges. In one case, a court held that an employer violated Title VII when it discharged an employee who wrote a letter to the EEOC complaining about its dismissal of his previous Title VII charge. Although the employee was allegedly discharged because the letter contained libelous and fraudulent statements, the court considered the letter to be a "good charge," notwithstanding the arguably malicious material [see Pettway v. American Cast Iron Pipe Co. (5th Cir. 1969) 411 F.2d 998, 1007] . Even contacting an employer's equal employment opportunity counselor to discuss whether grounds for a complaint might exist may be protected under Title VII [Hashimoto v. Dalton (9th Cir. 1997) 118 F.3d 671, 680-681 , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1122 (1998)] .

A complaint or statement made by an employee in an official employment discrimination proceeding under FEHA, Title VII, the ADA, or the ADEA, is absolutely privileged, even if made maliciously, and cannot subject the employee to liability to the employer or to another employee [Civ. Code § 47(b); Cruey v. Gannett Co. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 356, 367-368, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670] .

Also, a complaint or statement made by an employee to his or her employer, accusing another employee of harassment, is protected by a qualified privilege, even if the accusation is false [Civ. Code § 47(c)]. That is, the employee making the accusation will incur no liability to the falsely accused employee unless the accusation is made with malice [Cruey v. Gannett Co. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 356, 368-369, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670] .

For a form of allegation of retaliation, for use in a civil complaint under FEHA, see § 115.94.

[3] Proof of Retaliation

[a] Prima Facie Case

Unlawful retaliation is essentially a form of disparate treatment [see Wrighten v. Metropolitan Hospitals (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1346, 1354 (Title VII); Williams v. Boorstin (D.C. Cir. 1980) 663 F.2d 109, 116-117 , cert. denied, 451 U.S. 985 (1981) (Title VII); cf. Miller v. Fairchild Indus. (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 498, 504 , cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1056 (1990) (three-stage order and allocation of proof for disparate treatment cases set forth in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802-804, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 governs actions for retaliatory discharge brought under Title VII, 42 U.S.C. § 1981, and FEHA); see also discussion in*§ 115.23[2]*].

A prima facie case of retaliation may be established by showing all of the following [Wrighten v. Metropolitan Hospitals (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1346, 1354 (Title VII); Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 614, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA); see also Dudley v. Department of Transp. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 255, 261-265, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 739 (Moore-Brown-Roberti Family Rights Act (CFRA), Gov. Code § 12945.2 (l)(1), part of FEHA)]:

- The plaintiff engaged in a protected activity;
- The plaintiff was thereafter subjected to adverse employment action by his or her employer; and
- There was a causal link between the two.

To qualify as an "adverse employment action" under FEHA, an employer's act must have a material effect on the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment; it is not sufficient that the act deter the plaintiff or other employees from engaging in protected activities [Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1028, 1050-1055, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123 (expressly rejecting "deterrence standard"); see Taylor v. City of Los Angeles Dept. of Water & Power (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1216, 1237, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 206 (finding that alleged conduct of defendant satisfied both "materiality test" of Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1028, 1050-1055, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123 , and "deterrence test" of Burlington N. & Santa Fe Ry. Co. v. White (2006) 548 U.S. 53, 126 S. Ct. 2405, 2410-2416, 165 L. Ed. 2d 345, 354-361) , disapproved on other grounds, Jones v. Lodge at Torrey Pines P'ship (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1158, 1173-1174, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 624, 177 P.3d 232] . In contrast, a deterrence standard applies in Title VII cases: an employer's action will support a Title VII retaliation claim if it is "materially adverse," that is, if it would likely have dissuaded a reasonable worker from engaging in the protected activity [Burlington N. & Santa Fe Ry. Co. v. White (2006) 548 U.S. 53, 126 S. Ct. 2405, 2410-2416, 165 L. Ed. 2d 345, 354-361 (Title VII anti-retaliation provision, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(a), extends beyond workplace-related or employment-related retaliatory acts and harm)].

The sorts of "adverse employment actions" on which a FEHA retaliation action may be based are not limited to actions involving loss or reduction of pay or monetary benefits, such as termination, demotion, refusal to hire, or refusal to promote. They can encompass other forms of adversity as well. For example, there may be an adverse job impact, even without any reduction in salary or benefits, in an employer's moving an employee's office to an undesirable location, transferring an employee to an isolated corner of the workplace, and requiring an employee to relocate his or her personal files while forbidding the employee to use the firm's stationery and support services. However, to be actionable, an adverse employment action must be both detrimental and substantial, resulting in a material change in the terms of employment, impairing employment in some cognizable manner, or showing some other employment injury. For example, one delayed paycheck, an early job change, and one unsent overtime paycheck are not sufficiently substantial and detrimental adverse employment actions to be actionable [Thomas v. Dep't of Corrections (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 507, 510-512, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770] . Similarly, an employer's repeated criticisms are not sufficient to constitute an adverse employment action if the employee is not fired, demoted, or transferred; did not lose any benefits, bonuses or commissions; did not suffer any wage reduction; and did not experience any change in job duties or responsibilities [Pinero v. Specialty Rests. Corp. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 635, 641-647, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 348] . An assignment to a less-preferred position by itself--with no change in pay, benefits, or promotional opportunities, and with no hostile environment--does not constitute an adverse employment action [Malais v. Los Angeles City Fire Dept (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 350, 357-358, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 444] . On the other hand, an unfavorable employee evaluation may be actionable if it eliminates a reasonable potential for promotion or materially delays a promotion [Akers v. County of San Diego (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1454-1457, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602 (reduced opportunities for promotion may constitute adverse employment action, even if employee does not prove denial of specific promotional opportunity)].

In determining whether an employee has suffered an "adverse employment action," it is appropriate to examine the totality of the circumstances in light of the realities of the workplace. Thus, an adverse employment action may consist of a series of wrongful acts by the employer that are taken in response to the employee's protected conduct [Taylor v. City of Los Angeles Dept. of Water & Power (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1216, 1231-1232, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 206 , disapproved on other grounds, Jones v. Lodge at Torrey Pines P'ship (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1158, 1173-1174, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 624, 177 P.3d 232]. On the other hand, allegedly wrongful acts that are unrelated and are taken by different persons for different reasons, some of which have nothing to do with the employee's protected conduct, do not constitute an adverse employment action [McRae v. Department of Corr. & Rehab. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 377, 391, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313] .

A series of separate retaliatory acts collectively may constitute an "adverse employment action," even if some or all of the component acts might not be individually actionable [Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1028, 1055-1056, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123] . In determining whether retaliation has occurred in such a case, a court may apply the "continuing violation doctrine" and consider acts of the employer that took place outside the limitations period, if those acts are sufficiently linked to acts that took place within the limitations period [Yanowitz v.

L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1028, 1055-1059, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123 ("continuing violation doctrine," adopted in Richards v. CH2M Hill, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 798, 818-823, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87, 29 P.3d 175 , applies not just to FEHA harassment claims and disability-accommodation claims, but also to FEHA retaliation claims); but cf. AMTRAK v. Morgan (2002) 536 U.S. 101, 110-113, 122 S. Ct. 2061, 153 L. Ed. 2d 106 ("continuing violation doctrine" is inapplicable to Title VII claim based on discrete act of discrimination or retaliation)]. An employer's ongoing retaliatory conduct qualifies as a "continuing violation" if the employer's acts (1) are sufficiently similar in kind as to be part of the same course of conduct, recognizing that similar kinds of unlawful conduct may take different forms; (2) have occurred with reasonable frequency; and (3) have not acquired a degree of permanence [Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1028, 1059, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123] . For further discussion of the "continuing violation doctrine," see § 115.51[1][c].

The causal link between the plaintiff engaging in a protected activity and thereafter being subject to an adverse employment action by the employer may be established by direct evidence of retaliatory motive [Miller v. Fairchild Indus. (9th Cir. 1986) 797 F.2d 727, 731 (Title VII)], such as an adverse employment action admittedly based on a protected activity [see Sias v. City Demonstration Agency (9th Cir. 1978) 588 F.2d 692, 695 (Title VII)]. However, since such evidence is often unavailable [see Gates v. Georgia-Pacific Corp. (D. Or. 1970) 326 F. Supp. 397, 399 , aff'd, 492 F.2d 292 (9th Cir. 1974) (Title VII)], causation may be inferred from circumstantial evidence [Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 615, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA)]. For example, an employee may show that other employees did not suffer the same consequences for the same conduct [cf. Acosta v. University of District of Columbia (D.D.C. 1981) 528 F. Supp. 1215, 1224 (Title VII; plaintiff professor did not present prima facie case when he did not show that other employees with same or lesser qualifications were given grants)], or that there was a proximity in time between the employer's knowledge of protected activities and the alleged retaliatory action [see Miller v. Fairchild Indus. (9th Cir. 1986) 797 F.2d 727, 731 (Title VII); Hochstadt v. Worcester Found. for Experimental Biology (D. Mass. 1976) 425 F. Supp. 318, 324 , aff'd, 545 F.2d 222 (1st Cir. 1976) (Title VII); Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 615, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA)].

For mere temporal proximity between an employer's knowledge of protected activity and an adverse employment action to constitute sufficient prima facie evidence of causation, the temporal proximity must be very close. Thus, for example, the passage of a year between an employee's protected activity of requesting reasonable accommodations and the demotion of the employee does not show a causal link between the two events [Coons v. Secretary of United States Dep't of Treasury (9th Cir. 2004) 383 F.3d 879, 887] . Likewise, a transfer of an employee 20 months after the employer learned of the employee's protected conduct is insufficient to establish a prima facie case of causation [Clark County Sch. Dist. v. Breeden (2001) 532 U.S. 268, 121 S. Ct. 1508, 1510, 149 L. Ed. 2d 509 (per curiam) (allegedly retaliatory transfer occurred 20 months after employee filed EEOC complaint, notice of which was given to employer within 10 days of filing)]. Similarly, temporal proximity may be insufficient to support an inference of causation if uncontested facts negate that inference [Chen v. County of Orange (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 926, 949-951, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 786 (trial court properly granted nonsuit on retaliation claim because evidence of causation consisted solely of chronological sequence--denial of promotion occurred after plaintiff had complained of discrimination--but remainder of evidence established good and legitimate reasons not to promote plaintiff)]. For example, the transfer of plaintiff one month after the employer learned of the employee's Title VII lawsuit does not support an inference that the transfer was made in retaliation for filing the suit, in light of the conceded fact that the employer had been contemplating the transfer before it learned of the suit [Clark County Sch. Dist. v. Breeden (2001) 532 U.S. 268, 121 S. Ct. 1508, 1510, 149 L. Ed. 2d 509 (per curiam) ("Employers need not suspend previously planned transfers upon discovering that a Title VII suit has been filed, and their proceeding along lines previously contemplated, though not yet definitively determined, is no evidence whatever of causality")].

Temporal proximity is not a necessary element of causation, although a lack of temporal proximity may make it more difficult to show causation [Porter v. California Dep't of Corr. (9th Cir. 2004) 383 F.3d 1018, 1030] .

So long as causation is established, the employee need not show that he or she was eligible to engage in the protected activity at the time of the adverse employment action. For example, an employee who suffers retaliation for taking family care and medical leave under the Moore-Brown-Roberti Family Rights Act (CFRA) may state a cause of action for retaliation if the employee was eligible for leave when it was taken, even if the retaliatory action took place when the employee was no longer eligible [Dudley v. Department of Transp. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 255, 262, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 739 ; see Gov. Code § 12945.2 (l)(1)].

A causal link between the employee's protected activity and the adverse employment action is not established if the evidence does not support an inference that the individuals who took the adverse action had knowledge that the employee had engaged in the protected activity [see, e.g., Morgan v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2000) 88 Cal. App. 4th 52, 74, 105 Cal. Rptr.2d 652 (without knowledge that employee had previously filed grievance against employer, decision-makers who imposed adverse action "could not have acted in retaliation for [employee's] filing of the grievance")]. However, ignorance of an employee's protected activity does not afford a categorical defense unless it extends to all corporate actors who contributed materially to the adverse employment decision. Thus, an employer may be liable for retaliatory discharge when the supervisor who initiates disciplinary proceedings acts with retaliatory animus, even if the cause for discipline is separately investigated and the ultimate decision to discharge the employee is made by a manager with no knowledge that the employee has engaged in protected activity, so long as the supervisor's retaliatory motive was an actuating, but-for cause of the dismissal [Reeves v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 95, 107-110, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 717] .

[b] Burden of Proof and Presumptions

Once a plaintiff makes out a prima facie case of retaliation, the burden shifts to the employer to articulate some legitimate, nonretaliatory reason for its adverse employment action [Nidds v. Schindler Elevator Corp. (9th Cir. 1996) 113 F.3d 912, 919 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 950 (1997) (FEHA); Wrighten v. Metropolitan Hospitals (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1346, 1354 (Title VII); Williams v. Boorstin (D.C. Cir. 1980) 663 F.2d 109, 116 , cert. denied, 451 U.S. 985 (1981) (Title VII)].

To satisfy its burden, an employer need only produce admissible evidence that would allow the trier of fact to rationally conclude that the action was not motivated by discriminatory animus [Miller v. Fairchild Indus. (9th Cir. 1986) 797 F.2d 727, 731 (Title VII; quoting Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 257, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207)]. For example, an employer may show lack of qualifications or subsequent disqualification, or elimination of the plaintiff's job for other business purposes [see Williams v. Boorstin (D.C. Cir. 1980) 663 F.2d 109, 116 , cert. denied, 451 U.S. 985 (1981) (Title VII)].

If the employer's rebuttal is successful, the plaintiff must carry his or her ultimate burden of establishing by a preponderance of the evidence that retaliatory intent motivated the employer's action [Perryman v. Johnson Prods. Co. (11th Cir. 1983) 698 F.2d 1138, 1142 (Title VII)]. This may be accomplished directly by showing that a retaliatory reason more likely motivated the employer's action. However, an employer's motivation may be difficult to prove directly and, thus, is most often indirectly established by showing that the employer's proffered reason was a pretext [see Wrighten v. Metropolitan Hospitals (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1346, 1354 (Title VII); see also Stegall v. Citadel Broad. Co. (2003) 350 F.3d 1061, 1066 (Title VII; to survive motion for summary judgment, employee's circumstantial evidence of pretext must be specific and substantial)].

An employer's rebuttal often involves mixed motives (that is, retaliation plus a legitimate business purpose) [see, e.g., Williams v. Boorstin (D.C.Cir. 1980) 663 F.2d 109, 117 , cert. denied, 451 U.S. 985 (1981) (Title VII)]. In such a case, the plaintiff proves a violation if a preponderance of the evidence (whether direct or circumstantial) establishes that protected activity was a motivating factor in the adverse employment action [Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 123 S. Ct. 2148, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84, 93 ; Stegall v. Citadel Broad. Co. (2003) 350 F.3d 1061, 1067-1068 (Title VII)].

If the plaintiff succeeds at the "pretext" stage, there is a presumption that the adverse employment action was the product of discriminatory intent [Wrighten v. Metropolitan Hospitals (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1346, 1354 (Title VII)]. The employer may rebut the presumption by showing, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the adverse action would have been taken even in the absence of discriminatory intent [Wrighten v. Metropolitan Hospitals (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1346, 1354 (Title VII); but see Williams v. Boorstin (D.C. Cir. 1980) 663 F.2d 109, 117 , cert. denied, 451 U.S. 985 (1981) (Title VII; employer must rebut presumption by "clear and convincing evidence")].

Expert testimony ordinarily is not admissible to show retaliatory intent; in the absence of unusual facts, it must be presumed that jurors are capable of deciding a party's motive for themselves and do not need an expert to tell them which finding on that issue the evidence supports [Kotla v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 283, 290-294, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 898 (expert's testimony that certain facts were "indications" or "evidence" of retaliatory motive invaded province of jury to draw its own conclusions from evidence, and testimony lacked any reliable foundation in expert's background and expertise)].

[c] Applicants and Former Employees

Retaliation cases usually involve termination, but unlawful retaliation may also occur if an employer refuses to hire a person because he or she engaged in protected activities [see Ruggles v. California Polytechnic State University (9th Cir. 1986) 797 F.2d 782, 786 (Title VII; university allegedly retaliated against part-time instructor who filed EEOC complaint, by eliminating tenure-track position for which instructor applied)].

Taking action against a discharged employee can also be unlawful retaliation [Robinson v. Shell Oil Co. (1997) 519 U.S. 337, 339, 117 S. Ct. 843, 136 L. Ed. 2d 808 (Title VII; negative reference provided when former employee who charged discharge was discriminatory sought new employment)], as can terminating an independent contractor's contract [Sada v. Robert F. Kennedy Med. Ctr. (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 138, 161-162, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 112 (temporary nurse terminated after claiming discrimination in denial of application for regular employee status)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationRetaliationBurdens of ProofLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationRetaliationElementsAdverse Employment ActionsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationRetaliationElementsCausal LinkLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationRetaliationElementsProtected ActivitiesLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationRetaliationRemediesGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Application of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws to Specific Employment Practices

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 115.38-115.49

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 115.38[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Civil Actions and Judicial Remedies

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.50

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.50 Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[1] Subject Matter Jurisdiction Over FEHA Actions

California superior courts have subject matter jurisdiction over FEHA cases [Gov. Code § 12965(b)]. The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)]. In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case and must state whether the demand exceeds or does not exceed $10,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Gov. Code § 70613(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9), (10)]. For a discussion of subject matter jurisdiction in California civil actions, generally, see Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter .

Federal district courts generally may exercise supplemental jurisdiction over FEHA claims when those state claims arise from the same facts as federal claims [see 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a); see also 28 U.S.C. § 1367(b) (limitations on supplemental jurisdiction when federal district court's original jurisdiction is based only on diversity of citizenship under 28 U.S.C. § 1332)]. However, a federal court may decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction in certain situations, such as when a FEHA claim raises a novel or complex issue of state law [28 U.S.C. § 1367(c)]. If a federal court declines to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over a FEHA claim, the federal statute provides that the limitations period for the claim will be tolled while it is pending in the federal court and for 30 days after it is dismissed by the federal court [28 U.S.C. § 1367(d) (state law may provide longer tolling period)]. This tolling does not apply, however, to a claim against the state government, if the claim is dismissed by the federal court on the ground of the state's sovereign immunity under the Eleventh Amendment [Raygor v. Regents of Univ. of Minn. (2002) 534 U.S. 533, 122 S. Ct. 999, 152 L. Ed. 2d 27, 36-41] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Bring FEHA Claim With Title VII Claim. Federal courts will take supplemental jurisdiction of state claims that arise out of the same nucleus of facts as the federal claims. It is always a good idea to bring a FEHA claim together with a Title VII claim. For federal employees, the Title VII remedy will be the only remedy. Otherwise, FEHA is a parallel remedy and usually a better one than Title VII. By John H. Scott

The failure to exhaust FEHA administrative remedies deprives the court of subject matter jurisdiction [see Miller v. United Airlines (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 878, 889-890, 220 Cal. Rptr. 684 ; Bennett v. Borden, Inc. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 706, 710, 128 Cal. Rptr. 627 ; see also Carter v. Smith Food King (9th Cir. 1985) 765 F.2d 916, 921 (interpreting exhaustion of FEHA remedies, including filing of charge, as "jurisdictional prerequisite" to FEHA suit)]. For further analysis of the requirement to exhaust administrative remedies, see § 115.51.

[2] Subject Matter Jurisdiction Over Title VII, ADA, ADEA, and 42 U.S.C. § 1981 Actions

State and federal courts have concurrent subject matter jurisdiction to hear Title VII, ADEA, ADA, and 42 U.S.C. § 1981 claims.

Federal courts do not have exclusive jurisdiction over civil actions brought under Title VII, because Congress did not divest the state courts of their concurrent authority to adjudicate federal claims [Yellow Freight System v. Donnelly (1990) 494 U.S. 820, 821, 110 S. Ct. 1566, 108 L. Ed. 2d 834] . Unlike a number of statutes in which Congress unequivocally stated that the jurisdiction of the federal courts is exclusive, Title VII contains no language expressly confining jurisdiction to federal courts or ousting state courts of their presumptive jurisdiction [Yellow Freight System v. Donnelly (1990) 494 U.S. 820, 823, 110 S. Ct. 1566, 108 L. Ed. 2d 834] .

However, a state court action alleging Title VII or other federal claims is subject to removal by the defendant to federal district court [see 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331, 1441(a)]. For discussion of removal generally, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal .

State and federal courts also appear to have concurrent subject matter jurisdiction over ADA cases [Krouse v. American Sterilizer Co. (W.D. Pa. 1994) 872 F. Supp. 203, 205] . The holding in Yellow Freight System v. Donnelly has been extended, explicitly and implicitly, to claims asserted under ADA [Krouse v. American Sterilizer Co. (W.D. Pa. 1994) 872 F. Supp. 203, 205 ; Jones v. Illinois Cent. R.R. Co. (N.D. Ill. 1994) 859 F. Supp. 1144, 1145 ; see 42 U.S.C. § 12117(a) (Title VII remedies apply to ADA)].

With regard to ADEA claims, state courts have concurrent subject matter jurisdiction with the federal courts [Chapman v. City of Detroit (6th Cir. 1986) 808 F.2d 459, 463 ; see 29 U.S.C. § 626(c)(1) (person aggrieved may bring civil action in court of competent jurisdiction)].

State courts also have concurrent jurisdiction, with the federal courts, over cases brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 [De Horney v. Bank of America Nat'l Trust & Sav. Ass'n (9th Cir. 1989) 879 F.2d 459, 462-463 (on rehearing), modifying on other grounds 777 F.2d 440 (9th Cir. 1985) ; Filipino Accountants' Assn. v. State Bd. of Accountancy (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1028 n.4, 204 Cal. Rptr. 913 (assuming state court jurisdiction over § 1981 actions)].

For discussion of actions under Title VII, the ADA, the ADEA, and 42 U.S.C. § 1981, generally, see Cook and Sobieski, Civil Rights Actions (Matthew Bender). For additional discussion of actions under the ADA, see Ogletree, Deakins, Nash, Smoak & Stewart, Americans With Disabilities Act: Employee Rights And Employer Obligations (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsConcurrent JurisdictionCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral JurisdictionCivil

ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionSupplemental JurisdictionSame Case & ControversyLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Civil Actions and Judicial Remedies

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.51

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.51 Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies

[1] Exhaustion of FEHA Claims

[a] Jurisdictional Requirement

An aggrieved person may bring a civil action to enforce FEHA rights, but must first exhaust the FEHA administrative process [see Bagatti v. Department of Rehab. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 357, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 (plaintiff alleging failure to accommodate disability under Gov. Code § 12940(m) must first obtain right-to-sue notice under Gov. Code § 12965); Bennett v. Borden, Inc. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 706, 709-710, 128 Cal. Rptr. 627] . Exhaustion of administrative remedies is a jurisdictional prerequisite to maintaining a FEHA suit; the failure to exhaust subjects the suit to summary judgment, demurrer, or even the reversal of a favorable judgment [Hobson v. Raychem Corp. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 614, 631, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497 ; Bennett v. Borden, Inc. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 706, 709-710, 128 Cal. Rptr. 627 ; see Okoli v. Lockheed Technical Operations Co. (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1607, 1609, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 57 ; Baker v. Children's Hospital Med. Ctr. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1057, 1062, 257 Cal. Rptr. 768 ; Miller v. United Airlines (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 878, 890, 220 Cal. Rptr. 684] .

A public employee who has exhausted the FEHA administrative process and obtained a right-to-sue letter from the DFEH need not also exhaust the employer's internal administrative procedures prior to filing an FEHA claim in superior court [Schifando v. City of Los Angeles (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1074, 1082, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 457, 79 P.3d 569]. Similarly, a public employee who asserts both FEHA claims and related nonstatutory claims for wrongful termination in violation of public policy need not exhaust the internal administrative remedy provided by the employer with respect to those nonstatutory claims before filing a civil action, if the resolution of those claims would have a preclusive impact on the FEHA claim [Williams v. Housing Auth. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 708, 727-731, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 374] . Also, exhaustion of internal procedures is not required if the procedures do not include a quasi-judicial hearing with sufficient due process to generate a legally binding result [Ahmadi-Kashani v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 449, 456-461, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 556], or if the internal procedures are provided by a collective bargaining agreement rather than a statute [Ortega v. Contra Costa Cmty. Coll. Dist. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1073, 1080-1086, 67 Cal.

Rptr. 3d 832]. However, if the employee elects to pursue an employer's internal administrative process to a decision that is of a sufficiently judicial character to support collateral estoppel, the employee must pursue that process to completion, including exhausting any available judicial avenues for reversal of adverse findings. A failure to do so will result in any quasi-judicial administrative findings having binding, preclusive effect in later judicial proceedings [McDonald v. Antelope Valley Cmty. Coll. Dist. (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 88, 113, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 734, 194 P.3d 1026 ; Page v. Los Angeles County Probation Dept. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1135, 1143-1144, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 598 ; see Miller v. City of L.A. (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1382-1383, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 510 (having participated in evidentiary hearing and receiving hearing examiner's report and recommendation, employee was obligated to exhaust his judicial remedies, including seeking administrative mandamus, and employee's failure to do so resulted in administrative decision having collateral estoppel effect)].

A right-to-sue letter from the DFEH [see [c], below], gives the complainant a right to sue under the FEHA, but it does not satisfy the exhaustion of administrative remedies requirement for a federal claim. Thus, a claimant who wishes to assert a Title VII claim must obtain a right-to-sue letter from the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission [Roman v. Countyof Los Angeles (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 316, 325-326, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13] .

[b] Administrative Agencies

FEHA provides an extensive administrative apparatus for determining employment discrimination complaints. The Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH) and the Fair Employment and Housing Commission (FEHC) are the administrative bodies that enforce FEHA [see Gov. Code §§ 12901, 12903, 12930-12933, 12935; see also State Personnel Bd. v. FEHC (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 422, 428-429, 217 Cal. Rptr. 16, 703 P.2d 354 (overview of respective roles of DFEH and FEHC)]. The DFEH is a "prosecutorial" body that investigates employment discrimination complaints, conducts discovery, accuses and prosecutes discriminatory conduct, and publishes the results of its investigations [see Gov. Code §§ 12930, 12965]. The FEHC is an "adjudicative" body that holds hearings on DFEH accusations and decides the issues raised in the accusations [see Gov. Code §§ 12935, 12967-12972; 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7285.5, 7285.6 (FEHC regulations)].

For a detailed discussion of the administrative procedures under FEHA, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 42 (Matthew Bender).

PRACTICE TIP:

Exhaustion Requirement. A "joint filing" usually occurs between the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) and FEHA. However, it does not always occur, and one should not assume that because an employee complained at one agency a complaint was also referred to, or filed with, the other. It is also important to realize that simply because you are told by an employee that he or she visited an EEOC or a DFEH office and filled out forms, that a complaint was in fact made. Do not assume a complaint was officially made unless and until you see it with an accompanying charge number. There are cases in which persons have completed and signed complaints, delivered them to the EEOC or DFEH, and believed they had made a complaint when in fact the agency had no record of a complaint being made.

In addition, I have heard stories of intake workers at the EEOC and/or DFEH refusing to accept complaints because of someone's opinion that there was not sufficient evidence of discrimination or retaliation. In some cases this may be the correct decision. However, in others it would appear that persons with legitimate complaints are being prevented from "exhausting" the administrative remedy necessary to bring a lawsuit.

Thus, it is important to recognize that a person may accuse you of malpractice if you advise him or her to make a complaint with the EEOC or DFEH within a certain time and he or she fails to do so. Even if you put the advice in writing, a potential "client" may still turn on you. If you are retained by a person before the administrative claim is made, you must make sure that the claim is timely filed. Do not rely on the client to do it. Alternatively, make sure you have written a letter to the potential client notifying him or her (1) that you are not representing them, and (2) that it is their responsibility to timely make a complaint with EEOC or DFEH. Make sure also to give notice of the time limits for making such a claim. By John H. Scott

[c] Filing of Complaint, Statute of Limitation, and "Right-to-Sue" Letter

An aggrieved party starts the administrative process by filing a complaint with the DFEH and obtaining a "right-to-sue" letter from the DFEH.

The administrative complaint must be verified [Gov. Code § 12960(b)], but the verification may be made by the complainant's attorney [Blum v. Superior Court (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 418, 428, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 902 (attorney may verify by signing own name, not client's name, and should not verify complaint unless attorney believes allegations of complaint are true, penalties for perjury apply)].

After the administrative complaint is filed with the DFEH for investigation, the DFEH generally must serve the complaint on the employer, personally or by certified mail [Gov. Code § 12962(a)]. However, if the complainant hires or retains private counsel, then counsel must serve the complaint on the employer [Gov. Code § 12962(b)]. In either event, service must be made at the time of initial contact with the employer, or within 60 days, whichever comes first [Gov. Code § 12962(c)]. However, the need to serve the administrative complaint on the employer applies only if the complaint is filed with the DFEH "for investigation" [Gov. Code § 12962(a)]. Thus, if an aggrieved employee files an administrative complaint and immediately requests a right-to-sue letter, indicating that he or she does not wish the DFEH to investigate, the service requirement is no longer applicable. In such a case, the failure to serve the administrative complaint on the employer will not be a jurisdictional bar to the employee's eventual lawsuit against the employer [Wasti v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 667, 671-673, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 625] .

The administrative complaint must be filed with the DFEH within one year of the employer's alleged unlawful conduct [Gov. Code § 12960(b), (d)]. This one-year period may be extended under the following circumstances [Gov. Code § 12960(d)]:

- The one-year period may be extended by up to 90 days, if the aggrieved person first obtains knowledge of the facts concerning the unlawful practice after the expiration of the one-year period [see Williams v. City of Belvedere (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 84, 92-93, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 658 (court lacks equitable power to grant extension beyond that specifically provided by statute)].

- The one-year period may be extended by up to one year after rebuttal of the presumption that the aggrieved person's employer is the person or entity identified on the aggrieved person's W-2 form [see Gov. Code § 12928].

- If the grievance consists of an allegation of violence, intimidation, or threatened violence committed for reasons that constitute an unlawful basis for discrimination [see Civ. Code § 51.7], the one-year period may be extended by up to one year after the aggrieved person becomes aware of the identity of a person liable for the alleged violation; however, this extension may not exceed three years from the date of the alleged violation.

- The one-year period may be extended by up to one year after the date on which the aggrieved person reaches the age of majority (age 18) [see Fam. Code § 6500].

The one-year filing deadline is also subject to equitable exceptions, such as when a complainant reasonably is misled through no fault of his or her own as a result of inaccurate advice from the DFEH [see, e.g., Holland v. Union Pac. R.R. Co. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 940, 946, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 145 (employee was diligent in pursuit of his remedy, DFEH representative had assured him that completion of pre-complaint questionnaire would suffice to meet deadline, and his administrative complaint was only about two weeks late)].

The one-year deadline is also subject to equitable tolling while the complainant voluntarily pursues the employer's internal administrative remedy, even though such an internal remedy is optional and need not be exhausted before filing a FEHA action, and even if the complainant voluntarily terminates the internal proceeding before an administrative decision is rendered [McDonald v. Antelope Valley Cmty. Coll. Dist. (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 88, 105-114, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 734, 194 P.3d 1026].

If discriminatory treatment has occurred over a period of time, the entire course of discrimination may be actionable if the DFEH charge properly alleges a "continuing violation" and is filed within one year of the most recent act of discrimination [City and County of San Francisco v. FEHC (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 983, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 ; see Valdez v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1043, 1052, 282 Cal. Rptr. 726] . For example, in one case, a county failed to promote black firefighters because it relied on an eligibility list generated by a discriminatory test. The court held that the action was timely filed because promotions continued to be made from the eligibility list during the year preceding the filing of the administrative complaint [City and County of San Francisco v. FEHC (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 983, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 ; see Watson v. Dep't of Rehabilitation (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1271, 1290-1291, 261 Cal. Rptr. 204] .

In another case, the court of appeal applied the continuing violation doctrine in a sexual harassment case in which the plaintiff alleged an eleven-year pattern of discrimination [Accardi v. Superior Court (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 341, 348-351, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d. 292 ; cf. Regents of University of California v. Superior Court (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1710, 1718-1720, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 919 (on summary judgment, plaintiff must present evidence that discriminatory acts continued into the limitations period)].

The California Supreme Court has defined the elements of the "continuing violation" doctrine in the context of an employer's persistent failure to reasonably accommodate a disability or to eliminate a hostile work environment targeting a disabled employee [Richards v. CH2M Hill, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 798, 818-823, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87, 29 P.3d 175 (surveying various formulations of doctrine adopted by federal courts under federal antidiscrimination statutes)]. This ongoing conduct qualifies as a "continuing violation" if the employer's unlawful actions (1) are sufficiently similar in kind as to be part of the same course of conduct (recognizing that similar kinds of unlawful conduct may take different forms), (2) have occurred with reasonable frequency, and (3) have not acquired a degree of permanence [Richards v. CH2M Hill, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 798, 823, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87, 29 P.3d 175] .

In the context of an ongoing process of accommodation of disability, or ongoing disability harassment, "permanence" means that an employer's statements and actions make clear to a reasonable employee that any further efforts at informal conciliation to obtain reasonable accommodation or end harassment would be futile [Richards v. CH2M Hill, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 798, 823, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87, 29 P.3d 175] . Thus, when an employer engages in a continuing course of unlawful conduct under FEHA by refusing reasonable accommodation of a disabled employee or engaging in disability harassment, the statute of limitations does not necessarily begin to run when the employee first believes his or her rights may have been violated. Rather, the limitations period begins to run either when the employer's course of conduct ends (as by cessation of the conduct or by the employee's resignation), or when the employee is on notice that further efforts to end the unlawful conduct will be in vain [Richards v. CH2M Hill, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 798, 823, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87, 29 P.3d 175] . At least one court of appeal has held that the same formulation of the continuing violation doctrine applies in FEHA sexual harassment cases [see Birschtein v. New United Motor Manufacturing, Inc. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1003-1006, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347] . This formulation of the continuing violation doctrine has also been applied in a sex-discrimination case under FEHA [Cucuzza v. City of Santa Clara (2002) 104 Cal. App.

4th 1031, 1040-1043, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 660] .

PRACTICE TIP:

"Continuing Violation" Doctrine. The "continuing violation" doctrine often becomes very significant in employment discrimination cases. In general, employers continue to advocate that the doctrine should be eliminated or severely restricted. However, the California Supreme Court's 2001 decision in Richards v. CH2M Hill, Inc., discussed above, reaffirms existing law. To the extent the continuing violation doctrine is narrowed in the future, employers should be careful of what they ask for because they might get it. A narrowing of the doctrine would require attorneys to advise employees to complain, as soon as possible, whenever they believe they are victims of discrimination. This in turn would lead to more internal complaints, more complaints under Title VII and FEHA, and potentially more lawsuits. It would also place more employees in the position of having a retaliation claim regarding any "adverse act" that occurs after they have complained of discrimination.

Conversely, a "liberal" continuing violation doctrine encourages employees to "stick it out" and wait for things to "get better" before complaining. If a manager is replaced or an employee is transferred, the problem may go away. Do we really want to encourage employees to complain of discrimination every time they hit a bump in the road? By John H. Scott

The continuing violation doctrine does not apply to bar a claim of ongoing, company-wide, systematic discrimination against a protected class [Alch v. Superior Court (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 339, 367-377, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 29 (if employer enforced discriminatory policy during limitations period, claims are timely filed both by persons who applied unsuccessfully for jobs during that period and by persons who were deterred from applying for jobs during that period)].

After the filing of the complaint, the DFEH issues a "right-to-sue" letter at th e request of the complainant, if it has failed to issue an accusation within 150 days after the complaint was filed, or if it has determined before then that it will not issue an accusation [Gov. Code § 12965(b)]. If the complainant does not request a right-to-sue notice, the DFEH must issue the notice on completion of its investigation, and no later than one year after the complaint was filed [Gov. Code § 12965(b)]. Because the complainant's entitlement to a right-to-sue notice becomes unconditional one year after the filing of the administrative complaint, at that point the complainant will be deemed to have exhausted his or her administrative remedy, and a failure to request a right-to-sue letter will not bar a civil action [Grant v. Comp USA, Inc. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 637, 645-651, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 177] .

The right-to-sue letter must inform the complainant that he or she has one year from the date of the letter to file a civil action [see Gov. Code § 12965(b)]. This one-year period may be tolled, however, if (1) the DFEH has deferred its investigation of the complaint to the EEOC; or (2) the EEOC, after an investigation by the DFEH, agrees to perform a substantial weight review of the DFEH determination or conducts its own investigation [Gov. Code § 12965(d), (e); see § 115.52[1]].

For a detailed discussion of the administrative procedures under FEHA, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 42 (Matthew Bender).

PRACTICE TIP:

Requesting Immediate "Right-to-Sue" Letter. An employee/complainant can request an immediate "right-to-sue" letter from either EEOC or DFEH. This may or may not be advisable. Unless you are ready to promptly jump into litigation, it may be preferable to wait and see what the administrative "investigation" brings. Often it is months before investigations occur. Sometimes the investigations are thorough and well done. Other times they are not. The results of EEOC investigations are admissable, but not conclusive, in a subsequent Title VII lawsuit. By John H. Scott

[d] Burden of Proof and Administrative Remedies

An unlawful practice alone is not sufficient to sustain an award of actual damages; the DFEH is required to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the complaining party has sustained actual injury, and specified evidence of the effects of the discrimination on the complaining party must be considered [Gov. Code § 12970(b)].

If the FEHC finds that employment discrimination exists, it must order the respondent to cease and desist and take actions including hiring, reinstatement, or upgrading of employees, with or without backpay [Gov. Code § 12970(a)(1)]. The FEHC may also order the respondent to pay compensatory damages for mental suffering and/or an administrative fine for conduct that would constitute grounds for punitive damages in a civil action, but there is a $150,000 limit on the total award of compensatory damages and an administrative fine [see Gov. Code § 12970(a)(3), (c), (d)].

[e] Judicial Review of Administrative Decisions

FEHC decisions are subject to judicial review by writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 [Gov. Code §§ 11523, 12972]. The substantial evidence standard of review applies to FEHC findings of unlawful discrimination [see American National Ins. Co. v. FEHC (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 603, 607, 186 Cal. Rptr. 345, 651 P.2d 1151 ; County of Fresno v. FEHC (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1548, 277 Cal. Rptr. 557 ; Raytheon Co. v. FEHC (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1250-1251, 261 Cal. Rptr. 197] . The independent judgment standard applies to findings that unlawful discrimination did not occur [see Kerrigan v. Fair Employment Practice Comm'n (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 43, 51-52, 154 Cal. Rptr. 29 , cert. denied, 444 U.S. 930] .

[f] Transfer to Court by Respondent

The respondent may elect to transfer the administrative proceedings to court if the accusation includes a prayer for damages for emotional injuries or administrative fines, or both. The respondent must serve notice of the election on all parties within 30 days after service of the accusation (or within 30 days after service of an amended accusation if the amendment was made for the purpose of adding a prayer for damages for emotional injuries, administrative fines, or both) [Gov. Code § 12965(c)(1)]. If the defendant makes such an election, the DFEH must dismiss the accusation and file (or elect to have the Attorney General file) the court action in its own name on behalf of the aggrieved person, who is the real party in interest in the civil action and, as such, has the right to participate as a party and be represented by counsel. Transferred actions are given priority by the court [Gov. Code § 12965(c)(2)]. A plaintiff in such an action has the same right to relief (including attorney's fees and costs recoverable by the prevailing party) as in an action filed under Gov. Code § 12965(b) [Gov. Code § 12965(c)(3)]. In addition, the relief granted may include a requirement that the employer conduct training for all employees, supervisors, and management on the requirements of FEHA and the employer's internal grievance procedures [Gov. Code § 12965(c)(3)].

[g] Actions Not Requiring Exhaustion of Adminstrative Remedies

Although an employee must exhaust FEHA administrative remedy before bringing a civil action under FEHA or seeking any remedies provided by FEHA, exhaustion of the administrative remedy is not required before filing a civil action for damages alleging nonstatutory causes of action [Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 88, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373] . Thus, for example, exhaustion of FEHA administrative remedies is not a prerequisite to filing a civil action alleging a tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, which is independent of FEHA [see Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 88-91, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373] . For discussion of common law causes of action for wrongful termination, see Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline .

On the other hand, if an employer provides a statutory internal grievance mechanism, a failure to exhaust its remedies precludes a subsequent nonstatutory civil action [Palmer v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 899, 903-906, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567] . Similarly, an employer's internal remedy generally must be exhausted before the employee sues under a statutory provision that does not contain its own administrative remedy [see Campbell v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 311, 329-330, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 320, 333-335, 106 P.3d 976 (public employee must exhaust employer's internal remedy before suing for retaliation for statutorily protected "whistleblowing" activity under Lab. Code § 1102.5, which is silent on administrative remedy or exhaustion requirement)]. The exhaustion of internal grievance procedures is required not because of any contractual obligation, but because of compelling policy considerations. If an employer has the opportunity quickly to determine through the operation of its internal procedures that it has committed error, it may be able to minimize, and sometimes eliminate, any monetary injury to the employee by immediately reversing the initial action. An employee should not be permitted to increase damages by forgoing available internal remedies. Moreover, an exhaustion requirement reflects the courts' recognition of the "expertise" of the employer's quasi-judicial tribunal, permitting it to adjudicate the merits of the plaintiffs' claims in the first instance [Campbell v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 311, 322, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 320, 327-328, 106 P.3d 976 (requirement that internal remedy be exhausted serves salutary function of mitigating damages, recognizes quasi-judicial tribunal's expertise, and promotes judicial economy by unearthing relevant evidence and providing record should there be judicial review of case); Palmer v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 899, 905, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567] .

However, a failure to exhaust an employer's internal procedures will not preclude a civil action asserting a claim under the FEHA or another statutory scheme that contains its own exhaustion prerequisite. Thus, a public employee who has exhausted the FEHA administrative process and obtained a right-to-sue letter from the DFEH need not also exhaust internal administrative procedures provided by the employer prior to filing an FEHA claim in superior court [Schifando v. City of Los Angeles (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1074, 1081-1091, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 457, 79 P.3d 569]. Similarly, a public employee who asserts both FEHA claims and related nonstatutory claims for wrongful termination in violation of public policy need not exhaust the internal administrative remedy provided by the employer with respect to those nonstatutory claims before filing a civil action, if the resolution of those claims would have a preclusive impact on the FEHA claim [Williams v. Housing Auth. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 708, 727-731, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 374] . Also, exhaustion of internal procedures is not required if the procedures do not include a quasi-judicial hearing with sufficient due process to generate a legally binding result [Ahmadi-Kashani v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 449, 456-461, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 556], or if the internal procedures are provided by a collective bargaining agreement rather than a statute [Ortega v. Contra Costa Cmty. Coll. Dist. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1073, 1080-1086, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 832]. However, if the employee elects to pursue an employer's internal administrative process to a decision that is of a sufficiently judicial character to support collateral estoppel, the employee must pursue that process to completion, including exhausting any available judicial avenues for reversal of adverse findings. A failure to do so will result in any quasi-judicial administrative findings having binding, preclusive effect in later judicial proceedings [McDonald v. Antelope Valley Cmty. Coll. Dist. (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 88, 113, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 734, 194 P.3d 1026 ; Page v. Los Angeles County Probation Dept. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1135, 1143-1144 , 20 Cal. Rptr. 3dd 598; see Miller v. City of L.A. (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1382-1383, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 510 (having participated in evidentiary hearing and receiving hearing examiner's report and recommendation, employee was obligated to exhaust his judicial remedies, including seeking administrative mandamus, and employee's failure to do so resulted in administrative decision having collateral estoppel effect)].

[2] Exhaustion of Title VII, ADA, and ADEA Claims

[a] Jurisdictional Requirement

Title VII, the ADA, and the ADEA have an administrative scheme that is distinct from, but related to, FEHA apparatus. The federal enforcement agency for these statutes is the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) [see 29 U.S.C. § 626 (ADEA); 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-4, 2000e-5(a) (Title VII); see also 42 U.S.C. § 12117 (procedures set forth in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5 apply to ADA)].

Before filing a civil action under Title VII or the ADA, an aggrieved person must file a timely EEOC charge or DFEH complaint, and must obtain an EEOC "right-to-sue" letter [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(b), (c), (e), (f); Zipes v. Trans World Airlines (1982) 455 U.S. 385, 393, 102 S. Ct. 1127, 71 L. Ed. 2d 234 ; Jasch v. Potter (9th Cir. 2002) 302 F.3d 1092, 1094-1096 (if EEOC reaches merits of employee's Title VII claim and issues right-to-sue letter, employee has sufficiently exhausted administrative remedies, even though employee did not fully cooperate with EEOC investigation); see also 42 U.S.C. § 12117 (procedures set forth in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5 apply to ADA)]. A Title VII complainant generally has 180 days from the time of the alleged unlawful employment practice to file with the EEOC, but a 300-day filing period applies if the complainant institutes proceedings with a state or local agency, such as the DFEH, that has authority to grant or seek relief from unlawful employment practices [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(e)(1); see [b], below]. The charge must be verified [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(b)]. However, an otherwise timely charge may be verified after the expiration of the time for filing [29 C.F.R. § 1601.12(b); Edelman v. Lynchburg Coll. (2002) 535 U.S. 106, 122 S. Ct. 1145, 152 L. Ed. 2d 188, 196-201 (upholding 29 C.F.R. § 1601.12(b) as valid interpretation of 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5)].

The 180- or 300-day period for filing a Title VII charge based on a discrete act of discrimination or retaliation (e.g., termination, failure to promote, denial of transfer, or refusal to hire) generally begins to run when that act occurs [AMTRAK v. Morgan (2002) 536 U.S. 101, 110-115, 122 S. Ct. 2061, 153 L. Ed. 2d 106]. A plaintiff who does not file a timely charge under Title VII challenging the adoption of a discriminatory practice may assert a disparate-impact claim in a timely charge challenging the employer's later application of that practice [*Lewis v. City of Chicago (May 24, 2010) -- U.S. --, 130 S. Ct. 2191, 176 L. Ed. 2d 967, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 4165, at *10-21 (after employer adopted practice of excluding employment applicants who did not achieve certain score on examination, each time employer selected applicants who took that examination constituted "use" of that employment practice under 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A)(i), giving rise to disparate-impact claim by excluded applicant)].

If the alleged unlawful employment practice consists of discrimination in compensation [see, e.g., 29 U.S.C. § 623(a)(1) (ADEA); 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1) (Title VII)], a discriminatory act occurs and triggers the filing period (1) when the discriminatory compensation decision or other practice is adopted; (2) when the employee becomes subject to the discriminatory compensation decision or other practice; and (3) when the employee is affected by application of the discriminatory compensation decision or other practice, including each time wages, benefits, or other compensation is paid, resulting in whole or in part from that decision or other practice [29 U.S.C. § 626(d)(3) (ADEA); 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(e)(3)(A) (Title VII) (overruling Ledbetter v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. (2007) 550 U.S. 618, 127 S. Ct. 2162, 2167-2172, 167 L. Ed. 2d 982, 990-995 , which had held that employee's Title VII charge had to be filed within applicable 180 or 300 days after pay-raise decision and could not be based on mere fact that paychecks issued within limitations period entailed adverse effects resulting from past discriminatory pay-raise decisions)]. The employee in such a case may recover back pay for up to two years preceding the filing of the charge, if the unlawful employment practices that have occurred during the charge-filing period are similar or related to unlawful employment practices with regard to discrimination in compensation that occurred outside the time for filing a charge [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(e)(3)(B)]. These special rules governing claims of discrimination in compensation were enacted in 2009 but are effective as if enacted on May 28, 2007, and apply to all discriminatory-compensation claims pending on or after that date under Title VII, the ADEA, the ADA, and the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 [Pub. L. No. 111-2, §§ 5, 6 (Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act of 2009); see 29 U.S.C. §§ 791(g), 794(d), 794a(a)(1), (2) (Rehabilitation Act of 1973); 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-16(f) (Title VII federal employment; 42 U.S.C. § 12117(a) (ADA))].

A claim other than for discrimination in compensation or for harassment generally may impose liability on the employer only for events occurring within the limitations period, even if events occurring outside of the limitations period form part of a pattern extending to events that are not time-barred [Raad v. Fairbanks N. Star Borough (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 1185, 1192 (discriminatory practice other than harassment remains divisible into discrete acts for purposes of limitations period, even if it extends over time)]. Furthermore, such a claim based on a discrete act of discrimination or retaliation occurring outside the limitations period is time-barred even if it was performed under an allegedly discriminatory policy that remained in effect during the limitations period [see Cherosky v. Henderson (9th Cir. 2003) 330 F.3d 1243, 1245-1248 (claims under Rehabilitation Act, 29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq., are governed by same continuing violations doctrine that applies to claims under Title VII)].

If the employee is asserting a hostile work environment claim, the filing period may be measured from the time of any act contributing to that hostile environment [AMTRAK v. Morgan (2002) 536 U.S. 101, 115-122, 122 S. Ct. 2061, 153 L. Ed. 2d 106 (application of equitable doctrines may either limit or toll time period within which employee must file charge)].

The EEOC issues a right-to-sue letter (1) if an aggrieved person requests the letter at least 180 days after a charge is submitted or if the EEOC determines that it will be unable process the charge within 180 days; (2) if the EEOC is unable to obtain voluntary compliance from the employer; or (3) if the EEOC dismisses the charge [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 1601.28 (EEOC guideline; notice of right to sue); see also 42 U.S.C. § 12117 (procedures set forth in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5 apply to ADA); 29 C.F.R. § 1601.1 (EEOC procedural regulations apply to ADA)]. The exhaustion of administrative remedies requirement for a federal claim cannot be satisfied by obtaining a right-to-sue letter from the California Department of Fair Employment and Housing [Roman v. County of Los Angeles (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 316, 325-326, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13] . The aggrieved person has 90 days from the date of the right to sue letter to initiate a civil action in court [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(1); see O'Donnell v. Vencor Inc. (9th Cir. 2006) 466 F.3d 1104, 1111 (complaint filed after expiration of that 90-day period is barred, even if plaintiff previously filed timely complaint that was voluntarily dismissed without prejudice)].

Under the ADEA, an aggrieved person may bring his or her own civil action, but not until 60 days after filing an EEOC charge or DFEH complaint [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 626(d), 633(b); 29 C.F.R. § 1626.7(b) (EEOC guideline)]. However, under the ADEA, a person's private right of action terminates if the EEOC commences a civil action [see 29 U.S.C. § 626(c)]. A filing with the EEOC will constitute a "charge" that starts the running of the 60-day period under the ADEA if it alleges unlawful discrimination, specifies the name of the charged party, and can be reasonably construed as a request for the EEOC to take remedial action to protect the employee's rights or otherwise to settle a dispute between the employer and employee [Federal Express Corp. v. Holowecki (2008) 552 U.S. 389, 128 S. Ct. 1147, 1156-1158, 170 L. Ed. 2d 10].

If the claim made in an employee's lawsuit differs from the charge that the employee filed with the EEOC, the court will not find that the employee has exhausted administrative remedies unless a reasonable investigation of the charge filed with the EEOC would have encompassed the events alleged in the lawsuit. For example, an employee who has exhausted administrative remedies for a claim that his or her termination constitutes unlawful discrimination will be deemed to have exhausted a claim based on the employer's failure to reinstate the employee, since an EEOC investigation of either claim would necessarily have encompassed both claims [Josephs v. Pacific Bell (9th Cir. 2006) 443 F.3d 1050, 1061-1062 (ADA)]. On the other hand, a claim that the employer retaliated against the employee for filing a charge with the EEOC is not administratively exhausted by the charge filed with the EEOC, if that charge alleged harassment by one supervisor but the retaliation was allegedly conducted by another supervisor. In such a case, a reasonable investigation of the EEOC charge would not have encompassed the second supervisor's allegedly retaliatory acts [Vasquez v. County of L.A. (9th Cir. 2003) 349 F.3d 634, 644-646 (Title VII)].

An equitable exception to the administrative-exhaustion requirement is available when an EEOC representative misleads the employee concerning his or her claim. Relief from the exhaustion requirement is available if the employee (1) diligently pursued his or her claim; (2) was misinformed or misled by the EEOC; (3) relied in fact on the misinformation or misrepresentations of the EEOC, causing the employee to fail to exhaust his or her administrative remedies; and (4) was acting pro se at the time [Josephs v. Pac. Bell (9th Cir. 2006) 443 F.3d 1050, 1061 (employee was told by EEOC representative that he needed to retain counsel before filing claim, and delay caused by seeking out counsel caused employee to miss filing deadline)].

[b] Federal Process in Relation to State Agency

The federal administrative process is initiated by filing a written "charge" with the EEOC within 300 days after an alleged unlawful act or, if a complaint is filed with the DFEH first, within 30 days after the DFEH terminates its process, whichever occurs first [29 U.S.C. § 626(d) (ADEA); 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(a), (e) (Title VII); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1601.7-1601.14, 1626.5-1626.8 (EEOC guidelines); see also 42 U.S.C. § 12117 (procedures set forth in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5 apply to ADA)]. The charge filed with the EEOC must be verified [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(b)]. However, an otherwise timely charge may be verified after the expiration of the time for filing [29 C.F.R. § 1601.12(b); Edelman v. Lynchburg Coll. (2002) 535 U.S. 106, 122 S. Ct. 1145, 1148-1152, 152 L. Ed. 2d 188 (upholding 29 C.F.R. § 1601.12(b) as valid interpretation of 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5)].

If the charge is based on Title VII or the ADA, state administrative proceedings must generally be initiated first; an EEOC charge may not be filed until 60 days after those proceedings are commenced, unless the state agency terminates its proceedings sooner [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(c); see also 42 U.S.C. § 12117 (procedures set forth in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5 apply to ADA)]. By contrast, an aggrieved person may file charges based on the ADEA with the DFEH and EEOC simultaneously [Oscar Mayer & Co. v. Evans (1979) 441 U.S. 750, 756, 99 S. Ct. 2066, 60 L. Ed. 2d 609 ; see 29 U.S.C. §§ 626(d), 633(b)].

Generally, if an EEOC charge based on Title VII or the ADA is filed first, the EEOC will defer it to the state equal employment opportunity agency [see 29 C.F.R. § 1601.13(a)(4)(i) (EEOC guideline); see also 29 C.F.R. §§ 1601.1 (EEOC procedural regulations apply to ADA), 1601.80 (DFEH is certified "deferral" or "FEP agency")]. However, the EEOC and DFEH have a work-sharing agreement whereby complaints or charges that are covered by both FEHA and Title VII may be processed first by the agency with which the complaint is originally filed [see EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 5.4; see also 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-4(g)(1) (authorizing work-sharing agreements), 12117 (procedures set forth in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-4 apply to ADA); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1601.1 (EEOC procedural regulations apply to ADA), 1601.13(c), 1626.10(a)].

[c] Administrative Actions and Remedies

On the filing of a charge, the EEOC takes the following action:

- The EEOC investigates the charge [see 29 U.S.C. § 626(a) (ADEA); 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-5(b), 2000e-8, 2000e-9 (Title VII); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1601.15-1601.17, 1626.15, 1626.16 (EEOC guidelines); see also 42 U.S.C. § 12117 (procedures set forth in 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-5, 2000e-8, 2000e-9 apply to ADA); 29 C.F.R. § 1601.1 (EEOC procedural regulations apply to ADA)].

- The EEOC may attempt informally to eliminate the alleged discrimination by conciliation [see 29 U.S.C. § 626(d) (ADEA); 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(b) (Title VII); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1601.20, 1601.24, 1626.12, 1626.15(b) (EEOC guidelines); see also 42 U.S.C. § 12117 (procedures set forth in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5 apply to ADA); 29 C.F.R. § 1601.1 (EEOC procedural regulations apply to ADA)].

- The EEOC, if it is unable to obtain conciliation, may bring a civil action in federal court [see 29 U.S.C. § 626(b) (ADEA); 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-5(f)(1), 2000e-6(b) (Title VII); 29 C.F.R. § 1601.27 (EEOC guideline); see also 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-6(a),(c)-(e) (EEOC civil actions in federal court if there is pattern or practice of discrimination), 12117 (procedures set forth in 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-5, 2000e-6 apply to ADA); 29 C.F.R. § 1601.1 (EEOC procedural regulations apply to ADA)]. In an ADA case, the United States Supreme Court held that the EEOC may bring its own enforcement action seeking relief for the aggrieved person, even if the aggrieved person has waived his or her right to pursue judicial enforcement by signing a mandatory arbitration agreement [EEOC v. Waffle House, Inc. (2002) 534 U.S. 279, 122 S. Ct. 754, 151 L. Ed. 2d 755, 764-770 ; see § 115.55 (waiver of judicial remedies in arbitration clauses)].

Under Title VII and the ADA, an aggrieved person has the right to intervene in an EEOC civil action [42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(1); see 42 U.S.C. § 12117 (procedures set forth in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5 apply to ADA)].

For a detailed discussion of the administrative procedures under Title VII, the ADA, and the ADEA, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 42 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationExhaustion of RemediesLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate ImpactExhaustion of RemediesLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate TreatmentExhaustion of RemediesLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationExhaustion of RemediesLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationHarassmentRacial HarassmentExhaustion of Remedies

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Civil Actions and Judicial Remedies

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.52

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.52 Civil Actions under FEHA

[1] Statute of Limitations

After exhausting FEHA's administrative remedies and receiving a "right-to-sue" letter from the DFEH, an aggrieved person has one year from the date of the right to sue letter to file a civil action [see Gov. Code § 12965(b)]. This one-year filing requirement is a statute of limitations subject to equitable tolling, rather than a jurisdictional requirement [see Salgado v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 823 F.2d 1322, 1324-1325] .

The one-year limitations period may be tolled if the following requirements are met [Gov. Code § 12965(d)(1), (e)(1)]:

> (1) A charge of discrimination or harassment was timely filed concurrently with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) and the DFEH; and
>
> (2) Either (i) the DFEH issued a right-to-sue letter in conjunction with a decision to defer its investigation of the charge to the EEOC; or (ii) the EEOC deferred its investigation to the DFEH and then, after an investigation and determination by the DFEH, conducted its own investigation or agreed to perform a substantial weight review of the DFEH determination.

If the foregoing requirements are met, the complainant's time for commencing a civil action will expire when the federal right-to-sue period expires, or one year from the date of the DFEH right-to-sue letter, whichever is later [Gov. Code § 12965(d)(1), (e)(1); see Downs v. Department of Water & Power (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1093, 1100-1102, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 590 ; but see Mathieu v. Norrell Corp. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 1189-1190, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52 (employee's pursuit of administrative remedy under FEHA does not toll limitations period on common-law claim of wrongful termination in violation of public policy)].

If a plaintiff files a complaint alleging common law causes of action within the limitations period, a subsequent amended complaint alleging FEHA causes of action that is filed after the limitations period has expired but that rests on the same facts and refers to the same incidents and injuries as the original complaint, will "relate back" to the initial complaint and will thereby be timely filed [Goldman v. Wilsey Foods (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1085, 1094-1095, 265 Cal. Rptr. 294] .

California courts have concurrent jurisdiction with federal courts to hear Title VII claims [Yellow Freight System v. Donnelly (1990) 494 U.S. 820, 821, 110 S. Ct. 1566, 108 L. Ed. 2d 834] . Thus, a plaintiff may allege Title VII causes of action in state court along with his or her FEHA claims. To do so, however, the plaintiff must receive a right-to-sue letter from the EEOC, which is valid for only 90 days [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(1); see O'Donnell v. Vencor Inc. (9th Cir. 2006) 466 F.3d 1104, 1111 (complaint filed after expiration of that 90-day period is barred, even if plaintiff previously filed timely complaint that was voluntarily dismissed without prejudice)]. Consequently, the plaintiff must file his or her complaint within that limitations period (as opposed to the one year limitations period for FEHA actions) or risk dismissal of his or her Title VII claims [see Draper v. ECR Coeur Rochester, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1104, 1107-1109 (applying continuing violations doctrine in Title VII case)]. A defendant may remove state court actions that allege Title VII claims to federal court [see 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331, 1441(a)]. For a discussion of removal of actions to federal court, generally, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal . For a comprehensive discussion of Title VII civil actions, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 43 (Matthew Bender).

For a form of civil complaint seeking damages and equitable relief under FEHA, see § 115.90.

[2] Venue

A FEHA civil action may be brought in any of the following places [Gov. Code § 12965(b)]:

- Any county in California in which the unlawful practice is alleged to have been committed;
- The county in which the records relevant to the practice are maintained and administered; or
- The county in which the aggrieved person would have worked but for the alleged unlawful practice.

However, if the defendant is not found within any such county, the action may be brought within the county of the defendant's residence or principal office [Gov. Code § 12965(b)].

FEHA plaintiffs may bring their actions wherever FEHA venue provision permits, even if they have other causes of action that would establish venue elsewhere [see Brown v. Superior Court (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 477, 488-489, 208 Cal. Rptr. 724, 691 P.2d 272] .

The FEHA venue statute, Gov. Code § 12965(b), does not preclude a change of venue for the convenience of witnesses under Code Civ. Proc. § 397(c), the general civil venue statute [Richfield Hotel Management v. Superior Court (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 222, 226-227, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161] .

For a discussion of venue in California civil actions generally, see Ch. 571, Venue .

[3] Parties Not Named in Charge

A plaintiff may not bring a FEHA civil action against a defendant not named in the DFEH charge [see Gov. Code § 12960]. An individual defendant must be named in either the caption or the body of a DFEH charge in order for the plaintiff to bring a civil action against that individual [Cole v. Antelope Valley Union High School Dist. (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 1505, 1515, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 ; Saavedra v. Orange County Consol. Transp. Service Agency (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 824, 826-828, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 282 ; Martin v. Fisher (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 118, 121-123, 13 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 922] .

[4] Class Actions

The plaintiff may file a complaint on behalf of, and as a representative of, a group or class if the plaintiff alleges that an unlawful employment practice (1) adversely affects, in a similar manner, a group or class of persons of which the plaintiff is a member, or (2) raises questions of law or fact that are common to the group or class [Gov. Code § 12961].

Although there is little case law discussing the procedural requirements for FEHA class actions, class actions asserting claims under Title VII and other federal antidiscrimination laws have generally been subjected to the usual class action rules and procedures [see, e.g., General Tel. Co. of Southwest v. Falcon (1982) 457 U.S. 147, 160-161, 102 S. Ct. 2364, 72 L. Ed. 2d 740 ; East Texas Motor Freight v. Rodriguez (1977) 431 U.S. 395, 399-406, 97 S. Ct. 1891, 52 L. Ed. 2d 453 ; Bates v. UPS (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 974, 985 (en banc) (ADA: class must establish that at least one named plaintiff has standing); Gay v. Waiters' and Dairy Lunchmen's Union (9th Cir. 1977) 549 F.2d 1330, 1331-1334] . Since California class action rules are similar to federal class action rules [see Collins v. Rocha (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 232, 238, 102 Cal. Rptr. 1, 497 P.2d 225] , FEHA class actions are likely to be subject to the full range of California class action requirements.

Accordingly, there must be an ascertainable class with a well-defined community of interest in the questions of law and fact affecting the parties to be represented [see Code Civ. Proc. § 382; Daar v. Yellow Cab Co. (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 695, 704, 63 Cal. Rptr. 724, 433 P.2d 732] . The community of interest requirement is not satisfied if every class member would have to litigate numerous questions to establish his or her right to recover as a class member. For example, FEHA disability discrimination claims generally are not amenable to class treatment because they involve individualized, fact-specific inquiries, such as whether each employee is disabled for FEHA purposes and whether the employer has provided reasonable accommodation for each employee [McCullah v. Southern Cal. Gas. Co. (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 495, 499-502, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 208] . On the other hand, race, age, and gender-discrimination cases may be amenable to class treatment because the identification of class members is straightforward in such cases [McCullah v. Southern Cal. Gas. Co. (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 495, 500, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 208] .

If a class action involving a comparable claim of discrimination is pending in federal court, a FEHA class action may not be brought in California court against the same defendant [Gov. Code § 12965(b)]. This provision proscribes only concurrent (i.e., not successive) class actions, and therefore it does not bar a FEHA class action after the dismissal without prejudice of a class action in federal court [Alch v. Superior Court (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 339, 362-367, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 29] .

For a detailed discussion of the procedural requirements for class actions generally, see Ch. 120, Class Actions .

[5] Right to Jury Trial

There is a right to a jury trial in a civil action under FEHA [see Asare v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 856, 868-869, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 452] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationStatutes of LimitationsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationDefenses & ExceptionsStatutes of LimitationsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate ImpactStatutes of LimitationsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate TreatmentStatutes of LimitationsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationStatutes of Limitations

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Civil Actions and Judicial Remedies

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.53

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.53 Workers' Compensation Preemption

Several California courts of appeal have held that the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act (WCA) [Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3602] do not bar a civil damages action for sex, race, or other prohibited employment discrimination under FEHA [see Flait v. North American Watch Corp. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 467, 480, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 522 (retaliation for efforts to prevent sexual harassment); Goldman v. Wilsey Foods (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1085, 1095-1096, 265 Cal. Rptr. 294 (religious discrimination); Meninga v. Raley's, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 79, 84-91, 264 Cal. Rptr. 319 (sex discrimination); Jones v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 794, 807-808, 244 Cal. Rptr. 37 (race discrimination); see also Murray v. Oceanside Unified Sch. Dist. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1362-1363, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 28 (cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress founded on sexual-orientation harassment not barred by exclusivity provisions of WCA)]. However, the exclusive remedy provisions may apply to a subsequent workplace injury incurred while carrying out the duties of a position in which the employee was placed for an alleged discriminatory reason. In such a case, a civil action is barred unless the discriminatory act was a substantial factor in causing the workplace injury [Huffman v. Interstate Brands Cos. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 679, 692-697, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 397 (emotional distress caused by subsequent work-related injury following alleged discriminatory act is not recoverable in civil action unless discriminatory act was substantial factor in causing the subsequent injury)].

If an employee is injured or killed by a third party in the course of the employee's employment solely because of the third party's personal beliefs relating to his or her perception of the employee's race, religious creed, color, national origin, age, gender, disability, sex, or sexual orientation, workers' compensation benefits may be available in addition to any action the employee or his or her survivors may have against the third party [see Lab. Code § 3600(c) (for purposes of determining whether to grant or deny workers' compensation claim, if employee is injured or killed by third party in course of employee's employment, no personal relationship or personal connection shall be deemed to exist between employee and third party based only on determination that third party injured or killed employee solely because of third party's personal beliefs relating to his or her perception of employee's race, religious creed, color, national origin, age, gender, disability, sex, or sexual orientation)].

Historically, California courts of appeal held that the WCA preempts a FEHA civil action by an industrially injured employee alleging discrimination on the basis of his or her resulting disability because Lab. Code § 132a provides the exclusive remedy for such discrimination [see, e.g., Angell v. Peterson Tractor, Inc. (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 981, 995, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 541 ; Usher v. American Airlines (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1520, 1526, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 335 ; Denney v. Universal City Studios (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1226, 1234-1236, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 170 ; Pickrel v. General Telephone Co. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1058, 1064, 252 Cal. Rptr. 878] . One Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals panel held that amendments to FEHA, including Gov. Code § 12993(a), which were intended to strengthen FEHA to incorporate provisions of the ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.], did not eliminate the possibility of workers' compensation exclusivity [Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Corp. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1514, 1530] .

The California Supreme Court, however, has rejected the reasoning of these earlier cases, and has held that Lab. Code § 132a does not preclude an employee who becomes disabled by a workplace injury from pursuing FEHA and common law wrongful discharge remedies for discrimination on the basis of the disability resulting from the injury [City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1150-1161, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752] .

In City of Moorpark, the court of appeal had reached the same result as the Supreme Court, but had based its holding on the Legislature's 1993 amendment to FEHA, which provided, in part, that FEHA would not be deemed to repeal any laws of the state relating to disability discrimination "unless those provisions provide less protection to the enumerated classes of persons covered" [see City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1153-1154, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 ; see also Gov. Code § 12993(a)]. The California Supreme Court, however, reached its holding in City of Moorpark without regard to the 1993 amendments to FEHA. Rather, the Court distinguished the Lab. Code § 132a remedy from other remedies of the WCA [see Lab. Code § 3600 et seq.], noting that Section 132a addresses a breach of an employee's civil rights (compensation for discrimination based on work-related disability), and not compensation for medical injuries [City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1154-1158, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752] . Emphasizing the breadth of FEHA, the Court noted that it does not apply only to disabilities unrelated to work and expresses a legislative purpose that its provisions be construed broadly [City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1157, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752] . However, the Court also noted that "not every instance of disability discrimination in violation of Section 132a gives rise to a valid FEHA claim" [City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1158, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Workers' Compensation & SSDIRemedies Under Other LawsExclusivityGeneral OverviewWorkers' Compensation & SSDIRemedies Under Other LawsExclusivityExceptions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Civil Actions and Judicial Remedies

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.54

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.54 Substantive Defenses

[1] Affirmative Defenses Generally

Affirmative defenses to employment discrimination claims under FEHA include all of the following:

- Antiharassment policy [Burlington Industries v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 765, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 807-808, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662] .

- Bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) [Gov. Code § 12940; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(a) (FEHC regulation)].

- Business necessity/job relatedness [2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7286.7(b),(c), 7287.4(e) (FEHC regulations); City and County of San Francisco v. FEHC (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 989, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716] .

- Inability to perform a job or to perform a job safely [see Gov. Code § 12940(a)(1),(2); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.8(b)-(f) (FEHC regulation); Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 848 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988) (construing FEHA)].

- Written release of claims.

- Compliance with security regulations established by the United States or by California [Gov. Code § 12940; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(d) (FEHC regulation)].

- Compliance with nondiscrimination or affirmative action plans [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(e)].

- Actions required by state or federal law [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(f) (FEHC regulation)].

- The lawful regulation of spouses working together [Gov. Code § 12940(a)(3); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.5(a)(1),(2) (FEHC regulation)].

- Veteran's preferences [Gov. Code § 12940(a)(4)].

Several of these affirmative defenses are discussed in the following subsections [see also sample forms in §§ 115.100 -115.107].

For further discussion of these affirmative defenses, as well as affirmative defenses to claims brought under Title VII, the ADA, the ADEA, and other equal employment opportunity laws, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law (Matthew Bender).

[2] After-Acquired Evidence

An issue that has frequently arisen in employment discrimination claims is the extent to which evidence of employee misconduct that would have justified an employer's adverse employment action, but which was not discovered by the employer until after it took an allegedly discriminatory employment action (so-called "after-acquired evidence"), may act as a defense to a discrimination claim. A common factual context in which this issue arises involves an employer's discovery, usually after the commencement of litigation of a discrimination claim, that the employee had falsified his or her resume or employment application. Employers have argued in such cases that the plaintiff should not be entitled to recovery because the plaintiff would have been fired (or would not have been hired in the first place) had the employer known of the falsification.

The United States Supreme Court, resolving a conflict among the federal appellate courts, has held that after-acquired evidence of employee wrongdoing does not bar an employee from relief under the ADEA (and, by implication, other federal discrimination statutes) [see McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publishing Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 356-360, 115 S. Ct. 879, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852] . The Court held, however, that the employee's misconduct, while not a complete bar to relief, is relevant to the remedies available in a particular case, since the employer's legitimate interests must be taken into account in fashioning an equitable remedy. Although leaving detailed resolution of the proper remedy to future decisions, the Court observed that as a general rule, neither reinstatement nor front pay is an appropriate remedy in cases of this type [McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publishing Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 360-362, 115 S. Ct. 879, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852] . However, the Court rejected any absolute rule barring back pay, and stated that back pay should generally be calculated from the date of the unlawful discharge to the date that the new information was discovered, although in formulating a remedy the trial court can consider any extraordinary circumstances that affect the legitimate interests of either party [McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publishing Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 362, 115 S. Ct. 879, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852] .

The Court in McKennon further stated that when an employer seeks to rely on after-acquired evidence of wrongdoing to limit relief, it must first establish that the wrongdoing was of such severity that the employee in fact would have been terminated on those grounds alone if the employer had known of it at the time of the discharge [McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publishing Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 362-363, 115 S. Ct. 879, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852] .

A California court of appeal, in a case involving common-law wrongful termination and age discrimination claims, has also refused to adopt a blanket rule that after-acquired evidence of falsification of an employment application is a complete defense to a wrongful termination or employment discrimination claim [Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 614, 617-618, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642] . The court reasoned that an automatic forfeiture of all employment rights, regardless of the circumstances, was too harsh a penalty in many cases. The court further reasoned that in cases in which an employer has fired a worker in violation of the statutory ban on discrimination, the purpose and effect of the discrimination statutes would be unacceptably undermined by a principle that would allow a fact that played no part in the firing decision to bar recovery [Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 614, 618-619, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642] . The court in that case did not discuss the potential effect of such after-acquired evidence on the amount of damages, because the issue was not before the court [see Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 614, 619 n.1, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642] .

Another California court of appeal has considered the application of the after-acquired evidence doctrine and the unclean hands doctrine in cases involving claims of both discrimination during employment and wrongful discharge. If after-acquired evidence establishes that the employee had engaged in misconduct that went to the heart of the employment relationship and related directly to the employee's wrongful-discharge claim, the unclean hands doctrine will bar that claim [Camp v. Jeffer, Mangels, Butler & Marmaro (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 620, 638-639, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329] . Thus, if an employee who is disqualified from employment by government-imposed requirements nevertheless obtains a job by misrepresenting the pertinent qualifications, the employee will have no recourse for an alleged wrongful termination of employment [Camp v. Jeffer, Mangels, Butler & Marmaro (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 620, 638-639, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329] . For example, if an employee obtained employment by using false resident alien and social security cards, the employee's claim for wrongful discharge will be barred by the unclean hands doctrine. Because the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 prohibits employers from knowingly hiring or continuing to employ unauthorized aliens [8 U.S.C. § 1324a], an employee's misrepresentation of his or her entitlement to work in the United States goes to the heart of the employment relationship and deprives the employee of any right to complain about termination [Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 833, 845, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12 ; see Hoffman Plastic Compounds, Inc. v. NLRB (2002) 535 U.S. 137, 150-151, 122 S. Ct. 1275, 152 L. Ed. 2d 271 (federal immigration policy precludes award of back pay for employment discrimination under National Labor Relations Act, 29 U.S.C. § 158(a)(3), to undocumented alien who has never been legally authorized to work in United States)].

However, in such a case neither the after-acquired evidence doctrine nor the unclean hands doctrine will bar the employee's discrimination or harassment claims for acts occurring during employment. Although the employee cannot complain of having lost a job that he or she was never entitled to in the first place, the employee nonetheless was employed by the employer. The employee's misrepresentation did not void the employment contract; it merely rendered it voidable should the employer seek to rescind it. While employed, the employee was entitled to all the protections available under employment law. Barring the employee's claim for sexual harassment occurring during the employment relationship would not serve the primary purpose of FEHA and Title VII, which is to end employment discrimination. In such a case, the equities between employer and employee can be balanced by barring all portions of the employment discrimination claim that are tied to the employee's discharge. The employer will not be permitted to escape the consequences of discriminatory conduct that was not caused or justified by the employee's misrepresentation [Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 833, 842, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12] .

The after-acquired evidence doctrine generally limits an employer's ability to rely on previously unknown wrongdoing of the employee to justify the employer's unlawful discrimination against the employee. However, if after-acquired evidence is offered to support the employer's originally proffered reason for an adverse employment action, the after-acquired evidence doctrine is inapplicable. Thus, for example, when an employee who has been terminated because of inability to perform the job alleges unlawful discrimination, the employer may offer after-acquired evidence to establish that the employee was in fact unable to do the job [Finegan v. County of Los Angeles (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10-13, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 762] .

After-acquired evidence of the employee's immigration status may have limited value in an action to enforce employment rights. The Legislature has declared that all protections, rights, and remedies available under state law, except any reinstatement remedy prohibited by federal law, are available to all individuals regardless of immigration status who have applied for employment, or who are or who have been employed, in California [Civ. Code § 3339(a); Gov. Code § 7285(a); Lab. Code § 1171.5(a)]. Accordingly, for purposes of enforcing state labor, employment, and civil rights laws, a person's immigration status is irrelevant to the issue of liability; in proceedings or discovery undertaken to enforce those state laws, no inquiry may be made into a person's immigration status unless the person seeking to make the inquiry has shown by clear and convincing evidence that the inquiry is necessary in order to comply with federal immigration law [Civ. Code § 3339(b); Gov. Code § 7285(b); Lab. Code § 1171.5(b)].

The Ninth Circuit has ruled that the foregoing provisions of California law are not preempted by the federal Immigration Reform and Control Act (IRCA), at least not when the employer can comply with the IRCA without creating a conflict with California law. The IRCA forbids employers from knowingly employing unauthorized aliens [8 U.S.C. § 1324a(a)(2)]. There is clearly no conflict between California law and IRCA--and therefore no preemption--when an employer is required to terminate an employee by IRCA and does so in order to comply with that statute. Under those circumstances, the employer can obey both laws because compliance with IRCA provides good cause, as defined by California law, for terminating unauthorized aliens [see Incalza v. Fendi N. Am., Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 479 F.3d 1005, 1010] .

Similarly, California law may impose liability on an employer for discharging an employee, even when the employer claims the discharge is required by the IRCA, when remedies short of discharge are permissible under the IRCA and its implementing regulations [Incalza v. Fendi N. Am., Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 479 F.3d 1005, 1010-1013 (IRCA and regulations authorized employer to place employee on unpaid leave without pay while employee obtained change in work visa to which employee was entitled under federal law)]. It remains an open question, however, whether California law and the IRCA conflict when an employer that is required by federal law to terminate an unlawful alien does so, but for reasons that are unlawful under California law [see Incalza v. Fendi N. Am., Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 479 F.3d 1005, 1010 (identifying issue but resolving case on other grounds)].

[3] Antiharassment Policy

In Burlington Industries and Faragher, the Supreme Court established that in Title VII "hostile environment" sexual harassment cases an employer may be held vicariously liable for the conduct of a supervisor with immediate (or successively higher) authority over the victimized employee [Burlington Industries v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 765, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 807-808, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662] . If the harassment has resulted in a tangible employment action, no affirmative defense is available to the employer [see Burrell v. Star Nursery (9th Cir. 1999) 170 F.3d 951, 956] . However, if no tangible employment action has been taken against the harassed employee, the employer may raise a two-part affirmative defense to liability or damages, subject to proof by a preponderance of the evidence. First, the employer must prove that "it exercised reasonable care to prevent and correct promptly any sexually harassing behavior." Second, it must prove that "the plaintiff employee unreasonably failed to take advantage of any preventive or corrective opportunities provided by the employer or to avoid harm otherwise" [Burlington Industries v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 765, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 807-808, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662] .

A constructive discharge (i.e., an abusive working environment so intolerable that the employee's resignation qualifies as a fitting response) does not by itself constitute a tangible employment action for this purpose. Thus, if a Title VII plaintiff alleges constructive discharge, the employer may assert the Burlington Industries/Faragher affirmative defense unless the employee quit in reasonable response to an employer-sanctioned adverse action that would qualify as a tangible employment action (e.g., a humiliating demotion, extreme cut in pay, or transfer to a position in which the employee would face unbearable working conditions) [Pennsylvania State Police v. Suders (2004) 542 U.S. 129, 124 S. Ct. 2342, 159 L. Ed. 2d 204, 216-223] an antiharassment policy is not required in every case as a matter of law, but the need for such a policy may be addressed in any case litigating the first element of the defense. Similarly, while proof of the second element of the defense is not limited to showing that the employee unreasonably failed to use any complaint procedure, such proof "will normally suffice to satisfy the employer's burden" for that element of the defense [Burlington Indus. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 765, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 807-808, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662] .

Similarly, the California Supreme Court has held that in a FEHA action against an employer for hostile environment sexual harassment by a supervisor, the employer may plead and prove a defense based on the "avoidable consequences" doctrine. In this context, the employer must prove the following to establish the defense: (1) that the employer took reasonable steps to prevent and correct workplace sexual harassment, (2) that the employee unreasonably failed to use the preventive and corrective measures that the employer provided, and (3) that reasonable use of the employer's procedures would have prevented at least some of the harm that the employee suffered [State Dep't of Health Servs. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1026, 1043-1044, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441, 79 P.3d 556]. However, an employee's failure to avail himself or herself of available protections offered by the employer does not provide a complete defense. At most, it serves to reduce the damages recoverable, and only if, taking account of the employer's antiharassment policies and procedures and its past record of acting on harassment complaints, the employee acted unreasonably in not sooner reporting the harassment to the employer [State Dept. of Health Servs. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1026, 1043-1044, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441, 79 P.3d 556 ; Myers v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1403, 1420-1421, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 501] .

For a form of an antiharassment policy affirmative defense, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law, Ch. 43 (Matthew Bender).

[4] Bona Fide Occupational Qualification

[a] Scope of Defense

Under FEHA, Title VII, and the ADEA, a discriminatory employment practice is not unlawful if it is based on a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(e) (Title VII); 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(1) (ADEA); Gov. Code § 12940 (FEHA); Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 19, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 (FEHA)].

A BFOQ must involve objective, verifiable requirements that concern job-related skills and aptitudes; it must relate to the "essence," or to the "central mission of the employer's business" [Auto Workers v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 202-204, 111 S. Ct. 1196, 113 L. Ed. 2d 158 (Title VII); see Western Air Lines v. Criswell (1985) 472 U.S. 400, 413-415, 105 S. Ct. 2743, 86 L. Ed. 2d 321 (ADEA); Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 333, 97 S. Ct. 2720, 53 L. Ed. 2d 786 (Title VII)].

FEHC regulations and California cases provide that the employer must prove that an employment practice that excludes an entire group of persons protected by FEHA (for example, all women or all persons with lower back defects) is justified because all or substantially all of the excluded persons are unable to safely and efficiently perform the job in question and because the business operation would otherwise be undermined [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(a); see Bohemian Club v. FEHC (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 19, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 (employer has burden of proof; relying on Weeks v. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. (5th Cir. 1969) 408 F.2d 228, 235 ; County of Alameda v. FEHC (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 499, 505-506, 200 Cal. Rptr. 381 (same); Sterling Transit Co. v. Fair Employment Practice Comm'n (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 791, 796-797, 175 Cal. Rptr. 548 (same)].

Like the Title VII BFOQ defense [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(e)], the FEHA BFOQ defense covers discrimination based on religion, national origin, and sex [see Gov. Code § 12940]. The FEHA BFOQ defense also expressly covers discrimination based on any other classification protected by that statute, including race [see Gov. Code § 12940].

By contrast, race is not a permissible BFOQ under Title VII because it was specifically excluded from the list of bases enumerated in that statute's BFOQ provision [see Knight v. Nassau County Civil Service Comm'n (2d Cir. 1981) 649 F.2d 157, 162 , cert. denied, 454 U.S. 818 ; 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(e)].

Also, federal cases have held that the Title VII BFOQ defense applies only to disparate treatment [see Harriss v. Pan Am. World Airways (9th Cir. 1980) 649 F.2d 670, 674] , and only to "hiring and employing," not to other terms and conditions of employment [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(e); EEOC v. Fremont Christian School (9th Cir. 1986) 781 F.2d 1362, 1367 (BFOQ defense not available when alleged discrimination consisted of employment policy of providing health insurance only to married men or single persons as heads of household, but not to married women)].

Generally, a FEHA BFOQ defense is narrowly construed [Bohemian Club v. FEHC (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 19, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769] . Thus, for example, even if an employer can demonstrate that certain jobs can only be performed by members of one sex, the employer also has the burden of showing that because of the nature of its business operation it could not rearrange the job responsibilities in order to reduce the BFOQ necessity [Bohemian Club v. FEHC (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 19, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 ; see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.8(c) (FEHC regulation)].

For a form of affirmative defense alleging that a challenged employment practice is a BFOQ, for use in a civil action under FEHA, see § 115.101.

[b] Application to Religion

Religion is one of the bases of discrimination to which the BFOQ defense applies under both FEHA and Title VII [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(e) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940 (FEHA)].

Although the use of religion as a BFOQ must be reasonably necessary to the normal operation of the employer's business, there is no requirement that the sole purpose of the employer be the promotion of religion or that the position be limited to the performance of religious functions [see Pime v. Loyola University of Chicago (N.D. Ill. 1984) 585 F. Supp. 435, 443 , aff'd, 803 F.2d 351 (7th Cir. 1986) (preferential hiring of Jesuit priests as teachers at Catholic-operated university upheld); see also 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(e)(2)].

For example, in one case in which a job required a helicopter pilot to fly over Mecca, the court held that a condition of employment requiring the pilot to convert to Islam, which was required under Saudi Arabian law, was covered by the BFOQ defense [see Kern v. Dynalectron Corp. (N.D. Tex. 1983) 577 F. Supp. 1196, 1199, 1202 , aff'd, 746 F.2d 810 (5th Cir. 1984)] .

However, in another case, the Ninth Circuit found that adherence to the Protestant faith was not a BFOQ for teaching at a school despite the fact that a testator's will that created and financed the school required that all teachers be Protestant. The court found that the central mission of the school was not merely to provide the native Hawaiian students with an education from the Protestant point of view, but to provide a solid education in traditional secular subjects, for which Protestant affiliation was largely irrelevant. The court stated that except for the school's religious education teachers, as to whom Protestant affiliation was conceded to be a BFOQ, there was nothing to suggest that adherence to the Protestant faith was essential to the teaching of secular subjects [EEOC v. Kamehameha Sch./Bishop Estate (9th Cir. 1993) 990 F.2d 458, 465-467 , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 963] .

[c] Application to Sex

Sex may be a BFOQ under FEHA and Title VII [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(e) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940 (FEHA)].

At least with respect to Title VII, the BFOQ defense applies if the physical characteristics of one sex or the other are necessary for the position (for example, wet nurse), or if the hiring of one sex is necessary for purposes of authenticity (for example, acting role) [see 29 C.F.R. § 1604.2(a)(2) (EEOC guideline)].

Since the essence of some jobs, such as prison guards, is to provide security, some cases have held that sex may be a

BFOQ for those jobs when the risk to females, by their "very womanhood," undermines their capacity to provide that security [see Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 335-336, 97 S. Ct. 2720, 53 L. Ed. 2d 786 ; Robino v. Iranon (9th Cir. 1998) 145 F.3d 1109, 1110-1111 (policy of assigning only female guards to certain posts at women's correctional institution was reasonably necessary to reduce risk of sexual conduct between guards and inmates)].

In some jobs the BFOQ defense involves safety considerations; thus, for example, the Title VII BFOQ has been applied to policies requiring flight attendants to discontinue flying when they learn they are pregnant [see, e.g., Harriss v. Pan American World Airways (9th Cir. 1980) 649 F.2d 670, 676 (Title VII); Condit v. United Air Lines (4th Cir. 1977) 558 F.2d 1176, 1176-1177 , cert. denied, 435 U.S. 934 (1978) (Title VII)]. Other courts, however, have held either that nonpregnancy is not a BFOQ for flight attendant jobs, or that it does not become one until a certain advanced point in the pregnancy [see, e.g., Maclennan v. American Airlines (E.D. Va. 1977) 440 F. Supp. 466, 472 (Title VII; airline did not bear its burden of showing all pregnant flight attendants should be removed); In re National Airlines (S.D. Fla. 1977) 434 F. Supp. 249, 263 (Title VII; no BFOQ until 20th week of pregnancy)].

Sex is not a BFOQ with respect to "fetal protection" policies that exclude fertile (as opposed to pregnant) female employees from hazardous jobs because of the possibility of harm to their potential unborn children. Both the United States Supreme Court and a California court of appeal have held that such a policy did not relate to the "essence" of the employer's business, because the employer did not show that there was a factual basis for believing that all or substantially all women would be unable to safely and efficiently perform the duties of the job [Auto Workers v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 206-207, 111 S. Ct. 1196, 113 L. Ed. 2d 158 (Title VII; fertile women, as far as the record showed, made batteries as efficiently as anyone else); Johnson Controls v. FEHC (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 517, 542, 267 Cal. Rptr. 158 (FEHA; same)].

Title VII cases have held that the BFOQ defense is applicable when the hiring of one sex or the other is necessary to maintain a general standard of privacy or decency for the job in question (for example, restroom attendants) [see Robino v. Iranon (9th Cir. 1998) 145 F.3d 1109, 1110-1111 (policy of assigning only female guards to certain posts at women's correctional institution was reasonably necessary to accommodate privacy of female inmates); Norwood v. Dale Maintenance Systems (N.D. Ill. 1984) 590 F. Supp. 1410, 1423 (restroom cleaner); Brooks v. ACF Industries (S.D.W. Va. 1982) 537 F. Supp. 1122, 1132 (female janitor in men's bath house)].

FEHC regulations interpreting FEHA state that privacy considerations may justify a BFOQ only under the following circumstances [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.8(b)]:

- If the job requires an employee to observe other individuals in a state of nudity or to conduct body searches;

- It would be offensive to prevailing social standards to have an individual of the opposite sex present; and

- It is detrimental to the mental or physical welfare of individuals being observed or searched to have an individual of the opposite sex present.

According to FEHC regulations, the following situations will not justify application of the defense [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.8(a)]:

- A correlation between individuals of one sex and physical agility or strength [cf. Rosenfeld v. Southern Pacific Co. (9th Cir. 1971) 444 F.2d 1219, 1224 (Title VII; employer must establish whether or not employees are qualified for job based on whether they have individual capacity to perform job); 29 C.F.R. § 1604.2(a)(1) (EEOC guideline; nondiscrimination principle requires consideration of individual capacities)];

- A correlation between individuals of one sex and height;

- Customer preference for employees of one sex [cf. Fernandez v. Wynn Oil Co. (9th Cir. 1981) 653 F.2d 1273, 1276 (Title VII); Diaz v. Pan Am. World Airways (5th Cir. 1971) 442 F.2d 385, 389 , cert. denied, 404 U.S. 950 (Title VII)];

- The necessity for providing separate facilities for one sex; or

- The fact that members of one sex have traditionally been hired to perform the particular type of job.

[d] Application to Age

FEHC regulations provide that, once a prima facie showing of age discrimination has been established, an employer may prove one or more of the defenses enumerated in the regulations, including the BFOQ defense [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.3(a)].

The standard for applying the ADEA BFOQ defense requires an employer to establish that (1) the age qualifications are reasonably necessary to the essence of the business, and (2) the employer had reasonable cause to believe, on a factual basis, that all or substantially all persons over the age qualifications would be unable to perform the duties of the job safely and efficiently, or, alternatively, that individual testing of the employees is highly impractical or impossible [Western Air Lines v. Criswell (1985) 472 U.S. 400, 413-415, 105 S. Ct. 2743, 86 L. Ed. 2d 321 ; see 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(1) (ADEA); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1625.6(b); Usery v. Tamiami Trail Tours (5th Cir. 1976) 531 F.2d 224, 235-236 ; EEOC v. Boeing Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 843 F.2d 1213, 1214, 1217-1220 , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 889] .

[e] Application to Disability or Medical Condition

The BFOQ defense for disability is closely related to the defense that the employee, because of his or her disability or medical condition, is unable, even with reasonable accommodation, to perform his or her essential duties without endangering his or her own health or safety or that of others [Gov. Code § 12940(a)(1),(2); see [6], below].

Lack of a disability may be a BFOQ under FEHA in certain circumstances [see Gov. Code § 12940]. For example, maximum weight requirements have been upheld when the employee held a job that was physically demanding and required strength, agility, and speed to meet the need for public safety and health concerns [Hegwer v. Board of Civil Service Comm'rs (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1011, 1025, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 389 (paramedics); see McMillen v. Civil Service Comm'n (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 125, 130-131, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548 (ambulance drivers)].

[5] Business Necessity and Job-Relatedness

FEHC regulations provide that, if an employer has a facially neutral employment practice that has a disparate impact on members of a classification protected by FEHA [see discussion of disparate impact at § 115.23[4]], the employer must prove that (1) there is an overriding legitimate business purpose that makes the practice necessary to the safe and efficient operation of the business, and (2) the challenged practice effectively fulfills the business purpose it is supposed to serve. The practice may still be impermissible if it is shown that there is an alternative practice that would accomplish the business purpose equally well with less discriminatory impact [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(b)].

If there is a facially neutral selection device, such as a test, that has a disparate impact on persons protected by FEHA, the employer must show that the device is sufficiently related to an essential function of the job in question to warrant its use [2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7286.7(c), 7287.4(e); see Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 428, 431, 436, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 (Title VII; scored test must measure whether person is suitable for particular position, and not measure qualifications of person in abstract); see also Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 431, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (Title VII; discriminatory tests are impermissible unless shown, by professionally acceptable standards, to predict, or significantly to correlate with, job performance)].

ADA regulations provide that, if an employer is charged with discrimination on the ground that a uniformly applied standard, criterion, or policy has a disparate impact on a disabled individual, it may defend on the ground that the challenged procedure is job-related and consistent with business necessity and that the performance cannot be accomplished by reasonable accommodation required under the ADA [29 C.F.R. § 1630.15(c)]. The same defense is provided with regard to a charge that an employer used discriminatory qualification standards, tests, or selection criteria [see 42 U.S.C. § 12113(a); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.15(b)]. Under this defense, for example, an employer may screen out a disabled potential worker for health or safety risks that the worker would pose to others or to himself or herself [29 C.F.R. § 1630.15(b)(2); Chevron U.S.A. Inc. v. Echazabal (2002) 536 U.S. 73, 77-87, 122 S. Ct. 2045, 153 L. Ed. 2d 82] .

To show that a qualification standard is job-related, an employer must demonstrate that the standard fairly and accurately measures the individual's actual ability to perform the essential functions of the job [Bates v. UPS (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 974, 996 (en banc)]. To show that the qualification standard is consistent with business necessity, the employer must show that it substantially promotes the business's needs [Bates v. UPS (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 974, 996 (en banc) ("business necessity" standard is quite high and is not to be confused with mere expediency)]. To show that sufficient job performance cannot be accomplished by reasonable accommodation, the employer must demonstrate either that no reasonable accommodation currently available would cure the performance deficiency or that such reasonable accommodation poses an undue hardship on the employer [Bates v. UPS (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 974, 996-997 (en banc)].

California courts generally treat business necessity and job-relatedness interchangeably. Thus, once disparate impact is established, the burden of proof shifts to the defendant to prove that the practice is job-related by demonstrating a business necessity for its use [City and County of San Francisco v. FEHC (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 989, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 ; see § 115.23[4][d]].

For a form of affirmative defense alleging that a challenged employment practice is justified by business necessity, for use in a civil action under FEHA, see § 115.102. For a form of affirmative defense alleging that a challenged employment requirement is job-related, see § 115.103.

[6] Inability to Perform Job or Danger to Health or Safety

FEHA generally proscribes employment discrimination based on physical or mental disability or medical condition [see Gov. Code § 12940(a); see also discussion at*§ 115.22[8]*], but an employer may refuse to hire or may discharge a person with a physical or mental disability or medical condition if that person, because of the disability or medical condition, cannot perform the essential duties of the job or cannot perform those duties in a manner that would not endanger his or her health or safety or that of others, even with reasonable accommodation [see Gov. Code § 12940(a)(1),(2); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.8(b)-(f); see also Gov. Code § 12926(f) ("essential duties" defined); see, e.g., EEOC v. UPS (2005) 424 F.3d 1060, 1074-1077 (safety-of-others defense justifies refusal to hire as commercial delivery driver applicant with monocular vision who fails vision test that rests on objective and statistical evidence that monocular drivers are involved in more accidents than binocular drivers); Quinn v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 472, 480-484, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 914 (plaintiff police officer could not establish prima facie cause of action for failure to accommodate hearing disability because that disability disqualified plaintiff for employment as police officer)].

The health and safety defense has a narrow scope [Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 848 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988)] . It must be tailored to the individual characteristics of each job applicant or employee in relation to specific legitimate job requirements [Sterling Transit Co. v. Fair Employment Practice Comm'n (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 791, 798, 175 Cal. Rptr. 548] . Thus, an employer may not refuse to hire someone based simply on the possibility of future health problems if there is no past or present interference with the person's safe job performance [see Gov. Code §§ 12926(k)(5), 12940(a); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.8(e); Sterling Transit Co. v. Fair Employment Practice Comm'n (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 791, 799, 175 Cal. Rptr. 548] .

Abstract medical generalizations regarding the possibility of future injury are insufficient as a matter of law to qualify as a defense [Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 851 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988)] . However, statistical studies and clinical measurements may be used to show that an employee cannot safely perform his or her job [see McMillen v. Civil Service Comm'n (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 125, 130-131, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548 (weight limitations for ambulance drivers); Hegwer v. Board of Civil Service Comm'rs (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1011, 1025, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 389 (weight limitations for paramedics)].

An employer has a duty reasonably to accommodate a person's physical or mental disability or medical condition, and failure to do so may negate the application of the health and safety defense [see Gov. Code §§ 12926(n), 12940(a)(1),(2),(m); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.9; Fisher v. Superior Court (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 779, 783, 223 Cal. Rptr. 203] . For discussion of employer's duty to accommodate physical or mental disabilities or medical conditions, see § 115.35[1].

Under the ADA, a qualified individual is defined as a disabled person who, with or without reasonable accommodation, can perform the essential functions of the position [42 U.S.C. § 12111(8); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(n)].

The ADA also includes a defense based on health risks if the disabled pers on has an infectious or communicable disease and the job involves handling food [42 U.S.C. § 12113(d); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.16(e)].

For forms of affirmative defenses alleging the plaintiff's inability to perform job duties and the plaintiff's inability to perform job duties without endangering his or her own health and safety or that of others, see §§ 115.104 and 115.105.

[7] Reasonable Factor Other Than Age

Under the ADEA, an employer may defend an age discrimination claim on the ground that the employer made a differentiation based on reasonable factors other than age [see 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(1); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1625.7(e) (EEOC guideline; employer bears burden of showing that reasonable factor exists)]. The existence of a reasonable factor other than age is an affirmative defense on which the employer bears the burden of proof [Meacham v. Knolls Atomic Power Lab. U.S. (2008) -- U.S. --, 128 S. Ct. 2395, 2398, 2400-2402, 171 L. Ed. 2d 283 , on remand, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36999 (Apr. 15, 2009)].

An employer may base an employment decision on a factor that is empirically correlated with age if the decision is in fact motivated by a factor other than age. Thus, for example, at least in a disparate-treatment case, an employer's decision to terminate an employee based on years of service because his or her pension is close to vesting does not constitute discriminatory treatment on the basis of age in violation of the ADEA, even though years of service may be statistically correlated with age, because age and years of service are analytically distinct [Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 612-613, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338 ; see Kentucky Ret. Sys. v. EEOC (2008) 554 U.S. 135, 128 S. Ct. 2361, 2364-2370, 171 L. Ed. 2d 322 (ADEA; because age and pension status are analytically distinct, state pension plan does not discriminate because of age simply because it (1) lawfully makes age part of conditions of pension eligibility and (2) treats workers differently in light of their pension status); see also discussion at § 115.33[2]].

The use of salary as a criterion when terminating employees may constitute age discrimination under FEHA if use of that criterion adversely impacts older workers [Gov. Code § 12941 (expressly rejecting holding of Marks v. Loral Corp. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 30, 63, 66, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1)].

[8] Written Release of Claims

A written release of claims by an employee may be a valid defense against that employee's later claim of employment discrimination under FEHA [see Skrbina v. Fleming Cos. (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1366-1367, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 481] . The California Supreme Court has held that the standard language of the mandatory preprinted form used in settling workers' compensation claims [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10874 (Workers' Compensation Appeals Board Form 15)] releases only those claims that are within the scope of the workers' compensation system, and it does not apply to claims asserted in separate civil actions. Moreover, extrinsic evidence is not admissible to show that the parties intended the preprinted release form to encompass claims outside the scope of the workers' compensation system [Claxton v. Waters (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 367, 376-377, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 246, 96 P.3d 496 , (Supreme Court's decision to have prospective effect only, so that previously executed preprinted releases may be shown by extrinsic evidence to encompass claims outside scope of workers' compensation)]. After the Supreme Court's decision, the official workers' compensation settlement form was revised to provide expressly that "Execution of this form has no effect on claims that are not within the scope of the workers' compensation law or claims that are not subject to the exclusivity provisions of the workers' compensation law, unless otherwise expressly stated" [Workers' Compensation Appeals Board Form 15, 2, as revised eff. Oct. 2005].

The parties in a workers' compensation proceeding may prepare and execute their own general release that expressly purports to settle claims outside the scope of the workers' compensation system [see Claxton v. Waters (2004); 34 Cal. 4th 367, 377, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 246, 96 P.3d 496] . In such a case, for example, if the employee has knowledge of a potential FEHA claim against the employer at the time of executing a general release in a workers' compensation proceeding, and if the employee has not yet initiated litigation of that claim, the employee has the burden of expressly excepting the claim from the release.

In the absence of an express exception of the FEHA claim, and absent contrary extrinsic evidence, the general language releasing all claims will bar the employee from pursuing the FEHA claim [Jefferson v. California Dep't of Youth Authority (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 299, 305-306, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 391, 48 P.3d 423] . In another case, for example, an employee who signed a general release of all employment claims was held to have extinguished his right to later bring an action against his employer for disability and age discrimination. The court found that the language of the release could not have been plainer and that absent fraud, duress, deception, misrepresentation, or undue influence, a plaintiff's assertion that he or she did not intend to relinquish his or her rights to employment discrimination claims does not invalidate the release if the plaintiff read and willingly signed the release [Skrbina v. Fleming Cos. (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1366-1367, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 481] .

In the absence of clear language releasing all claims, however, a release of one claim does not ordinarily operate to release other claims. If a release is ambiguous about its scope, extrinsic evidence may be admissible to show whether the parties intended the release to encompass claims not expressly mentioned [Butler v. Vons Cos. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 943, 947-950, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 151 (in context of settlement of labor grievance signed by union, employee, and employer, whether waiver of unknown claims was intended as release of employee's personal FEHA claims was question of fact)].

A release of claims that does not comply with the requirements of the Older Workers Benefits Protection Act [29 U.S.C. § 626(f)(1)] cannot bar a claim for age discrimination under the ADEA [Oubre v. Entergy Operations (1998) 522 U.S. 422, 426-428, 118 S. Ct. 838, 139 L. Ed. 2d 849 (specific statutory requirements for release of ADEA claims foreclose application of general contract principles to make nonconforming release effective)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Carefully Review Written Release. This issue often arises in workers' compensation claims as well as severance agreements. It is important to caution clients to have an attorney carefully review, and explain, any written release before it is signed because it is quite possible that an employee is being "tricked" into releasing claims he or she did not intend to release. By John H. Scott

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationDefenses & ExceptionsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationDefenses & ExceptionsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationDefenses & ExceptionsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationNational Origin DiscriminationDefenses & ExceptionsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationRacial DiscriminationDefenses & ExceptionsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Civil Actions and Judicial Remedies

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.55

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.55 Waiver of Judicial Remedies in Arbitration Clauses

[1] Employment Subject to Arbitration

In a setting involving interstate commerce, employees may waive their statutory rights to judicial enforcement of at least some civil rights statutes by agreeing to arbitrate [Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 23, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26 (ADEA); EEOC v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton, & Scripps (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 742, 746-753 (en banc) (employer may require employee to sign agreement to arbitrate Title VII claims as condition of employment); Spellman v. Securities, Annuities & Ins. Services (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 452, 462-463, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427 (FEHA)]. However, there must be "at least a knowing agreement to arbitrate" [Prudential Ins. Co. of America v. Lai (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 1299, 1304-1305 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 812 (1995) (insufficiency of employment form incorporating another document which did not explicitly mention employment disputes); see Renteria v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 1104, 1107 (same); Mitri v. Arnel Mgmt. Co. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1164, 1170-1173, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 223 (employee handbook statement that "employees are required to sign an arbitration agreement" does not itself constitute arbitration agreement)]. The agreement must be express, with the employee explicitly being given the choice, and making the choice, whether he or she is willing to waive a specific statutory remedy [Nelson v. Cyprus Bagdad Copper Corp. (9th Cir. 1997) 119 F.3d 756, 761-762 , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1072 (1998) (insufficiency of plaintiff's agreement to read employee handbook with new requirement of arbitration, with his continued employment thereafter)].

The exclusion of Section 1 of the Federal Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C. § 1, for "contracts of employment of seamen, railroad employees, or any other class of workers engaged in foreign or interstate commerce" is limited to contracts of transportation workers only. All other employment contracts "evidencing transactions involving commerce," 9 U.S.C. § 2, are governed by the FAA [Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Adams (2001) 532 U.S. 105, 121 S. Ct. 1302, 149 L. Ed. 2d 234 (overruling Ninth Circuit minority position articulated in Craft v. Campbell Soup Co. (9th Cir. 1998) 177 F.3d 1083)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Advantages of Arbitration. In some cases mandatory arbitration may be a positive as opposed to a negative. Generally, cases can be arbitrated less expensively and more quickly. Accordingly, in some cases it may be advantageous for an aggrieved employee to obtain a faster and less expensive resolution of a dispute--even if it means giving up the right to a jury trial. By John H. Scott

[2] Requirements for Valid Arbitration Clause

The California Supreme Court has held that a mandatory arbitration agreement in an employment contract that encompasses unwaivable statutory rights (such as the employee's rights under FEHA) must effectively permit the employee to vindicate his or her statutory cause of action in the arbitration forum [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychare Servs. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 90, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 ; see Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Superior Court (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 665, 680-682, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 171, 229 P.3d 83 (dictum: provision limiting access to administrative remedy for FEHA claims does not by itself render arbitration agreement unenforceable)]. Therefore, such an arbitration agreement is invalid unless it meets all the following standards [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 99-113, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 ; see Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 740-741, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422 (Armendariz applies retroactively to pending cases)]:

- The agreement provides for neutral arbitrators;

- The agreement provides for more than minimal discovery [see Dotson v. Amgen, Inc. (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 975, 982-985, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 341 (arbitration provision that limits discovery but empowers arbitrator to order additional discovery on showing of need is not unconscionable); Fitz v. NCR Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 702, 715-719, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 88 (minimum standards of fairness are not met by agreement that restricts discovery to depositions of two individuals and of experts expected to testify, plus exchange of hearing exhibits and witness lists, with no additional discovery unless arbitrator finds fair hearing would be impossible without additional discovery)];

- The agreement requires a written award that will reveal the essential findings and conclusions on which the award is based, so as to permit judicial review;

- The agreement provides for all of the types of relief that would otherwise be available in court; and

- The agreement does not require the employee to pay, as a condition of access to the arbitration forum, unreasonable costs or any arbitrators' fees or expenses, or any expense that the employee would not be required to bear if he or she brought the action in court. Therefore, a mandatory arbitration agreement that encompasses the arbitration of FEHA claims is not subject to the California Arbitration Act's general cost-sharing provision [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1284.2]. Rather, such an arbitration agreement impliedly obliges the employer to pay all types of costs that are unique to arbitration [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 113, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669] .

The foregoing standards apply to any arbitration agreement that purports to encompass an employee's rights under any statute enacted "for a public reason," that is, for public purpose. Thus, for example, these standards apply in determining the validity of an agreement to arbitrate claims arising under Labor Code Section 230.8 (which prohibits discrimination against an employee who has taken time off to participate in his or her child's school activities) or Labor Code Section 970 (which prohibits employers from misrepresenting the terms and conditions of employment to induce a person to change residences to take the job) [Mercuro v. Superior Court (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 167, 180, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671] .

The California Supreme Court has further held that, even as to claims other than unwaivable causes of action, an arbitration provision is unconscionable and unenforceable if it is (1) procedurally unconscionable, and (2) substantively unconscionable [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 113-121, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669] . The procedural aspect of unconscionability focuses on oppression or surprise due to unequal bargaining power, and it generally takes the form of a contract of adhesion, imposed as a condition of employment with no opportunity for the employee to negotiate [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 113-114, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 ; Nyulassy v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 1280-1281, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 296 ; see, e.g., Olvera v. El Pollo Loco, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 447, 455-456, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 65 (procedural unconscionability was evidenced by inequality in bargaining power between low-wage employees and corporate employer, as well as by employer's inaccurate description of arbitration policy as requiring "mediation" rather than arbitration)]. Generally, if there truly is no element of procedural unconscionability in an arbitration provision, the provision will not be deemed unconscionable, no matter how one-sided the terms appear to be [Gentry v. Superior Court (2007), 42 Cal. 4th 443, 469, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773 (employer's failure to provide employees with material information about disadvantageous terms of arbitration agreement, combined with likelihood that employees felt pressure not to opt out of agreement, meant that agreement was not free from procedural unconscionability)].

The substantive aspect of unconscionability focuses on the terms of the agreement and whether those terms are so one-sided as to lack basic fairness and mutuality [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 114, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 ; Nyulassy v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 1280-1281, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 296 ; see, e.g., Olvera v. El Pollo Loco, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 447, 456-457, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 65 (class arbitration waiver was substantively unconscionable because it would preclude most effective or only way for low-wage employees to vindicate their statutory rights, particularly since many of those employees had limited English-language skills and were likely ill-informed of their statutory rights, and it would benefit only employer, which was unlikely to have any claim against its employees as class)]. For example, an arbitration provision imposed in an adhesive context lacks fairness and mutuality if it requires the employee, but not the employer, to arbitrate all claims arising out of the same transaction or occurrence. Also, an arbitration agreement is unconscionably one-sided if it restricts the full recovery of damages by the employee, while placing no such restriction on the employer [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 113-121, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 ; see Stirlen v. Supercuts (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1539-1540, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138] . Also unconscionable in a contract of adhesion is a provision giving the arbitrator exclusive authority to decide questions of enforceability, including questions of unconscionability [Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 494, 505, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471 (when one party is "repeat player" in arbitration, arbitrator has self-interest in deciding that any given dispute is arbitrable)].

If an arbitration agreement is "permeated" by unconscionability--for example, if it contains more than one unlawful provision, or if there is no discrete unlawful provision that can be severed from the agreement--then the entire arbitration agreement is void and cannot be partially enforced [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 121-127, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 ; see Civ. Code § 1598; see, e.g., Franco v. Athens Disposal Co. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1277, 1304, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 539 (because arbitration agreement contained two unlawful provisions--class arbitration waiver, and provision precluding employee from seeking civil penalties on behalf of other employees under Lab. Code § 2698 et seq.--agreement as whole was tainted with illegality and was therefore unenforceable); Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enters., Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 154, 181, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818 (arbitration agreement containing more than one unlawful provision--class arbitration waiver and unconscionable arbitrator-selection clause--was permeated by unlawful purpose and was therefore unenforceable)]. For example, if an arbitration agreement (1) addresses the kinds of claims that normally would be brought by the employee but not those that would be brought by the employer, (2) limits the employee's recovery to the amount of wages paid during the employee's last six months of work, (3) precludes recovery by the employee for statutory claims, (4) specifies a venue for arbitration that is convenient for the employer but not necessarily for the employee, and (5) requires that the employee initially pay all costs of arbitration, the agreement is unconscionable and so one-sided as to be unenforceable [Pinedo v. Premium Tobacco Stores, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 774, 781, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 435 (such arbitration agreement "is at least equally unconscionable to the one presented in Armendariz")].

Similarly, an arbitration agreement is "permeated by an unlawful purpose," and therefore unenforceable in its entirety, if the terms of the agreement and the surrounding circumstances indicate a systematic effort to impose arbitration on an employee as an inferior forum that works to the employer's advantage [Mercuro v. Superior Court (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 167, 185, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 (systematic effort to impose arbitration on employee as inferior forum was established by employer's threats and cajoling to get employee to sign agreement, lack of mutuality as to arbitrable claims, provision that unlawfully required employee to share burden of arbitrator's fee, and disadvantages to employee in using designated arbitrator)]. On the other hand, if the arbitration agreement contains a clause in which the parties expressly agree to allow a court or arbitrator to sever or modify any "unreasonable or unenforceable" provisions, the agreement as so modified may be enforceable [Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 743-746, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422 ; see Civ. Code §§ 1599, 1670.5(a)].

If the employer has afforded the employee a meaningful opportunity to opt out of an arbitration agreement, the agreement will not be deemed unconscionable [Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Ahmed (9th Cir. 2002) 283 F.3d 1198, 1199-1200 (arbitration agreement is not adhesive, and thus lacks procedural unconscionability, if employee is given opportunity to opt out)]. However, if the employee's failure to opt out is not an authentic informed choice, the agreement does have an element of unconscionability and faces judicial scrutiny to determine whether its terms are so one-sided or oppressive as to be substantively unconscionable [Gentry v. Superior Court (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 443, 469, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773 (employer's failure to provide employees with material information about disadvantageous terms of arbitration agreement, combined with likelihood that employees felt pressure not to opt out of agreement, meant that agreement was not free from procedural unconscionability); Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Mantor (9th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 1101, 1106-1107 (arbitration agreement is procedurally unconscionable if employee's opportunity to opt out is not meaningful, such as when employer pressures employee and threatens employee's job if he or she does not accept arbitration agreement)].

The waivability of federal statutory remedies depends on congressional intent in enacting the particular statute [Nelson v. Cyprus Bagdad Copper Corp. (9th Cir. 1997) 119 F.3d 756, 760 (noting evidence of congressional intent to preclude waivers under ADA)].

A general arbitration provision in a collective bargaining agreement that does not explicitly incorporate statutory antidiscrimination requirements does not effectively waive individual employees' rights to a judicial forum for their statutory civil rights claims [Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp. (1998) 525 U.S. 70, 119 S. Ct. 391, 142 L. Ed. 2d 361, 371-372 ; see Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 34-35, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26 ; Spellman v. Securities, Annuities & Ins. Services (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 452, 461, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427] . The Labor Management Relations Act's general presumption of the arbitrability of disputes arising under a collective bargaining agreement [see 29 U.S.C. § 185; AT&T Technologies, Inc. v. Communications Workers of America (1986) 475 U.S. 643, 650, 106 S. Ct. 1415, 89 L. Ed. 2d 648] is inapplicable to claims arising from civil rights statutes [Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp. (1998) 525 U.S. 70, 119 S. Ct. 391, 142 L. Ed. 2d 361, 369-371] .

A collective bargaining agreement provision that clearly and unmistakably requires union members to arbitrate statutory claims is enforceable [14 Penn Plaza LLC v. Pyett (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1456, 173 L. Ed. 2d 398, 408-414 (enforcing collective bargaining agreement that expressly mandated grievance and arbitration procedure as "sole and exclusive remedy" for union members' claims of employment discrimination under state and federal statutes, including Age Discrimination in Employment Act, 29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq.); see Camargo v. California Portland Cement Co. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1018-1021, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 841 (arbitration award not entitled to collateral estoppel effect in subsequent FEHA litigation because arbitration had been conducted under collective bargaining agreement that did not clearly and unmistakably provide for arbitration of FEHA claims, and arbitration procedures did not allow for full litigation and fair adjudication of FEHA claims); Vasquez v. Superior Ct. (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 430, 433-436, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 294 (collective bargaining agreement did not specifically refer to ADA or FEHA, so there was no clear and unmistakable waiver)].

In any event, an arbitration provision will not foreclose a civil action by the employee to collect unpaid wages [Lab. Code § 229]. Moreover, an arbitration agreement made between the employer and the employee will not bar the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission from pursuing judicial relief for the employee under the Americans With Disabilities Act [EEOC v. Waffle House, Inc. (2002) 534 U.S. 279, 286-298, 122 S. Ct. 754, 151 L. Ed. 2d 755, 763-770 (ADA grants EEOC exclusive authority over choice of forum and prayer for relief in its own enforcement action, and that authority is not affected by employee's signing of mandatory arbitration agreement); see 42 U.S.C. §§ 12101 et seq ., 12117(a) (ADA)].

For detailed discussion of the enforceability of arbitration clauses, see Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration .

Even if a mandatory arbitration provision in an employment agreement is enforceable, a court must vacate an arbitration award made pursuant to the provision if a legal error in the award prevents the employee from obtaining a hearing on his or her FEHA claim or other claim based on unwaivable statutory rights. In such a case, vacatur is appropriate because the arbitrator exceeds his or her powers by making an award based on a legal error [Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Superior Court (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 665, 675-680, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 171, 229 P.3d 83 (arbitrator erred in concluding that arbitration was time-barred, based on erroneous interpretation of Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.12 tolling provision); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4) (vacatur is required when arbitrator exceeds his or her powers)]. Other grounds for vacatur under the California Arbitration Act include corruption, fraud, and prejudicial misconduct by the arbitrators [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)]. For detailed discussion of judicial enforcement and vacatur of arbitration awards, see Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsArbitrabilityLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964RemediesAlternative Dispute Resolution

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Civil Actions and Judicial Remedies

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.56

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.56 Judicial Remedies

[1] Scope

Generally, the remedial goal of FEHA is to restore a plaintiff who proves discrimination or retaliation to the position or status he or she would have enjoyed but for the defendant's wrongful conduct [Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 852 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988) (construing FEHA)].

FEHA does not specifically set forth judicial remedies, other than to authorize a discretionary award of costs (including expert witness fees) and attorney's fees to the prevailing party [see Gov. Code § 12965(b); Commodore Home Systems v. Superior Court (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 211, 215, 185 Cal. Rptr. 270, 649 P.2d 912 ; Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 852 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988)] . However, it has been held that all relief generally available in noncontractual actions, including punitive damages, may be awarded in civil actions under FEHA [Commodore Home Systems v. Superior Court (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 211, 221, 185 Cal. Rptr. 270, 649 P.2d 912] .

For a form of civil complaint seeking damages and equitable relief under FEHA, see § 115.90.

[2] Back Pay

Courts commonly award back pay in FEHA civil actions [see, e.g., American National Ins. Co. v. FEHC (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 603, 606, 186 Cal. Rptr. 345, 651 P.2d 1151 ; Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 855 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988)] .

FEHC administrative decisions define back pay as the amount that a plaintiff would have earned but for an employer's unlawful conduct, minus the amount that plaintiff did earn or could have earned if he or she had mitigated the loss by seeking or securing other comparable employment [see DFEH v. Rosenberg (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 10; DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, pp. 21-22; DFEH v. County of Madera (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-03, pp. 36-37; DFEH v. J. E. Robinson, D.D.S. (1989) FEHC Dec. No. 89-02, p. 14; DFEH v. Aluminum

Precision Products, Inc. (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-05, p. 9; see also Ackerman v. Western Electric Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 855, 855 n.16 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988) (construing FEHA; amounts earned from other employment deducted from back pay award); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.9(a)(1)(A) (FEHC regulation; mitigation of back pay awards)].

Back pay includes pension and profit-sharing contributions [see DFEH v. California State University--Sacramento (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-08, p. 25; cf. Patterson v. American Tobacco Co. (4th Cir. 1976) 535 F.2d 257, 269 , cert. denied, 429 U.S. 920 (Title VII)] , vacation pay, sick pay, overtime and shift differential pay [see DFEH v. California State University--Sacramento (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-08, p. 25; cf. Pettway v. American Cast Iron Pipe Company (5th Cir. 1974) 494 F.2d 211, 263 (Title VII)] , fringe benefits (such as medical insurance) [see County of Alameda v. FEHC (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 499, 509, 200 Cal. Rptr. 381] , and all other compensation that would have been obtained but for the discrimination [cf. Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 418-421, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (Title VII)] .

Because back pay is a make-whole remedy, intended to restore the employee to the financial situation that would have existed but for the employer's wrongful conduct, an employee is not entitled to earnings he or she would not have received in any event. Thus, for example, an employer is not liable for back pay during a period that a wrongfully discharged employee is unavailable for work due to a disability that is not the result of the employer's wrongful conduct [see Davis v. Los Angeles Unified Sch. Dist. Pers. Comm'n (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1122, 1134-1135, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 69] .

The plaintiff has the burden of demonstrating the amount of back pay [see DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, pp. 21-22]. However, the burden is on the employer to prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, that no pay is due the plaintiff in some or all of the back pay period, and to prove any offsets to plaintiff's expected earnings [see DFEH v. County of Madera (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 90-03, p. 36].

If an employee is denied a promotion for a discriminatory reason that is prohibited by FEHA, and then voluntarily resigns, the employee is not precluded from recovering back pay for the period after the date of his or her resignation, even if the employee was not constructively discharged [Cloud v. Casey (2000) 76 Cal. App. 4th 895, 905-908, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 757 (declining to adopt contrary federal rule); but see Satterwhite v. Smith (9th Cir. 1984) 744 F.2d 1380, 1381 n.1 (under federal discrimination law, employee who has been discriminatorily denied promotion is precluded from recovering back pay for any period after date of resignation, unless employee was constructively discharged)].

[3] Front Pay or Future Lost Earnings

Courts have discretion to award "front pay" or "future lost earnings" under FEHA if, because of unlawful discrimination or retaliation, an applicant or employee has lost earnings he or she would have received beyond the judgment date [see, e.g., Bihun v. AT&T Information Systems, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 976, 995-997, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787 ; Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 856 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988) (construing FEHA)]. Front pay may also be awarded when reinstatement is not feasible [Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 856 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988) (construing FEHA)].

Front pay is an equitable remedy designed to (1) compensate for lost reinstatement rights by allowing discharged employees to find comparable employment, (2) deter future improper employer action, or (3) make a discharged employee whole until he or she attains a level of earnings equivalent to the level at the time of termination [Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 856 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988) (construing FEHA)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Effect of Duty to Mitigate. The efforts to mitigate damages can have a significant impact on both "back pay" that accrues before trial [see [2], above] and "front pay" that may be claimed. As noted, front pay is considered an equitable remedy in lieu of reinstatement. Normally, the employer will have the opportunity to elect to reinstate a terminated employee, or be exposed to front pay, in the event that there is finding of liability. By John H. Scott

[4] Compensatory Damages

Courts may award compensatory damages for discrimination under FEHA [see Commodore Home Systems v. Superior Court (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 211, 221, 185 Cal. Rptr. 270, 649 P.2d 912 ; Bihun v. AT&T Information Systems, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 976, 995-997, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787 ; Garcia v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 701, 711, 219 Cal. Rptr. 544] .

Thus, plaintiffs may recover damages for mental suffering and emotional distress resulting from discrimination, as well as for other resulting damages that are not included in the formulations of "back pay" and "front pay" [see Commodore Home Systems v. Superior Court (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 211, 220-221, 185 Cal. Rptr. 270, 649 P.2d 912 ; Bihun v. AT&T Information Systems, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 976, 995-997, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787 ; Garcia v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 701, 711, 219 Cal. Rptr. 544 ; cf. Alcorn v. Anbro Engineering (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 493, 498, 86 Cal. Rptr. 88, 468 P.2d 216 (damages for emotional distress due to discriminatory termination available under tort theory)].

[5] Punitive Damages

Punitive damages are available in civil actions under FEHA [Commodore Home Systems v. Superior Court (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 211, 221, 185 Cal. Rptr. 270, 649 P.2d 912] . Recovery of punitive damages is generally limited to FEHA violations that are accompanied by malice, oppression, or fraud [see Civ. Code § 3294; see, e.g., Monge v. Superior Court (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 503, 511-512, 222 Cal. Rptr. 64 (plaintiffs who pleaded sexually hostile working environment were entitled to seek punitive damages under FEHA); see generally Ch. 177, Damages].

Punitive damages may be assessed against an employer based on the wrongful conduct of its employee if the employer [Civ. Code § 3294(b)]:

- Had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee and employed him or her with a conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others;
- Authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct of the employee; or
- Was personally guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice.

Thus, the employer itself need not have committed fraud, oppression, or malice to be liable for punitive damages [see Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1153-1154, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510] . However, to subject a corporate employer to liability for punitive damages in such a case, the conscious disregard, authorization, or ratification must have been performed by an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation [Civ. Code § 3294(b); see § 115.36[2][c] (discussion of employer liability for punitive damages due to acts of supervisors)]. For this purpose, a "managing agent" is a corporate employee who exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in making decisions that ultimately determine corporate policy; the mere power to hire and fire employees is not sufficient to establish such authority [White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 567, 573-577, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944 (determination of managing-agent status is factual determination that must be made on case-by-case basis)].

Evidence showing that the employer denied the employee his or her protected rights under FEHA, and then sought to hide what the employer had done with a false explanation, can meet the statutory definition of malice, which includes despicable conduct intended to cause injury to the plaintiff carried on with a "willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others" [Cloud v. Casey (2000) 76 Cal. App. 4th 895, 911-912, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 757 ; Civ. Code § 3294(d)(1)].

Under Title VII, punitive damages are available to victims of workplace discrimination if the employee demonstrates that the employer has engaged in intentional discrimination and has done so "with malice or with reckless indifference to (the employee's) federally protected rights" [42 U.S.C. § 1981a(b)(1)]. However, the total of punitive damages plus compensatory damages for nonpecuniary and future pecuniary losses may not exceed a statutory cap [42 U.S.C. § 1981a(b)(3); see also Lansdale v. Hi-Health Supermart Corp. (9th Cir. 2002) 314 F.3d 355, 357-359 (damages limitation of 42 U.S.C. § 1981a(b)(3) does not violate constitutional separation of powers, Seventh Amendment right to jury trial, Due Process clause, or Equal Protection clause); but see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(e)(3)(B) (in addition to relief authorized by 42 U.S.C. § 1981a, employee claiming discrimination in compensation may recover back pay for up to two years preceding filing of charge of discrimination, if unlawful employment practices that occurred during charge-filing period are similar or related to unlawful employment practices with regard to discrimination in compensation that occurred outside time for filing charge)]. To recover punitive damages under Title VII, a plaintiff must show that the employer had a "subjective consciousness" of the risk of injury or illegality. The employer's conduct need not be shown to be egregious, although evidence of egregious misconduct may be used to meet the plaintiff's burden of proof [Kolstad v. American Dental Assoc. (1999) 527 U.S. 526, 119 S. Ct. 2118, 144 L. Ed. 2d 494, 506-507, 512] . After a showing of the requisite intent by certain managerial employees, the employee must also show that the requisite mental state can be imputed to the employer [Kolstad v. American Dental Assoc. (1999) 527 U.S. 526, 119 S. Ct. 2118, 144 L. Ed. 2d 494, 508-512] . In Title VII cases, with respect to punitive damages, an employer may not be vicariously liable for the discriminatory conduct of its managerial agents when the agents' decisions are contrary to the employer's good-faith efforts to comply with Title VII (e.g., institution of a written sexual harassment policy) [Kolstad v. American Dental Assoc. (1999) 527 U.S. 526, 119 S. Ct. 2118, 144 L. Ed. 2d 494, 512] .

The Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution places constraints on state-court awards of punitive damages [State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 416-418, 123 S. Ct. 1513, 155 L. Ed. 2d 585 ; BMW of N. Am. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 568, 116 S. Ct. 1589, 134 L. Ed. 2d 809 ; Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749 ; Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1159, 1171, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 379, 113 P.3d 63]. The United States Supreme Court has articulated three "guideposts" for courts reviewing punitive damages: (1) the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's misconduct, (2) the disparity between and the punitive damages award and the actual or potential harm suffered by the plaintiff, (3) the difference between the punitive damages awarded by the jury and the civil penalties authorized or imposed in comparable cases [State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 418, 123 S. Ct. 1513, 155 L. Ed. 2d 585 ; Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749]. The most important of these guideposts is the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct. On this question, courts must consider whether (1) the harm caused was physical as opposed to economic; (2) the tortious conduct evinced an indifference to or a reckless disregard of the health or safety of others; (3) the target of the conduct had financial vulnerability; (4) the conduct involved repeated actions or was an isolated incident; and (5) the harm was the result of intentional malice, trickery, or deceit, or mere accident [State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 419, 123 S. Ct. 1513, 155 L. Ed. 2d 585 ; Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749 (one-to-one ratio between compensatory and punitive damages was federal constitutional limit in FEHA discrimination and harassment case involving relatively low degree of reprehensibility of defendant's conduct and substantial compensatory damages award, which included substantial amount of noneconomic damages, which itself may have included punitive component)].

[6] Injunctive Relief

Although FEHA does not expressly authorize a court to grant injunctive relief for unlawful discrimination, courts have awarded such relief, including (1) hiring, promotion, and reinstatement orders [see, e.g., Johnson v. Civil Service

Comm'n (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 585, 591, 200 Cal. Rptr. 289 (order directing city to employ petitioner as firefighter); Fair Employment Practice Comm'n v. State Personnel Bd. (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 322, 331-332, 172 Cal. Rptr. 739 (promotion order); International Union of Operating Engineers v. Fair Emp. Practice Comm'n (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 504, 510-511, 81 Cal. Rptr. 47 , cert. denied, 397 U.S. 1037 (1970) (order to hire)], (2) orders granting retroactive seniority [see, e.g., County of Alameda v. FEHC (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 499, 200 Cal. Rptr. 381 (retroactive seniority granted to black female denied position by county as jail cook)], (3) orders requiring removal of negative materials from work records and requiring employer to indicate voluntary departure from employment [see Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 857 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988) (construing FEHA)], and (4) orders directing employers to cease and desist from discriminatory policies or practices [see Herr v. Nestle U.S.A., Inc. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 779, 788-790, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477 (age discrimination in violation of FEHA is unlawful employment practice that may be enjoined under Unfair Competition Law, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq.); Northern Inyo Hosp. v. Fair Employment Practice Comm'n (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 14, 17, 112 Cal. Rptr. 872 (construing former FEPA)].

In a FEHA suit in which the trier of fact has determined that the defendant committed racial harassment through the pervasive use of racially derogatory language, the court has the power to issue an injunction prohibiting the defendant's continued use of racial epithets in the workplace. Such an injunction is not an unconstitutional prior restraint on speech [see U.S. Const., amend. I; Cal. Const., art. I, § 2]. Rather, it is simply an order precluding the defendant from continuing unlawful conduct that has been judicially determined to violate FEHA and that is outside the scope of constitutional free-speech protection [Aguilar v. Avis Rent A Car System (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 121, 133-142, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132, 980 P.2d 846 , cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1138 (2000)] .

[7] Prejudgment Interest

FEHA plaintiffs may recover prejudgment interest on awards of back pay and other tangible, easily ascertainable benefits [see Civ. Code § 3287(a); see also County of Alameda v. FEHC (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 499, 508, 200 Cal. Rptr. 381 (upholding without comment interest on back pay award)].

Prejudgment interest is also available under Civ. Code § 3291, which provides for recovery of prejudgment interest in "any action to recover damages for personal injury" from a defendant that is not a public employee or entity, if (1) the plaintiff made an offer pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998,(2) the defendant did not accept the offer before trial or within 30 days, and (3) the plaintiff obtained a more favorable judgment. An action for damages for sexual harassment under FEHA constitutes an action for "personal injury" within the meaning of the statute, and therefore prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3291 is available [Bihun v. AT& T Information Systems, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 976, 1004-1005, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787] .

[8] Attorney's Fees

Under FEHA, a court has discretion to award reasonable attorney's fees and costs (including expert witness fees) to the prevailing party [Gov. Code § 12965(b); see Flannery v. Prentice (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 572, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 809, 28 P.3d 860 (except to extent prevailing party has already paid his or her attorney, and unless contractual agreement provides otherwise, attorney's fee award under FEHA belongs to attorney, rather than to prevailing party)]. The court's discretion in deciding whether to award fees must be exercised in a manner that will best effectuate the purposes of FEHA, which is intended primarily to safeguard the right of Californians to seek, obtain, and hold employment without experiencing discrimination on account of the grounds specified by the Act [Horsford v. Board of Trs. of Cal. State Univ. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 359, 393-394, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 644] .

In a FEHA action, a court should ordinarily award attorney's fees to a prevailing plaintiff unless special circumstances would render a fee award unjust [Chavez v. City of Los Angeles (2010) 47 Cal. 4th 970, 976, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 710, 224 P.3d 41 ; see Gov. Code § 12965(b)]. However, if a FEHA action is not brought as a limited civil case, and the plaintiff recovers an amount that could have been awarded in a limited civil case, the trial court has discretion to deny attorney's fees [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033(a) (trial court may deny costs to prevailing plaintiff in unlimited civil case if judgment could have been recovered in limited civil case)]. In exercising that discretion, however, the trial court must give due consideration to the policies and objectives of the FEHA in general and of its fee-shifting provision in particular [Chavez v. City of Los Angeles (2010) 47 Cal. 4th 970, 986989,104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 710, 224 P.3d 41 ; see Gov. Code § 12965(b)].

Attorney's fees and costs are not available if an action is filed by a public agency or a public official acting in an official capacity [Gov. Code § 12965(b)].

Although FEHA's fee-shifting provision expressly includes expert witness fees [see Gov. Code § 12965(b)], the United States Supreme Court has held that expert fees are not encompassed in federal fee-shifting statutes that authorize awards of attorney's fees "as part of the costs" [Arlington Cent. Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ. v. Murphy (2006) 548 U.S. 291, 126 S. Ct. 2455, 2458-2463, 165 L. Ed. 2d 526 ; see 20 U.S.C. § 1415(i)(3)(B) (attorney's fees in Individuals With Disabilities Education Act); 42 U.S.C. § 1988 (attorney's fees in civil rights actions)].

The standard governing the court's discretion to award attorney's fees under FEHA is the same as the standard under Title VII [Cummings v. Benco Building Services (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 1386-1388, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 53] . Title VII contains an attorney's fees provision that is similar to FEHA's provision [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(k)], and it has been observed that, because of the strong public interest in private enforcement of Title VII, attorney's fees should ordinarily be awarded to the prevailing plaintiff in all but special circumstances [see Christiansburg Garment Co. v. EEOC (1978) 434 U.S. 412, 417, 98 S. Ct. 694, 54 L. Ed. 2d 648 ; Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 415, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280] . By contrast, a prevailing defendant may recover attorney's fees only if he or she can show that the plaintiff's suit was frivolous, unreasonable, without foundation, or brought in bad faith [Christiansburg Garment Co. v. EEOC (1978) 434 U.S. 412, 421, 98 S. Ct. 694, 54 L. Ed. 2d 648 ; Delaney v. Superior Fast Freight (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 590, 600, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33 ; Cummings v. Benco Building Services (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 1387, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 53] . Thus, for example, the fact that the plaintiff fails to present credible evidence of discriminatory conduct is not a sufficient basis to support an award of attorney's fees to the prevailing defendant. The proper standard is whether the plaintiff should have anticipated at the outset that none of the evidence of discriminatory conduct was credible [EEOC v. Bruno's Restaurant (9th Cir. 1993) 13 F.3d 285, 290] . On the other hand, a plaintiff who survives a motion for summary judgment or nonsuit is not automatically immune from an award of attorney's fees, if the evidence used to raise a triable issue of fact proves to be fabricated or spurious [Rosenman v. Christensen, Miller, Fink, Jacobs, Glaser, Weil & Shapiro (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 859, 866-867, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 903 (requirement of findings may not be waived)].

If a FEHA defendant is treated as the prevailing party by virtue of the plaintiff's rejection of an offer of judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 and the plaintiff's failure to obtain a judgment more favorable than the offer, that circumstance does not eliminate the substantive requirements for awarding attorney's fees to a prevailing FEHA defendant. Therefore, in such a case, a defendant seeking an award of attorney's fees must still show that the plaintiff's suit was frivolous, unreasonable, without foundation, or brought in bad faith [Mangano v. Verity, Inc. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 944, 948-951, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 526].

The courts of appeal are in conflict on the question whether a prevailing FEHA defendant seeking to recover ordinary litigation costs (other than attorney's fees) must show that the plaintiff's suit was frivolous, unreasonable, without foundation, or brought in bad faith. The Second District, Division Seven, holds that such a showing is a prerequisite to the defendant's recovery of costs as well as attorney's fees [Cummings v. Benco Building Services (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 1387, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 53] . The First and Sixth Districts hold that although such a showing is necessary for the recovery of attorney's fees, it is not required for the recovery of costs [Knight v. Hayward Unified Sch. Dist. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 121, 134-136, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 287 ; Perez v. County of Santa Clara (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 671, 679-682, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 867] .

To be a prevailing party, a plaintiff has to win more than a mere finding that there was discrimination. However, he or she need not succeed on all or the majority of the claims made, or win monetary relief [Hashimoto v. Dalton (9th Cir. 1997) 118 F.3d 671, 677-678 , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1122 (1998) ($31,000 in fees awarded for winning expungement of record and cease and desist order against employer in retaliation case)]. Moreover, if the suit consists of related claims, and the plaintiff has obtained substantial relief, the trial court has discretion to award all or substantially all of the plaintiff's fees, even if the court did not adopt each contention raised by the plaintiff [Greene v. Dillingham Constr. N.A., Inc. (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 418, 423-424, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 250 (although plaintiff succeeded only on FEHA harassment claim, trial court properly awarded substantial fees relating to discrimination claim, given strong interrelationship of claims)].

Although fees are not reduced when a plaintiff prevails on only one of several factually related and closely intertwined claims, a reduced fee award is appropriate when a plaintiff achieves only limited success [Chavez v. City of Los Angeles (2010) 47 Cal. 4th 970, 989990, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 710, 224 P.3d 41 ("Because [the plaintiff's] single successful claim apparently was not closely related to or factually intertwined with plaintiff's many unsuccessful claims, the trial court reasonably could ... conclude that plaintiff was not entitled to attorney fees for time spent litigating those unsuccessful claims.")]. Also, a fee request that appears unreasonably inflated is a special circumstance permitting the trial court to reduce the award or deny fees altogether [Chavez v. City of Los Angeles (2010) 47 Cal. 4th 970, 990991, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 710, 224 P.3d 41] .

If the court enters summary judgment in favor of the defendant because the plaintiff failed to exhaust administrative remedies, the defendant does not qualify as a prevailing party for purposes of recovering attorney's fees [EEOC v. UPS (2005) 424 F.3d 1060, 1078 ; Hon v. Marshall (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 470, 475, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 11] .

Under the catalyst theory, a FEHA plaintiff may achieve sufficient success to be deemed a prevailing party even if the lawsuit does not result in a judgment in favor of the plaintiff. For example, the lawsuit may be dismissed after the defendant voluntarily ceases the conduct that is the subject of the suit. To obtain attorney's fees in the absence of a judicially recognized change in the legal relationship between the parties, the plaintiff must establish that (1) the lawsuit was a catalyst motivating the defendant to provide the primary relief sought; (2) the lawsuit had merit and achieved its catalytic effect by threat of victory, not by dint of nuisance and threat of expense; and (3) the plaintiff reasonably attempted to settle the litigation prior to filing the lawsuit [Tipton-Whittingham v. City of Los Angeles (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 604, 608-610, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371, 101 P.3d 174 (California law generally continues to recognize catalyst theory and does not require judicially recognized change in legal relationship between parties as prerequisite for obtaining attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 or Gov. Code § 12965(b)); see Graham v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 553, 594, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 331, 101 P.3d 140] . Unless fees are sought under the catalyst theory, however, a prelitigation settlement demand is not a prerequisite to a fee award under the "private attorney general statute," Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 [Vasquez v. State of California (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 243, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 466, 195 P.3d 1049 (although not required for fee award outside context of catalyst theory, prelitigation settlement efforts may inform court's inquiry into whether necessity of litigation was such as to make fee award appropriate)].

If the defendant is a government agency, the catalyst theory will not be applied to allow the recovery of attorney's fees by a plaintiff whose lawsuit merely caused the acceleration of the issuance of government regulations or remedial measures, if the process of issuing those regulations or undertaking those measures was ongoing at the time the lawsuit was filed [Tipton-Whittingham v. City of Los Angeles (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 604, 609, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371, 101 P.3d 174 (if government agency had discretion as to timing of performing some action, mere fact that lawsuit may accelerate that performance does not establish eligibility for attorney fees); Westside Cmty. for Indep. Living, Inc. v. Obledo (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 348, 354, 188 Cal. Rptr. 873, 657 P.2d 365] .

In contrast, the United States Supreme Court has rejected the catalyst theory as a basis for determining that a plaintiff is a prevailing party under a federal fee-shifting statute. Rather, to be a prevailing party under federal statutes, a plaintiff must have obtained a "judicial imprimatur" that alters the legal relationship of the parties, such as a judgment on the merits or a court-ordered consent decree. It is not enough for the plaintiff's lawsuit to have been a catalyst in causing a voluntary change in the defendant's conduct [Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home, Inc. v. West Virginia Dep't of Health & Human Res. (2001) 532 U.S. 598, 602-603, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855 (construing "prevailing party" language in Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988, 42 U.S.C. § 3613(c)(2), and ADA, 42 U.S.C. § 12205)].

If the trial court awards attorney's fees to a prevailing defendant in a FEHA case, the court must make written findings that the plaintiff's suit was sufficiently frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation [Rosenman v. Christensen, Miller, Fink, Jacobs, Glaser, Weil & Shapiro (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 859, 867-868, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 903 (requirement of findings may not be waived)].

Attorney's fees recovered by an employee in a FEHA action, and paid to the employee's attorney, are deductible from the employee's gross income for income tax purposes [I.R.C. § 62(a)(20),(e)(18)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Multipliers. Under FEHA, a multiplier is available under certain circumstances [see Flannery v. California Highway Patrol (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 629, 634, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 632] . On the other hand, obtaining a multiplier in a Title VII action, or under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, is virtually impossible [see Perdue v. Kenny A. ex rel. Winn (2010) -- U.S. --, 130 S. Ct. 1662, 176 L. Ed. 2d 494, 501-508 (in calculating attorney's fee under federal fee-shifting statute, lodestar figure--number of hours worked multiplied by prevailing hourly rate--may be enhanced due to superior performance and results, but only in extraordinary circumstances and not on basis of factors subsumed in lodestar calculation); City of Burlington v. Dague (1992) 505 U.S. 557, 112 S. Ct. 2638, 120 L. Ed. 2d 449] . By John H. Scott

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationRemediesBackpay & FrontpayLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationRemediesCompensatory DamagesLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationRemediesPunitive Damages

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Civil Actions and Judicial Remedies

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 115.57-115.69

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 115.57[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.70

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.70 Related Matthew Bender Publications

For discussion of federal civil rights legislation and actions, see J. Cook & J. Sobieski, Civil Rights Actions (Matthew Bender)

For discussion of the laws related to the employment of legal and illegal aliens, see C. Gordon & S. Mailman, Immigration Law And Procedure (Matthew Bender)

For discussion of employment discrimination, see A. Larson & L. Larson, Employment Discrimination (Matthew Bender)

For discussion of California employment law, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law (Matthew Bender)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.71

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.71 Federal Constitution

Due process clause, applicable to federal government. U.S. Const., amend. V

Sovereign immunity of states. U.S. Const., amend. XI

Privileges and immunities, due process, and equal protection clauses, applicable to states. U.S. Const., amend. XIV

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawEqual ProtectionScope of ProtectionConstitutional LawPrivileges & ImmunitiesGovernmentsFederal GovernmentClaims By & Against

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.72

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.72 State Constitution

Prohibition against restrictions on entry into vocation, trade, profession, business, or employment based on sex, race, creed, color, or national or ethnic origin. Cal. Const., art. I, § 8

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.73

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.73 Federal Statutes

[1] Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964

Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.

Definitions. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e

Applicability. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-1

Unlawful employment practices; protected classifications; covered entities. 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2, 2000e-3

Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC). 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-4

Enforcement provisions. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5

Pattern or practice of discrimination; civil actions by Attorney General. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-6

Effect of Title VII on state equal employment opportunity laws. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-7

EEOC investigations. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-8

Conduct of EEOC hearings. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-9

Veterans' preference. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-11

EEOC authority to issue regulations. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-12

[2] Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA)

Americans with Disabilities Act. 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.

Congressional findings. 42 U.S.C. § 12101

Definitions. 42 U.S.C. § 12102

Discrimination prohibited. 42 U.S.C. § 12112

Defenses. 42 U.S.C. § 12113

Enforcement. 42 U.S.C. § 12117

[3] Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA)

Age Discrmination in Employment Act. 29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq.

Congressional findings and purpose. 29 U.S.C. § 621

Unlawful employment practices; covered entities. 29 U.S.C. § 623

Enforcement. 29 U.S.C. § 626

EEOC power to issue rules and regulations. 29 U.S.C. § 628

Definitions. 29 U.S.C. § 630

Covered persons. 29 U.S.C. § 631

Effect of ADEA on state equal employment opportunity laws. 29 U.S.C. § 633

[4] Miscellaneous

Jurisdiction of United States District Courts in civil rights cases. 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331, 1343, 1344

Equal Pay Act of 1963. 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)

Rehabilitation Act of 1973. 29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.

Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974. 38 U.S.C. § 4211 et seq.

Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1994. 38 U.S.C. § 4301 et seq.

Equal rights under law (Civil Rights Act of 1866). 42 U.S.C. § 1981

Property rights of citizens. 42 U.S.C. § 1982

Civil action for deprivation of civil rights under color of state law (Civil Rights Act of 1871). 42 U.S.C. § 1983

Conspiracy to interfere with civil rights. 42 U.S.C. § 1985

Failure to prevent conspiracy to interfere with civil rights. 42 U.S.C. § 1986

State law applicable in federal civil rights actions. 42 U.S.C. § 1988(a)

Recovery of attorney's fees in civil rights actions. 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b)

Title VI of Civil Rights Act of 1964. 42 U.S.C. § 2000d et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawConspiracyGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawSection 1983 ActionsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964General Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.74

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.74 State Statutes

[1] Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)

Fair Employment and Housing Act. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH). Gov. Code §§ 12901, 12930

Fair Employment and Housing Commission (FEHC). Gov. Code §§ 12903, 12935

California public policy with respect to equal employment opportunity. Gov. Code § 12920

Equal employment opportunity as civil right. Gov. Code § 12921(a)

Definitions. Gov. Code §§ 12925, 12926, 12926.2

Unlawful employment practices; protected classifications; covered entities; exceptions. Gov. Code § 12940

Unlawful age discrimination; exceptions; right to continue employment beyond normal retirement date. Gov. Code §§ 12941, 12942

Unlawful discrimination based on pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical condition. Gov. Code § 12945

Dress requirements for employees. Gov. Code § 12947.5

Unlawful workplace language restriction. Gov. Code § 12951

Procedure for filing DFEH complaint. Gov. Code § 12960

Class actions. Gov. Code § 12961

Service of DFEH complaint; time limit. Gov. Code § 12962

DFEH investigation. Gov. Code § 12963

Discovery in administrative proceedings. Gov. Code §§ 12963.1-12963.5

DFEH conference, conciliation, and persuasion. Gov. Code §§ 12963.7, 12964

DFEH accusation of discrimination; civil actions. Gov. Code § 12965

FEHC hearings; findings; remedies. Gov. Code §§ 12967-12970

Withdrawal of DFEH complaint. Gov. Code § 12971

DFEH compliance review. Gov. Code § 12973

Civil action for relief pending final DFEH disposition of complaint. Gov. Code § 12974

Construction of FEHA. Gov. Code § 12993

[2] Miscellaneous

Freedom from violence or threat of violence because of protected characteristics. Civ. Code § 51.7

Damages for denial of right provided by Civ. Code § 51.7. Civ. Code § 52(b)

Protection from interference with rights by threats, intimidation, coercion, or violence. Civ. Code § 52.1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationActionable DiscriminationLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationCoverage & DefinitionsPregnancy & Parental Rights

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.75

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.75 Federal Administrative Regulations

Procedural regulations for carrying out Title VII. 29 C.F.R. pt. 1601

Guidelines on sex discrimination. 29 C.F.R. pt. 1604

Guidelines on religious discrimination. 29 C.F.R. pt. 1605

Guidelines on national origin discrimination. 29 C.F.R. pt. 1606

Guidelines on employee selection procedures. 29 C.F.R. pt. 1607

Affirmative action. 29 C.F.R. pt. 1608

Regulations implementing ADEA. 29 C.F.R. pts. 1625, 1626

Regulations implementing ADA. 29 C.F.R. pt. 1630

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationNational Origin DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationReligious DiscriminationGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.76

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.76 State Administrative Regulations

California policy and purpose with respect to equal employment opportunity. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.3

FEHC authority to issue regulations. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.4

Definitions. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5

Employment discrimination principles. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.6

Affirmative defenses. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7

Affirmative action. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.8

Remedies. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.9

Employment practices having effect of unlawful discrimination. 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7287.1-7287.9

National origin and ancestry discrimination. 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7289.4, 7289.5

Sex discrimination. 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7290.6-7291.2

Marital status discrimination. 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7292.0-7292.6

Religious discrimination. 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7293.0-7293.4

Physical or mental disability discrimination. 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7293.5-7294.2

Age discrimination. 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7295.0-7296.4

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationNational Origin DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationReligious DiscriminationGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.77

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.77 Decisions

[1] Coverage of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws

[a] Title VII

In punitive damages context, employer may not be vicariously liable for discriminatory employment decisions of its managerial agents when those decisions are contrary to employer's good-faith efforts to comply with Title VII. Kolstad v. American Dental Assoc. (1999) 527 U.S. 526, 119 S. Ct. 2118, 144 L. Ed. 2d 494, 512

Employer is subject to agency liability for discriminatory programs of third parties if employer affirmatively, actively participates in program and has some control over terms of program. Morgan v. Safeway Stores (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 1211, 1214-1215

Musician who performed concerts for school district, but was responsible for employing, equipping, transporting, and controlling the members of his group, is independent contractor not covered by Title VII. Lutcher v. Musicians Union Local 47 (9th Cir. 1980) 633 F.2d 880, 883

[b] ADA

In determining whether professional corporation has at least 15 employees thereby making it subject to ADA [see 42 U.S.C. § 12111(5)], shareholder- director of corporation will count as employee if that individual's work is subject to corporation's control. Clackamas Gastroenterology Assocs., P.C. v. Wells (2003) 538 U.S. 440, 123 S. Ct. 1673, 155 L. Ed. 2d 615, 623-627

ADA does not validly abrogate states' Eleventh Amendment immunity from private damages suits for employment discrimination against disabled persons. Board of Trustees v. Garrett (2001) 531 U.S. 356, 121 S. Ct. 955, 148 L. Ed.

2d 866, 878-884

Pursuit and receipt of Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) benefits does not automatically estop recipient from establishing that his or her disability is also covered under ADA, since SSDI finding of severe disability does not necessarily conflict with showing that ADA claimant can perform job with "reasonable accommodation;" however, when faced with ADA plaintiff's previous sworn statement asserting "total disability," trial court should require explanation of any apparent inconsistency with necessary elements of ADA claim. Cleveland v. Policy Management Sys. Corp. (1999) 526 U.S. 795, 119 S. Ct. 1597, 1600-1604, 143 L. Ed. 2d 966

Employer requiring as job qualification that employee meet otherwise applicable federal safety standard need not justify enforcing that regulation solely because its standard may be waived in individual case, when waiver program is experimental. Albertson's, Inc. v. Kirkingburg (1999) 527 U.S. 555, 119 S. Ct. 2162, 144 L. Ed. 2d 518, 525, 537-538

ADA held not to cover employee with impairment that led to loss of job but did not substantially limit a major life activity or substantially limit her general employability (nurse with lifting restriction). Thompson v. Holy Family Hosp. (9th Cir. 1997) 121 F.3d 537, 539-541

[c] ADEA

ADEA does not validly abrogate states' Eleventh Amendment immunity from private damages suits. Kimel v. Florida Bd. of Regents (2000) 528 U.S. 62, 120 S. Ct. 631, 145 L. Ed. 2d 522, 547

Complementary provisions of Title VII and ADEA are construed consistently. Monce v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1990) 895 F.2d 560, 561

ADEA claim against church for denying minister promotion to pastorship because of age violates Free Exercise Clause of U.S. Const., amend. I. Minker v. Baltimore Annual Conference of United Methodist Church (D.C. Cir. 1990) 894 F.2d 1354, 1356-1358

ADEA coverage not limited to rank-and-file "employees," but may also apply to stockholders, officers, and directors who are also "employees." Hyland v. New Haven Radiology Associates (2d Cir. 1986) 794 F.2d 793, 797

[d] 42 U.S.C. § 1981

Unlike Title VII (see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-16(c)), 42 U.S.C. § 1981 has no waiver of sovereign immunity. Ellis v. Naval Air Rework Facility (N.D. Cal. 1975) 404 F. Supp. 377, 380

[e] FEHA

Student receiving athletic scholarship is not employee of university for purposes of FEHA. Shephard v. Loyola Marymount Univ. (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 837, 842-847, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 829

Depending on its severity, posttraumatic stress disorder may meet definition of mental disability under FEHA. Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 259, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55

Alcoholism is potentially a covered disability under FEHA. Gosvener v. Coastal Corp. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 805, 813

FEHA prohibits discrimination based on protected classification; employer is not forbidden from perceiving difference between good employee and incompetent one, or good employee and better one. Gonzales v. Metpath, Inc. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 422, 426, 262 Cal. Rptr. 654

[2] Civil Rights Act of 1991

Four-year federal "catchall" statute of limitations [28 U.S.C. § 1658] applies to hostile work environment, wrongful termination, and failure-to-transfer claims that are cognizable under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 by virtue of Civil Rights Act of 1991's expansion of scope of § 1981. Jones v. R.R. Donnelley & Sons Co. (2004) 541 U.S. 369, 124 S. Ct. 1836, 158 L. Ed. 2d 645, 652-658

Jury trial and expanded damages provisions of Civil Rights Act of 1991 (CRA) are not retroactively applicable to cases pending at time of enactment; each provision of CRA must be addressed separately with regard to issue of retroactivity. Landgraf v. USI Film Products (1994) 511 U.S. 244, 247, 286, 114 S. Ct. 1483, 128 L. Ed. 2d 229

Provision of Civil Rights Act of 1991 (CRA) expanding rights under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 to include right to enforce established employment contract is not applicable to cases not final prior to CRA's enactment. Rivers v. Roadway Express (1994) 511 U.S. 298, 300, 313, 114 S. Ct. 1510, 128 L. Ed. 2d 274

Punitive damages provision not applied retroactively to allegedly discriminatory conduct occurring before Civil Rights Act of 1991 passed. McGinnis v. Kentucky Fried Chicken of California (9th Cir. 1994) 51 F.3d 805, 807-808

Civil Rights Act of 1991 (CRA) provision overruling Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 234-235 cannot be applied retroactively, nor may statute of limitations provision of CRA be applied retroactively to revive plaintiff's claim that would otherwise be barred under former statutory scheme. Chenault v. United States Postal Service (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 535, 538-539

[3] Disparate Treatment

[a] Prima Facie Case

Prima facie case under McDonnell Douglas is not pleading requirement under federal notice-pleading system; rather, it is evidentiary standard governing order and allocation of proof in a private, non-class employment discrimination suit. Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N.A. (2002) 534 U.S. 506, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1, 9

Disparate treatment does not require malevolent motive; beneficence of employer's motive does not undermine finding of unlawful disparate treatment. Auto Workers v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 199-200, 111 S. Ct. 1196, 113 L. Ed. 2d 158 (Title VII)

Plaintiff must prove prima facie disparate treatment case by a preponderance of the evidence. Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 252-253, 256, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207

McDonnell Douglas does not purport to create inflexible formulation; because facts necessarily vary in Title VII cases, McDonnell Douglas specification of required prima facie proof is not necessarily applicable in every respect to differing factual situations. Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 358, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396

To establish a prima facie disparate treatment case, plaintiff must show that he or she is a member of a protected class; that he or she applied and was qualified for a job (or other employment opportunity or benefit) for which an employer was seeking applicants; that, despite plaintiff's qualifications, he or she was rejected; and that, after plaintiff's rejection, the position remained open and employer continued to seek applicants from persons with plaintiff's qualifications (or to provide the benefit to other such persons). McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668

Plaintiff was precluded by doctrine of judicial estoppel from bringing employment discrimination action against employer, because court found that sworn statements she had previously made for purposes of obtaining workers' compensation benefits, asserting she was unable to work, were inconsistent with later assertion in civil discrimination action that she was able to perform job satisfactorily. Rissetto v. Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 343 (9th Cir. 1996) 94 F.3d 597, 601, 605-606

Appearance of gender neutrality (e.g., roughly same number of men and women laid-off and not recalled) does not invalidate claim that layoffs and decision not to recall women were part of plan to get rid of female employees and therefore discriminatory. EEOC v. Farmer Brothers Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 31 F.3d 891, 899-900

Burden of establishing prima facie case only requires production of evidence that "suggests" that employment decision was based on protected classification. Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1420 (ADEA)

Evidence that employer violated its own affirmative action plan is relevant to question of discriminatory intent. Gonzales v. Police Dep't (9th Cir. 1990) 901 F.2d 758, 761 (Title VII)

When district court's findings did not specifically address McDonnell Douglas/Burdine burden and allocation of proof issues, court of appeals was unable to determine whether district court properly applied law to facts. Norris v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1990) 900 F.2d 1326, 1329, 1332 (Title VII)

Affirmative action or equal opportunity evidence is relevant to and probative of employer's intent not to discriminate. EEOC v. General Tel. Co. of Northwest (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 575, 578 (Title VII)

Payment of wages according to prevailing market rates does not by itself support inference of intentional discrimination, even if market reflects historical pattern of lower wages to positions staffed predominantly by members of protected class. American Federation of State, etc. v. Washington (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1406-1407

Statistical evidence substantiates inference of discriminatory intent, even if it is not directly probative of any particular element of McDonnell Douglas test. Diaz v. American Telephone & Telegraph (9th Cir. 1985) 752 F.2d 1356, 1362-1363 (Title VII)

Statistical evidence alone is rarely sufficient to establish prima facie case of disparate treatment. Gay v. Waiters' and Dairy Lunchmen's Union (9th Cir. 1982) 694 F.2d 531, 552-553 (Title VII)

Statistical evidence relevant, though not necessarily sufficient, to establishing prima facie case of disparate treatment. Laborde v. Regents of University of California (9th Cir. 1982) 686 F.2d 715, 718 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1173 (1983) (Title VII)

Trial court finding of discrimination was reasonable when black employees were fired for refusing to do work from which similarly situated white employee was excused. Slack v. Havens (9th Cir. 1975) 522 F.2d 1091, 1095

McDonnell Douglas test applies to provide standard of proof regarding prima facie case in FEHA action involving alleged denial of tenure on basis of race. Clark v. Claremont University Center (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 639, 662-664, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151

[b] Rebuttal of Prima Facie Case

To rebut plaintiff's prima facie case of disparate treatment, employer need only offer legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason or policy for its challenged action; employer need not negate possibility that its facially neutral employment practice has disparate impact. Raytheon Co. v. Hernandez (2003) 540 U.S. 44, 124 S. Ct. 513, 157 L. Ed. 2d 357, 365-367

Purpose of requiring employer to articulate legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for its conduct is not only to rebut prima facie case, but also to frame factual issue with sufficient clarity so that plaintiff will have full and fair opportunity to demonstrate that employer's reason is pretext for discrimination. Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 255-256, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207

Evidence showing that employer's work force is racially balanced or that it contains disproportionately high percentage of minority employees is relevant to employer's rebuttal of prima facie case of disparate treatment. Furnco Constr. Corp. v. Waters (1978) 438 U.S. 567, 580, 98 S. Ct. 2943, 57 L. Ed. 2d 957

Evidence of business downturn requiring layoffs and use of combination of factors (including seniority but not age) in determining whom to lay off was sufficient to rebut prima facie age discrimination case. Nidds v. Schindler Elevator Corp. (9th Cir. 1996) 113 F.3d 912, 917-918 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 950 (1997) (FEHA)

Summary judgment for defendant is appropriate if plaintiff presents only minimal prima facie case and does not supply additional evidence to refute employer's proffered explanation. Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 885, 890

When plaintiff presents prima facie case and then raises genuine factual issue regarding authenticity of employer's proffered reason for its action, summary judgment is inappropriate. Washington v. Garrett (9th Cir. 1993) 10 F.3d 1421, 1433

Statistical evidence that employer has good nondiscrimination record for period after discrimination claim is filed is irrelevant to merits of initial claim. Gonzales v. Police Dep't (9th Cir. 1990) 901 F.2d 758, 761-762 (Title VII)

Employer is unable to use data acquired after time adverse employment decision was made to articulate hypothetical nondiscriminatory reason for decision. Norris v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1990) 900 F.2d 1326, 1329, 1331 (Title VII)

In case of defendant's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication of issues, burden rests on defendant to negate plaintiff's prima facie case. Valdez v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1043, 1051, 282 Cal. Rptr. 726 (FEHA)

Employer sustained burden to rebut prima facie case of disparate treatment by offering declarations that employee was denied promotion based on neutral, nondiscriminatory criteria, together with transcripts of employee's deposition testimony stating that individuals who evaluated her did not act in sexually discriminatory manner. University of Southern California v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1028, 1036, 272 Cal. Rptr. 264 (FEHA)

[c] Pretext or "Mixed Motive"

In Title VII "mixed-motive" case [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(m)], plaintiff may rely on circumstantial evidence to demonstrate that impermissible criterion was motivating factor in adverse employment action. Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 123 S. Ct. 2148, 2153-2155, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84, 93-95

Evidence that employer's nondiscriminatory explanation of its action is unworthy of credence is one form of circumstantial evidence that is probative of intentional discrimination, and it may be sufficient to support jury finding of intentional discrimination, depending on particulars of case. Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing Prods. (2000) 530 U.S. 133, 120 S. Ct. 2097, 147 L. Ed. 2d 105, 115-121

Plaintiff's initial evidence, combined with effective cross examination of employer, may be sufficient to discredit employer's rebuttal. Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 255 n.10, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207

Proof of pretext does not require employee to show that employer would have in any event taken discriminatory adverse action, without regard to employee's alleged deficiencies; employee's burden is to show that membership in protected classification was "but for" cause of employer's conduct. McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 282 n.10, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493 (Title VII and 42 U.S.C. § 1981)

Pretext is proven by statistical evidence relating to employment policy and practice. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 805, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668

Plaintiff's pretext evidence, though present in record, was insufficient to survive defendant's summary judgment motion in age discrimination case. Nidds v. Schindler Elevator Corp. (9th Cir. 1996) 113 F.3d 912, 918-919 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 950 (1997) (FEHA)

In analyzing pretext, court may not conclude that falsity of one proffered reason means other proffered reasons are false; court is required to decide whether employer actually had discriminatory motive, and is not allowed to substitute its judgment for employer's; employer has discretion to choose among equally qualified candidates. Odima v. Westin Tucson Hotel Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 991 F.2d 595, 600-602 (Title VII)

Summary judgment for employer was inappropriate if employer's reasons for adverse employment actions were legitimate but inconsistent, because inconsistencies required credibility judgment by trier of fact. Rodriguez v. General Motors Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 904 F.2d 531, 533 (42 U.S.C. § 1981)

District court was required to evaluate plausibility of each of several explanations proffered by employer for repeated rejections of employee. Norris v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1990) 900 F.2d 1326, 1330 (Title VII)

Employer's shifting rationales for adverse employment decision generated inference of pretext. Norris v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1990) 900 F.2d 1326, 1331 (Title VII)

Plaintiff employee's deposition testimony, in which she stated that she did not feel that she was terminated because of her physical limitation, negated requisite element of case, i.e., that the reason provided by the employer for plaintiff's termination was a pretext to mask illegal motive of disability discrimination. Walker v. Blue Cross of California (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 985, 998, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184

Summary judgment for employer is appropriate if employer shows as matter of law that there was proper basis for adverse employment action, and no substantial responsive evidence is presented relating to pretext. University of Southern California v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1028, 1039-1040, 272 Cal. Rptr. 264 (FEHA claim evaluated under federal law interpreting Title VII)

[4] Class-Wide or "Pattern or Practice" Claims

Trial court erred when it placed burden on each individual class member to prove that he or she was qualified for job sought and that vacancy was available. Franks v. Bowman Transp. Co. (1976) 424 U.S. 747, 772, 96 S. Ct. 1251, 47 L. Ed. 2d 444

In large corporation with branch offices throughout country, discharge of seven older employees over 2-year period did not alone establish pattern or practice of discrimination. Mundy v. Household Finance Corp. (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 542, 546 (ADEA)

"Pattern or practice" claims create "important point of convergence" between disparate treatment and disparate impact theories of liability. Segar v. Smith(D.C. Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1249, 1266, 1267 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII)

[5] Disparate Impact

[a] Scope and Application

Under Title VII, before employer can discard test results to avoid disparate impact on minority candidates--conduct that would itself constitute intentional race-based discrimination against those who did well on the test--employer must have strong basis in evidence to believe it will be subject to disparate-impact liability if it fails to take race-conscious, discriminatory action of discarding test results. Ricci v. DeStefano (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 2658, 174 L. Ed. 2d 490, 507-511

Private individuals may not sue to enforce disparate impact regulations promulgated under Title VI of Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. § 2000d et seq. Alexander v. Sandoval (2001) 532 U.S. 275, 121 S. Ct. 1511, 149 L. Ed. 2d 517

Good intent or absence of discriminatory intent does not redeem employment procedures or testing mechanisms that operate as "built-in headwinds" for minority groups and are unrelated to measuring job capability. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 432, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158

Analysis of multicomponent challenge to hiring system under disparate impact theory is proper. Green v. USX Corp. (3d Cir. 1988) 843 F.2d 1511, 1521-1525

Language in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1) making it unlawful for employers "to discriminate" against employees requires proof of intentional discrimination, while language in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(2), prohibiting practices that "tend to deprive" employees of opportunities or status, allows proof of disparate impact. Colby v. J.C. Penney Co. (7th Cir. 1987) 811 F.2d 1119, 1126-1127 (Title VII)

Practices based on complex of factors outside employer's control, such as reliance on prevailing market wage rates, are not "single practice" subject to challenge under disparate impact analysis. American Fed'n of State, County, and Municipal Employees v. State of Washington (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1405-1406 (Title VII)

Black employment applicant failed to show that job requirement had disparate impact on blacks as class; although only small proportion of employees were black, there was no evidence that requirement was used to choose among applicants for positions other than one sought by plaintiff. Peters v. Lieuallen (9th Cir. 1984) 746 F.2d 1390, 1392 (Title VII)

Court rejects employee's disparate impact claim because there was no evidence that employer applied disputed promotion criteria to anyone but her. Yartzoff v. State of Oregon, Employment Div. (9th Cir. 1984) 745 F.2d 557, 559 (ADEA)

Disparate impact theory is appropriate in cases under either 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1) (unlawful for employers "to discriminate" against employees) or 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(2) (prohibiting practices that "tend to deprive" employee of opportunities or status). Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co. (9th Cir. 1983) 705 F.2d 1492, 1494 , cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1255 (1984)

[b] Prima Facie Case of "Significant" Adverse Impact

Statistical evidence must be substantial enough to raise inference of causation. Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1424 (ADEA)

Statistics showing that 55 percent of majority class members passed employment test compared to 29.4 percent of protected class members is not statistically significant. Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1272-1273 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1021 (1982) (Title VII)

Statistics showing 33 percent failure rate in employment test for protected class members compared to 13 percent failure rate for majority class members establishes significant adverse impact. Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 919 (1981) (Title VII)

[c] Establishing Business Justification

"Manifest relationship" standard applies to cases in which employment practices are neither required by nor necessary to employer's legitimate interests. New York City Transit Authority v. Beazer (1979) 440 U.S. 568, 587, 99 S. Ct. 1355, 59 L. Ed. 2d 587 (Title VII)

Requirement of certain number of years of job experience does not necessarily bear "manifest relationship" to job. Lewis v. Bloomsburg Mills (4th Cir. 1985) 773 F.2d 561, 569-571 (Title VII)

Disparate impact is tolerable only if it is "incidental product" of selection device that genuinely predicts or significantly correlates with successful job performance. Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1277 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1021 (1982) (Title VII); City and County of San Francisco v. FEHC (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 986, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 (FEHA)

Employer's administrative convenience is not sufficient in itself to justify adverse impact. Blake v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1979) 595 F.2d 1367, 1376 , cert. denied, 446 U.S. 928 (1980) (Title VII)

[6] Protected Classifications

[a] Sex

Nothing in Title VII bars claim of sex discrimination because plaintiff and defendant are of same sex. Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Services (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 79, 118 S. Ct. 998, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201

Employment decisions reflecting gender-based stereotyping are unlawful under Title VII. Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 250-251

Male, as well as female, employees are protected by Title VII. Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 682, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89 (Title VII)

Requirement of minimum height of 5 feet 2 inches, and minimum weight of 120 pounds, for prison guards, had discriminatory impact on women guards because requirement excluded 41 percent of women but only one percent of men. Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 329-331, 97 S. Ct. 2720, 53 L. Ed. 2d 786 (Title VII)

Evidence of prior sexual harassment is admissible to prove gender discrimination. EEOC v. Farmer Brothers Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 31 F.3d 891, 897-898

With respect to sex discrimination, "sex" logically only refers to membership in class delineated by gender, rather than sexual activity regardless of gender. De Cintio v. Westchester County Medical Center (2d Cir. 1986) 807 F.2d 304, 306 , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 825 (1987)

Manifest purpose of Title VII with respect to sex discrimination is to ensure that men and women are treated equally. Holloway v. Arthur Andersen & Co. (9th Cir. 1977) 566 F.2d 659, 663

Title VII prohibition against sex discrimination does not encompass discrimination based on sexual orientation. Voyles v. Ralph K. Davies Medical Ctr. (N.D. Cal. 1975) 403 F. Supp. 456, 457 , aff'd, 570 F.2d 354 (9th Cir. 1978)

Employer fetal protection policy is "facial, blatant, overt gender-based job discrimination" that violates FEHA, unless warranted by BFOQ. Johnson Controls v. FEHC (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 517, 267 Cal. Rptr. 158

[b] Race or Color

Title VII bars race discrimination against white persons as well as black persons. McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 280, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493

Title VII prohibits discriminatory preference for any group, minority, or majority. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158

Allegation that plaintiff was subject to discrimination based on being East Indian was sufficient to raise claim of racial discrimination. Sandhu v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 846, 858, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617

[c] National Origin

Congress did not intend "national origin" to embrace citizenship requirements for employment. Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 89-90, 94 S. Ct. 334, 38 L. Ed. 2d 287

Provision of Immigration Reform and Control Act (8 U.S.C. § 1324a(a)(1)) requiring employers to verify legal immigration status of employees did not violate right to free exercise of religion by religious organization whose beliefs prohibit refusing work to prospective employees on ground they are aliens. American Friends Service Committee v. Thornburgh (9th Cir. 1991) 941 F.2d 808, 809

Adverse employment decision was properly predicated on individual's accent when accent interfered materially with job performance. Fragante v. City and County of Honolulu (9th Cir. 1989) 888 F.2d 591, 596 , cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1081 (1990) (Title VII)

[d] Religion

Prima facie case of discrimination includes proof that temporal mandate was part of employee's bona fide religious belief, if employee contends that his or her belief required attendance at particular time and place, such as at particular pilgrimage. Tiano v. Dillard Department Stores (9th Cir. 1998) 139 F.3d 679, 682-683

Factors that indicate insincerity of religious belief include acting in manner inconsistent with belief, and material gain by fraudulently hiding secular interests behind veil of religious doctrine; size and history of particular religion is also relevant. Philbrook v. Ansonia Bd. of Educ. (2d Cir. 1985) 757 F.2d 476, 482 , aff'd, 479 U.S. 60, 107 S. Ct. 367, 93 L. Ed. 2d 305 (1986)

Private school's discriminatory policy based on members' sincere religious belief that racial socialization would lead to interracial marriage is social policy rather than free exercise of "religion," and therefore not protected by U.S. Const., amend. I. Brown v. Dade Christian Schools (5th Cir. 1977) 556 F.2d 310, 311-312 , cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1063 (1978)

[e] Disability or Medical Condition

Firing employees for drug misconduct at work does not violate ADA prohibition against discrimination on basis of drug addiction. Collings v. Longview Fibre Company (9th Cir. 1995) 63 F.3d 828, 832-833

Gov. Code § 12926.1, added effective January 1, 2001, clarified existing law that impairment need not substantially limit major life activity to constitute physical disability under FEHA, and contrary language in Cassista v. Community Foods (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1050, 1060, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143 was dictum that did not accurately reflect California law. Colmenares v. Braemar Country Club, Inc. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1019, 1028-1031 , Cal. Rptr. 2d 662, 63 P.3d 220

It is not FEHA violation for employer to terminate employee because of reading problems, if actual diagnosis of a reading disorder is not made until after termination occurs. Pensinger v. Bowsmith, Inc. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 709, 725, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531

Adverse action based on employee's performance without employer's knowledge of disability is not prohibited discrimination. Brundage v. Hahn (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 228, 236-237, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830

Under pre-1993 amendment to definition of "physical handicap," truck driver with kidney disorder that prevented him from meeting employer's requirement of sleeping in cab of moving truck is not handicapped if he was physically able to work as truck driver generally. Maloney v. ANR Freight Sys., Inc. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1284, 1287-1288

Employees who were hypersensitive to tobacco smoke were "physically handicapped" because they suffered from respiratory disorders, and exposure to tobacco smoke substantially limited their ability to breathe. County of Fresno v. FEHC (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1549-1550, 277 Cal. Rptr. 557

[f] Age

ADEA does not authorize mixed-motive age-discrimination claims; rather, under 29 U.S.C. § 623(a)(1), plaintiff must prove by preponderance of evidence (which may be direct or circumstantial) that age was "but-for" cause of employer's adverse action, and so burden of proof never shifts to employer to show that it would have taken adverse action regardless of age. Gross v. FBL Fin. Servs., Inc. (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 2343, 174 L. Ed. 2d 119, 127-129 , remanded, 588 F.3d 614 (2009)

Because age and pension status are analytically distinct, state pension plan does not discriminate because of age in violation of ADEA simply because it (1) lawfully makes age part of conditions of pension eligibility and (2) treats workers differently in light of their pension status. Kentucky Ret. Sys. v. EEOC (2008) 554 U.S. 135, 128 S. Ct. 2361, 2364-2370, 171 L. Ed. 2d 322

Disparate impact theory is applicable in ADEA cases. Smith v. City of Jackson (2005) 544 U.S. 228, 125 S. Ct. 1536, 161 L. Ed. 2d 410, 416

ADEA does not prohibit employer from favoring older employee over younger one, even if younger employee is over age 40. Gen. Dynamics Land Sys., Inc. v. Cline (2004) 540 U.S. 581, 124 S. Ct. 1236, 1240-1249, 157 L. Ed. 2d 1094, 1104-1113

Employer's decision to terminate employee because his or her pension is close to vesting did not constitute discriminatory treatment on basis of age in violation of ADEA. Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 611-612, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338

Plaintiff class (pilots over age 60) had right to present evidence of executive memos showing that airlines' real reason for requiring pilots over age 60 to retire was based on age discrimination rather than longstanding safety policy. Baker v. Delta Air Lines (9th Cir. 1993) 6 F.3d 632, 641

State statute that prohibited hiring police officers over 29 years old was invalid under ADEA only insofar as it affected individuals over age of 40. Hahn v. City of Buffalo (2d Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 12, 14

Public policy against age discrimination set forth in FEHA [see Gov. Code § 12920] was not intended to apply to small employers who are not subject to FEHA's substantive prohibitions [see Gov. Code § 12926(d)], and therefore may not serve as basis for public policy wrongful termination action against employers employing less than five employees. Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 121, 124-125, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074

[g] Pregnancy

Although adopting service-credit rule unfavorable to those out on pregnancy leave would violate Title VII, seniority system does not necessarily violate Title VII when it gives current effect in calculation of pension benefits to such rules that operated before Pregnancy Discrimination Act took effect on April 29, 1979. AT&T Corp. v. Hulteen (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1962, 173 L. Ed. 2d 898, 906

School board rules requiring pregnant teachers to take maternity leave were unconstitutional because rules created conclusive presumption that every pregnant teacher was physically incapable of continuing her duties. Cleveland Bd. of Education v. LaFleur (1974) 414 U.S. 632, 643, 644, 646-647, 94 S. Ct. 791, 39 L. Ed. 2d 52

Leave policy that differentiates between disabilities caused by occupational injuries and those that occur off the job does not impermissibly discriminate against pregnant employees, so long as it provides at least four months' leave for pregnancy disability. Spaziano v. Lucky Stores (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 106, 110-113, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378

Plaintiff presented sufficient evidence under FEHA to support verdict for sex discrimination or pregnancy discrimination by showing that supervisor harassed her and ultimately discharged her from her position as hotel banquet manager because she was a woman and because she was pregnant. Carr v. Barnabey's Hotel Corp. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 14, 17, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 127

[7] Hiring

"Subjective" employee selection criteria are not "precise and formal." Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487

U.S. 977, 982, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (Title VII)

"Subjective" employee selection criteria are often characterized by "lack of objective job qualifications" for particular job classifications. Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1479 (en banc), ret'd to panel, 827 F.2d 439 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII)

"Objective" selection criteria are generally specific, clearly delineated, quantifiable, objectively verified, and mechanically applied. American Fed'n of State, County, and Municipal Employees v. State of Washington (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1405-1406 (Title VII)

"Subjective" employee selection criteria lacked "well-defined" characteristics. Heagney v. University of Washington (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 1157, 1163 (Title VII)

[8] Compensation

Denial of preliminary injunction for former head coach of university women's basketball team was correct because plaintiff failed to demonstrate fair chance of success on merits because difference between pay offered to her to renew contract and compensation paid to head coach of men's basketball team could have been attributable to lack of substantial similarity of jobs based on substantial differences in job responsibilities, working conditions, performance, and experience between men's coach and plaintiff. Stanley v. University of Southern California (9th Cir. 1994) 13 F.3d 1313, 1321-1323

[9] Other Terms, Conditions, and Privileges of Employment

[a] Employer Rules and Requirements

"No-spouse" rules in practice often result in discrimination against women, and are generally unjustified. Thomas v. Metroflight (10th Cir. 1987) 814 F.2d 1506, 1509

Grooming rules do not significantly deprive either sex of employment opportunities if they are even-handedly applied to employees of both sexes; Title VII is violated when special appearance rules are imposed on members of only one sex. Gerdom v. Continental Airlines (9th Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 602, 605-606 , cert. dismissed, 460 U.S. 1074 (1983)

Rationale that garnishment rule "fosters employee productivity" is required to be proven by employer. Wallace v. Debron Corp. (8th Cir. 1974) 494 F.2d 674, 677 (Title VII)

"Fetal protection" policy is unlawful "sex discrimination" under FEHA, and is not protected by BFOQ defense; "business necessity" defense does not apply to such policies. Johnson Controls v. FEHC (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 517, 533-542, 267 Cal. Rptr. 158

[b] Fringe Benefits

Employers may not provide benefits for spouses or families of employees of one gender when same benefits are not provided for spouses or families of employees of opposite gender. Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 682-683, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89

Employers may not treat pregnancy-related conditions less favorably than other medical conditions for benefit purposes. Morgan v. Safeway Stores (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 1211, 1213 (Title VII)

There is prima facie Title VII liability if discrimination in health benefits is based on gender. Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co. (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 362, 365 , cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1255 (1984)

[c] Training and Advancement

Employer's denial of employee's opportunity to enter entirely different career by virtue of promotion constitutes refusal to hire, which negates limitation on back pay in promotion cases. Odima v. Westin Tucson Hotel (9th Cir. 1995) 53 F.3d 1484, 1494-1495

Employee's allegation that application for promotion would have been futile because of employer's prior refusal to promote women was sufficient to state Title VII claim. Gifford v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe R.R. Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 685 F.2d 1149, 1154

Plaintiff's failure to promote allegation was subject to summary judgment because employer had established that position was not in fact a promotion for plaintiff, she was not qualified for position, and another person was chosen for position before employer received plaintiff's application. Addy v. Bliss & Glennon (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 205, 213, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642

[d] Seniority Systems

Seniority system is scheme that alone or in tandem with nonseniority criteria allots to employees ever-improving employment rights and benefits as their relative lengths of pertinent employment increase; principal feature is that preferential treatment is dispensed on basis of some measure of time served in employment. California Brewers Ass'n v. Bryant (1980) 444 U.S. 598, 606, 100 S. Ct. 814, 63 L. Ed. 2d 55

Seniority system was "bona fide" because (1) it applied equally to all races and ethnic groups; (2) placement of certain employees in separate bargaining unit from other employees was rational, in accord with industry practice, and consistent with NLRB precedents; (3) system did not have its genesis in racial discrimination; and (4) it was negotiated and maintained free from any illegal purpose. Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 355-356, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII)

Existence of seniority system that complies with Title VII (see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h)) does not relieve employer of duty to reasonably accommodate employees' religious beliefs, unless accommodation cannot be accomplished without disrupting seniority system or imposing more than de minimis hardship on employer. Balint v. Carson City (9th Cir. 1999) 180 F.3d 1047, 1053-1054 (en banc)

Seniority system was not "bona fide," because it penalized blacks more than whites, unequal treatment was not attributable to legitimate division of bargaining units, and it was originated and maintained for discriminatory purpose. United States v. Georgia Power Co. (5th Cir. 1983) 695 F.2d 890, 892-893

Union's seniority system was not "bona fide," because it was negotiated and maintained for illegal purpose of excluding blacks from membership, and with intent and effect of discriminating on basis of race. Wattleton v. International Brotherhood of Boiler Makers (7th Cir. 1982) 686 F.2d 586, 593 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1208 (1983)

[e] Pregnancy Leave

Pregnant employees have right to take leave of absence for reasonable period of time, not to exceed four months; Title

VII does not preempt Gov. Code § 12945(b)(2) [now see Gov. Code § 12945(a)]. California Federal Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Guerra (1987) 479 U.S. 272, 292, 107 S. Ct. 683, 93 L. Ed. 2d 613

[f] Family Care and Medical Leave

Federal Family and Medical Leave Act [29 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq.] validly abrogates the states' Eleventh Amendment immunity by authorizing state employees to recover damages for denial of leave to care for sick family members. Nevada Dep't of Human Res. v. Hibbs (2003) 538 U.S. 721, 726-740, 123 S. Ct. 1972, 155 L. Ed. 2d 953

Statutory procedure under California's Moore-Brown-Roberti Family Rights Act to determine whether employee has serious health condition entitling him or her to medical leave of absence [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(k)(3)] is not mandatory; employer's failure to use that procedure does not bar employer from contending in subsequent litigation that employee did not have serious health condition that made him or her unable to perform job. Lonicki v. Sutter Health Cent. (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 201, 209-214, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 570, 180 P.3d 321

[10] Retirement or Pension Plans and Benefits

Title VII prohibits employer from offering option of receiving retirement benefits from one of several employer-selected companies that, based on sex-based mortality tables, pay female employees lower monthly benefits than male employees who make same contributions to deferred compensation plan. Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1089-1091, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236

Benefit plan that reduces employee's disability benefits by amount of pension benefits when he or she reaches retirement age but does not retire violates ADEA because it coerces employee to involuntarily retire. Kalvinskas v. California Inst. of Technology (9th Cir. 1996) 96 F.3d 1305, 1307-1308

Giving severance pay to all terminated employees on plant closing, except those eligible for retirement because they had attained age 55, was not "plan" within meaning of ADEA "bona fide employee benefit plan" exemption because it was not integral part of complex benefit scheme, but was just one-time ad hoc cash payment. EEOC v. Borden's, Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 724 F.2d 1390, 1395

Statutory exclusion of employees over age 60 from disability allowance under former Educ. Code § 23902 constituted involuntary retirement in violation of ADEA. Smith v. Alum Rock Union Elementary School Dist. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1651, 1655-1658, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399

[11] Discharge and Layoff

Plaintiff who advances Title VII hostile-environment constructive discharge claim must show working conditions so intolerable that reasonable person would have felt compelled to resign. Pennsylvania State Police v. Suders (2004) 542 U.S. 129, 124 S. Ct. 2342, 159 L. Ed. 2d 204, 216-220

Black postal employee who was discharged for losing her mailbox keys did not establish "pretext for discrimination" because, although she presented evidence that other employees who lost their keys were not discharged, she did not present evidence that she and other employees were similarly situated. Talley v. United States Postal Service (8th Cir. 1983) 720 F.2d 505, 507 , cert. denied, 466 U.S. 952 (1984) (Title VII)

Racial discrimination was inferred when plaintiff established that (1) he was member of racial minority, (2) he was qualified for job he was performing, (3) he was satisfying normal requirements in his work, (4) he was discharged, and

(5) after his discharge his employer assigned white employees to perform same work. Flowers v. Crouch-Walker Corp. (7th Cir. 1977) 552 F.2d 1277, 1281-1282 (Title VII)

Under California law, constructive discharge requires that plaintiff show that a reasonable person faced with alleged intolerable working conditions or employer actions would have had no reasonable alternative except to quit, and that employer had actual, rather than merely constructive, knowledge of intolerable conditions. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1248-1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022

Continuous pattern of discriminatory examinations, deprivation of training assignments, denial of opportune assignments, and other similar conduct justify trier of fact in concluding that there was constructive discharge. Valdez v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1043, 1057, 282 Cal. Rptr. 726 (FEHA)

[12] Accommodation

Under ADA, employer ordinarily need not offer accommodation that would violate employer's bona fide, established seniority rules, because such accommodation is not reasonable unless there are special circumstances that make it reasonable in particular case. US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589

Employer is required to provide reasonable religious accommodation unless it would cause employer undue hardship, but employer is not required to provide accommodation of employee's choice; nor is employer required to show that employee's alternative accommodations would result in undue hardship. Ansonia Bd. of Educ. v. Philbrook (1986) 479 U.S. 60, 68-69, 107 S. Ct. 367, 93 L. Ed. 2d 305 (Title VII)

Under ADA, individual who is regarded as having impairment that would constitute disability, but who does not in fact have that impairment, is not entitled to reasonable accommodation. Kaplan v. City of N. Las Vegas (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 1226, 1231-1233

Employer's obligation under ADA to engage in interactive process with employee extends beyond first attempt at accommodation and continues when employee asks for different accommodation or when employer is aware that initial accommodation is failing and further accommodation is needed. Humphrey v. Memorial Hosps. Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1137-1139

Employer need not offer or implement accommodation that would violate seniority system under collective bargaining agreement, because such accommodation would be unreasonable per se. Willis v. Pac. Mar. Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 244 F.3d 675, 680-682

Employee has no duty to cooperate with settlement offers that did not constitute accommodation attempts. Toledo v. Nobel-Sysco, Inc. (10th Cir. 1989) 892 F.2d 1481, 1488-1489 , cert. denied, 495 U.S. 948 (1990) (Title VII)

"Undue hardship" relates to gain-seeking employer exclusively concerned with preserving and promoting its economic efficiency. EEOC v. Townley Engineering & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 610, 616 , cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1077 (1989) (Title VII)

Employer is required to provide means through which employee may eliminate his or her religious conflict while preserving his or her employment status. Hudson v. Western Airlines (9th Cir. 1988) 851 F.2d 261, 266 (Title VII)

Employee not required to cooperate with accommodation attempt that required him to seek his own replacement for working on Sunday, when employee sincerely believed that working on Sunday was morally wrong and that inducing another to work was sin. Smith v. Pyro Mining Co. (6th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 1081, 1085-1088 , cert. denied, 485 U.S.

989 (1988) (Title VII)

Employer and union made good faith effort to accommodate employee's religious beliefs when they offered to permit employee to substitute payment to charity, including his own church, for payment of union dues under "security agreement." Yott v. North American Rockwell Corp. (9th Cir. 1979) 602 F.2d 904, 907 , cert. denied, 445 U.S. 928 (1980) (Title VII)

Employer was not permitted to excuse failure to accommodate by pointing to deficiencies in plaintiff's suggested accommodation. Anderson v. General Dynamics Convair Aerospace Div. (9th Cir. 1978) 589 F.2d 397, 401 , cert. denied, 442 U.S. 921 (1979) (Title VII)

Employer may consider present cost of proposed accommodation measures, but not anticipated future costs of employment, such as medical and disability benefits or leaves of absence. Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 851 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988) (FEHA; construing 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.9)

Employee who has disability and seeks accommodation under ADA or FEHA has burden of establishing his or her ability, with reasonable accommodation, to perform essential job functions. Green v. State (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 254, 260-264, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 165 P.3d 118

Under FEHA, employer's duty to accommodate and to engage in good-faith interactive process to determine reasonable accommodations applies whether applicant or employee is actually disabled or is "regarded as" disabled. Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 54-62, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874

Reasonable accommodation does not require employer to excuse failure to control a controllable disability or to give employee second chance to control disability in future. Brundage v. Hahn (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 228, 239, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830

Duty of accommodation of disability includes affirmative duty to make known to employee other suitable job opportunities, whether or not employeerequests accommodation. Prilliman v. United Air Lines (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 950-951, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142

Accommodation of alcoholic employee held reasonable as matter of law when employer supported several attempts at rehabilitation and reassigned employee to less stressful position while continuing supervisorial pay rate, and employee continued to relapse and miss work while on drinking binges. Gosvener v. Coastal Corp. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 805, 808-813, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 339 (FEHA)

FEHC did not abuse its discretion in finding failure to reasonably accommodate because all measures employer took were unsuccessful, were not taken specifically to accommodate affected employees, or deprived affected employees of employment privileges. County of Fresno v. FEHC (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1555-1556, 277 Cal. Rptr. 557

[13] Harassment

Simple teasing, offhand comments, and isolated incidents (unless extremely serious) will not amount to hostile work environment. Clark County Sch. Dist. v. Breeden (2001) 532 U.S. 268, 121 S. Ct. 1508, 1510, 149 L. Ed. 2d 509 (per curiam)

Whether sexual conduct complained of is sufficiently severe and pervasive to create a hostile work environment is determined by examining totality of circumstances; such finding is not limited to cases in which harasser's conduct causes tangible psychological injury. Harris v. Forklift Systems (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 21-23, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed.

2d 295

Repeated demands for sexual favors, public fondling, and forcible rape on several occasions, were plainly sufficient to state claim for "hostile environment" sexual harassment. Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 67, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 (Title VII)

Testimony of other female employees who claimed to have been sexually harassed by employer is admissible in quid pro quo sexual harassment action for purpose of showing employer's motive in discharging plaintiff. Heyne v. Caruso (9th Cir. 1995) 69 F.3d 1475, 1478

Employer still has obligation to provide remedy for harassment even when harasser has stopped of his or her own accord. Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1528-1529 (Title VII)

Defendant's claim that accused harasser abused both men and women and people of other nationalities, as well as alleged female victim of sexual harassment, did not refute allegation of harassment because his abusive behavior towards women relied on sexual epithets and references to women's bodies. Steiner v. Showboat Operating Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 25 F.3d 1459, 1463-1464 , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1082 (1995)

Female plaintiff states prima facie case of hostile environment sexual harassment under Title VII if she alleges conduct that reasonable woman would consider sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter conditions of employment and create abusive working environment; employer shields itself from liability for harassment by coworkers if its remedial actions are reasonably calculated to end harassment. Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 879, 882

Requisite elements for claim of racially hostile work environment are (1) "repeated slurs," and (2) employer tolerance and condonation. Davis v. Monsanto Chemical Co. (6th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 345, 349 , cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1110 (1989) (Title VII)

Trial court may aggregate evidence of racial hostility with evidence of sexual hostility to determine whether there is pervasive discriminatory atmosphere sufficient to establish "hostile work environment harassment." Hicks v. Gates Rubber Co. (10th Cir. 1987) 833 F.2d 1406, 1416-1417 (Title VII)

Although harassment and discrimination are separate wrongs under FEHA, they are sometimes closely interrelated and even overlapping, particularly with regard to proof; thus, if hostile work environment is created through official employment actions that would ordinarily be associated with discrimination claim, those actions can also form basis of harassment claim. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749

Hostile work environment sexual harassment claim is not established (1) by coworker's crude language and lewd gestures that are not directing sexual innuendos or gender-related language toward plaintiff or toward women in general; or (2) by infrequent sexual comments directed at employees other than plaintiff, if those comments do not permeate and destroy plaintiff's work environment. Lyle v. Warner Bros. Television Prods. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 264, 279-282, 289-292, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 2, 132 P.3d 211

Although isolated instance of favoritism on the part of supervisor toward female employee with whom supervisor is conducting consensual sexual affair ordinarily would not constitute sexual harassment of other employees, when such sexual favoritism in workplace is sufficiently widespread it may create hostile work environment in which demeaning message is conveyed to female employees that they are viewed by management as "sexual playthings" or that way for women to get ahead in workplace is by engaging in sexual conduct with their supervisors or managers. Miller v. Department of Corr. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 446, 466, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797, 115 P.3d 77

To be actionable, racial harassment must be severe or pervasive; liability cannot be founded on acts of racial harassment that are occasional, isolated, sporadic, or trivial. Etter v. Veriflo Corp. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 457, 466-467, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33

Employer cannot be held liable to employee for failing to take reasonable steps to prevent unlawful harassment unless employee actually suffered harassment. Trujillo v. North County Transit Dist. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 280, 286-289, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 596

Preferential treatment of coemployee who is romantically involved with supervisor, without further evidence of sexual harassment, is not actionable by other employees under FEHA. Proksel v. Gattis (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1626, 1631, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 322

Individual supervisors may be liable for sexual harassment as "persons" under FEHA if they participate personally in harassment or aid or abet in harassment by failing to investigate or remedy it. Matthews v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 598, 599-600, 605-606, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350

Evidence of sexual harassment of other female employees by accused perpetrator was admissible, relevant, and not hearsay or unduly prejudicial to show employer's knowledge of perpetrator's reputation and conduct. Bihun v. AT&T Information Systems, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 976, 987-991, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787 (FEHA)

Employer was liable for punitive damages when it fired employee after he complained to management about racial harassment by coworkers; employer violated FEHA obligation not to discriminate, which was independent of coworkers' conduct. Roberts v. Ford Aerospace & Communications Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 793, 800, 274 Cal. Rptr. 139

Whether sexual harassment is sufficiently pervasive to create hostile work environment is determined from totality of circumstances; factors that may be considered include (1) nature of unwelcome sexual conduct, (2) frequency of offensive encounters, (3) total number of days over which all offensive conduct occurs, and (4) context in which sexually-harassing conduct occurred. Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 609-610, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA)

[14] Retaliation

Title VII anti-retaliation provision, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(a), protects employee who opposes unlawful discrimination by speaking out about it in answering questions during employer's internal investigation, even if that employee did not report discrimination on his or her own initiative. Crawford v. Metropolitan Gov't (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 846, 172 L. Ed. 2d 650, 656-659

42 U.S.C. § 1981 encompasses claims of retaliation on basis of race, including retaliation against person for complaining about violation of another person's rights under § 1981. CBOCS W., Inc. v. Humphries (2008) 553 U.S. 442, 128 S. Ct. 1951, 1954-1955, 1961, 170 L. Ed. 2d 864, 869, 877

29 U.S.C. § 633a(a), which prohibits "discrimination based on age" in federal employment, includes prohibition of retaliation based on filing of age-discrimination complaint. Gomez-Perez v. Potter (2008) 553 U.S. 474, 128 S. Ct. 1931, 1935-1936, 1943, 170 L. Ed. 2d 887, 893-894, 902

Employer's action will support Title VII retaliation claim if it is "materially adverse," that is, if it would likely have dissuaded reasonable worker from engaging in protected activity. Burlington N. & Santa Fe Ry. Co. v. White (2006) 548 U.S. 53, 126 S. Ct. 2405, 2410-2416, 165 L. Ed. 2d 345, 354-361

For mere temporal proximity between employer's knowledge of protected activity and adverse employment action to constitute sufficient prima facie evidence of retaliation, that temporal proximity must be very close. Clark County Sch. Dist. v. Breeden (2001) 532 U.S. 268, 121 S. Ct. 1508, 1510, 149 L. Ed. 2d 509 (per curiam)

Former employee is "employee" within meaning of anti-retaliation provision of Title VII. Robinson v. Shell Oil Co. (1997), 519 U.S. 337, 346, 117 S. Ct. 843, 136 L. Ed. 2d 808

No protected activity when employee engaged in self-help opposition to customer's harassment after employer had taken reasonable steps to protect her from such harassment; in absence of employer's acquiescence there is no unlawful employer action to oppose (Title VII). Folkerson v. Circus Circus Enterprises (9th Cir. 1997) 107 F.3d 754, 756

Contacting government employer's equal employment opportunity counselor is protected participation in Title VII enforcement machinery. Hashimoto v. Dalton (9th Cir. 1997) 118 F.3d 671, 680 , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1122 (1998)

Complaint must set forth sufficient factual basis to support legal conclusion of retaliation; terminations following soon after protected activity are sufficient. Miller v. Fairchild Indus. (9th Cir. 1986) 797 F.2d 727, 732 (Title VII)

Plaintiff must show causal link between protected activity and retaliation. Wrighten v. Metropolitan Hospitals (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1346, 1354 (Title VII)

Requiring proof of actual unlawful employment practices in "opposition" cases chills legitimate assertion of employee rights under equal employment opportunity law. Sias v. City Demonstration Agency (9th Cir. 1978) 588 F.2d 692, 695 (Title VII)

Opposition to coemployee's racial slur was not protected by Title VII when there was no evidence that employer authorized or approved remark, either before or after incident, and coemployee was reprimanded by employer on day of incident. Silver v. KCA, Inc. (9th Cir. 1978) 586 F.2d 138, 142

That employer with retaliatory motive takes action that is reasonably likely to deter plaintiff or other employees from engaging in protected activities does not constitute unlawful retaliation unless it materially affects terms, conditions, or privileges of employment. Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1028, 1050-1055, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123

Employee has cause of action for retaliation in violation of Moore-Brown-Roberti Family Rights Act (CFRA), Gov. Code § 12945.2(l)(1) (part of FEHA), if employer is covered under CFRA, employee is eligible for and exercises right to CFRA leave, and employee suffers adverse employment action as result. Dudley v. Department of Transp. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 255, 261-265, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 739

Plaintiff who (1) engaged in protected activity and (2) was thereafter subjected to adverse action met first two requirements of prima facie case of retaliation but failed to meet third requirement of causal link between first two because employer alleged its adverse actions were based on plaintiff's failure to perform job. Addy v. Bliss & Glennon (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 205, 215, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642

Employee established prima facie case of retaliation for reporting sexual harassment complaints from subordinate, when he was terminated by employer after reporting the complaints. Flait v. North American Watch Corp. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 467, 476-479, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 522

Retaliatory failure to renew office lease affected condition of employment and was type of conduct proscribed by FEHA. Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 617, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842

[15] Jurisdiction over Civil Actions

Federal courts do not have exclusive jurisdiction over civil actions brought under Title VII, because Congress did not divest state courts of their concurrent authority to adjudicate federal claims. Yellow Freight System v. Donnelly (1990) 494 U.S. 820, 821, 110 S. Ct. 1566, 108 L. Ed. 2d 834

State and federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction over 42 U.S.C. § 1981 cases. De Horney v. Bank of America Nat'l Trust and Sav. Ass'n (9th Cir. 1989) 879 F.2d 459, 463

State courts have concurrent subject matter jurisdiction, with federal courts, over ADEA claims. Chapman v. City of Detroit (6th Cir. 1986) 808 F.2d 459, 463

[16] Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies

Discriminatory layoff claim was within scope of discriminatory failure to rehire claim for purposes of exhaustion of remedies under Title VII. EEOC v. Farmer Brothers Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 31 F.3d 891, 898-899

Title VII plaintiff may file civil action prior to receiving EEOC right-to-sue letter, as long as premature filing does not preclude state from performing administrative duties and defendant is not prejudiced. Edwards v. Occidental Chemical Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 892 F.2d 1442, 1445 n.1

One-year FEHA statute of limitations, Gov. Code § 12960(d), is subject to equitable tolling while employee voluntarily pursues employer's internal administrative remedy, even though internal remedy is optional and need not be exhausted before filing FEHA action, and even if employee voluntarily terminates internal proceeding before administrative decision is rendered. McDonald v. Antelope Valley Cmty. Coll. Dist. (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 88, 105-114, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 734, 194 P.3d 1026

Public employee must exhaust employer's internal remedy before suing for retaliation for protected "whistleblowing" activity under Lab. Code § 1102.5, which is silent on administrative remedy or exhaustion requirement. Campbell v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 311, 329-330, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 320, 333-335

Employee who has exhausted FEHA administrative process and obtained right-to-sue letter from DFEH need not also exhaust internal administrative procedures provided by employer prior to filing FEHA claim in superior court. Schifando v. City of Los Angeles (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1074, 1082, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 457, 79 P.3d 569

Although employee must exhaust administrative remedies before bringing civil action under FEHA, exhaustion of administrative remedies is not required before filing civil action for damages alleging nonstatutory causes of action. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 86, 88, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373

If employer establishes internal grievance mechanism, employee's failure to exhaust its remedies precludes any subsequent private civil action. Palmer v. Regents of the University of California (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 899, 903-906, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567

Failure to name defendants in DFEH complaint is fatal to right to bring FEHA civil action against them in court. Valdez v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1043, 1061, 282 Cal. Rptr. 726

[17] Limitations Periods

Plaintiff who does not file timely charge under Title VII challenging adoption of discriminatory practice may assert disparate-impact claim in timely charge challenging employer's later application of that practice. *Lewis v. City of Chicago (May 24, 2010) -- U.S. --, 130 S. Ct. 2191, 176 L. Ed. 2d 967, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 4165, at *10-21

Although 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(b) requires verification of Title VII charge filed with EEOC, 29 C.F.R. § 1601.12(b) validly allows otherwise timely charge to be verified after expiration of time for filing. Edelman v. Lynchburg Coll. (2002) 535 U.S. 106, 122 S. Ct. 1145, 152 L. Ed. 2d 188, 196-201

Tolling provision of federal supplemental jurisdiction statute, 28 U.S.C. § 1367(d), does not toll limitations period for state-law claim against state, if claim is dismissed by federal court on ground of state's sovereign immunity under Eleventh Amendment. Raygor v. Regents of Univ. of Minn. (2002) 534 U.S. 533, 122 S. Ct. 999, 152 L. Ed. 2d 27, 37-41

In determining whether employer unlawfully retaliated against employee, court may apply "continuing violation doctrine," considering acts of employer that took place outside limitations period, if those acts are sufficiently linked to acts that took place within limitations period. Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1028, 1055-1059, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123

Employer's persistent failure to reasonably accommodate disability or to eliminate hostile work environment targeting disabled employee constitutes "continuing violation" for purposes of FEHA limitations period, if employer's unlawful actions (1) are sufficiently similar in kind as to be part of same course of conduct, (2) have occurred with reasonable frequency, and (3) have not acquired degree of permanence that would make clear to employee that any further efforts at informal conciliation would be futile. Richards v. CH2M Hill, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 798, 823, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87, 29 P.3d 175

Although continuous, pervasive environmental harassment may be "continuing violation" for limitations purposes, plaintiff may be precluded from properly pleading environmental harassment if only isolated acts of harassment occurred within limitations period. Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 610, 613, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842

[18] Defenses

Existence of reasonable factor other than age that, under 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(1), justifies act otherwise prohibited by ADEA is affirmative defense on which employer bears burden of proof. Meacham v. Knolls Atomic Power Lab. U.S. (2008) 554 U.S. 8e, 128 S. Ct. 2395, 2398, 24002402, 171 L. Ed. 2d 283 , on remand, 2009, U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36999 (Apr. 15, 2009)

Federal immigration policy, as expressed in Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, 8 U.S.C. § 1324a, precludes award of back pay for employment discrimination under National Labor Relations Act, 29 U.S.C. § 158(a)(3), to undocumented alien who has never been legally authorized to work in United States. Hoffman Plastic Compounds, Inc. v. NLRB (2002) 535 U.S. 137, 122 S. Ct. 1275, 152 L. Ed. 2d 271, 283-284

Release of all claims against employer that does not comply with requirements of Older Workers Benefits Protection Act [29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(1)(B),(F),(G)] cannot bar claim for age discrimination under ADEA; specific statutory requirements for release of ADEA claims foreclose application of general contract principles to make nonconforming release effective. Oubre v. Entergy Operations (1998) 522 U.S. 422, 426-428, 118 S. Ct. 838, 139 L. Ed. 2d 849 (ADEA)

BFOQ must apply to particular position in question. Trans World Airlines v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 122, 105

S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523 (ADEA)

Employer may refuse to hire individual because he or she is "overqualified," as long as that term is defined objectively and is not used as proxy for age. EEOC v. Insurance Co. of North America (9th Cir. 1995) 49 F.3d 1418, 1420-1421

Findings of fact for business justification are often relevant to BFOQ analysis, and various standards for establishing business justification are similar to those for determining BFOQ; accordingly, "manifest relationship" standard applied to BFOQ analysis. Chambers v. Omaha Girls Club (8th Cir. 1987) 834 F.2d 697, 701, 704

Salary savings that may be realized by replacing employee protected by ADEA with younger, lower-salaried employee do not constitute permissible, nondiscriminatory justification for replacement, particularly when employer does not pursue less-detrimental alternatives, such as offering older employee continued employment at lower salary or in different position. Metz v. Transit Mix (7th Cir. 1987) 828 F.2d 1202, 1205-1208

BFOQ defense inapplicable to medical school that excluded Jewish doctors from assignment to Saudi Arabia because college never tried to determine official Saudi policy regarding Jewish doctors working there, nor whether there would have been difficulty in obtaining visas for them. Abrams v. Baylor College of Medicine (5th Cir. 1986) 805 F.2d 528, 533 (Title VII)

BFOQ defense possibly applicable to charges that Japanese company incorporated in United States violated Title VII by hiring only Japanese citizens in its management positions; court required to determine whether Japanese citizenship was BFOQ because of such factors as (1) Japanese linguistic and cultural skills; (2) knowledge of Japanese products, markets, customs, and business practices; (3) familiarity with personnel and workings of principal or parent enterprise in Japan; and (4) acceptability to those persons with whom company does business. Avigliano v. Sumitomo Shoji America (2d Cir. 1981) 638 F.2d 552, 559 (Title VII)

BFOQ defense applicable to flight attendants who are forced to take maternity leave when they become pregnant. Harriss v. Pan American World Airways (9th Cir. 1980) 649 F.2d 670, 677 (Title VII)

Employer's evidence of abstract medical generalizations regarding possibility of future injury was insufficient as a matter of law to qualify as defense. Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 851 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988) (FEHA)

Standard language of mandatory preprinted form used in settling workers' compensation claims--see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10874--releases only those claims that are within scope of workers' compensation system, and extrinsic evidence is not admissible to show that parties intended preprinted release form to encompass claims outside scope of workers' compensation system. Claxton v. Waters (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 367, 376-377, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 246, 96 P.3d 496

In FEHA action for hostile environment sexual harassment by supervisor, employer may establish "avoidable consequences" defense by proving (1) that employer took reasonable steps to prevent and correct workplace sexual harassment, (2) that employee unreasonably failed to use preventive and corrective measures employer provided, and (3) that reasonable use of employer's procedures would have prevented at least some of harm that employee suffered. State Dept. of Health Servs. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1026, 1043-1044, 79 P.3d 556

If employee in workers' compensation proceeding has knowledge of potential FEHA claim against employer at time of executing general release that purports to settle all claims, including those outside scope of workers' compensation system, but employee has not yet initiated litigation of FEHA claim, employee has burden of expressly excepting that claim from release; in absence of such exception, and absent contrary extrinsic evidence, general language releasing all claims will bar employee from pursuing FEHA claim. Jefferson v. California Dep't of Youth Auth. (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 299, 302-311, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 391, 48 P.3d 423

After-acquired evidence doctrine does not prevent admission of after-acquired evidence that is offered to support employer's originally proffered reason for adverse employment action; thus, when employee who has been terminated because of inability to perform job alleges unlawful discrimination, employer may offer after-acquired evidence to establish that employee was in fact unable to do job. Finegan v. County of Los Angeles (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10-13, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 762

Employee's misrepresentation of his or her entitlement to work in United States goes to heart of employment relationship and deprives employee of any right to complain about termination; however, neither after-acquired evidence doctrine nor unclean-hands doctrine will bar employee's discrimination or harassment claims for acts occurring during employment. Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 833, 842-845, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12

Delays by FEHC or DFEH in processing claim do not give rise to laches defense. County of Fresno v. FEHC (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1556, 277 Cal. Rptr. 557

BFOQ defense inapplicable to male club that excluded women from employment based on privacy and male comradery concerns, because customer preference cannot be basis for exception and privacy concerns did not justify exclusion when enclosed shower and bathroom facilities were available. Bohemian Club v. FEHC (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 19-23, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 (FEHA)

Speculation of possibility of future injury and fiscal restraint was insufficient to justify failure to hire plaintiff as firefighter because of spinal condition. Johnson v. Civil Service Comm'n (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 585, 590-591, 200 Cal. Rptr. 289 (FEHA)

Evidence that plaintiff's condition created possibility of future health problems not sufficient to justify refusal to employ plaintiff, given strong policy for providing equal employment opportunities for disabled. Sterling Transit Co. v. Federal Employment Practice Comm'n (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 791, 799, 175 Cal. Rptr. 548 (FEHA)

[19] Waiver of Judicial Remedies in Arbitration Clauses

Collective bargaining agreement provision that clearly and unmistakably requires union members to arbitrate statutory antidiscrimination claims is enforceable. 14 Penn Plaza LLC v. Pyett (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1456, 173 L. Ed. 2d 398, 408-414

Collective bargaining agreement's general arbitration provision that does not explicitly refer to statutory antidiscrimination rights will not act as waiver of individual employees' rights to judicial forum for their statutory civil-rights claims. Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp. (1998) 525 U.S. 70, 119 S. Ct. 391, 142 L. Ed. 2d 361, 371-372

ADEA action was subject to compulsory arbitration pursuant to arbitration agreement contained in securities registration application. Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 23, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26

Employee's agreement to read employee handbook with new requirement of arbitration, with continued employment thereafter, when handbook stated that its procedures were exclusive ones for processing disputes, including those arising from statute, was insufficient to compel arbitration. Nelson v. Cyprus Bagdad Copper Corp. (9th Cir. 1997) 119 F.3d 756, 761-762 , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1072 (1998)

Employment application incorporating another document, the latter amended to refer to arbitration of employment disputes, was insufficient to preclude waiver of statutory right to go to court. Renteria v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 1104, 1107

Title VII claim was subject to arbitration after voluntary initiation of arbitration by employee. Nghiem v. NEC Electronic (9th Cir. 1993) 25 F.3d 1437, 1441 , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1044 (1994)

If employee subject to mandatory employment arbitration agreement is unable to obtain hearing on merits of his or her FEHA claims, or claims based on other unwaivable statutory rights, because of arbitration award based on legal error, trial court does not err in vacating award. Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Superior Court (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 665, 675-680, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 171, 229 P.3d 83

Requirements for validity of mandatory arbitration agreement in employment contract that encompasses unwaivable statutory rights such as employee's rights under FEHA. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 99-113, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669

If arbitration agreement contains clause in which parties expressly agree to allow court or arbitrator to sever or modify any "unreasonable or unenforceable" provisions, agreement as so modified may be enforceable. Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 743-746, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422

Federal Arbitration Act (9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.) preempts FEHA judicial remedies for age discrimination and requires enforcement of agreement to arbitrate any claims, disputes, or controversies arising between plaintiff and his employer. Hall v. Nomura Securities International (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 43, 48-51, 268 Cal. Rptr. 45

[20] Judicial Remedies

Catalyst theory is not proper basis for determining that plaintiff is prevailing party under ADA fee-shifting provision, 42 U.S.C. § 12205; to be prevailing party, plaintiff must have obtained "judicial imprimatur" that alters legal relationship of parties, such as judgment on merits or court-ordered consent decree, and it is not enough that plaintiff's lawsuit was catalyst in causing voluntary change in defendant's conduct. Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home, Inc. v. West Virginia Dep't of Health & Human Res. (2001) 532 U.S. 598, 605, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855

Amount received in settlement of claim for back pay and liquidated damages for violation of ADEA constitutes taxable income. Commissioner v. Schleier (1995) 515 U.S. 323, 327, 115 S. Ct. 2159, 132 L. Ed. 2d 294

Punitive damages have no fixed formula, and therefore punitive damages in employment discrimination case set at 10 times amount of compensatory damages were permissible. EEOC v. Farmer Brothers Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 31 F.3d 891, 902-905

Back pay is available to undocumented alien employees who are subject to Title VII violations as long as they were not deported during and were available for employment throughout back pay period. EEOC v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1516-1517

Title VII attorney's fees provision does not authorize award of expert witness fees. Denny v. Westfield State College (1st Cir. 1989) 880 F.2d 1465, 1468, 1471

Compensatory damages were unwarranted when disabled plaintiff did not show that loss of employment led to undue suffering, relative to anyone involuntarily terminated from job, or need for professional psychological help, or that employer's conduct was abusive or outrageous. Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 856-857 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988) (FEHA)

If FEHA action is not brought as limited civil case, and plaintiff recovers amount that could have been awarded in limited civil case, trial court has discretion under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033(a) to deny attorney's fees, but in exercising that discretion, court must give due consideration to policies and objectives of FEHA in general and of its fee-shifting provision, Gov. Code § 12965(b), in particular. Chavez v. City of Los Angeles (2010) 47 Cal. 4th 970, 986989, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 710, 224 P.3d 41

One-to-one ratio between compensatory and punitive damages was federal constitutional limit in FEHA discrimination and harassment case involving relatively low degree of reprehensibility of defendant's conduct and substantial compensatory damages award, which included substantial amount of noneconomic damages, which itself may have included punitive component. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749

Under catalyst theory, plaintiff may obtain attorney's fees as "prevailing party" under FEHA fee-shifting provision, Gov. Code § 12965(b), despite lack of favorable judgment, if (1) plaintiff's lawsuit was catalyst motivating defendant to provide primary relief sought; (2) lawsuit had merit and achieved its catalytic effect by threat of victory, not by dint of nuisance and threat of expense; and (3) plaintiff reasonably attempted to settle litigation prior to filing lawsuit. Tipton-Whittingham v. City of Los Angeles (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 604, 608, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371

Except to extent prevailing party has already paid his or her attorney, and unless contractual agreement provides otherwise, attorney's fee award under FEHA belongs to attorney, rather than to prevailing party. Flannery v. Prentice (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 572, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 809, 28 P.3d 860

In FEHA racial harassment suit, court has power to issue injunction prohibiting defendant's continued use of racial epithets in workplace; such injunction is not unconstitutional prior restraint on speech if it simply precludes defendant from continuing unlawful conduct that has been judicially determined to violate FEHA. Aguilar v. Avis Rent A Car System (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 121, 133-142, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132, 980 P.2d 846 , cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1138 (2000)

Employee who is denied promotion for discriminatory reason prohibited by FEHA, and who then voluntarily resigns, is not precluded from recovering back pay for period after date of resignation, even if employee was not constructively discharged. Cloud v. Casey (2000) 76 Cal. App. 4th 895, 905-908, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 757

FEHA action considered to be tort for purposes of former statutory provision barring recovery of attorney fees when rejected settlement offer exceeds final recovery, and when attorney fees were to be excluded from computation of final recovery in non-tort actions only. Wilson v. Safeway Stores (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 267, 273-274, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 532

Attorney's fee award of $450 per hour in sexual harassment action found to be at "high end," but not "off the scale," in light of record. Bihun v. AT&T Information Systems, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 976, 997, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787 (FEHA)

Award of attorney's fees to prevailing employer, against plaintiff, was unjustified when plaintiff's age discrimination claim was not shown to be frivolous, unreasonable, or groundless. Cummings v. Benco Building Services (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 1390, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 53 (FEHA)

[21] Preemption

Section 301(a) of Labor Management Relations Act (29 U.S.C. § 185(a)) did not preempt FEHA claim that employer applied terms of collective bargaining agreement in discriminatory manner, even though court would have to refer to agreement, because resolution of FEHA claim did not depend on interpretation of agreement. Detabali v. St. Luke's

Hosp. (9th Cir. 2007) 482 F.3d 1199, 1203

National Bank Act provision that empowers national banks to dismiss bank officers "at pleasure," 12 U.S.C. § 24, § 5, does not preempt age-discrimination claims asserted under state laws that substantively mirror provisions of Age Discrimination in Employment Act. Kroske v. US Bank Corp. (9th Cir. 2005) 432 F.3d 976, 981-989

Section 301(a) of Labor Management Relations Act (29 U.S.C. § 185(a)) does not preempt FEHA claims that do not depend on meaning of collective bargaining agreement. Jackson v. Southern California Gas Co. (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 638, 644

National Bank Act provision that empowers national banks to dismiss bank officers "at pleasure," 12 U.S.C. § 24, § 5, does not preempt FEHA claims alleging dismissal on ground of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or age. Peatros v. Bank of America (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 147, 173-175, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 659, 990 P.2d 539

FEHA does not preempt other state laws, including common law, prohibiting or restricting employment discrimination. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 73-82, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373

Exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law preempt FEHA claim of disability or handicap discrimination when disability resulted from industrial injury. Langridge v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 664, 667-670, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34

Exclusive remedy provisions of worker's compensation law (Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3601) do not preclude FEHA actions, primarily because two statutes address different public policy concerns. Goldman v. Wilsey Foods (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1085, 1095-1096, 265 Cal. Rptr. 294

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationNational Origin DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationReligious DiscriminationGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.78

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.78 Administrative Decisions

In deciding whether to award compensatory damages for emotional injury, factors considered by FEHC include complainant's testimony; any corroborating testimony of friends and coemployees; nature, extent, duration, and egregiousness of conduct; and extent to which employer acted to rectify discrimination. DFEH v. Rosenberg (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-09, p. 11

Duty to prevent sexual harassment includes obligation to respond forcefully and effectively when employer learns of harassment. DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 20

Plaintiff establishes prima facie case of unlawful retaliation by proving, by preponderance of evidence, that (1) he or she engaged in protected activity, (2) he or she suffered reverse employment action, and (3) causal connection exists between protected activity and employer's adverse action; plaintiff need not show that retaliatory reason was sole or principal reason for adverse action. DFEH v. County of Madera (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-03, p. 33; DFEH v. California State University--Hayward (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-18, p. 21; DFEH v. California State University--Sacramento (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-08, p. 24

Length of maternity leave depends on period of actual physical disability, and may be greater than that provided to other temporarily disabled employees. DFEH v. J.E. Robinson, D.D.S. (1989) FEHC Dec. No. 89-02, p. 10

With respect to regulation of spouses working together, careful assessment required to be made of actual work setting to determine whether setting would pose, because of mutual concerns married couples are assumed to bear, potential conflict of interest or other hazard greater for married couples than for other employees. DFEH v. Insurance America Sales Agency (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-07, p. 6

FEHC able to compensate for pain, fear, emotional distress, shame, humiliation, and similar forms of injury suffered as a result of employment discrimination. DFEH v. Aluminum Precision Products, Inc. (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-05, p.

10

Nonprofit organization must be religious to be exempt from FEHA. DFEH v. Bohemian Club (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-01, pp. 12-15

"Marital status" defined. DFEH v. Community Hospital of San Gabriel (1986) FEHC Dec. No. 86-08

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate TreatmentFamily Status DiscriminationLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationHarassmentSexual HarassmentDefenses & ExceptionsAntiharassment PolicyLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationHarassmentSexual HarassmentRemediesCompensatory DamagesLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationRetaliationElementsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawLeaves of AbsenceFamily & Medical Leave ActCoverage & DefinitionsAdoption & Maternity

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.79

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.79 Law Reviews

Chow, Sticks, Stones, and Simple Teasing: The Jurisprudence of Non-Cognizable Harassing Conduct in the Context of Title VII Hostile Work Environment Claims, 33 Loy. L.A. L. Rev. 133 (1999)

Harper, Employer Liability for Harassment under Title VII: A Functional Rationale for Faragher and Ellerth, 36 San Diego L. Rev. 41 (1999)

Comment, Making Sense of the McDonnell Douglas Framework: Circumstantial Evidence and Proof of Disparate Treatment Under Title VII, 87 Cal. L. Rev. 983 (1999)

Note, Defining Employer Liability: Toward a Precise Application of Agency Principles in Title VII Sexual Harassment Cases, 29 Golden Gate U.L. Rev. 235 (1999)

Comment, Considering Hybrid Sex and Age Discrimination Claims by Women: Examining Approaches to Pleading and Analysis--A Pragmatic Model, 28 Golden Gate U.L. Rev. 115 (1998)

Comment, Employment Discrimination After the 1993 Amendments to FEHA: A Change in the Once Settled Bargain?, 32 U.S.F. L. Rev. 433 (1998)

Note, What Is "Sex"? Heterosexual-Male-on-Heterosexual-Male Sexual Harassment Actions After Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Services, Inc., 71 S. Cal. L. Rev. 1341 (1998)

Franke, What's Wrong with Sexual Harassment?, 49 Stan. L. Rev. 691 (1997)

Comment, Employer Discrimination on the Basis of Pregnancy: Righting the Power Imbalance, 27 Golden Gate U.L. Rev. (1997)

Comment, Same-Gender Sexual Harassment: Is It Sex Discrimination Under Title VII?, 36 Santa Clara L. Rev. 1147 (1996)

Note, Walking the Constitutional Tightrope: Balancing Title VII Hostile Environment Sexual Harassment Claims with Free Speech Defenses, 80 Minn. L. Rev. 979 (1996)

Hadfield, Rational Women: A Test for Sex-Based Harassment, 83 Cal. L. Rev. 1151 (1995)

Note, What's Sex Got To Do With It?, 47 Stan. L. Rev. 565 (1995)

Burstein, What is "Reasonable Accommodation" Under the Americans With Disabilities Act?, 38(5) Prac. Law. 63 (1992)

Estrich, Sex at Work, 43 Stan. L. Rev. 813 (1991)

Kelman, Concepts of Discrimination in "General Ability" Job Testing, 104 Harv. L. Rev. 1157 (1991)

Lanctot, The Defendant Lies and the Plaintiff Loses: The Fallacy of the "Pretext-Plus" Rule in Employment Discrimination Cases, 43 Hastings L.J. 57 (1991)

Kotkin, Public Remedies for Private Wrongs: Rethinking the Title VII Back Pay Remedy, 41 Hastings L.J. 1301 (1990)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental FreedomsFreedom of SpeechGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationReasonable AccommodationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationProofBurdens of ProofGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationHarassmentSexual HarassmentCoverage & DefinitionsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.80

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.80 Text References

Schlei & Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (BNA 2d ed. 1983)

Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 8, Constitutional Law, §§ 855-878 (10th ed. 2005)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral Overview

83 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 115.81-115.89

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 115.81[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
A. Complaint and Allegations for Violations of Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.90

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.90 Complaint for Damages and Preliminary and Permanent Injunction for Violation of Fair Employment and Housing Act--Refusal to Hire [Gov. Code §§ 12940, 12941, 12965]

[1] FORM Complaint for Damages and Preliminary and Permanent Injunction for Violation of Fair Employment and Housing Act--Refusal to Hire [Gov. Code §§ 12940, 12941, 12965]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES [AND INJUNCT-
_____ [name],	)	IVE RELIEF] FOR EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINA-
[and DOES I through _____,]	)	TION
Defendant(s).	)	(Fair Employment and Housing Act)
	)	[Amount demanded (exceeds or does not exceed)
	)	$10,000]
		[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

_____

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant _____ [name] is _____ [specify type of entity, e.g., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of _____] and is subject to suit under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act, Government Code Section 12900 et seq. (FEHA), in that defendant _____ [specify facts showing that defendant is subject to suit under FEHA (Gov. Code §§ 12926(d),(e),(g), 12940), e.g., regularly employs five or more persons].

[2. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES I-_____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of these fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that plaintiff's injuries as herein alleged were proximately caused by the aforementioned defendants.)]

[3. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that) (A)t all times herein mentioned each of the defendants was the agent and employee of each of the remaining defendants and, in doing the things hereinafter alleged, was acting within the course and scope of such agency and employment.]

4. _____ [Allege facts showing proper venue under Gov. Code § 12965(b), e.g., The unlawful employment practice(s) complained of herein occurred in _____ County].

5. Plaintiff _____ [name] is an adult person, and a resident of the County of _____, State of California.

6. Plaintiff is a _____ [state plaintiff's membership in group protected by FEHA, e.g., black person].

[Paragraphs 7-10, below, set forth specific allegations of discrimination based on refusal to hire. Other allegations of discrimination based on different grounds may be substituted or added here. See, e.g.,§§ 115.91 -115.94.]

7. On _____ [date], plaintiff presented himself/herself at the personnel office of defendant _____ [name of employer] at _____ [location] to request employment as _____ [specify position sought, e.g., a file clerk], but defendant refused to hire plaintiff.

[8. At all times herein mentioned, plaintiff was qualified for the position of _____ (specify position sought, e.g., file clerk) with defendant _____ (name of employer) in that _____ (specify facts indicating plaintiff's qualification for job, such as his/her education, training, and experience).]

[EITHER]

9. Defendant's refusal to hire plaintiff constitutes disparate treatment in that it was based on the fact that plaintiff is a _____ [specify protected characteristic on which claim of discrimination is based, e.g., black person]. Defendant intentionally refused to hire plaintiff because of plaintiff's _____ [specify protected characteristic, e.g., race]. Plaintiff bases this conclusion on the fact that _____[specify, e.g., defendant continued to seek applicants for the position of file clerk, and ultimately hired a white applicant with the same qualifications as plaintiff].

[AND/OR]

10. The defendant's policy or practice requiring employment applicants to _____ [specify facially neutral employment policy, e.g., have earned a college degree] [also] caused plaintiff to be _____ [specify loss caused by employment policy, e.g., denied the employment he/she desired]. This policy or practice has a disparate impact on plaintiff and other persons of his/her _____ [specify protected characteristic, e.g., race], in that it causes persons of plaintiff's _____ [specify protected characteristic, e.g., race] to be demonstrably disadvantaged, vis-a-vis _____ [specify group that has advantage because of requirement, e.g., white] candidates seeking employment, in the following manner: _____ [specify facts showing numerical disparity caused by defendant's employment policy or practice]. [Furthermore, defendant's policy or practice is not justified by any business necessity in that _____ (specify, e.g., a college degree is neither necessary nor helpful to performance of the duties of the job for which plaintiff applied).]

[CONTINUE]

11. Defendant's discriminatory action(s) against plaintiff, as alleged above, constituted unlawful discrimination in employment on account of _____ [specify protected characteristic, e.g., race], in violation of _____ [specify relevant section(s) of FEHA that plaintiff claims were or are being violated, e.g., Government Code Section 12940(a)].

12. As a proximate result of defendant's discriminatory action(s) against plaintiff, as alleged above, plaintiff has been harmed in that plaintiff has suffered the loss of the wages, salary, benefits, and additional amounts of money plaintiff would have received if _____ [specify, e.g., plaintiff had been hired by defendant _____ (name of employer)]. As a result of such discrimination and consequent harm, plaintiff has suffered such damages _____ [in the amount of $_____ or in an amount according to proof].

[13. As a further proximate result of defendant's discriminatory action(s) against plaintiff, as alleged above, plaintiff has been harmed in that plaintiff has suffered the intangible loss of such employment-related opportunities as _____ (specify, e.g., experience in the position sought by plaintiff). As a result of such discrimination and consequent harm, plaintiff has suffered such damages _____ (in the amount of $_____ or in an amount according to proof).]

[14. As a further proximate result of defendant's discriminatory action(s) against plaintiff, as alleged above, plaintiff has been harmed in that plaintiff has suffered humiliation, mental anguish, and emotional and physical distress, and has been injured in mind (and body) as follows: _____ (describe injury). As a result of such discrimination and consequent harm, plaintiff has suffered such damages _____ (in the amount of $_____ or in an amount according to proof).]

[15. The above-recited actions of defendant were done with malice, fraud, or oppression, and in reckless disregard of the plaintiff's rights under FEHA. Specifically, _____ (set forth facts showing malice, fraud, or oppression, within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3294).]

[16. No adequate remedy exists at law for the injuries suffered by plaintiff herein, insofar as the employment opportunity that defendant has denied to plaintiff cannot be secured absent injunctive relief. If this court does not grant injunctive relief of the type and for the purpose specified below, plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury. Therefore, plaintiff requests the following injunctive relief: _____ (specify nature and extent of injunctive relief sought, e.g., requiring defendant _____ [name of employer] to hire plaintiff for the employment position plaintiff sought).]

17. On _____ [date that appears on DFEH charge], and _____ [within one year of the date of the discrimination committed by defendant or specify circumstances extending period for filing DFEH charge], plaintiff filed a charge of discrimination with the California Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH). A copy of this charge is appended hereto, marked "Exhibit _____," and is incorporated by this reference as though fully set forth.

18. On _____ [date that appears on right-to-sue letter issued by DFEH], the DFEH issued to plaintiff a notice of right to bring a civil action based on the charge that is "Exhibit _____" to this complaint. A copy of this notice of right of action is appended hereto, marked "Exhibit _____," and is incorporated by this reference as though fully set forth.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment as follows:

1. For back pay, front pay, and other monetary relief _____ [in the sum of $_____ or according to proof];

[2. For general damages _____ (in the sum of $_____ or according to proof);]

[3. For punitive damages in an amount appropriate to punish defendant for its wrongful conduct and set an example for others;]

4. For interest on the sum of damages awarded, calculated from _____ [date that discrimination first began] to the date of judgment;

[5. For preliminary and permanent injunctive relief as specified in Paragraph 16, above;]

6. For reasonable attorney's fees pursuant to Government Code Section 12965(b);

7. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

8. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

_____ [date]
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the plaintiff in the above-entitled action. I have read the foregoing complaint and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters which are therein alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date and place]
_____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use by a plaintiff in an action for damages and injunctive relief against an employer who has discriminated based on a classification protected by FEHA [see Gov. Code § 12965(b)]. It is intended to be a generalized complaint containing the basic allegations required in any FEHA civil action. For illustrative purposes, the complaint alleges that an employer refused to hire plaintiff, a prospective employee, because of the plaintiff's race. However, the complaint may be adapted to allege any unlawful practice (for example, discriminatory refusal to promote or transfer, discriminatory layoff, discriminatory discharge) based on membership in any protected classification (for example, religion, color, national origin, ancestry, physical handicap, medical condition, marital status, sex, sexual orientation, age) [see Gov. Code §§ 12940(a), 12941]. For examples of such allegations, see §§ 115.91 -119.94.

The form of complaint in [1], above, may be used to allege either disparate treatment or disparate impact, or both. Disparate treatment occurs when an employer intentionally treats some employees less favorably than others because of their race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or other protected characteristic [see Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335-336, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) ; Mixon v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1317, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884 (FEHA)] . Disparate impact occurs when facially neutral employment practices and criteria (for example, preemployment tests, education requirements, experience requirements, height and weight requirements) fall more harshly on one group than another and cannot be justified by business necessity [Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335 n.15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII)] . For discussion of these theories of liability, see § 115.23.

For additional forms for use in FEHA cases or cases brought under other employment discrimination laws, see K. Wilcox, ed., California Employment Law (Matthew Bender).

[3] Allegations

The form of complaint in [1], above, alleges all of the following:

- An allegation that defendant is covered by FEHA (Paragraph 1) [see Gov. Code §§ 12926(d), 12940].

- An optional fictitious name ("DOE") allegation (Optional Paragraph 2).

- An optional agency allegation (Optional Paragraph 3).

- An allegation establishing venue (Paragraph 4) [see Gov. Code § 12965(b)].

- An allegation that plaintiff is an adult person, and an allegation of plaintiff's residence (Paragraph 5).

- An allegation that plaintiff is a member of a group protected by FEHA (Paragraph 6) [see Gov. Code §§ 12940, 12941].

- Allegations setting forth defendant's specific conduct violating FEHA (Paragraphs 7-11) [see Gov. Code §§ 12940, 12941, 12945], including a "disparate treatment" allegation (Paragraph 9), and a "disparate impact" allegation (Paragraph 10) [see § 115.23[2],[4]].

- Allegations that defendant's conduct proximately caused injury and damages to plaintiff (Paragraph 12 and Optional Paragraphs 13 and 14) [see Commodore Home Systems v. Superior Court (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 211, 221, 185 Cal. Rptr. 270, 649 P.2d 912 (compensatory damages); Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 853, 856 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988) (back pay and front pay)].

- An optional allegation that the actions of defendants were done with malice, fraud, or oppression, and in reckless disregard of the plaintiff's rights under FEHA (Optional Paragraph 15). This optional allegation, if appropriate under the circumstances, would support recovery of punitive damages [see Civ. Code § 3294; Commodore Home Systems v. Superior Court (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 211, 221, 185 Cal. Rptr.

270, 649 P.2d 912] .

- An optional allegation supporting a request for injunctive relief, such as reinstatement or retroactive seniority (Optional Paragraph 16) [see Johnson v. Civil Service Comm'n (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 585, 591, 200 Cal. Rptr. 289 (order directing city to employ petitioner as firefighter); County of Alameda v. FEHC (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 499, 508-509, 200 Cal. Rptr. 381 (order granting retroactive seniority); Fair Employment Practice Comm'n v. State Personnel Bd. (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 322, 332-333, 172 Cal. Rptr. 739 (order granting retroactive promotion); International Union of Operating Engineers v. Fair Emp. Practice Comm'n (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 504, 510-511, 81 Cal. Rptr. 47 , cert. denied, 397 U.S. 1037 (1970) (order to hire); see generally Civ. Code §§ 3420-3423; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 526, 527].

- Allegations that plaintiff exhausted FEHA's administrative remedies (Paragraphs 17 and 18) [see Gov. Code §§ 12960, 12965(b); see also [6], below].

[4] Prayer

The prayer in the form complaint in [1], above, seeks preliminary and permanent injunctive relief.

In a limited civil case, the court may issue temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions, but not permanent injunctive relief unless authorized by statute; thus, if permanent injunctive relief is sought, the action cannot be brought as a limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(8), 580(b)(2)]. For discussion, a procedural checklist, and additional forms necessary to obtain a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

The prayer also seeks back pay, front pay, and other monetary relief, as well as general damages.

The prayer includes an optional prayer for punitive damages. In a case where the violation of FEHA involves malice, fraud, oppression, or reckless disregard of the plaintiff's rights [see Civ. Code § 3294], the plaintiff might be able to recover punitive damages. If the facts do not involve malice, fraud, oppression, or reckless disregard of the plaintiff's rights, the optional punitive damages allegation (Optional Paragraph 15 of the form of complaint) and the optional prayer for punitive damages should not be used.

The prayer also includes a prayer for attorney's fees. Gov. Code § 12965(b) provides for recovery of attorney's fees in FEHA cases.

[5] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

A complaint seeking preliminary injunctive relief must be either verified or accompanied by affidavits (or declarations under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) in support of the allegations of the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]. If relying on a verified complaint instead of affidavits (or declarations), counsel must plead evidentiary facts that would entitle plaintiff to the relief sought [see E.H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 373, 106 P.2d 1 ; Finnie v. Town of Tiburon (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1, 15, 244 Cal. Rptr. 581] .

[6] Administrative Prerequisites and Procedural Requirements

Before filing a FEHA civil complaint, a plaintiff must exhaust the FEHA administrative process [see Bennett v. Borden, Inc. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 706, 709-710, 128 Cal. Rptr. 627] , and the complaint must allege the exhaustion of those remedies. Thus, a FEHA civil complaint must allege that a timely DFEH complaint was filed and a DFEH "right-to-sue" letter was issued [see Gov. Code §§ 12960, 12965(b)], or the civil complaint may be dismissed [see Myers v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 1059, 1062-1064, 218 Cal. Rptr. 630] . California cases generally hold the administrative prerequisites to be jurisdictional [see Baker v. Children's Hospital Med. Ctr. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1057, 1062, 257 Cal. Rptr. 768 ; see also Stache v. International Union of Bricklayers (9th Cir. 1988) 852 F.2d 1231, 1233 , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 815 (1989) ; Carter v. Smith Food King (9th Cir. 1985) 765 F.2d 916, 921 ; Bennett v. Borden, Inc. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 706, 710, 128 Cal. Rptr. 627 ; but see Grywczynski v. Shasta Beverages (N.D. Cal. 1984) 606 F. Supp. 61, 65-66 (administrative prerequisites operate as statutes of limitation on right to sue)]. For further discussion relating to FEHA administrative prerequisites, see § 115.51[1].

Once the plaintiff has exhausted FEHA administrative remedies (that is, a right-to-sue letter is issued), he or she generally has one year to file a civil complaint [see Gov. Code § 12965(b); but see Gov. Code § 12965(d), (e) one-year period may be tolled under certain circumstances if charges were concurrently filed with DFEH and EEOC); see also § 115.52[1]].

The allegations in the civil complaint need not necessarily be identical to those set forth in the DFEH complaint, as long as they are "like or related to" the allegations in the DFEH complaint [see Baker v. Children's Hospital Med. Ctr. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1057, 1062-1065, 257 Cal. Rptr. 768] . However, the plaintiff may not name any person or entity as a defendant who was not previously named in the DFEH complaint [Carter v. Smith Food King (9th Cir. 1985) 765 F.2d 916, 921 ; see Gov. Code § 12965(b); see also discussion at*§ 115.52[3]*].

The plaintiff must serve a copy of the civil complaint on the principal DFEH and FEHC offices [Gov. Code § 12965(b)]. If the plaintiff fails to do so, he or she may be ordered to comply with this requirement [Gov. Code § 12965(b)].

Although an employee must exhaust the FEHA administrative remedy before bringing a civil action under FEHA or seeking any remedies provided by FEHA, exhaustion of the administrative remedy is not required before filing a civil action for damages alleging nonstatutory causes of action [Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 88, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373] . Thus, for example, exhaustion of FEHA administrative remedies is not a prerequisite to filing a civil action alleging a tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, which is independent of FEHA [see Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 88-91, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 ; see also Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline , for discussion and forms relating to common law causes of action for wrongful termination]. After the FEHA administrative process is exhausted and plaintiff has obtained a right-to-sue letter, the plaintiff may then move to amend his or her wrongful termination complaint to add causes of action under FEHA [see Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 88, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373] .

[7] Jurisdiction

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)]. If the optional language in the form seeking permanent injunctive relief is used, the action cannot be brought as a limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 580(b)(2) (court in limited civil case may not issue permanent injunction unless authorized by statute)].

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case and must state whether the demand exceeds or does not exceed $10,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Gov. Code § 70613(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9),(10)].

[8] Cross References

For alternative forms of allegations for use in conjunction with this form, see §§ 115.91 -115.94

For alternative allegations as to agency, capacity, and residence of parties, and fictitious name allegations, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used

For discussion and forms relating to amendment of pleadings for use when an unknown defendant is sued under a fictitious name, see Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings

For alternative forms of captions and introductions, see Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions

For discussion and forms relating to the format of complaints, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see Ch. 177, Damages

For discussion and forms relating to temporary restraining orders, preliminary injunctions, and permanent injunctions, see Ch. 303, Injunctions

For discussion of jurisdiction in California courts, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal , and Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter

For forms of allegations of infliction of emotional distress, see Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress

For alternative forms of prayers, see Ch. 420, Prayers

For discussion and forms relating to service of summons, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers

For forms of allegations establishing venue, see Ch. 571, Venue

For alternative forms of verification, see Ch. 572, Verification

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
A. Complaint and Allegations for Violations of Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.91

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.91 Allegation for Use in FEHA Complaint--Refusal to Accommodate Employee's or Applicant's Religious Beliefs [Gov. Code § 12940(a), (l)]

[1] FORM Allegation for Use in FEHA Complaint--Refusal to Accommodate Employee's or Applicant's Religious Beliefs [Gov. Code § 12940(a), (l)]

1. Plaintiff's religious creed requires that _____ [state sincerely held religious belief or creed that defendant failed to accommodate, e.g., plaintiff observe the Jewish Sabbath by going to temple on Saturdays].

2. On _____ [date], plaintiff informed defendant of the religious requirement set forth in Paragraph _____, above, and that plaintiff _____ [specify conflict with employment responsibilities, e.g., would thereby be unable to work on Saturdays].

3. From _____ [date], until _____ [date], defendant _____ [name of employer] refused to accommodate plaintiff's religious beliefs and practices in the following manner: _____ [state actions taken by defendant, or action defendant failed to take, that constituted refusal to accommodate religious creed, e.g., defendant insisted that plaintiff work on Saturdays and threatened to discharge plaintiff if he/she did not work then].

[2] Use of Form

The form allegations in [1], above, are for use when an employer violates FEHA by refusing to accommodate an employee's or applicant's religious creed [see Gov. Code § 12940(a), (l); Best v. California Apprenticeship Council (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 626, 634, 207 Cal. Rptr. 863 (employers and labor unions must reasonably accommodate sincerely held religious beliefs of any applicant or employee); see also Gov. Code § 12926(o) (religious creed defined); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.3].

In an appropriate case, these allegations may be used in place of, or in addition to, the allegations in Paragraphs 7-10 of the general complaint set forth in § 115.90.

For discussion of employers' duty to accommodate employees' religious beliefs, see §§ 115.22[6], 115.35[2].

[3] Allegations

The form allegations in [1], above, state that:

- The plaintiff has a bona fide religious belief (Paragraph 1) [see Gov. Code § 12926(o); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.1].

- The plaintiff informed the defendant of the plaintiff's religious belief and that it conflicted with his or her employment responsibilities (Paragraph 2).

- An adverse employment action was taken against the plaintiff because of his or her observance of that religious belief (Paragraph 3) [see Gov. Code § 12940(a), (l)].

If the plaintiff contends that he or she was required to attend a specific observance at a particular time and place, such as a particular pilgrimage, the complaint should allege that the plaintiff's bona fide religious belief included a mandate to be present at the particular observance [see Tiano v. Dillard Department Stores (9th Cir. 1998) 139 F.3d 679, 682-683 (temporal mandate was part of employee's prima facie case)].

[4] Cross References

For a general form of FEHA complaint, see § 115.90

For alternative forms of allegations for use in FEHA complaints, see §§ 115.92- 115.94

For discussion and forms relating to the format of complaints, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
A. Complaint and Allegations for Violations of Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.92

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.92 Allegation for Use in FEHA Complaint--Failure to Accommodate Physical or Mental Disability or Medical Condition [Gov. Code § 12940(a)]

[1] FORM Allegation for Use in FEHA Complaint--Failure to Accommodate Physical or Mental Disability or Medical Condition [Gov. Code § 12940(a)]

1. Plaintiff has the following _____ [physical disability or mental disability or medical condition]: _____ [specify disability or medical condition that defendant failed to accommodate].

2. Defendant _____ [name] was aware of plaintiff's _____ [physical disability or mental disability or medical condition] set forth in Paragraph _____, above, because _____ [state reason defendant was aware of plaintiff's physical or mental disability or medical condition, e.g., plaintiff informed defendant of the _____ (physical disability or mental disability or medical condition) on _____ (date)].

3. From _____ [date], until _____ [date], defendant _____ [name of employer] failed reasonably to accommodate plaintiff's needs based on his/her physical disability or mental disability or medical condition] in the following manner: _____ [state actions taken by defendant, or action defendant failed to take, that constituted failure to accommodate physical or mental disability or medical condition, e.g., Defendant would not accommodate plaintiff's need to leave work when necessary for treatment of the _____ (physical disability or mental disability or medical condition) set forth in Paragraph _____, above].

4. At all times mentioned herein, plaintiff was willing and able to perform the duties and functions of his/her position if such reasonable accommodation had been made by defendant. At no time would the performance of the functions of the employment position, with a reasonable accommodation for plaintiff's _____ [physical disability or mental disability or medical condition] have been a danger to plaintiff's or any other person's health or safety, nor would it have created an undue hardship to the operation of defendant's business.

[2] Use of Form

The form allegations in [1], above, are for use when an employer violates FEHA by refusing to accommodate the needs of an employee having a physical or mental disability or medical condition [see Gov. Code § 12940(a); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.9].

In an appropriate case, these allegations may be used in place of, or in addition to, the allegations in Paragraphs 7-10 of the general complaint set forth in § 115.90.

The form may be adapted for use by an employee whose development of a disability disqualified him or her from the position currently held, if the employer, without undue hardship, could have restructured the job for the employee or found the employee a different, suitable position [see Prilliman v. United Air Lines (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 948-951, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142] .

For discussion of employers' duty to accommodate employees' physical or mental disabilities or medical conditions, see §§ 115.22[8], 115.35[1].

[3] Allegations

The form allegations in [1], above, state that:

- The plaintiff has a physical or mental disability or medical condition (and is thereby protected by FEHA) (Paragraph 1) [see Gov. Code § 12940(a); see also Gov. Code § 12926(h),(i),(k) ("medical condition," "mental disability," and "physical disability" defined)].

- The defendant knew about plaintiff's physical or mental disability or medical condition (Paragraph 2) [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.9].

- The defendant failed reasonably to accommodate plaintiff's physical or mental disability or medical condition (Paragraph 3) [see Gov. Code §§ 12926(n) (definition of "reasonable accommodation"), 12940(m)].

- The plaintiff is able to perform the duties of the job without endangering the health and safety of himself, herself, or others (Paragraph 4) [see Gov. Code § 12940(a)(1),(2)] or causing undue hardship to the operation of defendant's business [see Gov. Code §§ 12926(s), 12940(m)].

[4] Cross References

For a general form of FEHA complaint, see § 115.90

For alternative forms of allegations for use in FEHA complaints, see § 115.91, 115.93, and 115.94

For discussion and forms relating to the format of complaints, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
A. Complaint and Allegations for Violations of Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.93

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.93 Allegation for Use in FEHA Complaint--Harassment, and Constructive Discharge Resulting from Harassment [Gov. Code § 12940(j), (k)]

[1] FORM Allegation for Use in FEHA Complaint--Harassment, and Constructive Discharge Resulting from Harassment [Gov. Code § 12940(j), (k)]

[EITHER]

1. _____ [Defendant _____ (name of employer) and/or Defendant's agent(s) and supervisor(s) _____ (name(s))] engaged in the following actions with the intent of harassing plaintiff on account of his/her _____ [specify protected group characteristic, e.g., race]: _____ [specify in detail actions taken by defendant that constitute harassment].

[AND/OR]

2. Defendant's employee(s) _____ [name(s)] engaged in the following actions with the intent of harassing plaintiff on account of his/her _____ [specify protected group characteristic, e.g., race]: _____ [specify in detail actions taken by defendant that constitute harassment]. _____ [Defendant and/or Defendant's agent(s) and supervisor(s) _____ (name(s))] knew or should have known of these harassing actions because _____ [state basis of actual or constructive knowledge of defendant, its agents, and/or its supervisors]. Despite defendant's _____ [actual or constructive] knowledge of the above mentioned harassment [, and the knowledge of his/her/its supervisors and agents], defendant failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action to stop the harassment. [Furthermore, before the harassment occurred, defendant failed to take all reasonable steps to prevent such harassment from occurring.]

[CONTINUE]

[3. The actions alleged in Paragraph(s) _____, above, caused plaintiff to be constructively discharged from his/her employment, in that any reasonable person in plaintiff's position subject to those actions would have resigned or quit his/her employment, as plaintiff was compelled by those actions to do. Defendant had actual knowledge of the intolerable conditions caused by the acts of harassment alleged above, but failed to take any steps to end those conditions (for the purpose of causing plaintiff's resignation). Furthermore, defendant knew or should have known that plaintiff's resignation would result from his/her/its actions.]

[2] Use of Form

The form allegations in [1], above, are for use when an employee or applicant is harassed because of his or her race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, or age over 40 years [Gov. Code § 12940(j),(k)].

In an appropriate case, these allegations may be used in place of, or in addition to, the allegations in Paragraphs 7-10 of the general complaint set forth at § 115.90.

These allegations may be adapted for use by an employee who claims environmental harassment even though he or she was not the object of harassment. Since the plaintiff in such a case must establish that harassing conduct directed at others permeated his or her direct work environment, the plaintiff must allege that he or she personally witnessed the conduct, and that it was in his or her immediate work environment. The facts pleaded must establish a nexus between the alleged harassment of others, the plaintiff's observations of the harassing conduct, and the work context in which the harassment occurred [see Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 610-613, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842] .

For discussion of harassment as a violation of FEHA, see § 115.36.

[3] Allegations

The form allegations in [1], above, state that:

- Defendant and/or its agents and supervisors harassed plaintiff based on a classification protected by FEHA (Paragraph 1) [see Gov. Code § 12940(j),(k); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b)(2)].

- Plaintiff's coemployees harassed plaintiff, and defendant or its agents or supervisors knew or should have known of the harassment but failed to prevent it or take corrective action (Paragraph 2) [see Gov. Code § 12940(j),(k); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b)(3)].

- Plaintiff was constructively discharged because of the harassment (Optional Paragraph 3) [see Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1248-1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022] .

[4] Liability for Harassment by Supervisors and Coworkers

An employer is strictly liable for discriminatory harassment by its agents and supervisory employees [see Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b)(2); Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 397, 415-416, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457] . An employer is also liable for discriminatory harassment by nonsupervisory employees if the employer (or its agents or supervisors) knew or should have known of the harassment and failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1)] or failed to take all reasonable steps to prevent the harassment [Gov. Code § 12940(k)].

Any employee, supervisor, or nonsupervisor, who harasses a coemployee is personally liable under FEHA for any harassment that he or she perpetrates, regardless of what the employer knows or does about the harassing conduct [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(3); see McClung v. Employment Development Dept. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 467, 475-476, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 428, 99 P.3d 1015 (Gov. Code § 12940(j)(3) does not apply retroactively to impose liability on nonsupervisors for conduct predating its enactment effective January 1, 2001)]. In addition, the harassing coworker may be liable to the harassment victim under other statutes or tort theories [see Carrisales v. Department of Corrections (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1132, 1136-1137, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804, 988 P.2d 1083 (decided prior to enactment of legislation imposing FEHA liability directly on harassing coworker)].

For further discussion of employer liability for supervisors, employees, and nonemployees, see § 115.36[2].

[5] Constructive Discharge

The form allegations in [1], above, contain an optional constructive discharge allegation (Optional Paragraph 3). A court will find a constructive discharge if a reasonable person in the plaintiff's position would have felt that he or she had no reasonable alternative except to quit, and that the employer had actual, rather than merely constructive, knowledge of the intolerable conditions [Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1248-1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022] . Although constructive discharge often is alleged in conjunction with alleged unlawful harassment, this constructive discharge allegation may be adapted for use when a plaintiff is forced to quit because of any discriminatory treatment.

For further discussion of constructive discharge, see § 115.34[3].

[6] Cross References

For a general form of FEHA complaint, see § 115.90

For alternative forms of allegations for use in FEHA complaints, see §§ 115.91, 115.92, and 115.94

For discussion and forms relating to the format of complaints, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
A. Complaint and Allegations for Violations of Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.94

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.94 Allegation for Use in FEHA Complaint--Retaliation [Gov. Code § 12940(h)]

[1] FORM Allegation for Use in FEHA Complaint--Retaliation [Gov. Code § 12940(h)]

1. On _____ [date], plaintiff took the following action: _____ [describe protected action taken by plaintiff for which employer allegedly retaliated, e.g., filed a charge of discrimination with the California Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH)].

2. On _____ [date], defendant's employee(s) _____ [name(s)] took the following action(s) against plaintiff: _____ [describe in detail retaliatory action(s) taken by defendant's employees, e.g., defendant's employee _____ (name) denied plaintiff a promotion to _____ (position), a position for which plaintiff was fully qualified]. The action(s) of defendant's employee(s) _____ [was or were] caused by and _____ [was or were] in retaliation for the protected activity of plaintiff set forth in Paragraph _____, above, in that _____ [state all facts showing causal link between protected activity of plaintiff and alleged retaliatory action, e.g., plaintiff's promotion was denied the day after defendant's employee _____ (name) became aware that plaintiff had filed a DFEH charge].

[If appropriate, add:]

3. Despite defendant's _____ [actual or constructive] knowledge of the above-mentioned retaliation [, and the knowledge of his/her/its supervisors and agents], defendant failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action to stop the retaliation. [Furthermore, before the retaliation occurred, defendant failed to take all reasonable steps to prevent such retaliation from occurring.]

[2] Use of Form

The form allegations in [1], above, are for use when an employer retaliates against an employee because the employee has opposed unlawful practices under FEHA or because the employee has filed a complaint, testified, assisted, or otherwise participated in any proceeding under FEHA [see Gov. Code § 12940(h)]. The form includes an optional allegation for use when the employer failed to take reasonable steps to prevent unlawful retaliation from occurring [see Gov. Code § 12940(k)].

In an appropriate case, these allegations may be used in place of, or in addition to, the allegations in Paragraphs 7-10 of the general complaint set forth at*§ 115.90*.

For discussion of retaliation as a violation of FEHA, see § 115.37.

[3] Allegations

The form allegations in [1], above, state that:

- Plaintiff took an action protected by FEHA (that is, opposed unlawful discrimination or participated in FEHA administrative proceedings) (Paragraph 1) [see Gov. Code § 12940(h)].

- Defendant retaliated against plaintiff because of plaintiff's protected activity (Paragraph 2) [see Wrighten v. Metropolitan Hospitals (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1346, 1354 (Title VII; requirement of causal link between protected activity and retaliation); see also Miller v. Fairchild Indus. (9th Cir. 1986) 797 F.2d 727, 732 (Title VII; complaint must set forth sufficient factual basis to support legal conclusion of retaliation; terminations following soon after protected activity are sufficient)].

- Defendant failed to take reasonable steps to prevent the retaliation (Optional Paragraph 3) [see Gov. Code § 12940(k) (it is unlawful employment practice for employer to fail to take all reasonable steps necessary to prevent "discrimination" from occurring); Taylor v. City of Los Angeles Dept. of Water & Power (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1216, 1239-1240, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 206 (retaliation is form of "discrimination" actionable under Gov. Code § 12940(k), disapproved on other grounds, Jones v. Lodge at Torrey Pines P'ship (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1158, 1173-1174, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 624, 177 P.3d 232].

[4] Cross References

For a general form of FEHA complaint, see § 115.90

For alternative forms of allegations for use in FEHA complaints, see §§ 115.91 -115.93

For discussion and forms relating to the format of complaints, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
A. Complaint and Allegations for Violations of Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 115.95-115.99

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 115.95[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
B. Affirmative Defense Allegations for Use in Answering Fair Employment and Housing Act Complaints

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.100

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.100 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Accommodation Would Cause Undue Hardship [Gov. Code §§ 12926(s), 12940(l), (m)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Accommodation Would Cause Undue Hardship [Gov. Code §§ 12926(s), 12940(l), (m)]

AS A _____ [specify, e.g., FIRST] AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE, defendant alleges that the accommodation sought by plaintiff for his/her _____ [physical disability or mental disability or medical condition or religious (belief or observance)] would impose an undue hardship on defendant in that such an accommodation would _____ [specify, e.g., be unduly costly or burdensome or so restructure the position that essential functions would have to be performed by others].

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages and injunctive relief for employment discrimination in violation of FEHA. It is for use by a defendant who claims that it would cause undue hardship for the defendant to accommodate the plaintiff's disability, medical condition, or religious beliefs [see Gov. Code §§ 12926(s), 12940 (l), (m); 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7293.3, 7293.9; Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 851-852 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988)] .

For discussion of undue hardship, see § 115.35[1][d],[2][d].

[3] Cross References

For forms of other affirmative defenses for use in answering FEHA complaints, see §§ 115.101 -115.107

For discussion of answers to complaints, including forms, see Ch. 26, Answers

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
B. Affirmative Defense Allegations for Use in Answering Fair Employment and Housing Act Complaints

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.101

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.101 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Bona Fide Occupational Qualification (BFOQ) [Gov. Code § 12940]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Bona Fide Occupational Qualification (BFOQ) [Gov. Code § 12940]

AS A _____ [specify, e.g., FIRST] AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE, defendant alleges that the practice alleged by plaintiff to be discriminatory is justified by a bona fide occupational qualification, in that _____ [specify, e.g., all or substantially all (specify protected class, e.g., women) could not perform the duties of the position of _____ (specify) in a safe and efficient manner because _____ (specify reasons), and the essence of defendant's business operation would therefore be undermined if defendant were required to employ _____ (specify protected class, e.g., women) in such positions].

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages and injunctive relief for employment discrimination in violation of FEHA. It is for use by a defendant who claims that a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) exists [see Gov. Code § 12940; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(a)].

A defendant who discriminates against a protected group may assert the BFOQ defense if the defendant can show that all or substantially all of the excluded persons would not be able to perform the particular job safely and efficiently, and the business operation would thus be undermined [see Gov. Code § 12940; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(a); Bohemian Club v. FEHC (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 19-23, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769] .

For discussion of the BFOQ defense, see § 115.54[4].

[3] Cross References

For forms of other affirmative defenses for use in answering FEHA complaints, see §§ 115.100, 115.102 -115.107

For discussion of answers to complaints, including forms, see Ch. 26, Answers

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
B. Affirmative Defense Allegations for Use in Answering Fair Employment and Housing Act Complaints

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.102

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.102 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Business Necessity [Gov. Code § 12940]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Business Necessity [Gov. Code § 12940]

AS A _____ [specify, e.g., FIRST] AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE, defendant alleges that the practice complained of by plaintiff, namely _____ [specify practice alleged in complaint to be discriminatory], is permissible and is not a violation of the Fair Employment and Housing Act, because an overriding legitimate business purpose exists, namely _____ [specify business purpose], which makes this practice necessary to the safe and efficient operation of defendant's business. This practice fulfills such a business purpose and is the only reasonable practice that could accomplish this purpose [, in that _____ (add facts documenting necessity of practice, if desired)].

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages and injunctive relief for employment discrimination in violation of FEHA. It is for use by a defendant who claims that a challenged employment policy or practice was justified by business necessity.

This defense applies to facially neutral employment policies or practices that are challenged under the disparate impact theory of liability. To assert the defense successfully under FEHA, a defendant must show that the policy or practice is necessary to the safe and efficient operation of the business and that no other policy with a lesser discriminatory impact would serve as well [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(b)].

For discussion of the disparate impact theory of liability, see § 115.23[4]. For discussion of the business necessity defense, see § 115.54[5].

[3] Cross References

For forms of other affirmative defenses for use in answering FEHA complaints, see §§ 115.100, 115.101, 115.103 -115.107

For discussion of answers to complaints, including forms, see Ch. 26, Answers

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
B. Affirmative Defense Allegations for Use in Answering Fair Employment and Housing Act Complaints

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.103

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.103 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Job-Relatedness [Gov. Code § 12940]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Job-Relatedness [Gov. Code § 12940]

AS A _____ [specify, e.g., FIRST] AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE, defendant alleges that defendant's practice of _____ [specify testing or selection device claimed by plaintiff to have adverse impact on plaintiff] is permissible under the Fair Employment and Housing Act because it is related to an essential function of the job in question, in that _____ [state facts showing relationship of defendant's procedure to job].

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages and injunctive relief for employment discrimination in violation of FEHA. It is for use by a defendant in a disparate impact case who claims that a facially neutral selection procedure or test was job-related. To establish this defense under FEHA, the defendant must show that the practice was sufficiently related to an essential function of the job in question to warrant its use [see 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7286.7(c), 7287.4(e)].

For discussion of the disparate impact theory of liability, see § 115.23[4]. For discussion of the job-relatedness defense, see § 115.54[5].

[3] Cross References

For forms of other affirmative defenses for use in answering FEHA complaints, see §§ 115.100 -115.102, 115.104 -115.107

For discussion of answers to complaints, including forms, see Ch. 26, Answers

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
B. Affirmative Defense Allegations for Use in Answering Fair Employment and Housing Act Complaints

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.104

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.104 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Employee or Applicant Cannot Perform Duties [Gov. Code § 12940(a)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Employee or Applicant Cannot Perform Duties [Gov. Code § 12940(a)]

AS A _____ [specify, e.g., FIRST] AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE, defendant alleges that defendant _____ [refused to hire or discharged or reassigned] plaintiff because plaintiff, as a result of his/her _____ [physical disability or mental disability or medical condition], is unable to perform the essential duties of the position _____ [for which he/she applied or from which he/she was (discharged or transferred)], in that _____ [specify facts showing plaintiff's inability to perform job duties].

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages and injunctive relief for employment discrimination in violation of FEHA. It is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages and injunctive relief for physical or mental disability or medical condition discrimination in violation of FEHA [Gov. Code § 12940(a)]. It is for use by a defendant who claims that the plaintiff, because of the plaintiff's disability or medical condition, cannot perform the essential duties required of a particular position [see Gov. Code §§ 12926(f), 12940(a)(1),(2)].

For discussion of the defense that a disabled employee cannot perform his or her job, see § 115.54[6].

[3] Cross References

For forms of other affirmative defenses for use in answering FEHA complaints, see §§ 115.101 -115.104, 115.106, 115.107

For discussion of answers to complaints, including forms, see Ch. 26, Answers

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
B. Affirmative Defense Allegations for Use in Answering Fair Employment and Housing Act Complaints

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.105

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.105 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Employee or Applicant Is Danger to Health or Safety [Gov. Code § 12940(a)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Employee or Applicant Is Danger to Health or Safety [Gov. Code § 12940(a)]

AS A _____ [specify, e.g., FIRST] AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE, defendant alleges that defendant _____ [refused to hire or discharged or reassigned] plaintiff because plaintiff, as a result of his/her _____ [physical disability or mental disability or medical condition], is unable to perform the essential duties of the position _____ [for which he/she applied or from which he/she was _____ (discharged or transferred)] in a manner that would not endanger plaintiff's health or safety or the health or safety of others, even with reasonable accommodation, because _____ [specify facts showing danger to health and safety of plaintiff or others from plaintiff's performance of job duties].

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages and injunctive relief for employment discrimination on the basis of disability or medical condition in violation of FEHA [Gov. Code § 12940(a)]. It is for use by a defendant who claims that the plaintiff, because of a physical or mental disability or medical condition, cannot perform the essential duties of the position for which he or she applied, or from which he or she was discharged, without endangering the health or safety of the plaintiff or others, even with reasonable accommodation [see Gov. Code § 12940(a)(1),(2); Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836, 848-851 , aff'd, 860 F.2d 1514 (9th Cir. 1988)] .

For discussion relating to the defense that a disabled employee cannot perform his or her job safely, see § 115.54[6].

[3] Cross References

For forms of other affirmative defenses for use in answering FEHA complaints, see §§ 115.101 -115.104, 115.106, 115.107

For discussion of answers to complaints, including forms, see Ch. 26, Answers

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
B. Affirmative Defense Allegations for Use in Answering Fair Employment and Housing Act Complaints

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.106

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.106 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Waiver of Employment Claims

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Waiver of Employment Claims

AS A _____ [specify, e.g., FIRST] AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE, defendant alleges that plaintiff waived all employment-related claims against defendant by signing, on _____ [date], a written waiver extinguishing his/her right to later bring any action relating to employment against defendant.

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages and injunctive relief for employment discrimination in violation of FEHA. It is for use by a defendant who claims that the plaintiff signed a written waiver extinguishing all of the plaintiff's rights against the defendant with regard to any employment-related disputes [see Skrbina v. Fleming Cos. (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1366-1367, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 481] . A general release that expressly purports to settle claims outside the scope of the workers' compensation system, for example, will ordinarily bar a FEHA claim based on the injury that gave rise to the workers' compensation claim [Jefferson v. California Dep't of Youth Auth. (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 299, 302-311, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 391, 48 P.3d 423 ; but see Claxton v. Waters (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 367, 376-377, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 246, 96 P.3d 496 (standard language of mandatory preprinted form used in settling workers' compensation claims--see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10874--releases only those claims that are within scope of workers' compensation system)].

For further discussion relating to the defense that an employee waived his or her right to bring a claim against the employer, see § 115.54[8].

[3] Cross References

For forms of other affirmative defenses for use in answering FEHA complaints, see §§ 115.100-115.105, 115.107.

For discussion of answers to complaints, including forms, see Ch. 26, Answers

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
B. Affirmative Defense Allegations for Use in Answering Fair Employment and Housing Act Complaints

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.107

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.107 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Avoidable Consequences

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering FEHA Complaint--Avoidable Consequences

AS A _____ [specify, e.g., FIRST] AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE, defendant alleges that at all relevant times, defendant took reasonable steps to prevent and correct workplace sexual harassment; that plaintiff unreasonably failed to use the preventive and corrective measures that defendant provided; and that reasonable use of those measures would have avoided the damages alleged by plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for hostile environment sexual harassment in violation of FEHA. It is for use to assert that all or part of the plaintiff's claimed damages could have been avoided if the plaintiff had used the procedures provided by the defendant to prevent or correct sexual harassment.

Under FEHA, an employer is liable for harassment by a nonsupervisory employee only if the employer was negligent, that is, if the employer knew or should have known of the harassing conduct and failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action [Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1)]. In contrast, the employer is liable without negligence for harassment by a supervisory employee [State Dep't of Health Servs. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1026, 1041, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441, 79 P.3d 556 ; see Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1)]. In either circumstance, however, the employer may assert the "avoidable consequences" defense. To establish this defense, the employer must prove (1) that the employer took reasonable steps to prevent and correct workplace sexual harassment, (2) that the employee unreasonably failed to use the preventive and corrective measures that the employer provided, and (3) that reasonable use of the employer's procedures would have prevented at least some of the harm that the employee suffered [State Dep't of Health Servs. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1026, 1044, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441, 79 P.3d 556]. However, an employee's failure to avail himself or herself of available protections offered by the employer does not provide a complete defense. At most, it serves to reduce the damages recoverable, and only if, taking account of the employer's antiharassment policies and procedures and its past record of acting on harassment complaints, the employee acted unreasonably in not sooner reporting the harassment to the employer [State Dept. of Health Servs. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1026, 1043-1044, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441, 79 P.3d 556 ; Myers v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1403, 1420-1421, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 501] .

For further discussion of employers' liability for sexual harassment, see § 115.36[5]. For an allegation for use in a complaint for sexual harassment in violation of FEHA, see § 115.93.

[3] Cross References

For forms of other affirmative defenses for use in answering FEHA complaints, see §§ 115.100 -115.106

For discussion of answers to complaints, including forms, see Ch. 26, Answers

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
B. Affirmative Defense Allegations for Use in Answering Fair Employment and Housing Act Complaints

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 115.108-115.119

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 115.108[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 115 CIVIL RIGHTS: EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION
PART IV. FORMS
C. Discovery Forms

11-115 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 115.120

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 115.120 Interrogatories for Employment Law Litigation [Cal. Judicial Council Form No. DISC-002]

[1] FORM Interrogatories for Employment Law Litigation [Cal. Judicial Council Form No. DISC-002]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form of interrogatories is an illustrative reproduction of Cal. Judicial Council Form No. DISC-002 adopted by the Judicial Council for optional use in employment litigation, including employment discrimination cases [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2033.710, 2033.740(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.35].

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Cross References

For discussion, a procedural checklist, and related forms, see Ch. 190, Depositions and Discovery .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 116.syn

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.syn Synopsis to Chapter 116: CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS

§ 116.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 116.02 Cross References

§§ 116.03-116.09 [Reserved]

§ 116.10 Governing Statutes

§ 116.11 Discrimination Prohibited by Unruh Civil Rights Act

[1] Scope of Act

[a] Prohibited Discrimination

[b] No Application to Employment Discrimination

[c] Interaction With Constitutional Protections

[2] Liberal Construction

[a] Generally

[b] Persons Not Specifically Listed

[c] Retaliation

[d] Specific Acts of Individual

[3] Intentional Discrimination Must Be Shown

[4] Differential Treatment

[a] Broad Prohibitions

[b] Distinctions Based on Economic Criteria

[5] Association With Member of Group

[6] Plaintiff Need Not Be Customer

[7] Speech May Be Actionable

[8] Single Instance of Discrimination Actionable

[9] Demand for Equal Treatment

§ 116.12 Groups Protected From Discrimination

[1] Groups Specified in Act

[2] Children, Families With Children, and Students

[3] Homosexuals

[4] Additional Groups

§ 116.13 Entities Prohibited From Discriminating

[1] "Business Establishments"

[a] Broad Construction

[b] Reasonable Construction

[2] Associations and Clubs

[a] Distinction Between Public and Private Associations

[b] Businesslike Attributes

[c] Examples of Public Associations

[d] Examples of Private Associations

[3] Legislative Enactments By Governmental Bodies

§ 116.14 Defenses

[1] Limitations on Construction of Act

[2] Building Repairs or Modifications

[3] Reasonable Business Exceptions

[a] Nature of Business

[i] Reasonable Deportment Rules

[ii] Customers with Improper or Disruptive Behavior

[b] Specialized Facility

[4] Public Policy Exception

[a] Compelling Societal Interest

[b] Applicable to Children and Seniors

§ 116.15 Remedies

[1] Independent of Other Remedies

[2] Statute of Limitations

[3] Damages for Unlawful Discrimination

[4] Preventive Relief

[5] Optional Administrative Complaint

§§ 116.16-116.29 [Reserved]

§ 116.30 Governing Statutes

§ 116.31 Discrimination in Business Transactions

§ 116.31A Gender Price Discrimination

§ 116.32 Discrimination in Granting Franchises

§ 116.33 Defense: Building Repairs or Modifications

§ 116.34 Discriminatory Restrictive Covenants

§ 116.35 Sexual Harassment

§ 116.36 Disabled Persons

[1] Statutory Bases for Relief

[2] Civil Code §§ 54 and 54.1

[a] Protections

[b] Definitions

[c] Intent

[d] Broad Application

[e] Standing

[3] Guide Dogs

[4] Remedies

[a] Damages

[b] Injunctive Relief

[c] Optional Administrative Complaint

[d] Attorney's Fees

[5] Access to Public Buildings

[a] Building Standards

[b] Enforcement

[6] Access to Public Accommodations

[a] Standards

[b] Definitions

[c] Exemptions and Exceptions

[d] Enforcement

[e] Construction-Related Accessibility Claims

[i] Applicability of Statute

[ii] Definitions

[iii] Service of Application Form, Notice, and Advisory

[iv] Early Evaluation Conference and Stay

[v] Attorney's Fees and Damages

[vi] Inspection and Certification of Site

[7] Access to Public Amusements and Resorts

[a] Accommodations

[b] Enforcement

§ 116.37 Restraint of Trade

[1] Discrimination Prohibited

[2] Relief

§§ 116.38-116.49 [Reserved]

§ 116.50 Governing Statutes

§ 116.51 Title II of Civil Rights Act of 1964

[1] Scope of Act

[2] Prohibition Against Discrimination in Places of Public Accommodation

[3] Discrimination Required by State Law

[4] Interference With Exercise of Right

[5] Injunctive Relief

[6] Exclusive Means of Enforcement

§ 116.52 Title III of Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990

[1] Generally

[2] Definition of "Disability"

[3] Public Accommodations and Services Offered by Private Entities

[4] Telecommunication Relay Services

§ 116.53 Air Carrier Access Act of 1986

§§ 116.54-116.59 [Reserved]

§ 116.60 Related Matthew Bender Publications

§ 116.61 Federal Constitution

§ 116.62 State Constitution

§ 116.63 Federal Statutes

§ 116.64 State Statutes

[1] Associations and Facilities with Discriminatory Policies

[2] Business Discrimination

[3] Disabled Persons

[a] Access for Disabled Persons

[b] Insurance for Disabled Persons

[c] Public Programs for Disabled Persons

[d] Miscellaneous Protections and Rights for Disabled Persons

[4] Insurance

[5] Real Estate Transactions

§ 116.64A California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI)

§ 116.65 Decisions

[1] Unruh Civil Rights Act

[2] Other State Laws

[a] Disabled Persons

[b] Other Discrimination

[3] Title II of Civil Rights Act of 1964

[4] Americans With Disabilities Act

[5] Air Carrier Access Act of 1986

[6] Preemption

§ 116.66 Attorney General Opinions

§ 116.67 Law Reviews

§ 116.68 Text References

§§ 116.69-116.79 [Reserved]

§ 116.80 Complaint for Damages and Preliminary and Permanent Injunction for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act--General Form [Civ. Code §§ 51, 52(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Allegations

[4] Prayer

[5] Temporary Restraining Order

[6] Verification

[7] Cross References

§ 116.81 Allegations for Use in Complaints for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act--Refusal by Physician to Treat Child

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 116.82 Allegation for Use in Complaints for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act--Exclusion or Expulsion of Person From Association or Club

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§§ 116.83-116.89 [Reserved]

§ 116.90 Complaint for Damages for Sexual Harassment in Business, Service, or Professional Relationship [Civ. Code §§ 51.9, 52(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Allegations

[4] Prayer

[5] Venue

[6] No Action for Conduct Before January 1, 1995

[7] Cross References

§ 116.91 Cross Complaint for Declaratory Relief--Discriminatory Restriction on Real Property is Void [Civ. Code § 53]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Allegations

[4] Prayer

[5] Judicial Notice

[6] Venue

[7] Cross References

§§ 116.92-116.99 [Reserved]

§ 116.100 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering Complaints for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act--Action Required by Law

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 116.101 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering Complaints for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act--Modification of Building Required

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

Dennis M. Farias
Revision Author n*

John H. Scott
Editorial Consultant n*

FOOTNOTES:
(n23)Footnote *. Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases.

(n24)Footnote *. John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976.

Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART I. SCOPE

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.01

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses the Unruh Civil Rights Act, Civ. Code § 51, which prohibits discrimination by business establishments based on sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, medical condition, marital status, or sexual orientation [see § 116.10 et seq.]. This chapter contains a complaint for damages and preliminary and permanent injunction for violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act [see § 116.80].

In addition, this chapter contains the following forms of allegations for use in a complaint for violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act:

- Refusal by physician to treat a child [see § 116.81].
- Exclusion or expulsion of a person from an association or club [see § 116.82].

This chapter also contains the following forms of affirmative defense allegations for use in answering complaints for violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act, Civ. Code § 51:

- Action required by law [see § 116.100].
- Modification of building required [see § 116.101].

Further, this chapter discusses other state laws prohibiting the following kinds of discrimination by businesses:

- Discrimination in business transactions [Civ. Code § 51.5; see § 116.31].
- Discrimination in the granting of franchises [Civ. Code § 51.8; see § 116.32].
- Discriminatory restrictive covenants concerning real property [Civ. Code § 53; see § 116.34]. The chapter contains a form of cross complaint for declaratory relief, seeking a declaration that a discriminatory restriction on real property is void, under Civ. Code § 53 [see § 116.91].

- Sexual harassment in business and professional contexts [Civ. Code § 51.9; see § 116.35]. The chapter contains a form of complaint for damages for sexual harassment under Civ. Code § 51.9 [see § 116.90].

- Discrimination against disabled persons by business entities [Civ. Code §§ 54-55.1; Gov. Code §§ 4450-4458; Health & Safety Code §§ 19952-19954, 19955-19959; see § 116.36].

- Discriminatory restraint of trade [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16700 et seq. (Cartwright Act); see § 116.37].

This chapter also discusses the following federal laws prohibiting discrimination in business establishments:

- Title II of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [42 U.S.C. §§ 2000a-2000a-6; see § 116.51].

- Title III of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA), as well as portions of the ADA dealing with telecommunications relay services for individuals with hearing or speech impairments [42 U.S.C. § 12181 et seq.; 47 U.S.C. § 225; see § 116.52].

- The Air Carrier Access Act of 1986 (ACAA) [49 U.S.C. § 41705; see § 116.53].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART I. SCOPE

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.02

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.02 Cross References

- For a comprehensive procedural guide that chronologically outlines the procedures in a typical civil action brought in a California state court, see Ch. 2, Procedural Guide for Civil Actions .

- For discussion and forms relating to discrimination in government-funded programs and activities, see Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities .

- For discussion and forms relating to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and the other post-Civil War civil rights statutes, see Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

- For discussion and forms relating to prisoners' rights, see Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

- For discussion and forms relating to employment discrimination, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination .

- For discussion and forms relating to housing discrimination, see Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination .

- For discussion and forms relating to interference with civil rights by threats, intimidation, coercion, or violence, see Ch. 117A, Civil Rights: Interference with Civil Rights by Threats, Intimidation, Coercion, or Violence .

- For discussion and forms of jurisdictional allegations for use in federal court, and for discussion and forms relating to removal of actions to federal court, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal .

- For discussion and forms relating to injunctions, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

- For discussion and forms relating to civil rights actions arising from illegal searches and seizures, see Ch. 429, Privacy .

- For discussion of deprivation of civil rights during an administrative investigation, see Ch. 471, Investigations by Public Agencies .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawFederally Assisted ProgramsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPrisoner RightsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawSection 1983 ActionsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART I. SCOPE

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 116.03-116.09

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 116.03[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Unruh Civil Rights Act

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.10

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.10 Governing Statutes

The Unruh Civil Rights Act (the "Unruh Act" or the "Act") is set forth in Civ. Code § 51 [Civ. Code § 51(a)]. Civ. Code § 52 provides for actions for damages and other remedies for violation of the Unruh Act and certain other statutes prohibiting discrimination.

Related provisions concerning discrimination in business transactions and franchises are set forth in Civ. Code §§ 51.5 and 51.8, respectively. A prohibition on discriminatory restrictions relating to real property is contained in Civ. Code § 53. Civ. Code §§ 54-55.1 set forth rights of persons with disabilities. Requirements regarding access to public buildings by individuals with disabilities are set forth in Gov. Code §§ 4450-4458. Health & Safety Code §§ 19955-19959 set forth access requirements to public accommodations by persons with physical disabilities.

As noted, Civ. Code § 51 is the Unruh Civil Rights Act. Nevertheless, many courts discussing related code sections refer to them as part of the Act [see, e.g., Park Redlands Covenant Control Comm. v. Simon (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 87, 93, 226 Cal. Rptr. 199 (discussing Civ. Code § 53)]. This chapter uses the terms "Unruh Civil Rights Act," "Unruh Act," and "Act" in conformity with the technical definition, to refer to Civ. Code § 51. Code sections that are related to the Unruh Civil Rights Act are discussed separately, in Subpart B of this chapter [see § 116.30].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPublic FacilitiesGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPublic FacilitiesRemedies

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Unruh Civil Rights Act

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.11

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.11 Discrimination Prohibited by Unruh Civil Rights Act

[1] Scope of Act

[a] Prohibited Discrimination

The Unruh Act provides that all persons within the jurisdiction of California are free and equal, and no matter what their sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, medical condition, marital status, or sexual orientation are entitled to the full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges, or services in all business establishments of every kind whatsoever [Civ. Code § 51(b)]. Moreover, a violation of these rights of any individual under the federal Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) also constitutes a violation of the Unruh Act [Civ. Code § 51(f); for discussion of Title III of the ADA, see § 116.52]. For related jury instructions, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 3020 et seq. (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions.

Discrimination in housing based on age is governed by Civ. Code §§ 51.2-51.4 and 51.10-51.12 (County of Riverside only) [see Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination].

[b] No Application to Employment Discrimination

The Unruh Civil Rights Act has no application to employment discrimination [see Sprewell v. Golden State Warriors (9th Cir. 2000) 231 F.3d 520, 530 ; Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 77, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373] . For discussion of statutes prohibiting employment discrimination, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination .

[c] Interaction With Constitutional Protections

The rights of religious freedom and free speech, as guaranteed in both the federal and the California Constitutions, do not exempt a medical clinic's physicians from complying with the Unruh Civil Rights Act's prohibition against discrimination based on a person's sexual orientation. Thus, for example, physicians employed by a clinic could not refuse fertility treatments to a lesbian on the basis of the physicians' religious beliefs regarding the particular type of treatment [North Coast Women's Care Medical Group, Inc. v. Benitez (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1145, 1153-1161, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 708].

[2] Liberal Construction

[a] Generally

The Unruh Civil Rights Act is to be given a liberal construction with a view to effectuating its purposes [Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 28, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195 ; Jackson v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 936, 941, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207 ; Winchell v. English (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 125, 128, 133 Cal. Rptr. 20] . The primary purpose of the Act is to compel recognition of the equality of all persons in the right to the particular service offered by an organization or entity covered by the Act [Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 733, 195 Cal. Rptr. 325 , appeal dismissed, 468 U.S. 1205 (1984) , on review after remand, 17 Cal. 4th 670, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 (1998) (Boy Scouts not subject to Act for purposes of membership decisions)].

Thus, the Unruh Act prohibits all arbitrary discrimination by business establishments [In re Cox (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 205, 216, 90 Cal. Rptr. 24, 474 P.2d 992] . Arbitrary discrimination is not limited to exclusionary practices by businesses, but encompasses all forms of unequal treatment of patrons [Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 29, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195 ; see discussion in [4], below]. The prohibition of all types of arbitrary discrimination precludes discriminatory treatment based on generalizations about the class to which a person belongs. Further, an exclusionary practice cannot be justified only on the ground that the presence of a class of persons does not accord with the nature of the organization or its facilities [Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 733, 195 Cal. Rptr. 325 , appeal dismissed, 468 U.S. 1205 (1984) , on review after remand, 17 Cal. 4th 670, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 (1998) (Boy Scouts not subject to Act for purposes of membership decisions); but see discussion regarding limited exception for specialized facilities in § 116.14[3][b]].

[b] Persons Not Specifically Listed

In keeping with the liberal construction of the Unruh Act, the identification of particular bases of discrimination in the Act is illustrative rather than restrictive, and the Act has been construed to prohibit arbitrary discrimination against groups not specifically listed [see In re Cox (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 205, 216, 90 Cal. Rptr. 24, 474 P.2d 992 ; see also § 116.12].

[c] Retaliation

The Unruh Act has been construed to prohibit discrimination that is an act of retaliation against an individual for having previously exercised his or her legal rights [Vaughn v. Hugo Neu Proler Int'l (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1612, 1617-1620, 273 Cal. Rptr. 426 (Div. 5, 2d Dist.) ; but see, contra, Gayer v. Polk Gulch, Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 515, 519-525, 282 Cal. Rptr. 556 (Div. 4, 1st Dist.) (acknowledging different result in Vaughn, and attempting to make factual distinctions between the two cases)].

[d] Specific Acts of Individual

In deciding whether a violation of the Act has occurred, the overriding issue is always whether the denial of equal treatment is on an unjustified ground [see Wynn v. Monterey Club (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 789, 797, 168 Cal. Rptr. 878] . A person may not be discriminated against because of his or her status as a member of a particular class. Discriminatory treatment is not prohibited by the Act, however, if it is reasonably based on the individual conduct of the person [Hubert v. Williams (1982) 184 Cal. Rptr. 161 ; see § 116.14].

[3] Intentional Discrimination Must Be Shown

A plaintiff seeking to establish a case under the Unruh Act must plead and prove intentional discrimination in violation of the Act. The disparate impact test, which permits a plaintiff to establish a prima facie case of discrimination by showing that a defendant's facially neutral policies or practices have a disproportionately adverse impact on a statutorily protected class of persons, does not apply to actions under the Unruh Act [Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1142, 1170, 1175]. Although a plaintiff may not establish discrimination in violation of the Unruh Act through use of the disparate impact test, relevant evidence of disparate impact is admissible on proper foundation and subject to the general rules of evidence [Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1142 ; see Everett v. Superior Court (2003) 104 Cal. App. 4th 388, 392-394, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418 (grant of summary adjudication against plaintiff was improper because plaintiff presented statistical evidence sufficient to support inference that defendant amusement park's facially neutral line cutting policy was applied in discriminatory manner)].

However, a plaintiff who establishes a violation of the Americans With Disabilities Act need not prove intentional discrimination in order to obtain damages for disability discrimination under the Unruh Act in violation of Civil Code § 51(f) [Munson v. Del Taco, Inc. (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 661, 667-678, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 685, 208 P.3d 623 , approving Lentini v. California Center for the Arts (9th Cir. 2004) 370 F.3d 837, 846-847 , and disapproving Gunther v. Lin (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 223, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 317 and Coronado v. Cobblestone Village Community Rentals, L.P. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 831, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 883 , insofar as they hold to the contrary].

[4] Differential Treatment

[a] Broad Prohibitions

The Unruh Civil Rights Act prohibits all forms of stereotypical discrimination. It mandates equal provision of advantages, privileges, and services in business establishments [Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 36, 38, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195] . Thus, the protection of the Act is not limited to discriminatory exclusion, but encompasses all forms of differential treatment, including the following:

- Enforcement of a dress code for men but not for women [see Hales v. Ojai Valley Inn & County Club (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 25, 28-29, 140 Cal. Rptr. 555] .

- Charging women a lesser amount than men for admission or services [see Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 36, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195 ; but see Starkman v. Mann Theatres Corp. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1491, 1495-1501, 278 Cal. Rptr. 543 (age-based discounts not prohibited)].

- Seating only couples consisting of one male and one female in more desirable, semiprivate restaurant booths [see Rolon v. Kulwitzky (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 289, 291-292, 200 Cal. Rptr. 217] .

On the other hand, offering discount admission prices to "baby-boomers" to attend a musical about that generation does not involve an arbitrary class-based generalization protected by the Unruh Act [Pizarro v. Lamb's Players Theatre (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1171, 1174-1176, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 859] .

[b] Distinctions Based on Economic Criteria

Although stereotypical discrimination is prohibited, distinctions made on the basis of economic criteria are not within the scope of the Unruh Act. In accordance with its legitimate interests, a business may justify such limitations on consumer access to its public accommodations so long as the limitations are applied uniformly and neutrally to all persons regardless of their personal characteristics [Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1142, 1161-1162, 1169]. For example, a landlord's policy of requiring that a prospective tenant have a gross monthly income of at least three times the rent was not arbitrary discrimination prohibited by the Act, even though it excluded some persons, mainly women, who were able to pay rent. Businesses, particularly landlords who may lose a substantial amount of money while pursuing eviction proceedings against a defaulting tenant, have an essential interest in obtaining full and timely payment for the goods and services they provide [Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1142].

Another court held that there was no violation in a case involving a commercial landlord's refusal to rent suites in an office building to anyone other than doctors. The court discussed the cases that have held that the Unruh Act prohibits "all arbitrary discrimination by business establishments," and concluded that in fact those cases prohibit only arbitrary discrimination based on personal, as opposed to economic, characteristics [Roth v. Rhodes (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 530, 539, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 706] . The court found that the Act was not intended to prohibit legitimate business decisions, such as those of an operator of a commercial building who wishes to limit tenants to specific categories. As long as discrimination based on profession is not a stratagem designed to disguise discrimination based on personal characteristics, it is not prohibited under the Act [Roth v. Rhodes (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 530, 539, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 706] .

[5] Association With Member of Group

The Unruh Act proscribes not only discrimination against an individual based directly on his or her status as a member of a particular group, but also discrimination against an individual for associating with a member of a particular group [see Rotary Club of Duarte v. Bd. of Dirs. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1035, 1061, 224 Cal. Rptr. 213 , aff'd sub nom., Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474 (association of local club with women); Hubert v. Williams (1982) 184 Cal. Rptr. 161 (association with persons of homosexual orientation); Winchell v. English (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 125, 129, 133 Cal. Rptr. 20 (association with African Americans); see also In re Cox (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 205, 216, 90 Cal. Rptr. 24, 474 P.2d 992 (association with young male with long hair and unconventional dress)].

[6] Plaintiff Need Not Be Customer

A plaintiff need not necessarily be a customer of a business establishment to bring an action against that establishment for discrimination in violation of the Unruh Act [see Jackson v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 936, 940-942, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207] .

In one case, for example, the plaintiff, an African-American investment advisor, had recommended that two elderly clients invest in a particular mutual fund and had accompanied them to the defendant bank to facilitate the transaction. An employee of the bank, allegedly because of her prejudice against African Americans, told the plaintiff's clients that the plaintiff was trying to "pull a scam" on them and urged them not to undertake the transaction. As a result of the employee's statements, the clients left the bank and did not go through with the transaction. The court of appeal held that the plaintiff stated a cause of action for violation of the Unruh Act and rejected the defendant's argument that the plaintiff could not sue under the Act because he was not seeking the bank's services as a customer of the bank at the time of the acts alleged in the complaint. The court noted that the bank accommodated the public in many ways peripheral to its main functions of providing banking services, including allowing persons to accompany its customers and help them pursue their banking business. The court held that when the bank refuses an African American this courtesy because of his or her race, the bank is denying that person the full and equal accommodations, privileges, or services of the bank, inviolation of the Act [Jackson v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 936, 940-941, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207] .

However, a person must tender the purchase price for a business's services or products to have standing to sue it under the Unruh Civil Rights Act for alleged discriminatory practices relating to it [Surrey v. TrueBeginnings, LLC (2008)

168 Cal. App. 4th 414, 417-420, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 443] .

[7] Speech May Be Actionable

The Unruh Act may be violated by words alone. When the speech is meant to, and does, offend the law, although utterance of the words themselves may be constitutionally protected, the speaker will be subject to legal consequences [Long v. Valentino (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1287, 1297, 265 Cal. Rptr. 96 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 855 (1990) ; see Cal. Const., art. I, § 2(a) (responsibility for abuse is part of right of freedom of speech)].

Words that amount to conduct designed to accomplish a direct violation of the law and that are not primarily a means of conveying an idea or point of view may be a violation of the Act [Long v. Valentino (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1287, 1297, 265 Cal. Rptr. 96 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 855 (1990) (police officer was told he must leave assembly because he was police officer)]. However, speech that serves as mere incitement of another to commit a civil rights violation is not actionable under the Act [Long v. Valentino (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1287, 1293-1295, 265 Cal. Rptr. 96 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 855 (1990)] .

[8] Single Instance of Discrimination Actionable

The Unruh Act prohibitions are not limited to discriminatory acts that are routinely committed, or to discriminatory acts that are a matter of policy. Although plaintiff's burden of persuasion may be easier if he or she can provide evidence that the defendant routinely discriminates against the class to which plaintiff belongs, liability under the Act may be established by pleading and proving a single violation [see Jackson v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 936, 942, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207] .

[9] Demand for Equal Treatment

In order to recover under the Unruh Act, plaintiffs who are discriminated against when they present themselves at a business establishment and pay the price of admission need not demand equal treatment and be refused [Angelucci v. Century Supper Club (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 160, 168, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 142, 158 P.3d 718] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPublic FacilitiesGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Unruh Civil Rights Act

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.12

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.12 Groups Protected From Discrimination

[1] Groups Specified in Act

The Unruh Act specifically prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, medical condition, marital status, or sexual orientation [Civ. Code § 51(b)].

Moreover, because the identification of those particular bases of discrimination is illustrative rather than restrictive, any arbitrary discrimination against members of other groups is also prohibited [see In re Cox (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 205, 216, 90 Cal. Rptr. 24, 474 P.2d 992 ; but see Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1142, 1159-1161, 1175 (cautionary language suggesting that Court's preference is to limit scope of Act to groups specified in Civ. Code § 51); see also § 116.12[4]].

[2] Children, Families With Children, and Students

Children, and families with children, are protected classes shielded from discriminatory treatment by the Unruh Act [Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 721, 736-740, 180 Cal. Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 858] .

Children may not be arbitrarily excluded from most businesses. Thus, an ordinance allowing general merchants such as supermarkets, drug stores, and bookstores to exclude unaccompanied minors from their premises in an effort to shield them from the display of certain sexually explicit material violates the Unruh Act. Minors, whether or not accompanied by parents, cannot be denied access to retail establishments that sell a wide variety of literature or the necessities of life, simply because such establishments also sell some materials sought to be restricted [American Booksellers Assn., Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 197, 205, 181 Cal. Rptr. 33] .

Similarly, differential treatment of students by fast food outlets and convenience stores violates the Act. Thus, excluding students from the premises, limiting the number of student patrons, restricting students to certain hours or portions of the premises, or levying a minimum charge on student purchases are all unlawful discriminatory practices against students [see Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 29-30, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195 , approving 59 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 70 (1976) , which interpreted Act to prohibit arbitrary discrimination against students)].

[3] Homosexuals

The Unruh Act prohibits arbitrary discrimination against homosexuals [Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 734, 195 Cal. Rptr. 325 , appeal dismissed, 468 U.S. 1205 (1984) , on review after remand, 17 Cal. 4th 670, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 (1998) ; Hubert v. Williams (1982) 184 Cal. Rptr. 161 ; see Rolon v. Kulwitzky (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 289, 292, 200 Cal. Rptr. 217 (reversing trial court's denial of preliminary injunction enforcing municipal ordinance prohibiting business discrimination on basis of sexual orientation)].

Note that some courts have treated what appears to be discrimination against homosexuals as a distinction drawn on the basis of marital status, and have denied relief under the Unruh Act on this basis [see, e.g., Beaty v. Truck Ins. Exchange (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1455, 1461, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 593 (insurer's refusal to issue joint umbrella policy, reserved for married couples, to unmarried homosexual couple did not state claim for sexual orientation discrimination under Act, since homosexual couple was treated differently than married couple because they were unmarried rather than because they were homosexual); but see Smith v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 1143, 1210 n.7, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 700, 913 P.2d 909 (Kennard, J., concurring and dissenting) (acknowledging that homosexual couples' unmarried status is not matter of voluntary choice)].

The Unruh Civil Rights Act was amended by the Civil Rights Act of 2005 to specifically include both sexual orientation and marital status as prohibited bases of discrimination [Civ. Code § 51(b); see 2005 Stats., ch. 420, § 2].

[4] Additional Groups

The Unruh Act has been construed to apply to several other smaller and more discrete groups not mentioned in the Act. Thus, the Act has been interpreted to prohibit arbitrary discriminatory treatment against any of the following:

- Persons reputed to have an immoral character [see Orloff v. Los Angeles Turf Club (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 734, 740-741, 227 P.2d 449 (decided under predecessor to Civ. Code § 51)].

- Police officers [see Long v. Valentino (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1287, 1298, 265 Cal. Rptr. 96 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 855 (1990)] .

- Persons who receive, or are eligible to receive, public assistance benefits [59 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 223, 225 (1976)] .

- Persons of a particular occupation or marital status [58 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 608, 613 (1975)] .

- Persons with children, based on the number of children [58 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 608, 613 (1975)] .

This list of groups is not necessarily exclusive, but may continue to expand as the Unruh Act is interpreted in additional situations.

Domestic partners registered under the California Domestic Partner Rights and Responsibilities Act of 2003 [Fam. Code § 297 et seq.], the current version of the domestic partnership law, are the equivalent of spouses for the purposes of the Unruh Act. A business that extends benefits to spouses it denies to registered domestic partners engages in impermissible marital status discrimination. On the other hand, while the Unruh Act may also protect the rights of other unmarried couples and unmarried individuals to equal access to public accommodations under some circumstances, distinctions drawn by businesses between married couples and those unmarried couples and individuals that are supported by legitimate business reasons do not constitute impermissible marital status discrimination under the Unruh Act [Koebke v. Bernardo Heights Country Club (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 824, 836-855, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 565, 115 P.3d 1212 (before effective date of Domestic Partner Act, country club's policy of denying same benefits to domestic partners granted to married couples was supported by legitimate business interests, and policy did not facially violate Unruh Act's proscription against sexual orientation discrimination; however, under facts disclosed by record, domestic partners may have had viable Unruh Act claim for discriminatory application of club's policy)]. However, a court of appeal, citing cautionary language in Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1142, 1159-1161, 1175, , has stated that future expansion of categories protected by the Unruh Act should be carefully weighed to ensure a result consistent with legislative intent [see King v. Hofer (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 678, 681-684, 49 Cal Rptr. 2d 719 (Act does not afford protection for nonsmokers because Act not intended to address health and safety issues; nonsmoking is not the type of immutable characteristic usually protected by the Act; business owners might have legitimate business needs to discriminate against nonsmokers); see also Beaty v. Truck Ins. Exchange (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1455, 1461-1465, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 593 (insurer's refusal to issue joint umbrella policy to unmarried homosexual couple, as discrimination on basis of marital status, could be justified by strong state policy favoring marriage, its applicability alike to all persons, and its nonarbitrary nature)].

Another court of appeal found that courts have been reluctant to extend the scope of protection under the Unruh Act since the decision of the California Supreme Court in Harris [see Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 767, 787, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301] . In Brown, the court found that the Unruh Act did not protect against sexual harassment [Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 767, 786-788, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301] . However, in 1994, after the date of the events at issue in Brown, the Legislature enacted Civ. Code § 51.9, prohibiting sexual harassment in business, service, and professional relationships. For discussion of Civ. Code § 51.9, see § 116.35.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPublic FacilitiesGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Unruh Civil Rights Act

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.13

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.13 Entities Prohibited From Discriminating

[1] "Business Establishments"

[a] Broad Construction

The Unruh Act prohibits discrimination in all business establishments of every kind whatsoever. Its use, in Civ. Code § 51(b), of the words "all" and "of every kind whatsoever" in referring to business establishments leaves no doubt that the term "business establishments" should be interpreted in the broadest sense reasonably possible [Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 72, 78, 219 Cal. Rptr. 150, 707 P.2d 212 ; Burks v. Poppy Constr. Co. (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 463, 468, 20 Cal. Rptr. 609, 370 P.2d 313 ; see Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 670, 696, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 ; Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 609-610, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776] .

The word "business" embraces everything about which one can be employed, and it is often synonymous with "calling, occupation, or trade, engaged in for the purpose of making a livelihood or gain" [Burks v. Poppy Constr. Co. (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 463, 468, 20 Cal. Rptr. 609, 370 P.2d 313] .

The word "establishment," as broadly defined, includes not only a fixed location, such as the place where one is permanently fixed for residence or business, but also a permanent commercial force or organization or a permanent settled position as in life or business [Burks v. Poppy Constr. Co. (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 463, 468-469, 20 Cal. Rptr. 609, 370 P.2d 313] . Thus, "business establishment" includes rental housing [Hubert v. Williams (1982) 184 Cal. Rptr. 161] , and has been held to encompass a couple, not otherwise engaged in the real estate business, who rented out their triplex units for gain, even though they maintained no office and employed no persons to assist them in either the rental or maintenance of the property [Swann v. Burkett (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 685, 694-695, 26 Cal. Rptr. 286] .

Consistent with its broad interpretation, the term "business establishment" includes all commercial and noncommercial entities open to and serving the public [see Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 732-733, 195 Cal. Rptr. 325 , appeal dismissed, 468 U.S. 1205 (1984) , on review after remand, 17 Cal. 4th 670, 696-700, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 (1998) (Boy Scouts not a "business establishment" under Act for purposes of membership decisions, but is for purposes of business transactions with nonmembers)].

An organization's status as a nonprofit organization does not preclude it from being a business establishment within the meaning of the Unruh Act [Rotary Club of Duarte v. Bd. of Dirs. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1035, 1051, 224 Cal. Rptr. 213 , aff'd sub nom. Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474] . Thus, "business establishment" has been held to include all of the following:

- A Rotary Club [see Rotary Club of Duarte v. Bd. of Dirs. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1035, 1051, 224 Cal. Rptr. 213 , aff'd sub nom. Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474] .

- A boys' club [see Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 72, 88-91, 219 Cal. Rptr. 150, 707 P.2d 212 (cautioning that finding was based on circumstances surrounding that particular club)].

- A country club [see Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 621-623, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776] .

- Boy Scouts, with respect to transactions between the Boy Scouts and nonmembers at Boy Scouts retail stores and elsewhere [see Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 670, 696-700, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218] .

For further discussion of the application of the Unruh Act to associations and clubs, see [2], below.

For a form of allegation for use in a complaint alleging violation of the Unruh Act against a physician for refusal to treat a child, see § 116.81. For a form of allegation for use in a complaint alleging violation of the Act by exclusion or expulsion from an association or club, see § 116.82.

[b] Reasonable Construction

Although the term "business establishment" is construed in the broadest sense reasonably possible, the Unruh Act does not apply to organizations that are "truly private" [Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 615-618, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776 ; Hart v. Cult Awareness Network (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 786-793, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705] . Generally, when an organization is truly private, forcing it to adhere to the Unruh Act would impermissibly interfere with the First Amendment rights of its members [see Hart v. Cult Awareness Network (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 786-787, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705] .

Courts have a duty to construe the term "business establishment" in the broadest sense reasonably possible [Hart v. Cult Awareness Network (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 792, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705 ; see Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 670, 697, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 ; Randall v. Orange County Council, Boy Scouts of America (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 736, 744, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453, 952 P.2d 261 (Boy Scouts could not reasonably be found to constitute business establishment for purposes of subjecting membership decisions to Act)]. As part of this duty, courts must avoid constitutional infirmity. Accordingly, when treating a group as a business establishment and subject to the Act would interfere with the members' First Amendment rights, or lead to some other constitutional infringement, the courts should not so treat the group [Hart v. Cult Awareness Network (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 792-793, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705] .

However, the mere fact that an organization calls itself "private" does not necessarily preclude it from being a "business establishment" for purposes of the Unruh Act [see, e.g., Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 618-619, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776 ("private" country club that regularly transacted business with nonmembers on its premises was "business establishment" subject to Act)].

[2] Associations and Clubs

[a] Distinction Between Public and Private Associations

The Unruh Act will not be construed to apply to a "truly private" social club or organization [see Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 615-618, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776] .

Put another way, the Act will not be construed to apply to an organization if the application of the Act would infringe on the members' constitutional right to freedom of association. The Constitution protects two separate types of associational interests: intimate and expressive. The intimate associational interest protects the freedom to form and preserve certain kinds of personal relationships or associations as a fundamental element of personal liberty. The expressive associational interest protects the right to associate for the purpose of engaging in those activities protected by U.S. Const., amend. I: speech, assembly, petition for redress of grievances, and the exercise of religion [Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 617-618, 104 S. Ct. 3244, 82 L. Ed. 2d 462 (construing Minnesota Human Rights Act); Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 624-626, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776 ; see U.S. Const., amends. I, XIV; Cal. Const., art. I, § 3].

For purposes of determining whether or not an association is in fact private, and constitutionally protected, rendering the proscriptions of the Unruh Act inapplicable, there is no single test; rather, several criteria are considered. The factors considered include purpose, selectivity of members, and relationship among members. Size, membership policies, and other characteristics are also considered if pertinent in a particular case [Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 620, 104 S. Ct. 3244, 82 L. Ed. 2d 462 (construing Minnesota Human Rights Act)].

The fact that an organization is not selective in its admission policies, and affords membership to a large segment of the public, is not itself sufficient to demonstrate that the organization reasonably can be characterized as the functional equivalent of a traditional place of public accommodation or amusement so as to make the organization's membership decisions subject to the Unruh Act [Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 670, 697-698, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218] . In Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts, the California Supreme Court found that because the Boy Scouts is an expressive social organization whose primary function is the inculcation of a specific set of values in its youth members, its small social group structure and activities are not comparable to those of a traditional place of public accommodation or amusement, and its recreational facilities and activities are complementary to that primary purpose, the Boy Scouts (at any level of the organizational hierarchy) could not be considered a "business establishment" within the meaning of the Act, and were thus not prohibited by the Act from excluding homosexuals from membership [Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 670, 696-700, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 ; see also Randall v. Orange County Council, Boy Scouts of America (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 736, 744, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453, 952 P.2d 261 (Boy Scouts may exclude atheists from membership without violating Act)]. Although the Boy Scouts engages in business transactions with nonmembers on a regular basis through the operation of retail shops and licensing of the use of its insignia, those activities are distinct from the core functions of the Boy Scouts and do not involve the sale of access to the basic activities or services offered by the organization, such as pack or troop meetings, overnight hikes, the national jamboree, or any portion of the extended training and educational process [Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 670, 699-700, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 (Unruh Act would apply and prohibit discrimination in business transactions with nonmembers in retail stores and elsewhere)].

The relationship among members may also be decisive. Relationships that are continuous, personal, and social are indicative of a private association. When the turnover in membership is high or the relationships are based on commercial interests, the organization is not truly private [Rotary Club of Duarte v. Bd. of Dirs. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1035, 1059, 224 Cal. Rptr. 213 , aff'd sub nom. Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474] .

Furthermore, the fact that a club or association regularly allows nonmembers access to its facilities, or transacts business with nonmembers on its premises, may undercut a claim that the club or association is "private" for purposes of the constitutional right of association [see, e.g., Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 629, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776] .

For a form of allegations for use in a complaint alleging violation of the Unruh Act based on exclusion or expulsion of a person from an association or a club, see § 116.82.

For further discussion and forms relating to the constitutional right to freedom of association and membership policies of associations, see Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs .

[b] Businesslike Attributes

If an association is organized for a businesslike purpose, it is not viewed as a private association for purposes of the Unruh Act. Thus, when an association is formed for the purpose of performing acts typically performed by a business, it is a business establishment within the meaning of the Act [see O'Connor v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 790, 796, 191 Cal. Rptr. 320, 662 P.2d 427 (condominium homeowners' association)].

Similarly, when a group's revenues are dependent on its conducting fairly sophisticated business transactions, such as organizing conferences, granting licenses and collecting royalties, publishing magazines and other international publications, and maintaining a large central office, it is viewed as having sufficient businesslike attributes to render it a business establishment within the meaning of the Act [Rotary Club of Duarte v. Bd. of Dirs. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1035, 1051-1055, 224 Cal. Rptr. 213 , aff'd sub nom. Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474] .

Whether or not substantial business benefits accrue to members, regardless of whether they are of a primary or secondary concern, is also considered in deciding whether an association is private and not bound by the Act [Rotary Club of Duarte v. Bd. of Dirs. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1035, 1055, 224 Cal. Rptr. 213 , aff'd sub nom. Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474] . For example, when members receive a variety of goods, privileges, and services as a result of their membership in a club, such as receipt of various publications, the right to display the club emblem, and the right to attend business conferences at which the member learns helpful management techniques and has the opportunity to discuss business problems with experts in the field, those benefits are business benefits [Rotary Club of Duarte v. Bd. of Dirs. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1035, 1059, 224 Cal. Rptr. 213 , aff'd sub nom. Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474] . Additionally, when business concerns are motivating factors for joining a club, as occurs when membership is limited to business and professional leaders in the community, thereby providing a forum that encourages business relations to grow and enhances the commercial advantages of its members, the association is not private [Rotary Club of Duarte v. Bd. of Dirs. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1035, 1058, 224 Cal. Rptr. 213 , aff'd sub nom. Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474] .

Even if an association or club is not primarily organized for a business purpose, it may be treated as a "business establishment" subject to the Unruh Act if it regularly conducts business transactions on its premises with persons who are not members of the association or club [Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 621-623, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776] .

[c] Examples of Public Associations

In Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 72, 219 Cal. Rptr. 150, 707 P.2d 212 , the California Supreme Court found that a boys' club was a business establishment within the scope of the Unruh Act. The Court said the club was a place of public accommodation or amusement because its primary function was to operate a permanent physical plant offering established recreational facilities that patrons could use at their convenience during the hours the club was open. Moreover, the Court found the club was classically public in its operation. It opened its doors to the entire male youthful population without any attempt to select or restrict membership or access on the basis of personal, cultural, or religious affinity, as a private club might. Boys who joined had no power in club affairs and no control over who else could become members, and paid a small fee for the annually renewed membership. The club provided an atmosphere characterizing a public accommodation; relations with and among its members were of a kind that takes place more or less in public view and were of a relatively nongratuitous, noncontinuous, nonpersonal, and nonsocial sort [Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 72, 81, 219 Cal. Rptr. 150, 707 P.2d 212] .

The court in Isbister cautioned that its holding was specifically limited to that particular club, and arose out of its public nature, offering basic recreational facilities to a broad segment of the population (any local boys), and excluding only a particular group (girls) expressly recognized by the Act as a traditional target of discrimination [Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 72, 84, 219 Cal. Rptr. 150, 707 P.2d 212] .

In another case, a plaintiff challenged a "private" country club's practice of excluding women from proprietary membership in the club. The Supreme Court held that the defendant club was a "business establishment" within the meaning of the Unruh Act, because it regularly conducted business transactions on its premises with persons who were not members of the club [Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 621-623, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776] . The court in Warfield observed that the defendant club (1) regularly permitted (on the average of once a week) nonmembers to use its facilities for a fee in connection with sponsored events; (2) obtained income on a regular basis from fees charged for the use of its facilities, and from the purchase of food and beverages on its premises, by nonmember "invited guests;" and (3) received a significant, albeit indirect, financial benefit from regular business transactions with nonmembers conducted at the club's golf and tennis pro shops located on the premises [see Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 621-622, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776] .

[d] Examples of Private Associations

An organization comprised of former cult members, and selected others, devoted to informing the public about the harmful effects of mind control and unethical practices employed by cults was held to be private [see Hart v. Cult Awareness Network (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 786-793, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705] . The pertinent characteristics of the organization in Hart indicated that the First Amendment rights of its members would be infringed if the Unruh Act were applied to require it to accept as members anyone who applied. The organization at issue in Hart was small and had a highly restricted and carefully selected membership. The members had shared opinions, thoughts, and concerns regarding groups it considered to be cults. The organization's purpose was narrow. It did not offer any goods and services to the general public; instead, it offered counsel and support to its very selective membership. Finally, forcing the organization to open membership to groups such as Scientologists would seriously impede its ability to engage in protected activities and to disseminate its preferred views [Hart v. Cult Awareness Network (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 787-793, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705 (membership was sought by members of Church of Scientology, which met group's definition of "cult")].

The Boy Scouts is a private association for purposes of membership decisions and thus not subject to the Unruh Act because (1) it is an expressive social organization whose primary function is the inculcation of a specific set of values in its youth members, (2) its small social group structure and activities are not comparable to those of a traditional place of public accommodation or amusement, and (3) its recreational facilities and activities are complementary to that primary purpose [Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 670, 696-700, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 (Boy Scouts may exclude homosexuals from membership without violating Act); see also Randall v.

Orange County Council, Boy Scouts of America (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 736, 744, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453, 952 P.2d 261 (Boy Scouts may exclude atheists without violating Act)].

[3] Legislative Enactments By Governmental Bodies

Because the Unruh Act, by its terms, bars discrimination only by business establishments, it does not apply to legislative enactments by governmental bodies [Burnett v. San Francisco Police Department (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1177, 1191-1192 (Unruh Act inapplicable to city ordinance barring persons under 21 years from after-hours clubs)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPublic FacilitiesGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Unruh Civil Rights Act

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.14

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.14 Defenses

[1] Limitations on Construction of Act

The Unruh Act will not be construed to confer any right or privilege on a person that is conditioned or limited by law or that is applicable alike to persons of every sex, color, race, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, medical condition, marital status, or sexual orientation [Civ. Code § 51(c); see Beaty v. Truck Ins. Exchange (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1455, 1463, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 593 (Act not intended to create right of insurance so long as insurer's policy is applicable alike to all persons)].

For a form of an affirmative defense allegation to a complaint under the Unruh Act based on the defense that the defendant's action is one required by law, see § 116.100.

What the Act proscribes is any form of arbitrary discrimination. Certain types of discrimination have been denominated reasonable and, therefore, not arbitrary. Thus, a business establishment need not tolerate customers who damage property, injure others, or otherwise disrupt business [Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 30, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195] . Additionally, a business establishment may promulgate reasonable deportment rules that are rationally related to the services performed and the facilities provided [In re Cox (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 205, 217, 90 Cal. Rptr. 24, 474 P.2d 992 ; see Gatto v. County of Sonoma (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 744, 765-769, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550 (county fair's enforcement of dress code to require patron to remove vest bearing insignia of Hell's Angels Motorcycle Club did not violate right to full and equal accommodations under Unruh Act); Hessians Motorcycle Club v. J.C. Flanagans (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 833, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552 (refusing entry to sports bar of motorcyclists wearing indicia of membership in particular motorcycle club did not violate Unruh Act as rationally related to prevention of barroom brawls between members of rival gangs)]. For additional discussion of reasonable business exceptions, see [3], below.

[2] Building Repairs or Modifications

Nothing in the Unruh Act requires any construction, alteration, repair (structural or otherwise), or modification of any sort whatsoever, beyond construction, alteration, repair, or modification that is otherwise required by other provisions of law, to any new or existing establishment, facility, building, improvement, or any other structure [Civ. Code § 51(d)].

The Unruh Act may not be construed to augment, restrict, or alter in any way the authority of the State Architect to require construction, alteration, repair, or modifications that he or she otherwise possesses pursuant to other provisions of the law [Civ. Code § 51(d)].

For a form of affirmative defense allegation, to be used in answering a complaint under the Unruh Act, based on the defense that modification of a building would be required, see § 116.101.

[3] Reasonable Business Exceptions

[a] Nature of Business

[i] Reasonable Deportment Rules

Pursuant to the "nature-of-the-business" exception, a business may promulgate reasonable deportment rules that are rationally related to the nature of the business enterprise and the facilities provided. This exception is an acknowledgment that certain behavior may be appropriate in one setting, but inappropriate in another. Its application is very limited, and the few cases that have held discriminatory treatment to be nonarbitrary based solely on the nature of the business have emphasized the special nature of the business. Therefore, their application to other situations should be carefully and narrowly construed [see Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 30-31, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195] . Indeed, the exception was inapplicable when invoked by the owners of an ordinary apartment complex as a rationale to exclude children [see Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 721, 741, 180 Cal. Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 858] .

When the services rendered by a business are of a particularly sensitive or unique nature, the nature-of-the-business exception may allow them to exclude certain persons with impunity. For example, a cemetery may lawfully exclude persons who would damage property, injure others, or otherwise disrupt funeral services. The Unruh Act does not require the cemetery to admit these persons and wait until they cause a disruption before asking them to leave. Given the sensitive nature of the services offered by the cemetery, a policy permitting private funerals that preclude the attendance of uninvited persons is a reasonable regulation rationally related to the services performed [Ross v. Forest Lawn Mem'l Park (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 988, 992-993, 203 Cal. Rptr. 468] . Thus, a cemetery could safely exclude punk rockers from the funeral of a punk rocker whose mother, the cemetery's client, had requested that the funeral and burial services be private and that only family members and invited guests be permitted to attend [Ross v. Forest Lawn Mem'l Park (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 988, 992-993, 203 Cal. Rptr. 468] .

Similarly, the Act does not prohibit a gambling facility from refusing to admit a woman known to be a compulsive gambler, who had manifested a propensity to gamble beyond her means to the extent of committing what was possibly an illegal act, all of which was having a detrimental effect on her well-being as well as that of her husband. The nature of the business, a gambling establishment, was fundamentally different from other types of businesses in that it was not a form of harmless entertainment [Wynn v. Monterey Club (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 789, 797, 168 Cal. Rptr. 878] .

[ii] Customers with Improper or Disruptive Behavior

A business establishment need not tolerate customers who damage property, injure others, or otherwise disrupt business [Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 30, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195] . Additionally, a business establishment may promulgate reasonable deportment rules that are rationally related to the services performed and the facilities provided [In re Cox (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 205, 217, 90 Cal. Rptr. 24, 474 P.2d 992] .

Although businesses may protect their enterprises from improper and disruptive behavior, the Act requires them to do so directly by excluding those persons who are in fact disruptive. For example, a sports bar could refuse entry to motorcyclists wearing "colors" or patches indicating membership in a particular motorcycle gang, while otherwise admitting entry to those wearing full motorcycle regalia, without violating the Unruh Act, to prevent barroom fights between members of rival gangs [Hessians Motorcycle Club v. J.C. Flanagans (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 833, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552] . Businesses may not pursue a broad status-based exclusionary policy that operates to deprive innocent individuals of the services of the business to which the Act grants all persons access [Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 721, 740, 180 Cal. Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 858] . The significance of the nature-of-the-business exception is that the person's conduct, as opposed to his or her status, may result in exclusion by the business [Frantz v. Blackwell (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 91, 95-96, 234 Cal. Rptr. 178] . Thus, a developer was within his rights to refuse to have further dealings with a real estate broker who had previously tried to profit at the developer's expense, despite a signed contract to the contrary. The exclusion did not single out an undefined group, and was not based on a generalization about a defined group; rather, it was personal, that is, aimed at a particular individual based on his conduct [Frantz v. Blackwell (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 91, 95, 234 Cal. Rptr. 178] .

[b] Specialized Facility

Nothing in the Unruh Act prohibits the exclusion of an entire class whose presence would not accord with the nature of the business enterprise and its facilities. Indeed, limitation of access to members of certain groups may operate in certain cases as a reasonable and permissible means of establishing and preserving specialized facilities for those particularly in need of those services or that environment. The social need served by such a specialized institution, however, must be well documented and established as a matter of public policy. The case for specialization is strengthened if the facility was designed to satisfy the particular concerns and characteristics of the needy group, making it less suitable for general use [Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 721, 741-743, 180 Cal. Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 858] .

In Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson, the California Supreme Court first articulated this specialized-facility exception to the Act. The Court discussed the exception in terms of housing facilities reserved for older persons, emphasizing seniors' special concerns with the physical facilities and the requirement that the facilities be easily accessible, as well as seniors' special social and psychological needs and their financial limitations. A specialized institution designed to meet a special need is fundamentally different from a facility suitable for the general public that seeks to exclude a class based on no particular need [Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 721, 742-743, 180 Cal. Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 858] . For discussion of lawful and unlawful housing discrimination, see Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination .

The specialized-facility defense was unsuccessful for a boys' club with a membership restricted to males between the ages of 8 and 18. The club argued that it was a specialized facility designed and operated solely to serve the particular social needs of boys, and that its primary purpose--to combat delinquency--is an important social interest best served by concentrating on male youth who are four times more likely than their female counterparts to get into trouble with the law. The Supreme Court was unpersuaded, stating that there was no indication that the crafts, games, counseling programs, and recreational facilities offered by the club were suited to or safe only for males. Additionally, there was no evidence that a sex-segregated drop-in recreational facility was more effective in combating juvenile delinquency than one open to both sexes, or that extension of membership to girls would cause an impractical net increase or decrease in membership [Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 72, 88-89, 219 Cal. Rptr. 150, 707 P.2d 212] . However, the Court cautioned that its holding was based on the particular nature and function of that club and that nothing it said necessarily requires a similar result in the case of other single-sex youth organizations [Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 72, 91, 219 Cal. Rptr. 150, 707 P.2d 212] .

[4] Public Policy Exception

[a] Compelling Societal Interest

Absent a compelling public social policy supporting differential treatment, discriminatory treatment violates the Unruh Act [Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 38, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195] . "Public policy" exceptions to the Act are rare and are based on a "compelling societal interest" as reflected in statutory enactments.

For example, it is permissible to exclude children from bars or adult bookstores, because it is illegal to serve alcoholic beverages or to distribute harmful matter to minors. This sort of discrimination is not arbitrary and therefore not prohibited by the Act [Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 31, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658 (furnishing alcoholic beverages to person under 21 years of age); Penal Code § 313.1 (distributing "harmful matter" to minor)].

The fundamental purpose of the Unruh Act is the elimination of antisocial discriminatory practices--not the elimination of socially beneficial ones [Sargoy v. Resolution Trust Corp. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1039, 1049, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 889 (court recognized that not upholding preferential treatment for seniors could place in jeopardy discounts and benefits accorded seniors, thereby profoundly impacting their quality of life)].

The public-policy exception generally has a statutory basis. Arguments to apply it to instances without an applicable statute have been unsuccessful. For example, a private, nonprofit religious corporation that published yellow pages featuring advertisements only of "born-again" businesses and professional people argued that, for public policy reasons arising out of the compelling societal interest of protecting religious freedom, its actions were not prohibited by the Act. However, an appellate court rejected the argument, noting that there was no statutory underpinning, and characterized it as a constitutional argument in disguise [Pines v. Tomson (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 370, 387, 206 Cal. Rptr. 866 ; see Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 721, 741, 180 Cal. Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 858 (exclusion of children from apartment complex, unlike exclusion of children from bars or adult book stores, could not be defended by reference to any statutorily sanctioned restriction on activities of children)].

[b] Applicable to Children and Seniors

Thus far, the public policy exception to the Unruh Act has been restricted to minors and senior citizens [see, e.g., Sargoy v. Resolution Trust Corp. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1039, 1048-1049, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 889 (seniors); Starkman v. Mann Theatres Corp. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1491, 1495-1501, 278 Cal. Rptr. 543 (children); see also Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 38, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195 (not applicable to women); Pines v. Tomson (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 370, 387, 206 Cal. Rptr. 866 (not applicable to "born again" people)].

For example, price discounts for children or senior citizens are permitted, based on social policy considerations as exemplified by numerous statutes providing for different treatment of those groups, as well as a recognition of their frequently limited earning capacities [Starkman v. Mann Theatres Corp. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1491, 1495-1501, 278 Cal. Rptr. 543 (policy does not perpetuate irrational stereotypes, and all members of society will be members of both groups); see Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 37-38, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195] . Moreover, this exception is not limited to price discounts, but extends to other preferential treatment of these groups [Sargoy v. Resolution Trust Corp. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1039, 1045-1046, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 889 (preferential interest rates offered by savings and loan association to seniors)].

Sex-based price discounts, however, are unlawful. Rather than supporting different treatment of men and women, public policy strongly mandates the equal treatment of men and women. Although there are a few instances in which public policy warrants differential treatment for men and women, typically these are based on the constitutional right to personal privacy and involve a sex-segregated facility, such as a public restroom. A discriminatory pricing policy is in no way based on privacy considerations, nor is it justified by any other public policy that might warrant differential treatment based on sex [Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 38, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPublic FacilitiesGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Unruh Civil Rights Act

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.15

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.15 Remedies

[1] Independent of Other Remedies

Civ. Code § 52 provides for actions for damages, sets forth penalties, and generally provides procedures for obtaining relief for violations of the Unruh Act. Actions brought pursuant to Civ. Code § 52 are independent of any other actions, remedies, or procedures that may be available to an aggrieved party pursuant to any other law [Civ. Code § 52(e); see San Jose Country Club Apartments v. County of Santa Clara (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 948, 951-952, 187 Cal. Rptr. 493 (state law not preemptive of county ordinance)].

Civ. Code § 52 contains essentially the same limiting clause concerning modification of facilities as Civ. Code § 51(d) [see Civ. Code § 52(g); see also § 116.14[2]].

The Attorney General, district attorney, or city attorney may intervene in any action for relief from the denial of equal protection of the laws on account of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or disability if the attorney certifies the case to be of general public importance [see Civ. Code § 52(d)].

If parties to a contract agree to submit any dispute under the contract to arbitration, one party may not bring an independent action claiming that a contract provision violates the Unruh Act. The Act does not provide that parties may not agree to submit claims to arbitration [Wolitarsky v. Blue Cross of California (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 338, 345-348, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 629 (claim that health insurance policy imposing additional deductible for maternity benefits illegally discriminated on basis of gender in violation of Act was subject to arbitration, when there was nothing in agreement to exclude claim from scope of arbitration agreement)]. For discussion of the enforceability of arbitration clauses, see Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration .

[2] Statute of Limitations

The limitations period for an action brought under the Unruh Act was the one-year limitations period specified in former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3) for personal injury actions [West Shield Investigations & Sec. Consultants v. Superior Court (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 935, 953, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 612 ; see Gatto v. County of Sonoma (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 744, 754-760, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550 (limitations period for claims under Civ. Code §§ 51, 52.1 is one-year; but there is problem created by lack of clarity as to which provisions of Civil Code actually comprise Unruh Act and Legislature's failure to specify statute or statutes of limitations applicable to provisions of Civil Code commonly thought to be components of Unruh Act); Mitchell v. Sung (N.D. Cal. 1993) 816 F. Supp. 597, 602 (Unruh Act seeks to protect against personal injury, thus one-year limitations period must be applied to Unruh Act claim); but see Olympic Club v. Underwriters at Lloyd's London (9th Cir. 1993) 991 F.2d 497, 501 (stating in dicta that statute of limitations for Unruh Act claims is three year period for actions based on statutory liability provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 338(a)); Kramer v. Regents of the Univ. of California (N.D. Cal. 1999) 81 F. Supp. 2d 972, 977 (applicable statute of limitations for Unruh Act claims is three-year limitations period for statutory claims); Independent Housing Servs. v. Fillmore Ctr. Assocs. (N.D. Cal. 1993) 840 F. Supp. 1328, 1359 (because there appeared to be no common law cause of action for lack of building access, court presumed three-year period of Code Civ. Proc. § 338(a) is proper limitations period for statutory claims other than Unfair Business Practice Act)]. Effective January 1, 2003, Code Civ. Proc. § 340 was amended and Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1 was added to provide that personal injury actions are now governed by a two-year statute of limitations.

When a request for damages from a government agency is not merely incidental to a transcendent interest in injunctive relief but is the primary relief sought, the claim is subject to the Government Claim Act [Gov. Code § 910 et seq.], and the statute of limitation is extended beyond the limitations period otherwise applicable [Gatto v. County of Sonoma (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 744, 760-765, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550] .

[3] Damages for Unlawful Discrimination

Whoever denies, aids or incites a denial, or makes any discrimination or distinction contrary to Civ. Code §§ 51, 51.5, or 51.6, is liable for each and every such offense for the actual damages suffered by any person denied those rights [Civ. Code § 52(a); for discussion of Civ. Code § 51.5, see § 116.31]. For purposes of Civ. Code § 52, "actual damages" means special and general damages [Civ. Code § 52(h)].

In addition to actual damages, the person discriminating is subject to liability for a penalty in any amount that may be determined by a jury or by a court sitting without a jury, up to a maximum of three times the amount of actual damage, but in no case less than $4,000 [Civ. Code § 52(a)]. Thus, any arbitrary discrimination by businesses is per se injurious, and, regardless of the amount of the successful plaintiff's actual damages, he or she is entitled to an award of the statutory minimum amount for every violation of Civ. Code § 51 [Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 33, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195] .

Punitive damages are available when the defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice [see Civ. Code § 3294]. The additional sum specified by Civ. Code § 52 is a penalty that the law imposes in every case, regardless of the circumstances surrounding the discriminatory conduct; that penalty does not exclude the imposition of punitive damages under Civ. Code § 3294 [Greenberg v. Western Turf Ass'n (1903) 140 Cal. 357, 363-364, 73 P. 1050 , aff'd, 204 U.S. 359, 27 S. Ct. 384, 51 L. Ed. 520 (1907) (interpreting predecessor of the Act, Stats. 1893, ch. 185)]. For further discussion of punitive damages pursuant to Civ. Code § 3294, see Ch. 177, Damages .

Attorney's fees in an amount determined by the court are also available [Civ. Code § 52(a)]. A prevailing plaintiff in a Civ. Code § 52 action is entitled to an attorney fee award as a matter of law [Engel v. Worthington (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 628, 630-635, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 526] . For a general discussion of attorney's fees, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

For a general form of complaint for damages and injunctive relief for violation of the Unruh Act, see § 116.80. For a related jury instruction, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 3026 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions.

PRACTICE TIP:

Available Remedies. The Unruh Civil Rights Act is an often overlooked and very effective remedy in non-employment and non-public entity situations. However, in my experience the wrongs that this law was designed to remedy occur relatively infrequently in California. It is now unusual that a store, restaurant, etc. will refuse to provide service to individuals because of their race, gender, etc. In addition, in situations where this does occur, there are usually little, if any, economic damages. Nevertheless, statutory damages are available as well as injunctive relief, punitive damages, and attorneys' fees. By John H. Scott

[4] Preventive Relief

Whenever there is reasonable cause to believe that any person or group of persons is engaged in conduct of resistance to the full enjoyment of any of the rights described in Civ. Code § 52, and that the conduct is intended to deny the full exercise of those rights, any person aggrieved by that conduct may bring a civil action for preventive relief in the appropriate court [Civ. Code § 52(c) (action may also be brought by Attorney General or district or city attorney); see Vargas v. Hampson (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 479, 481, 20 Cal. Rptr. 618, 370 P.2d 322 (aggrieved person may bring action on behalf of all persons similarly situated)]. The complaint should set forth facts pertaining to the conduct, and request preventive relief deemed necessary to ensure the full enjoyment of the rights described in Civ. Code § 52. The relief may include an application for a permanent or temporary injunction, restraining order, or other order against the person or persons responsible for the conduct [Civ. Code § 52(c)].

An action for preventive relief must be brought by an "aggrieved person"; the implication is that a public interest group would not have the requisite standing. Careful pleading, however, may enable such a group to seek injunctive relief under appropriate circumstances. For example, in an unfair competition action, an association acting for the interests of the general public had standing to bring an action for injunctive relief, and, unless otherwise expressly provided, the remedies and penalties are cumulative to the remedies or penalties available under all other laws [see former Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17204, 17205]. Thus, a nonprofit organization of consumers had standing to bring an action for injunctive relief when alleging age discrimination by a housing development when it sued under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. (unfair competition statutes) and the Unruh Act. The plaintiff's standing under the unfair competition statutes enabled it to bring an action for an injunction to enforce the Act [Consumers Union of United States v. Fisher Development, Inc. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1433, 1437-1444, 257 Cal. Rptr. 151 ; see § 116.37]. However, the voters of California by initiative amended Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204, effective January 1, 2005, to delete the provision that allowed an action under the unfair competition laws by any person acting for the interest of the general public, and substituted the requirement that an action may be brought by any person who has suffered injury in fact and has lost money or property as a result of the unfair competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204]. Thus, unless it was able to show that it had suffered injury in fact under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq., the nonprofit organization of consumers that sued under the Unruh Act and Bus. & Prof. § 17200 et seq. would no longer have standing under the unfair competition statutes and therefore under the Unruh Act.

For a general form of complaint for damages and injunctive relief for violation of the Unruh Act, see § 116.80.

[5] Optional Administrative Complaint

Any person claiming to be aggrieved by an alleged unlawful practice in violation of Civ. Code § 51 may also file a verified complaint with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH) pursuant to Gov. Code § 12948 [Civ. Code § 52(f)]. The DFEH administers the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA), under which it is an unlawful practice to deny, or to aid, incite, or conspire in the denial of, rights created by Civ. Code § 51 [Gov. Code §

12948; see Gov. Code § 12900 et seq. (FEHA)].

The DFEH has the power to receive, investigate, and conciliate complaints alleging a violation of Civ. Code § 51. The DFEH also is authorized to issue accusations and to prosecute those actions before the Fair Employment and Housing Commission (FEHC) [Gov. Code §§ 12930(h), 12965; but see Wilson v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1213, 1220-1224, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 419 (FEHC lacks jurisdiction to determine merits of challenge to insurance underwriting decision alleged to violate Unruh Act)].

The remedies and procedures of FEHA are independent of any other remedy or procedure that might apply [Gov. Code § 12930(f)(2)]. Moreover, notwithstanding the Legislature's intent to occupy the field of regulation of discrimination in employment and housing encompassed by FEHA, nothing in FEHA will be construed, in any manner, to limit or restrict the application of Civ. Code § 51 [see Gov. Code § 12993(c)].

Because it is generally understood that the Unruh Act does not apply to discrimination in employment [see Alcorn v. Anbro Engineering (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 493, 500, 86 Cal. Rptr. 88, 468 P.2d 216] , the type of unlawful practice most likely to prompt a complaint with the DFEH involves housing discrimination. It is unlawful for any person subject to the provisions of Civ. Code § 51, as it applies to housing accommodations, to discriminate against any person on the basis of specified characteristics [see Gov. Code § 12955(d)].

If, in addition to filing an action under Civ. Code § 52, a complaint has been filed and remedy pursued under FEHA, the DFEH will terminate proceedings on notification of the entry of the final judgment unless the judgment is a dismissal entered at the complainant's request [see Gov. Code § 12980(a)]. If, under the FEHA procedure, the FEHC finds that an unlawful practice has occurred, no remedy will be available to the aggrieved person unless he or she waives any and all rights or claims under Civ. Code § 52 prior to receiving a remedy and signs a written waiver to that effect [see Gov. Code § 12987(e)].

For discussion of employment discrimination, and the procedures to be followed in pursuing remedies under FEHA for employment discrimination, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination . For discussion of housing discrimination, and the procedures to be followed in pursuing remedies under FEHA for housing discrimination, see Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesCompensatory DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive DamagesCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPublic FacilitiesGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Unruh Civil Rights Act

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 116.16-116.29

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 116.16[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Business Establishments

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.30

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.30 Governing Statutes

Civ. Code § 51.5 prohibits discrimination by business establishments in business transactions. Civ. Code § 51.6 prohibits gender price discrimination. Civ. Code § 51.8 prohibits discrimination in granting franchises. Civ. Code § 53 prohibits discriminatory restrictive covenants in written instruments relating to real property.

Civ. Code § 51.9 prohibits sexual harassment in business, service, and professional relationships.

Civ. Code § 52 provides for damages actions and other remedies for violation of Civ. Code §§ 51.5 and 51.9, as well as Civ. Code §§ 51 (Unruh Act) and 51.7 (interference with civil rights by threats, intimidation, coercion, or violence).

Civ. Code §§ 54 and 54.1 provide for equal access by individuals with disabilities or medical conditions to public accommodations and public places. Civ. Code § 54.2 provides for access to public accommodations and public places for persons with assistance dogs.

Gov. Code §§ 4450-4458 govern access to public buildings by persons with disabilities. Health & Safety Code §§ 19952-19954 govern access to places of public amusement and resort by persons with disabilities. Health & Safety Code §§ 19955-19959 govern access to public accommodations by persons with disabilities.

The Cartwright Act, which governs combinations in restraint of trade, and which contains some provisions dealing with discriminatory business practices, is set forth in Bus. & Prof. Code § 16700 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawDistributorships & FranchisesCauses of ActionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral

OverviewCivil Rights LawPublic FacilitiesGeneral OverviewReal Property LawRestrictive CovenantsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Business Establishments

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.31

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.31 Discrimination in Business Transactions

No business establishment of any kind whatsoever may discriminate against, boycott or blacklist, refuse to buy from, contract with, sell to, or trade with any person because of any characteristic listed or defined in Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e) of the person or of the person's partners, members, stockholders, directors, officers, managers, superintendents, agents, employees, business associates, suppliers, or customers, because the person is perceived to have one or more of those characteristics, or because the person is associated with a person who has, or is perceived to have, any of those characteristics [Civ. Code § 51.5(a); for discussion of Civ. Code § 51(b), (e), see § 116.12].

As used in Civ. Code § 51.5, the term "person" includes any person, firm, association, organization, partnership, business trust, corporation, limited liability company, or company [Civ. Code § 51.5(b)].

Civ. Code § 52 provides the remedies for violation of Civ. Code § 51.5. For discussion of the remedies provided by Civ. Code § 52, see § 116.15.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPublic FacilitiesGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Business Establishments

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.31A

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.31A Gender Price Discrimination

Civ. Code § 51.6, the Gender Tax Repeal Act of 1995 [see Civ. Code § 51.6(a)], prohibits business establishments of any kind from discriminating against a person with regard to the price charged for services of a similar kind because of the person's gender [Civ. Code § 51.6(b)]. However, Civ. Code § 51.6(b) does not prohibit price differences based specifically on the amount of time, difficulty, or cost of providing the services [Civ. Code § 51.6(c)]. Civ. Code § 51.6 also does not alter or affect the provisions of the Health and Safety Code, the Insurance Code, or other laws governing health care service plans or insurer underwriting or rating practices [Civ. Code § 51.6(e)]. Civ. Code § 51.6 does require the following business establishments to clearly and conspicuously disclose to the customer in writing and as specified the pricing for each standard service provided [Civ. Code § 51.6(f)]:

- Tailors or businesses providing aftermarket clothing alterations;
- Barbers or hair salons; and
- Dry cleaners and laundries providing services to individuals.

Violations of the Gender Tax Repeal Act are governed by the same provision that applies to Unruh Civil Rights Act violations [Civ. Code § 52(a)], and claims under the Gender Tax Repeal Act are subject to the same analysis and outcome with respect to the issues of notice and injury [Angelucci v. Century Supper Club (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 160, 166 n.5, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 142, 158 P.3d 718] .

The remedies for a violation of Civ. Code § 51.6 are those provided in Civ. Code § 52(a). However, an action under Civ. Code § 51.6 is independent of any other remedy or procedure available to the aggrieved party [Civ. Code § 51.6(d); see § 116.15 for discussion of remedies under Civ. Code § 52].

For related jury instructions, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 3022, 3026

(LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available as LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPublic FacilitiesGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Business Establishments

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.32

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.32 Discrimination in Granting Franchises

No franchisor may discriminate in the granting of franchises solely on account of any characteristic listed or defined in Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e) of the franchisee and the composition of a neighborhood or geographic area reflecting any characteristic listed or defined in Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e) in which the franchise is located [Civ. Code § 51.8(a); for discussion of Civ. Code § 51(b), (e), see § 116.12]. However, nothing in Civ. Code § 51.8 may be interpreted to prohibit a franchisor from granting a franchise to prospective franchisees as part of a program or programs to make franchises available to persons lacking the capital, training, business experience, or other qualifications ordinarily required of franchisees, or any other affirmative action program adopted by the franchisor [Civ. Code § 51.8(a)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawDistributorships & FranchisesGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Business Establishments

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.33

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.33 Defense: Building Repairs or Modifications

Nothing in Civ. Code § 51.5 or 51.8 (pertaining to business transactions and franchises, respectively) may be construed to require any construction, alteration, repair (structural or otherwise), or modification of any sort whatsoever, beyond that construction, alteration, repair, or modification otherwise required by other provisions of law, to any new or existing establishment, facility, building, improvement, or any other structure. In addition, nothing in Civ. Code § 51.5 or 51.8 may be construed to augment, restrict, or alter in any way the authority the State Architect possesses under other laws to require construction, alteration, repair, or modifications [Civ. Code §§ 51.5(c), 51.8(b)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Business Establishments

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.34

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.34 Discriminatory Restrictive Covenants

Every provision in a written instrument relating to real property is void if it purports to forbid or restrict the conveyance, encumbrance, leasing, or mortgaging of that real property to any person because of any characteristic listed or defined in Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e) [Civ. Code § 53(a); see Civ. Code § 782 (provision in deed of real property in California purporting to restrict right to sell, lease, rent, use, or occupy property to persons having any characteristic listed in Gov. Code § 12955(a) or (d), by providing for payment of penalty, forfeiture, reverter, or otherwise, is void, with exception for familial status as applied to housing for older persons), Civ. Code § 782.5 (deed or other written instrument relating to title to real property, or written covenant, condition, or restriction annexed or made part of deed or instrument, containing provision purporting to forbid, restrict, or condition right to sell, buy, lease, rent, use, or occupy property on account of any basis listed in Gov. Code § 12955(a) or (d) is deemed to be revised to omit provision, with exception for familial status as applied to housing for older persons); for discussion of Civ. Code § 51(b), (e), see § 116.12]. Every restriction or prohibition regarding the use or occupation of real property because of any characteristic listed or defined in Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e) is void [Civ. Code § 53(a); for discussion of Civ. Code § 51(b), (e), see § 116.12].

Every restriction or prohibition, whether by way of covenant, or condition on use or occupation, or on transfer of title to real property, that directly or indirectly limits the acquisition, use, or occupation of that property because of any characteristic listed or defined in Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e) is void [Civ. Code § 53(b); for discussion of Civ. Code § 51(b), (e), see § 116.12].

The scope of Civ. Code § 53 is both broad and comprehensive. The all-encompassing nature of its language, and particularly the overlapping provisions of Civ. Code § 53(a) and (b), indicate a legislative desire to ensure that no gaps in coverage exist. Moreover, even though not a part of the Unruh Act, Civ. Code § 53 is interpreted in a similar manner to effectuate the same general goal of prohibiting arbitrary discrimination [Taormina Theosophical Community v. Silver (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 964, 975, 190 Cal. Rptr. 38 ; see Park Redlands Covenant Control Comm. v. Simon (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 87, 93, 226 Cal. Rptr. 199] . In 2005, the Civil Rights Act of 2005 amended Civ. Code § 53 to prohibit discrimination based on the characteristics specified in Civ. Code § 51(b), (e), thus conforming § 53 with the Unruh Act [see 2005 Stats., ch. 420].

For a form of cross complaint for declaratory relief to declare a discriminatory restriction on real property void, see § 116.91.

For discussion and forms relating to restrictive covenants generally, see Ch. 184, Deeds .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral OverviewReal Property LawRestrictive CovenantsEnforcement

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Business Establishments

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.35

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.35 Sexual Harassment

A person is liable under Civ. Code § 51.9 for sexual harassment if the plaintiff proves all of the following:

- There is a business, service, or professional relationship between the plaintiff and defendant, including, but not limited to, any of the following persons [Civ. Code § 51.9(a)(1)]:
  - Physicians;
  - Psychotherapists, as defined in Bus. & Prof. Code § 728(c)(1);
  - Dentists;
  - Attorneys;
  - Social workers (holders of masters' degrees in social work);
  - Real estate agents;
  - Real estate appraisers;
  - Accountants;
  - Bankers;
  - Trust officers;

- Financial planners;
- Loan officers;
- Persons involved in collection services;
- Building contractors;
- Escrow loan officers;
- Executors;
- Trustees;
- Administrators;
- Landlords;
- Property managers;
- Teachers; and
- Any person in a relationship with the plaintiff that is substantially similar to any of those listed above;

- The defendant made sexual advances, solicitations, sexual requests, or demands for sexual compliance by the plaintiff, or engaged in other verbal, visual, or physical conduct of a sexual nature or of a hostile nature based on gender, that were unwelcome and pervasive or severe [Civ. Code § 51.9(a)(2)];

- There is an inability by the plaintiff to easily terminate the relationship [Civ. Code § 51.9]; and

- The plaintiff has suffered or will suffer economic loss or disadvantage or personal injury as a result of the defendant's conduct, including, but not limited to, emotional distress or the violation of a statutory or constitutional right.

The definition of sexual harassment and the standards for determining liability set forth in Civ. Code § 51.9 are limited to determining liability only with regard to causes of action brought under that statute [Civ. Code § 51.9(d)].

Damages are awarded as provided by Civ. Code § 52(b) [Civ. Code § 51.9(b); see § 116.15].

Nothing in Civ. Code § 51.9 limits the application of any other remedies provided under the law [Civ. Code § 51.9(c); see Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 767, 777-788, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301 (discussing causes of action under FEHA and Civ. Code § 51 (Unruh Act) for sexual harassment in rental housing)]. However, the Unruh Act, Civ. Code § 51, does not itself protect against sexual harassment [Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 767, 788, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301] . Civ. Code § 51.9 was enacted by the Legislature effective January 1, 1995, to plug that hole in California civil rights law [Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 767, 787, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301] .

Civ. Code § 51.9 does not define "pervasive" or "severe." However, by its use of the words "pervasive or severe" in Civ. Code § 51.9, the Legislature intended to incorporate into § 51.9 the liability limitations governing workplace sexual harassment suits brought under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the FEHA [Hughes v. Pair (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 1035, 1044-1051 ; for discussion of Title VII and FEHA and workplace sexual harassment, see Ch. 15, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination]. To be pervasive, the sexually harassing conduct must consist of more than a few isolated incidents [Hughes v. Pair (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 1035, 1048 ; see also Lyle v. Warner Brothers Television Productions (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 264, 284, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 2, 132 P.3d 211].

Because Civ. Code § 51.9 prohibits "solicitations, sexual requests, [and] demands for sexual compliance," it allows a plaintiff to sue for the quid pro quo form of sexual harassment [Hughes v. Pair (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 1035, 1049, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 636, 209 P.3d 963]. To establish quid pro quo sexual harassment, a plaintiff must show that a tangible action resulted from a refusal to submit to sexual demands. However, a claim involving only unfulfilled threats should be categorized as a hostile work environment claim, which requires a showing of severe or pervasive conduct [Hughes v. Pair (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 1035, 1049, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 636, 209 P.3d 963].

Civ. Code § 51.9 does not require that the defendant have a fiduciary relationship with the plaintiff [C.R. v. Tenet Healthcare Corp. (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1094, 1107-1110, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 424].

Principles of ratification apply to a section 51.9 cause of action. Thus, a business can be liable for sexual harassment under Civ. Code § 51.9 based its ratification of the actions of its employees [C.R. v. Tenet Healthcare Corp. (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1094, 1110-1112, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 424].

For a form complaint for a cause of action for sexual harassment in violation of Civ. Code § 51.9, see § 116.90. For related jury instructions, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 3024, 3027 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions.

PRACTICE TIP:

Civ. Code § 51.9. Expect a lot of activity in the future surrounding Civ. Code § 51.9 and sexual harassment outside of the work-place. There are few published decisions. One issue that is yet to be resolved is whether an employer (business establishment) can be vicariously liable for the sexual harassment of an employee. If so, the test that will be applied to establish vicarious liability and the extent to which employers will be required to indemnify employees are unresolved issues. By John H. Scott

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Business Establishments

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.36

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.36 Disabled Persons

[1] Statutory Bases for Relief

The phrase "blindness or other physical disability" was added to Civ. Code §§ 51, 51.5, 51.8, 52, and 53 in 1987. At the same time, restrictive clauses were added to those code sections providing that no modification of facilities, generally, and no modification of real property was required to accommodate the blind and physically disabled. Those statutory amendments thereby entitled a blind or physically disabled person to a cause of action under Civ. Code §§ 51, 51.5, 51.8, 52, and 53, so long as the action was not precluded by the limiting clauses. Consequently, the blind and physically disabled had the rights set forth in Civ. Code §§ 51, 51.5, 51.8, 52, and 53, as well as in Civ. Code §§ 54-55.1 (discussed below), and, when bringing an action for relief, could tailor their pleadings accordingly.

These code sections were subsequently amended further. The phrase "blindness or other physical disability" was changed to "disability," and the restrictive clause regarding modification of real estate was eliminated. "Medical condition" was added to the prohibited bases for discrimination in Civ. Code §§ 51 and 51.5. Other changes were also made to reflect the intent of the Legislature to strengthen California law in areas in which it was weaker than the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) and to retain California law where it provides more protection for individuals with disabilities than the ADA [Stats. 1992, ch. 913, § 1; for discussion of Title III of the ADA, see § 116.52; see also Civ. Code § 51(f) (violation of individual's rights under ADA is violation of Unruh Act)]. In 2005, the Civil Rights Act of 2005 amended Civ. Code §§ 51.5, 51.8, and 53 to prohibit discrimination under those sections based on the characteristics specified in Civ. Code § 51(b), (e), thus conforming those sections with the Unruh Act [see 2005 Stats., ch. 420].

As used in Civ. Code § 51, "disability" means any mental or physical disability as defined in Gov. Code § 12926 [Civ. Code § 51(e)(1)].

"Medical condition" has the same meaning as defined in Gov. Code § 12926(h) [Civ. Code § 51(e)(2)]. For discussion of Gov. Code § 12926, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination .

[2] Civil Code §§ 54 and 54.1

[a] Protections

Individuals with disabilities or medical conditions have the same right as the general public to the full and free use of streets, highways, sidewalks, walkways, public buildings, medical facilities, including hospitals, clinics, and physicians' offices, public facilities, and other public places [Civ. Code § 54(a)].

Individuals with disabilities are entitled to as full and equal access as other members of the general public to accommodations, advantages, facilities, medical facilities, including hospitals, clinics, and physicians' offices, and privileges of all common carriers, airplanes, motor vehicles, railroad trains, motorbuses, streetcars, boats, or any other public conveyances or modes of transportation (whether private, public, franchised, licensed, contracted, or otherwise provided), and to telephone facilities, adoption agencies, private schools, hotels, lodging places, places of public accommodation, amusement, or resort, and other places to which the general public is invited, subject only to the conditions and limitations established by law, or by state or federal regulation, and applicable alike to all persons [Civ. Code § 54.1(a)(1); see Civ. Code § 54.1(a)(2), (3) (defining "telephone facilities" and "full and equal access"); City and County of San Francisco v. Grant Co. (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 1085, 1090, 227 Cal. Rptr. 154] . However, violation of regulations designed to ensure access may not necessarily confer standing on a disabled plaintiff, if the regulations were not intended to prevent the type of injury suffered by the plaintiff [see, e.g., Urhausen v. Longs Drug Stores California, Inc. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 254, 261-266, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 838 (although disabled, plaintiff had no standing under Civ. Code § 54.1 based on defendant's violation of disabled access regulations governing slope of parking spaces, where regulations were not intended to prevent type of accident plaintiff suffered)].

A blind (or otherwise visually impaired) pedestrian has all the rights and privileges conferred by law on other persons in any of the places, accommodations, or conveyances specified in Civ. Code §§ 54 and 54.1, notwithstanding the fact that the person is not carrying a predominantly white cane (with or without a red tip), or using a guide dog. Moreover, that person's failure to carry a cane or to use a guide dog does not constitute negligence per se [Civ. Code § 54.4].

[b] Definitions

For purposes of Civ. Code § 54, "disability" means any mental or physical disability as defined in Gov. Code § 12926 [Civ. Code § 54(b)(1)]. "Medical condition" has the same meaning as defined in Gov. Code § 12926(h) [Civ. Code § 54(b)(2)]. For discussion of Gov. Code § 12926, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination .

"Full and equal access," for purposes of Civ. Code § 54.1(a), in its application to transportation, means access that meets the standards of Titles II and III of the ADA and federal regulations adopted pursuant to it, except that, if state law prescribes higher standards, it means access that meets those higher standards [Civ. Code § 54.1(a)(3); for discussion of Title III of the ADA, see § 116.52].

[c] Intent

In contrast to the Unruh Civil Rights Act, a violation of Civ. Code § 54.1(a) does not require a showing of intent [Hankins v. El Torito Restaurants (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 510, 520 n.4, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 684 ; Donald v. Cafe Royale (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 168, 178-180, 266 Cal. Rptr. 804] .

[d] Broad Application

Violation of a disability access standard is not a prerequisite for imposing liability under Civ. Code § 54.1. The public accommodation law applies to policies as well as to structural impediments. Thus, Civ. Code § 54.1 is violated by policies, not otherwise compelled by law, that deny disabled individuals full and fair access to public accommodations [Hankins v. El Torito Restaurants (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 510, 521-524, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 684 (trial court finding that restaurant was in compliance with relevant structural access standards did not preclude finding of violation of Civ. Code § 54.1(a)); for discussion of public access standards, see [6][a], below].

[e] Standing

Civil Code § 54.3 imposes the standing requirement that the plaintiff have suffered an actual denial of equal access before any suit for damages can be brought. A plaintiff cannot recover damages under § 54.3 unless the violation actually denied him or her access to some public facility [Reycraft v. Lee (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1223, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 746 ; Urhausen v. Longs Drug Stores California, Inc. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 254, 265-266, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 838 (plaintiff's attempt to equate denial of equal access with violation of federal or state regulations would nullify standing requirement of § 54.3, since any disabled person could sue for statutory damages whenever he or she encountered noncompliant facilities, regardless of whether lack of compliance actually impaired plaintiff's access to those facilities and eliminate any distinction between cause of action for equitable relief under Civ. Code § 55 and cause of action for damages under Civ. Code § 54.3)]. Standing under Civ. Code § 54.3 is established when a disabled plaintiff can show he or she actually presented himself or herself to a business or public place with the intent of purchasing its products or utilizing its services in the manner in which those products and/or services are typically offered to the public and was actually denied equal access on a particular occasion [Reycraft v. Lee (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1224, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 746]. If the business or public place does not allow admittance without a fee, a disabled plaintiff would need to show he or she presented himself or herself to the business or public place intending to patronize it and to pay the admission fee to gain admittance to the business or public place as any other customer would do but was actually denied equal access [Reycraft v. Lee (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1224, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 746].

Civil Code § 55 of the CDPA provides the remedy of injunctive relief for deterrence claims, because it allows a disabled plaintiff who is aggrieved or potentially aggrieved to file an action to enjoin the violation [Civ. Code § 55]. Civil Code § 54.3 of the CDPA does not include any express language that could be construed to include deterrence claims. Instead, a disabled plaintiff can file an action seeking actual damages against any person or business that denies or interferes with admittance to or enjoyment of public places [Civ. Code § 54.3]. The difference in the two statutes was intentional, and based on the differences, a court has concluded the statutes as written were intended to provide two distinct remedies to disabled plaintiffs depending on whether they were simply deterred, i.e., "potentially aggrieved" [see Civ. Code § 55], or actually denied equal access. Without more, the statutes when read together appear to provide disabled plaintiffs with a complete legal remedy to achieve the purpose of the CDPA to reduce or eliminate the physical impediments to participation in community life by the physically handicapped [Reycraft v. Lee (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1226-1227, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 746].

[3] Guide Dogs

Every individual with a disability has the right to be accompanied by a specially trained guide dog, signal dog, or service dog, in any of the places specified in Civ. Code § 54.1 without being required to pay an extra charge or security deposit for the dog. However, the individual is liable for any damage done to the premises or facilities by that dog [Civ. Code § 54.2(a)].

Visually impaired or blind persons and persons licensed to train guide dogs for individuals who are visually impaired or blind, and persons who are deaf or hearing impaired and persons authorized to train signal dogs for individuals who are deaf or hearing impaired, and other individuals with a disability and persons authorized to train service dogs for individuals with a disability, may take dogs, for the purpose of training them as guide dogs, signal dogs, or service dogs, in any of the places specified in Civ. Code § 54.1 without being required to pay an extra charge for the dog. However, the individual is liable for any damage done to the premises or facilities by the dog. These persons must ensure the dog is on a leash and tagged as a guide dog, signal dog, or service dog by an identification tag issued by the county clerk, animal control department, or other agency, as authorized by Food & Agric. Code § 30850 et seq. [Civ. Code §§ 54.1(c), 54.2(b) (also providing that violation of right under ADA also constitutes violation of these sections, and that these statutes are not to be construed to impose limitation to access in violation of the ADA); see Civ. Code § 54.1(b) (housing accommodations); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 7200 et seq. (licensing of trainers of guide dogs)].

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, Civ. Code §§ 54-55.1 do not require zoos or wild animal parks to allow guide dogs, signal dogs, or service dogs to accompany individuals with a disability in areas of the zoo or park where zoo or park animals are not separated from the public by a physical barrier [Civ. Code § 54.7(a) ("physical barrier" does not include automobile or other conveyance); see also Civ. Code § 54.7(b)-(e) (additional requirements for owners of zoos and wild animal parks)].

[4] Remedies

[a] Damages

Any person or persons, firm, or corporation who denies or interferes with admittance to or enjoyment of public facilities as specified in Civ. Code §§ 54 and 54.1, or who otherwise interferes with the rights of an individual with a disability under Civ. Code §§ 54, 54.1, and 54.2, is liable for each offense for the actual damages suffered [Civ. Code § 54.3(a) (also defining "interfere" as including preventing or causing prevention of guide, signal, or service dog from carrying out its functions in assisting disabled person)]. In addition to actual damages, the person or entity engaging in the discrimination is subject to liability in an amount that may be determined by a jury or by the court sitting without a jury, up to a maximum of three times the amount of actual damages, but in no case less than $1,000 [Civ. Code § 54.3(a)]. Even when no actual damages have been sustained, if there has been a denial of equal access, the minimum statutory damages are available, regardless of the defendant's intent [Donald v. Cafe Royale (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 168, 177, 266 Cal. Rptr. 804] .

Attorney's fees in an amount determined by the court are also available [Civ. Code § 54.3(a)].

The remedies provided by Civ. Code § 54.3 are nonexclusive, and are in addition to any other remedy provided by law, including, but not limited to, any action for injunctive or other equitable relief available to the aggrieved party or brought in the name of the people of California or the United States [Civ. Code § 54.3(b)]. However, a person may not be held liable for damages under both § 54.3 and § 52 for the same act or failure to act [Civ. Code § 54.3(c); for discussion of damages under Civ. Code § 52, see § 116.15[3]].

There is no federal-question jurisdiction over an action for damages under Civ. Code § 54.1, even though Civ. Code § 54.1(d) makes violation of the federal Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) a violation of state law. Congress intended that there be no federal cause of action for damages for a violation of Title III of the ADA. To exercise federal-question jurisdiction in these circumstances would circumvent the intent of Congress [Wander v. Kaus (9th Cir. 2002) 304 F.3d 856 ; Pickern v. Best Western Timber Cove Lodge Marina Resort (E.D. Cal. 2002) 194 F. Supp. 2d 1128, 1131-1133] .

[b] Injunctive Relief

Any person who is aggrieved or potentially aggrieved by a violation of Civ. Code § 54 or 54.1, Gov. Code § 4450 et seq. (access to public buildings), or Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq. (access to public accommodations), may bring an action to enjoin the violation [Civ. Code § 55; Donald v. Sacramento Valley Bank (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1183, 1191, 260 Cal. Rptr. 49 (private injunctive relief for violation of Civ. Code § 54.1)]. For discussion of Gov. Code § 4450 et seq. and Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq., see [5] and [6], below.

The prevailing party in such an action is entitled to recover reasonable attorney's fees [Civ. Code § 55; see Donald v.

Cafe Royale (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 168, 184-185, 266 Cal. Rptr. 804] . A prevailing defendant may be entitled to an award of attorneys' fees under Civ. Code § 55. While other provisions of California's disability access statutes allow only a prevailing plaintiff to recover attorneys' fees [see Civ. Code §§ 52, 54.3], the plain language of Civ. Code § 55 allows bilateral fee recovery. Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4) provides that the defendant is the prevailing party if dismissal is entered in its favor or if the plaintiff does not recover any relief against it, unless the context clearly requires otherwise. There is no requirement that the prevailing defendant be awarded fees only if plaintiff's claim was frivolous, unreasonable, or groundless [Molski v. Arciero Wine Group (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 786, 790-791, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 574 (trial court acted within its discretion when it determined defendant was prevailing party, where plaintiff obtained none of relief he sought and defendant obtained judgment in its favor on every cause of action)]. However, attorneys' fees may not be awarded to a prevailing defendant if they are precluded by the ADA. To the extent Civ. Code § 55 does authorize the award of fees to a prevailing defendant on nonfrivolous state claims under the California Disabled Persons Act that parallel nonfrivolous ADA claims, the ADA preempts Civ. Code § 55 [Hubbard v. SoBreck, LLC (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 983, 985-987].

In addition to any remedies available under the ADA, or other provisions of law, an action to enjoin any violation of Civ. Code § 54 or 54.1 may be brought by the district attorney, the city attorney, the Department of Rehabilitation acting through the Attorney General, or the Attorney General [Civ. Code § 55.1; see 42 U.S.C. § 12102 (ADA)].

[c] Optional Administrative Complaint

Any person claiming to be aggrieved by an alleged unlawful practice in violation of Civ. Code §§ 54, 54.1, or 54.2 may also file a verified complaint with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH) pursuant to Gov. Code § 12948 [Civ. Code § 54.3(b)]. The DFEH administers the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) [Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.], under which it is an unlawful practice to deny, or to aid, incite, or conspire in the denial of, rights created by Civ. Code §§ 54, 54.1, or 54.2 [Gov. Code § 12948].

[d] Attorney's Fees

Civil Code Section 55, which allows any person aggrieved or potentially aggrieved by a violation of Civ. Code §§ 54 or 54.1, Gov. Code § 4450 et seq., or Health & Saf. Code § 19955 et seq. to bring an action to enjoin the violation, also mandates that the prevailing party in an action to enjoin a violation of disability access requirements be entitled to recover reasonable attorney's fees. The mandatory language in Civ. Code § 55 unambiguously authorizes "bilateral fee recovery" for both the prevailing plaintiffs and the prevailing defendants [Molski v. Arciero Wine Group (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 786, 790, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 574]. Thus, unlike under the ADA, a prevailing defendant under the CDPA may recover attorney's fees under § 55 regardless of whether the plaintiff's action was frivolous [Molski v. Arciero Wine Group (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 786, 792, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 574].

The Americans with Disabilities Act bars awards of attorney's fees to prevailing defendants unless plaintiff's action is frivolous [Hubbard v. SoBreck, LLC (9th Cir. 2009) 554 F.3d 742, 744]. However, when a plaintiff makes parallel claims for injunctive relief under the ADA and Civ. Code § 55, and the defendant prevails on the ADA claim for the same reasons defendant prevails on the CDPA claim, the mandatory language of Civ. Code § 55 requires an award of attorney's fees to the prevailing defendant whether or not plaintiff's claim was frivolous [Jankey v. Lee (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 1173, 1183-1187, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 290; but see Hubbard v. SoBreck, LLC (9th Cir. 2009) 554 F.3d 742, 745 (because proof required to establish violation of CDPA and ADA is identical, and it is impossible to distinguish fees necessary to defend against CDPA claim from those expended in defense of ADA claim, grant of fees on California cause of action is necessarily grant of fees as to ADA claim; because ADA bars fees to defendants for nonfrivolous actions, preemption principles preclude imposition of fees on plaintiff for bringing nonfrivolous claims under state law that parallel claims also filed pursuant to federal law)].

The normal standard of review regarding an attorney's fees award is abuse of discretion. However, discretion may not be exercised whimsically, and reversal is required when there is no reasonable basis for the ruling or when the trial court has applied the wrong test to determine if the statutory requirements were satisfied [Jankey v. Lee (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 1173, 1179, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 290].

[5] Access to Public Buildings

[a] Building Standards

Gov. Code §§ 4450-4460 govern access to public buildings by persons with disabilities, and are intended to ensure that all buildings, structures, sidewalks, curbs, and related facilities constructed in California by the use of public monies are accessible to and usable by persons with disabilities.

The State Architect is required to develop and submit for approval proposed building standards, and develop other regulations for making buildings, structures, sidewalks, curbs, and related facilities accessible to and usable by persons with disabilities [see Gov. Code § 4450(b); see also Health & Safety Code § 18935 et seq. (State Building Standards Code)]. In no case shall the State Architect's regulations and building standards prescribe a lesser standard of accessibility or usability than that provided by the Accessibility Guidelines prepared by the federal Access Board as adopted by the United States Department of Justice to implement the ADA [Gov. Code § 4450(c); cf. Berkeley Center for Independent Living v. Coyle (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 874, 878-879, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 39 (Department of Housing and Community Development regulation, defining "publicly funded" to not include loans, grants, guarantees, or other assistance from a public agency to finance privately owned buildings, violated Gov. Code § 4450 requirement that all buildings constructed using public funds be accessible to disabled persons)].

Except as otherwise provided by law, buildings, structures, sidewalks, curbs, and related facilities subject to the provisions of Gov. Code § 4450 et seq. or Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq. (access to public accommodations) must conform to the standards of the California Building Standards Code and other regulations for making buildings, structures, sidewalks, curbs, and related facilities accessible to and usable by persons with disabilities that are in effect on the date of an application for a building permit. With respect to buildings, structures, sidewalks, curbs, and related facilities not requiring a building permit, building standards published in the California Building Standards Code relating to access for persons with disabilities and other regulations adopted pursuant to Gov. Code § 4450 in effect at the time construction is commenced are applicable [Gov. Code § 4451(c); for discussion of Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq., see [6], below]. Until building standards are published in the California Building Standards Code and other regulations are developed by the State Architect and adopted by the California Building Standards Commission pursuant to Gov. Code § 4450, buildings, structures, sidewalks, curbs, and related facilities subject to the provisions of Gov. Code § 4450 et seq. or Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq. must meet or exceed the requirements of the ADA [Gov. Code § 4451(d)].

[b] Enforcement

The provisions of Gov. Code § 4450 et seq. are enforced by both of the following entities [Gov. Code § 4453]:

- The Director of the Department of General Services, if state funds are utilized for any project or if funds of other public entities are utilized for the construction of school projects; and

- The governing bodies of the public entity whose funds are utilized, except for the construction of school projects.

The administrative authorities charged with enforcement may grant exceptions from the literal requirements of the applicable building standards or regulations, or permit the use of other methods or materials, but only when it is clearly evident that equivalent facilitation and protection that meets or exceeds the requirements under federal law are thereby secured [Gov. Code § 4451(f)].

The district attorney, the county counsel if the district attorney does not bring an action, the city attorney, or the Attorney General may bring an action to enjoin a violation of Gov. Code § 4450 et seq. [Gov. Code § 4458].

Additionally, any person who is aggrieved or potentially aggrieved by a violation of Gov. Code § 4450 et seq. may seek injunctive relief [Civ. Code § 55, discussed in [4][b], above; see also Health & Safety Code § 19953, discussed in [7][b], below].

[6] Access to Public Accommodations

[a] Standards

Health & Safety Code §§ 19955-19959 govern access to public accommodations by persons with physical disabilities, and are intended to ensure that public accommodations or facilities constructed with private funds adhere to the provisions of Gov. Code § 4450 et seq. [Health & Safety Code § 19955(a); see [5], above]. Any curb or sidewalk intended for public use, and all passenger vehicle service stations, shopping centers, offices of physicians and surgeons, and office buildings constructed with private funds must also adhere to those provisions [see Health & Safety Code §§ 19955.5, 19956.5].

All sanitary facilities made available for the public, clients, or employees in public accommodations or facilities, passenger vehicle service stations, shopping centers, offices of physicians and surgeons, and office buildings constructed with private funds must be made available for persons with disabilities [Health & Safety Code §§ 19955(a), 19955.5].

[b] Definitions

For purposes of Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq., "public accommodation or facilities" means a building, structure, facility, complex, or improved area that is used by the general public and includes auditoriums, hospitals, theaters, restaurants, hotels, motels, stadiums, and convention centers [Health & Safety Code § 19955(a) ("hospitals" includes, but is not limited to, hospitals, nursing homes, and convalescent homes); see Donald v. Sacramento Valley Bank (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1183, 1195, 260 Cal. Rptr. 49 (automatic teller machine as public facility)].

As used in Health & Safety Code § 19955.5, "office building" means a structure in which commercial activity or service is performed or a profession is practiced, or in which any combination thereof is performed or practiced in all or the majority of the building or structure [Health & Safety Code § 19955.5].

[c] Exemptions and Exceptions

In those public accommodations that are privately funded multistoried buildings, accessibility by ramp or elevator above and below the first floor is not required for either of the following [Health & Safety Code § 19956]:

- Multistoried office buildings, other than the professional office of a health care provider, and passenger vehicle service stations less than three stories high, or less than 3,000 square feet per story; or

- Any other privately funded multistoried building that is not a shopping center, shopping mall, or the professional office of a health care provider, and that is less than three stories high or less than 3,000 square feet per story if a reasonable portion of all facilities and accommodations normally sought and used by the public in such a building are accessible to and usable by persons with disabilities.

Every existing public accommodation constructed prior to July 1, 1970, that is not exempted by Health & Safety Code §

19956 is subject to the requirements of Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq. when any alterations, structural repairs or additions are made. This requirement only applies to the area of specific alteration, structural repair, or addition; it does not mean that the entire building or facility is subject to Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq. [Health & Safety Code § 19959].

In cases of practical difficulty, unnecessary hardship, or extreme differences, a building department responsible for the enforcement of Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq. may grant exceptions from the literal requirements of the applicable standards and specifications or may permit the use of other methods or materials, but only if it is clearly evident that equivalent facilitations and protection are thereby secured [Health & Safety Code § 19957]. Granting an exception when there is no showing of practical difficulty, unnecessary hardship, extreme differences, or equivalent facilitation may be an abuse of discretion [People ex rel. Deukmejian v. CHE, Inc. (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 123, 137].

[d] Enforcement

Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq., as well as Gov. Code § 4450 et seq., as applied under Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq., are enforced by the building department of the city, county, or city and county within which the facility or structure is located [see Health & Safety Code § 19958]. Every city, county, or city and county may appoint a local appeals board to hear written appeals of any action taken by the local building department [see Health & Safety Code § 19957.5].

The district attorney, the county counsel if the district attorney does not bring an action, the city attorney, the Department of Rehabilitation acting through the Attorney General, or the Attorney General may bring an action to enjoin a violation of Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq. [Health & Safety Code § 19958.5]. Additionally, any person who is aggrieved or potentially aggrieved by a violation of Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq. may seek injunctive relief [Civ. Code § 55, discussed in [4][b], above; see also Health & Safety Code § 19953, discussed in [7][b], below].

[e] Construction-Related Accessibility Claims

[i] Applicability of Statute

The Construction-Related Accessibility Standards Compliance Act [Civ. Code § 55.51 et seq.], applies to any construction-related accessibility claim, including, but not limited to, any claim brought under Civ. Code §§ 51, 54, 54.1, or 55 [Civ. Code § 55.51]. It applies only to claims filed on or after January 1, 2009. Nothing in the Act is intended to affect litigation filed before that date [Civ. Code §§ 55.54(o), 55.57(a)]. Nothing in the Act is intended to affect existing law regarding class action requirements [Civ. Code §§ 55.54(p), 55.57(b)].

[ii] Definitions

For these purposes, a "construction-related accessibility claim" is any civil claim in a civil action with respect to a place of public accommodation, including, but not limited to, a claim brought under Civ. Code §§ 51, 54, 54.1, or 55, based wholly or in part on an alleged violation of any construction-related accessibility standard [Civ. Code § 55.52(1)]. A "construction-related accessibility standard" is a provision, standard, or regulation under state or federal law requiring compliance with standards for making new construction and existing facilities accessible to persons with disabilities, including, but not limited to, any such provision, standard, or regulation set forth in Civ. Code §§ 51, 54, 54.1, or 55, Health & Safety Code § 19955.5, the California Building Standards Code [Title 24 of Cal. Code Reg.], the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 [42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.], and the Americans with Disabilities Act Accessibility Guidelines [Civ. Code § 55.52(6); s ee 28 C.F.R. Part 36, Appendix A]. "Place of public accommodation" has the same meaning as "public accommodation" in 42 U.S.C. § 12181(7) and the federal regulations adopted pursuant to that section [Civ. Code § 55.52(7)], and "site" means a place of public accommodation [Civ. Code § 55.52(9)].

A "certified access specialist" or "CASp" is any person who has been certified pursuant to Gov. Code § 4459.5 [Civ.

Code § 55.52(3)]. "CASp-inspected" means the site was inspected by a CASp and determined to meet all applicable construction-related accessibility standards [Civ. Code § 55.52(4); see Civ. Code § 55.53(a)(1)]. "CASp determination pending" means the site was inspected by a CASp and is pending a determination by the CASp that the site meets applicable construction-related accessibility standards [Civ. Code § 55.52(5); see Civ. Code § 55.53(a)(2)].

A "qualified defendant" is a defendant in an action that includes a construction-related accessibility claim asserted against a place of public accommodation meeting the requirements of "CASp-inspected" or "CASp determination pending" prior to the date the defendant was served with the summons and complaint in that action. To be a qualified defendant, the defendant is not required to have been the party who hired a CASp, so long as the basis of the alleged liability of the defendant is a construction-related accessibility claim. To determine whether a defendant is a qualified defendant, the court need not make a finding that the place of public accommodation complies with all applicable construction-related accessibility standards as a matter of law. The court need only determine that the place of public accommodation has a status of "CASp-inspected" or "CASp determination pending" [Civ. Code § 55.52(8)].

A "complaint" is a civil complaint filed or to be filed with a court and sent to or served upon a defendant on the basis of one or more construction-related accessibility claims [Civ. Code § 55.3(a)(1)]. A "demand for money" is a written document provided to a building owner or tenant, or an agent or employee of a building owner or tenant, containing a request for money on the basis of one or more construction-related accessibility claims [Civ. Code § 55.3(a)(2)]. A "construction-related accessibility claim" is a claim of a violation of any construction-related accessibility standard with respect to a place of public accommodation. "Construction-related accessibility claim" does not include a claim of interference with housing within the meaning of Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(2) or a claim of interference caused by something other than the construction-related accessibility condition of the property, including, but not limited to, the conduct of any person [Civ. Code § 55.3(a)(3)].

[iii] Service of Application Form, Notice, and Advisory

An attorney who causes a summons and complaint to be served in an action that includes a construction-related accessibility claim, including, but not limited to, a claim brought under Civ. Code §§ 51, 54, 54.1, or 55, must, at the same time, cause to be served a copy of the application form [see Civ. Code § 55.54(c)], and a copy of the following notice to the defendant on separate papers that shall be served with the summons and complaint [Civ. Code § 55.54(a)(1)]:

NOTICE TO DEFENDANT

YOU MAY BE ENTITLED TO ASK FOR A STAY (TEMPORARY STOPPAGE) AND EARLY EVALUATION CONFERENCE IN THIS LAWSUIT.

If the construction-related accessibility claim pertains to a site that has been inspected by a Certified Access Specialist (CASp) and you have an inspection report for that site, you may make an immediate request for a court stay and early evaluation conference in the construction-related accessibility claim by filing the attached application form with the court. You may be entitled to the court stay and early evaluation conference regarding the accessibility claim only if ALL of the statements in the application form are true.

The court will schedule the conference to be held within 50 days after you file the attached application form. The court will also issue an immediate stay of the proceedings unless the plaintiff has obtained a temporary restraining order in the construction-related accessibility claim. At your option, you may be, but need not be, represented by an attorney to file the application to request the early evaluation conference. You may obtain a copy of the application form, filing instructions, and additional information about the stay and early evaluation conference through the Judicial Council Internet Web site at http://www.courtinfo.ca.gov/selfhelp/.

You may file the application after you are served with a summons and complaint, but no later than your first court pleading or appearance in this case, which is due within 30 days after you receive the summons and complaint. If you do not have an attorney, you will need to file the application within 30 days after you receive the summons and complaint to request the stay and early evaluation conference. If you do not file the application, you will still need to file your reply to the lawsuit within 30 days after you receive the summons and complaint to contest it. You may obtain more information about how to represent yourself and how to file a reply without hiring an attorney at http://www.courtinfo.ca.gov/selfhelp/. If a plaintiff representing himself or herself hires an attorney after the case is filed, you will have 30 days to file an application for a court stay and early evaluation conference after you receive a Notice of Substitution of Counsel, unless an early evaluation conference or settlement conference has already been held.

You may file the application form without the assistance of an attorney, but it may be in your best interest to immediately seek the assistance of an attorney experienced in disability access laws when you receive a summons and complaint. You may make an offer to settle the case, and it may be in your interest to put that offer in writing so that it may be considered under Civil Code Section 55.55.

An attorney who files a Notice of Substitution of Counsel to appear as counsel for a plaintiff who, acting in propria persona, previously filed a complaint in an action that includes a construction-related accessibility claim, must, at the same time, cause to be served a copy of the application form and a copy of the notice upon the defendant on separate pages attached to the Notice of Substitution of Counsel [Civ. Code § 55.54(a)(2)].

An attorney must provide a written advisory with each demand for money or complaint sent to or served by the attorney upon a defendant, in the prescribed form, on a page or pages that are separate and clearly distinguishable from the demand for money or complaint, as follows [Civ. Code § 55.3(b)]:

IMPORTANT INFORMATION FOR BUILDING OWNERS AND TENANTS

This form is available in English, Spanish, Chinese, Vietnamese, and Korean through the Judicial Council of California. Persons with visual impairments can get assistance in viewing this form through the Judicial Council Internet Web site at http://www.courtinfo.ca.gov.

Existing law requires that you receive this information because the demand for money or complaint you received with this document claims that your building or property does not comply with one or more existing construction-related accessibility laws or regulations protecting the civil rights of persons with disabilities to access public places.

YOU HAVE IMPORTANT LEGAL OBLIGATIONS. Compliance with disability access laws is a serious and significant responsibility that applies to all California building owners and tenants with buildings open for business to the public. You may obtain information about your legal obligations and how to comply with disability access laws through the Division of the State Architect. Commencing September 1, 2009, information will also be available from the California Commission on Disability Access Internet Web site.

YOU HAVE IMPORTANT LEGAL RIGHTS. You are not required to pay any money unless and until a court finds you liable. Moreover, RECEIPT OF THIS ADVISORY DOES NOT NECESSARILY MEAN YOU WILL BE FOUND LIABLE FOR ANYTHING.

> You may wish to promptly consult an attorney experienced in this area of the law to get helpful legal advice or representation in responding to the demand for money or complaint you received. You may contact the local bar association in your county for information on available attorneys in your area. If you have insurance, you may also wish to contact your insurance provider. You have the right to seek assistance or advice about this demand for money or complaint from any person of your choice, and no one may instruct you otherwise. Your best interest may be served by seeking legal advice or representation from an attorney.
>
> If a complaint has been filed and served on you and your property has been inspected by a Certified Access Specialist (CASp; see www.dsa.dgs.ca.gov/casp), you may have the right to a court stay (temporary stoppage) and early evaluation conference to evaluate the merits of the construction-related accessibility claim against you pursuant to Civil Code Section 55.54. At your option, you may be, but need not be, represented by an attorney to file a reply and to file an application for a court stay and early evaluation conference. If you choose not to hire an attorney to represent you, you may obtain additional information about how to represent yourself and how to file a reply without hiring an attorney through the Judicial Council Internet Web site at http://www.courtinfo.ca.gov/selfhelp/. You may also obtain a form to file your reply to the lawsuit, as well as the form and information for filing an application to request the court stay and early evaluation conference at that same Web site.
>
> If you choose to hire an attorney to represent you, the attorney who sent you the demand for money or complaint is prohibited from contacting you further unless your attorney has given the other attorney permission to contact you. If the other attorney does try to contact you, you should immediately notify your attorney.

The advisory requirement applies only to a demand for money or complaint made by an attorney, and nothing in Civ. Code § 55.3 is intended to affect the right to file a civil complaint under any other law or regulation protecting the physical access rights of persons with disabilities. Nothing in Civ. Code § 55.3 requires a party acting in propria persona to provide or send a demand for money to another party before proceeding against that party with a civil complaint [Civ. Code § 55.3(d)]. Civ. Code § 55.3 does not apply to any action brought by the Attorney General, or by a district attorney, city attorney, or county counsel [Civ. Code § 55.3(e)].

The Judicial Council will adopt a form that may be used by attorneys to comply with the advisory requirements. The form will be in substantially the same format and include all of the text set forth above. The form will be available in English, Spanish, Chinese, Vietnamese, and Korean, and include a statement that the form is available in additional languages, and the Judicial Council Internet web site address where the different versions of the form may be located. The form will include Internet web site information for the Division of the State Architect and, when operational, the California Commission on Disability Access [Civ. Code § 55.3(c)].

[iv] Early Evaluation Conference and Stay

Upon being served with a summons and complaint asserting a construction-related accessibility claim, a qualified defendant may file a request for a court stay and early evaluation conference prior to or simultaneous with the defendant's responsive pleading or other initial appearance in the action that includes the claim. If the defendant filed a timely request for stay and early evaluation conference before a responsive pleading was due, the period for filing a responsive pleading will be tolled until the stay is lifted. Any responsive pleading filed simultaneously with a request for stay and early evaluation conference may be amended without prejudice, and the period for filing that amendment will be tolled until the stay is lifted [Civ. Code § 55.54(b)(1)].

If the plaintiff had acted in propria persona in filing a complaint that includes a construction-related accessibility claim, the qualified defendant who is served with a Notice of Substitution of Counsel has 30 days to file an application for a stay and an early evaluation conference. The application may be filed prior to or after the defendant's filing of a responsive pleading or other initial appearance in the action that includes the claim, except that an application may not be filed in a claim in which an early evaluation conference or settlement conference has already been held on the claim [Civ. Code § 55.54(b)(2)].

An application for an early evaluation conference and stay must include a signed declaration that declares both that the site identified in the complaint has been CASp-inspected or is CASp determination pending and, if the site is CASp-inspected, there have been no modifications completed or commenced since the date of inspection that may impact compliance with construction-related accessibility standards to the best of the defendant's knowledge; and that an inspection report pertaining to the site has been issued by a CASp. The inspection report must be provided to the court and the plaintiff at least 15 days prior to the court date set for the early evaluation conference [Civ. Code § 55.54(c)(1)]. The Legislature has provided a provisional request form to be used and filed by a qualified defendant until a form is adopted by the Judicial Council [Civ. Code § 55.54(c)(2)]. The Judicial Council will prepare and post on its Internet web site instructions and a form for a qualified defendant to use to file an application for stay and early evaluation conference and a form for the court's notice of stay and early evaluation conference. Until those forms are adopted, the Judicial Council will post on its Internet web site the provisional forms [Civ. Code § 55.54(l)(1)]. The Judicial Council will also prepare and post on its Internet web site instructions and a cover page to assist plaintiffs and defendants, respectively, to comply with their filing responsibilities. The cover page will also provide for the party's declaration of proof of service of the pertinent document served under the court order [Civ. Code § 55.54(l)(2)].

Upon the filing of an application for stay and early evaluation conference by a qualified defendant, the court must immediately issue an order that does all of the following:

- Grants a 90-day stay of the proceedings with respect to the construction-related accessibility claim, unless the plaintiff has obtained temporary injunctive relief that is still in place for the construction-related accessibility claim [Civ. Code § 55.54(d)(1)].

- Schedules a mandatory early evaluation conference for a date as soon as possible from the date of the order, but in no event later than 50 days after issuance of the order, and in no event earlier than 21 days after the filing of the request [Civ. Code § 55.54(d)(2)].

- Directs the parties, and any other person whose authority is required to negotiate and enter into settlement, to appear in person at the time set for the conference. Appearance by counsel does not satisfy the requirement that the parties or those with negotiation and settlement authority personally appear, provided, however, that the court may allow a party who is unable to attend in person due to a disability to participate in the hearing by telephone or other alternative means or through a representative authorized to settle the case [Civ. Code § 55.54(d)(3)].

- Directs the defendant to file with the court under seal and serve on the plaintiff a copy of any relevant CASp inspection report at least 15 days before the date of the conference. The CASp inspection report is confidential and is available only as set forth in Civ. Code § 55.54(d)(5), (e)(4) [Civ. Code § 55.54(d)(4)].

- Directs the parties that the CASp inspection report may be disclosed only to the court, the parties to the action, the parties' attorneys, individuals employed or retained by the attorneys to assist in the litigation, and insurance representatives or others involved in the evaluation and settlement of the case [Civ. Code § 55.54(d)(5)].

- Directs the plaintiff to file with the court and serve on the defendant at least 15 days before the date of the conference a statement that includes, to the extent reasonably known, for use solely for the purpose of the early evaluation conference, all of the following [Civ. Code § 55.54(d)(6)]:

1. An itemized list of specific conditions on the subject premises that are the basis of the claimed violations of construction-related accessibility standards in the plaintiff's complaint.

2. The amount of damages claimed.

3. The amount of attorneys' fees and costs incurred to date, if any, that are being claimed [see [v], below].

4. Any demand for settlement of the case in its entirety.

The court may schedule additional conferences and may extend the 90-day stay for good cause shown, but not to exceed one additional 90-day extension [Civ. Code § 55.54(h)].

A party failing to comply with any court order may be subject to court sanction at the court's discretion [Civ. Code § 55.54(e)(1)]. The court will lift the stay when the defendant has failed to file and serve the CASp inspection report prior to the early evaluation conference and has failed also to produce the report at the time of the early evaluation conference, unless the defendant shows good cause for that failure [Civ. Code § 55.54(e)(2)]. The court may lift the stay at the conclusion of the early evaluation conference upon a showing of good cause by the plaintiff. Good cause may include the defendant's failure to make reasonably timely progress toward completion of corrections noted by a CASp [Civ. Code § 55.54(e)(3)].

The CASp inspection report filed and served pursuant to Civ. Code § 55.54(d) must remain confidential throughout the stay and will continue to be confidential until the conclusion of the claim, whether by dismissal, settlement, or final judgment, unless there is a showing of good cause by any party. Good cause may include the defendant's failure to make reasonably timely progress toward completion of corrections noted by a CASp. The confidentiality of the inspection report will terminate upon the conclusion of the claim, unless the owner of the report obtains a court order pursuant to the California Rules of Court to seal the record [Civ. Code § 55.54(e)(4); see Cal. Rules Ct., Rule 3.907].

All discussions at the early evaluation conference are subject to Evid. Code § 1152, protecting disclosures made in mediation [Civ. Code § 55.54(f); see Ch. 31, Mediation]. The Legislature has stated its intent that the purpose of the evaluation conference include, but not be limited to, evaluation of all of the following [Civ. Code § 55.54(f)]:

1. Whether the defendant is entitled to the 90-day stay for some or all of the identified issues in the case, as a qualified defendant.

2. The current condition of the site and the status of any plan of corrections, including whether the qualified defendant has corrected or is willing to correct the alleged violations, and the timeline for doing so.

3. Whether the case, including any claim for damages or injunctive relief, can be settled in whole or in part.

4. Whether the parties should share other information that may facilitate early evaluation and resolution of the dispute.

Early evaluation conferences must be conducted by a superior court judge or commissioner, or a court early evaluation conference officer. A commissioner will not be qualified to conduct early evaluation conferences unless he or she has received training regarding disability access requirements imposed by the Americans with Disabilities Act, state laws that govern access to public facilities, and federal and state regulations adopted pursuant to those laws [Civ. Code § 55.54(i)]. For these purposes, a "court early evaluation conference officer" is an attorney employed by the court who has received training regarding disability access requirements imposed by the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, state laws that govern access to public facilities, and federal and state regulations adopted pursuant to those laws. Attorneys serving in this capacity may also be utilized by the court for other purposes not related to these proceedings [Civ. Code § 55.54(i)].

Nothing in the Act precludes any party from making an offer to compromise pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 [Civ. Code § 55.54(g)]. Nothing in the Act may be deemed to make any inspection report, opinion, statement, or other finding or conclusion of a CASp binding on the court, or to abrogate in any manner the ultimate authority of the court to make all appropriate findings of fact and law. The CASp inspection report and any opinion, statement, finding, or conclusion therein will be given the weight the trier of fact finds that it deserves [Civ. Code § 55.54(j)]. Nothing in the Act may be construed to invalidate or limit any California construction-related accessibility standard that provides greater or equal protection for the rights of individuals with disabilities than is afforded by the Americans with Disabilities Act and the federal regulations adopted pursuant to the ADA [Civ. Code § 55.54(k)].

The stay provisions do not apply to a construction-related accessibility claim in which the plaintiff has been granted temporary injunctive relief that remains in place [Civ. Code § 55.54(m)]. The early conference and stay provisions also do not apply to an action brought by the Attorney General, or by a district attorney, city attorney, or county counsel [Civ. Code § 55.54(n)].

[v] Attorney's Fees and Damages

In determining an award of reasonable attorney's fees and recoverable costs with respect to a construction-related accessibility claim, the court may consider, along with other relevant information, written settlement offers made and rejected by the parties. However, this does not affect or modify the inadmissibility of evidence regarding offers of compromise pursuant to Evid. Code § 1152, including, but not limited to, inadmissibility to prove injury or damage [Civ. Code § 55.55].

Statutory damages under either Civ. Code §§ 52(a) or 54.3(a) may be recovered in a construction-related accessibility claim against a place of public accommodation only if a violation or violations of one or more construction-related accessibility standards denied the plaintiff full and equal access to the place of public accommodation on a particular occasion [Civ. Code § 55.56(a)]. A plaintiff is denied full and equal access only if the plaintiff personally encountered the violation on a particular occasion, or the plaintiff was deterred from accessing a place of public accommodation on a particular occasion [Civ. Code § 55.56(b)]. A violation personally encountered by a plaintiff may be sufficient to cause a denial of full and equal access if the plaintiff experienced difficulty, discomfort, or embarrassment because of the violation [Civ. Code § 55.56(c)].

A plaintiff demonstrates that he or she was deterred from accessing a place of public accommodation on a particular occasion only if both of the following apply [Civ. Code § 55.56(d)]:

1. The plaintiff had actual knowledge of a violation or violations that prevented or reasonably dissuaded the plaintiff from accessing a place of public accommodation that the plaintiff intended to use on a particular occasion.

2. The violation or violations would have actually denied the plaintiff full and equal access if the plaintiff had accessed the place of public accommodation on that particular occasion.

Statutory damages may be assessed based on each particular occasion that the plaintiff was denied full and equal access, and not upon the number of violations of construction-related accessibility standards identified at the place of public accommodation where the denial of full and equal access occurred. If the place of public accommodation consists of distinct facilities that offer distinct services, statutory damages may be assessed based on each denial of full and equal access to the distinct facility, and not upon the number of violations of construction-related accessibility standards identified at the place of public accommodation where the denial of full and equal access occurred [Civ. Code § 55.56(e)]. These provisions do not alter the applicable law for the awarding of injunctive or other equitable relief for a violation or violations of one or more construction-related accessibility standards, nor alter any legal obligation of a party to mitigate damages [Civ. Code § 55.56(f)].

[vi] Inspection and Certification of Site

Upon completion of the inspection of a site, a certified access specialist ("CASp") [see Civ. Code § 55.52(3)] must comply with the following: For a CASp-inspected site, if the CASp determines the site meets all applicable construction-related accessibility standards, the CASp will provide a written inspection report to the requesting party that includes both an identification and description of the inspected structures and areas of the site and a signed and dated statement of compliance that includes both a statement that, in the opinion of the CASp, the inspected structures and areas of the site meet construction-related accessibility standards, which clearly indicates whether the determination of the CASp includes an assessment of readily achievable barrier removal, and, if corrections were made as a result of the CASp inspection, an itemized list of all corrections and dates of completion [Civ. Code § 55.53(a)(1)]. For a CASp determination pending site, if the CASp determines that corrections are needed to the site in order for the site to meet all applicable construction-related accessibility standards, the CASp will provide a signed and dated written inspection report to the requesting party that includes all of the following [Civ. Code § 55.53(a)(2)]:

- An identification and description of the inspected structures and areas of the site.

- A statement that, in the opinion of the CASp, the inspected structures and areas of the site need correction to meet construction-related accessibility standards, clearly indicating whether the determination of the CASp includes an assessment of readily achievable barrier removal.

- An identification and description of the structures or areas of the site that need correction and the correction needed.

- A schedule of completion for each of the corrections within a reasonable time frame.

In determining whether the site meets applicable construction-related accessibility standards when there is a conflict or difference between a state and federal provision, standard, or regulation, the state provision, standard, or regulation applies unless the federal provision, standard, or regulation is more protective of accessibility rights [Civ. Code § 55.53(b)].

Every CASp who conducts an inspection of a place of public accommodation must, upon completing the inspection of the site, provide the building owner or tenant who requested the inspection with the following notice, which the State Architect must make available as a form on the State Architect's Internet web site [Civ. Code § 55.53(c)]:

NOTICE TO PRIVATE PROPERTY OWNER/TENANT:

YOU ARE ADVISED TO KEEP IN YOUR RECORDS ANY WRITTEN INSPECTION REPORT AND ANY OTHER DOCUMENTATION CONCERNING YOUR PROPERTY SITE THAT IS GIVEN TO YOU BY A CERTIFIED ACCESS SPECIALIST.

IF YOU BECOME A DEFENDANT IN A LAWSUIT THAT INCLUDES A CLAIM

CONCERNING A SITE INSPECTED BY A CERTIFIED ACCESS SPECIALIST, YOU MAY BE ENTITLED TO A STAY (TEMPORARY STOPPAGE) OF THE CLAIM AND AN EARLY EVALUATION CONFERENCE.

IN ORDER TO REQUEST THE STAY AND EARLY EVALUATION CONFERENCE, YOU WILL NEED TO VERIFY THAT A CERTIFIED ACCESS SPECIALIST HAS INSPECTED THE SITE THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THE CLAIM. YOU WILL ALSO BE REQUIRED TO PROVIDE THE COURT AND THE PLAINTIFF WITH THE COPY OF A WRITTEN INSPECTION REPORT BY THE CERTIFIED ACCESS SPECIALIST, AS SET FORTH IN CIVIL CODE SECTION 55.54. THE APPLICATION FORM AND INFORMATION ON HOW TO REQUEST A STAY AND EARLY EVALUATION CONFERENCE MAY BE OBTAINED AT http://www.courtinfo.ca.gov/selfhelp/.

YOU ARE ENTITLED TO REQUEST, FROM A CERTIFIED ACCESS SPECIALIST WHO HAS CONDUCTED AN INSPECTION OF YOUR PROPERTY, A WRITTEN INSPECTION REPORT AND OTHER DOCUMENTATION AS SET FORTH IN CIVIL CODE SECTION 55.53. YOU ARE ALSO ENTITLED TO REQUEST THE ISSUANCE OF A DISABILITY ACCESS INSPECTION CERTIFICATE, WHICH YOU MAY POST ON YOUR PROPERTY.

In addition, upon a determination that the site either meets applicable construction-related accessibility standards or is "CASp determination pending," every CASp who completes an inspection of a place of public accommodation must provide the building owner or tenant requesting the inspection with a numbered disability access inspection certificate indicating that the site has been inspected by a certified access specialist [Civ. Code § 55.53(e)(1)].

Commencing July 1, 2010, a local agency must employ or retain at least one building inspector who is a certified access specialist, who provides provide consultation to the local agency, permit applicants, and members of the public on compliance with state construction-related accessibility standards [Civ. Code § 55.53(d)(1)]. If a permit applicant or member of the public requests consultation from a certified access specialist, the local agency may charge an amount limited to a reasonable hourly rate, an estimate of which will be provided upon request in advance of the consultation [Civ. Code § 55.53(d)(3)].

A CASp inspection by a building inspector who is a certified access specialist is treated equally for legal and evidentiary purposes as an inspection conducted by a private CASp, and nothing in the Act precludes permit applicants or any other person with a legal interest in the property from retaining a private CASp at any time [Civ. Code § 55.53(d)(3)]. However, nothing in the Act is intended to require a property owner or tenant to hire a CASp. A property owner's or tenant's election not to hire a CASp is not admissible to prove that person's lack of intent to comply with the law [Civ. Code § 55.53(f)].

[7] Access to Public Amusements and Resorts

[a] Accommodations

Health & Safety Code §§ 19952-19954 govern access to places of public amusement and resort by persons who are physically disabled. Any person, public or private firm, organization, or corporation that owns or manages places of public amusement and resort, including theaters, concert halls, and stadiums, must provide seating or accommodations for persons with physical disabilities in a variety of locations within the facility, to the extent that such variety can be provided while meeting fire and panic safety requirements of the State Fire Marshal, so as to provide those persons a choice of admission prices otherwise available to members of the general public [Health & Safety Code § 19952(a)].

This requirement applies to publicly and privately owned facilities or to structures for which a building permit or a building plan for new construction was issued on or after January 1, 1985 [Health & Safety Code § 19952(c); see Health & Safety Code § 19952(d) (Health & Safety Code § 19952 should not be construed to prescribe lesser standards of accessibility or usability than the Accessibility Guidelines prepared by the federal Access Board and adopted by the United States Department of Justice to implement the ADA)].

[b] Enforcement

Any person who is aggrieved or potentially aggrieved by a violation of Health & Safety Code §§ 19952-19954 (or Gov. Code §§ 4450-4460 or Health & Safety Code §§ 19955-19959) may bring an action to enjoin the violation [Health & Safety Code § 19953]. The prevailing party in the action is entitled to recover reasonable attorney's fees [Health & Safety Code § 19953]. The district attorney, the county counsel if the district attorney does not bring an action, the city attorney, the Department of Rehabilitation acting through the Attorney General, or the Attorney General also may bring an action to enjoin a violation of Health & Safety Code §§ 19952-19954 [Health & Safety Code § 19954].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesCompensatory DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Business Establishments

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.37

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.37 Restraint of Trade

[1] Discrimination Prohibited

The Cartwright Act, which governs combinations in restraint of trade, is set forth at Bus. & Prof. Code § 16700 et seq. Although most of its provisions deal with general restraints of trade or competition, the Cartwright Act does contain some provisions that deal with discriminatory business practices.

Discrimination in business transactions based on a policy requiring discrimination against a person on the basis of any characteristic listed or defined in the Unruh Act [Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e); see § 116.12, above] or that person's conducting of business in a particular location, is prohibited [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721; Pines v. Tomson (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 370, 381-383, 206 Cal. Rptr. 866] . However, nothing in Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721 prohibits any person, on the basis of his or her individual ideology or preferences, from doing business or refusing to do business with any other person consistent with law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721(d)].

It is an unlawful trust and an unlawful restraint of trade for any person to grant or accept a letter of credit, contract, or similar business document that requires discrimination against an individual on the basis of any characteristic listed or defined in the Unruh Act [Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e); see § 116.12, above] or against that person's lawful business associations [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.5(a)(1); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.5(d) ("person" includes, but is not limited to, individuals, firms, partnerships, associations, corporations, and governmental agencies)]. It is similarly an unlawful trust and an unlawful restraint of trade to refuse to grant or accept a letter of credit, contract, or similar business document that does not contain such a discriminatory provision [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.5(a)(2)]. However, the prohibition against discrimination on the basis of a person's association does not include the requiring of association with particular employment or a particular group as a prerequisite to obtaining group rates or discounts on insurance, recreational activities, or other similar benefits [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.5(c)]. The provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.5 do not apply to any letter of credit, contract, or other document containing a provision pertaining to a labor dispute or an unfair labor practice if the other provisions of that letter of credit, contract, or other document do not otherwise violate the provisions of § 16721.5 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.5(b)].

The Legislature expressed its intent that Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16721 and 16721.5 be interpreted and applied so as not to conflict with federal law with respect to transactions in the interstate or foreign commerce of the United States to the extent, if any, not preempted by the Export Administration Act of 1969 and any regulations promulgated under it [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.6]. Because the Export Administration Act of 1969, pursuant to its terms, was terminated on September 30, 1979, presumably the Legislature's intent applies with equal force to the successor statutory scheme concerning export regulation set forth in 50 U.S.C. App. § 2401 et seq. [see 50 U.S.C. App. § 2418; see also 50 U.S.C. App. § 2407 (foreign boycotts)].

[2] Relief

Any person who is injured in his or her business or property by a violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721 or 16721.5 may bring suit in any court having jurisdiction in the county in which the defendant or any agent resides or is found or in which service may be obtained, without respect to the amount in controversy. An injured person may recover three times the damages sustained, interest on actual damages, and preliminary or permanent injunctive relief, and shall be awarded a reasonable attorney's fee together with the costs of the suit [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 16750; see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761 (prejudgment interest)]. The action may be brought by any injured person, regardless of whether that person dealt directly or indirectly with the defendant [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 16750(a)].

For discussion of the Cartwright Act and its remedies, as well as a general form of complaint for damages and injunctive relief, see Ch. 565, Unfair Competition .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawPrice Fixing & Restraints of TradeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesCompensatory DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Business Establishments

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 116.38-116.49

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 116.38[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Federal Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Business Establishments

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.50

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.50 Governing Statutes

Title II of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000a-2000a-6, prohibits discrimination or segregation in places of public accommodation, as well as discrimination or segregation required by state law, and interference with the exercise of any of the rights it secures.

The Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) prohibits discrimination against persons with disabilities in the areas of employment [see 42 U.S.C. § 12111 et seq. (Title I of the ADA)], public services and transportation [see 42 U.S.C. § 12131 et seq. (Title II of the ADA)], public accommodations [see 42 U.S.C. § 12181 et seq. (Title III of the ADA)], and telecommunications [see 47 U.S.C. § 225].

The Air Carrier Access Act of 1986 (ACAA), 49 U.S.C. § 41705, provides that in providing air transportation, an air carrier, including a foreign air carrier, may not discriminate against an otherwise qualified individual with a disability.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawProtection of Disabled PersonsAmericans With Disabilities ActGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPublic FacilitiesGeneral OverviewTransportation LawAir TransportationCommercial AirlinesGeneral OverviewTransportation LawCarrier Duties & LiabilitiesDuty to Provide Service

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Federal Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Business Establishments

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.51

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.51 Title II of Civil Rights Act of 1964

[1] Scope of Act

Title II of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 is set forth in 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000a-2000a-6. Broad in its scope, Title II prohibits discrimination or segregation in places of public accommodation, as well as discrimination or segregation required by state law [42 U.S.C. §§ 2000a(a), 2000a-1]. Additionally, Title II prohibits interference with the exercise of any of the rights it secures [42 U.S.C. § 2000a-2].

Title II does not apply to a private club or other establishment not in fact open to the public, except to the extent that the facilities of that establishment are made available to the customers or patrons of an establishment within the scope of 42 U.S.C. § 2000a(b) [42 U.S.C. § 2000a(e); see [2], below]. Membership practices determine whether or not an organization is a private club. Generally, if membership is more or less automatically available to any defined group, the organization is not a private club [see, e.g., Tillman v. Wheaton-Haven Recreation Ass'n (1973) 410 U.S. 431, 438, 93 S. Ct. 1090, 35 L. Ed. 2d 403 (swimming pool association with membership available, as a practical matter, to all who purchased homes in surrounding geographical areas was not private club)].

For detailed coverage of Title II, see J. Cook & J. Sobieski, Civil Rights Actions (Matthew Bender).

[2] Prohibition Against Discrimination in Places of Public Accommodation

All persons are entitled to the full and equal enjoyment of the goods, services, facilities, privileges, advantages, and accommodations of any place of public accommodation without discrimination or segregation on the ground of race, color, religion, or national origin [42 U.S.C. § 2000a(a)].

The following establishments that serve the public are places of public accommodation if their operations affect commerce, or if discrimination or segregation by them is supported by state action [42 U.S.C. § 2000a(b)]:

- An inn, hotel, motel or other establishment that provides lodging for transient guests, except for an owner-occupied facility with no more than five rooms for rent;

- A restaurant, cafeteria, lunchroom, lunch counter, soda fountain, or other facility principally engaged in selling food for consumption on its premises, including, but not limited to, any such facility located on the premises of any retail establishment, or a gasoline station;

- A motion picture house, theater, concert hall, sports arena, stadium, or other place of exhibition or entertainment; and

- An establishment that holds itself out as serving patrons of an otherwise covered establishment, when it is located within the premises of the covered establishment, or the covered establishment is located within its premises.

The construction given to the phrase "operations of an establishment affect commerce" is very broad and all-encompassing. Thus, the operations of an establishment affect commerce if it is an establishment providing lodging for transient guests, if it serves interstate travelers, if a substantial portion of the products it sells have moved in commerce, if it presents sources of entertainment that move in commerce, or if it is physically located within the premises of, or there is physically located within its premises, an establishment whose operations affect commerce [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000a(c)]. "Commerce" is also very broadly defined, and generally means travel, trade, traffic, commerce, transportation, or communication that crosses state lines [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000a(c)].

Discrimination or segregation by an establishment is supported by state action if that discrimination or segregation [42 U.S.C. § 2000a(d)]:

- Is carried on under color of any law, statute, ordinance, or regulation;

- Is carried on under color of any custom or usage required or enforced by officials of a State or any of its political subdivisions; or

- Is required by action of a State or any of its political subdivisions.

[3] Discrimination Required by State Law

All persons are entitled to be free, at any establishment or place, from discrimination or segregation of any kind on the ground of race, color, religion, or national origin, if that discrimination or segregation is or purports to be required by any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, rule, or order of a State or an agency or political subdivision of a state [42 U.S.C. § 2000a-1].

[4] Interference With Exercise of Right

It is unlawful for any person to do or attempt to do any of the following with regard to any right or privilege secured by 42 U.S.C. § 2000a or 2000a-1 [42 U.S.C. § 2000a-2]:

- Withhold, deny, or deprive any person of any such right or privilege;

- Intimidate, threaten, or coerce any person with the purpose of interfering with any such right or privilege; or

- Punish any person for exercising or attempting to exercise any such right or privilege.

[5] Injunctive Relief

Whenever a person has violated, or there are reasonable grounds to believe a person is about to violate, Title II, an aggrieved person may file a civil action in district court for preventive relief, including an application for a permanent or temporary injunction, restraining order, or other order [42 U.S.C. § 2000a-3(a) (Attorney General may intervene); see 42 U.S.C. § 2000a-6(a) (district court jurisdiction); see also 42 U.S.C. § 2000a-5 (injunctive action brought by Attorney General based on pattern or practice of resistance to full enjoyment of protected rights)]. The aggrieved party need not exhaust any administrative or other remedy that may be provided by law [42 U.S.C. § 2000a-6(a)]. In certain circumstances the court may appoint an attorney for the complainant and may authorize the commencement of the action without the payment of fees, costs, or security [42 U.S.C. § 2000a-3(a)].

If the alleged violation of Title II occurs in a state, or in a political subdivision of a state, that has a law prohibiting that act or practice and authorizing a state or local authority to grant or seek relief from that practice or to institute criminal proceedings, written notice of that alleged act or practice must be given to the appropriate state or local authority. No civil action under Title II may be brought before the expiration of 30 days after that notice has been given, provided that the court may stay proceedings pending termination of the state or local enforcement proceedings [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000a-3(c)]. If the alleged violation of Title II occurs in a political entity without such a law, there is no similar waiting period before a civil action under Title II may be brought. However, the court may refer the matter to the Community Relations Service for up to 120 days, if it believes there exists a reasonable possibility of securing voluntary compliance [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000a-3(d); see also 42 U.S.C. § 2000a-4 (investigations by Community Relations Service)].

In its discretion, the court may allow the prevailing party in a Title II action, other than the United States, a reasonable attorney's fee as part of the costs [42 U.S.C. § 2000a-3(b)].

[6] Exclusive Means of Enforcement

The remedies provided in Title II are the exclusive means of enforcing the rights based on Title II. However, nothing in Title II precludes any individual or any state or local agency from asserting any right based on any other federal or state law not inconsistent with Title II, including any statute or ordinance requiring nondiscrimination in public establishments or accommodations, or from pursuing any remedy, civil or criminal, that may be available for the vindication or enforcement of that right [42 U.S.C. § 2000a-6(b)].

Additional federal causes of action for discrimination by places of public accommodation are available under 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981 (abridgment of right to contract on basis of race), 1983 (action under color of state law that causes deprivation of any right, privilege, or immunity secured by federal Constitution or laws), and 1985(3) (conspiracy to deny individual right to equal protection of laws). For discussion of these causes of action, see Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawCivil Rights ActsCivil Rights Act of 1964Civil Rights LawPublic FacilitiesGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPublic FacilitiesRemedies

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Federal Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Business Establishments

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.52

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.52 Title III of Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990

[1] Generally

The Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) is a clear and comprehensive national mandate for the elimination of discrimination against individuals with disabilities [42 U.S.C. § 12101(b)(1)]. It prohibits discrimination against persons with disabilities in all of the following areas:

- Employment [see 42 U.S.C. § 12111 et seq. (Title I of the ADA)];
- Public services and transportation [see 42 U.S.C. § 12131 et seq. (Title II of the ADA)];
- Public accommodations [see 42 U.S.C. § 12181 et seq. (Title III of the ADA)]; and
- Telecommunications [see 47 U.S.C. § 225].

The provisions of the ADA applicable to employment (Title I) are discussed in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination . The provisions of the ADA applicable to public services and transportation (Title II) are discussed in Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government Funded Programs and Activities

Compensatory damages are recoverable under the ADA only on proof of discriminatory intent [Ferguson v. City of Phoenix (1998) 157 F.3d 668, 673-676 , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1159 (1999) (remedies for violations of ADA must be construed as remedies under Title VI of Civil Rights Act of 1964, and in absence of proof of discriminatory intent, compensatory relief should not be allowed under Title VI, citing Guardians Ass'n v. Civil Service Comm'n of the City of New York (1983) 463 U.S. 582, 103 S. Ct. 3221, 77 L. Ed. 2d 866)].

The ADA prohibits retaliation against any individual for opposing any unlawful practice or because he or she has made a charge or participated in an investigation or proceeding under the ADA. It also prohibits coercion, intimidation, threats, or interference with any person's rights under the ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12203]. Nothing in the ADA may be construed to require an individual with a disability to accept an accommodation, aid, service, opportunity, or benefit that that individual chooses not to accept [42 U.S.C. § 12201(d)].

Although they are not intended to be used as a subterfuge to evade the purposes of the ADA, there are some provisions specific to insurers and health care providers that permit them to underwrite, classify, and administer risks that are based on or not inconsistent with state law [see 42 U.S.C. § 12201(c); for discussion of insurance generally, see Ch. 308, Insurance].

The use of alternative means of dispute resolution to resolve disputes is encouraged [see 42 U.S.C. § 12212].

The prevailing party in a proceeding under the ADA may be awarded attorney's fees [see 42 U.S.C. § 12205], unless the defendant voluntarily changes its conduct before plaintiff obtains judicial relief [see Buckhannon Board & Care Home, Inc. v. West Virginia Dep't of Health & Human Resources (2001) 532 U.S. 598, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 1841-1843, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855] .

Except as otherwise provided, the ADA does not apply a lesser standard than the standards or regulations applicable under the Rehabilitation Act [see Zukle v. Regents of the Univ. of California (9th Cir. 1999) 166 F.3d 1041, 1045 (no significant difference in analysis of rights and obligations created by ADA and Rehabilitation Act); Ferguson v. City of Phoenix (1998) 157 F.3d 668, 673 , cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1159 (1999) (by statute, remedies for violations of ADA and Rehabilitation Act are coextensive)].

Further, the ADA does not invalidate or limit other laws, including state laws, that provide greater or equal protection of the rights of persons with disabilities [42 U.S.C. § 12201].

A plaintiff must have constitutional standing under U.S. Const. Art. III to bring an action under the Americans with Disabilities Act. Constitutional standing has three elements [Skaff v. Meridien North America Beverly Hills (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 832, 837 ; see also Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife (1992) 504 U.S. 555, 560, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351]:

- The plaintiff must have suffered an injury in fact that is concrete, particularized, and actual or imminent.
- There must be a causal link between the injury and the conduct of which the plaintiff complains.
- It must be likely that a favorable decision will redress the plaintiff's injury.

An ADA plaintiff has suffered an injury in fact sufficient to give that plaintiff standing to challenge barriers in a public accommodation under the ADA when the plaintiff has actually encountered those barriers [D'Lil v. Best Western Encina Lodge & Suites (9th Cir. 2008) 538 F.3d 1031, 1036 ; Skaff v. Meridien North America Beverly Hills (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 832, 838 ; Pickern v. Holiday Quality Foods Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 293 F.3d 1133, 1138-39]. Thus, a plaintiff who has suffered an injury in fact that is concrete, particularized, actual, and imminent has constitutional standing under U.S. Const. Art. III to bring suit challenging accessibility barriers under Title III of the Americans with Disabilities Act [Doran v. 7-Eleven, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 1191, 1195-1196]. An ADA plaintiff who has Art. III standing as a result of at least one barrier at a place of public accommodation may, in one suit, permissibly challenge all barriers in that public accommodation that are related to his or her specific disability [Doran v. 7-Eleven, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 1191, 1197-1202]. However, a plaintiff does not have standing based on unencountered barriers unless the plaintiff can show that those barriers had a deterrent effect on that plaintiff personally re-entering the defendant's business [Chapman v. Pier 1 Imports (U.S.) Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 571 F.3d 853, 857-859].

The ADA does not require either that plaintiffs give defendants pre-suit notice that they intend to sue, or that plaintiffs give defendants an opportunity to cure the alleged violation or violations before filing suit as a prerequisite to recovering attorneys' fees [Skaff v. Meridien North America Beverly Hills (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 832, 844-845].

[2] Definition of "Disability"

The term "disability," with respect to an individual, means any of the following [42 U.S.C. § 12102(2)]:

- A physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of the major life activities of that individual;
- A record of such impairment; or
- Being regarded as having such an impairment.

Thus, for example, the United States Supreme Court determined that human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) is a "physical impairment" within the meaning of 42 U.S.C. § 12102(2), from the moment of infection throughout every stage of the disease, as a physiological disorder with a constant detrimental effect on an infected person's hemic and lymphatic systems. This is so even when the infection has not yet progressed to the symptomatic phase [Bragdon v. Abbott (1998) 524 U.S. 624, 631-641, 118 S. Ct. 2196, 141 L. Ed. 2d 540 (HIV is physical impairment substantially limiting major life activity of reproduction)].

The United States Supreme Court has also held that mentally retarded persons are within the definition of "disability" for the purposes of the ADA [Olmstead v. L.C. (1999) 527 U.S. 581, 119 S. Ct. 2176, 144 L. Ed. 2d 540, 551 n.2 (two mentally retarded women, one also diagnosed with schizophrenia and other with personality disorder)].

"Disability" does not include any of the following [42 U.S.C. § 12211(b)]:

- Transvestism, transsexualism, pedophilia, exhibitionism, voyeurism, gender identity disorders not resulting from physical impairments, or other sexual behavior disorders;
- Compulsive gambling, kleptomania, or pyromania; or
- Psychoactive substance use disorders resulting from current illegal use of drugs.

An individual currently engaging in the illegal use of drugs is not an individual with a disability when the entity to which the ADA applies acts on the basis of that use [42 U.S.C. § 12210(a)]. Nevertheless, an individual may not be denied health services or services provided in connection with drug rehabilitation on the basis of the current illegal use of drugs if the individual is otherwise entitled to those services [42 U.S.C. § 12210(c)].

Homosexuality and bisexuality are not impairments and, thus, are not disabilities [42 U.S.C. § 12211(a)].

[3] Public Accommodations and Services Offered by Private Entities

Title III of the ADA, 42 U.S.C. §§ 12181-12189, governs public accommodations and services operated by private entities. The protections provided by Title III of the ADA to individuals with disabilities are significant and broad in scope. Much of the language used is similar to the language of Title II of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. § 2000a et seq.) [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 12181(7) (definition of "public accommodation"), 12187 (private club and religious organizations exemptions)]. Moreover, the remedies and procedures set forth in Title II of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 are the remedies and procedures available to any person subjected to discrimination in violation of Title III of the ADA or who has reasonable grounds to believe he or she is about to be subjected to such discrimination [42 U.S.C. § 12188(a)]. For discussion of Title II of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, see Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government Funded Programs and Activities .

The ADA prohibits discrimination against an individual on the basis of disability in the full and equal enjoyment of the goods, services, facilities, privileges, advantages, or accommodations of any place of public accommodation by any person who owns, leases (or leases to), or operates a place of public accommodation [42 U.S.C. § 12182(a)].

The ADA's general prohibition of discriminatory denial of the opportunity to participate in or benefit from goods, services, facilities, privileges, advantages, or accommodations of an entity [42 U.S.C. § 12182(b)(1)(A)(i)] has been interpreted broadly to include denial of the right to participate in PGA golf tours and their qualifying rounds [PGA Tour, Inc. v. Martin (2001) 532 U.S. 661, 121 S. Ct. 1879, 149 L. Ed. 2d 904] , as well as denial of life insurance [see Cloutier v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America (N.D. Cal. 1997) 964 F. Supp. 299, 301-302 (applicant for life insurance had standing to pursue claim against insurer under ADA after being denied coverage based on his partner's infection with human immunodeficiency virus)].

With regard to foreign-flag cruise ships, a clear statement of congressional intent is necessary before a general statutory requirement can interfere with matters that concern a vessel's internal affairs and operations, as contrasted with statutory requirements that concern the security and well-being of United States citizens or territory. Thus, although the clear statement rule could limit the application of Title III to foreign-flag cruise ships in some instances, when it requires removal of physical barriers, except insofar as Title III regulates a vessel's internal affairs, it would appear the rule is inapplicable to many other duties Title III might impose [Spector v. Norwegian Cruise Line Ltd. (2005) 545 U.S. 119, 125 S. Ct. 2169, 2174-2175, 162 L. Ed. 2d 97] .

Goods, services, facilities, privileges, advantages, and accommodations must be afforded to an individual with a disability in the most integrated setting appropriate to the needs of the individual [42 U.S.C. § 12182(b)(1)(B)].

Title III of the ADA prohibits places of public accommodation from discriminating against disabled persons by, among other things, failing to remove architectural barriers to their businesses or, if removal is not readily achievable, using alternative methods for providing disabled persons with access to their goods, services, and facilities [Snyder v. San Diego Flowers (S.D. Cal. 1998) 21 F. Supp. 2d 1207, 1208 ; see 42 U.S.C. § 12182(a), (b)]. A plaintiff who is disabled within the meaning of the ADA and who has actual knowledge of illegal barriers at a public accommodation to which he or she desires access need not engage in the futile gesture of attempting to gain access in order to show actual injury during the limitations period. A plaintiff who seeks injunctive relief against an ongoing violation is not barred from seeking relief either by the statute of limitations or by lack of standing [Pickern v. Holiday Quality Foods Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 293 F.3d 1133, 1134] .

The ADA defines public accommodation to include numerous types of private entities for which the word "public" reflects the entity's use in commerce, not its ownership [42 U.S.C. § 12181(7)]. The ADA applies to establishments that fall within any of 12 categories [42 U.S.C. § 12181(7); 28 C.F.R. § 36, appen. B (2008)]:

- Places of lodging.
- Establishments serving food or drink.
- Places of exhibition or entertainment.
- Places of public gathering.

- Sales or rental establishments.
- Service establishments.
- Stations used for specified public transportation.
- Places of public display or collection.
- Places of recreation.
- Places of education.
- Social service center establishments.
- Places of exercise or recreation.

The ADA gives the following examples of private entities considered public accommodations, if the operations of the entities affect commerce [42 U.S.C. § 12181(7)]:

- An inn, hotel, motel, or other place of lodging, except for an establishment located within a building that contains not more than five rooms for rent or hire and that is actually occupied by the proprietor of the establishment as the residence of the proprietor.
- A restaurant, bar, or other establishment serving food or drink.
- A motion picture house, theater, concert hall, stadium, or other place of exhibition or entertainment.
- An auditorium, convention center, lecture hall, or other place of public gathering.
- A bakery, grocery store, clothing store, hardware store, shopping center, or other sales or rental establishment.
- A laundromat, dry-cleaner, bank, barber shop, beauty shop, travel service, shoe repair service, funeral parlor, gas station, office of an accountant or lawyer, pharmacy, insurance office, professional office of a health care provider, hospital, or other service establishment.
- A terminal, depot, or other station used for specified public transportation.
- A museum, library, gallery, or other place of public display or collection.park, zoo, amusement park, or other place of recreation.
- A park, zoo, amusement park, or other place of recreation.
- A nursery, elementary, secondary, undergraduate, or postgraduate private school, or other place of education.
- A day care center, senior citizen center, homeless shelter, food bank, adoption agency, or other social service center establishment.
- A gymnasium, health spa, bowling alley, golf course, or other place of exercise or recreation.

Although the 12 categories of public accommodations listed in the ADA are exclusive, the illustrative examples for each category are not. Within each category only a few examples are given. The category of sales or rental establishments, for example, would include an innumerable array of facilities sweeping far beyond the few examples given in the regulation. Retail or wholesale establishments selling or renting items, such as bookstores, videotape rental stores, car rental establishment, pet stores, and jewelry stores would also be covered under this category, even though they are not specifically listed [28 C.F.R. § 36, appen. B (2008)]. In deciding whether an establishment is a public accommodation even in the absence of an express designation, courts ask whether its inclusion furthers the ADA's purpose [Nicholls v. Holiday Panay Marina, L.P. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 966, 970-971, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 309 (identifying private marina as included rental establishment subject to ADA furthered ADA's purpose)].

Restricted access does not, by itself, make an accommodation nonpublic. Selectivity in choosing who among members of the public may enter or use an accommodation does not necessarily defeat its public character [Martin v. PGA Tour, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 204 F.3d 994, 998 ; Nicholls v. Holiday Panay Marina, L.P. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 966, 972, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 309]. Many facilities classified as public accommodations under the ADA are open only to specific invitees [Nicholls v. Holiday Panay Marina, L.P. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 966, 972, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 309 ; Independent Living Resources v. Oregon Arena Corp. (D. Or. 1997) 982 F. Supp. 698, 759 (private executive suites in sports arena were public accommodation); see, e.g., 42 U.S.C. §§ 12181(7)(J) (private schools); 12181(7)(L) (gymnasiums, health spas, and golf courses); 12181(7)(C) (theaters, concert halls, and stadiums)].

A "private club" is exempt under the ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12181(7); see, e.g., Jankey v. Twentieth Century Fox Film Corp. (C.D. Cal. 1998) 14 F. Supp. 2d 1174, 1179 ; United States v. Lansdowne Swim Club (E.D. Pa. 1989) 713 F. Supp. 785, 796-797]. Features that tend to make an organization a private club include the following [Nicholls v. Holiday Panay Marina, L.P. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 966, 969 n.2, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 309 ; see also Jankey v. Twentieth Century Fox Film Corp. (C.D. Cal. 1998) 14 F. Supp. 2d 1174, 1179 ; United States v. Lansdowne Swim Club (E.D. PA. 1989) 713 F. Supp. 785, 796-797]:

- Selectivity in membership.
- Restriction of nonmembers' use of facilities.
- The degree of member control of the organization's operations.
- The purpose of the organization's existence.
- Advertisement to the public.
- Substantial membership fees.
- The organization's profit or nonprofit status.

Under the regulations, wheelchair areas must be an integral part of any fixed seating plan and provided so as to provide people with physical disabilities a choice of admission prices and lines of sight comparable to those for members of the general public [see 28 C.F.R. § 36.406 & Appendix A; see also Dept. of Justice Technical Assistance Manual § 4.33.3 (in addition to requiring companion seating and dispersion of wheelchair locations, ADA Accessibility Guidelines (ADAAG) requires that wheelchair locations provide people with disabilities lines of sight comparable to those for members of general public)]. In assembly areas where spectators can be expected to stand during an event or show being viewed, wheelchair locations must provide lines of sight over spectators who stand [Miller v. Cal. Speedway Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 536 F.3d 1020, 1027-1033 , citing Dept. of Justice Technical Assistance Manual § 4.33.3].

Under regulations, a disabled individual can be denied an accommodation when the individual poses a direct threat to the health or safety of others [28 C.F.R. § 36.208; see Lockett v. Catalina Channel Express, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 496 F.3d 1061, 1065-1067 (single decision by ticket seller of ferry operator to ask blind passenger to ride in general passenger area with her guide dog, rather than in more expensive lounge area, was reasonable judgment under 28 C.F.R. § 36.208, where ferry operator had adopted policy excluding animals from lounge based on another passenger's alleged allergy, and there is no suggestion that the person had any training to evaluate the possible effect on an allergic passenger of the presence of a service animal in the Commodore Lounge. With the ferry scheduled to depart, selling Lockett a ticket for the general passenger area was a reasonable judgment. It allowed CCE to provide Lockett with transportation to Catalina Island, as she requested, albeit without the benefits and the cost of the Commodore Lounge)].

42 U.S.C. § 12188(a) incorporates the requirements of 42 U.S.C. § 2000a-3(c), for civil actions under the ADA, so that disabled persons suing under 42 U.S.C. § 12182 are required to exhaust administrative remedies [Snyder v. San Diego Flowers (S.D. Cal. 1998) 21 F. Supp. 2d 1207, 1208-1211] .

Regulations to implement Title III of the ADA have been promulgated by the Attorney General and are set forth at 28 C.F.R. § 36.101 et seq. Guidelines issued by the Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board pertaining to standards for accessible design in places of public accommodations and commercial facilities are set forth in 36 C.F.R. Appendix A.

[4] Telecommunication Relay Services

The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) is charged with ensuring that interstate and intrastate telecommunications relay services are available, to the extent possible and in the most efficient manner, to individuals who have a hearing or speech impairment [47 U.S.C. § 225(b)(1)]. For purposes of administering and enforcing 47 U.S.C. § 225, the FCC has the same authority, power, and functions with respect to intrastate carriers as it has with respect to interstate carriers. Regardless of whether the carrier engages in interstate or intrastate communications, violation of 47 U.S.C. § 225 is subject to the same remedies, penalties, and procedures applicable to a violations of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.) [see 47 U.S.C. § 225(b)(2); see also 47 U.S.C. § 609].

Every common carrier providing telephone service was required to provide telecommunications relay service in compliance with the FCC regulations pertaining to telecommunications services for hearing-impaired and speech-impaired individuals by July 26, 1993 [see 47 U.S.C. § 225(c)].

"Telecommunications relay service" means telephone transmission services that provide the ability for an individual who has a hearing or speech impairment to engage in communication by wire or radio with a hearing individual in a manner that is functionally equivalent to the ability of an individual who does not have a hearing or speech impairment to communicate using voice communication services by wire or radio. It includes services that enable two-way communication between an individual who uses a telecommunications device for the deaf (TDD) or other nonvoice terminal device and an individual who does not use such a device [47 U.S.C. § 225(a)(3)]. 47 U.S.C. § 225 is applicable to common carriers engaged in interstate or intrastate communication by wire or radio [see 47 U.S.C. § 225(a)(1); see also 47 U.S.C. §§ 152(b), 153, 221(b)].

Except when a state establishes an approved program to implement and enforce regulations concerning intrastate common carriers, the FCC has the responsibility of enforcing Section 225 and related regulations. Complaints alleging violations should be made to the FCC [see 47 U.S.C. § 225(e), (f), (g)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawProtection of Disabled PersonsAmericans With Disabilities ActAccommodationCivil Rights

LawProtection of Disabled PersonsAmericans With Disabilities ActLegislative PurposeCivil Rights LawProtection of Disabled PersonsAmericans With Disabilities ActScopeCommunications LawFederal ActsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Federal Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Business Establishments

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.53

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.53 Air Carrier Access Act of 1986

The Air Carrier Access Act of 1986 (ACAA), provides that in providing air transportation, an air carrier may not discriminate against an otherwise qualified individual on any of the following grounds [49 U.S.C. § 41705]:

- The individual has a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities;
- The individual has a record of such an impairment; or
- The individual is regarded as having such an impairment.

Air carrier personnel may refuse to provide transportation to a passenger on the basis of safety [14 C.F.R. § 382.31], and a carrier may require a medical certificate for a qualified individual with a disability under certain circumstances, including where the individual's medical condition is such that there is reasonable doubt that the individual can complete the flight safely, without requiring extraordinary medical assistance during the flight [14 C.F.R. § 382.53]. However, a decision to refuse passage must be assessed in light of facts and circumstances known to the airline at the time the decision was made, and the decision to refuse passage cannot be unreasonable or irrational [Newman v. American Airlines (9th Cir. 1999) 176 F.3d 1128, 1131] .

Each individual act of discrimination in violation of the ACAA constitutes a separate offense punishable by a civil penalty [49 U.S.C. § 46301(a)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawGeneral OverviewTransportation LawAir TransportationAirline Deregulation ActGeneral

OverviewTransportation LawCarrier Duties & LiabilitiesDuty to Provide Service

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Federal Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Business Establishments

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 116.54-116.59

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 116.54[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.60

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.60 Related Matthew Bender Publications

For thorough discussion of federal civil rights legislation and actions, see J. Cook & J. Sobieski, Civil Rights Actions (Matthew Bender)

For related jury instructions regarding civil rights, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI), Series 3000 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral Overview

127 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.61

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.61 Federal Constitution

Due process clause, applicable to federal government. U.S. Const., amend. V

Sovereign immunity of states. U.S. Const., amend. XI

Privileges and immunities, due process, and equal protection clauses, applicable to states. U.S. Const., amend. XIV

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawEqual ProtectionScope of ProtectionConstitutional LawPrivileges & ImmunitiesGovernmentsFederal GovernmentClaims By & Against

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.62

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.62 State Constitution

Prohibition against restrictions on entry into vocation, trade, profession, business, or employment based on sex, race, creed, color, or national or ethnic origin. Cal. Const., art. I, § 8

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.63

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.63 Federal Statutes

Jurisdiction of United States District Courts in civil rights cases. 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331, 1343, 1344

Equal rights under law. 42 U.S.C. § 1981

Property rights of citizens. 42 U.S.C. § 1982

Civil action for deprivation of civil rights under color of state law. 42 U.S.C. § 1983

Conspiracy to interfere with civil rights. 42 U.S.C. § 1985

Neglect to prevent conspiracy to interfere with civil rights. 42 U.S.C. § 1986

State law applicable in federal civil rights actions. 42 U.S.C. § 1988(a)

Recovery of attorney's fees in civil rights actions. 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b)

Discrimination in public accommodations. 42 U.S.C. § 2000a et seq. (Title II of Civil Rights Act of 1964)

Discrimination in public facilities; civil action by Attorney General if individual complainants are certified unable to maintain action. 42 U.S.C. § 2000b et seq.

Discrimination against disabled persons. 42 U.S.C. § 12111 et seq. (Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990)

Access to telecommunications relay services for individuals with hearing and speech impairments. 47 U.S.C. § 225

Discrimination against disabled persons by air carriers. 49 U.S.C. § 41705 (Air Carrier Access Act of 1986)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawConspiracyGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingEqual Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981)General OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingProperty Rights (sec. 1982)General OverviewCivil Rights LawPractice & ProcedureCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawSection 1983 ActionsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.64

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.64 State Statutes

[1] Associations and Facilities with Discriminatory Policies

State funds may not be used for payments or contributions to private organizations with discriminatory membership policies. Gov. Code § 11015

State and local agencies prohibited from conducting any function in any facility with discriminatory admittance policy. Gov. Code §§ 11131, 54961

[2] Business Discrimination

Licensee under Business and Professions Code subject to disciplinary action for discrimination against persons on basis of any characteristic listed or defined in Unruh Act [Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e)]. Bus. & Prof. Code § 125.6

Discrimination in certain business transactions prohibited. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16721, 16721.5, 16721.6

Certain forms of discrimination prohibited by Automobile Dealers Anti-Coercion Act. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 18400-18413

Persons not to be excluded from race tracks by rules of California Horse Racing Board on account of any characteristic listed or defined in Unruh Act [Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e)]. Bus. & Prof. Code § 19572

Social clubs licensed to serve alcoholic beverages that engage in discriminatory membership practices engage in unlawful activity and may be denied license. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23428.5, 23428.18-23428.28

Certain expenses of alcoholic beverage club licensee that discriminates in membership or use of its services or facilities nondeductible for tax purposes. Bus. & Prof. Code § 23438

Equal rights in business establishments. Civ. Code § 51 (Unruh Civil Rights Act)

Discrimination or boycott in business transactions prohibited. Civ. Code § 51.5

Franchisors prohibited from discriminating in granting of franchises. Civ. Code § 51.8

Damages for denial of equal rights in business establishments. Civ. Code § 52

State trust monies may not be invested in entities engaging in discriminatory business practices in furtherance or compliance with Arab League's economic boycott of Israel. Gov. Code § 16649.80 et seq.

[3] Disabled Persons

[a] Access for Disabled Persons

Disabled persons have right to full and free use of, and equal access to, public facilities. Civ. Code §§ 54, 54.1

Injunctive relief available to person aggrieved by violation of Civ. Code §§ 54, 54.1; Gov. Code § 4450 et seq.; and Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq.; Civ. Code § 55

District attorney, county counsel if district attorney does not bring action, city attorney, Department of Rehabilitation, or Attorney General authorized to sue to enforce disabled persons' right of access to public places and conveyances. Civ. Code § 55.1; Health & Safety Code §§ 19954, 19958.5

Construction-Related Accessibility Standards Compliance Act. Civ. Code §§ 55.3, 55.51 et seq.

Access to public buildings by disabled persons. Gov. Code §§ 4450-4460

Access to fixed route transit equipment and public transit structures by individuals with disabilities. Gov. Code § 4500

Toilet facilities for disabled persons in public buildings. Gov. Code §§ 7250-7252

Public officers and employees prohibited from coercing disabled persons with regard to joining organization or preventing discussion of legislation. Gov. Code §§ 8312, 8313

State agency parking facility required to reserve parking spaces for physically disabled persons. Gov. Code § 14679

Discrimination at public beaches or public access to beaches prohibited. Gov. Code §§ 54091, 54092

California Building Standards Law. Health & Safety Code § 18901 et seq.

Membership of physically disabled on California Building Standards Commission. Health & Safety Code § 18921

California Building Standards Code. Health & Safety Code § 18935 et seq.

State Historical Building Code. Health & Safety Code § 18950 et seq.

Access to historical buildings by physically disabled. Health & Safety Code §§ 18953, 18954, 18956

Access to places of public amusement and resort by physically disabled persons. Health & Safety Code §§ 19952-19954

Access to public accommodations by physically disabled persons. Health & Safety Code §§ 19955-19959

Reduced transit fares and accessibility of dial-a-ride and paratransit services to individuals with disabilities. Pub. Util. Code §§ 99155, 99155.5

[b] Insurance for Disabled Persons

Health care services plan prohibited from unnecessary discrimination against physically or mentally impaired persons. Health & Safety Code § 1367.8

Disabled persons do not automatically lose coverage under parents' health care service plan on reaching specified limiting age. Health & Safety Code § 1373(d)

Extension of medical benefits to person who became totally disabled while enrolled in plan. Health & Safety Code § 1399.62

Disability insurance required to be offered to physically handicapped members of group under same terms and conditions as others. Ins. Code § 10122.1

Self-insured employee welfare benefit plan required to offer coverage to physically handicapped persons under same terms and conditions as others. Ins. Code § 10123.2

Discrimination against blind motor vehicle owners or disabled persons prohibited in motor vehicle liability insurance. Ins. Code §§ 11628.5, 11628.7

[c] Public Programs for Disabled Persons

Shared housing for elderly and disabled persons. Health & Safety Code §§ 19902-19904

Community Redevelopment Law prohibits discrimination on specified grounds. Health & Safety Code §§ 33050, 33051

Special housing programs for disabled. Health & Safety Code § 50680 et seq.

California Children's Services Act, including services for physically handicapped minors. Health & Safety Code § 123800 et seq.

Genetically Handicapped Person's Program. Health & Safety Code § 125125 et seq.

[d] Miscellaneous Protections and Rights for Disabled Persons

Discrimination against blind persons in social work profession prohibited. Bus. & Prof. Code § 4992.6

Certain legal service projects benefitting disabled persons entitled to funds from Funds for Provision of Legal Services to Indigent Persons. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6210-6228

Service station refueling service for disabled persons. Bus. & Prof. Code § 13660

Additional penalties applicable to violation of unfair competition law perpetrated against disabled persons. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17206.1

Assistive listening or computer-aided transcription systems required in courts. Civ. Code § 54.8

Requirement that on and after January 1, 2005, whenever transit operator improves or replaces ticket vending machine at public transit station to include video instructions, transit operator must equip ticket vending machine with audio instructions enabling visually impaired persons to follow visual prompts. Pub. Util. Code § 99163

[4] Insurance

Discrimination in contract coverage by health care service plan prohibited. Health & Safety Code § 1365.5

Discriminatory practices by certain admitted insurers prohibited. Ins. Code §§ 679.70-679.73

Sex-based differentials in rates, dividends, or benefits. Ins. Code § 790.03(f)

Insurance business subject to California laws applicable to any other business, including Unruh Civil Rights Act. Ins. Code § 1861.03(a)

Discrimination in life and disability insurance forbidden. Ins. Code §§ 10140-10145.3

Discrimination in motor vehicle liability insurance forbidden. Ins. Code §§ 11628, 11628.5, 11628.7, 11629, 11629.5

Discrimination by insurers in bonding contractors prohibited. Ins. Code §§ 12095-12097

[5] Real Estate Transactions

Discriminatory restrictions on ownership or use of real property are void. Civ. Code § 53

Restrictions in deeds on basis of characteristics listed in Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) are void. Civ. Code § 782

Restrictions in deeds on basis of characteristics listed in FEHA are omitted. Civ. Code § 782.5

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawGeneral OverviewHealthcare LawInsurancePreexisting ConditionsPublic Health & Welfare LawHousing & Public BuildingsAccessibility, Construction & DesignPublic Health & Welfare LawSocial ServicesDisabled & Elderly PersonsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawRestrictive CovenantsGeneral Overview

131 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.64A

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.64A California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI)

For related jury instructions regarding civil rights, including instructions addressing, for example, the Unruh Civil Rights Act, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI), Series 3000, Civil Rights (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.65

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.65 Decisions

[1] Unruh Civil Rights Act

Application of Unruh Act to associations does not violate rights of members guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. I, when it does not interfere unduly with members' freedom of private association and does not violate right of expressive association. Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 547-549, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474

Unlike Americans with Disabilities Act as interpreted by United States Supreme Court, definition of disability under Unruh Act does not require plaintiff to show she is regarded as having present limitation of major life activity, which as California Legislature clarified, was state of California law when insurance company refused to issue policy to plaintiff, so that insurance company was not entitled to summary judgment on claim under Unruh Act for disability discrimination for refusing to issue disability income insurance policy based on plaintiff's diagnosis of and treatment for adjustment disorder with mixed anxiety and depressed mood and company's underwriting policy to deny coverage for applicants with adjustment disorder until at least one year after cessation of treatment. Goldman v. Standard Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2003) 341 F.3d 1023, 1026-1034

Unruh Act is intended to proscribe arbitrary discrimination, or blanket exclusion of class of persons; Act does not compel creation of separate but equal Olympic track events for women. Martin v. Int'l Olympic Comm. (9th Cir. 1984) 740 F.2d 670, 675-677

Plaintiff who establishes violation of Americans With Disabilities Act need not prove intentional discrimination in order to obtain damages for disability discrimination in violation of Civ. Code § 51(f). Munson v. Del Taco, Inc. (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 661, 667-678, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 685, 208 P.3d 623

Rights of religious freedom and free speech guaranteed in both federal and California Constitutions did not exempt medical clinic's physicians from complying with Unruh Civil Rights Act's prohibition against discrimination based on person's sexual orientation, so that physicians employed by clinic could not refuse fertility treatments to lesbian on basis of physicians' religious beliefs regarding particular type of treatment, where First Amendment's right to free exercise of religion did not exempt physicians from conforming their conduct to Unruh Act's antidiscrimination requirements even if compliance posed incidental conflict with their religious beliefs, and where to avoid conflict between their religious beliefs and Unruh Act's antidiscrimination provisions, physicians could simply refuse to perform medical procedure at issue for any patient of clinic or, because they would incur liability under Act if they infringed on right to full and equal services of clinic's medical practice, they could avoid conflict by ensuring that every patient requiring procedure received full and equal access to procedure through clinic physician lacking their religious objections. North Coast Women's Care Medical Group, Inc. v. Benitez (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1145, 1153-1161, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 708

To state claims under Unruh Act and Gender Tax Repeal Act, men who alleged that they patronized club on several occasions and were charged admission fee higher than fee charged to women were not required to request nondiscriminatory treatment and be refused, where Unruh Act did not establish as condition of instituting lawsuit that defendant have been given notice and opportunity to correct asserted violation, and price discrimination on basis of gender constituted injury under Unruh Act. Angelucci v. Century Supper Club (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 160, 168, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 142, 158 P.3d 718

Although domestic partners registered under California Domestic Partner Rights and Responsibilities Act of 2003 [Fam. Code § 297 et seq.] are equivalent of spouses for purposes of Unruh Act, before effective date of Domestic Partner Act, country club's policy of denying to domestic partners of members same benefits granted to spouses of members did not violate Unruh Act as impermissible marital status discrimination, and was not impermissible sexual orientation discrimination. However, lesbian domestic partners were entitled to opportunity to prove viable Unruh Act claim for discriminatory application of club's policy. Koebke v. Bernardo Heights Country Club (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 824, 836-855, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 565, 115 P.3d 1212

Unruh Act does not apply to membership decisions of Boy Scouts, because Boy Scouts is expressive social organization whose primary function is inculcation of specific set of values in its youth members, its small social group structure and activities are not comparable to those of traditional place of public accommodation or amusement, and its recreational facilities and activities are complementary to primary purpose; however, business transactions with nonmembers through operation of retail shops and elsewhere, and licensing of use of its insignia, are covered by Act. Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 670, 696-700, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P. 2d 218 ; Randall v. Orange County Council, Boy Scouts of America (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 736, 744, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453, 952 P.2d 261

Concepts of "arbitrary discrimination" and "reasonable" regulations are questions of law decided on demurrer or summary judgment when business policy or practice is valid on its face because it bears reasonable relation to commercial objectives appropriate to enterprise serving public. Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1142, 1164-1165, 1169

Boys' club was business establishment under Unruh Act and its male-only membership policy was prohibited, arbitrary form of discrimination based on findings regarding nature and function of particular defendant club; relevant evidence regarding particular club included suitability of its programs, services, and facilities for both sexes, that value and effectiveness of programs would not be diminished by inclusion of both sexes, and absence of proof that female membership would cause serious permanent damage to club's funding or to its relationship with parent national organization. Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 72, 88-91, 219 Cal. Rptr. 150, 707 P.2d 212

Sex-based price discounts (typically in form of "Ladies' Day") are prohibited by Unruh Act. Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 38, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195

Age restriction in covenants, conditions, and restrictions of condominium development excluding minor children violate Unruh Act. O'Connor v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 790, 793, 794, 191 Cal. Rptr. 320, 662 P.2d 427

Blanket exclusion of all families with minor children from apartment complex is violation of Unruh Act. Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 721, 741-743, 180 Cal. Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 858

Injunctive relief as well as damages available in action under Civ. Code §§ 51 and 52. Burks v. Poppy Constr. Co. (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 463, 470, 20 Cal. Rptr. 609, 370 P.2d 313

Recreational common areas within common interest development that were fenced trails with various entry points spread over common area, entry points included architectural barriers to access by vehicles, trails were linked to larger web of privately owned and publicly owned trails in county, trails were accessible to general public because homeowners' association followed custom of not precluding members of general public from utilizing trails, and association did not charge fees to members of general public for utilizing its trails or otherwise attempt to commercially exploit trails, did not constitute public accommodation under ADA, CPDA, and Unruh Act, where trails would not be public accommodation if association actively excluded general public from using them and private trails did not transform into public accommodations merely because association does not actively exclude members of public from using trails; and where there was no evidence suggesting trails were built for anyone other than association members, association encourages public use of its trails through advertising or otherwise, or that association charges fees to members of public for using trails or benefits in other ways from public's use of trails. Carolyn v. Orange Park Community Assn. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1097-1106, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 699

Bank did not act arbitrarily in violation of Unruh Act when it required United States citizens to provide Social Security number to open credit card account, while allowing foreign nationals to open one using alternative form of identification, where federal regulations specifically required bank to obtain Social Security number from any United States citizen who opened account but specified that when individual customer was not United States citizen, bank could obtain either Social Security number or alternative identification. Bank did not violate Unruh Act by applying minimum identification standards imposed by federal law to both foreign nationals and United States citizens seeking to obtain a credit account, where distinction between types of identification numbers required for United States citizens and foreign nationals was created by federal law and for bank to depart from federally required minimums by imposing stricter requirements on foreign nationals, but not on United States citizens, might have itself appeared discriminatory in context of regulatory scheme and might subject bank to litigation, and even if litigation were not successful, bank had strong incentive to avoid expense and controversy associated with defending such claim. Howe v. Bank of America N.A. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1443, 1452-1454, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 506

In action under Unruh Act by students expelled allegedly for having lesbian relationship, private religious high school was not "business establishment" subject to Act, where primary function of school was inculcation of religious values in its youth members, and admission to school was effectively selective and based on Lutheran religious values; where, although fact that school was nonprofit was not controlling, inculcation of specific set of values with programs designed to teach moral principles to which school subscribed prevented school from being considered business establishment whose student admission practices were subject to Act; where former students' complaint regarding their dismissal from school went to heart of reason for existence of school; where school could charge fees without being subject to Act, because otherwise private organization can engage in some business transactions with members without risk of becoming "business enterprise" for purposes of Unruh Civil Rights Act; and where teaching of garden-variety secular subjects in addition to religious topics did not make it business establishment because school's religious message was inextricably intertwined with its secular functions. Doe v. California Lutheran High School Assn. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 828, 834-841, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 475

In action under Unruh Act and ADA by organization representing disabled individuals against operator of retail department stores for maintaining narrow pathways between merchandise display racks that blocked shoppers with wheelchairs and other mobility aids from reaching merchandise, although trial court properly found that retailer denied access to disabled individuals and that widening merchandise pathways to allow access was not legally mandated because wider pathways would cause significant loss of selling space and profit, trial court erred in concluding that retailer provided adequate alternative method for making its merchandise available to disabled individuals by designing new and remodeled stores to be physically accessible, where, although sufficient evidence supported trial court's finding that removal of barriers to access was not readily achievable and thus not legally mandated, retailer did not meet its obligation to make its merchandise available to disabled individuals denied access to retailer's existing stores by constructing new and geographically distant stores that were accessible, and trial court needed on remand to consider appropriate alternative means for making merchandise available to disabled individuals who denied physical access. Californians for Disability Rights v. Mervyn's LLC (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 571, 582-601, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 144

Baseball team's Mother's Day giveaway of tote bags did not unlawfully violate Unruh Act by giving tote bags to women, where team's intent was to honor mothers on Mother's Day and due to volume of attendees and time pressure, it would have been impracticable for team to make sure each woman who received tote bag was in fact mother, so that team adopted practical approach of giving tote bags to all females over 18 years of age, so that intended discrimination was not female versus male, but rather mothers versus rest of the population, which was not violation of Act as unreasonable, arbitrary or invidious discrimination. Cohn v. Corinthian Colleges (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 523, 527-530, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 401

Plaintiff who presented himself to Internet matchmaking service business with intent of purchasing its services, but became aware of business's practice of charging different amounts for such services based on gender and did not purchase services, was not aggrieved by practice so as to have standing to sue for violations of Unruh Civil Rights Act. Surrey v. TrueBeginnings (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 414, 417-420, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 443

Unruh Act did not require accommodations for individuals with learning disabilities and other conditions affecting their ability to read when taking Medical College Admission Test (MCAT), where, in administering MCAT, defendant maintained facially neutral testing policy with disparate impact on persons with learning and reading-related disabilities, requiring accommodations under Unruh Act to extent they were required under ADA, and there was no allegation defendant failed to comply with ADA in considering requests for accommodations on MCAT. Turner v. Assn. of American Medical Colleges (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1401, 1407-1411, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 94

In action by disabled person against restaurant owner under Unruh Civil Rights Act and Disabled Persons Act, alleging that he was refused service and subjected to ridicule and harassment at restaurant in retaliation for his efforts to ensure that restaurant was accessible for use by disabled under Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, trial court erred in granting summary judgment to restaurant owner after finding that plaintiff failed to establish prima facie case of unlawful retaliation because retaliatory action allegedly taken by restaurant against him was too trivial to be judicially cognizable, where plaintiff's claims, if found true, were sufficient to allow fact finder to conclude, employing both subjective and objective tests, that he was subjected to materially adverse acts of retaliation by restaurant owner, and where plaintiff produced sufficient evidence to establish number of material adverse acts intentionally directed at him that interfered with his full and equal use of restaurant, which was place of public accommodation. Wilson v. Murillo (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1124, 1132-1139, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 214

In action by paraplegic plaintiff who sued owners of apartment complex in which he lived, trial court properly determined that Unruh Civil Rights Act was not violated by lack of curb ramp, which would have required structural modification to property, which Unruh Act specifically did not require, and where cause of action under Civ. Code § 51 premised on existence of structural barrier depended on whether lack of wheelchair ramp at curb constituted intentional violation of another provision of law relating to disability access, and none of statutes referred to by plaintiff as source of such structural access standards was applicable to residential and common areas of apartment complex, even though leasing office within facility was. Coronado v. Cobblestone Village Community Rentals, L.P. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 831, 840-851, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 883

Cable service provider's practice of packaging FM or music service together with television programming or refusing to provide FM or music service by itself did not as matter of law violate Unruh Act, because policy applied equally to sighted and blind subscribers, and contention that policy, despite equal application to all subscribers, had adverse impact on blind persons failed to state violation of Act. Further, blind plaintiff could not show denial of access to place of public accommodation in violation of ADA, because as matter of law, cable services are not place of public accommodation. Belton v. Comcast (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1224, 1237-1239, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 631

Disabled plaintiff in wheelchair who proved restaurant owner's concededly unintentional violations of Americans With Disabilities Act and hence Unruh Act [Civ. Code § 51(f)] could not recover damages, where he could have sued based on unintentional ADA violations but recovered smaller statutory minimum penalty under Civ. Code § 54.3, but he elected to try to obtain larger statutory minimum penalty under Civ. Code § 52 and failed to present evidence defendant intentionally discriminated against him as required by Civ. Code § 52. Gunther v. Lin (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 223, 226-256, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 317

Plain language of Civ. Code § 52(a) makes clear that only those who deny rights guaranteed by Civ. Code § 51, 51.5, or 51.6 are liable for attorney's fees. Thus, trial court erred in awarding plaintiff attorney's fees for bringing disability discrimination action under Unruh Act. Plaintiff accepted defendant's offer to compromise under Code Civ. Proc. § 998, so there was no finding defendant denied, aided, or incited denial, or made any discrimination or distinction contrary to § 51, 51.5, or 51.6, and judgment based on compromise settlement did not constitute finding of liability. Doran v. North State Grocery, Inc. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 484, 488-492, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 922

Theater company's offer of discount admission prices to "baby-boomers" to attend musical about that generation did not involve arbitrary class-based generalization protected by Unruh Civil Rights Act. Pizarro v. Lamb's Players Theatre (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1171, 1174-1176, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 859

Physician pleaded sufficient facts to state valid cause of action against hospital pursuant to Unruh Civil Rights Act, when he specifically alleged that hospital operated as business enterprise offering its facilities to qualified physicians who were not its employees in exchange for fees and other considerations, Unruh Act applied to prevent business entities from discriminating in provision of their facilities on basis of race, and physician's allegation he was denied access was properly cognizable under Unruh Act. Payne v. Anaheim Memorial Medical Center (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 729, 745-749, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 230

Man over 60 years of age who was allowed to speak on call-in radio show but then not allowed to speak on issue of age failed to state age discrimination claim under Unruh Act that would likely prevail on merits, when although certain aspects of operating and publishing commercial syndicated talk show might qualify for treatment under Unruh Act, production and airing of talk show involving public discourse of necessity involved free speech component calling into play First Amendment, requiring additional scrutiny, and state had no compelling interest to justify application of the Unruh Act in face of defendant's First Amendment rights. Ingels v. Westwood One Broadcasting Services, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1068-1074, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 933

In Unruh Act case by African-American man against amusement park based on plaintiff's ejection from park for alleged line cutting, trial court's grant of summary adjudication against plaintiff was improper, when he presented statistical evidence sufficient to support inference that park's facially neutral line cutting policy was applied in discriminatory manner. Everett v. Superior Court (2003) 104 Cal. App. 4th 388, 392-394, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418

County fair's enforcement of dress code to require patron to remove vest bearing insignia of Hell's Angels Motorcycle Club did not violate right to full and equal accommodations under Unruh Act. Gatto v. County of Sonoma (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 744, 765-769, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550

Policy of sports bar of refusing entry to motorcyclists wearing "colors" or patches indicating membership in particular motorcycle club, while admitting entry to patrons in casual attire including full motorcycle regalia, did not violate Unruh Act, when policy was not unlawful discrimination based on unconventional appearance since motorcyclists wearing full regalia were admitted to bar and only part of outfit for which plaintiffs were refused entry was patch signifying allegiance to particular club and when "no colors" rule was policy applicable alike to all persons regardless of race, color, sex, religion, etc., bar possessed legitimate business interest in excluding plaintiffs to prevent barroom brawls between members of rival gangs, and allowing discrimination claim of this nature would lead to endless, increasingly frivolous challenges to dress codes and other neutral admission policies common in many restaurants and retail establishments. Hessians Motorcycle Club v. J.C. Flanagans (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 833, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552

Trial court properly dismissed survivor's action on behalf of estate of long-term mental patient alleging violation of Unruh Act, based on violation of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, for violating implementing regulation requiring public entities to place disabled individuals in setting enabling them to interact with nondisabled persons to fullest extent possible ("integration mandate"), where on closing of state hospital in which decedent had lived, transfer of decedent to community institutional facility rather than another state hospital may have been medically inappropriate but was not violation of integration mandate. Black v. Dep't of Mental Health (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 739, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 39

Unruh Act not violated by car rental agencies' requirement of minimum age for rental where Civ. Code § 1936 regulates rental car contracts, and language of Section 1936(a)(3) anticipates and expressly approves adoption of minimum age requirements by car rental companies and is unambiguous and does not contain reasonableness requirement. Lazar v. Hertz Corp. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1494, 1503, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 368

Police officers are persons entitled to protections of Unruh Act; police officers may bring actions for violations of Act even though their injuries have arisen in some way related to performance of their duties. Long v. Valentino (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1287, 1298, 265 Cal. Rptr. 96 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 855 (1990)

Proprietor of hotel is not permitted to expel guest because of guest's alleged "anti-gay" philosophy; hotel owners are prohibited under Unruh Act from isolating guests according to perceived social or political philosophies. Gray v. Kircher (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1069, 1075, 236 Cal. Rptr. 891

Unruh Act seeks to remedy arbitrary discrimination, not discrimination based on purely personal grounds. Frantz v. Blackwell (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 91, 96, 234 Cal. Rptr. 178

When organization is business enterprise rather than private association, membership is clearly advantage or privilege under Unruh Act, and exclusion from or termination of membership arbitrarily on basis of protected characteristic is prohibited. Rotary Club of Duarte v. Bd. of Dirs. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1035, 1059, 224 Cal. Rptr. 213 , aff'd sub nom., Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537

Segregation on premises of patrons between ages of 18 and 21 is not arbitrary if required to ensure compliance with Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22 (ban on sale of alcoholic beverages to persons under 21), and is permissible if underage drinking cannot otherwise be controlled on premises, and thus does not violate Act. Reilly v. Stroh (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 47, 52-53, 207 Cal. Rptr. 250

Practice of requiring oath or affirmation of particular religious belief by advertiser before publication of advertisement in religiously oriented business telephone directory is improper. Pines v. Tomson (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 370, 383-386, 206 Cal. Rptr. 866

Medical practices and physician services are within meaning of "business establishment" under Unruh Act; hospital's arbitrary refusal to provide medical services to individual violates Act. Leach v. Drummond Med. Group (1983) 144

Cal. App. 3d 362, 371-372, 192 Cal. Rptr. 650

Allegations of community of interest insufficient when complaint for violation of Unruh Act brought on behalf of nine subclasses of patrons alleged separate arbitrary bases for exclusion. Bartlett v. Hawaiian Village, Inc. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 435, 438-440, 151 Cal. Rptr. 392

Ordinance purporting to give owner of private property arbitrary power to exclude anyone, under penalty of criminal prosecution, is interference with civil rights guaranteed by Civ. Code §§ 51 and 52. Ames v. City of Hermosa Beach (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 146, 152, 93 Cal. Rptr. 786

[2] Other State Laws

[a] Disabled Persons

Because award of attorney's fees to prevailing party is mandatory under Civ. Code § 55, and because no finding that plaintiff's claim was frivolous is required under Civ. Code § 55, nor is Civ. Code § 55 preempted by Americans with Disabilities Act, trial court properly awarded prevailing defendant attorney's fees. Jankey v. Lee (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 1173, 1183-1187, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 290

In action under ADA and California Disabled Persons Act, award of attorney's fees to prevailing defendants was preempted by ADA, even though CDPA authorized fees to "prevailing party," where trial court found that plaintiffs' claims were not frivolous and fees were not warranted under ADA, and violation of federal ADA constituted violation of CDPA so that to extent Civ. Code § 55 mandated imposition of fees on losing plaintiff who brought both nonfrivolous ADA action and parallel action under CDPA, fee award under CDPA would be inconsistent with ADA; and where proof required to show violation of CDPA and of ADA was identical, so that it was impossible to distinguish fees necessary to defend against CDPA claim from those expended in defense against ADA claim, and grant of fees on California cause of action was necessarily grant of fees as to ADA claim. Hubbard v. SoBreck, LLC (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 983, 985-987

Action for damages for alleged violation of Disabled Persons Act because countertops in defendant's business establishments were allegedly too high to allow wheelchair access was not barred by res judicata based on consent decree in class action lawsuit against same defendant BFRC in United States District Court in Florida, which alleged defendant's facilities denied equal access to disabled persons in violation of federal Americans with Disabilities Act, because Florida federal case was resolved by consent decree expressly reserving any damage claims under state law. Louie v. BFS Retail & Commercial Operations, LLC (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1544, 1553-1562, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441

Disabled Persons Act ("DPA") did not require accommodations for individuals with learning disabilities and other conditions affecting their ability to read when taking Medical College Admission Test ("MCAT"), where focus of DPA is on physical access to public places and equal physical access to nontangible location such as Internet site, and DPA could not be read to require accommodations for learning and reading-related disabilities on standardized test, and where, like Unruh Civil Rights Act, DPA incorporates ADA to extent violation of right of individual under ADA also constitutes a violation of DPA, but plaintiffs made no allegation or showing that defendant violated ADA. Turner v. Assn. of American Medical Colleges (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1401, 1411-1413, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 94

Mobile home park was place of public accommodation under California Disabled Persons Act, where general public was invited to park on daily, weekly, or monthly basis, as long as they paid rent or fees and followed rules, and whether plaintiff actually paid rent or other fees and followed rules was not relevant to determining whether park fell within CDPA's broad definition of places required to afford full and equal access to individuals with disabilities. However, trial court properly held that plaintiff did not have standing to sue for monetary damages under Civ. Code § 54.3 based on noncompliance of park's swimming pool with American With Disabilities Act Accessibility Guidelines, where plaintiff failed to register as guest and pay guest fee, so that plaintiff was unable to show she actually presented herself to business, as any other customer or guest would do, with intent of paying guest fee to gain admittance to park or to use swimming pool; and where stipulated facts were not specific enough to show actual denial or interference with access on particular occasion, as opposed to merely becoming aware of discriminatory conditions in pool area of park. Reycraft v. Lee (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1217-1227, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 746

Recreational common areas within common interest development that were fenced trails with various entry points spread over common area, entry points included architectural barriers to access by vehicles, trails were linked to larger web of privately owned and publicly owned trails in county, trails were accessible to general public because homeowners' association followed custom of not precluding members of general public from utilizing trails, and association did not charge fees to members of general public for utilizing its trails or otherwise attempt to commercially exploit trails, did not constitute public accommodation under ADA, CPDA, and Unruh Act, where trails would not be public accommodation if association actively excluded general public from using them and private trails did not transform into public accommodations merely because association does not actively exclude members of public from using trails; and where there was no evidence suggesting trails were built for anyone other than association members, association encourages public use of its trails through advertising or otherwise, or that association charges fees to members of public for using trails or benefits in other ways from public's use of trails. Carolyn v. Orange Park Community Assn. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1097-1106, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 699

In action under Civ. Code § 55, trial court acted within its discretion when it determined defendant was prevailing party, where plaintiff obtained none of relief he sought and defendant obtained judgment in its favor on every cause of action, and there was no requirement that prevailing defendant be awarded fees only if plaintiff's claim was frivolous, unreasonable, or groundless; and where any violations were remediated by defendant before action was filed, and plaintiff did not voluntarily dismiss his groundless claim for injunctive relief. Molski v. Arciero Wine Group (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 786, 790-793, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 574

In action by disabled person against restaurant owner under Unruh Civil Rights Act and Disabled Persons Act, alleging that he was refused service and subjected to ridicule and harassment at restaurant in retaliation for his efforts to ensure that restaurant was accessible for use by disabled under Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, trial court erred in granting summary judgment to restaurant owner after finding that plaintiff failed to establish prima facie case of unlawful retaliation because retaliatory action allegedly taken by restaurant against him was too trivial to be judicially cognizable, where plaintiff's claims, if found true, were sufficient to allow fact finder to conclude, employing both subjective and objective tests, that he was subjected to materially adverse acts of retaliation by restaurant owner, and where plaintiff produced sufficient evidence to establish number of material adverse acts intentionally directed at him which interfered with his full and equal use of restaurant, which was place of public accommodation. Wilson v. Murillo (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1124, 1132-1139, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 214

In action by paraplegic plaintiff who sued owners of apartment complex in which he lived, trial court properly determined that Disabled Persons Act was not violated by lack of curb ramp, where cause of action under Disabled Persons Act premised on existence of structural barrier depended on whether lack of wheelchair ramp at curb constituted intentional violation of another provision of law relating to disability access, and none of statutes referred to by plaintiff as source of such structural access standards was applicable to residential and common areas of apartment complex, even though leasing office within facility was. Coronado v. Cobblestone Village Community Rentals, L.P. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 831, 842-851, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 883

Although disabled, plaintiff had no standing under Civ. Code § 54.1 based on defendant's violation of disabled access regulations governing slope of parking spaces, where regulations were not intended to prevent type of accident plaintiff suffered by falling; failure of access aisle to comply with applicable regulations did not deny her equal access to store, because there was no reason to believe plaintiff would have been unable to reach store entrance had she taken prescribed route. Urhausen v. Longs Drug Stores California, Inc. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 254, 261-266, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 838

Concrete trash container on path to south entrance of defendant restaurant was violation of Americans with Disabilities Act, and hence violation of Civ. Code § 54 even though restaurant had one other accessible entrance, where obstacle such as concrete trash container, blocking accessible route of travel to entrance, presented breach of duty under ADA. Madden v. Del Taco, Inc. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 294, 301-304, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313

No federal-question jurisdiction over action for damages under California's Disabled Person's Act [Civ. Code § 54.1]. Wander v. Kaus (9th Cir. 2002) 304 F.3d 856 ; Pickern v. Best Western Timber Cove Lodge Marina Resort (E.D. Cal. 2002) 194 F. Supp. 2d 1128, 1131-1133

Taken together, Civ. Code § 54 et seq. (equal access to public facilities), Gov. Code § 4450 et seq. (access to public buildings), and Health & Safety Code § 19955 et seq. (access to public accommodations) provide for two-fold procedure: public agency or individual may bring injunctive action to enforce compliance with access standards, and individual may bring action for damages when able to establish that he or she was denied equal access on particular occasion. Donald v. Cafe Royale (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 168, 183, 266 Cal. Rptr. 804

Office building making major renovations on seventh floor was required by Gov. Code § 4456 and Health & Safety Code § 19955 to make restrooms on that floor accessible to physically handicapped; limited exception to accessibility requirements for multistoried public accommodations provided by Health & Safety Code § 19956 was not applicable to office building. Wilshire Financial Tower v. City of Los Angeles (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 119, 122-124, 265 Cal. Rptr. 685

City ordinance prohibiting discrimination against persons with AIDS by business establishments, except those engaged in exchange of products containing blood or sperm, was not unconstitutional when applied to manicure establishment. Jasperson v. Jessica's Nail Clinic (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1099, 1109-1112, 265 Cal. Rptr. 301

Scope of Civ. Code § 54.1, applicable to "places to which the general public is invited," is broader than that of Health & Safety Code § 19955. Donald v. Sacramento Valley Bank (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1183, 1195, 260 Cal. Rptr. 49

Civ. Code § 55.1 authorized both city and state to bring action to enjoin violation of Civ. Code § 54.1; state was empowered to bring action, even if city was estopped from acting, when city was not acting as arm or agent of state. City and County of San Francisco v. Grant Co. (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 1085, 1089-1092, 227 Cal. Rptr. 154

[b] Other Discrimination

Alleged comments made by trustee to mother of trust beneficiary during single telephone conversation and brief statement to mother in person later same day during social event at museum failed to establish "severe" or "pervasive" conduct necessary to pursue claim of hostile environment sexual harassment under Civ. Code § 51.9, as those terms are interpreted under Title VII and FEHA in decisions pertaining to sexual harassment in workplace, where conduct could not have been pervasive because it was not so egregious as to alter conditions of underlying professional relationship; and where conduct could not have been severe because, although it was vulgar and highly offensive, remark made in presence of other people attending private showing at museum could not plausibly be construed by reasonable trier of fact as threat to commit sexual assault on plaintiff. Mother also failed to allege facts establishing violation of Civ. Code § 51.9 based on quid pro quo form of sexual harassment, where allegation that trustee's crude statement, considered in context in which it allegedly was made, was threat that, unless mother granted him sexual favors, he would use his authority as trustee to deny her requests for funds, amounted at most to unfulfilled threats, given that mother did not allege that because she rejected his sexual overtures, trustee followed through on his alleged threat by using his authority to cause financial injury or hardship to mother or to her son. Hughes v. Pair (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 1035, 1041-1050, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 636, 209 P.3d 963

Patient at medical center sufficiently alleged cause of action against medical center under Civ. Code § 51.9 by alleging that she was sexually molested by certified nursing assistant, who was one of center's employees, where patient satisfied requirement of business or professional relationship by alleging that nursing assistant, as center's employee or agent, had responsibilities substantially similar to those provided by physician; and where center could be liable for sexual abuse of patient under Civ. Code § 51.9 based on sufficient allegations it ratified nursing assistant's alleged sexual misconduct. C.R. v. Tenet Healthcare Corp. (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1094, 1107-1112, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 424

Person must tender purchase price for business's services or products to have standing to sue it for alleged discriminatory practices relating to it. Thus, plaintiff who presented himself to Internet matchmaking service business with intent of purchasing its services, but became aware of business's practice of charging different amounts for such services based on gender and did not purchase services, was not aggrieved by practice so as to have standing to sue for violations of Gender Tax Repeal Act. Surrey v. TrueBeginnings (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 414, 417-420, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 443

Minor's causes of action for interference with civil rights under Civ. Code § 52.1 and for sexual harassment under Civ. Code § 51.9 were time-barred as matter of law; applicable statute of limitations was one year period provided by former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3), and complaint was not filed within one year period following emancipation; minor's tolling provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 352(a) was not applicable after minor was emancipated. West Shield Investigations & Sec. Consultants v. Superior Court (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 935, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 612 . Note: Effective January 1, 2003, Code Civ. Proc. § 340 was amended and Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1 was added to provide that personal injury actions are now governed by a two-year statute of limitations.

Nonprofit corporation organized for purpose of securing equal housing opportunities for all persons had standing under former Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204 (unfair business practices) to maintain action for injunctive relief for alleged violations of Unruh Act, regardless of its standing under Unruh Act; party is permitted to bring suit under Unfair Business Practices Act to enforce other statutes under which that party would otherwise lack standing. Midpeninsula Citizens for Fair Housing v. Westwood Investors (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 1377, 1389-1393, 271 Cal. Rptr. 99

Restrictive covenant limiting residents of tract housing development to those aged 45 and over invalid under Civ. Code § 53. Park Redlands Covenant Control Comm. v. Simon (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 87, 93, 226 Cal. Rptr. 199

Exclusion of men from "Ladies Only" show featuring male dancers was impermissible gender-based discrimination in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 125.6 and Civ. Code § 51. Easebe Enterprises v. Rice (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 981, 985-987, 190 Cal. Rptr. 678

Inclusion of religion in Civ. Code § 53 indicative that manner in which person approaches spiritual matters is improper and irrelevant criterion for denying access to land; covenant restricting occupancy to members of society similar to religion is void. Taormina Theosophical Community v. Silver (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 964, 976, 190 Cal. Rptr. 38

[3] Title II of Civil Rights Act of 1964

Swimming pool association with membership available, as a practical matter, to all who purchased homes in surrounding geographical areas was not private club. Tillman v. Wheaton-Haven Recreation Ass'n (1973) 410 U.S. 431, 438, 93 S. Ct. 1090, 35 L. Ed. 2d 403

[4] Americans With Disabilities Act

Barrier removal required by Title III of Americans With Disabilities Act that would bring foreign-flag cruise vessel into noncompliance with International Convention for Safety of Life at Sea (SOLAS) [32 U.S. T. 47, T. I. A. S. No. 9700], or any other international legal obligation, and would create serious difficulties for vessel and have substantial impact on its operation, would not be readily achievable. Whether barrier modification is readily achievable must take into consideration modification's effect on shipboard safety. Thus, structural modification is not readily achievable within meaning of 42 U.S.C. § 12181(9) if it would pose direct threat to health or safety of others. Spector v. Norwegian Cruise Line Ltd. (2005) 545 U.S. 119, 125 S. Ct. 2169, 2180-2181, 162 L. Ed. 2d 97

Americans With Disabilities Act by its plain terms prohibits PGA from denying disabled professional golfer equal access to its tours and qualifying rounds on basis of his disability by prohibiting him from using golf cart, where tours and qualifying rounds occur on golf courses, which are the types of places specifically identified as public accommodation, and at all relevant times, PGA leases and operates golf courses to conduct qualifying rounds and tours; and when allowing him to use golf cart and waiving "walking rule," which prohibits use of golf carts in tours and final qualifying rounds, is not modification that would fundamentally alter nature of tours or qualifying rounds, since walking rule is neither essential attribute of game itself nor indispensable feature of tournament golf; further, even if walking rule is "outcome affecting" because fatigue may adversely affect performance, refusal to consider disabled player's personal circumstances violated ADA requirement that individualized inquiry be conducted, since disabled player endures greater fatigue with cart than able-bodied competitors do by walking. PGA Tour, Inc. v. Martin (2001) 532 U.S. 661, 121 S. Ct. 1879, 149 L. Ed. 2d 904

When state Legislature eliminated former requirement of "self-preservation" for resident s of care homes providing assisted living after filing of lawsuit under Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988, 42 U.S.C. § 3600 et seq. and Americans with Disabilities Act, plaintiffs were not entitled to attorney's fees award under "catalyst theory," under which plaintiff is prevailing party if it achieves desired result because lawsuit brought about voluntary change in defendant's conduct, since state's voluntary change lacked necessary judicial imprimatur. Buckhannon Board and Care Home, Inc. v. West Virginia Department of Health and Human Resources (2001) 532 U.S. 598, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 1841-1843, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855

HIV is physical impairment substantially limiting major life activity of reproduction. Bragdon v. Abbott (1998) 524 U.S. 624, 631-641, 118 S. Ct. 2196, 141 L. Ed. 2d 540

Plaintiff did not have standing to pursue claims of violation of ADA, where plaintiff could not show that he suffered injury in fact as to unencountered barriers, because he did not personally encounter alleged barriers, and where he could not show deterrent effect, given that, although his unverified complaint alleged that barriers he claimed to have encountered deterred him from reentering defendant's store, he testified otherwise in his depositions and admitted that encountered alleged barriers did not deter him from visiting store or using restroom, he intended to return to store in future, and he may already have done so. Chapman v. Pier 1 Imports (U.S.) Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 571 F.3d 853, 857-859

District court erred in finding that paraplegic plaintiff did not have standing to seek attorney's fees in action under Title II of ADA against hotel because she failed to introduce evidence of her intent to return to hotel at time that she filed her complaint, where her intent to return to area was evidenced by regularity with which she visited city before, during, and after her stay at hotel, and where her desire to stay at hotel on future trips if it were made accessible was also well supported by evidence she submitted at each successive stage of litigation; district court erred in relying on plaintiff's approximately sixty prior ADA suits to question sincerity of her intent to return to hotel, where record contained no evidence of whether those places had been made accessible, such that plaintiff could have safely returned if she so wished. D'Lil v. Best Western Encina Lodge & Suites (9th Cir. 2008) 538 F.3d 1031, 1036-1040

After district court dismissed case pursuant to settlement agreement, plaintiff was prevailing party entitled to attorney's fees award under ADA and district court erred in denying fees, where plaintiff had authority to require defendants to construct accessible restroom under and only because of settlement agreement; where ADA did not allow district court to consider lack of prelitigation notice as factor in its special-circumstances analysis in determining whether request for attorney's fees under ADA would be unjust because ADA does not require prelitigation notice; and where district court erred in denying fees because it found plaintiff unreasonably protracted litigation, which was reason to reduce fees, not deny them altogether. However, district court had discretion to reduce plaintiff's fee award based on plaintiff's protraction of litigation, but, in its protraction analysis, could not consider whether plaintiff provided prelitigation notice, where it was evident that lack of prelitigation notice did not result in incurring of any unnecessary fees during litigation. Jankey v. Poop Deck (9th Cir. 2008) 537 F.3d 1122, 1129-1134

In assembly areas where spectators can be expected to stand during an event or show being viewed, wheelchair locations must provide lines of sight over spectators who stand. Miller v. Cal. Speedway Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 536 F.3d 1020, 1027-1033

In action by government against nationwide movie theater owners to require them to provide full and equal enjoyment to disabled moviegoers in 96 stadium-style multiplexes located across United States, trial court abused its discretion in ordering modifications to multiplexes designed or built before government gave fair notice of its interpretation of pertinent guideline drafted by Architectural and Transportation Barriers Board and adopted by Attorney General as part of Standards for Accessible Design [28 C.F.R. pt. 36, app. A, § 4.33.3], requiring theaters to provide viewing angle for wheelchair seating within range of angles offered to general public in stadium-style seats, where injunction violated due process. District court also abused its discretion in issuing nationwide injunction neglecting comity concerns pertaining to Fifth Circuit's existing, less stringent interpretation of § 4.33.3. United States v. AMC Entertainment, Inc. (9th Cir. 2008) 549 F.3d 760, 762-774

In action by disabled plaintiff who used wheelchair, alleging violations of ADA based on barriers to access in retail store, district court properly granted summary judgment to store on alleged ADA violations plaintiff encountered or of which he had personal knowledge, where, although plaintiff had standing to challenge barriers at store even though it was store was far away from his home, given that he had personally suffered discrimination as result of barriers, evidence on which he relief to show store's aisle width violated ADA did not raise genuine issue of material fact as to width of aisle; and where exclusion of disabled plaintiff from employees-only restroom did not violate ADA. However, district court erred in concluding that plaintiff did not have standing to challenge other barriers related to his disability and identified in his expert's site inspections, where it was not essential prerequisite of plaintiff's standing that he prove that deterrence caused by previously encountered violations was reason particular violation was not discovered and hence alleged in his complaint, and uncertainty about whether store contained barriers other than those personally known to plaintiff was itself actual, concrete and particularized injury under deterrence framework of ADA standing. Doran v. 7-Eleven, Inc. (9th Cir. 2008) 524 F.3d 1034, 1039-1049

In action against winery that was designated historic property by county, by paraplegic who encountered discriminatory barriers to access when he visited winery, district court properly ordered barrier removal within building, but erred in determining that it would not be readily achievable to make accessible ramp to entrance by refusing to apply 28 C.F.R. § 36.405, providing procedure for businesses to seek alternative requirements for historic properties, and Americans with Disabilities Act Accessibility Guidelines for Buildings and Facilities [28 C.F.R. § 36 App. A 4.1.7], which was incorporated by § 36.405, when evaluating whether accessible ramp would be readily achievable; winery's provision of all relevant services on wheelchair-accessible gazebo was not appropriate alternative accommodation, because it did not change winery's obligation to make readily available changes to enable maximum participation possible for those able to access interior of wine-tasting room. Molski v. Foley Estates Vineyard (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 1043, 1046-1050

Plaintiff who suffered injury in fact that was concrete, particularized, actual, and imminent had constitutional standing under U.S. Const. Art. III to bring suit against store challenging accessibility barriers under Title III of Americans with Disabilities Act and could, in one suit, permissibly challenge all barriers in public accommodation related to his specific disability. However, district court did not err in granting summary judgment to store on issues of whether store's aisle width and refusal to allow him to access employees-only restroom were ADA violations, where plaintiff introduced no evidence as to actual width of aisles and exclusion of disabled plaintiff from employees-only restroom did not violate ADA. Doran v. 7-Eleven, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 1191, 1197-1203

Hotel's initial mistake in assigning room with bathtub rather than roll-in shower caused no cognizable damage under ADA, because it was immediately corrected by reassignment to room with roll-in shower as plaintiff had requested. Similarly, initial absence of shower chair was promptly corrected, and plaintiff had chair he could use in roll-in shower by next morning so he suffered no cognizable injury concerning shower because hotel promptly corrected its errors. However, plaintiff pled injuries that gave him standing to pursue case by alleging encounters with accessibility barriers, other than barrier of inaccessible showers, at hotel, including "path of travel," guestroom, bathroom, telephone, elevator, and signage barriers to access, all in violation of federal and state law and regulation. Finally, because ADA did not require plaintiff to give hotel pre-suit notice that he intended to sue or give hotel opportunity to cure alleged violations before filing suit as pre-requisite to recovering attorney's fees, district court erred when it denied plaintiff's motion for attorney's fees and costs. Skaff v. Meridien North America Beverly Hills (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 832, 837-846

Single decision by ticket seller of ferry operator to ask blind passenger to ride in general passenger area with her guide dog, rather than in more expensive lounge area, was reasonable judgment under 28 C.F.R. § 36.208, where ferry operator had adopted policy excluding animals from lounge based on another passenger's alleged allergy and, with ferry scheduled to depart, selling plaintiff ticket for general passenger area allowed ferry operator to provide plaintiff with transportation, as she requested, albeit without benefits and the cost of lounge. Lockett v. Catalina Channel Express, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 496 F.3d 1061, 1065-1067

In action by wheelchair-bound restaurant patron against restaurant for violations of ADA, trial court abused its discretion in denying plaintiff new trial after jury concluded that restaurant did not fail to identify and remove architectural barriers at restaurant, where testimony of plaintiff and investigator established laundry list of architectural barriers, restaurant's vice president acknowledged continued existence of violations and flatly admitted no one at restaurant had attempted to identify or remove architectural barriers, and only issue about which there was disagreement was whether removal of barriers was readily achievable under 42 U.S.C. § 12182(b)(2)(A)(iv), which was separate from whether restaurant identified and removed barriers. District court's conclusion that jury determined that plaintiff, who had been deemed vexatious litigant for his history of ADA lawsuits, was not "individual" under ADA, but was business and could not recover was unreasonable and legally flawed, where explanation was inconsistent with plain language, structure, and spirit of ADA, and neither district court nor defendant provided support for concluding that person could be considered business and not individual because of history of litigiousness. Molski v. M.J. Cable, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 481 F.3d 724, 731-734

Under Title III of ADA, two private entities staging National Finals Rodeo at publicly owned arena in Las Vegas operate arena during rodeo and are responsible for assuring compliance with ADA's public accommodation physical accessibility requirements, when Title III applies to private entity operating facility owned by public entity. However, suit could proceed without participation of public university, which was owner of arena. Disabled Rights Action Committee v. Las Vegas Events, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 375 F.3d 861, 872-884

In action by wheelchair-bound quadriplegic, based on her ejection from performing arts center with her service dog, district court properly ordered defendants to modify policies to give persons with disabilities "broadest feasible access" to center and not to exclude service animal who made noise on previous occasion, even if behavior was disruptive, if noise was made and intended to serve as means of communication for benefit of disabled owner or if behavior would otherwise be acceptable to center if engaged by humans. Modification was both reasonable and necessary and ordered modification would not cause fundamental alteration of services and facility provided by center. District court also properly found one employee, director of sales and event services, individually liable because he had requisite authority to qualify as operator under Title III, having ability to instruct center staff on who could or could not be admitted to theater, and actively participated in discriminatory acts. Lentini v. California Center for the Arts, Escondido (9th Cir.

2004) 370 F.3d 837, 843-846, 849

District court did not abuse its discretion in concluding current and future Medi-Cal patients with special needs requiring medical services offered at county hospital dedicated primarily to providing inpatient and outpatient rehabilitative care to disabled individuals established likelihood of success on merits of ADA claim for injunctive relief to prevent closure of hospital, when plaintiffs were qualified individuals with disabilities, when as public entity county's health care program is covered by ADA, and when services plaintiffs would lose with closure fell within scope of care county must provide consistent with ADA. Rodde v. Bonta (9th Cir. 2004) 357 F.3d 988, 995-998

Because there was legally enforceable settlement agreement between parties, district court erred when it denied plaintiffs attorney's fees and costs under ADA and 42 U.S.C. § 1988. District court also erred when it denied plaintiffs prevailing party status based on their success in obtaining preliminary injunction preventing defendant developmental services department from releasing development center residents into community placements unless certain conditions were met. District court did not err, however, in denying plaintiffs prevailing party status based on their efforts to modify intervenors' permanent injunction. Richard S. v. Dept. of Developmental Services of State of California (9th Cir. 2003) 317 F.3d 1080, 1086-1089

Trial court erroneously dismissed action under ADA by paraplegic plaintiff who uses wheelchair, alleging that because defendant grocery stores are "public accommodations" within meaning of ADA [42 U.S.C. § 12181(7)(E)], defendant is required to remove architectural barriers making it difficult for plaintiff to gain access to one of defendant's stores on ground that plaintiff had not attempted to enter store during limitations period so that claim was time-barred and he did not have standing, when plaintiff who is disabled within meaning of ADA and who has actual knowledge of illegal barriers at public accommodation to which he or she desires access need not engage in futile gesture of attempting to gain access to show actual injury during limitations period, and plaintiff who seeks injunctive relief against ongoing violation is not barred from seeking relief either by statute of limitations or by lack of standing. Pickern v. Holiday Quality Foods Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 293 F.3d 1133, 1134

Plaintiff "prevails" and is entitled to attorney's fees and costs when plaintiff enters into legally enforceable settlement agreement with defendant under ADA and 42 U.S.C. § 1988. Barrios v. California Interscholastic Federation (9th Cir. 2002) 277 F.3d 1128, 1134 , cert. denied, 537 U.S. 820

Only owner, lessee, lessor, or operator of noncompliant public accommodation can be liable under Title III of ADA for "design and construct" discrimination described in 42 U.S.C. § 12183(a); thus, architect may not be held liable for failure to design and construct movie theater complex in manner compliant with ADA. Lonberg v. Sanborn Theaters Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 21065

Disabled persons suing under Americans with Disabilities Act for failure to remove architectural barriers or use alternative methods for providing disabled persons with access to their goods, services, and facilities (see 42 U.S.C. § 12182(a), (b)) must exhaust administrative remedies before suing. Snyder v. San Diego Flowers (S.D. Cal. 1998) 21 F. Supp. 2d 1207, 1208-1211

Applicant for life insurance had standing to pursue claim against insurer under ADA after being denied coverage based on his partner's infection with human immunodeficiency virus. Cloutier v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America (N.D. Cal. 1997) 964 F. Supp. 299, 301-302

Recreational common areas within common interest development that were fenced trails with various entry points spread over common area, entry points included architectural barriers to access by vehicles, trails were linked to larger web of privately owned and publicly owned trails in county, trails were accessible to general public because homeowners' association followed custom of not precluding members of general public from utilizing trails, and association did not charge fees to members of general public for utilizing its trails or otherwise attempt to commercially exploit trails, did not constitute public accommodation under ADA, CPDA, and Unruh Act, where trails would not be public accommodation if association actively excluded general public from using them and private trails did not transform into public accommodations merely because association does not actively exclude members of public from using trails; and where there was no evidence suggesting trails were built for anyone other than association members, association encourages public use of its trails through advertising or otherwise, or that association charges fees to members of public for using trails or benefits in other ways from public's use of trails. Carolyn v. Orange Park Community Assn. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1097-1106, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 699

In action under ADA by paraplegic plaintiff who leased slip at marina and sued marina for lack of wheelchair access, trial court erred in finding private marina was not public accommodation subject to ADA, where marina was on its face rental establishment subject to ADA, ADA's failure to mention marinas that leased boat slips to public as covered did not preclude marinas from being rental establishments to which it applied, and including marina as public accommodation even in absence of express designation furthered ADA's purpose to integrate persons with disabilities into economic and social mainstream of American life; where fact that marina did not allow within marina any functions open to general public was not dispositive, because restricted access by itself did not make accommodation nonpublic and selectivity in choosing who among members of public could enter or use an marina did not necessarily defeat its public character; and where trial court erroneously miscast the marina as permanent lodging exempt from ADA, because there was no evidence any marina tenants lived at the marina or regularly slept overnight on their boats. Nicholls v. Holiday Panay Marina, L.P. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 966, 970-975, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 309

In action under Unruh Act and ADA by organization representing disabled individuals against operator of retail department stores for maintaining narrow pathways between merchandise display racks that blocked shoppers with wheelchairs and other mobility aids from reaching merchandise, although trial court properly found that retailer denied access to disabled individuals and that widening merchandise pathways to allow access was not legally mandated because wider pathways would cause significant loss of selling space and profit, trial court erred in concluding that retailer provided adequate alternative method for making its merchandise available to disabled individuals by designing new and remodeled stores to be physically accessible, where, although sufficient evidence supported trial court's finding that removal of barriers to access was not readily achievable and thus not legally mandated, retailer did not meet its obligation to make its merchandise available to disabled individuals denied access to retailer's existing stores by constructing new and geographically distant stores that were accessible, and trial court needed on remand to consider appropriate alternative means for making merchandise available to disabled individuals who denied physical access. Californians for Disability Rights v. Mervyn's LLC (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 571, 582-601, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 144

[5] Air Carrier Access Act of 1986

Decision to refuse passage must be assessed in light of facts and circumstances known to airline at time decision was made, and decision to refuse passage cannot be unreasonable or irrational. Newman v. American Airlines (9th Cir. 1999) 176 F.3d 1128, 1131

[6] Preemption

Blind passenger's claim against airline under Civ. Code § 54.1 based on airline's insistence that he sit in front row of passenger section of aircraft was preempted by former 49 U.S.C. § 1305(a)(1) of Federal Aviation Act. Hingson v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (9th Cir. 1984) 743 F.2d 1408, 1415-1416

Civ. Code § 2103, requiring common carriers to treat passengers with civility, is preempted with respect to air carriers by Federal Aviation Act (49 U.S.C. § 1305(a)(1)); Civ. Code § 51 is not similarly preempted because it applies generally to all business establishments and does not relate to services of air carriers in particular. Abou-Jaoude v. British Airways (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1137, 1141-1145, 281 Cal. Rptr. 150

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawPublic FacilitiesGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental FreedomsFreedom of Association

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.66

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.66 Attorney General Opinions

Homeowners' association may prohibit children from using one of two swimming pools if restriction is reasonable and does not create inequity for families with children. 75 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 219 (1992)

Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control is authorized to revoke license of private club because of discriminatory membership practices on determination for good cause that continuance would be contrary to public welfare or morals. 70 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 75 (1987)

Businesses not in violation of Civ. Code § 51 when establishing regulations relating to services performed and facilities provided, so long as restrictions not arbitrary and there is evidence of disruption to business and patrons by identified group of persons constituting significant proportion of identifiable class. 61 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 320 (1978)

Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.5 not applicable to clauses in letters of credit related to confiscation or war risk or primary boycotts (as opposed to secondary or tertiary boycotts) of one nation directly against another. 59 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 592, 596 (1976)

Specific restrictions made by business establishments such as convenience stores and fast-food outlets and aimed exclusively at students and not general public are arbitrary discrimination. 59 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 70 (1976)

Pedestrian overcrossings constructed with public funds are "sidewalks" within meaning of Gov. Code § 4450, and must be made accessible to and usable by physically handicapped. 58 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 512, 515 (1975)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.67

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.67 Law Reviews

Center and Imparato, Development in Disability Rights: Redefining "Disability" Discrimination: A Proposal to Restore Civil Rights Protections for All Workers, 14 Stan. L. & Pol'y. Rev. 321 (2003)

Blanck, Schur, Kruse, Schwochau, and Song, Development in Disability Rights: Calibrating the Impact of the ADA's Employment Provisions, 14 Stan. L. & Pol'y. Rev. 267 (2003)

Comment, Architectural Barriers Under the ADA: An Answer to the Judiciary's Struggle with Technical Non-Compliance, 39 Cal. W. L. Rev. 349 (2003)

Liebaert, The Death of the Unruh Civil Rights Act: An Examination of the Act After Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV and an Argument in Favor of Liberalizing the Act, 29 W. St. U.L. Rev. 1 (2001)

Comment, Are Insurance Companies Liable Under the Americans with Disabilities Act?, 88 Cal. L. Rev. 607 (2000)

Note, Interpreting "Place of Public Accommodation" Under Title III of the ADA: A Technical Determination with Potentially Broad Civil Rights Implications, 50 Duke L.J. 297 (2000)

Comment, Does Title III of the Americans with Disabilities Act Regulate Insurance?, 66 U. Chi. L. Rev. 243 (1999)

Note, A Public Accommodations Challenge to the Use of Indian Team Names and Mascots in Professional Sports, 112 Harv. L. Rev. 904 (1999)

Comment, A Measure of Our Progress: Testing for Race Discrimination in Public Accommodations, 44 UCLA L. Rev. 1207 (1997)

Rice, Race, Gender, "Redlining," and the Discriminatory Access to Loans, Credit, and Insurance: An Historical and Empirical Analysis of Consumers Who Sued Lenders and Insurers in Federal and State Courts, 1950-1995, 33 San Diego L. Rev. 583 (1996)

Note, "Unruhly" State of Affairs: Warfield v. Peninsula Golf and Country Club, 26 Sw. U. L. Rev. 167 (1996)

Suggs, Racial Discrimination in Business Transactions, 42 Hastings L.J. 1257 (1991)

Note, The Unruh Civil Rights Act: A Weapon To Combat Homophobia in Military On-Campus Recruiting, 24 Loy. L.A. L. Rev. 1333 (1991)

Note, California's Unruh Civil Rights Act is Constitutionally Applauded: Board of Directors of Rotary International v. Rotary Club of Duarte, 18 Sw. U. L. Rev. 559 (1989)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawProtection of Disabled PersonsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawProtection of Disabled PersonsAmericans With Disabilities ActGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawProtection of Disabled PersonsAmericans With Disabilities ActAccommodationCivil Rights LawPublic FacilitiesGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationCoverage & DefinitionsSexual Orientation

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.68

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.68 Text References

Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 8, Constitutional Law, §§ 898-914 (9th ed. 1988)

136 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 116.69-116.79

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 116.69[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Unruh Civil Rights Act

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.80

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.80 Complaint for Damages and Preliminary and Permanent Injunction for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act--General Form [Civ. Code §§ 51, 52(a)]

[1] FORM Complaint for Damages and Preliminary and Permanent Injunction for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act--General Form [Civ. Code §§ 51, 52(a)]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES [AND PRELIMIN-
_____ [name],	)	ARY AND PERMANENT INJUNCTION]
[and DOES I through _____,]	)	(Unruh Civil Rights Act)
Defendant(s).	)	[Amount demanded _____ (exceeds
	)	or does not exceed) $10,000]
	)	[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

_____

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, _____ [state capacity and residence of defendant or other basis of venue, e.g., a resident of _____ County, California, or a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of California with its principal place of business in _____ (city), _____ County, California].

[2. Defendants Doe I through Doe _____, inclusive, are sued herein under fictitious names. Their true names and capacities are unknown to plaintiff. When their true names and capacities are ascertained, plaintiff will amend this complaint by inserting their true names and capacities herein. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that plaintiff's damages as herein alleged were proximately caused by those defendants.)]

[3. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that,) (A)t all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ (name) was the agent of defendant _____ (name) and, in doing the things hereinafter alleged,was acting within the course and scope of such agency and with the permission and consent of his/her codefendant.]

4. _____ [Allege that defendant is a business establishment within the meaning of the Unruh Civil Rights Act, e.g., At all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ (name) was the _____ (specify, e.g., owner or proprietor or lessor or lessee or operator) of a business establishment engaged in the business of _____ (specify, e.g., a public establishment for the sale of food and drink to be consumed on the premises) commonly known and designated as _____ (name of business), situated in _____ (city), _____ County, California].

5. _____ [Allege act(s) of discrimination, e.g., On _____ (date), plaintiff entered _____ (name of business) with the intention and purpose of purchasing food and drink to be consumed on the premises. Plaintiff requested defendant _____ (name), one of defendant's employees, to take his/her order and to serve him/her the selected food and drink. Plaintiff's request was refused. During the time plaintiff was on the above-mentioned premises, food and drink such as he/she wished to order were served and sold to other patrons of defendant's establishment who arrived before and after plaintiff].

6. _____ [Allege protected characteristic of plaintiff enumerated in Act or which is an arbitrary basis for discrimination, e.g., Plaintiff is _____ (a person of the African American race or a member of the Peace and Freedom Party)].

7. _____ [Allege that plaintiff's characteristic was the reason for the act of discrimination, e.g., (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that) (D)efendants, and each of them, denied to plaintiff the services, advantages, accommodations, facilities, and privileges provided to other persons, as alleged above, on account of plaintiff's _____ (sex or race or color or religion or ancestry or national origin or disability or marital status or sexual orientation or medical condition, or state other characteristic that was an arbitrary basis for discrimination, e.g., political affiliation [state explanation if necessary, e.g., in that plaintiff, as a member of the Peace and Freedom Party, was in possession of political literature on entering defendant's establishment])].

[8. _____ (Allege that defendant's wrongful conduct is continuing, e.g., Defendant's wrongful conduct is continuing in that defendant continues to deny plaintiff and all persons of plaintiff's _____ [sex or race or color or religion or ancestry or national origin or disability or medical condition or marital status or sexual orientation, or state other characteristic that is an arbitrary basis for discrimination, e.g., political affiliation] the full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges, and services of the above-mentioned business establishment).]

[9. Unless defendant _____ (name) is restrained by a preliminary and permanent injunction of this court, plaintiff's injury will be great and irreparable. Plaintiff has no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy at law because _____ (specify facts that show pecuniary compensation would not afford adequate relief, that it would be extremely difficult to ascertain the amount of compensation that would afford adequate relief, and/or that restraint is necessary to prevent a multiplicity of proceedings, e.g., it will be impossible for plaintiff to determine the precise amount of damage that he/she will suffer if defendant's conduct is not restrained or plaintiff will be forced to institute a multiplicity of suits to obtain adequate compensation if defendant's conduct is not restrained).]

[10. _____ (Set forth any actual damages sustained as a proximate result of defendants' refusal to serve plaintiff).]

11. As a proximate result of the wrongful act of defendants, plaintiff is [in addition] entitled to recover statutory damages of _____ [specify amount up to three times the amount of actual damages or $4,000], plus attorney's fees, as provided in Civil Code Section 52.

[12. The above-recited actions of defendant(s) were done with malice, fraud, or oppression, and in reckless disregard of the plaintiff's rights. Specifically, _____ (set forth facts showing malice, fraud, or oppression, within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3294).]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment [against defendants, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For a preliminary injunction and a permanent injunction enjoining defendant and defendant's agents, servants, and employees, and all persons acting under, in concert with, or for defendant from denying, and aiding and inciting such denial, and from making any discrimination, distinction, or restriction in providing full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, and services in defendant's business establishment;

2. For general damages in the sum of $_____;

3. For statutory damages in the sum of $_____ [if actual damages are $1,333.34 or more, specify amount three times actual damages, otherwise $4,000] pursuant to Civil Code Section 52;

4. For attorney's fees pursuant to Civil Code Section 52;

[5. For exemplary and punitive damages;]

6. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

7. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

_____ [date]
Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the plaintiff in the above-entitled action. I have read the foregoing complaint and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters which are therein alleged on information and belief, and, as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is a general form for use by a plaintiff seeking damages for violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code § 51).

Any violation of the Unruh Act is per se injurious, entitling the victim to a statutory award of at least $4,000 [Civ. Code § 52(a)]. If the victim sustains actual damages, the damages may be recovered, in addition to an award of up to three times that amount [Civ. Code § 52(a); see Civ. Code § 52(h) ("actual damages" means special and general damages); see also Optional Paragraph 10].

Injunctive relief is also available when a person or group of persons is engaged in conduct of resistance to the full enjoyment of the rights secured by the Unruh Act [Civ. Code § 52(c); see Optional Paragraphs 8 and 9].

With appropriate modifications, this form may be used to state a complaint for violation of Civ. Code § 51.5, which prohibits discrimination in business transactions on the basis of the characteristics protected by the Unruh Act, and which entitles the plaintiff to the same remedies [see Civ. Code § 52].

With appropriate modifications, this form may also be used to state a complaint for violation of Civ. Code § 51.7, which prohibits violence or the threat of violence against persons or property based on the same protected characteristics as the Unruh Act [see Civ. Code § 52(b)]. In modifying the form, note that there is no $4,000 minimum on tripled actual damages, and that the complaint should include a request for the $25,000 civil penalty [see Civ. Code § 52(b)]. For discussion of Civ. Code § 51.7, see Ch. 117A, Civil Rights: Interference with Civil Rights by Threats, Intimidation, Coercion, or Violence .

[3] Allegations

The form of complaint in [1], above, alleges all of the following:

- Defendant's capacity and basis for venue (Paragraph 1).

- An optional fictitious name ("DOE") allegation (Optional Paragraph 2) [see Civ. Code § 474; see also Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used].

- An optional agency allegation (Optional Paragraph 3) [see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent].

- Facts showing that defendant is a business establishment within the meaning of the Act (Paragraph 4).

- The nature of defendant's wrongful conduct (Paragraph 5).

- The characteristic of plaintiff that is a protected characteristic enumerated in the Act or an arbitrary basis for discrimination (Paragraph 6) [see Civ. Code § 51(b)].

- The relationship between defendant's wrongful conduct and plaintiff's characteristic (Paragraph 7).

- An optional paragraph alleging the continuing nature of defendant's wrongful conduct (Optional Paragraph 8). This paragraph should be used if plaintiff seeks injunctive relief.

- An optional paragraph alleging facts showing why plaintiff lacks an adequate remedy at law and will suffer great and irreparable injury (Optional Paragraph 9) [Civ. Code § 3422(1)-(3); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(2)-(6); see Wind v. Herbert (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 276, 285, 8 Cal. Rptr. 817] . This paragraph should be used if plaintiff seeks injunctive relief.

- An optional paragraph alleging any actual damages plaintiff incurred (Optional Paragraph 10) [see Civ. Code § 3333].

- Plaintiff's right to recover statutory damages and attorney's fees (Paragraph 11) [see Civ. Code § 52].

- An optional allegation that the actions of defendants were done with malice, fraud, or oppression, and in reckless disregard of the plaintiff's rights (Optional Paragraph 12). This optional allegation, if appropriate under the circumstances, would support recovery of punitive damages [see Civ. Code § 3294].

[4] Prayer

The prayer in the form complaint in [1], above, seeks preliminary and permanent injunctive relief.

In a limited civil case, the court may issue temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions, but not permanent relief; thus, if permanent injunctive relief is sought, the action cannot be brought as a limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(8), 580(b)(2)]. For discussion, a procedural checklist, and additional forms necessary to obtain a temporary restraining order, preliminary injunction, or permanent injunction, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

The prayer also seeks both general and statutory damages.

The prayer includes an optional prayer for punitive damages. In a case where the violation of the Unruh Act involves malice, fraud, oppression, or reckless disregard of the plaintiff's rights [see Civ. Code § 3294], the plaintiff might be able to recover punitive damages. If the facts do not involve malice, fraud, oppression, or reckless disregard of the plaintiff's rights, the optional punitive damages allegation (Optional Paragraph 12 of the form of complaint) and the optional prayer for punitive damages should not be used.

The prayer also includes a prayer for attorney's fees. Civ. Code § 52 provides for recovery of attorney's fees in Unruh Act cases.

[5] Temporary Restraining Order

If a temporary restraining order is also sought without notice, it must be shown either by verified complaint or by affidavit (or declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) that great or irreparable injury would result to the applicant before the matter can be heard on notice. The plaintiff's attorney is also required to certify under oath that certain steps were taken and reasons existed for the lack of formal notice [see Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1204(b)]. If a temporary restraining order is granted, it will issue with an order to show cause, on the hearing of which the court will determine whether to grant a preliminary injunction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]. For further discussion and forms regarding temporary restraining orders, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

[6] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

Moreover, if the plaintiff states in his or her complaint facts showing that the action has been commenced in a proper place for trial of the action, and no affidavit or declaration is filed stating those facts, the complaint must be verified [see Civ. Code § 1812.10; Code Civ. Proc. § 396a].

A complaint seeking preliminary injunctive relief must be either verified or accompanied by affidavits (or declarations under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) in support of the allegations of the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]. If relying on a verified complaint instead of affidavits (or declarations), counsel must plead evidentiary facts that would entitle plaintiff to the relief sought [see E.H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 373, 106 P.2d 1 ; Finnie v. Town of Tiburon (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1, 15, 244 Cal. Rptr. 581] . In a limited civil case, the court may issue temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions, but not permanent injunctive relief; thus, if permanent injunctive relief is sought, the action cannot be brought as a limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(8)]. Therefore, if the optional language for permanent injunctive relied is used, the complaint may not be brought as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 580(b)(2)]. For discussion, a procedural checklist, and additional forms necessary to obtain a temporary restraining order, preliminary injunction, or permanent injunction, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

[7] Cross References

For alternative forms of allegations for use in conjunction with this form, see §§ 116.81 and 116.82

For alternative allegations as to agency, capacity, and residence of parties, and fictitious name allegations, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used

For discussion and forms relating to amendment of pleadings for use when an unknown defendant is sued under a fictitious name, see Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings

For alternative forms of captions and introductions, see Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions

For discussion and forms relating to the format of complaints, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see Ch. 177, Damages

For discussion and forms relating to temporary restraining orders, preliminary injunctions, and permanent injunctions, see Ch. 303, Injunctions

For discussion of jurisdiction in California courts, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal , and Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter

For forms of allegations of infliction of emotional distress, see Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress

For alternative forms of prayers, see Ch. 420, Prayers

For discussion and forms relating to service of summons, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers

For forms of allegations establishing venue, see Ch. 571, Venue

For alternative forms of verification, see Ch. 572, Verification

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Unruh Civil Rights Act

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.81

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.81 Allegations for Use in Complaints for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act--Refusal by Physician to Treat Child

[1] FORM Allegations for Use in Complaints for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act--Refusal by Physician to Treat Child

1. At all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ [name] was engaged in the business of the practice of medicine [commonly known and designated as _____ (name of professional corporation or clinic, if appropriate)] situated _____ [city], _____ County, California.

2. On _____ [date], plaintiff _____ [name] entered into an oral agreement with defendant whereby defendant agreed to render medical services to plaintiff's minor child _____ [name]. Pursuant to that agreement, plaintiff went to the office of defendant with the intent and purpose of obtaining medical treatment for _____ [briefly describe type of illness or medical symptoms]. At that time, plaintiff _____ [name] requested medical services from defendant for plaintiff's minor child _____ [name], but defendant failed and refused to provide such services. At all times herein mentioned and prior and subsequent thereto, defendant provided medical services to other persons similar to those requested by plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

The form allegations in [1], above, are for use by a parent in an action for violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code § 51) based on a physician's refusal to treat the plaintiff's minor child. These allegations may be substituted for Paragraphs 4 and 5 of the complaint in § 116.80[1].

These form allegations are based on the fact situation in Washington v. Blampin (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 604, 38 Cal. Rptr. 235 . In Washington, a father entered into an agreement with a physician whereby the physician was to render medical services to the plaintiff's minor child. The court found that the services sought were services both to the father and to the child in that it is the legal duty of a parent to provide necessary medical care for his or her child. Thus, a complaint based on those allegations states a cause of action both on behalf of the father and on behalf of the child [Washington v. Blampin (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 604, 608, 38 Cal. Rptr. 235 (judgment on pleadings for defendant reversed; court did not discuss recovery to which either father or son may be entitled)]. When medical service is refused by reason of a protected characteristic of the plaintiff, the personal nature of the physician-patient relationship creates no obstacle to recovery of damages [Washington v. Blampin (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 604, 608, 38 Cal. Rptr. 235] .

[3] Cross References

For a general form of complaint under the Unruh Act, see § 116.80

For an alternative form of allegations for use in Unruh Act complaints, see § 116.82

For discussion and forms relating to the format of complaints, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Unruh Civil Rights Act

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.82

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.82 Allegation for Use in Complaints for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act--Exclusion or Expulsion of Person From Association or Club

[1] FORM Allegation for Use in Complaints for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act--Exclusion or Expulsion of Person From Association or Club

1. At all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ [name of association or club, e.g., Boys' Club of Santa Cruz] was a nonprivate association or club in that _____ [specify characteristics indicating public nature of association or club, e.g., it was open to the general public, it had a large membership, and was without any limits on membership or specific standards for admissibility].

2. At all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ [name of association or club] was a business establishment within the meaning of the Unruh Civil Rights Act in that it was a _____ [commercial or noncommercial] entity open to and serving the general public.

[EITHER]

3. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff applied for membership with _____ [name of association or club] [set forth procedures required for membership, if any, e.g., by tendering membership dues and a completed application form].

[OR]

3. Plaintiff joined _____ [name of association or club] on _____ [date], and was a member in good standing until plaintiff was expelled from defendant _____ [association or club].

[CONTINUE]

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff was notified that he/she would [not be admitted to or be expelled from] membership in defendant _____ [name of association or club] for the reason that _____ [specify protected characteristic of plaintiff enumerated in Act or reason that is an arbitrary basis for discrimination, e.g., plaintiff is homosexual], and for no other reason, in contravention of Civil Code Section 51.

[2] Use of Form

The form allegations in [1], above, are for use by a plaintiff in an action against an association or a club for violation of the Unruh Act, Civ. Code § 51, by excluding a prospective member or expelling a member of the association or club for a discriminatory reason. The allegations set forth facts showing that the association or club is a business establishment within the meaning of the Act, because it is not truly a private club, but is in fact open to the public, and without an exclusive membership [see Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 72, 88-91, 219 Cal. Rptr. 150, 707 P.2d 212 ; see also § 116.13[2]]. These allegations may be substituted for Paragraphs 4 and 5 of the complaint in § 116.80[1].

[3] Cross References

For a general form of complaint under the Unruh Act, see § 116.80

For an alternative form of allegations for use in Unruh Act complaints, see § 116.81

For discussion and forms relating to the format of complaints, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Unruh Civil Rights Act

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 116.83-116.89

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 116.83[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART IV. FORMS
B. Other Statutory Actions

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.90

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.90 Complaint for Damages for Sexual Harassment in Business, Service, or Professional Relationship [Civ. Code §§ 51.9, 52(b)]

[1] FORM Complaint for Damages for Sexual Harassment in Business, Service, or Professional Relationship [Civ. Code §§ 51.9, 52(b)]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES
_____ [name], [and DOES I	)	(Sexual Harassment in Business, Service, or Profesthrough _____,] Defendant(s).	)	sional Relationship)
	)	[Amount demanded (exceeds or does not exceed)
	)	$10,000]
		[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

_____

Plaintiff alleges:

[Allege venue, EITHER]

1. _____ [If defendant is an individual, allege defendant's residence, e.g., Defendant _____ (name) resides in _____ County, California.]

[AND/OR]

1. _____ [If defendant is a business entity, allege type of entity and principal place of business (or other venue), e.g., Defendants _____ (name) and _____ (name) are, and at all times herein mentioned were, partners engaged in property management under the common name of _____ (name of partnership), having their principal place of business at _____ (address), _____ (city), California, and are sued herein individually and by such common name.]

[AND/OR]

1. _____ [If defendant is a corporation, allege capacity and principal place of business (or other venue), e.g., Defendant _____ (name) is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a limited liability professional corporation organized and existing under the laws of California, engaged in property management, with its principal place of business at _____ (address), _____ (city), California.]

[CONTINUE]

[2. Defendants Doe I through Doe _____, inclusive, are sued herein under fictitious names. Their true names and capacities are unknown to plaintiff. When their true names and capacities are ascertained, plaintiff will amend this complaint by inserting their true names and capacities herein. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that plaintiff's damages as herein alleged were proximately caused by those defendants.)]

[3. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that at all times herein mentioned each of the defendants, including all defendants sued under fictitious names, was the agent and employee of each of the remaining defendants, and in doing the things herein alleged, was acting within the scope of his/her agency and employment.]

4. At all times herein mentioned, there was [and is] a _____ [allege nature of relationship between plaintiff and defendant, e.g., business or service or professional] relationship between plaintiff and defendant[s] in that defendant is a _____ [allege the nature of the business, service, or profession in which defendant engages, e.g., property manager] and plaintiff is _____ [allege plaintiff's role in the business, service, or professional relationship, e.g., a tenant in an apartment building that was at all times herein mentioned managed by defendant, which is located at 1234 Main Street, in the City of Farallones, County of Pacific, State of California].

5. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [made or began making] _____ [sexual advances or solicitations or sexual requests or demands for sexual compliance by the plaintiff] that were unwelcome and _____ [pervasive or severe]. _____ [Allege the specific facts showing the defendant's sexual advances, solicitations, sexual requests, or demands for sexual compliance by plaintiff.]

[EITHER]

6. Plaintiff cannot easily terminate plaintiff's relationship with defendant without tangible hardship because _____ [allege facts showing how termination of the relationship would cause plaintiff tangible hardship, e.g., since defendant continues to manage the property at 1234 Main Street, Farallones, California, which includes the apartment that is plaintiff's current residence, plaintiff would have to move to a different residence, which would involve the time and expense of finding a new residence and incurring all of the expenses involved in moving. Further, plaintiff cannot afford to move at this time.]

[OR]

6. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff terminated the relationship with defendant with tangible hardship. _____ [Allege facts showing how termination of the relationship caused plaintiff tangible hardship, e.g., Since defendant continued to manage the property at 1234 Main Street, Farallones, California, which included the apartment that was plaintiff's residence, plaintiff had to move to a different residence, incurring the hardship of spending the time and expense of finding a new residence and incurring all of the expenses involved in moving. Further, plaintiff could not afford to move and was forced to borrow the money to move.]

[CONTINUE]

7. As a direct and proximate result of defendant's conduct, plaintiff was _____ [state damage caused], all to his/her damage in an amount according to proof.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For damages in an amount according to proof;

2. For exemplary damages;

3. For attorney's fees and costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

_____ [date]
Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[Verification, if desired. See § 116.80[1].]

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use by a victim of sexual harassment in a business, service, or professional relationship pursuant to Civ. Code § 51.9. On plaintiff's proof of all the required elements under Civ. Code § 51.9, damages are recoverable as provided in Civ. Code § 52(b) [Civ. Code § 51.9(b)].

For discussion of sexual harassment and Civ. Code § 51.9, see § 116.35.

For related jury instructions, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 3024, 3027 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions.

[3] Allegations

The form of complaint in [1], above, alleges all of the following:

- Defendant's capacity and basis for venue (alternative versions of Paragraph 1).

- An optional fictitious name ("DOE") allegation (Optional Paragraph 2) [see Civ. Code § 474; see also Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used].

- An optional agency allegation (Optional Paragraph 3) [see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent].

- A business, service, or professional relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant (Paragraph 4);

- The nature of the sexually harassing conduct or behavior by defendant that forms the basis for the cause of action, and the nature of the conduct as unwelcome and pervasive or severe (Paragraph 5);

- Plaintiff's inability to easily terminate the relationship without tangible hardship or the tangible hardship caused to plaintiff in terminating the relationship (alternate versions of Paragraph 6); and

- That plaintiff has suffered or will suffer economic loss or disadvantage or personal injury as a result of the harassing conduct (Paragraph 7).

[4] Prayer

The complaint seeks an award of damages in an amount according to proof [see Civ. Code §§ 51.9, 52(b)].

The complaint also includes a prayer for exemplary damages and for attorney fees as provided under Civ. Code § 52(b) [Civ. Code § 51.9(b) (damages will be awarded as provided by Civ. Code § 52(b))].

[5] Venue

The county in which the defendants or some of them reside at the commencement of the action is the proper county for the trial of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)].

A corporation has a residence where its principal office or place of business is established [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5].

[6] No Action for Conduct Before January 1, 1995

Civ. Code § 51.9 was enacted in 1994, effective January 1, 1995. It is prospective in application only and does not apply to conduct before January 1, 1995 [see Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 767, 788, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301] . Further, the Unruh Act itself, Civ. Code § 51, does not protect against sexual harassment [see Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 767, 786-788, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301] .

[7] Cross References

For alternative allegations as to agency, capacity, and residence of parties, and fictitious name allegations, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used

For discussion and forms relating to amendment of pleadings for use when an unknown defendant is sued under a fictitious name, see Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings

For alternative forms of captions and introductions, see Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions

For discussion and forms relating to the format of complaints, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see Ch. 177, Damages

For discussion of jurisdiction in California courts, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal , and Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter

For forms of allegations of infliction of emotional distress, see Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress

For alternative forms of prayers, see Ch. 420, Prayers

For discussion and forms relating to service of summons, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers

For forms of allegations establishing venue, see Ch. 571, Venue

For alternative forms of verification, see Ch. 572, Verification

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART IV. FORMS
B. Other Statutory Actions

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.91

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.91 Cross Complaint for Declaratory Relief--Discriminatory Restriction on Real Property is Void [Civ. Code § 53]

[1] FORM Cross Complaint for Declaratory Relief--Discriminatory Restriction on Real Property is Void [Civ. Code § 53]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)
_____ [name], [and DOES I through _____,] Defendant(s).	)	NO. _____
_____ [name], Cross Complainant,	)	CROSS COMPLAINT FOR DECLARATORY RELIEF
vs.	)	(Discriminatory Restriction on Real Property Is Void)
_____ [name], [and DOES I through _____,] Cross Defendant(s).	)

_____

Cross complainant alleges:

[1. _____ (Allege capacity and residence(s) of cross defendant(s), if appropriate. See form of complaint in § 116.80[1], Paragraph 1).]

2. Cross complainant is, and at all times herein mentioned was, _____ [specify cross complainant's interest in real property, e.g., the owner in fee simple] of certain real property _____ [describe property, e.g., identified as lot number _____ in that tract of land known as _____ (name of subdivision)]. Cross complainant's lot is known as _____ [street address], _____ County, California, and more particularly described as follows: _____ [give legal description].

3. Cross defendant is the owner of, or claims some interest in, real property _____ [describe property, e.g., identified as lot number _____ in the tract of land described above], which lot is known as _____ [street address], _____ County, California, and is more particularly described as follows: _____ [give local description].

[4. Cross defendants DOES I through _____, inclusive, are sued herein under fictitious names. Their true names and capacities are unknown to cross complainant. When their true names and capacities are ascertained, cross complainant will amend this cross complaint by inserting their true names and capacities herein. (Cross complainant is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named cross defendants claims some right, title, estate, lien, or interest in the property described above and that each of them is responsible in some manner for the (threatened) wrongful conduct herein alleged.)]

5. _____ [Set forth existence of discriminatory restriction relating to real property, e.g., _____ (Name of subdivision) is divided into lots on which a Declaration of Restrictions was executed by _____ (name of original owner who drew up restrictions) on _____ (date), and recorded in the office of the County Recorder of _____ County, on _____ (date), in Book _____, page _____, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof].

6. _____ [Set forth general terms of restriction that discriminates against a person on the basis of sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, and/or disability, e.g., The Declaration of Restrictions specifies that ownership of all lots within the above-described tract of land is restricted to persons who have been members of the Fundamental Theology Society for at least three years and that, if the owner chooses to sublease, all sublessees must be members of the Fundamental Theology Society, and have been so for at least three years. To impose the same restrictions on all lots in the tract, the former owner adopted and used a form of conveyance for sale of the lots that incorporated the Declaration of Restrictions and designated the tract described above as the dominant tenement].

7. This discriminatory restriction is void according to Civil Code Section 53 in that it _____ [set forth how discriminatory restriction violates Civ. Code § 53, e.g., purports to forbid the conveyance and leasing of that real property to any person not of a specified religious group].

8. An actual controversy has arisen and now exists between cross complainant and cross defendants in that cross complainant contends that the restrictions described above are void, whereas cross defendants dispute these contentions and contend that the restrictions are valid and enforceable.

9. Cross complainant desires a judicial determination of his/her rights and duties and a declaration as to whether the restrictions described above are void.

10. A judicial declaration is necessary and appropriate at this time under the circumstances in order that cross complainant may ascertain his/her rights and duties under the written instrument.

WHEREFORE, cross complainant prays judgment against cross defendants as follows:

1. For a declaration by the court that the restriction described above is, by reason of Civil Code Section 53, void and not binding or enforceable;

2. For costs of suit incurred herein; and

3. For such other further relief as the court may deem proper.
_____ [date]

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Cross Complainant _____ [name]

[Verification, if desired. See § 116.80[1].]

[2] Use of Form

This form of cross complaint is for use by a landowner to secure a judicial declaration that a discriminatory restriction relating to real property is void because it violates Civ. Code § 53.

An action for declaratory relief is not the cross complainant's only remedy; he or she may choose another appropriate method of relief, such as canceling the discriminatory restriction [see Civ. Code § 3414 (partial cancellation of instruments); see also Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments].

This form is presented as a cross complaint to exemplify the situation in which one party seeks to enforce a restrictive condition and the other party responds by cross complaint to declare the restriction void [see, e.g., Taormina Theosophical Community. v. Silver (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 964, 190 Cal. Rptr. 38] .

According to Civ. Code § 53, a provision in a written instrument relating to real property that purports to forbid or restrict the conveyance, encumbrance, leasing, or mortgaging of that property to any person any characteristic listed or defined in Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e) is void. Additionally, every restriction or prohibition regarding the use or occupation of real property because of any characteristic listed or defined in Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e) is also void [Civ. Code § 53(a)]. Further, every restriction or prohibition, whether by way of covenant, condition on use, occupation, or transfer of title, which restriction or prohibition directly or indirectly limits the acquisition, use, or occupation of that property because of any characteristic listed or defined in Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e) is similarly void [Civ. Code § 53(b); see § 116.34; for discussion of Civ. Code § 51(b), (e), see § 116.12].

If the discriminatory restriction is based on a characteristic listed in the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) [see Gov. Code § 12955(a), (d), as defined in Gov. Code §§ 12926, 12926.1(m), (p)(1), 12955.2], counsel may modify this form to include allegations based on Civ. Code §§ 782 and 782.5. Civ. Code § 782 renders void any deed provisions that purport to restrict the right to use property to persons of a characteristic listed in FEHA by providing for payment of a penalty, forfeiture, reverter, or otherwise. Civ. Code § 782.5 provides that restrictions in deeds or other written instruments that purport to restrict use of the property on the basis of a characteristic listed in FEHA are deemed omitted from the deed or instrument. For further discussion and forms relating to restrictive covenants, see Ch. 184, Deeds .

[3] Allegations

The form of cross complaint in [1], above, alleges all of the following:

- The capacity and residence of each cross defendant, if appropriate (Paragraph 1).
- Cross complainant's and cross defendant's ownership of lots in the same tract (Paragraphs 2, 3).

- An optional fictitious name ("DOE") allegation (Optional Paragraph 4) [see Civ. Code § 474; see also Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used].

- The existence of a Declaration of Restrictions (Paragraph 5).

- The discriminatory nature of those restrictions (Paragraph 6).

- That the discriminatory nature of the restrictions renders them void (Paragraph 7) [see Civ. Code § 53].

- That an actual controversy exists relating to the legal rights and duties of the parties and that cross complainant desires a judicial determination that is necessary and appropriate (Paragraphs 8-10) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060; see also Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief].

[4] Prayer

The complaint seeks a declaration by the court that the discriminatory restriction is, by reason of Civ. Code § 53, void and not binding or enforceable.

[5] Judicial Notice

In any action to declare that a restriction or prohibition specified in Civ. Code § 53(a) or (b) is void, the court must take judicial notice of the recorded instrument or instruments containing the prohibitions or restrictions in the same manner that it takes judicial notice of the matters listed in Evid. Code § 452 [Civ. Code § 53(c); for discussion regarding judicial notice, see Ch. 551, Trial].

[6] Venue

An action for the determination of a right or interest in real property is local and must be tried in the county in which the real property is located [Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(1); for discussion regarding venue, see Ch. 571, Venue].

[7] Cross References

For alternative allegations as to capacity, and residence of parties, and fictitious name allegations, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used

For discussion and forms relating to amendment of pleadings for use when an unknown defendant is sued under a fictitious name, see Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings

For discussion of the procedures in an action for cancellation of a written instrument, as well as of a form of judgment for cancellation of a deed, see Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments

For alternative forms of captions and introductions, see Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions

For discussion and forms relating to the format of complaints, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints

For discussion and forms relating generally to actions for declaratory relief, and for a form of judgment, see Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief

For discussion of interpretation of deeds and forms relating to restrictive covenants, see Ch. 184, Deeds

For discussion of jurisdiction in California courts, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal , and Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter

For alternative forms of prayers, see Ch. 420, Prayers

For discussion, procedure, and forms relating generally to actions to quiet title, see Ch. 482, Quieting Title

For discussion and forms relating to service of summons, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers

For forms of allegations establishing venue, see Ch. 571, Venue

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART IV. FORMS
B. Other Statutory Actions

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 116.92-116.99

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 116.92[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART IV. FORMS
C. Affirmative Defenses

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.100

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.100 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering Complaints for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act--Action Required by Law

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering Complaints for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act--Action Required by Law

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that there has been no violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act, in that _____ [describe alleged discriminatory conduct and set forth how it is required by law or is applicable alike to all persons, e.g., defendant's allegedly discriminatory conduct in refusing to admit persons under 21 years of age into its premises is not an arbitrary policy, but is required by law, which mandates that such persons not be admitted into bars].

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense is for use by a defendant in an answer to a complaint alleging a violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act when the allegedly discriminatory conduct is required by law. The Act does not confer any right or privilege on a person that is conditioned or limited by law or that is applicable alike to persons of every sex, color, race, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, medical condition, marital status, or sexual orientation [Civ. Code § 51(c)].

The fact situation serving as the basis for this form is the defendant's status as a bar or tavern. Not only is a bar not required to admit persons under 21 years of age, but, if it does so, it may be guilty of a misdemeanor [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 25665; see generally Bus. & Prof. Code § 23000 et seq. (Alcoholic Beverage Control Act)].

[3] Cross References

For a form of another affirmative defense for use in answering Unruh Act complaints, see § 116.101

For discussion of answers to complaints, including forms, see Ch. 26, Answers

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 116 CIVIL RIGHTS: DISCRIMINATION IN BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS
PART IV. FORMS
C. Affirmative Defenses

11-116 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 116.101

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author John H. Scott Editorial Consultant

§ 116.101 Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering Complaints for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act--Modification of Building Required

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation for Use in Answering Complaints for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act--Modification of Building Required

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that there has been no violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act, in that his/her/its refusal to admit plaintiff into his/her/its business establishment is not discriminatory, but is caused by the structure of the building and by the fact that admittance of plaintiff _____ [briefly set forth how special needs of plaintiff prevent his or her admission to the building without construction, alteration, or modification, e.g., to the building as it is presently constructed is impossible because plaintiff uses a wheelchair and all the doorways are too narrow to accommodate a wheelchair and] would require construction, alteration, repair, or modification of the building in which defendant's business establishment is located that is not required by other provisions of law.

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense is for use by a defendant in an answer to a complaint alleging a violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act when the refusal to admit the plaintiff is based on the limitations of the facility in which the defendant's business is located. The Act does not require any construction, alteration, repair (structural or otherwise), or modification of any sort whatsoever to any new or existing establishment, facility, building, improvement, or any other structure, beyond construction, alteration, repair, or modification otherwise required by other provisions of law [Civ. Code § 51(d)].

Counsel should note that, although the Act does not require modification of any type to a building unless the modification is required by other provisions of law, if modifications are made to places of public accommodation or public amusement, compliance with accessibility standards may be required [see § 116.36[6] and [7]].

[3] Cross References

For a form of another affirmative defense for use in answering Unruh Act complaints, see § 116.100

For discussion of answers to complaints, including forms, see Ch. 26, Answers

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 117.syn

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.syn Synopsis to Chapter 117: CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION

§ 117.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 117.02 Cross References

§§ 117.03-117.09 [Reserved]

§ 117.10 Governing Statutes

§ 117.11 Introduction to California Fair Employment and Housing Act

§ 117.12 Relationship to Other Civil Rights Laws

§ 117.13 Definitions Under FEHA

[1] "Aggrieved Person"

[2] "Disability"

[3] "Discrimination"

[4] "Familial Status"

[5] "Housing Accommodation"

[6] "Marital Status"

[7] "Owner"

[8] "Person"

[9] "Real Estate-Related Transactions"

§ 117.14 Unlawful Practices Under FEHA

[1] By Any Person

[2] By Owner

[3] By Financial Institution

[4] Inaccessible Multifamily Dwellings

[a] Definitions

[b] Building Standards

[5] Unlawful Restrictive Covenants

[a] Required Cover Page or Stamp Statement

[b] Filing Restrictive Covenant Modification to Remove Racially Restrictive Covenant

[6] Income Discrimination

§ 117.15 Limitations on FEHA

[1] Good Faith Purchaser

[2] Religion

[3] Educational Organizations

[4] Other Limitations on FEHA

[5] Construction of Rights and Remedies Under FEHA

§ 117.16 Administrative Remedy

[1] Filing Complaint

[2] Department of Fair Employment and Housing Proceedings

[a] General Investigative Procedures

[i] Initial Steps--Serving Notice of Complaint and Commencing Proceedings

[ii] Issuance and Service of Subpoenas and Discovery Requests

[iii] Preparation of Final Investigative Report

[iv] Withdrawal or Dismissal of Complaint

[v] Settlement Agreements

[b] Class Actions

[3] Conciliation Agreement and Enforcement

[4] Temporary Injunctive Relief

[5] Accusation

[a] Issuance

[b] Election After Issuance of Accusation

[c] Denial of Accusation

[6] Hearing by Commission

[7] Commission Orders

[a] Unlawful Practices

[b] No Unlawful Practice

[c] Orders Generally

[d] Judicial Review of Order

[e] Compliance Review by Department

§ 117.17 Civil Actions

[1] After Denial of Accusation

[a] General Procedure

[b] Remedies

[2] Based on Election After Issuance of Accusation

[3] Separate From FEHA Complaint

[4] Available Relief

[5] Standing

[6] Disparate Impact Theory

§ 117.18 Actions by Attorney General

[1] Commencement of Civil Actions

[2] Relief Available

[3] Intervention

§§ 117.19-117.29 [Reserved]

§ 117.30 Governing Statutes

§ 117.31 Unruh Civil Rights Act

[1] Statutory Rule

[2] Applicable to Housing

[3] Age-Based Restrictions

§ 117.32 Sexual Harassment

[1] Statutory Liability

[2] Prospective Application of Civ. Code § 51.9

§ 117.33 Senior Citizen Housing

[1] Exception to Age Discrimination Prohibition

[2] Specially Designed Housing

[a] Statutory Requirements Generally

[b] Specific Design Requirements

[c] Definitions

[i] "Qualifying Resident" or "Senior Citizen"

[ii] "Qualified Permanent Resident"

[iii] "Senior Citizen Housing Development"

[iv] "Dwelling Unit" or "Housing"

[v] "Cohabitant"

[vi] "Permitted Health Care Resident"

[d] Covenants, Conditions, and Restrictions

[e] Continued Right of Occupancy

[3] Exemption From Special-Design Requirement

§ 117.34 Discriminatory Restrictive Covenants Regarding Real Property

§ 117.35 Disabled Persons

[1] Equal Access to Housing Accommodations

[2] Qualifications on Equal Access

[3] Provisions Applicable to Guide, Signal, and Service Dogs

§ 117.36 Financing for Housing

[1] Purposes of Holden Act

[2] Financing Discrimination Prohibited

[3] Limitations

[4] Definitions

[a] "Agency" and "Secretary"

[b] "Fair Market Value"

[c] "Financial Institution"

[d] "Housing Accommodation"

[5] Powers of Secretary

[a] Issuance of Rules, Regulations, Guidelines, and Orders

[b] Adoption of Regulations

[c] Monitoring and Investigation of Lending Patterns and Practices

[6] Notice of Rights

[7] Complaint

[8] Department Action on Complaint

[9] Administrative Hearing

[10] Judicial Review

§ 117.37 State May Not Promote Discrimination

§§ 117.38-117.49 [Reserved]

§ 117.50 Governing Statutes

§ 117.51 Federal Fair Housing Act

[1] Prohibition Against Discrimination in Housing; Claims of Disparate Treatment and Disparate Impact

[2] Prohibited Practices

[a] Renting and Selling

[b] Residential Real Estate-Related Transactions

[c] Government Actions Related to Use of Property

[d] Acts of Interference, Coercion, or Intimidation

[e] Refusal to Accommodate Disability

[f] Post-Acquisition Discrimination

[3] Definitions

[4] Defenses

[a] Owner Exemptions

[b] Private Organization Exemptions

[c] Other Defenses

[5] Housing for Older Persons

[6] Administrative Remedy

[a] Complaint Process

[i] Filing of Civil Action

[ii] Notice

[iii] Joining Additional or Substitute Persons

[b] Referral to State Agency by HUD

[c] Referral to Attorney General by HUD

[d] Investigation

[e] Conciliation

[f] Hearing

[g] Review or Enforcement by Court

[7] Judicial Remedies

[a] Action Under 42 U.S.C. § 3612(o)

[b] Action Under 42 U.S.C. § 3614

[c] Action Under 42 U.S.C. § 3608(d), (e)

[d] Action Under 42 U.S.C. § 3613

[i] Commencement of Action

[ii] Relief Available

[iii] Jury Trial

[e] Standing

[f] Proof

[8] Prevention of Intimidation

§ 117.52 Actions Under 42 U.S.C. § 1982

[1] Generally

[2] Broadly Construed

[3] Order and Burden of Proof

[4] Owner's Liability for Acts of Rental Agent

[5] Remedies

§§ 117.53-117.59 [Reserved]

§ 117.60 Related Matthew Bender Publications

§ 117.61 Federal Constitution

§ 117.62 State Constitution

§ 117.63 Federal Statutes

§ 117.64 State Statutes

§ 117.65 Federal Regulations

§ 117.66 State Regulations

§ 117.66A California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI)

§ 117.67 Decisions

[1] California Fair Employment and Housing Act

[2] Unruh Civil Rights Act

[3] Senior Citizen Housing

[4] Discriminatory Restrictive Covenants Regarding Real Property

[5] Financing for Housing

[6] State Promotion of Discrimination

[7] Federal Fair Housing Act

[8] Actions Under 42 U.S.C. § 1982

§ 117.68 Attorney General Opinions

§ 117.69 Law Reviews

§ 117.70 Text References

§§ 117.71-117.79 [Reserved]

§ 117.80 Complaint in State Court for Damages and Preliminary and Permanent Injunction for Violation of California Fair Employment and Housing Act--Refusal to Rent or Sell [Gov. Code §§ 12927(c), 12955(a), 12980(h)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Allegations

[4] Prayer

[5] Temporary Restraining Order

[6] Verification

[7] Statute of Limitations

[8] Cross References

§ 117.81 Allegations for Use in Complaints for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act [Civ. Code § 51]--Refusal of Realtors, and Contractors or Condominium Association, to Rent or Sell

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Application of Unruh Civil Rights Act

[4] Cross References

§ 117.82 Allegations for Use in Complaints for Violation of Unruh Civil Rights Act [Civ. Code § 51]--Exclusion or Expulsion From Apartment Complex or Condominium Association

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§§ 117.83-117.89 [Reserved]

§ 117.90 Complaint in United States District Court for Damages and Injunction for Violation of Federal Fair Housing Act--Discrimination in Sale or Rental of Housing [42 U.S.C. § 3604(a), (b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Allegations

[4] Prayer

[5] Statute of Limitations

[6] Jurisdiction and Venue

[7] Cross References

§ 117.91 Allegations for Use in Complaints for Violation of Federal Fair Housing Act [42 U.S.C. §§ 3604-3606]--Discrimination in Advertising [42 U.S.C. § 3604(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 117.92 Allegations for Use in Complaints for Violation of the Federal Fair Housing Act [42 U.S.C. §§ 3604-3606]--Discrimination by False Representation That Building Is Not Available [42 U.S.C. § 3604(d)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 117.93 Allegations for Use in Complaints for Violation of Federal Fair Housing Act [42 U.S.C. §§ 3604-3606]--Discrimination by Inducing Sale or Rental Based on Representation That Persons of Particular Characteristic Moving Into Neighborhood [42 U.S.C. § 3604(e)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 117.94 Allegations for Use in Complaints for Violation of Federal Fair Housing Act [42 U.S.C. §§ 3604-3606]--Discrimination in Residential Real Estate-Related Transactions [42 U.S.C. § 3605]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 117.95 Allegations for Use in Complaints for Violation of Federal Fair Housing Act [42 U.S.C. §§ 3604-3606]--Discrimination in Brokerage Services [42 U.S.C. § 3606]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

Dennis M. Farias
Revision Author n*
John H. Scott
Editorial Consultant n

FOOTNOTES:

(n27)Footnote *.

Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases.

(n28)Footnote **.

John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976.

Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118

Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART I. SCOPE

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.01

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses state and federal laws prohibiting housing discrimination. In particular, the chapter discusses the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) (Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.) as it relates to discrimination in housing [see §§ 117.10 -117.18].

This chapter also includes discussion of all of the following:

- The application of the Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code § 51) to housing discrimination [see § 117.31].

- Civ. Code § 51.9, which prohibits sexual harassment by landlords and property managers, and others in the housing context [see § 117.32].

- Housing for senior citizens [see § 117.33] and disabled persons [see § 117.35], as well as state laws prohibiting discriminatory restrictive covenants [see § 117.34], and discrimination in real estate financing [see § 117.36].

- The decision in Mulkey v. Reitman (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 529, 50 Cal. Rptr. 881, 413 P.2d 825 , aff'd, 387 U.S. 369, 87 S. Ct. 1627, 18 L. Ed. 2d 830 (1967) , in which the California Supreme Court held that the state may not enact laws that promote discrimination in housing [see § 117.37].

- The federal Fair Housing Act (FHA), 42 U.S.C. § 3601 et seq. [see § 117.51], as well as 42 U.S.C. § 1982, which prohibits discrimination in the conveyance of real and personal property [see § 117.52].

This chapter contains the following forms:

- A form of complaint for use in state court in an action for damages and preliminary and permanent injunction for violation of the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.) by refusal to rent or sell real property [see § 117.80].

- An allegation for use in a complaint for violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code § 51) based on the refusal of realtors, and contractors or a condominium association, to rent or sell real property [see § 117.81].

- An allegation for use in a complaint for violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code § 51) based on the exclusion or expulsion from an apartment complex or condominium association [see § 117.82].

- A form of complaint for use in a United States District Court in an action for damages and injunctive relief for violation of the federal Fair Housing Act (FHA) (42 U.S.C. § 3601 et seq.) by discrimination in the sale or rental of housing [see § 117.90].

- Alternative forms of allegations for use in complaints for violation of the federal Fair Housing Act (FHA) (42 U.S.C. § 3601 et seq.) based on the following:

  - Discrimination in advertising [see § 117.91];

  - Discrimination by false representation that a building is not available [see § 117.92];

  - Discrimination by inducing a sale or rental based on a representation that persons of a particular characteristic are moving into a neighborhood [see § 117.93];

  - Discrimination in residential real estate-related transactions [see § 117.94]; and

  - Discrimination in brokerage services [see § 117.95].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsFair Housing ActCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsProhibited ActsCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingProperty Rights (sec. 1982)General Overview

148 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART I. SCOPE

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.02

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.02 Cross References

- For a comprehensive procedural guide that chronologically outlines the procedures in a typical civil action brought in a California state court, see Ch. 2, Procedural Guide for Civil Actions .

- For discussion and forms relating to discrimination in government-funded programs and activities, see Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities .

- For discussion and forms relating to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and the other post-Civil War civil rights statutes (42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1982, 1985, 1986, and 1988), see Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

- For discussion and forms relating to prisoners' rights, see Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

- For discussion and forms relating to employment discrimination, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination .

- For discussion and forms relating to discrimination in business establishments, see Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments .

- For discussion and forms relating to interference with civil rights by threats, intimidation, coercion, or violence, see Ch. 117A, Civil Rights: Interference with Civil Rights by Threats, Intimidation, Coercion, or Violence .

- For discussion and forms of jurisdictional allegations for use in federal court, and for discussion and forms relating to removal of actions to federal court, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal .

- For discussion and forms relating to injunctions, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

- For discussion and forms relating to civil rights actions arising from illegal searches and seizures, see Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.310 et seq.

- For discussion of deprivation of civil rights during an administrative investigation, see Ch. 471, Investigations by Public Agencies .

- For discussion of adjudication of cases before public agencies, see Ch. 473, Public Agency Adjudication .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingProperty Rights (sec. 1982)General OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingProperty Rights (sec. 1982)Public Discrimination

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART I. SCOPE

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 117.03-117.09

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

[Reserved]

§§ 117.03[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.10

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.10 Governing Statutes

The California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) is set forth in Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.11

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.11 Introduction to California Fair Employment and Housing Act

The California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA), Gov. Code § 12900 et seq., is administered by the Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH or "Department").

FEHA declares that discrimination in housing accommodations is against public policy and that its design is to eliminate discrimination [Gov. Code § 12920]. FEHA prohibits discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, marital status, national origin, ancestry, familial status, source of income, and disability [Gov. Code §§ 12920, 12955]. However, the provision of housing for homeless youth is not considered unlawful age discrimination, notwithstanding Gov. Code §§ 12920 and 12955 [Gov. Code § 11139.3].

As used in Gov. Code § 12955 (prohibiting housing discrimination), the definition of the terms "race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, marital status, national origin, ancestry, familial status, source of income, or disability" includes a perception that the person has any of those characteristics or that the person is associated with a person who has, or is perceived to have, any of those characteristics [Gov. Code § 12955(m)].

The terms "religious creed," "religion," "religious observance," "religious belief," and "creed" include all aspects of religious belief, observance, and practice [Gov. Code § 12926(o)].

FEHA protects against sexual harassment as a form of sexual discrimination in housing [Gov. Code § 12955(a); Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 767, 782, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsFamily Status DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGender & Sex DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsLeasing & SalesCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsNational Origin DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsRacial Discrimination

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.12

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.12 Relationship to Other Civil Rights Laws

The provisions of FEHA are construed liberally for the accomplishment of its stated purposes. Nothing contained in FEHA is deemed to repeal any of the provisions of the Civil Rights Law or any other state law relating to discrimination because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation, unless those provisions provide less protection to the enumerated classes of persons covered under FEHA [Gov. Code § 12993(a)].

Although the Legislature intended to occupy the field of regulation of discrimination in housing encompassed by FEHA, exclusive of all other laws banning discrimination in housing by any city, city and county, county, or other political subdivision of the state, nothing contained in FEHA is construed in any manner or way to limit or restrict the application of Civ. Code § 51 (the Unruh Act) [Gov. Code § 12993(c); see Citizens for Uniform Laws v. County of Contra Costa (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1468, 1473-1475, 285 Cal. Rptr. 456 (county ordinance prohibiting discrimination against persons who test positive for HIV was not preempted by FEHA, at least in part because purpose of two laws was different; decided before FEHA applied to disability); for discussion of Civ. Code § 51, as it relates to housing, see § 117.31[2]].

The filing of a complaint and the pursuit of an administrative remedy with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH) under FEHA does not prejudice the complainant's right to pursue judicial relief under other applicable laws. However, if a civil action has been filed under Civ. Code § 52, DFEH will terminate proceedings on notification of entry of final judgment, unless the judgment is a dismissal entered at the complainant's request [Gov. Code § 12980(a)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.13

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.13 Definitions Under FEHA

[1] "Aggrieved Person"

As used in FEHA in connection with housing accommodations, unless a different meaning clearly appears from the context, the term "aggrieved person" includes any person who claims to have been injured by a discriminatory housing practice or believes that he or she will be injured by a discriminatory housing practice that is about to occur [Gov. Code § 12927(g)]. "Aggrieved person" under the FEHA could include a nonprofit fair housing organization [see Sisemore v. Master Financial, Inc. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1424-1426, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 719] .

[2] "Disability"

For purposes of FEHA, "disability" includes, but is not limited to, any physical or mental disability as defined in Gov. Code § 12926 [Gov. Code § 12955.3]. Depression and its related manifestations can meet the definition of disability under antidiscrimination laws [Auburn Woods I Homeowners Assn. v. Fair Employment & Housing Comm. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1578, 1592-1593, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 669] . For discussion of Gov. Code § 12926, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination .

[3] "Discrimination"

As used in FEHA in connection with housing accommodations, unless a different meaning clearly appears from the context, the term "discrimination" is very broadly defined, and includes all of the following [Gov. Code § 12927(c)(1)]:

- Refusal to sell, rent, or lease housing accommodations;
- Refusal to negotiate for the sale, rental, or lease of housing accommodations;
- Making an untrue representation that housing accommodations are not available for inspection, sale, or rental;
- Denial or withholding of housing accommodations;
- Provision of inferior terms, conditions, privileges, facilities, or services in connection with housing accommodations;
- Harassment in connection with housing accommodations;
- Cancellation or termination of a sale or rental agreement;
- Provision of separated or segregated housing conditions;
- Refusal to permit, at the expense of a disabled person, reasonable modifications of existing premises occupied or to be occupied by the disabled person if the modifications may be necessary to afford that person full enjoyment of the premises. In the case of a rental, however, the landlord may, if reasonable to do so, condition modification on the renter's agreeing to restore the interior of the premises to the premodification condition (other than for reasonable wear and tear); and
- Refusal to make reasonable accommodations in rules, policies, practices, or services if accommodations may be necessary to afford a disabled person equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling.

The refusal to rent or lease a portion of an owner-occupied, single-family residence to a person as a roomer or boarder living within the household is not discrimination, so long as no more than one roomer or boarder will live within the household, and so long as the owner complies with Gov. Code § 12955(c), which prohibits discriminatory notices, statements, and advertisements [Gov. Code § 12927(c)(2)(A)]. In addition, when the sharing of living areas in a single dwelling unit is involved, the use of words stating or tending to imply that the housing being advertised is available only to persons of one sex does not constitute discrimination [Gov. Code § 12927(c)(2)(B)].

[4] "Familial Status"

For purposes of FEHA, "familial status" means one or more minors who reside with one of the following persons [Gov. Code § 12955.2]:

- A parent;
- Another person with care and legal custody of that minor;
- A person who has been given care and custody of that minor by a state or local governmental child welfare agency; or

- The designee of the parent or other person with legal custody of a minor by written consent of the parent or designated custodian.

The protections afforded by FEHA against discrimination on the basis of familial status also apply to any individual who is [Gov. Code § 12955.2]:

- Pregnant;
- In the process of securing legal custody of any minor; or
- In the process of being given care and custody of any minor by a state or local governmental agency responsible for the welfare of children.

[5] "Housing Accommodation"

As used in FEHA in connection with housing accommodations, unless a different meaning clearly appears from the context, the term "housing accommodation" means any building, structure, or portion of one, that is occupied as, or intended for occupancy as, a residence by one or more families. "Housing accommodation" includes any vacant land that is offered for sale or lease for the construction of a building, structure, or part of one, intended for residential occupation [Gov. Code § 12927(d)].

[6] "Marital Status"

FEHA prohibits inquiry regarding, or discrimination on the basis of, the "marital status" of a person seeking to rent or lease any housing accommodation [Gov. Code § 12955(a), (b)]. This protection includes unmarried cohabiting couples [Smith v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 1143, 1160, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 700, 913 P.2d 909] .

[7] "Owner"

As used in FEHA in connection with housing accommodations, unless a different meaning clearly appears from the context, the term "owner" generally means any person having any legal or equitable right of ownership or possession or the right to rent or lease housing accommodations, and includes a lessee, sublessee, assignee, managing agent, and real estate broker or salesperson, as well as the state and any of its political subdivisions and agencies [Gov. Code § 12927(e); see [5], above ("housing accommodation" defined)].

[8] "Person"

The term "person" includes one or more individuals, partnerships, associations, corporations, limited liability companies, legal representatives, trustees, trustees in bankruptcy, and receivers or other fiduciaries [Gov. Code § 12925(d); see Gov. Code § 12927(f) ("person" includes all individuals and entities described in 42 U.S.C. § 3602(d) and in the definition of "owner" in Gov. Code § 12927(e), and all institutional third parties, including the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation)].

[9] "Real Estate-Related Transactions"

As used in FEHA in connection with housing accommodations, unless a different meaning clearly appears from the context, the term "real estate-related transactions" includes any of the following [Gov. Code § 12927(h)]:

- The making or purchasing of loans or providing other financial assistance for use in purchasing, constructing, improving, repairing, or maintaining a dwelling, or that is secured by residential real estate;

- The selling, brokering, or appraising of residential real property; and

- The use of territorial underwriting requirements, for the purpose of requiring a borrower in a specific geographic area to obtain earthquake insurance, required by an institutional third party on a loan secured by residential real property.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsDisability DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGender & Sex DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsNational Origin DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsRacial Discrimination

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.14

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.14 Unlawful Practices Under FEHA

[1] By Any Person

It is unlawful under FEHA for any person [see Gov. Code §§ 12925(d), 12927(f) and § 117.13[8]] to do any of the following:

- Make, print, or publish, or cause to be made, printed, or published, any notice, statement, or advertisement relating to the sale or rental of a housing accommodation that indicates any preference, limitation, or discrimination based on a protected characteristic [Gov. Code § 12955(c)];

- Aid, abet, incite, compel, or coerce the performance of any act or practice prohibited by Gov. Code § 12955, or attempt to do so [Gov. Code § 12955(g)];

- Induce for profit any person to sell or rent any dwelling by representations regarding the entry or prospective entry into the neighborhood of a person possessing a protected characteristic [Gov. Code § 12955(h)];

- Discriminate based on a protected characteristic against any person in making available a real estate-related transaction or in the terms and conditions of such a transaction [Gov. Code § 12955(i) (applicable to persons, organizations, or entities whose business involves real estate-related transactions)];

- Deny a person access to, or membership or participation in, a multiple-listing service, real estate brokerage organization, or other service because of a protected characteristic [Gov. Code § 12955(j)];

- Make unavailable or deny a dwelling based on discrimination because of a protected characteristic [Gov. Code § 12955(k)]; or

- Discriminate on the basis of a protected characteristic through public or private land use practices, decisions, and authorizations [Gov. Code § 12955(l)].

Discrimination under Gov. Code § 12955(l) includes, but is not limited to, restrictive covenants, zoning laws, denials of use permits, and other actions authorized under the Planning and Zoning Law (Gov. Code § 65000 et seq.), that make housing opportunities unavailable [Gov. Code § 12955(l)]. Effective January 1, 2001, discrimination under Gov. Code § 12955(l) also includes the existence of a restrictive covenant, regardless of whether accompanied by a statement that the restrictive covenant is repealed or void [Gov. Code § 12955(l)]. One court of appeal gave retroactive application to Gov. Code § 12955(l) [Hall v. Butte Home Health, Inc. (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 308, 313-323, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 246 (no evidence that retroactive application of Gov. Code § 12955(l) to restrictive covenants that would have prohibited group homes for elderly disabled effected substantial impairment of contractual arrangements in violation of federal or state contract clause, when neighbors seeking to enforce covenants failed to show discernible impact on property rights, and state had significant, legitimate public purpose of providing suitable housing for disabled)].

If financial assistance is provided for the purchase, organization, or construction of any housing accommodation, it is unlawful for any person, bank, mortgage company, or other financial institution to discriminate against any person or group of persons in the terms, conditions, or privileges relating to the receipt or use of the financial assistance because of a protected characteristic [Gov. Code § 12955(e); see [3], below (unlawful practices by financial institution)].

It is unlawful to coerce, intimidate, threaten, or interfere with any person in the exercise or enjoyment of, or on account of that person having exercised or enjoyed, or on account of that person having aided or encouraged any other person in the exercise or enjoyment of, any right granted or protected by Gov. Code § 12955 or 12955.1 [Gov. Code § 12955.7; for discussion of Gov. Code § 12955.1, see [4], below].

Unlawful housing discrimination under FEHA includes a refusal to make reasonable accommodations in rules, policies, practices, or services when those accommodations may be necessary to afford a disabled person equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling [Gov. Code § 12927(c)(1)]. Mental disabilities fall within the purview of this provision and include a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of a person's major life activities [Auburn Woods I Homeowners Assn. v. Fair Employment & Housing Comm. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1578, 1592, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 669 ; see Gov. Code § 12955.3 (explicitly stating that "disability" includes any physical or mental disability as defined in Gov. Code § 12926); see also Gov. Code § 12926(i)(1) (defining "mental disability" to include any mental or psychological disorder or condition limiting major life activity, i.e., making achievement of major life activity difficult)]. "Major life activities" is to be broadly construed and includes physical, mental, and social activities and working [Gov. Code § 12926(i)(1)(C)]. To establish discrimination based on a refusal to provide reasonable accommodations, a party must establish all of the following [Auburn Woods I Homeowners Assn. v. Fair Employment & Housing Comm. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1578, 1592, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 669 ; see Gov. Code § 12927(c)]:

- He or she suffers from a disability as defined in FEHA;

- The discriminating party knew of, or should have known of, the disability;
- Accommodation is necessary to afford an equal opportunity to use and enjoy the dwelling; and
- The discriminating party refused to make this accommodation.

A substantial limitation on use and enjoyment does not require an individual to be incapable of any use and enjoyment of his or her home. To say that no one is disabled under FEHA unless the person is unable to use and enjoy the home would render all the provisions in FEHA governing reasonable accommodations entirely empty of meaning [Auburn Woods I Homeowners Assn. v. Fair Employment & Housing Comm. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1578, 1595, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 669] .

If a person is subject to the provisions of Civ. Code § 51 (Unruh Act) as it applies to housing accommodations, it is unlawful for that person to discriminate in the provision of housing against any person because of sex, sexual orientation, color, race, religion, ancestry, national origin, familial status, marital status, disability, source of income, or on any other basis prohibited by Civ. Code § 51 [Gov. Code § 12955(d); for discussion of the applicability of Civ. Code § 51 to housing, see § 117.31].

[2] By Owner

It is unlawful under FEHA for an owner to do any of the following:

- Discriminate against or harass any person because of a protected characteristic [Gov. Code § 12955(a)];
- Make or cause any written or oral inquiry concerning a protected characteristic of any person who seeks to purchase, rent, or lease a housing accommodation [Gov. Code § 12955(b)]; or
- Harass, evict, or otherwise discriminate against any person in the sale or rental of housing accommodations when the owner's dominant purpose is retaliation against a person who has opposed practices unlawful under Gov. Code § 12955, informed law enforcement agencies of practices believed unlawful under § 12955, testified or assisted in any proceeding under FEHA, or aided or encouraged a person to exercise or enjoy the rights secured by FEHA [Gov. Code § 12955(f)]. Nothing in Gov. Code § 12955(f) is intended to cause or permit the delay of an unlawful detainer action [Gov. Code § 12955(f)].

Additionally, the acts discussed in [1], above, as being unlawful when performed by any "person" are unlawful when performed by an owner.

[3] By Financial Institution

It is unlawful for any person, bank, mortgage company, or other financial institution that provides financial assistance for the purchase, organization, or construction of any housing accommodation to discriminate in the terms, conditions, or privileges relating to the obtaining or use of that financial assistance against any person or group of persons because of a protected characteristic [Gov. Code § 12955(e); see Health & Safety Code § 35811; see also § 117.36].

[4] Inaccessible Multifamily Dwellings

[a] Definitions

For purposes of Gov. Code § 12955, "discrimination" includes, but is not limited to, a failure to design and construct a covered multifamily dwelling in a manner that allows access to and use by persons with disabilities [see Gov. Code § 12955.1]. At a minimum, an accessible dwelling must have at least one building entrance on an accessible route, unless it is impracticable to do so because of the terrain or unusual characteristics of the site. The burden of establishing impracticability is on the person who designed or constructed the facility [Gov. Code § 12955.1(a)].

To be accessible, all covered multifamily dwellings with a building entrance on an accessible route must be designed and constructed in a manner that complies with all of the following [Gov. Code § 12955.1(b)]:

- The public and common areas are readily accessible to and useable by handicapped persons;

- All the doors designed to allow passage into and within all premises are sufficiently wide to allow passage by persons in wheelchairs; and

- All premises within covered multifamily dwelling units contain the following features of adaptable design:

  - An accessible route into and through the covered dwelling unit;

  - Light switches, electrical outlets, thermostats, and other environmental controls in accessible locations;

  - Reinforcements in bathroom walls to allow later installation of grab bars around the toilet, tub, shower stall, and shower seat, if those facilities are provided; and

  - Useable kitchens and bathrooms so that an individual in a wheelchair can maneuver about the space.

For purposes of Gov. Code § 12955.1, "covered multifamily dwellings" means buildings consisting of four or more dwelling units if the buildings have one or more elevators. Ground floor dwelling units in other buildings consisting of four or more dwelling units are also "covered multifamily dwellings." Dwelling units within a single structure separated by firewalls do not constitute separate buildings [Gov. Code § 12955.1(c)].

[b] Building Standards

Notwithstanding Gov. Code § 12935 (functions, powers, and duties of Fair Employment and Housing Commission), regulations adopting building standards necessary to implement, interpret, or make specific the provisions of Gov. Code § 12955.1 are to be developed by the office of the State Architect for public housing and by the Department of Housing and Community Development for all other residential occupancies, and are to be adopted pursuant to the State Building Standards Code (Health & Safety Code § 18935 et seq.) [Gov. Code § 12955.1(d)]. The building standard requirements must meet or exceed the requirements under the federal Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988 and its implementing regulations, and the existing state law building standards contained in Title 24 of the California Code of Regulations [Gov. Code § 12955.1(f); see 42 U.S.C. § 3601 et seq.; 24 C.F.R. 100.1 et seq.].

The building standards contained in Title 24 of the California Code of Regulations are applied by the Department in investigating discrimination complaints to determine whether a covered multifamily dwelling is designed and constructed for access to and use by persons with disabilities in accordance with Gov. Code § 12955.1 [Gov. Code § 12955.1(e)].

Before the effective date of regulations promulgated under Gov. Code § 12955.1, existing federal accessibility standards will apply if they provide to persons with disabilities greater protections than existing state accessibility regulations [

Gov. Code § 12955.1(d)]. After promulgation of regulations pursuant to Gov. Code § 12955.1, the state regulations will apply only if they provide to persons with disabilities the same or greater protections as the federal standards [Gov. Code § 12955.1(d)]. If particular federal regulations provide greater protections than state regulations, the federal regulations will apply [Gov. Code § 12955.1(d)].

[5] Unlawful Restrictive Covenants

[a] Required Cover Page or Stamp Statement

A county recorder, title insurance company, escrow company, real estate broker, real estate agent, or association that provides a copy of a declaration, governing document, or deed to any person must place a cover page or stamp on the first page of the previously recorded document or documents stating, in at least 14-point boldface type, the following [Gov. Code § 12956.1(b)(1)]:

> If this document contains any restriction based on race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, familial status, marital status, disability, national origin, source of income as defined in Gov. Code § 12955(p), or ancestry, that restriction violates state and federal fair housing laws and is void, and may be removed pursuant to Section 12956.1 of the Government Code. Lawful restrictions under state and federal law on the age of occupants in senior housing or housing for older persons shall not be construed as restrictions based on familial status.

The requirements of Gov. Code § 12956.1(b)(1) do not apply to documents submitted for recordation to a county recorder [Gov. Code § 12956.1(b)(2)].

Any person who records a document for the express purpose of adding a racially restrictive covenant is guilty of a misdemeanor. However, the county recorder will not incur any liability for recording the document [Gov. Code § 12956.1(c)]. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a prosecution for a violation of Gov. Code § 12956.1(c) must commence within three years after the discovery of the document's recording [Gov. Code § 12956.1(c)].

As used in Gov. Code § 12956.1, the terms "association," "governing documents," and "declaration" have the same meanings as in Civ. Code § 1351 [Gov. Code § 12956.1(a); for discussion of Civ. Code § 1351, see Ch. 124, Condominiums and Other Common Interest Developments].

[b] Filing Restrictive Covenant Modification to Remove Racially Restrictive Covenant

A person who holds an ownership interest of record in property he or she believes is the subject of an unlawfully restrictive covenant in violation of Gov. Code § 12955(l) may record a document titled "Restrictive Covenant Modification" [Gov. Code § 12956.2(a)]. However, this provision does not apply to persons holding an ownership interest in property that is part of a common interest development as defined in Civ. Code § 1351(c) if the board of directors of that common interest development is subject to the requirements of Civ. Code § 1352.5(b) [Gov. Code § 12956.2(g)].

The county recorder will make available to the public Restrictive Covenant Modification forms [Gov. Code § 12956.2(e)]. The modification document must include a complete copy of the original document containing the unlawfully restrictive language with the unlawfully restrictive language stricken [Gov. Code § 12956.2(a)].

The county recorder may choose to waive the fee prescribed for recording and indexing instruments pursuant to Gov. Code § 27361 in the case of the modification document [Gov. Code § 12956.2(a)]. The modification document will be indexed in the same manner as the original document being modified. It must contain a recording reference to the original document in the form of a book and page or instrument number, and date of the recording [Gov. Code § 12956.2(c)].

Before recording the modification document, the county recorder submits it and the original document to the county counsel, who determines whether the original document contains an unlawful restriction based on race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, familial status, marital status, disability, national origin, source of income as defined in Gov. Code § 12955(p), or ancestry. The county counsel returns the documents and informs the county recorder of the determination. The county recorder will refuse to record the modification document if the county counsel finds that the original document does not contain an unlawful restriction [Gov. Code § 12956.2(b)].

Subject to covenants, conditions, and restrictions recorded after the recording of the original document containing the unlawfully restrictive language, and subject to covenants, conditions, and restrictions that will be recorded after the Restrictive Covenant Modification, the restrictions in the Restrictive Covenant Modification, once recorded, are the only restrictions having effect on the property. The effective date of the terms and conditions of the modification document are the same as the effective date of the original document [Gov. Code § 12956.2(d)].

If the holder of an ownership interest of record in property causes to be recorded a modified document that contains modifications not authorized by Gov. Code § 12956.2, the county recorder will not incur liability for recording the document. The liability that may result from the unauthorized recordation is the sole responsibility of the holder of the ownership interest of record who caused the modified recordation [Gov. Code § 12956.2(f)].

For discussion of restrictive covenants generally, see Ch. 184, Deeds .

[6] Income Discrimination

Gov. Code § 12955 prohibits all types of housing discrimination on the basis of source of income [see, e.g., Gov. Code § 12955(a) (unlawful for owner of housing accommodation to discriminate against any person because of source of income)]. For purposes of § 12955, "source of income" is defined as lawful, verifiable income paid directly to a tenant or paid to a representative of a tenant [Gov. Code § 12955(p)(1)]. It is not discrimination based on source of income to make a written or oral inquiry concerning the level or source of income [Gov. Code § 12955(p)(2)].

The following acts based on income are also specifically prohibited by FEHA:

- To use a financial or income standard in renting housing that fails to account for the aggregate income of persons residing together or proposing to reside together on the same basis as the aggregate income of married persons residing together or proposing to reside together [Gov. Code § 12955(n)].

- When there is a government rent subsidy, to use a financial or income standard in assessing eligibility for the rental of housing that is not based on the portion of the rent to be paid by the tenant [Gov. Code § 12955(o)].

The prohibition against discrimination on the basis of source of income in the FEHA is not limited to rental housing. It includes, for example, discrimination on the basis of a person's source of income in assessing eligibility for a mortgage loan [Sisemore v. Master Financial, Inc. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1410-1417, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 719] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsDisability DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsEconomic DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGender & Sex DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsNational Origin DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair

Housing RightsRacial Discrimination

155 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.15

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.15 Limitations on FEHA

[1] Good Faith Purchaser

Nothing contained in FEHA relating to discrimination in housing may be construed to affect the title or other interest of a person who purchases, leases, or takes an encumbrance on a housing accommodation in good faith and without either knowledge or actual notice of the filing of a complaint with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH) or the filing of a civil action [Gov. Code § 12995(a)(1)].

[2] Religion

Nothing in FEHA prohibits a religious organization, association or society, or any nonprofit institution or organization operated, supervised, or controlled by or in conjunction with a religious organization, association, or society from limiting the sale, rental, or occupancy of dwellings that it owns or operates for other than a commercial purpose to persons of the same religion or from giving preference to those persons, unless membership in that religion is restricted on account of race, color, or national origin [Gov. Code § 12955.4].

However, an individual whose religious beliefs do not permit him or her to comply with FEHA because of a religious proscription against renting housing to unmarried cohabiting couples does not have a valid claim to an exemption from FEHA under the First Amendment free exercise clause, the Religious Freedom Restoration Act (42 U.S.C. § 2000bb et seq.), or Cal. Const., art. I, § 4 [Smith v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 1143, 1161-1179, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 700, 913 P.2d 909] .

[3] Educational Organizations

Nothing contained in FEHA relating to discrimination in housing may be construed to prohibit a postsecondary educational institution, whether private or public, from providing housing accommodations reserved for male or female students so long as no individual is denied equal access to housing accommodations, or from providing separate housing accommodations reserved primarily for married students or students with minor dependents who reside with them [Gov. Code § 12995(a)(2)].

[4] Other Limitations on FEHA

Nothing contained in FEHA relating to discrimination in housing may be construed to prohibit selection based on factors other than race, color, religion, sex, marital status, national origin, ancestry, familial status, disability, or other basis prohibited by the Unruh Civil Rights Act [Gov. Code § 12995(a)(3)]. Although this provision permits consideration of nonprotected characteristics, it does not excuse the owners of an apartment complex from complying with their duty under a contract with a city to accept applications from very low income households qualified for federal housing assistance [Zakaria v. Lincoln Property Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 500, 509-510, 229 Cal. Rptr. 669] .

Nothing contained in FEHA relating to discrimination in housing may be construed to promote housing accommodations on a preferential or quota basis [Gov. Code § 12995(a)(4)].

Nothing contained in FEHA relating to discrimination in housing affects the nondiscriminatory enforcement of state and local public nuisance laws, provided that those laws do not otherwise conflict with the provisions of FEHA [Gov. Code § 12995(b)].

Nothing contained in FEHA precludes the government from establishing programs to collect information relating to discriminatory housing practices [Gov. Code § 12955.5].

[5] Construction of Rights and Remedies Under FEHA

Nothing in FEHA may be construed to afford to the classes protected under FEHA fewer rights or remedies than the federal Fair Housing Act (42 U.S.C. § 3601 et seq.) and its implementing regulations (24 C.F.R. 100.1 et seq.), or state law relating to fair housing as it existed before January 1, 1993 [Gov. Code § 12955.6(a); for discussion of the federal Fair Housing Act, see § 117.51].

Any state law that purports to require or permit any action that would be an unlawful practice under FEHA is to that extent invalid [Gov. Code § 12955.6].

The Act may be construed to afford greater rights and remedies to an aggrieved person than those afforded by federal law and other state laws [Gov. Code § 12955.6]. Thus, the provisions of FEHA relating to discrimination in housing are intended to conform to the general requirements of federal law, and may provide greater protection [Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 767, 780-782, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301 ; see Hall v. Butte Home Health, Inc. (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 308, 320-321, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 246 (addition of Gov. Code § 12955.6 was designed to bring California into conformity with federal law)].

For example, relying on appellate court decisions interpreting 42 U.S.C. § 3604(b), a provision of the federal Fair Housing Act, as prohibiting sexual harassment in housing as a form of sex discrimination, a California appellate court likewise construed FEHA to prohibit sexual harassment, even though FEHA does not explicitly so provide [Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 767, 780-782, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301 , citing Honce v. Vigil (10th Cir. 1993) 1 F.3d 1085 and DiCenso v. Cisneros (7th Cir. 1996) 96 F.3d 1004] .

Similarly, a court of appeal interpreted Gov. Code § 12955.6 in tandem with Gov. Code § 12955(l), to invalidate facially neutral restrictive covenants that would have the effect of prohibiting group homes for the disabled elderly, based on the court's finding that the federal Fair Housing Act is broadly applied to reach all practices, including facially neutral restrictive covenants, that interfere with the exercise of rights under federal fair housing laws [Hall v. Butte Home Health, Inc. (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 308, 320-321, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 246 , citing United States v. City of Hayward (9th Cir. 1994) 36 F.3d 832, 835 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 813 (1985)] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsEconomic DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGender & Sex DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsRacial DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsRemediesReal Property LawTitle QualityGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.16

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.16 Administrative Remedy

[1] Filing Complaint

Any person claiming to be aggrieved by an alleged violation of Gov. Code § 12955, 12955.1, or 12955.7 may file with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH or "Department") a verified written complaint [Gov. Code § 12980(a)].

The complaint must (1) state the name and address of the person alleged to have committed the violation, and (2) set forth the particulars of the violation and any other information required by DFEH [Gov. Code § 12980(a); see Gov. Code § 12980(b) (Attorney General or Director of DFEH may also file complaint)].

The complaint must be filed within one year from the date on which the alleged violation occurred or terminated [Gov. Code § 12980(b)].

[2] Department of Fair Employment and Housing Proceedings

[a] General Investigative Procedures

[i] Initial Steps--Serving Notice of Complaint and Commencing Proceedings

The DFEH may proceed on a complaint in the same manner and with the same powers as in Gov. Code § 12960 et seq. (enforcement and hearing procedures in cases involving unlawful employment practices), except that when the provisions of Gov. Code § 12980 et seq. (enforcement and hearing procedures in cases involving housing discrimination) provide greater rights and remedies, those provisions prevail [Gov. Code § 12980(c)]. For discussion of enforcement and hearing procedures before DFEH in cases involving unlawful employment practices, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination .

On the filing of a complaint, the Department must serve notice on the complainant of the time limits, rights of the parties, and choice of forums provided for under the law [Gov. Code § 12980(d)].

Within 10 days of its filing, the Department must cause a copy of the complaint to be served on or mailed to the respondent alleged to have committed the violation, and must advise the respondent in writing of his or her procedural rights and obligations [Gov. Code § 12986]. The respondent may file an answer to the complaint [Gov. Code § 12986].

The Department must commence proceedings with regard to a complaint within 30 days of its filing [Gov. Code § 12980(e)].

On notice that a verified complaint against him or her has been filed under FEHA, an owner of housing accommodations must maintain and preserve any and all rental records or any other written materials relevant to the complaint until the complaint is fully and finally disposed of and all appeals or related proceedings terminated [Gov. Code § 12956].

Whenever a person against whom a complaint has been filed is contacted by the Department, a member of the Department's staff, or a commissioner of the Fair Employment and Housing Commission (FEHC or "Commission"), he or she must be informed whether the purpose of the contact is investigation or conference, conciliation, or persuasion [Gov. Code § 12985]. If the contact is for the purpose of conference, conciliation, or persuasion, the person must be informed that all matters relating to the contact are privileged [Gov. Code § 12985].

An investigation of allegations contained in any complaint filed with the Department must be completed within 100 days after its receipt, unless it is impracticable to do so. If the investigation is not completed within 100 days, the complainant and respondent must receive written notice of the Department's reasons for not doing so [Gov. Code § 12980(f)].

[ii] Issuance and Service of Subpoenas and Discovery Requests

The Department may issue and serve subpoenas to require the attendance and testimony of witnesses as well as the production of books, records, documents, and physical materials [see Gov. Code § 12963.1]. It also has the power to issue and serve written interrogatories [see Gov. Code § 12963.2], and requests for production of physical materials [see Gov. Code § 12963.4], as well as the power to conduct depositions [see Gov. Code § 12963.3]. If a person or organization fails to comply with any discovery method, DFEH may file with the superior court a petition for an order compelling compliance [see Gov. Code § 12963.5; see Department of Fair Employment and Housing v. Superior Court (Keller) (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 896, 904-905, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615 (DFEH investigating claim of housing discrimination entitled to disclosure of rental applications and agreements from landlord's agent; Department's interest in prohibiting discrimination in housing outweighs any privacy interest of applicants for denied housing or accepted as renters); DFEH v. Superior Court (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 149, 151-152, 171 Cal. Rptr. 863 (trial court erred in failing to issue order to compel respondent to respond to interrogatories)].

[iii] Preparation of Final Investigative Report

On the conclusion of each investigation, DFEH must prepare a final investigative report containing all of the following [Gov. Code § 12980(g)]:

- The names of any witnesses and the dates of any contacts with those witnesses;
- A summary of the dates of any correspondence or other contacts with the aggrieved persons or the respondent;
- A summary of witness statements;
- Answers to interrogatories; and
- A summary description of other pertinent records.

A final investigative report may be amended if additional evidence is later discovered [Gov. Code § 12980(g)].

[iv] Withdrawal or Dismissal of Complaint

If, at any time during any DFEH proceedings, a complaint is withdrawn by the complainant or dismissed by DFEH, or an investigation is terminated or closed by DFEH, notice of this fact must be given to the respondent and complainant without undue delay [Gov. Code § 12971].

[v] Settlement Agreements

All agreements reached in settlement of any housing discrimination complaint filed pursuant to Gov. Code § 12980 must be agreements between the respondent and complainant, and such agreements are subject to approval by DFEH [Gov. Code § 12980(j)]. All such agreements must be made public, unless otherwise agreed by the complainant and respondent, and DFEH determines that the disclosure is not required to further the purposes of FEHA [Gov. Code § 12980(i)].

[b] Class Actions

Since DFEH may proceed on a complaint in the same manner and with the same powers as in Gov. Code § 12960 et seq. (enforcement and hearing procedures in cases involving unlawful employment practices) [Gov. Code § 12980(c)], the provisions governing the use of class actions apparently also apply in the context of housing discrimination complaints. Thus, if a violation alleged in a verified complaint adversely affects, in a similar manner, a group of persons of which the aggrieved person filing the complaint is a member, or if the violation raises questions of law or fact that are common to that group, the aggrieved person or the Director of DFEH may file the complaint on behalf of and as representative of that group [Gov. Code § 12961]. Any complaint so filed may be investigated as a class complaint and, if the Director considers that circumstances warrant it, will be treated as such for purposes of conciliation and accusation [Gov. Code § 12961; see Gov. Code § 12965(a) (determination by Director must be made and communicated in writing to each respondent within one year after complaint was filed)].

When an accusation is issued as a class accusation, the case will be treated as a class case for all other purposes of FEHA, including, but not limited to, hearing, determination, reconsideration, and judicial proceedings [see Gov. Code § 12961]. Any accusation issued as a result of a class complaint must be issued within two years after the filing of the complaint [Gov. Code § 12965(a)].

[3] Conciliation Agreement and Enforcement

If, after investigation, DFEH determines that a complaint is valid, it will immediately endeavor to eliminate the unlawful practice by conference, conciliation, and persuasion. The DFEH staff is prohibited from disclosing what transpires in the course of those endeavors [Gov. Code § 12963.7(a); see Gov. Code § 12963.7(b) (improper disclosure is misdemeanor)].

Except as provided in Gov. Code § 12980 (agreements are made public), all matters connected with conference, conciliation, or persuasion efforts resulting from the filing of an administrative complaint are privileged and may not be received in evidence [Gov. Code § 12984 (DFEH members or employees who make impermissible disclosures are guilty of misdemeanor or subject to disciplinary action)].

Any agreement reached by conference, conciliation, and persuasion must be written, signed by all parties, and approved by the Director of the DFEH, or the Director's authorized representative. Any agreement resolutions may be in the nature of, but are not limited to, types of remedies that might be ordered after accusation and hearing [Gov. Code § 12964; see [7], below (Fair Employment and Housing Commission orders)].

Within one year of its effective date, DFEH must conduct a compliance review to determine whether the agreement has been fully obeyed and implemented [Gov. Code § 12964]. The DFEH may bring an action for appropriate injunctive relief whenever evidence indicates that a violation is occurring or is about to occur [Gov. Code § 12964]. Whenever DFEH has reasonable cause to believe that a respondent has breached a conciliation agreement, it will refer the matter to the Attorney General with a recommendation that a civil action be filed for the enforcement of the agreement [Gov. Code § 12981(e)].

[4] Temporary Injunctive Relief

After a complaint has been filed, if DFEH determines that there is probable cause to believe that the allegations are true and constitute a violation of FEHA, it may bring an action to enjoin the owner of the property from taking further action with regard to the rental, lease, or sale of the property, and to require compliance with Gov. Code § 12956 (retention of records by owner), until DFEH has completed its investigation and made its determination [Gov. Code § 12983; see Gov. Code § 12974 (similar provisions applicable in cases involving unlawful employment practices)]. The Department may also elect to have the Attorney General bring the action [Gov. Code § 12983].

In such a case, the superior court may enter an order awarding a temporary restraining order or a preliminary or final injunction in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 527 [Gov. Code § 12983; for discussion of Code Civ. Proc. § 527, see Ch. 303, Injunctions].

Any temporary restraining order so obtained must not be in effect for more than 20 days [Gov. Code § 12983].

[5] Accusation

[a] Issuance

In the case of a failure to eliminate a violation of Gov. Code § 12955, 12955.1, or 12955.7 that has occurred, or is about to occur, through conference, conciliation, and persuasion, or in advance thereof if circumstances warrant, the Director of DFEH must cause a written accusation to be issued in the name of DFEH, notwithstanding Gov. Code § 12971, in the same manner and with the same powers as provided in Gov. Code § 12965 [Gov. Code § 12981(a)]. However, when the provisions of Gov. Code § 12980 et seq. provide greater rights and remedies, those provisions prevail [Gov. Code § 12981(a)].

An accusation alleging an unfair housing practice must be issued within 100 days after the filing of a complaint, unless it is impracticable to do so [Gov. Code § 12981(a)].

The accusation, together with a copy of the verified complaint, as amended, must be served on the respondent [Gov. Code § 12965(a); see Gov. Code § 12966 (when respondent is state contractor, copy of accusation must be sent to appropriate state agency)].

The accusation will require the person accused (the respondent) to answer the charges at an administrative hearing or civil trial, as elected by the parties under Gov. Code § 12989 [Gov. Code § 12981(a); for discussion of the election under Gov. Code § 12989, see [b], below]. Any aggrieved person may intervene as a matter of right in the proceeding and in the appeal or other judicial review of the proceeding [Gov. Code § 12981(a)].

If DFEH determines that an allegation concerns the legality of a zoning or other land use law or ordinance, DFEH or the Attorney General must take appropriate action with regard to the complaint according to the procedures in FEHA for other complaints of housing discrimination [Gov. Code § 12981(b)].

[b] Election After Issuance of Accusation

If an accusation is issued, a complainant, a respondent, or an aggrieved person on whose behalf a complaint is filed may elect, in lieu of an administrative proceeding, to have the charges adjudicated in a civil action [Gov. Code § 12989(a)]. Any such election may be made within 20 days after the service of the accusation, and not later than 20 days after service of the complaint to the respondent [Gov. Code § 12989(b)].

A notice of election must be filed with DFEH, and DFEH must serve a copy of the notice on the Director, the respondent, and the aggrieved person on whose behalf the complaint is filed. The notice must be filed and served in accordance with the procedures of Gov. Code § 12962 [Gov. Code § 12989(b)].

If either party serves a notice of election, DFEH will, within 30 days after service of that notice, dismiss the accusation [Gov. Code § 12989(c)].

If such an election is not made, the director must maintain an administrative proceeding [Gov. Code § 12989(e); see [6], below].

[c] Denial of Accusation

If DFEH determines that no accusation will issue, or if it fails to issue an accusation within 100 days after the complaint is filed, DFEH must promptly notify the person claiming to be aggrieved [Gov. Code § 12980(h)]. In any event, this notice must be issued no more than 30 days after the date of the determination, or 30 days after the date of the expiration of the 100-day period, whichever occurs first [Gov. Code § 12980(h)].

The notice must inform the person claiming to be aggrieved that he or she may bring a civil action against the person named in the verified complaint and that any such action must be brought within the time period specified in Gov. Code § 12989.1 [Gov. Code § 12980(h); see § 117.17[1]]. The notice must also indicate, unless DFEH has determined that no accusation will be issued, that the person claiming to be aggrieved has the option of continuing to seek redress through the procedures of DFEH if he or she chooses not to file a civil action [Gov. Code § 12980(h)].

[6] Hearing by Commission

When an accusation is issued, and the complainant elects not to have the charges adjudicated in a civil action, a hearing is held by the Fair Employment and Housing Commission (FEHC or "Commission") for the purpose of determining the issues [Gov. Code §§ 12967, 12981(c)]. That hearing must be held within 90 days after the issuance of the accusation [Gov. Code § 12968].

The case supporting the accusation is presented by attorneys of DFEH [Gov. Code § 12969].

Except as provided in Gov. Code § 12980, the content of discussions or endeavors at conciliation are not received in evidence at the hearing [Gov. Code §§ 12969, 12984].

The Commission must conduct all actions and procedures in accordance with its procedural regulations [Gov. Code § 12972(a)]. If the Commission does not have a procedural regulation on a particular issue, it must rely on pertinent provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act (APA) [Gov. Code § 12972(b)(1); see Gov. Code § 11370 et seq. (APA)]. Notwithstanding Gov. Code § 12972(b)(1), the Administrative Adjudication Bill of Rights in Gov. Code § 11425.10 et seq. and the rules for judicial review in Gov. Code § 11523 apply to the Commission as well [Gov. Code § 12972(b)(2)].

In addition to the discovery available to each party under Gov. Code § 12972(a) and (b), DFEH and the respondent may each cause a single deposition to be taken in the manner prescribed for depositions in civil actions [Gov. Code § 12972(c); see Ch. 190, Depositions and Discovery].

The DFEH must make final administrative disposition of the complaint within one year of the date of its filing, unless it is impracticable to do so. If DFEH is unable to make final administrative disposition of a complaint within one year, it must provide written notice to the complainant and the respondent of its reasons for not doing so [Gov. Code § 12981(c)].

[7] Commission Orders

[a] Unlawful Practices

After a hearing, if the Commission finds that the respondent has engaged in any unlawful practice as defined in FEHA, it will state its finding of fact and will issue a cease and desist order to be served on the respondent, and take those actions that, in the judgment of the Commission, will effectuate the purpose of FEHA, including, but not limited to, any of the following [see Gov. Code §§ 12970(a), 12987(a)]:

- If the housing accommodation is still available, its sale or rental [Gov. Code § 12987(a)(1)].

- The sale or rental of like housing accommodation, if available [Gov. Code § 12987(a)(1)].

- The provision of financial assistance, terms, conditions, or privileges previously denied, for the purchase, organization, or construction of the housing accommodation, if available [Gov. Code § 12987(a)(1)].

- Affirmative or prospective relief, including injunctive or other equitable relief [Gov. Code §§ 12970(a)(5), 12987(a)(2)].

- The payment to the complainant of a civil penalty against any named respondent, not to exceed $10,000, unless either of the following occurs [Gov. Code § 12987(a)(3) (penalties will be collected by DFEH)]:

  - The respondent, in a separate accusation, has been adjudged to have intentionally committed a prior violation of Gov. Code § 12955 within five years of the complaint (if so, the penalty may exceed $10,000, but may not exceed $25,000); or

- The respondent, in separate accusations, has been adjudged to have intentionally committed two or more prior violations of Gov. Code § 12955 within seven years of the complaint (if so, the penalty may exceed $25,000, but may not exceed $50,000).

- The payment of actual damages to the complainant [Gov. Code § 12987(a)(4)].

- An award of reasonable attorney's fees and costs, including expert witness fees, to a prevailing party other than the state, against any party other than the state [Gov. Code § 12987(a)(3)].

In determining whether to assess a civil penalty pursuant to Gov. Code § 12987, the Commission must find that the respondent has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, expressed or implied [Gov. Code § 12987(b); see Civ. Code § 3294]. In determining the amount of a civil penalty, the Commission must consider Gov. Code § 12955.6 and relevant evidence of, including, but not limited to, the following [Gov. Code § 12987(b)]:

- Willful, intentional, or purposeful conduct.

- Refusal to prevent or eliminate discrimination.

- Conscious disregard for fair housing rights.

- Commission of unlawful conduct.

- Intimidation or harassment.

- Conduct without just cause or excuse.

- Multiple violations of FEHA.

With regard to what may be awarded as "actual damages" by the Commission, Gov. Code § 12987 is valid insofar as it authorizes the Commission to award quantifiable out-of-pocket restitutive damages, but is invalid under the judicial powers clause (Cal. Const., art. VI, § 1) insofar as it authorizes the award of nonquantifiable general compensatory damages for emotional distress and other intangible injury [Walnut Creek Manor v. FEHC (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 245, 255-267, 284 Cal. Rptr. 718, 814 P.2d 704 (restitutive damages includes out-of-pocket expenditures for increased rent and utilities)]. However, amendments to the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) since Walnut Creek Manor was decided, in particular the judicial option provision which gives both sides in a FEHA administrative proceeding the choice to adjudicate the matter in court [Gov. Code § 12989], have remedied separation of powers concerns over the Commission's authority to award emotional distress damages, and the Commission can award such damages as actual damages under Gov. Code § 12987(a)(4) [Konig v. Fair Employment and Housing Commission (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 743, 747-758, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 50 P.3d 718] .

Multiple acts of discrimination against the same complainant on the same unlawful basis establish only a single unlawful practice, and warrant the imposition of punitive damages based on a single act [Walnut Creek Manor v. FEHC (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 245, 267-273, 284 Cal. Rptr. 718, 814 P.2d 704 (substantial multiple cumulative awards for punitive damages for single course of discriminatory conduct against one complainant are unreasonable)].

No remedy is available to the aggrieved person unless he or she waives any and all rights or claims under Civ. Code § 52 before receiving a remedy, and signs a written waiver to that effect [Gov. Code § 12987(e)].

If the respondent is licensed or granted a privilege by a state agency and the Commission finds the respondent has engaged in an unlawful practice and that the violation occurred in connection with the license or privilege, the Commission must provide the licensing or privilege-granting agency with a copy of its order [Gov. Code § 12970(f)].

If the Commission finds that the respondent has engaged in an unlawful practice under FEHA, and the respondent is licensed or granted a privilege by an agency of the state or the federal government to do business, provide a service, or conduct activities, and the unlawful practice is determined to have occurred in connection with the exercise of that license or privilege, the Commission must provide the licensing or privilege granting agency with a copy of its decision or order [Gov. Code § 12987(c)]. If the Commission finds that the respondent has engaged in an unlawful practice under FEHA and is liable for actual damages or a civil penalty, any amount due to the respondent by a state agency may be offset to satisfy the Commission's final order or decision [Gov. Code § 12987(d)].

If the Commission finds that a respondent has engaged in an unlawful practice and the practice apparently consisted of certain criminal acts, the Commission, with the complainant's consent, will provide the local district attorney's office with a copy of its decision and order [Gov. Code § 12970(j); see Penal Code §§ 243.4, 261, 262, 286, 288, 288a, 289 (criminal acts referred to in Gov. Code § 12970(j) include various sexual assaults and batteries, rape, and lewd or lascivious acts involving children)].

The Commission and the Department may engage in affirmative actions with property owners in furtherance of the purposes of FEHA [see Gov. Code § 12988; see also Gov. Code § 12970(a)(5)]. Additionally, the Commission may require a report of the manner of compliance [Gov. Code §§ 12970(a)(6), 12987(f)].

[b] No Unlawful Practice

If the Commission finds that a respondent has not engaged in any violation of FEHA, it will state its findings of fact and issue an order dismissing the accusation against the respondent [Gov. Code § 12987(g); see Gov. Code § 12970(g)].

[c] Orders Generally

The Commission must cause any order it issues to be served on the party against whose interests the order has been made [Gov. Code § 12987(a), (g)]. Any order issued must have printed on its face references to the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act, which prescribe the rights of appeal of any party to the proceeding to whose position the order is adverse [Gov. Code § 12987(h); see Gov. Code § 12970(i); see also Ch. 473, Public Agency Adjudication , et seq.].

Any findings and determination made, or any order issued, must be written and indicate the identity of the members of the Commission who participated [Gov. Code § 12970(h)].

[d] Judicial Review of Order

The party to whose position the Commission's order is adverse may apply for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 [Gov. Code § 12987.1]. The superior court, in reviewing the Commission's final order, may award the following relief [Gov. Code § 12987.1(b)]:

- Grant to the petitioner, or any other party, temporary relief, including, but not limited to, a restraining order, or other order as the court deems just and proper.

- Affirm, modify, or set aside, in whole or in part, the order, or remand the order for further proceedings, and enforce the order to the extent that it is affirmed or modified.

Any party to the proceeding before the Commission or any aggrieved person may intervene as a matter of right in the superior court proceeding [Gov. Code § 12987.1(c)].

The petition for a writ of mandate must be filed within 30 days after the last day on which reconsideration can be ordered, although the right to petition will not be affected by the failure to seek reconsideration [Gov. Code § 11523; see Gov. Code § 11521 (reconsideration)]. The complete record of the proceedings, or those parts of it that are designated by the petitioner, will be prepared by the Office of Administrative Hearings or by the agency and delivered to the petitioner, within 30 days after a request for it, on the payment of the specified fees and costs. The record of the proceedings will be prepared only on request of the petitioner [see Gov. Code § 11523]. The complete record includes the pleading, all notices and orders issued by the agency, any proposed decision by an administrative law judge, the final decision, a transcript of all proceedings, the exhibits admitted or rejected, the written evidence, and any other papers in the case. If the petitioner, within 10 days after the last day on which reconsideration can be ordered, requests that the agency prepare all or any part of the record, the time within which a petition may be filed must be extended until 30 days after its delivery to him or her [see Gov. Code § 11523].

The court's inquiry will extend to the following questions [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(b)]:

- Whether the Department proceeded without or in excess of jurisdiction;
- Whether there was a fair trial; and
- Whether there was any prejudicial abuse of discretion.

Abuse of discretion is established if (1) DFEH has not proceeded in the manner required by law, (2) the order or decision is not supported by the findings, or (3) the findings are not supported by the evidence [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(b); see Hess v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 232, 235 n.3, 187 Cal. Rptr. 712 (court observed that party seeking review never specified proper standard for review of Commission's decision, but found that Commission's findings were supported by evidence under both independent judgment and substantial evidence tests)].

Notwithstanding Gov. Code § 12987.1(a)-(d), when the reviewing court denies a petition for writ of mandate seeking review of a Commission order or decision, the court must enter judgment denying the petition and enforcing the Commission's order or decision [Gov. Code § 12987.1(e)].

For discussion of judicial review of administrative adjudications by petition for writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, and forms for use in those proceedings, see Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions .

[e] Compliance Review by Department

Within one year of the effective date of every final order or decision issued pursuant to FEHA, DFEH will conduct a compliance review to determine whether the order or decision has been fully obeyed and implemented [Gov. Code § 12981(d); see Gov. Code § 12973(a) (same provision in employment context)].

If the time for judicial review of a final Commission order or decision has lapsed, or if all means of judicial review have been exhausted, DFEH may apply to the superior court in any county in which an action could have been brought under Gov. Code § 12965(b) for the enforcement of the order, or decision, or order as modified in accordance with a decision on judicial review [Gov. Code § 12981(f); see Gov. Code § 12987.1(d) (provides for petition to court for decree enforcing Commission's order after time for petitioning for review of that order has expired) and Gov. Code § 12973(b) (same provision in employment context); for discussion of venue, see § 117.17[1][a]].

If, after a hearing, the court determines that an order or decision has been issued by the Commission and that either the time limits for judicial review have lapsed or the order or decision was upheld in whole or in part on judicial review, the court will issue a judgment and order enforcing the order, or decision, or order as modified in accordance with a decision on judicial review [Gov. Code § 12981(f)]. The court will not review the merits of the order or decision. Its judgment is nonappealable and has the same force and effect as, and is subject to all the provisions of law relating to, a judgment in a civil action [Gov. Code § 12981(f)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionMediationsCivil ProcedureSettlementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsRemedies

157 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.17

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.17 Civil Actions

[1] After Denial of Accusation

[a] General Procedure

An aggrieved person may bring a civil action under FEHA against the respondent when DFEH declines to issue an accusation. Such an action must be brought within the time period specified in Gov. Code § 12989.1 [Gov. Code § 12980(h); for discussion of Gov. Code § 12989.1, see [3], below].

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Gov. Code § 12980(h); see Gov. Code § 12965(b) (same provision in employment context); see also Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86].

The action may be brought in the county in which the alleged violation was committed or in which the relevant records are maintained and administered. If the defendant is not found within that county, the action may be brought within the county of the defendant's residence or principal office [Gov. Code § 12980(h)].

A copy of the complaint must be served on the principal offices of DFEH and the Commission [Gov. Code § 12980(h) (remedy for failure to do so is order to do so)].

[b] Remedies

Other than an award of attorney's fees, Gov. Code § 12980(h) does not state what remedies the court may provide. Presumably, compensatory damages and punitive damages, if warranted by the circumstances, are available [see Civ. Code § 3281 et seq.; see also Ch. 177, Damages]. If, however, the court is limited to the remedial powers of the Commission, then recovery is limited to actual damages, a civil penalty, and reasonable attorney's fees and costs [see Gov. Code § 12987(a)].

Arguably, the remedial orders a court may make in actions brought under Gov. Code § 12989 or 12989.1 should also be available in this type of action [see [4], below].

For a general form of complaint for damages and injunctive relief for violation of FEHA, see § 117.80.

[2] Based on Election After Issuance of Accusation

When DFEH issues an accusation under Gov. Code § 12981, a complainant, respondent, or aggrieved person may elect, in lieu of an administrative proceeding, to have the charges adjudicated in a civil action [Gov. Code § 12989(a); for discussion of Gov. Code § 12981, see § 117.16[5]]. Within 30 days of receiving the notice of election, DFEH will itself or, at its election through the Attorney General, file a civil action with the superior court in its name or on behalf of the aggrieved person as a real party in interest [Gov. Code § 12989(c)].

Such an action may be filed in the county in which the unlawful practice is alleged to have been committed, in the county in which the records relevant to that practice are maintained and administered, or in the county in which the aggrieved person would have resided in the housing accommodation. If the respondent is not found within that county, the action may be filed in the county of the respondent's residence or principal office [Gov. Code § 12989(c)].

Any person aggrieved with regard to the issues to be determined may intervene as of right in the civil action [Gov. Code § 12989(d)].

[3] Separate From FEHA Complaint

An aggrieved person may commence a civil action in an appropriate court within two years after the occurrence or the termination of an alleged discriminatory housing practice or after the breach of a conciliation agreement, whichever occurs last, to obtain appropriate relief with regard to the discriminatory housing practice or breach [Gov. Code § 12989.1]. The computation of the two-year period does not include any time during which an administrative proceeding under FEHA was pending [Gov. Code § 12989.1]. An action may be commenced whether or not a complaint under FEHA was filed and without regard to the status of any such complaint [Gov. Code § 12989.1].

Any person who is aggrieved with regard to the issues to be determined in a civil action filed under FEHA may intervene in such a civil action [Gov. Code § 12989.1]. However, an aggrieved person who has been party to a conciliation agreement may not bring an action with regard to the practice that forms the basis for the complaint, except for the purpose of enforcing the terms of that agreement [Gov. Code § 12989.1].

Additionally, an aggrieved person may not commence a civil action with regard to an alleged discriminatory practice that forms the basis of an accusation issued by DFEH if DFEH has commenced a hearing on the accusation [Gov. Code § 12989.1].

[4] Available Relief

In an action brought under Gov. Code § 12989 or 12989.1, if the court finds that a discriminatory housing practice has occurred or is about to occur, the court may award the plaintiff or complainant actual and punitive damages and may grant other relief, including the issuance of a temporary or permanent injunction, temporary restraining order, or other order, as it deems appropriate, to prevent any defendant from engaging in or continuing to engage in an unlawful practice. The court may, at its discretion, award the prevailing party, other than the state, reasonable attorney's fees and costs, including expert witness fees, against any party other than the state [Gov. Code § 12989.2(a); for discussion of Gov. Code § 12989, see [2], above; for discussion of Gov. Code § 12989.1, see [3], above]. However, notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Commission is not liable for the attorney's fees of parties to the administrative adjudication of cases brought before the Commission, including proceedings under Gov. Code §§ 11523 and 12987.1 and administrative mandamus proceedings under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 [Gov. Code § 12989.2(b)].

[5] Standing

FEHA protects independent contractors in the context of housing discrimination. A party that can maintain an action for retaliation under the federal Fair Housing Act (FHA) [see § 117.51 et seq.] has standing to bring a retaliation claim under FEHA [see Walker v. City of Lakewood (9th Cir. 2001) 263 F.3d 1005, 1015 (independent fair housing services provider engaged in advocacy efforts had standing under FHA and FEHA to bring retaliation claims against city)].

[6] Disparate Impact Theory

A facially neutral practice may have a disparate impact on a protected class under FEHA. A FEHA housing discrimination claim may be founded on a disparate impact theory. Gov. Code § 12955.8(b) authorizes a claim for housing discrimination irrespective of intent, when the alleged act or omission has the effect of discriminating on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, familial status, marital status, disability, national origin, or ancestry. Further, the Legislature sought to make the FEHA substantially equivalent to the federal Fair Housing Act and its amendments [42 U.S.C. § 3601 et seq.; see § 117.51; see also Konig v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 743, 749, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 50 P.3d 718 ; Broadmoor San Clemente Homeowners Assn. v. Nelson (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1, 6-7, 8, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 316] , and federal authority plainly authorizes disparate impact housing discrimination claims under the federal Fair Housing Act [Sisemore v. Master Financial, Inc. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1420, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 719 ; see Betsey v. Turtle Creek Associates (4th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 983, 986 ; Keith v. Volpe (9th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 467, 482] .

To present a prima facie disparate impact case under the federal Fair Housing Act, a plaintiff must show at least that the defendant's actions had a discriminatory effect. Discriminatory effect means that the conduct of the defendant actually or predictably results in prohibited discrimination [Sisemore v. Master Financial, Inc. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1420, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 719 ; Keith v. Volpe (9th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 467, 482 , quoting United States v. City of Black Jack, Missouri (8th Cir. 1974) 508 F.2d 1179] . The plaintiff need not show a discriminatory intent to establish a disparate impact claim. [Sisemore v. Master Financial, Inc. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1420, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 719 ; Pfaff v. United States HUD (9th Cir. 1996) 88 F.3d 739, 745-746] . Rather, the essential premise of an FHA disparate impact claim is that some housing practices, adopted without a deliberately discriminatory motive, may in operation be functionally equivalent to intentional discrimination [Sisemore v. Master Financial, Inc. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1420, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 719 ; Mountain Side Mobile Estates v. Secretary of HUD (10th Cir. 1995) 56 F.3d 1243, 1250-1251] .

By alleging that a mortgage lender's policies of not lending for a home that operates a day care center if the income is included to qualify for the loan, plaintiffs alleged an adequate foundation for a disparate impact claim under the FEHA. They asserted that the lender's policies disproportionately affected women and families with children because those two protected classes comprised a higher percentage of daycare home operators in the relevant county than the percentages of those groups found generally in the county. The lender could ultimately disprove the allegations that its policies had a disparate impact on women or families with children by, for example, establishing that its lending policy was justified by business necessity [Sisemore v. Master Financial, Inc. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1417-1423, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 719] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJusticiabilityStandingGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesCompensatory DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive DamagesCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsCosts & Attorney Fees

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.18

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.18 Actions by Attorney General

[1] Commencement of Civil Actions

Whenever the Attorney General has reasonable cause to believe that any person or group of persons is engaged in a pattern or practice of denying to others the full enjoyment of any of the rights granted by Gov. Code § 12980 et seq., or that any group of persons has been denied any of those rights, and that denial raises an issue of general public importance, the Attorney General will commence a civil action [Gov. Code § 12989.3(a)]. The Attorney General may also bring actions on referral from DFEH under Gov. Code § 12981(b) with regard to discriminatory housing practices [Gov. Code § 12989.3(b)].

The Attorney General must commence such actions within 18 months of the occurrence or termination of the alleged discriminatory housing practice [Gov. Code § 12989.3(c)].

The Attorney General also will bring civil actions with regard to breaches of conciliation agreements referred by DFEH. Such actions must be commenced within 90 days after the referral of the alleged breach [Gov. Code § 12989.3(d)].

[2] Relief Available

In actions brought by the Attorney General, the court may award preventive relief, other relief as it deems appropriate, including monetary damages to persons aggrieved, and a civil penalty of up to $50,000 for a first violation and $100,000 for any subsequent violation [see Gov. Code § 12989.3(f)].

The court may also award to a prevailing party, other than the state, attorney's fees and costs, including expert witness fees, against any party other than the state [Gov. Code § 12989.3(g)].

In addition, the Attorney General enforces subpoenas issued at the request of DFEH or other party under the provisions of FEHA [Gov. Code § 12989.3(e)].

[3] Intervention

On timely application, any person may intervene in an action brought by the Attorney General if it involves (1) an alleged discriminatory practice with regard to which that person is an aggrieved person, or (2) a conciliation agreement to which that person is a party. The court may grant, as appropriate, relief to any intervening party that is authorized to be granted to a plaintiff under Gov. Code § 12989.2 [Gov. Code § 12989.3(h); for discussion of Gov. Code § 12989.2, see § 117.17[4]].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDamagesCompensatory DamagesCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive DamagesCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsCosts & Attorney FeesCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsRemedies

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Fair Employment and Housing Act

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 117.19-117.29

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

[Reserved]

§§ 117.19[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Relating to Housing Discrimination

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.30

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.30 Governing Statutes

The Unruh Civil Rights Act is set forth in Civ. Code § 51.

Related provisions concerning age-based housing restrictions are set forth in Civ. Code § 51.2. Other provisions concerning housing specially designed for senior citizens are set forth in Civ. Code §§ 51.3, 51.4, and 51.10-51.12.

Sexual harassment in a business, service, or professional relationship, including sexual harassment by a landlord or property manager, is prohibited by Civ. Code § 51.9.

Discriminatory restrictions on the ownership or use of real property are prohibited by Civ. Code §§ 53, 782, and 782.5.

The rights of individuals with disabilities to full and equal access to housing accommodations are set forth in Civ. Code § 54.1(b).

The Holden Act, setting forth the law prohibiting discrimination in the provision of financial assistance for housing accommodations, is contained in Health & Safety Code § 35800 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsLeasing & Sales

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Relating to Housing Discrimination

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.31

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.31 Unruh Civil Rights Act

[1] Statutory Rule

The Unruh Civil Rights Act (or "Unruh Act") provides that all persons in California, no matter what their sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, medical condition, marital status, or sexual orientation, are entitled to the full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges, or services in all business establishments of every kind whatsoever [Civ. Code § 51(b)].

[2] Applicable to Housing

The provisions of the Unruh Act apply with full force to the business of renting housing accommodations [Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 721, 731, 180 Cal. Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 858] , as well as to other real estate transactions [Lee v. O'Hara (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 476, 478, 20 Cal. Rptr. 617, 370 P.2d 321 ; see Sisemore v. Master Financial, Inc. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1402-1409, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 719 (allegation of discrimination in mortgage lending against operation of day center stated claim under Unruh Act)].

The Unruh Act is applicable regardless of the characteristics of the real estate business. Thus, the Act has been applied to all of the following:

- The owners of an apartment complex, as well as to a real estate broker [see, e.g., Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 721, 730-736, 180 Cal. Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 858 (owners); Lee v. O'Hara (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 476, 478, 20 Cal. Rptr. 617, 370 P.2d 321 (brokers)];

- A married couple, not otherwise engaged in the real estate business, who were renting their triplex unit for gain, even though they maintained no office and employed no persons to assist them in the rental or maintenance of the property [Swann v. Burkett (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 685, 686-687, 694-695, 26 Cal. Rptr. 286] ; and

- Nonprofit homeowners' associations [see O'Connor v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 790, 795-797, 191 Cal. Rptr. 320, 662 P.2d 427 (condominiums); Park Redlands Covenant Control Comm. v. Simon (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 87, 93, 226 Cal. Rptr. 199 (tract houses)].

In addition, the Unruh Act is applicable when individuals serve in more than one capacity in a real estate transaction or when several individuals act in conjunction with each other in a real estate transaction. Thus, the Unruh Act has been applied to the builders, owners, subdividers, sellers, and promoters of a housing tract [see Burks v. Poppy Constr. Co. (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 463, 470, 20 Cal. Rptr. 609, 370 P.2d 313 ; Don Wilson Builders v. Superior Court (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 77, 78, 33 Cal. Rptr. 621] .

If a real estate transaction involves multiple parties, however, the discriminatory practices of one party will not be imputed to an innocent party. Thus, a real estate broker who in good faith does all within his or her power to serve a member of a protected class is not liable if the broker's failure to complete the transaction is due solely to the owner's refusal to sell because of the buyer's membership in a protected class [see Vargas v. Hampson (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 479, 481, 20 Cal. Rptr. 618, 370 P.2d 322 ; Wagner v. O'Bannon (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 121, 130-131, 79 Cal. Rptr. 44] .

The Unruh Act may also apply to a bank, based on an agreement between the bank and real estate brokers to impose special restrictions on the sale, financing, and occupancy of real property on the sole ground of the race, creed, or color of the purchaser [see Holmes v. Bank of America (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 529, 535-536, 30 Cal. Rptr. 917 (reversed dismissal following demurrer)].

It is the denial of equal accommodations, privileges, and services that is actionable under Civ. Code § 51. Civ. Code § 51 does not require affirmative action by a real estate business. Thus, a failure affirmatively to seek out buyers in a protected class and to advertise affirmatively that such buyers are invited to purchase is not a violation. Under certain circumstances, however, mere quiescence could amount to discrimination. For example, a failure to show a home to black purchasers seeking property in that style and price range could warrant the inference of discrimination [Crowell v. Isaacs (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 755, 757, 45 Cal. Rptr. 566] .

Remedies under the Unruh Act are available only to those discriminated against and those whose rights are denied. Thus, white sellers who alleged only that real estate agents failed to show their home to black purchasers failed to show they were persons entitled to a remedy under the Unruh Act when they alleged nothing to show discrimination against them [Crowell v. Isaacs (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 755, 757-758, 45 Cal. Rptr. 566] .

For forms of allegations for use in actions under the Unruh Act based on housing discrimination, see § 117.81.

[3] Age-Based Restrictions

In Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson, the California Supreme Court held that the Unruh Act prohibited an apartment complex from refusing to rent to families with children [Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 721, 736-740, 180 Cal. Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 858] . The landlord had excluded children based on the belief that children are rowdier, noisier, more mischievous, and more boisterous than adults, and from the desire to preserve an all-adult living environment that included facilities not geared for children. The Court disallowed the total exclusion of children, noting that nothing in the nature of an ordinary apartment complex is incompatible with the presence of families with children [Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 721, 736-740, 180 Cal. Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 858] . In O'Connor v. Village Green Owners Ass'n, the Court reiterated this holding and held that an age restriction in the covenants, conditions, and restrictions of a condominium development that limited residency to persons over the age of 18 years violated the Unruh Act [O'Connor v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 790, 796-797, 191 Cal. Rptr. 320, 662 P.2d 427] .

Although the Marina Point Court disallowed the total exclusion of children from an ordinary apartment complex, it made a sharp distinction between the exclusion of children from an ordinary apartment complex and the age-based admission policies of retirement communities or housing complexes reserved for older citizens. The Court observed that those facilities are designed for the elderly and generally have particular appurtenances and exceptional arrangements for their specified purposes, and concluded that age qualifications concerning a housing facility reserved for older citizens can operate as a reasonable and permissible means of establishing and preserving specialized facilities for those particularly in need of such services or environment [Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 721, 741-743, 180 Cal. Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 858] .

Civ. Code §§ 51.2 and 51.10 (applicable only to Riverside County), enacted after the Marina Point and O'Connor decisions, clarify and expand on the concept of specialized housing for the elderly [see also Civ. Code §§ 51.3, 51.4; § 117.33].

Additionally, the Unruh Act prohibits only unreasonable, arbitrary, or invidious discrimination, not differential treatment based on actual characteristic differences or differences in the needs of users. Thus, if an age-based housing restriction is reasonable, it may be permissible, even in an ordinary living environment [Sunrise Country Club Assn. v. Proud (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 377, 381, 235 Cal. Rptr. 404] . For example, when a condominium development specified areas as either adult or family areas, and restricted children under the age of 16 years to residence in family areas and recreation in family facilities, that division was held not to constitute an unreasonable or arbitrary age discrimination. The court reasoned that, first and foremost, there was no blanket exclusion of children under the age of 16 years. The absence of a total exclusion and the reasonable provision of housing and recreational facilities for families with children made the case fundamentally distinguishable from Marina Point and O'Connor, in which the exclusion was complete and absolute [Sunrise Country Club Assn. v. Proud (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 377, 382, 235 Cal. Rptr. 404] . The court was also persuaded by additional policy concerns such as the surplus of family housing accommodations in the area, the reduced danger of injury to children playing in the streets of the family area, the promotion of children's welfare and health by prohibiting them from using the adult jacuzzis, and the fact that the adult areas were largely populated by retired or semiretired adults [Sunrise Country Club Assn. v. Proud (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 377, 382, 235 Cal. Rptr. 404] .

The provision of housing for homeless youth is not considered unlawful age discrimination, notwithstanding any other provision of law, including Civ. Code §§ 51, 51.2, and 51.10 [Gov. Code § 11139.3].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJusticiabilityStandingGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsAge DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsLeasing & Sales

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Relating to Housing Discrimination

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.32

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.32 Sexual Harassment

[1] Statutory Liability

Under Civ. Code § 51.9, a landlord or property manager can be held liable for sexual harassment [Civ. Code § 51.9(a)(1)(D)]. Real estate agents, real estate appraisers, bankers, loan officers, building contractors, and escrow loan officers are also liable for sexual harassment under Civ. Code § 51.9 [Civ. Code § 51.9(a)(1)(B)]. Moreover, others may be liable for sexual harassment in the housing context if they are in a business, service, or professional relationship with the plaintiff that is substantially similar to the relationships listed in Civ. Code § 51.9 [Civ. Code § 51.9(a)(1)(F)].

The elements of proof of sexual harassment are set forth in Civ. Code § 51.9(a) and are discussed in Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments . For a related jury instruction, see Judicial Council Of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 3024 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions.

[2] Prospective Application of Civ. Code § 51.9

In Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 767, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301 , the court of appeal held that before the enactment of Civ. Code § 51.9, which was effective January 1, 1995, the Unruh Act [Civ. Code § 51] did not protect against sexual harassment by a landlord. In Brown, a male landlord had made comments to a female tenant of an offensive, sexual nature and had engaged in other harassing behavior. The tenant and her husband sued under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) and the Unruh Act. The jury awarded damages under FEHA and the Unruh Act. The court of appeal reversed the award under the Unruh Act. The court found that courts had been reluctant to extend the scope of protection of the Unruh Act since the California Supreme Court's decision in Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1142, 278 Cal. Rptr. 614, 805 P.2d 873 , which held that the Unruh Act does not prohibit all arbitrary discrimination by businesses. The court in Brown held that in 1991, when the acts of harassment took place, the Unruh Act did not protect against sexual harassment [Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 767, 788, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301] .

The enactment of Civ. Code § 51.9 plugged that hole in the civil rights law, but § 51.9 applied only prospectively, not retrospectively [Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 767, 787-788, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301] .

Protection against discrimination in housing under the Fair Employment and Housing Act is discussed in §§ 117.10 -117.18.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGender & Sex Discrimination

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Relating to Housing Discrimination

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.33

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.33 Senior Citizen Housing

[1] Exception to Age Discrimination Prohibition

The Unruh Act prohibits a business establishment from discriminating in the sale or rental of housing based on age [see Civ. Code § 51]. Nevertheless, if accommodations are designed to meet the physical and social needs of senior citizens, a business establishment may establish and preserve that housing for senior citizens pursuant to Civ. Code § 51.3 [Civ. Code § 51.2(a); see [2], below]. Additionally, if accommodations constructed before February 8, 1982, meet the criteria for senior citizen housing specified in Civ. Code § 51.3, except housing as to which § 51.3 is preempted by the prohibition in the federal Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988 [P.L. 100-430] and implementing regulations against discrimination on the basis of familial status, a business establishment may establish and preserve that housing for senior citizens without the housing development being designed to meet physical and social needs of senior citizens [Civ. Code § 51.2(a); see [3], below].

Civ. Code § 51.2, enacted in 1984, was intended to clarify the holdings in Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 721, 180 Cal. Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115 , and O'Connor v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 790, 191 Cal. Rptr. 320, 662 P.2d 427 , which suggested an exception based on the special housing needs of senior citizens [

Civ. Code § 51.2(b); see discussion at § 117.31[3]].

Civ. Code §§ 51.2-51.4 do not apply to the County of Riverside. Rather, with regard to the County of Riverside only, those provisions are supplanted by Civ. Code §§ 51.10-51.12, which provide that a business establishment may establish and preserve housing for senior citizens, even if the housing is not specially designed to meet the physical and social needs of senior citizens.

[2] Specially Designed Housing

[a] Statutory Requirements Generally

The provisions of Civ. Code § 51.3 are essential for the establishment and preservation of specially designed accessible housing for senior citizens. There is an inadequate supply of housing to accommodate all the senior citizens who require special living environments and services [Civ. Code § 51.3(a)].

To qualify as a housing development designed for senior citizens, the condominium, stock cooperative, limited-equity housing cooperative, planned development, or multiple-family residential rental property must have been developed for, and initially put to use as, housing for senior citizens, or substantially rehabilitated or renovated for, and immediately afterward put to use as, housing for senior citizens [Civ. Code § 51.3(f); see, e.g., Huntington Landmark Adult Community Assn. v. Ross (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1018, 261 Cal. Rptr. 875] .

Civ. Code § 51.3 has been construed to apply to any residential development regardless of the actual purpose for which it was originally designed or constructed, so long as its physical characteristics meet the needs of seniors. Thus, if a housing development was constructed before Civ. Code § 51.3 came into effect and its design is already suited to seniors, rehabilitation or renovation of existing structures is not required [Bliler v. Covenant Control Com. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 18, 26-27, 252 Cal. Rptr. 50] . The holding of Bliler has been reinforced by amendment of Civ. Code § 51.3, providing that no housing development constructed before January 1, 1985, will fail to qualify as a senior citizen housing development because it was not originally developed for or originally put to use for occupancy by senior citizens [Civ. Code § 51.3(f); see also Civ. Code § 51.2(a)].

Civ. Code § 51.11, which is applicable to the County of Riverside only, contains less stringent requirements than Civ. Code § 51.3 for the preservation of housing for senior citizens.

[b] Specific Design Requirements

There is no established design required for housing designed for the needs of seniors. Although seniors may have different physical needs, housing designed to accommodate those needs is not restricted to housing designed for the disabled. Factors that suggest housing designed with senior citizens in mind include individual units that are small in size, one story, and require no yard work, and the grouping of those units around extensive communal recreational and educational facilities [Huntington Landmark Adult Community Assn. v. Ross (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1018-1019, 261 Cal. Rptr. 875] . More and wider sidewalks and well-lighted walkways and halls are also characteristics of housing designed for senior citizens [Bliler v. Covenant Control Com. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 18, 27, 252 Cal. Rptr. 50] .

[c] Definitions

[i] "Qualifying Resident" or "Senior Citizen"

For purposes of Civ. Code § 51.3, "qualifying resident" or "senior citizen" means a person 62 years of age or older, or 55 years of age or older in a senior citizen housing development [Civ. Code § 51.3(b)(1)].

For special definitions applicable to the preservation of housing for senior citizens in Riverside County, see Civ. Code § 51.11(b).

[ii] "Qualified Permanent Resident"

For purposes of Civ. Code § 51.3, "qualified permanent resident" means a person who meets both of the following requirements [Civ. Code § 51.3(b)(2); see Huntington Landmark Adult Community Assn. v. Ross (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1021, 261 Cal. Rptr. 875 (person must comply with all requirements to qualify as qualified permanent resident)]:

- Was residing with the qualifying resident or senior citizen prior to the death, hospitalization, or other prolonged absence of, or the dissolution of marriage with, the qualifying resident or senior citizen; and

- Was 45 years of age or older, or was a spouse, cohabitant, or person providing primary physical or economic support to the qualifying resident or senior citizen.

"Qualified permanent resident" also means a "disabled" person or person with a disabling illness or injury who is a child or grandchild of the senior citizen or a qualified permanent resident as defined in Civ. Code § 51.3(b)(2) who needs to live with the senior citizen or qualified permanent resident because of the disabling condition, illness, or injury. For these purposes, "disabled" means a person who has a disability as defined in Civ. Code § 54(b). "Disabling injury or illness" means an illness or injury which results in a condition meeting the definition of disability in Civ. Code § 54(b) [Civ. Code § 51.3(b)(3); for discussion of Civ. Code § 54(b), see Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments].

If a qualified permanent resident's disabling condition ends, the owner, board of directors, or other governing body may require the formerly disabled resident to cease residing in the development on receipt of six months' written notice, provided that the owner, board of directors, or other governing body may allow the person to remain a resident for up to one year after the disabling condition ends [Civ. Code § 51.3(b)(3)(A)]. The owner, board of directors, or other governing body may take action to prohibit or terminate occupancy by a qualified permanent resident if the owner, board or directors, or other governing body finds, based on credible and objective evidence, that the person is likely to pose a significant threat to the health or safety of others that cannot be ameliorated by a reasonable accommodation, provided that the prohibition or termination of occupancy may be taken only after both of the following are done [Civ. Code § 51.3(b)(3)(B)]:

- Reasonable notice and an opportunity to be heard are provided for the disabled person whose occupancy is being challenged and reasonable notice is provided to the coresident parent or grandparent of that person; and

- Due consideration is given to the relevant, credible, and objective information provided in the hearing, at which evidence is taken and held in a confidential manner, pursuant to a closed session, by the owner, board of directors, or other governing body to preserve the privacy of the affected persons.

The affected persons are entitled to have present at the hearing an attorney or any other person authorized by them to speak on their behalf or to assist them in the matter [Civ. Code § 51.3(b)(3)(B)].

[iii] "Senior Citizen Housing Development"

For purposes of Civ. Code § 51.3, "senior citizen housing development" means a residential development developed, substantially rehabilitated, or substantially renovated for, senior citizens that has at least 35 dwelling units. Any senior citizen housing development required to obtain a public report under Bus. & Prof. Code § 11010, which submits its application for a public report after July 1, 2001, is required to have been issued a public report as a senior citizen housing development under Bus. & Prof. Code § 11010.05. No housing development constructed before January 1, 1985, will fail to qualify as a senior citizen housing development because it was not originally developed or put to use for occupancy by senior citizens [Civ. Code § 51.3(b)(4)].

[iv] "Dwelling Unit" or "Housing"

For purposes of Civ. Code § 51.3, "dwelling unit" or "housing" means any residential accommodation other than a mobilehome [Civ. Code § 51.3(b)(5)].

[v] "Cohabitant"

For purposes of Civ. Code § 51.3, "cohabitant" refers to persons who live together as husband and wife, or who are domestic partners within the meaning of Fam. Code § 297 [Civ. Code § 51.3(b)(6)].

[vi] "Permitted Health Care Resident"

For purposes of Civ. Code § 51.3,"permitted health care resident" means a person hired to provide live-in, long-term, or terminal health care to a qualifying resident, or a qualifying resident's family member providing that care. For these purposes, the care provided by a permitted health care resident must be substantial in nature and must provide either assistance with necessary daily activities or medical treatment, or both [Civ. Code § 51.3(b)(7)]. A permitted health care resident is entitled to continue his or her occupancy, residency, or use of the dwelling unit as a permitted resident in the absence of the senior citizen only if both of the following are applicable [Civ. Code § 51.3(b)(7)]:

- The senior citizen became absent from the dwelling due to hospitalization or other necessary medical treatment and expects to return to the residence within 90 days from the date the absence began; and

- The absent senior citizen or an authorized person acting for the senior citizen submits a written request to the owner, board of directors, or governing board stating that the senior citizen desires that the permitted health care resident be allowed to remain in order to be present when the senior citizen returns to reside in the development.

On written request by the senior citizen or an authorized person acting for the senior citizen, the owner, board of directors, or governing board has the discretion to allow a permitted health care resident to remain for a time period longer than 90 days from the date the senior citizen's absence began, if it appears that the senior citizen will return within a period of time not to exceed an additional 90 days [Civ. Code § 51.3(b)(7)].

[d] Covenants, Conditions, and Restrictions

The covenants, conditions, and restrictions, and other documents or written policy of a senior citizen housing development must set forth the limitations on occupancy, residency, or use on the basis of age. Any such limitation must not be more exclusive than to require that one person in residence in each dwelling unit may be required to be a senior citizen and that each other resident in the same dwelling unit may be required to be a qualified permanent resident, a permitted health care resident, or a person under 55 years of age whose occupancy is permitted under Civ. Code § 51.3(h) or Civ. Code § 51.4(b). The limitation may be less exclusive, but must at least require that the persons commencing occupancy include a senior citizen who intends to reside in the unit as his or her primary residence on a permanent basis. Application of the rules in Civ. Code § 51.3(c) regarding limitations on occupancy may result in less than all of the dwellings being actually occupied by a senior citizen [Civ. Code § 51.3(c)].

The covenants, conditions, and restrictions, or other documents or written policy, must permit temporary residency, as a guest of a senior citizen or qualified permanent resident, by a person of less than 55 years of age for specified periods of time not less than 60 days in a year [Civ. Code § 51.3(d)]. Moreover, the policy documents must permit the occupancy of a dwelling unit by a permitted health care resident during any period that the person is actually providing live-in, long-term, or hospice health care to a qualifying resident for compensation. "For compensation" includes provision of lodging and food in exchange for care [Civ. Code § 51.3(i)].

The covenants, conditions, and restrictions, or other documents or written policy, applicable to any condominium, stock cooperative, limited-equity housing cooperative, planned development, or multiple-family residential property that contained age restrictions on January 1, 1984, are enforceable only to the extent permitted by Civ. Code § 51.3, notwithstanding lower age restrictions contained in those documents or policies [Civ. Code § 51.3(g); for special requirements for covenants, conditions, and restrictions applicable to the preservation of housing for senior citizens in Riverside County, see Civ. Code § 51.11].

[e] Continued Right of Occupancy

On the death or dissolution of marriage, or on hospitalization or other prolonged absence, of the qualifying resident, any qualified permanent resident, but not a permitted health care resident, may continue occupancy, residency, or use of the dwelling unit as a permitted resident [Civ. Code § 51.3(e); for provision applicable to Riverside County, see Civ. Code § 51.11(e)].

Any person who had the right to reside in, occupy, or use the housing or an unimproved lot subject to Civ. Code § 51.3 on January 1, 1985, may not be deprived of the right to continue that residency, occupancy, or use as the result of the enactment of Civ. Code § 51.3 [Civ. Code § 51.3(h); for provision applicable to Riverside County, see Civ. Code § 51.11(g)].

[3] Exemption From Special-Design Requirement

A housing development constructed before February 8, 1982, is exempt from the Unruh Act's prohibition of discrimination in housing, if it meets all the criteria for senior citizen housing specified in Civ. Code § 51.3, even though the housing development was not designed to meet the physical and social needs of senior citizens [Civ. Code § 51.2(a)].

The requirements for senior housing under Civ. Code §§ 51.2 and 51.3 are more stringent than those required under the federal Fair Housing Act. This was done intentionally in recognition of the acute shortage of housing for families with children in California [Civ. Code § 51.4(a); for discussion of the federal Fair Housing Act, see § 117.51]. The requirement for specially designed accommodations in senior housing provides important benefits to senior citizens and also ensures that housing exempt from the prohibition of age discrimination is carefully tailored to meet the compelling societal interest in providing senior housing. However, the special-design requirements for senior housing may pose a hardship to some housing developments that were constructed before the Marina Point decision [Civ. Code § 51.4(a); see Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 721, 180 Cal. Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115 , cert. denied, 459 U.S. 858 , discussed in § 117.31[3]]. Therefore, the Legislature permitted a narrow, time-limited exception to the strict design requirement; that exception was set forth at former Civ. Code § 51.4(b). Any person who resided in, occupied, or used, before January 1, 1990, a dwelling in a senior citizen housing development which relied on the exemption to the special design requirement provided by Civ. Code § 51.4 before January 1, 2001, may not be deprived of the right to continue the residency, occupancy, or use as the result of the changes made to Civ. Code § 51.4 by the enactment of Senate Bills 1382 or 2011 at the 1999-2000 regular session of the Legislature [Civ. Code § 51.4(b)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsAge DiscriminationCivil Rights LawContractual

Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsExemptions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Relating to Housing Discrimination

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.34

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.34 Discriminatory Restrictive Covenants Regarding Real Property

Every provision in a written instrument relating to real property that purports to forbid or restrict the conveyance, encumbrance, leasing, or mortgaging of that real property to any person because of any characteristic listed or defined in Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e) is void. Further, every restriction or prohibition regarding the use or occupation of real property because of any characteristic listed or defined in Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e) is also void [Civ. Code § 53(a); for discussion of Civ. Code § 51(b), (e), see Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments, § 116.12].

Additionally, every restriction or prohibition, whether by way of covenant, condition on use or occupation, or on transfer of title to real property, that directly or indirectly limits the acquisition, use, or occupation of that property because of any characteristic listed or defined in Civ. Code § 51(b) or (e) is void [Civ. Code § 53(b)].

Although not part of the Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code § 51), Civ. Code § 53 clearly was enacted to effectuate the same general goals [see Park Redlands Covenant Control Comm. v. Simon (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 87, 93, 226 Cal. Rptr. 199 (applying principles of Civ. Code § 51 in analysis of restrictive covenant)].

The scope of Civ. Code § 53 is both broad and comprehensive: it interdicts discrimination in leasing and mortgaging, as well as in conveyancing, and forbids indirect as well as direct restraints [Taormina Theosophical Community, Inc. v. Silver (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 964, 975, 190 Cal. Rptr. 38] .

A restrictive reading of the prohibited bases of discrimination in Civ. Code § 53 would be at odds with the all-inclusive scope of its coverage. Accordingly, Civ. Code § 53(b) has been interpreted to prohibit all covenants on land that would discriminate on bases similar to those listed [Taormina Theosophical Community, Inc. v. Silver (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 964, 975, 190 Cal. Rptr. 38] . For example, when a nonprofit organization established a retirement community for Theosophists and restricted ownership and occupancy to persons who had been members of their society for three years, or had been approved by the board of trustees, the court found that restriction sufficiently close to a restriction based on religion to be void. The court found Theosophy to be like a religion in its concern with spiritual matters and the common beliefs of its members. The restriction operated like a religious restriction in that it discriminated based on a person's sympathy to a set of ideas that was spiritual in nature [Taormina Theosophical Community, Inc. v. Silver (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 964, 976, 190 Cal. Rptr. 38] .

For a form of cross complaint for declaratory relief declaring a restriction on real property to be void because it is discriminatory, see Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments, § 116.91.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsLeasing & SalesReal Property LawRestrictive CovenantsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Relating to Housing Discrimination

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.35

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.35 Disabled Persons

[1] Equal Access to Housing Accommodations

Individuals with disabilities are entitled to full and equal access, like other members of the general public, to all housing accommodations offered for rent, lease, or compensation, subject to the conditions and limitations established by law, or by state or federal regulation, and applicable alike to all persons [Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(1); see Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(2) (defining "housing accommodations")].

Any person renting, leasing, or otherwise providing real property for compensation may not refuse to permit an individual with a disability, at that person's expense, to make reasonable modifications of the existing rented premises if the modifications are necessary to afford the person full enjoyment of the premises. However, any modifications under this paragraph may be conditioned on the disabled tenant entering into an agreement to restore the interior of the premises to the condition existing before the modifications. No additional security may be required on account of an election to make modifications to the rented premises under this paragraph, but the lessor and tenant may negotiate, as part of the agreement to restore the premises, a provision requiring the disabled tenant to pay an amount into an escrow account, not to exceed a reasonable estimate of the cost of restoring the premises [Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(3)(A)].

Any person renting, leasing, or otherwise providing real property for compensation may not refuse to make reasonable accommodations in rules, policies, practices, or services, when those accommodations may be necessary to afford individuals with a disability equal opportunity to use and enjoy the premises [Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(3)(B)].

It is a denial of equal access to housing accommodations for any person, firm, or corporation to refuse to lease or rent housing accommodations to an individual who is blind or visually impaired, an individual who is deaf or hearing impaired, or other individual with a disability on the basis that the individual with a disability is partially or wholly dependent on the income of his or her spouse, if the spouse is a party to the lease or rental agreement. However, a lessor or landlord is not prohibited from considering the aggregate financial status of an individual with a disability and his or her spouse [Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(7)].

[2] Qualifications on Equal Access

"Housing accommodations" means any real property, or portion of real property, that is used or occupied, or is intended, arranged, or designed to be used or occupied, as the home, residence, or sleeping place of one or more human beings. However, "housing accommodations" does not include any accommodations included within Civ. Code § 54.1(a) (public facilities), or any single-family residence in which the occupants rent, lease, or furnish for compensation only one room [Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(2)].

Nothing in Civ. Code § 54.1(b) requires any person renting, leasing, or providing for compensation real property to modify his or her property in any way or to provide a higher degree of care for an individual with a disability than for an individual who is not disabled [Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(4)].

[3] Provisions Applicable to Guide, Signal, and Service Dogs

It is a denial of equal access to housing accommodations for any person, firm, or corporation to refuse to lease or rent housing accommodations to any of the following individuals [Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(6)(A); see Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(6)(C) ("guide dog," "signal dog," and "service dog" defined)]:

- An individual who is blind or visually impaired on the basis that the individual uses the services of a guide dog;
- An individual who is deaf or hearing impaired on the basis that the individual uses the services of a signal dog; or
- An individual with any other disability on the basis that the individual uses the services of a service dog.

It is also a denial of equal access to housing accommodations to refuse to permit any of the following [Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(6)(A)]:

- An individual who is blind or visually impaired to keep a guide dog;
- An individual who is deaf or hearing impaired to keep a signal dog; or
- An individual with a physical disability to keep a service dog on the premises.

Except in the normal performance of duty as a mobility or signal aid, Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(6) may not be construed to prevent the owner of a housing accommodation from establishing terms in a lease or rental agreement that reasonably regulate the presence of guide dogs, signal dogs, or service dogs on the premises of a housing accommodation. Nor will Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(6) be construed to relieve a tenant from any liability otherwise imposed by law for real and personal property damages caused by a guide, signal, or service dog when proof of same exists [Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(6)(B)].

Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(6) sets forth the exclusive circumstances under which Civ. Code §§ 54-55.1 require any person renting, leasing, or providing for compensation real property to accept as a tenant an individual with a disability who has a dog, if that person refuses to accept any tenants who have dogs [Civ. Code § 54.1(b)(5)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsDisability Discrimination

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Relating to Housing Discrimination

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.36

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.36 Financing for Housing

[1] Purposes of Holden Act

The Holden Act, Health & Safety Code § 35800 et seq., sets forth the law prohibiting discrimination in the provision of financial assistance for housing accommodations [see Health & Safety Code § 35800]. The purposes of the Holden Act include the following [Health & Safety Code § 35802(a); see Health & Safety Code § 35801 (Legislative findings and declarations)]:

- To prevent discrimination in the provision of financial assistance for financing or refinancing the purchase, construction, rehabilitation, or improvement of housing accommodations because of conditions, characteristics, or trends in the neighborhood or geographic area surrounding the security property.

- To encourage increased lending in neighborhoods or geographic areas in which conventional residential mortgage financing has been unavailable.

- To increase the availability of housing accommodations to creditworthy persons.
- To ensure the supply of decent, safe housing.
- To prevent the abandonment and decay of neighborhoods and geographic areas.

The provisions of the Holden Act will be liberally construed to effectuate its purposes [Health & Safety Code § 35832]. Rules, regulations, guidelines, and orders issued under the Holden Act must not be in any manner contrary to, or inconsistent with, the Act's purposes [Health & Safety Code § 35831].

[2] Financing Discrimination Prohibited

No financial institution may discriminate in the availability of, or the provision of, financial assistance for the purpose of purchasing, constructing, rehabilitating, improving, or refinancing housing accommodations because of, in whole or in part, the consideration of conditions, characteristics, or trends in the neighborhood or geographic area surrounding the housing accommodation [Health & Safety Code § 35810(a)]. However, such consideration may be permitted in a particular case if the financial institution demonstrates that it is necessary to avoid an unsafe and unsound business practice [see Health & Safety Code § 35810(a)].

Furthermore, this provision does not prohibit a financial institution from establishing a special loan program designed to engender equality in housing in accordance with the federal Fair Housing Act (42 U.S.C. § 3601 et seq.), or similar state and federal laws, so long as the program promotes housing opportunities in ethnic minority or low-income neighborhoods [Health & Safety Code § 35810(b)].

No financial institution may discriminate in the availability or provision of financial assistance for the purpose of purchasing, constructing, rehabilitating, improving, or refinancing housing accommodations because of, in whole or in part, the consideration of any basis listed in Gov. Code § 12955(a) or (d), as those bases are defined in Gov. Code §§ 12926, 12926.1(m), 12955(p)(1), and 12955.2, with an exception for familial status as applied to housing for older persons [Health & Safety Code § 35811; see § 117.11 et seq. for discussion of characteristics in Gov. Code § 12955, and for discussion of characteristics in Gov. Code § 12926, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination].

In appraising a housing accommodation, or in determining whether or not, and under what terms and conditions, to provide financial assistance for the purpose of purchasing, constructing, rehabilitating, improving, or refinancing a housing accommodation, no financial institution may consider the racial, ethnic, religious, or national origin composition of a neighborhood or geographic area surrounding a housing accommodation, or whether or not that composition is undergoing change or expected to undergo change [Health & Safety Code § 35812]. No financial institution may utilize appraisal practices that are inconsistent with the provisions of the Holden Act [Health & Safety Code § 35812].

[3] Limitations

Nothing in the Holden Act requires a financial institution to provide financial assistance if it is clearly evident that occupancy of the housing accommodation would create an imminent threat to the health or safety of the occupant [Health & Safety Code § 35813]. Moreover, nothing in the Act precludes a financial institution from considering the fair market value of the property that will secure the proposed loan [Health & Safety Code § 35813].

The provisions of the Holden Act, including rules, regulations, guidelines, and orders issued under it, do not affect the validity of any prohibitions or requirements pertaining to the activity of financial institutions that arise from other provisions of law relating to discrimination in lending [Health & Safety Code § 35831].

With regard to federal savings and loan associations, the procedural aspects of the Holden Act are preempted by federal law. The regulatory control of the federal Bank Board over federal savings and loan associations is so pervasive that it leaves no room for state regulatory control. Thus, if rights granted by the Holden Act are to be enforced against a federal savings and loan association, such enforcement must be by the Bank Board [Conference of Federal Sav. & Loan Ass'ns v. Stein (9th Cir. 1979) 604 F.2d 1256, 1260 , aff'd, 445 U.S. 921, 100 S. Ct. 1304, 63 L. Ed. 2d 754 (1980)] .

[4] Definitions

[a] "Agency" and "Secretary"

For purposes of the Holden Act, "agency" means the Business, Transportation and Housing Agency [Health & Safety Code § 35805(a)]. "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Business, Transportation, and Housing Agency [Health & Safety Code § 35805(e)].

[b] "Fair Market Value"

For purposes of the Holden Act, "fair market value" means the most probable price that a property should bring in a competitive and open market under all conditions requisite to a fair sale, the buyer and seller each acting prudently and knowledgeably, and assuming the price is notaffected by undue stimulus. The use of this definition by a financial institution in an appraisal made at any time on or after July 1, 1986, does not violate the provisions of the Holden Act [Health & Safety Code § 35805(b)].

[c] "Financial Institution"

For purposes of the Holden Act, "financial institution" includes any bank, savings and loan association, or other institution in the state, including a public agency, that regularly makes, arranges, or purchases loans for the purchase, construction, rehabilitation, improvement, or refinancing of housing accommodations [Health & Safety Code § 35805(c)].

[d] "Housing Accommodation"

For purposes of the Holden Act, "housing accommodation" includes any improved or unimproved real property, or portion of real property, that satisfies all of the following requirements [Health & Safety Code § 35805(d)]:

- It is used or is intended to be used as a residence;
- It is or will be occupied by the owner; and
- It contains not more than four dwelling units.

"Housing accommodation" also includes any residential dwelling containing not more than four dwelling units when the owner thereof, whether or not he or she will occupy the property, applies or has applied for a secured home improvement loan from a financial institution, the proceeds of which will be used to improve the security property [Health & Safety Code § 35805(d)].

[5] Powers of Secretary

[a] Issuance of Rules, Regulations, Guidelines, and Orders

The Secretary will issue rules, regulations, guidelines, and orders that are necessary to interpret and enforce the provisions of the Holden Act and to affirmatively further its provisions [Health & Safety Code § 35814].

[b] Adoption of Regulations

The Secretary will adopt regulations applicable to all persons who are in the business of originating residential mortgage loans, including, but not limited to, insurers, mortgage bankers, investment bankers, and credit unions, and who are not depository institutions within the meaning of the federal Home Mortgage Disclosure Act (12 U.S.C. § 2801 et seq.) [Health & Safety Code § 35816]. The regulations for residential mortgage loans will impose substantially the same reporting requirements by geographic area and loan product as are imposed by the federal Home Mortgage Disclosure Act [Health & Safety Code § 35816]. Health & Safety Code § 35816 does not apply to subsidiaries of depository institutions or subsidiaries of depository institution holding companies that are currently reporting to a federal or state regulatory agency as provided by the federal Home Mortgage Disclosure Act or that are subject to substantially the same reporting requirements by geographic area and loan product pursuant to an act of a federal or state regulatory agency [Health & Safety Code § 35816].

[c] Monitoring and Investigation of Lending Patterns and Practices

The Secretary will monitor and investigate the lending patterns and practices of financial institutions for compliance with the Holden Act, including the lending patterns and practices for housing accommodations that are not occupied by the owner. If a finding is made that those patterns or practices violate the Act, the Secretary will take action to effectuate the purposes of the Act. In addition to other remedies provided by the Holden Act or other provisions of law, the Secretary may recommend to the Treasurer that state funds not be deposited in a financial institution when the Secretary has made a finding that the financial institution has engaged in a lending pattern and practice that violates the Holden Act [Health & Safety Code § 35815(a)].

[6] Notice of Rights

Financial institutions must notify all applicants at the time of written application for financial assistance of the prohibitions enumerated in the Holden Act, and of their right of review. That notice, which must be in at least 10-point type and posted in a conspicuous place for public inspection, must include the address of the Secretary, and where complaints may be filed and questions asked [Health & Safety Code § 35830].

[7] Complaint

Any applicant for a real estate loan in connection with a housing accommodation claimed to be aggrieved by an alleged violation of the Holden Act, or of any rule or regulation adopted under the Act, may file a complaint with the Secretary [Health & Safety Code § 35820].

Immediately on receipt of the complaint, the Secretary will endeavor to eliminate any alleged unlawful practice by conference, conciliation, or persuasion [Health & Safety Code § 35821; see Health & Safety Code § 35815(a) (Secretary may take action after finding practices of financial institution that violate Act)].

[8] Department Action on Complaint

If, in accordance with the established procedures, and within 30 days of receiving the complaint, the Secretary finds that a financial institutionhas engaged in any unlawful practice, the Secretary will so state in a written decision and will issue a cease and desist order. That order may require the financial institution to take either of the following steps that, in the judgment of the Secretary, will effectuate the purposes of the Act [see Health & Safety Code § 35822]:

- Providing financial assistance or providing it on nondiscriminatory terms; or

- Paying damages to the complainant in an amount not to exceed $1,000, if the Secretary finds that effective relief in the form of financial assistance is no longer available.

The Secretary may also require a report of the manner of compliance [Health & Safety Code § 35822].

If the Secretary finds that the financial institution has not engaged in any practice that constitutes a violation, the Secretary will issue a written decision incorporating his or her findings of fact and will cause a copy of the decision to be served on the complainant and the financial institution [Health & Safety Code § 35822].

[9] Administrative Hearing

The Secretary's decision will be final unless, within 10 days after receipt of that decision, either the complainant or financial institution files a written request with the Secretary for a formal administrative hearing [Health & Safety Code § 35823]. On receiving such a request, the Secretary will file a copy of the request with the Office of Administrative Hearings [Health & Safety Code § 35823].

Within 20 days of receiving the request, the Office of Administrative Hearings will commence a hearing on the merits in accordance with the provisions of the Administrative Procedures Act, except that the decision of the hearing officer will be a final decision that is binding on the Secretary [Health & Safety Code § 35823; for discussion of the Administrative Procedures Act (Gov. Code § 11500 et seq.), see Ch. 473, Public Agency Adjudication et seq.]. If the Secretary's decision was in favor of the complainant, the Secretary will represent the complainant at the hearing [Health & Safety Code § 35823].

The decision of the hearing officer must be in accordance with the provisions of Health & Safety Code § 35822 [see [8], above] and must be rendered within 45 days of receipt by the Office of Administrative Hearings of the request for a hearing [Health & Safety Code § 35823].

[10] Judicial Review

Either the complainant or the financial institution may obtain judicial review of the administrative decision by filing a petition for writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 [Health & Safety Code § 35823].

In any such proceeding, the court may exercise its independent judgment on the evidence included in the record of the administrative hearing and may additionally consider evidence that was improperly excluded, as well as any other relevant evidence not included in the record of the administrative hearing that the court finds the offering party could not, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, have produced at that hearing [Health & Safety Code § 35823].

The court may in its discretion award costs or reasonable attorney's fees, or both, to the complainant if the complainant is the prevailing party, without regard to whether such judicial action is brought by the complainant or by the financial institution [Health & Safety Code § 35823].

For discussion, procedural checklists, and forms for use in petitioning a court to review an administrative decision under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions , et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Banking LawFederal ActsFair Housing & National Housing ActsCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Relating to Housing Discrimination

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.37

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.37 State May Not Promote Discrimination

The state is generally free to enact laws proscribing discrimination in housing, and has done so to a great extent through the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) (Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.) [see §§ 117.10 -117.18] and the Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code § 51) [see § 117.31] and its related provisions. The state is not free, however, to enact laws or otherwise become involved in actions that would promote discrimination.

For example, in 1964, Proposition 14, an initiative measure enacting Cal. Const., art. I, § 26, was approved by the voters. Proposition 14 provided that neither the state nor any of its subdivisions or agencies shall deny, limit, or abridge, directly or indirectly, the right of any person who is willing or desires to sell, lease, or rent any part or all of his or her real property, or to decline to sell, lease, or rent that property to those persons as he or she, in his or her absolute discretion, chooses. Proposition 14 was enacted with the clear intent to overturn state laws that bore on the right of private sellers and lessors to discriminate, and to forestall future state action that might circumscribe that right [Mulkey v. Reitman (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 529, 534-535, 50 Cal. Rptr. 881, 413 P.2d 825 , aff'd, 387 U.S. 369, 87 S. Ct. 1627, 18 L. Ed. 2d 830 (1967)] .

Proposition 14 was held to be unconstitutional as a denial of the equal protection of the laws as guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal constitution, and was held void [see Mulkey v. Reitman (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 529, 545, 50 Cal. Rptr. 881, 413 P.2d 825 , aff'd, 387 U.S. 369, 87 S. Ct. 1627, 18 L. Ed. 2d 830 (1967) (Cal. Const., art. I, § 26 was repealed in 1974)]. In reaching its decision, the Court noted that among the civil rights protected from discriminatory state action are the rights to acquire, enjoy, own, and dispose of property [Mulkey v. Reitman (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 529, 535, aff'daff'd, 387 U.S. 369, 87 S. Ct. 627, 18 L. Ed. 2d 830 (1967)]. The Court characterized Proposition 14 as an attempt to establish a constitutional right to privately discriminate on grounds that would be unavailable if state action was involved. The Court ultimately concluded that state action was involved, because state action has been consistently found when the state, in any meaningful way, has lent its processes to the achievement of discrimination even though that goal was not within the state's purposes. As a result of Proposition 14, the state would have affirmatively acted to change its existing laws from a situation in which the discrimination practiced was legally restricted to one in which it was encouraged, and at the very least, would have become a partner in the act of discrimination [see Mulkey v. Reitman (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 529, 536-538, 542-543, 50 Cal. Rptr. 881, 413 P.2d 825 , aff'd, 387 U.S. 369, 87 S. Ct. 1627, 18 L. Ed. 2d 830 (1967) ; see also Peyton v. Barrington (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 880, 50 Cal. Rptr. 905, 413 P.2d 849 ; Thomas v. Goulis (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 884, 50 Cal. Rptr. 910, 413 P.2d 854 (memorandum cases in which judgments were reversed after Proposition 14 was held unconstitutional)].

Under Gov. Code § 11135, no person in California may, on the basis of race, national origin, ethnic group identification, religion, age, sex, sexual orientation, color, or disability, be unlawfully denied full and equal access to the benefits of, or unlawfully subjected to discrimination under, any program or activity conducted, operated, or administered by the state or by any state agency, funded directly by the state, or receiving financial assistance from the state [Gov. Code § 11135(a); see Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities]. However, the provision of housing for homeless youth is not considered unlawful age discrimination, notwithstanding any other provision of law, including Gov. Code § 11135 [Gov. Code § 11139.3].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingEqual Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981)General OverviewConstitutional LawEqual ProtectionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Other State Laws Relating to Housing Discrimination

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 117.38-117.49

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

[Reserved]

§§ 117.38[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Federal Laws Relating to Housing Discrimination

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.50

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.50 Governing Statutes

The federal Fair Housing Act (FHA) is set forth in 42 U.S.C. § 3601 et seq.

42 U.S.C. § 1982 provides that all citizens have equal property rights.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingFair Housing RightsGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawContractual Relations & HousingProperty Rights (sec. 1982)General Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11: Carriers thru Civil Service-Chs.109-118
Chapter 117 CIVIL RIGHTS: HOUSING DISCRIMINATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Federal Laws Relating to Housing Discrimination

11-117 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 117.51

AUTHOR: Dennis M. Farias Revision Author Dennis M. Farias is a graduate of the University of Colorado School of Law, and an attorney licensed in California, Colorado, and Nevada. He has practiced extensively in the field of civil rights law. Mr. Farias is a staff attorney for the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, assisting the court primarily with civil rights and habeas corpus cases. John H. Scott Editorial Consultant John Houston Scott graduated from Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut in 1966. In 1970 he received a Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara, majoring in Religious Studies. He graduated from Golden Gate University School of Law in 1976. Mr. Scott has been in private practice in San Francisco since 1977 specializing in civil rights litigation with an emphasis on police misconduct, prisoner and patient rights issues, and employment discrimination. He is currently a partner in the law firm of Prentice & Scott, 433 Turk Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. He has tried in excess of 100 cases to verdict throughout the State of California. In addition, he has been attorney of record in a variety of published decisions in both state and federal courts.

§ 117.51 Federal Fair Housing Act

[1] Prohibition Against Discrimination in Housing; Claims of Disparate Treatment and Disparate Impact

The federal Fair Housing Act (FHA), set forth in 42 U.S.C. §§ 3601-3631, was originally enacted as Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968. The FHA implements the policy of the United States to provide for fair housing within constitutional limits throughout the nation, and is administered by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) [42 U.S.C. §§ 3601, 3608(a)]. The Secretary of HUD ordinarily commands considerable deference in interpreting the FHA [Harris v. Itzhaki (9th Cir. 1999) 183 F.3d 1043, 1051] .

The FHA prohibits discrimination in housing based on race, color, religion, sex, familial status, or national origin [see 42 U.S.C. § 3604]. Some provisions of the Act include handicap as an additional protected characteristic [see, e.g., 42 U.S.C. §§ 3604(c)-(f), 3605, 3606]. The language of the FHA is to be treated as broad and inclusive [Trafficante v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1972) 409 U.S. 205, 209, 93 S. Ct. 364, 34 L. Ed. 2d 415 ; Walker v. City of Lakewood (9th Cir. 2001) 263 F.3d 1005, 1018] .

The courts apply a Title VII discrimination analysis in examining claims of discrimination brought under the FHA [

Gamble v. City of Escondido (9th Cir. 1997) 104 F.3d 300, 304] . A plaintiff can establish a claim of discrimination under the FHA under a theory of disparate treatment or disparate impact [Gamble v. City of Escondido (9th Cir. 1997) 104 F.3d 300, 304-305] .

A claim of disparate treatment is analyzed under Title VII's three-stage test, and requires proof of discriminatory motive [Gamble v. City of Escondido (9th Cir. 1997) 104 F.3d 300, 305 , citing McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668] .

However, the three-stage test in McDonnell Douglas is inapplicable to Fair Housing Act challenges to a facially discriminatory policy [Community House, Inc. v. City of Boise (9th Cir. 2006) 468 F.3d 1118, 1124 , citing Bangerter v. Orem City Corp. (10th Cir. 1995) 46 F.3d 1491, 1501 n.16 ; Reidt v. County of Trempealeau (7th Cir. 1992) 975 F.2d 1336, 1341] . The appropriate approach in facial discrimination cases is the one for employment discrimination cases in which the challenged policy is facially discriminatory. In that situation, the absence of a malevolent motive does not convert a facially discriminatory policy into a neutral policy with a discriminatory effect. The appropriate test is whether the characteristic on which the discrimination is made is a "bona fide occupational qualification" ("BFOQ") [Community House, Inc. v. City of Boise (9th Cir. 2006) 468 F.3d 1118, 1124 ; see Int'l Union, United Auto., Aerospace & Agric. Implement Workers of Am. v. Johnson Controls, Inc. (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 197, 199, 200, 111 S. Ct. 1196, 113 L. Ed. 2d 158] . Thus, a plaintiff makes out a prima facie case of intentional discrimination under the Fair Housing Act merely by showing that a protected group has been subjected to explicitly differential, i.e. discriminatory, treatment [Community House, Inc. v. City of Boise (9th Cir. 2006) 468 F.3d 1118, 1124 (plaintiffs established prima facie case of facial discrimination under Fair Housing Act because they were explicitly excluded from housing for homeless based on their gender and familial status)]. To justify facial discrimination under the Fair Housing Act, a defendant must show either: (1) that the restriction benefits the protected class or (2) that it responds to legitimate safety concerns raised by the individuals affected, rather than being based on stereotypes [Community House, Inc. v. City of Boise (9th Cir. 2006) 468 F.3d 1118, 1125 (plaintiffs raised serious questions as to whether asserted justifications of safety concerns or policy allowing transfer of homeless men from one shelter to another to convert shelter into shelter for women and children satisfy standards for permissible discrimination under Fair Housing Act)].

A disparate impact claim requires a showing of discriminatory effect to establish a prima facie case [Gamble v. City of Escondido (9th Cir. 1997) 104 F.3d 300, 306] . After the plaintiff establishes a prima facie case, the burden shifts to the defendant to articulate some legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the action. The defendant is only required to set forth a legally sufficient explanation. Assuming the defendant can successfully rebut the presumption of discrimination, the burden shifts back to the plaintiff to raise a genuine factual question as to whether the proffered reason is pretextual. A plaintiff may succeed in persuading the court that he or she has been a victim of intentional discrimination directly, by persuading the court that a discriminatory reason more likely motivated the defendant, or indirectly, by showing that the defendant's proffered explanation is unworthy of credence. The trier of fact may consider the same evidence the plaintiff introduced to establish a prima facie case in determining whether the defendant's explanation is merely pretext. Once the plaintiff establishes a prima facie case, summary judgment for the defendant will ordinarily not be appropriate on any ground relating to the merits, because the crux of a discrimination claim is the elusive factual question of intentional discrimination [Harris v. Itzhaki (9th Cir. 1999) 183 F.3d 1043, 1051] .

For discussion of the disparate treatment and disparate impact theories, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination .

[2] Prohibited Practices

[a] Renting and Selling

It is unlawful for any person to discriminate on the basis of a protected characteristic by refusing to sell or rent after the making of a bona fide offer, or by refusing to negotiate for the sale or rental of, or by otherwise making unavailable or denying, a dwelling to any person [42 U.S.C. § 3604(a)]. This prohibition is limited to bona fide purchasers; there is no violation when a party discriminated against is a "tester," rather than a bona fide purchaser [see Havens Realty Corp. v. Coleman (1982) 455 U.S. 363, 374, 102 S. Ct. 1114, 71 L. Ed. 2d 214] .

It is also unlawful for any person to discriminate on the basis of a protected characteristic in the terms, conditions, or privileges of a sale or rental of a dwelling, or in the provision of related services or facilities [42 U.S.C. § 3604(b)].

For a general form of complaint for damages and injunctive relief under the FHA on the basis of discrimination in the sale and rental of housing, see § 117.90.

It is unlawful for any person to discriminate on the basis of a protected characteristic by making, printing, or publishing, or causing the making, printing, or publishing of, any notice, statement, or advertisement, with regard to the sale or rental of a dwelling that indicates any preference, limitation, or discrimination based on a protected characteristic or an intention to make such a preference, limitation, or discrimination [42 U.S.C. § 3604(c) (includes handicap as additional protected characteristic)]. For a form of allegation alleging housing discrimination based on discrimination in advertising, see § 117.91.

It is unlawful for any person to discriminate on the basis of a protected characteristic by representing falsely that a dwelling is not available for inspection, sale, or rental [42 U.S.C. § 3604(d) (includes handicap as additional protected characteristic)]. This prohibition is applicable to "testers." Thus, a "tester" who has been subjected to unlawful misrepresentations under 42 U.S.C. § 3604(d) has standing to sue under the FHA [Havens Realty Corp. v. Coleman (1982) 455 U.S. 363, 373-374, 102 S. Ct. 1114, 71 L. Ed. 2d 214] . For a form of allegation alleging housing discrimination based on such a false representation, see § 117.92.

It is unlawful for any person to discriminate on the basis of a protected characteristic by making, for profit, representations regarding entry into the neighborhood of persons of a particular protected characteristic in order to induce or attempt to induce the sale or rental of a dwelling [42 U.S.C. § 3604(e) (includes handicap as additional protected characteristic); see 24 C.F.R. § 100.85 (refers to this activity as "blockbusting")]. For a form of allegation alleging housing discrimination based on such a representation, see § 117.93.

It is unlawful for any person to discriminate on the basis of a protected characteristic by denying or placing conditions on access to, membership in, or participation in a multiple-listing service, organization, facility, or other form of brokerage service relating to the selling or renting of dwellings [42 U.S.C. § 3606 (includes handicap as additional protected characteristic)]. For a form of allegation alleging housing discrimination based on discrimination in brokerage services, see § 117.95.

It is unlawful for any person to discriminate in the sale or rental of, or to otherwise make unavailable or deny, a dwelling to any buyer or renter or to discriminate in the terms, conditions, or privileges of sale or rental of a dwelling, or in the provision of related services or facilities, because of a handicap of that buyer or renter, a person residing in or intending to reside in that dwelling after it is so sold, rented, or made available, or any person associated with that buyer or seller [42 U.S.C. § 3604(f)(1), (2)]. For purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 3604(f), discrimination is widely defined and encompasses refusal to make reasonable modifications and accommodations [see 42 U.S.C. § 3604(f)(3)]. Statutory compliance, however, does not require actions that would constitute a direct threat to the health or safety of individuals or that would result in substantial physical damage to property [42 U.S.C. § 3604(f)(9)]. 42 U.S.C. § 3604(f) permits states and local entities to require dwellings to provide greater access than it requires [see 42 U.S.C. § 3604(f)(8)].

Testers and testing organizations have standing to sue to enforce the provisions of 42 U.S.C. § 3604(f)(2) even if (1) the tester has no interest in renting or purchasing the property, and (2) the organization cannot demonstrate that any of its members has an interest in renting or purchasing the property [Smith v. Pacific Properties & Dev. Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 358 F.3d 1097, 1101-1104] . Further, an organization can show standing in its own right by showing that it was required to divert scarce resources from other efforts to promote awareness of and compliance with federal and state accessibility laws and to benefit the disabled community in other ways [Smith v. Pacific Properties & Dev. Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 358 F.3d 1097, 1104-1106] .

[b] Residential Real Estate-Related Transactions

It is unlawful for any person or other entity whose business includes engaging in residential real estate-related transactions to discriminate against any person in making available such a transaction, or in the terms or conditions of such a transaction, on the basis of a protected characteristic [42 U.S.C. § 3605(a) (includes handicap as additional protected characteristic); for definition of "residential real estate-related transaction," see § 117.51[3]].

The FHA's ban on racial discrimination extends to the underwriting of homeowners' property insurance [Ojo v. Farmers Group, Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 565 F.3d 1175, 1181 ; see Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cisneros (6th Cir. 1995) 52 F.3d 1351, 1359 (no Congressional intent precludes application of Fair Housing Act to insurance underwriting practices); NAACP v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co. (7th Cir. 1992) 978 F.2d 287, 293 (Fair Housing Act applies to discriminatory denials of insurance and discriminatory pricing that effectively preclude ownership of housing because of race of applicant); Nat'l Fair Hous. Alliance, Inc. v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. (D. D.C. 2002) 208 F. Supp. 2d 46, 57 (application of FHA to homeowners insurance is fully consistent with statute's purpose in eliminating discrimination resulting in segregated housing and lack of equal housing opportunities, citing Trafficante v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1972) 409 U.S. 205, 211-212, 93 S. Ct. 364, 34 L. Ed. 2d 415)]. However, while the FHA applies to cases involving discriminatory denials of homeowners' insurance to persons based on race, it is not specifically directed at insurance regulation [Ojo v. Farmers Group, Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 565 F.3d 1175, 1181 ; see Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cisneros (6th Cir. 1995) 52 F.3d 1351, 1360-1361 (because FHA does not mention insurance, it is covered by McCarran-Ferguson Act and cannot be construed to invalidate, impair or supersede state law enacted to regulate business of insurance); NAACP v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co. (7th Cir. 1992) 978 F.2d 287, 298 (recognizing that FHA does not mention insurers)].

For a form of allegation alleging housing discrimination based on discrimination in a residential real estate-related transaction, see § 117.94.

[c] Government Actions Related to Use of Property

A person may invoke the FHA to challenge governmental actions related to use of property, such as failure to grant a conditional use permit [see, e.g., Gamble v. City of Escondido (9th Cir. 1997) 104 F.3d 300, 305-307 (complaint for handicap discrimination in refusing to grant conditional use permit to build residence and adult day care facility failed to state claim for disparate treatment, disparate impact, or municipality's failure to make reasonable accommodation)].

A person may sue under the FHA and the Fair Housing Act Amendments (FHAA), 42 U.S.C. § 3604(f)(3)(B), if a local municipality refuses to make reasonable accommodations for handicapped housing [Gamble v. City of Escondido (9th Cir. 1997) 104 F.3d 300, 305, 307] .

[d] Acts of Interference, Coercion, or Intimidation

It is unlawful for any person to coerce, intimidate, threaten, or interfere with any person in the exercise or enjoyment of, or on account of his or her having exercised or enjoyed, or aided or encouraged another to exercise or enjoy, any right granted or protected by the FHA [see 42 U.S.C. § 3617; see, e.g., Walker v. City of Lakewood (9th Cir. 2001) 263 F.3d 1005, 1015 (FHA prevents employers from canceling at-will employment contracts in retaliation for fair housing advocacy; failure to renew annual contract in retaliation for fair housing advocacy actionable); United States v. City of Hayward (9th Cir. 1994) 36 F.3d 832, 835-836 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 813 (1995) (city's action in ordering rent reduction after mobilehome park ended its adults-only policy constituted "interference" with mobilehome park's attempt to comply with FHA in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 3617); Smith v. Stechel (9th Cir. 1975) 510 F.2d 1162, 1163-1164 (action by apartment complex employees charging employer with terminating their employment because they rented apartments to members of ethnic minority groups)]. Section 3617 does not require a showing of force or violence for coercion, interference, intimidation, or threats to give rise to liability [Walker v. City of Lakewood (9th Cir. 2001) 263 F.3d 1005, 1018] . "Interference," in particular, has been broadly applied to reach all practices having the effect of interfering with the exercise of rights under the federal fair housing laws [Walker v. City of Lakewood (9th Cir. 2001) 263 F.3d 1005, 1018 ; United States v. Hayward (9th Cir. 1994) 36 F.3d 832, 835] .

To state a claim for retaliation under the FHA, a plaintiff must show all of the following [Walker v. City of Lakewood (9th Cir. 2001) 263 F.3d 1005, 1017 ; see San Pedro Hotel Co. v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 470, 477 ; see also 42 U.S.C. § 3617]:

- The plaintiff engaged in a "protected activity";
- Defendant subjected plaintiff to an adverse action, or defendant's subsequent activities were causally linked with the plaintiff's exercise of a protected activity; and
- Plaintiff suffered some resulting damage.

Termination of a contract can be an adverse action even if plaintiff was not making a profit on the contract. Loss of profit is only relevant at the damages stage [Walker v. City of Lakewood (9th Cir. 2001) 263 F.3d 1005, 1019 n.6].

If the plaintiff presents a prima facie retaliation claim, the burden shifts to the defendant to articulate a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for its decision. If the defendant articulates a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason, the plaintiff bears the ultimate burden of demonstrating that the reason was merely a pretext for a discriminatory motive [Walker v. City of Lakewood (9th Cir. 2001) 263 F.3d 1005, 1017] .

[e] Refusal to Accommodate Disability

Unlawful discrimination against disabled persons in housing includes a refusal to make reasonable accommodations in rules, policies, practices, or services, when accommodations may be necessary to afford disabled persons equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling [42 U.S.C. § 3604(f)(3)(B)]. The Fair Housing Act imposes an affirmative duty on landlords to reasonably accommodate the needs of disabled persons [United States v. California Mobile Home Park Mgmt. Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 29 F.3d 1413, 1416] , not only with regard to physical accommodations [see 42 U.S.C. § 3604(f)(3)(A), (C)], but also with regard to the administrative policies governing rentals [Giebeler v. M&B Assocs. (9th Cir. 2003) 343 F.3d 1143, 1146-1147] .

To make out a claim of discrimination based on failure to reasonably accommodate, a plaintiff must demonstrate each of the following [McGary v. City of Portland (9th Cir. 2004) 386 F.3d 1259, 1261 ; Giebeler v. M&B Assocs. (9th Cir. 2003) 343 F.3d 1143, 1147 ; United States v. California Mobile Home Park Mgmt. Co. (9th Cir. 1997) 107 F.3d 1374, 1380] :

- He or she suffers from a handicap as defined by the FHA;
- Defendants knew or reasonably should have known of the plaintiff's handicap;
- Accommodation of the handicap may be necessary to afford plaintiff an equal opportunity to use and enjoy the dwelling; and
- Defendants refused to make such accommodation.

[f] Post-Acquisition Discrimination

The federal Fair Housing Act applies to post-acquisition discrimination; the reach of the statute encompasses claims regarding services or facilities perceived to be wanting after the owner or tenant has acquired possession of the dwelling. The regulations implementing the FHA, promulgated by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, support permitting post-acquisition claims [Committee Concerning Community Improvement v. City of Modesto (9th Cir. 2009) 583 F.3d 690, 713-714 ; see 24 C.F.R. § 100.65 (prohibiting failing or delaying maintenance or repairs of sale or rental dwellings and limiting use of privileges, services or facilities associated with dwelling)].

[3] Definitions

"Aggrieved person" includes any person who claims to have been injured by a discriminatory housing practice or who believes that he or she will be injured by a discriminatory housing practice that is about to occur [42 U.S.C. § 3602(i)].

"Dwelling" means any building, structure, or portion of a building or sturcture, that is occupied as, or designed or intended for occupancy as, a residence by one or more families, and any vacant land offered for sale or lease for the construction or location of such a building, structure, or portion of building or structure [42 U.S.C. § 3602(b)].

"Familial status" means one or more minors being domiciled with his or her parent or another person having legal custody of that minor or the designee of his or her parent or legal custodian. The familial status protections also apply to any person who is pregnant or in the process of securing legal custody of any minor [see 42 U.S.C. § 3602(k)].

"Handicap" means a person with a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of that person's major life activities, a person with a record of having such an impairment, or a person who is regarded as having such an impairment. "Handicap" does not include the current, illegal use of or addiction to a controlled substance [42 U.S.C. § 3602(h)].

"Person" includes individuals, corporations, partnerships, associations, labor organizations, legal representatives, mutual companies, joint stock companies, trusts, unincorporated organizations, trustees, trustees in cases under Title 11 of the United States Code, receivers, and fiduciaries [see 42 U.S.C. § 3602(d)].

"Rental" includes leasing, subleasing, letting, and any other grant for a consideration of the right to occupy premises not owned by the occupant [see 42 U.S.C. § 3602(e)].

As used in 42 U.S.C. § 3605, "residential real estate-related transaction" means the making or purchasing of loans or providing other financial assistance (1) for purchasing, constructing, improving, repairing, or maintaining a dwelling; or (2) secured by residential real estate. It also means the selling, brokering, or appraising of residential real property [42 U.S.C. § 3605(b)].

"Steering" is the practice of directing prospective home buyers or renters interested in equivalent properties to different areas according to their race [see Gladstone, Realtors v. Bellwood (1979) 441 U.S. 91, 94, 99 S. Ct. 1601, 60 L. Ed. 2d 66 ; TOPIC v. Circle Realty (9th Cir. 1976) 532 F.2d 1273, 1274 , cert. denied, 429 U.S. 859] .

"Testers" are individuals who, without an intent to rent or purchase a home or apartment, pose as renters or purchasers for the purpose of collecting evidence of unlawful practices [see Havens Realty Corp. v. Coleman (1982) 455 U.S. 363, 373, 102 S. Ct. 1114, 71 L. Ed. 2d 214] .

[4] Defenses

[a] Owner Exemptions

The provisions of 42 U.S.C. § 3604, other than the prohibition set forth in 42 U.S.C. § 3604(c) regarding advertisements, may not apply to the sale or rental of a single-family house by its owner. Specifically, an owner is exempt from those provisions when the owner owns three or fewer such houses, when the sale or rental occurs without any use of sale or rental facilities, without the services of any real estate broker, and without the publication or mailing of any advertisement or written notice in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 3604(c) [42 U.S.C. § 3603(b)(1)]. Moreover, the exemption applies only when the owner does not own any interest in, or possess any right to any portion of the proceeds from the sale or rental of more than three such single family houses at any one time [see 42 U.S.C. § 3603(b)(1)]. If the owner does not reside in the house at the time of sale, this exemption applies only to one such sale within any two-year period [see 42 U.S.C. § 3603(b)(1)].

This exemption has been construed very narrowly, and is solely applicable to owners. Accordingly, it is not available to lessees seeking to sublease the premises [Singleton v. Gendason (9th Cir. 1976) 545 F.2d 1224, 1226 ("owner" given its plain meaning)].

Additionally, the provisions of 42 U.S.C. § 3604, other than the prohibition set forth in 42 U.S.C. § 3604(c) regarding advertisements, do not apply to the rental of rooms or units in an owner-occupied building with separate living quarters for no more than four families [see 42 U.S.C. § 3603(b)(2)].

[b] Private Organization Exemptions

Nothing in the FHA prohibits a religious organization and its nonprofit affiliate from limiting the sale, rental, or occupancy of dwellings that it owns and operates for noncommercial purposes to persons of the same religion, or from giving preference to those persons, unless membership in that religion is restricted on the basis of race, color, or national origin [see 42 U.S.C. § 3607(a)].

Nothing in the FHA prohibits a truly private club, one that as an incident to its primary purposes provides lodgings that it owns and operates for noncommercial purposes, from limiting the rental or occupancy of those lodgings to its members or from giving preference to its members [see 42 U.S.C. § 3607(a)].

[c] Other Defenses

The FHA does not limit the applicability of any reasonable local, state, or federal restrictions regarding the maximum number of occupants permitted to occupy a dwelling [42 U.S.C. § 3607(b)(1); but see City of Edmonds v. Oxford House (1995) 514 U.S. 725, 732-737, 115 S. Ct. 1776, 131 L. Ed. 2d 801 (zoning ordinance that limited occupancy to "single family" and defined relationships that qualify as a "family" did not qualify as a maximum occupancy restriction for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 3607(b)(1) exemption)].

The FHA does not prohibit conduct against a person because of his or her conviction of the illegal manufacture or distribution of a controlled substance [42 U.S.C. § 3607(b)(4); see 21 U.S.C. § 802 (definition of "controlled substance")].

Nothing in the FHA prohibits a person engaged in the business of furnishing appraisals of real property from considering factors other than protected characteristics [42 U.S.C. § 3605(c)].

No person who has previously recovered under the Equal Credit Opportunity Act (15 U.S.C. § 1691 et seq.) for the same prohibited transaction may recover under the FHA [see 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(i)].

[5] Housing for Older Persons

No provision of the FHA regarding familial status applies to housing for older persons [42 U.S.C. § 3607(b)(1); see 42 U.S.C. §§ 3604(a)-(e), 3605(a), 3606 (pertaining to familial status)].

As used in 42 U.S.C. § 3607, "housing for older persons" means any of the following kinds of housing [see 42 U.S.C. § 3607(b)(2)]:

- Housing provided under any state or federal program that HUD determines is specifically designed and operated to assist elderly persons;

- Housing intended for, and solely occupied by, persons 62 years of age or older; and

- Housing intended and operated for occupancy by persons 55 years of age or older, so long as:

  - At least 80 percent of the occupied units are occupied by at least one person who is 55 years of age or older;

  - The housing facility or community publishes and adheres to policies and procedures that demonstrate the intent required under this provision; and

  - The housing facility or community complies with rules issued by HUD for verification of occupancy, which must provide for verification by reliable surveys and affidavits, and which must include examples of the types of policies and procedures relevant to a determination of compliance.

Housing will not fail to meet these requirements by reason of persons residing in that housing as of September 13, 1988, who do not meet the age requirements, provided that new occupants of that housing meet the age requirements. Neither will housing fail to meet these requirements by reason of unoccupied units, provided that those units are reserved for occupation by persons who meet the age requirements [see 42 U.S.C. § 3607(b)(3)].

[6] Administrative Remedy

[a] Complaint Process

[i] Filing of Civil Action

An aggrieved person may (1) pursue administrative enforcement, or (2) file a direct civil action [see 42 U.S.C. § 3613(a)(2)]. The two-year filing period for civil actions without exhaustion of the administrative remedy runs concurrently with the administrative filing period, but if an administrative remedy is sought, the civil action filing period does not include the time during which administrative procedures are pending [42 U.S.C. § 3613(a)(1)(B)]. For discussion of direct civil actions, see [7][d], below.

An aggrieved person seeking an administrative remedy may, not later than one year after an alleged discriminatory housing practice has occurred or terminated, file a complaint alleging the discriminatory housing practice [42 U.S.C. § 3610(a)(1)(A)(i); 24 C.F.R. § 103.35]. If the complaint indicates that there was more than one act of discrimination, or that the discrimination is continuing, the complaint must be filed within one year of the last incident of discrimination [24 C.F.R. § 103.35]. The complaint must be written and signed under oath, and must contain the information required by HUD [42 U.S.C. § 3610(a)(1)(A)(ii), (D); see 24 C.F.R. § 103.25 (contents of complaint)]. The complaint may be reasonably and fairly amended at any time [42 U.S.C. § 3610(a)(1)(D)].

Complaints are submitted to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). The complaint may be filed by mail or telephone with any of HUD's Offices of Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity or with any state or local agency that HUD has certified to receive complaints. A complainant can call or go to any other HUD office for help in filing a complaint, and those offices will send the complaint to HUD's Office of Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity, which will contact the complainant about the complaint's filing [24 C.F.R. § 103.30].

[ii] Notice

After a complaint is filed, HUD will serve an acknowledgment on the aggrieved person advising him or her of the time limits and options available [see 42 U.S.C. § 3610(a)(1)(B)(i)]. HUD will also notify the respondent of the complaint within 10 days of its filing [42 U.S.C. § 3610(a)(1)(B)(ii)]. The respondent has 10 days after receipt of this notice to file a sworn answer, but may subsequently amend the answer [42 U.S.C. § 3610(a)(1)(B)(iii), (D)].

[iii] Joining Additional or Substitute Persons

A person not originally named as respondent, but who is identified as a respondent in the course of investigation, may be joined as an additional or substitute respondent on written notice to that person from HUD. That notice must comply with the original notice requirements and must explain the basis for the joinder [42 U.S.C. § 3610(a)(2)].

[b] Referral to State Agency by HUD

Whenever a complaint alleges a discriminatory practice within the jurisdiction of a state or local public agency and concerning which that agency has been certified by HUD, HUD will refer the complaint to that agency [42 U.S.C. § 3610(f)(1)]. Except with the consent of the certified agency, HUD will take no further action after referral, unless the agency fails to commence proceedings on the complaint within 30 days, fails to carry forward its proceedings with reasonable promptness, or no longer qualifies for certification [42 U.S.C. § 3610(f)(2)].

[c] Referral to Attorney General by HUD

At any time after the complaint is filed, HUD may do either of the following [42 U.S.C. § 3610(e)]:

- Authorize a civil action by the Attorney General for appropriate temporary or preliminary relief pending final disposition of the complaint. The commencement of such an action does not affect any administrative proceedings; or

- Transmit information to the Attorney General or to the appropriate licensing or supervisory authorities pertaining to patterns or practices of resistance, enforcement of subpoenas, or licensing or supervision.

[d] Investigation

HUD will make and complete an investigation within 100 days after the filing of the complaint (or provide written notice of its reasons for not doing so) [42 U.S.C. § 3610(a)(1)(B)(iv), (C)]. After its investigation HUD will prepare a final report, which may later be amended if additional evidence is discovered [see 42 U.S.C. § 3610(b)(5)].

Within 100 days after the complaint's filing, HUD will make its determination of whether there is reasonable cause to believe that a discriminatory housing practice has occurred or is about to occur [42 U.S.C. § 3610(g)(1)].

Based on its determination, HUD will do one of the following three things:

- If the Secretary determines that reasonable cause exists to believe that a discriminatory housing practice has occurred or is about to occur, the Secretary will issue a charge on behalf of the aggrieved person for further proceedings under 42 U.S.C. § 3612 [42 U.S.C. § 3610(g)(2)(A)]. HUD may not issue a charge after the beginning of the trial of a civil action based on that violation commenced by the aggrieved party [42 U.S.C. § 3610(g)(4)]. HUD will serve a copy of the charge on each party and provide information about how to make an election under 42 U.S.C. § 3612(a), together with a notice of opportunity for a hearing, unless that election is made [42 U.S.C. § 3610(h)].

- If the Secretary determines that the matter involves the legality of any state or local zoning or other land use regulation, the Secretary will refer the matter to the Attorney General for appropriate action under 42 U.S.C. § 3614 [42 U.S.C. § 3610(g)(2)(C)].

- If the Secretary determines that no reasonable cause exists to believe that a discriminatory housing practice has occurred or is about to occur, the Secretary will promptly dismiss the complaint, and make public disclosure of that dismissal [42 U.S.C. § 3610(g)(3)].

When a charge is filed by HUD, a complainant, a respondent, or an aggrieved person on whose behalf the complaint was filed may elect to have the claims decided in a civil action under 42 U.S.C. § 3612(o) in lieu of a hearing under 42 U.S.C. § 3612(b). The election must be made within 20 days after the electing party is served with a copy of the charge [see 42 U.S.C. § 3612(a)].

Notwithstanding the confidentiality of the conciliation process, HUD will make available to the parties any information discovered during its investigation, as well as its final report [42 U.S.C. § 3610(d)(2)].

[e] Conciliation

During the time between the filing of the complaint and the filing of a charge or a dismissal, HUD will, to the extent feasible, engage in conciliation regarding the complaint [42 U.S.C. § 3610(b)(1); see 24 C.F.R. § 103.300 et seq. (conciliation procedures)].

Any conciliation agreement is an agreement between the parties, subject to approval by HUD [42 U.S.C. § 3610(b)(2)].

If a conciliation agreement provides for binding arbitration of the dispute, any resulting arbitration may award appropriate relief, including monetary relief [42 U.S.C. § 3610(b)(3)].

Whenever HUD has reasonable cause to believe that a respondent has breached a conciliation agreement, it will refer the matter to the Attorney General for enforcement [42 U.S.C. § 3610(c)].

Nothing said or done in the course of the conciliation process may be made public or used as evidence in a subsequent proceeding without the written consent of the parties [42 U.S.C. § 3610(d)(1)].

[f] Hearing

If no election is made by a complainant, respondent, or aggrieved person to have the claims decided in a civil action in lieu of an administrative hearing, HUD must provide an opportunity for a hearing [42 U.S.C. § 3612(b); see 42 U.S.C. § 3612(a) (election); see also [7][a], below]. The hearing must commence within 120 days after the charge is issued [see 42 U.S.C. § 3612(g)(1)]. HUD will delegate the conduct of the hearing to an administrative law judge, who will conduct the hearing at a place in the vicinity in which the discriminatory practice allegedly occurred [see 42 U.S.C. § 3612(b)].

At the hearing each party may appear, be represented by counsel, present evidence, cross examine witnesses, and obtain the issuance of subpoenas. Any aggrieved person may intervene as a party in the proceedings [42 U.S.C. § 3612(c)].

If the trial of a civil action involving the same housing practice has commenced, the hearing proceeding will not continue [42 U.S.C. § 3612(f)].

The administrative law judge must make findings of fact and conclusions of law within 60 days after the end of the hearing [see 42 U.S.C. § 3612(g)(2)]. Depending on his or her findings, the administrative law judge may do any of the following:

- Issue an order for appropriate relief, which may include actual damages and injunctive or other equitable relief, as well as a civil penalty against the respondent to vindicate the public interest [see 42 U.S.C. § 3612(g)(3) (amount of civil penalty, up to specified maximums, may vary, depending on whether or not respondent has committed prior discriminatory practices); see also 42 U.S.C. § 3612(g)(6) (HUD will send copy of order to Attorney General in case of repeat offenders)];

- Recommend appropriate disciplinary action to the governmental licensing or regulation agency if the violation occurs in course of a business subject to licensing [see 42 U.S.C. § 3612(g)(5)]; or

- Dismiss the charge and make public disclosure of the dismissal [42 U.S.C. § 3612(g)(7)].

However, no order will affect any contract, sale, encumbrance, or lease consummated before the issuance of that order and involving a bona fide purchaser, encumbrance, or tenant without actual notice of the charge [42 U.S.C. § 3612(g)(4)].

The administrative law judge may award reasonable attorney's fees and costs to the prevailing party [42 U.S.C. § 3612(p)].

HUD may review any finding, conclusion, or order issued by the administrative law judge. That review must be completed within 30 days after the judge's holding; otherwise, it becomes final [42 U.S.C. § 3612(h)(1)].

HUD is responsible for service of the order on each party [see 42 U.S.C. § 3612(h)(2)].

Any party aggrieved by a final order may petition for judicial review [42 U.S.C. § 3612(i)]. If no petition for review is filed within 45 days after the order, the findings of fact of the administrative law judge will be conclusive in connection with any petition for enforcement [see 42 U.S.C. § 3612(l)].

[g] Review or Enforcement by Court

Any party aggrieved by a final order may petition for review within 30 days after that order is entered [see 42 U.S.C. § 3612(i); see also 28 U.S.C. § 2341 et seq. (review of orders of federal agencies)].

HUD may petition for the enforcement of the order and for appropriate temporary relief or restraining order [42 U.S.C. § 3612(j)(1)].

Any party to the proceeding before the administrative law judge may intervene in the court proceeding [42 U.S.C. § 3612(k)(1), (2)].

On the filing of a petition, whether by an aggrieved party or HUD, the court may do any or all of the following [42 U.S.C. § 3612(k)(1)]:

- Grant such temporary relief, restraining order, or other order as it deems just and proper;

- Affirm, modify, or set aside, in whole or in part, the order, or remand the order for further proceedings; and/or

- Enforce the order.

If no petition for review has been filed, and HUD has not sought enforcement of the order, any person entitled to relief under the order may petition for enforcement of the order within 60 days after it is entered [42 U.S.C. § 3612(m)].

[7] Judicial Remedies

[a] Action Under 42 U.S.C. § 3612(o)

After a charge has been filed, an election may be made by a complainant, respondent, or aggrieved person to have the claims decided in a civil action in lieu of a hearing [42 U.S.C. § 3612(a); see [6][f], above]. If an election is made to have the claims decided in a civil action, the action will be authorized by the Secretary to be brought in federal district court by the Attorney General on behalf of the aggrieved person. The action must be commenced within 30 days after the election is made [42 U.S.C. § 3612(o)(1)]. Any aggrieved person may intervene as of right in the action [42 U.S.C. § 3612(o)(2)].

If the court finds that a discriminatory housing practice has occurred or is about to occur, the court may grant any relief that a court could grant with regard to that practice under 42 U.S.C. § 3613 [42 U.S.C. § 3612(o)(3); see [d], below].

If monetary relief is sought for the benefit of a nonintervening aggrieved person, no relief will be awarded to that person unless he or she has complied with discovery orders entered by the court [42 U.S.C. § 3612(o)(3)].

[b] Action Under 42 U.S.C. § 3614

Whenever the Attorney General has reasonable cause to believe that any person or group of persons is engaged in a pattern or practice of resistance to the full enjoyment of any of the rights granted by the FHA, or that any group of persons has been denied any of those rights and that denial raises an issue of general public importance, the Attorney General may bring a civil action in federal district court [42 U.S.C. § 3614(a)]. The Attorney General may also bring such an action based on a referral by HUD [42 U.S.C. § 3614(b)]. On timely application, any aggrieved person may intervene in an action commenced by the Attorney General under these provisions [42 U.S.C. § 3614(e)].

In response to the action, the court may do any or all of the following [see 42 U.S.C. § 3614(d)(1)]:

- Award such preventive relief, including a permanent or temporary injunction, restraining order, or other order as is necessary to assure the full enjoyment of the rights granted by the FHA;

- Award such other relief as the court deems appropriate, including monetary damages to persons aggrieved; and/or

- Assess a civil penalty to vindicate the public interest, up to specified maximums.

Despite the use of the word "may" in 42 U.S.C. § 3614(d)(1)(B), the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that an award of compensatory damages under that section is mandatory, not discretionary, if a party has proven unlawful discrimination and actual damages [see United States v. City of Hayward (9th Cir. 1994) 36 F.3d 832, 839-840 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 813 (1995)] .

The court may also grant to an intervening party appropriate relief, such as that authorized to be granted to a plaintiff in an action under 42 U.S.C. § 3613 [42 U.S.C. § 3614(e); see [d], below].

In its discretion, the court may allow the prevailing party, other than the United States, reasonable attorney's fees and costs [see 42 U.S.C. § 3614(d)(2)].

[c] Action Under 42 U.S.C. § 3608(d), (e)

All executive departments and agencies, including HUD, are required to administer their programs and activities relating to housing and urban development in a manner that affirmatively furthers the purposes of the FHA [42 U.S.C. § 3608(d), (e)].

A civil action may be brought in federal court to require action that carries out these affirmative duties or to enjoin an action that violates them [see Young v. Pierce (E.D. Tex. 1982) 544 F. Supp. 1010, 1018-1019 ; see also NAACP v. Secretary of Housing and Urban Dev. (1st Cir. 1987) 817 F.2d 149, 157-160 (judicial review of claim that HUD failed to comply with 42 U.S.C. § 3608(e)(5))].

Jurisdiction for this type of action exists under either 28 U.S.C. § 1343(a)(4), which provides for enforcement of any act of Congress for the protection of civil rights, or under 28 U.S.C. § 1331, which provides for original federal court jurisdiction of all civil actions arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States.

[d] Action Under 42 U.S.C. § 3613

[i] Commencement of Action

An aggrieved person may commence a civil action for appropriate relief whether or not an administrative complaint has been filed under 42 U.S.C. § 3610, and without regard to the status of any such complaint [42 U.S.C. § 3613(a)(2)]. When based on an alleged discriminatory housing practice, the action must be brought no later than two years after the occurrence or the termination of that practice. The action may be brought in an appropriate federal district court or in state court [42 U.S.C. § 3613(a)(1)(A); see 42 U.S.C. § 3613(e) (Attorney General may intervene in that action)]. The two-year period does not include any time during which a related administrative proceeding was pending [42 U.S.C. § 3613(a)(1)(B)].

If the action is based on breach of a conciliation agreement, the action must be filed no later than two years after the breach [42 U.S.C. § 3613(a)(1)(A)]. In that case, the purpose of the action must be to enforce the terms of the agreement [42 U.S.C. § 3613(a)(2)].

