In U.D. Registry Inc. v. State of California (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 107, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228 , however, the court of appeal held that Civ. Code § 1785.13(a)(3), prohibiting a consumer credit report from containing information about unlawful detainer actions unless the lessor was the prevailing party [see third item in list, above], violates the First Amendment because the state may not suppress dissemination of concededly truthful information for fear of that information's effect on its disseminators or recipients [U.D. Registry Inc. v. State of California (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 107, 115-116, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228] . The court reasoned that "where information is entrusted to the government, a less drastic means than punishing truthful publication almost always exists for guarding against the dissemination of private facts" [U.D. Registry Inc. v. State of California (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 107, 115, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228 , quoting The Florida Star v. B.J.F. (1989) 491 U.S. 524, 534, 109 S. Ct. 2603, 105 L. Ed. 2d 443] . Since the state affords the consumer the right to dispute inaccurate information on a credit report, seek a reinvestigation of the accuracy of the information, and provide a brief statement explaining any unresolved disputed information to be included in any credit report issued about the consumer [see Civ. Code § 1785.15(f)], the state's concerns about the effect of the information on its recipients (that is, tenant blacklisting or imposing unfair and unnecessary hardship on tenants seeking rental housing are served without violation of the First Amendment [U.D. Registry Inc. v. State of California (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 107, 116, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228] .

The seven-year period specified in the fifth and seventh items in the list above for accounts placed for collection (internally or by referral to a third party, whichever is earlier), charged to profit or loss, or subject to any similar action begins to run on expiration of the 180-day period beginning when the delinquency commenced that immediately preceded the collection or similar action. When more than one of these actions is taken with respect to a particular account, the seven-year period begins concurrently for all of them as of the date the first action is begun [Civ. Code § 1785.13(b)].

[b] Medical Information Prohibited

Consumer credit reporting agencies may not include medical information in their consumer files and may not furnish medical information for employment, insurance, or credit purposes in a credit report without the consumer's consent [Civ. Code § 1785.13(f)].

[c] Identification of Bankruptcy Chapter

If a consumer credit reporting agency furnishes a credit report containing information regarding any case involving a consumer arising under the bankruptcy laws, it must identify which chapter of Title 11 of the United States Code the case arose under if that information can be ascertained from the agency's source of information [Civ. Code § 1785.13(c)].

[d] Closure of Open-End Credit Account

If a consumer credit reporting agency is notified by a furnisher of credit information that an open-end credit account has been closed by a consumer, any credit report issued thereafter by the agency with respect to that consumer and that includes information on that account must indicate the fact that the consumer closed the account. For these purposes, an "open-end credit account" does not include any demand deposit account, such as a checking account, money market account, or share draft account [Civ. Code § 1785.13(e)].

[e] Overdue Child or Spousal Support

Consumer credit reports must include information, if any, on the failure of the consumer to pay overdue child or spousal support when the information was either provided to the agency by the State Department of Child Support [Fam. Code § 4701] or provided and verified by another federal, state, or local governmental agency [Civ. Code § 1785.13(g); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681s-1].

[2] Investigative Consumer Reports

The prohibitions on the reporting of obsolete information contained in the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act are similar to those in the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act [compare Civ. Code § 1786.18 with Civ. Code § 1785.13]. Under the latter act, records of arrest, indictment, information, and misdemeanor complaints may be reported pending pronouncement of judgment on the particular subject matter of those records [Civ. Code § 1786.18(a)(7)]. In addition, the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act prohibits the reporting of suits that antedate the report by more than seven years from the date of filing, satisfied judgments that antedate the report by more than seven years from the date of entry, and unsatisfied judgments that antedate the report by more than 10 years from the date of entry [Civ. Code § 1786.18(a)(2), (3)]. Bankruptcies may not be reported if they antedate the report by more than 10 years [Civ. Code § 1786.18(a)(1)].

The prohibitions in the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act [see Civ. Code § 1786.18(a)] are not applicable to any investigative consumer report to be used in either of the following circumstances [Civ. Code § 1786.18(b)]:

- In the underwriting of life insurance that involves, or may reasonably be expected to involve, an amount of $250,000 or more; or

- By an employer that is explicitly required by a governmental regulatory agency to check for records that are prohibited by Civ. Code § 1786.18(a) when the employer is reviewing a consumer's qualification for employment.

Except as otherwise provided in Civ. Code § 1786.28 (reporting of public-record information), an investigative consumer reporting agency must not furnish an investigative consumer report that includes information that is a matter of public record and that relates to an arrest, indictment, conviction, civil judicial action, tax lien, or outstanding judgment, unless the agency has verified the accuracy of the information during the 30-day period ending on the date the report is furnished [Civ. Code § 1786.18(c)].

An investigative consumer reporting agency must not prepare or furnish an investigative consumer report on a consumer that contains information that is adverse to the interest of the consumer and that is obtained through a personal interview with a neighbor, friend, or associate of the consumer or with another person with whom the consumer is acquainted or who has knowledge of the item of information, unless either (1) the investigative consumer reporting agency has followed reasonable procedures to obtain confirmation of the information from an additional source that has independent and direct knowledge of the information, or (2) the person interviewed is the best possible source of the information [Civ. Code § 1786.18(d)].

An investigative consumer reporting agency must provide, on the first page of an investigative consumer report, a notice in at least 12-point boldface type setting forth that the report does not guarantee the accuracy or truthfulness of the information as to the subject of the investigation, but only that it is accurately copied from public records, and information generated as a result of identity theft, including evidence of criminal activity, may be inaccurately associated with the consumer who is the subject of the report [Civ. Code § 1786.29(a)].

Chapter 129 CONSUMER CREDIT REPORTING
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act and California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act

13-129 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 129.18

§ 129.18 Reporting Agency Procedures

[1] Verification and Certification of Users

Every consumer credit reporting agency and investigative consumer reporting agency must maintain reasonable procedures designed to avoid violations of Civ. Code §§ 1785.13 and 1786.18 (governing contents of reports) and to limit furnishing of consumer credit and investigative consumer reports to permissible purposes [see Civ. Code §§ 1785.11 (consumer agencies), 1786.12 (investigative agencies)].

These procedures require that prospective users of the information identify themselves, certify the purposes for which the information is sought, certify that the information will be used for no other purposes, and in the case of an investigative consumer report, make the certifications described in Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(4) [see discussion in § 129.19[1]]. The consumer credit or the investigative consumer reporting agency must keep a record of the purpose for which information is sought, as stated by the user [Civ. Code §§ 1785.14(a) (consumer agencies), 1786.20(a) (investigative agencies)]. An investigative consumer reporting agency may assume that the purpose for which a user seeks information remains the same as that which the user has previously stated. The investigative consumer reporting agency must inform the user that the user is obligated to notify the agency of any change in the purpose for which information will be used [Civ. Code § 1786.20(a)]. (The federal provision does not require that a record of the purposes be kept [see 15 U.S.C. § 1681e].)

Every consumer credit or investigative consumer reporting agency must make a reasonable effort to verify the identity of a new prospective user and the uses certified by the prospective user prior to furnishing the user a consumer report. No consumer credit reporting agency may furnish a report to any person unless it has reasonable grounds for believing, or no investigative consumer reporting agency may furnish a report to any person unless it has a written agreement, that the consumer report will be used by the person only for the permissible purposes listed under Civ. Code § 1785.11 or 1786.12 [Civ. Code §§ 1785.14(a) (consumer agencies), 1786.20(a) (investigative agencies); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681e(a)]. A consumer credit reporting agency does not have reasonable grounds for believing that a consumer credit report will be used by the person for the purposes listed in Civ. Code § 1785.11 unless all of the following applicable requirements are satisfied:

- If the prospective user is a retail seller [see generally Civ. Code § 1802.3] and intends to issue credit to a consumer who appears in person on the basis of an application for credit submitted in person, the consumer credit reporting agency must, with a reasonable degree of certainty, match at least three categories of identifying information within the file maintained by the consumer credit reporting agency on the consumer with the information provided to the consumer credit reporting agency by the retail seller. The categories of identifying information may include, but are not limited to, first and last name, month and date of birth, driver's license number, place of employment, current residence address, previous residence address, or social security number [but see Civ. Code § 1789.85 et seq. (restrictions on use of social security numbers)]. The categories of information must not include the mother's maiden name [Civ. Code § 1785.14(a)(1)].

- If the prospective user is a retail seller and intends to issue credit to a consumer who appears in person on the basis of an application for credit submitted in person, the retail seller must certify, in writing, to the consumer credit reporting agency that it instructs its employees and agents to inspect a photo identification of the consumer at the time the application was submitted in person. This paragraph does not apply to an application for credit submitted by mail [Civ. Code § 1785.14(a)(2)].

- If the prospective user intends to extend credit by mail pursuant to a solicitation by mail, the extension of credit must be mailed to the same address as on the solicitation unless the prospective user verifies any address changeby, among other methods, contacting the person to whom the extension of credit will be mailed [Civ. Code § 1785.14(a)(3)].

An investigative consumer reporting agency must not make an inquiry for the purpose of preparing an investigative consumer report on a consumer for employment purposes if the making of the inquiry by an employer or prospective employer of the consumer would violate any applicable federal or state equal employment opportunity law or regulation [Civ. Code § 1786.20(c)].

[2] Exception for Subscriber Agreement

A credit reporting agency does not have to inquire regarding the purpose of each report or obtain certification for each report furnished if it is operating under an agreement with a subscriber in which the subscriber has certified that reports will only be requested and used in connection with a credit transaction involving the consumer concerned in each of its requests [Hiemstra v. TRW, Inc. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1629, 1633-1634, 241 Cal. Rptr. 564] .

[3] Maintaining Accuracy of Reports

Whenever a consumer credit or investigative consumer reporting agency prepares a report, it must follow reasonable procedures to assure maximum possible accuracy of the information concerning the individual to whom the report relates [Civ. Code §§ 1785.14(b) (consumer agencies), 1786.20(b) (investigative agencies); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681e(b); Dennis v. BEH-1, LLC (9th Cir. 2007), 485 F.3d 443, 446 (credit reporting agency that relied on secondary documents--namely trial minutes and register of actions, without obtaining copy of actual judgment--proceeded reasonably, as matter of law, to meet "maximum possible accuracy" standard); see also Schoendorf v. U.D. Registry, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 227, 238-240, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 313 (reversing order granting defendant's motion under anti-SLAPP statute to dismiss tenant's action against reporting agency for refusal to add clarifying information to her report in violation of both state CCRAA and federal FCRA)]. An investigative consumer reporting agency must retain the investigative consumer report for a period of two years after the report is provided [Civ. Code § 1786.20(b)]. For procedures when matters of public record are involved and when information is likely to havean adverse effect on a consumer's ability to obtain employment, see Civ. Code §§ 1785.18 (consumer agencies) and 1786.28 (investigative agencies), and 15 U.S.C. § 1681k.

For a consumer credit reporting agency, the reasonable procedures must include, but are not limited to, permanent retention by the agency in the consumer's file, or a separately individualized file, of that portion of the data in the file that is used by the consumer credit reporting agency to identify the individual consumer pursuant to Civ. Code § 1785.14(a)(1) [see [1], above]. This permanently retained data must be available for use in either a reinvestigation pursuant to Civ. Code § 1785.16(a) [see § 129.21[1][a]], an investigation when the consumer has filed a police report pursuant to Civ. Code § 1785.16(k) [see [7], below], or a restoration of a file involving the consumer. If the permanently retained identifying information is retained in a consumer's file, it must be clearly identified in the file in order for an individual who reviews the file to easily distinguish between the permanently stored identifying information and any other identifying information that may be a part of the file. This retention requirement must not apply to data that is reported in error, obsolete, or found to be inaccurate through the results of a reinvestigation initiated by a consumer pursuant to Civ. Code § 1785.16(a) [Civ. Code § 1785.14(b)].

[4] Verification of Adverse Information in Subsequent Investigative Consumer Reports

Whenever an investigative consumer reporting agency prepares an investigative consumer report, no adverse information in the report (other than information that is a matter of public record, the status of which has been updated pursuant to Civ. Code § 1786.28) may be included in a subsequent investigative consumer report unless the adverse information has been verified in the process of making the subsequent consumer report, or unless the adverse information was received within the three-month period preceding the date on which the subsequent report is furnished [Civ. Code § 1786.30; see 15 U.S.C. § 1681 l].

[5] No Prohibition Against User's Disclosure to Consumer

No consumer credit reporting agency may prohibit a user from disclosing the contents of a consumer credit report to the consumer who is the subject of the report if adverse action may be taken against the consumer by the user based, in whole or in part, on the report. The act of disclosure to the consumer by the user in this situation is not a basis for liability of the consumer credit reporting agency or the user under Civ. Code § 1785.31 (action for damages) [Civ. Code § 1785.14(c)]. No similar provision exists in the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act.

[6] Notice of Obligations to Supplier of Information

A consumer credit reporting agency must provide a written notice to any person who regularly and in the ordinary course of business supplies information to the agency concerning any consumer or to whom the agency provides a credit report that specifies that person's obligations under the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act. The notice may consist of copies of the appropriate code sections [Civ. Code § 1785.14(d)]. No similar provision exists in the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act.

[7] Permanent Block on Reporting of Information

Penal Code § 530.5 provides that every person who willfully obtains personal identifying information of another person, and uses that information for any unlawful purpose, including to obtain, or attempt to obtain, credit, goods, services, real property, or medical information without the consent of that person, is guilty of a public offense [Penal Code § 530.5(a)]. "Personal identifying information" means any of the following [Penal Code § 530.55(b)]:

- Name.
- Address.
- Telephone number.

- Health insurance number.
- Taxpayer identification number.
- School identification number.
- State or federal driver's license or identification number.
- Social security number.
- Place of employment.
- Employee identification number.
- Professional or occupational number.
- Mother's maiden name.
- Demand deposit account number.
- Savings account number.
- Checking account number.
- Personal identification number (PIN) or password.
- Alien registration number.
- Government passport number.
- Date of birth.
- Unique biometric data including fingerprint, facial scan identifiers, voiceprint, retina or iris image, or other unique physical representation.
- Unique electronic data including information identification number assigned to the person, address or routing code, telecommunication identifying information or access device.
- Information contained in a birth or death certificate.
- Credit card number of an individual person.
- Equivalent form of identification.

If a consumer submits to a credit reporting agency a copy of a valid police report (or a valid investigative report made by a Department of Motor Vehicles investigator with peace officer status) filed pursuant to Penal Code § 530.5 [see Penal Code § 530.6(a) (creation of police report)], the agency must promptly and permanently block reporting of any information that the consumer alleges appears on his or her credit report as a result of a violation of Penal Code § 530.5, so that the information cannot be reported. The agency must promptly notify the furnisher of the information that the information has been so blocked. The permanently blocked information may be unblocked only if, and furnishers of information and consumer credit reporting agencies must ensure that information is unblocked only if, a preponderance of the evidence establishes one of the following facts:

- The information was blocked due to a material misrepresentation of fact by the consumer or fraud.

- The consumer agrees that the blocked information was, or portions of the blocked information were, blocked in error.

- The consumer knowingly obtained possession of goods, services, or money as a result of the blocked transaction or transactions or the consumer should have known that he or she obtained possession of goods, services, or money as a result of the blocked transaction or transactions.

If blocked information is unblocked, the consumer must be promptly notified in the same manner as consumers are notified of the reinsertion of information pursuant to Civ. Code § 1785.16(c) [see § 129.21[3]]. The prior presence of the blocked information in the agency's file on the consumer is not evidence of whether the consumer knew or should have known that he or she obtained possession of any goods, services, or money. For these purposes, fraud may be demonstrated by circumstantial evidence. In unblocking information, furnishers and consumer credit reporting agencies are subject to their respective requirements pursuant to the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act regarding the completeness and accuracy of information [Civ. Code § 1785.16(k); see Civ. Code § 1785.16.3 (Civ. Code § 1785.16(k) does not apply to consumer reporting agency that acts only as reseller of credit information by assembling and merging information contained in database of another consumer reporting agency or agencies, and that does not maintain permanent database of credit information from which new credit reports are produced)].

In unblocking information, a consumer reporting agency must comply with all requirements of Civ. Code § 1785.16 and 15 U.S.C. § 1681i [see § 129.21[1]] relating to reinvestigating disputed information. In addition, a consumer reporting agency must accept the consumer's version of the disputed information and correct or delete the disputed item when the consumer submits to the consumer reporting agency documentation obtained from the source of the item in dispute or from public records confirming that the report was inaccurate or incomplete, unless the consumer reporting agency, in the exercise of good faith and reasonable judgment, has substantial reason based on specific, verifiable facts to doubt the authenticity of the documentation submitted and notifies the consumer in writing of that decision, explaining its reasons for unblocking the information and setting forth the specific, verifiable facts on which the decision was based [Civ. Code § 1785.16(l); see Civ. Code § 1785.16.3 (Civ. Code § 1785.16(l) does not apply to consumer reporting agency that acts only as reseller of credit information by assembling and merging information contained in database of another consumer reporting agency or agencies, and that does not maintain permanent database of credit information from which new credit reports are produced)].

[8] Information Traceable to Identity Theft

A consumer credit reporting agency must delete from a consumer credit report inquiries for credit reports based on credit requests that theconsumer credit reporting agency verifies were initiated as the result of identity theft as defined in Civ. Code § 1798.92 [Civ. Code § 1785.16.1].

A person or business that conducts business in California and owns or licensescomputerized data that includes personal information is required to disclose any breach of the security of the data to any resident of California whose unencrypted personal information was, or is reasonably believed to have been, acquired by an unauthorized person. A person or business that maintains computerized data that includes personal information owned by another also is required to notify the owner or licensee of the information of any breach of security of the data [see Civ. Code § 1798.82(a), (b)]. For discussion of these requirements, see Ch. 429, Privacy .

[9] Prohibited Sale of Consumer Debt

No creditor may sell a consumer debt to a debt collector, as defined [see 15 U.S.C. § 1692a; Civ. Code § 1785.16.2(c)], if the consumer is a victim of identity theft [see Civ. Code § 1798.2 (definition)], and with respect to that debt, the creditor has received notice, pursuant to Civ. Code § 1785.16(k) [see [7], above], that the consumer's file with a consumer credit reporting agency is blocked with respect to that debt [Civ. Code § 1785.16.2(a)]. This does not apply to a creditor's sale of a debt to a subsidiary or affiliate of the creditor, if, with respect to that debt, the subsidiary or affiliate does not take any action to collect the debt [Civ. Code § 1785.16.2(b)].

[10] Implementation of Security Alerts and Security Freezes

A consumer may elect to place a security alert in his or her credit report by making a request in writing or by telephone to a consumer credit reporting agency. A security alert is a notice placed in a consumer's credit report, at the request of the consumer, that notifies a recipient of the credit report that the consumer's identity may have been used without the consumer's consent to fraudulently obtain goods or services in the consumer's name [Civ. Code § 1785.11.1(a)].

Every consumer credit reporting agency must do the following to implement security alerts:

- Maintain a toll-free telephone number to accept security alert requests from consumers 24 hours a day, seven days a week [Civ. Code § 1785.11.1(c)]. The toll-free telephone number must be included in any written disclosure by a consumer credit reporting agency to any consumer pursuant to Civ. Code § 1785.15 [see § 129.20[1][f]] and must be printed in a clear and conspicuous manner [Civ. Code § 1785.11.1(d)].

- Place a security alert on a consumer's credit report no later than five business days after receiving a request from the consumer [Civ. Code § 1785.11.1(e)]. The security alert must remain in place for at least 90 days, and a consumer must have the right to request a renewal of the security alert [Civ. Code § 1785.11.1(f)].

- Notify each consumer who has requested that a security alert be placed on his or her consumer credit report of the expiration date of the alert [Civ. Code § 1785.11.1(j)].

- Notify each person requesting consumer credit information with respect to a consumer of the existence of a security alert in the credit report of that consumer, regardless of whether a full credit report, credit score, or summary report is requested [Civ. Code § 1785.11.1(b)].

In addition to requesting that a security alert be placed in a credit report, a consumer may elect to place a security freeze on his or her credit report by making a request in writing by mail to a consumer credit reporting agency. "Security freeze" means a notice placed in a consumer's credit report, at the request of the consumer and subject to certain exceptions, that prohibits the consumer credit reporting agency from releasing the consumer's credit report or any information from it without the express authorization of the consumer. If a security freeze is in place, information from a consumer's credit report may not be released to a third party without prior express authorization from the consumer. This does not prevent a consumer credit reporting agency from advising a third person that a security freeze is in effect with respect to the consumer's credit report [Civ. Code § 1785.11.2(a)]. However, it appears that the statute is not constitutionally enforceable to prevent a consumer credit reporting agency from disseminating any true information about the consumer that the agency has in its records [U.D. Registry, Inc. v. State of California (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 405, 425, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 647] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act and California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act

13-129 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 129.19

§ 129.19 Preparation or Procurement of Investigative Consumer Reports

[1] For Insurance Underwriting, Employment, or Residential Lease

A person may not procure or cause to be prepared an investigative consumer report unless the following conditions are met [Civ. Code § 1786.16(a); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681d(a)]:

- If an investigative consumer report may be sought in connection with the underwriting of insurance, it must be clearly and accurately disclosed in writing at the time the application form, medical form, binder, or similar document is signed by the consumer that an investigative consumer report regarding the consumer's character, general reputation, personal characteristics, and mode of living may be made. If no signed application form, medical form, binder, or similar document is involved in the underwriting transaction, the disclosure must be made to the consumer in a writing mailed or otherwise delivered to the consumer not later than three days after the report was first requested. The disclosure must include the name and address of any investigative consumer reporting agency conducting an investigation, plus the nature and scope of the investigation requested, and a summary of the provisions of Civ. Code § 1786.22 [Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(1)].

- If, at any time, an investigative consumer report is sought for employment purposes other than suspicion of wrongdoing or misconduct by the subject of the investigation, the person seeking the investigative consumer report may procure the report, or cause the report to be made, only if all of the following apply [Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(2)]:

  - The consumer has authorized in writing the procurement of the report.

  - The person procuring or causing the report to be made has a permissible purpose [see Civ. Code § 1786.12 (definition)].

- The person procuring or causing the report to be made provides a clear and conspicuous disclosure in writing to the consumer, at any time before the report is procured or caused to be made, in a document that consists solely of the disclosure, that aninvestigative consumer report may be obtained. The permissible purpose of the report must be identified in the disclosure, which may include information on the consumer's character, general reputation, personal characteristics, and mode of living. The disclosure must identify the name, address, and telephone number of the investigative consumer reporting agency conducting the investigation and notify the consumer of the nature and scope of the investigation requested, including a summary of the provisions of Civ. Code § 1786.22.

- If an investigative consumer report is sought in connection with the hiring of a dwelling unit [see Civ. Code § 1940(c)], the person procuring or causing the report to be made must, not later than three days after the date on which the report was first requested, notify the consumer in writing that an investigative consumer report will be made regarding the consumer's character, general reputation, personal characteristics, and mode of living. This notification must include the name and address of the consumer reporting agency that will prepare the report and a summary of the provisions of Civ. Code § 1786.22 [Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(3)].

The person procuring or causing the request to be made must certify to the investigative consumer reporting agency that the person has made the applicable disclosures to the consumer required by Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(1)-(3) and that the person will comply with Civ. Code § 1786.16(b) [Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(4)]. The person procuring the report or causing it to be prepared must agree to provide a copy of the report to the subject of the investigation [Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(5)]. Any person described in Civ. Code § 1786.12(d) [see [2], below] who requests an investigative consumer report in accordance with Civ. Code § 1786.16(a) regarding that consumer must provide the consumer with a means by which the consumer may indicate on a written form, by means of a box to check, that the consumer wishes to receive a copy of any report that is prepared. If the consumer wishes to receive a copy of the report, the recipient of the report must send a copy of the report to the consumer within three business days of the date the report is provided to the recipient, who may contract with any other entity to send a copy to the consumer. The notice to request the report may be contained on either the disclosure form, as required by Civ. Code § 1786.16(a), or a separate consent form. The copy of the report must contain the name, address, and telephone number of the person who issued the report and how to contact them. In addition, the person requesting the report must comply with Civ. Code § 1786.40 [see § 129.20[3]] if the taking of adverse action is a consideration [Civ. Code § 1786.16(b)].

The foregoing provisions do not apply to an investigative consumer report procured or caused to be prepared by an employer, if the report is sought for employment purposes due to suspicion held by an employer of wrongdoing or misconduct by the subject of the investigation [Civ. Code § 1786.16(c)].

[2] Persons Who May Initiate Preparation of Report

The persons described in Civ. Code § 1786.12(d) (permissible purposes of investigative reports) constitute the sole and exclusive class of persons who may cause an investigative consumer report to be prepared [Civ. Code § 1786.16(d)]. These permissible persons are persons who intend to use the information for one of the following [Civ. Code § 1786.12(d)]:

- Employment purposes.

- As a factor in determining a consumer's eligibility for insurance or the rate for that insurance.

- In connection with a determination of the consumer's eligibility for a license or other benefit granted by a governmental instrumentality required by law to consider the applicant's financial responsibility or status.

- In connection with an order of a court of competent jurisdiction to provide support when the imposition or enforcement of the order involves the consumer.

- In connection with the hiring of a dwelling unit [see Civ. Code § 1940(c) (applicable definition of "dwelling unit")].

[3] Federal Requirements

The federal act allows a person to procure or cause to be prepared an investigative consumer report under either of the following circumstances [15 U.S.C. § 1681d(a)]:

- If it is clearly and accurately disclosed to the consumer that an investigative consumer report, including information as to his or her character, general reputation, personal characteristics, and mode of living may be made, and the disclosure both:

  - Is made in a writing mailed or otherwise delivered to the consumer within three days after the date on which the report was first requested.

  - Includes a statement informing the consumer of his or her right to request the additional disclosures provided for under 15 U.S.C. § 1681d(b).

- The person certifies to the consumer reporting agency that both:

  - The person has made the disclosures to the consumer as specified above.

  - The person will comply with the statutory provisions giving the consumer the right to request additional written disclosures provided for under 15 U.S.C. § 1681d(b).

Any person who procures or causes to be prepared an investigative consumer report on any consumer on written request made by the consumer within a reasonable period of time after receipt of the disclosurerequired by 15 U.S.C. § 1681d(a)(1) must make a complete and accurate disclosure of the nature and scope of the investigation requested. This disclosure must be made in a writing mailed or otherwise delivered to the consumer not later than five days after the date on which the request for the disclosure was first received from the consumer or the report was first requested, whichever is later [15 U.S.C. § 1681d(b)].

No person is liable for a violation of the foregoing provisions if he or she shows by a preponderance of the evidence that, at the time of the violation, he or she maintained reasonable procedures to assure compliance [15 U.S.C. § 1681d(c)].

Chapter 129 CONSUMER CREDIT REPORTING
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act and California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act

13-129 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 129.20

§ 129.20 Disclosures to Consumers

[1] By Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies

[a] Consumer's Right to Inspect Generally

The following disclosures are required to be made only to those consumers who have a mailing address in California [Civ. Code § 1785.6]. Every consumer credit reporting agency, on request and proper identification of any consumer, must allow the consumer to visually inspect all files maintained regarding the consumer at the time of the request [Civ. Code § 1785.10(a); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681g(a)]. On being contacted, every consumer credit reporting agency must advise the consumer of the agency's obligation to disclose the files in person, by mail, or by telephone, as well as its obligation to provide the consumer with a written version of the file on request, or with a written copy of the file with an explanation of any code, including any credit score used, and certain key factors [Civ. Code § 1785.10(b)], as defined in Civ. Code § 1785.15.1, discussed in [g], below. All information on a consumer in a consumer credit reporting agency's files at the time of an inspection request must be available for inspection, including the names and addresses of the sources of the information [Civ. Code § 1785.10(c)]. After 2002, the disclosed information must include telephone numbers identified for consumer service if provided by the sources of information [Civ. Code § 1785.10(c); Stats. 2002, ch. 9, §§ 1, 2; Stats. 2001, ch. 236, §§ 2, 3; but see Stats. 2001, ch. 236, § 1 (requirement does not apply to person that is subject to consumer credit reporting laws merely by virtue of Civ. Code § 1785.5); see also Civ. Code § 1785.10(f) (exemption for agency that is subject to Civ. Code § 1785.22)].

[b] Disclosure of Recipients and Inquiries

The consumer credit reporting agency must disclose the recipients of any consumer credit report on the consumer that the agency has furnished (1) for employment purposes within the two-year period preceding the request, and (2) for any other purpose within the 12-month period preceding the request. A disclosure of credit report recipients must also include the name of the recipient or the fictitious business name under which the recipient does business and, if requested by the consumer, the address of the recipient [Civ. Code § 1785.10(d); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681g(a)]. After 2002, the disclosed information must include the address of the recipient whether or not requested by the consumer, as well as telephone numbers identified for consumer service if provided by the recipient [Civ. Code § 1785.10(d)(2); Stats. 2002, ch. 9, §§ 1, 2; Stats. 2001, ch. 236, §§ 2, 3; but see Stats. 2001, ch. 236, § 1 (requirement does not apply to person that is subject to consumer credit reporting laws merely by virtue of Civ. Code § 1785.5); see also Civ. Code § 1785.10(f), (g) (exemptions for agency subject to Civ. Code § 1785.22)].

Every consumer credit reporting agency must also disclose a record of all inquiries received by the agency during the 12-month period prior to the request that identified the consumer in connection with a credit transaction that was not initiated by the consumer. These types of credit transactions are discussed under § 129.14[2]. This record of inquiries must also include the name of each recipient making an inquiry [Civ. Code § 1785.10(e)]. After 2002, the record of inquiries must include as well the address of each recipient making an inquiry and telephone numbers identified for consumer service if provided by the recipient [Civ. Code § 1785.10(e); Stats. 2002, ch. 9, §§ 1, 2; Stats. 2001, ch. 236, §§ 2, 3; but see Stats. 2001, ch. 236, § 1 (requirement does not apply to person that is subject to consumer credit reporting laws merely by virtue of Civ. Code § 1785.5); see also Civ. Code § 1785.10(f), (g) (exemptions for agency subject to Civ. Code § 1785.22)].

[c] Contents and Format of Disclosure

A consumer has the right to request and receive all of the following information:

- Either a decoded written version of the file or a written copy of the file with an explanation of any code used containing all of the information in the file at the time of the request [Civ. Code § 1785.15(a)(1)] (the federal provision does not require that a decoded version or that a copy of any code used be given to the consumer [see 15 U.S.C. § 1681h(b)]).

- A credit score for the consumer, key factors, and related information, as defined and required in Civ. Code § 1785.15.1, discussed in [g], below [Civ. Code § 1785.15(a)(2)].

- A record of all inquiries, by recipient, that resulted in the provision of information concerning the consumer in connection with credit transactions that were not initiated by the consumer and that were received by the consumer credit reporting agency within the 12-month period immediately preceding the disclosure request [Civ. Code § 1785.15(a)(3)].

- A list of recipients, including end users specified under Civ. Code § 1785.22 (resale of consumer credit reports), of any consumer credit report on the consumer that the consumer credit reporting agency furnished for employment purposes within the previous two years, or for any other purpose within the previous 12 months [Civ. Code § 1785.15(a)(4)].

Identification of the recipients of consumer credit reports by a consumer credit reporting agency must include their names or, if applicable, the fictitious business names under which the recipients do business. Identification must also include the recipients' addresses if requested by the consumer [Civ. Code § 1785.15(a)(4)].

[d] Timing and Procedure for Disclosure

A consumer credit reporting agency must supply files and information required under Civ. Code § 1785.10 (disclosures to consumers) during normal business hours and on reasonable notice [Civ. Code § 1785.15(a); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681h(b)(2)].

Files maintained on a consumer by a consumer credit reporting agency must be disclosed to the consumer as follows [Civ. Code § 1785.15(b)(1)-(3)]:

- In person, at the location where the agency's trained personnel are located, if he or she appears in person and furnishes proper identification.

- By mail, if the consumer makes a written request with proper identification for a copy of the file or a decoded version of the file to be sent to the consumer at a specified address. A consumer credit reporting agency must send the file by regular mail, postage prepaid, within five business days of receiving the request. Consumer credit reporting agencies complying with requests for mailings are not liable for disclosures to third parties caused by mishandling of mail after the mailings leave the agencies (there is no equivalent federal provision).

- By telephone, providing a summary of all information contained in the files on the consumer and required by Civ. Code § 1785.10, if the consumer has made a written request, with proper identification for telephone disclosure.

A consumer credit reporting agency may also provide the information in its files that it is required to disclose in writing in another form if it is available from the agency and authorized by the consumer. A consumer may request that such a disclosure be made in person, by telephone with proper identification, by electronic means if this is available from the agency, or by any other reasonable means that is available [Civ. Code § 1785.15(b)(4)].

"Proper identification" is defined as that information generally deemed sufficient to identify a person. Only if a consumer is unable to reasonably identify himself or herself may a consumer credit reporting agency require additional information concerning the consumer's employment and personal or family history in order to verify his or her identity [Civ. Code § 1785.15(c)].

[e] Persons Present During Inspection

A consumer credit reporting agency must provide trained personnel to explain any information furnished to the consumer under Civ. Code § 1785.10 [Civ. Code § 1785.15(d); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681h(c)].

The consumer may be accompanied by one other person of his or her choosing, who must furnish reasonable identification [Civ. Code § 1785.15(e); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681h(d); see also Cisneros v. U.D. Registry Inc. (1996) 39 Cal. App. 4th 548, 571-572, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 233 (agency not required to disclose consumer files pursuant to request made directly by consumer's attorney)]. A consumer credit reporting agency may require the consumer to furnish a written statement granting permission to the agency to discuss the consumer's file in the other person's presence [Civ. Code § 1785.15(e); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681h(d)].

[f] Summary of Consumer's Rights and Toll-Free Number

Any written disclosure by a consumer credit reporting agency to a consumer must include a written summary of all rights the consumer has under the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act. In the case of a consumer credit reporting agency that compiles and maintains consumer credit reports on a nationwide basis, the disclosure must also include a toll-free telephone number that consumers can use to contact the agency [Civ. Code § 1785.15(f)]. For a sample of the written summary of consumer rights that must be provided, see Civ. Code § 1785.15(f).

Each consumer credit reporting agency must maintain a toll-free telephone number to accept security alert requests [see § 129.18[10]] from consumers 24 hours a day, seven days a week [Civ. Code § 1785.11.1(c)]. The toll-free telephone number must be included in any written disclosure by a consumer credit reporting agency to any consumer pursuant to Civ. Code § 1785.15 and must be printed in a clear and conspicuous manner [Civ. Code § 1785.11.1(d)].

[g] Credit Score Information

A "credit score" is a numerical value or a categorization derived from a statistical tool or modeling system used by a person who makes or arranges a loan, to predict the likelihood of certain credit behaviors, including default. The numerical value or the categorization derived from this analysis may also be referred to as a "risk predictor" or "risk score." The term "credit score" does not include any mortgage score or rating of an automated underwriting system that considers any factors in addition to creditinformation, including, but not limited to, the loan-to-value ratio, the amount of down payment, or a consumer's financial assets. The term also does not include other elements of the underwriting process or underwriting decision [Civ. Code § 1785.15.1(b)].

On receiving a consumer's request for a credit score, a consumer credit reporting agency must supply to the consumer a notice that includes the following information, along with a statement indicating that the information and credit scoring model may be different than the credit score that may be used by the lender [Civ. Code § 1785.15.1(a)]:

- The consumer's current credit score or the consumer's most recent credit score that was previously calculated by the credit reporting agency for a purpose related to the extension of credit.

- The range of possible credit scores under the model used.

- All of the key factors that adversely affected the consumer's credit score in the model used, the total number of which must not exceed four [see Civ. Code § 1785.15.1(c) ("key factors" means all relevant elements or reasons adversely affecting credit score for particular individual, listed in order of their importance based on their effect on credit score)].

- The date the credit score was created.

- The name of the person or entity that provided the credit score or credit file on which the credit score was created.

However, if the consumer requests the credit file and not the credit score, then the consumer must receive the credit file and a statement that he or she may request and obtain a credit score [Civ. Code § 1785.15.1(a)].

A consumer credit reporting agency must supply the consumer with a credit score that is derived from a credit scoring model that is widely distributed to users by that consumer credit reporting agency in connection with residential real property loans or with a credit score that assists the consumer in understanding the credit scoring assessment of his or her credit behavior and predictions about his or her future credit behavior, along with a statement indicating that the information and credit scoring model may be different than that used by the lender [Civ. Code § 1785.15.2(a)].

The required information must be provided in the same time frame and manner as the information described in Civ. Code § 1785.15 [Civ. Code § 1785.15.1(d)], discussed in [d], above. A consumer credit reporting agency may charge a reasonable fee for providing the required information [Civ. Code § 1785.15.2(b)].

A consumer reporting agency cannot be compelled to develop or disclose a score if the agency does not distribute scores that are used in connectionwith residential real property loans and does not develop scores that assist credit providers in understanding a consumer's general credit behavior and predicting his or her future credit behavior [Civ. Code § 1785.15.1(e)].

A consumer credit reporting agency that distributes credit scores developed by another person or entity is not required to provide a further explanation of them, or to process a dispute arising pursuant to Civ. Code § 1785.16(a) [see § 129.21[1][a]], except that the consumer credit reporting agency must provide the consumer with the name and address and website for contacting the person or entity who developed the score or developed the methodology of the score.

This does not apply to a consumer credit reporting agency that develops or modifies scores that are developed by another person or entity [Civ. Code § 1785.15.1(f)].

A consumer reporting agency is not required to maintain credit scores in its files [Civ. Code § 1785.15.1(g)].

Any provision in a contract that prohibits the disclosure of a credit score by a person who makes or arranges loans or a consumer credit reporting agency is void. A lender has no liability under any contractual provision for disclosure of a credit score [Civ. Code § 1785.16(m)].

[h] Fees for Disclosure

Permissible charges that a consumer credit reporting agency may impose for disclosures and notifications, and impermissible charges, are governed by Civ. Code § 1785.17 and 15 U.S.C. § 1681j.

[i] Response After Report of Identity Theft

In addition to any other rights the consumer may have under Civ. Code § 1785.1 et seq., every consumer credit reporting agency, after being contacted by telephone, mail, or in person by any consumer who has reason to believe that he or she may be a victim of identity theft, must promptly provide to that consumer a statement, written in a clear and conspicuous manner, describing the statutory rights of victims of identity theft under Civ. Code § 1785.1 et seq. [Civ. Code § 1785.15.3(a), (d)]. This does not apply to a consumer reporting agency that acts only as a reseller of credit information by assembling and merging information contained in the database of another consumer reporting agency or agencies and that does not maintain a permanent database of credit information from which new credit reports are produced [Civ. Code § 1785.15.3(c)].

Every consumer credit reporting agency, on the receipt from a victim of identity theft of a police report prepared pursuant to Penal Code § 530.6, or a valid investigative report made by a Department of Motor Vehicles investigator with peace officer status regarding the public offenses described in Penal Code § 530.5, must provide the victim, free of charge and on request, with up to 12 copies of his or her file during a consecutive 12-month period, not to exceed one copy per month, following the date of the police report. Notwithstanding any other provision of Civ. Code § 1785.1 et seq., the maximum number of free reports that a victim of identity theft is entitled to obtain under Civ. Code § 1785.1 et seq. is 12 per year, as provided by Civ. Code § 1785.15.3(b) [Civ. Code § 1785.15.3(b),(d)].

[2] By Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies

[a] Consumer's Right to Inspect

Every investigative consumer reporting agency, on request and proper identification of any consumer, must allow the consumer to visually inspect all files maintained regarding that consumer at the time of the request [Civ. Code § 1786.10(a); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681g(a)].

An investigative consumer reporting agency must provide a consumer seeking to obtain a copy of a report or making a request to review a file, a written notice in simple plain English and Spanish setting forth the terms and conditions of his or her right to receive all disclosures as provided in Civ. Code § 1786.26 (concerning which disclosures must be provided at no charge and which may be provided for a fee) [Civ. Code § 1786.29(b)].

All items of information must be available for inspection, except that the sources of information, other than public records and records from data bases available for sale, acquired solely for use in preparing an investigative consumer report and actually used for no other purpose need not be disclosed. However, in the event an action is brought under the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act, those sources must be available to the consumer under appropriate discovery procedures in the court in which the action brought [Civ. Code § 1786.10(b)(1)]. Nothing in the Act may be interpreted to mean that investigative consumer reporting agencies are required to divulge to consumers the sources of investigative consumer reports except in such appropriate discovery procedures [Civ. Code § 1786.10(b)(2); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681g(a)].

An investigative consumer reporting agency must also identify the recipients of any investigative consumer report on the consumer that the agency has furnished either (1) for employment or insurance purposes within the three-year period preceding the request or (2) for any other purpose within the three-year period preceding the request [Civ. Code § 1786.10(c); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681g(a)]. The identification of a recipient must include the name of the recipient or, if applicable, the trade name (written in full) under which the recipient conducts business and, on request of the consumer, the address and telephone number of the recipient [Civ. Code § 1786.10(d)]. The agency must also disclose the dates,original payees,and amounts of any checks or charges on which is based any adverse characterization of the consumer that is included in the file at the time of the disclosure [Civ. Code § 1786.10(e)].

[c] Timing and Procedures for Disclosure

An investigative consumer reporting agency must supply files and information required under Civ. Code § 1786.10 during normal business hours and on reasonable notice [Civ. Code § 1786.22(a); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681h(b)(2)]. The agency must supply a written explanation of any coded information in the consumer's file whenever a file is provided to a consumer [Civ. Code § 1786.22(e) (there is no equivalent federal provision)].

Files maintained on a consumer by an investigative consumer reporting agency must be disclosed to the consumer as follows [Civ. Code § 1786.22(b)]:

- In person, if he or she appears in person and furnishes proper identification. A copy of the file must be available to the consumer for a fee that may not exceed the actual cost of the duplication services provided.

- By certified mail, if the consumer makes a written request with proper identification for a copy of the file to be sent to a specified addressee. Investigative reporting agencies complying with requests for mailings are not liable for disclosures to third parties caused by mishandling of mail after the mailings leave the agencies (there is no equivalent federal provision).

- By telephone, providing a summary of all information contained in the files on the consumer and required by Civ. Code § 1786.10, if the consumer has made a written request, with proper identification, for telephone disclosure and the toll charge, if any, for the telephone call is prepaid by or charged directly to the consumer.

"Proper identification" is defined as that information generally deemed sufficient to identify a person, including documents such as a valid driver's license, social security account number, military identification card, and credit cards. Only if the consumer is unable to reasonably identify himself or herself with the information described above may an investigative consumer reporting agency require additional information concerning the consumer's employment and personal or family history in order to verify his or her identity [Civ. Code § 1786.22(c)].

[d] Persons Present During Inspection

The investigative consumer reporting agency must provide trained personnel to explain any information furnished to the consumer under Civ. Code § 1786.10 [Civ. Code § 1786.22(d); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681h(c)].

The consumer may be accompanied by one other person of his or her choosing, who must furnish reasonable identification. An investigative consumer reporting agency may require the consumer to furnish a written statement granting permission to the agency to discuss the consumer's file in the other person's presence [Civ. Code § 1786.22(f); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681h(d)].

[e] Fees for Disclosure

For the charges that an investigative consumer reporting agency may make for disclosure, see Civ. Code § 1786.26 and 15 U.S.C. § 1681j.

[3] By User of Report

Whenever insurance for personal, family, or household purposes, employment, or the hiring of a dwelling unit involving a consumer is denied, or the charge for that insurance or the hiring of a dwelling unit is increased, under circumstances in which a report regarding the consumer was obtained from an investigative consumer reporting agency, the user of the investigative consumer report must so advise the consumer against whom the adverse action has been taken and supply the name and address of the investigative consumer reporting agency making the report [Civ. Code § 1786.40(a)].

Whenever insurance for personal, family, or household purposes involving a consumer is denied or the charge for that insurance is increased, either wholly or in part because of information bearing upon the consumer's general reputation, personal characteristics, or mode of living, that was obtained from a person other than an investigative consumer reporting agency, the consumer, or another person related to the consumer and acting on the consumer's behalf, the user of the information, on the consumer's written request for the reasons for the adverse action received within 60 days after learning of the adverse action, must disclose, within a reasonable time, the nature and substance of the information to the consumer. The user of the information must clearly and accurately disclose to the consumer his or her right to make this written request at the time the adverse action is communicated to the consumer [Civ. Code § 1786.40(b)].

[4] By Person Doing Investigation in Lieu of Hiring Investigative Agency

Any person, except an agency subject to the Information Practices Act of 1977 [see Civ. Code § 1798 et seq.], who collects, assembles, evaluates, compiles, reports, transmits, transfers, or communicates information on a consumer's character, general reputation, personal characteristics, or mode of living, for employment purposes, which are matters of public record (meaning records documenting an arrest, indictment, conviction, civil judicial action, tax lien, or outstanding judgment), and does not use the services of an investigative consumer reporting agency, must providea copy of the related public record to the consumer within seven days after receipt of the information, regardless of whether the information is received in written or oral form [Civ. Code § 1786.53(a),(b)(1)]. The person must provide on any job application form, or any other written form, a box that, if checked by the consumer, permits the consumer to waive his or her right to receive a copy of the public record [Civ. Code § 1786.53(b)(2)].

If any person obtains a public record pursuant to Civ. Code § 1786.53 for the purpose of conducting an investigation for suspicion of wrongdoing or misconduct by the subject of the investigation, that person may withhold the information until the completion of the investigation. On completion of the investigation, that person must provide a copy of the public record, unless the consumer waived his or her rights [Civ. Code § 1786.53(b)(3)].

If any person takes any adverse action as a result of receiving information pursuant to Civ. Code § 1786.53(a), that person must provide to the consumer a copy of the public record, regardless of whether the consumer waived his or her rights [Civ. Code § 1786.53(b)(4)]. "Adverse action," as relating to employment, means a denial of employment or any decision made for an employment purpose that adversely affects any current or prospective employee [Civ. Code § 1786.53(a)(1)].

Nothing in these requirements compels a person to provide the same information to any consumer on more than one occasion [Civ. Code § 1786.53(c)].

The foregoing requirements are not intended to modify Lab. Code § 1198.5 (concerning an employee's inspection of his or her personnel record) or existing law concerning information obtained by an employer or employment agency without the use of the services of an investigative consumer reporting agency for employment reference checks, background investigations, credential verifications, or employee investigations, except as provided in Civ. Code § 1786.53. Nor are those requirements intended to change or supersede existing law related to privileged attorney-client communications or attorney work product, or require the production or disclosure of that information [Civ. Code § 1786.55].

§ 129.21 Procedures When Consumer Disputes Report's Accuracy

[1] Reinvestigation by Consumer Credit Reporting Agency

[a] Timing and Scope

If a consumer disputes the completeness or accuracy of any item of information contained in his or her file, and the consumer (or a user on behalf of the consumer) conveys the dispute directly to a consumer credit reporting agency, the agency must reinvestigate and record the current status of the disputed information within 30 business days after the agency receives notice of the dispute from the consumer or user. A consumer credit reporting agency may require that disputes by consumers be in writing. The agency must conduct the reinvestigation without charge [Civ. Code § 1785.16(a)].

In conducting the reinvestigation, the consumer credit reporting agency must review and consider all relevant information submitted by the consumer with respect to the disputed item of information [Civ. Code § 1785.16(b)]. The agency must also notify any person who provided the information in dispute within five business days after receiving notice of the dispute at the address and in the manner specified by the person [Civ. Code § 1785.16(a)]. For the procedure for correcting information contained in a consumer credit report by the person furnishing the information to a consumer credit reporting agency, see Civ. Code § 1785.30. As a matter of law, a consumer reporting agency's insistence that the consumer sign a form waiving all privacy rights to financial and medical information before reinvestigating an item in his or her file violates the California and federal Acts [Cisneros v. U.D. Registry Inc. (1996) 39 Cal. App. 4th 548, 575, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 233] .

[b] Frivolous or Irrelevant Dispute

If a consumer credit reporting agency determines that the dispute is frivolous or irrelevant, it must notify the consumer within five business days after that determination is made that it is terminating its reinvestigation of the item of information. Notification must be made by mail or, if authorized by the consumer for that purpose, by any other means available to the agency. In this notification, the agency must state the specific reasons why it has determined that the consumer's dispute is frivolous or irrelevant, including a failure of the consumer to furnish the agency with sufficient information to investigate the dispute [Civ. Code § 1785.16(a),(b)]. The presence of information in the consumer's file that contradicts the contention of the consumer does not, in and of itself, constitute reasonable grounds for believing that the dispute is frivolous or irrelevant [Civ. Code § 1785.16(e); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681i(a)]. This duty to notify is imposed solely on the agency itself, and a consumer reporting agency's officer is not liable for the failure of the agency to make a formal response to a consumer complaint [Cisneros v. U.D. Registry Inc. (1996) 39 Cal. App. 4th 548, 582-583, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 233] .

The federal Act also requires that the consumer be notified within five business days if the agency determines that the dispute is frivolous or irrelevant [15 U.S.C. § 1681i(a)(3)(B)].

[c] Modification of File and Notice of Reinvestigation

If the disputed item of information is found to be inaccurate or missing or can no longer be verified by the evidence submitted, the consumer credit reporting agency must promptly add, correct, or delete that informationfrom the consumer's file [Civ. Code § 1785.16(b)]. The agency also must maintain reasonable procedures to prevent the reappearance of information that has been deleted and not reinserted in a consumer's file and in credit reports based on the information in that consumer's file [Civ. Code § 1785.16(i)].

A consumer credit reporting agency must notify the consumer of the results of any reinvestigation within five days of completion. A notice of reinvestigation must include the following [Civ. Code § 1785.16(d)]:

- A statement that the reinvestigation is complete.

- A consumer credit report based on the consumer's file as revised following the reinvestigation.

- A description or indication of any changes made in the consumer's credit report as a result of those revisions to the consumer's file, a description of any changes made or sought by the consumer that were not made, and an explanation of why they were not made.

- A notice that the consumer may request a description of the procedures that were used by the agency to determine the accuracy and completeness of the information, including the name, business address, and telephone number of anyone who furnished information to the agency and who was contacted in connection with that information.

- A notice that the consumer has a right to add a statement to his or her file disputing the accuracy or completeness of the information.

- A notice that the consumer has a right to request that the agency provide a notice that the item of information has been deleted or that the item of information is disputed to anyone who has received a credit report concerning the consumer within the previous two years (for employment purposes) or 12 months (for any other purpose), discussed under [6], below.

- A notice that the dispute will remain on file with the agency as long as the credit information is used.

- A notice that a statement about the details of the dispute will be furnished to any recipient as long as the credit information is retained in the agency's database.

A consumer credit reporting agency must provide a description of the procedures it used to determine the accuracy and completeness of any information within 15 days of receiving a request [Civ. Code § 1785.16(d)].

The federal act does not require that the consumer be notified when inaccurate and unverifiable information has been deleted from the consumer's file [see 15 U.S.C. § 1681i(a)].

[2] Reinvestigation by Investigative Consumer Reporting Agency

If a consumer disputes the completeness or accuracy of any item of information contained in his or her file, and conveys the dispute directly to the investigative consumer reporting agency, the agency, without charge, must reinvestigate and record the current status of the disputed information or delete the item from the file in accordance with Civ. Code § 1786.24(c), before the end of the 30-day period beginning on the date the agency receives the notice of the dispute from the consumer [Civ. Code § 1786.24(a)].

The agency must notify any person who provided information in dispute at the address and in the manner specified by that person. The notice must include all relevant information regarding the dispute that the agency has received from the consumer. The agency must also promptly provide to the person who provided the information in dispute all relevant information regarding the dispute that is received by the agency from the consumer during the reinvestigation [Civ. Code § 1786.24(b)].

In conducting a reinvestigation, the agency must review and consider all relevant information submitted by the consumer with respect to the disputed item of information [Civ. Code § 1786.24(c)].

The agency may terminate a reinvestigation of information disputed by a consumer if the agency reasonably determines that the dispute is frivolous or irrelevant, including by reason of a failure by a consumer to provide sufficient information to investigate the disputed information. On making a determination that a dispute is frivolous or irrelevant, the agency must notify the consumer, by mail or, if authorized by the consumer for that purpose, by any other means available to the agency. In this notification, the agency must state the specific reasons why it has determined that the consumer's dispute is frivolous or irrelevant and provide a description of any information required to investigate the disputed information, which may consist of a standardized form describing the general nature of the required information [Civ. Code § 1786.24(d)]. The presence of information in the consumer's file that contradicts the contention of the consumer does not, in and of itself, constitute reasonable grounds for believing the dispute is frivolous or irrelevant [Civ. Code § 1786.24(h)].

If a reinvestigation is made and, after reinvestigation, the disputed item of information is found to be inaccurate, incomplete, or cannot be verified by the evidence submitted, the agency must promptly delete that information from the consumer's file or modify the information, as appropriate, based on the results of the reinvestigation, and must notify the consumer that the information has been deleted or modified. The agency must also notify any and all sources from which the disputed information was obtained and inform them in writing of the reasons and results of the reinvestigation, and send a copy of this notification to the consumer. In accordance with Civ. Code § 1786.10(b), the copy of the notification sent to the consumer need not reveal the identity of the source of information, unless otherwise required by law [Civ. Code § 1786.24(e)].

The agency must provide notice to the consumer of the results of any reinvestigation, by mail or, if authorized by the consumer for that purpose,by other means available to the agency. The notice must include all of the following [Civ. Code § 1786.24(g)]:

- A statement that the reinvestigation is completed.

- An investigative consumer report that is based on the consumer's file as that file is revised as a result of the reinvestigation.

- A description or indication of any changes made in the investigative consumer report as a result of those revisions to the consumer's file.

- A notice that, if requested by the consumer, a description of the procedure used to determine the accuracy and completeness of the information will be provided to the consumer by the investigative consumer reporting agency, including the name, business address, and telephone number of any furnisher of information contacted in connection with that information.

- A notice that the consumer has the right to add a statement to the consumer's file disputing the accuracy or completeness of the information.

- A notice that the consumer has the right to request that the investigative consumer reporting agency furnish notifications under Civ. Code § 1786.24(k) [see discussion under [6], below].

Any investigative consumer reporting agency that compiles and maintains files on consumers on a nationwide basis, as defined in the federal Act, must implement an automated system through which furnishers of information to that agency may report the results of a reinvestigation that finds incomplete or inaccurate information in a consumer's file to other investigative consumer reporting agencies [Civ. Code § 1786.24(n)].

All actions to be taken by an investigative consumer reporting agency under Civ. Code § 1786.24 are governed by the applicable time periods specified in 15 U.S.C. § 1681i [Civ. Code § 1786.24(o)].

The federal act requires that consumer reporting agencies provide consumers with written notice of the results of a reinvestigation not later than five days after the completion of the reinvestigation. Notice must be by mail or, if the consumer authorizes it, by any other means available to the agency [15 U.S.C. § 1681i(a)(6)(A)].

[3] Reinsertion of Information by Consumer Credit Reporting Agency

If a consumer credit or investigative consumer reporting agency conducts a reinvestigation and deletes information from a consumer's file, that information may not be reinserted into the file unless the person who furnishes the information certifies that the information is accurate. If any previously deleted information is reinserted into a consumer's file, the agency must promptly notify the consumer of that fact in writing or, if authorized by the consumer for that purpose, by any other means available to the agency [Civ. Code §§ 1785.16(c) (consumer agencies), 1786.24(f) (investigative agencies)].

As part of, or in addition to this notice, a consumer credit reporting agency must provide the consumer with a written notice within five business days of reinserting the information that includes [Civ. Code § 1785.16(c)]:

- A statement that the disputed information has been reinserted.

- A notice that the agency will provide the consumer, within 15 days following a request, with the name, address, and telephone number of any furnisher of information contacted by or that contacted the agency in connection with the reinsertion.

- The toll-free telephone number of the consumer credit reporting agency that the consumer can use to obtain this name, address, and telephone number.

- A notice that the consumer has a right to a reinvestigation of the information reinserted by the agency and to add a statement to his or her file disputing the accuracy or completeness of the information, discussed in [d], below.

An investigative consumer reporting agency must provide to the consumer, in writing, all of the following [Civ. Code § 1786.24(f)]:

- A statement that the disputed information has been reinserted.

- The name, address, and telephone number of any furnisher of information contacted or that contacted the agency in connection with the reinsertion, and the telephone number of the furnisher, if reasonably available.

- A notice that the consumer has the right to a reinvestigation of the information reinserted by the agency and to add a statement to his or her file disputing the accuracy or completeness of the information.

A consumer credit reporting agency must maintain reasonable procedures to prevent the reappearance in a consumer's file and in consumer credit reports of information that has been deleted and not reinserted [Civ. Code § 1785.16(i)]. An investigative consumer reporting agency must maintain reasonable procedures designed to prevent the reappearance in a consumer's file and in investigative consumer reports of information that has been deleted pursuant to Civ. Code § 1786.24 and not reinserted pursuant to Civ. Code § 1786.24(f) [Civ. Code § 1786.24(l)].

[4] Statement of Dispute by Consumer

If a consumer credit or investigative consumer reporting agency determines that a dispute is frivolous or irrelevant, or if the reinvestigation does not resolve the dispute, or if the information is reinserted into the consumer's file by an investigative consumer reporting agency pursuant to Civ. Code § 1786.24(f), the consumer may file a brief statement setting forth the nature of the dispute. This procedure also applies if a consumer credit reporting agency reinserts previously deleted information. The agency may limit this statement to not more than 100 words if it provides the consumer with assistance in writing a clear summary of the dispute [Civ. Code §§ 1785.16(f) (consumer agencies), 1786.24(i) (investigative agencies); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681i(b)].

[5] Notice of Dispute in Subsequent Reports

Whenever a statement of dispute is filed, the consumer credit or investigative consumer reporting agency must, in any subsequent consumer credit or investigative consumer report containing the information in question, clearly note that the information is disputed by the consumer and must include in the report either the consumer's statement or a clear and accurate summary of the statement [Civ. Code §§ 1785.16(g) (consumer agencies), 1786.24(j) (investigative agencies); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681i(c)].

[6] Notice of Deletion of Disputed Information or of Dispute

Following the deletion of information from a consumer's file that was inaccurate or could no longer be verified, or following the filing of a dispute by a consumer, a consumer credit or investigative consumer reporting agency must, at the consumer's request, furnish a notice that an item of information has been deleted or that an item of information is in dispute. In the case of disputed information, the notice must include the statement or summary of the dispute filed pursuant to Civ. Code § 1785.16(f) or 1786.24(i) [Civ. Code §§ 1785.16(h) (consumer agencies), 1786.24(k) (investigative agencies); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681i(d)].

A consumer credit reporting agency must furnish the notice to any person specifically designated by the consumer who received, within two years prior to the deletion or the filing of the dispute, a credit report concerning the consumer for employment purposes or who received, within 12 months of the deletion or the filing of the dispute, a credit report concerning the consumer for any other purpose, if the credit report contained the deleted or disputed information. The agency must clearly and conspicuously disclose to the consumer his or her right to request that such a notice be provided. This disclosure must be made at or prior to the time the information is deleted or the consumer's statement regarding the disputed information is received [Civ. Code § 1785.16(h); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681i(d)].

An investigative consumer reporting agency must furnish the notice to any person who has, within two years prior to the deletion or the filing of the dispute, received an investigative report concerning the consumer for employment purposes, or who has, within one year of the deletion or the filing of the dispute, received an investigative report concerning the consumer for any other purpose, if these investigative consumer reports contained the deleted or disputed information, unless the consumer specifically requests in writing that this notification not be given to all persons or to any specified persons. The agency must clearly and conspicuously disclose to the consumer his or her rights to make a request that this notification not be made [Civ. Code § 1786.24(k); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681i(d)].

[7] Summary Resolution by Consumer Credit Reporting Agency

If a consumer's dispute with a consumer credit reporting agency is resolved by deletion of the disputed information within three business daysafter the agency is notified of the dispute and the consumer receives written verification of that fact within five business days following the deletion, the agency is excused from taking any further action that might otherwise be required for a reinvestigation [Civ. Code § 1785.16(j)]. However, the consumer credit reporting agency is still required to provide notice of deletion to the persons and in the manner specified in Civ. Code § 1785.16(h) [Civ. Code § 1785.16(j); see discussion in [6], above].

If the consumer's dispute is resolved by deletion of the disputed information within three business days, beginning with the day the investigative consumer reporting agency receives notice of the dispute in accordance with Civ. Code § 1786.24(a) [see discussion in [2], above], the investigative consumer reporting agency will be exempt from requirements for further action under Civ. Code § 1786.24(g), (i), and (j), if the agency does all of the following [Civ. Code § 1786.24(m)]:

- Provides prompt notice of the deletion to the consumer by telephone.

- Provides written confirmation of the deletion and a copy of an investigative consumer report of the consumer that is based on the consumer's file after the deletion.

- Includes, in the telephone notice or in a written notice that accompanies the confirmation and report, a statement of the consumer's right to request under Civ. Code § 1786.24(k) [see discussion in [6], above] that the agency furnish notifications under that subsection.

[8] Investigation at User's Request

A user, in its discretion, may notify a consumer that on the latter's request the user may contact a consumer credit reporting agency and request that the agency investigate the current status of an item or items of information contained in a consumer report if the consumer disputes the completeness or accuracy of an item or items of information as provided to the user [Civ. Code § 1785.21(a)]. The agency may require identification from the user to ensure the validity of the request and, in that regard, may require that the request be put in writing with proper identification [Civ. Code § 1785.21(b)]. In the event that the request is made and identification given in the form or manner demanded by the agency, the agency must review the consumer's file and report the current status of the disputed information to the user and to the consumer by the most expeditious means possible [Civ. Code § 1785.21(c)].

No user who furnishes information pursuant to Civ. Code § 1785.21 may be liable to any person for furnishing such information [Civ. Code § 1785.21(d)].

There is no comparable federal provision.

Chapter 129 CONSUMER CREDIT REPORTING
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act and California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act

13-129 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 129.22

§ 129.22 Duties of Users of Consumer Reports

[1] Notice of Adverse Action Based on Report

Whenever any person takes any adverse action with respect to a consumer based, in whole or in part, on any information contained in a consumer credit report, that person must do all of the following [Civ. Code § 1785.20(a); see Civ. Code § 1785.16; see also 15 U.S.C. § 1681m(a)]:

- Provide written notice of the adverse action to the consumer.

- Provide the consumer with the name, address, and telephone number of the consumer reporting agency that furnished the report.

- Provide a statement that the credit grantor's decision to take adverse action was based, in whole or in part, on information contained in the consumer credit report.

- Provide the consumer with a written notice informing the consumer of his or her right within 60 days to receive a free copy of his or her credit report from the agency or from any other consumer credit reporting agency that compiles and maintains files on consumers on a nationwide basis, and the consumer's right to dispute the accuracy or completeness of any information in the credit report furnished by the consumer credit reporting agency.

For the statutory definition of the term "adverse action" for purposes of the preceding requirements, see § 129.13[6], above [see also Civ. Code § 1785.3(a)].

[2] Disclosure of Information Not Obtained From Agencies

Whenever credit or insurance for personal, family, or household purposes involving a consumer is denied, or the charge for credit or insurance is increased either wholly or in part because of information obtained from a person other than a consumer credit reporting agency bearing on a consumer's creditworthiness or credit standing, the user of that information, within a reasonable period of time, and on the consumer's written request for the reasons for the adverse action received within 60 days after learning of the adverse action, must disclose the nature and substance of the information to the consumer. The user of the information must clearly and accurately disclose to the consumer his or her right to make a written request at the time the adverse action is communicated to the consumer [Civ. Code § 1785.20(b); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681m(b)]. No person is liable for any violation of Civ. Code § 1785.20 if he or she shows by a preponderance of the evidence that at the time of the alleged violation he or she maintained reasonable procedures to assure compliance with Civ. Code § 1785.20(a) and (b) [Civ. Code § 1785.20(c); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681m(c)].

The federal provision does not require that the substance of the information be disclosed to the consumer [see 15 U.S.C. § 1681m(b)].

[3] Use of Report for Employment Purposes

Prior to requesting a consumer credit report for employment purposes, the user of the report must provide written notice to the person involved. The notice must inform the person that a report will be used and the source of the report, and must contain a box that the person may check off to receive a copy of the credit report. If the consumer indicates that he or she wishes to receive a copy of the report, the user must request that a copy be provided to the person when the user requests its copy from the credit reporting agency. The report to the user and to the subject person must be provided contemporaneously and at no charge to the subject person [Civ. Code § 1785.20.5(a)].

Whenever employment involving a consumer is denied either wholly or partly because of information contained in a consumer credit report obtained from a consumer credit reporting agency, the user of the consumer credit report must advise the consumer against whom the adverse action has been taken and supply the name and address or addresses of the agency making the report [Civ. Code § 1785.20.5(b)].

No person is liable for any violation of Civ. Code § 1785.20.5 if he or she shows by a preponderance of the evidence that, at the time of the alleged violation, he or she maintained reasonable procedures to assure compliance with that section [Civ. Code § 1785.20.5(b)].

The federal act does not contain a comparable provision.

[4] Use of Prequalifying Reports for Unsolicited Offers of Credit

Any person who uses a consumer credit report in connection with any credit transaction that is not initiated by the consumer and that consists of a firm offer of credit [see Civ. Code §§ 1785.3(e), (h), 1785.11(b)] must provide a clear and conspicuous statement to the consumer with any solicitation. This statement must contain all of the following [Civ. Code § 1785.20.1(a)]:

- That information contained in the consumer's prequalifying report was used in connection with the transaction.

- That the consumer received the offer of credit because he or she satisfied the criteria for creditworthiness under which the consumer was selected for the offer.

- That, when applicable, the credit may not be extended if, after the consumer responds to the offer, he or she does not meet the criteria used to select the consumer for the offer.

- That the consumer has a right to prohibit the use of information contained in his or her file with any consumer credit reporting agency in connection with any credit transaction that is not initiated by the consumer. A consumer may exercise this right by using the notification system that consumer credit reporting agencies are required to maintain (discussed in § 129.14[3]).

The requirement to provide consumers with a clear and conspicuous statement with any solicitation does not apply to any person using a prequalifying report if all of the following conditions are met [Civ. Code § 1785.20.1(b)]:

- The person using the prequalifying report is affiliated by common ownership or common corporate control with the person who procured the report.

- The person who procures the prequalifying report from the consumer credit reporting agency clearly and conspicuously discloses to the consumer to whom the report relates before providing the prequalifying report that the report might be provided to, and used by, an affiliate.

- The consumer consents in writing to this provision and use of the prequalifying report.

No person can be denied credit on the basis of having refused to provide his or her written consent to this provision and use of a prequalifying report unless that consent is necessary for the extension of credit related to that transaction by an affiliate [Civ. Code § 1785.20.1(c)].

The federal act does not contain a comparable provision.

[5] Resale of Consumer Credit Reports

A person may not procure a consumer credit report for the purpose of reselling it or any of the information it contains unless that person discloses to the consumer credit reporting agency that issues the report the identity of the ultimate user of the report and each permissible purpose for which the report is furnished to the end user [Civ. Code § 1785.22(a)].

A person who procures a consumer credit report for the purpose of reselling it or any of the information it contains must establish and comply with reasonable procedures designed to ensure that the consumer credit report or information is resold only for permissible purposes. These procedures must include [Civ. Code § 1785.22(b)(1)]:

- Identification of each prospective user of the resold consumer credit report or information.

- Certification of each purpose for which the resold consumer credit report or information will be used.

- Certification that the resold consumer credit report or information will be used for no other purpose.

The person procuring the report must make reasonable efforts to verify the identities and certifications required before reselling a consumer credit report or any of the information it contains [Civ. Code § 1785.22(b)(2)].

[6] Implementation of Security Alerts

On and after July 1, 2004, any person who uses a consumer credit report in connection with the approval of credit based on an application for an extension of credit, or with the purchase, lease, or rental of goods or non-credit-related services, and who receives notification of a security alert [see § 129.18[10]], may not lend money, extend credit, or complete the purchase, lease, or rental of goods or non-credit-related services without taking reasonable steps to verify the consumer's identity, in order to ensure that the application for an extension of credit or for the purchase, lease, or rental of goods or non-credit-related services is not the result of identity theft [Civ. Code § 1785.11.1(g)]. For this purpose,

"extension of credit" does not include an increase in the dollar limit of an existing open-end credit plan, as defined in Regulation Z [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.2], or any change to, or review of, an existing credit account [Civ. Code § 1785.11.1(h)].

If the consumer has placed a statement with the security alert in his or her file requesting that identity be verified by calling a specified telephone number, any person who receives that statement with the security alert in a consumer's file must take reasonable steps to verify the identity of the consumer by contacting the consumer using the specified telephone number before lending money, extending credit, or completing the purchase, lease, or rental of goods or non-credit-related services. If a person uses a consumer credit report to facilitate the extension of credit or for another permissible purpose on behalf of a subsidiary, affiliate, agent, assignee, or prospective assignee, that person may verify a consumer's identity in lieu of the subsidiary, affiliate, agent, assignee, or prospective assignee [Civ. Code § 1785.11.1(g)].

If a consumer has placed a statement including a telephone number with the security alert in his or her file, then his or her identity must be verified by contacting the consumer using that telephone number as specified above. Otherwise, if reasonable steps are taken to verify the identity of the consumer pursuant to Civ. Code § 1785.20.3(b) (requiring a creditor to verify a consumer's address when the address on a credit application varies significantly from the address in a credit report), then those steps constitute compliance with the requirements of Civ. Code § 1785.11.1 [Civ. Code § 1785.11.1(i)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act and California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act

13-129 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 129.23

§ 129.23 Duties of Furnishers of Credit Information

[1] Inaccurate or Incomplete Information Prohibited

A person may not furnish information on a specific transaction or experience to any consumer credit reporting agency if that person knows or should know that the information is incomplete or inaccurate [Civ. Code § 1785.25(a); see Hussey-Head v. World Savings and Loan (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 773, 779-780, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 171 (consumer claimed lender furnished incomplete and inaccurate information to credit reporting agencies; court found triable issues of material fact concerning violation of Civ. Code § 1785.25(a))].

Civ. Code § 1785.25(a) is specifically exempted from the broad preemption mandated in 15 U.S.C. § 1681t(b)(1) for the Fair Credit Reporting Act [15 U.S.C. § 1681t(b)(1)(F); see § 129.10[2]]. The right of action to enforce Civ. Code § 1785.25(a) is found in other sections of the Civil Code that are not specifically exempted from the federal preemption provision; namely, Civ. Code § 1785.25(g) [see § 129.23[6]] and Civ. Code § 1785.31 [see § 129.24[1][a] -[d]]. That omission, however--the fact that those enforcement sections of the Civil Code were not specifically exempted from the federal preemption provision--does not mean that violations of Civ. Code § 1785.25(a) can be redressed only through actions maintained by federal or state officials, rather than by a private action as authorized in the California law. The private right of action to enforce Civ. Code § 1785.25(a) is not preempted [Gorman v. Wolpoff & Abramson, LLP (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1147, 1173-1174 ; accord Sanai v. Saltz (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 746, 778, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 673].

If a person who regularly and routinely furnishes information about that person's own transactions or experiences with one or more consumers to one or more consumer credit reporting agencies in the ordinary course of business determines that information on a specific reported transaction or experience is not complete or accurate, he or she must promptly notify the consumer credit reporting agency of that determination and provide the agency with any corrections or additions that are necessary to make the reported information complete and accurate [Civ. Code § 1785.25(b)].

[2] Reinvestigation of Disputed Information

As long as the completeness or accuracy of any information on a specific transaction or experience furnished to a consumer credit reporting agency is subject to a continuing dispute between the affected consumer and the person providing the information, that person may not report it to a consumer credit reporting agency without also including a notice that the information is disputed by the consumer [Civ. Code § 1785.25(c)].

If a consumer disputes the completeness or accuracy of any item of information contained in his or her file and conveys the dispute directly to a consumer credit reporting agency, the agency must reinvestigate the current status of the disputed information. Part of this reinvestigation involves verifying the information with the person who furnished it to the agency, as discussed in § 129.21 [Civ. Code § 1785.16(a)]. On receiving a notice from a consumer credit reporting agency that a consumer is disputing the completeness or accuracy of any information in his or her file, the person who provided the information to the agency must complete a reinvestigation of the disputed information and report back to the consumer credit reporting agency with the results of the reinvestigation within 30 business days following the date on which the agency received the notice of dispute from the consumer. The person who originally supplied the information must also review all relevant information submitted [Civ. Code § 1785.25(f)].

[3] Closure of Open-End Credit Accounts

Any person who regularly furnishes information to a consumer credit reporting agency regarding a consumer who has an open-end credit account with that person must notify the agency when the consumer closes the account. The notification must be provided in information regularly furnished for the period in which the account is closed [Civ. Code § 1785.25(d)].

[4] Action on Delinquent Accounts

Any person who places a delinquent account for collection (either internally or by referral to a third party), charges a delinquent account to profit or loss, or takes similar action and subsequently furnishes information to a consumer credit reporting agency regarding that action must include within the furnished information the approximate commencement date of the delinquency that gave rise to the action unless that date was previously reported to the credit agency. This provision does not require that a delinquent account be reported to any consumer credit reporting agency [Civ. Code § 1785.25(e)].

[5] Submission of Negative Credit Information

A creditor may submit negative credit information concerning a consumer to a consumer credit reporting agency only if the creditor notifies the consumer involved [Civ. Code § 1785.26(b)]. A "creditor" for these purposes includes an agent or assignee of a creditor, including an agent engaged in administering or collecting a creditor's accounts [Civ. Code § 1785.26(a)(1)]. "Negative credit information" is defined as information concerning a consumer's credit history that, because of the consumer's past delinquencies, late or irregular payment history, insolvency, or any form of default, would reasonably be expected to adversely affect the consumer's ability to obtain or maintain credit. The term does not include information or credit histories arising from nonconsumer transactions or any other credit transaction outside the scope of the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act (Civ. Code § 1785.1 et seq.), nor does it include inquiries about a consumer's credit record [Civ. Code § 1785.26(a)(2)].

The required notice of negative credit information must be in writing and must be delivered in person or by first class mail, postage prepaid, to the consumer's last known address prior to, or within 30 days after, the negative credit information is reported to a consumer credit reporting agency [Civ. Code § 1785.26(c)]. After providing this notice, the creditor may submit additional information to a credit reporting agency respecting the same transaction or extension of credit that gave rise to the original negative credit information without having to provide an additional notice [Civ. Code § 1785.26(b)].

The required notice may be part of a notice of default, a billing statement, or other correspondence, and may be included as preprinted or standard form language in any of these communications from the creditor to the consumer [Civ. Code § 1785.26(c)(1)]. The notice is sufficient if it is in substantially the following form [Civ. Code § 1785.26(c)(2)]:

> As required by law, you are hereby notified that a negative credit report reflecting on your credit record may be submitted to a credit reporting agency if you fail to fulfill the terms of your credit obligations.

A creditor may provide a notice that is more specific than the suggested statutory language if the creditor chooses to do so. The notice may also include, but may not be limited to, particular information regarding an account or information respecting the approximate date on which the creditor submitted or intends to submit a negative credit report [Civ. Code § 1785.26(c)(3)].

Giving a consumer notice that negative credit information has been or will be submitted does not create any requirement that a creditor must actually submit any negative credit information to a consumer credit reporting agency. However, this required notice does not authorize the use of the notice in violation of the federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (15 U.S.C. § 1692 et seq.) [Civ. Code § 1785.26(c)(4)].

[6] Liability for Noncompliance

A person who furnishes information to a consumer credit reporting agency is liable for failure to comply with any of the duties imposed on that person unless that person establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that, at the time of the failure to comply, he or she maintained reasonable procedures to comply with those requirements [Civ. Code § 1785.25(g)]. The same standard is applicable to a creditor who fails to provide the required notice that negative credit information is being submitted to a consumer credit reporting agency [Civ. Code § 1785.26(d)].

Chapter 129 CONSUMER CREDIT REPORTING
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act and California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act

13-129 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 129.24

§ 129.24 Remedies for Statutory Violations

[1] Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act

[a] Actual and Punitive Damages

Any consumer who suffers damage as a result of a violation of the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act may bring an action against the person or persons responsible to recover the following [Civ. Code § 1785.31(a); see 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681n, 1681o (federal statute does not set limits for the amount of punitive damages for willful violation)]:

- For a negligent violation, actual damages, including court costs, loss of wages, attorney's fees, and, when applicable, pain and suffering.

- For a willful violation, actual damages as in the case of a negligent violation plus punitive damages of not less than $100 nor more than $5,000 for each violation, plus any other relief that the court deems proper.

In a case in which a natural person is found liable for obtaining a consumer credit report under false pretenses or for knowingly obtaining a consumer credit report without a permissible purpose, an award of actual damages may not be less than $2,500 [Civ. Code § 1785.31(a)(3)]. For a complaint by a consumer against a consumer credit reporting agency for improperly furnishing a consumer credit report, see § 129.110.

Although Civ. Code § 1785.31 is phrased in terms of "any person," it only creates a right of action against a credit reporting agency or a user of information for violations of the Act. It does not extend liability to one who furnishes information to a credit reporting agency. Liability in that case must be based on Civ. Code § 1785.25 or 1785.26 (discussed in § 129.23[6]). If a consumer has causes of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress and defamation against a creditor that has falsely and intentionally misreported delinquencies, the consumer is not required tohave the credit agencies investigate or correct the disputed information before proceeding against the creditor [Pulver Avco Fin. Servs. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 622, 633-634, 227 Cal. Rptr. 491 ; see § 129.26[1]].

For a form for drafting a complaint for damages for obtaining a consumer credit report under false pretenses or for knowingly obtaining a consumer credit report without a permissible purpose, see § 129.117.

[b] Injunctive Relief

Injunctive relief is available to any consumer aggrieved by a violation or a threatened violation of the act, whether or not the consumer seeks any other remedy [Civ. Code § 1785.31(b); see generally Ch. 303, Injunctions]. There is no comparable federal provision.

[c] Punitive Damages in Class Action

Any person who willfully violates any requirement imposed under the Act may be held liable for punitive damages in a class action in any amount the court allows. In determining the amount of the award in a class action, the court must consider among relevant factors the amount of any actual damages awarded, the frequency of the violations, the resources of the violator, and the number of persons adversely affected [Civ. Code § 1785.31(c); see generally Ch. 120, Class Actions]. There is no comparable federal provision.

[d] Costs and Attorney's Fees

Subject to an exception for actions against debt collectors, the prevailing plaintiffs in any action under Civ. Code § 1785.31 are entitled to recover court costs and reasonable attorney's fees [Civ. Code § 1785.31(d); see 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681n, 1681o (attorney's fees to prevailing consumer only); see also Cisneros v. U.D. Registry Inc. (1996) 39 Cal. App. 4th 548, 577-578, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 233 (broader attorney fee provision of California Act not preempted by federal act); see generally Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.50 et seq.]. A debt collector who is sued under Civ. Code § 1785.31 is entitled to recover reasonable attorney's fees on a court finding that the action was not brought in good faith if the basis for the action is related to debt collection, whether or not issues relating to the debt collection are raised in the same or another proceeding [Civ. Code § 1785.31(e)].

Thus, if the consumer loses, he or she may have to pay the attorney's fees and court costs.

[e] Civil Penalties for Wrongfully Obtaining or Using Consumer Credit Data

The Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act provides that, in addition to any other remedy provided by law, a consumer may bring an action for a civil penalty, not to exceed $2,500, against any of the following persons [Civ. Code § 1785.19(a)]:

- A person who knowingly and willfully obtains access to a file other than as provided by Civ. Code § 1785.11 (furnishing of consumer credit reports);

- A person who knowingly and willfully obtains data from a file other than as provided by Civ. Code § 1785.11; or

- A person who uses the data received from a file in a manner contrary to an agreement with the consumer credit reporting agency.

A "file" includes all of the information on a consumer recorded and retained by a consumer credit reporting agency, regardless of how the information is stored [Civ. Code § 1785.3(g)]. Civ. Code § 1785.11, which sets forth the limited circumstances in which a consumer credit reporting agency is permitted to furnish a consumer credit report, is discussed in § 129.14.

The action may also be brought by the person or entity responsible for the file accessed, and is in addition to any other remedy that may exist [Civ. Code § 1785.19(a)]. A prevailing plaintiff must be awarded the civil penalty, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees [Civ. Code § 1785.19(b)].

For a complaint for civil penalties for wrongful obtaining or use of consumer credit reporting data, see § 239.116.

[f] Civil Penalty for Failure to Place Security Alert in File

A consumer may elect to place a security alert in his or her credit report by making a request in writing or by telephone to a consumer credit reporting agency [Civ. Code § 1785.11.1(a); see § 129.18[10]]. Notwithstanding Civ. Code § 1785.19 [see [e], above], any consumer credit reporting agency that recklessly, willfully, or intentionally fails to place a security alert pursuant to Civ. Code § 1785.11.1 is liable for a civil penalty up to $2,500 plus reasonable attorney's fees [Civ. Code § 1785.11.1(k)].

The total amount recoverable would usually be within the jurisdiction of the small claims court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 116.220(a)(1) (jurisdictional ceiling is $5,000)]. For discussion and forms for use in suing on small claims, see Ch. 526, Small Claims .

[2] Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act

An investigative consumer reporting agency or user of information that fails to comply with any requirement under the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act, with respect to an investigative consumer report is liable to the consumer who is the subject of the report in an amount equal to the sum of all the following [Civ. Code § 1786.50(a); see §§ 129.118, 129.119]:

- Any actual damages sustained by the consumer as a result of the failure or, except in the case of class actions, $10,000, whichever sum is greater [see 15 U.S.C. § 1681n (provides for actual damages without designating minimum dollar recovery)]; and

- In the case of any successful action to enforce any liability under the act, the costs of the action together with reasonable attorney's fees as determined by the court.

If the court determines that the violation was grossly negligent or willful, the court may also assess, and the consumer may recover, punitive damages [Civ. Code § 1786.50(b); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681n(a)(2)].

An investigative consumer reporting agency or user of information that fails tocomply with any requirement of the Act with respect to an investigative consumer report is not liable to the consumer who is the subject of the report when the failure to comply results in a more favorable investigative consumer report than if there had not been a failure to comply [Civ. Code § 1786.50(c)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act and California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act

13-129 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 129.25

§ 129.25 Actions for Defamation, Invasion of Privacy, and Negligence

Except for the civil remedies provided in Civ. Code § 1785.31, no consumer may bring any action or proceeding in the nature of defamation, invasion of privacy, or negligence with respect to the reporting of information against any consumer reporting agency, any user of information, or any person who furnishes information to a consumer reporting agency, based on information disclosed pursuant to Civ. Code §§ 1785.10 and 1785.15 (right to inspect agency files) and Civ. Code § 1785.20 (duties of users of reports), except as to false information furnished with malice or willful intent to injure the consumer [Civ. Code § 1785.32; see 15 U.S.C. § 1681h(e); Hiemstra v. TRW, Inc. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1629, 1635, 241 Cal. Rptr. 564] .

Civ. Code § 1785.32 and 15 U.S.C. § 1681h(e) do not create a right of action against a creditor that has falsely and intentionally misreported a debt as owing, nor do they prohibit any common law cause of action a consumer may have for conduct such as defamation or intentional infliction of emotional distress, or the bringing of such a cause of action within the provisions of either Act [Pulver v. Avco Fin. Servs. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 622, 633-634, 227 Cal. Rptr. 491]. For a complaint for damages for intentional infliction of emotional distress for use by a consumer against a creditor who has falsely claimed a debt to be owed, see Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress . For general discussion and forms relating to defamation and negligence actions, see Ch. 340, Libel and Slander , and Ch. 380, Negligence .

For the purpose of applying 15 U.S.C. § 1681h(e), the Ninth Circuit adopts, as the standard for the "malice" requirement, the standard enunciated in New York Times v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 279-280, 84 S. Ct. 710, 11 L. Ed. 2d 686 . Thus, to prevail on a claim for libel under the federal statute, a plaintiff alleging malice must prove that the crucial information was furnished with knowledge that it was false or with reckless disregard of whether it was false or not. To show such reckless disregard, the plaintiff must present sufficient evidence to permit the conclusion that the defendant in fact entertained serious doubts as to the truth of the information that was furnished [Gorman v. Wolpoff & Abramson, LLP (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1147, 1173-1174].

Nothing in the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act affects the right of any consumer to maintain an action against an investigative reporting agency, a user of an investigative consumer report, or an informant for invasion of privacy or defamation [Civ. Code § 1786.52].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act and California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act

13-129 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 129.26

§ 129.26 Federal Actions and Proceedings

[1] Effect of Pending Action on State Remedies

Any consumer credit or investigative consumer reporting agency or user of information against whom an action brought pursuant to 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681n and 1681o (civil liabilities for willful and negligent noncompliance with federal Fair Credit Reporting Act) is pending is not subject to suit for the same act or omission under Civ. Code § 1785.31 (consumer agencies) or 1786.50 (investigative agencies) [Civ. Code §§ 1785.34(a) (consumer agencies), 1786.52(a) (investigative agencies); see Pulver v. Avco Fin. Servs. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 622, 633, 227 Cal. Rptr. 491 (15 U.S.C. §§ 1681n and 1681o do not create liability on part of one who furnishes false credit information to credit reporting agency)].

[2] Final Judgment Bars State Action

The entry of a final judgment against a consumer credit or investigative consumer reporting agency or user of information in an action brought pursuant to 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681n and 1681o is a bar to the maintenance of any action based on the same act or omission that might be brought under the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act or the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act [Civ. Code §§ 1785.34(b) (consumer agencies), 1786.52(b) (investigative agencies)].

[3] Penalty for Unauthorized Disclosures by Agency's Employee

Any officer or employee of a consumer reporting agency who knowingly and willfully provides information concerning an individual from the agency's files to a person not authorized to receive that information issubject to a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both [15 U.S.C. § 1681r].

[4] Administrative Enforcement

[a] Federal Trade Commission

Compliance with the requirements of the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act is enforced under the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. § 41 et seq.) by the Federal Trade Commission with respect to consumer reporting agencies and all other persons subject to that act, except to the extent that enforcement of the requirements imposed under the Fair Credit Reporting Act is specifically committed to some other government agency under 15 U.S.C. § 1681s(b) (discussed in [b], below). For the purpose of the exercise by the Federal Trade Commission of its functions and powers under the Federal Trade Commission Act, a violation of any requirement or prohibition imposed under the Fair Credit Reporting Act constitutes an unfair or deceptive act or practice in commerce in violation of 15 U.S.C. § 45(a), and is subject to enforcement by the Federal Trade Commission under 15 U.S.C. § 45(b) with respect to any consumer reporting agency or person subject to enforcement by the Federal Trade Commission, irrespective of whether that person is engaged in commerce or meets any other jurisdictional tests in the Federal Trade Commission Act. The Federal Trade Commission has procedural, investigative, and enforcement powers, including the power to issue procedural rules in enforcing compliance with the requirements imposed under the Fair Credit Reporting Act and to require the filing of reports, the production of documents, and the appearance of witnesses as though the applicable terms and conditions of the Federal Trade Commission Act were part of the Fair Credit Reporting Act. Any person violating any of the provisions of the Fair Credit Reporting Act is subject to the penalties and entitled to the privileges and immunities provided in the Federal Trade Commission Act as though the applicable terms and provisions were part of the Fair Credit Reporting Act [15 U.S.C. § 1681s(a)(1)].

[b] Other Government Agencies

Compliance with the requirements imposed under the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act with respect to consumer reporting agencies and persons who use consumer reports from those agencies is enforced under the following federal laws [15 U.S.C. § 1681s(b)]:

- Title 12 U.S.C. § 1818 in the case of the following:

  - National banks, and federal branches and federal agencies of foreign banks, by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

  - Member banks of the Federal Reserve System (other than national banks), branches and agencies of foreign banks (other than federal branches, federal agencies, and insured state branches of foreign banks), commercial lending companies owned or controlled by foreign banks, and organizations operating under 12 U.S.C. § 601 et seq. or 611 et seq., by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

  - Banks insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (other than members of the Federal Reserve System) and insured state branches of foreign banks, by the Board of Directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

- Title 12 U.S.C. § 1818 by the Office of Thrift Supervision, in the case of savings associations whose deposits are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

- The Federal Credit Union Act (12 U.S.C. § 1751 et seq.), by the Administrator of the National Credit Union Administration with respect to any federal credit union.

- The Interstate Commerce Act (49 U.S.C. § 10101 et seq.), by the Secretary of Transportation, with respect to all carriers subject to the jurisdiction of the Surface Transportation Board.

- Title 49 U.S.C. § 40101 et seq. (concerning air commerce and safety) by the Secretary of Transportation with respect to any air carrier or foreign air carrier.

- The Packers and Stockyards Act of 1921 (7 U.S.C. § 181 et seq., except as provided in 7 U.S.C. § 226), by the Secretary of Agriculture with respect to any activities subject to that act.

For the purpose of the exercise, by any agency referred to above, of its powers under any act referred to above, a violation of any requirement imposed under the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act is deemed to be a violation of a requirement imposed under the act referred to. In addition to its powers under any provision of law specifically referred to in the preceding paragraphs, each of the agencies referred to may exercise, for the purpose of enforcing compliance with any requirement imposed under the act, any other authority conferred on it by law [15 U.S.C. § 1681s(c)].

[1] Credit Denial

The term "credit denial" means a denial or revocation of credit, a change in the terms of an existing credit arrangement, or a refusal to grant credit in substantially the amount or on substantially the terms requested. The term does not include a refusal to extend additional credit under an existing credit arrangement when the applicant is delinquent or otherwise in default, or when the additional credit would exceed a previously established credit limit without a specific written application or request for an increase in the credit limit [Civ. Code § 1787.2(e)(2)].

[2] Creditor and Applicant

The term "creditor" refers only to creditors who regularly extend, or arrange for the extension of, credit whether in connection with loans, sales of property or services, or otherwise [Civ. Code § 1787.2(e)(3)]. The term "applicant" means a natural person who applies for credit primarily for personal, family or household purposes [Civ. Code § 1787.2(e)(1)].

13-129 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 129.44

§ 129.44 Disclosure Requirements on Denial of Credit: Statement of Reasons

Each applicant denied credit is entitled to a statement of reasons for that action from the creditor. A creditor satisfies this obligation by either [Civ. Code § 1787.2(b)(2)]:

- Providing statements of reasons in writing as a matter of course to applicants denied credit; or
- Giving written notification of credit denial that discloses both:
  - The applicant's right to a statement of reasons within 30 days after receipt by the creditor of a request made within 60 days after the notification.
  - The identity and address of the person or office from which the statement of reasons may be obtained.

The statement of reasons may be given orally if the written notification advises the applicant of the right to have the statement of reasons confirmed in writing on written request [Civ. Code § 1787.2(b)(3)].

A statement of reasons meets the requirements of Civ. Code § 1787.2(b) only if it contains the specific reasons for the credit denial [Civ. Code § 1787.2(c)].

If a creditor has been requested by a third party to make a specific extension of credit directly or indirectly to an applicant, the notification and statement of reasons required by *Civ. § 129.45 Remedies

Any creditor who fails to comply with any requirement of Civ. Code § 1787.2 is liable for any actual damages sustained by an applicant as a result of that failure [Civ. Code § 1787.3(a)]. In addition, any creditor, other than a government or governmental subdivision or agency, who fails to comply with any requirement imposed under the Holden Credit Denial Disclosure Act of 1976 [Civ. Code § 1787.3(b) may not exceed the lesser sum of $500,000 or one percent of the creditor's net worth [Civ. Code § 1787.3(b)].

In determining the amount of punitive damages in any action, the court must consider, among other relevant factors, the amount of any actual damages awarded, the frequency and persistence of failures of compliance by the creditor, the resources of the creditor, the numbers of persons adversely affected, and the extent to which the creditor's failure of compliance was intentional [Civ. Code § 1787.3(b)].

In any action brought by an aggrieved applicant under Civ. Code § 1787.3(a) or (b), the costs of the action, together with a reasonable attorney's fee as determined by the court, are added to any damages awarded by the court [Civ. Code § 1787.3(c)].

§ 129.66 Contract Requirements and Rescission Rights

[1] Contract Requirements

A credit services organization may not provide any service to a buyer except in accordance with a written contract that complies with the statutory requirements set forth below [Civ. Code § 1789.16(a)].

A copy of the fully completed contract and all other documents the credit services organization requires the buyer to sign must be given to the buyer at the time they are signed [Civ. Code § 1789.16]. Every contract between the buyer and a credit services organization for the purchase of the services of the credit services organization must be in writing, dated, signed by the biuyer, and include all of the following [Civ. Code § 1789.16(a)]:

- The following statement in at least 10-point bold type, right next to the space reserved for the buyer's signature:

  "You, the buyer, may cancel this contract at any time prior to midnight of the fifth day after the date of the transaction. See the attached notice of cancellation form for an explanation of this right."

- The terms and conditions of payment, including the total of all payments to be made by the buyer, whether to the credit services organization or to some other person.

- A full and detailed description of the services to be performed by the credit services organization for the buyer, including all guarantees and all promises of full or partial refunds, and the estimated date by which the services are to be performed or the estimated length of time for performing the services, not to exceed six months or a shorter period consistent with the purposes of the Credit Services Act as may be prescribed by the Department of Justice.

- The credit services organization's principal business address and the name and address of its agent, other than the Secretary of State, in the State of California, authorized to receive service of process.

A copy of the contract or contracts that the credit services organization intends to execute with its customers must be attached to the organization's registration statement [Civ. Code § 1789.25(e); see § 129.68, below].

Contract modifications must be signed. A credit services organization cannot modify its membership contract to require arbitration and preclude class relief merely by notifying members by mail that continued membership constituted acceptance of the modification [Mitchell v. American Fair Credit Association (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1345, 1352-1354, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193] .

[2] Rescission Rights

Attached to the contract, and easily detachable, must be a completed form in duplicate, in at least 10-point bold type, captioned "Notice of Cancellation," containing the following statement written in the same language as used in the contract [Civ. Code § 1789.16(b)]:

"Notice of Cancellation"

"You may cancel this contract, without any penalty or obligation, within five days from the date the contract is signed.

"If you cancel, any payment made by you under this contract must be returned within 15 days following receipt by the seller of your cancellation notice.

"To cancel this contract, mail or deliver a signed and dated copy of this cancellation notice, or any other written notice, to

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. California Credit Services Act of 1984

13-129 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 129.67

§ 129.67 Remedies for Breach of Contract

[1] Damages

The seller's breach of a credit services contract is a violation of the Credit Services Act [Civ. Code § 1789.17]. Any buyer injured by the credit services organization's breach of contract or by any other violation of the Credit Services Act may bring an action for recovery of actual damages. Damages awarded must be at least the amountpaid by the buyer to the credit services organization, punitive damages, when proper, and reasonable attorney's fees and costs [Civ. Code § 1789.21(a)]. In addition, any person, including a consumer credit reporting agency [Civ. Code § 1785.3(d)], and any consumer of, or user of, a consumer credit reporting agency under the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act [Civ. Code § 1785.1 et seq.], and any furnisher of credit information under that Act, may bring an action for the recovery of damages for a violation of the Credit Services Act [Civ. Code § 1789.21(b)]. The prevailing party in the action is entitled to reasonable attorney's fees and costs [Civ. Code § 1789.21(b)].

[2] Injunctions

In addition to an action for damages, any buyer, or any person, including a consumer credit reporting agency [Civ. Code § 1785.3(d)], and any consumer of, or user of, a consumer credit reporting agency under the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act [Civ. Code § 1785.1 et seq.], and any furnisher of credit information under that Act, injured by the credit services organization's breach of contract or by any other violation of the Credit Services Act may bring an action for injunctive relief [Civ. Code § 1789.21]. Any superior court in California has jurisdiction to enjoin violation of the Credit Services Act. The duty to institute such actions is vested in the California Attorney General, district attorneys, and city attorneys [Civ. Code § 1789.20(a)]. If the violation of the Credit Services Act is also a practice or act declared unlawful by the Consumer Legal Remedies Act (Civ. Code § 1750 et seq.), the buyer will have standing under that Act to seek injunctive relief [Civ. Code §§ 1770, 1780]; for a detailed discussion and forms relating to the Consumer Legal Remedies Act, see Ch. 504, Sale: Consumers Legal Remedies Act .

Before a credit services organization conducts business in California, it must obtain a $100,000 bond from an admitted surety in favor of the State of California for the benefit of any person who is damaged by any violation of the Credit Services Act and any individual damaged by those practices [Civ. Code § 1789.18(a)]. A copy of the bond must be filed with the Secretary of State [Civ. Code § 1789.18]. The bond must be maintained for two years following the date on which the credit services organization ceases to conduct business in California [Civ. Code § 1789.18(c)].

Any person claiming against the bond may maintain an action against the credit services organization and the surety [Civ. Code § 1789.18(b); for a discussion of such actions and forms, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings, § 538.40 et seq.].

Former provisions of the Credit Services Act permitted the use of a trust account in lieu of a bond. However, 1992 amendments to the Credit Services Act [Stats. 1992, ch. 651] deleted the authorization of a credit services organization to use a trust account [compare Civ. Code §§ 1789.13(a), 1789.18 with former Civ. Code §§ 1789.13(a), 1789.18]. The 1992 legislation, however, did not amend Civ. Code § 1789.24, which provides for claims against deposits made in lieu of a bond under Code Civ. Proc § 995.710 [see Civ. Code § 1789.24(a)].

If a deposit is authorized in lieu of a bond, a claimant against the deposit does not proceed under Code Civ. Proc. § 996.430. Instead, the claimant first obtains a judgment against the credit services organization and then establishes the claim by furnishing the Secretary of State evidence of the judgment, together with evidence that the claimant is a person with standing under former Civ. Code § 1789.18(b) (now see Civ. Code § 1789.18(a)) [Civ. Code § 1789.24(a), (b)]. The Secretary of State pays claims every 240 days until the account is exhausted, prorating claims whenever the account is insufficient to cover claims filed in any 240-day period [Civ. Code § 1789.24(c)-(e)]. Except as to amounts which would otherwise be returned to the credit services organization, the account is exempt from attachment, garnishment, or execution [Civ. Code § 1789.24(f)]. The Secretary of State will retain a cash deposit for two years from the date the Secretary receives written notification from the assignor of the deposit that the assignor has ceased to engage in the business of a credit services organization or has filed a bond pursuant to Civ. Code § 1789.18, provided that there are no outstanding claims against the deposit [Civ. Code § 1812.24(g); see Civ. Code § 1812.24(i) (earlier return of deposit pursuant to court order)].

Every credit services organization must file a registration application, accompanied by a specified registration fee, with the Department of Justice. The application must be filed, and a certificate of registration received, before the organization conducts business in California. A certificate of registration will not be issued until the bond required by *Civ. 13-129 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 129.80

§ 129.80 Debt Relief for Qualifying Military Service Members

Federal and California law grant relief from various debts and obligations, including consumer obligations and installment sales, to qualifying military service members while they are actively engaged in military service [see 50 U.S.C. App. § 501 et seq. (Servicemembers Civil Relief Act); Mil. & Vet. Code § 400 et seq.]. Among other available relief, the governing statutes allow qualifying persons to obtain a temporary stay from payment of debts during the term of military service with respect to any obligation or liability incurred by the service member before his or her period of military service [see 50 U.S.C. App. § 591(a), (b); Mil. & Vet. Code § 409.3(a)]. For detailed discussion of the available relief, qualifying persons, and the procedures for obtaining relief, see Ch. 127, Consumer Contracts and Loans, § 127.22; see also Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales, §§ 501.60 et seq., 501.300.

In connection with such stays, the governing provisions of the applicable federal and California statutes provide that application by a service member for, or receipt by a service member of, a stay, postponement, or suspension in the payment of any tax, fine, penalty, insurance premium, or other civil obligation or liability of that person under the relief provisions discussed above may not of itself, without regard to other considerations, provide the basis for anyone to make an adverse report relating to the creditworthiness of the service member by or to any person or entity engaged in the practice of assembling or evaluating consumer credit information [50 U.S.C. App. § 518(3); Mil. & Vet. Code § 401(a)(3)]. Any person violating the applicable California statute is liable for actual damages and reasonable attorney's fees incurred by the injured party [Mil. & Vet. Code § 401(b)]. In addition, violation of this prohibition is a misdemeanor [Mil. & Vet. Code § 401(c)].

The protection described above is available under federal law to members of the uniformed services [see 10 U.S.C. § 101(a)(5) (definition)] during periods of military service [see 50 U.S.C. App. § 511(1)-(3)] and, in many cases, for 90 days after termination of a member's period of military service. Protection is available under California law to officers and enlisted members of the the National Guard called or ordered into active state service by the Governor or into active federal service by the President of the United States under Title 10 or 32 of the United States Code, or reservists of the United States Military Reserve who have been called to full-time active duty [Mil. & Vet. Code § 400(a)]. "Military service," for purposes of the California requirements, means full-time active state service or full-time active federal service, or full-time active duty of a reservist, for a period in excess of seven days in any 14-day period [Mil. & Vet.

Code § 400(b) (service since September 11, 2001, to engage in homeland defense against terrorism, is credited toward seven-day period); see also 50 U.S.C. App. § 511(3) (meaning of "period of military service" for purposes of federal requirements)].

For a complaint for unlawful retaliation by a lender, creditor, or other person against a person who received stay or postponement because of military service, see § 129.150.

[1] California Holden Credit Denial Disclosure Act of 1976

California resident pursuing state and federal claims against issuer for improperly withholding and then willfully destroying derogatory information that formed basis for denial of Mastercard application [see, e.g., Civ. Code § 1787.2(b)] was first required to exhaust administrative claims against Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation as receiver [see 12 U.S.C. § 1821(d)(3)-(13)] appointed for bank six months before district court action was filed. Henderson v. Bank of New England (9th Cir. 1993) 986 F.2d 319, 321 ; see Intercontinental Travel Marketing v. FDIC (9th Cir. 1994) 45 F.3d 1278, 1282-1283 (extending Henderson holding to cases in which claimants filed their action before FDIC was appointed as receiver)

[2] Federal Credit Reporting

When consumer's action is based on "willful" failure to comply with Fair Credit Reporting Act [see 15 U.S.C. § 1681n(a)], it may encompass not only knowing violations but also defendant's reckless disregard of statutory duties. Safeco Ins. Co. of Am. v. Burr (2007)551U.S.47, 127 S. Ct. 2201, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1045, 1058-1060

In transaction between consumer and insurance company, Fair Credit Reporting Act [15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq.] requires that company must send adverse action notice in any of these cases: (1) higher rate is charged because of credit information that company obtains, regardless of whether that rate is contained in initial policy or extension or renewal of policy and regardless of whether company has previously charged lower rate for that consumer; (2) consumer would have received lower rate for insurance had credit information been more favorable, regardless of whether consumer's credit rating is above or below average; and (3) company charges more for insurance on basis of transmission stating that no credit information or insufficient credit information is available. Reynolds v. Hartford Fin. Servs. Group, Inc. (9th Cir. 2006) 435 F.3d 1081, 1084

When consumer applies for insurance with family of companies and is charged higher rate for insurance because of credit report, two or more companies within that family may be jointly and severally liable. Reynolds v. Hartford Fin.

Servs. Group, Inc. (9th Cir. 2006) 435 F.3d 1081, 1085

Denial of credit is not prerequisite to recovery of actual damages under Fair Credit Reporting Act [15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq.] for consumer reporting agency's failure to follow maximum possible accuracy in its credit reports, as required under 15 U.S.C. § 1681e(b). Guimond v. Trans Union Credit Information Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 45 F.3d 1329, 1333

Credit reporting agency cannot satisfy its obligation under Fair Credit Reporting Act [15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq.] to advise consumer of sources of its information merely by claiming ignorance. Guimond v. Trans Union Credit Information Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 45 F.3d 1329, 1334

Credit report constitutes "consumer report" and user of report is subject to Federal Credit Reporting Act, whenever credit bureau reasonably expects user will use report for purpose permissible under Act. Comeaux v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 915 F.2d 1264, 1274 (report obtained under false pretenses in violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1681q)

Credit reporting agency failed to meet obligation to reinvestigate inaccurate credit reports under 15 U.S.C. § 1681 when it refused to reinvestigate second inaccurate credit report based on first inaccurate report but subsequently corrected credit report. Dynesv. TRW Credit Data (9th Cir. 1981) 652 F.2d 35, 36

Business that provides merchants subscribing to its services with information on check-cashing histories of potential customers is within scope of Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq.). Greenway v. Information Dynamics, Ltd. (D. Ariz. 1974) 399 F. Supp. 1092, 1095 , aff'd, 524 F.2d 1145 (1975)

Credit report used in connection with lease application for business purposes is not "consumer report" within meaning of Fair Credit Reporting Act. Sizemore v. Bambi Leasing Corporation (N.D. Ga. 1973) 360 F. Supp. 252, 254

Reports prepared by consumer reporting agency for purpose of determining whether insured was totally disabled are "consumer reports" or "investigative consumer reports" within meaning of 15 U.S.C. § 1681(d) and (e) of Fair Credit Reporting Act. Beresh v. Retail Credit Co., Inc. (C.D. Cal. 1973) 358 F. Supp. 260, 261

[3] California Credit Reporting

Bank's request for husband's credit information in connection with wife's loan application held to be authorized under Civ. Code § 1785.11(a)(3)(A), (F). Olson v. Six Rivers National Bank (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 1, 12-13, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 301

Trial court erred in granting defendant's motion under anti-SLAPP statute to dismiss tenant's action against reporting agency for refusal to add clarifying information to her report in violation of both state CCRAA and federal FCRA; plaintiff made prima facie showing of facts that would, if established at trial, support judgment in her favor. Schoendorf v. U.D. Registry, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 227, 238-240, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 313

Company in business of gathering information about renters and selling it to landlords for screening purposes was "consumer credit reporting agency" under federal act; under state act, agency not required to disclose consumer files pursuant to request made directly by consumer's attorney. Cisneros v. U.D. Registry Inc. (1996) 39 Cal. App. 4th 548, 562, 571, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 233

Credit reporting agency can prove compliance with Civ. Code §§ 1785.11 and 1785.14 by showing it operated under agreement with subscriber in which subscriber certified that it would only request and use reports in connection with credit transaction involving consumer named in each request; agency is not required to inquire into purpose of each report or to obtain certification for each report. Hiemstra v. TRW, Inc. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1629, 1633-1634, 241 Cal. Rptr. 564

In action against land developer by adjacent landowner, trial court properly granted defendant's motion for summary judgment on issue concerning recovery of punitive damages under 15 U.S.C. § 1681n, when record did not support finding that defendant knowingly and wilfully obtained information by making any false representation to consumer reporting agency making the consumer investigation report. Emerson v. J.F. Shea Co. (1978) 76 Cal. App. 3d 579, 600, 143 Cal. Rptr. 170

Although federal Fair Credit Reporting Act grants concurrent jurisdiction to courts of California, trial court is not permitted to engraft provisions of Civ. Code § 3294 (exemplary damages for oppression, fraud, or malice) onto federal law. Emerson v. J.F. Shea Co. (1978) 76 Cal. App. 3d 579, 588-589, 143 Cal. Rptr. 170

[4] California Credit Services Act

Credit services organization could not modify its membership contract to require arbitration and preclude class relief merely by notifying members by mail that continued membership constituted acceptance of modification; under Civ. Code § 1789.16(a), contract modifications must be signed. Mitchell v. American Fair Credit Association (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1345, 1352-1354, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use by a consumer against a consumer reporting agency in an action for damages pursuant to Civ. Code § 1785.31 for the improper furnishing of a consumer credit report in violation of Civ. Code §§ 1785.11 and 1785.14(a).

For a discussion of permissible purposes of consumer credit reports, see § 129.14[1]. For a discussion of remedies for statutory violations, see § 129.24.

[3] Allegations

This form alleges all of the following:

- That defendant is a consumer credit reporting agency (Paragraph 3) [see Civ. Code § 1785.3(d)].
- The date on which liability arose (Paragraph 4).
- The defendant's failure to comply with a provision of the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act (Paragraph 5) [see Civ. Code § 1785.11].
- That liability is based on defendant's negligent or willful failure to comply (Paragraph 6) [see Civ. Code § 1785.31].
- Damages based on plaintiff's actual damages (Paragraph 7) [see Civ. Code § 1785.31(a)(1)].
- Attorney's fees (Paragraph 8) [see Civ. Code § 1785.31(a)(1) and discussion under [8], below].
- Punitive damages if the violation was willful (Paragraph 9) [see Civ. Code § 1785.31(a)(2)].

[4] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[5] Damages

[a] Negligent Noncompliance

Any consumer credit reporting agency or user of information that negligently fails to comply with any requirement of the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act with respect to a consumer credit report is liable to the consumer who is the subject of the report in an amount equal to actual damages, including court costs, loss of wages, attorney's fees, and (when applicable) pain and suffering [Civ. Code §§ 1785.31(a)(1), 1785.31(d)].

[b] Willful Noncompliance

In a case of willful violation, the agency or user is liable not only for the amounts recoverable for a negligent violation but also for punitive damages of not less than $100 nor more than $5,000 for each violation, and for any other relief that the court deems proper [Civ. Code § 1785.31(a)(2)].

[6] Injunctive Relief

Injunctive relief is available to any consumer aggrieved by a violation or a threatened violation of the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act, whether or not the consumer seeks any other remedy [Civ. Code § 1785.31(b)]. See discussion and forms pertaining to injunctive relief in Ch. 303, Injunctions.

[7] Jurisdiction and Limitation of Actions

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)].

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the paper must state whether or not the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

An action to enforce any liability created under Civ. Code §§ 1785.31-1785.34 (remedies) may be brought in any appropriate court of competent jurisdiction within two years from the date the plaintiff knew or should have known of the violation of the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act, but not more than seven years from the earliest date the liability could have arisen. However, when a defendant has materially and wilfully misrepresented any information required under the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act to be disclosed to a consumer and the information so misrepresented is material to the establishment of the defendant's liability to the consumer, the action may be brought at any time within two years after the discovery of the misrepresentation by the consumer [Civ. Code § 1785.33].

[8] Attorney's Fees

Attorney's fees recovered under a contract provision or under a statute or law that authorizes their recovery are an element of costs [Civ. Code§ 1717(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(5) (methods of fixing attorney's fees that are item of costs)]. It is not necessary to plead or prove a contract provision for attorney's fees or the amount of attorney's fees incurred. It is sufficient to make the contract with the attorney's fees provision part of the complaint [Ganey v. Doran (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 901, 911-912, 236 Cal. Rptr. 787] . Nor is it necessary to plead the right to recover attorney's fees that are authorized by statute [see Beneficial Standard Properties, Inc. v. Scharps (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 227, 232, 136 Cal. Rptr. 549 ; T.E.D. Bearing Co. v. Walter E. Heller & Co. (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 59, 62, 112 Cal. Rptr. 910] . However, no election or waiver results from pleading entitlement to attorney's fees [see Lanyi v. Goldblum (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 181, 188, 223 Cal. Rptr. 32] . Discussion and forms addressing the various methods for recovering attorney's fees provided by statutes are located in Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, §§ 174.10 et seq., and 174.50 et seq. Recovery of attorney's fees under contract provisions is addressed in §

174.50 et seq.

[EITHER]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is an allegation for use in a complaint for damages brought by a consumer against a consumer credit reporting agency when the agency has violated the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act by reporting prohibited information [*Civ. [3] Alleging Other Violations of the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act

There are a number of ways in which the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act may be violated. This allegation contains two examples. Other violations include:

- Failure to disclose information to the consumer [Civ. Code § 1785.10; see § 129.20].

- Failure to reinvestigate or delete inaccurate or unverifiable information [Civ. Code § 1785.16(a); see § 129.21[1]].

Allegations of the above violations can be substituted in § 129.110[1] in place of either Paragraph 5 or Paragraphs 4 and 5, depending on the facts of the case.

At all times herein mentioned there was, and is now, in full force and effect between defendant _____ (name of surety) as surety and defendant _____ (name of credit services organization) as principal a surety bond in the penal sum of $_____ guaranteeing payment to plaintiff and others damaged by

_____'s (name of credit services organization) violations of Civil Code Sections 1789.10 through 1789.25 of their actual damages.]

4. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [name of credit services organization], a credit services organization within the meaning of Civil Code Section 1789.12(a), _____ [allege defendant's violation of act, e.g., represented to the public, including plaintiff, by means of advertisements in newspapers and on television that it "guaranteed bankcard credit" and could obtain for plaintiff an extension of credit in the form of a credit card issued by a major bank].

5. The advertising representations specified in Paragraph 4, above, were false in that defendant _____ [name of credit services organization] could not obtain an extension of credit for plaintiff, had no authority from any bank to extend or guarantee such credit, and could only refer plaintiff to banks to be granted or denied credit on substantially the same terms and under the same conditions as available to the general public.

6. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff saw, heard, read, believed, and relied on defendant's advertising and, in reliance thereon, entered into a written contract with defendant _____ [name of credit services organization], a copy of which is attached to this complaint as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference, paid defendant _____ [name of credit services organization] fifty dollars, and completed various forms and questionnaires for defendant to procure a bank credit card for plaintiff. 8. 9. Defendant _____ [name of credit services organization] promised plaintiff that it would obtain the extension of credit for him/her within 90 days of _____ [date set out in paragraph 7]. The 90 days have passed and defendant _____ [name of credit services organization] fails and refuses to obtain an extension of credit for plaintiff or to return plaintiff's money.

10. [2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use in an action for damages by a buyer/consumer against a credit services organization and its surety alleging that the credit services organization has violated the provisions of Civ. Code § 1789.10 et seq. [see Civ. Code §§ 1789.13-1789.17, 1789.21]. By way of example, it alleges violations of Civ. Code § 1789.13(c),(g) (Paragraphs 4-7), of Civ. Code §§ 1789.14 and 1789.15 (Paragraph 8), and of Civ. Code § 1789.17 (Paragraph 9). For forms that may be combined or used in conjunction with this form to seek relief under the Consumers Legal Remedies Act, see Ch. 504, Sales: Consumers Legal Remedies Act .

Judicial Council pleading forms for breach of contract actions and for fraud actions may be used in lieu of the foregoing form. These forms are available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

By eliminating references to the surety, this form may be modified for use against a credit services organization that has made a deposit in lieu of bond pursuant to Civ. Code § 1789.24. After judgment is obtained, the claim against the account is processed by the Secretary of State [Civ. Code § 1789.24; see § 129.67[3]].

[3] Allegations

This form alleges all of the following:

- That defendants are a credit services organization and its surety (Paragraphs 1-3) [see Civ. Code §§ 1789.12(a), (b), 1789.18].

- That advertising misrepresentations were made and the substance of those misrepresentations (Paragraph 4) [see Civ. Code § 1789.13(g)].

- The falsity of the representations (Paragraph 5).

- That defendant credit services organization knew or should have known the representation was false (Paragraph 6).

- That plaintiff relied on the representations and in reliance on those representations paid defendant money and refrained from taking other steps to secure an extension of credit (Paragraph 7).

- The date and fact of the defendant credit services organization's violation of Civ. Code § 1789.14 (Paragraph 8) [see Civ. Code §§ 1789.14, 1789.15].

- The failure of defendant to obtain a credit card for plaintiff and plaintiff's damages (Paragraphs 9, 10) [see Civ. Code §§ 1789.17, 1789.21].

- Defendant's wilfulness or gross negligence and plaintiff's entitlement to punitive damages and/or attorney's fees (Paragraphs 11 and 12) [see Civ. Code § 1789.21].

[4] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[5] Attorney's Fees

Civ. Code § 1789.21 provides for the payment of plaintiff's attorney's fees and costs [Civ. Code § 1789.21].

[6] Cross Complaint by Surety

A surety faced with claims in excess of the bond is likely to cross complain for declaratory relief and/or in interpleader naming plaintiff and any other known claimants under the bond as cross defendants. To avoid this complication, the plaintiff may prefer to proceed originally against the credit services organization alone, even though the plaintiff is authorized by Civ. Code § 1789.18(b) and Code Civ. Proc. § 995.850 to proceed directly against the surety, and to seek recovery under the bond only if the judgment against the credit services organization proves uncollectible [see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings , and Ch. 314, Interpleader].

[2] Use of Form

This form is a complaint by a plaintiff against a defendant who took any prohibited action against the plaintiff because the plaintiff (or some other person) previously had applied for and/or been granted relief under provisions of California law that give certain active-duty military personnel various protections against adverse consequences under civil law [Mil. & Vet. Code § 400 et seq.]. Those provisions apply to military reservists and National Guard members who are called to active military service under specified circumstances and, in many cases, for limited periods of time [see Mil. & Vet. Code § 400]. The complaint seeks recovery of actual damages incurred by the plaintiff as a result of the defendant's actions, as well as attorney's fees.

[3] Governing Law

California law provides specific relief to qualifying military personnel in a variety of areas, including default judgments [Mil. & Vet. Code § 402(a)], pending judicial proceedings [50 U.S.C. App. § 521; Mil. & Vet. Code § 403(a)], fines or penalties on contracts and similar obligations [50 U.S.C. App. § 522; Mil. & Vet. Code § 403(b)], execution of judgments, attachments, and similar matters [Mil. & Vet. Code § 403(c)], statutes of limitations [Mil. & Vet. Code § 404], interest rates [50 U.S.C. App. § 526; Mil. & Vet. Code § 405], leases [Mil. & Vet. Code § 409], installment contracts [Mil. & Vet. Code § 407], mortgages [Mil. & Vet. Code § 408], insurance [Mil. & Vet. Code § 409.1], and taxes [Mil. & Vet. Code § 409.2].

For detailed discussion of the relief available, the manner in which such relief can be requested, and the persons who qualify for this relief, see Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales, §§ 501.60 et seq., 501.300.

[4] Prohibition Against Taking Specified Actions Against Persons Granted Relief Under Acts

Persons who are granted relief under the above statutes are protected against certain retaliatory acts and other negative consequences that might otherwise result from the granting of relief. Specifically, California provides that application by a service member for, or receipt by a service member of, a stay, postponement, or suspension in the payment of any tax, fine, penalty, insurance premium, or other civil obligation or liability of that person may not itself, without regard to other considerations, provide the basis for any of the following [Mil. & Vet. Code § 401(a)]:

- A determination by any lender or other person that the service member is unable to pay any civil obligation or liability in accordance with its terms.

- With respect to a credit transaction between a creditor and the service member, any denial or revocation of credit by the creditor, change bythe creditor in the terms of an existing credit arrangement, or refusal by the creditor to grant credit to the service member in substantially the amount or on substantially the terms requested.

- An adverse report relating to the creditworthiness of the service member by or to any person or entity engaged in the practice of assembling or evaluating consumer credit information.

- A refusal by an insurer to insure the service member.

[5] Cause of Action for Violation of Prohibitions

The California statute expressly creates a cause of action for violation of the prohibitions discussed in [4], above. Any person violating any of these prohibitions is liable for actual damages and reasonable attorney's fees incurred by the injured party [Mil. & Vet. Code § 401(b)].

Note that there is no requirement that the violator be one of the persons who were involved in the original grant of relief under the statute. Rather, a cause of action may be asserted against "any person" who does any of the prohibited acts. Thus, for example, a third party lender who denied credit to a service member after becoming aware that the service member previously had been granted relief in connection with an unrelated obligation or liability could be held liable for the actual damages resulting from the denial of credit, even though the lender had nothing to do with the original matter for which the relief was granted.

Similarly, the statutory language does not limit the term "injured party" to service members. Thus, for example, the family of an affected service member conceivably could bring an action as "injured parties" under the statute if they could show actual damages [see also Mil. & Vet. Code § 409.5 (rights extended to dependents of service members)].

The federal Servicemembers Civil Relief Act contains prohibitions similar to those discussed in [4], above [see 50 U.S.C. App. § 518], but unlike its California counterpart, does not expressly provide for a private right of action for violation of those prohibitions [compare 50 U.S.C. App. § 518 with Mil. & Vet. Code § 401(b)]. Instead, the federal statute simply remains silent on the question of how a violation of its similar provisions is to be redressed. The general enforcement provisions of the predecessor federal statute provided that its provisions were "to be enforced through the usual forms of procedure obtaining in those courts or under such regulations as they may prescribe" [see former 50 U.S.C. App. § 512(2)]. However, the 2003 revision of this statute eliminated that language [see now 50 U.S.C. App. § 512(a),(b)].

In addition to the civil cause of action, the California statute also provides that any person violating the above prohibitions is guilty of a misdemeanor [Mil. & Vet. Code § 401(c)].

The complaint in [1], above, alleges the following:

- Identity and residence of plaintiff and defendant [Paragraphs 1 and 2].

- Optional allegation regarding defendants sued under fictitious names [Paragraph 3].

- That plaintiff (or a military service member, if the action being brought by someone other than the military service member) previously applied for relief under Mil. & Vet. Code § 400 et seq. with respect to specified obligation(s), liability or liabilities, or proceeding(s) [Paragraph 4]. Note that it is not necessary that relief actually be granted, only that an application for such relief was made. However, if relief was in fact granted, this complaint includes a statement of that fact.

- That defendant thereafter took one of the prohibited actions specified in [4], above, against plaintiff [Paragraph 5].

- That defendant's action were taken because of the relief previously granted under the federal or California statutes, without regard to other considerations [Paragraph 6].

- That plaintiff incurred actual damages as the result of the defendant's actions [Paragraph 7]. The California statute specifically permits recovery for actual damages and attorney's fees [Mil. & Vet. Code § 401(b)]. No other kinds of damages are authorized.

§ 135.11 Purpose of Contempt Proceedings

The purpose of a contempt proceeding is either to protect the rights of the litigants in an action or to vindicate the dignity or authority of the court [Morelli v. Superior Court (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 328, 333, 82 Cal. Rptr. 375, 461 P.2d 655] . This distinction in the purpose of contempt proceedings helps distinguish civil from criminal contempt [see discussion in § 135.12]. This distinction is also relevant in distinguishing between direct and indirect contempt [see discussion in § 135.13].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Definitions and General Matters

13-135 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 135.12

§ 135.12 Civil and Criminal Contempt Distinguished

Contempts arising under Code Civ. Proc. § 1209 may be described as either civil or criminal. If the primary objective of a contempt proceeding under Code Civ. Proc. § 1209 et seq. is to protect the rights of the litigants, the proceeding is regarded as civil in character [Morelli v. Superior Court (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 328, 333, 82 Cal. Rptr. 375, 461 P.2d 655 ; see also Share v. Casiano Bel-Air Homeowners Assn. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 515, 523, 263 Cal. Rptr. 753] . On the other hand, if the objective of the contempt proceeding is to vindicate the dignity or authority of the court, the contempt is regarded as criminal in character, even though it arises in a civil action [Morelli v. Superior Court (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 328, 333, 82 Cal. Rptr. 375, 461 P.2d 655] .

The nature of the punishment imposed by a contempt order also determines whether it is civil or criminal. A contempt proceeding is civil when the contempt order sought is remedial and coercive in nature, and the parties chiefly interested in the conduct of a civil contempt proceeding are the individuals whose private rights and remedies the civil contempt proceeding was instituted to protect or enforce [In re Morris (1924) 194 Cal. 63, 67, 227 P. 914] . Conversely, a contempt proceeding is criminal when it is exclusively punitive in nature, and the government, the courts, and the people are interested in the prosecution of criminal contempt proceedings [In re Morris (1924) 194 Cal. 63, 67, 227 P. 914] .

Thus, whether a contempt is civil or criminal depends on whether the punishment imposed is remedial and coercive, and benefits the complainant, or whether it is solely punitive in order to vindicate the authority ofthe court [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 631, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] . If the punishment is a sentence of imprisonment, it is remedial if the contemner stands committed unless and until he or she performs the affirmative act required by the court's order, and it is punitive if the sentence is limited to imprisonment for a definite period [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 632, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] . If the punishment is a fine, it is remedial when it is paid to the complainant and punitive when it is paid to the court, though a fine that would be payable to the court is also remedial when the defendant can avoid paying it simply by performing the affirmative act required by the court's order [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 632, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] .

When the penalty is remedial, the conditional nature of the punishment renders the relief civil in nature because the contemner can end the sentence or suspended sentence and discharge himself or herself at any moment by doing what he or she had previously refused to do [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 633, 637 n.8, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] . For example, when the contempt consists of an omission to perform an act that is still within the contemner's power to perform, such as the ability of a contemner to obey a duly served supbpoena in a pending action, a court may treat that contemner's disobedience as a civil contempt by imprisoning the contemner pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1219 until he or she has performed the act [Morelli v. Superior Court (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 328, 332, 82 Cal. Rptr. 375, 461 P.2d 655 (failure of expert witness to appear for deposition); see In re Mark A. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1124, 1143, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 106 (court is not authorized to punish contempt by imposing evidence sanction, such as striking testimony of other witnesses)]. Thus, punishment may not be imposed in a civil contempt proceeding if it is clearly established that the alleged contemner is unable to comply with the terms of the court's order [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 638 n.9, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] .

When the contempt consists of an omission to perform an act that is not possible for the contemner to perform, such as the inability of a contemner to obey a subpoena to testify in an action that has terminated, a court may treat the contemner's disobedience as a criminal contempt by imposing a fine not exceeding $1,000, by imprisoning the contemner for a period not to exceed five days, or both, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1218 [Morelli v. Superior Court (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 328, 332, 82 Cal. Rptr. 375, 461 P.2d 655 ; see In re Mark A. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1124, 1143, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 106 (court is not authorized to punish contempt by imposing evidence sanction, such as striking testimony of other witnesses)]. When the penalty is punitive, the unconditional nature of the punishment renders the relief criminal in nature because the relief cannot undo or remedy what has been done or afford any compensation, and the contemnor cannot shorten the term by promising not to repeat the offense [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 633, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721 ; see also In re Feiock (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 141, 144-145, 263 Cal. Rptr. 437] . That a determinate sentence is suspended and the contemner put on probation does not make the remedy civil in nature, for a suspended sentence with a term of probation is not equivalent to a conditional sentence that would allow the contemner to avoid or purge the sanctions;rather, it remains a determinate sentence, and a fixed term of probation is itself a punishment that is criminal in nature [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 639 n.11, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] .

Thus, an unconditional penalty is criminal in nature because it is solely and exclusively punitive in character, whereas a conditional penalty, by contrast, is civil because it is specifically designed to compel the doing of some act [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 633, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] . Any sentence must be viewed as remedial, and hence civil in nature, if the court conditions release on the contemner's willingness to comply with the order or imposes a determinate sentence that includes a purge clause [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 634, 635 n.7, 640, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] . On the contrary, a criminal contempt proceeding would be characterized by the imposition of an unconditional sentence for punishment or deterrence [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 634-635, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] . If both civil and criminal relief are imposed in the same proceeding, the criminal feature of the order is dominant and fixes its character for purposes of review by a higher court [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 638 n.10, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] .

Either form of punishment has an incidental effect. If the case is civil and punishment is purely remedial, there is also a vindication of the court's authority. If the proceeding is for criminal contempt and punishment is solely punitive, to vindicate the authority of the law, the complainant may also derive some incidental benefit from the fact that the punishment tends to prevent a repetition of the disobedience. But such indirect consequences do not change punishment that is merely coercive and remedial into that which is solely punitive in character or vice versa [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 635-636, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] .

Punishment that is criminal in nature may not be imposed unless federal constitutional protections are applied in the contempt proceeding [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 637, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] . These protections include the requirement that the offense be proved beyond a reasonable doubt [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 632, 632 n.5, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] . The United States Supreme Court has recognized, however, that certain specific constitutional protections, such as the right to trial by jury, are not applicable to those criminal contempts that can be classified as petty offenses [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 632 n.5, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721 (citing Bloom v. Illinois (1968) 391 U.S. 194, 208-210, 88 S. Ct. 1477, 20 L. Ed. 2d 522)].

§ 135.13 Types of Contempt

[1] Classification of Contempt as Direct or Indirect

Contempts, in addition to being classified as civil or criminal in nature, are also classified as either direct or indirect.

[2] Direct Contempt

[a] Definition and Examples

A direct contempt is committed in the immediate view and presence of the court [Arthur v. Superior Court (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 404, 407, 42 Cal. Rptr. 441, 398 P.2d 777] or of the judge at chambers [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a)].

Examples of direct contempt include the following:

- When an attorney refuses to obey the court directing him or her to stop arguing a point on which it has ruled, or makes statements to the court the content of which are rude, hostile, and disrespectful [see Boysaw v. Superior Court (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 215, 223, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531, 999 P.2d 748] .

- When an attorney impugns the integrity of the court by statements made in open court, either orally or in writing [In re Buckley (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 237, 248, 110 Cal. Rptr. 121, 514 P.2d 1201 ; Fine v. Superior Court (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 651, 665-674, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376 (attorney filed Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1 disqualification affidavit containing false allegations in attempt to disqualify commissioner from acting as temporary judge)].

- When an attorney behaves insolently to a witness on cross examination [Hawk v. Superior Court (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 108, 125, 116 Cal. Rptr. 713] .

- When an attorney fails to appear before a court without excusable cause at the appointed date and hour set for the commencement or resumption of judicial proceedings in which he or she is counsel [In re Baroldi (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 101, 106, 234 Cal. Rptr. 286 , disapproved on another ground in Boysaw v. Superior Court (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 215, 221, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531, 999 P.2d 748 ; In re Karpf (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 355, 363, 88 Cal. Rptr. 895] .

- When an attorney representing an appellant willfully fails to comply with a court order requiring the filing of the appellant's opening brief [In re Rubin (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1176, 1178-1179, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 593, 25 P.3d 1075 ; In re Garland (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1172, 1174-1175, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 591, 25 P.3d 1074] .

- When a person carries a weapon into a courtroom with an offensive or defensive purpose [see In re Jasper (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 985, 988, 106 Cal. Rptr. 754 ; In re Carvallo (1973) 29 Cal. App. 3d 983, 987, 105 Cal. Rptr. 925] .

As the examples illustrate, a direct contempt proceeding is essentially one undertaken to preserve the power of the court [Reifler v. Superior Court (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 479, 485, 114 Cal. Rptr. 356] . As discussed in § 135.12, a contempt proceeding undertaken to preserve the authority or dignity of the court is also charaterized as a criminal contempt.

Although contemptuous conduct committed in the presence of a judge is usually treated as a direct contempt, the judge may choose to use the procedures for indirect contempt and set the matter for hearing beforeanother judge [see, e.g., Hanson v. Superior Court (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 75, 82, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 782 (because none of contemptuous conduct occurred in presence of judge who made contempt adjudication, contempt was indirect); see § 135.32 (indirect contempt proceedings)].

For discussion of proceedings for direct contempt, see § 135.31.

[b] Effect of Contemner's Apology

In direct contempt, an apology to the court or judge is given serious consideration [In re Buckley (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 237, 257, 110 Cal. Rptr. 121, 514 P.2d 1201] . Generally, an apology is regarded with favor by the courts as the only remedial act left to the contemner [see In re Carrow (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 924, 933, 115 Cal. Rptr. 601] . However, the effect of the apology as a mitigating factor rests exclusively in the court's or judge's discretion unless the court or judge is personally embroiled in the contempt matter [In re Buckley (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 237, 257, 110 Cal. Rptr. 121, 514 P.2d 1201 (judge found to have misinterpreted attorney's apology as a further affront to the court's integrity)].

[3] Indirect Contempt

An indirect or constructive contempt [see In re Roth (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 226, 229, 39 P.2d 490] is not committed in the immediate view and presence of the court or of the judge at chambers [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a); Bridges v. Superior Court (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 464, 473, 94 P.2d 983 (reversed on other grounds Bridges v. California (1941) 314 U.S. 252, 62 S. Ct. 190, 86 L. Ed. 192)].

The primary example of an indirect contempt is a party's or witness' failure to comply with an order [In re Gould (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 172, 175, 15 Cal. Rptr. 326] or injunction [Vanderstok v. Bank of America (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 731, 734, 105 Cal. Rptr. 699] . Therefore, an indirect contempt proceeding is essentially one undertaken to protect the rights of the parties to litigation [Reifler v. Superior Court (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 479, 485, 114 Cal. Rptr. 356] . As discussed in § 135.12, a contempt proceeding undertaken to protect the rights of parties to litigation is also characterized as a civil contempt.

If contemptuous conduct is committed in the presence of one judge, who then defers the contempt adjudication to another judge, the alleged contempt will be treated as an indirect contempt, because it was not committed in the presence of the judge who made the contempt adjudication [see, e.g., Hanson v. Superior Court (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 75, 82, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 782] .

For discussion of proceedings for indirect contempt, see § 135.32.

[b] Sufficiency of Order on Which Indirect Contempt Is Based

[i] Order Must Be Written and Clear

For an order to be enforceable in an indirect contempt proceeding, it must be in writing or entered in the court's minutes. In addition, it must be definitive and certain [Ketscher v. Superior Court (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 601, 604-605, 88 Cal. Rptr. 357] but not overbroad [Younger v. Smith (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 138, 150, 106 Cal. Rptr. 225] . Punishment for contempt can only rest on clear, intentional violation of a specific, narrowly drawn order. Whether the order is sufficiently specific is determined by the terms of the order that the trial court issued, and not by any explanation or reasons given for the order [Board of Supervisors v. Superior Court (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1724, 1737, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 906] .

For example, a court lacks the power to punish a contemner under the following circumstances:

- When the order alleged to be violated is indefinite and susceptible to interpretation as a mere warning to the contemner [see Ketscher v. Superior Court (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 601, 604-605, 88 Cal. Rptr. 357] .

- When the order is neither in writing nor entered in the court's minutes [see In re Marcus (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1009, 1015-1016 (to avoid uncertainty that can arise when attempting to enforce oral ruling, order must be set forth in detail either in court's minutes or in written order signed by judge and filed with court); Ketscher v. Superior Court (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 601, 604-605, 88 Cal. Rptr. 357] .

- When the order, which intends merely to prohibit prejudicial pretrial publicity, is used to punish a technical violation that is harmless and nonprejudicial [Younger v. Smith (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 138, 150, 165, 106 Cal. Rptr. 225] .

[ii] Ability to Comply With Order Usually Must Be Shown

To punish for indirect contempt, it must be shown that the person subject to the order had the ability to comply with the order [In re Cassil (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 1081, 1087, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 267 ; see Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 638 n.9, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] . For example, in one case, a court of appeal overturned a judgment of contempt based on a party's failure to comply with a trial court order requiring the party to turn over certain funds to a receiver, because there was no evidence of the existence of any funds that could have been paid to the receiver and hence no evidence of ability to comply with the order [see In re Cassil (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 1081, 1088-1089, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 267] . In another case, a court of appeal held that the director of the state Department of Social Services was not in contempt for disobeying an order, in view of legislationenacted after that order which precluded the director's compliance [Anderson v. Superior Court (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1240, 1243, 1250, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 891 (also holding that director was not barred from asserting statute and inability to comply with order simply because she had helped draft the statute and supported its enactment)].

While ability to comply is usually an element of the charge of contempt, to be alleged and proved by the party seeking imposition of a contempt judgment, there is an exception in the case of an order to pay child support [see also discussion in § 135.14[5][b]]. In this case ability to pay is not an element. When a court of competent jurisdiction makes an order compelling a parent to furnish support, proof that the order was made, filed, and served on the parent, or proof that the parent was present in court at the time the order was pronounced, and proof of noncompliance with the order, together constitute prima facie evidence of a contempt of court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209.5]. Proof of these basic facts proves the entire contempt. Once contempt is proved, any excuse or justification, such as inability to pay, is a matter of affirmative defense to be proved by the contemnor [Moss v. Superior Court (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 396, 425, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215, 950 P.2d 59 ; see also § 135.14[5][b]]. Similar principles apply to other family law orders in which the ability to pay has already been determined. Thus, for example, if an order to pay attorneys' fees in conjunction with a child-custody and support proceeding includes an implied determination of the ability to pay, the ability to pay will not be an element of the charge of contempt [In re Ivey (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 793, 798-802, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 447 (long-standing California precedent applies principles of Code Civ. Proc § 1209.5 to family law orders other than support orders)].

Chapter 135 CONTEMPT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Definitions and General Matters

13-135 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 135.14

§ 135.14 Acts or Omissions Constituting Contempt

[1] In General

Code Civ. Proc. § 1209 describes those acts and omissions with respect to courts of justice or proceedings in courts of justice that constitute contempts of the authority of the courts. In addition, Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1209.5 and 1210 describe acts or omissions with respect to child support and possession of real property, respectively, that constitute contempt.

[2] Interruption of Judicial Proceedings

Disorderly, contemptuous, or insolent behavior towards the judge while holding court tending to interrupt the due course of a trial or other judicial proceeding constitutes a contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(1)]. For instance, a defense attorney's statement in open court during trial that "this court obviously doesn't want to apply the law" constitutes an act of contempt within the scope of Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(1) [In re Buckley (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 237, 246, 110 Cal. Rptr. 121, 514 P.2d 1201 ; see Hanson v. Superior Court (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 75, 84-85, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 782 (attorney's statement in argument to jury that attorney's client "has not received a fair trial" was contemptuous on its face because it impugned court's integrity by suggesting judge had failed to carry out duty of guaranteeing fair trial)], as does an attorney's unannounced departure from the courtroom that interrupts the due course of a trial [Thorne v. Municipal Court (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 249, 252, 46 Cal. Rptr. 749] . Contemptuous conduct under Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(1) may consist of disrespectful remarks addressed to the court or to witnesses or may consist of a disrespectful tone of voice in making otherwise noncontemptuous remarks [see In re Hallinan (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 1179, 1180-1182, 81 Cal. Rptr. 1, 459 P.2d 255] .

Likewise, a breach of the peace, boisterous conduct, or violent disturbance tending to interrupt the due course of a trial or other judicial proceeding constitutes a contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(2)]. For instance, an attorney committed a contempt when he hawed and laughed after a trial judge sustained objections on the ground of irrelevancy to three successive questions asked by the attorney in examining a witness [DeGeorge v. Superior Court (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 305, 310-311, 114 Cal. Rptr. 860] .

[3] Misbehavior in Office

Misbehavior in office or other willful neglect or violation of duty by an attorney, counsel, clerk, sheriff, coroner, or other person appointed or elected to perform a judicial or ministerial service constitutes a contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(3)]. For instance, a contempt may consist of counsel's infractions of a trial judge's warning to adhere to the no comment rule in a criminal trial or to refrain from commenting on a defendant's failure to testify in that trial [see People v. Haldeen (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 478, 483, 73 Cal. Rptr. 102] . Similarly, a contempt under Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(3) may consist of unprofessional conduct by an attorney seeking to inflame a jury, such as statements by the attorney in the presence of the jury that the prosecutor of the criminal trial has reasonable doubts as to the defendant's guilt [Hawk v. Superior Court (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 108, 127-128, 116 Cal. Rptr. 713] .

An officer whose acts or omissions would ordinarily amount to contempt under Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(3) is not guilty of contempt if those acts or omissions resulted from complying with a court order that the officer was bound to obey [Gates v. Municipal Court (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 45, 53-55, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 439 (sheriff complying with federal court order to limit jail population had complete defense to charge of contempt based on failure to enforce conflicting state law)].

[4] Abuse of Process

Abuse of the process or proceedings of the court constitutes a contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(4)]. An abuse of process is the use of legal process for a purpose other than that which it was designed to accomplish. The essential elements of abuse of process are an ulterior purpose and a willful act in the use of the process not proper in the regular conduct of the proceeding [Weisenburg v. Molina (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 478, 489, 129 Cal. Rptr. 813] . Similarly, falsely pretending to act under the authority or an order or process of the court constitutes a contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(4)]. Rescuing any person or property in the custody of an officer by virtue of an order or process of the court constitutes a contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(6)]. In addition, a contempt may consist of any other unlawful interference with the process or proceedings of a court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(8)], such as the possession or display of offensive or defensive weapons by any unauthorized person in a courtroom which inevitably causes sufficient consternation to disrupt judicial proceedings [In re Jasper (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 985, 988, 106 Cal. Rptr. 754] .

[5] Disobedience of Order

[a] In General

Disobedience of any lawful judgment, order, or process of the court generally constitutes a contempt [Code Civ. Proc. 1209(a)(5)]. Thus, disobedience of a lawful order of a court ordinarily is a contempt [Ketscher v. Superior Court (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 601, 604, 88 Cal. Rptr. 357] , as is failure to comply with the terms of a mandatory injunction [Vanderstok v. Bank of America (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 731, 734, 105 Cal. Rptr. 699] . However, not every violation of a court order is subject to punishment as a contempt of court; a court's power to compel compliance with its orders to ensure the orderly administration of justice does not extend to punishing violations of substantive law when such violations do not impair the dignity or functioning of the court. Moreover, if the Legislature has established a specific penalty for a transgression, courts may not impose a contempt punishment that is inconsistent with the legislative scheme [In re Nolan W. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1217, 1230-1231, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140, 203 P.3d 454] . For example, reunification services in juvenile dependency proceedings are voluntary and cannot be forced on an unwilling or indifferent parent; the legislative scheme contemplates that the ultimate penalty for a parent's failure to satisfy a requirement of a reunification plan is the loss of parental rights [see, e.g., Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.5(a)(2), 366.21(e),(f), 366.22(a), 366.26]. Therefore, a juvenile court may not use its contempt power to incarcerate a parent solely for the failure to comply with an order to participate in a voluntary reunification plan [In re Nolan W. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1217, 1233-1238, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140, 203 P.3d 454 (use of juvenile court's contempt power to incarcerate parent who fails to satisfy reunification program requirement is inconsistent with legislative scheme and therefore beyond court's power)].

An attorney may be held in contempt for a failure to appear in court if aware of an order requiring the attorney's appearance in court, and if the attorney is able to appear, but knowingly and intentionally does not appear [In re Aguilar (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 386, 389-392, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874, 97 P.3d 815 (termination of individual attorney's employment with law firm was not sufficient excuse for failure to appear at oral argument before Supreme Court or to notify Court that he would not be appearing, even though firm, not individual attorney, was client's formal attorney of record)].

However, no contempt of court is committed unless the underlying order is valid and enforceable at the time of any acts alleged to be in defiance of it [In re Blaze (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 210, 212, 76 Cal. Rptr. 551] . In one case, for example, the trial court held a party in contempt for disobediance of a judgment based on a settlement agreement. However, the purported contemnor had not personally signed the underlying settlement agreement as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6. The court of appeal therefore held that the judgment confirming the settlement agreement was void and unforceable, and consequently annulled the contempt order [Davidson v. Superior Court (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 514, 517-518, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 739] .

In addition, the order must be definitive or disobedience of it cannot be punished as a contempt [Ketscher v. Superior Court (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 601, 605, 88 Cal. Rptr. 357 ; see Board of Supervisors v. Superior Court (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1724, 1737, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 906 (order must be specific and narrowly drawn); see also § 135.13[3][b]].

Also, the alleged contemner's notice or knowledge of the order he or she is charged with violating is a jurisdictional prerequisite to a finding of contempt. If the contemner's counsel was present in court when the order was made and was thereafter served with the formal order, the court may infer that the contemner had notice of the order [In re Ivey (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 793, 804-805, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 447] .

Finally, to be held in contempt, the person subject to the order must have had the ability to comply with it [see Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 638 n.9, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721 ; In re Cassil (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 1081, 1087, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 267 ; see further discussion in [b], below, and in § 135.13[3][b][ii]].

Aside from the contempt proceedings, a judicial officer has the power to impose money sanctions, not exceeding $1,500, for a violation of a lawful court order without good cause or substantial justification [Code Civ. Proc. § 177.5; see Ch. 372, Motions and Order].

[b] Noncompliance With Order for Child Support

Noncompliance with an order of a court of competent jurisdiction compelling a parent to furnish support or necessary food, clothing, shelter, medical attendance, or other remedial care for his or her child may constitute contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209.5]. Prima facie evidence of such contempt of court is shown by proof that the order was made, filed, and served on the parent or that the parent was present in court at the time the order was pronounced and by proof of noncompliance with the order [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209.5]. Once a contempt is proved, any excuse or justification, such as inability to pay, is a matter of defense [Moss v. Superior Court (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 396, 425, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215, 950 P.2d 59 (disapproving contrary statement in In re Feiock (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 141, 147, 263 Cal. Rptr. 437); see also § 135.13[3][b][ii]]. Similar principles apply to other family law orders in which the ability to pay has already been determined. Thus, for example, if an order to pay attorneys' fees in conjunction with a child-custody and support proceeding includes an implied determination of the ability to pay, the ability to pay will not be an element of the charge of contempt [In re Ivey (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 793, 798-802, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 447 (longstanding California precedent applies principles of Code Civ. Proc§ 1209.5 to family law orders other than support orders)].

The United States Supreme Court held that Code Civ. Proc. § 1209.5 is consititutional only if the contempt proceeding is civil, rather than criminal, in nature [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 637-638, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] . For purposes of federal due process, a contempt proceeding is civil in nature when the penalty provided is conditional and specifically designed to compel performance of some act; the proceeding is criminal in nature when the penalty is unconditional andexclusively punitive in character [Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 631-636, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] . For discussion of how the state courts have characterized civil and criminal contempt proceedings, see § 135.12.

For discussion, procedures, and forms for use in contempt proceedings with respect to enforcement of court orders and judgments in family law matters in general and with child support orders in particular, see Ch. 258, Family Law Enforcement .

[c] Reentry on Property After Judicial Ejectment

Every person dispossessed or ejected from real property by the judgment or process of a court of competent jurisdiction who, without having the right to do so, reenters or takes possession of the real property, or induces or procures any other person, without the right to do so, or aids and abets that person is guilty of a contempt of the court in which the judgment was rendered or from which the process issued. On conviction for contempt, the court must immediately issue an alias process directed to the proper officer requiring him or her to restore possession to the party entitled under the original judgment or process or to the party's lessee, grantee, or successor in interest [Code Civ. Proc. § 1210].

No appeal from the order directing the issuance of an alias writ of possession stays its execution unless a written undertaking is executed by the appellant to the effect that the appellant will not commit, or suffer to be committed, any waste on the property and, if the order is affirmed or the appeal dismissed, that the appellant will pay the value of the use and occupation of the property from the time of unlawful reentry until the delivery of possession pursuant to the judgment or order. The value of the appellant's use and occupation of the property may not exceed a sum fixed by the judge of the court in which the order for the alias writ was made and must be specified in the undertaking [Code Civ. Proc. § 1210]. The undertaking must be executed by two or more sufficient personal sureties, by one sufficient admitted surety insurer, or by any combination of sufficient personal sureties and admitted surety insurers [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.310]. The requirement that the undertaking be in writing is now contained in Code Civ. Proc. § 995.320(a).

For a discussion of bonds and undertakings and related forms, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings, § 538.40 et seq. For discussion, procedures, and forms for use in ejectment proceedings, see Ch. 241, Ejectment .

[6] Conduct Involving Witnesses

Unlawfully detaining a witness or party to an action while he or she is going to, remaining at, or returning from the court where the action is on the calendar for trial constitutes a contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(7)]. Disobedience of a subpoena duly served or refusing to be sworn or answer as a witness constitutes a contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(9)]. For discussion, procedures, and forms for use in deposing witnesses, see Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions .

[7] Conduct Involving Jurors

When summoned as a juror in a court, neglecting to attend or serve as such, improperly conversing with a party to the action to be tried in that court or with any other person in relation to the merits of the action, or receiving a communication from a party or other person in respect to an action to be tried without immediately disclosing the communication to the court constitutes a contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(10)]. For discussion and forms relating to juror conduct, see Ch. 322, Juries and Verdicts .

[8] Disobedience of Superior Tribunal

Disobedience by an inferior tribunal, magistrate, or officer of the lawful judgment, order, or process of a superior court or proceeding in an action or special proceeding contrary to law after the action or special proceeding is removed from the jurisdiction of the inferior tribunal, magistrate, or officer constitutes a contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(11)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Definitions and General Matters

13-135 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 135.15

§ 135.15 Conduct Constituting Misdemeanor Contempt

[1] In General

Every person guilty of any contempt of the following kinds is guilty of a misdemeanor [Penal Code § 166(a)]:

- Disorderly, contemptuous, or insolent behavior committed during the sitting of a court of justice in the immediate view and presence of the court and directly tending to interrupt its proceedings or to impair the respect due to its authority [Penal Code § 166(a)(1)].

- Disorderly, contemptuous, or insolent behavior committed in the presence of a referee while engaged in a trial or hearing pursuant to a court order, in the presence of a jury while sitting for the trial of a cause, or on an inquest or other proceeding authorized by law [Penal Code § 166(a)(2)].

- Any breach of the peace, noise, or other disturbance directly tending to interrupt the proceedings of a court [Penal Code § 166(a)(3)].

- Willful disobedience of the terms as written of any process or court order or out-of-state court order, lawfully issued by any court, including orders pending trial [Penal Code § 166(a)(4); see also [2]-[5] below].

- Resistance willfully offered by any person to the lawful order or process of any court [Penal Code § 166(a)(5)].

- The contumacious and unlawful refusal of any person to be sworn as a witness; or, when so sworn, the like refusal to answer any material question [Penal Code § 166(a)(6)].

- The publication of a false or grossly inaccurate report of the proceedings of any court [Penal Code § 166(a)(7)].

- Presenting to any court having power to pass sentence on any prisoner under conviction, or to any member of the court, any affidavit or testimony or representation of any kind, verbal or written, in aggravation or mitigation of the punishment to be imposed on the prisoner, except as provided in the Penal Code [Penal Code § 166(a)(8)].

Penal Code § 166(b)-(e) and Penal Code § 273.6 provide for specific additional punishment for disobedience of specified protective orders [see discussion in [2]-[5], below].

[2] Violation of Stay-Away Order With Previous Conviction for Stalking

Any person who is guilty of contempt of court under Penal Code § 166(a)(4) (willful disobedience of process or court order, see [1], above) by willfully contacting a victim either directly or by phone or mail, and who has been previously convicted of a violation of Penal Code § 646.9 (stalking) is subject to imprisonment in a county jail for up to one year, a fine of $5,000, or both [Penal Code § 166(b)(1); see also Penal Code § 166(b)(2), (3) (each contact a separate violation and incarceration during contact not a defense)].

[3] Violation of Protective Order in Criminal Proceeding Involving Domestic Violence

Any willful and knowing violation of certain protective orders or stay-away court orders, when the order is issued pursuant to Penal Code § 136.2 (intimidation or dissuasion of witness) in a pending criminal proceeding involving domestic violence, or is issued as a condition of probation after a conviction in such a proceeding or in one involving elder or dependent adult abuse, constitutes contempt of court and a misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment in the county jail, fine, or both [Penal Code § 166(c)(1); see also Penal Code § 166(c)(2), (4), (e) (additional provisions for punishment); Penal Code § 382 (defining elder or dependent adult abuse); Penal Code § 13700 (defining domestic violence)]. The foregoing punishments also apply to the willful and knowing violation of any of the following orders [Penal Code § 166(c)(1), (3)]:

- Any order issued pursuant to Fam. Code § 6320 or 6389.

- An order excluding one party from the family dwelling or from the dwelling of the other.

- An order enjoining a party from specified behavior that the court determined was necessary to effectuate the orders described in paragraph Penal Code § 166(c)(1).

For further discussion, see Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence , and California Criminal Defense Practice, § 142.11 (Matthew Bender).

[4] Violation of Order Prohibiting Possession or Ownership of Firearm

Every person who owns, possesses, purchases, or receives a firearm is subject to punishment under the provisions of Penal Code § 12021(g) [Penal Code § 166(d)(1)] if the person knows that these acts are prohibited by:

- A temporary restraining order or injunction issued pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6 or 527.8 (harassment and injunctive relief by employer against person who threatens or harms employee, respectively) issued against that person;

- A protective order as defined in Fam. Code § 6218 (domestic violence and related matters), or issued pursuant to Penal Code § 136.2 (intimidation or dissuasion of witness) or 646.91 (stalking); or

- A protective order issued pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 15657.03 (abuse of elder or dependent adult).

Every person subject to any of these protective orders may not be prosecuted under Penal Code § 166 for owning, possessing, purchasing, or receiving a firearm to the extent that firearm is granted an exemption pursuant to Family Code § 6389(h) (particular firearm necessary as condition of continued employment) [Penal Code § 166(d)(2)].

For further discussion, see Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence , and California Criminal Defense Practice, § 142.11 (Matthew Bender).

[5] Violation of Protective Order or Injunction Relating to Domestic Violence, Harassment, Threat to Employee, and Elder Abuse

Any intentional and knowing violation of any of the following orders is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine, or by imprisonment in a county jail, or both [Penal Code § 273.6(a); see Penal Code § 273.6(b)-(e) (imprisonment for physical injury and increased penalties for subsequent convictions)]:

- A protective order, as defined in Fam. Code § 6218 (concerning domestic violence and related matters).

- An order issued pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6 (concerning harassment).

- An order issued pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 (concerning injunctive relief by an employer against a person who threatens or harms an employee).

- An order issued pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 527.85 (concerning injunctive relief obtained by a private post secondary educational institution against a person who threatens or harms a student).

- An order issued pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 15657.03 (concerning abuse of elders and dependent adults).

For further discussion, see Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence , and California Criminal Defense Practice, § 142.11 (Matthew Bender).

[6] Civil Liability as Not Precluding Criminal Liability

A criminal act of contempt [see Penal Code § 166] is no less punishable as a crime because it is also declared to be punishable as a contempt under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1218 and 1219 [Penal Code § 657]. However, payment of a fine or imprisonmentfor a contempt may mitigate the punishment to be imposed on a person convicted on indictment for the act adjudged to be a contempt [Penal Code § 658].

[7] Criminal and Misdemeanor Contempt

[a] Distinguished

Apart from the distinction between civil and criminal contempt arising under Code Civ. Proc. § 1209, Penal Code § 166 describes certain contemptuous conduct as constituting a misdemeanor [but see Penal Code § 166(c)(4), 273.6(d), (e) (potential increased penalties for second or subsequent conviction of specified protective orders or injuctions)]. Thus, the term criminal contempt may refer either to a punitive contempt under Code Civ. Proc. § 1209 et seq. [see In re Morris (1924) 194 Cal. 63, 67, 227 P. 914] or to a contempt arising under Penal Code § 166. For the purpose of clarity, this chapter refers to criminal contempt as a contempt arising under Code Civ. Proc. § 1209 and misdemeanor contempt as a contempt arising under Penal Code § 166. For a discussion of conduct constituting misdemeanor contempt, see § 135.15.

[b] Distinct Methods of Procedure

Civil and criminal contempts arising under Code Civ. Proc. § 1209 and misdemeanor contempts arising under Penal Code § 166 are the subjects of two distinct methods of procedure [In re Application of Roth (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 226, 229] . A violation under Penal Code § 166 is a misdemeanor and, therefore, is prosecuted in the same manner as other misdemeanors [In re McKinney (1968) 70 Cal. 2d 8, 14, 73 Cal. Rptr. 580, 447 P.2d 972 (prosecution for misdemeanor contempt improper in superior court when superior court lacks power to hear misdemeanors under Penal Code); but see Penal Code § 166(c)(4), 273.6(d), (e) (potential increased penalties forsecond or subsequent conviction of specified protective orders or injuctions)]. For this reason, proceedings under Penal Code § 166 are not subject to the procedures prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1209 et seq. For example, the affidavit requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1211 are inapplicable to complaints charging misdemeanor contempt under Penal Code § 166 [People v. Saffel (1946) 168 P.2d 497] . In addition, in contrast to persons prosecuted for contempt under the Code of Civil Procedure, persons prosecuted for contempt under Penal Code § 166 have a state constitutional and statutory right to a jury trial, and this right also applies to a contempt proceeding under Penal Code § 11229 (Red Light Abatement Law) [Mitchell v. Superior Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 1230, 1240-1241, 265 Cal. Rptr. 144, 783 P.2d 731] . Because civil and criminal proceedings have different procedural safeguards, a district attorney may not attempt to transform criminal proceedings under Penal Code § 166 into a prosecution for contempt under Code Civ. Proc. § 1209 et seq. since the alleged contemners would thereby lose their right to trial by jury [Safer v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 230, 241, 124 Cal. Rptr. 174, 540 P.2d 14] .

In the exercise of prosecutorial discretion, a prosecutor has discretion to charge a defendant with a more general lesser offense even when there is a more specific greater offense that might embrace the facts of the case. Hence, a prosecutor may charge a contempt under the Code of Civil Procedure, to which there is no right to jury trial, which could also have been prosecuted under the Penal Code, to which there is a right to trial by jury. But due process requires the prosecution to afford the defendant fair notice of the nature of the penalties and proceedings he or she faces by indicating, in the declarations filed initiating the contempt proceeding, the jurisdictional basis for the action [Mitchell v. Superior Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 1230, 1251-1252, 265 Cal. Rptr. 144, 783 P.2d 731 (rejecting "suggestive dictum" to the contrary in Safer v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 230, 241, 124 Cal. Rptr. 174, 540 P.2d 14 , above)].

[c] Challenging Validity of Basis of Misdemeanor Contempt

When prosecution of misdemeanor contempt under Penal Code § 166 arises out of an alleged violation of an order issued by a superior court, there is no jurisdictional impediment to the misdemeanor defendant challenging the validity of the superior court's order in the misdemeanor prosecution [People v. Gonzalez (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 804, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 74, 910 P.2d 1366] . In Gonzalez the superior court had issued an injunction in a civil nuisance suit which purported to restrain defendant and others from engaging in specified, allegedly gang related, activities. Defendant was then charged with misdemeanor contempt for failure to comply with the injunction. The Supreme Court recognized defendant's right to collaterally attack the constitutionality of the injunction, reasoning that the only acts punishable as contempt under Penal Code § 166 are "willful disobedience of any process or order lawfully issued by any court" and that a void court order cannot be the basis for a valid contempt judgment [People v. Gonzalez (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 804, 816-817, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 74, 910 P.2d 1366] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Definitions and General Matters

13-135 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 135.16

§ 135.16 Criminal Nature of Contempt Proceedings

[1] Proceedings Under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1209-1222

A contempt proceeding under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1209-1222 is neither a civil action [Freeman v. Superior Court (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 533, 536, 282 P.2d 857] nor a strictly criminal action [Bridges v. Superior Court (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 464, 477, 94 P.2d 983 (rev'd on other grounds Bridges v. California (1941) 314 U.S. 252, 62 S. Ct. 190, 86 L. Ed. 192)]. Rather, a contempt proceeding is a special proceeding of a criminal nature [Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 370, 371, 72 Cal. Rptr. 177] and the constitutional rights of the accused must be observed [In re Martin (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 472, 480, 139 Cal. Rptr. 451 (order of contempt annulled when trier of fact at contempt hearing acted as adversary to accused, thus denying accused due process of law)]. As in any criminal proceeding, no presumptions are indulged in to aid the sufficiency of the affidavit complaining of the alleged contemner [Phillips v. Superior Court (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 256, 257, 137 P.2d 838 (affidavit in indirect contempt proceeding defective for failing to allege that accused contemner had requisite knowledge of order at time he violated it)], although a court may order or permit an insufficient or defective affidavit to be amended [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5; Mossman v. Superior Court (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 706, 709-710, 99 Cal. Rptr. 638] . Similarly, the accused contemner is entitled to a presumption of innocence and cannot be compelled to testify. Finally, a mere preponderance of evidence is insufficient; the contempt must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt [In re Martin (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 472, 480, 139 Cal. Rptr. 451] .

[2] No Right to Jury Trial

In a contempt proceeding under Code Civ. Proc. § 1209 et seq., although certain constitutional rights of the accused must be observed [see In re Martin (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 472, 480, 139 Cal. Rptr. 451] , the accused contemner has no right to have the contempt matter heard before a jury [In re Morelli (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 819, 850, 91 Cal. Rptr. 72 (writ of habeas corpus denied to alleged contemner asserting right to jury trial)]. Proceedings in a contempt proceeding under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1209-1222 are not within the constitutional requirements guaranteeing trial by jury [Mitchell v. Superior Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 1230, 1240, 265 Cal. Rptr. 144, 783 P.2d 731 ; Bridges v. Superior Court (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 464, 477, 94 P.2d 983 (rev'd on other grounds Bridges v. California (1941) 314 U.S. 252, 62 S. Ct. 190, 86 L. Ed. 192); United Farm Workers, AFL-CIO v. Superior Court (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d

212, 214-215, 71 Cal. Rptr. 513 (denying writ of prohibition sought to prevent superior court from civil contempt matter in absence of jury)], and a trial court lacks the discretion to grant a jury trial in such a contempt proceeding [Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 370, 375, 72 Cal. Rptr. 177] .

An indigent contemnor has a right to have counsel appointed as a matter of due process if the contemnor may lose his or her physical liberty as a result of the contempt proceeding [County of Santa Clara v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1686, 1693-1694, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 7] .

[3] No Right to Different Tribunal

[a] In General

The contempt proceeding constitutes a continuation of the action from which it emanates [McClenny v. Superior Court (1964) 60 Cal. 2d 677, 687, 36 Cal. Rptr. 459, 388 P.2d 691] . Therefore, unlike a proceeding for misdemeanor contempt under Penal Code § 166 [In re McKinney (1968) 70 Cal. 2d 8, 13-14, 73 Cal. Rptr. 580, 447 P.2d 972] , the trial of a contempt proceeding under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1209-1222 is before the court in which the proceeding giving rise to the alleged contempt is pending [Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 370, 372, 72 Cal. Rptr. 177] .

[b] Exception When Judge Personally Embroiled

In a direct contempt, when a judge has become so personally embroiled as to make him or her unfit to sit in judgment on the contempt charge, as a matter of due process the judge must refer the matter of adjudication of the alleged contempt to another judge [In re Buckley (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 237, 255-257, 110 Cal. Rptr. 121, 514 P.2d 1201 , cert. denied, 418 U.S. 910, 94 S. Ct. 3202, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1156 (1974) ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(6) (disqualification of judge for bias)].

In the adjudication of a contempt proceeding justice must be fairly administered and must satisfy the appearance of justice. Therefore, whether a judge is personally embroiled may depend on both the nature of the alleged contemptuous conduct as well as the acts and statements of the judge in either responding to the conduct or in proceeding with the contempt charges [see Offutt v. United States (1954) 348 U.S. 11, 14, 75 S. Ct. 11, 99 L. Ed. 11 ; In re Buckley (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 237, 256, 257, 110 Cal. Rptr. 121, 514 P.2d 1201] . When the conduct rises to the level of personal vilification, it may be considered as evidence of the trial court's probable personal embroilment. For example, if the attack on the integrity of the court consists of "fighting words," it carries a potential for bias which requires disqualification [see In re Buckley (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 237, 256, 110 Cal. Rptr. 121, 514 P.2d 1201 (citing Mayberry v. Pennsylvania (1971) 400 U.S. 455, 465-466, 91 S. Ct. 499, 27 L. Ed. 2d 532 , and noting United States v. Meyer (D.C. Cir. 1972) 462 F.2d 827, 844 , in which attorney's accusation that judge had made up his mind on case before entering courtroom required disqualification)]. Similarly, statements made by the judge may indicate that he or she is unfit to sit in judgment on the alleged contemner. For example, the judge's excessive injection into counsel's examination of witnesses, and numerous comments to counsel, indicating at times hostility, even when made under provocation, may be sufficient evidence of bias and partiality to require the judge's disqualification [see Offutt v. United States (1954) 348 U.S. 11, 16-17, 75 S. Ct. 11, 99 L. Ed. 11 (cited in In re Buckley (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 237, 257, 110 Cal. Rptr. 121, 514 P.2d 1201)].

However, even though the alleged contemner may have been disruptive, if the contemner did not attack the judge's integrity, the judge may hear the contempt charge [In re Grossman (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 624, 632, 101 Cal. Rptr. 176] . Similarly, the fact that the contemner was disrespectful does not require the judge to disqualify himself or herself [see In re Buckley (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 237, 256-257, 110 Cal. Rptr. 121, 514 P.2d 1201 (finding judge's remarks, in interrupting petitioner's argument, that he did not know that petitioner went on forever demonstrated impatience but not personal embroilment, and remark attributing petitioner's delay to be result of petitioner's cunning, shrewd, and deliberate attempt to thwart the court was accurate picture of petitioner's conduct and not example of bias)].

To protect the free flow of information, news reporters and related news media personnel have an immunity from contempt for refusing to obey an order that seeks disclosure of either the source of published information or unpublished information obtained in the course of newsgathering. The immunity is both statutory and constitutional [Cal. Const., art. I, § 2(b); Evid. Code § 1070], and is frequently referred to as the newspersons' "shield law."

§ 135.18 Contempt Against County Government

Notwithstanding Code Civ. Proc. § 1211 (summary punishment of contempt committed in court's presence) or any other law, no contempt order may be made affecting a county government or any member of its governing body acting under its constitutional or statutory authority unless the court finds either of the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 128(f)]:

(1) That the county has the resources necessary to comply with the court's order.

(2) That the county has the authority, without recourse to voter approval or without incurring additional indebtedness, to generate the additional resources necessary to comply with the court's order, that compliance with the court's order will not expose the county, any member of its governing body, or any other county officer to liability for failure to perform other constitutional or statutory duties, and that compliance with the court's order will not deprive the county of resources necessary for its reasonable support and maintenance.

The court's finding as to the existence of one of the above conditions must be based on a review of evidence presented at a hearing conducted for the purpose of determining contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 128(f)].

§ 135.31 Direct Contempt Proceedings

[1] In General

A contempt committed in the immediate view and presence of the court or the judge at chambers, known as a direct contempt, may be treated summarily [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a); Arthur v. Superior Court (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 404, 407, 42 Cal. Rptr. 441, 398 P.2d 777 ; but see Hanson v. Superior Court (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 75, 82, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 782 (although contemptuous conduct committed in presence of judge is usually treated as direct contempt, judge may choose to use procedures for indirect contempt and defer contempt adjudication to another judge); see also § 135.32 (indirect contempt proceedings)]. No hearing is required in adirect contempt proceeding [DeGeorge v. Superior Court (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 305, 315, 114 Cal. Rptr. 860] . Rather, all the requirements of due process are satisfied if the alleged contemner is confronted with the charge and given an opportunity to explain the purported contempt [Arthur v. Superior Court (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 404, 409, 42 Cal. Rptr. 441, 398 P.2d 777] .

A commissioner acting as a temporary judge pursuant to the parties' stipulation generally has full judicial power, including the inherent power to punish a direct contempt [Fine v. Superior Court (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 651, 662-665, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376] .

[2] Timing

Direct contempt proceedings are described as "summary" [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a)]. Thus, a judge has the authority summarily to convict and to sentence contemners for their acts of contempt as the contemptuous acts occur [In re Siegel (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 843, 845, 120 Cal. Rptr. 8] , when prompt punishment is imperative [In re Grossman (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 624, 629, 101 Cal. Rptr. 176] . In addition, a trial judge may conduct direct contempt proceedings in chambers following the allegedly contemptuous conduct, giving the accused contemner an opportunity to be heard in defense or mitigation, and suspending execution of any sentence imposed on the convicted contemner until the jury is discharged [Hawk v. Superior Court (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 108, 131, 116 Cal. Rptr. 713] . Finally, a judge may defer the adjudication of contempt and the imposition of punishment until the conclusion of a trial [In re Grossman (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 624, 631, 101 Cal. Rptr. 176] . However, where final and decisive action is deferred until a trial is concluded, an adjudication of contempt and sentencing without affording the accused contemner notice or an opportunity to be heard may be violative of due process [see In re Karagozian (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 516, 523, 118 Cal. Rptr. 793] .

[3] Direct Contempt Order

A contempt that is committed in the immediate view and presence of either the court or the judge in chambers, known as a direct contempt, may be treated summarily. In such a case the order need only recite the facts that occurred in the court's or judge's immediate view and presence, state that the person proceeded against is thereby adjudged guilty of contempt, and prescribe the punishment [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a); Boysaw v. Superior Court (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 215, 220-221, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531, 999 P.2d 748] .

The requirement that the direct contempt order recite the relevant facts is a jurisdictional requirement, and an order that lacks a sufficient factual recitation is void [In re Ringgold (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1001, 1011-1014, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 507] . The facts recited must be sufficiently detailed to show, on their face, that the conduct constituted a legal contempt [Boysaw v. Superior Court (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 215, 221, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531, 999 P.2d 748 ; Chula v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 199, 203, 18 Cal. Rptr. 507, 368 P.2d 107 ; see Hanson v. Superior Court (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 75, 82, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 782 (if contemptuous conduct is committed in presence of one judge, who then defers contempt adjudication to another judge, contempt is indirect, and contempt order need not recite facts constituting contempt)]. When, for example, the conduct is not so outrageous as to be immediately recognized as an act of contempt, something more must be shown: the order must recite facts showing that the court or judge warned the person that further similar conduct would result in a citation for contempt, and the person nevertheless persisted in the conduct. Thus, a direct contempt order that is based on an attorney's rude, hostile, and disrespectful manner of speaking, as distinguished from the content of the speech, must include a recitation of the fact that the court gave such a warning and that the person directly disregarded it [see Boysaw v. Superior Court (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 215, 222-223, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531, 999 P.2d 748 (also stating that, if an adjudication of contempt depends on the volume, accent, inflection, or tone of voice, or on manner, facial expression, or demeanor, the order of contempt must describe this conduct in detail)].

If the direct contempt is based on the violation of a prior order, the written direct contempt order must describe the prior order. As with other aspects of a written contempt order, the reference to the prior order must (1) recite the facts (what the prior order directed be done); (2) be stated with sufficient particularity that there is no need to refer to any extrinsic document in order to determine what was required by the prior order (except that a transcript may be attached to the order so as to put the contemptuous conduct in context); (3) be described with sufficient particularity to demonstrate on its face that the ensuing contemptuous conduct violated the prior order; and (4) not consist of the judge's conclusions regarding the prior order [In re Ringgold (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1001, 1014, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 507] .

The order need not include the statutory formula that the conduct occurred "in the immediate view and presence" of the court or judge in chambers, so long as the facts recited in the order clearly show this to be the case [Boysaw v. Superior Court (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 215, 220-221, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531, 999 P.2d 748 (expressly disapproving several court of appeal cases inconsistent with this holding)].

If an order punishing a party for direct contempt is found jurisdictionally invalid, contempt proceedings may not be reinstituted against that party [In re Bloom (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 409, 412-413, 229 Cal. Rptr. 747 , disapproved on another ground in Boysaw v. Superior Court (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 215, 221, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531, 999 P.2d 748] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Contempt Proceedings

13-135 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 135.32

§ 135.32 Indirect Contempt Proceedings

[1] Definition

If a contempt did not occur in the immediate view and presence of the court or the judge at chambers, it is an indirect contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a); see Hanson v. Superior Court (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 75, 82, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 782 (if contemptuous conduct is committed in presence of one judge but adjudicated by another judge, contempt is indirect because not committed in presence of judge who made contempt adjudication)]. For a discussion of what constitutes an indirect contempt, see the discussion in § 135.13[3].

A more elaborate procedure must be followed in an indirect contempt proceeding to notify the persons charged with contempt and to allow theman opportunity to be heard [Arthur v. Superior Court (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 404, 407, 42 Cal. Rptr. 441, 398 P.2d 777] .

[2] Commencing Indirect Contempt Proceeding

[a] Initiating Affidavit or Declaration

A proceeding in indirect contempt is commenced by the presentation of an affidavit or declaration under penalty of perjury under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5 setting forth the alleged contemptuous acts to the court or judge [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a); In re Morelli (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 819, 830, 91 Cal. Rptr. 72] . The affidavit or declaration is, in effect, a complaint framing the issues before the court. It is a jurisdictional prerequisite to the court's power to punish an indirect contempt [In re Gould (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 172, 175, 15 Cal. Rptr. 326] .

Code Civ. Proc. § 1211 does not require that one affidavit have all the essential facts in order to supply the facts constituting a contempt. Rather, several affidavits may be grouped, if necessary, to embrace all of the essential facts into one document or made part of a master affidavit or verified petition [In re Roth (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 226, 236, 39 P.2d 490] . The affidavit charging the contempt need be no more specific in its averments of the facts constituting the contempt than a complaint charging a crime needs to be [In re Roth (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 226, 229, 39 P.2d 490] . However, an affidavit based wholly on information and belief and without any authentic source for the information is not an affidavit of the facts prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1211 [In re Roth (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 226, 236, 39 P.2d 490] and is insufficient to sustain a contempt conviction under the hearsay rule of evidence [Freeman v. Superior Court (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 533, 537, 282 P.2d 857] .

Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(b) provides that in family law matters, filing of the Judicial Council form entitled "Order to Show Cause and Affidavit for Contempt (Family Law)" [see Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-410] constitutes compliance with the affidavit requirement of Code Civ. Proc. § 1211. For a reproduction of this form, as well as a discussion of contempt in connection with family law proceedings, see Ch. 258, Family Law Enforcement .

For a general form of declaration initiating an indirect contempt proceeding, see § 135.80.

[b] Statement of Facts by Judicial Officer

As an alternative to an affidavit or declaration under penalty of perjury, a statement of facts may be submitted by the referees, arbitrators, or other judicial officers concerning the alleged contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a)]. For instance, a certificate of nonappearance of a witness prepared by a notary and shorthand reporter at a deposition meets the requirements for a statement of facts by a judicial officer under Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a) [In re Morelli (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 819, 829, 91 Cal. Rptr. 72] .

[c] Affidavit Required for Issuance of Order or Warrant

Neither an order to show cause [In re Rose (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 299, 304, 202 P.2d 1064] nor a warrant of attachment [In re Passalacqua (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 230, 231, 275 P.2d 160] may be issued by a court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1212] except on proper affidavits, or declarations under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], setting forth the full facts of the alleged contempt [Lund v. Superior Court (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 698, 713, 39 Cal. Rptr. 891, 394 P.2d 707] . For a discussion of when orders to show cause and warrants of attachment and commitment are issued, see respectively [5] and [6], below.

[3] Construction, Amendment, and Review

At all stages of the contempt proceedings, the affidavit [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211], declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], or statement of facts [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211] may be construed, amended, and reviewed as follows:

- If no objection is made to the sufficiency of the affidavit, declaration, or statement during the hearing on the charges, jurisdiction of the subject matter does not depend on averments of the affidavit, declaration, or statement, but may be established by the facts found by the trial court to have been proved at the hearing. The court must cause the affidavit, declaration, or statement to be amended to conform to proof [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5(a)].

- The court may order or permit amendment of the affidavit, declaration, or statement for any defect or insufficiency at any stage of theproceedings. The trial of the person accused of contempt continues as if the affidavit, declaration, or statement had originally been filed as amended unless substantial rights of the accused would thereby be prejudiced. If such right would be prejudiced, the court may grant a reasonable postponement forno longer than the ends of justice require [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5(b)].

- No affidavit, declaration, or statement is insufficient and no trial, order, judgment, or other proceeding based thereon is affected by any defect or imperfection in matter of form which does not prejudice a substantial right of the person accused on the merits. No order or judgment of conviction for contempt will be set aside, nor will a new trial be granted, for an error in pleading in an affidavit, declaration, or statement unless, after examining the entire cause, including the evidence, the court is of the opinion that the error complained of has resulted in a miscarriage of justice [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5(c)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5 abrogates the former rule which considered an affidavit, declaration, or statement fatally defective for failure to state one or more of the jurisdictional facts necessary to sustain a contempt order [see Freeman v. Superior Court (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 533, 537, 282 P.2d 857] or for other technicalities [see Palm Springs Alpine Estates, Inc. v. Superior Court (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 883, 888, 63 Cal. Rptr. 618 (no verification of document purporting to be initiating affidavit)]. As a result of the enactment of § 1211.5 in 1970, affidavits, declarations, and statements are no longer considered fatally defective for these reasons. Rather, courts have greater flexibility in contempt proceedings with respect to the sufficiency of affidavits, declarations, and statements [see Mossman v. Superior Court (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 706, 710, 713, 99 Cal. Rptr. 638] . Thus, a trial court is not deprived of jurisdiction, nor are its proceedings considered void, as a result of an insufficient initiating affidavit. For instance, when contempt proceedings were initiated on the basis of an insufficient affidavit which failed to allege the contemner's notice or knowledge of the order he was charged with violating, the court of appeal issued a writ of prohibition to restrain the trial court from further proceedings against the contemner and applied Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5(b) to permit amendment of the initiating affidavit [Mossman v. Superior Court (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 706, 710, 713, 99 Cal. Rptr. 638] .

[4] Opposing Affidavit

The accused contemner may submit an affidavit, or declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], in response to the affidavit initiating the contempt proceeding. The opposing affidavit, or counter affidavit [Associated Lbr. & Box Co. v. Superior Court (1947) 79 Cal. App. 2d 577, 580, 180 P.2d 389] , constitutes the answer or plea to the charge of contempt [Bailey v. Superior Court (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 47, 53, 297 P.2d 795 (verified answer); In re Application of Roth (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 226, 229] and may raise the accused contemner's available defenses [see Nutter v. Superior Court (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 72, 74, 6 Cal. Rptr. 404 (affidavit admits allegations of initiating affidavit and asserts defense that accused contemner unable to pay moneys required by court order due to accused contemner's insolvency)]. Together with the initiating affidavit, the opposing affidavit frames the issues to be tried [Freeman v. Superior Court (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 533, 536, 282 P.2d 857] .

Any question as to the adequacy of an order to show cause [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1212] and of the adequacy of the affidavit or declaration on which the order to show cause is based should be raised by an opposing affidavit or declaration [Morelli v. Superior Court (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 262, 266, 68 Cal. Rptr. 572] having the effect of a demurrer [see Taylor v. Superior Court (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 244, 246, 125 P.2d 1] .

[5] Order to Show Cause

An order to show cause [Code Civ. Proc. § 1212] is issued by the court after the initiating affidavit stating the facts constituting the contempt is presented to the court [Arthur v. Superior Court (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 404, 408, 42 Cal. Rptr. 441, 398 P.2d 777] . It is customary to issue the order to show cause to give the accused contemner notice of the charge of contempt and an opportunity to refute the charge before issuing a warrant for his or her arrest or commitment to custody [see In re Rose (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 299, 304-305, 202 P.2d 1064] .

The order to show cause acts as a summons to appear in court on a certain day and, as its name suggests, to show cause why the cited person should not be held in contempt. Unless the cited person has concealed himself or herself from the court, he or she must be personally served with the order to show cause and the supporting affidavit; otherwise, the court lacks jurisdiction to proceed [Cedars-Sinai Imaging Med. Group v. Superior Court (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1281, 1286-1287, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320 (attorney's waiver, at hearing, of right to receive written notice of court's ruling or of further hearing date does not waive client's right to be personally served with order to show cause prior to hearing)].

[6] Warrants of Attachment and Commitment

A bench warrant, or warrant of attachment, is a process issued by the court (from the "bench") for the attachment or arrest of a person in order to compel his or her attendance before the court to answer to a charge of contempt [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1212; Silvagni, v. Superior Court (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 287, 290, 321 P.2d 15 (noting bench warrant is also used to compel attendance of witness who has failed to comply with subpoena)]. The court or judge may issue a warrant of attachment only on notice tothe accused contemner. This requirement is satisfied if the accused contemner is present in court when the order is made which he or she is accused of violating [Ex parte Cottrell (1881) 59 Cal. 417, 418-419] . Ordinarily, however, the trial court or judge will issue an order to show cause [Ex parte Cottrell (1881) 59 Cal. 420, 421 ; see Morelli v. Superior Court (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 328, 330, 82 Cal. Rptr. 375, 461 P.2d 655 (trial court issuedbench warrant following accused contemner's failure to appear at hearing on order to show cause why contemner would not be held in contempt for failure to obey subpoena duces tecum to appear for deposition)]. For an illustrative form of bench warrant, see § 135.83.

As an alternative procedure, if the accused contemner has not been arrested previously by a warrant of attachment, a court or judge may grant a warrant of commitment to custody on notice or an order to show cause. However, a warrant of commitment to custody may not be issued without previous attachment to answer, notice, or an order to show cause [Code Civ. Proc. § 1212].

[7] Undertaking; Discharge on Undertaking

Whenever a warrant of attachment is issued pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1209 et seq., the court or judge must direct, by an endorsement on the warrant, that the person charged may be let to bail for his or her appearance, in an amount to be specified in the endorsement [Code Civ. Proc. § 1213]. Whenever a warrant of attachment is issued, the court or judge may direct, by an endorsement on the warrant, that the person charged may give an undertaking for that person's appearance. The amount of the undertaking must be specified in the endorsement [Code Civ. Proc. § 1215]. The undertaking must be in writing [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.320(a)], and must be executed by two or more sufficient personal sureties, one sufficient admitted surety insurer, or by any combination of sufficient personal sureties and admitted surety insurers [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.310]. For a discussion of bonds and undertakings and related forms, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings .

[8] Execution of Warrant and Detention

On executing the warrant of attachment, the executing officer must keep the person in custody, bring him or her before the court or judge, and detain him or her until an order is made in the premises, unless the person arrested entitles himself or herself to be discharged pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1215 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1214].

[9] Return by Officer

The officer must return the warrant and undertaking, if any, received by him or her from the person arrested by the return day specified in the warrant [Code Civ. Proc. § 1216].

[10] Nonappearance of Accused Contemner After Arrest

When the warrant of attachment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1212] has been returned by the officer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1216] and the person arrested does not appear on the return day, the court or judge may order another warrant of attachment or may order the undertaking [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1216] to be enforced, or both. If the undertaking is enforced, the measure of damages in the action is the extent of the loss or injury sustained by the aggrieved party by reason of the misconduct for which the warrant was issued [Code Civ. Proc. § 1220].

[11] Inability of Accused Contemner to Attend

Whenever an officer is required by the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1209 et seq. to keep a person arrested on a warrrant of attachment in custody and to bring that person before a court or judge, that person's inability to attend, from illness or otherwise, is a sufficient excuse for not bringing him or her up. Furthermore, an officer may not confine a person arrested on a warrant of attachment in prison, or otherwise restrained of personal liberty, except insofar as may be necessary to secure that person's attendance [Code Civ. Proc. § 1221].

[12] Hearing

When the person arrested has been brought up or has appeared, the court must proceed to investigate the charge [Code Civ. Proc. § 1217]. The issues of fact on which the hearing must be had [Lyon v. Superior Court (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 446, 452, 67 Cal. Rptr. 265, 439 P.2d 1] to investigate the charge are framed by the respective affidavits [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1211] or declarations of the plaintiff and defendant which serve as pleadings [Freeman v. Superior Court (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 533, 536, 282 P.2d 857] . In addition, the court or judge must hear any answer that the accused contemner may make to the charge [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1217] and may take oral testimony [Reifler v. Superior Court (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 479, 484, 114 Cal. Rptr. 356] of witnesses for and against the person charged [Code Civ. Proc. § 1217]. For instance, the accused contemner has the opportunity to offer any legitimate excuse at the hearing [Sorell v. Superior Court (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 157, 161, 56 Cal. Rptr. 222] , such as financial inability to comply with an order of support, which constitutes a complete defense to a charge of contempt [Nutter v. Superior Court (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 72, 75, 6 Cal. Rptr. 404] .

The accused contemner is entitled to be heard by the same tribunal that is to pronounce judgment on him or her [Marcus v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 598, 605, 111 Cal. Rptr. 101 (order of contempt as annulled when appeals board pronounced judgment on basis of transcript of proceedings conducted by referee)]. Adjournment of the trial may be had from time to time if necessary [Code Civ. Proc. § 1217].

On the answer and evidence taken at the hearing [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1217], the court or judge must determine whether or not the person proceeded against is guilty of the contempt charged [Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(a)].

[13] Order Adjudging Indirect Contempt

In Moss v. Superior Court (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 396, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215, 950 P.2d59 , the Supreme Court disapproved the practice of using minute orders to set out a judgment of indirect contempt [Moss v. Superior Court (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 396, 404 n.3, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215, 950 P.2d 59 (relying, however, on Reifler v. Superior Court (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 479, 114 Cal. Rptr. 356 , which, as discussed below, construed language that no longer appears in Code Civ. Proc. § 1218)]. Moreover, the Court noted that there is no jurisdictional reqirement that an indirect contempt judgment include the trial court's underlying factual findings. Nevertheless, to assist a reviewing court in determining if there is sufficient evidence to support such a judgment, a trial court should recite its factual findings either in the judgment itself or orally on the record [Moss v. Superior Court (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 396, 404 n.3, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215, 950 P.2d 59] .

Former Code Civ. Proc. § 1218, first paragraph, required, in cases of indirect contempt, the entry of a "judgment" that included "the conviction, specifying particularly the offense" [see, e.g., In re Jones (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 879, 881, 120 Cal. Rptr. 914 (construing former Code Civ. Proc. § 1218, first paragraph, and holding contempt order void for failure to specify offense particularly); Reifler v. Superior Court (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 479, 484-485, 114 Cal. Rptr. 356 (construing former Code Civ. Proc. § 1218, first paragraph, to require that findings regarding indirect contempt be incorporated into a judgment)]. This language was removed, however, by an amendment enacted in 1977.

Currently, the relevant statutory provisions require, by implication only, that there be some order or judgment of indirect contempt that includes an adjudication that the contemnor is guilty of the contempt charged [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(a) and discussion in [12], above; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1222 (providing for the finality and conclusiveness of "[t]he judgment and orders of the court or judge, made in cases of contempt") and discussion in § 135.41]. Thus, while there are express statutory requirements applicable to the making of direct contempt orders [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a); see also § 135.31[3]], there are no comparably explicit statutory requirements governing indirect contempt orders.

In light of the Moss opinion, although no longer explicitly required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1218, it is recommended that any party initiating indirect contempt proceedings seek to ensure that any subsequent judgment of contempt (1) is embodied in a formal order rather than in the trial court's minutes [see Eldridge v. Superior Court (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1350, 1354, 256 Cal. Rptr. 724 (distinguishing formal orders from minute orders)], and (2) is also supported by factual findings specifying the offense with particularity, which are either set out in the formal order itself or, alternatively, are included in the trial court's record following oral recitation.

For a form of proposed formal order adjudicating an indirect contempt, see § 135.84.

§ 135.33 Punishment or Coercion of Contemner

[1] Punishment of Criminal Contemner

When a contemner is adjudged guilty of a criminal contempt, which consists of the omission to perform an act that is not possible for the contemner still to perform [Morelli v. Superior Court (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 328, 332, 82 Cal. Rptr. 375, 461 P.2d 655 (inability of contemner to obey subpoena to testify in action which had terminated at time of contempt trial); see Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 632-635, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] , the court or judge may impose a fine not exceeding $1,000, imprisonment not exceeding five days, or both [Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(a)], at its discretion [see In re Siegel (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 843, 846, 120 Cal. Rptr. 8 (fine of $250 imposed on attorneys adjudged guilty of direct contempt, with execution of sentence suspended until the last day of trial, as well within discretion of court under Code Civ. Proc. § 1218)]. For a discussion of the distinction between criminal and civil contempt, see § 135.12.

[2] Coercion of Civil Contemner

[a] By Incarceration

Except as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1219(b) (discussed under [4][b], [c], below), when a contemner is adjudged guilty of a civil contempt that consists of the omission to perform an act which is yet in the power of the person to perform, the court or judge may imprison that person until he or she has performed the act specified in the warrant of commitment [Code Civ. Proc. § 1219(a); see Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 631-632, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721] . For a discussion of the distinction between civil and criminal contempt, see § 135.12.

Unlike a commitment under Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(a), which authorizes commitment for a definite term, a commitment under Code Civ. Proc. § 1219 is provisional; that is, a contemner may be imprisoned only until he or she performs an act that is in his or her power to perform [County of Lake v. Superior Court (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 815, 817, 136 Cal. Rptr. 830] . Therefore, an order adjudging a person guilty of contempt for failure to perform an act as directed by the court must state that it is yet withinthe power of the person sought to be imprisoned to perform the act [Van Hoosear v. Railroad Comm'n (1922) 189 Cal. 228, 233, 207 P. 903 (mere recital that obedience to court order willfully refused as insufficient)]. For instance, an order stating that the contemner had had the ability to comply with a restraining order and injunction is void for failing to include a finding that the act to be performed is presently within the power of the contemner to perform [County of Lake v. Superior Court (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 815, 817, 136 Cal. Rptr. 830 (failure to conduct survey and conform salary schedule as required by local ordinance and to meet and confer with employees' respresentatives in good faith as ordered by court)].

[b] When Incarceration Becomes Penal

An incarceration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1219 to compel compliance with a court order presents a special problem when disobedience of the order is based on an established moral principle, such as the contemner's promise to a news source to maintain confidentiality. When a court determines that a contemner's continued incarceration will not accomplish the purpose of the order, such as revealing the identity of the contemner's news source, the incarceration becomes penal in nature. Its duration is then limited by the five-day maximum sentence provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(a) [In re Farr (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 577, 584, 111 Cal. Rptr. 649 ; see Evid. Code § 1070 (newsreporter's immunity from contempt)].

[3] Costs and Attorney's Fee Incurred by Initiating Party

A person who is subject to a court order as a party to the action, or any agent of that person, who is adjudged guilty of contempt for violating that court order generally may be ordered to pay to the party initiating the contempt proceeding the reasonable attorney's fees and costs incurred by that party in connection with the contempt proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(c); see Goold v. Superior Court (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9-11, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 455 (second sentence of Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(a) authorizes court to award complainant attorney's fees and costs in all cases, including those involving violations of Family Code orders otherwise punishable under Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(c))]. However, in a contempt action brought by a district attorney or city attorney against a party for failing to comply with a court order entered pursuant to the Domestic Violence Protection Act [see Fam. Code § 6200 et seq.], any attorney's fees and costs ordered by the court must be paid to the California Emergency Management Agency's account established for the purpose of funding domestic violence shelter service providers [Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(d); see Penal Code § 13823.15(f) (funding for domestic violence shelter services)].

[4] Special Rules

[a] Probation Report Regarding Minor

In any case in which a contempt consists of the refusal of a minor under the age of 16 years to take the oath or to testify, before imposing any sanction for the contempt, the court must first refer the matter to theprobation officer in charge of matters coming before the juvenile court for a report and recommendation as to the appropriateness of the imposition of a sanction. The court must consider the report and recommendation in imposing a sanction in the case [Code Civ. Proc. § 1219.5(a)]. The court may, however, impose a sanction for contempt prior to receipt of the report and recommendation if the court enters a finding, supported by specific facts stated on the record, that the minor would be likely to flee if released before the receipt of the report and recommendation [Code Civ. Proc. § 1219.5(c)].

[b] Victims of Sexual Assault

Notwithstanding any other law, no court may imprison or otherwise confine or place in custody the victim of a sexual assault for contempt when the contempt consists of refusing to testify concerning that sexual assault [Code Civ. Proc. § 1219(b)]. Moreover, notwithstanding Code Civ. Proc. § 1211 (summary punishment of contempt committed in court's presence) or any other law, if an order of contempt is made affecting the victim of sexual assault, when the contempt consists of refusing to testify concerning that sexual assault, the execution of any sentence is stayed pending the filing within three judicial days of a petition for extraordinary relief testing the lawfulness of the court's order, violation of which is the basis for the contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 128(d)].

For the purpose of these sections, "sexual assault" means any act made punishable by Penal Code §§ 261, 262, 264.1, 285, 286, 288, 288a, or 289 [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 128(d), 1219(c)(1)].

[c] Victims of Domestic Violence

Notwithstanding any other law, no court may imprison or otherwise confine or place in custody the victim of a domestic violence crime for contempt when the contempt consists of refusing to testify concerning that domestic violence crime [Code Civ. Proc. § 1219(b)]. Moreover, notwithstanding Code Civ. Proc. § 1211 (summary punishment of contempt committed in court's presence) or any other law, if an order of contempt is made affecting the victim of domestic violence, if the contempt consists of refusing to testify concerning that domestic violence, the execution of any sentence is stayed pending the filing within three judicial days of a petition for extraordinary relief testing the lawfulness of the court's order, a violation of which is the basis for the contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 128(e)].

"Domestic violence" means abuse perpetrated against any of the following persons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 128(e), 1219(c)(2); Fam. Code § 6211]:

- A spouse or former spouse.
- A cohabitant or former cohabitant, as defined in Fam. Code § 6209.
- A person with whom the respondent is having or has had a dating or engagement relationship.
- A person with whom the respondent has had a child and the presumption applies that the male parent is the father of the child of the female parent under the Uniform Parentage Act (Fam. Code § 7600 et seq.).
- A child of a party or a child who is subject to an action under the Uniform Parentage Act and the presumption applies that the male parent is the father of the child to be protected.
- Any other person related by cosanguinity or affinity within the second degree.

For detailed discussion of the Domestic Violence Prevention Act (Fam. Code § 6211 et seq.), see Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence .

[d] Public Safety Employees

Notwithstanding Code Civ. Proc. § 1211 (summary punishment of contempt committed in court's presence) or any other law, if an order of contempt is madeaffecting a public safety employee acting within the scope of employment for reason of the employee's failure to comply with a duly issued subpoena or subpoena duces tecum, the execution of any sentence must be stayed pending the filing within three judicial days of a petition for extraordinary relief testing the lawfulness of the court's order on which the contempt is based [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 128(c), 1209(d)].

"Public safety employee" includes any peace officer, firefighter, paramedic, or any other employee of a public law enforcement agency whose duty is either to maintain official records or to analyze or present evidence for investigative or prosecutorial purposes [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 128(c), 1209(d)].

[e] Attorneys and Attorneys' Agents

Notwithstanding Code Civ. Proc. § 1211 (summary punishment of contempt committed in court's presence) or any other law, if an order of contempt is made affecting an attorney, his or her agent, investigator, or any person acting under the attorney's direction, in the preparation and conduct of any action or proceeding, the execution of any sentence must be stayed pending the filing within three judicial days of a petition for extraordinary relief testing the lawfulness of the court's order, except for any conduct that is proscribed by Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(b) relating to an attorney's duty to maintain respect due to courts and judicial officers [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 128(b), 1209(c)].

If the contemner is an attorney, and it appears that the contempt holding involves grounds warranting attorney discipline under the Business and Professions Code, the court may transmit a copy of the relevant minutes, final order, and transcript to the State Bar [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6086.7; see In re Rubin (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1176, 1179, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 593, 25 P.3d 1075] .

[f] Orders Issued Under Family Code

In any court action in which a party is found in contempt of court for failure to comply with a court order pursuant to the Family Code, the court is required by statute to make an order imposing a penalty on the contemner that varies according to whether a prior finding of contempt has been made. On a first finding of contempt, the court must order the contemner to perform community service up to a specified number of hours, or be imprisoned up to that same number of hours, for each count of contempt. The penalties increase for second, third, or subsequent findings of contempt to require both imprisonment and community service up to a prescribed number of hours [Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(c)(1)-(3)]. The court must take parties' employment schedules into consideration when ordering community service or imprisonment, or both [Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(c)(4)].

In addition to mandatory community service or imprisonment, a party found in contempt for failing to comply with a court order under the Family Code may be ordered to pay to the party initiating the contempt proceeding the reasonable attorney's fees and costs incurred by that party in connection with the contempt proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(a); Goold v. Superior Court (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9-11, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 455 (second sentence of Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(a) authorizes court to award complainant attorney's fees and costs in all cases, including those involving violations of Family Code orders otherwise punishable under Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(c))].

A district attorney or city attorney may bring a contempt action against a party for failing to comply with a court order entered pursuant to the Domestic Violence Protection Act [Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(d); see Fam. Code § 6200 et seq. (Domestic Violence Protection Act)].

If the contempt alleged is for failure to pay child, family, or spousal support, each month for which payment has not been made in full may be alleged as a separate count of contempt and punishment imposed for each count proven [Code Civ. Proc. § 1218.5(a)].

Special limitations periods apply with respect to commencing contempt actions in family law and related proceedings. If the contempt alleged is the failure to pay child, family, or spousal support, the limitations period for commencing the contempt action is three years from the date that the payment was due. If the action before the court is enforcement of another order under the Family Code, the limitations period for commencing a contempt action is two years from the time that the alleged contempt occurred [Code Civ. Proc. § 1218.5(b)].

No party who is in contempt of a court order or judgment in a dissolution of marriage, dissolution of domestic partnership, or legal separation action is permitted to enforce the order or judgment, by way of execution or otherwise, either in the same action or by way of a separate action, against the other party. This restriction does not affect or apply to the enforcement of spousal or child support orders [Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(b)].

For discussion and forms relating to the use of contempt to enforce orders and judgments under the Family Code, see Ch. 258, Family Law Enforcement .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Review of Contempt Proceedings

13-135 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 135.42

§ 135.42 Availability of Writs

The availability of any particular extraordinary writ to review contempt proceedings depends largely on the time when the alleged contemner seeks review. For example, a writ of review (certiorari) is granted by any court when an inferior tribunal, board, or officer exercising judicial functions exceeds the jurisdiction of that tribunal, board, or officer [Code Civ. Proc. § 1068 (appellate division of superior court may grant writ in limited civil case)]. Thus, the writ is available to annul any completed contempt proceedings taken in excess of jurisdiction [see Chula v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 199, 204, 18 Cal. Rptr. 507, 368 P.2d 107 ; Chase v. Superior Court (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 872, 878, 27 Cal. Rptr. 383] .

A writ of habeas corpus is available to every person unlawfully imprisoned or restrained of liberty under any pretense whatever as a means of inquiring into the cause of the imprisonment or restraint [Penal Code § 1473(a)]. Thus, an alleged contemner may prosecute a writ of habeas corpus in order to seek release from custody after commitment for contempt based on, for example, either an alleged failure to comply with an order of injunction [see In re Circosta (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 777, 779, 33 Cal. Rptr. 514] or an alleged abuse of, or unlawful interference with, the proceedings of a court [see In re Carvallo (1973) 29 Cal. App. 3d 983, 985-986, 105 Cal. Rptr. 925] .

A writ of prohibition arrests the proceedings of any tribunal, corporation, board, or person exercising judicial injunctions when the proceedings are without, or in excess of, the jurisdiction of that tribunal, corporation, board, or person [Code Civ. Proc. § 1102]. Thus, the writ is available to restrain the commission of an act in a contempt proceeding which is in excess of the court's jurisdiction [see Safer v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 230, 242, 124 Cal. Rptr. 174, 540 P.2d 14 ; State Bd. of Equalization v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 252, 254, 70 P.2d 482] . It may be sought, for example, in order to arrest a trial court's intended imposition of a contempt sentence [Ketscher v. Superior Court (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 601, 604, 88 Cal. Rptr. 357 ; see Nelson v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 729, 730, 73 P.2d 232] , or to arrest contempt proceedings prosecuted by way of a warrant of attachment against a person accused of disobeying a court order which was neither rendered nor entered in judgment [Silvagni v. Superior Court (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 287, 290, 321 P.2d 15] .

It should be noted that if a petition for a writ of prohibition is made at the appropriate time but the lower tribunal completes the threatened judicial act before a decision is made on the petition, the reviewing court may treat the proceeding as one for a writ of review [Chase v. Superior Court (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 872, 878, 27 Cal. Rptr. 383] , provided a complete record of the lower court's proceedings, including a transcript of the evidence, is brought before the reviewing court [Van Hoosear v. Railroad Comm'n (1922) 189 Cal. 228, 236, 207 P. 903 (annulling order of contempt by writ of review on petition for writ of prohibition when record warrants relief)].

Chapter 135 CONTEMPT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Review of Contempt Proceedings

13-135 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 135.43

§ 135.43 Scope of Review

[1] Jurisdictional Basis for Issuance of Writs

Generally, writs of review, prohibition, and habeas corpus are jurisdictional writs [see Mitchell v. Superior Court (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 759, 762, 104 Cal. Rptr. 921 ; In re Circosta (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 777, 784, 33 Cal. Rptr. 514] . Lack of jurisdiction, in the broad sense of the word, establishes the ground for their issuance [see Safer v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 230, 242, 124 Cal. Rptr. 174, 540 P.2d 14] . Thus, the scope of review on an application for a writ of review, prohibition, or habeas corpus by an alleged contemner is identical: (1) whether the act or omission charged against the contemner confers the court with jurisdiction to adjudicate the alleged contempt and (2) whether the jurisdictional act or omission is supported by the evidence [In re Carvallo (1973) 29 Cal. App. 3d 983, 985, 986, 105 Cal. Rptr. 925 ; see Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 290, 109 P.2d 942 ; In re Karpf (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 355, 364, 88 Cal. Rptr. 895] .

[2] Examples of Jurisdictional Defects

Common jurisdictional defects, for which reviewing writs are available, include situations in which:

- A trial court finds a person guilty of contempt when there is a failure to show the contemner's notice or knowledge of the court order alleged to have been disobeyed (§ 135.92) [see Phillips v. Superior Court (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 256, 257, 137 P.2d 838] .

- An contempt order based on violation of a court order fails to show the contemner's ability to comply with that order (§ 135.93) [see In re Liu (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 135, 140, 78 Cal. Rptr. 85] , or the contemner's willful failure to comply with that order (§ 135.94) [see Warner v. Superior Court (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 821, 824, 826, 273 P.2d 89] .

- An order of contempt is insufficient for failure to recite the facts of a direct contempt sufficient particularity to show that the conduct constituted a legal contempt or was committed in the immediate view and presence of the court or judge in chambers (§ 135.95) [Boysaw v. Superior Court (2000) 23

Cal. 4th 215, 220-221 ;see also Rosenstock v. Municipal Court (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 1, 7, 132 Cal. Rptr. 59] .

- A trial court erroneously divests itself of jurisdiction to hear a contempt proceeding (§ 135.96) [Taylor v. Superior Court (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 244, 246, 125 P.2d 1] .

- No order or judgment was rendered or entered for which the contemner could be found in contempt [Silvagni v. Superior Court (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 287, 290, 321 P.2d 15] .

- The order which the contemner is alleged to have violated was void on its face [Mitchell v. Superior Court (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 759, 762, 104 Cal. Rptr. 921] or is unconstitutionally overbroad (§ 135.97) [Younger v. Smith (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 138, 150, 106 Cal. Rptr. 225] .

- A contemner is found in contempt for nonappearance when that contemner's attorney appeared for him or her (§ 135.98) [Morelli v. Superior Court (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 262, 270, 68 Cal. Rptr. 572] .

[3] Examination of Entire Record

In reviewing the evidence supporting whether or not the court below had jurisdiction and whether or not such jurisdiction was exceeded, the reviewing court looks to the entire record of the contempt proceedings [In re Circosta (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 777, 784, 33 Cal. Rptr. 514] . The reviewing court indulges in no presumptions of regularity, validity, or sufficiency in support of the contempt proceedings [In re Blaze (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 210, 211, 76 Cal. Rptr. 551 ; In re Circosta (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 777, 785, 33 Cal. Rptr. 514] and, because contempt proceedings are criminal in nature, strictly construes the order or judgment of contempt in favor of the accused contemner [Andrews v. Superior Court (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 756, 759, 7 Cal. Rptr. 194] .

However, with respect to the evidence supporting any particular jurisdictional act or omission in the contempt proceedings, the power to weigh the evidence rests solely with the trial court [In re Buckley (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 237, 247, 110 Cal. Rptr. 121, 514 P.2d 1201] . The reviewing court examines such evidence only for the purpose of ascertaining whether there was any substantial evidence before the trial court to sustain its jurisdiction [Chula v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 199, 204, 18 Cal. Rptr. 507, 368 P.2d 107] .

[6] Challenging Validity of Basis of Misdemeanor Contempt

When prosecution of misdemeanor contempt under Penal Code § 166 arises out of alleged violation of superior court order, misdemeanor defendant is not barred from challenging the validity of the superior court's order in misdemeanor trial, because attack on superior court order is collateral and only acts punishable as contempt under Penal Code § 166 are "willful disobedience of any process or order lawfully issued by any court" and that void court order cannot be basis for valid contempt judgment. People v. Gonzalez (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 804, 815-817, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 74, 910 P.2d 1366

Proc. § 1211*), order finding person in contempt of court as in excess of court's jurisdiction and void; order as not saved by Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5, which applies to insufficient initiating affidavits filed and not when no affidavit is filed. In re Cowan (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1281, 1282-1283, 1286-1289, 281 Cal. Rptr. 740

[10] Nature of Contempt Power

If Legislature has established specific penalty for particular transgression, courts may not impose a contempt punishment that is inconsistent with the legislative scheme; thus, because of unique nature of reunification services in juvenile dependency proceedings juvenile court may not use its contempt power to incarcerate parent solely for failure to comply with order to participate in voluntary reunification plan. In re Nolan W. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1217, 1230-1231, 1233-1238, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140, 203 P.3d 454

Contempt power as court's "ultimate weapon"; power to adjudicate direct contempt as necessarily arbitrary and to be used with great prudence, judge bearing in mind that exercise of that power is not so much to vindicate judge's character as to promote respect due administration of laws. McCann v. Municipal Court (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 527, 536-537, 270 Cal. Rptr. 640

[12] Newsreporter's Immunity From Contempt

[a] In General

Court must balance news reporter's immunity against possibility that defendant's constitutional right to a fair trial will be compromised if the news reporter fails to disclose his or her source, and court's balancing test should encompass two principal considerations: (1) whether there is a "substantial probability of future violations or 'leaks' " that will impair defendant's right to a fair trial and (2) whether there are reasonable alternatives to disclosure. In re Willon (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 1080, 1099, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 245

News reporter's immunity under Evid. Code § 1070 as merely immunity from contempt and not privilege against disclosure. KSDO v. Superior Court (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 375, 383-384, 186 Cal. Rptr. 211

Evid. Code § 1070 as intended to protect free flow of information and to provide newsreporters with privilege against being held in contempt for refusing to answer questions concerning sources of their information. Rosato v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 190, 217, 124 Cal. Rptr. 427 , cert. denied, (1976) 427 U.S. 912, 96 S. Ct. 3200, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1204

[b] Limitations on Scope of Immunity

Newsreporter's privilege as not overriding public's interest in ensuring that neither reporter nor source invades rights of other citizens through reprehensible conduct forbidden to all other persons. Rosato v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 190, 219, 124 Cal. Rptr. 427 , cert. denied, (1976) 427 U.S. 912, 96 S. Ct. 3200, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1204 (quoting Branzburg v. Hayes (1972) 408 U.S. 665, 691-692, 92 S. Ct. 2646, 33 L. Ed. 2d 626)

Newsreporter's privilege as not shielding newsreporters from testifying about criminal activity in which they have participated or which they have observed. Rosato v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 190, 218-219, 124 Cal. Rptr. 427 , cert. denied, (1967) 427 U.S. 912, 96 S. Ct. 3200, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1204 (quoting Branzburg v. Hayes (1972) 408 U.S. 665, 691-692, 92 S. Ct. 2646, 33 L. Ed. 2d 626)

Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 190, 221, 222, 124 Cal. Rptr. 427 , cert. denied, (1976) 427 U.S. 912, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1204* ; Farr v. Superior Court (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 60, 68-71, 99 Cal. Rptr. 342 , cert. denied, (1972) 409 U.S. 1011, 93 S. Ct. 430, 34 L. Ed. 2d 305

Limitation on protection afforded by shield law as applicable only when questions asked may tend to identify who, if anyone, among those subject to court's order, may have violated it. Rosato v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 190, 224, 124 Cal. Rptr. 427 , cert. denied, (1976) 427 U.S. 912, 96 S. Ct. 3200, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1204

Evid. Code § 1070 as not granting reporter immunity from contempt for refusal to name sources of information when sources were earlier identified by reporter as judicial officers subject to court's order banning publicity during notorious murder trial. In re Farr (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 577, 582, 111 Cal. Rptr. 649

[c] Scope of Immunity

Immunity from contempt under Cal. Const., art. I, § 2(b), and Evid. Code § 1070 as granting to nonparty witnesses virtually absolute protection against compelled disclosure, because generally contempt is only effective remedy against these witnesses; however, immunity as not constituting privilege against disclosure, because it does not provide protection against sanctions other than contempt which may be invoked against party to civil litigation. Mitchell v.

Superior Court (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 268, 274, 208 Cal. Rptr. 152, 690 P.2d 625

Privilege as extending not only to identity of source but also, in absence of constitutional or other limitation on privilege, to disclosure of information which may tend to reveal source of information. Rosato v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 190, 217-218, 124 Cal. Rptr. 427 , cert. denied, (1976) 427 U.S. 912, 96 S. Ct. 3200, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1204

Burden, though not heavy, on reporter claiming privilege to show that his or her testimony may tend to lead to source. Rosato v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 190, 218, 124 Cal. Rptr. 427 , cert. denied, (1976) 427 U.S. 912, 96 S. Ct. 3200, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1204

In determining applicability of newsreporter's privilege, court as considering not only offered evidence but also matters disclosed in argument, implication of the question, setting in which it is asked, and other relevant factors. Rosato v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 190, 218, 124 Cal. Rptr. 427 , cert. denied, (1976) 427 U.S. 912, 96 S. Ct. 3200, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1204

[13] Order, Process, or Proceeding of Court

Unless court proceeding or process is involved, court as not authorized to invoke contempt powers; "process" as synonymous with "proceeding"; "proceeding" as referring to something done or to be done in court of justice or before judicial officer. Raygoza v. Betteravia Farms (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1592, 1596, 239 Cal. Rptr. 188

Commission on Judicial Performance (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1297, 1314, 240 Cal. Rptr. 859, 743 P.2d 919* (upholding removal of judge based on multiple abuses of contempt power)

Civil contempt as means of enforcing contractual right that has been judicially determined in order or judgment, and as instituted to preserve and enforce rights of private parties to suit, and to compel obedience to orders and decrees made to enforce rights and administer remedies to which court has found them to be entitled; such proceedings as remedial and coercive in their nature, and parties chiefly in interest in their conduct and prosecution as individuals whose private rights and remedies they were instituted to protect or enforce. Share v. Casiano Bel-Air Homeowners Assn. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 515, 523, 263 Cal. Rptr. 753

[15] Statutes of Limitation

Neither Penal Code § 802(a) (imposing, with specified exceptions, one-year limitation on prosecution of offense not punishable by death or imprisonment in state prison) nor Code Civ. Proc. § 340(2) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 340(b)] (imposing one-year limitation on action on statute for forfeiture or penalty to people of California) as applying to contempt proceeding by Workers' Compensation Appeals Board against medical doctor for willful violation of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10606 (specifying required contents of medical reports submitted in workers' compensation cases), when alleged contemptuous acts could easily have had continuously operating effect until well into one-year period before contempt proceedings were instituted; whether appeals board loses jurisdiction of proceeding by passage of time as question of fact dependent on whether delay in prosecution was unreasonable and to contemner's prejudice, and contemner as having burden of proving by preponderance of evidence affirmative defense based on statute of limitations. Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 156, 164-167, 259 Cal. Rptr. 414

Proc. § 1211(a)*); facts as required to be stated with sufficient particularity to demonstrate on its face without aid of speculation that conduct constituted a legal contempt; evidence, findings, and judgment as all construed in favor of contemnor; however, all that is required as that order be made reciting facts, adjudging person guilty, and prescribing punishment. *McCann v. [b] Determining Whether Conduct Constitutes One or More Contempts

Contempt committed in immediate view and presence of court or judge at chambers, known as direct contempt, may be treated summarily under Code Civ. Proc. § 1211. Arthur v. Superior Court (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 404, 407, 42 Cal. Rptr. 441, 398 P.2d 777

Crucial question in determining whether separate adjudications of contempt are proper is whether separate adjudications were based on separate insults to authority of court, not whether insults happened to occur on same or different days. Conn v. Superior Court (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 774, 786, 242 Cal. Rptr. 148

Due process requirements are not satisfied when alleged contemner, who failed to make scheduled court appearance on behalf of client, was not advised by court of specific charge or that court was contemplating contempt order. *In re Baroldi (1987) 189 Cal. [c] Contempt Order

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a), a direct contempt order may be summary in nature; it need only recite the facts showing that the person proceeded against engaged in conduct constituting contempt and that the conduct occurred in the court's or judge's immediate view and presence, recite further that the person is thereby adjudged guilty of contempt, and prescribe the punishment. Boysaw v. Superior Court (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 215, 220-221, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531, 999 P.2d 748

The facts recited in order of direct contempt must be sufficiently detailed to show, on their face, that the conduct constituted a legal contempt; if the conduct is not so outrageous as to be immediately recognized as an act of contempt, the order must recite facts showing that the court or judge warned the person that further similar conduct would result in a citation for contempt, and the person nevertheless persisted in the conduct; if an adjudication of contempt depends on the volume, accent, inflection, or tone of voice, or on manner, facial expression, or demeanor, the order of contempt must describe this conduct in detail. Boysaw v. Superior Court (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 215, 222-223, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531, 999 P.2d 748

Order as required to show, without aid of speculation, that contempt occurred; order as void if it falls to show on its face facts sufficient to constitute legal contempt. Chula v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 199, 203, 18 Cal. Rptr. 507, 368 P.2d 107

Contempt order that does not identify provision alleged contemner violated does not meet standards for contempt orders. Runnion v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 277, 287, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 105

Order of contempt as void when petitioner was denied due process in that he was not confronted with charge against him and order of contempt is jurisdictionally defective. In re Baroldi (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 101, 111, 234 Cal. Rptr. 286 , disapproved on another ground in Boysaw v. Superior Court (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 215, 221, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531, 999 P.2d 748

Order as permitted but not required to recite circumstances in which contemptuous remark made. In re Rosen (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 71, 73, 106 Cal. Rptr. 757 , disapproved on another ground in Boysaw v. Superior Court (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 215, 221, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531, 999 P.2d 748

Order reciting that attorney was absent when ordered to appear, that he knew he was required to appear, that he had the ability to appear, that he willfullyneglected to appear, and that explanation offered by him to excuse his absence was wholly unsatisfactory as presenting facts sufficient to show contempt actually occurred. In re Karpf (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 355, 364, 88 Cal. Rptr. 895

[d] Timing

Judge as having authority to summarily convict and sentence contemners for their acts of contempt as the contemptuous acts occur. In re Siegel (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 843, 845, 120 Cal. Rptr. 8

Trial judge as permitted to conduct direct contempt proceedings in chambers following allegedly contemptuous conduct. Hawk v. Superior Court (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 108, 131, 116 Cal. Rptr. 713 , cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1012 (1975)

Trial court's failure to amend affidavit pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5 to include contempt charges on date not previously mentioned in affidavit when evidence of acts occurring on that date were presented as depriving defendants of clear notice that they were being charged with criminal conduct and constituting violation of their constitutional right to due process. Reliable Enterprises, Inc. v. Superior Court (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 604, 619-620, 204 Cal. Rptr. 786 (disapproved on another point in *Mitchell v. Superior Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 1230, 1248 n.13, 265 Cal. [4] Punishment or Coercion of Contemner

[a] Coercion of Civil Contemner

Whether contempt is civil or criminal as depending on whether punishment imposed is remedial and for benefit of complainant or punitive to vindicate authority of court, and this in turn as depending on nature of punishment; if punishment is a sentence of imprisonment, it is remedial if contemner stands committed unless and until he or she performs affirmative act required by court's order; when penalty imposed for contempt is remedial, conditional nature of punishment as rendering relief civil in nature because contemner can end sentence, or suspended sentence, and discharge himself or herself at any moment by doing what he or she had previously refusedto do. Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 631-633, 637 n.8, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721

Coercion for civil contempt when act, of which omission to perform constitutes contempt, still possible for contemner to perform. Morelli v. Superior Court (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 328, 332, 82 Cal. Rptr. 375, 461 P.2d 655

Preclusion of multiple punishments embodied in Penal Code § 654 as applicable to punishments for contempt under Code Civ. Proc. § 1218; fines imposed on plaintiff and his attorney for each day that order was not obeyed as exceeding trial court's jurisdiction because plaintiff and his attorney were guilty of only one act of contempt each. Conn v. Superior Court (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 774, 786-788, 242 Cal. Rptr. 148 (also noting that then operative version of Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5 allows courts greater latitude in imposing sanctions under such circumstances)

Commitment under Code Civ. Proc. § 1219 as provisional since contemner is imprisoned until he or she performs act which is in his or her power to perform. Lake County v. Superior Court (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 815, 817, 136 Cal. Rptr. 830

Contempt order stating that contemner had ability to comply with restraining order and injunction as void for failing to include finding that act to be performed was within power of contemner to perform. Lake County v. Superior Court (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 815, 817, 136 Cal. Rptr. 830

[b] Punishment of Criminal Contemner

Whether contempt is civil or criminal as depending on whether punishment imposed is remedial and for benefit of complainant or punitive to vindicate authority of court, and this in turn as depending on nature of punishment; if punishment is a sentence of imprisonment, it is punitive if sentence is limited to imprisonment for definite period. Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 631-632, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721

[1] Availability of Writs

[a] In General

Rptr. 121, 514 P.2d 1201* ; *In re Smith (1976) 65 Cal. App. 3d 291, 296, 135 Cal. Rptr. 5 , disapproved on another ground in Boysaw v. Superior Court (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 215, 221, 96 Cal. Habeas corpus as suitable remedy to review contempt citation; prohibition as also appropriate to prevent imposition of unauthorized discovery sanctions; but when sanction imposed for contempt for refusing to answer interrogatories is imprisonment, habeas corpus as correct vehicle to review court order. In re De La Parra (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 139, 141, 228 Cal. Rptr. 864

Writ of habeas corpus as proper procedure to challenge conviction of criminal contempt. In re Abrams (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 685, 687, 166 Cal. Rptr. 749

[b] Imprisonment as Condition for Writ of Habeas Corpus

Writ of habeas corpus as available when contemner seeks release from custody for contempt for failure to pay spousal

[d] When Judicial Act Performed After Petition Made

Superior Court (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 872, 878, 27 Cal. Rptr. 383*

[2] Jurisdictional Defects

Direct contempt order was not defective for failing to state that conduct occurred "in immediate view and presence" of the court; statutory formula need not be recited when order otherwise recites facts showing clearly that this is what occurred. Boysaw v. Superior Court (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 215, 220-221, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531, 999 P.2d 748

Direct contempt order was defective when facts described conduct that was not so outrageous as to be immediately recognized as an act of contempt; in such a case the court must warn person proceeded against that further similar conduct will result in a citation for contempt, and the order must show that this warning was given but disregarded by that person; if an adjudication of contempt depends on the volume, accent, inflection, or tone of voice, or on manner, facial expression, or demeanor, the order of contempt must describe this conduct in detail. Boysaw v. Superior Court (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 215, 222-223, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531, 999 P.2d 748

Writ as available when trial court finds person guilty of contempt on affidavit which is fatally defective for failure to allege contemner's notice or knowledge of order alleged to have been disobeyed. Phillips v. Superior Court (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 256, 257, 137 P.2d 838 (decided prior to enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5); In re Liu (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 135, 140, 78 Cal. Rptr. 85 (decided prior to enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5)

Fact that alleged contemner is party to litigation as not sufficient to charge him or her with knowledge of order made in connection with litigation. Phillips v. Superior Court of Kern County (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 256, 258, 137 P.2d 838

To have valid contempt adjudication, trial court as required to observe procedures and requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1211 et seq.; trial court's order in civil action ordering contemner imprisoned for 15 days on his refusal to answer interrogatories as unwarranted and jurisdictionally defective when it did not comply with those procedures and requirements. In re De La Parra (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 139, 144, 228 Cal. Rptr. 864

Writ as available when order which contemner was alleged to have violated is void on its face. Mitchell v. Superior Court (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 759, 762, 104 Cal. Rptr. 921

Writ as available when contemner found in contempt for nonappearance when contemner's attorney appeared for him or her. Morelli v. Superior Court (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 262, 270, 68 Cal. Rptr. 572

Writ as available when no order or judgment rendered or entered for which contemner could be found in contempt. Silvagni v. Superior Court (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 287, 290, 321 P.2d 15

Writs of review and prohibition as jurisdictional writs. Mitchell v. Superior Court (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 759, 762,

[4] Order of Contempt Not Appealable

Contempt order as permitted to be reviewed by petition for writ of prohibition. Safer v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 230, 235, 124 Cal. Rptr. 174, 540 P.2d 14

[5] Construction of Order on Review

[a] In General

Reviewing court as not indulging in presumptions as to regularity, validity, or sufficiency of contempt proceedings. In re Blaze (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 210, 211, 76 Cal. Rptr. 551 ; In re Circosta (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 777, 785, 33 Cal. Rptr. 514

[b] Writ of Habeas Corpus

Petition for writ of habeas corpus as seeking release from custody. In re Circosta (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 777, 779, 33 Cal. Rptr. 514

[c] Writ of Prohibition

Writ of prohibition as functioning to restrain acts taken in excess of court's jurisdiction. Safer v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 230, 242, 124 Cal. Rptr. 174, 540 P.2d 14

App. 2d 262, 268, 68 Cal. Rptr. 572*

[6] Scope of Review

Although reviewing court looks to entire record of court below, power to weigh evidence as resting solely with trial court. In re Buckley (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 237, 247, 110 Cal. Rptr. 121, 514 P.2d 1201

Reviewing court as considering evidence in contempt proceeding only for purpose of ascertaining whether there was any substantial evidence before trial court to sustain its jurisdiction. Chula v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 199, 204, 18 Cal. Rptr. 507, 368 P.2d 107

Order of contempt proper when substantial evidence supports trial court's finding that alleged contemner was ordered to appear personally, had the ability to appear at the ordered place and time, and failed to appear without sufficient reason or excuse. Chula v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 199, 206, 18 Cal. Rptr. 507, 368 P.2d 107

Scope of review on application for writ of review or prohibition as identical. Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 290, 109 P.2d 942

Because power to weigh evidence rests exclusively with trial court, reviewing court's responsibility on review of contempt judgment as being merely to ascertain whether there existed any substantial evidence to sustain jurisdiction of trial court. Conn v. Superior Court (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 774, 784, 242 Cal. Rptr. 148

Judicial review of evidence as limited to determination of whether there is any substantial evidence to sustain jurisdiction of trial court; power to weigh evidence as resting with trial court. In re Holmes (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 934, 941, 193 Cal. Rptr. 790

Reviewing court as looking to entire record of court below. In re Circosta (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 777, 784, 33 Cal. Rptr. 514

Scope of review as: (1) whether act or omission charged against contemner confers court with jurisdiction to adjudicate alleged contempt and (2) whether jurisdictional act or omission is supported by evidence. In re Carvallo (1973) 29 Cal. App. 3d 983, 986, 105 Cal. Rptr. 925

Scope of review on application for writ. In re Carvallo (1973) 29 Cal. App. 3d 983, 986, 105 Cal. Rptr. 925

Scope of review on application for writ of review or habeas corpus as identical. In re Karpf (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 355, 364, 88 Cal. Rptr. 895 ; In re Circosta (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 777, 785, 33 Cal. Rptr. 514

[2] Use of Form

The declaration in [1], above [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], is for use in initiating a contempt proceeding when the contempt charged is one not committed in the immediate view and presence of the court or judge at chambers [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a)] and consists of a violation of a court order, such as an order or judgment which is in the nature of an injunction [see Vanderstok v. Bank of America (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 731, 734, 105 Cal. Rptr. 699] .

Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(b) provides that in family law matters, filing of the Judicial Council form entitled "Order to Show Cause and Affidavit for Contempt (Family Law)" [see Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-410] constitutes compliance with the affidavit requirement of Code Civ. Proc. § 1211. For a reproduction of the Judicial Council form, as well as a discussion of contempt in connection with family law proceedings, see Ch. 258, Family Law Enforcement .

[3] Allegations

The declaration alleges the capacity of the declarant (Paragraph 1), the making of the order alleged to be violated (Paragraph 2), [In re Liu (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 135, 140, 78 Cal. Rptr. 85 (making of order as one of facts essential to establish jurisdiction for contempt proceeding)], and that the order alleged to be violated was written or entered in the court's minutes (Paragraph 3), [see Ketscher v. Superior Court (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 601, 604-605, 88 Cal. Rptr. 357] .

Because an alleged contemner's notice or knowledge of the order he or she is charged with contempt for violating is a jurisdictional prerequisite to the validity of a contempt order [Freeman v. Superior Court (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 533, 537, 282 P.2d 857] , an affidavit (declaration) must also allege that the accused contemner had notice or knowledge of the existence of the order at the time he or she is alleged to have violated it. Thus, an affidavit (declaration) should allege that the accused contemner was served with notice of the order alleged to be violated, that he or she had actual knowledge of its terms, or that he or she was present in court when it was made (Paragraph 4) [see Phillips v. Superior Court (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 256, 257-258, 137 P.2d 838] .

An affidavit (declaration) must allege that the accused contemner had the ability to comply with the order alleged to be violated [In re Liu (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 135, 140, 78 Cal. Rptr. 85 (ability to comply as one of facts essential to establish jurisdiction for contempt proceeding)] at the time he or she is alleged to have violated it (Paragraph 5) [see Sorell v. Superior Court (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 157, 163, 56 Cal. Rptr. 222] . In addition, the declaration alleges that the order alleged to be violated has remained in full force and effect (Paragraph 6).

Finally, the affidavit (declaration) must allege that the accused contemner failed to comply with the order [In re Rose (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 299, 304, 202 P.2d 1064] or injunction [see People v. Saffel (1946) 168 P.2d 497] or that the accused contemner voluntarily disabled himself or herself from ability to comply with the order (Paragraph 7) [Van Hoosear v. Railroad Comm'n (1922) 189 Cal. 228, 233, 207 P. 903] and that such disobedience was willful (Paragraph 8) [In re Liu (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 135, 140, 78 Cal. Rptr. 85 (willful disobedience or order as one of facts essential to establish jurisdiction for contempt proceeding); Warner v. Superior Court (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 821, 824, 826, 273 P.2d 89 (affidavit fatally defective for failure to allege willfulness)]. However, the paragraph describing the contemner's willfulness in his or her noncompliance need not also allege the contemner's specific wrongful intent unless the question of intent goes to the gravamen of the contempt alleged to be committed [see In re Jasper (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 985, 988, 106 Cal. Rptr. 754 (intent a factor when contempt is act of doubtful propriety, such as carrying concealed knife into courtroom)].

[4] Jurisdiction and Venue

A civil contempt proceeding is brought before the court in which the proceeding giving rise to the alleged contempt is pending [Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 370, 372, 72 Cal. Rptr. 177 (quoting Bridges v. Superior Court (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 464, 478, 94 P.2d 983 , reversed on other grounds, Bridges v. California (1941) 314 U.S. 252, 62 S. Ct. 190, 86 L. Ed. 192)].

[5] Declaration in Lieu of Affidavit

Although Code Civ. Proc. § 1211 authorizes an affidavit to initiate a contempt proceeding, a declaration under penalty of perjury is a satisfactorysubstitute for an affidavit [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5] in a contempt proceeding [In re Morelli (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 819, 830, 91 Cal. Rptr. 72 (elements of contempt derived from declaration as meeting requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1211)]. When a contempt proceeding is initiated by referees, arbitrators, or other judicial officers, they may submit a statement of facts in lieu of an affidavit [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a)].

[2] Use of Form

The form of order in [1], above, to show cause is for use in bringing a person charged with an indirect contempt before the court to answer to the charge [Code Civ. Proc. § 1212]. The order must be accompanied by an affidavit, or declaration [see § 135.80], stating the facts constituting the alleged contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211].

[3] Use of Order to Show Cause

An order to show cause [Code Civ. Proc. § 1212] is issued by the court after the initiating affidavit (declaration) is presented to the court [Arthur v. Superior Court (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 404, 408, 42 Cal. Rptr. 441, 398 P.2d 777] . It is customary to issue the order to show cause in order to give the accused contemner notice of the charge of contempt and an opportunity to refute the charge before issuing a warrant for his or her arrest or commitment to custody [see In re Rose (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 299, 304-305, 202 P.2d 1064] . Unless the cited person has concealed himself or herself from the court, he or she must be personally served with the order to show cause and the supporting affidavit; otherwise, the court lacks jurisdiction to proceed [Cedars-Sinai Imaging Med. Group v. Superior Court (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1281, 1286-1287, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320 (attorney's waiver, at hearing, of right to receive written notice of court's ruling or of further hearing date does not waive client's right to be personally served with order to show cause prior to hearing)].

Ordinarily, it is only on disobedience of an order to show cause that a warrant of attachment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1212; § 135.83] issues [Morelli v. Superior Court (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 328, 330, 82 Cal. Rptr. 375, 461 P.2d 655] .

[2] Use of Form

The form of order in [1], above, to show cause is for use in bringing a person charged with an indirect contempt before the court to answer to the charge [Code Civ. Proc. § 1212], with a provision for service on the alleged contemner's attorney [see Kroneberger v. Superior Court (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 206, 210, 16 Cal. Rptr. 339 (court as permitted to direct service to alleged contemner's attorney when alleged contemner concealed himself or herself to avoid service or out of state for that purpose)]. The order to show cause must be accompanied by an affidavit, or declaration [see § 135.80], stating the facts constituting the alleged contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211].

[3] Service on Attorney of Alleged Contemner

Ordinarily, when a party has an attorney of record in an action or proceeding, the service of papers, when required, must be on the attorneyrather than the party. However, this does not apply to papers which bring the party into contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1015; Cedars-Sinai Imaging Med. Group v. Superior Court (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1281, 1286-1287, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320 (except when citee has concealed himself or herself from court, court lacks jurisdiction unless citee has been personally served with order to show cause and supporting affidavit)]. Similarly, the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010-1015 (notices, filing, and service of papers) are made inapplicable to papers bringing a party into contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1016]. Notwithstanding these provisions, a court may direct service to be made on the attorney of record for an alleged contemner when it appears that the alleged contemner is concealing himself or herself to avoid service of the order to show cause or is remaining outside the state for that purpose [Kroneberger v. Superior Court (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 206, 210, 16 Cal. Rptr. 339 (annulling, however, order of contempt where neither defendant nor defendant's attorney of record served with order to show cause with respect to an alleged failure to comply with a custody order by removing child from state)].

Ordinarily, it is only on disobedience of an order to show cause that a civil bench warrant issues [see Morelli v. Superior Court (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 328 330, 82 Cal. Rptr. 375, 461 P.2d 655 (trial court issuing order to show cause why accused contemner should not be held in contempt for failure to obey subpoena duces tecum to appear for deposition and subsequently issuing bench warrant, with bail fixed at $500, for failure of accused contemner to appear at hearing on order to show cause)].

[2] Use of Form

This form of a contempt order is for use in an indirect contempt proceeding in which the contemner is found guilty of a contempt and either punished for the contempt [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(a)] or, if the contempt consists of an omission to perform an act which is still in the contemner's power to perform, imprisoned until he or she performs the act [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1219]. With appropriate modifications, this form may be used as a contempt order in a direct contempt proceeding [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a)].

The form contains an optional paragraph ordering the defendant or respondent to pay a sum for reasonable attorney's fees and costs to the party initiating the contempt proceeding [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(a); see also § 135.33[3]].

[3] Requirements of Order of Contempt

An indirect contempt order must state whether or not the person proceeded against is guilty of the contempt charged [

Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(a)]. An order embodying a judgment of indirect contempt should also recite with particularity the findings respective to each charged offense [see Moss v. Superior Court (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 396, 404 n.3, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215, 950 P.2d 59 and discussion in § 135.32[13]].

In addition, the order of contempt must state the fine, imprisonment, or both [Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(a); see discussion in § 135.33]. A contempt order imposing coercive punishment under Code Civ. Proc. § 1219 must specify the act to be performed and must include a finding that that act is within the power of the contemner to perform [County of Lake v. Superior Court (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 815, 817, 136 Cal. Rptr. 830 ; see discussion in § 135.33[2]].

[Thereafter, the Honorable _____ (name), Judge, ordered a stay of execution until _____ [date], at _____ [time], and released petitioner (on his/her own recognizance) until that date.]

7. The respondent court exceeded its jurisdiction in adjudging petitioner in contempt of court in that _____ [specify, e.g., the order petitioner is alleged to have violated is void on its face as directly contrary to statutory authority in that the order alleged to be violated is precluded by the partner's adverse claim to the assets].

8. Petitioner has no right of appeal from the order of contempt rendered by respondent court in that Section 1222 of the Code of Civil Procedure provides that orders or judgments of contempt are final and conclusive.

9. Petitioner has no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy, other than this proceeding for a writ of review, by reason of the foregoing lack of right to appeal from an order of contempt [and in that _____ (state any additional facts restricting petitioner's remedy)].

10. Enforcement of the order of contempt will require petitioner to _____ [show effect of order of contempt on petitioner's legal rights and obligations, e.g., submit to imprisonment or pay a fine of $500] to petitioner's injury and detriment.

[11. This petition is made to this court in the first instance, rather than to the _____ (Superior Court, _____ County or Court of Appeal, _____ Appellate Division) of the State of California, for the following reason(s): _____ (as required by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a)(1) , explain why reviewing court should issue writ as original matter).]

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays:

1. That this court issue a writ of review to respondent court [, and to the Honorable _____ (name), Judge,] commanding that court to certify fully to this court, at a specified time and place, a transcript of the records and proceedings in the above-entitled contempt matter adjudging petitioner guilty of contempt of court and _____ [sentencing him/her to imprisonment or fining him/her $500], so that the same may be inquired into and determined by this court;

2. That the foregoing cause be heard and fully considered by this court and that the order of contempt made by the Honorable _____ [name], Judge, for that court, on _____ [date], be annulled and set aside;

3. That this court issue an order requiring respondent to desist and refrain from further proceedings in the above-entitled contempt matter during the pendency of this proceeding;

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Source of Form

The fact situation suggested in the form in [1], above, is taken from the opinion in Mitchell v. Superior Court (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 759, 104 Cal. Rptr. 921 .

[3] Use of Form

The form of petition [Code Civ. Proc. § 1069] in [1], above, is for use in seeking a writ of review in the appellate division of a superior court, a court of appeal, or the Supreme Court to review the exercise of judicial functions by an inferior tribunal, board, or officer [Code Civ. Proc. § 1068].

More specifically, it seeks a review of a lower court's order holding the petitioner in contempt of court for violating an order of the lower court [see Mitchell v. Superior Court (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 759, 762, 104 Cal. Rptr. 921 (writ of review as proper when lower tribunal acts in excess of its jurisdiction)].

[4] Allegations

The petition alleges:

- The capacity of the petitioner and that the petitioner is the party beneficially interested (Paragraph 1) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1069].

- The identity and capacity of respondent and any real parties in interest (Paragraphs 2, 3).

- The exercise of judicial functions by a lower tribunal (Paragraphs 4, 5) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1068].

- The issuance of an order to show cause re contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1212], a hearing on the alleged contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1217], a determination that the petitioner is guilty of contempt, and the imposition of punishment on the petitioner (Paragraph 6) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1218].

- That the inferior tribunal exceeded its jurisdiction in adjudging petitioner in contempt (Paragraph 7) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1068].

- That petitioner is without the right of appeal (Paragraph 8) [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1068, 1222].

- That petitioner has no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy other than by writ of review (Paragraph 9) [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1068, 1222].

- That petitioner's interest will be directly affected by the proceeding (Paragraph 10).

The foregoing petition also includes an optional allegation for use when the petition might lawfully have been made to a lower court in the first instance (Paragraph 11) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a)(1)].

[5] Verification

A petition to a reviewing court for a writ of review must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 1069; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a)(4)]. In addition, the petition must be accompanied by proof of service of a copy of the petition on the respondent and any real party in interest named in the petition [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107].

[6] Supporting Memorandum

A supporting memorandum customarily accompanies a petition filed in a superiorcourt, although it does not appear to be expressly required by statute or court rule [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(a) (defining law and motion proceedings), 3.1113 (generally requiring memorandum in support of noticed motion)].

[7] Additional Requirements

Any writ petition seeking review of a trial court's ruling must be accompanied by a record adequate to permit review, including (1) copies of the ruling from which the petition seeks relief, (2) copies of all documents and exhibits submitted to the trial court supporting and opposing the petitioner's position, and (3) any other documents or portions of documents submitted to the trial court that are necessary for a complete understanding of the case and the ruling under review [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(b)(1)(A)-(C); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(c) (format for documents and exhibits)]. In exigent circumstances, these documents may be omitted if counsel files a declaration explaining the urgency and the circumstances making the documents unavailable and fairly summarizing their substance [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(b)(2)]. The record must also include a reporter's transcript of the oral proceedings that resulted in the ruling under review [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(b)(1)(D)]. If a reporter's transcript is unavailable, the record must include a declaration by counsel stating that a transcript has been ordered and is expected to be filed on a certain date, or if no transcript is available, explaining its unavailability and fairly summarizing the proceedings, including the parties' arguments and any statement by the court supporting its ruling [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(b)(3)]. If the petitioner does not submit the required record or explanations, or does not present facts sufficient to excuse the failure to submit them, the court may summarily deny the petition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(b)(4)].

The petition must also be accompanied by a Certificate of Interested Entities or Persons [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.488(b), (c); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.208]. If the petitioner is an entity, that party's certificate must list any other entity or person the petitioner knows has an ownership interest of 10 percent or more in the petitioner. [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.208(e)(1)]. An "entity" for this purpose is a corporation, partnership, firm, or other association, but it does not include a governmental entity or its agencies or a natural person [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.208(c)(2)]. If the petitioner knows of any other person or entity that has a financial or other interest in the outcome of the proceeding that the petitioner reasonably believes the justices of the appellate court should consider in determining whether to disqualify themselves under the Code of Judicial Ethics, the petitioner's certificate must list that entity or person and identify the nature of the interest of the person or entity [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.208(e)(2)]. If the petitioner knows of no entity or person that must be listed, the petitioner must so state in the certificate [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.208(e)(3)]. A failure to file the certificate may result in the striking of the petition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.488(d)(2); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.488(d)(1) (if certificate does not accompany petition, clerk will notify petitioner that certificate must be filed)].

If the petition requests a temporary stay, the cover of the document must prominently display the notice "STAY REQUESTED" and identify the nature and date of the proceeding or act sought to be stayed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.116(a), 8.486(a)(7)]. The petition must also (1) identify the trial court and department involved, (2) specify the name and telephone number of the trial judge whose order the request seeks to stay, and (3) explain the urgency [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.116(a), 8.486(a)(7)]. If the petitioner fails to comply with these requirements, the reviewing court may decline to consider the request for a stay [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.116(c)].

[8] Proof of Service

When the petition is filed in an appellate court, it must be accompanied by proof of service of copies of the petition and accompanying points and authorities on the respondent and any real party in interest named in the petition, except that only the petition need be served on a respondent that is the superior court or a judge of that court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107; [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(e)].

The proof of service must name each party represented by each attorney served [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.25(a)(2)]. A petition accompanied by a defective proof of service will be filed, but if a proper proof of service is not filed within five days, the court may strike the petition or impose a lesser sanction. However, a court may, in its discretion and for good cause, grant the petition ex parte without notice or service of the petition on the respondent and any real party in interest [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.486(e), 8.487(a)(4)].

The fact situation suggested in the form in [1], above, is taken from the opinion in Silvagni v. Superior Court (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 287, 321 P.2d 15 .

[3] Use of Form

The petition in [1], above, is for use in seeking a writ of prohibition in the appellate division of a superior court, court of appeal, or the Supreme Court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1103] to arrest contempt proceedings of a court taken in excess of its jurisdiction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1102]. More specifically, it may be used to arrest a lower court's proceedings in contempt against a petitioner accused of disobeying a court order when that order was not rendered or entered in judgment [Silvagni v. Superior Court (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 287, 290, 321 P.2d 15] .

[4] Allegations

The foregoing petition alleges:

- That the petitioner is the party beneficially interested (Paragraph 1) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1103].
- The identity and capacity of respondent and any real parties in interest (Paragraphs 2, 3).
- The exercise of judicial functions by a lower tribunal (Paragraphs 4, 5) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1102].

- That petitioner has no statutory right of appeal (Paragraph 8).
- That petitioner has no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy other than by writ of prohibition (Paragraph 9) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1103].

[5] Verification

A petition to a reviewing court for a writ of prohibition must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 1103; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a)(4)]. In addition, the petition must be accompanied by proof of service of a copy of the petition on the respondent and any real party in interest named in the petition [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107].

[6] Supporting Memorandum

A supporting memorandum also customarily accompanies a petition filed in superior court, although it does not appear to be expressly required by statute or court rule [but see Code Civ. Proc. § 1090 (made applicable to writ of prohibition by Code Civ. Proc. § 1105, and referring to the proceeding as a "motion") and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113 (requiring memorandum in support of noticed motion)].

[7] Additional Requirements

Any writ petition seeking review of a trial court's ruling must be accompanied by a record adequate to permit review, including (1) copies of the ruling from which the petition seeks relief, (2) copies of all documents and exhibits submitted to the trial court supporting and opposing the petitioner's position, and (3) any other documents or portions of documents submitted to the trial court that are necessary for a complete understanding of the case and the ruling under review [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(b)(1)(A)-(C); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(c) (format for documents and exhibits)]. If the petitioner does not submit the required record or explanations, or does not present facts sufficient to excuse the failure to submit them, the court may summarily deny the petition [*Cal. If the petitioner is an entity, that party's certificate must list any other entity or person the petitioner knows has an ownership interest of 10 percent or more in the petitioner) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.208(e)(2)]. If the petitioner knows of no entity or person that must be listed, the petitioner must so state in the certificate [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.208(e)(3)]. A failure to file the certificate may result in the striking of the petition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.488(d)(2); *see Cal. [8] Proof of Service

When the petition is filed in an appellate court, it must be accompanied by proof of service of copies of the petition and accompanying points and authorities on the respondent and any real party in interest named in the petition, except that only the petition need be served on a respondent that is the superior court or a judge of that court [*Code Civ. § 135.92 Allegation for Use in Petition Seeking Relief From Contempt Proceedings--Petitioner's Knowledge of Order Alleged to Be Violated Not Shown

[1] FORM Allegation for Use in Petition Seeking Relief From Contempt Proceedings--Petitioner's Knowledge of Order Alleged to Be Violated Not Shown

The respondent court is without power to adjudge petitioner in contempt of court in that no evidence was introduced to show that petitioner _____ [had notice or knowledge of the order he/she is accused of violating or had actual knowledge of the terms of the order he/she is accused of violating or was present in court when the order he/she is accused of violating was made].

[2] Use of Form

The allegation in [1], above, is for use in a petition for a writ seeking relief from contempt proceedings when the petitioner's notice or knowledge of the order he or she is accused of violating [see Phillips v Superior Court (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 256, 257-258, 137 P.2d 838 (affidavit failing to allege that petitioner served with notice of order, had actual knowledge of its terms, or was present in court when it was made)] is not shown [see Freeman v. Superior Court (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 533, 537, 282 P.2d 857 (sufficiency of evidence to sustain contempt order)]. In an appropriate case, the allegation may be substituted for Paragraph 7 of the petition for writ of review in § 135.90. In addition, the allegation may be used in a petition for a writ of habeas corpus [see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus] or prohibition [see § 135.91].

[3] Insufficient Affidavits Not Fatally Defective

Formerly, affidavits, declarations, and statements were considered fatally defective for failure to state one or more of the jurisdictional facts necessary to sustain a contempt order [Freeman v. Superior Court (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 533, 537, 282 P.2d 857 (affidavit as fatally defective if it fails to allege accused contemner's notice or knowledge of order allegedly disobeyed at time he or she allegedly violated it)] or for other technicalities [Palm Springs Alpine Estates, Inc. v. Superior Court (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 883, 888, 63 Cal. Rptr. 618 (no verification of document purporting to be initiating affidavit)]. However, as a result of the enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5 in 1970, the foregoing rule is abrogated. Thus, insufficient or defective affidavits, declarations, and statements are no longer considered fatally defective because they can be amended to conform to proof by the trial court at the hearing on the contempt charge [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5(a)] or ordered or permitted to be amended by a court at any stage of the proceedings [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5(b); see Mossman v. Superior Court (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 706, 710, 99 Cal. Rptr. 638] . Courts now have greater flexibility in contempt proceedings with respect to the sufficiency of affidavits, declarations, and statements under Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5 than under the former rule [see Mossman v. Superior Court (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 706, 713, 99 Cal. Rptr. 638 (court of appeal as issuing writ of prohibition to restrain trial court from further proceedings against contemner on basis of insufficient initiating affidavit and as applying Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5(b) to permit amendment of such affidavit)].

The respondent court is without power to adjudge petitioner in contempt of court in that no evidence was introduced to show that petitioner had the present ability to perform the act he/she was ordered to perform by the respondent court in its above-described order of _____ [date].

[2] Use of Form

In an appropriate case, the allegation may be substituted for Paragraph 7 of the petition for writ of review in § 135.90. 1. On or about _____ [date], in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] the above-entitled court, the Honorable _____[name], Judge, summarily made an order finding the petitioner in contempt of court for _____ [specify] [and sentencing him/her to _____ (number) days imprisonment].

2. The above-entitled court exceeded its jurisdiction in making the order of contempt against petitioner in that the order made fails to _____ [recite facts showing, with sufficient particularity, that the conduct of petitioner constitutes a legal contempt and/or recite that, or recite facts showing that, the conduct of petitioner occurred in the immediate view and presence of the court].

[2] Use of Form

The allegations in [1], above, are for use in a petition for a writ seeking relief from contempt proceedings when a lower court makes an order of direct contempt in a summary proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a)]. The ground for relief is that the order is defective in that it did not recite facts showing, with sufficient particularity, that the acts of the petitioner constituted a legal contempt, or that the order is defective because it failed either to state or recite facts showing that the acts of the petitioner occurred in the immediate view and presence of the court [*see Boysaw v. 1. On or about _____ [date], in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] the above-entitled court, the Honorable _____[name], Judge, issued an order to show cause on the basis of _____ [affidavits or declarations] submitted by petitioner directing _____ [name of alleged contemner] to appear at a hearing to determine whether or not he/she should be held in contempt of court for violating the order described above. At the hearing, the Honorable _____[name], Judge, declined to hear any evidence concerning the alleged contempt and rendered his/her decision that the above-entitled court had no jurisdiction to hear or determine the alleged contempt.

2. The above-entitled court exceeded its jurisdiction by refusing to hear and determine the contempt of court alleged in petitioner's _____ [affidavits or declarations].

3. Petitioner has no right of appeal from the order by which respondent court divested itself of jurisdiction to hear the contempt in that Section 1222 of the Code of Civil Procedure provides that orders or judgments of contempt are final and conclusive.

[2] Use of Form

The allegations in [1], above, are for use in a petition for a writ seeking reinstatement of contempt proceedings when a lower court wrongfully divests itself of jurisdiction to hear and determine an alleged contempt [*Taylor v. 1. On or about _____ [date], in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] the above-entitled court, the Honorable _____[name], Judge, issued an order to show cause directing petitioner to appear in person at a hearing to determine whether or not petitioner should be held in contempt of court for allegedly violating the order described above.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-136 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 136.10

§ 136.10 Governing Law

[1] Statutory Authority

Grounds for continuances and procedures to follow in motions for continuances are contained in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 139, 473(a)(2), 594a-596, 1024, 1054, and 1054.1. Code Civ. Proc. § 2024(f) [Code Civ. Proc. § 2024.060 operative July 1, 2005] states that an extension of time for discovery is not a ground for a continuance.

Separate grounds for continuances are described in case law.

Additional procedural requirements are stated in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(b), and local rules of court.

Several code sections govern continuances in specific types of cases. For a listing of these sections, see § 136.42.

[2] Local Rules of Court

Most trial courts have local rules governing continuances, when and before whom they may be requested, the grounds for continuance, and other requirements. Counsel should examine these rules carefully. Some rules state procedural requirements while others modify or clarify the grounds for granting continuances. Local rules of court with significant impact on continuances are discussed throughout this part.

[3] Trial Court Delay Reduction Act

Superior courts in all California counties are required to implement trial court delay reduction programs [Gov. Code §§ 68605.5, 68620]. In the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act, legislature has directed counties to adopt and utilize a firm, consistent policy against continuances, to the maximum extent possible and reasonable, in all stages of litigation [see Gov. Code § 68607(g)]. Despite this policy, the act does allow the parties to agree to a single continuance not to exceed 30 days. This agreement must be made within 30 days of the filing of the responsive pleadings, and is made by stipulation filed with the court [Gov. Code § 68616(d)].

Local rules may further regulate the procedure for obtaining stipulated continuances. For example, local rules may detail the procedure for seeking a stipulated continuance and limit the number of stipulated continuances that will be granted without appearance [see San Francisco Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 8.2(B) (continuances in law and motion matters)].

Other local rules may regulate continuances in specific situations [see, e.g., Alameda Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 3.170(b) (continuance of case management conference)].

For further coverage of the act and the local delay reduction rules, see Ch. 552, Trial Court Delay Reduction .

Chapter 136 CONTINUANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-136 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 136.11

§ 136.11 Nature of Continuances

A continuance is the postponement of a hearing or trial to a specified new date; some statutes use the term "postponement" instead of "continuance" [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 594a-596]. The continued or postponed case should be distinguished from the case which is dropped from the civil active list since the latter must repeat all trial setting procedures and the new trial date is uncertain [see Parker v. Dingman (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1018, 122 Cal. Rptr. 309 ; see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(a)]. In some situations, trial courts grant a stay which is like a continuance except a specific new trial date is not set [see discussion under § 136.24].

Chapter 136 CONTINUANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-136 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 136.12

§ 136.12 Source of Authority

The power to postpone for good cause the time of a hearing or trial is an integral part of a court's jurisdiction to hear and determine an action or proceeding [Curtis v. Underwood (1894) 101 Cal. 661, 669, 36 P. 110] . This power is independent from the rules of court which set out procedures for its exercise [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(b)] and statutory and case law which describe situations where exercise may be appropriate [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 594a-596].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 136.13 Discretionary Power

The decision of whether or not to grant a continuance is left to the trial court's discretion, even where statutory language seems to make postponement mandatory [Thurmond v. Superior Court (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 836, 838-840, 59 Cal. Rptr. 273, 427 P.2d 985] . This discretion has been described as a legal discretion, not capricious or arbitrary, but one controlled in its exercise by fixed legal principles [Kalmus v. Kalmus (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 405, 415, 230 P.2d 57] . In the absence of clear abuse, the trial court's determination of whether good cause for a continuance existed will not be disturbed by an appellate court [Lewis v. Neptune Society Corp. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 427, 429, 240 Cal. Rptr. 656] . Trial courts may be reversed for refusing to grant a continuance if their actions, however laudable as an effort to control the calendar, deny the party an opportunity to present his or her case fairly and fully [Hays v. Viscome (1953) 122 Cal. App. 2d 135, 140, 264 P.2d 173] .

As a practical matter the action of the trial court in granting or denying a continuance is almost always upheld on appeal although denial of a continuanceis occasionally held to be reversible error [see, e.g., Oak Knoll Broadcasting Corp. v. Hudgings (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 563, 565-566, 80 Cal. Rptr. 175 (denial of continuance upheld where unprepared witness placed on call after service of the subpoena); Hays v. Viscome (1953) 122 Cal. App. 2d 135, 140-141, 264 P.2d 173 (prejudicial error to deny continuance to call witness whom adverse party failed to call)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-136 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 136.14

§ 136.14 Continuances Disfavored

Under the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act, judges are required to adopt and utilize a firm, consistent policy against continuances, to the maximum extent possible and reasonable, in all stages of litigation [Gov. Code § 68607(g)].

To ensure the prompt disposition of civil cases, the dates assigned for a trial are firm; and all parties and their counsel must regard the date set for trial as certain [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(a)]. Although continuances of trials are disfavored, each request for a continuance must be considered on its own merits; and the court may grant a continuance only upon an affirmative showing of good cause requiring the continuance [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(b)]. Failure to consider all the facts and circumstances that are relevant to the determination, and overemphasis on the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act, is reversible error [Oliveros v. County of Los Angeles (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1389, 1398, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 638] . For discussion of the grounds constituting good cause, see § 136.17.

The earlier doctrine of liberality in the granting of continuances has been declared by the court of appeal to be unsupported by precedent and obsolete. The court characterized unnecessary continuances as wasteful, nonproductive, time-consuming, and a fertile ground for public criticism of the courts [County of San Bernardino v. Doria Mining & Engineering Corp. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 776, 781, 140 Cal. Rptr. 383] .

§ 136.15 Relationship to Dismissal Status

Before seeking continuance of a trial, counsel should consider the possible effects of an order granting continuance. Should the case be exempt from the case disposition time goals of the delay reduction act [see Cal. Rules Ct., Rule 3.714(c)], there is the possibility that the continuance may lead to involuntary dismissal for delay in prosecution. Repeated requests for continuances may result in discretionary dismissal on the court's own motion or on the motion of the defendant if the plaintiff fails to settle or bring the case to trial within two years after filing [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2)(B); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340]. Alternatively, mandatory dismissal may result if the plaintiff fails to bring the case to trial within five years after filing [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360; see Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 311, 331-332, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58 (prior law); see also Ch. 212, Dismissal]. If the facts of the situation or the practice of the court require counsel to put the case off calendar rather than request a continuance to a specified date, the consequences of a dismissal for delay in bringing the action to trial can be avoided if defendant waives the applicable statutory time requirement [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140; see Bank of America Nat'l Sav. & Trust Ass'n v. Superior Court (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 450, 452-453, 71 P.2d 296 (applying former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)].

§ 136.16 Costs

The trial court has discretion to impose, as a condition of granting a continuance, the payment of expenses occasioned by the postponement [Code Civ. Proc. § 1024; see DeCesare v. Lembert (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 20, 25-26, 192 Cal. Rptr. 354 (holding that "costs," under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1024 prior to 1986 amendment substituting "expenses," did not include attorney's fees or income lost because of the continuance, and questioning the result in McFaddin v. H.S. Crocker Co. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 585, 33 Cal. Rptr. 389 , insofar as attorney's fees were awarded)].

If the continuance was necessary because the court permitted an adverse party to amend a pleading or proceeding, the court may require, as a condition to the amendment, the payment of such costs as may be just [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(a)(2)]. The court need not limit its assessment of costs to those expenses ordinarily taxable after a case has been tried [McFaddin v. H.S. Crocker Co. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 585, 594-595, 33 Cal. Rptr. 389 (amount assessed to cover costs and counsel fees); Inman v. Fremont Medical Center (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 169, 172, 122 Cal. Rptr. 372 (continuance conditioned on costs of calling an entire jury panel)].

Courts have required the moving party to pay the following types of expenses: fees to jurors [Inman v. Fremont Medical Center (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 169, 172, 122 Cal. Rptr. 372] ; travel and lodging expenses [Wilkin v. Tadlock (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 156, 157-158, 241 P.2d 1066] ; and business expenses caused by postponement [Levine v. Pollack (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 129, 133-139, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 491] . However, courts may not require the payment of attorney's fees or lost income in exchange for a continuance or lost income [DeCesare v. Lembert (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 20, 25, 192 Cal. Rptr. 354] .

13-136 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 136.17

§ 136.17 Grounds for Granting Continuances

[1] Good Cause

Continuances in civil cases, whether before or during trial, should not be granted except upon an affirmative showing of good cause requiring the continuance [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(c)]. One element of good cause hasbeen described as necessity [County of San Bernardino v. Doria Mining & Engineering Corp. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 776, 781, 140 Cal. Rptr. 383] . Other elements often considered in determining whether good cause exists are the party's past record of diligence in proceeding with the case and the degree of prejudice to either side [see Carl v. Thomas (1931) 116 Cal. App. 294, 300-301, 2 P.2d 872] .

[2] Factors Considered

A party seeking a continuance must make the motion or application as soon as reasonably practical once the necessity for continuance is discovered [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(b)].

Circumstances that may indicate good cause include [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(c)]:

- The unavailability of an essential lay or expert witness because of death, illness, or other excusable circumstances;
- The unavailability of a party because of death, illness, or other excusable circumstances;
- The unavailability of trial counsel because of death, illness, or other excusable circumstances;
- The substitution of trial counsel, but only where there is an affirmative showing that the substitution is required in the interests of justice;
- The addition of a new party if:
    - the new party has not had a reasonable opportunity to conduct discovery and prepare for trial, or

- the other parties have not had a reasonable opportunity to conduct discovery and prepare for trial in regard to the new party's involvement in the case;

- A party's excused inability to obtain essential testimony, documents, or other material evidence despite diligent efforts; or

- A significant, unanticipated change in the status of the case as a result of which the case is not ready for trial.

In ruling on a motion or application for continuance, the court must consider all the facts and circumstances that are relevant to the determination, which include [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(d)]:

- The proximity of the trial date;

- Whether there was any previous continuance, extension of time, or delay of trial due to any party;

- The length of the continuance requested;

- The availability of alternative means to address the problem that gave rise to the motion or application for a continuance;

- The prejudice that parties or witnesses will suffer as a result of the continuance;

- If the case is entitled to a preferential trial setting, the reasons for that status and whether the need for a continuance outweighs the need to avoid delay;

- The court's calendar and the impact of granting a continuance on other pending trials;

- Whether trial counsel is engaged in another trial;

- Whether all parties have stipulated to a continuance;

- Whether the interests of justice are best served by a continuance, by the trial of the matter, or by imposing conditions on the continuance; and

- Any other fact or circumstance relevant to the fair determination of the motion or application.

Although several statutes describe situations which support a finding of good cause for a continuance, case law describes other sets of facts where continuances are deemed either justifiable or necessary [Taylor v. Bell (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 1008, 98 Cal. Rptr. 855 , cert. denied, 408 U.S. 923, 92 S. Ct. 2493, 33 L. Ed. 2d 334 (1972)] . These are discussed under §§ 136.19 -136.21 and § 136.24.

[3] Grounds Enumerated

Although the trial court may consider many factors in deciding whether to grant a continuance, certain situations occur frequently and represent the principal grounds for which continuances are usually granted. These principal grounds are discussed under §§ 136.18 -136.25.

13-136 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 136.18

§ 136.18 On Attorneys' Stipulation

The most commonly utilized ground for continuances is probably written agreement among the attorneys on a case. The Code of Civil Procedure provides that the court must postpone a trial, or the hearing of any motion or demurrer, for a period not to exceed 30 days, when all attorneys of record of parties who have appeared in the action agree in writing to such postponement [Code Civ. Proc. § 595.2]. This section has been construed as directory only; if it is impracticable to accommodate the parties, the court may refuse a continuance [Lorraine v. McComb (1934) 220 Cal. 753, 757, 32 P.2d 960 ; Pham v. Nguyen (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 11, 15, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422] . One court has suggested that although Code Civ. Proc. § 595.2 does not create any entitlement to a continuance, trial courts should be cognizant of the exigencies of actual practice and recognize that continuances play a legitimate role in keeping a law practice manageable [Pham v. Nguyen (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 11, 15-16, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422] . The court criticized County of San Bernardino v. Doria Mining & Engineering Corp. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 776, 140 Cal. Rptr. 383 , as going too far in suggesting that continuances be granted only grudgingly. The court recognized that balancing the competing goals of prompt disposition of civil cases and accomodating professional courtesy between opposing counsel may require some discernment by the trial court [Pham v. Nguyen (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 11, 16-17, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422 (holding, however, that trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying continuance)].

The Trial Court Delay Reduction Act also allows the parties to stipulate to a single continuance not to exceed 30 days [Gov. Code § 68616(d); for discussion, see § 136.10[3]]. Local rules may further regulate the procedure for obtaining stipulated continuances. For example, local rules may detail the procedure for seeking a stipulated continuance and limit the number of stipulated continuances that will be granted without appearance [see San Francisco Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 8.2(B) (continuances in law and motion matters)]. Even if the parties agree to a continuance by stipulation, the parties must still make a request for continuance by a noticed motion or an ex parte application under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1200 et seq ., and be supported by declarations [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(b)].

Moreover, Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(a) provides in part that a continuance before or during trial must not be granted except on an affirmative showing of good cause. Although this policy appears to contradict the express language of Code Civ. Proc. § 595.2 (discussed above), Code Civ. Proc. § 595.2 must also be interpreted consistently with the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act directive to the courts to adopt and utilize a firm, consistent policy against continuances, to the maximum extent possible and reasonable, in all stages of litigation [see Gov. Code § 68607(g)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-136 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 136.19

§ 136.19 Absent Witness or Evidence

[1] General Requirements

Unavailability of a material witness, or the absence of material evidence, may be proper grounds for a continuance [Jurado v. Toys "R" Us, Inc. (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1615, 1618, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 158 ; Cade v. Mid-City Hospital Corp. (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 589, 599-600, 119 Cal. Rptr. 571] . The requirements of materiality of the evidence and a showing of due diligence to obtain it are interdependent. In many cases which hold the evidence to be immaterial, the party has been exceedingly lax in bringing the case to trial [see Agnew v. Larson (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 444, 449-450, 17 Cal. Rptr. 538] . Conversely, if the evidence is of critical importance to the party's cause, the court may overlook a moderate failure of diligence [see Murr v. Murr (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 511, 521-522, 197 P.2d 369] .

A motion to postpone a trial on this ground must be made on affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) showing the materiality of the evidence expected to be obtained, and that due diligence has been used to procure it [Code Civ. Proc. § 595.4]. In the case of an absent witness, the court may require the moving party to state upon affidavit the substance of the testimony expected to be provided [see Code Civ. Proc. § 595.4].

A party opposing summary judgment does not have an automatic right for a second chance to prepare a responsive separate statement or present evidence; instead, the party must demonstrate a reason for the trial court to exercise its discretion, by offering a good faith showing by affidavit that a continuance is needed to obtain facts essential to justify opposition to the motion. Where no such affidavit is filed, and where defendants do not contend they needed a continuance to obtain essential facts, a trial court does not abuse its discretion by declining to grant a continuance [Oldcastle Precast, Inc. v. Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Co. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 554, 577, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 363].

[2] Materiality

To obtain a continuance on the ground of absent evidence, counsel must describe the desired evidence with particularity and state facts showing its materiality [Lea v. Shank (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 964, 977, 85 Cal. Rptr. 709 ; see Lewis v. Neptune Society Corp. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 427, 429, 240 Cal. Rptr. 656] .

An absent witness' testimony must be material in the sense that the evidence could not be proven in other ways [see

Oak Knoll Broadcasting Corp. v. Hudgings (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 563, 565-566, 80 Cal. Rptr. 175 (defining material witness)]. Thus, a witness whose testimony is cumulative or only collateral to the controverted issue, or who is needed only for impeachment purposes, is not a material witness for the purpose of granting a continuance [Lewis v. Neptune Society Corp. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 427, 429, 240 Cal. Rptr. 656 (cumulative testimony); Zlotoff v. Tucker (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 988, 993-994, 201 Cal. Rptr. 692 (collateral issue); In re Steiner (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 391, 395, 285 P.2d 972 (impeachment only)]. Similarly, an affidavit (declaration) that states evidence already testified to, or that fails to describe the evidence adequately, cannot support a continuance to produce material evidence [Stephens v. Aviation Research & Dev. Pub. Corp. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 349, 351, 52 Cal. Rptr. 322] .

[3] Diligence

Obtaining a continuance on the basis of absence of evidence also requires a showing of diligence [see Code Civ. Proc. § 595.4]. Counsel must state facts which support a claim of diligence [Lewis v. Neptune Society Corp. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 427, 430, 240 Cal. Rptr. 656] . In the case of a scheduled witness, counsel should show a substantial previous effort to procure the witness's attendance [see Marcucci v. Vowinckel (1913) 164 Cal. 693, 694-695, 130 P. 430 ; Jurado v. Toys "R" Us, Inc. (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1615, 1619, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 158 (denial of continuance reversed when one subpenaed medical expert left thecountry before trial and other had moved with no forwarding address); see also Kramer v. Kramer (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 727, 731, 17 Cal. Rptr. 461 (denial of continuance upheld where witness was on call, but not subpoenaed, and court refused to wait 15 minutes for witness to appear)]. If counsel cannot name the witness or state when the witness will be available, denial of a continuance is justified [Allstate Ins. Co. v. King (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 698, 703, 60 Cal. Rptr. 892] .

Diligence is also lacking when counsel requests time to obtain evidence, the need for which should have been anticipated before the trial [Estate of Smith (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 74, 81, 106 Cal. Rptr. 774, 507 P.2d 78] . Nevertheless, even the most diligent attorneys are not required to anticipate an unpredictable change of events at trial [Crosby v. Martinez (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 534, 541-542, 324 P.2d 26 (legal surprise as basis for continuance when evidence admitted in error and rebuttal witness not otherwise needed)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-136 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 136.20

§ 136.20 Absence of Party

[1] Good Cause Requirement

The mere absence of a party from a proceeding is not sufficient reason to compel a court to grant a continuance [Young v. Redman (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 827, 832, 128 Cal. Rptr. 86] . Thus, a party may bring an issue to trial or hearing and proceed with the case in the absence of the other party unless the court, for good cause, otherwise directs [Code Civ. Proc. § 594(a).] If the issue to be tried is an issue of fact, proof must first be made to the satisfaction of the court that the adverse party has had 15 days' notice for trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 594(a)].

Although illness of a party is considered good cause for granting a continuance, the illness should be supported, whenever possible, by an appropriate declaration of a medical doctor, and unless the illness is a result of an emergency occurring after the trial setting conference, the continuance should be requested by noticed motion with supporting documents [In re Marriage of Teegarden (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 401, 405-406, 226 Cal. Rptr. 417] .

To establish good cause, a party must prove more than serious illness or unavoidable absence [Nahas v. Nahhas (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 440, 442, 287 P.2d 381] . A party's illness does not mandate continuance if the trial court concludes that the party is able to attend trial [Lewis v. Neptune Society Corp. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 427, 430, 240 Cal. Rptr. 656] . The party's presence must be critically necessary to assist counsel or to testify [Sonstelie v. Bush (1929) 102 Cal. App. 396, 398-399, 283 P. 336] . In addition, the party should have been otherwise proceeding with the case diligently [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Taylor (1921) 52 Cal. App. 307, 310, 198 P. 651] . If the party already has testified or could testify by deposition, continuances on the basis of absence are generally denied (except a continuance for evidence-taking) [Young v. Redman (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 827, 831, 128 Cal. Rptr. 86 (voluntarily absent party had already given deposition); Russell v. Roberts (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 390, 397, 114 Cal. Rptr. 305 (party hospitalized but available for evidence-taking)].

[2] Military Service

[a] Servicemembers Civil Relief Act

The Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (formerly, the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act) [50 U.S.C. App., § 501 et seq.] provides that in any action or proceeding in which a person in the military service is involved, the court is required to grant a stay of proceedings for a minimum period of 90 days [50 U.S.C. App. §§ 521, 522.].

The 2003 revisions to the former Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act were made to ease the economic and legal burdens on military personnel called to active duty. The revisions significantly changed the law to provide that the stay is no longer discretionary, but is automatic.

If the defendant is in military service, or within 90 days after release from military service, and has received notice of an action or proceeding, the court must stay the action for a minimum of 90 days upon application of the service member or upon the court's own motion [50 U.S.C. App. § 522].

The application from the service member must consist of a letter or other communication stating why current military duty requirements materially affect the service member's ability to appear and when the service member will be able to appear. The application must include a letter or other communication from the service member's commanding officer stating that the service member is unable to appear due to military duty and is not authorized for leave at the time of the letter [50 U.S.C. App. § 522]. If the application meets these requirements, the 90-day stay must be granted.

In any civil action where the defendant does not make an appearance, the plaintiff is required to file an affidavit stating whether or not the defendant is in military service or stating that the plaintiff is unable to determine if the defendant is in military service. If it appears that the defendant is in military service, an attorney is appointed for the defendant. The stay must be granted upon motion of the attorney or upon the court's own motion, if the court determines that: (1) there may be a defense to the action and a defense cannot be presented without the presence of the service member/defendant; or (2) after due diligence, counsel has been unable to contact the service member/defendant or otherwise determine if a meritorious defense exists [50 U.S.C. App. § 521].

While the initial 90-day stay is essentially automatic, the granting of an additional stay is discretionary. A request for an additional stay may be denied ifthe servicemember's ability to appear and participate in the civil action is not adversely affected by his or her military duties [George P. v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 216, 224-225, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 919] .

Federal cases decided prior to the 2003 revisions to the Act may bear little weight because of the fundamental changes to the Act.

[b] State Protections for Reservists and Members of the National Guard

Effective June 21, 2002, California enacted a set of statutes similar to the former Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act to offer protections for servicemembers that are officers and enlisted members of the National Guard called or ordered into active state service by the Governor or President, and Reservists of the United States Military Reserve who have been called to full-time active duty [see Mil. & Vet. Code § 400 et seq.]. However, California law has not yet been revised to conform to the significant revisions made by the 2003 Servicemembers Civil Relief Act, which replaced the former Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act. Under the state statutes, at any stage in any action or proceeding in which a service member is involved, either as plaintiff or defendant, during the period of military service or within 60 days thereafter, the court may, in its discretion on its own motion, and must, on application to it by the service member or some person on his or her behalf, stay the action or proceeding unless, in the opinion of the court, the ability of the plaintiff to prosecute the action or the defendant to conduct his or her defense is not materially affected by reason of his or her military service [see Mil. & Vet. Code § 403(a)].

Any stay of any action may be ordered for the period of military service and three months thereafter or any part of that period, and subject to those terms as may be just; and if the service member is a codefendant with others the plaintiff may nevertheless, by leave of court, proceed against the others [see Mil. & Vet. Code § 403(d)].

[3] Accommodation Under the Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA)

Cal. Rules of Ct, Rule 1.100 provides a party who is a "person with disabilities" within the meaning of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), the California related statutes of Civ. Code § 51 et seq., or other applicable state and federal laws, may seek an "accommodation" which may include making reasonable modifications in policies, practices, and procedures of the court. One court opinion has provided the reach of this rule of court applies to a trial continuance where, in a marital dissolution proceeding, the trial court erred in denying a spouse's request for a continuance as an accommodation for disability because it was undisputed that the spouse, who had bipolar disorder, was disabled within the meaning of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), had been hospitalized on the day before trial was set to resume, was under a physician's care, and was self-representing; a trial continuance was a reasonable, if not necessary, accommodation, even though it meant a delay in conducting the trial, and none of the grounds listed in Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 1.100(f) existed when the spouse's request was denied [In re Marriage of James & Christine C. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1272-1277, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 715].

The term "applicant" under Cal. Rules of Ct, Rule 1.100(a) means any lawyer, party, witness, juror, or other person with an interest in attending any proceeding before any court of this state. Whether the scope of this rule will be extended to require a continuance in appropriate circumstances for other than a party remains to be adjudicated.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-136 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 136.21

§ 136.21 Unavailability of Counsel

[1] Diligence Required

If the ground advanced for continuance is that a party's attorney is unavailable, the trial court, in exercising its discretion with due regard to all interests involved, must carefully consider the reasons for that unavailability [Arm v. State Bar (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 763, 776, 268 Cal. Rptr. 741, 789 P.2d 922] . Continuances may be granted to counsel to provide additional preparation time, resolve a conflict between cases, or reschedule a case when counsel is absent. In these situations, a continuance must be justified by a showing of diligence and necessity [County of San Bernardino v. Doria Mining & Engineering Corp. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 776, 783, 140 Cal. Rptr. 383] . A request for a continuance supported by a showing of the serious physical illness or death of trial counsel will generally be granted absent a lack of diligence or other abusive circumstances [Hernandez v. Superior Court (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1247, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 821] .

In situations in which the party and the attorney have been diligent, but counsel is nonetheless not ready for trial, denial of a continuance has been held to be reversible error [Oliveros v. County of Los Angeles (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1389, 1398, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 638 (denial of continuance reversed where attorney unavailable due to engagement in another trial; court overemphasized calendar management); Vann v. Shilleh (1975) 54 Cal. App. 3d 192, 196-199, 126 Cal. Rptr. 401 (denial of continuance reversed where former counsel withdrew, not at party's request, one or two days before trial); Cohen v. Herbert (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 488, 493-496, 8 Cal. Rptr. 922 (denial of continuance reversed where attorney was involved in military duties, opposing party was not prejudiced, and, without continuance, receivership would have been imposed)]. If the number of trial preparation days available has been adequate, an unusual problem with the case will not justify postponing the trial [Beck v. Reinholtz (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 719, 722-723, 292 P.2d 906 (denial of continuance affirmed where, during pretrial period longer than that prescribed by statute, attorney discovered he did not have all necessary information)].

Similarly, in situations of schedule conflict (or absence for other reasons), a continuance may be granted if absence is unavoidable [Palomar Mortgage Co. v. Lister (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 236, 238-239, 27 Cal. Rptr. 863 (denial of short continuance reversed where attorney was engaged in separate trial and opposing party was not prejudiced)]. Failure of the party or attorney, however, to attempt diligently to avoid the conflict will result in denial of the continuance [Bixby v. Hotchkis (1945) 72 Cal. App. 2d 368, 371-372, 164 P.2d 808 (denial of continuance affirmed where counsel failed to anticipate or take steps to resolve a schedule conflict); Thomas v. Toppins (1928) 206 Cal. 18, 19, 272 P. 1042 (denial of continuance affirmed where, after counsel became ill, party had ample time to arrange for new counsel)].

Local court rule or practice may also restrict the availability of continuance on the ground of schedule conflict [see, e.g., Placer Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 20.5; San Mateo Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 2.3(e)(6) (no continuance of trial date on ground counsel is engaged in trial of another case unless trial counsel and back-up trial counsel were specified at first case management conference)].

[2] Necessity Required

Even when the party and attorney act with diligence, if there is no real necessity for the continuance, it may be denied [Fejer v. Paonessa (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 190, 194-195, 231 P.2d 507 (denial of continuance affirmed where two of party's attorneys unprepared but party had adequate representation from third counsel); County of San Bernardino v. Doria Mining & Engineering Corp. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 776, 783, 140 Cal. Rptr. 383 (denial of continuance affirmed where party sought to substitute counsel without showing that counsel of record was unable or unwilling to provide representation)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-136 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 136.23

§ 136.23 Member of the Legislature

[1] Entitled to Continuance

A member of the California Legislature is entitled, subject to stated exceptions, to a continuance when he or she is a party, attorney of record, or principle witness to a civil action before a trial court or an administrative proceeding before a state board, commission, or officer [Code Civ. Proc. § 595]. In the trial court, the continuance applies to any discovery proceeding, pretrial conference, deposition, interrogatory, or any other proceeding arising out of the pending civil action as well as the trial itself [Code Civ. Proc. § 595].

[2] Meeting of Interim Committee

When the member of the Legislature is the duly appointed member of a legislative interim committee which is meeting or scheduled to meet within a period that the court finds does not exceed the time reasonably necessary to enable the member to reach the committee meeting by the ordinary mode of travel, the court is required, subject to stated exceptions, to postpone the trial, proceeding, or hearing to such date following adjournment or recess of the committee as the court finds is reasonably necessary to enable the member to appear using the ordinary mode of travel, unless the attorney of record consents to an earlier date [Code Civ. Proc. § 595].

[3] Legislature in Session or Short Recess

When the Legislature is in session or in a recess of 40 days or less and the legislator's interim committees are adjourned or recessed, the court is required, subject to stated exceptions, to postpone the trial, proceeding, or hearing to at least 30 days following final adjournment of the Legislature or until a recess of more than 40 days begins, unless the attorney of record consents to an earlier date. If a date is available during recess, continuance must be given to the earlier recess date rather than a date during adjournment [Code Civ. Proc. § 595].

[4] Effect on Running of Time

If the postponement is granted, it suspends for the same period of time as the postponement, the running of any period of time for any ruling or proceeding by the court, board, commission, or officer, or for the performance by any party of any act affected by the postponement [Code Civ. Proc. § 595].

[5] When Continuance Not Mandatory

The granting of this continuance is mandatory unless the court determines that it would defeat or abridge a right to relief pendente lite in a paternity action or a right to invoke a provisional remedy such as pendente lite support in a domestic relations controversy, attachment and sale of perishable goods, receivership of a failing business, and temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction, and that the continuance should not be granted [Code Civ. Proc. § 595; see also Thurmond v. Superior Court (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 836, 838-839, 59 Cal. Rptr. 273, 427 P.2d 985 (interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. § 595, which contained no provision on mandatory continuances or specified exceptions as directory, and suggesting that a court could refuse a continuance to a member of the Legislature if a substantial existing right would be defeated or abridged by extended continuances)].

§ 136.24 Other Action Pending

Generally, when two cases which involve substantially the same issues are pending in the same jurisdiction between identical parties, the prior action may be pleaded in abatement of the second action [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c); see Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions]. If, because of some difference between the two cases, abatement is not applicable, but the outcome of one of the actions could substantially resolve issues in the other, a continuance (sometimes described as a stay) of the latter case is appropriate [Anthony v. General Motors Corp. (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 699, 707-708, 109 Cal. Rptr. 254 (continuance proper where pending case would be collateral estoppel on a key issue); Pesquera Del Pacifico v. Superior Court (1949) 89 Cal. App. 2d 738, 201 P.2d 553 (continuance not necessary where foreign trial raised different issues)]. Continuance may be justified whether the uncontinued case is at the pretrial, trial, or appellate stage [Margolis v. Superior Court (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 333, 338-339, 311 P.2d 167] . It is not required that the uncontinued case be filed before the continued case [Ehrhart & Associates, Inc. v. Superior Court (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 1, 4, 7 Cal. Rptr. 844] .

A result similar to a continuance is also available by statute when one case is brought in California and a related action is pending in another state. Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30 (inconvenient forum) permits a California court to stay (or dismiss) an action when the court finds that in the interest of substantial justice, the action should be heard in a forum outside the state. When granting a continuance under case law, the main concern of the court is the effect of the other pending action on issues in the instant case; under Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30,however, the trial court examines such factors as convenience, residence, and availability of witnesses [see, e.g., Belnap Freight Lines, Inc. v. Petty (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 159, 162-164, 119 Cal. Rptr. 907] . 13-136 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 136.25

§ 136.25 Amended Pleadings

When it appears to the satisfaction of the trial court that an amendment of pleadings renders a postponement necessary, the court may on its own motion postpone the trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(a)(2)]. The decision to allow amendment of the pleadings if requested during trial will not be disturbed absent a clear showing of abuse of discretion [Consolidated World Investments, Inc. v. Lido Preferred Ltd. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 373, 383, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 524] . Continuance of trial on the ground of amendment of pleadings may be appropriate, even if the matter is on the "fast track" [Honig v. Financial Corp. of America (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 960, 967, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922] .

Counsel may also request a continuance on the ground of surprise when the court permits an opposing party to amend the pleadings [see Carl v. Thomas (1931) 116 Cal. App. 294, 298, 2 P.2d 872] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-136 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 136.26

§ 136.26 Procedure

[1] On Motion or Application of Parties

A party seeking a continuance of the date set for trial, whether contested or uncontested or stipulated to by the parties, must make the request for a continuance by a noticed motion or an ex parte application under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1200 et seq., with supporting declarations; and the party must make the motion or application as soon as reasonably practical once the necessity for the continuance is discovered [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(b)].

The California Rules of Court require that (1) a motion for continuance before trial be made to the judge supervising the master calendar or, if there is no master calendar, to the judge in whose department the case is pending or, if the case has been assigned for all purposes to a specific judge or department the motion must be made before the assigned judge or in the assigned department; (2) except for good cause, the motion must be made on written notice to all other parties; and (3) notice must be given and the motion made promptly on the necessity for the continuance being ascertained [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1103(b), 3.1332(a)]. Further, a continuance before or during trial must not be granted except on an affirmative showing of good cause [see discussion under § 136.20[1]].

[2] On Motion of Court

The court may postpone a trial on its own motion if, at the time fixed for trial the court is engaged in the trial of another action; or, if as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 473(a)(2) (see the discussion under § 136.25), an amendment of the pleadings, or the allowance of time to make such amendment, or to plead, renders a postponement necessary [Code Civ. Proc. § 594a].

[3] Waiver of Procedural Formalities

In the exercise of their discretionary powers, trial courts may, for good cause, disregard the failure of a party requesting a continuance to satisfy such formal requirements as noticed motion, writings, or affidavits [Taylor v. Bell (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 1008, 98 Cal. Rptr. 855 , cert. denied, 408 U.S. 923, (1972) ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 595.4]. If, however, a party has failed to meet these formal requirements, and the trial court denies the continuance for other reasons, the appellate court may uphold the denial without examining the merits [see County of San Bernardino v.

Doria Mining & Engineering Corp. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 776, 783, 140 Cal. Rptr. 383] .

In any case, although the trial court may excuse failure to comply with the requirement of a declaration in support of motion for continuance, it is not required to do so [Mahoney v. Southland Mental Health Associates Medical Group (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 167, 172, 272 Cal. Rptr. 602] . Where a party fails to file an affidavit contending it needs a continuance to obtain essential facts, a trial court does not abuse its discretion by declining to grant a continuance [Oldcastle Precast, Inc. v. Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Co. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 554, 577, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 363].

[4] Oral Motions

While the rules of court do not expressly provide for oral motions for continuances [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332)], a common situation creating good cause for an oral motion is the occurrence of an event at trial which surprises one of the parties; in such a case the party may immediately move for a continuance or mistrial rather than waiting to see how the case progresses [McCown v. Spencer (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 216, 228, 87 Cal. Rptr. 213] .

§ 136.28 Review

Appeal may not be taken from an order denying a continuance but the order isreviewable on an appeal from an appealable order [Cohen v. Herbert (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 488, 490, 8 Cal. Rptr. 922 (appeal from order appointing receiver); on appealable judgments and orders, see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 904-904.5]. However, a writ of mandate, which is used to compel the performance of an act which the law specially enjoins, will issue to compel a continuance improperly denied [Whalen v. Superior Court (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 598, 602, 7 Cal. Rptr. 610 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1085 (power to issue writ of mandate)]. In general, a trial court's determination of the existence of good cause for a continuance will not be disturbed absent a clear abuse of discretion [Lewis v. Neptune Society Corp. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 427, 429, 240 Cal. Rptr. 656] .

[1] Absent Witness or Evidence

[a] Diligence

Court did not abuse discretion in denying party's motion for continuance to produce rebuttal witness when party knew well in advance that issue would be raised. Estate of Smith (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 74, 81, 106 Cal. Rptr. 774, 507 P.2d 78

Trial court did not abuse discretion in denying continuance based on unavailability of expert witness when supporting deposition simply showed that party met witness on Saturday before Monday trial date to discuss testimony and that after lengthy conversation party learned that expert was not interested in testifying on her behalf; deposition did not provide sufficient explanation of reason for unavailability, and there was no indication that witness was under subpoena. Pham v. Nguyen (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 11, 16-17, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422

Code Civ. Proc. § 595.4 (motions to postpone trial on ground of absence of evidence) requires written notice and affidavit showing materiality of evidence expected to be obtained and that due diligence has been used to procure it. Lewis v. Neptune Society Corp. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 427, 430, 240 Cal. Rptr. 656

Denial of defendant's motion for continuance was not abuse of discretion when defendant's attorney made motion only two days before trial despite awareness for previous 10 days that witness would not be available, when he made no effort to depose witness to preserve testimony, and when he made no showing that testimony of absent witness' testimony was material. Zlotoff v. Tucker (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 988, 993-994, 201 Cal. Rptr. 692

Motion for continuance on ground of absent witness is inadequate without showing that witness can be expected to appear in future. Allstate Ins. Co. v. King (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 698, 703, 60 Cal. Rptr. 892

Continuance is available to procure additional material evidence or testimony of absent, material witness if party has acted with diligence in preparing evidence for trial. Larson v. Solbakken (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 410, 428-430, 34 Cal. Rptr. 450

Discretion to deny motion for continuance to produce witnesses on ground of surprise testimony was not abused when both pleadings and pretrial order raised issue. Specht v. Keitel (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 332, 340-343, 12 Cal. Rptr. 95

Surprise is appropriate basis for continuance to obtain witness to rebut evidence admitted in error. Crosby v. Martinez (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 534, 541-542, 324 P.2d 26

Denial of continuance to call vital witness which adverse party was expected to callwas unnecessarily prejudicial to requesting party. Hays v. Viscome (1953) 122 Cal. App. 2d 135, 140-141, 264 P.2d 173

Denial of continuance to call material witness was error even though moving party failed to interview witness before trial. Murr v. Murr (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 511, 521-522, 197 P.2d 369

Denial of continuance justified when party cannot even name absent witness. Dineen v. City & County of San Francisco (1940) 38 Cal. App. 2d 486, 493, 101 P.2d 736

[b] Materiality

Denial of motion for continuance of summary judgment hearing to obtain declaration from expert witness is not error when the declaration would not create a triable issue of material fact. Yuzon v. Collins (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 149, 168, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 18

Denial of continuance when testimony sought from unavailable witness would be cumulative to that of other witnesses was not abuse of discretion. Lewis v. Neptune Society Corp. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 427, 429, 240 Cal. Rptr. 656

Denial of motion for continuance to present affidavits controverting opposing party's declarations is not prejudicial to moving party if trial court did not consider declarations in reaching its decision. Goss v. Edwards (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 264, 273, 137 Cal. Rptr. 252

Discretion was not abused by denial of motion for continuance for indefinite time to obtain evidence of unknown content. Lea v. Shank (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 964, 977, 85 Cal. Rptr. 709

Denial of continuance on basis of absent witnesses is not prejudicial when requesting party does not describe what testimony witnesses would have given. Stephens v. Aviation Research & Dev. Pub. Corp. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 349, 351, 52 Cal. Rptr. 322

Request for continuance on ground of absent material witness as supported by showing that facts cannot otherwise be proven. Agnew v. Larson (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 444, 450, 17 Cal. Rptr. 538

Affidavit that does not show what witness would state is insufficient to establish materiality. Jennings v. American President Lines, Ltd. (1943) 61 Cal. App. 2d 417, 426, 143 P.2d 349

[2] Costs

Conditioning grant of continuance on payment of costs of entire jury panel is permitted when party requested continuance after jury panel summoned. Inman v. Fremont Medical Center (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 169, 172, 122 Cal. Rptr. 372

[3] Granting of Continuances

[a] Good Cause

Refusal to grant continuance necessary for transcription of tape recordings, or to accept tapes themselves as administrative record, as abuse of discretion when plaintiff made good faith attempt to provide adequate record and when request for continuance was not dilatory, abusive, or prejudicial to rights of opposing party. Darley v. Ward (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 257, 262-263, 168 Cal. Rptr. 481, 617 P.2d 1113

Wide discretion of trial court in granting or denying continuance is not disturbed in absence of clear abuse. Estate of Smith (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 74, 81, 106 Cal. Rptr. 774, 507 P.2d 78

Trial court abused its discretion in entering judgment against the corporate defendant where brief trial continuance would have permitted defendant to file the required informational statement, restore the corporation's good standing with the state, and defend the litigation. Cadle Co. v. WorldWide Hospitality Furniture (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 504, 512, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 480

Trial court did not abuse discretion in denying motion to continue made on day of trial when, four days before trial, plaintiff was offered new job which necessitated his immediate attendance at two-week training course out of state; although plaintiff's attorney stated he was unable to go forward in the plaintiff's absence, trial court acted within its discretion when is was not convinced that plaintiff could not have arranged his work schedule to be available for trial, or that plaintiff could not have notified this attorney earlier so motion could have been brought before the trial date; plaintiff knew trial date when he accepted job, and under Cal. Rules of Ct., App. Div. I, § 9, he was to regard trial date as definite court appointment that takes precedence over all nonemergencies. Lazarus v. Titmus (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1246-1247, 1250, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 676

Granting of continuances is not favored, and party seeking continuance must make proper showing of good cause. Lewis v. Neptune Society Corp. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 427, 429, 240 Cal. Rptr. 656

Unnecessary continuances are wasteful, nonproductive, time-consuming, and fertile ground for criticism of courts. County of San Bernardino v. Doria Mining & Engineering Corp. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 776, 781, 140 Cal. Rptr. 383

Continuance is appropriate alternative to mistrial when juror or material witness becomes ill. Schnear v. Boldrey (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 478, 482, 99 Cal. Rptr. 404

Grounds for continuance are not exclusively controlled by statutory law. Taylor v. Bell (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 1008, 98 Cal Rptr 855 , cert. denied, 408 U.S. 923, 92 S. Ct. 2493, 33 L. Ed. 2d 334 (1972)

Reversal of trial court's denial of continuance was not possible when, on appeal, moving party's failure to provide record of proceedings precludes showing of information supporting continuance. Muller v. Tanner (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 445, 458, 82 Cal. Rptr. 738

[b] Insufficient Time

Continuance was not justified by substitution of executor for party within previous 18 days without showing of prejudice to executor. Eastwood v. Froehlich (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 523, 529, 131 Cal. Rptr. 577

[c] Member of Legislature

Continuance on statutory ground that counsel is member of Legislature is directory only. Thurmond v. Superior Court (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 836, 838-840, 59 Cal. Rptr. 273, 427 P.2d 985 (decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 595, current statutory language modified to accommodate this case)

[d] Other Action Pending

Stay until conclusion of arbitration was appropriate, even though party requesting stay was not party to arbitration and resolution of some issues will not bind requesting party under doctrine of collateral estoppel if result of arbitration may be to simplify postponed case and prevent multiple litigation of some of issues affecting some of parties. Marcus v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 204, 209-212, 141 Cal. Rptr. 890

Continuance was proper to await outcome of workers' compensation case before trying civil action for personal injuries. Black Bros. Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 501, 509, 71 Cal. Rptr. 344 , disapproved on other grounds in Denham v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 557, 563, 86 Cal. Rptr. 65, 468 P.2d 193

[e] Party Absent

Continuance of civil trial until release of imprisoned defendants was appropriate when not prohibited by law or substantially prejudicing rights of plaintiffs. Payne v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 908, 923, 132 Cal. Rptr. 405, 553 P.2d 565

Trial court erred in denying a spouse's request for a continuance as an accommodation under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.100 for disability because it was undisputed that the spouse, who had bipolar disorder, was disabled within the meaning of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), had been hospitalized on the day before trial was set to resume, was under a physician's care, and was self-representing; a trial continuance was a reasonable, if not necessary, accommodation, even though it meant a delay in conducting the trial, and none of the grounds listed in Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 1.100(f) existed when the spouse's request was denied. In re Marriage of James & Christine C. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1272-1277, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 715

While an initial 90-day stay under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act is essentially automatic, the granting of an additional stay is discretionary. A request for an additional stay may be denied if the servicemember's ability to appear and participate in the civil action is not adversely affected by his or her military duties. A continuance was properly denied when the father's military service did not adversely affect his participation in a juvenile dependency proceeding. The record demonstrated that the father had appeared in the action and received services for reunification with his child for essentially the entire period required by law. The father had also made a personal appearance during a leave of absence from the military and had already provided necessary testimony. Furthermore, the father had been represented by counsel at all times and had been able to communicate with social services staff and counsel while he was in Iraq. George P. v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 216, 224-225, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 919

Application for stay under the former Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act (now, the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act) (50 U.S.C. App. § 501 et seq.) depends on facts and circumstances in each case; mere fact that party requesting continuance is in military service, without more, is insufficient to warrant stay; party in military service must show that he or she is actually unavailable to participate and that his or her rights would be adversely affected by virtue of absence from trial; mere contentions of unavailability, without affirmative representations that leave to attend trial was sought and refused, are insufficient to warrant such relief; record supported juvenile court's denial of father's requested stay of contested hearing under Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.22. This case interprets federal law prior to significant revisions made in 2003. However, it may be useful in supporting a motion for a continuance brought under the California Military and Veterans Code which requires the service member to make a prima facie showing that his or her ability to prosecute or defend is materially affected by reason of military service (Mil. & Vet. Code § 400 et seq.). Christine M. v. Superior Court (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1233, 1243-1245 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220

Voluntarily absent party who had given deposition was not entitled to continuance. Young v. Redman (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 827, 832, 128 Cal. Rptr. 86

Continuance was properly denied when hospitalized witness had given deposition and was available for taking of additional evidence. Russell v. Roberts (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 390, 397, 114 Cal. Rptr. 305 , disapproved on other grounds in DeBerard v. Lim (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 659, 671, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292, 976 P.2d 843

Whether party is healthy enough to attend trial as issue for trial judge's evaluation and determination. Agnew v. Parks (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 696, 702, 33 Cal. Rptr. 465

Party's illness and inability to attend trial as insufficient to establish good cause for continuance. Nahas v. Nahhas (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 440, 442, 287 P.2d 381 ; but see Estate of Stevens (1922) 57 Cal. App. 160, 161, 206 P. 668 (illness of out-of-state parties as sufficient)

Continuance under the former Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act (now, the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act) [50 U.S.C. App. § 521] until discharge of absent party is unnecessary when party is judgment proof and court already granted brief continuance for his deposition. This case interprets federal law prior to significant revisions made in 2003. However, it may be useful in supporting a motion for a continuance brought under the California Military and Veterans Code [Mil. & Vet. Code § 400 et seq.]. Culver v. Superior Court (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 76, 78, 270 P.2d 78

Continuance on basis of absent party is properly denied when affidavits of illness are overcome by proof to contrary. Kalmus v. Kalmus (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 405, 414, 230 P.2d 57

Military service by itself is inadequate basis for continuance under the former Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act now the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act [50 U.S.C. App. § 521]. This case interprets federal law prior to significant revisions made in 2003. However, it may be useful in supporting a motion for a continuance brought under the California Military and Veterans Code which requires the servicemember to make a prima facie showing that his or her ability to prosecute or defend is materially affected by reason of military service [Mil. & Vet. Code § 400 et seq.]. Ridley v. Young (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 503, 514-515, 149 P.2d 76

[f] Plaintiff's Bankruptcy

Plaintiff's pending bankruptcy did not require that trial be continued on defendant's motion; although bankrupt's cause of action becomes part of bankruptcy estate on filing of petition in bankruptcy (11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(1)), such transfer by operation of law did not divest plaintiff of right to continue to prosecute case pendingassertive action by trustee in bankruptcy (11 U.S.C. § 323(a); Bankr. Rules, Rule 6009); former Code Civ. Proc. § 385 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5) expressly authorized plaintiff to remain real party in interest even after cause of action had been transferred to bankruptcy estate by operation of law until such time as court allowed trustee to substitute for plaintiff. National Secretarial Service, Inc. v. Froehlich (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 510, 520, 258 Cal. Rptr. 506

[g] Stipulation

Code Civ. Proc. § 595.2, providing that court shall postpone trial or hearing on consent of parties, as directory. Lorraine v. McComb (1934) 220 Cal. 753, 755, 32 P.2d 960

[h] Unavailability of Counsel

Denial of request for trial continuance constitutes reversible error when trial counsel for the County was engaged in another trial resulting in a lack of representation in court. Oliveros v. County of Los Angeles (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1389, 1398, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 638

A request for a continuance supported by a showing of the serious physical illness or death of trial counsel will generally be granted absent a lack of diligence or other abusive circumstances. Trial counsel sought a continuance due to battle with pancreatic cancer and later died. Trial counsel's serious physical illness culminating in death clearly constituted good cause for a continuance. Hernandez v. Superior Court (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1247, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 821

Continuance required if counsel withdraws, not at party's request, one or two days before trial. Vann v. Shilleh (1975) 54 Cal. App. 3d 192, 196-199, 126 Cal. Rptr. 401

Discretion to deny trial continuance is not abused when party insists on particular counsel who refuses to try case or changes counsel just prior to trial. Agnew v. Parks (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 696, 700-702, 33 Cal. Rptr. 465 ; Flynn v. Fink (1923) 60 Cal. App. 670, 674-675, 213 P. 716

Denial of short continuance when attorney is engaged in separate trial and opposing party is not prejudiced as unjustified. Palomar Mortgage Co. v. Lister (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 236, 238-239, 27 Cal. Rptr. 863

Attorney unavoidably unprepared was sufficient ground for continuance when remedy sought was receivership. Cohen v. Herbert (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 488, 493-496, 8 Cal. Rptr. 922

Denial of continuance was justified when, although two of party's attorneys were unprepared, party had adequate representation from third attorney. Fejer v. Paonessa (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 190, 194-195, 231 P.2d 507

Continuance because of attorney absence was properly denied when counsel showed only conflicting professional engagement. Mann v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 439, 446, 207 P.2d 105

Denial of continuance was justified when counsel failed to anticipate or take steps to resolve schedule conflict. Bixby v. Hotchkis (1945) 72 Cal. App. 2d 368, 371-372, 164 P.2d 808

[4] Procedure

[a] On Motion of Parties

Motions for continuance is required to be made on written notice. Lewis v. Neptune Society Corp. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 427, 430, 240 Cal. Rptr. 656 (citing former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 375, now 3.1332)

[b] Waiver of Procedural Formalities

Where a party fails to file an affidavit contending it needs a continuance to obtain essential facts, a trial court does not abuse its discretion by declining to grant a continuance. Oldcastle Precast, Inc. v. Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Co. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 554, 577, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 363

Oral stipulation by attorney not of record is insufficient under Code Civ. Proc. § 595.2 (postponement when attorneys of record agree in writing). County of San Bernardino v. Doria Mining & Engineering Corp. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 776, 784, 140 Cal. Rptr. 383

[5] Review

When arbitrator exercises discretion in denying a continuance request, trial court must determine whether the arbitrator abused his or her discretion by refusing to postpone the hearing upon sufficient cause being shown. Second, if there was an abuse of discretion, the trial court must determine whether the moving party suffered substantial prejudice as a result. Moreover, on appeal from the trial court's order granting or denying a request to vacate the arbitration award, the review is de novo. SWAB Financial, LLC v. E* Trade Securities, LLC (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1181, 1198, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 904

Absent clear abuse, trial court's determination of whether good cause for continuance existed will not be disturbed by appellate court [Eastwood v. Froehlich (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 523, 529, 131 Cal. Rptr. 577] .

Order denying continuance is nonappealable but reviewable on appeal of another appealable order. Cohen v. Herbert (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 488, 490, 8 Cal. Rptr. 922

Writ of mandate is available to compel continuance improperly denied. Whalen v. Superior Court (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 598, 602, 7 Cal. Rptr. 610

[6] Right of Party Opposing Continuance

Plaintiff who diligently prosecutes suit is entitled to have trial within reasonable time; policy that causes shall be disposed of on their merits is not served when party without fault is denied determination of cause through repeated continuances granted to opposing party; requirement is that at some point case shall without fail be tried on day certain. Redevelopment Agency v. Tobriner (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1096, 264 Cal. Rptr. 481

[7] Third-Party Claims

In hearing on third-party claim under former Code Civ. Proc. § 689 (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 720.110, 720.210), denial of 60-day continuance for out-of-state witnesses requested by third-party claimant which erroneously expected trial by affidavit was proper considering burden on adverse party which had alreadybrought witnesses from abroad. Joint Holdings & Trading Co. v. First Union Nat'l Bank of N.C. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 159, 167, 123 Cal. Rptr. 519

When one party obtains continuance of hearing for third-party claim under former Code Civ. Proc. § 689 (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 720.110, 720.210) by telephone call to court, notice of new date is inadequate unless reasonably certain to inform adverse counsel who did not participate in telephone call. Parker v. Dingman (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1018, 122 Cal. Rptr. 309

Party to summary proceeding on third-party claim under former Code Civ. Proc. § 689 (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 720.110, 720.210) (claim that levied-on personal property belongs to third party) was not entitled to continuance though out of state at time of hearing. Dingwall v. Anderson (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 658, 663-664, 76 Cal. Rptr. 827

Continuance was denied in proceeding on third-party claim under former Code Civ. Proc. § 689 (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 720.110, 720.210) when subpoenaed witness placed on call not available for hearing. Oak Knoll Broadcasting Corp. v. Hudgings (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 563, 565-566, 80 Cal. Rptr. 175

PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

13-136 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 136.60

§ 136.60 Facts to Be Ascertained

1. Determine whether facts support a continuance. Examples of facts supporting common grounds for continuances include the following:

a. Absent witness.

Determine:

☐ What would witness' testimony be [see, e.g., Lea v. Shank (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 964, 977, 85 Cal. Rptr. 709] .

☐ That the evidence is new and material [see, e.g., Gibson v. Cobb (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 226, 235-237, 46 Cal. Rptr. 57] .

☐ That the evidence could not be otherwise proven [see, e.g., Agnew v. Larson (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 444, 450, 17 Cal. Rptr. 538] .

☐ That the witness is unavailable despite the party's diligent efforts [see, e.g., Kramer v. Kramer (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 727, 731, 17 Cal. Rptr. 461] .

☐ When the witness can be present [see, e.g., Allstate Ins. Co. v. King (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 698, 703, 60 Cal. Rptr. 892] .

b. Absent party.

Determine:

☐ That the party's presence is vitally needed because party is the sole or major witness and a deposition is inadequate or party's assistance to counsel is indispensable since party is the only person who knows all of the facts and the whereabouts of witnesses [see, e.g., Sonstelie v. Bush (1929) 102 Cal. App. 396, 398-399, 283 P. 336] .

☐ That absence is unavoidable [see, e.g., Nahas v. Nahhas (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 440, 442, 287 P.2d 381] .

c. Unavailability of counsel because of schedule conflict.

Determine:

☐ That the conflict arose after the date for trial was set and could not be avoided [see, e.g., Bixby v. Hotchkis (1945) 72 Cal. App. 2d 368, 371-372, 164 P.2d 808] .

☐ That substituting attorneys is not possible [see, e.g., Fejer v. Paonessa (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 190, 194-195, 231 P.2d 507] .

d. Substitution of counsel.

Determine:

☐ That substantial reasons existed for changing counsel [see, e.g., County of San Bernardino v. Doria Mining & Engineering Corp. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 776, 783, 140 Cal. Rptr. 383] .

☐ That party acted diligently as soon as it became apparent that new counsel was needed [see, e.g., Thomas v. Toppins (1928) 206 Cal. 18, 19, 272 P. 1042] .

☐ That party found it difficult to find counsel who would accept the case unless a continuance were granted [see, e.g., Vann v. Shilleh (1975) 54 Cal. App. 3d 192, 196-199, 126 Cal. Rptr. 401] .

e. Other action pending.

Determine whether or not the other case, once decided, could resolve significant issues in the instant case [see, e.g., Anthony v. General Motors Corp. (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 699, 707-708, 109 Cal. Rptr. 254] .

f. Military service.

To support a motion for continuance on the ground of military service of party Servicemembers Civil Relief Act [50 U.S.C. App. § 501 et seq.], determine:

☐ The manner in which current military duty requirements materially affect the servicemember's ability to appear.

State protections for reservists and members of the National Guard [Mil. & Vet. Code § 400 et seq.]), determine:

☐ How counsel's ability to prosecute or defend is materially affected by the party's absence [see, e.g., Whealton v. Whealton (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 656, 665-666, 63 Cal. Rptr. 291, 432 P.2d 979] .

2. Determine the earliest date to which the matter could be continued.

3. Determine the effect, if any, on the possibility for dismissal for failure to bring the case to trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 et seq.] if the party seeking a continuance is a plaintiff, petitioner, or cross complainant.

NOTE:
If granting the continuance may make the party vulnerable to a motion to dismiss by defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 et seq.], counsel should consider the possibility of obtaining a waiver [for appropriate language, see form in § 136.70].

4. Any prejudice that may result to other parties to the case if a continuance is granted.

NOTE:
When an attack is made on a discretionary procedural order, including continuance orders, the order is not considered made in the exercise of sound discretion if it resulted in possible or probable prejudice to a party [see Cohen v. Herbert (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 488, 493-496, 8 Cal. Rptr. 922 (order denying continuance reversed); Larson v. Solbakken (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 410, 428-430, 34 Cal. Rptr. 450 (order granting continuance upheld on finding that no prejudice to adverse party was shown)] although its application may be limited to situations of emergency at least where the trial court has granted continuance [see discussion in § 136.14].

5. Whether counsel for the other parties will stipulate to the continuance. For procedure, see § 136.61.

NOTE:

Subject to its own discretion, the court will postpone a trial, or the hearing of any motion or demurrer, for a period not to exceed 30 days, when all attorneys of record who have appeared in the action agree in writing to such postponement [Code Civ. Proc. § 595.2; see also forms in §§ 136.70 -136.71].

6. If not all parties will stipulate, move for a continuance.

a. Determine whether good cause exists to dispense with written notice to the other parties. If so, proceed by ex parte motion. For procedure, see § 136.62.

b. Otherwise, proceed by noticed motion. For procedure, see § 136.63.

§ 136.61 Stipulation

1. Ascertain new trial or hearing date.

Ascertain the earliest date on which all counsel and the court can proceed. This may require substantial discussion among counsel and the court clerk to fix a date that all can agree to.

2. Prepare papers.

a. Stipulation for continuance to a certain day or, if required, to drop the case from the trial calendar [see § 136.70].

b. Order [see § 136.71].

NOTE:
The order may be added at the end of the stipulation [see § 136.70] or may be a separate document [see § 136.71].

3. Sign the original of the stipulation and have counsel for each party or party appearing in pro per sign it.

4. Obtain signature of judge.

Present the original stipulation and the order to the clerk with the request that it be presented to the judge for signature. If the judge signs the order, present the stipulation and order to the clerk with the request that it be filed.

5. Distribute conformed, file-stamped copies of the stipulation and order to each of the other counsel or parties appearing in pro per.

PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

13-136 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 136.62

§ 136.62 Ex Parte Application

NOTE:
If counsel for the other parties will not stipulate to a continuance, an ex parte application or noticed motion is used. The ex parte application is made on written notice [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(b)]. If good cause is shown for making the motion without notice to the adverse party, an ex parte motion may be used. Otherwise, counsel should proceed by way of a noticed motion [for procedure, see § 136.63].

1. Consult local court rules relating to continuances, such as rules stating the court and time for making such motions [see, e.g., San Francisco Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 8.2(B)].

2. Prepare papers.

a. Ex parte application for continuance [see § 136.72].

NOTE:
The application must set forth both the reason justifying the continuance and facts establishing good cause for not giving notice [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(a)].

b. Declarations supporting both requirements for good cause [see §§ 136.75 -136.80].

c. Memorandum in support of the motion.

d. Order granting the continuance [see § 136.82].

NOTE:
The order usually follows at the end of the motion on the same paper.

2. Sign papers.

Counsel for the moving party signs the application and memorandum, if any, and has the person making the declaration, if any, sign it, or, in the case of an affidavit, has the affiant subscribe and swear to its contents before an officer authorized to administer oaths [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2012, 2093].

3. Present papers.

a. Present the application and supporting papers to the court clerk with the request that the motion and supporting documents be presented to the judge for signature.

b. If the judge signs the order, the originals of the application, supporting documents, and order are filed. Obtain conformed copies of the order from the court clerk for service on the other parties.

NOTE:

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1019.5(a), when a motion is granted or denied, unless the court otherwise orders, notice of the court's decision or order [see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders] must be given by the prevailing party to all other parties or their attorneys, in the manner provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1010 et seq. [see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers], unless notice is waived by all parties in open court and is entered in the minutes.

PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

13-136 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 136.63

§ 136.63 Noticed Motion

1. Ascertain new date.

Ascertain from the court clerk or local court rule the date on which the motion for a continuance can be heard and the department of the court that will hear it.

NOTE:
The minimum notice period is 16 court days, plus increased periods when service is by mail, facsimile transmission, overnight delivery, or electronic service unless time is shortened [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010.6; see Ch. 524, Shortening and Extension of Time]. If In addition, counsel will need time to prepare the written documents and to have the supporting declarations executed by the persons making them.

2. Prepare papers.

a. Notice of motion [§ 136.73].

b. Affidavit or declaration under penalty of perjury in support of themotion [see §§ 136.74 -136.79].

c. Supporting memorandum.

d. Proof of service [for forms, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers].

e. Proposed order, if desired [see § 136.82].

3. Sign papers.

Counsel for the moving party signs the notice of motion and memorandum and has the person making the declaration sign it, or, in the case of an affidavit, subscribe and swear to its contents before an officer authorized to administer oaths [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2012, 2093].

4. Serve papers.

Counsel for the moving party should serve the papers on other counsel or parties appearing in pro per by mail [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1012, 1013] or by delivery in person or as otherwise provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1011.

NOTE:

When a written notice of motion is necessary, it must be given at least 16 court days before the hearing, provided that if service is by mail the 16-day period is increased by five calendar days if the place of mailing and address are within California, 10 calendar days if either the place of mailing or address is outside California but within the United States, and 20 calendar days if either the place of mailing or address is outside the United States [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)]. If the notice is served by facsimile transmission or overnight delivery, the 16-day period is increased by two calendar days [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)]. An extension period of two court days may apply in the case of electronic service [see Code Civ. Proc. 1010.6(a)(6); for discussion, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.41[8]].

Papers served by mail should either bear a notation of date and place of mailing or be accompanied by an unsigned copy of the affidavit, declaration, or certificate of mailing [Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(b)]. If service is by facsimile transmission, Express Mail, or another method of overnight delivery, the papers should bear a notation of their date and place of deposit or transmission, or be accompanied by an unsigned copy of the proof of service [Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(d), (f), (g)].

5. Present the papers to the court.

Present the original notice of motion, affidavit (declaration), and memorandum with proof of service attached to the court clerk for filing and request that the motion be placed on calendar.

NOTE:

With respect to attachment of proof of service, see NOTE under Paragraph D(4), above].

6. Argue the motion.

a. If motion is opposed, examine any opposing papers, and, if time permits, prepare, serve, and file a supplemental affidavit (declaration), and memorandum in the same manner as the original documents [see (2), above].

NOTE:

Counsel for a party opposing the motion may prepare an affidavit or declaration [see § 136.81] in opposition to the motion or may admit that certain evidence would be given at the trial and oppose a continuance on that ground [see Code Civ. Proc. § 595.4; § 136.80]. Counsel for a party opposing the motion may also prepare, serve, and file a memorandum in opposition to the motion. For memoranda opposing a motion for a continuance, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 48, Continuance of Proceedings (Matthew Bender).

b. Attend the hearing on the motion and present argument, if any, in support of the motion. If the motion is granted, ascertain the exact wording of the court's order.

7. Obtain order.

a. Prepare the order, if not already done [see § 136.82].

b. Present the original and copies of the order to the clerk with the request that he or she obtain the judge's signature to, and file, the original and that he or she conform and return the copies. If the order is presented by mail, a self-addressed, stamped envelope should be enclosed for return of the conformed copies.

c. Give notice of the court's decision or order granting or denying the motion to all other parties or their attorneys, in the manner provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1010 et seq. (see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers) unless notice was waived by all parties in open court and was entered in the minutes [Code Civ. Proc. § 1019.5; for a form of notice, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders].

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a form of stipulation for use when all the parties agree to the continuance of a trial or hearing date.

If counsel and the court clerk have established a new hearing or trial date, it may be used in the form. Otherwise, counsel should state the earliest acceptable date and use the optional language on subsequent dates.

For the steps to be taken in preparing a stipulation, see § 136.61.

[3] Effect of Stipulation

Code Civ. Proc. § 595.2 provides that in all cases the court shall postpone a trial for a period not to exceed 30 days when all attorneys of record of parties who have appeared in the action agree in writing to the postponement. Although Code Civ. Proc. § 595.2 refers only to actions, its provisions may be applicable to special proceedings under statutes relating to such proceedings and incorporating the provisions of Part II of the Code of Civil Procedure, including Code Civ. Proc. § 595.2 [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 1230.040 (eminent domain proceedings)].

[4] Restrictions

Counsel may be restricted by the policies and provisions of the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act [see Gov. Code §§ 68607(g) (policy against continuances), 68616(d) (limited allowance for 30 day stipulated continuance). For discussion, see § 136.10[3]].

[5] Good Cause

Code Civ. Proc. § 595.2 does not expressly require a showing of good cause for the continuance, but this statute has been held to be directory only and not mandatory [see Lorraine v. McComb (1934) 220 Cal. 753, 755, 32 P.2d 960] . Therefore, since Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332 states that a continuance will not be granted except on a showing of good cause supported by declaration, have the stipulation state that good cause for the continuance exists and that an affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) establishing the facts showing good cause be attached to the stipulation. This is expressly required by some local court rules [see, e.g., San Francisco Uniform Local Ct. Rules, Rule 8.2(B)].

For discussion of what may constitute good cause, see §§ 136.136.17[1] and 136.20[1].

The form in [1], above, is an ex parte application for continuance to be used when, for good cause, a motion for continuance cannot be made on written notice to all other parties [*see Cal. If good cause does not exist for avoiding the notice requirement, counsel must use the noticed motion procedure [see § 136.73].

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a declaration that may be used in lieu of an affidavit [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5] in support of a motion for a continuance on the ground that the declarant is a member of the Legislature and is either a party, a principal witness, or an attorney for a party.

[3] Mandatory Continuance

Granting this type of a continuance is mandatory, unless the court determines that it would defeat or abridge certain specified rights [Code Civ. Proc. § 595; see Thurmond v. Superior Court (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 836, 838-840, 59 Cal. Rptr. 273, 427 P.2d 985] .

[1] FORM Declaration in Support of Motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(b)] for Continuance--By Attorney--Necessity of Appearance in Other Trial

[Caption. See § 136.74.]

I, _____ [name], declare:

1. I am an attorney at law duly admitted to practice before all the courts of California and the attorney of record for _____ [name of party] in this _____ [action or proceeding] which has been set for _____ [trial or hearing] on _____ [date], [in _____ (Department or Division) _____ of] this court.

2. I am also attorney for _____ [specify party] in the case of _____ [title, court, and number], set for trial [in _____ (Department or Division) _____ thereof], on _____ [date], at _____ [city], California.

3. It will be necessary for me to be present in that court for trial of that cause which is expected to last approximately _____ days, and I therefore request a continuance of the _____ [trial or hearing] herein until _____ [date], or as soon thereafter as is convenient to the court.

4. _____ [State reason why conflict occurred, e.g., The conflict in trial dates would not have been reasonably anticipated at the time of the trial setting conference and occurs because of requests by an opposing party in the other case.]

5. _____ [State reason why adequate representation is not otherwise available, e.g., Within my law firm, both of these cases were assigned to me for trial and the time is insufficient for another attorney to prepare either case.]

6. _____ [State reasons for necessity of proceeding with other case, e.g., The cause to be tried in _____ (city), _____, California cannot be continued and numerous witnesses are under subpoena for appearance therein who could not appear at a later date.]

7. _____ [Name of adverse party] will not be prejudiced by a continuance of the subject cause until a later date.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a declaration for use in support of a motion for acontinuance on the ground that the attorney has a schedule conflict.

The form states the conflict, the next available trial date, the reasons the conflict occurred despite counsel's diligence, and the unavailability of adequate legal representation from other sources.

For further discussion of this ground for continuance, see § 136.136.21[1].

For a related form of declaration by a party for use in supporting a continuance based on substitution of counsel, see § 136.76.

[3] Effect of Schedule for Trial

Once a case has been scheduled for trial, a court may be reluctant to grant a continuance on this ground. Unless there are clear facts to support the conclusion that the conflict could not be avoided or alternative representation procured, counsel should consider requesting a stipulation for continuance from opposing counsel [see § 136.70].

[4] Unavailability of Counsel for Other Reasons

This form may be modified and used to support continuances made on the ground that the attorney is unavoidably absent due to illness or unavoidably unprepared because of newness, surprise, or some other cause. The declaration must show that the absence or lack of preparation is unavoidable (e.g., the party's previous attorney withdrew just prior to trial [see Vann v. Shilleh (1975) 54 Cal. App. 3d 192, 196-199, 126 Cal. Rptr. 401] ; counsel diligently attempted to prepare [see Cohen v. Herbert (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 488, 493-496, 8 Cal. Rptr. 922] ; counsel could not have anticipated the event causing surprise at trial [see Crosby v. Martinez (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 534, 541-542, 324 P.2d 26]). The declaration must also establish the unavailability of adequate alternative legal representation. Illness should be supported by a physician's declaration [see § 136.79].

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a stipulation for use when a party has made a motion for a continuance on account of the absence of a material witness and, on order of the court, has filed an affidavit (declaration under penalty of perjury [*Code Civ. [3] Effect of Admission on Continuance

If the adverse party admits that such evidence would be given and that it be considered as actually given on the trial or offered and overruled as improper, the trial must not be postponed [Code Civ. Proc. § 595.4].

If the motion was made ex parte, the order should show that good cause was shown for not giving written notice [see § 136.72].

If the court imposed any conditions on the granting of the order, such conditions should be stated in the order.

For a discussion of the specific finding recommended by the Standards of Judicial Administration when the ground for continuance is unavailability of counsel due to a conflicting trial, see § 136.75.

§ 137.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses general duties of parties and their attorneys that continue while an action or proceeding is pending. The duties addressed in this chapter are:

- The duty to notify the court of a change of address [see §§ 137.10, 137.11]. A form of notice of change of address of party or attorney is included [see § 137.60].

- The duty to inform the court of related cases [see § 137.12]. A form of notice of related case and response to notice of related case are included [see §§ 137.61, 137.62].

- The duty to inform the court of the notice of stay of the proceedings and the duty to inform the court of the termination or modification of the stay [see § 137.13]. A form of notice of stay and notice of termination or modification of stay are included [see §§ 137.63, 137.64].

PART I. SCOPE

§ 137.02 Cross References

Continuing duties that arise in connection with specific procedures that may or may not be present in any given action or proceeding are discussed together with those procedures. For example, a plaintiff's continuing duty under Gov. Code § 985(c) to inform the defendant in an action under the California Tort Claims Act of the existence of collateral sources is discussed in Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

The presentation of a pleading or other paper to the court by an attorney or unrepresented party may result in the impostition of sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7. Presentation includes later advocating the paper, which may be thought of as a continuing duty. Section 128.7 applies to actions commenced on or after January 1, 1995 [see Ch. 510, Sanctions].

13-137 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 137.11

§ 137.11 Maintenance of List of Addresses by First-Named Plaintiff

If more than two parties appear in a case and are represented by different counsel, the plaintiff or petitioner named first in the complaint or petition must maintain a current list of the parties and addresses for service on each party. The plaintiff or petitioner must, on request, furnish a copy of this list to any party or the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.254].

Each party is required to provide the first-named plaintiff or petitioner with its current address for service of notice when it first appears in the action, and to notify that plaintiff or petitioner of any change in address [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.254; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.200 (duty to notify court and all parties of change of address), discussed in § 137.10].

Any party serving an order, notice, or pleading on a party who has not yet appeared in the action must serve a copy of the list at the same time as the order, notice, or pleading is served [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.254].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-137 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 137.12

§ 137.12 Duty to Inform Court of Related Cases

[1] Continuing Duty to Give Notice

Whenever a party in a civil action knows or learns that the action or proceeding is related to another action or proceeding pending, dismissed, or disposed of by judgment in any state or federal court in California, the party must serve and file a Notice of Related Case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300(b)]. This duty applies when a party files a case with knowledge of a related action or proceeding or thereafter learns of a related action or proceeding [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300(f)].

For a form of notice, Judicial Council Form CM-015, Notice of Related Case, see § 137.61.

[2] Persons to Be Served

The Notice of Related Case must be filed in all pending cases listed in the notice and must be served on all parties in those cases [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300(d)].

[2] Contents of Notice and Time for Service

The Notice of Related Case must [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300(c)]:

- List all civil cases that are related by court, case name, case number, and filing date;
- Identify the case that has the earliest filing date and the court and department in which that case is pending; and
- Describe the manner in which the cases are related.

The Notice of Related Case must be served and filed as soon as possible, but no later than 15 days after the facts concerning the existence of related cases become known [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300(e)].

A party is not required to serve and file a Notice of Related Case if another party has already filed a notice and served all parties on the same case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300(k)].

[4] What Constitutes a "Related" Case

A pending civil case is related to another pending civil case, or to a civil case that was dismissed with or without prejudice, or to a civil case that was disposed of by judgment, if the cases [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300(a)]:

- Involve the same parties and are based on the same or similar claims;

- Arise from the same or substantially identical transactions, incidents, or events requiring the determination of the same or substantially identical questions of law or fact;

- Involve claims against, title to, possession of, or damages to the same property; or

- Are likely for other reasons to require substantial duplication of judicial resources if heard by different judges.

[5] Response Supporting or Opposing Notice of Related Case

Within five days after service on a party of a Notice of Related Case, the party may serve and file a response supporting or opposing the notice. The response must state why one or more of the cases listed in the notice are not related or why other good cause exists for the court not to transfer the cases to or from a particular court or department. The response must be filed in all pending cases listed in the notice and must be served on all parties in those cases [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300(g)].

[6] Action by the Court

[a] Related Cases Pending in One Superior Court

If all the related cases have been filed in one superior court, the court, on notice to all parties, may order that the cases, including probate and family law cases, be related and may assign them to a single judge or department. In a superior court where there is a master calendar, the presiding judge may order the cases related [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300(h)(1)].

In a court in which cases are assigned to a single judge or department, cases may be ordered related as follows [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300(h)(1)]:

- Where all the cases listed in the notice are unlimited civil cases, or where all the cases listed in the notice are limited civil cases, the judge who has the earliest filed case must determine whether the cases must be ordered related and assigned to his or her department;

- Where the cases listed in the notice include both unlimited and limited civil cases, the judge who has the earliest filed unlimited civil case must determine whether the cases should be ordered related and assigned to his or her department;

- Where the cases listed in the notice contain a probate or family law case, the presiding judge or a judge designated by the presiding judge must determine whether the cases should be ordered related and, if so, to which judge or department they should be assigned;

- In the event that any of the cases listed in the notice are not ordered related under one of the above scenarios, any party in any of the cases listed in the notice may file a motion to have the cases related. The motion must be filed with the presiding judge or the judge designated by the presiding judge; and

- If the procedures for relating pending cases under this rule do not apply, the procedures under Code Civ. Proc. § 1048 and Rule 3.350 must be followed to consolidate cases pending in the same superior court.

The above provisions do not apply to cases that have been designated as complex by the parties or determined to be complex by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300(h)(3)].

[b] Related Cases Pending in Different Superior Courts

If the related cases are pending in more than one superior court on notice to all parties, the judge to whom the earliest filed case is assigned may confer informally with the parties and with the judges to whom each related case is assigned, to determine the feasibility and desirability of joint discovery orders and other informal or formal means of coordinating proceedings in the cases [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300(h)(2)(A)]. If it is determined that related cases pending in different superior courts should be formally coordinated, the procedures in Code of Civil Procedure section 403 and rule 3.500 must be followed for noncomplex cases, and the procedures in Code of Civil Procedure section 404 et seq. and rules 3.501 et seq. must be followed for complex cases [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300(h)(2)(B)].

[7] Ruling on Related Cases

The court, department, or judge issuing an order relating cases must either [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300(i)]:

- File a notice of the order in all pending cases and serve a copy of the notice on all parties listed in the Notice of Related Case; or

- Direct counsel for a party to file the notice in all pending cases and serve a copy on all parties.

[8] Cases Not Ordered Related

If for any reason a case is not ordered related, that case will remain assigned to the court, judge, or department where it was pending at the time of the filing and service of the Notice of Related Case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300(j)].

For discussion of formal consolidation and coordination of actions, see Ch. 125, Consolidation, Severance, and Coordination of Actions .

For discussion of the effect on a later action of a prior action pending in California on the same cause of action, see Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions .

§ 137.13 Duty to Inform Court of Stay of Proceedings

[1] Duty to Give Notice of Stay

The party who requested or caused a stay of a proceeding must immediately serve and file a notice of the stay and attach a copy of the order or other document showing that the proceeding is stayed. If the person who requested or caused the stay has not appeared, or is not subject to the jurisdiction of the court, the plaintiff must immediately file a notice of the stay and attach a copy of the order or other document showing that the proceeding is stayed. The notice of stay must be served on all parties who have appeared in the case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.650(a)].

The party responsible for giving notice under (a) must provide notice if the case is stayed for any of the following reasons [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.650(a)]:

- An order of a federal court or a higher state court;
- Contractual arbitration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.4;
- Arbitration of attorney fees and costs under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201;
- Automatic stay caused by a filing in another court, including a federal bankruptcy court.

The notice must state whether the case is stayed with regard to all parties or only certain parties. If it is stayed with regard to only certain parties, the notice must specifically identify those parties. The notice must also state the reason that the case is stayed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.650(c)].

For the mandatory form of notice, Judicial Council Form CM-180, Notice of Stay of Proceedings, see § 137.63.

[2] Duty to Give Notice of Termination or Modification of Stay

When a stay is vacated, is no longer in effect, or is modified, the party who filed the notice of the stay must immediately serve and file a notice of termination or modification of stay. If that party fails to do so, any other party in the action who has knowledge of the termination or modification of the stay must serve and file a notice of termination or modification of stay. Once one party in the action has served and filed a notice of termination or modification of stay, other parties in the action are not required to do so [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.650(d)].

For the mandatory form of notice, Judicial Council Form CM-181, Notice of Termination or Modification of Stay, see § 137.64.

Chapter 140 CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Definitions and Specific Provisions

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.10

§ 140.10 Definitions

[1] Contract and Agreement

The Civil Code defines a contract as an agreement to do or not to do a particular thing [Civ. Code § 1549; Breckinridge v. Crocker (1889) 78 Cal. 529, 536, 21 P. 179] . Generally, however, "agreement" has a wider meaning than "contract":

- An agreement is a manifestation of mutual assent by two or more persons to one another, which may be made by words or by any other conduct, including silence [see Stevens v. Dillon (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 178, 182, 168 P.2d 492] .

- A contract is an enforceable agreement that satisfies the requirements for a contract [see Civ. Code § 1550; § 140.20] and creates an obligation or duty, for the breach of which the law supplies a remedy to the party to whom the obligation or duty is owed [see Scott v. Security Title Ins. & Guar. Co. (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 606, 614, 72 P.2d 143 ; Ulwelling v. Crown Coach Corp. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 96, 137 138, 23 Cal. Rptr. 631] .

[2] Oral or Written Contract

All contracts may be oral, except those that are specifically required by statute to be in writing [Civ. Code § 1622; see, e.g., Fam. Code § 1611 (premarital agreements); former Civ. Code § 5134 (marriage settlement agreements executed before 1986, see Fam. Code § 1503)]. A contract may be partly oral and partly written [Griffith v. Bucknam (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 454, 458 184 P.2d 179] .

In an action based on a contract, the court may apply various rules distinguishing oral contracts and written contracts, for example:

- The limitation period generally is two years for an action based on an oral contract [Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1)] or four years for an action based on a written contract [Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1)], but there are exceptions [see, e.g., Com. Code § 2725 (period may be from one year to four years for action on contract for sale of goods, whether oral or written)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

- The statute of frauds may be pleaded in defense against enforcement of a contract listed in the statute, if the contract is oral and no note or memorandum of the contract is in writing and subscribed by the defendant or his or her agent [see, e.g., Civ. Code § 1624; Prob. Code § 21700 (contract to make will or not to revoke will)]. For a form for an affirmative defense based on the statute of frauds, see § 140.143; for further discussion and forms, see Ch. 530, Statute of Frauds .

- The parol evidence rule generally may be raised to preclude evidence of the terms of a written contract, other than the writing [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1856; for discussion of the parol evidence rule, see § 140.31, below].

For forms for complaints for breach of a written contract, see §§ 140.101 -140.103, 140.105; for a form for a complaint for breach of an oral contract, see § 140.104.

[3] Executory or Executed Contract

An executory contract is one that, to some extent, remains to be performed, whereas an executed contract is one that has been fully performed [Civ. Code § 1661; Mather v. Mather (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 582, 586 587, 154 P.2d 684] . There must be complete performance by both parties for the contract to be executed; performance on only one side is not sufficient [Smith v. Parlier Winery, Inc. (1935) 7 Cal. App. 2d 357, 360, 46 P.2d 170] .

[4] Unilateral or Bilateral Contract

A bilateral contract comprises an exchange of promises made by both parties, while a unilateral contract is a promise made by one party in exchange for an expected act or forbearance, which the other party subsequently does or forbears to do, with knowledge of the promise [see Davis v. Jacoby (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 370, 378, 34 P.2d 1026] . A unilateral contract sometimes is described in terms of offer and acceptance; the promise is an offer, which the other party may accept by doing, or forbearing to do, a specified act [Asmus v. Pacific Bell (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 1, 14-15, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179, 999 P.2d 71 (after employer modified its unilaterally adopted policy, employees' continued employment constituted acceptance of offer of modified unilateral contract); Newberger v. Rifkind (1972) 104 Cal. Rptr. 663 (continuing in employment was acceptance of employer's implied offer of unilateral contract consisting of right to exercise stock option); Tetrick v. Sloan (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 540, 546 547, 339 P.2d 613 (offer to pay broker's commission for selling particular real estate generally required acceptance by act of selling real estate)]. For discussion of offer and acceptance generally, see § 140.22[3], [4].

[5] Express or Implied Contract

[a] In General

A contract is either express or implied [Civ. Code § 1619]. The terms of an express contract are stated in words [Civ. Code § 1620], whereas the existence and terms of an implied contract are manifested by conduct [Civ. Code § 1621; Bell v. Superior Court (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1108,263 Cal. Rptr. 787 ; McGough v. University of San Francisco (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1577, 1584, 263 Cal. Rptr. 404 ; see Mitsui O.S.K. Lines v. Dynasea Corp. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 208, 212-213, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (no implied contract that defendant agreed to pay freight charges for shipment)]. For example, if one party does not rely on the explicit words by which the parties agreed, but instead considers that a course of conduct, which may include various oral representations, has created a reasonable expectation of a certain performance, then failure to receive that performance gives rise to a cause of action for breach of an implied-in-fact contract [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 675, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; McGough v. University of San Francisco (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1577, 1584 1585, 263 Cal. Rptr. 404 ; Wilkerson v. Wells Fargo Bank (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1217, 1225 n.2, 261 Cal. Rptr. 185 ; see Scott v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 454, 463-464, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427, 904 P.2d 834 ; Kawasho Internat. (U.S.A.), Inc. v. Lakewood Pipe Service, Inc. (1983) 152 Cal. App. 3d 785, 789 791, 201 Cal. Rptr. 640] . For an allegation of a contract implied in fact to be used in a complaint for breach of contract, see § 140.110.

The essential elements of an implied-in-fact contract and an express contract are the same, namely, mutual assent and consideration [McGough v. University of San Francisco (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1577, 1584, 263 Cal. Rptr. 404 ; Chandler v. Roach (1957) 156 Cal. App. 2d 435, 440, 319 P.2d 776] . Similarly, once the implied-in-fact contract is established, its terms stand on an equal footing with express terms [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 677, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373] .

An essential difference between an implied contract and an express contract is the mode of proof [Bell v. Superior Court (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1108, 263 Cal. Rptr. 787] . When the contract is implied, the party asserting the contract must prove conduct from which the court can infer the promise [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 677, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; Youngman v. Nevada Irrigation Dist. (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 240, 246, 74 Cal. Rptr. 398, 449 P.2d 462] . The court must determine, as a matter of fact, whether the parties acted in a manner that provides the necessary foundation for the implied contract. The plaintiff may introduce evidence of the parties' conduct, and the defendant may introduce evidence rebutting the inferences arising from that conduct or showing another explanation for it [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 677, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373] .

[b] Implied-in-Fact or Implied-by-Law Contract

Implied contracts under Civ. Code §§ 1619 and 1621 refer to implied-in-fact contracts that arise from the mutual agreement of the parties [Iusi v. Chase (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 83, 87, 337 P.2d 79 ; see § 140.10[5][a]]. Courts recognize contracts called "implied-by-law contracts" or "quasi-contracts" to prevent the unjust enrichment of one party, who has no intent, either express or implied, to pay or to make reimbursement for something of value received by that party. The law imposes an obligation to pay or reimburse because good conscience dictates that the party benefited should make the payment reimbursement [Santa Clara County v. Robbiano (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 845, 848, 5 Cal. Rptr. 19 ; see Halperin v. Raville (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 765, 774, 222 Cal. Rptr. 350 (imposing liability to repay loan to family business on equitable ground when no express promise was made)].

The equitable doctrine of unjust enrichment applies where the plaintiff, while having no enforceable contract, nonetheless has conferred a benefit on the defendant, which the defendant has knowingly accepted in circumstances in which it would be inequitable for the defendant to retain the benefit without paying for its value. The phrase "unjust enrichment" does not describe a theory of recovery but describes the effect that would result from a failure to make restitution in circumstances where it is equitable to do so. Therefore, no particular form of pleading is necessary to invoke the doctrine of restitution, and a well-pleaded claim for breach of contract can be sufficient. While the measure of damages for unjust enrichment is essentially restitution, that concept that has been expanded in modern jurisprudence to include, not only the restoration of something, but also compensation, reimbursement, indemnification, or reparation for benefits derived from, or for loss or injury caused to, another [Dunkin v. Boskey (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 171, 195, 198, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 44 ; accord, Hernandez v. Lopez (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 932, 939, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 376 (Dunkin was dispositive in case that was "textbook example for application of the equitable doctrine of unjust enrichment"; plaintiff pleaded cause of action for breach of contract that fully raised all facts and circumstances in which equity could contemplate quasi-contractual remedy to prevent defendant from being unjustly enriched)].

As a general rule, a public entity cannot be sued on an implied-by-law contract or quasi-contract. The theory of recovery is based on quantum meruit and equitable theories of restitution, which are outweighed by the need to protect and limit a public entity's contractual obligations [see Miller v. McKinnon (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 83, 88, 124 P.2d 34 ; Lundeen

Coatings Corp. v. Department of Water & Power (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 816, 832 n.9, 283 Cal. Rptr. 551] .

[6] Void or Voidable Contract

A voidable contract is one that is void as to one party, who has acted wrongly, but not void as to the other party, who has not acted wrongly, unless the innocent party elects to treat it as void. Thus, a voidable contract may be rendered a nullity at the option of an innocent party [BGJ Associates, LLC v. Wilson (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 1226-1230, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140 (oral joint venture agreement between attorney and client which was result of undue influence and violation of attorney's fiduciary duties was voidable; client did not ratify it by his conduct); White Dragon Prods. v. Performance Guarantees, Inc. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 163, 172, 241 Cal. Rptr. 745 ; Depner v. Joseph Zukin Blouses (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 124, 127, 56 P.2d 574] .

A void contract is a nullity by operation of law. It cannot be given any effect, and it cannot be ratified by a party [Durbin v. Hillman (1920) 50 Cal. App. 377, 379, 195 P. 274] . A contract void because of illegality has no legal existence for any purpose, and it may not serve as the foundation of any action, either at law or in equity [R.M. Sherman Co. v. W.R. Thomason, Inc. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 559, 563, 236 Cal. Rptr. 577] . However, one who is not a party to a contract does not have standing to seek to void it on public policy grounds [Killian v. Millard (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1601, 1605, 1607, 279 Cal. Rptr. 877 (plaintiffs sold interests in litigation to finance it; defendant had no standing to void those contracts)].

Determining whether a particular contract is void or merely voidable is not always easy [see, e.g., Asdourian v. Araj (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 276, 291-294, 211 Cal. Rptr. 703, 696 P.2d 95 ; White Dragon Prods. v. Performance Guarantees, Inc. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 163, 172-173, 241 Cal. Rptr. 745] . For forms for raising an affirmative defense of illegality, see §§ 140.144, 140.145; for coverage of this issue in various contexts see Ch. 215, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake , which discusses and includes forms for allegations related to the defenses to formation of a contract discussed in this chapter, and Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution.

[1] Effect

The parties to a contract may agree contractually in advance on the forum for resolving disputes between them. A forum selection clause in a contract will be given effect unless it is unfair or unreasonable [M/S Bremen v. Zapata Off-Shore Co. (1972) 407 U.S. 1, 15, 92 S. Ct. 1907, 32 L. Ed. 2d 513 (enforcing reasonable clause in international commercial transaction stipulating forum in England unless invalid for fraud or overreaching); Richards v. Lloyd's of London (9th Cir. 1997) 135 F.3d 1289, 1294-1296 (applying Bremen and holding that antiwaiver provisions of Securities Act of 1933 and Securities Exchange Act of 1934 did not void contract's forum selection and choice of law provisions in international transaction); Smith, Valentino & Smith, Inc. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 491, 495-496, 131 Cal. Rptr. 374, 551 P.2d 1206 (enforcement does not contravene policy favoring access to courts by resident plaintiffs if plaintiff has freely and voluntarily negotiated away that right); Cal-State Business Products & Services, Inc. v. Ricoh (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1666, 1678, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417] .

"Unreasonable" in this context means that the party challenging the forum-selection clause must establish one of the following facts [Smith, Valentino & Smith, Inc. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 491, 494-496, 131 Cal. Rptr. 374, 551 P.2d 1206 ; Cal-State Business Products & Services, Inc. v. Ricoh (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1666, 1679, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417] :

- The forum selected would be unavailable or unable to accomplish substantial justice;

- The forum selection clause is the result of overreaching or the unfair use of unequal bargaining power; or

- The forum chosen by the parties would be seriously inconvenient for the trial of the particular action.

Neither inconvenience nor additional expense in litigating in the selected forum is part of the test of unreasonableness [Smith, Valentino & Smith, Inc. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 491, 496, 131 Cal. Rptr. 374, 551 P.2d 1206 ;

America Online, Inc. v. Superior Court (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 1, 15, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 699 (expense of litigating in Virginia rather than California should not be considered); Furda v. Superior Court (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 418, 426-427, 207 Cal. Rptr. 646] . However, the choice of forum must have some rational basis, and enforcement of the forum selection clause must not bring about a result contrary to the public policy of the forum [Furda v. Superior Court (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 418, 426, 427, 207 Cal. Rptr. 646 ; see Cal-State Business Products & Services, Inc. v. Ricoh (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1666, 1681-1682, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417 (New York was major commercial center close enough to one party's domicile to have sufficient nexus for parties domiciled in New Jersey and California)]. For example, in a case in which a forum selection clause designated Virginia as the jurisdiction in which all disputes arising out of the relationship would be litigated, the court held that because one of the causes of action sought class action relief under the Consumers Legal Remedies Act [Civ. Code § 1750 et seq.], which voids any waiver of rights under the Act as contrary to public policy, enforcement of the clause would be the functional equivalent of a contractual waiver and thus was prohibited under California law [America Online, Inc. v. Superior Court (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 1, 15, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 699 (also concluding that because Virginia law does not allow consumer lawsuits to be brought as class actions, rights of California class members would be diminished if they were required to litigate in Virginia)].

A contractual venue selection clause differs from a forum selection clause in that it is purely an intrastate issue involving the selection of a county in which to hold the trial, rather than the selection of a court from among different states or nations. Such a clause has been held invalid to the extent that it is inconsistent with the statutory venue scheme [Alexander v. Superior Court (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 723, 725-727, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 111 (finding that agreements fixing venue in location other than that allowed by statute violate public policy)].

[2] Enforcement

[a] Fairness Test

Courts will enforce a forum selection clause in a contract entered into freely and voluntarily by parties who have negotiated at arms' length [Smith, Valentino & Smith, Inc. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 491, 495-496, 131 Cal. Rptr. 374, 551 P.2d 1206 ; Cal-State Business Products & Services, Inc. v. Ricoh (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1666, 1679, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417] . The parties entered into a forum selection clause freely and voluntarily if the party who is displeased with it had the power to walk away from the contract negotiations [Cal-State Business Products & Services, Inc. v. Ricoh (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1666, 1681, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417] .

Even if the forum selection clause is in a contract of adhesion and was not the subject of bargaining, the courts will enforce it if [Carnival Cruise Lines, Inc. v. Shute (1991) 499 U.S. 585, 591-594, 111 S. Ct. 1522, 113 L. Ed. 2d 622, 633 ; Cal State Business Products & Services, Inc. v. Ricoh (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1666, 1679, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417 ; Furda v. Superior Court (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 418, 426, 207 Cal. Rptr. 646 ; Bos Material Handling, Inc. v. Crown Controls Corp. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 99, 108,186 Cal. Rptr. 740 ; see Hunt v. Superior Court (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 901, 908-909, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215 (in dispute involving lease and guaranty, forum selection clause held not valid when it did not give notice that party was consenting to have California exercise personal jurisdiction)]:

- There is no evidence of unfair use of superior power to impose the contract on the other party; and
- The clause is within the reasonable expectations of the party against whom it is being enforced.

[b] Clause in Contract for Ocean Passage

Forum selection clauses on cruise tickets are governed by federal admiralty law. They are not invalid simply because they are not negotiated and are found in form ticket contracts, at least when the passenger does not claim lack of notice of the clause and evidence does not support a finding that the chosen forum is inconvenient [Carnival Cruise Lines, Inc. v. Shute (1991) 499 U.S. 585, 590, 595, 111 S. Ct. 1522, 113 L. Ed. 2d 622, 629, 632-633, 634 (clause does not violate 46 U.S.C. App. § 183c)].

However, when the ticket is purchased in California and there is an issue regarding the consumer's notice of a forum selection clause, the courts will determine the issue in accordance with Civ. Code §§ 1550, 1565, and 1580, which would make such a clause unenforceable as to any plaintiff who did not have sufficient notice of the clause before entering into the contract. Absent notice, mutual consent would be lacking [see Carnival Cruise Lines, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1019, 1026-1027, 286 Cal. Rptr. 323 (on remand from United States Supreme Court, state court of appeal again remanded for factual determinations regarding notice)].

[3] Challenge to Enforcement of Clause

A defendant seeking to challenge the plaintiff's choice of forum on the basis of a forum selection clause may move to dismiss or stay the action because of inconvenient forum [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.30, 418.10]. In an ordinary (i.e., noncontractually based) challenge to the forum in which the plaintiff initiated the action, the defendant's burden of proof is set forth by the statutory criteria of forum non conveniens and substantial justice [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.30(a), 418.10(a)(2); Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 751, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14 ; Cal-State Business Products & Services, Inc. v. Ricoh (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1666, 1675-1678, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417] .

When a party moves under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.30 and 418.10 for enforcement of a forum selection clause, the party opposing enforcement of the clause (generally the plaintiff) bears the burden of proving that there are grounds for invalidating the contract provision [Smith, Valentino & Smith, Inc. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 491, 496, 131 Cal. Rptr. 374, 551 P.2d 1206 ; Cal-State Business Products & Services, Inc. v. Ricoh(1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1666, 1680-1681, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417] . Because the plaintiff, by entering into a contract with a forum selection provision, has contracted away the right to the forum of preference, and the defendant is seeking to enforce the contract right to the preferred forum, the issues are whether the provision is reasonable and whether it was the result of overreaching or the use of unfair bargaining power [Cal-State Business Products & Services, Inc. v. Ricoh (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1666, 1678-1683, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417 ; but see Lifeco Services Corp. v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 331, 335, 271 Cal. Rptr. 385 (forum selection clause enforced on basis of reasonableness, but court also engaged in analysis of traditional forum non conveniens factors)]. If, however, recovery in an action is based on legislation that contains a statutory anti-waiver provision, the burden of proof may be shifted to the party seeking enforcement of the forum selection clause [America Online, Inc. v. Superior Court (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10-11, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 699 (fact that claims were pleaded under Consumers Legal Remedies Act containing statutory anti-waiver provision mandated departure from general rule that places burden of proving unfairness or unreasonableness of forum selection clause on party opposed to its enforcement); *accord, Doe 1 v. AOL LLC (9th Cir. 2009) 552 F.3d 1077, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 875, at *15-19] .

A plaintiff who is not a party to a contract will be bound by the contract's forum selection clause if (1) the third party is closely related to the contractual relationship, and (2) the contractual forum state provides a suitable alternative forum for the lawsuit [Net2phone, Inc. v. Superior Court (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 583, 587 (private plaintiff which itself had suffered no injury but filed representative action under California's unfair competition law alleging that defendant's contractual provisions subjected its customers to unfair business practices was bound by contract providing that disputes would be subject to exclusive jurisdiction in New Jersey)]. However, a nonparty to the contract may not be entitled to enforce a contractual forum selection clause on the basis of being "closely related to the contractual relationship" between the parties [see, e.g., Bancomer, S.A. v. Superior Court (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1450, 1458-1461, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 435 (bank, designated in purchase agreement to establish trust through which interests in Mexico resort would be purchased, not entitled to enforce forum selection clause because it lacked standing as third-party beneficiary and was not "closely related to contractual relationship" between vendor and purchaser); see also Berclain America Latina v. Baan Company N.V. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 401, 407-409, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745 (reversing order dismissing action based on forum selection clause when corporation was neither signatory nor third party beneficiary of agreement, and was not so closely related to signatory as to be entitled to assert forum selection clause)]. The key to the "closely related" test is whether the nonsignatories were close to the contractual relationship. Giving standing to all closely related entities honors general principles of judicial economy by making all parties closely allied to the contractual relationship accountable in the same forum, thereby abating a proliferation of actions and inconsistent rulings [Bugna v. Fike (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 229, 233-236, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161 (defendants, who were not signatories to contract, but who were closely related to contractual relationship by virtue of negotiating, evaluating, and putting together transactions under attack, held entitled to enforce forum selection clause)].

For discussion and forms related to the enforceability and enforcement of forum selection clauses and motions to dismiss or stay for inconvenient forum, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal .

Chapter 140 CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Definitions and Specific Provisions

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.12

§ 140.12 Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

[1] In Every Contract

California law recognizes an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in every contract. However, breach of the covenant does not necessarily give rise to a cause of action [Quigley v. Pet, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 877, 889-890, 208 Cal. Rptr. 394] . The covenant is to the effect that neither party to the contract will do anything deliberately to deprive the other of the benefits of the agreement [Pasadena Live, LLC v. City of Pasadena (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1089, 1092-1094, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 233 (allegation that defendant city breached implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by preventing plaintiff entertainment production company from even submitting entertainment proposals for consideration adequately alleged breach of contract for amphitheater productions); see Oracle Corp. v. Falotti (9th Cir. 2003) 319 F.3d 1106, 1111-1112 (compensation committee did not breach covenant of good faith and fair dealing under stock option agreement); Quigley v. Pet, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 877, 887-888, 887 n.2, 893-894, 893 n.5, 894 n.6, 208 Cal. Rptr. 394 (difference between contract standard and tort standard)].

A breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing involves something more than a breach of a contractual duty itself. It involves unfair dealing (which may or may not also constitute a breach of an express contract term) in the form of a conscious and deliberate act that unfairly frustrates the agreed common purpose of the contract and disappoints the reasonable expectations of the other party to the contract [Celador Int'l Ltd. v. Walt Disney Co. (C.D. Cal. 2004) 347 F. Supp. 2d 846, 852 , citing Careau & Co. v. Security Pac. Bus. Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1394, 272 Cal. Rptr. 387] . If a claim for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing does not go beyond the statement of a breach of the express contractual terms and seeks the same relief sought in a breach of contract claim, it is simply superfluous to the contract claim. However, a claim for breach of the implied covenant is separate and distinct from a contract claim in three situations: (1) if no contract claim is alleged; (2) if the plaintiff is seeking recovery in tort; and (3) if the plaintiff alleges that the defendant acted in bad faith to frustrate the benefits plaintiff was to receive under the contract [Celador Int'l Ltd. v. Walt Disney Co. (C.D. Cal.2004) 347 F. Supp. 2d 846, 852 , citing Careau & Co. v. Security Pac. Bus. Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1395, 272 Cal. Rptr. 387 , Guz v. Bechtel Nat'l, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 353 n. 18, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089] .

The implied covenant does not create a fiduciary relationship; it merely affords a basis for redress for breach of contract [see Wolf v. Superior Court (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 25, 30-31, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 860 (contingent entitlement to future compensation within control of one party did not, alone, give rise to fiduciary relationship)]. Without an express contractual relationship, a party cannot assert a cause of action for breach of the implied covenant [Smith v. City and County of San Francisco (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 38, 49, 275 Cal. Rptr. 17 (statutory relationship between developer and city would not support cause of action for breach of implied covenant; promissory estoppel argument also failed); Kim v. Regents of the University of California (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 160, 164-165, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10 (civil service employee could not state cause of action for breach of contractual covenant of good faith and fair dealing, since public employment is held by statute rather than by contract)].

[2] Nature of Duty Imposed

The precise nature and extent of the duty imposed by this covenant depends on the contractual purposes [Sheppard v. Morgan Keegan & Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 61, 66-67, 266 Cal. Rptr. 784 ; Ellis v. Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 132, 139, 246 Cal. Rptr. 863 ; Mobil Oil Corp. v. Exxon Corp. (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 942, 949, 223 Cal. Rptr. 392 (judgment on pleadings usually improper when precise extent of duty imposed by covenant at issue)]. However, courts will not use the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing to vary the terms on an unambiguous agreement or to override an express provision in a contract [Carma Developers (Cal.), Inc. v. Marathon Development California, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 342, 374-376, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 467, 826 P.2d 710 (termination of lease); April Enterprises, Inc. v. KTTV (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 805, 816, 195 Cal. Rptr. 421] . Further, courts will not apply the implied covenant when the contract is unambiguous and implication of the covenant is not needed to effectuate the parties' expressed desire for a binding agreement [Storek & Storek, Inc. v. Citicorp Real Estate, Inc. (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 44, 55-58, 64, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 267 (covenant of good faith and fair dealing not implied so as to prohibit defendant lender from doing what it was expressly permitted to do under loan agreement--withhold loan funds when conditions precedent to its performance were not fulfilled to its satisfaction); Third Story Music, Inc. v. Waits (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 798, 808-809, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747 (corporation's promise to market music or refrain from doing so, at its election, was not subject to implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing)].

If a contract gives one party discretion to affect rights of the other party, this covenant imposes a duty to exercise that discretion in good faith and in accordance with fair dealing [Cal. Lettuce Growers v. Union Sugar Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 474, 484, 289 P.2d 785 ; Locke v. Warner Bros., Inc. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 354, 363-364, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 921 ; Sheppard v. Morgan Keegan & Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 61, 67, 266 Cal. Rptr. 784 ; Walter E. Heller Western, Inc. v. Tecrim Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 149, 161, 241 Cal. Rptr. 677] . For example, in a case in which a class of automobile purchasers sued the corporation that financed the purchases for breach of contract, the court of appeal held that the corporation breached the implied covenant by using a method of computing mandatory insurance premium and refunds--the accelerated method--that was not objectively reasonable [Acree v. General Motors Acceptance Corp. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 385, 393-396, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 99 (given sales agreement's silence on issue of premium refund method, borrower legitimately could expect that a different refund method--pro-rata by time method--would be used)]. In another example, when a legal publisher's author agreement obligated the publisher to make a judgment as to the quality or literary merit of the author's work, the court held that the contract was not illusory because the publisher's duty to exercise its discretion was limited by its duty of good faith and fair dealing [Chodos v. West Publishing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 992, 997 (publisher was required to make judgment in good faith and could not reject manuscript for other unrelated reasons)].

[3] Breach of Implied Covenant in Insurance Contract

In the context of insurance policies, a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing may be the basis for a tort action [see Comunale v. Traders & General Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 658, 328 P.2d 198 ; for tort and contract actions, see § 140.56[2], see generally Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.10 et seq.]. Courts that allow the cause of action in the context of insurance contracts emphasize the special relationship between the contracting parties, characterized by elements of public interest, adhesion, and fiduciary responsibility [see, e.g., Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 820, 157 Cal. Rptr. 482, 598 P.2d 452 , cert. denied, 445 U.S. 912 (1980)] .

The special relationship test involves the following characteristics [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 690-691, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; see Wallis v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 1109, 1119, 207 Cal. Rptr. 123 (using five criteria instead of four)]:

- One of the parties to the contract enjoys a superior bargaining position to the extent of being able to dictate the terms of the contract;

- The purpose of the weaker party in entering into the contract is not primarily to profit but rather to secure an essential service or product, financial security, or peace of mind;

- The relationship of the parties is such that the weaker party places trust and confidence in the stronger party; and

- There is conduct on the part of the stronger party indicating an intention to frustrate the weaker party's enjoyment of the contract rights.

[4] Bad-Faith Denial of Existence of Contract

In 1995, the California Supreme Court ruled in Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. that tort recovery is precluded for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing outside the insurance context, at least in the absence of an independent duty arising from principles of tort law other than the bad faith denial of the existence of, or liability under, the breached contract [Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 85, 102, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420, 900 P.2d 669] . The Court expressly overruled a 1984 case holding that a party to a contract may be subject to tort remedies when, in addition to breaching the contract, the party seeks to avoid liability by denying, in bad faith and without probable cause, that the contract exists [Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 85, 92, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420, 900 P.2d 669 ; Seaman's Direct Buying Service, Inc. v. Standard Oil Co. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 752, 769-770, 206 Cal. Rptr. 354, 686 P.2d 1158] . That cause of action was known as the tort of bad faith denial of the existence of a contract. The Court concluded that the former rule was no longer viable [see Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 85, 102-103, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420, 900 P.2d 669] . However, the Court emphasized that nothing in the Freeman opinion should be read as affecting existing precedent governing enforcement of implied contracts in insurance cases [Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 85, 103, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420, 900 P.2d 669] .

The Court's opinion in Freeman contained no statement regarding the effect of its decision on pending actions. It appears that the decision was fully retroactive and barred any pending claims based on the abrogated cause of action [see Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Companies (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 287, 305, 250 Cal. Rptr 116, 758 P.2d 58 ; Peterson v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 147, 151-152, 181 Cal. Rptr. 784, 642 P.2d 1305] .

§ 140.13 Arbitration Clause and Service-of-Suit Clause

In a service-of-suit clause, a party agrees to submit to the personal jurisdiction of designated courts for specified purposes related to the contract. The purpose of such a clause is to ease the burdens that the beneficiary of the clause might otherwise encounter in trying to obtain service of process sufficient to establish personal jurisdiction over the other party (for instance, when the other party is not a citizen of the United States and has no presence in the United States). Generally, because of the publicpolicy favoring arbitration in lieu of litigation, courts have tended to hold that a service-of-suit clause can co-exist in a contract along with an arbitration clause--that is, the two clauses will not be in conflict--as long as the service-of-suit clause can be interpreted as having been intended to facilitate enforcement of the arbitration clause. This is easily possible if the arbitration clause is qualified by an introductory phrase such as "Notwithstanding every other provision of this contract... " [Boghos v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 495, 502-503, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 787, 115 P.3d 68 (both clauses could operate in insurance contract when it was construed so that service-of-suit clause would allow insured to sue in court if insurer refused to arbitrate or refused to pay award)].

- A lawful object, which may be assumed as long as the contract is not specifically prohibited [see generally, e.g., Civ. Code § 1667 et seq. (unlawful contracts)] and unless the defendant asserts illegality of the contract [see § 140.24].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Formation of Enforceable Contract

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.21

§ 140.21 Person Incapable of Contracting

[1] Unsound Mind

[a] Contract Void

A person entirely without understanding or whose incapacity has been judicially determined and who has not been restored to reason has no power to make a contract of any kind. Any contract entered into by such a person is void, except that a person entirely without understanding is liable for the reasonable value of things furnished that are necessary for his or her support or the support of his or her family [Civ. Code §§ 38, 40]. A person whose incapacity has been judicially determined is liable on a contract implied by law for the payment of necessaries. Whether an incompetent person can be liable on an express contract for necessaries appears unlikely [Estate of Doyle (1932) 126 Cal. App. 646, 647, 14 P.2d 920] .

The term "understanding" denotes not the act of understanding but the capacity or faculty of doing so. The expression "without understanding" denotes persons without that capacity. However, the expression should not be understood in its literal and extreme sense because even the most disabled person may have some degree of understanding. Instead, the expression as it applies to both executed and executory contracts, refers to a person entirely without the capacity to understand or comprehend such transactions [Jacks v. Estee (1903) 139 Cal. 507, 511, 73 P. 247] .

The statutory exception cannot be invoked by a person of sound mind who wants to avoid a contract with a person subsequently ascertained to be of unsound mind. Civ. Code §§ 38, 40 are intended to protect only persons without the capacity to comprehend the nature and subject of a contract [San Francisco Credit Clearing-House v. MacDonald (1912) 18 Cal. App. 212, 215, 122 P. 964] .

[b] Contract Voidable

A contract made by a person of unsound mind but not totally without understanding, before the person has been judicially determined to be without capacity, may be rescinded [Civ. Code §§ 39(a), 1689(b)(7); but see Saret-Cook v. Gilbert, Kelly, Crowley & Jennett (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1225-1227, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 732 (even if plaintiff lacked contractual capacity because she was under influence of Demerol at time of executing agreement, she both ratified contract and accepted benefits under agreement)]. A person need not be incompetent to enter into every kind of contract to obtain rescission. The test is whether the person could deal with the subject matter of the contract sought to be rescinded, with a full understanding of his or her rights and the nature, purpose, and effect of what he or she did with respect to the particular transaction [Walton v. Bank of California (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 527, 541, 32 Cal. Rptr. 856] .

The test of understanding varies from one contract to the next [Smalley v. Baker (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 824, 832, 69 Cal. Rptr. 521] . However, a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof that a person is of unsound mind exists for purposes of rescission if the person is substantially unable to manage his or her own financial resources or resist fraud or undue influence [Civ. Code § 39(b)]. Substantial inability may not be proved solely by isolated incidents of negligence or imprudence [Civ. Code § 39(b)].

Incompetence is determined as of the time the contract was made. In addition, the right to rescind does not depend on knowledge of the disabled party's incompetence or fraud on the part of the other party [Weseman v. Latham (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 841, 846, 315 P.2d 364] .

For a complaint for relief based on rescission of a contract as a result of incompetence before adjudication, see Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution . For affirmative defenses based on various degrees of incapacity to contract, see §§ 140.133 -140.135.

[c] Evidentiary Requirements

The Probate Code establishes evidentiary requirements relating to judicial determinations of capacity, including the capacity to contract [see Prob. Code § 812 (application of rules)]. A determination that a person is of unsound mind or lacks the capacity to contract must be supported by evidence of a deficit in at least one of four specified mental functions, and evidence of a correlation between the deficit or deficits and the decision or acts in question [Prob. Code § 811(a)]:

- Alertness and attention;
- Information processing;
- Thought processes; and
- Ability to modulate mood and effect.

There are specific statutory examples of what is sufficient to demonstrate impairment in each of these categories.

The court may consider such a deficit only if the deficit, by itself or in combination with other mental-function deficits, significantly impairs the person's ability to understand and appreciate the consequences of his or her actions with regard to the type of act or decision in question [Prob. Code § 811(b)]. The court may take into consideration the frequency, severity, and duration of periods of impairment [Prob. Code § 811(c)].

Diagnosis of a mental or physical disorder is insufficient by itself to support a determination that a person is of unsound mind or lacks the capacity to contract [Prob. Code § 811(d); see Prob. Code § 810(b) (legislative findings and declarations in support of requirements specified in Prob. Code § 811)].

[2] Defendant Deprived of Civil Rights

Persons deprived of their civil rights are not capable of contracting [Civ. Code § 1556; see Penal Code § 2600 (deprivation of state prisoners' civil rights)]. Any person deprived of civil rights may assert the defense of incapacity to contract, especially if the evidence shows that the party asserted the incapacity but the other party proceeded with the contract [Rosman v. Cuevas (1959) 176 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 867, 869, 1 Cal. Rptr. 485 ; but cf. Jones v. Allen (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 278, 282-283, 8 Cal. Rptr. 316 (seller who sold automobile to convict whose civil rights had been suspended did not remain owner for purpose of imposing liability for personal injuries sustained by person hit by automobile driven by convict)].

Chapter 140 CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Formation of Enforceable Contract

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.22

§ 140.22 Parties' Consent

[1] Consent Must Be Free

The consent of the parties must be freely given [Civ. Code § 1565]. A consent that is not free is nevertheless not ineffectual. The contract may be rescinded, in the manner prescribed by the rules for rescission contained in Civ. Code § 1688 et seq. [Civ. Code § 1566; see Thompson Crane & Trucking Co. v. Eyman (1954) 123 Cal. App. 2d 904, 908, 267 P.2d 1043] . For discussion and forms relating to rescission, see Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution .

An apparent consent is not real or free when obtained through duress, menace, fraud, undue influence, or mistake [Civ. Code § 1567; see Jones v. Adams Financial Services (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 831, 840, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151 (loan documents signed by elderly woman who was blind and suffered from dementia were obtained through fraud in the execution without negligence on plaintiff's part and contract therefore was void)]. Consent is deemed to have been obtained through one of these causes only when it would not have been given had the cause not existed [Civ. Code § 1568]. For discussion and forms relating to contracts tainted by such defects, see Ch. 215, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake .

When a party to a contract containing an arbitration clause elects to resist arbitration and asserts fraud in the inducement or fraud in the execution, special procedural rules apply because an arbitration clause is considered to be separable from the contract. If the party asserts fraud in the inducement of the contract generally, the assertion is no bar to the arbitration of the contract. The separable arbitration clause is considered valid, and the parties must arbitrate whether the contract was induced by fraud (even though a finding of fraud in the inducement may result in rescission of the contract as a whole). If, however, the party is asserting fraud in the inducement of the arbitration clause specifically, the assertion is to be resolved by the trial court, as it goes to the validity of the arbitration clause itself. An assertion of fraud in the execution of the entire agreement is not arbitrable under either state or federal law. If the entire contract is void ab initio because of fraud, the parties have not agreed to arbitrate any controversy; therefore, an issue of fraud in the execution is to be resolved by the trial court, not by an arbitrator [Brown v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 938, 958, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 817 ; see generally Rosenthal v. Great Western Fin. Securities Corp. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 394, 415-419, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 875, 926 P.2d 1061 (prescribing court's duty, in proceedings to compel arbitration, to determine existence and validity of arbitration agreement, as well as parties' respective burdens of proof); Toal v. Tardif (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1208, 1220-1222, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 97 (prescription, in Rosenthal opinion, of court's duty and parties' burdens of proof respecting existence of valid arbitration agreement, applies also to proceedings for confirmation of arbitration award; party's consent to arbitration agreement cannot be proved solely by evidence that party's attorney signed agreement on party's behalf)]. For discussion, see Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[4].

[2] Mutuality

[a] Requirement

The consent of the parties must be mutual [Civ. Code § 1565]. Consent is not mutual unless the parties agree on the same thing in the same sense [Civ. Code § 1580; see The Money Store v. Southern California Bank (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 722, 728, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58 (lender's closing instructions to bank exhibited mutual consent); Weddington Productions, Inc. v. Flick (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 793, 811 ; McClintock v. Robinson (1937) 18 Cal. App. 2d 577, 582, 64 P.2d 749] .

[b] Objective Test

The mutuality of the parties' consent must be gathered from their words and acts, judged by a reasonable standard, which must manifest an intention to agree in regard to the matter in question. The real but unexpressed state of a party's mind on the subject is immaterial [Brant v. California Dairies, Inc. (1935) 4 Cal. 2d 128, 133, 48 P.2d 13 ; Hilleary v. Garvin (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 322, 327, 238 Cal. Rptr. 247] . Under this objective test, a "meeting of the minds" is unnecessary. A party may be bound even though that party misunderstood the terms of a proposed contract and actually had a different undisclosed intention [Myers v. Carter (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 238, 241, 30 Cal. Rptr. 91] .

On the other hand, a failure to reach a meeting of the minds on all material points prevents the formation of a contract even though the parties have orally agreed on some of the terms or have taken some action related to the alleged contract [Banner Entertainment, Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 348, 359, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 598] . Thus, when undisputed facts showed that there was no meeting of the minds as to the essential structure and operation of an alleged joint venture, as a matter of law there was no contract, even if there was agreement on some of the terms [Bustamante v. Intuit, Inc. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 199, 215, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 692] .

[c] Unenforceable Promise Does Not Preclude Mutuality

A contract does not lack mutuality of consent if the promise of one of the parties is unenforceable or voidable because of a special privilege not expressly reserved in the promise but given by the law. Examples are the voidable contracts of minors and persons lacking mental capacity to contract [Metropolitan Water Dist. v. Marquardt (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 159, 179, 28 Cal. Rptr. 724, 379 P.2d 28 ; see § 140.21].

[3] Offer

[a] Definition

A contract is created by a proposal or offer by one party and an acceptance by the other [Tuso v. Green (1924) 194 Cal. 574, 580-581, 229 P. 327] . An offer is a promise that is in its terms conditional on an act, forbearance, or return promise to be given in exchange for the promise or its performance [Restatement of Contracts, § 24].

[b] Requirements

The offer must reach the offeree. The burden of ascertaining whether it did reach the offeree is on the offeror.

Consequently, the offeror, merely by sending an offer, is not entitled to take for granted that the offeree received and accepted it [American Bldg. Maintenance Co. v. Indemnity Ins. Co. (1932) 214 Cal. 608, 616, 7 P.2d 305] .

An offer must be sufficiently definite, or must call for such definite terms in the acceptance, that the performance promised is reasonably certain. A contract is void if it is so uncertain and indefinite that the intention of the parties in material respects cannot be determined [Weddington Productions, Inc. v. Flick (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 793, 811-812 ; Ladas v. California State Auto. Ass'n (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 770, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810 ; for the effect of a contract being void, see § 140.10[6]].

The California Supreme Court has held that a licensed auto dealer's newspaper advertisement for the sale of a particular vehicle at a specified price constituted an offer that was accepted by a customer's tender of the advertised price [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 261, 271, 276, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807, 27 P.3d 702 (construing offer in light of Veh. Code § 11713.1(e), which states it is a violation of Vehicle Code for dealer to fail to sell vehicle at advertised price)].

[c] Revocation Before Acceptance

The offeror may revoke an offer at any time before the offeree has communicated acceptance to the offeror, but not afterwards [Civ. Code § 1586; Grieve v. Mullaly (1930) 211 Cal. 77, 79, 293 P. 619 ; see Ersa Grae Corp. v. Fluor Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 613, 622, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288 (communication of revocation to offeror's agent did not revoke offer when agent did not notify offeree of revocation before offeree accepted); see also CPI Builders, Inc. v. Impco Technologies, Inc. (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1174, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 851 (offeror's communication of revocation to offeror's attorney did not revoke offer when offeror's attorney did not notify offeree's attorney of revocation before offeree accepted)]. The offeror may withdraw an offer that states that it will remain open for a given length of time at any time prior to acceptance unless based on a valuable consideration [Davies v. Langin (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 579, 584, 21 Cal. Rptr. 682 ; for discussion of options supported by consideration, see [d], below].

An offer is revoked on the occurrence of any of the following events:

- The communication of a notice of revocation by the offeror to the other party in the manner prescribed by Civ. Code §§ 1581 and 1583 (methods by which consent can be communicated and the time consent is deemed communicated) before the other party's acceptance has been communicated to the offeror [Civ. Code § 1587(1); Wilson v. White (1911) 161 Cal. 453, 462, 119 P. 895] . A personal messenger is not a "normal means of communication" or a "mode" of communication within the meaning of Civ. Code §§ 1582 and 1587. "Mode" refers to the medium, not to the messenger [Ersa Grae Corp. v. Fluor Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 613,622-623, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288] .

- The lapse of the time prescribed in the offer for its acceptance or, if no time is prescribed, the lapse of a reasonable time without communication of the acceptance [Civ. Code § 1587(2); Davies v. Langin (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 579, 584-585, 21 Cal. Rptr. 682] .

- The failure of the offeree to fulfill a condition precedent to acceptance [Civ. Code § 1587(3)].

- The death or insanity of the offeror before acceptance [Civ. Code § 1587(4); Bard v. Kent (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 449, 451-452, 122 P.2d 8] .

[d] Option Supported by Consideration

An option agreement is a unilateral contract that results when one party (the optionor) offers to do something when and if some condition is satisfied by the other party (the optionee), and consideration passes from the optionee to the optionor. Usually, the optionor's offer is to sell property to the optionee on specified terms within a specified period, and the condition is that the optionee must accept the offer--that is, exercise the option--within that period, and the consideration is the payment of money by the optionee [*Steiner v. Thexton (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 411, 106 Cal. Rptr. 3d 252, 226 P.3d 359, 2010 Cal. LEXIS 1913, at *10-11 ; County of San Diego v. Miller (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 684, 688, 119 Cal. Rptr. 491, 532 P.2d 139] . In some cases, the equitable doctrine of promissory estoppel can be applied to overcome the absence of normal consideration [e.g., A-C Co. v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 462, 472, 219 Cal. Rptr. 62 ; see § 140.23[8]].

This kind of unilateral contract may be called an irrevocable option, or irrevocable offer, because the effect of the consideration is to transform what would otherwise be a mere offer, which could be revoked at any time prior to acceptance, into an offer that cannot be revoked as long as satisfaction of the specified condition remains in the optionee's power [*Steiner v. Thexton (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 411, 106 Cal. Rptr. 3d 252, 226 P.3d 359, 2010 Cal. LEXIS 1913, at *15-25] .

In the case of an irrevocable option to purchase real property, the effect of the optionee's satisfying the specified condition is to supplant the unilateral contract (the option agreement) with a bilateral contract for sale of the property by the optionor and purchase by the optionee [Palo Alto Town & Country Village, Inc. v. BBTC Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 494, 503-504, 113 Cal. Rptr. 705, 521 P.2d 1097] .

An irrevocable option may be exercised against the optionor's successors following the optionor's death. Unless the option agreement provides to the contrary, an irrevocable option generally is assignable [County of San Diego v. Miller (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 684, 688, 119 Cal. Rptr. 491, 532 P.2d 139] .

[4] Acceptance

[a] Definition and Requirements

An acceptance of an offer is an expression of assent to the offered terms, made by the offeree in a manner requested or authorized by the offeror. Unless otherwise required by statute or by the terms of the offer [see Schreiber v. Hooker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 634, 639, 251 P.2d 55] , an acceptance may be written or oral [Riverside Fence Co. v. Novak (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 656, 661, 78 Cal. Rptr. 536] . An acceptance, to be effective, must comply with the terms of the offer in every respect, but it is not essential that the acceptance repeat the identical language [Schreiber v. Hooker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 634, 639, 251 P.2d 55] .

With respect to the procedure established by Code Civ. Proc. § 998, governing written offers to compromise a pending action, it has been held that both the policy of encouraging settlement and the desirability of maintaining certainty compel the conclusion that general contract principles should not apply to the determination of whether an offer has been rejected. Thus, in the absence of an unequivocal rejection of a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer, the offer may be accepted by the offeree during the statutory period unless the offer has been revoked by the offeror [Guzman v. Visalia Community Bank (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1370, 1376-1377, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581 (trial court erred in denying plaintiff's request to enforce defendant's Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer to compromise, since disparaging comment of plaintiff's counsel regarding that offer did not constitute a rejection)].

[b] Qualified Acceptance Is Rejection

The acceptance must be absolute and unqualified [Civ. Code § 1585; King v. Stanley (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 584, 588, 197 P.2d 321 , disapproved on other grounds, Patel v. Liebermensch (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 344, 351 n.4, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 366, 197 P.3d 177] . A qualified acceptance is a new proposal [Civ. Code § 1585; Ten Winkel v. Anglo Cal. Sec. Co. (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 707, 717, 81 P.2d 958 ; but see Com. Code § 2207 (expression of acceptance operates as acceptance even though additional or different terms are included)], and constitutes a rejection terminating the offer [see Roth v.

Malson (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 552, 557-559, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 226 (prospective buyer's response to seller's counteroffer was a counter-counteroffer rather than an acceptance, and no contract was formed)]. The new proposal (or counteroffer) must be accepted by the original offeror, now turned offeree, before a contract results [Landberg v. Landberg (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 742, 750, 101 Cal. Rptr. 335] .

[c] Sealed Bid as Acceptance

Generally, a seller who solicits sealed bids is not bound to accept the highest bid submitted. However, if the seller manifests an intent to be bound by the highest bid submitted, the request or bid is an offer [Carver v. Teitsworth (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 845, 851-852, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 (acceptance with following change manifested intent to be bound by highest bid: "Sale price to be determined by sealed bid(s) at price not less than $795,000, 2 PM. 9/12/88. Terms will not be renegotiated.")].

A sealed bid that states the price in terms of a formula, such as "$1,000 higher [or lower] than any other sealed bid received at the bid opening," is defective for uncertainty even if the price can be objectively determined [Carver v. Teitsworth (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 845, 853, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446] . The problem with formula bids is not that they are uncertain, but that they are considered unfair, and thus void, because they defraud both the soliciting party and the sum-certain bidders. The fraud on the sum-certain bidders occurs because it renders their bids ineffective and guarantees the formula bidder's supremacy. The prospect of a formula bidder frightens away potential sum-certain bidders, which chills competition. Fraud on the soliciting party occurs if the formula bidder prevails at a price lower (for a purchase) or higher (for a sale) than actual competition would have produced. However, formula bidding is fully valid if the soliciting party expressly solicits relative bids or if relative bidding is objectively reasonable as being customary in the particular trade or industry [Carver v. Teitsworth (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 845, 854-855, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 (reversing summary judgment for insufficiency of factual record, which contained no expert opinions regarding industry practice, although clearly sum-certain bidders were not aware that relative bid would be submitted)].

[d] When Acceptance Is Effective

Consent is deemed to be fully communicated between the parties as soon as the offeree puts an acceptance in the course of transmission to the offeror [Civ. Code § 1583; see Civ. Code § 1582 (requiring conformity to conditions of proposal)].

[5] Communication of Consent or Acceptance

[a] Requirement

Generally, in order to constitute a contract, the acceptance of an offer must be communicated to the offeror [Commercial Casualty Ins. Co. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 901, 907, 254 P.2d 954 ; see Civ. Code § 1565(3)]. For discussion of acceptance of unilateral contracts as an exception to this rule, see [b], below.

If an offer prescribes any conditions concerning communication of its acceptance, the offeror is not bound unless the acceptance satisfies those conditions. However, when the offer prescribes no conditions, the offeree may use any reasonable and usual mode of accepting [Civ. Code § 1582]. That is, if the offer does not make a positive requirement or impose an absolute condition of a specified manner of acceptance but merely suggests a permitted manner, another method of acceptance is not precluded [Estate of Crossman (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 370, 372, 41 Cal. Rptr. 800 ; see Palo Alto Town & Country Village, Inc. v. BBTC Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 494, 498-500, 113 Cal. Rptr. 705, 521 P.2d 1097 (applying same principles to option)].

[b] Unilateral Contracts

In the case of a unilateral contract, no notice of acceptance by performance is normally required [Davis v. Jacoby

(1934) 1 Cal. 2d 370, 378, 34 P.2d 1026 ; for definition of unilateral contract, see § 140.10[4]]. An offer for a unilateral contract is accepted and the contract is formed when the offeree performs. However, the offeree is required to give notice of the performance to the offeror within a reasonable time. Without notice, the offeror may treat the offer as lapsed [Harris v. Time, Inc. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 465, 476, 236 Cal. Rptr. 471 ; see Skaggs-Stone, Inc. v. La Batt (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 142, 143-144, 5 Cal. Rptr. 882 (guaranty of obligation owed to creditor was enforceable only when creditor had notice of undertaking)].

[c] Modes of Communicating Consent or Acceptance

For the acceptance or consent to be effectively communicated, the offeree must perform some act or omission by which the offeree intends to communicate (or that necessarily tends to communicate) consent [Civ. Code § 1581]. Consent may be manifested by acts or conduct and need not necessarily be shown by a writing or express words [Kritzer v. Citron (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 33, 39, 224 P.2d 808] .

When acceptance is by mail, formation of the contract is complete when the letter of acceptance is posted. Delivery to the post office of an acceptance properly addressed and with correct postage operates as delivery to the person addressed at the place and time it is delivered to the post office [Palo Alto Town & Country Village, Inc. v. BBTC Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 494, 500-501, 113 Cal. Rptr. 705, 521 P.2d 1097 ; Gibbs v. American Savings & Loan Assn. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1372, 1376, 266 Cal. Rptr. 517] . Delivery to a third person who is to deposit the acceptance in the mail is not effective for this purpose [Gibbs v. American Savings & Loan Assn. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1372, 1376, 266 Cal. Rptr. 517] . Even in the face of testimony that an acceptance was deposited in the mail on a certain date, another date on the postmark is sufficient evidence to support a judgment that the acceptance did not occur until the date of the postmark [Gibbs v. American Savings & Loan Assn. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1372, 1375-1376, 266 Cal. Rptr. 517] .

If an offer is accepted by telegram, it takes effect on its deposit for transmission [Sam Finman, Inc. v. Rokuz Holding Corp. (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 758, 761, 279 P.2d 982] .

Civ. Code §§ 1582 and 1583 apply to irrevocable options as well as to revocable offers. Absent any provisions in the option contract to the contrary, the exercise of an option becomes effective at the time written notice of acceptance is deposited in the mail [Palo Alto Town & Country Village, Inc. v. BBTC Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 494, 501, 113 Cal. Rptr. 705, 521 P.2d 1097 ; for discussion of revocation before acceptance, see [3][c], above; for discussion of irrevocable options, see [3][d], above)].

[d] Silence as Acceptance

Silence generally may not constitute an acceptance unless there is a relationship between the parties, a previous course of dealing pursuant to which silence would be understood as acceptance [Southern Cal. Acoustics Co. v. C.V. Holder, Inc. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 719, 722, 79 Cal. Rptr. 319, 456 P.2d 975 ; accord Adams v. Johns-Manville Corp. (9th Cir. 1989) 876 F.2d 702, 704 (applying California law; settlement procedures in class action provided course of conduct between parties requiring objection by party who intended not to accept settlement offer)], or unless the circumstances impose on the offeree a duty to speak [Wold v. League of the Cross (1931) 114 Cal. App. 474, 479, 300 P. 57] . Acceptance may be inferred from inaction in the face of a duty to act to reject a benefit, the retention of a benefit conferred, the past relations of the parties, or the offeror having given the offeree reason to believe that acceptance would be manifested by silence [Golden Eagle Ins. Co. v. Foremost Ins. Co. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 1385-1387, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 242 ; see Durgin v. Kaplan (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 81, 91, 65 Cal. Rptr. 158, 436 P.2d 70] .

Acceptance through silence can be said to be an application of the doctrine of equitable estoppel. A party invoking this doctrine must prove all of the following [Adams v. Johns-Manville Corp. (9th Cir. 1989) 876 F.2d 702, 706-707 (applying California law)]:

- The party to be estopped was apprised of the facts;

- The party to be estopped intended his, her or its conduct to be acted on, or that party acted in such a way that the party asserting estoppel could reasonably believe that silence would constitute acceptance;

- The party asserting estoppel was ignorant of the actual facts; and

- The party asserting estoppel relied on the other's conduct to his, her, or its injury.

[e] Performance of Conditions or Acceptance of Consideration as Consent

Performance of the conditions of a proposal, or the acceptance of the consideration offered with a proposal, is an acceptance of the proposal [Civ. Code § 1584; see Estate of Klauenberg (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 1067, 1070, 108 Cal. Rptr. 669] . Additionally, in option contracts (see [3][d], above), although the usual contemplated method of accepting an option is by notice, a valid acceptance may be made by a tender of actual performance [Riverside Fence Co. v. Novak (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 656, 661, 78 Cal. Rptr. 536] . However, Civ. Code § 1584, stating that the acceptance of the consideration offered with a proposal is an acceptance of the proposal, can have no application unless the offeree has an opportunity to reject the consideration before it is conveyed. If the offeree has not had such an opportunity, he or she cannot be said to have accepted [Desny v. Wilder (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 715, 739, 299 P.2d 257] .

[f] New Contract Terms Posted on Web Site

In some situations the terms of a consumer service contract are posted on the service provider's web site, and that posting is the only source to which a customer can refer for those terms. If the service provider posts revised terms on the web site, an issue exists as to whether the modified contract is enforceable against an existing customer.

In this situation, the Ninth Circuit has concluded that such a party has no obligation to check the terms of the contract on a periodic basis in order to learn whether they have been changed by the service provider. The customer would not know when to check the web site for possible changes to the contract terms without being notified regarding how the contract had been changed. Even if the customer checked the contract every day for possible changes, an examination still would be cumbersome in the absence of such notice, because the customer would have to compare every word of the posted contract with the existing contract in order to detect whether it had changed. It is elementary that a party cannot unilaterally change the terms of a contract, but must obtain the other party's consent to do so. Presenting a revised contract amounts to nothing more than making an offer and does not bind the other party until it is accepted. Generally an offeree cannot actually assent to an offer unless the offeree knows of its existence. Even if the customer's continued use of the provided service could be considered assent, such assent can be inferred only after the customer has received proper notice of the proposed changes [Douglas v. United States Dist. Court (9th Cir. 2007) 495 F.3d 1062, 1066-1067] .

[6] Promise to Agree in Future

[a] In General

The general rule is that if an "essential element" of a promise is reserved for the future agreement of the parties, the promise gives rise to no legal obligation until the future agreement is made. The enforceability of a contract containing a promise to agree depends on the relative importance and the severability of the matter left to the future. It is a question of degree that may be settled by determining whether the indefinite promise is so essential to the bargain that inability to enforce that promise strictly according to its terms would make the enforcement of the remainder of the agreement unfair [Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 396, 405, 55 Cal. Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713 ; see Com. Code § 2204(3) (contract for sale of goods does not fail for indefiniteness when terms are left open, if parties intended to make contract and there is reasonably certain basis for giving appropriate remedy); Kruse v. Bank of America (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 38, 59, 248 Cal. Rptr. 217 (when evidence clearly shows that only subject matter under consideration is left for further negotiation and agreement, no contract is formed; reason is not vagueness and indefiniteness but is simply absence of any terms)].

It is not unlawful or even unusual, however, for contracting parties to agree to cross certain bridges when they are reached [see, e.g., Herman v. County of Los Angeles (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 484, 487-488, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 691 (agencies' promise to reach mutual agreement on new placement of former police officers who did not pass review process did not void contract for failure to reach agreement on essential term)].

A minor possible ground of disagreement in an otherwise complete agreement will not render the agreement uncertain. If the matters left for future agreement are unessential, each party will be forced to accept a reasonable determination of the unsettled point, or, if possible, the unsettled point may be left unperformed and the remainder of the contract enforced. The law does not favor the destruction of contracts because of uncertainty. Courts will construe agreements to carry into effect the reasonable intentions of the parties if they can be ascertained and are feasible [Wong v. Di Grazia (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 525, 539, 35 Cal. Rptr. 241, 386 P.2d 817] . A promise to agree in the future is unenforceable only when the uncertainty or incompleteness prevents the court from knowing, with the aid of extrinsic evidence if necessary, what to enforce [Okun v. Morton (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 805, 817, 819, 250 Cal. Rptr. 220] .

One rule of interpretation is that a contract is to be given effect if possible. One court, in considering the term "based on" in an agreement that called for horse-race purses to be based on the previous year's pari-mutuel pools, noted that if "based on" meant "estimated," there would be something left for the parties to agree on, and the contract might be illusory; but if "based on" meant "equal to," there was sufficient certainty [Horsemen's Benevolent & Protective Assn. v. Valley Racing Assn. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 1558-1559, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698 (trial court properly submitted matter to jury after admitting extrinsic evidence)].

[b] Intention to Execute Written Agreement

When the parties definitely agree on all of the essential terms of an agreement in a writing, there is a contract even though the parties intendthat a formal writing will be executed later [see Harris v. Rudin, Richman & Appel (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 299, 306-309, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822 (distinguishing Beck v. American Health Group Internat., Inc. (1989) 260 Cal. Rptr. 237 , discussed below, when signed letter purported to embody "essential terms" of agreement)]. On the other hand, when there is a manifest intention that the agreement is not to be complete until reduced to a formal writing to be executed, there is no contract until this is done [Rennick v. O.P.T.I.O.N. Care, Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 77 F.3d 309, 315-316 ; Banner Entertainment v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 348, 357-358, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 598 ; Beck v. American Health Group Internat., Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1555, 1562, 260 Cal. Rptr. 237 ; Duran v. Duran (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 176, 180, 197 Cal. Rptr. 497 ; Smissaert v. Chiodo (1958) 163 Cal. App. 2d 827, 830-831, 330 P.2d 98] .

An agreement to agree that shows a manifest intention that the parties not be bound until they have finally agreed or until a final, formal agreement is executed will not support a cause of action for breach of contract or for specific performance [Autry v. Republic Productions, Inc. (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 144, 151, 180 P.2d 888 ; Beck v. American Health Group Internat., Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1555, 1563, 260 Cal. Rptr. 237] . If an ambiguous written agreement to agree is incorporated into a complaint, or set forth in haec verba, and a party does not allege the meaning that party ascribes to it, the court will construe the language of the agreement on its face and as a whole to determine whether there is a manifest intention that the parties are already bound or that they will not be bound until a final, formal document is executed [Beck v. American Health Group Internat., Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1555, 1562, 260 Cal. Rptr. 237 ; Hillsman v. Sutter Community Hospitals (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 743, 749-750, 200 Cal. Rptr. 605] .

[c] Contract to Negotiate an Agreement

One court has held that a contract to negotiate an agreement is distinguishable from a so-called "agreement to agree," and can be formed and breached just like any other contract [see Copeland v. Baskin Robbins U.S.A. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1251, 1253, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 875 (parties agreed to purchase and sell ice cream manufacturing plant, and agreed to negotiate terms of second agreement for purchase and sale of ice cream manufactured at that plant)]. The court first stated that the contract to negotiate the terms of a second agreement, in this case for the purchase and sale of ice cream, was neither illegal or immoral pursuant to Civ. Code § 1667. The court further found that a contract to negotiate the terms of an agreement differs from a mere agreement to agree because failure to agree is not itself a breach of a contract to negotiate. A party will be liable only if a failure to reach ultimate agreement resulted from a breach of that party's obligation to negotiate or to negotiate in good faith [Copeland v. Baskin Robbins U.S.A. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1251, 1257].

The appropriate remedy for breach of a contract to negotiate is not damages for the injured party's lost profits under the prospective contact, but rather damages caused by the injured party's reliance on the agreement to negotiate. Reliance damages include plaintiff's out-of-pocket costs in conducting the negotiations, and any lost opportunity costs [Copeland v. Baskin Robbins U.S.A. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1251, 1260-1264, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 875 (holding that defendant was entitled to summary judgment because it showed that plaintiff could not establish reliance damages); see Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.140 et seq.].

Chapter 140 CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Formation of Enforceable Contract

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.23

§ 140.23 Consideration

[1] In General

Consideration is an act or return promise, bargained for and given in exchange for a promise, which either gives a benefit to the promisor or imposes a burden on the promisee [Civ. Code § 1605; Flojo Internat., Inc. v. Lassleben (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 713, 719, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 99 ; Peterson Tractor Co. v. State Board of Equalization (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 662, 670, 18 Cal. Rptr. 800] . A promise alone, unsupported by consideration, is not enforceable and has no binding force [Western Lith. Co. v. Vanomar Producers (1921) 185 Cal. 366, 369, 197 P. 103 ; see, e.g., O'Byrne v. Santa Monica-UCLA Medical Center (2002) 94 Cal. App. 4th 797, 808-810 (no consideration was given for medical staff bylaws adopted pursuant to 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 70703; thus bylaws did not in and of themselves constitute contract between hospital and physician on its medical staff); see also Kremen v. Cohen (9th Cir. 2003) 337 F.3d 1024, 1028-1029 (registrar of Internet domain name did not breach implied contract with registrant by assigning name to another party; no consideration was given for registration)].

Consideration is a necessary element of both express contracts and implied contracts [Civ. Code § 1605; Grant v. Long (1939) 33 Cal. App. 2d 725, 737, 92 P.2d 940] . However, the requirement of consideration applies only to executory contracts. After the contract is fully executed on both sides, the question of consideration becomes immaterial [Schiffman v. Atlas Mill Supply, Inc. (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 847, 853, 14 Cal. Rptr. 708] .

The existence of consideration does not depend on a benefit being conferred on the promisor. It is sufficient if the promisee must take on some burden of suffer some detriment, or gives a return promise to do so [Brody v. Gabriel (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 644, 645, 14 Cal. Rptr. 539] .

Generally it does not matter from whom the consideration moves or to whom it goes. If it is bargained for and given in exchange for a promise, the promise is not gratuitous. In one case, for example, the owner of a closely held corporation had relinquished ownership and control to the corporation's major supplier in return for forgiveness of a debt owed to thecorporation and the right to royalties and commissions based on sales generated by the former owner as sales representative for the reorganized corporation. The corporation refused to pay commissions, claiming that it had not received any consideration. The court of appeal rejected the argument, characterizing the corporation as the promisor of the promise to pay royalties. The consideration received was the transfer of the corporate stock to the supplier, which was a detriment to the promisee, the former owner, and apparently of vital interest to the corporation [Flojo Internat., Inc. v. Lassleben (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 713, 719, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 99] .

[2] Element of Bargain or Agreed Exchange

The consideration for a promise must actually be bargained for and given in exchange for the promise [Simmons v. California Institute of Technology (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 264, 272, 209 P.2d 581 ; Jara v. Suprema Meats, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1251, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187 (promise by one shareholder to another not to vote for increased officer compensation without other's agreement was unenforceable gratuitous promise because it was not induced by, or given, to induce return promise or performance); Passante v. McWilliam (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1240, 1247-1249, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 298 (attorney who arranged loan could not enforce subsequent promise by grateful borrower to transfer stock to attorney)]. No act of an offeree can constitute consideration binding on the offeror unless the latter agrees to be bound in return [Bard v. Kent (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 449, 452, 122 P.2d 8] . The fact that the promisee relies on the promise to the promisee's injury, or the promisor gains some advantage, does not establish consideration without the element of bargain or agreed exchange [Meyer v. Glenmoor Homes, Inc. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 242, 259, 55 Cal. Rptr. 502].

[3] When Consideration Presumed

A written instrument is presumptive evidence of consideration [Civ. Code § 1614]. Thus, the plaintiff does not need to plead the existence and character of the consideration in a complaint for breach of contract if the pleading states that the contract was in writing [Henke v. Eureka Endowment Asso. (1893) 100 Cal. 429, 433, 34 P. 1089] , or if a written contract is set forth in full in the pleading [Williams v. Hall (1889) 79 Cal. 606, 607, 21 P. 965] .

The presumption of consideration under Civ. Code § 1614 affects the burden of producing evidence, not the burden of proof [Rancho Santa Fe Pharmacy, Inc. v. Seyfert (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 875, 884, 268 Cal. Rptr. 505] . Once the court admits sufficient evidence to call into question the validity of the presumed fact, i.e., consideration, the proponent of the written instrument has the burden of proving the presumed fact [Rancho Santa Fe Pharmacy, Inc. v. Seyfert (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 875, 883]. On the other hand, the burden of pleading and proving the lack of consideration is on the party seeking to avoid the contract on that ground [Civ. Code § 1615; Blonder v. Gentile (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 869, 874, 309 P.2d 147] . However, the presumption does not apply to a contract in which a different rule is expressly prescribed [Toomy v. Dunphy (1890) 86 Cal. 639, 642, 25 P. 130] , nor does it apply to ordinary letters [Michaelian v. State Fund (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1093, 1112, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 133 ; Foltz v. First Trust & Sav. Bank (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 59, 61, 194 P.2d 135] .

The recital of a certain specific consideration in an agreement subscribed by both parties is a statement or admission of the parties that the consideration was received and is prima facie evidence to that effect [Podesta v. Mehrten (1943) 57 Cal. App. 2d 66, 71, 134 P.2d 38] . Nevertheless, the parties are not estopped by recitals in an agreement with respect to its consideration. A party may always show the true consideration or want of it by extrinsic evidence for the purpose of avoiding a contract, even though the contract states facts that show a valuable consideration [Royer v. Kelly (1916) 174 Cal. 70, 72, 161 P. 1148] .

[4] Mutuality of Obligation Required

When the parties exchange promises as consideration in their attempt to contract, the promises must be mutual in obligation. Without mutuality of obligation, there is no consideration for the agreement, and no enforceable contract results.

The mutuality of obligation principle, however, applies only to bilateral contracts. In the unilateral contract context, there is no mutuality of obligation [see Asmus v. Pacific Bell (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 1, 14-15, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179, 999 P.2d 71 (rule governing termination of unilateral contracts is that once employer promisor determines it will terminate or modify contract, and provides its employees with reasonable notice of change, additional consideration is not required)].

For discussion of lack of mutuality of obligation as a defense to an action for breach of contract, see § 140.62[1].

[5] Ability of One Party to Terminate Contract

Courts generally hold that contracts permitting one party to withdraw at will, or permitting performance by one party as he or she pleases, lack consideration. However, a contract is not necessarily unenforceable if one party has the power to terminate the contract under certain conditions. For instance, the defense of lack of mutuality of obligation (see § 140.62[1]) generally does not apply if a party has the right to terminate the contract on the happening of certain contingencies beyond the party's control [Vitagraph, Inc. v. Liberty Theatres Co. (1925) 197 Cal. 694, 701, 242 P. 709] . The defense also does not apply when a party has a power ofrevocation, if the power is exercisable only on notice to the other party. In such a case the requirement of notice is a sufficient legal detriment to constitute consideration [Mutz v. Wallace (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 100, 111, 29 Cal. Rptr. 170] . For discussion of termination of contracts generally, see § 140.47.

[6] Requirements Contracts

[a] Validity in General

A contract that reserves in either party an option to deliver or to accept personal property, or to contract for a future delivery, and under which the quantity is dependent on the will, wish, want, or desire of the other party, is void for lack of consideration and mutuality. For discussion of defense of lack mutuality generally, see § 140.62[1]. However, when a buyer agrees to buy what he or she needs or requires of a certain product, and the seller absolutely promises to sell, a contract is made. Such a contract imposes on the buyer the duty of buying what the buyer requires from the seller and on the seller the obligation to sell to the buyer at the contract price [Ross v. Frank W. Dunne Co. (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 690, 698, 260 P.2d 104] .

[b] Performance Conditional on Party's Satisfaction

Contracts making the duty of performance of one of the parties conditional on that party's satisfaction are enforceable. They are of two kinds [see Mattei v. Hopper (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 119, 122-123, 126, 330 P.2d 625] :

- Contracts in which the condition calls for satisfaction as to commercial value or quality, operative fitness, or mechanical utility are enforceable, since dissatisfaction cannot be claimed arbitrarily, unreasonably, or capriciously. Courts use the standard of the reasonable person in determining whether satisfaction has been received.

- Contracts containing satisfaction clauses involving fancy, taste, or judgment are nevertheless enforceable, even though the satisfaction of one party is dependent on a subjective standard, since the party's determination of dissatisfaction must be made in good faith [see, e.g., Locke v. Warner Bros., Inc. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 354, 364-365, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 921 (evidence raised triable issue of material fact as to whether movie studio had honest or good faith dissatisfaction with director's proposals under film development deal)].

One party's approval of the documents, or of preliminary title reports and inspections in real estate transactions, may be a condition precedent to that party's performance. If the party whose approval is required expressly and unequivocally disapproves, the contract is terminated and cannot be revived by later waiver of the condition [Beverly Way Associates

v. Barham (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 49, 51, 56, 276 Cal. Rptr. 240] .

[7] Sufficiency of Consideration

[a] Intrinsic Value Not Counted

The sufficiency of the consideration supporting a promise does not depend on its intrinsic value. Generally, courts do not inquire into the real value of consideration as long as it is something of legally cognizable value. The determination as to the adequacy of the consideration in this regard is left to the parties at the time of contracting and should not be made by the court when one party attempts to enforce the contract [see Schumm v. Berg (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 174, 185, 231 P.2d 39 ; Rice v. Brown (1953) 120 Cal. App. 2d 578, 582, 261 P.2d 565] . However, this rule does not preclude a party from showing that the consideration had some value at least. Something that is completely worthless by any standard cannot constitute a valid consideration [Louisville Title Ins. Co. v. Surety Title & Guar. Co. (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 781, 791, 132 Cal. Rptr. 63] .

[b] Court's Power to Weigh Consideration

Whether sufficient consideration was received by a promisor is a question of fact [Estate of Thomson (1913) 165 Cal. 290, 296, 131 P. 1045] . In certain cases, courts have been given the power by statute to consider relative values in weighing the sufficiency of consideration. These cases include agreements involving the rights of heirs, devisees, and legatees [Prob. Code § 1020.1; Estate of Freeman (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 486, 489, 48 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

Further, the courts may not enforce specific performance against a party to a contract unless that party has received adequate consideration [Civ. Code § 3391; Morrill v. Everson (1888) 77 Cal. 114, 115-116, 19 P. 190 ; for discussion of specific performance generally, see Ch. 528, Specific Performance]. In this context, "adequate" means a consideration that is fair and reasonable in the circumstances [Chalmers v. Raras (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 682, 689, 19 Cal. Rptr. 531] . In considering the circumstances, the court should determine the object to be obtained by the contract and the relationship of the parties [Berkeley Lawn Bowling Club v. City of Berkeley (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 280, 290, 116 Cal. Rptr. 762] .

[c] Sufficiency at Time of Making Contract

The courts determine the sufficiency of the consideration as of the time the parties entered into the contract, not in relation to a subsequent time [Crail v. Blakely (1973) 8 Cal. 3d 744, 753, 106 Cal. Rptr. 187, 505 P.2d 1027] . If there was sufficient consideration at the time the parties made the agreement, the fact that it subsequently diminished in value or became of no value does not relieve the promisor from liability on the promise [Riverside Water Co. v. Jurupa Ditch Co. (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 538, 542, 9 Cal. Rptr. 742] .

[d] Moral Obligation as Consideration

In general, a moral obligation is not consideration for a contract. However, a moral obligation originating in some benefit conferred on the promisor or prejudice suffered by the promisee is consideration for a promise [see Civ. Code § 1606] if good and valuable consideration once existed [Wilson v. Wilson (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 264, 271-272, 5 Cal. Rptr. 317, 352 P.2d 725 (father's moral obligation of continued support of children after failure to perform property agreement made at time of divorce rested on legal duty to support children)].

For example, if a party once had a past legal obligation, but the remedy is now barred, e.g., when a debt is barred by the statute of limitations or a discharge in bankruptcy or an original obligation is barred by the statute of frauds, a subsequent promise to pay is enforceable [cf. Dow v. River Farms Co. (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 403, 410, 243 P.2d 95 (company's promise to pay plaintiff's husband for past services rendered was only promise to make gift and unenforceable because no past legal obligation existed)]. The subsequent promise is enforceable because, although the remedy to enforce the payment of the debt is gone or never existed, the moral obligation to pay remains [Lambert v. Schmalz (1897) 118 Cal. 33, 35, 50 P. 13] .

If there was no expectation of payment by either party when past services were rendered, a promise by the party receiving the services to pay the performing party is a mere promise to make a gift and not enforceable [Passante v. McWilliam (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1240, 1248-1249, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 298 (no consideration for directors' oral promise to provide corporation's attorney with stock interest in return for arranging financing when loan was arranged before stock was promised)].

[e] Promise to Perform Existing Duty

Consideration for an agreement is not adequate when it is a mere promise to perform what the promisor is already legally bound to do [Grant v. Aerodraulics Co. (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 68, 75, 204 P.2d 683] . For example, a promise of extra compensation for completion of a contract, made to a party who has the existing legal duty to perform the contract, is without consideration [Bailey v. Breetwor (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 287, 291-292, 23 Cal. Rptr. 740] .

However, the agreed consideration may consist almost wholly of a performance that is already required if some small additional performance is bargained for and given. Thus, if the bargained-for performance that is rendered includes something not within the requirements of an existing duty, the requirement of consideration is met [House v. Lala (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 238, 243, 29 Cal. Rptr. 450] .

Relinquishment or forbearance of a claimed right is consideration for the creation of a new right, regardless of whether the claimed right actually was effective [Walters v. Calderon (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 863, 873-874, 102 Cal. Rptr. 89] . Examples include [Booth v. Bond (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 153, 157, 132 P.2d 520] :

- Cancellation of an existing debt.
- Release of security.
- Forbearance to sue (even though it subsequently appears that the forbearer might not have been successful in the suit).

Similarly, a promise given in consideration of the settlement or compromise of a dispute or controversy, the outcome of which is uncertain or doubtful, is supported by consideration [see Baker v. Philbin (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 393, 397, 218 P.2d 119] .

The determinative question is whether the purported right waived or relinquished was one the promisee could have urged in good faith and which presented some bona fide question of validity, however slight, rather than whether the right was legally valid and effective. If the right waived and relinquished was obviously worthless and ineffective, a promise to relinquish it would not constitute valid consideration [Walters v. Calderon (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 863, 873-874, 102 Cal. Rptr. 89] .

[8] Promissory Estoppel as Substitute for Consideration

[a] In General

Consideration is something bargained for and given in exchange for a promise. The promisee's performance is requested at the time the promisor makes the promise and the performance is bargained for. The absence of this bargained-for exchange would normally render a promise unenforceable. Nevertheless, a promisor may be bound under the doctrine of promissory estoppel when the following conditions exist [Drennan v. Star Paving Co. (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 409, 413, 333 P.2d 757 ; US Ecology, Inc. v. State (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 887, 891, 908, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 894 ; Smith v. City and County of San Francisco (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 38, 48, 275 Cal. Rptr. 17 ; Sheppard v. Morgan Keegan & Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 61, 67, 266 Cal. Rptr. 784 ; A-C Co. v. Security Pacific Nat. Bank (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 462, 474, 219 Cal. Rptr. 62] :

- The promisor makes a promise that the promisor should reasonably expect to induce action or forbearance of a definite and substantial character on the part of the promisee;

- The promise does induce such action or forbearance;

- The promisor's breach of the promise was a substantial factor in causing injury to the promisee; and

- Injustice can be avoided only by enforcement of the promise.

The doctrine of promissory estoppel employs equitable principles to satisfy the requirement that consideration be given in exchange for the promise sought to be enforced [Raedeke v. Gibraltar Sav. & Loan Asso. (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 665, 672, 111 Cal. Rptr. 693, 517 P.2d 1157] .

[b] Elements

For the doctrine of promissory estoppel to apply, the plaintiff must establish that:

- Defendant made a promise [see Southern Cal. Acoustics Co. v. C.V. Holder, Inc. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 719, 723, 79 Cal. Rptr. 319, 456 P.2d 975 ; see also Glen Holly Entm't Inc. v. Tektronix Inc. (9th Cir. 2003) 352 F.3d 367, 381 (affirming dismissal of promissory estoppel claim; alleged representations did not constitute actionable promises because they were too vague and indefinite to be enforceable); Lange v. TIG Ins. Co. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1179, 1186-1187, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 39 (doctrine of promissory estoppel did not apply when no promise of sufficient definitiveness and clarity was found)];

- The plaintiff's reliance on defendant's promise was reasonable [see MacIsaac & Menke Co. v. Freeman (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 327, 335, 15 Cal. Rptr. 48] ;

- The plaintiff suffered substantial detriment as a result of the reliance on defendant's promise or representation [see Henry v. Weinman (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 360, 366-367, 321 P.2d 117] ; and

- Defendant's breach of the promise was a substantial factor in causing injury to the plaintiff [US Ecology, Inc. v. State (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 887, 891, 908, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 894] .

The existence of these elements is a question of fact [Division of Labor Law Enforcement v. Transpacific Transportation Co. (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 268, 275-276, 137 Cal. Rptr. 855] .

As an illustration of the application of promissory estoppel, in the case of an employment contract, the court may estop an employer from terminating an employee before the start date, and without an opportunity to demonstrate the employee's ability to meet the job requirements, after the employee severs his or her former employment and moves across the country [Sheppard v. Morgan Keegan & Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 61, 67, 266 Cal. Rptr. 784] .

The California Supreme Court has applied the doctrine of promissory estoppel in the public contract context, holding that the lowest responsible bidder that was wrongfully denied a public contract has a cause of action for monetary damages against the public entity. Those damages, however, included bid preparation costs but not lost profits [

[c] Equitable Estoppel

Evid. Code § 623 creates a related doctrine called "equitable estoppel." It provides that a party who has, by the party's own statement or conduct, intentionally and deliberately led another to believe a particular thing to be true and to act on that belief, may not, in litigation arising out of that statement or conduct, contradict it. The doctrine of equitable estoppel requires proof of four elements [Hair v. State of California (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 321, 328-329, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871] :

- The party to be estopped must be apprised of the true facts;
- The party to be estopped must intend that his, her or its conduct be acted on, or must act so that the party asserting the estoppel had a right to believe that was the intent;
- The party asserting the estoppel must be ignorant of the true facts; and
- The party asserting the estoppel must rely on the conduct or statement to that party's injury.

An oral promise to make a will or not to revoke a will [see generally Prob. Code § 21700 (statute of frauds); see also former Civ. Code § 1624(6) (statute of frauds applicable to such contracts made before 1985); former Prob. Code § 150 (statute of frauds applicable to such contracts made in 1985-2000)] can be enforced by application of the equitable estoppel doctrine, whether the promisor is living [Juran v. Epstein (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 882, 897, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 588] or dead [Estate of Housley v. Haywood (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 342, 349-351, 357-358, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 628] . Furthermore, a party may be estopped from asserting the statute of limitations as a defense to an untimely action to enforce an oral promise to make a will [Battuello v. Battuello (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 842, 847-848, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548 (appellant alleged sufficient facts to come within doctrine of equitable estoppel to assertion of one-year statute of limitations set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 366.2, which applied because promisor made inter vivos transfer of property covered by contract)].

The complaint in § 140.106[1] may be modified to allege breach of a contract arising from, and the terms of which are governed by, the defendant's conduct or statement. For an affirmative defense asserting equitable estoppel to establish discharge of an obligation, see Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments .

[9] Failure of Consideration Based on Failure to Perform

[a] In General

Failure of consideration is the failure to perform a promise, the performance of which has been exchanged for performance by the other party. In all executory contracts the several promises of the parties constitute toeach, reciprocally, the consideration of the contract. A failure to perform constitutes a failure of consideration, either partial or total, within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1689 (grounds for rescission of contract) [Bliss v. California Coop. Producers (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 240, 248-249, 181 P.2d 369 ; for discussion of partial failure, see [b], below].

The other party may invoke the failure as a basis for rescinding or terminating the contract, provided the failure or refusal to perform constitutes a breach in such an essential particular as to justify rescission or termination. The right of the aggrieved party to claim release from obligations and thus to elect to terminate the contract depends on the gravity of the breach [Taliaferro v. Davis (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 398, 411-412, 31 Cal. Rptr. 164] .

Failure of consideration, however, does not vitiate the contract from the beginning. Until rescinded or terminated, a contract once in effect remains in effect. This principle rests on the distinction that failure of consideration is based not on facts existing at the time the mutual promises in a bilateral contract are made, but on some fact or contingency that occurs between the time of the making of the contract and the action that results in the material failure of performance by one party [Taliaferro v. Davis (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 398, 411, 31 Cal. Rptr. 164] .

For an affirmative defense based on failure of consideration, see § 140.148[1].

[b] Partial Failure of Consideration

A failure of a part of a lawful consideration nullifies that part. However, because the amount of consideration is irrelevant, the court may nevertheless enforce the promise if there remains a substantial consideration [Del Riccio v. Photochart (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 301, 312, 268 P.2d 814]. Although an insubstantial failure of consideration does not give the other party the right to rescind the contract, it can be a basis for damages [Hofland v. Gustafson (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 907, 909]. A partial failure of consideration resulting from the willful failure of a party to perform a material part of the contract is sufficient, however, to justify the other party's rescission [Bonadelle Construction Co. v. Hernandez (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 396, 399, 337 P.2d 85] .

[c] Substantial Performance

Substantial performance means that [Bonadelle Construction Co. v. Hernandez (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 396, 399, 337 P.2d 85] :

- There has been no willful departure from the terms of the contract;
- There has been no omission of any of its essential parts; and
- The performing party has in good faith performed all of the substantive terms of the contract.

The doctrine of substantial performance assumes the existence of a binding contract [Rosenaur v. Pacelli (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 673, 677, 345 P.2d 102] . The rule as to what constitutes substantial performance is indefinite, and the question must be determined in each case with reference to the existing facts and circumstances [Bonadelle Construction Co. v. Hernandez (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 396, 399, 337 P.2d 85] . The defects in performance must be easily remedied or compensated, so that the other party may get almost what the contract called for [Posner v. Grunwald-Marx, Inc. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 169, 187, 14 Cal. Rptr. 297, 363 P.2d 313] . For further discussion, see Ch. 104, Building Contracts .

Chapter 140 CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Formation of Enforceable Contract

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.24

§ 140.24 Illegal Contracts

[1] What Makes Contract Illegal

The consideration and the object of a contract--that is, the thing the party receiving the consideration agrees to do or not to do [Civ. Code § 1595]--must be lawful. If either the consideration or the object of the contract is unlawful, the contract is illegal and may be unenforceable [McIntosh v. Mills (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 333, 344, 346, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 66] . A contract is illegal if the object or consideration is any of the following [Civ. Code §§ 1596, 1607, 1109 & 1667; Diosdado v. Diosdado (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 470, 474, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 494 (contract between husband and wife providing for liquidated damages for infidelity held contrary to public policy); Homami v. Iranzadi (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1104, 1109-1111, 260 Cal. Rptr. 6 ; Green v. Mt. Diablo Hospital Dist. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 63, 71, 254 Cal. Rptr. 689 ; Bovard v. American Horse Enterprises, Inc. (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 832, 838, 247 Cal. Rptr. 340 ; see Vick v. Patterson (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 414, 417, 322 P.2d 548] :

- Contrary to an express provision of law;
- Contrary to the policy of express law, even though not expressly prohibited; or
- Otherwise contrary to good morals.

Whether a contract is illegal or contrary to public policy is a question of law to be determined from the circumstances of each particular case [Jackson v. Rogers & Wells (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 336, 349-350, 258 Cal. Rptr. 454 ; Kallen v. Delug (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 940, 951, 203 Cal. Rptr. 879] .

For affirmative defenses asserting illegality, see § 140.143 (contract contrary to an express provision of law) and § 140.145 (contract contrary to public policy or good morals).

[2] Contrary to Law or Public Policy

Generally, a contract that is against public policy or against the mandate of a statute is void and may not be made the foundation of any action,either in law or in equity [McIntosh v. Mills (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 333, 344, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 66 ; Homami v. Iranzadi (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1104, 1109-1111, 260 Cal. Rptr. 6 ; South Tahoe Gas Co. v. Hofmann Land Improvement Co. (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 750, 756, 102 Cal. Rptr. 286]. In determining whether the subject of a given contract violates public policy, courts must rely on the state of law as it existed at the time the contract was made [Bovard v. American Horse Enterprises, Inc. (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 832, 840 n.3, 247 Cal. Rptr. 340 ; Moran v. Harris (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 913, 918, 182 Cal. Rptr. 519].

Such illegal contracts include the following agreements for the sharing of attorney's fees:

- A contract for fee sharing between an attorney and a nonlawyer [McIntosh v. Mills (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 333, 344, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 66 (unenforceable as contrary to rule of professional conduct)].

- A contract for fee-sharing between attorneys not in compliance with Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200, which prohibits fee-sharing between attorneys who are not partners, except by written client consent [see Chambers v. Kay (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 142, 162-163, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 536, 56 P.3d 645 (Rule 2-200 was approved to protect public and promote respect and confidence in legal profession, and fee-sharing agreements not in compliance with that rule therefore are unenforceable); Margolin v. Shemaria (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 891, 903, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 502 (attorney who made case referral to another attorney had no viable contract for sharing of fees that complied with Rule 2-200); but see Huskinson & Brown, LLP v. Wolf (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 453, 464, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 693, 84 P.3d 379 (law firm was barred from recovering under fee-sharing agreement with another firm, in absence of written client consent to agreement required by Rule 2-200, but was entitled to recover from other firm in quantum meruit for reasonable value of services rendered on client's behalf)].

Other kinds of contracts that are illegal as violating a statute or public policy include the following:

- An agreement by which an heir hunter obtains an assignment authorizing the heir hunter to select and pay for an attorney, if there is any element of legal representation included in the contract or assignment, such as the heir hunter's being empowered to control litigation involving the inheritance in question [Estate of Molino (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 913, 923, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 512 (void as against public policy)].

- An agreement for an agent to be compensated for procuring performance engagements for a singer, if the agent does not meet licensing requirements in the Talent Agencies Act, Lab. Code § 1700 et seq. [Yoo v. Robi (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1089, 1103, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 740 (agent's contract was void; defense of illegality based on public policy was not waived by failure to include it as affirmative defense, since legality was challenged in petition to Labor Commissioner, who found contract illegal and void)].

- An agreement for the establishment of a plant in Iran to manufacture computer products to be sold in Iran [Kashani v. Tsann Kuen China Enterprise, Ltd. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 531, 537, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 174 (unenforceable as illegal and against public policy because it violated U.S. presidential executive orders and implementing regulations excluding U.S. persons from transactions relating to supply of technology to Iran)].

- A contract between spouses providing for liquidated damages for infidelity [Diosdado v. Diosdado (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 470, 474, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 494 (contrary to public policy underlying no-fault provisions for dissolution of marriage)].

- A sperm bank's agreement with potential parents precluding disclosure of a donor's identity and other information under all circumstances [Johnson v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1065-1067, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 864 (contrary to public policy and unenforceable, as Fam. Code § 7613 permits disclosure of insemination records under certain circumstances); but see Dunkin v. Boskey (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 171, 189-190, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 44 (agreement by unmarried couple to grant male partner paternity rights to child conceived by artificial insemination was not against public policy, and served rather than contravened family law policies to legitimate children and provide for their support)].

- A confidentiality clause in a settlement agreement that prohibits a securities dealer's customer from discussing the dealer's misconduct with regulatory authorities [Cariveau v. Halferty (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 126, 138, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417 (void and unenforceable as violation of public policy set forth in securities laws and regulations)].

[3] Taint of Partial Illegality

If any part of a single consideration for one or more objects, or of several considerations for a single object, is unlawful, the entire contract is void [Civ. Code § 1608]. Similarly, if a contract has a single object and that object is unlawful, either in whole or in part, the entire contract is void [Civ. Code § 1598; see Yoo v. Jho (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1251, 1256, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 243 (in view of illegal object of contract for sale of business dealing in counterfeit goods, trial court erred in entertaining action and in awarding any relief, including attorney's fees; also holding that if parties fail to raise issue of contract's illegality, trial court should raise it sua sponte when evidence reveals probable illegality); Bovard v. American Horse Enterprises, Inc. (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 832, 838, 247 Cal. Rptr. 340 (refusing to enforce notes given to purchase company that manufactured jewelry and drug paraphernalia)]. For the legal effect of a void contract, see § 140.10[6].

However, if the contract is only partially illegal, these rules apply only when the court otherwise determines that the contract is not severable [see Keene v. Harling (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 318, 320, 324, 38 Cal. Rptr. 513, 392 P.2d 273] . Thus, if the transaction is of a nature that the good part of the consideration can be separated from what is bad, courts make void only what is against the law and let the rest stand[Birbrower, Montalbano, Condon & Frank v. Superior Court (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 119, 137-138, 140, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304, 949 P.2d 1 ; Keene v. Harling (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 318, 320, 324, 38 Cal. Rptr. 513, 392 P.2d 273] .

If the contract has several distinct objects, at least one of which is lawful, the contract is valid and enforceable as to the lawful object, provided the lawful object is clearly severable from the rest [Civ. Code § 1599; Birbrower, Montalbano, Condon & Frank v. Superior Court (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 119, 137-138, 140, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304, 949 P.2d 1 ; Symcox v. Zuk (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 383, 389, 34 Cal. Rptr. 462] . Civ. Code § 1599 authorizes, but does not require, a court to sever the illegal object of a contract from the legal object. The decision whether to sever the illegal object of a contract is informed by equitable considerations [Yoo v. Robi (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1089, 1105, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 740 ; e.g., Chiba v. Greenwald (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 71, 81-82, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 86 (trial court, in refusing to order severance, correctly found that agreement's lawful and unlawful objects were inextricably intertwined and correctly disregarded plaintiff's attempt, in second amended complaint, to allege separate consideration for each object, which allegation was inconsistent with two previous iterations of complaint)].

[4] Exculpatory Contract

Any contract that has for its object, directly or indirectly, to exempt anyone from responsibility for any of the following is against the policy of the law [Civ. Code § 1668; see Neubauer v. Goldfarb (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 47, 54-57, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 218 ; Farnham v. Superior Court (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 69, 73, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85 ; Blankenheim v. E.F. Hutton & Co. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1472-1473, 266 Cal. Rptr. 593 (negligent misrepresentation as species of fraud within meaning of Civ. Code § 1668)]:

- The person's own fraud;

- The person's own willful injury to the person or property of another; or
- The person's own violation of law, whether willful or negligent.

The plain language of Civ. Code § 1668 shows that its provisions apply to "[a]ll contracts" the object of which is, directly or indirectly, to exempt "anyone" from responsibility for his or her "own fraud, or willful injury to the person or property of another, or violation of law"; therefore, no exculpatory provision in any contract can be invoked by anyone who claims to have the benefit of the provision (whether or not the person is a party to the contract), in order to avoid the legal consequences of the person's own fraud, willful injury of another, or violation of law [Manderville v. PCG&S Group, Inc. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1486, 1501-1502, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 59 (defendant real estate broker could not invoke any exculpatory provisions of standard-form CAR contract of sale between plaintiff and broker's client, to avoid liability for broker's intentional misrepresentation to plaintiff)].

For example, an agreement exculpating a child care provider from its own negligence is void as against public policy [Gavin W. v. YMCA of Metropolitan Los Angeles (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 662, 671-674, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 168 (finding that contract involved public interest under criteria enumerated in Tunkl v. Regents of University of California (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 92, 32 Cal. Rptr. 33, 383 P.2d 441); see § 140.145, below]. A contractual clause prohibiting any recovery of damages (but not equitable relief) for any violation of statutory or regulatory law not made part of the parties' contractual obligations was held invalid under Civ. Code § 1668 [Health Net of Cal., Inc. v. Dept. of Health Servs. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 224, 226-227, 234-236, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 235 (extending settled interpretation of § 1668 with respect to violations of statutory law, to cover regulatory violations; contract involved public interest under Tunkl)]. A waiver of corporate directors' and majority shareholders' fiduciary duties to a minority shareholder in a private close corporation has been held to be against public policy and a clause purporting to effect such a waiver in a buy-sell agreement was held void [Neubauer v. Goldfarb (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 47, 54-57, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 218] .

However, Civ. Code § 1668 is not strictly applied. It does not per se prohibit a contractual release of future liability for ordinary negligence unless the "public interest" is involved or unless a statute expressly forbids it, and does not bar either contractual indemnity or insurance [see Benedek v. PLC Santa Monica, LLC (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1351, 1358-1359, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 (express language of unambiguous release of health club from all premises liability applied to personal injuries unrelated to exercise suffered by member; release of premises liability in consideration of permission to enter recreational facilities does not violate public policy); Farnham v. Superior Court (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 69, 74-75, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85 (contractual limitation on liability of corporate directors for defamation was not incompatible with public policy so as to violate Civ. Code § 1668)].

An agreement made in the context of sports or recreational programs or services, purporting to release anyone from liability for future gross negligence, generally is unenforceable as a matter of public policy [City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (Janeway) (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 747, 776-777, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527, 161 P.3d 1095] .

For further discussion of the validity or invalidity of exculpatory agreements, see § 140.145[4] and Ch. 380, Negligence .

In the case of a contract between two businesses having equal bargaining power, when the only question is which of them should bear the risk of economic loss in the event of a particular mishap that both parties recognize could ensue, there is no reason for the courts to intervene and remake the parties' agreement in the light of Civ. Code § 1668 [CAZA Drilling (California), Inc. v. TEG Oil & Gas U.S.A., Inc. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 453, 475, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 271] . However, a contract provision limiting consequential damages in commercial transactions may be tested for legality under Com. Code § 2719(3) [see generally Ch. 500, Sales: Sales Under the Commercial Code] rather than under Civ. Code § 1668 [Nunes Turfgrass, Inc. v. Vaughan-Jacklin Seed Co. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1518, 1538-1539, 246 Cal. Rptr. 823] .

[5] Superficial Legality

Even though a contract is legal on its face, a party may introduce evidence to establish its illegal character. If the substance of the transaction is illegal, it does notmatter when or how the illegality is raised. Whether the evidence comes from one side or the other, it is fatal to the case [Homami v. Iranzadi (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1104, 1112, 260 Cal. Rptr. 6 (plaintiff not entitled to recover after testifying he had oral agreement with defendant to collect interest secretly to evade tax law)].

When the parties are in pari delicto, this rule may leave the defendant with an unexpected benefit for the transaction. Nevertheless, the courts do not apply the rule to correct injustice between the parties, but out of regard for a higher interest, i.e., that of the public, whose welfare demands that the courts discourage these transactions. Knowing they will receive no help from the courts may be a deterrent making parties less likely to enter into illegal agreements [Homami v. Iranzadi (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1104, 1112-1113, 260 Cal. Rptr. 6] .

[6] When Illegal Contract Is Enforceable

[a] In General

A contract that is illegal because its object is contrary to common standards of morality ("malum in se") will not be enforced, but a contract that is illegal merely because its object is in violation of a statute ("malum prohibitum") may be enforceable, in spite of its illegality, by a party who is not in pari delicto [McIntosh v. Mills (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 333, 344 n.10, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 66 (refusing enforcement); see Wong v. Tenneco, Inc. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 126, 136-138, 216 Cal. Rptr. 412, 702 P.2d 570 (refusing enforcement); Shenson v. Fresno Meat Packing Co. (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 725, 731, 216 P.2d 156 (refusing enforcement); see also California Physicians' Serv. v. Aoki Diabetes Research Inst. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1506, 1516-1517, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 646 (while health care provider's contract with service plan was illegal because it violated statutory prohibition on corporate practice of medicine, that prohibition is meant to protect patients, not service plans, and contract for provision of medical services by licensed professionals plainly is not malum in se; service plan would have been unjustly enriched if it had been allowed to retain benefit of services that provider bestowed on its subscribers without compensating provider, and contract therefore was enforceable to extent of compensating provider for services rendered; court did not discuss parties' relative culpability)].

Whether an illegal contract should be enforced, the extent of enforceability, and the kind of remedy the court should allow depend on a variety of factors, including the policy of the transgressed law, the kind of illegality, and the particular facts. For example, the court should not refuse to enforce the contract if the following conditions are met: [Johnson v. Johnson (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 551, 557-558, 237 Cal. Rptr. 644 (resulting trust awarded); Emmons, Williams, Mires & Leech v. State Bar (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 565, 569, 86 Cal. Rptr. 367 (attorney fee-sharing agreement enforced in favor of bar association's attorney referral service); Cain v. Burns (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 439, 442, 280 P.2d 888 (attorney fee-sharing agreement enforced in favor of relatively innocent private investigator who had performed work)]:

- The public policy underlying the statute, regulation, or rule will not be affected in view of the circumstances of the particular transaction;
- The public cannot be protected because the transaction has been completed;
- No serious moral turpitude is involved;
- The defendant is the one guilty of the greater moral fault; and
- The defendant would otherwise be unjustly enriched at the expense of the plaintiff.

Similarly, if the illegality of a bargain is due to facts of which one party is justifiably ignorant and the other party is not, the court may grant the ignorant party relief [Tiedje v. Aluminum Taper Milling Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 450, 454, 296 P.2d 554] .

[b] Plaintiff in Class Protected by Law

If the policy of the law violated by the contract was designed for the plaintiff's protection, the court may enforce the contract. When the Legislature enacts a statute forbidding conduct to protect one class of persons from the activities of another, a member of the protected class may maintain an action for breach of contract, notwithstanding the fact that that party shared in the illegal transaction. The protective purpose of the legislation is realized by allowing the plaintiff who is not in pari delicto to maintain the action against the defendant who is within the class primarily to be deterred [Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 153, 308 P.2d 713] .

[c] Unfairly Harsh Result

In some cases a statute making conduct illegal may provide for a fine or administrative discipline and exclude by implication the additional penalty involved in holding the illegal contract unenforceable. In others, the forfeiture resulting from unenforceability is disproportionately harsh considering the nature of the illegality [M. Arthur Gensler, Jr., & Associates, Inc. v. Larry Barrett, Inc. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 695, 702-703, 103 Cal. Rptr. 247, 499 P.2d 503] .

Courts may provide a remedy despite a contract's illegality if the wrong involved is malum prohibitum (wrong because prohibited by law) and not malum in se (wrong in itself). In the former case, courts will take notice of the circumstances and give relief if justice and equity require a restoration of money received by either party [Smith v. Bach (1920) 183 Cal. 259, 263, 191 P. 14] . The principle is usually applied to aid one not in pari delicto but to some extent involved in the illegality, who is comparatively less culpable [South Tahoe Gas Co. v. Hofmann Land Improvement Co. (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 750, 758, 102 Cal. Rptr. 286] .

[7] Secret Intent to Violate Law

A secret intent to violate the law, concealed in the mind of one party to an otherwise legal contract, does not enable that party to avoid the contract and escape liability under its terms [Griffin v. Payne (1933) 133 Cal. App. 363, 373, 24 P.2d 370 (appellant unable to avoid margin contract despite intent to gamble on stock market when intent was not disclosed to brokers during time appellant was trading through them)]. In addition, a contract legal in itself is not rendered unenforceable by the fact that one of the parties knew that the other party intended, by means of the contract or the subject matter, to violate a law or public policy [People v. Brophy (1942) 49 Cal. App. 2d 15, 30, 120 P.2d 946 (contract between appellant and telephone company was enforceable despite company's knowledge of appellant's use of telephones for illegal purposes)].

An agreement that is legal when standing by itself, but is merely a step intended for the accomplishment of an illegal object, is illegal. Thus, if the effect of the contract is to accomplish an unlawful purpose, the court will declare the agreement illegal regardless of the intention of the parties [Stockton Morris Plan Co. v. California Tractor & Equip. Corp. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 684, 689-690, 247 P.2d 90] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Formation of Enforceable Contract

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.25

§ 140.25 Unconscionable Contract

[1] Nature of Unconscionability

[a] Procedural and Substantive Unconscionability

Unconscionability generally includes the absence of meaningful choice on the part of one of the parties together with contract terms that unreasonably favor the other party [Allan v. Snow Summit, Inc. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1358,1376-1377, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813 ; Carboni v. Arrospide (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 76, 82-83, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 845 ; West v. Henderson (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1578, 1586, 278 Cal. Rptr. 570] .

An unconscionable contract ordinarily involves both a procedural and a substantive element: (1) oppression or surprise due to unequal bargaining power, and (2) overly harsh or one-sided results [Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 261, 291-292, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807, 27 P.3d 702 (citing Armendariz); Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 113-114, 99 Cal. Rptr. 745, 6 P.3d 669 (reversing order compelling arbitration in wrongful termination action brought under FEHA); Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1164 ; Villa Milano Homeowners Association v. Il Davorge (2000) 84 Cal. App 4th 819, 828-829, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (arbitration clause contained in CC&Rs was unconscionable adhesion contract and unenforceable to the extent it applied to construction and design defect claims against developer who drafted, signed, and recorded CC&Rs)]. Both elements must appear to invalidate a contract or one of its individual terms. These elements, however, need not be present in the same degree. The more substantively oppressive the contract term, the less evidence of procedural unconscionability is required to come to the conclusion that the term is unenforceable, and vice versa [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 114, 6 P.3d 669 ; Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1164-1165, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189 ; Freeman v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 660, 669, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 860 (service fee on shopping card held not unconscionable); Woodside Homes v. Superior Court (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 723, 730, 736, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 35 (low level of procedural unconscionability required high level of substantive unconscionability; agreements for judicial reference held enforceable)].

The party asserting unconscionability has the burden of proving both procedural and substantive unconscionability [

Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189] .

"The procedural element focuses on two factors: oppression and surprise. Oppression arises from an inequality of bargaining power which results in no real negotiation and an absence of meaningful choice... . Surprise involves the extent to which the terms of the bargain are hidden in a 'prolix printed form' drafted by a party in a superior bargaining position" [Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189 , quoting Olsen v. Breeze, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 608, 621, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818] . There is no general rule that a form contract is procedurally unconscionable. Rather, procedural unconscionability arises from the manner in which the contract is presented to the party in the weaker position [Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189 ; accord, Lhotka v. Geographic Expeditions, Inc. (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 816, 824, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844 (by showing that defendant presented its contract as both nonnegotiable and not different from contract that would be presented by any other provider of guided hiking expeditions, plaintiff established minimal level of oppression to justify finding of procedural unconscionability)].

No extrinsic evidence of procedural unconscionability is required if a great disparity of power can be inferred from the parties' relationship or from the contract itself [Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189 (unconscionability could not be inferred from the relationship between a consumer and a motor home dealer)]. For example, oppression may be inferred in the employment context because generally only the most sought-after employees are in a position to refuse a job if the employer requires an arbitration agreement [Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189 ; see Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 115, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745 ; O'Hare v. Municipal Res. Consultants (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 267, 283, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116] .

Surprise may be found if a contract merely refers to rules set forth in another source that the customer would have to see prior to signing in order to learn the full import of the contract [Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189 ; see Harper v. Ultimo (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1402, 1406, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 418 (contract unconscionable because it incorporated terms not attached and those terms both required arbitration and severely limited damages)].

A provision is substantively unconscionable if it is so one-sided as to "shock the conscience" or it imposes harsh or oppressive terms [24 Hour Fitness, Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1199, 1213, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 533] . Those concepts--harshness, oppression, and "shocking to the conscience"--are not synonymous with "unreasonable." Basing an unconscionability determination on the unreasonableness of a contract provision would inject an inappropriate level of judicial subjectivity into the analysis [Morris v. Redwood Empire Bancorp (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1305, 1322, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797] . With a concept as nebulous as "unconscionability" it is important that a court not intervene to change contract terms that the parties have agreed to, merely because the court believes the terms are unreasonable; rather, the terms must "shock the conscience" [American Software, Inc. v. Ali (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1391, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477] .

In the context of an arbitration agreement, the agreement is unconscionable unless there is a "modicum of bilaterality" in the arbitration remedy [O'Hare v. Municipal Resource Consultants (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 267, 273-274, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 (citing Armendariz; finding mandatory arbitration provision procedurally and substantively unconscionable); Flores v. Transamerica Homefirst, Inc. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 846, 853-855, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376 (citing Armendariz; finding arbitration provisions procedurally and substantive unconscionable); Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 117, 6 P.3d 669] . The kind of arbitration provision that is so one-sided as to be substantively unconscionable is one that, rather than providing a neutral forum for dispute resolution, actually provides a strong disincentive for the weaker party to pursue any claim in any forum [Lhotka v. Geographic Expeditions, Inc. (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 816, 825, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844 (arbitration provision "guaranteed that plaintiffs could not possibly obtain anything approaching full recompense for their harm" because maximum recovery was limited to price plaintiffs paid for hiking expedition, remedy was restricted to mediation and arbitration in city far from plaintiffs' home, plaintiffs were required to share cost of mediation and to indemnify defendant for defense costs if plaintiffs sued instead of pursuing arbitration, and defendant was not subject to reciprocal limitation on recovery or reciprocal indemnification obligation)].

Another kind of substantively unconscionable provision in the context of an arbitration agreement occurs when the party imposing arbitration mandates a post-arbitration proceeding, either judicial or arbitral, wholly or largely to its benefit at the expense of the party on which the arbitration is imposed [Little v. Auto Stiegler (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1072-1074, 1076, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 (finding provision in mandatory employment arbitration agreement that permitted either party to appeal arbitration award of more than $50,000 to second arbitrator to be unconscionable, but concluding that provision could be severed and rest of agreement enforced)].

The courts have recognized that there is a sliding scale or a balancing relationship between the two elements of unconscionability. The greater the degree of unfair surprise or unequal bargaining power, the less the degree of substantive unconscionability required to annul the contract, and vice versa [Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 148, 160-161, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 113 P.3d 1100 (finding class-wide arbitration waiver provision in consumer credit card agreement to be both procedurally and substantively unconscionable); Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189 ; Harper v. Ultimo (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1402, 1406, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 418 (finding arbitration provision in construction contract to be both procedurally and substantively unconscionable); Marin Storage & Trucking, Inc. v. Benco Contracting and Engineering, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 1056, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 645 (in light of low level of procedural unfairness in adhesion contract containing indemnity clause, greater degree of substantive unfairness than that shown was required before contract could be found substantively unconscionable)]. Because procedural unconscionability must be measured on a sliding scale with substantive unconscionability, it is necessary not only to determine whether procedural unconscionability exists but also, and more important, to ascertain in what degree it may exist [Morris v. Redwood Empire Bancorp (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1305, 1319, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797] .

These rules are intended to make it possible for the courts to police explicitly against the contracts or clauses they find to be unconscionable. In the past, such policing has been accomplished largely by adverse construction of language, manipulation of the rules of offer and acceptance, or determinations that the clause is contrary to public policy or to the dominant purpose of the contract. Now, under these rules, a court may pass directly on the unconscionability of the contract or a particular clause and make a conclusion of law as to its unconscionability. The basic test is whether, in light of the general background and the needs of the particular case, the clauses involved are so one-sided as to be unconscionable under the circumstances existing at the time of the making of the contract. The principle is one of prevention of oppression and unfair surprise, without disturbance of the allocation of risks because of superior bargaining power [Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 1670.5].

For discussion of unconscionability as a defense to an action for breach of contract, see § 140.64.

[b] Unenforceable Contract of Adhesion

A contract of adhesion is a standardized contract imposed and drafted by the party of superior bargaining strength. It relegates to the subscribing party only the opportunity to adhere to the contract or reject it [Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1533-1534, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138] . A court will not enforce a contract of adhesion if it is unduly oppressive or unconscionable or if its terms are not within the reasonable expectation of the weaker or adhering party [Pardee Construction Company v. Superior Court (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1081, 1086-1087, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288 (real estate purchase agreements requiring all disputes to be submitted to judicial reference were adhesive contracts fatally infected with procedural and substantive unconscionability); Allan v. Snow Summit, Inc. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1375-1376, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813 ; Graham v. Scissor-Tail, Inc. (1981) 28 Cal. 3d 807, 820, 171 Cal. Rptr. 604, 623 P.2d 165 ; Izzi v. Mesquite Country Club (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1309, 1317-1318, 231 Cal. Rptr. 315 ; see Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 113-114, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d

669 (reversing order compelling arbitration in wrongful termination action brought under FEHA); Villa Milano Homeowners Assn. v. IL Davorge (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 819, 835-836, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (arbitration clause contained in CC&Rs was unconscionable adhesion contract and unenforceable to extent it applied to construction and design defect claims against developer who drafted, signed, and recorded CC&Rs)].

Use of a standardized form does not of itself make a contract an unconscionable adhesion contract. Even if a contract is adhesive, the court applies a sliding scale. There must be some showing of substantive unconscionability [Soltani v. Western & Southern Life Insurance Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1038, 1042-1045 (holding that employment contract provision shortening limitations period for wrongful termination action to six months was not unconscionable)]. The test for unconscionability is whether the stronger party has disappointed the reasonable expectations of the other party [Coon v. Nicola (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1225, 1234, 1235, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 846] . Adhesion, however, is not a prerequisite for unconscionability [Harper v. Ultimo (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1402, 1406, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 418 (finding arbitration provision in construction contract to be both procedurally and substantively unconscionable)]. For discussion of interpretation of contracts of adhesion, see § 140.32[12][c].

[2] Facts Indicating Unconscionability

[a] Arbitration Clause in Contract

An arbitration clause in an employment contract may be unconscionable according to the mores and business practices of the time and place of execution, if the contract provides the employer more rights and greater remedies than would otherwise be available and concomitantly deprives employees of significant rights and remedies they would normally enjoy, when the contract is considered in light of the commercial context in which it operates and the legitimate needs of the parties at the time the parties entered into it [Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1542, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138 ; see Bolter v. Superior Court (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 900, 910-911 ("place and manner" arbitration clauses in franchise agreement found unconscionable and clearly severable from remainder of agreement)]. Further, the Federal Arbitration Act [9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.] would not preclude a court from finding that the arbitration clause was unconscionable and unenforceable [Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1552, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138] .

However, an arbitration clause is not necessarily unconscionable simply because it is in an employment agreement, even though an employee seldom has as much bargaining power as the employer. An arbitration clause can be enforceable by the employer if it is written so that an employee would understand it, and the employee in fact read it before signing the agreement, and if the clause neither gives greater power to the employer nor deprives the employee alone of important rights [see Roman v. Superior Court (Flo-Kem, Inc.) (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1462, 1470-1476, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 153 (arbitration clause, which employee initialed, was in short agreement and applied to "all disputes" relating to employee's employment; clause did not reserve any rights solely to employer, did not impose undue limitation on discovery by employee, and did not limit administrative remedies available to employee under state law); but cf., e.g., Olvera v. El Pollo Loco, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 447, 455-457, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 65 (employer's attempt to force arbitration of employees' claims failed because purported agreement to arbitrate was based on procedurally and substantively unconscionable contents of employee manual)].

In Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc., a pre-employment arbitration "agreement" was found to be one-sided and thus unconscionable and unenforceable when it (1) contained limitations on remedies that the employee could obtain, (2) contained oppressive cost provisions requiring the employee to bear expenses that he or she would not be required to bear if the action could be brought in court, and (3) inherently favored the employer without some reasonable justification for that lack of mutuality. The California Supreme Court stated that such multiple defects indicated a systematic effort to impose arbitration on an employee not simply as an alternative to litigation, but as an inferior forum that works to the employer's advantage. Because courts are unable to cure this unconscionability through severance or restriction and are not permitted to cure it through reformation and augmentation, they must void the entire agreement [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 124-125, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 (reversing order compelling arbitration in wrongful termination action brought under FEHA); Pinedo v. Premium Tobacco Stores, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 774, 780-781 (affirming order denying arbitration in action brought under FEHA); see Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 740-743, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422 (citing principles set forth in Armendariz and remanding case to trial court to determine whether Armendariz applied to make parties' arbitration agreement unenforceable)]. This same reasoning was used by a federal court in determining that an employment contract provision requiring 10 days written notice to the employer as a prerequisite to filing suit was unenforceable. The court found that, as in Armendariz, the effect of the provision was to maximize employer advantage without reasonable justification for that arrangement. The failure to comply with the provision deprived an employee of a judicial forum and its concomitant rights [Soltani v. Western & Southern Life Insurance Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1038, 1045-1047] .

In another case, in which arbitration provisions in a reverse mortgage agreement were found to be both procedurally and substantively unconscionable, the court followed Armendariz in refusing to sever the invalid arbitration provisions. Because it was faced with an arbitration agreement in which no single provision could be stricken to remove the unconscionable taint, the court affirmed the trial court's order denying the lender's motion to compel arbitration [Flores v. Transamerica Homefirst, Inc. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 846, 857-858, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376] . Similarly, in a case in which the court found the provisions of an arbitration agreement between a securities corporation and its sales personnel to be both substantively and procedurally unconscionable, the cited Armendariz in holding that the arbitration agreement was unenforceable. Because the contract was permeated with unconscionability and illegality, the court could not cure it by removing the offending provisions [Mercuro v. Superior Court (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 167, 184-186, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671] .

An investment company's standard-form customer account agreement requiring customers to arbitrate disputes before a panel of three arbitrators from the Judicial Arbitration and Mediation Service and prohibiting consolidation or joinder of claims was so prohibitively expensive as to be unconscionable. The investment company's failure in court to offer a justification or explanation for requiring three arbitrators instead of one demonstrated that these provisions were included deliberately for the improper purpose of discouraging or preventing customers from vindicating their rights. Because these provisions could not be severed, the arbitration provisions in their entirety were unenforceable [Parada v. Superior Court (Monex Deposit Co.) (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1554, 1586-1587, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 743].

In a case involving a mandatory preemployment arbitration agreement in which a provision permitting either party to appeal an arbitration award of more than $50,000 to a second arbitrator was found unconscionable under Armendariz, the court concluded that the offending provision could be severed. Unlike the agreement in Armendariz, this contract involved only a single provision that was unconscionable, and no contract reformation was required [Little v. Auto Stiegler (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1072-1074, 1076, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979] .

A one-sided arbitration clause may have attributes of a contract of adhesion and yet not be unconscionable on its face. In that case, the court may uphold the clause against a claim of unconscionability. However, application of the clause could raise issues of fraud and waiver [Engalla v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 951, 984-986, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843, 938 P.2d 903 (arbitration requirement in group medical plan)].

An arbitration provision in an attorney's retainer agreement was held to be enforceable when the initial retainer agreement and amendment did not constitute an adhesion contract. The clients did not enter into a standardized contract with the attorney on a take it or leave it basis, the retainer agreement and amendment were negotiated and individualized agreements, and the clients possessed the freedom to employ the attorney of their choice and bargain for the terms of their choice [Powers v. Dickson, Carlson & Campillo (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1102, 1110, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 261] .

An arbitration provision in a comprehensive contracting service agreement between an insurer and a hospital was held to be enforceable when evidence of unconscionability presented by the hospital included only a declaration from its attorney who had no personal involvement with negotiation of the service agreement, and two newspaper articles containing quotes from an officer of the hospital on the reasons for filing the lawsuit. None of this material was competent evidence sufficient to establish unconscionability as a defense to mandatory arbitration [Coast Plaza Doctors Hospital v. Blue Cross of California (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 677, 687-689, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 809 (neither procedural nor substantive unconscionability found)].

[b] Prices of Consumer Goods and Services

Facts to be considered in determining whether a price is unconscionable are [Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 926-927, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503 ; Carboni v. Arrospide (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 76, 82-83, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 845 (interest rate of 200 percent per year unenforceable on loan exempt from usury law); see Civ. Code § 1670.5]:

- The basis and justification for the price charged.
- The price paid by other similarly situated consumers in similar transactions.
- The inconvenience imposed on the party charging the price.
- The true value of the goods or services.
- The absence of meaningful choice on the part of the party being charged the price.
- Whether deceptive practices are involved.

Although it is unlikely a court would find a price set by a freely competitive market unconscionable, the market price set by an oligopoly is not immune from scrutiny [Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 927, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503] .

The "oppression" element of procedural unconscionability requires lack of meaningful alternative sources of the goods or services in question [Shadoan v. World Savings & Loan Assn. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 97, 102-103, 268 Cal. Rptr. 207 ; Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 758, 768, 259 Cal. Rptr. 789] . On the other hand, the existence of consumer choice only decreases the extent of procedural unconscionability. It does not negate the oppression or obligate courts to enforce the challenged provision regardless of the extent of substantive unfairness. The existence of consumer choice is relevant, but it is not determinative of the entire issue of procedural unconscionability. Except in unusual circumstances--such as when the consumer is highly sophisticated and the challenged provision does not undermine important public policies--the use of a contract of adhesion establishes a minimal degree of procedural unconscionability notwithstanding the availability of market alternatives [Gatton v. T-Mobile USA, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 571, 583-585, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 344 ("In sum, there are provisions so unfair or contrary to public policy that the law will not allow them to be imposed in a contract of adhesion, even if theoretically the consumer had an opportunity to discover and use an alternate provider for the goods or services involved")].

[c] Class Action Waiver in Consumer Contract

In some cases in California, class action waivers in consumer contracts of adhesion [see § 140.32[12][c] (definition)] are unenforceable, whether the consumer is being asked to waive the right to class action litigation or the right to class-wide arbitration. When the waiver is found in a consumer contract of adhesion in a setting in which disputes between the contracting parties predictably involve small amounts of damages, and when it is alleged that the party with the superior bargaining power has carried out a scheme to deliberately cheat large numbers of consumers out of individually small sums of money, then, at least to the extent that the obligation at issue is governed by California law, the waiver becomes in practice what is prohibited by statute: the exemption of the stronger party from responsibility for its own fraud, or willful injury to the person or property of another [see Civ. Code § 1668]. Under these circumstances, such waivers are unconscionable under California law and should not be enforced [Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 148, 162-163, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 113 P.3d 1100 ; see Gatton v. T-Mobile USA, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 571, 588, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 344 (class-action/class-arbitration waiver in arbitration provision in cell phone service contract was directly within the scope of the holding in Discover Bank, and "even though the evidence of procedural unconscionability is limited, the evidence of substantive unconscionability is strong enough to tip the scale and render the arbitration provision unconscionable"); Cohen v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1442, 1451-1453, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 813 (application of Discover Bank principles to class-action waiver in satellite TV customer agreement, which was held unenforceable; summaries of other cases); Szetela v. Discover Bank (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 1094, 1099-1102, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 862] .

The Federal Arbitration Act [9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.; see Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration] does not preempt California law in this respect [Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 148, 153, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 113 P.3d 1100 ; accord, Shroyer v. New Cingular Wireless Servs. (9th Cir. 2007) 498 F.3d 976, 987-988] . Furthermore, there is no conflict between the Discover Bank holding and the Federal Arbitration Act sufficient to support a conclusion of implicit preemption [Shroyer v. New Cingular Wireless Servs. (9th Cir. 2007) 498 F.3d 976, 988-993] .

Prior to the Discover Bank decision cited above, the Ninth Circuit had held that a telecommunications carrier's new consumer services agreement was both procedurally and substantively unconscionable under California law. The imposition of the contract on customers without the opportunity for negotiation, modification, or waiver rendered it procedurally unconscionable. The one-sided contract terms, which barred class actions, imposed an arbitration fee scheme, and required any arbitration to remain confidential, rendered the contract substantively unconscionable [Ting v. AT&T (9th Cir. 2003) 319 F.3d 1126, 1148-1152] . Following the Discover Bank decision, the Ninth Circuit has added some refinements to the holding:

- If a service provider has overwhelming bargaining power and presents a take-it-or-leave-it contract to a customer, the contract can be held procedurally unconscionable, whether or not the customer has a meaningful choice as to service providers [Nagrampa v. MailCoups, Inc. (9th Cir. 2006) 469 F.3d 1257, 1283-1284 ; see Douglas v. United States Dist. Court (9th Cir. 2007) 495 F.3d 1062, 1067-1068] .

- A waiver that fails under the Discover Bank analysis is not saved by a contractual provision relieving the consumer of all expenses, including attorney's fees, that the consumer would incur pursuing an individual case [Shroyer v. New Cingular Wireless Servs. (9th Cir. 2007) 498 F.3d 976, 986 ("when the potential for individual gain is small, very few plaintiffs, if any, will pursue individual arbitration or litigation, which greatly reduces the aggregate liability a company faces when it has exacted small sums from millions of consumers"; original emphasis); see Laster v. AT&T Mobility LLC (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 849, 854-856] .

[3] No Ground for Affirmative Relief

Regardless of the status or identity of the plaintiff making the claim of unconscionability, Civ. Code § 1670.5 does not support an affirmative cause of action. However, a cause of action may exist under some other statute; for example:

- An affirmative cause of action may exist under the Consumers Legal Remedies Act [see, e.g., Civ. Code §§ 1770(a)(19), 1780; see generally Ch. 504, Sales: Consumers Legal Remedies Act], based on the use of unconscionable provisions in consumer contracts [Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. v. Superior Court

- Use of unconscionable contract provisions might support affirmative relief or injunctive relief under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. [seegenerally Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.10 et seq.], on the theory that use of such provisions constituted a deceptive or unfair business practice [Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 758, 772-775, 259 Cal. Rptr. 789] .

- If the contested term is a liquidated damages provision in a consumer contract, Civ. Code § 1671(d) provides affirmative relief to a party who has paid sums in accordance with an invalid provision to the extent the sums paid exceed the other party's actual damages [Beasley v. Wells Fargo Bank (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1383, 1398-1401, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 , disapproved on other grounds, Olson v. Automobile Club of So. Cal. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1142, 1153 n.6]. Liquidated damages provisions are discussed in Ch. 177, Damages .

[4] Court Will Hear Evidence

It is proper for the court to hear evidence on these questions. This evidence is for the court's consideration, not the jury's. The court must decide whether a particular contract or clause is unconscionable [see Legislative Committee Comment to Civ. Code § 1670.5]. The critical juncture for determining whether a contract is unconscionable is the moment it was entered into by the parties. The issue is not whether it is unconscionable in light of subsequent events [Civ. Code § 1670.5; see American Software, Inc. v. Ali (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1391, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Formation of Enforceable Contract

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.26

§ 140.26 Electronic Contracts and Signatures

[1] In General

With the advent of the Internet and other advances in technology, agreements are frequently negotiated and finalized by electronic communication methods such as fax, e-mail, or Internet websites. Agreements formed in this matter are not "written" or "signed" within the traditional meanings of those terms. In recognition of the changes in the way agreements are formed and preserved, both California and the federal government have enacted legislation validating electronic documents and electronic signatures. In California, the governing statute is the Uniform Electronic Transactions Act (UETA) [Civ. Code § 1633.1 et seq.]. Nearly all other states also have enacted UETA. The federal counterpart is the Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act (E-SIGN) [Pub. L. No. 106-229, tit. 1, 2 (June 30, 2000); 15 U.S.C. § 7001 et seq.]. For a discussion of the relationship between the state and federal statutes, see § 140.26[3][b].

[2] California Transactions

[a] Application of Uniform Act

In California, UETA applies (with some specified exceptions) to electronic records and electronic signatures relating to a "transaction"; that is, an action or set of actions occurring between two or more persons relating to the conduct of business, commercial, or governmental affairs [Civ. Code § 1633.3(a); see Civ. Code § 1633.2(o) (definition of "transaction"); see also Civ. Code §§ 1633.2(a)-(n), 1633.3(b)-(d), (f) (other definitions; exceptions)]. UETA is to be construed and applied so as to facilitate electronic transactions consistent with other applicable law; to be consistent with reasonable practices concerning electronic transactions and with the continued expansion of those practices; and to effectuate the general purpose to make uniform the law with respect to the subject of UETA among states enacting it [Civ. Code § 1633.6].

Numerous specific statutory exclusions from UETA exist [see Civ. Code § 1633.3(b), (c)]. The broadest exclusions include the following:

- Transactions subject to a law governing the creation and execution of wills, codicils, or testamentary trusts [Civ. Code § 1633.3(b)(1)].

- Transactions subject to Division 1 of the Commercial Code, except Com. Code §§ 1107 and 1206 [Civ. Code § 1633.3(b)(2)].

- Transactions subject to Divisions 3 (negotiable instruments), 4 (bank deposits and collections), 5 (letters of credit), 8 (investment securities), 9 (secured transactions), or 11 (funds transfers) of the Commercial Code [Civ. Code § 1633.3(b)(3)].

- Transactions subject to any law requiring that specifically identifiable text or disclosures in a record or portion of a record be separately signed or initialed [Civ. Code § 1633.3(b)(4)]. This would include various consumer protection laws, although some of these laws, such as the federal Truth In Lending Act, contain their own provision governing electronic disclosures [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.36 (electronic communication of Regulation Z disclosures); see also California Legal Forms, Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales, § 45.220[1][c] (Matthew Bender)]. However, this exclusion does not apply to transactions subject to Civ. Code §§ 1677 or 1678, relating to liquidated damages in real property sales contracts, or Code Civ. Proc. § 1278, relating to arbitration provisions in real property sales contracts.

Although transactions excluded from UETA are not subject to its provisions, they still may be conducted by electronic means if that can be done under any other applicable law [Civ. Code § 1633.3(f)].

[b] Effect of Electronic Contract or Signature

Under UETA, a record or signature may not be denied legal effect or enforceability solely because it is in electronic form. A contract may not be denied legal effect or enforceability solely because an electronic record was used in its formation. If a law requires a record to be in writing, an electronic record satisfies the law. If a law requires a signature, an electronic signature satisfies the law [Civ. Code § 1633.7; see Civ. Code § 1633.2(a), (d), (e), (g), (h), (m) (definitions of "contract," "electronic," and "record")]. In a case evaluating, under common law, the validity of an e mail sent prior to enactment of the UETA, a federal court held that the e mail, signed with a party's name, satisfied the statute of frauds, assuming that a binding oral agreement existed and that the e mail included all of the material terms of that agreement [Lamle v. Mattel, Inc. (Fed. Cir. 2005) 394 F.3d 1355, 1362-1363] .

Evidence of a record or signature may not be excluded in a proceeding solely because it is in electronic form [Civ. Code § 1633.13].

[c] Effect of Uniform Act on Parties

UETA does not require that a record or signature be created, generated, sent, communicated, received, stored, or otherwise processed or used, by electronic means or in electronic form [Civ. Code § 1633.5(a)].

Moreover, UETA applies only to a transaction between parties each of whom has agreed to conduct the transaction by electronic means. Whether the parties agree to conduct a transaction by electronic means is determined from the context and surrounding circumstances, including the parties' conduct. Except for a separate and optional agreement the primary purpose of which is to authorize a transaction to be conducted by electronic means, an agreement to conduct a transaction by electronic means may not be contained in a standard form contract that is not an electronic record. An agreement in such a standard form contract may not be conditioned on an agreement to conduct transactions by electronic means. An agreement to conduct a transaction by electronic means may not be inferred solely from the fact that a party has used electronic means to pay an account or register a purchase or warranty. These statutory rules may not be varied by agreement [Civ. Code § 1633.5(b)].

A party that agrees to conduct a transaction by electronic means may refuse to conduct other transactions by electronic means. If a seller sells goods or services by both electronic and nonelectronic means and a buyer purchases the goods or services by conducting the transaction by electronic means, the buyer may refuse to conduct further transactions regarding the goods or services by electronic means. These statutory rules may not be varied by agreement [Civ. Code § 1633.5(c)].

Except as otherwise provided in UETA, the effect of any of its provisions may be varied by agreement. The presence in certain provisions of UETA of the words "unless otherwise agreed," or words of similar import, does not imply that the effect of other provisions may not be varied by agreement [Civ. Code § 1633.5(d)].

[d] Attribution of Electronic Contract or Signature to Party

An electronic record or electronic signature is attributable to a person if it was the act of the person. The act of the person may be shown in any manner, including a showing of the efficacy of any security procedure applied to determine the person to whom the electronic record or electronic signature was attributable [Civ. Code § 1633.9(a)]. The effect of an electronic record or electronic signature attributed to a person under the foregoing rules is determined from the context and surrounding circumstances at the time of its creation, execution, or adoption, including the parties' agreement, if any, and otherwise as provided by law [Civ. Code § 1633.9(b)].

[e] Other Effects of Uniform Act

UETA also provides rules affecting the following aspects of transactions subject to it:

- Providing, sending, or delivering information "in writing" to another person, and the posting, displaying, or formatting of such information [see Civ. Code § 1633.8].
- Making changes, and dealing with errors, in electronic records [see Civ. Code § 1633.10].
- Notarizing an electronic signature, and signing under penalty of perjury [see Civ. Code § 1633.11].
- Complying with legal requirements to retain specified types of records [see Civ. Code § 1633.12].
- Conducting wholly automated transactions [see Civ. Code § 1633.14].
- Sending and receiving electronic records related to a transaction [see Civ. Code § 1633.15].
- Using electronic means to send a notice of a right to cancel [see Civ. Code § 1633.16].
- Prohibiting state agents from interfering with the use of electronic signatures [see Civ. Code § 1633.17].

[3] Interstate and International Transactions

[a] Effect of Electronic Contract or Signature

The federal E-SIGN Act applies to any transaction in or affecting interstate or foreign commerce [see 15 U.S.C. § 7001(a)]. Under E-SIGN, notwithstanding any statute, regulation, or other rule of law, a signature, contract, or other record relating to a transaction affecting interstate or foreign commerce may not bedenied legal effect, validity, or enforceability solely because it is in electronic form, and a contract relating to such a transaction may not be denied legal effect, validity, or enforceability solely because an electronic signature or electronic record was used in its formation [15 U.S.C. § 7001(a); see 15 U.S.C. § 7006 (definitions)]. The term "transaction" means an action, or a set of actions, relating to the conduct of business, consumer, or commercial affairs between two or more persons, including any of the following types of conduct [15 U.S.C. § 7006(13)]:

- The sale, lease, exchange, licensing, or other disposition of personal property (including goods and intangibles) or services (or any combination of these actions).

- The sale, lease, exchange, or other disposition (or any combination of these actions) of any interest in real property.

The E-SIGN requirements do not limit, alter, or otherwise affect any requirement imposed by a statute, regulation, or rule of law, other than a requirement that contracts or other records be written, signed, or in nonelectronic form [15 U.S.C. § 7001(b)(1)].

However, E-SIGN does not require any to agree to use or accept electronic records or electronic signatures (except a governmental agency, with respect to a record other than a contract to which it is a party) [15 U.S.C. § 7001(b)(2)].

[b] Effect of State Laws

State law, regulation, or other rule of law may modify, limit, or supersede the provisions of 15 U.S.C. § 7001 [discussed in [a], above] with respect to state law in the following cases [15 U.S.C. § 7002(a)]:

- The law or regulation in question constitutes an enactment of UETA as approved and recommended for enactment in all the states by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws in 1999, except that any exception to the scope of UETA enacted by a state [see, e.g., Civ. Code § 1633.3(b)(4), (c) (California exceptions)] is preempted to the extent that the exception is inconsistent with the regulatory provisions of E-SIGN. In other words, UETA controls in states that have enacted it, but individual state modifications of UETA that are inconsistent with E-SIGN are preempted.

- The law or regulation is question specifies alternative procedures or requirements for the use and/or acceptance of electronic records or signatures to establish the legal effect, validity, or enforceability of contracts, if these procedures or requirements are consistent with E-SIGN.

As of mid-2007, UETA has been enacted in all but four states, and those four have equivalent laws [see 15 U.S.C. § 7002(a)(2)]. UETA has also been enacted in the District of Columbia and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

In addition, state law may not require or accord greater legal status or effect to the implementation or application of a specific technology or technical specification for performing the functions of creating, storing, generating, receiving, communicating, or authenticating electronic records or electronic signatures [15 U.S.C. § 7002(a)(2)(A)(ii); see 15 U.S.C. § 7002(a)(1)]. States also are not permitted to circumvent the regulatory provisions of E-SIGN through the imposition of nonelectronic delivery methods under section 8(b)(2) of UETA [15 U.S.C. § 7002(c); see Civ. Code § 1633.8(b)(2)].

In a few other specified circumstances, state law will supersede E-SIGN requirements [see 15 U.S.C. § 7003]. Specifically, the requirement to give effect to an electronic contract or signature does not apply to a contract or other record to the extent it is governed by any of the following state laws [15 U.S.C. § 7003(a)]:

- A statute, regulation, or other rule of law governing the creation and execution of wills, codicils, or testamentary trusts.

- A statute, regulation, or other rule of law governing adoption, divorce, or other matters of family law.

- The Uniform Commercial Code, other than section 1 206 (presumptions), Article 2 (sales of goods), and Article 2A (personal property leases) [see Com. Code §§ 1206, 2101 et seq., 10101 et seq.].

The requirement to give effect to an electronic signature or record also does not apply to court documents (such as orders, notices, briefs and pleadings); notices of cancellation or termination of utility services; specified notices in connection with default, acceleration, repossession, foreclosure, eviction, or right to cure under a credit agreement secured by, or a rental agreement for, an individual's primary residence; cancellation of health or life insurance benefits; product recall notices [15 U.S.C. § 7003(b)(2)]; and any document required to accompany any transportation or handling of toxic or dangerous materials [15 U.S.C. § 7003(b)(3)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Interpretation of Contract

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.30

§ 140.30 Governing Law

[1] General Rule Absent Choice of Law Provision

Generally, a contract is interpreted in accordance with the law and usage of the place at which it is to be performed, or, if it does not indicate a place ofperformance, according to the law and usage of the place at which it was made [Civ. Code § 1646; see, e.g., Shannon-Vail Five Inc. v. Bunch (9th Cir. 2001) 270 F.3d 1207, 1210 (finding that since Nevada was place of performance of loan contract, Nevada law should be applied; analyzing Restatement (Second) of Conflicts to reach same result)]. The parties may provide in the contract for their choice of a different law, however [see [3], below].

[2] Contract Involving $250,000 or More Specifying California Law

The parties to any contract, agreement, or undertaking, contingent or otherwise, relating to a transaction involving in the aggregate not less than $250,000, may agree that California law will govern their rights and duties in whole or in part, whether the contract, agreement, or undertaking, or the transaction, bears a reasonable relation to California, and even if the transaction would otherwise be covered by Com. Code § 1301(a) (requiring reasonable connection to California and another state or country, to uphold choice of law provision) [Civ. Code § 1646.5; see Code Civ. Proc. § 410.40 (jurisdiction and venue over foreign corporation or resident pursuant to choice of law provision in contract involving not less than $1,000,000)].

However, this rule does not apply to any of the following contracts, agreements, or undertakings [Civ. Code § 1646.5]:

- A contract for labor or personal services.

- A contract relating to any transaction primarily for personal, family, or household purposes.

- Any other contract to the extent provided in Com. Code § 1301(b). The latter section lists Commercial Code sections that override a choice of law provision in situations involving creditors' rights against goods sold, leases, bank deposits and collections, letters of credit, bulk sales, investment securities, and perfection of security interests.

[3] Enforceability of Choice of Law Provision

[a] Adoption of Restatement Approach

In determining the enforceability of arm's length contractual choice of law provisions, California courts must apply the principles set forth in Restatement 2d of Conflict of Laws section 187, which reflects a strong policy favoring enforcement of such provisions [Nedlloyd Lines B.V. v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 459, 464-465, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330, 834 P.2d 1148 ; see Washington Mutual Bank v. Superior Court (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 906, 927-928, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320, 15 P.3d 1071 (trial court erred in certifying class in multi-state class action without first determining effect of choice of law agreements at issue: choice of law issues must be resolved as part of certification process)].

[b] Determining Reasonable Basis for Parties' Choice

To apply the principles of Restatement 2d of Conflict of Laws section 187 [see [a], above], the court first must determine that either (1) the chosen state has a substantial relationship to the parties or their transaction or (2) there is some other reasonable basis for the parties' choice of law. However, in making this inquiry, the court should be aware of the following possible exceptions [Nedlloyd Lines B.V. v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 459, 465, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330, 834 P.2d 1148] .

- There may be an exception when a choice of law issue arises from a contract subject to the Uniform Commercial Code, which provides that, with specified exceptions, when a transaction bears a reasonable relation to California and also to another state or nation, the parties may agree that the law either of California or of the other state or nation will govern their rights and duties. Failing such an agreement, the Commercial Code applies to transactions bearing an appropriate relation to California [Com. Code § 1301].

- A different result might obtain under subdivision (1) of Restatement 2d of Conflict of Laws section 187, which appears to allow the parties in some circumstances to specify the law of a state that has no relation to the parties or their transaction [Nedlloyd Lines B.V. v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 459, 465 n.4, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330, 834 P.2d 1148] .

The fact that one of the parties resides in another state gives the parties a reasonable ground for choosing that state's law [Nedlloyd Lines B.V. v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 459, 467, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330, 834 P.2d 1148 ; Hughes Electronics Corp. v. Citibank Delaware (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 251, 258, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 244] . The same should be true when there is an intended third-party beneficiary of the contract, and that person resides in the chosen state [ABF Capital Corp. v. Berglass (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 825, 835, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588] .

If the court cannot determine that there is a reasonable basis for the parties' choice, that is the end of the inquiry, and the court need not enforce the parties' choice of law [Nedlloyd Lines B.V. v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 459, 465, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330, 834 P.2d 1148] .

[c] Testing for Conflict With Fundamental Policy

If the court determines that the parties' choice of law was reasonable [see [b], above], the court must next determine whether the chosen state's law is contrary to a fundamental policy of California. If there is no such conflict, the court must enforce the parties' choice of law [Nedlloyd Lines B.V. v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 459, 465, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330, 834 P.2d 1148 ; e.g., IBM v. Bajorek (9thCir. 1999) 191 F.3d 1033, 1041-1042 (New York law, chosen in stock-option agreement); Guardian Savings & Loan Ass'n v. MD Assocs. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 309, 323, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151 (Texas law)].

There are no bright-line rules for determining what is or is not contrary to a fundamental policy of California [Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2006) 134 Cal. App. 4th 886, 893, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 456] . The absence of a fundamental conflict of laws could be due simply to the absence of any conflict [see, e.g., Gerdlund v. Electronic Dispensers International (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 263, 269-270, 235 Cal. Rptr. 279 (Nevada law was reasonable choice; there was no conflict with California policy since California's parol evidence rule was same as Nevada rule)]. Or it could be due to the absence of a fundamental policy that would be affected. For instance, California law allows contracting parties to shorten or extend limitation periods; thus, California has no discernible fundamental policy that would be thwarted by enforcing a choice of law provision for the application of another state's limitation period [ABF Capital Corp. v. Berglass (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 825, 836, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588] .

In determining whether another state's law conflicts with the fundamental policy of California, it would be error for the court to isolate the differences between an applicable California law and the other state's comparable law and then determine whether the isolated differences in the two states' laws reflect a fundamental policy. This approach would lead the court to consider each portion of the compared laws separately, which would minimize the impact of any deviation from the requirements of the California law. It is erroneous because it fails to consider the California law as an integrated whole, the particular parts of which reinforce each other [Brack v. Omni Loan Co., Ltd. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1312, 1325, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 275 (choice of Nevada law, in consumer loan contract of adhesion, conflicted with fundamental policy expressed in Finance Lenders Law, Fin. Code § 22000 et seq.)].

There may be an occasional case in which California is the forum, and the parties have chosen the law of another state, but the law of yet a third state, rather than California's law, would apply but for the parties' choice. In that situation, the California court will look to the fundamental policy of the third state in determining whether to enforce the parties' choice of law [Nedlloyd Lines B.V. v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 459, 465 n.5, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330, 834 P.2d 1148] .

[d] Resolving Fundamental Conflict of Laws

When there is a fundamental conflict with California law, the court then must determine whether California has a materially greater interest than the chosen state in the determination of the particular issue. If California has a materially greater interest than the chosen state, the choice of law will not be enforced, for the obvious reason that in such a case the California court should decline to enforce a law contrary to California's fundamental policy [Nedlloyd Lines B.V. v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 459, 465, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330, 834 P.2d 1148] . For example:

- California's strong policy expressed in Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, prohibiting covenants not to compete, determined the enforceability of a noncompetition agreement in an employment contract, which provided that Maryland law would govern contract disputes [Application Group Inc. v. Hunter Group, Inc. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 881, 900-902, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 73 ; see Scott v. Snelling & Snelling, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 1990) 732 F. Supp. 1034, 1039-1041 (Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 would control as to validity of noncompetition clause in franchise agreement that was to be governed by Pennsylvania law)].

- The parties' choice of Colorado law allowing an interest rate that would be usurious under California law could not be enforced [Mencor Enterprises, Inc. v. Hets Equities Corp. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 432, 441, 235 Cal. Rptr. 464] .

Otherwise, the parties' choice of law should be enforced. For example, California's interest in enforcing the policy underlying Code Civ. Proc. § 580b, which prohibits a deficiency judgment in certain cases of foreclosing a lien, was not materially greater than a Texas policy of ensuring that the justified expectations of the parties would be met [Guardian Savings & Loan Ass'n v. MD Assocs. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 309, 323, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151] .

There may be cases in which the chosen state has a materially greater interest in the matter than does California, but enforcement of the law of the chosen state would lead to a result contrary to a fundamental policy of California. In some cases, enforcement of the law of the chosen state may be appropriate in spite of California's policy to the contrary. For example, enforcement of a class-action waiver in a particular consumer contract of adhesion could be contrary to a fundamental policy of California [see Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 148 ; § 140.25[2][c]], but if enforcement of such a waiver would be consistent with the law of the other state that the contract specifies will govern the parties' rights and obligations, and if the party opposing enforcement of the waiver is asserting claims in a California court against a resident of that other state solely under the law of that state, the California court may conclude that the other state has a materially greater interest in seeing its law enforced than California has in enforcing its contrary fundamental policy [Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2006) 134 Cal. App. 4th 886, 895, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 456 (trial court correctly ruled that plaintiff, attempting to pursue class action, must abide by class-action waiver in consumer contract of adhesion governed by Delaware law and must submit to arbitration on his claim alone)]. On the other hand, if the party opposing enforcement is asserting claims under California law, then the court may conclude that California's interest in enforcing its fundamental policy is greater than the other state's interest in enforcing its contrary law [Klussman v. Cross Country Bank (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1283, 1298-1300, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 728 (trial court correctly ruled that class action waiver in consumer contract of adhesion governed by Delaware law could not be enforced in action under Consumers Legal Remedies Act and California's unfair competition law); accord, Omstead v. Dell, Inc. (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 1081, 1086 (under California law, choice-of-law provision electing Texas law, in computer manufacturer's consumer contract, was unenforceable; class-action waiver was unconscionable under Discover Bank test and could not be severed, rendering entire arbitration provision unenforceable)]. In these kinds of cases, careful consideration of both California's policy and the other state's interest would be required [Nedlloyd Lines B.V. v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 459, 465 n.6, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330, 834 P.2d 1148] .

[4] Application of Choice of Law Provision in Tort Action

Generally, a clause referring to all disputes "arising under or growing out of thisagreement" is considered broader than one stating only that "this agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the law of" a specified jurisdiction. The California Supreme Court narrowly held that a provision of the first kind required a cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty to be determined in accordance with the foreign law specified in the choice of law provision. Whatever fiduciary duties the parties had toward each other arose out of their contractual obligations to each other [Nedlloyd Lines B.V. v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 459, 469-472, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330, 834 P.2d 1148 (majority shareholder's duty to corporation)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Interpretation of Contract

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.31

§ 140.31 Parol Evidence Rule

[1] Elements

[a] Writing Intended as Final Expression of Agreement

The parol evidence rule generally prohibits the introduction of any extrinsic evidence, whether oral or written, to vary, alter, or augment the terms of an integrated written contract. The rule is codified in Civ. Code § 1625 and Code Civ. Proc. § 1856 [Casa Herrera, Inc. v. Beydoun (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 336, 343, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 97, 83 P.3d 497] .

The execution of a contract in writing, whether the law requires it to be written or not, supersedes all of the negotiations or stipulations concerning its subject matter that preceded or accompanied the execution of the contract [Civ. Code § 1625].

Terms set forth in a writing intended by the parties as a final expression of their agreement with respect to the terms included in the writing may not be contradicted by evidence of any previous agreement or of a contemporaneous oral agreement [Code Civ. Proc. § 1856(a); see Com. Code § 2202 (virtually identical rule applicable to contracts for sales of goods)]. The parties may explain or supplement the terms in such an agreement by evidence of consistent additional terms, unless the writing is intended as a complete and exclusive statement of the terms of the agreement [Code Civ. Proc. § 1856(b); see [b], below].

The parol evidence rule does not, however, prohibit the introduction of extrinsic evidence to explain the meaning of a written contract if the meaning urged is one to which the written contract terms are reasonably susceptible [Casa Herrera, Inc. v. Beydoun (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 336, 343, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 97, 83 P.3d 497] . Extrinsic evidence is admissible to explain ambiguities or to give meaning and content to words used in the agreement, as long as that evidence does not vary or contradict the written terms of the agreement [Blackburn v. Charnley (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 758, 766, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 885 ; see Code Civ. Proc. 1856(e)]. Evidence admitted to explain an agreement may include evidence of a course of dealing, usage of trade, or course of performance [Code Civ. Proc. 1856(c); Employers Reins. Co. v. Superior Court (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 906, 911, 923-924, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 733 (course-of-performance evidence is admissible only to interpret contract under which parties were performing; it is not relevant to interpret any other contract between same parties, even if both contracts involved same subject); see United States Cellular Inv. Co. v. GTE Mobilnet, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 281 F.3d 929, 937-938 (course of performance of partnership agreement demonstrated that partners did not intend that corporate partner's transfers of stock would trigger anti-transfer provisions); see also Com. Code § 2202 (virtually identical rule applicable to contracts for sales of goods)].

[b] Writing Intended as Final and Complete Agreement

As codified in Code Civ. Proc. 1856(a), the parol evidence rule precludes only evidence to contradict the terms of a written agreement that the parties intended to be their final agreement on those terms. It does not preclude evidence of consistent additional terms relating to the same subject matter unless the parties intended the agreement to be not only the final expression of their agreement but also their complete and exclusive statement of the terms of their agreement on the subject matter [Code Civ. Proc. 1856(b); see Com. Code § 2202 (virtually identical rule applicable to contracts for sales of goods)].

[c] Determination of Parties' Intention

The trial court determines whether the parties intended the writing to be a final expression of their agreement with respect to the terms included in it and whether the writing is intended also as a complete and exclusive statement of the terms of the agreement [Code Civ. Proc. § 1856(d); see Banco Do Brasil, S.A. v. Latian, Inc. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 973, 1001, 285 Cal. Rptr. 870 (whether rule applies to exclude evidence of any collateral oral agreements is question of law to be determined by court); see also Wang v. Massey Chevrolet (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 856, 872-873, 876, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 (citing Banco Do Brasil in determining that parol evidence rule barred evidence of oral misrepresentations when lease was not reasonably susceptible to interpretation consistent with those representations)].

[d] Integrity of Writing or Validity of Agreement

When a party puts a mistake or imperfection of the writing in issue by the pleadings, the parol evidence rule does not preclude taking evidence relevant to that issue [Code Civ. Proc. § 1856(e); see Pacific State Bank v. Greene (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 375, 388-389, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 739 (loan guarantor's declaration regarding which loan she intended to guarantee raised triable issue of fact concerning mutual mistake defense in bank's action to recover on several loans)].

When the validity of the agreement is in dispute, the parol evidence rule does not preclude taking evidence relevant to that issue [Code Civ. Proc. § 1856(f); Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 148, 308 P.2d 713 (rule does not preclude evidence that contract lawful on its face is in fact part of illegal transaction); Homami v. Iranzadi (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1104, 1112, 260 Cal. Rptr. 6] .

[e] Circumstances of Making Agreement

For the proper construction of an instrument, the parties may show the circumstances in which it was made, including the situation of the subject of the instrument and of the parties to it, so that the judge may be placed in the position of those whose language he or she is to interpret [Code Civ. Proc. § 1860]. The parol evidence rule does not preclude taking evidence of the circumstances in which the agreement was made or to which it relates, or to explain an extrinsic ambiguity, or otherwise to interpret the terms of the agreement, or to establish illegality or fraud [Code Civ. Proc.§ 1856(g) (so-called fraud exception to parol evidence rule); see, e.g., Kavruck v. Blue Cross of California (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 773, 782-784, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 152 (insured entitled to submit parol evidence to support interpretation of ambiguous health insurance policy term); Darling v. Controlled Environments Construction, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1221, 1234-1235, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 213 (parol evidence rule did not bar extrinsic evidence introduced to assist court in ascertaining parties' intent regarding ambiguity of floor flatness standard in structural concrete subcontract); Neverkovec v. Fredericks (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 337, 350-353, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 856 (parol evidence rule did not bar extrinsic evidence introduced by third party regarding intent of parties to release); see generally Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit]. For example, in a case in which a guarantor claimed that she agreed to guarantee a single loan but that a bank employee's misrepresentations led her to sign guaranty agreements covering four loans, the court of appeal held that evidence of factual misstatements was admissible to show mistake or fraud pursuant to the statutory exceptions to the parol evidence rule. The court concluded that the judicial limitation on the scope of the statutory fraud exception should not be further extended to preclude parol evidence of a misrepresentation of fact over the content of the physical document at time of signing [Pacific State Bank v. Greene (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 375, 378-379, 396, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 739] .

[2] Rule of Substantive Law

The parol evidence rule is a rule of substantive law, not a rule of evidence [Casa Herrera, Inc. v. Beydoun (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 336, 343, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 97, 83 P.3d 497 ; Estate of Gaines (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 255, 264, 100 P.2d 1055 ; Alling v. Universal Manufacturing Corp. (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1412, 1433, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718 ; Banco Do Brasil, S.A. v. Latian, Inc. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 973, 1000, 285 Cal. Rptr. 870] . It does not preclude evidence for reasons ordinarily requiring exclusion, such as the low probative value of the evidence or a policy against admitting it. Instead, the rule states simply that, as a matter of substantive law, the act of embodying the complete terms of an agreement in a writing, called integration, becomes the contract of the parties. Extrinsic evidence of their agreement, no matter how persuasive, is precluded because it cannot serve to prove what the agreement was; that is determined as a matter of law to be the writing itself [Riley v. Bear Creek Planning Committee (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 500, 508-509, 131 Cal. Rptr. 381, 551 P.2d 1213 ; Alling v. Universal Manufacturing Corp. (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1412, 1434, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718 ; Banco Do Brasil, S.A. v. Latian, Inc. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 973, 1000, 285 Cal. Rptr. 870 , cert. denied, 504 U.S. 986 (1992) ; Marani v. Jackson (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 695, 701, 228 Cal. Rptr. 518] .

In a case in which a court resolved an action for breach of contract and fraud in favor of a defendant by applying the parol evidence rule, and the defendant thereafter filed a malicious prosecution action against the plaintiffs in the underlying action, the California Supreme Court held that the termination of the underlying action based on the parol evidence rule satisfied the favorable termination element of a malicious prosecution claim [Casa Herrera, Inc. v. Beydoun (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 336, 339, 349, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 97, 83 P.3d 497] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Possibility of Action for Fraud in Lieu of Action for Breach of Contract. A party may not be able to prove a cause of action for breach of contract based on an oral misrepresentation that contradicts a written integrated agreement. However, the party may be able to prove a tort cause of action for fraud based on fraudulent concealment if the party was induced to enter into the written, integrated agreement by the other party's intentional failure to disclose material facts that party had a duty to disclose [see Marketing West, Inc. v. Sanyo Fisher (USA) Corp. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 603, 612-614, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 859] . This strategy is discussed in Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit .

[3] Integration and Susceptibility

[a] Determination That Agreement Is Integrated

The parties may not use parol evidence to add to or vary the terms of a written contract if they have agreed that it is an "integrated agreement," that is, a complete and final embodiment of the terms of their agreement [Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 222, 225, 65 Cal. Rptr. 545, 436 P.2d 561 ; Bionghi v. Metropolitan Water District of Southern California (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1364, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 388 (extrinsic evidence offered by plaintiff to show that contract required good cause for termination was inadmissible when agreement included integration clause); SDC/Pullman Partners v. Tolo Inc. (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 37, 53-54, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62 ; Alling v. Universal Manufacturing Corp. (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1412, 1434, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718 ; Wagner v. Glendale Adventist Medical Center (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1379, 1385, 265 Cal. Rptr. 412] . Whether a written agreement is integrated depends on the parties' intent, which the court must determine by considering relevant extrinsic evidence that explains but does not flatly contradict the writing [Stevenson v. Oceanic Bank (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 306, 316, 272 Cal. Rptr. 757] . The crucial issue in determining whether the agreement is integrated is whether the parties intended their writing to serve as the exclusive embodiment of their agreement. The resolution of this question involves examining the instrument itself as well as collateral agreements and circumstances at the time of the writing, and the subject matter, nature, and object of the contract [Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 222, 225-226, 65 Cal. Rptr. 545, 436 P.2d 561 ; Wedeck v. Unocal Corp. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 848, 862-863, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 ; Wagner v. Glendale Adventist Medical Center (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1379, 1385-1386, 265 Cal. Rptr. 412 ; McLain v. Great American Ins. Companies (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1484, 256 Cal. Rptr. 863 ; Marani v. Jackson (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 695, 702, 228 Cal. Rptr. 518] .

An appellate court is not bound by the trial court's determination of whether a written agreement is integrated. The appellate court may review the evidence de novo [Banco Do Brasil, S.A. v. Latian, Inc. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 973, 1001, 285 Cal. Rptr. 870 , cert. denied, 504 U.S. 986 (1992)] , unless the decision rests on evidence that is contradictory or from which conflicting inferences may be drawn, in which case the sufficiency-of-the-evidence standard applies [see Sunniland Fruit, Inc. v. Verni (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 892, 897, 284 Cal. Rptr. 824] .

[b] Factors to Be Considered

In determining integration, factors the court should consider include [Stevenson v. Oceanic Bank (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 306, 316, 272 Cal. Rptr. 757 ; McLain v. Great American Ins. Companies (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1484, 256 Cal. Rptr. 863 ; Marani v. Jackson (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 695, 702, 228 Cal. Rptr. 518 ; Mobil Oil Corp. v. Rossi (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 256, 266, 187 Cal. Rptr. 845] :

- The language and completeness of the written agreement;
- Whether it contains an integration clause;
- The terms of the alleged oral agreement and whether it might contradict those in the writing;
- Whether the oral agreement might naturally be made as a separate agreement or, conversely, involves terms that would more naturally have been included in the writing; and
- Whether the jury might be misled by the introduction of parol evidence.

[c] Previous Agreements

If the contract provides that there are no previous understandings or agreements not contained in the writing, it may express the parties' intention to nullify antecedent understandings or agreements. However, the court must examine such collateral agreements themselves to determine whether the parties intended that the subjects of negotiation withwhich the contract deals were to be included in, excluded from, or otherwise affected by, the writing [Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 222, 225-226, 65 Cal. Rptr. 545, 436 P.2d 561 (repudiating face-of-document rule requiring court to determine from face of instrument whether contract appeared to be complete agreement)].

[d] Partial Integration

Integration may be partial. The parties may intend a writing as a final expression of their agreement with respect to a particular subject matter or term, but not as a final expression of their entire agreement [Founding Members of Newport Beach Country Club v. Newport Beach Country Club, Inc. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 944, 953-954, 135 Cal Rptr. 2d 505 (concluding that part of contract regarding right of first offer of sale was integrated); Wallis v. Farmers Group, Inc. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 718, 730, 269 Cal. Rptr. 299 , disapproved on other grounds, Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 384, 394 n.2 ; Wagner v. Glendale Adventist Medical Center (1989) 216 Cal. App.

3d 1379, 1385, 265 Cal. Rptr. 412] . If only part of the agreement is integrated, the parol evidence rule applies to that part of the agreement; the parties may use extrinsic evidence to prove nonintegrated elements [Wallis v. Farmers Group, Inc. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 718, 730, 269 Cal. Rptr. 299 , disapproved on other grounds, Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 384, 394 n.2 ; but see Harden v. Maybelline Sales Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1550, 1555-1556, 282 Cal. Rptr. 96 (disagreeing with Wallis regarding application of parol evidence rule to employment applications)].

[e] Provisional Receipt of Evidence

To determine whether parol evidence is admissible, the court must provisionally receive all evidence offered relating to the intention of parties, the circumstances surrounding the making of the agreement, and the proffered collateral agreement [Gerdlund v. Electronic Dispensers International (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 263, 270, 235 Cal. Rptr. 279] . The following guidelines may apply:

- A contract provision that states that the contract supersedes all previous agreements between parties is not conclusive of integration. The court must examine the collateral agreement itself to determine whether the agreement was integrated [Gerdlund v. Electronic Dispensers International (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 263, 270-271, 235 Cal. Rptr. 279] .

- A standardized form drafted by one party is less likely to reflect an integrated agreement than a document drafted specifically to memorialize the parties' transaction [see McLain v. Great American Ins. Companies (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1485, 256 Cal. Rptr. 863] .

- A document that fails to address significant aspects of the agreement is not likely to be integrated [see McLain v. Great American Ins. Companies (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1485, 256 Cal. Rptr. 863 (employment application that made no mention of salary or position not integrated agreement)].

[f] Admission of Evidence

The court should exclude parol evidence of oral collateral agreements only if the collateral agreements directly contradict the writing and the jury is likely to be misled [Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 222, 227, 65 Cal. Rptr. 545, 436 P.2d 561] . Phrased another way, parol evidence is admissible if the agreement is susceptible of the meaning urged by the party offering the evidence [SDC/Pullman Partners v. Tolo Inc. (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 37, 53-54, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62 ; McLain v. Great American Ins. Companies (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1483, 1485-1486, 256 Cal. Rptr. 863 ; see Pacific Gas & E. Co. v. G.W. Thomas Drayage etc. Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 33, 37, 69 Cal. Rptr. 561, 442 P.2d 641 ; Bionghi v. Metropolitan Water District of Southern California (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1364-1366, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 388 (extrinsic evidence offered by plaintiff did not show that contract language was reasonably susceptible to interpretation that added requirement of good cause for termination and thus was inadmissible); United States Cellular v. GTE Mobilnet, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 281 F.3d 929, 938-939 (district court did not abuse discretion in excluding extrinsic evidence supporting plaintiff's construction of agreement's anti-transfer provisions because provisions were not fairly susceptible to that construction)].

Whether the court admits the evidence involves a determination of the credibility of the evidence and whether, considering the circumstances of the parties, the agreement is one that might naturally be made as a separate agreement [see Riley v. Bear Creek Planning Committee (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 500, 509, 131 Cal. Rptr. 381, 551 P.2d 1213 ; Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 222, 227-228, 65 Cal. Rptr. 545, 436 P.2d 561 ; FPI Development, Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 367, 388, 282 Cal. Rptr. 508 ; cf. Com. Code § 2202, Comment 3 (court should exclude evidence of additional terms only if they certainly would be included in document)]. If the court concludes that it would not have been natural for the parties to make an alleged collateral oral agreement, the court should nevertheless permit parol evidence of such an agreement if the court is convinced that the unnatural negotiation actually happened in the case [see Masterson v. Sine (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 222, 228 n.1, 65 Cal. Rptr. 545, 436 P.2d 561] .

[g] Issue of Law or Fact

California courts disagree on whether the issue of integration, i.e., whether the parties intended a writing as a final, complete, and exclusive statement of their agreement, is a question of law or of fact. The primary significance of whether integration is a question of law or fact is the standard applicable on review. If it is a question of law, the trial court's decision is subject to plenary review as long as the foundational extrinsic evidence is not in conflict. In some cases, the result will be the same whether theappellate court applies a substantial evidence test or makes its own determination [see, e.g., Esbensen v. Userware Internat., Inc. (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 631, 638 n.4, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 93] .

The First District and Fourth District Courts of Appeal have held that integration is a question of law [see Esbensen v. Userware Internat., Inc. (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 631, 638 n.4, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 93 ; Alling v. Universal Manufacturing Corp. (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1412, 1434, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718 ; Malmstrom v. Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 299, 314, 231 Cal. Rptr. 820 ; Brawthen v. H & R Block, Inc. (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 131, 137, 104 Cal. Rptr. 486] . The Second District has held that it is a question of fact [Mobil Oil Corp. v. Handley (1978) 76 Cal. App. 3d 956, 961, 143 Cal. Rptr. 321] .

The Third District Court of Appeal treats integration as a mixed question of law and fact. The Third District permits a limited weighing of the evidence by the trial court for the purpose of keeping "incredible" evidence of an oral understanding from the jury. Analysis of integration involves three steps [FPI Development, Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 367, 391, 392, 282 Cal. Rptr. 508] :

- Determining what happened.
- Selecting the applicable rules of law.
- Applying the rules to the facts.

Only if the evidence bearing on the first step (what happened) presents a conflict will the trial court weigh evidence. Necessarily, the court should not weigh evidence on a motion for summary judgment.

[4] Invocation of Rule by Stranger to Contract

Before 1978, Code Civ. Proc. § 1856 limited application of the parol evidence rule to the parties to the contract and their representatives and successors in interest. Case law interpreted this limitation to make the rule inapplicable to actions involving a stranger to the contract. In 1978, Code Civ. Proc. § 1856 was amended to remove the limiting language. The California Supreme Court has not yet addressed the issue. However, one court of appeal concluded that the amendment was a deliberate substantive change, and the parol evidence rule applies in actions involving a stranger to a contract [Kern County Water Agency v. Belridge Water Storage Dist. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 77, 86, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 ; see also Neverkovec v. Fredericks (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 337, 350, n.8, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 856 (citing Kern)]. The effect is to preclude the introduction of evidence of terms contradicting a writing even though the action is between a party to the contract and a stranger.

Chapter 140 CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Interpretation of Contract

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 140.32

140.32 Rules of Interpretation

[1] Uniformity of Rules

Courts must interpret all contracts, public or private, by the same rules, except as otherwise provided by the Civil Code [Civ. Code § 1635; see National Marble Co. v. Bricklayers & Allied Craftsmen (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 1057, 1067, 229 Cal. Rptr. 653 (language of contract, if clear and explicit, governs its interpretation)].

[2] Purpose to Give Effect to Parties' Intention

A court must interpret a contract to give effect to the mutual intention of the parties as the intention existed at the time of contracting, as far as that is ascertainable and lawful [Civ. Code § 1636; Roden v. Bergen Brunswig Corporation (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 620, 625, 633, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 549 (trial court did not err in interpreting judgment encapsulating section 998 settlement agreement concerning retirement benefits); People v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 516, 525, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151 (trial court did not err in interpreting terms of master settlement limiting outdoor tobacco advertising); De Anza Enterprises v. Johnson (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1307, 1314-1315, 1318, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749 (examination of joint venturers' contract terms, in context of document as a whole and surrounding circumstances, led to conclusion that parties intended to fix purchase price by mutual agreement or appraisal, leaving date to follow as matter of course); Stevenson v. Oceanic Bank (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 306, 316, 272 Cal. Rptr. 757 ; United States Cellular v. GTE Mobilnet, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 281 F.3d 929, 934-936 (finding no genuine issue of material fact as to proper construction of anti-transfer provisions in partnership agreement, because intent of parties as expressed in plain language of partnership agreement was not to restrict legitimate sale of stock of corporate partner)]. To ascertain the intention of the parties, if it is doubtful, the court must apply statutory rules [Civ. Code § 1637; see § 140.32[3] -[19]].

[3] Contract Language Governs

[a] Rule and Exception

The language of a contract governs its interpretation, if the language is clear and unambiguous and does not involve absurdity [Civ. Code § 1638; Appalachian Ins. Co. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1, 11, 262 Cal. Rptr. 716 ; National Marble Co. v. Bricklayers & Allied Craftsmen (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 1057, 1067, 229 Cal. Rptr. 653] . This interpretation, even though it involves what might properly be called questions of fact, is essentially a judicial function to be exercised according to the generally accepted canons of interpretation unless the interpretationturns on the credibility of extrinsic evidence [Parsons v. Bristol Development Co. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 861, 865, 44 Cal. Rptr. 767, 402 P.2d 839 ; Oceanside 84, Ltd. v. Fidelity Federal Bank (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1441 ; Canadian Ins. Co. v. Ehrlich (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 383, 391-392, 280 Cal. Rptr. 141 ; Greater Middleton Assn. v. Holmes Lumber Co. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 980, 989, 271 Cal. Rptr. 917 ; Appalachian Ins. Co. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1, 11, 262 Cal. Rptr. 716 ; Moss Dev. Co. v. Geary (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 1, 9, 115 Cal. Rptr. 736 ; see Sanchez v. Bally's Total Fitness Corporation (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 62, 69, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 902 (health club release and assumption of risk provision was clear, explicit, and comprehensible in itself and when considered with entire agreement and thus plaintiff's cause of action for negligence was barred by terms of agreement)].

[b] Judicial Function

When there is no extrinsic evidence or when the extrinsic evidence is uncontradicted, the interpretation of a written instrument is solely a judicial function [Greater Middleton Assn. v. Holmes Lumber Co. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 980, 989-990, 271 Cal. Rptr. 917 ; Northridge Hospital Foundation v. Pic 'N' Save No. 9, Inc. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1088, 1095 ; see In re Crow Winthrop Operating Partnership (9th Cir. 2001) 241 F.3d 1121, 1124 (court may interpret contract without recourse to extrinsic evidence if contract terms are unambiguous)]. When conflicting inferences may be drawn from extrinsic evidence that is not in conflict, the court must interpret the contract [Medical Operations Management, Inc. v. National Health Laboratories, Inc. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 886, 891-892, 895, 222 Cal. Rptr. 455] .

In general, when a dispute arises over the meaning of contract language, the first question the court must decide is whether the language is "reasonably susceptible" to the interpretation urged by a party. If not, the issue is concluded [Foster-Gardner, Inc. v. National Union Fire Insurance Company (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 857, 879-880, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 107, 959 P.2d 265 (use of word "suit" in insurance policies was not ambiguous; reasonable interpretation of that term is "lawsuit," that is, court proceeding initiated by filing of complaint, and construction which included pre-complaint notices was not reasonable); Oceanside 84, Ltd. v. Fidelity Federal Bank (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1448 ; So. Cal. Edison Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 839, 847-848, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 227 ; see Consolidated World Investments, Inc. v. Lido Preferred, Ltd. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 373, 379, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 524] . The court can determine whether the contract is reasonably susceptible to the party's interpretation from the language of the contract [So. Cal. Edison Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 839, 848, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 227 ; see United Teachers of Oakland v. Oakland Unified Sch. Dist. (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 322, 330, 142 Cal. Rptr. 105 ; see also [6], below], or from extrinsic evidence of the parties' intent [Oceanside 84, Ltd. v. Fidelity Federal Bank (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1448 ; So. Cal. Edison Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 839, 848, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 227 ; see Winet v. Price (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554] .

If the court decides the language is reasonably susceptible to the interpretation urged, the court moves to the second question; that is, what the parties intended the language to mean [So. Cal. Edison Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 839, 847-848, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 227 ; see Winet v. Price (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554] .

[c] Admissibility of Extrinsic Evidence

The paramount consideration in the interpretation of contracts is the mutual intention of the parties at the time of the contracting, as far as it is ascertainable and lawful [Western Camps, Inc. v. Riverway Ranch Enterprises (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 714, 723, 138 Cal. Rptr. 918 ; see Civ. Code § 1636]. The test of admissibility of extrinsic evidence to explain the meaning of a written instrument is not whether the instrument appears to the court to be plain and unambiguous on its face, but whether the offered evidence is relevant to prove a meaning to which the language is reasonably susceptible [Founding Members of Newport Beach Country Club v. Newport Beach Country Club, Inc. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 944, 955-956, 961, 135 Cal Rptr. 2d 505 (country club's governing regulation was not reasonably susceptible to interpretation urged by club's members); General Motors Corp. v. Superior Court (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 435, 441, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 622 (release); Horsemen's Benevolent & Protective Assn. v. Valley Racing Assn. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 1559, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698 ; Murphy Slough Assn. v. Avila (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 649, 653, 104 Cal. Rptr. 136] .

The court must ascertain and give effect to this intention by determining what the parties meant by the words they used. The meaning of particular words or groups of words varies with the verbal context and surrounding circumstances and purposes in view of the linguistic education and experience of the users and hearers or readers. A word has no meaning apart from these factors [Pacific Gas & E. Co. v. G.W. Thomas Drayage etc. Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 33, 38, 69 Cal. Rptr. 561, 442 P.2d 641] . Even if one assumes that words standing alone mean one thing, when the parties have demonstrated by their actions that to them those words mean something different, the court must enforce the meaning and intention of the parties [Corwin v. Los Angeles Newspaper Service Bureau, Inc. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 302, 314, 148 Cal. Rptr. 918, 583 P.2d 777] .

Extrinsic evidence is admissible to explain the meaning of a written instrument when the offered evidence is relevant to prove a meaning towhich the language of the instrument is reasonably susceptible in the light of all of the circumstances that reveal the sense in which the writer used the words [Pacific Gas & E. Co. v. G.W. Thomas Drayage etc. Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 33, 40, 69 Cal. Rptr. 561, 442 P.2d 641 ; Southern Pacific Transportation Company v. Santa Fe Pacific Pipelines Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1232, 1241-1242, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777 ; Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum, Inc. v. Oakland Raiders, Ltd. (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1049, 1057, 243 Cal. Rptr. 300] . Extrinsic evidence is not admissible to add to, detract from, or vary the terms of a written contract [Pacific Gas & E. Co. v. G.W. Thomas Drayage etc. Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 33, 39, 69 Cal. Rptr. 561, 442 P.2d 641 ; Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum, Inc. v. Oakland Raiders, Ltd. (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1049, 1058, 243 Cal. Rptr. 300 ; Gerdlund v. Electronic Dispensers International (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 263, 272, 235 Cal. Rptr. 279 ; see In re Crow Winthrop Operating Partnership (9th Cir. 2001) 241 F.3d 1121, 1124 (court may interpret contract without recourse to extrinsic evidence if contract terms are unambiguous)]. For example, in a case in which independent contractor insurance agents sought to use parol evidence to interpret a contract's termination provision to show that it required good cause, the court of appeals held that Pacific Gas, cited above, clearly prohibited such an attempt to graft a good cause requirement onto the termination provision's plain language allowing termination at will [Appling v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2003) 340 F.3d 769, 777-779 (affirming district court's holding that there was no genuine issue of material fact as to meaning of termination provision)]. Nevertheless, the court must first determine these terms before it can decide whether a party is offering extrinsic evidence for a prohibited purpose [Pacific Gas & E. Co. v. G.W. Thomas Drayage etc. Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 33, 39, 69 Cal. Rptr. 561, 442 P.2d 641 ; Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum, Inc. v. Oakland Raiders, Ltd. (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1049, 1058, 243 Cal. Rptr. 300] .

Rational interpretation requires at least a preliminary consideration of all credible evidence offered to prove the intention of the parties [Pacific Gas & E. Co. v. G.W. Thomas Drayage etc. Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 33, 39-40, 69 Cal. Rptr. 561, 442 P.2d 641]. Therefore, the trial court must provisionally receive any proffered extrinsic evidence that is relevant to show whether the contract is reasonably susceptible of a particular meaning. It is reversible error for a trial court to refuse to consider such extrinsic evidence on the basis of the trial court's own conclusion that the language of the contract appears to be clear and unambiguous on its face [Morey v. Vannucci (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 904, 912, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 573 ; e.g., Halicki Films v. Sanderson Sales & Mktg. (9th Cir. 2008) 547 F.3d 1213, 1223 (in absence of indication in record that trial court considered certain proffered documents, although court was specifically asked to do so and court mentioned other proffered documents, appellate court had to assume that trial court did not consider documents not mentioned; failure to consider that evidence was reversible error: "The court was required to use the extrinsic evidence to aid in its interpretation of the contract.")].

If the court decides, after considering this evidence, that the language of a contract, in the light of all of the circumstances, is fairly susceptible of either one of the two proposed interpretations, extrinsic evidence relevant to prove either of those meanings is admissible [Pacific Gas & E. Co. v. G.W. Thomas Drayage etc. Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 33, 37, 39-40, 69 Cal. Rptr. 561, 442 P.2d 641 (overruling "plain meaning" rule that no parol evidence admissible to interpret writing clear on its face if no ambiguity or uncertainty asserted); Wolf v. Superior Court (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1343, 1346, 1350-1351, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 649 (trial court erred in finding that term "gross receipts" in author's royalty contract meant only cash and in rejecting expert extrinsic evidence that, in entertainment context, term meant both money and value of other consideration received); Southern Pacific Transportation Company v. Santa Fe Pacific Pipelines Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App.4th 1232, 1245-1246, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777 (trial court committed reversible error in rejecting almost all exhibits and refusing to interpret agreements to determine formula for establishing rent or to consider extrinsic evidence pertinent to issue)]. This rule allows extrinsic evidence of the parties' understanding and intended meaning of the words used in their written agreement and is unconcerned with extrinsic collateral agreements [Brawthen v. H & R Block, Inc. (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 131, 136, 104 Cal. Rptr. 486] .

[e] Procedure for Admitting Extrinsic Evidence

When the proponent of extrinsic evidence urges a particular interpretation of a contract, the court, outside the presence of the jury, must permit the parties to introduce, conditionally or subject to a motion to strike, all available evidence on the issue of the meaning to be given to the written instrument. If the evidence has the effect of imparting to the written instrument a meaning to which the instrument is not readily susceptible, the court will strike the extrinsic evidence. The jury is involved only if the court makes three determinations [Equitable Life Assurance Society v. Berry (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 832, 838, 260 Cal. Rptr. 819] :

- The wording of the instrument is reasonably susceptible of the interpretation urged by the proponent of the extrinsic evidence;
- The extrinsic evidence is relevant to prove the proposed meaning; and
- The credibility of the proponent's parol evidence is disputed.

[4] Objective Manifestation Governs

The law imputes to a person the intention corresponding to the reasonable meaning of his or her language, acts, and conduct [H.S. Crocker Co., Inc. v. McFaddin (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 639, 643, 307 P.2d 429] . In construing the mutual intention of the parties, the objective, outward manifestation of mutual consent generally governs [Winet v. Price (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1166, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554] . If the objective manifestations are sufficient to establish a contract, the parties' subjective intentions or beliefs are wholly immaterial. In other words, when a person who can read and understand an instrument signs it, in the absence of fraud or imposition, that person is bound by its contents and is estopped from saying that its provisions are contrary to his or her intentions or understandings [Estate of Wilson (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 786, 802, 134 Cal. Rptr. 749] .

[5] Contract Fails to Express Parties' Intentions

When, through fraud, mistake, or accident, a written contract fails to express the realintention of the parties, the court must regard their intention and disregard the erroneous parts of the writing [Civ. Code § 1640]. Extrinsic evidence is admissible to show that the writing does not containthe real contract between the parties [Pasqualetti v. Galbraith (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 378, 381, 19 Cal. Rptr. 323 ; see Trident Center v. Connecticut General Life Ins. (9th Cir. 1988) 847 F.2d 564, 568-570] .

The parties may show by extrinsic evidence that a writing was not intended as a final act because it was not to become effective until a condition occurred; that is, the existence or efficacy of the instrument as a contract depends on a condition precedent, not inconsistent with its terms [Louis Lesser Enterprises, Ltd. v. Roeder (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 401, 410, 25 Cal. Rptr. 917] . In addition, the parties may introduce extrinsic evidence to show that they never intended a writing to constitute a contract [Martindell v. Bodrero (1967) 256 Cal. App. 2d 56, 62, 63 Cal. Rptr. 774] , or that they never, in fact, reached an agreement [Earp v. Nobmann (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 270, 288, 175 Cal. Rptr. 767 (disapproved on other grounds in Silberg v. Anderson (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 205, 212, 266 Cal. Rptr. 638, 786 P.2d 365)]. The burden of overcoming the presumption that a correctly executed contract correctly expresses the intention of the parties rests on the party seeking to avoid its plain terms [Taff v. Atlas Assur. Co. (1943) 58 Cal. App. 2d 696, 702, 137 P.2d 483] .

[6] Construction by the Parties

When the contract is ambiguous or uncertain, the practical construction placed on the contract by the parties, before any controversy arose as to its meaning, affords one of the most reliable means of determining the intent of the parties [Bohman v. Berg (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 787, 795, 8 Cal. Rptr. 441, 356 P.2d 185 ; Oceanside 84, Ltd. v. Fidelity Federal Bank (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1449 ; Kennecott Corp. v. Union Oil Co. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1179, 1189-1190, 242 Cal. Rptr. 403] . If the parties perform without objection under a contract the terms of which appear to be indefinite, they have indicated that its terms were sufficiently certain so they, at least, could perform it [Bohman v. Berg (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 787, 795-796, 8 Cal. Rptr. 441, 356 P.2d 185 ; Okun v. Morton (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 805, 819, 250 Cal. Rptr. 220] . The principle of practical construction applies only to acts performed under the contract before any dispute arose [Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 285, 296-297, 85 Cal. Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996 ; Okun v. Morton (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 805, 819, 250 Cal. Rptr. 220] .

[7] Words Interpreted in Ordinary Sense

[a] General Rule

The words of a contract are to be understood in their ordinary and popular sense, rather than according to any strict legal meaning [Beck v. American Health Group Internat., Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1555, 1562, 260 Cal. Rptr. 237 ; Salton Bay Marina, Inc. v. Imperial Irrigation Dist. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 914, 931, 218 Cal. Rptr. 839] , unless the parties used the words in a technical sense or gave them a special meaning by usage, in which case the latter must be followed [Civ. Code § 1644; Appalachian Ins. Co. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1, 11, 262 Cal. Rptr. 716 ; Achen v. Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 113, 120, 233 P.2d 74 ; see Northridge Hospital Foundation v. Pic 'N' Save No. 9, Inc. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1088, 1095 n.4, 232 Cal. Rptr. 329]. For example, courts will not give the disjunctive "or" will its ordinary meaning but may read it as "and" when that construction is necessary to carry out the obvious intent of the parties as gleaned from the context in which they used the word [Kelly v. William Morrow & Co. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1625, 1630-1632, 231 Cal. Rptr. 497] .

Courts interpret technical words as usually understood by persons in the profession or business to which they relate, unless clearly used in a different sense [Civ. Code § 1645].

[b] Custom and Trade Usage

Although courts ordinarily construe words in a contract according to their plain, ordinary, popular, or legal meaning, if, in reference to the subject matter of the contract, particular expressions have acquired a different meaning by trade usage, and both parties are engaged in that trade, courts will deem the parties to the contract to have used them according to their different and peculiar sense as shown by the trade usage [see, e.g., Texas Instruments, Inc. v. Tessera, Inc. (Fed. Cir. 2000) 231 F.3d 1325, 1331 (in patent case, term "litigation" in governing law clause of license agreement was found to include International Trade Commission proceedings); Wolf v. Superior Court (2004) 114

Cal. App. 4th 1343, 1346, 1354-1355, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 649 (trial court erred in finding that term "gross receipts" in author's royalty contract meant only cash and in rejecting expert extrinsic evidence that, in context of entertainment industry, term meant both money and value of other consideration received when not otherwise limited or defined by contract)]. Parol evidence is admissible to establish the trade usage even though the words in their ordinary or legal meaning are entirely unambiguous [Beneficial Fire & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Kurt Hitke & Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 517, 525-526, 297 P.2d 428] .

Generally, if there is a custom in an industry, courts deem those engaged in that industry to have contracted in reference to that practice unless the contrary appears from the other terms of the contract. The prevailing industry custom binds those engaged in the business even if there is no specific proof that the particular party to the litigation knew of the custom. The industry practice becomes a part of the contract, and the evidence of the custom is admissible to supply a missing term or to aid in interpretation if it does not alter or vary the terms of the contract [Midwest Television, Inc. v. Scott, Lancaster, Mills & Atha, Inc. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 442, 451, 252 Cal. Rptr. 573] .

[c] Party Not Engaged in Industry

A party to a contract not engaged in the industry is not bound by a custom or usage unless that party had actual knowledge of it, or it is so general or well-known in the community as to give rise to the presumption of that knowledge. For example, courts do not presume that customs of special trades and local usages limited to certain communities are known to all persons. In such a case, one who is not engaged in the trade or occupation that employs the usage relied on may be bound, but proof of actual knowledge of the usage is necessary unless it is so commonly accepted that the public is presumed to recognize its existence [see Peiser v. Mettler (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 594, 608, 328 P.2d 953] . In addition, custom and usage cannot change a rule of law and thus cannot override positive statutory law [Hayward Tamkin & Co. v. Carpenteria Inv. Co. (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 617, 623-624, 71 Cal. Rptr. 462 (custom and usage did not create duty on part of limited partners when governing statute, Corp. Code § 15501 [Uniform Limited Partnership Act, repealed Jan. 1, 2010], stated that limited partners would not be bound by obligations of partnership; now see Corp. Code § 15632 [California Revised Limited Partnership Act, operative July 1, 1984, and repealed Jan. 1, 2010]; Corp. Code § 15903.03 [Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008, applicable to all limited partnerships effective Jan. 1, 2010])].

[8] Implied Terms

[a] Test of Necessity

Stipulations necessary to make a contract reasonable or conformable to usage are deemed implied in respect to matters concerning which the contract manifests no contrary intention [Civ. Code § 1655]. All things in law or usage considered as incidental to a contract or necessary to carry it into effect are implied by the contract, unless some of them are expressly mentioned in the contract, in which case all other things of the same class are deemed excluded [Civ. Code § 1656; Addiego v. Hill (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 842, 846, 48 Cal. Rptr. 240] .

In an effort to remedy a deficiency, if it does not alter or vary the terms of the agreement, the court may [Frankel v. Board of Dental Examiners (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 534, 545, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 128 ; Addiego v. Hill (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 842, 846, 48 Cal. Rptr. 240] :

- Consider the usual and reasonable terms found in similar contracts;
- Infer unexpressed provisions of the contract from the writing;
- Rely on external facts; and

- Resort to custom and usage.

[b] Limitation on Finding Implied Terms

The law generally does not favor implied terms in contracts because they interfere with the right of the parties to freely set the contractual terms. A court's authority to infer a term in a contract is subject to the following limitations [Lippman v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 136, 142,145, 280 P.2d 775 ; Frankel v. Board of Dental Examiners (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 534, 545-546, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 128 ; City of Glendale v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 1768, 1778, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 305] :

- The implied term must arise from the language used or it must be indispensable to effectuate the intention of the parties;

- It must appear from the language used that the implied term was so clearly within the contemplation of the parties that they deemed it unnecessary to express;

- Implied terms can be justified only on the ground of legal necessity;

- A promise can be deemed to be implied only when it can be rationally assumed that it would have been expressly made if attention had been called to it; and

- There can be no implied term when the subject is completely covered by the contract.

[c] Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

Every contract contains an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing that neither party will do anything to deprive the other of the benefits of the contract [Merritt v. J.A. Stafford Co. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 619, 626, 68 Cal. Rptr. 447, 440 P.2d 927 ; Sheppard v. Morgan Keegan & Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 61, 66, 266 Cal. Rptr. 784 ; Ellis v. Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 132, 139, 246 Cal. Rptr. 863] . For purposes of traditional contract remedies, this covenant imposes on each party not only the duty to refrain from doing anything to render performance of the contract impossible, but also the duty to do everything the contract presupposes that party will do to accomplish the purpose of the contract [Pasadena Live, LLC v. City of Pasadena (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1089, 1092-1094, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 233 (allegation that defendant city breached implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by preventing plaintiff entertainment production company from even submitting entertainment proposals for consideration adequately alleged breach of contract for amphitheater productions); Floystrup v. City of Berkeley Rent Stabilization Bd. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1309, 1318, 268 Cal. Rptr. 898 ; Corson v. Brown Motel Investments, Inc. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 422, 427, 151 Cal. Rptr. 385 ; Harm v. Frasher (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 405, 417, 5 Cal. Rptr. 367] . For discussion of the covenant, see § 140.12.

[9] Entire Contract to Be Given Effect

The whole of a contract is to be taken together, so as to avoid internal conflict in its provisions and to give effect to every part, if reasonably practicable, each clause helping to interpret the other [Civ. Code § 1641; Trident Center v. Connecticut General Life Ins. (9th Cir. 1988) 847 F.2d 564, 566-567 (applying California law); Moore v. Wood (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 621, 630, 160 P.2d 772 ; Zubia v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 790, 797, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65 ; Gutzi Associates v. Switzer (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1636, 1642, 264 Cal. Rptr. 538 ; Appalachian Ins. Co. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1, 12, 262 Cal. Rptr. 716 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 1858]. Thus, the meaning of the contract is not determined by isolating one term used by the parties and defining it without reference to other language of the contract [Moore v. Wood (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 621, 630, 160 P.2d 772] .The meaning of the words used must be determined from a reading of the entire contract [Rodriguez v. Barnett (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 154, 160, 338

P.2d 907] . Even if one provision of the contract is clear and explicit, that portion alone does not govern its interpretation [Alperson v. Mirisch Co. (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 84, 90, 58 Cal. Rptr. 178] .

However, if construing every provision of the contract would be obviously repugnant to the intention of the parties or would lead to some other inconvenience or absurdity, the court will not construe the contract that way [Transamerica Ins. Co. v. Sayble (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1562, 1566, 239 Cal. Rptr. 201] . The court will interpret the contract to give effect to the contract's main apparent purpose [Harris v. Klure (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 574, 578, 23 Cal. Rptr. 313] .

[10] Resolving Ambiguities

[a] Trial Court's Procedure

When the meaning of words used in a contract is disputed, the trial court engages in a three-step process. First, the court provisionally receives any proffered extrinsic evidence that is relevant to prove a meaning to which the language of the contract is reasonably susceptible. If, in light of the extrinsic evidence, the language is reasonably susceptible to the interpretation urged, the extrinsic evidence is then admitted to aid the court in its role in interpreting the contract. When there is no material conflict in the extrinsic evidence, the trial court interprets the contract as a matter of law. This is true even when conflicting inferences may be drawn from the undisputed extrinsic evidence or when the extrinsic evidence renders the contract terms susceptible to more than one reasonable interpretation. If, however, there is a conflict in the extrinsic evidence, the factual conflict is to be resolved by the jury [Wolf v. Walt Disney Pictures & Television (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1107, 1126-1127, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 585].

[b] General Words Following Specific Words

When general words follow the enumeration of particular classes of persons or things, the court will construe the general words as applicable only to persons or things of the same general nature or class as those enumerated. This rule is based on the belief that if the writer had intended the general words to be used in their unrestricted sense, he or she would not have mentioned the particular things or class of things that would in that event be mere surplusage. The words "other" or "any other" following an enumeration of particular classes should be read as "other such like" or to include others "of like kind or character" [Fiske v. Niagra Fire Ins. Co. (1929) 207 Cal. 355, 357, 278 P. 861 ; Lawrence v. Walzer & Gabrielson (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1501, 1506, 256 Cal. Rptr. 6 ; Scally v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 806, 819, 100 Cal. Rptr. 501] . For example, an agreement to arbitrate disputes regarding "fees, costs, or any other aspect of" the parties' relationship only required arbitration of financial matters similar to disputes regarding fees and costs, but did not require arbitration of other breaches of their contract [Lawrence v. Walzer & Gabrielson (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1501, 1506, 256 Cal. Rptr. 6] .

[c] Interpretation of Ambiguities With Reference to Entire Contract

The court must interpret an ambiguous clause with reference to the entire contract [Medical Operations Management, Inc. v. National Health Laboratories, Inc. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 886, 893, 222 Cal. Rptr. 455 (also considering evidence as to negotiations, letter of intent, and drafting history)]. If two clauses of an agreement appear to be in direct conflict, the court must reconcile those clauses so as to give effect to the whole instrument. In construing an agreement in this manner, the court will consider no term uncertain or ambiguous if its meaning can be ascertained by fair inference from the terms of the agreement [Ellis v. McKinnon Broadcasting Co. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 1796, 1802, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 80 ; see [11], below, for further discussion of reconciling inconsistent provisions].

[d] Ambiguity Must Relate to Particular Case

The court must construe language in a contract in the context of the instrument as a whole (see [9], above), and in the circumstances of the particular case. The court cannot find language ambiguous in the abstract. There can be no ambiguity unrelated to application of the instrument to the particular facts of a case [Bay Cities Paving & Grading,

Inc. v. Lawyers' Mutual Ins. Co. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 854, 867, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 691, 855 P.2d 1263] .

[e] On Demurrer

At the demurrer stage, as long as the complaint does not place a clearly erroneous construction on the provisions of the contract, the court must accept the plaintiff's construction of an ambiguous contract as correct [Aragon-Haas v. Family Security Ins. Services, Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 232, 239, 282 Cal. Rptr. 233 ; Marina Tenants Assn. v. Deauville Marina Development Co. (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 122, 128, 132, 226 Cal. Rptr. 321] .

[11] Reconciling Inconsistent Provisions

[a] General and Specific Provisions

When general and specific provisions of a contract deal with the same subject matter, the specific provision, if inconsistent with the general provision, controls [Continental Cas. Co. v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1961) 57 Cal. 2d 27, 35, 17 Cal. Rptr. 12, 366 P.2d 455] . When the two provisions do not conflict, the court will give both effect [Powers v. Superior Court (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 318, 321-322, 242 Cal. Rptr. 55 (specific language in waiver and release did not conflict with general exculpatory language used in related rental agreement, and both provisions were effective)].

On the other hand, the court will reject specific words in a contract which are wholly inconsistent with its nature, or with the main intention of the parties [Civ. Code § 1653; see, e.g., Safeco Ins. Co. v. Robert S. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 758, 766, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 844 (insurance policy's illegal act exclusion could not reasonably be given meaning under established rules of construction of contracts and was thus rejected as invalid)].

[b] Written and Printed Provisions

If a contract is partly written and partly printed, or if part of it is written or printed under the special directions of the parties, and with a special view to their intention, and the remainder is copied from a form originally prepared without special reference to the particular parties and the particular contract in question, the written parts control the printed parts, and the purely original parts control those copied from a form. If the two are absolutely repugnant, the court must disregard the latter to that extent [Civ. Code § 1651; Gutzi Associates v. Switzer (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1636, 1642, 264 Cal. Rptr. 538 ; American City Bank v. Zetlen (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 548, 553, 61 Cal. Rptr. 311] .

The word "written" in Civ. Code § 1651 includes "typewritten" [Continental Cas. Co. v. Phoenix Constr. Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 423, 431, 296 P.2d 801] . Thus, the court must give a typewritten provision effect even when it is totally contrary to printed text [Gutzi Associates v. Switzer (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1636, 1642-1643, 264 Cal. Rptr. 538] .

[12] Interpretation Against Party Causing Uncertainty

[a] General Rule

In cases of uncertainty not removed by the statutory rules of construction [see generally Civ. Code § 1635 et seq.], the court should interpret the language of a contract most strongly against the party who caused the uncertainty [Civ. Code § 1654; see Taylor v. J.B. Hill Co. (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 373, 374, 189 P.2d 258 ; Badie v. Bank of America (1999) 67 Cal. App. 4th 779, 801, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 273 (interpreting provision in original credit account agreements that bank could change any "term, condition, service or feature" of account, which was ambiguous as to whether bank could impose alternative dispute resolution clause); Powers v. Dickson, Carlson & Campillo (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1102, 1112, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 261 ; Gutzi Associates v. Switzer (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1636, 1641-1643, 264 Cal. Rptr. 538 ; Lawrence v. Walzer & Gabrielson (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1501, 1507, 256 Cal. Rptr. 6 ; Ellis v. Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 132, 138, 246 Cal. Rptr. 863] . For example, in a case involving a Chapter 11 debtor's bankruptcy plan, the Ninth Circuit held that the lower courts correctly concluded that ambiguous language in the plan regarding discharge of "gap period" interest on taxes owed to the IRS should be construed against the debtor/drafter [Miller v. United States (9th Cir. 2004) 363 F.3d 999, 1006] . For purposes of this principle, uncertainty or ambiguity means doubtfulness, doubtfulness of meaning, duplicity, indistinctness, or uncertainty of meaning of an expression used in a written instrument, want of clearness or definiteness. It denotes language difficult to comprehend or distinguish, and of doubtful import [Royal Neckwear Co. v. Century City, Inc. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1146, 1153, 252 Cal. Rptr. 810 ; Estate of Black (1962) 211 Cal. App. 2d 75, 85, 27 Cal. Rptr. 418] .

For example, a lease that obligates the lessor to repair a roof is not ambiguous even though it also provides that the lessor is not liable for any consequential damages suffered by the tenant as a result of the lessor's failure to make the repairs. Nor is there ambiguity in a lease that obligates the tenants to pay for common area costs, including security, but allows the landlord to determine what level of security is appropriate [Royal Neckwear Co. v. Century City, Inc. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1146, 1153, 252 Cal. Rptr. 810] . However, a guaranty agreement including a waiver of the limitation period to the extent permitted by law is not ambiguous so as to require construction against the drafter when the only ambiguity was in the statute describing the permissible extent of waiver [California First Bank v. Braden (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 672, 675-676, 264 Cal. Rptr. 820] .

[b] When Rule Applies

This rule is to be applied only when an uncertainty has not been removed by other rules of construction [Oceanside 84, Ltd. v. Fidelity Federal Bank (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1448-1449 ; Jacobson v. Simmons Real Estate (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1293, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 699 , disapproved on other grounds in Trope v. Katz (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 274, 292, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 241, 902 P.2d 259]. This principle of interpretation is sometimes referred to as contra proferentem, and is not applicable to ambiguous language that was the product of joint drafting efforts [Mitchell v. Exhibition Foods, Inc. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1042, 229 Cal. Rptr. 535] . In dealing with ambiguous form contracts, courts apply this principle by interpreting the contract to have the meaning that a reasonable person in the position of the party with less bargaining power would expect [Hurd v. Republic Ins. Co. (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 250, 253, 169 Cal. Rptr. 675] .

[c] Contract of Adhesion

"Contract of adhesion" refers to a standardized contract prepared entirely by one party for acceptance by the other. Because of a great disparity in bargaining power between the parties, a contract of adhesion embodies an offer the second party must accept or reject on a "take it or leave it" basis, without an opportunity to bargain and under such conditions that the party accepting (or adhering to) the offer cannot obtain the desired product or service except by acquiescing to the form agreement [Steven v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 862, 882, 27 Cal. Rptr. 172, 377 P.2d 284 ; see Flores v. Transamerica Homefirst, Inc. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 846, 853-854, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376 (finding arbitration agreement to be procedurally unconscionable contract of adhesion when undisputed facts showed it was imposed on plaintiffs on "take it or leave it" basis); Powers v. Dickson, Carlson & Campillo (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1102, 1110, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 261 (attorney's retainer agreement was not contract of adhesion when clients did not enter into standardized contract on take it or leave it basis, retainer agreement and amendment were negotiated and individualized agreements, and clients had freedom to employ attorney of choice and bargain for terms of choice)]. The fact that a form contract is standardized does not itself establish the adhesive character of the contract. The determinative criteria are [Powers v. Dickson, Carlson & Campillo (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1102, 1110, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 261 (attorney retainer agreement not contract of adhesion); Izzi v. Mesquite Country Club (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1309, 1317-1318, 231 Cal. Rptr. 315 ; Parr v. Superior Court (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 440, 444, 188 Cal. Rptr. 801] :

- The relative bargaining powers of the parties;

- Whether the adhering party was free to negotiate for alteration of the printed terms of the proffered agreement; and

- The availability of the product or service from other sources.

The court will not enforce a contract of adhesion or an adhesive provision against the weaker or "adhering" party if the contract or provision does not fall within the reasonable expectations of the weaker party or an ordinary person in that party's position. Among the factors that strongly affect the court's assessment of whether the contract was within the reasonable expectation of the adhering party are notice and the extent to which the contract affects the public interest [Allan v. Snow Summit, Inc. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1375-1376, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813] . The court also will not enforce an adhesive contract or provision if, considered in its context, the contract is unduly oppressive or unconscionable [Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 925, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503 ; Marin Storage & Trucking, Inc. v. Benco Contracting and Engineering, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 1052, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 645 (although standardized contract could be considered contract of adhesion, that finding merely begins inquiry of whether particular provision within contract should be denied enforcement because it defeats expectations of weaker party or is unduly oppressive or unconscionable); Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1530, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138 ; Parr v. Superior Court (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 440, 445, 188 Cal. Rptr. 801 ; Holmes v. City of Los Angeles (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 212, 217, 172 Cal. Rptr. 589] . For discussion of unconscionable contracts, see § 140.25.

An exculpatory adhesion contract will be unenforceable if it violates public policy [see Tunkl v. Regents of University of California (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 92, 98-101, 32 Cal. Rptr. 33, 383 P. 2d 441 (enumerating factors indicating public policy violation); see also YMCA of Metropolitan Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 22, 27-28, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 612 (provision by which participants in Senior Program released YMCA for personal injury arising from YMCA's negligence exhibited none of coercive aspects typically found in adhesion contract)].

Certain rules of interpretation apply with particular force to contracts of adhesion, such as the rule that an ambiguity caused by the drafter or promisor must be resolved against that party. The party of superior bargaining power prescribes the words of the instrument. The party who subscribes to it lacks the economic strength to change that language. Hence, any ambiguity in the contract should be resolved against the drafter, and questions of doubtful interpretation should be construed in favor of the subscribing party [Neal v. State Farm Ins. Cos. (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 690, 695, 10 Cal. Rptr. 781 ; Badie v. Bank of America (1999) 67 Cal. App. 4th 779, 803-804, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 273 (interpreting provision in original credit account agreements that bank could change any "term, condition, service or feature" of account, which was ambiguous as to whether bank could impose alternative dispute resolution clause)].

An arbitration clause in an employment contract may be part of a contract of adhesion, even if the employee is a successful and sophisticated corporate executive, if the employee had no realistic ability to modify the terms of the employment contract. Experienced but legally unsophisticated business people may be unfairly surprised by unconscionable contract terms [Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1533-1534, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138] .

[d] Insurance Policy

It does not matter whether or not insurance policies are labeled adhesive, because the canons of construction governing insurance contracts are well established and have independent vitality even though the applicable principles undoubtedly grew out of contracts of adhesion [Equitable Life Assurance Society v. Berry (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 832, 837, 260 Cal. Rptr. 819] . For discussion of principles of interpretation of insurance contracts, see Ch. 308, Insurance .

[13] Several Instruments Taken Together

Several contracts relating to the same matters, between the same parties, and made as parts of substantially one transaction, are to be taken together [Civ. Code § 1642; Boyd v. Oscar Fisher Co. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 368, 378, 258 Cal. Rptr. 473 ; Housing Authority v. Monterey Senior Citizen Park (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 348, 353-354, 210 Cal. Rptr. 497 ; Nevin v. Salk (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 331, 338, 119 Cal. Rptr. 370 ; but see Stevenson v. Oceanic Bank (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 306, 317-318, 272 Cal. Rptr. 757 (loan agreement and guaranty separate; term from loan agreement not to be incorporated into guaranty agreement if it would be inconsistent with specific term of guaranty agreement)]. The term "contract" as used in Civ. Code § 1642 is descriptive only of a writing and actually refers to an "instrument" [Harm v. Frasher (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 405, 413, 5 Cal. Rptr. 367] . Whether the parties intended several writings to cover one transaction is generally a question of fact [Boyd v. Oscar Fisher Co. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 368, 378, 258 Cal. Rptr. 473 ; BMP Property Development v. Melvin (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 526, 531, 243 Cal. Rptr. 715 ; Nevin v. Salk (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 331, 338, 119 Cal. Rptr. 370] .

The general principle of joint construction of several instruments as one agreement is applicable regardless of whether they expressly refer to each other or it appears from extrinsic evidence that they were executed as a part of one transaction [Harm v. Frasher (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 405, 413, 5 Cal. Rptr. 367] . This principle also applies regardless of whether each of the several instruments was signed by all or only by some of the parties to the transaction [Harm v. Frasher (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 405, 414, 5 Cal. Rptr. 367] , or whether the written instruments were executed contemporaneously [Mayers v. Loew's, Inc. (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 822, 827, 221 P.2d 26] or at different times [Boyd v. Oscar Fisher Co. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 368, 378, 258 Cal. Rptr. 473 ; BMP Property Development v. Melvin (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 526, 531-532, 243 Cal. Rptr. 715 (loan agreement and exchange agreement single transaction even though closed through separate escrows); Nevin v. Salk (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 331, 338, 119 Cal. Rptr. 370] .

[14] Incorporation by Reference

A written agreement may incorporate other written agreements by expressly referring to them. In the event of incorporation of other agreements by reference, the court must consider and construe as one the original agreement and those referred to [Holbrook v. Fazio (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 700, 701, 191 P.2d 123] . For the terms ofanother document to be incorporated into the document executed by the parties, the following conditions must be satisfied [Kleveland v. Chicago Title Ins. Co. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 761, 765 (arbitration clause in title insurance policy was not incorporated by reference into preliminary title report and so was not binding on insured because arbitration was not mentioned in that report and report referred to policy that was different from what was actually issued by insurer); Baker v. Aubry (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1259, 1264 ; Richards v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 899, 904 n.3, 135 Cal. Rptr. 26 ; cf. Chan v. Drexel Burnham Lambert, Inc. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 632, 636-641, 223 Cal. Rptr. 838 (reference and availability were insufficient)]:

- The reference must be clear and unequivocal;
- The reference must be called to the attention of the other party;
- The other party must consent to it; and
- The terms of the incorporated document must be known or easily available to the contracting parties.

The contract need not recite that it "incorporates" another document, so long as it "guides" the reader to the incorporated document [Shaw v. Regents (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 44, 53-54, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 850 (patent agreement signed by university professor incorporated patent policy in effect at time agreement was executed)]. Documents that are not contracts may be incorporated into a contract [Shaw v. Regents (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 44, 55, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 850 (holding that university's patent policy was incorporated into employment agreement)].

[15] Supportive Interpretation

The court must give a contract susceptible to different interpretations an interpretation that will make the contract lawful, operative, definite, reasonable, and capable of being carried into effect, if the court can give it that construction without violating the intention of the parties [Civ. Code § 1643; see Apra v. Aureguy (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 827, 831, 13 Cal. Rptr. 177, 361 P.2d 897 ; City of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 423, 437, 333 P.2d 745 ; Strong v. Theis (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 913, 919-921, 232 Cal. Rptr. 272 (construction to avoid violating rule against perpetuities)]. The court must avoid an interpretation that will make a contract extraordinary, harsh, unjust, or inequitable, or that would result in an absurdity [Citizens for Goleta Valley v. HT Santa Barbara (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 1073, 1076-1077, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 249 (developer's interpretation of settlement agreement rejected by court when it defeated reasonable expectations of parties and would lead to absurd results); Ticor Title Ins. Co. v. Rancho Santa Fe Assn. (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 726, 730, 223 Cal. Rptr. 175 ; Howe v. American Baptist Homes of the West, Inc. (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 622, 627, 169 Cal. Rptr. 418 ; see Northridge Hospital Foundation v. Pic 'N' Save No. 9, Inc. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1088, 1095]. For example, because every contract in California has an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, the court properly interpreted a noncompetition clause in a lease to include additions to the shopping center to which it related; to do otherwise would violate the implied covenant [Edmond's of Fresno v. MacDonald Group, Ltd. (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 598, 605-608, 217 Cal. Rptr. 375] . For discussion of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, see § 140.12.

This rule of construction is based on a policy that favors carrying out the parties' intentions by enforcing their contract and disfavors holding contracts unenforceable for uncertainty [Hennefer v. Butcher (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 492, 500-501, 227 Cal. Rptr. 318] .

[16] Incorporation of Existing Law

As a general rule, all applicable laws in existence when the parties enter into a contract are presumed to be known to the parties and form a part of the contract as if the contract expressly referred to them and incorporated them in its terms [California First Bank v. Braden (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 672, 675-676, 264 Cal. Rptr. 820 (distinction between ambiguity in contract, which would require interpretation against drafter, and ambiguity in statute, which does not); Century 21 Region V., Inc. v. Pondoff Realty, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 11, 15 ; Grubb v. Ranger Ins. Co. (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 526, 529, 143 Cal. Rptr. 558 ; People v. Wilshire Ins. Co. (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 51, 58, 132 Cal. Rptr. 19] . Existing law includes court decisions interpreting statutes [California Ass'n of Highway Patrolmen v. Department of Personnel Admin. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 352, 364, 229 Cal. Rptr. 729] . The parties can agree originally to incorporate subsequent changes in the law or can reexecute their agreement to accomplish that purpose [Swenson v. File (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 389, 394-395, 90 Cal. Rptr. 580, 475 P.2d 852] .

Applying this principle, the court can interpret an agreement that might otherwise be unclear or ambiguous without resort to other rules of interpretation. For example, a franchise agreement that was the subject of a dispute with respect to escrow income and required the franchisee to pay the franchisor a percentage of its gross income derived from "all transactions requiring a real estate license" was not ambiguous when construed with regard to the relevant licensing law, which allowed the franchisee to operate its escrow services without an escrow license if it had a real estate license. In light of the applicable law, the income from escrow services clearly had to be included in gross income for purposes of computing the amount due to the franchisor [Century 21 Region V., Inc. v. Pondoff Realty, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 11, 14-15].

[17] Question of Law

Issues of contract interpretation are questions of law for the trial court, not for a referee under Code Civ. Proc. § 639(a) [De Guere v. Universal City Studios, Inc. (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 482, 501, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 438 ; Parsons v. Bristol Development Co. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 861, 865, 44 Cal. Rptr. 767, 402 P.2d 839] . Similarly, issues of contract enforceability, such as whether an agreement is a contract of adhesion and if so, whether it is enforceable, are equitable issues to be resolved by the trial court rather than a referee [De Guere v. Universal City Studios, Inc. (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 482, 501, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 438 ; see Westlye v. Look Sports (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1715, 1735-1737, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 781] .

[18] Appellate Court's Role in Interpreting Contract

Interpretation of a written instrument generally presents a question of law for the appellate court to determine anew [Parsons v. Bristol Development Co. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 861, 865, 44 Cal. Rptr. 767, 402 P.2d 839 ; Curry v. Moody (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 1552-1553, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 627 ; Equitable Life Assurance Society v. Berry (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 832, 840, 260 Cal. Rptr. 819 ; Boyd v. Oscar Fisher Co. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 368, 378, 258 Cal. Rptr. 473 (dealership agreement and invoices taken as one contract); Northridge Hospital Foundation v. Pic 'N' Save No. 9, Inc. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1088, 1099], when it does not depend on conflicting evidence. When extrinsic evidence was offered in the trial court, the reviewing court is not bound by the trial court's interpretation if the extrinsic evidence is incompetent, uncontradicted, not in conflict, not substantial, or inconsistent with the only interpretation to which the agreement is reasonably susceptible [Stevenson v. Oceanic Bank (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 306, 315, 272 Cal. Rptr. 757 ; Greater Middleton Assn. v. Holmes Lumber Co. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 980, 989-990, 271 Cal. Rptr. 917 ; Broffman v. Newman (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 252, 257, 261 Cal. Rptr. 532] . When the extrinsic evidence itself is not in conflict, but the inferences that may be drawn from it are, the appellate court is required to make its own de novo interpretation of the meaning of the agreement [Okun v. Morton (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 805, 816, 250 Cal. Rptr. 220 ; Malmstrom v. Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 299, 315, 231 Cal. Rptr. 820 ; Medical Operations Management, Inc. v. National Health Laboratories, Inc. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 886, 893, 222 Cal. Rptr. 455] .

In the absence of extrinsic evidence, the appellate court must accept the trial court's interpretation of a written instrument if that interpretation is reasonable, if it is one of two or more reasonable constructions of the instrument, or if it is equally tenable with the appellate court's interpretation. The appellate court still has a duty to interpret the instrument, but it must determine that the trial court's interpretation is erroneous before it may properly reverse the judgment [Parsons v. Bristol Development Co. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 861, 866, 44 Cal. Rptr. 767, 402 P.2d 839] . Similarly, when the trial court properly admits evidence to interpret an ambiguous contract, the appellate court must uphold any reasonable interpretation by the trial court, although the appellate court is not bound by the trial court's finding of ambiguity if it is based on incompetent evidence [Aviointeriors SpA v. World Airways, Inc. (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 908, 915, 226 Cal. Rptr. 527 ; Heston v. Farmers Ins. Group (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 402, 410, 206 Cal. Rptr. 585 ; Robinson v. Nevada Irrigation Dist. (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 760, 769-770, 161 Cal. Rptr. 863] .

[19] Effect of Factual Statements in Written Contract

Written contracts often contain material factual statements that are attributable to one party and are accepted as true by the other party when the contract was made. If the reliant party eventually discovers that such a factual statement was significantly untrue, that party may be able to assert, on a theory of fraud, a claim for damages or a right to rescind the contract [see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit ; Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution], or a defense to an action for breach of the contract [see Ch. 215, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake], assuming that both actionable misrepresentation and justifiable reliance can be proven [see, e.g., McClain v. Octagon Plaza, LLC (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 784, 792-794, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 885 (shopping mall lease exaggerated square footage of lessee's commercial space and total square footage of mall on which rent and lessee's share of common-area expenses were to be computed under lease)].

When fraud can be shown, the culpable party is precluded from invoking any provision in the contract by way of exculpation, such as a stipulation or waiver by the reliant party, since any such provision is void by statute [see Civ. Code § 1668 (any contract having as its object, directly or indirectly, to exempt any person from responsibility for that person's own fraud, whether willful or negligent, is "against the policy of the law"); § 140.24[4]]. Therefore, a provision stating that one party "acknowledges" or otherwise stipulates that some material factual statement by the other party is true, or that one party "agrees to" or otherwise purportedly accepts a fact-based situation of the other party's making, which does not comport with reality, is unenforceable when fraud exists [see, e.g., McClain v. Octagon Plaza, LLC (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 784, 794-796, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 885 (commercial lease stated that lessee "acknowledged" having investigated suitability of mall space for lessee's business use, when in fact lessor obstructed all investigative efforts while giving assurance that lessee could rely on lessor's exaggerated statement as to square footage)].

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.40

§ 140.40 Obligation Extinguished by Performance

[1] Acceptance of Performance

Generally, full performance of an obligation, either by the party whose duty it is to perform or by anyone else on that party's behalf and with that party's assent, if accepted by the party entitled to performance, extinguishes the obligation [Civ. Code § 1473].

If there is joint liability for an obligation, performance by one of the several parties jointly liable extinguishes the liability of all [Civ. Code § 1474; Wax v. Infante (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 1029, 1030 n.2, 194 Cal. Rptr. 14 (obligation for penalty assessed against defendants and their attorney satisfied when attorney paid penalty)].

Performance of an obligation for the delivery of money only is called "payment" [Civ. Code § 1478]. For discussion of extinguishment of an obligation to pay money, see [2], below; for an affirmative defense alleging payment, see § 140.138.

[2] Obligation to Pay Money

[a] Tender of Check or Note

Unless the parties agree otherwise, if the obligee takes a certified check, cashier's check, or teller's check in payment of an obligation, the obligation is discharged to the extent of the amount of the check [Com. Code § 3310(a)]. Unless the parties agree otherwise, and except as provided in Com. Code § 3310(a), if the obligee takes a noteor an uncertified check in payment of an obligation, the obligation is suspended to the extent of the amount of the check or note [Com. Code § 3310(b)].

In the case of an uncertified check, suspension continues until dishonor of the check or until it is paid or certified. Payment or certification of the check results in discharge of the obligation to the extent of the amount of the check [Com. Code § 3310(b)(1); Navrides v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 698, 706, 97 Cal. Rptr. 309, 488 P.2d 637 ; Hale v. Bohannon (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 458, 467, 241 P.2d 4 ; Cornwell v. Bank of America (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 995, 1000-1001, 274 Cal. Rptr. 322] .

In the case of a note, suspension continues until dishonor of the note or until it is paid. Payment of the note results in discharge of the obligation to the extent of the payment [Com. Code § 3310(b)(2)]. If the check or note is dishonored and the obligee of the obligation for which the instrument was taken is the person entitled to enforce the instrument, the obligee may enforce either the instrument or the obligation [Com. Code § 3310(b)(3); see Com. Code § 3310(b)(4), (c)].

[b] Lost Instrument

Unless the parties agree otherwise, and except as provided in Com. Code § 3310(a), if the obligee is the person entitled to enforce the instrument but no longer has possession of it because it was lost, stolen, or destroyed, the obligation may not be enforced to the extent of the amount payable on the instrument. To that extent the obligee's rights against the obligor are limited to enforcement of the instrument [Com. Code § 3310(b)(4)].

[c] Creditor's Direction

If a creditor or any one of two or more joint creditors at any time directs the debtor to perform the obligation in a particular manner, the obligation is extinguished by performance in that manner, even though the creditor does not receive the benefit of that performance [Civ. Code § 1476]. This rule applies only to a creditor's direction regarding the manner of transmission, not to a direction to pay something other than what was originally bargained for [Cober v. Connolly (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 741, 744, 128 P.2d 519] . If the creditor directs payment by mail, and the debtor mails the money but it is lost in transit, the obligation is satisfied even though the creditor does not receive the benefit. However, the creditor's provision to the debtor of self-addressed envelopes and payment coupons that state, "Detach and mail with payment" and "Mail this coupon with check payable to (the creditor)," does not amount to a direction to make payments by mail when the creditor also accepts payments by other methods, such as in its offices and by wire transfers or automated teller networks [Cornwell v. Bank of America (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 995, 999, 274 Cal. Rptr. 322] .

"Direct" as used in Civ. Code § 1476 refers to a single method of payment and is inapplicable without a specific direction to pay only in that manner. A creditor will not be held to have "directed" all methods of payment that it makes available [Cornwell v. Bank of America (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 995, 1000, 274 Cal. Rptr. 322] .

Chapter 140 CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Performance or Termination

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.41

§ 140.41 Obligation Extinguished by Offer or Tender of Performance

[1] Offer or Tender Generally

An obligation is extinguished by an offer or tender of performance by the debtor, or by someone on the debtor's behalf and with the debtor's assent, with the intent to extinguish the obligation [Civ. Code §§ 1485, 1487]. The offer or tender must be made to the party entitled to performance or to someone authorized by that party to receive performance [see Civ. Code § 1488; Hoover v. Wolfe (1914) 167 Cal. 337, 342, 139 P. 794 ; Barnes v. Osgood (1930) 103 Cal. App. 730, 734, 284 P. 975] . When properly made, the offer or tender has the effect of putting the other party in default if the party refuses to accept it [Still v. Plaza Marina Commercial Corp. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 385, 98 Cal. Rptr. 414] .

[2] Conditions for Valid Offer or Tender

[a] Full Performance

To be effective, an offer or tender of performance must be for full performance. An offer or tender of partial performance has no effect [Civ. Code § 1486; Still v. Plaza Marina Commercial Corp. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 385, 98 Cal. Rptr. 414] . Moreover, the offer or tender must be made in good faith, and in the manner most likely to benefit the creditor in the circumstances [Civ. Code § 1493; K & M, Inc. v. Le Cuyer (1951) 107 Cal. App. 2d 710, 717, 238 P.2d 28] .

[b] Unconditional

An offer of performance must be free from any conditions the creditor is not already bound to perform [Civ. Code § 1494; Gaffney v. Downey Savings & Loan Assn. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1165, 1168, 246 Cal. Rptr. 421 ; Still v. Plaza Marina Commercial Corp. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 385, 98 Cal. Rptr. 414 ; see Klinger v. Realty World Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1549, 1553-1554, 242 Cal. Rptr. 592 (Civ. Code § 1494 applied to continue accrual of prejudgment interest)]. An unwarranted condition annexed to an offer is, in effect, a refusal to perform [Steelduct Co. v. Henger-Seltzer Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 634, 646, 160 P.2d 804] .

[c] Present Ability to Perform

An offer or tender of performance has no effect if the person making it is not able and willing to perform according to the offer [Civ. Code § 1495; Allen v. Chatfield (1916) 172 Cal. 60, 68, 156 P. 47] . Even if the necessity of an offer or tender of performance is eliminated, such as by repudiation of the contract, ability to perform must be proved at trial to enforce the other party's obligation when that is an issue [see McDorman v. Moody (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 136, 141, 122 P.2d 639] .

A thing to be delivered need not be actually produced on an offer or tender of performance, unless the other party accepts the offer or tender [Civ. Code § 1496]. An offer in writing to pay a particular sum of money or to deliver a written instrument or specific personal property is, if not accepted, equivalent to the actual production and tender of the money, instrument, or property [Code Civ. Proc. § 2074; State of California v. Agostini (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 909, 913, 294 P.2d 769 ; for discussionof offer or tender of payment of money generally, see [5], below].

[3] Time for Offer or Tender

[a] No Time Fixed--Implication of Reasonable Time

When the contract is silent as to the time for delivery or performance, the court will imply a reasonable time for performance [Civ. Code § 1657; Walnut Creek Pipe Distributors, Inc. v. Gates Rubber Co. (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 810, 816, 39 Cal. Rptr. 767 ; compare Resolution Trust Corporation v. First American Bank (9th Cir. 1998) 155 F.3d 1126, 1128 (California law implying "reasonable time" term was inapplicable when agreement was not silent as to time but rather gave careful consideration to time requirements)]. What is "reasonable" is a question of fact [Palmquist v. Palmquist (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 322, 331, 27 Cal. Rptr. 744] . The offer or tender may be made at any time after it is due and before the debtor, on a reasonable demand, has refused to perform [Civ. Code § 1491]. However, if the performance is in its nature capable of being done instantaneously, e.g., the payment of money only (see [5], below), it must be performed immediately once the thing to be done has been exactly ascertained [Civ. Code § 1657; Shipley Co. v. Rosemead Co. (1929) 100 Cal. App. 706, 711, 280 P. 1017] .

When delay in performance is capable of exact and entire compensation, and time has not been expressly declared to be of the essence of the obligation, an offer or tender of performance, accompanied by an offer of compensation, may be made at any time after it is due, but without prejudice to any rights acquired by the creditor or by any other person in the meantime [Civ. Code § 1492; Benedict v. Calkins (1937) 19 Cal. App. 2d 416, 419, 65 P.2d 831] . The general rule of equity is that time is not of the essence of a contract unless it clearly appears from the terms of the contract, in the light of all the circumstances, that it was the intention of the parties [Henck v. Lake Hemet Water Co. (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 136, 143, 69 P.2d 849] .

[b] Time Fixed by Contract

If a contract fixes a time for performance, the offer or tender must be made [Civ. Code § 1490]:

- At that time;
- Within reasonable hours; and
- Not before or after.

[c] Premature Offer or Tender

A premature offer or tender of performance is not valid [Waller v. Brooks (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 389, 394, 72 Cal. Rptr. 228] .

[4] Place for Offer or Tender

If the contract does not expressly stipulate a place of performance, the court will find the contract performable in the place at which the circumstances viewed in the light of pertinent code provisions indicate the parties expected or intended it to be performed [Hale v. Bohannon (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 458, 466-467, 241 P.2d 4 (issue of fact)]. The place of performance for the payment of a debt, in the absence of an agreement or stipulation to the contrary, is either the place of the creditor's residence or business, if the creditor has one, or wherever else the creditor may be found. Under ordinary circumstances, it is the duty of the debtor to seek the creditor for the purpose of making payment [Civ. Code §§ 1488, 1489; Hale v. Bohannon (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 458, 466-467, 241 P.2d 4] .

In the absence of an express provision to the contrary, an offer or tender of performance may be made, at the option of the debtor, at any of the following locations [Civ. Code § 1489]:

- At any place appointed by the creditor;
- Wherever the creditor can be found;
- At the creditor's residence or place of business, when it can, with reasonable diligence, be found within California, if the creditor cannot, with reasonable diligence, be found within California, and within a reasonable distance from the residence or place of business, or if the creditor evades the debtor; or
- If that cannot be done, at any place within California.

[5] Offer of Payment of Money

An obligation for the payment of money is extinguished by an offer or tender of payment, if the debtor [Civ. Code § 1500; Taliaferro v. Taliaferro (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 109, 113, 300 P.2d 726 , cert. denied, 352 U.S. 971 (1957)] :

- Immediately deposits the amount in the name of the creditor;
- At a bank of deposit or savings and loan association within California of good repute; and
- Gives notice to the creditor.

Civ. Code § 1500 does not prescribe the mode of tender, but, rather, delineates a method of extinguishing an obligation [Sayward v. Houghton (1898) 119 Cal. 545, 550, 51 P. 853, 52 P. 44] .

For a deposit under Civ. Code § 1500 to constitute valid tender, the money deposited must be unconditionally available to the creditor. An account set up so that the creditor cannot withdraw from it without the debtor's signature does not amount to tender [Gaffney v. Downey Savings & Loan Assn. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1167, 246 Cal. Rptr. 421] . For an affirmative defense based on tender and deposit pursuant to Civ. Code § 1500, see § 140.139.

[6] Objections

[a] Required on Tender

To allow the obligor to remedy defects in the tender, the obligee must, at that time, specify any objection. Otherwise, the objection is deemed waived [Civ. Code § 1501; Code Civ. Proc. § 2076; see Riverside Fence Co. v. Novak (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 656, 661-662, 78 Cal. Rptr. 536] .

[b] Permissible Subjects of Objection

Objections to the mode of an offer or tender may cover not only what is offered, but also the conditions of the offer [Kofoed v. Gordon (1898) 122 Cal. 314, 321-323, 54 P. 1115] . If the objection is to an amount of money, the terms of an instrument, or an amount or kind of property, the obligee must specify the amount, terms, or kind required; otherwise the obligee is precluded from objecting afterward [Noyes v. Habitation Resources, Inc. (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 910, 913-914, 123 Cal. Rptr. 261] .

[c] Effect of Generally Recognized Business Usage or Course of Dealings Between Parties

Because of generally recognized business usage or the course of dealing between the parties, the obligor may have reason to believe that tender in a medium other than that prescribed by law will be acceptable. If the obligee refuses it, insisting on legal tender, the obligee must give the obligor a reasonable time to make a valid tender. The more technical the objection to the tender, the more reasonable the inference from slight evidence that the obligee waived the objection [Hunt v. Mahoney (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 540, 547, 187 P.2d 43] .

[d] Failure to Object

Failure to object to a tender does not waive a defect that, if specified, could not have been cured by the obligor [Klein v. Markarian (1917) 175 Cal. 37, 41, 165 P. 3 ; Roven v. Miller (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 391, 399, 335 P.2d 1035] . In addition, failure to object to a premature offer does not render the performance immediately due or waive the right to object to a subsequent offer made at maturity [Allen v. Chatfield (1916) 172 Cal. 60, 68, 156 P. 47] .

[7] Offer or Tender Not Required When Futile

An offer or tender of performance is not necessary when the conduct and declarations of the other party show that the offer or tender would be unavailing or when the person who should have made the offer or tender is induced not to by an act of the other party naturally tending to have that effect, at or before the time the performance or offer or tender may be made [Civ. Code § 1511(3); Hoppin v. Munsey (1921) 185 Cal. 678, 685, 198 P. 398 ; United California Bank v. Maltzman (1974) 44 Cal. App. 3d 41, 52, 118 Cal. Rptr. 299] .

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.42

§ 140.42 Demand for Performance

[1] When Required

When one party has an unconditional duty to perform an act, the other party is not required to demand performance before commencing an action for breach of contract. The action itself is the only demand necessary [Danielson v. Neal (1913) 164 Cal. 748, 750, 130 P. 716 ; McDonald v. Filice (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 613, 623, 60 Cal. Rptr. 832] .

If the promisor does not have an unconditional duty to perform and the contract does not specify a time for performance, the promisee must make a demand for performance within a reasonable time after it can lawfully be made [Woollomes v. Gomes (1938) 26 Cal. App. 2d 461, 465, 79 P.2d 728] , to put the promisor in default. For discussion of conditional performance generally, see § 140.44. The primary object of the demand is to enable the promisor to perform the obligation or otherwise discharge the liability without being subject to the inconvenience and expense of litigation [Tisdale v. Bryant (1918) 38 Cal. App. 750, 757, 177 P. 510] . However, if a demand for performance would be futile, the demand need not be made, since the law does not require idle acts [Cook v. Snyder (1936) 16 Cal. App. 2d 587, 591, 61 P.2d 53] . For example, if the delay has operated to the detriment of the promisee to so as to render the delayed performance valueless, and the promisor was charged with knowledge of the special circumstances, the promisee need not demand performance [Leonard v. Rose (1967) 65 Cal. 2d 589, 592-593, 55 Cal. Rptr. 916, 422 P.2d 604] .

[2] Effect on Running of Statute of Limitations

A demand for performance may be considered a preliminary requirement to the beginning of an action or a condition precedent to a right. If it is a preliminary requirement to an action, the statute of limitations begins to run when a right has fully accrued. However, if the demand is an integral part of a cause of action, the statute does not run until the demand is made [Woollomes v. Gomes (1938) 26 Cal. App. 2d 461, 465, 79 P.2d 728] .

§ 140.43 Performance of Alternative Obligations

A party whose obligation requires the performance of alternative acts has the right to select which act to perform unless the terms of the obligation provide otherwise [Civ. Code § 1448; San Bernardino Valley Water Dev.Co. v. San Bernardino Valley Mun. Water Dist. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 238, 247, 45 Cal. Rptr. 793] . The party must select an alternative in its entirety, unless the other party otherwise consents [see Civ. Code § 1450].

The selecting party must give notice of the selection within the time fixed by the terms of the obligation. If the terms of the obligation do not fix a time, the selecting party must give notice before the time the obligation ought to be performed; otherwise the right of selection passes to the other party [Civ. Code § 1449; Norris v. Harris (1860) 15 Cal. 226, 258] . The obligation becomes absolute only on the making of a selection by either party [see Norris v. Harris (1860) 15 Cal. 226, 258] .

If one of the alternative acts is unlawful or becomes unlawful or impossible to perform, the court will interpret the obligation as though the other stood alone [Civ. Code § 1451; Rosenthal v. Perkins (1898) 123 Cal. 240, 243, 55 P. 804] .

Chapter 140 CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Performance or Termination

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.44

§ 140.44 Performance of Conditional Obligation

[1] In General

The performance of a contractual obligation is conditional when the rights or duties of a party depend on the occurrence of an uncertain event [Civ. Code § 1434; Riess v. Murchison (9th Cir. 1964) 329 F.2d 635, 643 , after remand, 503 F.2d 999 (1974)] . Parties may insert in their contracts whatever legal conditions they desire [Cavanaugh v. Casselman (1891) 88 Cal. 543, 549, 26 P. 515] . These conditions may be precedent[see [4], below], subsequent [see [5], below], or concurrent [Civ. Code § 1435; see [6], below].

The breach of an important condition may excuse the other party from performance [Civ. Code § 1439; see, e.g., Wiz Technology, Inc. v. Coopers & Lybrand LLP (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 1, 11-14, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263 (auditor's resignation was justified by client's breach of material condition which required hiring different securities counsel)].

[2] Condition and Covenant Distinguished

A condition is a fact or event that creates no right or duty, but merely limits or modifies a contractual duty or right. The nonoccurrence of a condition can prevent the existence of a duty in the other party, but it cannot create any remedial rights and duties unless one party has promised that it will occur [see Civ. Code § 1582].

On the other hand, a promise or covenant is an expression of intention that the promisor will render some future performance and an assurance of its rendition to the promisee. The nonfulfillment of a promise, unlike a condition, is a breach of contract and creates in the other party a right to damages.

Whether a provision constitutes a condition or a covenant is determined from the whole document, its purpose, and the intention of the parties [Pacific Allied v. Century Steel Products (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 70, 80,327 P.2d 547] . When it is doubtful whether words create a promise or an express condition, the court interprets the words as creating a promise. Such an interpretation protects both parties and avoids having a slight failure to perform wholly destroy all rights under the contract [Div. Labor L. Enf. v. Ryan Aero. Co. (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 833, 836].

[3] Express and Implied Conditions

An express condition is a condition by agreement of the parties, expressed in definite language when the parties make the contract. A condition is implied when the parties make promises by expressing an intention that a fact or event should be a condition of their legal duty without putting it into words [see Sosin v. Richardson (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 258, 264, 26 Cal. Rptr. 610] .

[4] Condition Precedent

[a] Definition

A condition precedent is a condition to be performed before a right dependent on it accrues or an act dependent on it is to be performed [Civ. Code § 1436]. For example, the parties create a condition precedent by agreeing that a third person is to determine performance of the contract [see Lucas v. Quigley Motor Co. (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 152, 155, 12 Cal. Rptr. 442] , or that one party must perform to the satisfaction of the other party before the approving party has a duty to perform [see Mattei v. Hopper (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 119, 122-123, 330 P.2d 625 ; see also Locke v. Warner Bros., Inc. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 354, 363-364, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 921] .

[b] Not Favored by Law

The law does not favor conditions precedent. Courts are disinclined to construe the stipulations of a contract as conditions precedent unless compelled by the language of the contract, because such a construction prevents the court from doing justice for the parties according to the equities of the case [Front St., Mission & Ocean R.R. Co. v. Butler (1875) 50 Cal. 574, 577 ; Frankel v. Board of Dental Examiners (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 534, 550, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 128] . However, parties to a contract may agree that any matter is a condition precedent. If the words used in the contract are so precise, express, and strong that such an interpretation of the contract finding such an intention is the only one compatible with the terms employed, the court must give effect to the declared intention of the parties [Schwab v. Bridge (1915) 27 Cal. App. 204, 207, 149 P. 603] .

[c] Approval of Agreement by Others

Generally, an agreement subject to the approval of the board of directors of one of the contracting parties or of some third person is not unenforceable as illusory. Unless a reasonable person would have understood that the agreement was not effective when signed, approval is a condition precedent to the party's duty to perform, not a condition precedent to the formation of the contract [Jacobs v. Freeman (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 177, 187, 189-190, 163 Cal. Rptr. 680 ; for discussion of formation of enforceable contracts generally, see § 140.20 et seq.].

The condition of approval and the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing (see § 140.12) give rise to a duty on the part of the party whose performance is conditioned on approval to submit the contract to the board or other person for approval, as well as a duty on the part of the board or other person to decide whether to approve the contract [Moreland Development Co. v. Gladstone Holmes, Inc. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 973, 977-978, 186 Cal. Rptr. 6 ; Jacobs v. Freeman (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 177, 190, 163 Cal. Rptr. 680] .

Failure to submit the contract for approval is a breach of contract. For discussion of breach of contract generally, see § 140.50 et seq. If approval would have been given if sought, failure to seek approval excuses the condition of approval and the party whose performance was conditioned on approval must perform [Jacobs v. Tenneco West, Inc. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1413, 1417-1418, 231 Cal. Rptr. 351 (decree of specific performance proper on trial court's finding that approval would have been given if sought)]. If approval would not have been given if sought, failure to seek approval is excused, and the party whose performance was conditioned on approval need not perform. This excuse for nonperformance is a kind of affirmative defense. The party who did not submit the contract for approval has the burden of proving that the board of directors or other person, acting in good faith, would not have approved the contract if the party had submitted it for approval in a timely manner [Jacobs v. Tenneco West, Inc. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1413, 1418-1419, 231 Cal. Rptr. 351] .

[d] Payment From Particular Fund

A contract may limit an obligation to pay sums by prescribing payment out of a specified fund or from a specified source. The existence of the fund is a condition precedent to the obligation of payment. If, through no fault of the promisor, the fund does not exist, the promisor will not be obligated to pay [Sunniland Fruit, Inc. v. Verni(1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 892, 899, 284 Cal. Rptr. 824 ; Jeschke v. Lamarr (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 506, 511, 44 Cal. Rptr. 416 ; but see Wm. R. Clarke Corp. v. Safeco Ins. Co. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 882, 888-896, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 578, 938 P.2d 372 (in subcontractor's action against surety on general contractor's payment bond, "pay if paid" provision in subcontract did not create condition precedent to subcontractor's contractual right to receive payment from general contractor; provision was not valid as waiver of subcontractor's mechanic's lien rights); see also Capital Steel Fabrications v. Mega Construction Co. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1049, 1062, 58 Cal. App. 4th 1049, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 672 (holding that Clarke applies to a public works project when there is no pending action against the governmental entity)].

Simple identification of a particular pool of money as a source of payment does not limit or preclude recovery from other sources when the pool fails to materialize, unless the agreement expressly so states [Sunniland Fruit, Inc. v. Verni (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 892, 900, 284 Cal. Rptr. 824 (fact that advance would be "deducted" from grower's profits did not condition duty to repay advance on existence of profits)].

When the duty to pay is conditioned on the existence of a specific fund, the promisee must allege and prove that the condition has been satisfied [Draper v. Patterson (1958) 156 Cal. App. 2d 606, 608-609, 319 P.2d 694 (complaint insufficient for failing to allege that defendant made profit from crops off land in question)].

[5] Condition Subsequent

A condition subsequent is a future event, on the happening of which the obligation will become no longer binding on the other party if the other party chooses to avail himself, herself or itself of the condition [Civ. Code § 1438; Frankel v. Board of Dental Examiners (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 534, 550, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 128] . An example of a condition precedent is an agreement that the transfer of patent rights to a company is subject to the condition that the company must thereafter manufacture and sell at least 5,000 patented devices each year, otherwise, on demand, the patent rights must be reassigned [Lowe v. Copeland (1932) 125 Cal. App. 315, 318, 321, 13 P.2d 522] .

The intent to create a condition subsequent must appear expressly or by clear implication. However, no precise words are necessary [Lowe v. Copeland (1932) 125 Cal. App. 315, 321, 13 P.2d 522] .

[6] Concurrent Conditions

Concurrent conditions are conditions that are mutually dependent and are to be performed at the same time [Civ. Code § 1437; Groobman v. Kirk (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 117, 123, 323 P.2d 867] . In a bilateral contract (see § 140.10[4]), although performances are not necessarily to be rendered at the same time, the performance of one promise is the agreed exchange for the other promise [see McDorman v. Moody (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 136, 142, 122 P.2d 639] . As a result, and since the law does not favor conditions precedent, whenever possible the courts construe promises in a bilateral contract as mutually dependent and concurrent conditions [Rubin v. Fuchs (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 50, 53-54, 81 Cal. Rptr. 373, 459 P.2d 925 ; for discussion of conditions precedent, see [4], above].

The only important difference between a concurrent condition and a condition precedent is that the condition precedent must be performed before another duty arises, while a tender of performance is sufficient to cause another duty to arise in the case of concurrent conditions. The failure of both parties to perform concurrent conditions during the time for performance does not leave the contract open for an indefinite period so that either party may tender performance at that party's leisure [Pittman v. Canham (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 556, 559, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 340] . The failure of both parties to perform concurrent conditions results in a discharge of both parties' duty to perform. Thus, when a contract makes time of the essence, if the time expires without tender by either party, both parties are discharged from their obligations under the contract [Pittman v. Canham (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 556, 559-560, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 340] .

[7] Excuse of Condition

Courts will sometimes excuse conditions, allowing one party to enforce the contract even though the condition has not been satisfied. For example, if the obligee gives notice to the obligor before the obligor is in default, that the obligee will not perform the obligation, and does not retract that notice before the time performance is due, the obligor is entitled to enforce the obligation without previously performing or offering to perform any obligation in favor of the defaulting obligee [Civ. Code § 1440; see Tatum v. Ackerman (1905) 148 Cal. 357, 360, 83 P. 151] .

If a condition is solely for the benefit of one party, the condition and the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing give rise to the duty on the part of that party to do everything the contract presupposes that party will do to accomplish its purpose [Jacobs v. Freeman (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 177, 188-189, 163 Cal. Rptr. 680] . When the party to be benefitted by performance of the condition tries in good faith to satisfy the condition but is unable to do so, that party has an option not to consummate the transaction. Thus, a party may waive a condition precedent solely for that party's benefit [Crescenta Valley Moose Lodge v. Bunt (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 682, 687, 87 Cal. Rptr. 428 ; see Wyler Summit Partnership v. Turner Broadcasting (9th Cir. 1998) 135 F.3d 658, 662-664 (holding that plaintiff stated claim for breach of contract based on its alleged waiver of installment payment provision for "percentage compensation" for profits from film "Ben Hur"); Wyler Summit Partnership v. Turner Broadcasting (9th Cir. 2000) 235 F.3d 1184, 1191-1192 (trial court erred in granting summary judgment to studio on issue of waiver when genuine issue of material fact existed regarding whether installment provision originally was included in contract for sole benefit of director)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Performance or Termination

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.45

§ 140.45 Impossibility of Performance

[1] In General

[a] Impossible or Impracticable

At common law, the determination that a contract was impossible to perform was limited to literal or physical impossibility of performance [Kennedy v. Reece (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 717, 724, 37 Cal. Rptr. 708] . The common law rule still applies to the extent that a party may not escape a voluntarily assumed contractual obligationmerely because performance would be more expensive or more difficult than contemplated when the agreement was executed [Butler v. Nepple (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 589, 599, 6 Cal. Rptr. 767, 354 P.2d 239] .

However, modern cases recognize something as legally impossible when it is impracticable, that is, when it can be done only at an excessive and unreasonable cost [Mineral Park Land Co. v. Howard (1916) 172 Cal. 289, 293, 156 P. 458] . The defense of impossibility may be based on impracticability when it is due to excessive and unreasonable difficulty or expense [Christin v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 526, 533, 71 P.2d 205 ; see In re Marriage of Benjamins (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 423, 432 n.3, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 313 (general contract principles applied to dissolution settlement agreement)]. Nevertheless, facts that make performance more difficult or expensive than the parties anticipated do not constitute a ground for the defense of impracticability unless they are of the gravest importance [Kennedy v. Reece (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 717, 725, 37 Cal. Rptr. 708] .

A party invoking the impossibility defense must show that reasonable efforts were used to surmount the obstacles that prevented performance [McCalden v. California Library Ass'n (9th Cir. 1990) 955 F.2d 1214, 1219 , cert. denied, 504 U.S. 957 (1992)] .

For an affirmative defense based on impossibility, see § 140.137.

[b] Objective Test

If performance of a contract is possible, failure to perform is not an excuse for nonperformance, but is instead a breach even if the obligor may have become wholly unable to perform. If what is agreed to be done is possible and lawful, it must be done. If a party expressly undertakes to do a thing lawful in itself, and not necessarily impossible in all circumstances, but does not do it, that party must pay damages, even if the performance was rendered impracticable or even impossible by an unforeseen cause for which no provision was made and over which the party had no control but against which the party might have provided in the contract [Kennedy v. Reece (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 717, 725, 37 Cal. Rptr. 708] .

The impossibility must attach to the nature of the thing to be done and not to the inability of the promisor to do it. For example, failure of the defendant to obtain permission to divert traffic from an old bypass road in time for the plaintiff to proceed with the contract to construct new roads did not excuse performance on the grounds of impossibility, when the defendant was able to get consent later and might have arranged for the diversion at the date required by using greater diligence or better planning [Hensler v. City of Los Angeles (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 71, 83, 268 P.2d 12] . A party cannot assert the defense of impossibility if that party has placed performance of the contract beyond that party's control by a voluntary act [Pacific Venture Corporation v. Huey (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 711, 717, 104 P.2d 641 ; Lortz v. Connell (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 286, 290-291, 78 Cal. Rptr. 6] .

[2] Extreme Hardship

A party cannot assert a defense of impossibility based on extreme hardship if the party has received the full consideration or if circumstances have not entirely destroyed the purpose that both parties had in mind. There is no impossibility of performance when one party rendered services as agreed and nothing remains for the other party to do but pay the agreed compensation [Browne v. Fletcher Aviation Corp. (1945) 67 Cal. App. 2d 855, 862, 155 P.2d 896 (no impossibility of performance and plaintiff test pilot permitted to recover full contract price under contract to test gliders manufactured by defendant for Air Force, when gliders were delivered, accepted, and paid for in amount satisfactory to defendant even though tests by plaintiff lasted only three hours instead of projected 10 hours)].

[3] Destruction of Thing or Death of Party

If performance depends on the existence of a given thing, and existence was assumed as the basis of the agreement, performance is excused to the extent the thing ceases to exist or is nonexistent [Mineral Park Land Co. v. Howard (1916) 172 Cal. 289, 292, 156 P. 458] . Similarly, when one party engages another to render personal services for a specified period, the obligor's death or incapacity before the end of the agreed time terminates the contract if the terms of the contract and the surrounding circumstances indicate that each party relied on personal skills, talents, or characteristics that no one other than the other contracting party could provide [Farnon v. Cole (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 855, 858, 66 Cal. Rptr. 673 ; Cazares v. Saenz (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 279, 284-286, 256 Cal. Rptr. 209 (when partner in two-person law firm was appointed to bench, association agreement was discharged, and attorney associated with firm did not have to work with other partner)].

If the existence of a particular person is necessary for performance, incapacity making performance impracticable is sufficient to discharge the contract [Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 262 (1979)]. This rule does not apply if the services may be as well performed by others or if the contract by its terms shows that performance by others was contemplated [Howard v. Adams (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 253, 258, 105 P.2d 971] .

[4] Interference by Operation of Law

Performance may be excused by operation of law if the passage of a statute or ordinance makes the contemplated performance illegal or a condemnation proceeding brought by the state or a public agency prevents performance. Prevention by court order or process obtained by a private litigant, as in the case of an injunction or attachment obtained against the promisor by a third person, is not an excuse for nonperformance, however [see Civ. Code § 1511(1); Webster v. Southern Cal. First National Bank (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 407, 415-416, 137 Cal. Rptr. 293] . Laws or other governmental acts that only make performance unprofitable or more difficult or expensive also do not excuse the duty to perform a contractual obligation [Lloyd v. Murphy (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 48, 55, 153 P.2d 47] .

A court holding may also have the effect of making performance impossible and therefore excused. For example, the lessee under an equipment lease, i.e., a financing agreement in lease form, may be excused from making payments when, in a turn of events not reasonably foreseeable by either party when the agreement was made, the equipment became unusable because of a federal court order requiring that it berendered inoperable, operation of the equipment having been found to unlawfully interfere with operation of other similar equipment by the federal government [see Federal Leasing Consultants, Inc. v. Mitchell Lipsett Co. (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 44, 47-49]. The court applied the commercial frustration doctrine [see § 140.46].

[5] Act of God or Public Enemy

Performance may be excused by an irresistible, superhuman cause or by an act of God [Civ. Code § 1511(1); Sun Oil Co. v. Union Drilling etc. Co. (1929) 208 Cal. 114, 120, 280 P. 535] . For a discussion and forms relating to an act of God, see Ch. 10, Act of God .

Performance is also excused when prevented or delayed by the act of public enemies of California or of the United States, unless the parties have expressly agreed to the contrary [Civ. Code § 1511(2); but see U.S. Trading Corp. v. Newmark G. Co. (1922) 56 Cal. App. 176, 186-187, 205 P. 29 (railroad embargo to continue for indefinite time suspended but did not discharge performance of contract for shipment of goods)].

[6] Temporary Impossibility

Temporary impossibility of a character that, if it should become permanent, would discharge a promisor's entire contractual duty, operates as a permanent discharge if performance after the impossibility ceases would impose a substantially greater burden on the promisor. Otherwise, the duty is suspended while the impossibility exists [Autry v. Republic Productions, Inc. (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 144, 149, 180 P.2d 888 ; see G.W. Andersen Construction Co. v. Mars Sales (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 326, 336-337, 210 Cal. Rptr. 409 (building moratorium temporary impossibility suspending contractor's performance duty but not defendant's duty to make down payment required by contract)].

Chapter 140 CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Performance or Termination

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.46

§ 140.46 Frustration of Purpose

The doctrine of frustration applies when performance remains possible but the fundamental reason of both parties for entering into the contract has been frustrated by an unanticipated supervening circumstance, destroying substantially the value of performance by the party standing on the contract [Cutter Laboratories, Inc. v. Twining (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 302, 314-315, 34 Cal. Rptr. 317] . A promisor without fault in causing the frustration, who is harmed by it, is discharged from performance unless a contrary intention appears [Dorn v. Goetz (1948) 85 Cal. App. 2d 407, 411, 193 P.2d 121] .

The defense of frustration is available only when the frustration is substantial. It is not enough that the transaction will be less profitable than originally anticipated or even that one party will sustain a loss. The frustration must be so severe that it is not fairly regarded as within the risks assumed by that party under the contract [FPI Development, Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 367, 399, 282 Cal. Rptr. 508 ; Nieman v. Peterson (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 14, 19].

The doctrine of frustration is akin to the doctrine of impossibility of performance, since both developed from the commercial necessity of excusing performance in cases of extreme hardship. However, frustration is not a form of impossibility [Lloyd v. Murphy (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 48, 53-54, 153 P.2d 47] . Frustration more properly relates to the consideration for performance [Autry v. Republic Productions, Inc. (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 144, 148, 180 P.2d 888] .

The question is whether the equities of the case, considered in the light of sound public policy, require placing the risk of disruption or complete destruction of the contract equilibrium on the defendant or the plaintiff in the circumstances of the case. The answer depends on whether an unanticipated circumstance, the risk of which should not be fairly thrown on the promisor, has made performance vitally different from what was reasonably to be expected. The court must examine the circumstances surrounding the formation of the contract to determine whether it can fairly infer that the risk of the event causing the alleged frustration was not reasonably foreseeable. If it was foreseeable, the contract should have provided for it. The absence of a provision gives rise to an inference that the parties assumed the risk [Lloyd v. Murphy (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 48, 53-54, 153 P.2d 47] . Of course, if the parties have contracted with reference to the frustrating event or have contemplated the risks arising from it, they may not invoke the doctrine of frustration to escape their obligations [Glenn R. Sewell Sheet Metal, Inc. v. Loverde (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 666, 676, 75 Cal. Rptr. 889, 451 P.2d 721 ; U.S. Roofing, Inc. v. Credit Alliance Corp. (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1431, 1448 n.10, 279 Cal. Rptr. 533 (doctrine inapplicable because crane defect foreseeable as demonstrated by lease disclaimer provision)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Performance or Termination

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.47

§ 140.47 Termination of Contract

[1] In General

The parties may terminate an executory contract, wholly or in part, by mutual consent at any stage of performance. Termination means doing away with the existing agreement and leaving the parties in their respective positions at the time of termination. It differs from rescission, one result of which is to restore the parties to their former positions [Sanborn v. Ballanfonte (1929) 98 Cal. App. 482, 487-488, 277 P. 152] . The parties may terminate a written contract by an oral agreement, whether executed or not [Grant v. Aerodraulics Co. (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 68, 75, 204 P.2d 683] .

[2] Contractual Provision for Termination

[a] Enforceability and Effect

If a contract provides that a party may terminate it at that party's option, the party is not liable after termination for further transactions under the contract. However, obligations that accrued before termination are not affected [Merrill v. Continental Assurance Co. (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 663, 670, 19 Cal. Rptr. 432] .

A provision giving one party an option to terminate on substantial notice need not be supported by consideration different from consideration supporting the entire agreement [Millgee Investment Co. v. Friedrich (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 802, 805, 62 Cal. Rptr. 730] . The express term of the contract is not shortened or affected by the termination clause unless a party exercises the option to terminate under the clause inthe manner prescribed by the contract [Kuffel v. Seaside Oil Co. (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 354, 368, 90 Cal. Rptr. 209] .

Once a party exercises an option to terminate a contract, the contract is extinguished and discharged. The other party cannot thereafter revive it through an offer to perform an act, the nonperformance of which gave rise to the option to terminate [Siegel v. Lewis (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 86, 91, 168 P.2d 50] .

When a contract provides that either party may terminate it without cause by giving notice a specified number of days before termination, a party who terminates the contract without notice or on shorter notice than required breaches the contract. Damages for breach are limited to those that could have accrued during the period of the required notice [see Civ. Code § 3358; Martin v. U-Haul Co. of Fresno (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 396, 410-411, 251 Cal. Rptr. 17] .

[b] Necessity for Cause or Good Faith

The implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing [see § 140.12] may supply a requirement of good cause for termination if the contract is silent or ambiguous on that subject. However, courts will not interpret the implied covenant to add a requirement of good cause when the written contract expressly provides that it may be terminated at will or for any reason on notice [Gerdlund v. Electronic Dispensers International (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 263, 277-278, 235 Cal. Rptr. 279 (contract with nonemployee sales representative)].

Similarly, no tort cause of action arises for termination of a contract pursuant to a notice provision unless a special relationship exists between the parties to the contract [Martin v. U-Haul Co. of Fresno (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 396, 412-415, 251 Cal. Rptr. 17 (no special relationship: equipment rental dealership); Premier Wine & Spirits v. E. & J. Gallo Winery (9th Cir. 1988) 846 F.2d 537, 540 (applying California law in diversity action; no special relationship: wine distributorship); see Abrahamson v. NME Hospitals, Inc. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1325, 1329-1330, 241 Cal. Rptr. 396 (no tort even if termination pursuant to notice provision was motivated by refusal of independent contractor physician to condone poor practices in healing arts)].

The court may receive parol evidence of industry custom and the circumstances surrounding formation of the contract on the issue of whether a provision for termination by either party after notice includes the requirement that termination must be for poor performance that remains uncorrected after notice [Jack Rowe Assoc., Inc. v. Fisher Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 833 F.2d 177, 181-183 , after remand, 936 F.2d 578 (1991) (applying California law to require retrial: distributorship agreement); see Esbensen v. Userware Internat., Inc. (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 631, 636-640, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 93 (parol evidence admissible regarding oral understanding of grounds for termination of employment contract that was only partially integrated)].

Even when termination amounts to a breach of the contract because done on less notice than required by the contract, it does not constitute tortious denial of the existence of the contract [Martin v. U-Haul Co. of Fresno (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 396, 412, 251 Cal. Rptr. 17] . For discussion of tortious denial of the existence of a contract, see § 140.12[4].

E. Breach

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.50

§ 140.50 In General

[1] Definition

A breach of contract is a party's unjustified or unexcused nonperformance of a contractual duty the party is required to immediately perform. A breach may be total or partial [see § 140.51]. It may consist of [see Sackett v. Spindler (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 220, 227, 56 Cal. Rptr. 435] :

- Failure to perform acts promised;
- Prevention or hindrance of performance; or
- Repudiation of the promise.

A party cannot actually breach a contract until the time specified for performance has arrived [Taylor v. Johnston (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 130, 137, 123 Cal. Rptr. 641, 539 P.2d 425] . However, the court may treat repudiation of a promise as anticipatory breach [see § 140.54].

When a contract is expressly renewable for a fixed term at a party's option, but subject to the condition that renewal will depend on the parties reaching agreement about something essential to the contract (such as the nature and amount of security that one party will provide for that party's performance) in the renewal term, there is no breach of contract in the event that, after the option to renew is exercised, the parties fail to reach agreement on that essential something. After the original term ends, even if the parties continue to do business with each other as before, their conduct does not imply that the contract continues in existence. Therefore, if their negotiations regarding that essential something eventually come to naught, neither party can be liable for breach of contract [Warner Bros. Int'l TV Distrib. v. Golden Channels Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 522 F.3d 1060, 1070].

[2] Accrual of Cause of Action

A cause of action based on breach of contract accrues at the time of the breach. In the case of a personal performance contract, breach of the obligation to pay occurs at the time the other party completes the required performance [E.O.C. Ord, Inc. v. Kovakovich (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1194, 1203, 246 Cal. Rptr. 456] .

[3] Effect

Any breach, total or partial, that causes a measurable injury gives the aggrieved party a right to damages as compensation for the breach [Borgonovo v. Henderson (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 220, 231, 6 Cal. Rptr. 236] . The breach may consist of a defective performance as well as an absence of performance [Linden Partners v. Wilshire Linden (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 508, 531-532, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 708] . If there is a total breach of the contract, the plaintiff may sue for all consequential damages, general and special. Any subsequent action for additional damages could be successfully opposed by a plea of res judicata; thus, the plaintiff's injury is necessarily permanent.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Breach

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.51

§ 140.51 Partial Breach

[1] Effect

If the breach is partial only, the aggrieved party may recover damages for nonperformance only to the time of trial and may not recover damages for anticipated future nonperformance. Even if a breach is total, the aggrieved party may treat it as partial, unless the wrongdoer repudiated the contract [Coughlin v. Blair (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 587, 598-599, 262 P.2d 305] .

[2] Determination of Partial Breach

Whether a breach of contract is total or partial depends on its materiality and ordinarily is a question of fact [Whitney Inv. Co. v. Westview Dev. Co. (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 594, 601, 78 Cal. Rptr. 302 ; for discussion of materiality of breach, see § 140.52]. The circumstances of each case determine whether the aggrieved party may treat a breach of contract as total. If the aggrieved party has fully performed his, her or its obligations under a bilateral contract, courts usually treat a breach as partial unless it appears that performance of the agreement is unlikely and the aggrieved party may be protected only by the recovery of damages for the value of the promise [Coughlin v. Blair (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 587, 599, 262 P.2d 305] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Breach

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.52

§ 140.52 Materiality

The materiality of a breach does not depend necessarily on the amount of money involved [Associated Lathing & Plastering Co. v. Louis C. Dunn, Inc. (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 40, 51, 286 P.2d 825 (subcontractor's failure to install hangers was material breach even though cost of installing hangers was only $3,500 and total contract was for $140,000)]. In determining the materiality of a failure to fully perform a promise, the court should consider the following factors [Whitney Inv. Co. v. Westview Dev. Co. (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 594, 602, 78 Cal. Rptr. 302 ; Sackett v. Spindler (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 220, 229, 56 Cal. Rptr. 435] :

- The extent to which the aggrieved party will obtain the substantial benefit that party could have reasonably anticipated;

- The extent to which the aggrieved party may be adequately compensated in damages for lack of complete performance;

- The extent to which the party failing to perform has partly performed or made preparations for performance;

- The extent of the hardship on the party failing to perform, if the court terminates the contract;

- The willful, negligent, or innocent behavior of the party failing to perform;

- The extent of uncertainty that the party failing to perform will perform the remainder of the contract; and

- The timing of the breach (a slight breach at the outset may justify termination whereas a like breach later in performance may be insubstantial).

Whether a particular breach is material is usually a question of fact. The timing of a breach is a relevant consideration in determining its materiality. A slight breach at the outset may justify rescission, while a similar breach later in performance may be insubstantial [Whitney Inv. Co. v. Westview Dev. Co. (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 594, 601-602, 78 Cal. Rptr. 302] .

§ 140.53 Entire Contract or Severable Provisions

A factor for consideration in the breach of an executory contract is whether the terms of the contract are entire or severable [Big Boy Drilling Corp., Ltd. v. Etheridge (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 114, 119, 111 P.2d 953] . If a contract is divisible and severable so that both parties may fully perform without affecting subsequent performance or right of performance as to the remainder, and a breach occurs as to the severable part, the aggrieved party may treat that part as abandoned and recover the money paid on the severable part [San Diego Constr. Co. v. Mannix (1917) 175 Cal. 548, 554, 166 P. 325] .

However, if a contract is entire, a repudiation of a part is a repudiation of it all. The aggrieved party has the right to consider the breach of a part as a breach of the entire contract and discontinue performance on the entire contract. The aggrieved party is discharged from the satisfaction of any conditions on his, her or its part [De Prosse v. Royal Eagle Distilleries Co. (1902) 135 Cal. 408, 411, 67 P. 502] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Breach

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.54

§ 140.54 Anticipatory Breach

[1] Treatment as Actual Breach

California recognizes the rule of anticipatory breach. The promisee may treat the promisor's definite and unconditional repudiation of the contract, communicated to the promisee, as a breach of the contract creating an immediate right of action, even though the repudiation takes place long before the time prescribed for the promised performance and before conditions specified in the contract have been satisfied [Daum Development Corp. v. Yuba Plaza, Inc. (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 65, 73-74, 89 Cal. Rptr. 458 , disapproved on other grounds in Ninety Five Ten v. Crain (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 36, 40-41, 282 Cal. Rptr. 141 ; see Civ. Code § 1440; see also Mobil Oil Exploration & Producing Southeast, Inc. v. United States (2000) 530 U.S. 604, 120 S. Ct. 2423, 147 L.Ed. 2d 528, 534 (obligor's statement to obligee indicating that obligor will breach an important contractual promise, thereby substantially impairing the value of the contract, constituted repudiation of contract and plaintiffs were entitled to restitution whether or not repudiated contracts ultimately would have produced financial gain)].

[2] Requirements

[a] Repudiation Before Performance Due

An essential element of anticipatory breach is that the promisor expressly or implicitly repudiate the promise before the promisor's performance is due [Taylor v. Johnston (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 130, 137, 123 Cal. Rptr. 641, 539 P.2d 425] . The promisee may then treat the repudiation as a breach. However, the promisor may retract the repudiation up to the time performance is due, as long as the promisee has not madea detrimental change in position in reliance on the repudiation [Guerrieri v. Severini (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 12, 19, 330 P.2d 635] .

[b] Bilateral Contract

The contract must be bilateral [Taylor v. Johnston (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 130, 137, 123 Cal. Rptr. 641, 539 P.2d 425 ; see § 140.10[4]]. The doctrine of anticipatory breach by repudiation does not apply to contracts that are unilateral in their inception or that have become so by complete performance by one party. The theory underlying this rule is that a plaintiff who has no future obligations to perform is not prejudiced by having to wait for the arrival of the defendant's time for performance to sue for breach [Harris v. Time, Inc. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 449, 457, 237 Cal. Rptr. 584 ; Diamond v. University of So. California (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 49, 53-54, 89 Cal. Rptr. 302] .

[3] Remedies

When the promisor repudiates the contract, the aggrieved promisee may elect a remedy [Taylor v. Johnston (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 130, 137, 123 Cal. Rptr. 641, 539 P.2d 425 ; see Mobil Oil Exploration & Producing Southeast, Inc. v. United States (2000) 530 U.S. 604, 120 S. Ct. 2423, 147 L.Ed. 2d 528, 534 (oil companies sought restitution--rather than damages for breach of contract--of initial payments made to federal government after government repudiated lease contracts)]:

- Treat the repudiation as an anticipatory breach and immediately seek damages for breach of contract, terminating the contractual relation between the parties; or

- Treat the repudiation as an empty threat, wait until the time for performance arrives, and exercise remedies for actual breach if a breach does in fact occur at that time.

Treating repudiation as an anticipatory breach may enable the aggrieved party to pursue remedies apart from a suit for damages. For instance, if the aggrieved party normally would be entitled to mechanic's lien rights, a lien would have to be recorded within 90 days "after [the aggrieved party] completes his contract" [Civ. Code § 3115]. A contract is complete for purposes of commencing the recordation period when all work under the contract has been performed or excused, or has been otherwise discharged, as when the aggrieved party elects to treat repudiation of the contract as an anticipatory breach [Howard S. Wright Constr. Co. v. BBIC Investors, LLC (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 228, 241-243, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 769] .

If the aggrieved party disregards the repudiation and treats the contract as still in force, and the repudiating party retracts the repudiation before performance, the repudiation is nullified, and the aggrieved party is left with the remedies, if any, invocable at the time of performance [Taylor v. Johnston (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 130, 137-138, 123 Cal. Rptr. 641, 539 P.2d 425] . However, the aggrieved party's manifest purpose to allow or require performance by the promisor in spite of the repudiation does not nullify its effect as a breach, or prevent the repudiation from excusing satisfaction of conditions and from discharging the duty to render a return performance. Although the effect of repudiation may be nullified, it operates until nullified, not only as a breach but also as a continuing excuse of conditions and as a continuing justification of the promisee's failure to perform a return promise, even though the promisee indicated a willingness to forgive the repudiation [Guerrieri v. Severini (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 12, 19-20, 330 P.2d 635 ; see Civ. Code § 1440; but see Ersa Grae Corp. v. Fluor Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 613, 625, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288 (promisor who sues for damages must still prove ability to perform)]. Therefore, the promisee's option to treat the repudiation as an anticipatory breach, and seek damages for breach of contract [Taylor v. Johnston (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 130, 137, 123 Cal. Rptr. 641, 539 P.2d 425], remains viable unless and until the repudiation is nullified [Central Valley Gen. Hosp. v. Smith (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 501, 519, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 771 (promisee is entitled to sue immediately for damages but is not required to make that election immediately after promisor's anticipatory breach)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Breach

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.55

§ 140.55 Action for Damages After Breach

[1] Elements

The essential elements of a cause of action for damages for breach of contract are [Reichert v. General Ins. Co. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 822, 830, 69 Cal. Rptr. 321, 442 P.2d 377 ; Acoustics, Inc. v. Trepte Constr. Co. (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 887, 916, 92 Cal. Rptr. 723] :

- The contract [see § 140.20 et seq.], which the court will need to construe [see § 140.30 et seq.] to assess the other elements of the cause of action;
- Plaintiff's performance or excuse for nonperformance [see [2], below];
- Defendant's breach; and
- The resulting damages to the plaintiff [see [3], below].

[2] Plaintiff's Ability to Perform

To be entitled to a judgment for damages for breach of contract, the plaintiff must prove that but for the defendant's breach, the plaintiff would have had the ability to perform [for performance of contract generally, see § 140.40 et seq.]. This requirement usually arises after the defendant has repudiated or anticipatorily breached a contract [see § 140.54]. The plaintiff does not have to allege readiness or willingness to perform, but must prove ability to perform [Ersa Grae Corp. v. Fluor Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 613, 625, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288 (in action based on real estate sale, plaintiff did not have to actually form consortium or obtain financing to prove ability to perform); McDorman v. Moody (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 136, 140-141, 122 P.2d 639] .

[3] Causal Connection Between Breach and Damages

Damages are not presumed to flow from the fact that a party breached a contract. The plaintiff must establish the causal connection between the breach and the damages sought [see Civ. Code § 3300; for damages in breach of contract actions generally, see § 140.56[3]].

The fact that the defendant breached a contract by repudiating it or obtaining performance elsewhere is not sufficient to infer the plaintiff's damages. The plaintiffis relieved of the duty to perform, but must still prove damages. For example, if the plaintiff's performance is impossible, the plaintiff cannot prove that damages flowed from the breach, and the defendant is entitled to judgment [Metzenbaum v. R.O.S. Associates (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 202, 211-214, 232 Cal. Rptr. 741] . In the context of a franchise relationship, a franchisee's failure to make past royalty payments is not a proximate or "natural and direct" cause of the franchisor's failure to receive future royalty payments [see Postal Instant Press, Inc. v. Sealy (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 1704, 1713, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 365] .

On the other hand, the defendant's breach need not be the sole cause of the plaintiff's damages. Under the substantial-factor test, the defendant may be liable for all the plaintiff's damages even though other factors contributed. The plaintiff need not show the proportional contribution of the defendant's breach among the several factors causing injury. For example, a seller sued an escrow company for negligence and breach of contract based on the escrow company's failure to forward preliminary title reports or any demand, and the court found the escrow company liable to the seller for attorney's fees and litigation expenses incurred in the buyer's specific-performance suit against the seller. The court reasoned that the escrow company's failure to perform its duties with reasonable care and dispatch was a substantial factor in the collapse of the escrow, which resulted in the seller's damages [Bruckman v. Parliament Escrow Corp. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1051, 1060-1061, 1063-1064, 235 Cal. Rptr. 813] . For discussion and forms applying theories of implied contractual indemnity to this type of situation, see Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.30 et seq.

[4] Demand for Damages

A demand for damages is unnecessary when the defendant has an unconditional duty to perform an act or pay a sum of money [Bryson v. McCone (1898) 121 Cal. 153, 158, 53 P. 637 ; McDonald v. Filice (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 613, 623, 60 Cal. Rptr. 832] . When the contract calls for the payment of money at a certain time and the breach consists of the debtor's refusal to pay, the creditor's failure to make a demand at the place named does not discharge the debt. However, the debtor may plead it as a defense to the recovery of costs or interest if the defendant establishes the ability and willingness to pay the debt when due [Rottman v. Hevener (1921) 54 Cal. App. 474, 483-484, 202 P. 329] .

The court will award interest as damages only from the date of a demand or from the date of filing suit if there has been no previous demand [see Civ. Code § 3287; KGM Harvesting Co. v. Fresh Network (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 376, 391, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 286 (test for recovery of prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287(a) is whether defendant either actually knows amount of damages owed plaintiff or could have computed that amount from reasonably available information)]. An award of prejudgment interest is not automatic; a request for interest must be made in the trial court. Furthermore, requests for prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287 by a successful plaintiff must be made by way of motion prior to entry of judgment, or the request must be made in the form of a motion for new trial no later than the time allowed for filing such a motion [North Oakland Medical Clinic v. Rogers (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 824, 829-831, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 743 (when damages were awarded but no interest was included in verdict, and neither court nor jury had determined whether damages were liquidated or unliquidated, rule was applied retroactively to plaintiffs who never sought prejudgment interest as part of damages and sought interest at last minute as part of order awarding costs)].

For discussion of interest on damages generally, see § 140.56[3][e].

[5] Application of Government Claims Act (Tort Claims Act)

Gov. Code § 810 et seq., commonly known as the Government Claims Act (or Tort Claims Act), applies to a claim for damages based on breach of a contract by the state or a local public entity [City of Stockton v. Superior Court (2007)

42 Cal. 4th 730, 734, 737-740, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 295, 171 P.3d 20]. Therefore, "all claims for money or damages against the state ... on express contract" and all such claims against a local public entity are required to be presented in accordance with a prescribed procedure, not later than one year after the accrual of the cause of action [Gov. Code §§ 905, 905.2(b)(3), 911.2(a)]. No suit for money or damages may be brought against the state or local public entity "on a cause of action for which a claim is required to be presented in accordance with ... [the prescribed procedure] until a written claim therefor has been presented to the public entity and has been acted upon ... or has been deemed to have been rejected" [Gov. Code § 945.4]. For discussion of the claim procedure [see generally Gov. Code § 900 et seq.] and related forms, see Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Breach

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.56

§ 140.56 Remedies for Breach

[1] Choice of Remedies

[a] Action for Damages, Specific Performance, or Rescission

If a breach of contract is sufficiently material, the aggrieved party has the option to withhold future performance and rescind the contract. An aggrieved party who has the option of rescission has the choice of the following three remedies [see Michaelian v. Elba Land Co. (1926) 76 Cal. App. 541, 557, 245 P. 476] :

- An action for damages [see [3], below];
- A suit in equity for specific performance [e.g., Michaelian v. Elba Land Co. (1926) 76 Cal. App. 541, 557, 245 P. 476 ; see generally Ch. 528, Specific Performance]; or
- An action for rescission and restitution [see generally Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution].

For discussion of the factors for determining whether a breach is material, see § 140.52.

With rescission, the aggrieved party may seek return of any consideration furnished before the rescission, less offsets for any benefits retained, or, if what was furnished cannot be returned, e.g., labor, the aggrieved party may recover in quantum meruit for the value of the performance before rescission [Civ. Code §§ 1691, 1692; C. Norman Peterson Co. v. Container Corp. of America (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 628, 642-644, 218 Cal. Rptr. 592 (quantum meruit recovery after mutual abandonment followingbreach); B.C. Richter Contracting Co. v. Continental Cas. Co. (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 491, 499-500, 41 Cal. Rptr. 98] .

[b] Action for Declaratory Relief or Injunction

If a dispute arises about the parties' respective rights and duties under the contract, but there has been no breach, the appropriate action may be for declaratory relief [Code Civ. Proc. § 1060; Supervalu, Inc. v. Wexford Underwriting

Managers, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 64, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 316 (there is no requirement that declaratory judgment must resolve particular claim; only requirement for declaratory relief action is existence of actual controversy relating to legal rights and duties of parties to contract); Bertero v. National General Corp. (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 126, 135, 62 Cal. Rptr. 714 ; see generally Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief]. In addition, if the contract would be specifically enforceable, the aggrieved party may bring suit for an injunction [Civ. Code § 3423(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(1); see generally Ch. 303, Injunctions]. An action for injunction does not waive the plaintiff's right to assert a claim for damages in a subsequent action [Ahlers v. Smiley (1912) 163 Cal. 200, 206, 124 P. 827] .

[c] Effect of Contractual Stipulation for Equitable Relief

As a general matter, if the parties have stipulated in the contract as to the nature or amount of a remedy, it is proper for the trial court to honor the parties' agreement unless the court finds that to do so would be contrary to a rule of law or public policy. In determining the lawfulness of a stipulation that contemplates an equitable remedy, the court should take into account the special nature of equitable remedies. Given their extraordinary nature, equitable remedies usually are unavailable when the remedy at law is adequate, as when damages are quantifiable. A court must reject a stipulation contemplating an equitable remedy that is contrary to law or public policy, as in a case in which the evidence shows that an aggrieved party actually has an adequate remedy at law; otherwise, the court should honor the parties' agreement and enforce the stipulation [DVD Copy Control Assn. v. Kaleidescape, Inc. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 697, 725726, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 856].

[2] Tort Remedies

[a] No Tort Recovery for Breach in Violation of Public Policy

Outside the employment context [see Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 (employee fired for refusing to engage in illegal pricing practices)], no tort cause of action arises for breach of contract in violation of public policy [Harris v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 70, 82, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 649 (franchisee's claim that franchisor's refusal to make repairs as promised was in retaliation for franchisee's reporting underground gasoline leaks to authorities and failing to comply with defendant's pricing policies); Abrahamson v. NME Hospitals, Inc. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1325, 1329-1330, 241 Cal. Rptr. 396 (termination of physician's independent-contractor agreement, according to its terms, because of refusal to condone allegedly improper healing practices); see Premier Wine & Spirits v. E. & J. Gallo Winery (9th Cir. 1988) 846 F.2d 537, 540] . For discussion of this cause of action in the employment context, see Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline .

[b] Cause of Action for Negligence

The plaintiff may combine a contract cause of action with one for negligence in an appropriate case [for combining contract and tort causes of action in a single action generally, see § 140.56[2][e]]. A cause of action for negligence may be based on the negligent performance of an implied obligation arising from the contract [see, e.g., North American Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 764, 775-776, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466 (packaging and shipping contract imposed duty to reasonably and carefully perform contractual obligations; negligent performance of contractual obligation give rise to action in tort)]. The four-year limitation of Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1) governs an action based on negligent performance and breach of contract [Bruckman v. Parliament Escrow Corp. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1051, 1057-1058, 235 Cal. Rptr. 813 ; cf. Hensley v. Caietti (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1165, 1169, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 837 (complaint alleged only cause of action for attorney malpractice, with no mention of contract between attorney and client, so court applied one-year limitation of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 to bar action)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

[c] Claim for Emotional Distress

A plaintiff may recover damages for emotional distress when it is foreseeable from the nature of the contract that emotional distress will result from a breach of the contract [see, e.g., Wynn v. Monterey Club (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 789, 799-801, 168 Cal. Rptr. 878 ; Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 851-852, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39] . However, in a case to determine whether emotional distress damages were recoverable for the negligent breach of a contract to construct a house, the California Supreme Court held that when the contractor's negligence directly caused only economic injury and property damage, and breached no duty independent of the contract, the homeowners could not recover damages for emotional distress based upon breach of the contract [Erlich v. Menezes (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 543, 548, 558-560, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 886, 981 P.2d 978 ; see generally Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.140 et seq.].

The plaintiff also may allege intentional infliction of emotional distress [see, e.g., Rulon-Miller v. International Business Machines Corp. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 241, 254-255, 208 Cal. Rptr. 524 ; Wallis v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 1109, 1119-1120, 207 Cal. Rptr. 123] . For a general discussion of the tort of infliction of emotional distress, see Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress .

[d] Other Torts Involving Contracts

- For discussion of torts arising out of the specific contractual relationship of employer and employee, see Ch. 349, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline .

- For discussion of the torts of misrepresentation and deceit, which may be applicable in contractual relationships, see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit .

- For discussion of torts based on business contracts, see Ch. 565, Unfair Competition .

[e] Combining Tort and Contract Causes of Action

[i] In General

A plaintiff may want to allege a tort cause of action in a complaint alleging a breach of contract to increase the number of possible counts on which to base remedies and to increase the total amount of damages by recovering punitive damages. Contract damages are limited to the amount that will compensate the plaintiff for all of the detriment proximately caused by the breach [Civ. Code § 3300]. Punitive damages are not available for breach of contract, no matter how willful or malicious the defendant's conduct, except when the wrongful act is also a tort [see Civ. Code § 3294(a); Quigley v. Pet, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 877, 887, 208 Cal. Rptr. 394 ; for discussion of the preclusion of punitive damages in contract actions generally, see § 140.56[3][c]].

Tort damages may include compensation for all detriment caused by the tort [see Civ. Code § 3333], plus punitive damages if the plaintiff pleads and proves statutoryprerequisites [see Civ. Code § 3294(a)]. However, the plaintiff must exercise care in alleging a tort cause of action in a complaint alleging breach of a contract other than an insurance contract, as a result of the Supreme Court's 1995 holding discussed in § 140.12[3] [see Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 85, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420, 900 P.2d 669] . For general discussion of the issues involved in awarding damages in tort and contract actions, see Ch. 177, Damages .

[ii] Contract Statute of Limitations

An action for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing [see § 140.12[1]] sounds both in tort and in contract. The plaintiff is allowed to make an election. Unless and until the plaintiff makes an irrevocable election, the plaintiff is not estopped to rely on the contract theory and is entitled to the benefit of the four-year statute of limitations [see Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1)] governing actions on written contracts [Krieger v. Nick Alexander Imports, Inc. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 205, 220-221, 285 Cal. Rptr. 717 ; Frazier v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 90, 102-103, 214 Cal. Rptr. 883] .

The statute of limitations begins to run on the occurrence of the last element necessary to the cause of action, which in contract actions is generally the breach. The discovery rule may extend accrual of the cause of action until the plaintiff discovers or reasonably should discover the existence of the cause of action [see El Pollo Loco, Inc. v. Hashim (9th Cir. 2003) 316 F.3d 1032, 1038-1040 (discovery rule applied to toll statute of limitations in contract claim when fraudulent misrepresentations were asserted in conjunction with contract claim)]. However, the discovery rule applies only when a statutory scheme or a fiduciary relationship between the parties imposes a duty to disclose [Krieger v. Nick Alexander Imports, Inc. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 205, 221-222, 285 Cal. Rptr. 717 (evidence did not establish special relationship, so discovery rule was inapplicable and even contract action was barred)].

[iii] Attorney's Fees

A broad enough attorney's fee provision in a contract will support an award of attorney's fees to a prevailing party under Civ. Code § 1717 (discussed in Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees), even if only tort causes of action go to the jury. However, the tort causes of action must arise from the contract [Xuereb v. Marcus & Millichap, Inc. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1342-1345, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 154 (causes of action for negligence, breach of fiduciary duty, concealment, and misrepresentation arising from real estate purchase agreement)]. When a plaintiff before trial has voluntarily dismissed an action asserting both tort and contract claims arising from a contract containing a broadly worded attorney fee provision, Civ. Code § 1717 bars recovery of attorney fees incurred in defending contract claims. That section, however, does not bar recovery of attorney fees incurred in defending tort or other noncontract claims. Whether attorney fees incurred in the noncontract claims are recoverable after a pretrial dismissal depends upon the terms of the contractual attorney fee provision [Santisas v. Goodin (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 599, 602, 608, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830, 951 P.2d 399] . In one case, it was held that defendant was not the prevailing party for purposes of recovery of attorney fees incurred in defending noncontract causes of action when the plaintiffs obtained their litigation objective through settlement with other defendants [Silver v. Boatwright Home Inspection, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 443, 446, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475] . In a case in which a defendant who was not a party to a contract was sued for breach of that contract and various related tort and statutory causes of action, the court held that defendant could not recover attorney's fees incurred in defending the noncontract causes of action when the plaintiff had filed a voluntary dismissal with prejudice [Topanga and Victory Partners, LLP v. Toghia (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 775, 778, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 104] . For further discussion of attorney's fees, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

[3] Contract Damages

[a] Measure of Damages

Unless a statute otherwise specifically provides, the proper measure of damages for the breach of a contract is the amount that will compensate the plaintiff for all the detriment proximately caused by the breach or that, in the ordinary course of things, would be likely to result from the breach [Civ. Code § 3300; see Robinson Helicopter Company, Inc. v. Dana Corporation (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 979, 992-993, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 352, 102 P. 3d 268 (scope of contract remedy assumes that the parties can negotiate the risk of loss occasioned by a breach; accordingly courts enforce those obligations each party voluntarily assumes and award only those benefits they expected to receive)]. The plaintiff may not recover damages unless they are clearly ascertainable in both their nature and origin [Civ. Code § 3301; see, e.g., Vestar Development v. General Dynamics Corporation (9th Cir. 2001) 249 F.3d 958, 961-962 (action for breach of agreement to negotiate was properly dismissed when only damages sought were lost profits, which could not be proved with reasonable certainty as required by Civ. Code § 3301)].

Damages must be reasonable. If an obligation of any kind appears to create a right to unconscionable and grossly oppressive damages, contrary to substantial justice, no more than reasonable damages may be recovered [Civ. Code § 3359; Coughlin v. Blair (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 587, 600, 262 P.2d 305] .

Generally, the measure of damages for breach of contract includes only lost profits and prejudgment interest [Burnett & Doty Development Co. v. Phillips (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 384, 389-392, 148 Cal. Rptr. 569] . Nevertheless, courts have construed Civ. Code §§ 3300 and 3301 to allow recovery of damages for emotional distress and mental suffering in a breach of contract action if, from the particular subject matter of the contract and in the contemplation of the parties, mental suffering or emotional distress was a foreseeable and contemplated result of its breach [Rogoff v. Grabowski (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 624, 633, 246 Cal. Rptr. 185 ; Wynn v. Monterey Club (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 789, 799-801, 168 Cal. Rptr. 878] .

For further discussion of damages in contract actions, see Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.140 et seq.

[b] Limitation on Damages

Except as expressly provided by statute, a plaintiff may not recover a greater amount in damages for the breach of an obligation than that plaintiff could have gained by full performance on both sides [Civ. Code § 3358; see Martin v. U-Haul Co. of Fresno (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 396, 409-411, 251 Cal. Rptr. 17 (damages for breach of contract with termination option limited to damages that could potentially accrue during period of notice required to terminate)]. However, the court cannot apply this rule if the parties cannot show what the performance would have been. In that case, the court must make an estimate of damages rather than an actual computation. The party whose wrongful conduct rendered ascertainment of damages difficult cannot complain because the court estimated damages [Benard v. Walkup (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 595, 605-606 , 77 Cal. Rpt 544].

[c] Punitive Damages

A plaintiff may not recover punitive or exemplary damages in an action for breach of contract [Civ. Code § 3294]. For discussion of combining tort causes of action with contract causes of action, see [2], above.

[d] Minimizing Damages

Although aggrieved by a breach of contract, the plaintiff is required to do everything reasonably possible to minimize the loss and reduce the damages for which the defendant is liable. The plaintiff may not recover damages for detriment that could have been avoided by reasonable effort and without undue expense. The question of whether the plaintiff acted reasonably in mitigating damages is one of fact [Sackett v. Spindler (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 220, 238-239, 56 Cal. Rptr. 435] .

[e] Interest on Damages

[i] When Allowed

Every person who is entitled to recover damages certain, or capable of being made certain by calculation, whose right to recover is vested on a particular day, is entitled also to recover interest from that day, except for a period during which the debtor is prevented by law, or by the act of the creditor, from paying the debt [Civ. Code § 3287(a)]. Every person who is entitled under any judgment to receive damages based on a cause of action in contract when the claim was unliquidated may also recover interest from a date before the entry of judgment, which the court, in its discretion, may fix, but in no event earlier that the date the action was filed [Civ. Code § 3287(b)].

Requests for prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287 by a successful plaintiff must be made by way of motion prior to entry of judgment, or the request must be made in the form of a motion for new trial no later than the time allowed for filing such a motion [North Oakland Medical Clinic v. Rogers (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 824, 829-831, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 743 (when damages were awarded but no interest was included in verdict, and neither court nor jury had determined whether damages were liquidated or unliquidated, rule was applied retroactively to plaintiffs who never sought prejudgment interest as part of damages and sought interest at last minute as part of order awarding costs)].

A legal rate of interest to which the parties agreed in the contract remains chargeable after a breach, as before, until the contract is superseded by a verdict or another new obligation [Civ. Code § 3289(a); see Civ. Code § 3289.5 (retail installment contracts governed by Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.)]. If a contract does not stipulate a legal rate of interest, the obligation bears interest at the rate of 10 percent per year after breach [Civ. Code § 3289(b); see Mark McDowell Corp. v. LSM 128 (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 1431-1433 (if rate of interest specified in contract is usurious, Civ. Code § 3289(b) allows recovery of interest at 10 percent per year from date of breach)]. "Contract," as used in Civ. Code § 3289(b), does not include a note secured by a deed of trust on real property [Civ. Code § 3289(b)].

[ii] When Precluded

Accepting payment of the whole principal waives all claim to interest [Civ. Code § 3290; see San Francisco Unified School Dist. v. San Francisco Classroom Teachers Assn. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 146, 150, 272 Cal. Rptr. 38 (Civ. Code § 3290 applies only to interest as damages, not to postjudgment interest; thus, cashing check in satisfaction of judgment does not waive claim to postjudgment interest)].

An offer of payment stops the running of interest on an obligation. However, an offer to pay part of an amount owed does not stop the running of prejudgment interest if conditioned on the creditor's dropping a demand for other sums claimed [see Civ. Code §§ 1494, 1504; Klinger v. Realty World Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1549, 1553-1554, 242 Cal. Rptr. 592] . Tender and deposit of the amount owing pursuant to Civ. Code § 1500 also stops the running of interest [Klinger v. Realty World Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1549, 1554 n.2, 242 Cal. Rptr. 592] . For an affirmative defense alleging tender and deposit, see § 140.139.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Breach

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.57

§ 140.57 Waiver of Breach

The aggrieved party may waive a breach of contract. For example, an aggrieved party waives a breach by continued performance without a claim of breach [A.B.C. Distrib. Co. v. Distillers Distrib. Corp. (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 175, 187, 316 P.2d 71] . Waiver does not require actual subjective intent to waive a given right, but may result from conduct that, accordingto its natural import, is so inconsistent with the intent to enforce the right in question as to induce a reasonable belief that the aggrieved party has relinquished the right [see Rubin v. Los Angeles Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n. (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 292, 298, 205 Cal. Rptr. 455 (detrimental reliance not necessarily element of waiver but only of estoppel)]. Thus, whether specific conduct constitutes a waiver is a question of fact.

In continuing obligation contracts, a waiver of a breach up to a certain time does not necessarily preclude the promisee from asserting a subsequent breach [Bowman v. Santa Clara County (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 707, 713, 315 P.2d 67] . The court will determine whether the waiver occurred late enough to preclude a breach.

For an affirmative defense based on waiver of the breach, see § 140.136.

[1] Revocation of Offer

The offeror may revoke an offer at any time before the offeree communicates acceptance to the offeror, but not afterward [Civ. Code § 1586; Grieve v. Mullaly (1930) 211 Cal. 77, 79, 293 P. 619 ; see Ersa Grae Corp. v. Fluor Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 613, 622, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288 (communication of revocation to offeror's agent did not revoke offer when agent did not notify offeree of revocation before offeree accepted); see also CPI Builders, Inc. v. Impco Technologies, Inc. (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1174, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 851 (offeror's communication of revocation to offeror's attorney did not revoke offer when offeror's attorney did not notify offeree's attorney of revocation before offeree accepted)]. The result of the offeror's revocation before acceptance is that no contract results. For discussion of revocation of an offer before acceptance, see § 140.22[3][c]; for discussion of options supported by consideration constituting irrevocable offers, see § 140.22[3][d].

[2] Other Defenses Based on Lack of Consent

The following defenses may also be raised in an action for breach of contract, based on lack of consent:

- Consent was not freely given [see § 140.22[1]].
- Consent was not mutual [see § 140.22[2]].
- No contract was formed because the agreement was a promise or promises to agree in the future [see § 140.22[6]].

§ 140.62 Lack of Consideration

[1] No Mutuality of Obligation

In the case of a bilateral contract [see § 140.10[4]], in which promises are exchanged as consideration, the promises must be mutual in obligation, that is, both parties must have assumed some legal obligation. Without this mutuality of obligation, the agreement lacks consideration, and the parties have not created an enforceable contract. If one of the promises leaves the promisor free to perform or to withdraw from the agreement at will, the promise is illusory and provides no consideration [Mattei v. Hopper (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 119, 122, 330 P.2d 625] .

The defense of lack of mutuality of obligation [see § 140.23[4]] does not apply if either party has performed. The defense applies only to executory contracts and not to executed contracts or to unilateral contracts in general [see Asmus v. Pacific Bell (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 1, 14-15, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179, 999 P.2d 71 (mutuality of obligation principle requiring new consideration for contract termination applies to bilateral contracts only); Mutz v. Wallace (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 100, 109, 29 Cal. Rptr. 170 ; Anchor Cas. Co. v. Surety Bond Sav. & L. Ass'n (1962) 204 Cal. App. 2d 175, 182-183, 22 Cal. Rptr. 278] . For an affirmative defense asserting the lack of consideration, see § 140.142[1].

[2] Other Defenses Based on Lack of Consideration

Other defenses based on lack of consideration include:

- One party's ability to terminate the contract [see § 140.23[5]].
- One party's obligation to perform conditional on party's approval [requirements contract; see § 140.23[6]].
- Insufficient consideration [see § 140.23[7]].

The consideration and the object of a contract, that is, the thing that the party receiving the consideration agrees to do or not to do [Civ. Code § 1595], must be lawful. That a contract is illegal is a defense to an action for its breach [see, e.g., Civ. Code §§ 1596, 1607, 1677; *Homami v. Iranzadi(1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1104, 1109-1111, 260 Cal. § 140.64 Unconscionable Contract

If a court, as a matter of law, finds a contract or any clause of a contract to have been unconscionable at the time it was made, the court may do any of the following [Civ. Code § 1670.5(a); see, e.g., Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 743-745, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422 (remanding case to trial court to determine whether parties' arbitration agreement was unenforceable; agreement itself expressly provided for severance of provisions that resulted in plaintiff's claim of unconscionability)]:

- Refuse to enforce the contract [see, e.g., Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1164, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189 ; Abramson v. Juniper Networks, Inc. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 638, 668, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422 (finding entire arbitration agreement in employment contract to be void and unenforceable; because illegality and unconscionability permeated agreement, objectionable terms could not be severed); O'Hare v. Municipal Resource Consultants (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 267, 279, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 (because unconscionability permeated entire agreement, severance was not appropriate); Pardee Construction Company v. Superior Court (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1081, 1086-1087, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288 (trial court properly denied home builder's motion for appointment of judicial referee when real estate purchase agreements requiring all disputes to be submitted to judicial reference were adhesive contracts fatally infected with procedural and substantive unconscionability); Flores v. Transamerica Homefirst, Inc. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 846, 857-858, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376 (arbitration provisions in reverse mortgage agreement found to be both procedurally and substantively unconscionable; court refused to sever invalid provisions because no single provision could be stricken to remove the unconscionable taint, and lender therefore could not compel arbitration)];

- Enforce the remainder of the contract without the unconscionable clause [see Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1164, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189 ; Little v. Auto Stiegler (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1072-1074, 1076, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 (finding provision in mandatory employment arbitration agreement that permitted either party to appeal arbitration award of more than $50,000 to second arbitrator to be unconscionable, but concluding that provision could be severed and rest of agreement enforced); McManus v. CIBC World Markets Corp.

(2003) 109 Cal.App. 4th 76, 101-102, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 (unconscionable provisions requiring employee's payment of fees could be severed from arbitration agreements); Bolter v. Superior Court (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 900, 910-911, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888 (unconscionable place and manner clauses in arbitration agreement regarding forum selection, consolidation restrictions, and damages limitations found clearly severable from remainder of agreement)]; or

- Limit the application of any unconscionable clause so as to avoid an unconscionable result.

When a party claims or it appears to the court that all or any part of a contract may be unconscionable, the court must give the parties a reasonable opportunity to present evidence regarding the contract's commercial setting, purpose, and effect, to aid the court in making its determination [Civ. Code § 1670.5(b)]. For discussion of unconscionable contracts, see § 140.25; for an affirmative defense based on unconscionability, see § 140.146.

PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.83

§ 140.83 Decisions

[1] Acceptance

Oral contract consummated over telephone made when offeree utters words of acceptance. Travelers Insurance Co. v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1967) 68 Cal. 2d 7, 14-15, 64 Cal. Rptr. 440, 434 P.2d 992 ; Ledbetter Erection Corp. v. Workers' Comp. App. Bd. (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1105-1106, 203 Cal. Rptr. 396

With respect to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 written offer to compromise, policy of encouraging settlement and desirability of maintaining certainty compel conclusion that general contract principles should not apply to determining whether offer has been rejected; thus, in absence of unequivocal rejection of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer, offer may be accepted by offeree during statutory period unless revoked by offeror. Guzman v. Visalia Community Bank (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1370, 1376-1377, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581 (trial court erred in denying plaintiff's request to enforce defendant's Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer to compromise, since disparaging comment of plaintiff's counsel regarding offer did not constitute rejection)

When prospective buyer purported to accept seller's counteroffer by signing preprinted real estate form in space labeled "counter to counteroffer" and added terms in space labeled "changes/amendments," prospective buyer's response was counter-counteroffer rather than acceptance, and no contract was formed. Roth v. Malson (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 552, 557-559, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 226

[2] Attorney's Fees

Plaintiff, who was actual prevailing party, did not obtain "net monetary recovery" (which is required in order for plaintiff to be prevailing party for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 1032) because plaintiff settled with several defendants and then obtained nonjury damages award, against nonsettling defendant, in amount less than settlement proceeds; therefore, by statute, damages award against nonsettling defendant was offset by amount plaintiff received from settling defendants, resulting in take-nothing (zero damages) judgment against nonsettling defendant, to whom trial court properly awarded discretionary attorney's fees pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4). Goodman v. Lozano (2010)

47 Cal. 4th 1327, 1337-1338, Cal. Rptr. 3d , 223 P.3d 77

Plaintiff who rejects Code Civ. Proc. § 998 settlement offer that is greater than ultimate recovery may nonetheless recover preoffer costs to which it otherwise would be entitled, including preoffer attorney's fees when those fees are authorized category of recoverable costs under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1032, 1033.5. Scott Co. of California v. Blount, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1111-1112, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 979 P.2d 974

In case in which defendant was not prevailing party but whose Code Civ. Proc. § 998 settlement offer was greater than plaintiff's, defendant was entitled under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 to those costs incurred after settlement offer to which prevailing party would be entitled under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032; by operation of Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5, attorney's fees are category of cost allowable under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032 to which defendant was entitled. Scott Co. of California v. Blount, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1112-1114, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 979 P.2d 974

Judgment on property owner's claim against construction contractor for breach of warranty, based on defects in building, could not include attorney's fees for successful plaintiff because warranty, which was separate from construction contract and which property owner had acquired by assignment on purchasing property from previous owner that had erected building, did not contain attorney's fees provision, and construction contract, which did contain such provision, had not been assigned by seller. Vons Cos. v. Lyle Parks Jr., Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 823, 825-826, 835, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 562

Action for declaratory and injunctive relief to avoid enforcement of contract's arbitration provision absent order compelling arbitration was "action on a contract" for purposes of awarding attorney fees pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717; defendant was entitled to attorney's fees for successful defense in this action, notwithstanding possibility that defendant might not prevail in ensuing arbitration. Turner v. Schultz (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 974, 980-984, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 659

In action for declaratory relief, which ended with mixed results, trial court abused its discretion in denying seller's request for attorney's fees after finding that neither party achieved greater relief on contract; record indisputably showed that seller of real estate obtained greater relief on contract when trial court declared that seller had properly terminated parties' agreements based on buyer's inability to perform. Silver Creek, LLC v. BlackRock Realty Advisors, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 1537, 1541, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 864

In bank's action to recover on promissory note providing for attorney's fees, after defendant's motion for summary judgment was granted based on application of one-action rule in Code Civ. Proc. § 726, defendant was entitled to attorney's fees with respect to that successful defense against bank's breach of contract claim, even though bank succeeded on its common count for money lent and on its claim for unjust enrichment and thus was prevailing party overall. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Dintino (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 333, 355-358, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 38

Party to mediation agreement is not entitled to attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1717 when agreement is inadmissible under Evid. Code § 1115 et seq. [see Ch. 31, Mediation, § 31.13]. Rael v. Davis (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1608, 1622-1623, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 745

Defendant is not entitled to claim attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 after plaintiff has dismissed action on contract, because even though plaintiff has failed to obtain more-favorable judgment than defendant's earlier settlement offer, Code Civ. Proc. § 998 does not create independent right to attorney's fees; rather, defendant's only avenue for recovering attorney's fees is Civ. Code § 1717(a), but this path to fees is blocked by Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2), which bars any award of contractual attorney's fees when action has been voluntarily dismissed. Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Hunsberger (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1526, 1529, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 661

In action for breach of contract, if contract provides that in any litigation involving contract, prevailing party will be entitled to recover attorney's fees and costs, and if trial court grants defendant's motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction, then defendant is party prevailing on contract under Civ. Code § 1717 and is entitled to recover reasonable attorney's fees as costs, because complaint is necessarily dismissed in its entirety and thus plaintiff obtains nothing. Profit Concepts Management, Inc. v. Griffith (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 950, 952, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 396

If action is brought solely to compel arbitration of contractual dispute between parties, party who succeeds in obtaining order denying petition to compel arbitration is prevailing party in action on contract even though merits of parties' underlying contractual dispute have not yet been resolved; order denying request for costs and attorney's fees under such circumstances is appealable as special order after final judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 1294(e). Otay River Constructors v. San Diego Expressway (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 796, 799, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434

Unlawful detainer action can be either contract action or tort action, depending on facts constituting plaintiff's cause of action; if it is tort action, and tenancy was based on lease that provides for attorney's fees in sufficiently broad terms, then right to attorney's fees is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1032, not by Civ. Code § 1717. Drybread v. Chipain Chiropractic Corp. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1063, 1076-1077, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 580

When contract provides that in any action between parties, prevailing party is entitled to recover attorney's fees unless that party brought action without first attempting to mediate dispute, then seeking mediation is condition precedent to recovery of attorney's fees by party who initiates action; but if other party prevails, that party may recover attorney's fees pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717, whether or not mediation was sought by either party. Van Slyke v. Gibson (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1296, 1299-1300, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 491

Guarantors under agreement that contained attorney's fee provision were entitled to recover attorney's fees incurred to vacate domesticated out-of-state judgment; guarantors were prevailing parties, and basis of recovery was underlying contract, not judgment. Rainier National Bank v. Bodily (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 83, 86, 282 Cal. Rptr. 926

When alleged breach consisted of bank's three-year delay in turning over to borrower's trustee in bankruptcy assets of borrower that constituted bank's collateral, and delay resulted in attorney's fees in bankruptcy proceeding, fees were recoverable only in bankruptcy proceeding. Kruse v. Bank of America (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 38, 61, 248 Cal. Rptr. 217

[3] Breach of Contract

Contract action for damages was proper remedy after administrative agency unreasonably exercised its power to withhold specified contractual benefit from private entity with which agency had made contract; although agency's decision to withhold contractual benefit was discretionary decision, administrative mandamus (which agency argued was sole remedy) was not proper because agency did not make that decision after evidentiary hearing, nor was any hearing required by law; ordinary writ of mandate was not available because agency in fact made contract and acted pursuant to it; and cause of action for declaratory judgment could also be alleged in complaint for contract damages. 300 DeHaro St. Investors v. Department of Hous. & Community Dev. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1240, 1243, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 98

Pleading cause of action for specific performance and obtaining preliminary injunction restraining defendant from renting auditorium to any other entity on date reserved by plaintiff was not election of remedy barring recovery for breach of contract, when parties had stipulated to dismissal of specific performance cause of action and dissolution of preliminary injunction. Southern Christian Leadership Conference v. Al Malaikah Auditorium Co. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 207, 222-225, 281 Cal. Rptr. 216

Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.77, governing cancellation of contract under Veterans' Farm and Home Purchase Act of 1974 [

Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.50 et seq.] in event of breach, prevails over general scheme of Civil Code in expressly authorizing Department of Veterans Affairs to force forfeiture when veteran breaches Cal-Vet contract. Department of Veterans Affairs v. Duerksen (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 149, 157, 187 Cal. Rptr. 832

[4] Choice of Forum

Forum selection clause is not "defect" within meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c) governing removal from state court to federal court and providing, "a motion to remand the case on the basis of any defect other than lack of subject matter jurisdiction must be made within 30 days after the filing of the notice of removal under section 1446(a)"; therefore, motion to remand based on forum selection clause is not subject to 30-day limitation period (although district court may deny motion that is not made within reasonable time),and district court's order remanding case on basis of forum selection clause will be appealable notwithstanding 28 U.S.C. § 1447(d) providing, "an order remanding a case to the State court from which it was removed is not reviewable on appeal or otherwise." Kamm v. ITEX Corp. (9th Cir. 2009) 568 F.3d 752, 756-757

Forum selection clause giving exclusive jurisdiction to "the courts of Virginia" was construed to mean state courts only, not state and federal courts in Virginia, because it specified courts "of" Virginia (and because same clause mandated choice of law as "laws of the Commonwealth of Virginia"). Doe 1 v. AOL LLC (9th Cir. 2009) 552 F.3d 1077

Federal law governs validity of forum selection clause in diversity action; enforcement of forum selection clause is mandatory absent fraud, overreaching, or serious inconvenience. Spradlin v. Lear Siegler Management Services (9th Cir. 1991) 926 F.2d 865, 867-869

Parties contracted for sale of olive oil, to be delivered by Italian seller to California buyer, for $406,000; seller received buyer-initiated purchase order and was presented with option of completing substantial transaction with California entity in California, which required delivery of goods to California; seller opted to accept this order; on jurisdictional issue of whether seller could be sued in California, totality of facts supported finding that seller purposefully availed itself of benefits of forum; also, court concluded that it is not unreasonable to expect seller to make selection of appropriate forum in written contract before shipping $406,000 worth of goods into foreign jurisdiction, and seller's failure to make appropriate forum selection vitiated any concern that might have arisen over fairness of causing seller to face suit in California. Luberski, Inc. v. Oleificio F.LLI Amato S.R.L. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 409, 419, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 774

Plaintiff who is not party to contract will be bound by contract's forum selection clause if (1) third party is closely related to contractual relationship, and (2) contractual forum state provides suitable alternative forum for lawsuit; private plaintiff which itself suffered no injury but filed representative action under California's unfair competition law alleging that contractual provisions constituted unfair business practices was bound by contract providing that disputes would be subject to exclusive jurisdiction in New Jersey. Net2phone, Inc. v. Superior Court (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 583, 587

Contractual venue selection clause is purely intrastate issue involving selection of county in which to hold trial; clause held invalid to extent it was inconsistent with statutory venue scheme. Alexander v. Superior Court (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 723, 725-727, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 111

Provision in franchise agreement negotiated in California between California corporations, requiring any litigation under agreement to be in Florida, was enforceable when franchisor's parent, which owned all trademarks and names licensed under agreement, had its principal place of business in Florida. Lu v. Dryclean-U.S.A. of California, Inc. (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1490, 1493-1494

[5] Conditions

Whether condition precedent existed as pleaded and whether provision in ancillary agreement negated its existence were questions of fact to be resolved by trial court. MacManus v. A.E. Realty Partners (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1106, 1115, 241 Cal. Rptr. 315

When contract language is ambiguous and susceptible to two different meanings, one understood by each party, court will properly uphold contract and give it meaning attached by party who manifested meaning it attached, if that party had no reason to know of different meaning attached by other party and other party had reason to know of meaning attached by first party. Merced County Sheriff's Employees' Assn. v. County of Merced (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 662, 672-674, 233 Cal. Rptr. 519

Mutual assent is lacking if parties attach materially different meanings to their manifestations of assent and either (a) neither party knows or has reason to know meaning attached by other party or (b) each party knows or has reason to know of meaning attached by other; thus, no contract is formed if neither party is at fault or if both parties are equally at fault. Merced County Sheriff's Employees' Assn. v. County of Merced (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 662, 670, 675-676, 233 Cal. Rptr. 519

Mutual agreement to definite specifications of written building contract, including measurements of site and building and cost of construction, supported finding of valid contract. Sanders Construction Co. v. San Joaquin First Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 387, 394-395, 186 Cal. Rptr. 218

[6] Consideration

When defendants agreed to execute promissory note at time plaintiff made contribution to corporation, consideration existed for note although it was executed after plaintiff's contribution. Swanson v. Skiff (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 805, 809, 155 Cal. Rptr. 280

[7] Creation of Contract

[a] In General

Party contending that contract was conditioned on execution by all parties (and therefore was not binding on any signing party until signed by all) has burden of proving that signatures of all parties were contemplated as condition precedent to validity of contract, and failure to make that proof can leave that party bound by contract in question. Fagelbaum & Heller LLP v. Smylie (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1351, 1365, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 252

When party resisting petition to compel arbitration contends, and submits evidence supporting contention, that there was no meeting of minds as to arbitration provision in franchise agreement, court has authority to determine whether parties in fact made agreement to arbitrate. Winter v. Window Fashions Professionals, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 943, 948-949, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 89

Acceptance of deposit to reserve auditorium on specific date created contract in nature of option; although formal contract was not executed and cost figures had not been worked up, defendant was bound not to book other entity for auditorium on that date. Southern Christian Leadership Conference v. Al Malaikah Auditorium Co. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 207, 220-222, 281 Cal. Rptr. 216

Contract is "invalid" if not signed by all parties purportedly bound only when it is shown, either by parol evidence or express condition, that contract was not intended to be complete until all parties had signed; conversely, in absence of showing that contract was not intended to be complete until signed by all parties, parties who did sign it are bound. Angell v. Rowlands (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 536, 542, 149 Cal. Rptr. 574

[b] Objective Manifestations of Parties

In borrowers' action against lender alleging TILA violations and seeking rescission of loan, trial court erred in granting summary judgment to lender; essential element of loan contract, rate of interest, was not determined when terms of loan application differed from those in loan documents and agent represented that terms would be corrected; material issues as to existence and terms of contract remained. Grimes v. New Century Mortgage Corporation (9th Cir. 2003) 340 F.3d 1007, 1010-1011

In case involving sale of goods, trial court correctly instructed jury that in determining terms of parties' contract, jurors may consider all circumstances surrounding contract, including negotiations and statements of parties prior to contract; object, nature, and subject matter of contract; and subsequent acts and conduct of parties. Brittalia Ventures v. Stuke Nursery Co. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 17, 23, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 467

In dispute over whether or not employer was contractually obligated to provide employee with vested stock options, trial court erred in granting summary judgment for employer on grounds that as matter of law vesting schedule was material term in contract and parties did not reach agreement on question of vesting; existence of agreement with respect to conditions for vesting of options involved factual questions that could not be determined as matter of law due to conflicting inferences that could be drawn from words and acts of parties. Alexander v. Codemasters Group Limited (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 129, 147, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 145

Trial court erred in finding that signed "Work Authorization and Contract" containing indemnity clause on reverse was not binding contract due to absence of mutual assent; parties' course of dealings over years of using same document, despite no actual negotiation of every term, established that oral agreement to do work included terms contained in that document, which was signed at end of each work day. Marin Storage & Trucking, Inc. v. Benco Contracting and Engineering, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 1049-1051, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 645

Manifestation of willingness to enter into bargain is not offer if person to whom it is addressed knows, or has reason to know, that person making it does not intend to conclude bargain until he or she has made further manifestation of assent. Kruse v. Bank of America (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 38, 59, 248 Cal. Rptr. 217

Offeree is not bound by inconspicuous contractual provisions of which offeree was unaware and were contained in document whose contractual nature was not obvious, regardless of apparent manifestation of offeree to proposal. Windsor Mills, Inc. v. Collins & Aikman Corp. (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 987, 992-993, 101 Cal. Rptr. 347

Contract does not result when both parties understand no promise is intended. Findleton v. Taylor (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 651, 652, 25 Cal. Rptr. 439

Whether interchange of words constitutes binding contract depends on circumstances under which words were uttered, tone of voice used, and to whom they were addressed. Fowler v. Security-First Nat'l Bank (1956) 146 Cal. App. 2d 37, 47, 303 P.2d 565

[8] Defenses

Fact that party was compelled to enter into contract because of third person's refusal to deal with party is no defense to breach of contract. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. MCI Telecommunications Corp. (9th Cir. 1981) 649 F.2d 1315,

1321-1322

Excuses for nonperformance not apparent on face of contract nor embraced within facts alleged in complaint are affirmative defenses. Eucalyptus Growers Ass'n v. Orange County Nursery & Land Co. (1917) 174 Cal. 330, 335, 163 P. 45

Recission of contract is affirmative defense to be pleaded by defendant. Garratt v. Baker (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 745, 748, 56 P.2d 225 ; Stanton v. Santa Ana Sugar Co. (1927) 84 Cal. App. 206, 208-209, 257 P. 907

Defendant landowner, on being sued by real estate developer for breach of contract, could file anti-SLAPP motion because action was based on statements made and plans submitted to planning commission and city council (that is, protected activity) by defendant; however, developer made prima facie showing that land owner in fact breached contract, thus establishing probability that developer would prevail on complaint, and anti-SLAPP motion therefore was properly denied. Midland Pac. Bldg. Corp. v. King (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 264, 274-275, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 499

With respect to Code Civ. Proc. § 337 statute of limitations defense, plaintiff's out-of-state travel unrelated to interstate commerce may toll the statute pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 351; although Code Civ. Proc. § 351 impermissibly burdens interstate commerce with respect to residents who travel in the course of interstate commerce, tolling statutory periods for duration of out-of-state travel unrelated to interstate commerce does not violate commerce clause. Filet Menu, Inc. v. Cheng (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1276, 1282-1284, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 384

Dismissal of defendant's cross-complaint with prejudice did not preclude defendant from defending against complaint by introducing evidence tending to refute elements of breach of contract claim that had been generally denied by defendant. Walsh v. West County Mission Community College District (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1532, 1545-1547, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 725

Denial of "execution" puts in issue whether defendant's signature was obtained by fraud and whether instrument was delivered, but not defense of fraud in inducement or "sham transaction." FPI Development, Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 367, 401-403, 282 Cal. Rptr. 508

Defense of prematurity of action must be timely raised by defendant and is waived if not raised. State Medical Education Bd. v. Roberson (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 493, 501, 86 Cal. Rptr. 258

When plaintiff pleaded and defendant denied oral offer to do certain work, issue of whether offer had been made was raised, and whether offer was in fact made was not an affirmative defense. Leo F. Piazza Paving Co. v. Bebek & Brkich (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 226, 232, 296 P.2d 368

Defendant cannot rely on defense of estoppel unless it has been pleaded. Swanson v. Thurber (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 171, 181, 281 P.2d 642

[9] Demurrers

In action for breach of fiduciary duty, court of appeal denied plaintiff's petition for writ of mandate to compel trial court to vacate order sustaining demurrer; one contracting party's right to contingent compensation in form of percentage of future revenues in exclusive control of other contracting party does not create fiduciary relationship in otherwise arm's length business transaction. Wolf v. Superior Court (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 25, 30-31, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 860

Trial court improperly sustained defendant's demurrer in action alleging that defendant offered the domain name "golf.tv" in Internet auction, that plaintiff accepted offer by e-mail which entered highest bid, and that defendant memorialized contract by congratulatory e-mail to plaintiff entitled "E-mail invoice for domain registration"; plaintiff adequately pleaded cause of action for breach of contract. Lim v. The.TV Corp. Internat. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 684, 690-693, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 333

When express promise on which cause of action depended was alleged for first time in fourth amended complaint with no explanation for change, and record from previous demurrers made clear that plaintiff considered related duty to arise from implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, cause of action was sham, and demurrer was properly sustained without leave to amend. Amid v. Hawthorne Community Med. Group, Inc. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1383, 1387-1391, 261 Cal. Rptr. 240

In contract action, granting demurrer without leave to amend is improper if plaintiff might be able to show extrinsic circumstances indicating parties' intent, thus curing contract's uncertainty. Larwin-Southern Cal., Inc. v. JGB Inv. Co. (1979) 101 Cal. App. 3d 626, 635, 162 Cal. Rptr. 52

Demurrer is properly sustained against party attempting to circumvent doctrine barring tort action by pleading action for breach of contract. Austin v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 354, 358, 152 Cal. Rptr. 420

[10] Execution of Contracts

Addition of "Pres." after defendant's signature did not change legal effect of document as defendant's personal guaranty; to interpret document as guaranty by corporate general partner was objectively unreasonable because corporation was already liable without guaranty, and that interpretation would nullify guaranty. Home Federal Savings & L. Assn. v. Ramos (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1609, 1613-1614, 284 Cal. Rptr. 1

Director, officer, or other agent signing corporation's contract containing promise in proper form for an individual is not relieved from personal liability by addition to name of term such as "director" or "president"; these terms are merely descriptive of person rather than relationship in which person signs agreement; mere fact that person sustains agency relation to another does not prevent him or her from becoming personally liable on contract with third persons. Sebastian Int'l, Inc. v. Peck (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 803, 808, 240 Cal. Rptr. 911

[11] Failure of Consideration

Important consideration in determining if party has substantially performed is whether or not deviations are so slight that they might have been made by one who was honestly endeavoring to comply with contract. Perry v. Quackenbush (1894) 105 Cal. 299, 309, 38 P. 740

[12] Illegal Contracts

Civ. Code § 1511 is not declaration that public policy of California is not to enforce contract that would be unenforceable under laws of another jurisdiction, but is codification of private law embodying common law defense and thus does not prohibit payment of commissions illegal under law of Saudi Arabia. Northrop Corp. v. Triad Intern. Marketing S.A. (9th Cir. 1987) 811 F.2d 1265, 1270-1271

Law firm that was barred from recovering under fee-sharing agreement with another firm, due to the absence of written client consent to the agreement required by Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200, held entitled to recover from other firm in quantum meruit for reasonable value of services it rendered on client's behalf. Huskinson & Brown, LLP v. Wolf (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 453, 464, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 693, 84 P.3d 379

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200(A)(1) precluded plaintiff attorney from sharing in fees due to noncompliance with rule's written client consent requirement; attorneys who agreed to work as co-counsel on sexual harassment case were not "partners or associates" for purposes of exemption from rule; fee that parties negotiated without client's consent was not proper basis for quantum meruit award. Chambers v. Kay (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 142, 162-163, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 536, 56 P.3d 645

California courts will refuse to aid enforcement of contract illegal under Mexican law; comity is applicable when no California public policy is offended. Wong v. Tenneco, Inc. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 126, 137-138, 216 Cal. Rptr. 412, 702 P.2d 570

Noncompetition and nonsolicitation clauses in employment agreements were void and unenforceable under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, and their use violated Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. Dowell v. Biosense Webster, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 564, 574, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 (concluding also that so-called common law trade secret exception to stringent rule on covenants not to compete was probably no longer viable, but declining to decide that issue)

When contract called for plaintiff to provide range of services, some apparently requiring broker's license, which plaintiff did not have, and others seemingly not requiring license, plaintiff was entitled to go to trial on claim for compensation respecting services that did not require license. Venturi & Co. LLC v. Pacific Malibu Development Corp. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1417, 1421-1422, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 123

Contract allowing purchaser to complete purchase of four acres of unsubdivided land if, at purchaser's election, final map was recorded or purchaser "waived" recording of final map, thus allowed for sale of parcel of real property before final map had been filed, without being expressly conditioned on approval and filing of subdivision or parcel map, and that would have violated Subdivision Map Act; contract was therefore void as matter of law at time it was executed. Sixells, LLC v. Cannery Bus. Park (2008) 170 Cal. App. 4th 648, 653-654, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 235

With respect to illegal insurance contracts, Ins. Code § 700 (insurance company licensing statute) and policy behind that statute require that consumer who innocently purchases policy from company unlicensed in California may still enforce that insurance contract, even though it is illegal. Medina v. Safe-Guard Products, Internat., Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 105, 108109, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 672

No-hire provision in company's standard contract for buying various consultants' services, which bound consultant to pay damages if consultant hired any of company's employees within one year, was not enforceable because it was very broad provision covering not only solicitation by consultant but also all hiring, it applied to all of company's employees regardless of whether they worked with consultant or were even employed at time consultant rendered services, it was not necessary to protect company's legitimate interests, and it was outweighed by public policy favoring freedom of mobility for employees. VL Systems, Inc. v. Unisen, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 708, 718, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818

Although action for breach of contract was unavailing because it was based on contract that was partly illegal and consequently wholly unenforceable (in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6155, plaintiff was operating as unregistered attorney referral service), plaintiff could recover quantum meruit for lawful services (that is, services other than attorney referrals) performed pursuant to that contract; but recovery could not exceed amount that plaintiff would have recovered under that contract if it had been enforceable, and since that contract entitled plaintiff to fee only if referred lawyer won other party's case, plaintiff's quantum meruit recovery could be paid only from whatever judgment or settlement proceeds that lawyer obtained for other party. Selten v. Hyon (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 463, 471-472, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 896

Because illegal contract is void, it cannot be ratified by any subsequent act. Black Hills Invs., Inc. v. Albertson's, Inc. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 883, 896, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 263

Substantial evidence supported trial court's finding that singer's personal manager violated Talent Agencies Act by procuring performance engagements without license, rendering contracts void and barring recovery of commission; defense of illegality based on public policy not waived by failure to include it as affirmative defense. Yoo v. Robi (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1089, 1103, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 740

Agreement for establishment of plant in Iran to manufacture computer products to be sold in Iran held unenforceable as illegal and against public policy; agreement violated U.S. presidential executive orders and implementing regulations prohibiting U.S. persons from transactions relating to the supply of technology to Iran. Kashani v. Tsann Kuen China Enterprise, Ltd. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 531, 537

Contract between husband and wife providing for liquidated damages for infidelity held unenforceable because it was contrary to public policy underlying no-fault provisions for dissolution of marriage. Diosdado v. Diosdado (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 470, 474, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 494

Attorney who made case referral to another attorney had no viable contract for sharing of fees when contract did not comply with Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200, which prohibits fee-sharing unless specified conditions such as written client consent are met; policy considerations that caused enactment of Rule 2-200 for benefit of public also require that fee sharing agreement not be enforced by court of law. Margolin v. Shemaria (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 891, 903, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 502

Confidentiality clause in settlement agreement that prohibited securities customer from discussing dealer's misconduct with regulatory authorities was void and unenforceable as violation of public policy set forth in securities laws and regulations. Cariveau v. Halferty (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 126, 138, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417

Agreement by unmarried couple to grant male partner paternity rights to child conceived by artificial insemination was not against public policy, and served rather than contravened family law policies to legitimate children and provide for their support. Dunkin v. Boskey (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 171, 189-190, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 44

Sperm bank's agreement with potential parents precluding disclosure of donor's identity and other information under all circumstances was contrary to public policy and unenforceable, because Fam. Code § 7613 permits disclosure of insemination records under certain circumstances. Johnson v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1065-1067, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 864

Promise of married person to support his or her lover is unenforceable when they never lived together and sexual services were inseparable part of consideration. Taylor v. Fields (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 653, 663-665, 224 Cal. Rptr. 186

[13] Implied Contracts

No implied agreement to modify a written contract can arise from the conduct of the parties when the contract expressly requires any modification to be in writing. Warner Bros. Int'l TV Distrib. v. Golden Channels & Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 522 F.3d 1060, 1069

Implied-in-fact contract consists of obligations arising from mutual agreement and intent to promise, when agreement and promise have not been expressed in words. Silva v. Providence Hosp. of Oakland (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 762, 773, 97 P.2d 798

No contract was implied by city's adoption of resolution that created modified regulatory framework in form of subsidy for certain taxicab operators, when there was no intent to grant private rights of contract, nor any promise by city to pay for services rendered, nor any vested right of taxicab operators to receive compensation on performance. Cotta v. City and County of San Francisco (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1550, 1563, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 612

Implied contract of state is of equal dignity to express contract for purposes of prohibitions against impairment of contractual obligations. California Teachers Assn. v. Cory (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 494, 505, 202 Cal. Rptr. 611

Legislative intent to grant contractual right is implied from statute if it contains unambiguous element of exchange of consideration by private party for consideration offered by State. California Teachers Assn. v. Cory (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 494, 505

[14] Incapacity of Parties

Imposition of conservatorship without finding of incompetence does not deprive conservatee of capacity to contract. Board of Regents v. Davis (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 33, 36, 120 Cal. Rptr. 407, 533 P.2d 1047

[15] Interpretation of Contracts

[a] Contract of Adhesion

Contract of adhesion defined; because Legislature has determined that parties to real estate transaction should not rely on real estate brokers for tax advice, term in listing agreement so stating was not within reasonable expectation of seller or oppressive, and thus not adhesive. Carleton v. Tortosa (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 745, 759, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 734

[b] Duration of Contract

Unambiguous language that contract would continue until grounds arose for termination was a valid, express contractual term of duration; termination was only for cause, and not at will. Zee Medical Distributor Association, Inc. v. Zee Medical, Inc. (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1, 13-14, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 829

Under contracts that provide no fixed date for termination of promisor's obligation but condition obligation on event that necessarily implies termination, obligation is continuing until that event occurs; hence, agreement to pay percentage of billings on sales to specific accounts is construed to continue for as long as sales to those accountsare made. Lura v. Multaplex, Inc. (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 410, 414-415, 179 Cal. Rptr. 847

[c] Extrinsic Evidence to Explain Meaning of Contract

Court may interpret contract without recourse to extrinsic evidence if contract terms are unambiguous. In re Crow Winthrop Operating Partnership (9th Cir. 2001) 241 F.3d 1121, 1124 (bankruptcy court properly determined validity of change in ownership provision)

Civ. Code § 1647 requires court to consider extrinsic evidence regarding circumstances surrounding agreement's formation, and when inferences reasonably support party's interpretation, jury must test credibility of that interpretation and extrinsic evidence. Miller v. Fairchild Industries, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 498, 507-508

Summary judgment is not proper when agreement is ambiguous on its face; court must consider extrinsic evidence regarding circumstances of formation of contract and subsequent conduct of parties that supports reasonable interpretation of contract. IBEW, Local 47 v. Southern California Edison Co. (9th Cir. 1989) 880 F.2d 104, 107-108 (third-party beneficiary issue)

Trial court is required to consider proffered extrinsic evidence even if contract is not ambiguous, but evidence is admissible only if written agreement is reasonably susceptible to interpretation consistent with proffered extrinsic evidence. Barris Industries, Inc. v. Worldvision Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 875 F.2d 1446, 1450

When party contends that language of contract is ambiguous, test for admissibility of extrinsic evidence to explain meaning of contract is not whether contract appears to court to need interpreting but whether offered evidence is relevant to prove meaning to which language of instrument is reasonably susceptible; therefore, court must provisionally receive all credible evidence concerning parties' intentions, to determine whether contract language is reasonably susceptible to interpretation urged by party; and if, in light of extrinsic evidence, language is reasonably susceptible to interpretation urged, then extrinsic evidence is admitted to aid in interpreting contract. Wagner v. Columbia Pictures Indus. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 586, 589-590, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 898

Trial court erred in finding that term "gross receipts" in author's royalty contract meant only cash, and in rejecting expert extrinsic evidence that in context of entertainment industry term meant both money and value of other consideration received when not otherwise limited or defined by contract. Wolf v. Superior Court (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1343, 1346, 1354-1355, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 649

Substantial evidence supported trial court's ruling that phrase "forgiveness or discharge of debt" in contingency fee clause in attorney fee agreement was not ambiguous, and that undetermined and unrecovered claims did not constitute forgiveness or discharge of debt. Beard v. Goodrich (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1031, 1039, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 160

Parol evidence rule did not bar extrinsic evidence introduced to assist court in ascertaining intent of parties regarding ambiguity of floor flatness standard in structural concrete subcontract. Darling v. Controlled Environments Construction, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1221, 1234-1235, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 213

Trial court committed reversible error in rejecting almost all exhibits and refusing to interpret agreements to determine formula for establishing rent or to consider extrinsic evidence pertinent to issue. Southern Pacific Transportation Company v. Santa Fe Pacific Pipelines Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1232, 1245-1246, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777

Parol evidence rule did not bar extrinsic evidence introduced by third party regarding intent of parties to release. Neverkovec v. Fredericks (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 337, 350-353, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 856

When defendant made no showing that contract was ambiguous or uncertain but claimed that parties had implied agreement to delete covenants implied by statute, grant of summary judgment for defendant was error. Fidelity National Title Ins. Co. v. Miller (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1163, 1172-1173, 264 Cal. Rptr. 17

Sustaining demurrer was improper when extrinsic evidence should have been admitted to interpret contract provision. Southern Pacific Land Co. v. Westlake Farms, Inc. (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 807, 815-817

Latent ambiguity exists when language that appears to be perfectly clear is in fact susceptible to more than one reasonable interpretation; extrinsic evidence is admissible to determine existence of, and to resolve, latent ambiguity. Los Angeles City Employees Union v. City of El Monte (1985) 177 Cal. App. 3d 615, 622-623, 220 Cal. Rptr. 411

When guaranty instrument had blanks as to amount guaranteed, extrinsic evidence of intent that amount be unlimited was admissible to interpret instrument. RCA Corp. v. Hunt (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 903, 905-906, 184 Cal. Rptr. 633

[d] Implied Covenants

Same conduct that constitutes price-fixing conspiracy by consortium of purchasers under contract constitutes breach of duty of good faith imposed by State of California v. Chevron Corp. (9th Cir. 1989) 872 F.2d 1410, 1413-1414 , (considering federal and California antitrust claims and California bad faith claim)

Allegation that defendant city breached implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by preventing plaintiff entertainment production company from even submitting entertainment proposals for consideration adequately alleged breach of contract for amphitheater productions. Pasadena Live, LLC v. City of Pasadena (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1089, 1092-1094, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 233

Covenant of good faith and fair dealing not implied so as to prohibit defendant lender from doing what it was expressly permitted to do under loan agreement-withhold loan funds when conditions precedent to its performance were not fulfilled to its satisfaction; defendant had no duty to act in good faith when making determination of satisfaction; it was required only to make objectively reasonable decision. Storek & Storek, Inc. v. Citicorp Real Estate, Inc. (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 44, 55-58, 64, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 267

Implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in commercial lease and development agreement required land owner to do everything possible to accomplish purpose of lease; failure to do so was breach of implied covenant. Ocean Services Corp. v. Ventura Port Dist. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1780-1782, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 750

Implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing is not broad enough to require party, absent special circumstances such as letter of intent or acts constituting estoppel, to negotiate in good faith for modification or extension, or, once negotiations have commenced, to impose duty not to be unreasonable or not to break off negotiations for any reason or for no reason. Racine & Laramie, Ltd. v. Department of Parks & Recreation (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1026, 1034-1035, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 335

Bank signature cards executed by customer do not contain implied promise of customer to refrain from writing checks on checking accounts without sufficient funds (NSF checks). Shapiro v. United California Bank (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 256, 263, 184 Cal. Rptr. 34

[e] Implied Terms

When parties failed to agree on termination provision for oral contract under which X was to receive commission based on percentage of orders booked for procuring customer (with continuing relationship) for Y, and Y unilaterally discharged X, X was entitled to post-termination commissions for reasonable period based on quantum meruit. Watson v. Wood Dimension, Inc. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1359, 1363-1364, 257 Cal. Rptr. 816

[f] Interpretation Against Party Causing Uncertainty

Contract, even adhesion contract, is not to be construed against party causing uncertainty unless and until established rules of interpretation are unsuccessful in removing uncertainty. Mogil v. California Physicians Corp. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1030, 1040, 267 Cal. Rptr. 487

Prepayment clause was ambiguous and was construed against drafter of contract; plaintiff, who borrowed from defendant drafter, was entitled to offset prepaid interest when payment of specified sum was made in accordance with clause. Sands v. E.I.C., Inc. (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 231, 234-236, 173 Cal. Rptr. 342

[g] Reasonable Interpretation

EPA order requiring business to remediate pollution did not initiate "suit" within meaning of insurance policies and thus did not give rise to insurers' duty to defend; use of word "suit" in policies was not ambiguous, as reasonable interpretation of that term is "lawsuit" (that is, court proceeding initiated by filing of complaint), and construction that included pre-complaint notices was not reasonable. Foster-Gardner, Inc. v. National Union Fire Insurance Company (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 857, 879-880, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 107, 959 P.2d 265

[h] Several Instruments Taken Together

Partnership agreement executed before construction agreement, which authorized general partners to bind limited partnership to construction agreement, was not one with construction agreement so as to give general partners benefit of attorney's fee provision in suit by limited partners for breach of partnership agreement. Pilcher v. Wheeler (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 352, 355-357, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 533

Letter of commitment to extend permanent financing and construction loan agreement were taken together. Peterson Development Co. v. Torrey Pines Bank (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 103, 114, 284 Cal. Rptr. 367

Rule under Civ. Code § 1642 that several contracts relating to same matter are to be taken together was applicable to interpretation of transaction in which auto insurer issued separate liability policies on two of insured's three vehicles. Colonial Insurance Co. v. Montoya (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 74, 83, 228 Cal. Rptr. 833

Whether several writings compose one transaction is question of fact. Nevin v. Salk (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 331, 338, 119 Cal. Rptr. 370

[16] Mutuality of Obligation

Satisfaction clause in real estate contract did not render contract unenforceable for lack of mutuality, since promisor's duty to act in good faith was adequate consideration to support contract. Larwin-Southern Cal., Inc. v. JGB Inv. Co. (1979) 101 Cal. App. 3d 626, 640, 162 Cal. Rptr. 52

[17] Offer

[a] Generally

Licensed auto dealer's newspaper advertisement for sale of particular vehicle at specified price constituted offer that was accepted by customer's tender of the advertised price. Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 261, 271, 276, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807, 27 P.3d 702 (construing offer in light of Veh. Code § 11713.1(e), which states it is a violation of Vehicle Code for dealer to fail to sell vehicle at advertised price)

Common-law contract principles applied to contracts for sale of surplus school property under Naylor Act (former Educ. Code § 39390 et seq.); district's notice of "offer to sell" was actually only invitation to accept offers on specified terms; thus, city's responses were not acceptances and did not result in contract. City of Moorpark v. Moorpark Unified School Dist. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 921, 930-931, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 896, 819 P.2d 854

Lottery advertisements are not offers to potential purchasers to enter into unilateral contracts by buying lottery tickets; thus, potential purchaser who could not purchase ticket with chosen numbers because ticket machine malfunctioned had no cause of action against state or retailer for breach of contract. Brown v. California State Lottery Com. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1335, 1339-1340, 284 Cal. Rptr. 108

[b] Option Supported by Consideration

Letter of commitment for which fee was paid was option to addressee to obtain loan at specific term. Peterson Development Co. v. Torrey Pines Bank (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 103, 115, 284 Cal. Rptr. 367

Dual nature of option; after exercise of option, optionee is entitled to specific performance of transfer relating back to time option was given. In re Marriage of Joaquin (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1529, 1532-1533, 239 Cal. Rptr. 175

Option supported by consideration is irrevocable offer, open for prescribed period; unlike conditional or qualified acceptance in formation stage of contract, purported exercise of option that is qualified or conditional does not itself terminate option if time remains during term of option in which unauthorized qualification or condition may be removed and option may be exercised absolutely. C. Robert Nattress & Associates v. CIDCO (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 55, 66-67, 229 Cal. Rptr. 33

Although numerous decisions refer to exercise of option as acceptance of irrevocable offer, more accurate definition is that option is contract by which owner of property vests another with exclusive right to purchase property at stipulated sum within limited or reasonable period in future. C. Robert Nattress & Associates v. CIDCO (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 55, 66, 229 Cal. Rptr. 33

Right of first refusal, that is, preemptive right to purchase property on terms and conditions of offer to purchase by third person, becomes option of sorts after bona fide offer to purchase has been made to owner by third person. C. Robert Nattress & Associates v. CIDCO (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 55, 66, 229 Cal. Rptr. 33

Doctrine of substantial performance was not applicable to extend term of option to allow exercise after expiration of stated term; doctrine of relief from forfeiture under Civ. Code § 3275 was similarly unavailable to allow optionee to recover price increment under new and more costly contract that optionee was forced to negotiate because of failure to exercise option within prescribed period. Bekins Moving & Storage Co. v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 245, 251-254, 221 Cal. Rptr. 738

Option given for consideration is not permitted to be terminated without consent of optionee during period specified. Prather v. Vasquez (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 198, 204, 327 P.2d 963

[18] Oral and Written Contracts

In action for breach of real estate contract, plaintiff's successor in interest should not have been permitted to amend pleadings to conform to proof and assert claim for breach of written contract, in addition to original claim for breach of oral contract; defendants were unfairly prejudiced because plaintiff had testified at his deposition that only loan agreement between parties concerning property was oral agreement and that he had no knowledge of any agreement in nature of written lease-option; this testimony had reasonably limited focus of defendants' discovery efforts and manner in which they had prepared for trial; and at time of trial, plaintiff was deceased and so could not have been questioned on any issues relevant to alleged written lease-option agreement. Garcia v. Roberts (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 900, 913, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 286

Oral modification of written contract is valid executed oral agreement when promisee performs according to oral terms and gives valid consideration for new agreement by relinquishing right to certain benefits under original written agreement. Sanders Construction Co. v. San Joaquin First Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 387, 396-397, 186 Cal. Rptr. 218

Letter from one party reminding other party of terms of orally made agreement is not sufficient to bring contract within statute of limitations for written contracts. Citizens Cas. Co. v. Otis Clark & Co. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 294, 299-300, 96 Cal. Rptr. 838

[19] Parol Evidence Rule

Bankruptcy court did not err in precluding introduction of parol evidence to interpret settlement agreement; provision was not reasonable susceptible to meaning offered. In re Bennett (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 1059, 1064-1065

Termination of underlying breach of contract and fraud action in favor of defendant based on parol evidence rule satisfied favorable termination element of that party's subsequent malicious prosecution claim. Casa Herrera, Inc. v. Beydoun (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 336, 339, 349, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 97, 83 P.3d 497

Parol evidence was not available to explain meaning of written agreement that did not, on its face, clearly provide for compounding of interest by securities broker on customer debit-balance accounts. McConnell v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 816, 191 Cal. Rptr. 458, 662 P.2d 916

Insured was entitled to submit parol evidence to support her interpretation of ambiguous health insurance policy term governing age rating. Kavruck v. Blue Cross of California (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 773, 782-784, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 152

Parol evidence rule did not constitute defense or bar to claim based on Civ. Code § 1770(14) (Consumer Legal Remedies Act); however, rule barred evidence of oral misrepresentations in fraud cause of action when auto lease was not reasonably susceptible to interpretation consistent with those representations. Wang v. Massey Chevrolet (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 856, 870, 877, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770)

Contract that was integrated and in unambiguous terms required only notice for termination was not on its face reasonably susceptible of good cause requirement; because plaintiff offered no extrinsic evidence indicating contract was susceptible of such a meaning, parol evidence was not admissible to prove terms of contract. Bionghi v. Metropolitan Water District of Southern California (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1369, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 388

Parol evidence was admissible to show creation of new agreement at termination of written agreement rather than to alter written agreement; admission of evidence was necessary to resolve ambiguity of written agreement. Girard v. Ball (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 772, 785-786, 178 Cal. Rptr. 406

[20] Performance

[a] Equitable Estoppel

Equitable estoppel was not available to bar collection of prepayment penalty when collection agent mistakenly accepted payoff from note maker's agent without penalty and maker's agent knew of clear penalty language in note. Sanguansak v. Myers (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 117-118, 223 Cal. Rptr. 490

Equitable estoppel was applicable to estop payee from asserting maker's liability on note after maker did what payee instructed maker to do in response to maker's request that payee accept third person's payoff andrelinquish its security interest. San Diego Credit Union v. Smith (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 919, 922-923, 222 Cal. Rptr. 467

Civ. Code § 1606, which provides that moral obligation may be sufficient consideration, was not applicable to revive obligation that payee was equitably estopped from asserting, thus extension agreement was not binding on maker. San

Diego Credit Union v. Smith (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 919, 923-924, 222 Cal. Rptr. 467

[b] Joint Obligors

Performance by one of several joint obligors extinguishes liability of all. Los Angeles National Bank v. Vance (1908) 9 Cal. App. 57, 59, 98 P. 58

[c] Offer of Performance

Neither Civ. Code § 1501 (waiver of inadequacies of tendered performance if no objection made at time of tender) nor Code Civ. Proc. § 2076 (same) prohibited collection of prepayment penalty after collection agent mistakenly accepted payoff from note maker's agent without penalty; Civ. Code § 1501 and Code Civ. Proc. § 2076 apply to intentional failures to demand proper tender. Sanguansak v. Myers (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 115-117, 223 Cal. Rptr. 490

[d] Time of Performance

Civ. Code §§ 9 and 11, stating that whenever legal or contractual act is required to be performed on holiday, it may be performed on next business day without any adverse consequence, do not apply to national bank's credit card payment due dates because those state laws are preempted by federal law stating that national bank may make non-real-estate loans without regard to state law limitations concerning terms of credit, including schedule for repayment of principal and interest and payments due [12 C.F.R. § 7.4008(d)(2)(iv)]. Miller v. Bank of Am. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 980, 982, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 723

Code Civ. Proc. § 12a, which extends time to perform act to next non-holiday if performance falls due on Saturday or other holiday, does not apply to acts governed solely by contractual provisions; that section, therefore, did not extend time in which tenants could exercise option to extend lease when act fell due on Saturday but was performed on Monday. Gans v. Smull (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 985, 990

Time is not of essence of contract unless it is so declared. Baypoint Mortgage Corp. v. Crest Premium Real Estate etc. Trust (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 818, 825-826, 214 Cal. Rptr. 531

When only reasonable inference was that parties intended covenant to be effective immediately, time for performance of covenant not to compete contained in option contract commenced on execution and delivery of option contract, not on exercise of option. Hoover Community Hotel Development Corp. v. Thomson (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 1130, 1139, 213 Cal. Rptr. 750

[21] Personal Service Contracts

That hospital had contract with law enforcement agencies to provide care to crime victims was not sufficient to give rise to personal service contract between rape victim and hospital. Brownfield v. Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 405, 411-412, 256 Cal. Rptr. 240

[22] Promissory Estoppel as Substitute for Consideration

Dismissal of promissory estoppel claim affirmed; alleged representations did not constitute actionable promises because they were too vague and indefinite to be enforceable. Glen Holly Entm't Inc. v. Tektronix Inc. (9th Cir. 2003) 352 F.3d 367, 381

Doctrine of promissory estoppel applied (although fitting circumstances imperfectly) to public contract context; lowest responsible bidder wrongfully denied public contract had cause of action for monetary damages against public entity; damages included bid preparation costs but not lost profits. Kajima/Ray Wilson v. Los Angeles MTA (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 305, 315-317, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747

Doctrine of promissory estoppel is essentially equitable in nature, developed to provide remedy not generally available in courts of law before 1850; consequently neither party is entitled to jury trial as matter of right. C & K Engineering Contractors v. Amber Steel Co. (1978) 23 Cal. 3d 1, 8, 11, 151 Cal. Rptr. 323, 587 P.2d 1136

Doctrine of promissory estoppel will not apply when promise of sufficient definitiveness and clarity is not found. Lange v. TIG Ins. Co. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1179, 1186-1187, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 39

Party asserting promissory estoppel is required to establish that injury resulted from reliance on promise. Thomson v. International Alliance of Stage Employees (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 446, 454, 42 Cal. Rptr. 785

[23] Termination

[a] Generally

When parties failed to agree on termination provision for oral contract under which X was to receive commission based on percentage of orders booked for procuring customer (with continuing relationship) for Y, and Y unilaterally discharged X, X was entitled to post-termination commissions for reasonable period based on quantum meruit. Watson v. Wood Dimension, Inc. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1359, 1363-1364, 257 Cal. Rptr. 816

[b] Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

Author-publisher relationship did not warrant tort damages for bad faith breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing when author had published many works, bargaining positions were equal, and motive for entering contract was profit. Denholm v. Houghton Mifflin Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 912 F.2d 357, 361-362 (diversity case applying California law)

Cause of action for breach of implied covenant was duplicative of cause of action for breach of contract when it relied on same acts and sought same damages, and thus could be disregarded. Bionghi v. Metropolitan Water District of Southern California (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1370, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 388 , citing Careau & Co. v. Security Pacific Business Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1395, 272 Cal. Rptr. 387 , below

Cause of action for breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing is not stated in absence of valid contract to which covenant applies. Pacific States Enterprises, Inc. v. City of Coachella (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1414, 1425, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 68

When plaintiff has not pleaded any basis for recovery of anything other than ordinary contract damages, claim of tortious breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing is simply duplicative of contract cause of action and may be disregarded. Careau & Co. v. Security Pacific Business Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1392, 1395, 272 Cal. Rptr. 387

Allegation that parties had special relationship is sufficient to allow amendment to add cause of action for tortious breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. Kittredge Sports Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1045, 1048, 261 Cal. Rptr. 857

On rescission of contract, all rights under contract are extinguished, including right to bring action for tortious breach of contract. Imperial Cas. and Indem. Co. v. Sogomonian (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 169, 184-185, 243 Cal. Rptr. 639

Implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing arises on formation of contract; thus, precontract conduct does not support tort action for breach of covenant. Hess v. Transamerica Occidental Life Ins. Co. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 941, 945, 235 Cal. Rptr. 715

[c] Negligence

Although contract may create duty whose breach is negligence, contract between physician and hospital did not impose duty on hospital to keep report of peer review committee confidential; thus, no cause of action for negligence arose from disclosure to affiliated health insurer. Amid v. Hawthorne Community Medical Group, Inc. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1383, 1392, 261 Cal. Rptr. 240

[24] Third-Party Beneficiary

[a] In General

Understanding by promisor that promisee had intent to benefit third person is sufficient to bring third-party action under contract. Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 590-591, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685

Record on appeal, after trial court granted defense motion for summary judgment, disclosed existence of triable issue of fact on question of whether plaintiff was intended third-party beneficiary of short-term residential lease between defendant landlord and plaintiff's employer. Spinks v. Equity Residential Briarwood Apartments (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1004, 1025-1030, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 453

Third-party beneficiary has no standing to rescind contract. Schauer v. Mandarin Gems of California, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 949, 957-958, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 233

Third party may qualify as beneficiary under contract when contracting parties must have intended to benefit third party and intent appears from the terms of the contract, as determined by reading the contract as a whole in light of the circumstances under which it was made. Burnett v. Chimney Sweep (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1057, 1070, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 562 ; Johnson v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1064, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 864

Test for determining whether contract was made for benefit of third person is whether that intent appears from terms of contract; if those terms necessarily require promisor to confer benefit on third person, contract contemplates that benefit and parties are presumed to have intended it. *Prouty v. PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLISTS

§ 140.90 Plaintiff's Checklist for Action for Damages

NOTE:

Illustrative Procedures. This checklist is for use by the plaintiff in an action for damages for breach of contract. It is illustrative of procedures commonly used. A given case may require procedures not set forth here.

[1] Ascertain Relevant Facts

☐ Facts relating to the plaintiff:

☐ Capacity of the plaintiff (e.g., minor, adult, trustee, conservator, guardian, executor, partnership, domestic corporation, foreign corporation).

☐ Additional facts as desired, relating to the plaintiff's stability and financial solvency (e.g., employment status, prior residences, credit, bank, and personal references).

☐ Facts relating to the defendants:

☐ Name and address of each potential defendant, including all parties to the contract and, depending on the case, their:

☐ Capacity of each potential defendant (e.g., minor, adult, trustee, conservator, guardian, executor, partnership, domestic corporation, foreign corporation).

PRACTICE TIP:

When the defendant is the state or a local public entity, the plaintiff must follow the claim procedure prescribed in Gov. Code § 810 et seq., the Government Claims Act (Tort Claims Act) [City of Stockton v. Superior Court (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 730, 734, 737-740, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 295, 171 P.3d 20 ; see § 140.55[5]].

☐ Facts relating to the cause of action:

☐ Description of the plaintiff's obligations under the contract, or, if the plaintiff is a third-party beneficiary, assignee, etc., the obligations of the other party to the contract.

☐ Whether these were the original obligations of the parties; if the original obligations have been altered or modified, when, where, and in what respect.

☐ What precisely the defendant failed or refused to do.

PRACTICE TIP:

Strategic Use of Defendant's Statements. Reasons, if any, the defendant gave for failing or refusing to perform may suggest possible defenses the defendant could raise in the breach of contract action and the kind of action the plaintiff should bring. For example, the defendant's statements may indicate that the plaintiff should sue for reformation of the contract, if the contract does not clearly reflect the intention of the parties, and for breach of the contract as reformed, or for declaratory relief if the parties dispute the meaning of an ambiguous provision in the contract.

☐ What the plaintiff said or did in response to the defendant's failure or refusal to perform, possibly indicating grounds for the defendant to raise affirmative defenses of waiver, estoppel, rescission of the contract, or others.

☐ Whether there have there been any other disputes between the parties arising out of the contract, what they were, and whether they led to litigation.

[2] Obtain Relevant Documents

☐ The contract, if it is in writing, including all documents that collectively make up the contract.

NOTE:

A written contract can be wholly or partially in electronic form, or one or more of the parties can execute the contract by some type of electronic signature [see Civ. Code § 1633.1 et seq.]. For discussion of electronic contracts and signatures, see § 140.22[7]. When this is the case, printouts of the relevant electronic documents should be made, and the originals should be preserved.

☐ Actual or purported written modifications or alterations of the contract.

☐ Memoranda or written communication between the parties relating to performance or nonperformance of the contract.

[3] Make Preliminary Determinations

☐ Capacity of the plaintiff to sue, which may be governed by specific statutes for certain plaintiffs:

☐ Executor, administrator, or trustee, who may sue without joining persons for whose benefit they are prosecuting the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 369].

☐ Married person [see Code Civ. Proc. § 370].

☐ Minor, incompetent person, or person for whom a conservator has been appointed, who, in each instance, lacks capacity to sue and must appear by a guardian, conservator of the estate, or guardian ad litem [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a)].

☐ Causes of action and counts, which may be or include:

Marden (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 703, 708, 227 P.2d 10* ; for further discussion, procedures, and forms for use in actions for reformation of contracts, see Ch. 488, Reformation of Instruments].

☐ Cancellation [see Civ. Code § 3412] and any monetary relief necessary to do complete equity between the parties [*Matlin v. Crescent Commercial Corp. (1949) 93 Cal. ☐ Unilateral rescission and restitution [see Civ. Code §§ 1689(a), 1691] if any of the following is satisfied [Civ. Code § 1689(b); for discussion, procedures, and forms for use in an action for restitution based on rescission, see Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution]:

☐ The consent of the party rescinding, or of any party jointly contracting with the rescinding party, was given by mistake, or obtained through duress, menace, fraud, or undue influence, exercised by or with the connivance of the party as to whom the party rescinds, or of any other party to the contract jointly interested with such party; or

☐ The consideration for the obligation of the rescinding party, before rendered to that party, fails in a material respect from anycause; or

☐ The contract is unlawful for causes that do not appear in its terms or conditions, and the parties are not equally at fault; or

☐ Unilateral rescission pursuant to any statute authorizing rescission [see Civ. Code § 1689(b)(7)], including:

☐ Civ. Code § 39 (contracts by incompetent persons before incompetence judicially determined).

☐ Civ. Code § 1533 (grounds for rescission by creditor).

☐ Civ. Code § 1566 (rescission on ground that consent was not free).

☐ Civ. Code § 1930 (rescission by letter when hirer uses thing let for purpose other than purpose for which it was hired).

☐ Civ. Code § 2314 (rescission of ratification of agency).

☐ Declaratory relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060; Fagerstedt v. Continental Ins. Co. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 370, 372, 72 Cal.Rptr. 126 ; for discussion, procedures, and forms for use in actions for declaratory relief, see Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief].

☐ Specific performance [see Civ. Code § 3384 et seq.], provided all the following conditions are satisfied, unless a statute makes specific performance unavailable [see Civ. Code §§ 3390, 3391; for discussion, procedures, and forms for use in actions for specific performance, see Ch. 528, Specific Performance].

☐ The terms of the contract are complete and certain in all particulars essential to its enforcement, and the agreement contains all the material terms expressed in a reasonably definite manner [Lawrence v. Shutt (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 749, 761, 75 Cal. Rptr. 533 ; White Point Co. v. Herrington (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 458, 465, 73 Cal. Rptr. 885] ; and

☐ The plaintiff has fully and fairly performed all conditions precedent on plaintiff's part to the obligation of the other party, or the plaintiff has partially failed to perform, but the failure was either entirely immaterial or capable of being fully compensated [Civ. Code § 3392]; and

☐ The contract is fair and reasonable as to the defendant [Civ. Code § 3391(2)]; and

☐ The defendant received adequate consideration [Civ. Code § 3391(1)]; and

☐ The defendant's assent was not obtained by misrepresentation [Civ. Code § 3391(3)] or under the influence of mistake [Civ. Code § 3391(4)]; and

☐ The remedy at law (damages) would be inadequate [Morrison v. Land (1915) 169 Cal. 580, 586, 147 P. 259 ; see also Wilkison v. Wiederkehr (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 822, 832-833, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 631 (plaintiff could not maintain action for quasi-specific performance when he had adequate legal remedy in form of claim for damages)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Injunction as Alternative or Additional Relief. An injunction may be sought as an alternative or additional remedy to an action for breach of contract if the contract would be specifically enforceable. Suing for an injunction does not waive the plaintiff's right to assert a claim for damages in a subsequent action [Ahlers v. Smiley (1912) 163 Cal. 200, 206, 124 P. 827] . For discussion, procedures, and forms for use in obtaining injunctive relief, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

PRACTICE TIP:

Tort Action Against Interfering Third Person in Lieu of Contract Action. If one purposely and wrongfully induces another not to perform a contract by an act either unlawful in itself, such as libel, slander, fraud, physical violence, or threats of such an action [Elsbach v. Mulligan (1943) 58 Cal. App. 2d 354, 366, 136 P.2d 651] , or lawful in itself but not justified, in that the breach was not induced to protect an interest that has greater social value than insuring the stability of the contract [Imperial Ice Co. v. Rossier (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 33, 35, 112 P.2d 631] , a party to the contract who is aggrieved may bring an action against the party that induced the breach. For discussion and forms for use in an action for unlawful interference with a contractual relationship, see Ch. 565, Unlawful Competition .

☐ Determine whether another state's law might govern interpretation of the contract, based on:

☐ The contract's choice of law provision [see Gamer v. DuPont GloreForgan, Inc. (1976) 65 Cal. App. 3d 280, 286-287, 135 Cal. Rptr. 230 ; see also Frame v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 668, 673, 97 Cal. Rptr. 811 (contracting parties may specify what law is to control contract if enforcement of contract in accordance with specified foreign law does not result in evasion of settled public policy or statute of California protecting its citizens); but see Hall v. Superior Court (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 411, 416-417, 197 Cal. Rptr. 757 (agreement designating foreign law will not be given effect if it would violate strong California public policy or result in evasion of statute protecting California citizens)]; or

☐ The respective interests of the states or other jurisdictions involved (governmental interest approach) [Hurtado v. Superior Court (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 574, 579-580, 114 Cal. Rptr. 106, 522 P.2d 666] , considering the following factors:

☐ Character of the contract and purposes of the contract law under consideration [Dixon Mobile Homes, Inc. v. Walters (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 964, 972-973, 122 Cal. Rptr. 202] , disapproved on other grounds in Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 815 n.18, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109 ;

☐ Where the parties entered into the contract [see Henderson v. Superior Court (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 583, 592-593, 142 Cal. Rptr. 478] ;

☐ Where the negotiations for the contract took place;

☐ Where the contract was performed or was to be performed [see Henderson v. Superior Court (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 583, 592-593, 142 Cal. Rptr. 478] ;

☐ Where the subject matter of the contract was located;

☐ Domiciles, residences, places of business, and places of incorporation of the parties;

☐ Nationality of the parties;

☐ If any payments were made, where they were initiated;

☐ If a loan was involved, where the security for the loan was located;

☐ Determine if case is a limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1) (amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less)].

☐ If the action is a limited civil case, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b)].

[4] Prepare the Complaint

☐ Draft essential allegations:

☐ Capacity or residence of the plaintiff (generally optional, unless plaintiff is suing in a representative capacity or it is necessary to establish the plaintiff's right to maintain the action).

☐ Name, capacity, and residence of the defendant or each defendant. See the form in § 140.101[1] (Paragraph 1).

☐ Fictitious name allegations, if appropriate. See the form in § 140.101[1] (Paragraph 2). For other forms of fictitious name allegations, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used .

☐ If the defendant's performance is conditioned on an event, the happening of the event on which the obligation depends.

☐ Plaintiff's performance of all conditions, covenants, and promises under the contract on plaintiff's part to be performed (or the excuse for nonperformance). See the form in § 140.101[1] (Paragraph 5).

☐ Plaintiff's damages as a result of the defendant's breach. See the form in § 140.101[1] (Paragraph 8).

☐ If the meaning of the contract is at issue, the meaning the plaintiff ascribed to the contract and the particular customs and usages relating to the contract.

☐ Format, typing, paper, and style requirements are prescribed in the California Rules of Court. For discussion, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints .

☐ Copies to be prepared include:

[2] Use of Form

This form is a complaint that may be used in any action for breach of contract. It consists of the Judicial Council contract complaint with an attached Judicial Council breach of contract cause of action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.12; Cal. Rules of Ct., 1.45; Judicial Council Forms PLD-C-001, PLD-C-001(1)].

Use of these forms is optional [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.12; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.45]. For discussion and forms for complaints that can be used in lieu of the Judicial Council forms, see §§ 140.101 -140.106.

For reproduction and discussion of the Judicial Council form for a cause of action for common counts [Judicial Council Form PLD-C-001(2)], see Ch. 121, Common Counts, § 121.50. If a fraud cause of action is being asserted in conjunction with the breach of contract claim, Judicial Council Form PLD-C-001(3) may be attached. For an illustration of the latter form, see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.90.

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Filling Out Contract Complaint Form

[a] Heading

Counsel should fill in the name, address, and telephone number of the attorney for the plaintiff, the name, post office and street address of the court, and the names of the plaintiff and the defendant. The appropriate box should be checked and the number completed if the complaint is filed against defendants unknown at the time of filing. In addition, counsel should check the appropriate box to designate the pleading as a complaint or a cross complaint.

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)].

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the paper must state whether or not the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b)]. The statement regarding the demand must use the following language: "Amount demanded _____ [exceeds or does not exceed] $10,000" [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")]. The caption of the Judicial Council form contains space for the preceding information, as well as a box that may be checked if the action is being reclassified as a limited or unlimited civil case as the result of filing of the form as an amended complaint or cross-complaint.

[b] Number of Pages (Paragraph 2)

The blank with the number of pages contained in the pleading, including attachments and exhibits, must be filled in.

[c] Action Involving Installment or Automotive Sales or Consumer Obligations (Paragraph 6)

The appropriate boxes in Paragraph 6 must be checked when the action is subject to the provisions of the Unruh Retail Installment Act [see Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.] or the Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act [see Civ. Code § 2981 et seq.]. If the action arises from an offer or provision of goods, services, loans or extensions of credit intended primarily for personal, family or household use, other than an obligation described in Civ. Code §§ 1812.10 or 2984.4, or arises from a transaction consummated as a proximate result of either an unsolicited telephone call made by a seller engaged in the business of consummating transactions of that kind or a telephone call or electronic transmission made by the buyer or lessee in response to a solicitation by the seller, then Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b) applies [see Fontaine v. Superior Court (CashCall, Inc.) (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 830, 838-840, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 607 (statute applies to action by or against consumer, and if any defendant in consumer's action is individual, that is irrelevant to application of statute)], and the plaintiff should check the first box and insert "Code of Civil Procedure Section 395(b)" in lieu of the printed alternatives [see Code Civ. Proc. § 396a(a)].

In any action under these provisions, the plaintiff must file an affidavit (or declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) concurrently with the complaint, stating facts showing that the action has been commenced in the proper court for the trial of the action, and that the action is subject to the provisions of Civ. Code § 1812.10 or Civ. Code § 2984.4 or Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b). When the plaintiff files an affidavit or declaration with the complaint, plaintiff must serve a copy with the summons [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10(c), 2984.4(c); Code Civ. Proc. § 396a(a)]. In lieu of an affidavit or declaration, the plaintiff may state the required facts in a complaint verified by the oath of the plaintiff or plaintiff's attorney [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10(c), 2984.4(c); Code Civ. Proc. § 396a(a)]. In cases subject to Civ. Code § 1812.10 or Civ. Code § 2984.4, however, the plaintiff may not state facts on information or belief when they are stated in a verified complaint [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10(c), 2984.4(c)].

If the plaintiff fails to file an affidavit or declaration or state the required facts in a verified complaint, there may be no further proceedings. The court must, on its own motion or the motion of a party, dismiss the action without prejudice. The court, however, on such terms as may be just, may permit the plaintiff to file an affidavit or declaration after the complaint. In that case, the plaintiff must serve a copy of the affidavit on the defendant. The defendant's time to answer orotherwise plead dates from the service [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10(c), 2984.4(c); see Code Civ. Proc. § 396a(a)].

For further discussion, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used , Ch. 89 Automobiles: Sales and Financing Under the Rees-Levering Act , and Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales .

[d] Venue (Paragraph 7)

Paragraph 7 provides allegations relating to venue of the action, which may be determined by the following rules:

- Subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b) (see the next rule), if a defendant has contracted to perform an obligation in a particular county, the superior court in the county where the obligation is to be performed, or where the contract in fact was entered into, or where the defendant or any defendant resides at the commencement of the action, is a proper court for the trial of an action founded on that obligation, and the county where the obligation is incurred is the county where it is to be performed, unless there is a special contract in writing to the contrary [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)].

- In an action arising from an offer or provision of goods, services, loans, or extensions of credit intended primarily for personal, family, or household use, other than an obligation described in Civ. Code §§ 1812.10 or 2984.4 (see the next rule), or in an action arising from a transaction consummated as a proximate result of either an unsolicited telephone call made by a seller engaged in the business of consummating transactions of that kind or a telephone call or electronic transmission made by the buyer or lessee in response to a solicitation by the seller, the superior court in the county where the buyer or lessee in fact signed the contract, or where the buyer or lessee resided at the time the contract was entered into, or where the buyer or lessee resides at the commencement of the action, is the proper court for the trial of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b); see Fontaine v. Superior Court (CashCall, Inc.) (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 830, 838-840, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 607 (statute applies to action by or against consumer, and if any defendant in consumer's action is individual, that is irrelevant to application of statute)].

- Venue provisions relating to an action under the Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act [Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.; see Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales] or the Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act [Civ. Code § 2981 et seq.; see Ch. 89, Automobiles: Sales and Financing Under the Rees-Levering Act] are set out in Civ. Code §§ 1812.10(a) and 2984.4(a).

- A corporation or association may be sued in the county where the contract is made or is to be performed, or where the obligation or liability arises, or where the breach occurs, or where the principal place of business of the corporation or association is situated [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5].

[e] Causes of Action Attached (Paragraph 8)

Counsel should check the appropriate box in Paragraph 8 for each cause of action attached. The form contains specific boxes for breach of contract and common counts, and a general category labeled "Other." "Other" may include a Judicial Council approved cause of action form or a form prepared by counsel for a cause of action for which the Judicial Council has not yet approved a form [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.45(b), (c)]. Counsel should specify the title of the cause of action when checking "Other."

[f] Other Allegations (Paragraph 9)

Paragraph 9 provides space for other allegations. This space may be used for stating facts that do not fit within one of the specified paragraphs.

[g] Prayer (Paragraph 10)

In Paragraph 10, counsel should check the appropriate boxes for requesting damages, interest on damages, and attorney's fees. When plaintiff requests damages, counsel should fill in the amount. When attorney's fees are requested, counsel should check the "attorney fees" box and fill in a specific amount, or check the box asking for fees according to proof. Counsel should check "Other" and state the relief requested when seeking relief not specified on the form.

When seeking prejudgment interest from the date of breach at a rate stipulated by the contract [see Civ. Code § 3289(a)], counsel should insert the stipulated rate, state the date of breach, and check all three boxes. If the contract does not stipulate a legal rate of interest, the obligation bears interest at 10 percent per year after the breach [Civ. Code § 3289(b)] (except note secured by deed of trust on real property). Counsel should specify 10 percent per year, state the date of breach, and check all three boxes. When seeking prejudgment interest on damages not certain at the time of filing the complaint, and if the parties entered into the contract before 1986 and the contract contains no provision for interest on damages following a breach, counsel should check the first two boxes on the line referring to interest.

When seeking prejudgment interest at the legal rate from the date damages were certain or capable of being made certain [see Civ. Code § 3287(a)], counsel should insert the date damages became certain, substitute "legal rate" for "rate of _____ percent per year," and check all three boxes [see Civ. Code § 3302 (detriment caused by breach of obligation to pay money only is amount due with interest)].

[h] Pleading on Information and Belief (Paragraph 11)

If plaintiff alleges any matters on information and belief, counsel should check the box for Paragraph 11 and specify the appropriate paragraph numbers. Allegations as to matters peculiarly within the defendant's knowledge, which the plaintiff can learn only from statements made by the defendant to others, may properly be based on information and belief. The plaintiff may not allege on information and belief facts presumptively within plaintiff's knowledge [Hall v. James (1926) 79 Cal. App. 433, 435-436, 249 P. 876 ; Seamen's Bank v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1485, 1495, 236 Cal. Rptr. 31] , such as facts that are public record [People v. Birch Securities Co. (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 703, 708, 196 P.2d 143].

[4] Filling Out Breach of Contract Attachment

[a] Heading

Counsel should fill in the breach of contract cause of action heading with the short title of the case and the number of the cause of action. In addition, counsel should fill in the page number of the cause of action and check the appropriate box stating whether the cause of action is attached to a complaint or cross complaint.

[b] Nature of Contract (Paragraph BC-1)

Counsel should specify the plaintiff's name, the date the parties made the contract, the parties to the agreement, and the nature of the contract. The form contains boxes to indicate whether the contract was written, oral, or other. If counsel selects the "other" box, counsel should specify the type of agreement involved, such as an implied contract. The defendant may object by demurrer or answer to a complaint founded on a contract when defendant cannot ascertain from the complaint whether the contract iswritten, oral, or implied by conduct [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(g)].

Counsel should also check a box indicating that a copy of the agreement is attached as Exhibit A, or that the essential terms are stated in an attachment (Attachment BC-1) or specified in the space following Paragraph BC-1. Apparently, an attachment should be used when the essential terms cannot be alleged within the space provided on the form. All attachments to the cause of action must have numbers that correspond to the form's appropriate paragraph number.

Counsel should specify the dates of breach and the defendant's acts in breach of the contract [see Reichert v. General Ins. Co. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 822, 830, 69 Cal. Rptr. 321, 442 P.2d 377] in the space provided in Paragraph BC-2 or in an attachment labeled Attachment BC-2. Counsel should set out the facts showing the defendant's breach in an attachment to Paragraph BC-2 when the complaint form does not contain sufficient space.

A complaint based on breach of a contract to pay a sum of money must allege nonpayment of the money to state a cause of action [Davanay v. Eggenhoff (1872) 43 Cal. 395, 397 ; Marshall v. Von Zumwalt (1953) 120 Cal. App. 2d 807, 810, 262 P.2d 363] , superseded by statute as stated in 178 Cal. App. 4th 506 (2009) .

[d] Performance of Conditions Precedent (Paragraph BC-3)

Counsel need not state facts showing performance of conditions precedent in a contract. The form may state generally, as in Paragraph BC-3, that the plaintiff duly performed all conditions on plaintiff's part. If defendant controverts the allegation, however, the plaintiff must establish at the trial the facts showing performance [Code Civ. Proc. § 457]. To recover actual damages, the plaintiff must prove that but for the defendant's breach, the plaintiff would have had the ability to perform [Ersa Grae Corp. v. Fluor Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 613, 625, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288 ; see McDorman v. Moody (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 136, 140-141, 122 P.2d 639 ; Dickey v. Kuhn (1930) 106 Cal. App. 300, 303-304, 289 P. 242] .

[e] Plaintiff's Damages (Paragraph BC-4)

The complaint must specify the damages proximately caused by the defendant's breach [see Reichert v. General Ins. Co. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 822, 830, 69 Cal. Rptr. 321, 442 P.2d 377] . The plaintiff's damages may be stated in the space on the cause of action form for Paragraph BC-4 or in an attachment labeled Attachment BC-4.

An essential element of a cause of action for breach of contract is the sustaining of damages. The plaintiff is entitled to recover nominal damages for breach of contract, since the defendant's failure to perform a contractual duty is by itself a legal wrong that is fully distinct from the actual damages [Sweet v. Johnson (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 630, 632, 337 P.2d 499] .

Unless a statute specifically provides otherwise, the proper measure of damages for breach of contract is the amount that will compensate the plaintiff for all the detriment proximately caused by the breach or that, in the ordinary course of things, would be likely to result from the breach [Civ. Code § 3300; see generally Civ. Code § 3300 et seq. (damages in action based on breach of contract); Civ. Code § 3287 et seq. (interest as damages)].

[f] Attorney's Fees (Paragraph BC-5)

Counsel may check the box in Paragraph BC-5 stating that the plaintiff is entitled to attorney's fees by agreement or by statute. Except as provided by statute, the measure and mode of compensation of attorneys is left to the express or implied agreement of the parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021].

When the contract specifically provides that attorney's fees and costs incurred to enforce the provisions of the contract will be awarded to one of the parties or to the prevailing party, in an action for breach of the contract, the party determined to be the prevailing party, whether that party is the party specified in the contract or not, is entitled to reasonable attorney's fees in addition to other costs [Civ. Code § 1717(a); see Scott Co. of California v. Blount, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1108-1109, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 979 P.2d 974] (although contract's attorney fees provision was unilateral, giving only defendant and not plaintiff right to attorney fees, Civ. Code § 1717 rendered provision mutual, giving prevailing party right to attorney fees on any claims based on contract); International Billing Services,

Inc. v. Emigh (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1175, 1182-1183, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 532 (employees were entitled to attorney fees under reciprocity statute, Civ. Code § 1717, notwithstanding fact that employment agreement fee provision contained following atypical language: "You promise to reimburse Company for any legal fees, liability, or loss which Company incurs as a result of any unauthorized disclosure or use of Confidential Information by You"); Sears v. Baccaglio (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1136, 1154-1155 (reviewing legislative history of Civ. Code § 1717 and finding that party can fail to recover net monetary judgment and still prevail for purposes of collecting fees in action founded on contract); see also Gilbert v. Master Washer & Stamping Co., Inc. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 212, 214, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 461 (attorney represented by other members of his or her law firm is entitled to recover reasonable attorney fees under Civ. Code § 1717 when representation involves attorney's personal interests and not those of the firm)].

A court may deny a contractual claim for attorneys' fees by a defendant who has been voluntarily dismissed from a suit prior to trial [see Santisas v. Goodin (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 599, 602, 608, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830 ; Silver v. Boatwright Home Inspection, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 443, 446, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475 (holding that defendant was not prevailing party when plaintiffs obtained their litigation objective through settlement with other defendants); see also Jackson v. Homeowners Association Monte Vista Estates-East (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 773, 779-780, 782, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 363 (parties who agreed on record and in written settlement agreement that trial court would determine prevailing party in action and amount of attorney fee award before dismissal of action could and did waive provisions of Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2), which provides there will be no prevailing party when an action is dismissed pursuant to settlement)].

One appellate decision holds that when the plaintiff sues for breach of contract and wins, and the plaintiff's claim is based on proof of a written contract not containing aprovision for attorney's fees, the plaintiff cannot be entitled, under Civ. Code § 1717, to an award of attorney's fees based on a provision for attorney's fees found in a document that the defendant contended, unsuccessfully, was part of the parties' contract. In other words, a successful plaintiff's claim for attorney's fees under that statute must rest on the contract on which the plaintiff obtained judgment; the plaintiff's claim cannot rest on the discredited contract for which the defendant contended, even though (1) the plaintiff prevailed against the defendant's contention based on that contract and (2) the defendant could have claimed attorney's fees if the defendant had prevailed [Brittalia Ventures v. Stuke Nursery Co. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 17, 31, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 467] .

The court will construe the provision for attorney's fees as applying to the entire contract unless each party was represented by counsel in the negotiation and execution of the contract and the fact of that representation was specified in the contract [Civ. Code § 1717(a)]. For further discussion of attorney's fees, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, 174.50 et seq.

Attorney's fees may be recovered by the prevailing party in certain contract actions based on a book account as defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 337a, entered into after 1986 [see Civ. Code § 1717.5; see also Civ. Code § 1717]. For further discussion, see Ch. 8, Accounts Stated and Open Accounts .

Counsel has the option of checking a box and filling in a specific amount requested or checking a box asking for attorney's fees according to proof. Note that under Civ. Code § 1717, reasonable attorney's fees are fixed by the court, on notice and motion of a party, and the fees are an element of the costs of suit. Thus, a request for attorney's fees in the prayer would appear to be sufficient. To avoid ambiguity, however, counsel should state the appropriate information in Paragraph BC-5.

[g] Other Allegations (Paragraph BC-6)

Counsel may use the space marked "Other" in Paragraph BC-6 to allege facts for which no space has been provided in the form, such as an allegation on information and belief that the fictitiously named defendants are liable for the occurrences alleged in the complaint.

[5] Limitation of Action

The limitation period for an action on a contract in writing, except as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 336a (corporation bonds, notes, or debentures), is four years [Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1); see Code Civ. Proc. § 337(2) (actions on book accounts); see also Filet Menu, Inc. v. Cheng (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1276, 1282-1284, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 384 (statute may be tolled by plaintiff's out-of-state travel unrelated to interstate commerce pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 351)]. Actions on oral contracts are barred after two years [Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1)]. For a more detailed discussion, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

An action on a contract for the sale of goods, whether oral or written, is subject to the limitation period set forth in Com. Code § 2725 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1)].

[6] Verification

Counsel may attach a verification to the complaint, if desired. For discussion and a form for verification of the complaint, see § 140.101[1], [5].

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action for damages for breach of a written contract.

[3] Allegations

[a] In General

This complaint alleges the following elements of a cause of action for breach of contract [see Reichert v. General Ins. Co. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 822, 830, 69 Cal. Rptr. 321, 442 P.2d 377 ; FPI Development, Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 367, 383, 282 Cal. Rptr. 508 ; Acoustics, Inc. v. Trepte Constr. Co. (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 887, 916, 92 Cal. Rptr. 723 ; Lortz v. Connell (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 286, 290, 78 Cal. Rptr. 6] :

- The existence of the contract (Paragraph 4). Attaching a copy of a written contract and incorporating it by reference are not essential for pleading the contract, which may be properly pleaded by alleging the making of the contract and the substance of the relevant terms [Perry v. Robertson (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 333, 341, 247 Cal. Rptr. 74] .

PRACTICE TIP:
Tactical Advantage in Setting Out Contract. When a complaint sets out a written contract in full, a general demurrer is deemed to admit the contents of the contract and any pleaded meaning to which the contract is reasonably susceptible [Martinez v. Socoma Companies, Inc. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 394, 400, 113 Cal. Rptr. 585, 521 P.2d 841 ; Aragon-Haas v. Family Security Ins. Services, Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 232, 239, 282 Cal. Rptr. 233 (although plaintiff's interpretation of contract may prove invalid, resolution of issue on demurrer improper if plaintiff pleaded meaning to which contract is reasonably susceptible)].

- The performance of all conditions on the plaintiff's part or the plaintiff's excuse for nonperformance (Paragraph 5) [cf. Careau & Co. v. Security Pacific Business Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1390-1391, 272 Cal. Rptr. 387 (statements of defendant's representatives, who said conditions precedent were satisfied, were evidence but not sufficient as allegations in pleading)].

- The breach by the defendant (Paragraph 7).

- The resulting damage to the plaintiff (Paragraph 8).

The complaint alleges that the agreement was written (Paragraph 4). In an action founded on a contract, the defendant may object by demurrer [see § 140.130] or answer, on the ground that defendant cannot ascertain from the pleading whether the contract is written or oral or implied by conduct [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(g)].

When the contract is ambiguous, the complaint may allege the plaintiff's construction. On demurrer, the court must accept the plaintiff's construction as correct, as long as it is not clearly erroneous [Aragon-Haas v. Family Security Ins. Services, Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 232, 239, 282 Cal. Rptr. 233 ; Marina Tenants Assn. v. Deauville Marina Development Co. (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 122, 128, 132, 226 Cal. Rptr. 321] .

[b] Conditions Precedent

In pleading the performance of conditions precedent in the contract [see generally Civ. Code § 1436 (condition precedent defined)] (Paragraph 6), it is not necessary to state the facts showing performance. The complaint may state generally that the plaintiff duly performed all the conditions on plaintiff's part. If the defendant controverts the allegation, the plaintiff must establish at trial the facts showing performance [Code Civ. Proc. § 457].However, an allegation that the defendant breached the contract does not indicate that the plaintiff performed all that the plaintiff was obligated to perform or that the defendant prevented the plaintiff from rendering performance [Lortz v. Connell (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 286, 291, 78 Cal. Rptr. 6] .

If a condition precedent imposed by the contract must happen before the defendant's duty of performance arises, a specific allegation of the happening of the event is a necessary part of pleading the defendant's breach [Careau & Co. v. Security Pacific Business Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1389-1390, 272 Cal. Rptr. 387 (agreement for loan in which six of eight conditions were events and not acts to be performed by plaintiff)]. For example, if the defendant's promise to pay money is conditioned on defendant's ability to pay or on the existence of a fund from which payment is to be made, the plaintiff must allege that the condition has been satisfied [Byrne v. Harvey (1962) 211 Cal. App. 2d 92, 112-113, 27 Cal. Rptr. 110 ; see Clack v. State of California ex rel. Dept. Pub. Wks. (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 743, 748, 80 Cal. Rptr. 274] . Similarly, whenever it is essential to the cause of action that the plaintiff request that the defendant perform, the plaintiff must allege the request in the complaint and prove it at trial [California Canneries Co. v. Great Western Lumber Co. (1919) 44 Cal. App. 69, 71, 185 P. 1008] .

A general allegation of due performance will not suffice if the plaintiff also sets forth what actually occurred and the specific facts do not constitute due performance. If the plaintiff alleges due performance as a permissible conclusion of law, but also avers specific additional facts that do not support the conclusion or are inconsistent with it, the specific allegations control. A complaint that might have been sufficient with general allegations alone becomes defective [Careau & Co. v. Security Pacific Business Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1389-1390, 272 Cal. Rptr. 387] .

[c] Concurrent Conditions

Concurrent conditions are like conditions precedent, but are mutually dependent. The only important difference between a concurrent condition and a condition precedent is that the condition precedent must be performed before another duty arises, while a tender of performance is sufficient in the case of a concurrent condition. Failure of both parties to perform concurrent conditions does not leave the contract open for an indefinite period so that either party can tender performance at that party's leisure. Failure of both parties to perform concurrent conditions during the time for performance results in discharge of each party's duty to perform. Thus, when a contract makes time of the essence, if the time expires without tender by either party, both parties are discharged [Pittman v. Canham (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 556, 559-560, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 340] .

[d] Ability to Perform

To establish damages, the plaintiff must prove that but for the defendant's breach, the plaintiff would have had the ability to perform. Plaintiff must make this proof in any action for breach of contract, even one based on repudiation or anticipatory breach in which the plaintiff need not allege tender of performance [Ersa Grae Corp. v. Fluor Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 613, 625, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288 ; McDorman v. Moody (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 136, 140-141, 122 P.2d 639] .

[e] Consideration

A written instrument is presumptive evidence of consideration [Civ. Code § 1614]. The plaintiff need not plead the existence and character of the consideration if the complaint states that the contract was in writing or sets forth the written contract in full [Henke v. Eureka Endowment Asso. (1893) 100 Cal. 429, 433, 34 P. 1089] .

The presumption shifts the burden of producing evidence, not the burden of proof [Rancho Santa Fe Pharmacy, Inc. v. Seyfert (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 875, 884, 268 Cal. Rptr. 505] . Once the court has admitted evidence sufficient to call into question the presumed fact (consideration), the plaintiff has the burden of proving consideration [Rancho Santa Fe Pharmacy, Inc. v. Seyfert (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 875, 883, 268 Cal. Rptr. 505] .

[f] Damages

General damages (those that directly and inevitably flow from breach of any similar agreement) do not need to be itemized in a complaint, but special damages (secondary or derivative losses arising from circumstances that are particular to the contract or to the parties) must be pled with particularity [Lewis Jorge Construction Management, Inc. v. Pomona Unified School District (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 960, 969, 975, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 340, 102 P. 3d 257 (defining general and special damages and requiring specific pleading of special damages); Colvig v. RKO Gen., Inc. (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 56, 69, 42 Cal. Rptr. 473 (no specificity required for pleading of general damages)].

[4] Actions Involving Installment or Automotive Sales or Consumer Obligations

Counsel should cite the appropriate statute, Civ. Code § 1812.10 or Civ. Code § 2984.4, in Paragraph 3 when the action is subject to the provisions of the Unruh Retail Installment Act [Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.] or the Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act [Civ. Code § 2981 et seq.]. If the action arises from an offer or provision of goods, services, loans, or extensions of credit intended primarily for personal, family, or household use, other than an obligation described in Civ. Code §§ 1812.10 or 2984.4, or arises from a transaction consummated as a proximate result of either an unsolicited telephone call made by a seller engaged in the business of consummating transactions of that kind or a telephone call or electronic transmission made by the buyer or lessee in response to a solicitation by the seller, then Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b) applies [see Fontaine v. Superior Court (CashCall, Inc.) (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 830, 838-840, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 607 (statute applies to action by or against consumer, and if any defendant in consumer's action is individual, that is irrelevant to application of statute)], and the complaint should cite that statute [see Code Civ. Proc. § 396a(a)].

Concurrently with the complaint, the plaintiff must file an affidavit (or declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) stating facts showing that the action has been commenced in the proper court for the trial of the action, and that the action is subject to the provisions of Civ. Code § 1812.10 or Civ. Code § 2984.4 or Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b). In lieu of an affidavit or declaration, the complaint may state the required facts if the complaint is verified by the oath of the plaintiff or of plaintiff's attorney [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10(c), 2984.4(c); Code Civ. Proc. § 396a(a)]. In cases subject to Civ. Code § 1812.10 or Civ. Code § 2984.4, the plaintiff may not state facts on information or belief in a verified complaint [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10(c), 2984.4(c)].

When an affidavit or declaration is filed with the complaint, a copy must be served with the summons [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10(c), 2984.4(c); Code Civ. Proc. § 396a(a)].

[5] Verification

Verification of a complaint for damages for breach of contract generally is not required. However, verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[6] Jurisdiction

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)].

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the paper must state whether or not the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov.

Code § 70613(b)]. The statement regarding the demand must use the following language: "Amount demanded _____ [exceeds or does not exceed] $10,000" [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

[7] Attorney's Fees

In an action based on a contract that provides for an award of attorney's fees, the plaintiff need not plead or prove the contract provision for attorney's fees or the amount of attorney's fees incurred [see Civ. Code § 1717]. It is sufficient to make the contract part of the complaint [Ganey v. Doran (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 901, 911-912, 236 Cal. Rptr. 787] (Paragraph 4). However, no election or waiver results from pleading a contractual right to attorney's fees [Lanyi v. Goldblum (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 181, 188, 223 Cal. Rptr. 32] . The prayer in the form in [1], above, contains a specific request for attorney's fees.

For further discussion of attorney's fees, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees . For discussion of attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717.5 in contract actions based on a book account as defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 337a, see Ch. 8, Accounts Stated and Open Accounts .

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action for damages for breach of a contract entered into by correspondence between the parties.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges the following elements of the cause of action:

- Negotiations by the parties (Paragraph 3).
- A resulting agreement (Paragraphs 4 and 5).
- The plaintiff's performance of all conditions or the excuses for nonperformance (Paragraph 6).
- The breach by the defendant (Paragraph 7).
- The damages suffered by the plaintiff (Paragraph 8).

[4] Contract by Correspondence

Correspondence between the parties does not necessarily constitute a contract [Tibbs v. Smart & Final Iris Co. (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 618, 624, 313 P.2d 636 (no binding and enforceable agreement of sale existed between parties when numerous letters exchanged but last letter constituted new and conditional offer abrogating previous offers and was rejected); Azevedo v. Davidson (1920) 49 Cal. App. 443, 446, 193 P. 594 (letter did not constitute contract because correspondence indicated negotiations not to be considered closed until certain investigations made)]. However, when correspondence contains an offer and an absolute, unqualified acceptance, a contract may result. Some applicable statutory rules include the following:

- Consent is communicated when the party accepting a proposal has put the acceptance in the course of transmission to the proposer [Civ. Code § 1583].
- Acceptance must be absolute and unqualified [Civ. Code § 1585].
- A letter correctly addressed and properly mailed is presumed to have been received in the ordinary course of the mail [Evid. Code § 641].

Parol evidence is admissible to explain an incomplete contract entered into through correspondence [Amco Plastic Pipe Co. v. Jet Specialties Co. (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 32, 37, 14 Cal. Rptr. 712] .

A signed letter expressly referring to and adopting a contract is sufficient to bind the signing party to a written contract executed only by the plaintiff [Bartlett v. Rogers (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 250, 254, 229 P.2d 434] .

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action for damages for breach of contract by a third-party beneficiary to the contract.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges the following elements of the cause of action:

- The existence of the contract (Paragraph 3).
- The parties' intent that the contract be for the plaintiff's benefit (Paragraph 4).
- The defendant's breach of the contract (Paragraph 5).
- The plaintiff's damages caused by the breach (Paragraph 6).

[4] Third-party Beneficiary's Right

[a] Requirements to Enforce Contract

A third party may enforce a contract expressly for the benefit of that party at any time before the parties to the contract rescind it [Civ. Code § 1559]. Civ. Code § 1559 excludes enforcement of a contract by third parties who are only incidentally or remotely benefited by it. However, the contract need not be exclusively for the benefit of the third party, and the third party need not be named and identified in the contract [COAC, Inc. v. Kennedy Engineers (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 916, 919-920, 136 Cal. Rptr. 890] . California law generally classifies parties having enforceable rights under contracts to which they are not parties as creditor beneficiaries [see [b], below] or donee beneficiaries [see [c], below].

Intent to benefit the third party is important in determining the third party's right to bring an action under a contract. It is sufficient that the promisor understood that the promisee had that intent [Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 591, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685 , cert. denied, 368 U.S. 987 (1962) ; Schauer v. Mandarin Gems of California, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 949, 958, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 233 (jeweler must have understood that husband intended to give ring he was buying to wife because they shopped together, wife chose the ring, and husband bought it for the purpose of giving it to wife); see Mission Oaks Ranch, Ltd. v. County of Santa Barbara (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 713, 724, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (developer whose proposed project was denied after consultant hired by county prepared EIR could not sue county for damages caused by county's alleged failure to prepare proper EIR, as developer was not third-party creditor beneficiary of county's contract with consultant; written terms of contract showed intent that developer was not intended beneficiary), disapproved on another point in Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1123, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564 ; Dateline Builders, Inc. v. City of Santa Rosa (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 520, 526, 194 Cal. Rptr. 258 (developer holding option on real property beyond city limits and wanting to connect proposed project with city sewer lines not third-party beneficiary under contract between city and county to coordinate property development standards and avoid proliferation of fragmented sewer districts and systems)].

The third party need not be named or identified individually if the third party can show that he, she, or it is a member of a class for whose express benefit the parties made the contract [General Motors Corp. v. Superior Court (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 435, 444, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 622 (release); Macaulay v. Norlander (1992) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1, 7-8, 15 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 204 (agreement between investor and clearing broker); Kaiser Engineers, Inc. v. Grinnell Fire Protection Systems Co. (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 1050, 1054-1055, 219 Cal. Rptr. 626 ; but see Vahle v. Barwick (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1323, 1332, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 793 (trial court erred in granting summary judgment to attorney who was sued for malpractice in handling plaintiffs' personal injury case against country club on basis that language in release agreement between plaintiffs and country club was unambiguous and benefitted attorney; whether defendant attorney was intended third party beneficiary of release agreement was triable issue of fact)].

The party claiming to be a third-party beneficiary bears the burden of proving that the contracting parties actually promised the performance that the third-party beneficiary seeks. In a case in which the plaintiff did not sign a contract that contained an attorney fee provision, the court found that a defendant that was the prevailing party could recover contractual attorney's fees only if the nonsignatory plaintiff would have been entitled to those fees had it prevailed [see Sessions Payroll Management, Inc. v. Noble Construction Co. (2001) 84 Cal. App. 4th 671, 680-681, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 127 (because contracting parties did not intend to benefit third party by including it within contractual attorney's fee clause, it could not have recovered attorney's fees had it prevailed on third-party breach of contract cause of action; it thus should not have attorney's fees imposed against it); but see Loduca v. Polyzos (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 334, 337, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780 (property owner was third-party beneficiary of contract between general contractor and subcontractor for installation of cabinetry in owner's house under construction; property owner successfully sued subcontractor for breach of that contract and was entitled to attorney's fees under provision in that contract)].

A third party beneficiary's rights are subject to the conditions of the contract [see, e.g., Mercury Casualty Company v. Maloney (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 799, 802-803, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 647 (injured passenger who received medical payments from driver's excess insurer was obligated to reimburse insurer pursuant to insurance policy provision requiring reimbursement upon settlement with responsible party)].

[b] Creditor Beneficiary

A party cannot be a creditor beneficiary unless the contract will discharge some form of legal duty owed to the beneficiary by the promisee [COAC, Inc. v. Kennedy Engineers (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 916, 919-920, 136 Cal. Rptr. 890] .

A creditor beneficiary may bring an action against either the promisee or the promisor or against both of them [Anderson v. Calaveras Cent. Mining Corp. (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 338, 344, 57 P.2d 560] .

The third-party contract is not an offer to the creditor-beneficiary that the creditor-beneficiary must accept before a cause of action accrues. The cause of action accrues at the time the parties to the contract execute it, even if the creditor-beneficiary does not know of its existence. The cause of action is subject to the four-year statute of limitations [Skylawn & Skyview Memorial Lawn v. Superior Court (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 316, 318-320, 151 Cal. Rptr. 793 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1)].

[c] Donee Beneficiary

A party is a donee beneficiary if the promisee's contractual intent is to make a gift or confer a right against the promisor. If the promisee intends to make a gift, the donee beneficiary may recover if the promisor must have understood the donative intent from the nature of the contract and the circumstances accompanying its execution [Schauer v. Mandarin Gems of California, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 949, 958, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 233 (jeweler must have understood that husband intended to give ring he was buying to wife because they shopped together, wife chose the ring, and husband bought it for the purpose of giving it to wife)]. Even though a third party is not the intended recipient of a gift, the third party may nevertheless be a donee beneficiary if it appears from the terms of the promise, in view of the accompanying circumstances, that the promisee's purpose in obtaining the promise was to confer on the third party a right against the promisor to performance that was not due, supposed or asserted to be due from the promisee to the beneficiary [Martinez v. Socoma Companies, Inc. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 394, 400-401, 113 Cal. Rptr. 585, 521 P.2d 841 ; Dateline Builders, Inc. v. City of Santa Rosa (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 520, 526, 194 Cal. Rptr. 258] .

[d] Exception for Express Trust Beneficiary

Express trusts are not governed by the rules that apply to contracts generally. Civ. Code § 1559 has no application to a trust beneficiary. A trust beneficiary may not sue the trustee, an agent of the trustee or one with whom the trustee contracted for the benefit of the trust. The express trust beneficiary's rights are governed by the Probate Code provisions applicable to trusts [National Bank v. Exchange Nat. Bank (1921) 186 Cal. 172, 180, 199 P. 1 ; Saks v. Damon Raike & Co. (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 419, 430-431, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 869 ; see, e.g., Prob. Code §§ 16401, 16420, 16421, 17000, 17200].

[5] Promisee's Right to Enforce Contract

The promisee has the right to enforce a third-party contract for the benefit of the third party. The type of enforcement action depends on whether the third-party beneficiary is a creditor beneficiary or a donee beneficiary [see [4][b], [c], above]. For a creditor beneficiary, the promisee may bring an action for damages or specific performance, because the promisor has a legal obligation to pay the debt. For a donee beneficiary, the promisee may enforce the contract only through an action for specific performance. Although the promisee is entitled to the promised performance by the promisor, the performance is a gift to the beneficiary, and the promisee has no economic interest in the performance. Therefore, damages would be an inadequate remedy, and only specific performance is appropriate [In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 100, 106-108, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 133] .

[6] Waiver of Rights

The rights of a third-party beneficiary may be voluntarily waived or disclaimed. However, the burden is on the party claiming waiver to prove it by clear and convincing evidence. The courts will decide doubtful cases against a waiver [Bass v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 792, 796, 112 Cal. Rptr. 195, 518 P.2d 1147] .

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action for damages for breach of an oral agreement not subject to the statute of frauds [see, e.g., Marketing West, Inc. v. Sanyo Fisher (USA) Corp. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 603, 614, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 859 (oral employment contract allowing termination only for cause breached when employer threatened to terminate representatives who did not sign new written contract that allowed termination without cause)]. All contracts may be oral, except those that are specially required by statute to be in writing [Civ. Code § 1622; see generally Civ. Code § 1624 (contracts that must be in writing)].

For discussion and forms relating to contracts within the statute of frauds, see Ch. 530, Statute of Frauds . For an affirmative defense based on the statute of frauds, see § 140.143.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges the following elements of the cause of action:

- The parties entered into an oral agreement (Paragraph 3). The complaint should state that the agreement was oral; otherwise, the defendant may demur on the ground that defendnat cannot ascertain from the pleading whether the contract is written or oral or implied by conduct [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(g); see generally § 140.130].

- The parties made mutual promises constituting consideration (Paragraph 3). Since there is no presumption of consideration for an oral agreement, the complaint must allege the consideration [Acheson v. Western Union Tel. Co. (1892) 96 Cal. 641, 644, 31 P. 583] .

- The plaintiff performed all conditions required of plaintiff or was excused from performance (Paragraph 4).

- The defendant breached the contract (Paragraph 5).

- The plaintiff sustained damages (Paragraph 6).

The complaint need not allege a specific duration for an oral agreement. The law infers a reasonable term. Even if an oral agreement is terminable at will, Com. Code § 2309 requires that reasonable notice be given before termination [Khoury v. Maly's of California, Inc. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 612, 616, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 708 (sustaining demurrer improper although no duration of contract alleged, in part because what constitutes commercially reasonable time is presumptively within defendant's knowledge as much as plaintiff's)].

If the complaint does not allege explicit words by which the parties agreed but instead alleges a course of conduct, including oral representations that created a reasonable expectation, the cause of action is one for breach of an implied contract rather than breach of an oral contract [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 675, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; Wilkerson v. Wells Fargo Bank (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1217, 1225 n.2, 261 Cal. Rptr. 185 (implied contracts for employment terminable only for cause)]. For a form of allegation of an implied contract, see § 140.110[1].

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action for damages resulting from anticipatory breach of contract, when the breach occurs before the time for performance by the defendant [see, e.g., Zogarts v. Smith (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 165, 170-171, 194 P.2d 143 (anticipatory breach by implied repudiation occurred when defendants who covenanted to pay plaintiff's note out of partnership profits dissolved partnership, liquidated its assets, and voluntarily went out of business)]. If a promisor gives notice to the promisee before the promisee is in default, that the promisor will not perform the obligation on the promisor's part, and the promisor does not retract the notice before performance on is due, the promisee is entitled to enforce the obligation without previously performing or offering to perform any conditions on the promisee's part in favor of the promisor [Civ. Code § 1440].

The doctrine of anticipatory breach does not apply to contracts unilateral in their inception, or contracts that have become unilateral because of complete performance by one party [Diamond v. University of So. California (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 49, 53, 89 Cal. Rptr. 302] .

For further discussion of anticipatory breach, see § 140.54.

[3] Allegations

The essential element of anticipatory breach is that repudiation by the promisor occurred before the promisor's performance was due under the contract [Taylor v. Johnston (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 130, 137, 123 Cal. Rptr. 641, 539 P.2d 425 (aggrieved party faced with election of remedies when promisor repudiates contract: immediately seek damages for breach of contract or treat repudiation as empty threat and wait until time for performance arrives, then exercise remedies for actual breach)]. The complaint alleges the following elements of the cause of action:

- The contract (Paragraph 3).
- The repudiation by the defendant, which defendnat has not retracted (Paragraph 4) [see, e.g., Daum Development Corp. v. Yuba Plaza, Inc. (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 65, 73-74, 89 Cal. Rptr. 458 (definite and unconditional repudiation of contract by promisor communicated to promisee is breach of contract that creates immediate right of action even though it occurs long before time for performance); Mobil Oil Exploration & Producing Southeast, Inc. v. United States (2000) 530 U.S. 604, 120 S. Ct. 2423, 147 L.Ed. 2d 528, 534 (obligor's statement to obligee indicating that obligor will breach an important contractual promise, thereby substantially impairing the value of the contract, constituted repudiation of contract and plaintiffs were entitled to restitution whether or not repudiated contracts ultimately would have produced financial gain)].

- The plaintiff's performance of the contract or the plaintiff's willingness to perform, which need not be alleged (Paragraph 5). Since Civ. Code § 1440 states that anticipatory breach waives conditions, the plaintiff need not allege performance of all conditions on plaintiff's part. However, plaintiffs customarily include these allegations in a complaint for damages for anticipatory breach.

- The damages suffered by the plaintiff (Paragraph 6).

To establish a claim for damages, the plaintiff must prove that but for the defendant's breach, plaintiff would have had the ability to perform. Plaintiff must make this proof in any action for breach of contract, even one based on repudiation or anticipatory breach in which the plaintiff need not allege tender of performance [Ersa Grae Corp. v. Fluor Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 613, 625, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288 ; McDorman v. Moody (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 136, 140-141, 122 P.2d 639] .

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action for damages for breach of contract when the consideration is supplied by the doctrine of promissory estoppel [see § 140.23[8]]. The complaint may be used for a written or an oral contract in which the customary type of bargained-for consideration is missing.

Generally, a public entity is not estopped by the conduct of officers or employees unless a grave injustice would otherwise result [Lundeen Coatings Corp. v. Department of Water & Power (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 816, 830, 283 Cal. Rptr. 551] .

[3] Pleading and Proof

[a] Burden

The party claiming estoppel must specifically plead all facts to establish it. Conclusionary pleading of reliance is insufficient. The complaint must allege facts showing reliance and a change of position [Smith v. City and County of San Francisco (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 38, 48, 275 Cal. Rptr. 17] .

The burden of proof is on the party asserting estoppel to prove its essential elements, leaving nothing to surmise or questionable inference [Bank of California v. Connolly (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 350, 366, 111 Cal. Rptr. 468] .

[b] Allegations

The purpose of promissory estoppel is to make a promise binding without the customary bargained-for consideration [Youngman v. Nevada Irrigation Dist. (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 240, 249, 74 Cal. Rptr. 398, 449 P.2d 462] . The complaint alleges the following elements of the cause of action [see US Ecology, Inc. v. State (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 887, 891, 908, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 894 (plaintiff must prove that defendant's breach was substantial factor in causing injury to plaintiff); Lundeen Coatings Corp. v. Department of Water & Power (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 816, 829, 283 Cal. Rptr. 551 ; Thomson v. International Alliance of Stage Employees (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 446, 454, 42 Cal. Rptr. 785] :

- A promise clear and unambiguous in its terms (Paragraph 3).
- Reasonable and foreseeable reliance (Paragraph 4).
- Reliance by the plaintiff (Paragraph 5).

- Failure of the defendant to perform (Paragraph 6).
- Injury to the plaintiff as a proximate result of the defendant's breach of the promise (Paragraph 7).
- The necessity of enforcing the defendant's promise completely to avoid injustice (Paragraph 8).

[4] Remedy for Breach of Promise

The appropriate remedy in an action based on promissory estoppel lies in enforcement of the defendant's promise [Tomerlin v. Canadian Indemnity Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 638, 639, 39 Cal. Rptr. 731, 394 P.2d 571] . Generally, the court enforces the promise in toto. The trial court does nothave discretion to apportion or limit damages according to the equities of the case [see Saliba-Kringlen Corp. v. Allen Engineering Co. (1971) 92 Cal. Rptr. 799] . However, there is some authority for limiting the amount of recovery to a sum the judge considers equitable in a particular case [Swinerton & Walberg Co. v. City of Inglewood-L.A. County Civic Center Authority (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 98, 104-105, 114 Cal. Rptr. 834 (trial judge could decide proper measure of damages, and plaintiff entitled to at least partial enforcement of defendant's promise)].

[2] Use of Form

One of the allegations in § 140.107[1] may be used when the basis of venue is other than the defendant's residence at the time the action for breach of contract is commenced. Counsel can use the allegation in place of Paragraph 1 in the form in § 140.101[1].

If the defendant is a corporation or an association, venue is also proper in the county in which the obligation or liability arose, or in which the breach occurred, or in which the principal place of business of the corporation or association is situated [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5].

For allegations and declarations of venue based on Civ. Code § 2984.4 (motor vehicle sales) or Civ. Code § 1812.10 (retail installment sales), respectively, see Ch. 89, Automobiles: Sales and Financing Under the Rees-Levering Act , and Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales .

[3] Accompanying Papers

In a case subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b), concerning consumer obligations, the plaintiff must use the third alternative allegation [see § 140.107[1]; *see also Fontaine v. Superior Court (CashCall, Inc.) (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 830, 838-840, 96 Cal. [2] Use of Form

This declaration is to be filed by the plaintiff at the time the complaint is filed if the action is subject to the venue provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b) [see § 140.108[3]] and the complaint is not verified and does not allege compliance with the venue provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b) [Code Civ. Proc. § 396a(a)].

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive ofinterest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)].

[3] Venue

In an action arising from an offer or provision of goods, services, loans, or extensions of credit intended primarily for personal, family, or household use, other than an obligation described in Civ. Code § 1812.10 (Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act [Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.; see Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales]) or Civ. Code § 2984.4 (Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act [Civ. Code § 2981 et seq.; see Ch. 89, Automobiles: Sales and Financing Under the Rees-Levering Act]), or in an action arising from a transaction consummated as a proximate result of either an unsolicited telephone call made by a seller engaged in the business of consummating transactions of that kind or a telephone call or electronic transmission made by the buyer or lessee in response to a solicitation by the seller, the superior court in the county where the buyer or lessee in fact signed the contract, or where the buyer or lessee resided at the time the contract was entered into, or where the buyer or lessee resides at the commencement of the action, is the proper court for the trial of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b); see Fontaine v. Superior Court (CashCall, Inc.) (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 830, 838-840, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 607 (statute applies to action by or against consumer, and if any defendant in consumer's action is individual, that is irrelevant to application of statute)].

[4] Requirement That Affidavit or Declaration Be Filed and Served

Concurrently with filing the complaint, in a case subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b), the plaintiff must file an affidavit (or declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) in which the plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney states facts showing that the action was commenced in the proper court for the trial of the action and that the action is subject to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b). In addition, the plaintiff must serve a copy of the affidavit or declaration on the defendant at the time the summons is served. The facts may be stated in a verified complaint instead of an affidavit or declaration. If the plaintiff fails to file the affidavit or declaration or state facts in a verified complaint as required, there can be no further proceedings except to dismiss the action without prejudice. However, the court has discretion to permit late filing of the affidavit or declaration on terms as may be just [Code Civ. Proc. § 396a(a)].

For a form for an affidavit, see Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations .

[5] Action Filed in Improper Court

In a case subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b), if it appears from the complaint or affidavit or declaration, or otherwise that the court is not the proper court for trial, the court, whenever the fact appears, must transfer the action to the proper court, on its own motion or on motion of the defendant, unless the defendant consents in writing or in open court to keeping the action in the court in which plaintiff commenced it. Consent in open court must be entered in the minutes or docket of the court. If the defendant gives consent, the action may continue in the court in which plaintiff commenced it. However, the defendant may not give consent unless represented by counsel at the time the consent is given. In any case, when the court orders the action transferred, if summons is served before the action is filed in the court to which it is transferred, the time to answer or otherwise plead dates from the time of service on the defendant of written notice of filing as to any defendant so served who has not appeared in the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 396a(b), (c)].

[1] FORM Allegation--Offer of Performance [Civ. Code § 1485]

On or about _____ [date], plaintiff offered to perform his/her/its obligations under the agreement in good faith and unconditionally by _____ [specify tender of performance] and demanded that defendant perform the obligations on his/her/its part to be performed by _____ [specify defendant's performance], but defendant failed and refused, and continues to fail and refuse, to so perform.

[2] Use of Form

The allegation in [1], above, is for use in a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the plaintiff extinguished plaintiff's contractual duty by making an offer of performance.

[3] Offer of Performance

An offer of performance extinguishes the offering party's obligation [Civ. Code § 1485] when it is an offer of full performance [Civ. Code § 1486] by the debtor or someone on the debtor's behalf [Civ. Code § 1487] to the creditor [Civ. Code § 1488]. The offer must be in good faith [Civ. Code § 1493] and unconditional [Civ. Code § 1494]. An offer of performance puts the other party in default if that party refuses to accept it [Still v. Plaza Marina Commercial Corp. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 385, 98 Cal. Rptr. 414] .

The party making an offer of performance must be able and willing to perform according to the offer [Civ. Code § 1495]. The party will have to prove the ability to perform at trial when it is an issue [Ersa Grae Corp. v. Fluor Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 613, 625, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288 ; *McDorman v. _____ [Allege that plaintiff performed act as part of course of conduct, or as result of usage of trade or personal understanding between plaintiff and defendant, so that defendant voluntarily accepted consideration with expectation on both plaintiff's and defendant's parts that plaintiff would receive benefit for his/her/its actions, e.g., At the instance and request of defendant, plaintiff submitted to defendants, orally and in writing, a novel idea for a marketing campaign, with the expectation, which was fully and clearly understood by defendants, that plaintiff would be compensated for its use by defendants when and if defendants used it].

[2] Use of Form

The allegation in [1], above, is for use in a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the contract is implied in fact, that is, when the existence and terms of the contract are manifested by conduct and not by express words [see generally Civ. Code § 1621 (implied contract defined)]. It can be inserted in the form in § 140.101[1] in place of Paragraph 4.

[3] Pleading and Proof of Implied Contract

The essential elements of an implied-in-fact contract and an express contract are the same, i.e., mutual assent and consideration [Chandler v. Roach (1957) 156 Cal. App. 2d 435, 440, 319 P.2d 776] . The essential difference between an implied contract and an express contract is the mode of proof. When a contract is implied, the party asserting it must prove conduct from which a promise may be inferred [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 675, 677, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; Youngman v. Nevada Irrigation Dist. (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 240, 246, 74 Cal. Rptr. 398, 449 P.2d 462 ; Chandler v. Roach (1957) 156 Cal. App. 2d 435, 440, 319 P.2d 776 ; Thompson v. California Brewing Co. (1957) 150 Cal. App. 2d 469, 473, 310 P.2d 436] . The party seeking to prove the contract may introduce evidence of the parties' conduct to establish an implied-in-fact contract. The other party may introduce evidence rebutting inferences arising from the conduct or showing another explanation for it [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 677, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373] .

In pleading a cause of action on an agreement implied from conduct, the plaintiff need only allege the facts from which the promise is implied [Youngman v. Nevada Irrigation Dist. (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 240, 246-247, 74 Cal. Rptr. 398, 449 P.2d 462] . For example, the plaintiff established an implied-in-fact contract that interest was owed on past-due accounts bya course of conduct between the parties, including the seller's acceptance of special interest invoices, partial payment of interest, the continued business relationship between the parties, and an indication by the seller that interest would be paid [Kawasho Internat. (U.S.A.), Inc. v. Lakewood Pipe Service, Inc. (1983) 152 Cal. App. 3d 785, 789-791, 201 Cal. Rptr. 640] .

If the complaint does not allege explicit words by which the parties agreed, but instead alleges a course of conduct including oral representations that created a reasonable expectation, the cause of action is for breach of an implied contract rather than for breach of oral contract [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 675, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; Wilkerson v. Wells Fargo Bank (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1217, 1225 n.2, 261 Cal. Rptr. 185 (implied contract for employment terminable only for cause)].

[4] Proof of Damages for Breach of Implied Contract

The value of the benefit conferred is evidence of the reasonable value of services rendered under an implied contract [LuMetta v. U.S. Robotics, Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 824 F.2d 768, 770 (diversity case applying California law); Ferrier v. Commercial Steel Corp. (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 424, 426-427, 298 P.2d 555] .

The terms of an unenforceable express contract may be evidence of the reasonable value of services rendered under an implied contract, provided the agreed price assigns a dollar value to the promised performance or provides a formula by which the ultimate sum is readily ascertainable [LuMetta v. U.S. Robotics, Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 824 F.2d 768, 770 ; George v. Double-D Foods, Inc. (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 36, 42, 201 Cal. Rptr. 870] .

[1] FORM Allegation--Custom and Usage Applicable to Construction of Contract [Civ. Code § 1656]

At all times mentioned there has existed a trade custom and usage _____ [set out custom and usage, e.g., that in all contracts in which a manufacturer's representative is granted an exclusive agency by the manufacturer to perform services as a sales agent, the agent or manufacturer's representative correspondingly receives a commission on all sales made in the specified territory, notwithstanding the fact that the request for quotation of prices or the actual purchase order may be sent directly to the manufacturer for approval and shipment, and notwithstanding the fact that the principal may actually close the sale specifically originated by the agent]. This custom and usage is, and at all times mentioned has been, certain and uniform, of general continuity and notoriety, and acquiesced-in by the whole of this industry. This custom and usage was well known to plaintiff and to defendant and was in fact deemed by each of the parties to be an integral part of the contract.]

A party is not bound by a custom or usage unless the party had actual knowledge of it, or it is so general or well known in the community as to create a presumption of knowledge [Peiser v. Mettler (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 594, 608, 328 P.2d 953 ; Wise v. Reeve Electronics, Inc. (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 4, 9, 6 Cal. Rptr. 587] . The complaint must plead a custom for the court to accept evidence of that custom [Peiser v. Mettler (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 594, 608, 328 P.2d 953 ; Hanley v. Marsh & McLennan-J.B.F. Davis & Son, Ltd. (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 787, 797, 117 P.2d 69] .

The parties are deemed to have used words according to their different and peculiar sense as shown by trade usage [Beneficial Fire & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Kurt Hitke & Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 517, 525-526, 297 P.2d 428] . The test for admissibility of extrinsic evidence is not whether a written agreement appears to the court to be plain and unambiguous on its face, but whether the evidence offered is relevant to prove a meaning to which the language of the agreement is reasonably susceptible. Thus, the court could have properly admitted parol evidence of industry custom along with evidence of the circumstances surrounding formation of the contract todetermine whether a provision that either party could terminate a distributorship agreement on 30 days' notice meant that termination could be based only on poor performance that went uncorrected after notice [Jack Rowe Assoc., Inc. v. Fisher Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 833 F.2d 177, 180-183 ; see Wolf v. Superior Court (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1343, 1346, 1354-1355, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 649 (trial court erred in finding that term "gross receipts" in author's royalty contract meant only cash and in rejecting expert extrinsic evidence that, in context of entertainment industry, term meant both money and value of other consideration received when not otherwise limited or defined by contract)].

A trade usage that existed at the contract's inception no longer governs when, at the time of termination, that trade usage no longer exists [Varni Bros. Corp. v. Wine World, Inc. (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 880, 892-893, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 740] .

§ 140.112 Allegation--Modification of Original Written Contract by Subsequent Written Agreement or Executed Oral Agreement or Oral Agreement Supported by New Consideration [Civ. Code § 1698]

[1] FORM Allegation--Modification of Original Written Contract by Subsequent Written Agreement or Executed Oral Agreement or Oral Agreement Supported by New Consideration [Civ. Code § 1698]

[EITHER]

On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant entered into a written contract, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit _____ and made a part of this pleading. After entering into that contract, on or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant entered into another written contract, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit _____ and made a part of this pleading. The purpose of the second contract was to modify the terms of the first contract.

[OR]

On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant entered into a written contract, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit _____ and made a part of this pleading. After the parties entered into that contract, on or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant made an oral agreement to _____ [specify terms of oral agreement]. The purpose of the oral agreement was to modify the written contract. The object of the oral agreement has been fully performed in that _____ [specify performance of oral agreement by plaintiff and defendant].

[OR]

On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant entered into a written contract, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit _____ and made a part of this pleading. The contract did not contain a provision stating that the parties could not modify the contract by an oral agreement supported by new consideration. After the parties entered into the contract, on or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant made an oral agreement to _____ [specify terms of oral agreement]. The purpose of the oral agreement was to modify the written contract. The oral agreement was supported by valuable and new consideration in that _____ [specify new consideration].

[2] Use of Form

The allegation in [1], above, is for use in a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the parties modified the original written contract. This allegation may be used in the form in § 140.101[1] in place of Paragraph 4.

[3] Modification of Written Contract

[a] Parties' Power to Modify Contract

A modification of a contract is a change in one or more respects that introduces new elements into the details of the contract, or cancels some of them, but leaves the general purpose and effect undisturbed [Grant v. Aerodraulics Co. (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 68, 74, 204 P.2d 683] .

A contract in writing may be modified by a contract in writing [Civ. Code § 1698(a)], or by an oral agreement to the extent that the oral agreement is executed by the parties [Civ. Code § 1698(b); Estate of Wilson (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 786, 799, 134 Cal. Rptr. 749 (decided before 1976 amendment of Civ. Code § 1698); see Pearsall v. Henry (1908) 153 Cal. 314, 325, 95 P. 159 (Civ. Code § 1698 has no application to new agreements substituted for existing written agreements)]. Whether the parties modified a written contract by an executed oral agreement is a question of fact [Daugherty Co. v. Kimberly-Clark Corp. (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 151, 158, 92 Cal. Rptr. 120] .

Unless the contract expressly provides otherwise [see [b], below], a written contract may be modified by an oral agreement supported by new consideration [Civ. Code § 1698(c); see Raedeke v. Gibraltar Sav. & Loan Asso. (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 665, 673, 111 Cal. Rptr. 693, 517 P.2d 1157 (decided before 1976 amendment of Civ. Code § 1698; but see Com. Code § 2209(1) (allowing modification of contract without consideration)]. When applicable, the statute of frauds [Civ. Code § 1624] must be satisfied if a contract is modified by an oral agreement supported by new consideration [Civ. Code § 1698(c)].

[b] Provision Against Orally Modifying Contract

Parties may prevent enforcement of executory oral modifications pursuant to Civ. Code § 1698(c) by providing in the written contract that it may only be modified in writing [see Com. Code § 2209(2) (signed agreement can exclude modification except by signed writing)]. However, this contractual provision would not apply to a modification by an executed oral agreement as provided for in Civ. Code § 1698(b) [MacIsaac & Menke Co. v. Cardox Corp. (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 661, 670, 14 Cal. Rptr. 523 (in action by subcontractor to recover costs for work performed under written subcontract modified by executed oral agreement, defendant estopped from relying on subcontract provision requiring prior written approval before proceeding with work involving extra compensation by its acts and conduct in orally promising to pay for extra work performed)].

Courts may apply various rules of law to permit oral modification even though the written contract expressly provides that modifications must be in writing. Those rules include:

- Estoppel [MacIsaac & Menke Co. v. Cardox Corp. (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 661, 670, 14 Cal. Rptr. 523] ;

- Oral novation and substitution of a new agreement [Pearsall v. Henry (1908) 153 Cal. 314, 325, 95 P. 159] ;

- Rescission of a written contract by an oral agreement [see generally Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution];

- Waiver of a provision of a written contract [1st. Olympic Corp. v. Hawryluk (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 832, 841 (provision in building contract that owner could be charged only for extras ordered in writing permitted to be waived)]; and

- Oral independent collateral contracts [Lacy Mfg. Co. v. Gold Crown Mining Co. (1942) 52 Cal. App. 2d 568, 577, 126 P.2d 644 (subsequent oral agreement to pay additional sum for excess weight was independent, collateral contract that did not alter or vary written contract to transport and reconstruct factory)].

[4] Equitable or Implicit Modification

When one party has, through oral representations and conduct or custom, behaved in a manner antithetical to one or more of the terms of a contract after execution and has induced the other party to rely on those representations and conduct or custom, equity will uphold the apparent modification [cf. Wagner v. Glendale Adventist Medical Center (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1379, 1388, 265 Cal. Rptr. 412 (dicta, conduct not sufficient)].

The court may imply an agreement to modify a written contract by conduct of the parties that is inconsistent with the written contract so as to warrant a conclusion that the parties intended to modify it [Garrison v. Edward Brown & Sons (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 473, 479, 154 P.2d 377 ; Daugherty Co. v. Kimberly-Clark Corp. (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 151, 158, 92 Cal. Rptr. 120] .

§ 140.113 Allegation--Waiver of Condition by Defendant

[1] FORM Allegation--Waiver of Condition by Defendant

On or about _____ [date], defendant waived performance of the condition that plaintiff _____ [set forth condition] by _____ [specify how defendant waived condition]. Plaintiff has performed all other conditions of the contract on his/her/its part to be performed.

[2] Use of Form

The allegation in [1], above, is for use in a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the defendant has waived performance of a condition and the plaintiff has performed all other conditions.

[3] Waiver of Conditions

Waiver is the intentional relinquishment of a known right. Waiver may result from an express agreement or be inferred from circumstances indicating an intent to waive. It is essential that the promisee could and would have performed the condition had it not been for the promisor's waiver [Panno v. Russo (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 408, 412, 186 P.2d 452] .

A creditor waives all objections to the mode of an offer of performance that the creditor had an opportunity to state but did not state at the time to the party making the offer [Civ. Code § 1501].

The rule concerning modification of a written contract [see Civ. Code § 1698; § 140.112[3]] is subject to the exception that a party to a contract may by conduct or representations waive the performance of a condition or be estopped because of conduct or representations, to deny that the party has waived the performance [Panno v. Russo (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 408, 412, 186 P.2d 452 (decided before 1976 amendment of Civ. Code § 1698)].

[1] FORM Allegation--Charitable Pledge

1. On or about _____ [date], defendant executed a written subscription in favor of plaintiff by the terms of which defendant promised to pay to plaintiff the sum of $_____. A copy of the subscription is attached as Exhibit _____ and made a part of this pleading.

[EITHER]

2. At or about the same time other persons executed similar subscriptions by the terms of which all those persons concurred in a mutual promise to contribute to the payment of an aggregate sum of $_____ for the benefit of plaintiff.

[OR]

2. On the faith of and relying on defendant's subscription, plaintiff _____ [specify, e.g., erected a building, purchased equipment, employed teachers, and equipped a department to further the work of _____ (specify)].

[2] Use of Form

The allegations in [1], above, are for use in a complaint for damages for breach of a contract to pay a promised amount to a charitable institution. This allegation may be inserted in the form in § 140.101[1] in place of Paragraph 4.

[3] Enforceability of Pledge or Subscription

The general rule is that the promise to pay a subscription is ordinarily a mere offer that, in the absence of consideration, the promisor may withdraw at any time before acceptance. The subscription is an offer until the beneficiary accepts it or acts on it. However, when several parties may similar promises to contribute to the payment of an aggregate sum for the benefit of a charitable, religious, or educational institution in which they are all interested, the so-called mutuality of the promises is generally adequate consideration for enforcement by the promisee [Board of Home Missions v. Manley (1933) 129 Cal. App. 541, 543-544, 19 P.2d 21 ; see Grand Lodge v. Farnham (1886) 70 Cal. 158, 159-160, 11 P. 592] .

A subscription promise to a charitable institution is enforceable if the promisee uses the subscription to induce other contributions, even though the subscription was not conditioned on securing any particular sum in the aggregate [First Trust & Sav. Bank of Pasadena v. Coe College (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 195, 199, 47 P.2d 481] . Acts performed and obligations incurred by a promisee in reliance on the payment of a subscription noterender the agreement enforceable and estop the promisor from denying its validity [University of So. Cal. v. Bryson (1929) 103 Cal. App. 39, 51, 283 P. 949] .

On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant entered into a written contract by the terms of which defendant _____ [specify, e.g., granted to plaintiff an exclusive concession for the sale of _____ (specify product) by means of automatic vending machines in and about defendant's place of business located at _____ (city), _____ County, California]. A copy of the contract is attached as Exhibit _____ and made a part of this pleading. Plaintiff agreed _____ [specify, e.g., to pay defendant commissions based on the sales through the vending machines, and plaintiff paid defendant the sum of $_____ as advance commissions on sales as provided in the contract].

[2] Use of Form

The allegation in [1], above, is for use in an action for damages for breach of a contract to allow the sale of the plaintiff's products through vending machines located on the defendant's premises. This allegation may be inserted in the form in § 140.101[1] in place of Paragraph 4.

The fact that a contract gives a vending machine company discretion to change commission rates on written notice to the defendant does not render the contract illusory, lacking in mutuality, or void [Automatic Vending Co. v. Wisdom (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 354, 357, 6 Cal. Rptr. 31] .

[2] Use of Form

The demurrer in [1], above, is for use by the defendant to object to a complaint for breach of contract in superior court on the ground that the complaint fails to specify whether the contract is written or oral or implied by conduct [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(g)]. Special demurrers are not allowed in limited civil cases (amount in controversy is $25,000 or less) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 91(a), (d), 92(c); *Buss v. J.O. Martin Co. Defendant demurs to the complaint on the following ground:

Plaintiff's complaint fails to state a cause of action in that, the contract having been made for the benefit of a third party, and the plaintiff having failed to allege that the plaintiff was bound to provide the promised benefit to the third party, the plaintiff may not recover damages for breach of the contract because the third-party beneficiary is a donee beneficiary.

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that this demurrer has been set for hearing on _____ [date], at _____ [time], or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] the above-entitled court, located at _____ [name of building or street address or both], in _____ [city], _____ County, California.

The demurrer will be based on this notice of hearing and the supporting memorandum served and filed with this demurrer and notice of hearing, on the records and files herein, and on such evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the demurrer.

[2] Use of Form

The demurrer in [1], above, is for use when the defendant demurs on the ground that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that the plaintiff, as promisee of a contract for the benefit of a donee third party, may not recover damages for breach of the contract.

[3] Accompanying Papers

The defendant is required to serve and file a notice of hearing with the demurrer [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320(c), (d)]. The notice may be included in the demurrer as shown in the form in [1], above. A memorandum in support of the demurrer is not required; however, the court may construe the absence of a supporting memorandum as an admission that the demurrer is not meritorious and cause for overruling it, and as a waiver of all grounds not supported [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1113(a), 3.1320].

[4] Promisee for Donee Third-Party Beneficiary Not Damaged

When a contract is for the benefit of a third party, and the promisee is not bound to provide the promised benefit to the third party, i.e., the promised performance is a gift, not a legal obligation, the promisee may not recover damages if the promisor breaches the contract, because the third-party beneficiary is a donee beneficiary, not a creditor beneficiary [see § 140.103[4][b], [c]]. However, the promisee may seek specific performance [In re Marriage of Smith & Maescher (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 100, 106-108, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 133] .

[2] Use of Form

The Judicial Council has approved the answer in [1], above, for use in answering any action based on contract [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.12; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.45(a), (b); Judicial Council Form PLD-C-010; see generally Ch. 26, Answers]. Use of the form is optional [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.12].

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format is also available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Making General Denial

If the complaint is not verified or the demand or the value of the property in controversy does not exceed $1,000, the defendant may make a general denial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 431.30(d), 431.40(a)]. The Judicial Council has adopted a form for a general denial for this purpose [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.40(c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.45(a); Judicial Council Form PLD-050]. Use of the general denial form is mandatory [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.31(c)]. However, in an action based on contract brought on a Judicial Council complaint form [see § 140.100] that is unverified, the defendant may use either the mandatory general denial form or the form in [1], above, which more specifically applies to a contract complaint and has been approved by the Judicial Council for optional use [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.35; Judicial Council Form PLD-C-010]. Counsel should review local court practice to determine whether the court will require the mandatory general denial form.

[4] Filling Out Form

[a] Heading

Counsel should fill in the heading with the name, address, and telephone number of and party represented by the attorney filing the answer. Counsel should also fill in the name and post office and street address of the court, the names of the plaintiff and the defendant, and the case number. The appropriate box should be checked indicating whether counsel is answering a complaint or cross complaint, and fill in the name of the party who filed the complaint or cross complaint.

[b] Number of Pages (Paragraph 1)

Counsel should fill in the blank with the number of pages contained in the pleading, including attachments and exhibits.

[c] Name of Defendant (Paragraph 2)

The name of the defendant answering the complaint or cross complaint should be inserted in Paragraph 2.

[d] General Denial (Paragraph 3a)

Counsel should check the box for Paragraph 3a if the defendant generally denies each statement of the complaint or cross complaint.

The filing of a general denial denies in one sentence all the allegations of the complaint. In the case of a complaint for breach of contract, a general denial denies that there is a contract, that the plaintiff performed or had an excuse for nonperformance, that the defendant did not perform, or that the plaintiff was damaged. A general denial allows the denying party the opportunity to present evidence to refute the allegations in the complaint [Walsh v. West County Mission Community College District (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1532, 1545-1547, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 725 (dismissal of defendant's cross-complaint with prejudice did not preclude defendant from defending against complaint by introducing evidence tending to refute elements of breach of contract claim that had been generally denied by defendant)].

[e] Specific Denials (Paragraph 3b)

Counsel should check the box for Paragraph 3b when denying only part of the allegations of the complaint or cross complaint. Counsel should state the paragraph numbers of the allegations denied or an explanation of the denials in Paragraph 3b(1). The denials of the allegations controverted may be stated by reference to specific paragraphs or parts of the complaint. Denials may be stated also by express admission of certain allegations of the complaint with a general denial of all of the allegations not admitted [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(f)].

Denials based on lack of information or belief as to the truth of allegations should be stated in Paragraph 3b(2). Denials may be stated by denying certain allegations on information and belief or for lack of sufficient information or belief, with a general denial of all allegations not so denied or expressly admitted [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(f)].

If the space allowed for specific denials in Paragraphs 3b(1) and 3b(2) is not sufficient, counsel may continue the denials on Attachment 3b(1) and Attachment 3b(2). For additional discussion of denials, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[f] Affirmative Defenses (Paragraph 4)

Defendant's affirmative defenses must be alleged in Paragraph 4. The answer to a complaint must contain a statement of any new matter constituting a defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]. The example stated in Paragraph 4 may be used in an answer to an action for damages for breach of contract when the action was not commenced before expiration of the applicable statute of limitations [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337, 339; see also Filet Menu, Inc. v. Cheng (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1276, 1282-1284, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 384 (statute may be tolled by plaintiff's out-of-state travel unrelated to interstate commerce pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 351)]. The defenses must be separately stated, and the several defenses must refer to the causes of action they are intended to answer, in a manner by which they may be intelligibly distinguished [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(g)]. Each separately stated defense must be separately numbered [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.112]. Counsel should continue the list of affirmative defenses on a separate sheet of paper labeled Attachment 4.

For possible affirmative defenses, see §§ 140.133 -140.152. For further discussion of affirmative defenses, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[g] Other Allegations (Paragraph 5)

Counsel should state any additional allegations in Paragraph 5 of the answer.

[h] Prayer (Paragraph 6)

Counsel should check the box for Paragraph 6b if requesting costs of suit. Counsel may request additional relief by checking the box marked "other" and specifying the relief sought.

Except as otherwise provided specifically by statute, the measure and mode of compensation of attorneys is left to the express or implied agreement of the parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021]. In any action on a contract, when the contract specifically provides that attorney's fees and costs incurred to enforce the contract will be awarded to one of the parties or to the prevailing party, the party determined to be the prevailing party, whether or not the party specified in the contract, is entitled to reasonable attorney's fees in addition to costs and necessary disbursements [Civ. Code § 1717; see Scott Co. of California v. Blount, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1108-1109, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 979 P.2d 974 (although attorney fees provision in contract was unilateral, giving only defendant and not plaintiff right to attorney fees, Civ. Code § 1717 rendered provision mutual, giving prevailing party right to attorney fees on any claims based on contract); Sears v. Baccaglio (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1136, 1154-1155, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 769] (reviewing legislative history of Civ. Code § 1717 and finding that party can fail to recover net monetary judgment and still prevail for purposes of collecting fees in action founded on contract). A court may deny a contractual claim for attorneys' fees by a defendant who has been voluntarily dismissed from a suit prior to trial [see Santisas v. Goodin (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 599, 602, 608, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830 (examining recovery of attorney fees incurreddefending action when plaintiff has voluntarily dismissed action before trial); see also Silver v. Boatwright Home Inspection, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 443, 446, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475 (holding that defendant was not prevailing party when plaintiffs obtained their litigation objective through settlement with other defendants)]. For further discussion of attorney's fees, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.50 et seq.

There appear to be two options for requesting attorney's fees. According to Civ. Code § 1717, reasonable attorney's fees are fixed by the court, on notice and motion by a party, and the fees are an element of the costs of suit. Thus, although a request for costs of suit might also serve as a request for attorney's fees, counsel should check the box marked "other" and specifically request attorney's fees.

§ 140.134 Affirmative Defense--Defendant Lacked Capacity to Contract [Civ. Code § 39; Prob. Code § 812]--Contract Entered Into Before Adjudication of Incompetence

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Defendant Lacked Capacity to Contract [Civ. Code § 39; Prob. Code § 812]--Contract Entered Into Before Adjudication of Incompetence

AS A [_____ (specify number, if more than one, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [add, if more than one cause of action was alleged, TO THE _____ (specify number, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

1. On or about _____ [date], when plaintiff and defendant entered into the contract attached to the complaint as Exhibit _____, defendant was a person of unsound mind, but not entirely without understanding. Defendant lacked the capacity to contract, by virtue of the fact that defendant lacked the ability to understand and appreciate the rights, duties, and responsibilities created or affected by the contract, the probable consequences for defendant and other persons affected by the contract, or the significant risks and benefits of, and alternatives to, the contract.

[2. On or about _____ (date), when plaintiff and defendant entered into the written contract attached to the complaint as Exhibit _____, defendant was substantially unable to manage his/her own financial resources and/or to resist fraud or undue influence.]

3. At the time plaintiff and defendant entered into the contract, defendant's incapacity to contract had not been judicially determined.

4. On or about _____ [date], defendant rescinded the contract by _____ [specify means of giving notice to plaintiff, e.g., a letter from defendant to plaintiff].

5. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [restored to plaintiff everything of value that he/she received from plaintiff under the contract or offered to restore everything of value that he/she received from plaintiff, on the condition that plaintiff restore to defendant everything plaintiff received under the contract].

[2] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint seeking damages for breach of contract, when the defendant allegedly lacked the capacity to contract at the time the parties entered into the contract. This form admits that the defendant was not entirely without understanding, but alleges that the defendant was of unsound mind at the time the contract was entered into. A contract entered into by a person of unsound mind before that person's incapacity has been judicially determined is not automatically void, but is subject to rescission [Civ. Code § 39]. In contrast, a contract made by a person entirely without understanding is void [Civ. Code § 38]. To allege that the contract is void because the defendant was entirely without understanding, use the form in § 140.133 instead of this form. For further discussion, see § 140.21.

[3] Allegation of Lack of Capacity

Paragraph 1 alleges that the defendant was of unsound mind, but not entirely without understanding. This basic allegation is derived from the language of Civ. Code § 39(a). The additional language in support of that basic allegation is derived from Prob. Code § 812, which specifies the general criteria to determine whether a person lacks capacity to make any decision. A person lacks that capacity unless he or she has the ability to communicate the decision verbally or by other means and to understand and appreciate, to the extent relevant, all of the following [Prob. Code § 812]:

- The rights, duties, and responsibilities created by or affected by the decision;
- The probable consequences for the decision-maker and, when appropriate, the persons affected by the decision; and
- The significant risks, benefits, and reasonable alternatives involved in the decision.

These criteria apply to any determination of a person's capacity to make a decision, except as otherwise provided by law [Prob. Code § 812; see Smalley v. Baker (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 824, 832, 69 Cal. Rptr. 521 (test of mental competency is whether person understood nature, purpose, and effect of what he or she did); Walton v. Bank of California (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 527, 541, 32 Cal. Rptr. 856 (test of mental capacity is whether person could deal with subject matter of contract sought to be rescinded with full understanding of his or her rights)].

The optional language in Paragraph 2 may be included to invoke the rebuttable presumption established by Civ. Code § 39(b). Under that section, there is a rebuttable presumption, affecting the burden of proof, that a person is of unsound mind for purposes of rescission if the person is substantially unable to manage his or her own financial resources or resist fraud or undue influence [Civ. Code § 39(b)]. Substantial inability may not be proved solely by isolated incidents of negligence or imprudence [Civ. Code § 39(b)].

[4] Basic Prerequisites to Rescission

To qualify for rescission under Civ. Code § 39, the contract must have been entered into before defendant's incapacity was determined. Accordingly, Paragraph 3 of this form alleges that no such determination had been made at the time the plaintiff and the defendant entered into the contract.

To effect a rescission, the defendant must do both of the following promptly on discovering the facts that entitle him or her to rescind, if he or she is free from duress, menace, undue influence, or disability, and is aware of his or her right to rescind [Civ. Code § 1691]:

- Give notice of rescission to the plaintiff; and

- Restore to the plaintiff everything of value the defendant received from the plaintiff under the contract, or offer to restore it on condition that the plaintiff do likewise, unless the plaintiff is unable or positively refuses to do so.

Paragraphs 4 and 5 allege that these conditions have been satisfied.

§ 140.136 Affirmative Defense--Waiver of Breach

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Waiver of Breach

AS A [_____ (specify number, if more than one, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [add, if more than one cause of action was alleged, TO THE _____ (specify number, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

On _____ [date], plaintiff had full knowledge that defendant had not _____ [specify performance or lack of performance constituting breach], and plaintiff waived his/her/its right to performance on that date, in that plaintiff elected to treat the contract as still alive, viable, and binding, and plaintiff accepted further performance of the contract from defendant in that _____ [specify].

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the defendant breached the contract, but the plaintiff waived the breach.

[3] Waiver of Breach as Defense

A breach of contract is waived by continued performance on the part of the aggrieved party without a claim of breach [A.B.C. Distrib. Co. v. Distillers Distrib. Corp. (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 175, 187, 316 P.2d 71 ; see Bowman v. Santa Clara County (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 707, 713, 315 P.2d 67 (in case of continuing-obligation contract, waiver of breach up to certain time does not necessarily preclude promisee from asserting subsequent breach); see also § 140.57]. Waiver may be shown by conduct. What conduct constitutes waiver is a question of fact [Bowman v. Santa Clara County (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 707, 713, 315 P.2d 67] .

The plaintiff may waive the right to hold the defendant liable for breach if the plaintiff failed to give timely notice of cancellation of the contract and subsequently accepted a late tender of performance, treating the contract as binding after acquiring full knowledge of the breach [Leiter v. Eltinge (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 306, 317, 54 Cal. Rptr. 703] .

For example, acceptance of rent by a landlord after the tenant's breach of a condition of the lease, with full knowledge of all of the facts, was a waiver of the breach and precluded the landlord from declaring forfeiture of the lease by reason of the breach [Kern Sunset Oil Co. v. Good Roads Oil Co. (1931) 214 Cal. 435, 440, 6 P.2d 71] .

The burden of proving waiver of the right to rescind is on the party asserting and relying on the waiver [Mayer v. Northwood Textile Mills (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 406, 409, 233 P.2d 657] .

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Impossibility [Civ. Code §§ 1441, 1511(2), 1596]

AS A [_____ (specify number, if more than one, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [add, if more than one cause of action was alleged, TO THE _____ (specify number, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

[EITHER]

The _____ [condition or object] of the contract alleged in the complaint was impossible to _____ [fulfill or perform] at the time defendant was to have _____ [fulfilled or performed] it in that _____ [specify].

[OR]

Defendant's performance of the obligation to _____ [specify] was prevented by _____ [an irresistible, superhuman cause or the act of public enemies of California or the act of public enemies of the United States] in that _____ [specify].

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the defendant's fulfillment of a condition or performance of the object of the contract was impossible or prevented by a superhuman cause or an act of the public enemy.

[3] Impossibility as Defense

Impossibility of performance is an affirmative defense. The burden of proving it rests on the defendant [Oosten v. Hay Haulers Dairy Employees & Helpers Union (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 784, 788, 291 P.2d 17 , cert. denied, 351 U.S. 937 (1956) ; see § 140.45]. Whether impossibility exists is a question of law [Autry v. Republic Productions, Inc. (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 144, 157, 180 P.2d 888] .

An impossible condition in a contract is void [Civ. Code § 1441]. Performance is excused by the intervention of an irresistible superhuman cause or an act of public enemies [Civ. Code § 1511(2); but see, e.g., Civ. Code §§ 2194, 2195 (liability of inland common carrier of property for loss or injury caused by act of public enemy or superhuman cause); Com. Code § 2613 (rights of buyer when goods suffer casualty without fault of buyer or seller before risk of loss passes to buyer or under "no arrival, no sale" contract)]. The object of a contract must be possible by the time the contract is to be performed [Civ. Code § 1596]. Everything is deemed possible except that which is impossible in the nature of things [Civ. Code § 1597]. A contract with a single object that is wholly impossible of performance is void [Civ. Code § 1598].

Impracticability because of excessive and unreasonable difficulty or expense may be a defense [Christin v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 526, 533, 71 P.2d 205 ; see § 140.45].

[4] Act of God and Force Majeure

No party is responsible for that which no party can control [Civ. Code § 3526]. Acts of God are within this rule of law, as acts of God are events that occur independently of human agency [Conlin v. Coyne (1937) 19 Cal. App. 2d 78, 87, 64 P.2d 1123] . Damage by the elements is equivalent to an act of God [Pope v. Farmers' Union etc. Co. (1900) 130 Cal. 139, 141, 62 P. 384] . The words "irresistible, superhuman cause" are equivalent in meaning to the phrase "act of God," and refer to natural causes the effects of which cannot be prevented by the exercise of prudence, diligence, and care [Ryan v. Rogers (1892) 96 Cal. 349, 353, 31 P. 244] . The jury is required to determine as a fact whether the injury was caused by an act of God [Conlin v. Coyne (1937) 19 Cal. App. 2d 78, 87, 64 P.2d 1123 (jury's conclusion, if reasonably supported by evidence, conclusive on appeal)].

"Force majeure" is not limited to the meaning of "act of God." The test of force majeure is whether in the particular circumstances there was such an insuperable interference, occurring without the bound party's intervention, as could not have been prevented by the exercise of prudence, diligence, and care [Pacific Vegetable Oil Corp. v. C.S.T., Ltd. (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 228, 238, 174 P.2d 441] .

The rule that no one is responsible for damage caused by an act of God does not inure to the benefit of one who could have avoided the damage by complying with the contract [Holt Manufacturing Co. v. Thornton (1902) 136 Cal. 232, 235, 68 P. 708] .

On or about _____ [date], the obligation set forth in the complaint was fully discharged by defendant's payment to plaintiff of the sum of $_____, which was the full amount due and was accepted by plaintiff in full payment of the obligation.

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the defendant discharged the obligation sued on by payment [see Civ. Code §§ 1473, 1478 (full performance of obligation, if accepted by creditor, extinguishes it, and payment is performance of obligation for delivery of money only); Sousa v. First California Co. (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 533, 540, 225 P.2d 955 (performance consists of delivery and acceptance of money of other thing)].

A denial in the answer should be sufficient to put the fact of payment in issue, since the plaintiff must allege nonpayment to state a cause of action [Hawley Bros. etc. Co. v. Brownstone (1899) 123 Cal. 643, 646, 56 P. 468 ; Davanay v. Eggenhoff (1872) 43 Cal. 395, 397] . However, since the California Supreme Court holds payment to be an affirmative defense that must be pleaded, the safer practice is to plead payment as an affirmative defense [*Pastene v. If payment is by uncertified check, the underlying obligation is not discharged until the check is paid [Com. Code § 3310(b)(1); *Cornwell v. Bank of America (1990) 224 Cal. [2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of a contract to pay money, when the defendant tendered payment to the plaintiff, and, immediately after the plaintiff's refusal to accept the tender, the defendant deposited the money, in the plaintiff's name, in a bank or savings and loan association in California, of good repute, and notified the plaintiff of the deposit. The obligation is extinguished by the tender, deposit, and notice [Civ. Code § 1500; e.g., Taliaferro v. Taliaferro (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 109, 113, 300

§ 140.140 Affirmative Defense--Prevention of Performance [Civ. Code § 1511(1)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Prevention of Performance [Civ. Code § 1511(1)]

AS A [_____ (specify number, if more than one, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [add, if more than one cause of action was alleged, TO THE _____ (specify number, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

1. Defendant has performed all of the conditions of the contract on his/her/its part to be performed except _____ [specify condition not performed].

2. Defendant failed to perform the condition of _____ [specify condition] because plaintiff prevented defendant's performance by _____ [specify plaintiff's acts preventing defendant's performance, e.g., barring him/her/it from the premises where defendant was to do the work required by the terms of the contract].

3. At all times mentioned defendant was and is ready, willing, and able to perform the condition, but plaintiff has prevented and continues to prevent defendant's performance.

[4. On _____ [date], defendant gave notice to plaintiff that _____ (specify contents of notice, e.g., defendant intended to claim an extension of time to complete performance of the contract).]

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the plaintiff prevented the defendant's performance. The want of performance of an obligation, or an offer of performance in whole or in part, or any delay in performance, is excused when the performance or offer is prevented or delayed by the act of the creditor, or by the operation of law, even though the parties stipulated that this would not be an excuse [see Taylor v. Sapritch (1940) 38 Cal. App. 2d 478, 481, 101 P.2d 539] . However, the parties may expressly require in the contract that the party relying on prevention to excuse the party's performance must give written notice to the other party of an intention to claim an extension of time or of an intention to bring suit or of any other similar or related intent, within a reasonable time after the occurrence of the event excusing performance, provided the notice requirement is reasonable and just [Civ. Code § 1511(1)] (Paragraph 4).

If the creditor prevents performance of an obligation, the debtor is entitled to all the benefits the debtor would have received if both parties had performed the contract [Civ. Code § 1512]. For example, when theowner's breach delayed the contractor in the construction of a building, the contractor was excused from performance within the time specified and was entitled to damages [Kenworthy v. State of California (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 378, 382, 46 Cal. Rptr. 396] .

§ 140.141 Affirmative Defense--Novation [Civ. Code § 1530]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Novation [Civ. Code § 1530]

AS A [_____ (specify number, if more than one, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [add, if more than one cause of action was alleged, TO THE _____ (specify number, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

1. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant made a new contract in writing, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit _____ and made a part of this pleading.

2. The new contract _____ [substituted a new obligation, namely, _____ (describe new obligation) between the parties with the intent to extinguish the obligation created by the original contract sued on or substituted a new debtor, _____(name of new debtor), in place of defendant, with the intent to release defendant or substituted a new creditor, _____ (name of new creditor), in place of plaintiff, with the intent to transfer the rights of plaintiff to the new creditor].

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the parties to the contract made a novation.

[3] Methods of Making Novation

A novation is the substitution of a new obligation for an existing one [Civ. Code § 1530; Alexander v. Angel (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 856, 860, 236 P.2d 561] . It requires an intent to discharge the old contract, mutual assent, and consideration [Howard v. County of Amador (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 962, 977-978, 269 Cal. Rptr. 807] . Whether these elements are present is a question of fact [Klepper v. Hoover (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 460, 463, 98 Cal. Rptr. 482] . A novation is subject to the general rules governing contracts [Civ. Code § 1532].

A novation is made by one of the following methods [Civ. Code § 1531]:

- The substitution of a new obligation between the parties, with intent to extinguish the old obligation [Howard v. County of Amador (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 962, 977-978, 269 Cal. Rptr. 807 ; Hunt v. Smyth (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 818].

- The substitution of a new debtor in place of the old one, with the intent to release the latter [Alexander v. Angel (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 856, 860, 236 P.2d 561] . Acceptance of payments from a new debtor does not amount to a contract to release the original debtor, however[University of Redlands v. Ford (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 151, 152, 132 P.2d 238] .

- The substitution of a new creditor in place of the old one, with intent to transfer the rights of the latter to the former.

[4] Pleading and Evidence of Novation

The defendant must plead novation expressly or by unequivocal implication [Alexander v. Angel (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 856, 860, 236 P.2d 561] . Although a novation may be established by implication, the implication cannot arise until there is evidence showing facts and circumstances from which the court may reasonably infer that the parties intended a novation [Paykar Construction, Inc. v. Spilat Construction Corp. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 488, 494, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 863 (no evidence that subcontractor who settled with property owners and accepted promissory note in lieu of original debt also intended to substitute note for general contractor's obligation to subcontractor, particularly in light of subcontractor's dismissal of first action against defendants without prejudice); Ayoob v. Ayoob (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 236, 254, 168 P.2d 462] . The burden of proving a novation is on the party asserting it [Alexander v. Angel (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 856, 860, 236 P.2d 561 ; Davies Mach. Co. v. Pine Mountain Club, Inc. (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 18, 24-25, 113 Cal. Rptr. 784 ; see Howard v. County of Amador (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 962, 977-978, 269 Cal. Rptr. 807 (when novation asserted by third party rather than party to original contract, third party has heavy burden of proof, and, absent fraud or collusion, court is warranted in finding in favor of original parties to contract simply because they are original parties)].

If an oral agreement is substituted for an existing written agreement, the extinguishment of the written contract may be shown by parol evidence. Civ. Code § 1698, requiring that a contract in writing be altered only by a contract in writing or by an executed oral agreement, does not apply in this case [Producers Fruit Co. v. Goddard (1925) 75 Cal. App. 737, 756-757, 243 P. 686 (decided before 1976 amendment of Civ. Code § 1698)].

§ 140.142 Affirmative Defense--Lack of Consideration [Civ. Code § 1550]--Written Contract

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Lack of Consideration [Civ. Code § 1550]--Written Contract

AS A [_____ (specify number, if more than one, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [add, if more than one cause of action was alleged, TO THE _____ (specify number, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

The contract was executed without any consideration whatsoever [in that _____ (state facts showing lack of consideration)].

[2] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of contract when there was no consideration for the contract [see Civ. Code § 1550 (consideration as essential element of contract); see, e.g., O'Byrne v. Santa Monica-UCLA Medical Center (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 797, 808-810 (no consideration was given for medical staff bylaws adopted pursuant to 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 70703; thus bylaws did not in and of themselves constitute contract between hospital and physician on its medical staff)]. Lack of consideration is an affirmative defense and must be pleaded [Williams v. Kinsey (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 583, 603, 169 P.2d 487 ; see Civ. Code § 1615]. The burden of pleading and proving lack of consideration is on the party seeking to avoid the contract or invalidate it on that ground [Civ. Code § 1615; Blonder v. Gentile (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 869, 874, 309 P.2d 147] .

In addition to alleging that the contract was executed without consideration, it is better practice to plead facts showing that no consideration existed. Some courts have held that pleading in so many words that a contract was executed without any consideration whatever states a good defense [Bank of Italy v. Wetzel (1927) 82 Cal. App. 240, 244, 255 P. 254 ; see First-Trust Joint Stock Land Bank of Chicago v. Meredith (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 214, 221, 53 P.2d 958] . However, other courts have held that pleading execution of the contract without consideration is a conclusion of law and the defendant should state facts to show that no consideration existed [Gushee v. Leavitt (1855) 5 Cal. 160, 161 ; Drovers Nat'l Bank v. Browne (1928) 88 Cal. App. 716, 723, 264 P. 265] .

For further discussion, see § 140.23.

§ 140.143 Affirmative Defense--Statute of Frauds [Civ. Code § 1624]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Statute of Frauds [Civ. Code § 1624]

AS A [_____ (specify number, if more than one, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [add, if more than one cause of action was alleged, TO THE _____ (specify number, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

Plaintiff's alleged cause of action is barred by the provisions of subdivision _____ [number] of Civil Code Section 1624 in that the contract _____ [specify how the contract violates the statute of frauds, e.g., is an agreement that by its terms is not to be performed within a year], and no note or memorandum of it is in writing and subscribed by defendant or defendant's agent.

[2] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the contract comes within the statute of frauds [see Civ. Code § 1624 (contracts that must be written); Com. Code § 2201 (contract for sale of goods for $500 or more); Fam. Code § 1611 (contracts for marriage settlements); Prob. Code § 21700 (contract to make will or not to revoke will or other instrument); see also Civ. Code § 1698(c) (statute of frauds must be satisfied if written contract modified by oral agreement is within its provisions); Civ. Code § 2794 (when promise to answer for obligation of another need not be in writing)] and is not evidenced by an appropriate writing.

[3] Pleading Statute of Frauds

If the face of the complaint shows that the contract was oral and within the statute of frauds, the defendant may raise the defense by a general demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]. Defendant may use a special demurrer in a superior court action to force the plaintiff to state whether the contract is written or oral or implied by conduct [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(g); see § 140.130]. However, a general denial is sufficient to raise the defense of the statute of frauds [Howard v. Adams (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 253, 257, 105 P.2d 971] . The defendant may also make a specific denial of the contract [Walsh v. Standart (1917) 174 Cal. 807, 810, 164 P. 795] . Although a general or specific denial is sufficient to raise the defense, the more informative and better practice is to specifically plead the statute. For a more detailed discussion and forms relating to the statute of frauds, see Ch. 530, Statute of Frauds .

[4] Defendant's Waiver of Statute

The promisor may waive the protection of the statute of frauds [Romano v. Wilbur Ellis & Co. (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 670, 674, 186 P.2d 1012] . When the complaint alleges an oral agreement within the statute of frauds, and the defendant does not demur, plead the statute in the answer, or assert it during the trial, the defendant waives the defense [Baggesi v. Baggesi (1950) 100 Cal. App. 2d 828, 835, 224 P.2d 894] . Admitting the contract in the answer does not waive the protection of the statute of frauds, however, if the defendant specifically pleads the statute [Jamison v. Hyde (1903) 141 Cal. 109, 112, 74 P. 695] .

The defense of the statute of frauds may not be raised for the first time on appeal [Rutland, Edwards & Co. v. Cooke (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 258, 262, 112 P.2d 287] .

§ 140.144 Affirmative Defense--Contract Contrary to Express Provision of Law [Civ. Code § 1667(1)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Contract Contrary to Express Provision of Law [Civ. Code § 1667(1)]

AS A [_____ (specify number, if more than one, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [add, if more than one cause of action was alleged, TO THE _____ (specify number, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

The contract alleged in the complaint is unenforceable because it is contrary to an express provision of law, namely _____ [specify illegality].

[2] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the contract is contrary to a particular law [see § 140.24].

[3] Necessity of Pleading Illegality

Generally, illegality of a contract is an affirmative defense and should be specially pleaded if the illegality does not appear from the face of the complaint [see Eaton v. Brock (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 10, 13, 268 P.2d 58 ; see Yoo v. Robi (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1089, 1103, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 740 (defense of illegality based on public policy [violation of Talent Agencies Act] not raised as affirmative defense was not waived when issue was raised in petition to Labor Commissioner, whose decision was appealed in contract action)]. Nevertheless, illegality is a defense if the illegality appears on the face of the contract or the evidence proving the contract discloses the illegality [Cain v. Burns (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 439, 442, 280 P.2d 888 ; see Fomco, Inc. v. Joe Maggio, Inc. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 162, 166, 10 Cal. Rptr. 462, 358 P.2d 918 (finding no cases permitting trial court to grant motion for new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence of illegality when no evidence introduced at trial establishing illegality and moving party made no showing of exercise of diligence required by Code Civ. Proc. § 657(4))].

The defense of illegality may be raised for the first time on appeal when the evidence at trial discloses the illegality [see

Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 147-148, 308 P.2d 713 ; La Fortune v. Ebie (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 72, 75, 102 Cal. Rptr. 588 ; contra Prudential Ins. Co. v. Fromberg (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 185, 190, 49 Cal. Rptr. 475] .

[4] Illegality Is Unavoidable Issue

A party to an illegal contract cannot ratify it, be estopped from relying on the illegality, or waive the right to assert the defense [City Lincoln--Mercury Co. v. Lindsey (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 267, 274]. The court may raise the issue of illegality on its own motion when the evidence shows illegality, even if the parties did not raise issue at trial [Bovard v. American Horse Enterprises, Inc. (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 832, 838, 247 Cal. Rptr. 340] .

[5] Contracts Held to Be Illegal

A lawful object is an essential element of a contract [Civ. Code § 1550]. A contract is unlawful if it is contrary to an express provision of law [Civ. Code § 1667(1); see Civ. Code § 1689(b)(5) (rescission of unlawful contract)]. The law may be a federal law or a state law [Hainey v. Narigon (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 528, 531, 55 Cal. Rptr. 638] . Examples of contracts held to be illegal include:

- An agreement for the establishment of a plant in Iran to manufacture computer products to be sold in Iran was held unenforceable as illegal and against public policy in that it violated U.S. presidential executive orders and implementing regulations prohibiting U.S. persons from engaging in transactions relating to the supply of technology to Iran [Kashani v. Tsann Kuen China Enterprise, Ltd. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 531, 537, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 174] .

- A contract by a hospital to compensate the director of mental health services based on a percentage of gross revenues for room and board charges of all psychiatric patients in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 650 was void [Beck v. American Health Group Internat., Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1555, 1564-1565, 260 Cal. Rptr. 237 (sustaining demurrer without leave to amend)].

- An agreement employing a person to act as a real estate broker who was not licensed was void [Fellom v. Adams (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 855, 862, 79 Cal. Rptr. 633] .

§ 140.145 Affirmative Defense--Contract Contrary to Public Policy or Good Morals [Civ. Code § 1667(2), (3)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Contract Contrary to Public Policy or Good Morals [Civ. Code § 1667(2), (3)]

AS A [_____ (specify number, if more than one, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [add, if more than one cause of action was alleged, TO THE _____ (specify number, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

The contract alleged in the complaint is unenforceable. It is contrary to _____ [the policy of express law or good morals] in that _____ [specify facts].

[2] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the contract is contrary to public policy or good morals [see § 140.24].

[3] Contravention of Public Policy or Good Morals

A lawful object is an essential element of a contract [Civ. Code § 1550]. A contract is unlawful if it is contrary to the policy of express law, even though not expressly prohibited, or otherwise contrary to good morals [Civ. Code § 1667(2), (3); see Civ. Code § 1669 (contract in restraint of marriage); see also Civ. Code § 1689(b)(5) (rescission of unlawful contract); Diosdado v. Diosdado (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 470, 474, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 494 (contract between husband and wife providing for liquidated damages for infidelity held contrary to public policy underlying no-fault provisions for dissolution of marriage)]. For example, Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200, which prohibits fee sharing between attorneys who are not partners without written client consent, was approved to protect the public and promote respect and confidence in the legal profession, and fee-splitting agreements made in the absence of compliance with that rule therefore are unenforceable [see Chambers v. Kay (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 142, 162-163, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 536, 56 P. 3d 645 ; Margolin v. Shemaria (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 891, 903, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 502 (attorney who made case referral to another attorney had no viable contract for sharing of fees; policy considerations that caused enactment of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200, which prohibits attorney fee-sharing unless specified conditions are met, also require that non-complying fee sharing agreement not be enforced by court of law); but see Huskinson & Brown, LLP v. Wolf (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 453, 464, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 693, 84 P.3d 379 (law firm that was barred from recovering under fee-sharing agreement with another firm, due to the absence of written client consent to the agreement required by Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200, held entitled to recover from other firm in quantum meruit for reasonable value of services it rendered on client's behalf)]. The law may be a federal law or a state law [Hainey v. Narigon (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 528, 531, 55 Cal. Rptr. 638] .

The court determines whether a contract violates public policy on the basis of the law as it existed at the time the parties made the contract [Bovard v. American Horse Enterprises, Inc. (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 832, 840 n.3, 247 Cal. Rptr. 340 ; Moran v. Harris (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 913, 918, 182 Cal. Rptr. 519] .

[4] Exculpatory Clause as Against Public Policy

All contracts that have for their object, directly or indirectly, to exempt anyone from responsibility for his or her own fraud, or willful injury to the person or property of another, or violation of law, whether willful or negligent, are against the policy of the law [Civ. Code § 1668; see, e.g., Neubauer v. Goldfarb (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 47, 54-57, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 218 (waiver of corporate directors' and majority shareholders' fiduciary duties to minority shareholder in private close corporation is against public policy and contract provision in buy-sell agreement purporting to effect such a waiver is void)]. The California Supreme Court in Tunkl v. Regents of University of California interpreted Civ. Code § 1668 to invalidate exculpatory clauses in certain types of agreements as contrary to public policy [Tunkl v. Regents of University of California (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 92, 98-101, 32 Cal. Rptr. 33, 383 P.2d 441 (exculpatory clause in hospital admission form); see, e.g., Henrioulle v. Marin Ventures, Inc. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 512, 518-519, 143 Cal. Rptr. 247, 573 P.2d 465 (exculpatory clause in residential lease)]. The Court in Tunkl delineated six criteria for identifying the type of agreement in which an exculpatory clause is invalid as contrary to public policy [see generally Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.170 et seq.; see also Burnett v. Chimney Sweep (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1057, 1065-1066, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 562 (commercial lease involved none of the six characteristics present in Tunkl); Health Net of Cal., Inc. v. Dep't of Health Servs. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 224, 226-227, 234-236 (contractual clause prohibiting any recovery of damages--but not equitable relief--for any violation of statutory or regulatory law not made part of the parties' contractual obligations held invalid under Civ. Code 1668; contract involved public interest under Tunkl); Gavin W. v. YMCA of Metropolitan Los Angeles (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 662, 671-674 (agreement exculpating child care provider from its own negligence is void as against public policy; contract involved public interest under six factors enumerated in Tunkl)].

The plain language of Civ. Code § 1668 shows that its provisions apply to "[a]ll contracts" the object of which is, directly or indirectly, to exempt "anyone" from responsibility for his or her "own fraud, or willful injury to the person or property of another, or violation of law"; therefore, no exculpatory provision in any contract can be invoked by anyone who claims to have the benefit of the provision (whether or not the person is a party to the contract), in order to avoid the legal consequences of the person's own fraud, willful injury of another, or violation oflaw [Manderville v. PCG&S Group, Inc. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1486, 1501-1502, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 59 (defendant real estate broker could not invoke any exculpatory provisions of standard-form CAR contract of sale between plaintiff and broker's client, to avoid liability for broker's intentional misrepresentation to plaintiff)].

The criteria established for determining whether an exculpatory clause is unenforceable on the ground of contravening public policy are not applicable to a commercial transaction between large, sophisticated companies [Appalachian Ins. Co. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1, 27-32, 262 Cal. Rptr. 716 ; see CAZA Drilling (California), Inc. v. TEG Oil & Gas U.S.A., Inc. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 453, 475, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 271 (if only question is which of two equal bargainers should bear risk of economic loss in event of particular mishap, there is no reason for courts to intervene and remake parties' agreement in light of Civ. Code § 1668); Burnett v. Chimney Sweep (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1057, 1065-1066, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 562 (commercial lease is matter of private contract with which general public is not concerned)]. Nevertheless, exculpatory clauses in commercial contracts may be void under

Civ. Code § 1668 [see, e.g., Blankenheim v. E.F. Hutton & Co. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1472-1473, 266 Cal. Rptr. 593 (hold harmless agreement signed by investors void in action by investors against stockbroker for negligent misrepresentation)].

Exculpatory clauses have withstood challenges in various cases; for example:

- A hybrid contractual waiver in an employment agreement that preserved an employee's claims against his corporate employer but waived his right to sue the corporation's officers, directors, and shareholders for damages arising out of the employment agreement was not unenforceable for illegality under Civ. Code § 1668, primarily because the contractual provision was the result of a private, voluntary transaction in which the employee retained the right to seek redress from the corporation [Farnham v. Superior Court (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 69, 77-78, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85] .

- A conspicuous and reasonable exculpatory clause in a ski equipment rental agreement was not unenforceable for illegality under Civ. Code § 1668 merely because of the recreational-sports context, since recreational sports do not constitute a public interest [Westlye v. Look Sports (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1715, 1731-1733, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 781 ; accord YMCA of Metropolitan Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 22, 26-29, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 612 (release in agreement for participation in YMCA-sponsored programs for senior citizens); see also Benedek v. PLC Santa Monica, LLC (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1351, 1358-1359, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 (express language of unambiguous release of health club from all premises liability applied to personal injuries unrelated to exercise suffered by member; release of premises liability in consideration of permission to enter recreational facilities does not violate public policy)]. However, an agreement made in the context of sports or recreational programs or services, purporting to release anyone from liability for future gross negligence, generally is unenforceable as a matter of public policy [City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (Janeway) (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 747, 776-777, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527, 161 P.3d 1095] .

- An indemnity and hold harmless agreement was not unenforceable when only one of the criteria set forth in Tunkl v. Regents of University of California (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 92, 98-101, 32 Cal. Rptr. 33, 383 P. 2d 441 , for determining whether exculpatory clause is unenforceable on grounds of public interest applied [Rooz v. Kimmel (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 573, 588-590, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 177 ; see Queen Villas Homeowners Ass'n v. TCB Property Mgmt. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1, 6, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 528 (" Rooz, however, merely illustrates an extreme end of the rule of strict construction: If parties go out of their way and say 'we really, really mean it,' language clearly contemplating exculpation may be enforced.")].

- An exculpatory clause limiting a telephone directory company's liability for negligent failure to publish an advertisement was not unenforceable for illegality under Civ. Code § 1668, primarily because the standard form contract contained an offer to negotiate a different limitation and the plaintiff did not seek to do that [McCarn v. Pacific Bell Directory (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 173, 178-183, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109] .

- A release regarding injuries sustained while participating in a hypnotism show sponsored by a student-parent-teacher association was not invalid on public policy grounds because the activity did not constitute providing essential goods or services but was only recreational [Hohe v. San Diego Unified Sch. Dist. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1559, 1563-1564, 274 Cal. Rptr. 647] .

PART V. FORMS
B. Demurrers and Defenses

13-140 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 140.146

§ 140.146 Affirmative Defense--Unconscionability [Civ. Code § 1670.5]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Unconscionability [Civ. Code § 1670.5]

AS A [_____ (specify number, if more than one, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [add, if more than one cause of action was alleged, TO THE _____ (specify number, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

[Paragraph _____ of] [T]he contract alleged in the complaint is unenforceable [or construction and application of (that provision of) the contract should be limited to avoid an unconscionable result] because it was unconscionable at the time the contract was made, in that _____ [specify facts].

[2] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the contract or a clause of the contract was unconscionable at the time it was made [see § 140.25].

[3] Pleading and Proving Unconscionability

The statutory basis for the defense of unconscionability is Civ. Code § 1670.5, which does not define unconscionability but authorizes a court to refuse to enforce an unconscionable contract or clause [Civ. Code § 1670.5(a); see, e.g., Flores v. Transamerica Homefirst, Inc. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 846, 857-858, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376 (court refused to sever unconscionable arbitration provisions in reverse mortgage agreement); Bolter v. Superior Court (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 900, 910-911, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888 (unconscionable place and manner clauses in arbitration agreement regarding forum selection, consolidation restrictions, and damages limitations found clearly severable from remainder of agreement)]. The defendant may present evidence regarding the commercial setting, purpose, and effect of the contract to aid the court in determining whether the contract or a clause is unconscionable [Civ. Code § 1670.5(b)].

The party relying on unconscionability has the burden of proof [e.g., Trend Homes, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 950, 957-964, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 411 (purchasers of home failed to present evidence sufficient to support their assertion that provision for judicial reference as exclusive remedy under purchase contract was unconscionable)].

A party cannot state a claim for damages or injunctive relief under Civ. Code § 1670.5 based on the unconscionability of contract terms. However, if a contract is unconscionable, the court may award damages or injunctive relief under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 on the ground that imposing the offending terms constituted an unfair business practice [Shadoan v. World Savings & Loan Assn. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 97, 101, 268 Cal. Rptr. 207] .

When a complaint challenged a prepayment penalty as unconscionable and an unfair business practice, pleading lack of alternative financing without the offending term and the plaintiff's relative lack of bargaining power was a conclusion and without facts, and the trial court properly sustained a demurrer. Further, the prepayment penalty was not oppressive or unreasonably favorable to the defendant [Shadoan v. World Savings & Loan Assn. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 97, 103-106, 268 Cal. Rptr. 207] .

[4] Determination of Unconscionability

[a] Procedural and Substantive Aspects

Determining unconscionability encompasses procedural and substantive aspects. "The procedural element focuses on two factors: oppression and surprise. Oppression arises from an inequality of bargaining power which results in no real negotiation and an absence of meaningful choice. ... Surprise involves the extent to which the terms of the bargain are hidden in a 'prolix printed form' drafted by a party in a superior bargaining position" [Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189 , quoting Olsen v. Breeze, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 608, 621, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818] . There is no general rule that a form contract is procedurally unconscionable [see [b], below]. Rather, procedural unconscionability arises from the manner in which the contract is presented to the party in the weaker position [Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189] . No extrinsic evidence of procedural unconscionability is required when a great disparity of power can be inferred from the parties' relationship or from the contract itself [Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189 (unconscionability could not be inferred from the relationship between a consumer and a motor home dealer)].

Substantive unconscionability is evaluated as of the time the contract was made and consists of an allocation of risks in an objectively unreasonable manner [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 113-114, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 (reversing order compelling arbitration in wrongful termination action brought under FEHA); Szetela v. Discover Bank (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 1094, 1099-1100 (citing Armendariz and finding class arbitration waiver provision in consumer credit card agreement to be both procedurally and substantively unconscionable); Villa Milano Homeowners Association v. IL Davorge (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 819, 835-836, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (arbitration clause contained in CC&Rs was unconscionable adhesion contract and unenforceable to extent it applied to construction and design defect claims against developer who drafted, signed, and recorded CC&Rs); Nunes Turfgrass, Inc. v. Vaughan-Jacklin Seed Co. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1518, 1535 ; Kurashige v. Indian Dunes, Inc. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 606, 613-614, 246 Cal.Rptr. 310 ; see § 140.25[2]]. A compelling showing of substantive unconscionability supersedes a weaker showing of procedural unconscionability [Carboni v. Arrospide (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 76, 86, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 845 ; West v. Henderson (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1578, 1588, 278 Cal. Rptr. 570] .

The courts have recognized that there is a sliding scale or a balancing relationship between the two elements of unconscionability. The greater the degree of unfair surprise or unequal bargaining power, the less the degree of substantive unconscionability required to annul the contract, and vice versa [Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 148, 160-161, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 113 P.3d 1100 (finding class arbitration waiver provision in consumer credit card agreement to be both procedurally and substantively unconscionable); Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189 ; Harper v. Ultimo (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1402, 1406, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 418 (finding arbitration provision in construction contract to be both procedurally and substantively unconscionable); Woodside Homes v. Superior Court (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 723, 730, 736, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 35 (low level of procedural unconscionability required high level of substantive unconscionability; agreements for judicial reference held enforceable); Mercuro v. Superior Court (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 167, 174-175 (given employer's highly oppressive conduct in securing employee's consent to arbitration agreement, employee needed to make only minimal showing of substantive unconscionability); Marin Storage & Trucking, Inc. v. Benco Contracting and Engineering, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 1056, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 645 (in light of low level of procedural unfairness in adhesion contract containing indemnity clause, greater degree of substantive unfairness than that shown was required before contract could be found substantively unconscionable)].

[b] Standardized Form of Contract

A standardized form does not automatically render a contract unconscionable [Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189 (no general rule of unconscionability exists regarding form contracts); Marin Storage & Trucking, Inc. v. Benco Contracting and Engineering, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 1052, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 645 (although standardized contract could be considered contract of adhesion, that finding merely begins inquiry of whether particular provision within contract should be denied enforcement because it defeats expectations of weaker party or is unduly oppressive or unconscionable); Coon v. Nicola (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1225, 1235, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 846] . A standardized form does not establish the adhesive character of the contract. The court must consider the relative bargaining powers of the parties and the availability of contract benefits from other sources [see § 140.25[2][c]]. Conversely, the fact that certain terms of a standardized contract vary among inferior parties does not itself demonstrate that an objectionable provision was actively negotiated or eliminate the possibility that the provision is unconscionable [Ellis v. McKinnon Broadcasting Co. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 1796, 1805, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 80] .

Even if the contract is adhesive, an arbitration clause is enforceable if it is not in conflict with the reasonable expectations of the weaker party or unduly oppressive or unconscionable [Izzi v. Mesquite Country Club (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1309, 1317-1318, 231 Cal. Rptr. 315] . If a contract is adhesive, the court applies a sliding scale. There must be some showing of substantive unconscionability [Soltani v. Western & Southern Life Insurance Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1038, 1042-1045 (holding that employment contract provision shortening limitations period for wrongful termination action to six months was not unconscionable)].

A finding that a contract is one of adhesion is essentially a finding of procedural unconscionability. Substantive unconscionability focuses on the one-sidedness of the contract terms. In the context of an arbitration agreement, the agreement is unconscionable unless there is a "modicum of bilaterality" in the arbitration remedy [Flores v. Transamerica Homefirst, Inc. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 846, 853-855, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376 (citing Armendariz; finding arbitration provisions procedurally and substantive unconscionable); Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 117, 6 P.3d 669] .

Another kind of substantively unconscionable provision in the context of an arbitration agreement occurs when the party imposing arbitration mandates a post-arbitration proceeding, either judicial or arbitral, wholly or largely to its benefit at the expense of the party on which the arbitration is imposed [Little v. Auto Stiegler (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1072-1074, 1076, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 (finding provision in mandatory employment arbitration agreement that permitted either party to appeal arbitration award of more than $50,000 to second arbitrator to be unconscionable, but concluding that provision could be severed and rest of agreement enforced)].

[c] Parties' Relative Positions

The fact that a manufacturer is better able than a buyer to detect defects in a product was not relevant in evaluating a claim of unconscionability of warranty disclaimer and hold harmless clauses, when the manufactured item was not mass-produced but was the product of specialized high technology, it was a high risk product, and the contract was not preprinted but was negotiated by the parties [Appalachian Ins. Co. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1, 25-26, 262 Cal. Rptr. 716] .

A buyer that drafted one of two exculpatory clauses in a contract and dealt with similar provisions in previous contracts between the parties could not claim surprise at the scope of provisions claimed to be unconscionable [AppalachianIns. Co. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1, 24-25, 262 Cal. Rptr. 716] .

Between large, sophisticated companies, no procedural element of unconscionability was established by an allegation of total monopoly in the manufacture of upper-stage rockets used to launch communications satellites, when a third company, with which the buyer originally contracted, provided an alternative launch capability [Appalachian Ins. Co. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1, 23, 262 Cal. Rptr. 716] . Similarly, there is nothing inherent in the relationship between a motor home buyer and motor home dealership from which to infer a great disparity of bargaining power [Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1166, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189 (noting buyer's freedom not to make elective purchase)].

With regard to employment agreements, arbitration provisions that limited employee remedies, contained oppressive cost provisions, and inherently favored the employer without reasonable justification, were found in Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. to be so one-sided as to be unconscionable and unenforceable [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 124-125, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 (reversing order compelling arbitration in wrongful termination action brought under FEHA); Pinedo v. Premium Tobacco Stores, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 774, 780-781 (affirming order denying arbitration in action brought under FEHA); see Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 740-743, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422 (citing principles set forth in Armendariz and remanding case to trial court to determine whether Armendariz applied to make parties' arbitration agreement unenforceable); see also § 140.25[2][b]]. This same reasoning was used by a federal court in determining that an employment contract provision requiring 10 days written notice to the employer as a prerequisite to filing suit was unenforceable. The court found that, as in Armendariz, the effect of the provision was to maximize employer advantage without reasonable justification for that arrangement. The failure to comply with the provision deprived an employee of a judicial forum and its concomitant rights [Soltani v. Western & Southern Life Insurance Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1038, 1045-1047] . In a case involving a mandatory preemployment arbitration agreement in which a provision permitting either party to appeal an arbitration award of more than $50,000 to a second arbitrator was found unconscionable under Armendariz, the court concluded that the offending provision could be severed. Unlike the agreement in Armendariz, this contract involved only a single provision that was unconscionable, and no contract reformation was required [Little v. Auto Stiegler (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1072-1074, 1076, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979] .

In the context of real property developments, an arbitration clause contained in covenants, conditions, and restrictions (CC&Rs) was held to be an unconscionable adhesion contract that was unenforceable to the extent it applied to construction and design defect claims against the developer who drafted, signed, and recorded the CC&Rs [Villa Milano Homeowners Association v. Il Davorge (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 819, 835-836, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1] . Similarly, real estate purchase agreements containing a provision requiring all disputes to be submitted to judicial reference were held to be adhesive contracts fatally infected with procedural and substantive unconscionability [Pardee Construction Company v. Superior Court (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1081, 1086-1087, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288 (trial court properly denied home builder's motion for appointment of judicial referee; contract provision presented each entry-level home buyer with "take it or leave it" proposition)].

In the context of consumer credit card agreements, an arbitration clause that prohibited class treatment of small individual claims was held to be unconscionable and unenforceable [Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 148, 162-163, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 113 P.3d 1100 ; Szetela v. Discover Bank (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 1094, 1099-1102, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 862] .

In the case of a satellite TV customer agreement, a provision in an arbitration clause prohibiting class or representative claims in arbitration was unconscionable and unenforceable, based on application of the Discover Bank principles. Because the customer agreement expressly prohibited the severance of that provision from the remainder of the arbitration clause, the entire arbitration clause was unenforceable [Cohen v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1442, 1447, 1451-1453, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 813 (summaries of other cases)].

[d] Liquidated Damages Provision

The reasonableness standard set forth in Civ. Code § 1671(b), concerning liquidated damages, provides for more judicial scrutiny than is allowed under unconscionability standards [see, e.g., Ridgley v. Topa Thrift and Loan Assn. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 970, 979-981, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378, 953 P.2d 484 (Cal. Supreme Court evaluated clause in promissory note which was both prepayment charge and late payment penalty); see also Ch. 177, Damages]. An unreasonable risk allocation could invalidate a liquidated damages clause without the clause's being unconscionable, but a liquidated damages clause that is reasonable under Civ. Code § 1671(b) cannot be unconscionable [H.S. Perlin Co. v. Morse Signal Devices (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1289, 1301-1302, 258 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

[e] Conscionability of Price

Factors relevant to determining whether a price is unconscionable include all of the following [Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 926-929, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503 , appeal dismissed, 475 U.S. 1001 (1986) ; see Civ. Code § 1670.5]:

- The basis and justification for the charged amount.
- The price paid by other similarly situated consumers in similar transactions.
- The inconvenience imposed on the seller.
- The true value of the goods or services.
- The absence of a meaningful choice for the buyer.
- Whether deceptive practices are involved.

A price set by a freely competitive market is unlikely to be unconscionable, but a market price set by oligopoly is subject to scrutiny [Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 927, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503 .

[5] Provisions Held Unconscionable

[a] Arbitration Clauses

The following are examples of arbitration clauses that have been held to be unconscionable [see generally Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration]:

- An arbitration clause in a contract for a television show was procedurally and substantively unconscionable. The weaker parties were five siblings who were young and unsophisticated and had recently lost both parents. The arbitration provision appeared in one paragraph near the end of a lengthy, single-spaced document. No words were printed in bold letters or larger font, nor were they capitalized. Although the siblings were required to place their initials in boxes adjacent to six other paragraphs, no box appeared next to the arbitration provision. The arbitration provision was substantively unconscionable because it required only the siblings to submit their claims to arbitration; only the television show producers, not the siblings, could compel arbitration; and the provision barred only the siblings from seeking appellate review of the arbitrator's decision [Higgins v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1252-1254, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 293] .

- An arbitration clause in an employment contract was unconscionable because it provided the employer more rights and greater remedies than would otherwise be available, and deprived employees of significant rights and remedies they would normally enjoy [Stiren v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1542, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138 , 60 Cal. Rptr. 32d 138; see Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 124-125, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 (reversing order compelling arbitration in wrongful termination action brought under FEHA); accord, Davis v. O'Melveny & Myers (9th Cir. 2007) 485 F.3d 1066, 1084] .

- Provisions in real estate purchase agreements requiring all disputes to be submitted to judicial reference were procedurally and substantively unconscionable [Pardee Construction Company v. Superior Court (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1081, 1090-1092, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288] .

- An arbitration provision in a construction contract that required all controversies under the contract to be settled in accordance with the Uniform Rules for Better Business Bureau Arbitration--which were not attached--was held to be unconscionable [Harper v. Ultimo (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1402, 1406, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 418] .

- An arbitration clause in a consumer credit card agreement that prohibited class treatment of small individual claims was held to be procedurally and substantively unconscionable [Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 148, 162-163, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 113 P.3d 1100 ; Szetela v. Discover Bank (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 1094, 1099-1102, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 862] .

- An arbitration provision in a set of covenants, conditions, and restrictions (CC&Rs), to the extent that the provision applied to construction and design defect claims against the developer who had drafted, signed, and recorded the CC&Rs [Villa Milano Homeowners Association v. Il Davorge (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 819, 835-836, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (arbitration clause in CC&Rs was unconscionable adhesion contract and unenforceable to extent it applied to construction and design defect claims against developer who drafted, signed, and recorded CC&Rs)].

- An arbitration provision in a residential lease, which provided for binding arbitration of personal injury disputes arising from the condition of lease premises (that is, exclusively tenant claims) and which provided no opportunity for tenants to decline the provision, was held unconscionable due to lack of sufficient bilaterality [Jaramillo v. JH Real Estate Partners, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 394, 405-406, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 525] .

[b] Other Contract Provisions

The following are examples of contract provisions other than arbitration clauses that have been held to be unconscionable:

- A telecommunications carrier's new consumer services agreement that barred class actions, imposed an arbitration fee scheme, and required any arbitration to remain confidential, and which imposed the contract on customers without the opportunity for negotiation, modification, or waiver, was held substantively and procedurally unconscionable [Ting v.AT&T (9th Cir. 2003) 319 F.3d 1126, 1148-1152 .

- A provision in an employment contract requiring 10 days written notice to the employer as a prerequisite to filing suit [Soltani v. Western & Southern Life Insurance Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1038, 1045-1047 (finding that effect of provision was to maximize employer advantage without reasonable justification for that arrangement)].

- An advertising salesman's standardized form employment agreement that provided for forfeiture of commissions on previously sold advertising if the employer had not yet received payment on the salesman's termination was both procedurally and substantively unconscionable [Ellis v. McKinnon Broadcasting Co. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 1796, 1803-1805, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 80] .

- An interest rate of 200 percent per year on a loan exempt from the usury law was unconscionable and thus unenforceable, considering that similar loans by exempt lenders would have cost one tenth as much and the borrower was subject to emotional duress when the loan was negotiated, needed the loan to pay pressing obligations, and could not obtain funds any other way [Carboni v. Arrospide (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 76, 82-87, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 845] .

- Allegations that the price charged in standardized, nonnegotiable adhesion contracts by car rental companies for a collision damage waiver was far in excess of a price that would be determined in a competitive business environment, and that on an annualized basis the rate charged was twice the amount of insurance provided, while no competition existed between the defendants for such insurance, were sufficient to support a claim of unconscionability to survive a demurrer [Truta v. Avis Rent A Car System, Inc. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 802, 820-821, 238 Cal. Rptr. 806] .

[6] Provisions Held Not Unconscionable

The following are examples of contract provisions held not to be unconscionable:

- A charge imposed for excess value insurance on packages to be shipped via the carrier from convenience outlets at supply stores, even though it was double the charge that the carrier would have imposed for the same insurance on directly shipped packages [Wayne v. Staples, Inc. (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 466, 482-483, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 544 (amount that office supply store's outlets would charge was clearly disclosed to customers, office supply store's outlets gave customers the option to ship packages without purchasing the excess value coverage as well as option to obtain excess value coverage from other providers, and potential customers had a wide range of choices for shipping their packages at places other than office supply store's outlets)].

- An arbitration provision in a form purchase contract for a used motor home [Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165-1166, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189 (fact that dealer used a form contract for its transactions did not mean contract was unconscionable, and buyer was under no economic compulsion to buy)].

- A clearly marked provision imposing a service fee on a shopping card after 24 months of nonuse [Freeman v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 660, 667-670, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 860 (no take-it-or-leave-it situation existed, as purchaser could use card before imposition of fee or simply decline to purchase shopping card and make purchases by other means)].

- An employment contract provision shortening the limitations period for a wrongful termination action to six months [Soltani v. Western & Southern Life Insurance Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1038, 1042-1045 (no showing of substantive unconscionability)].

- A clause in a real estate sales contract requiring home buyers who sue the builder to submit the dispute to binding judicial reference [Woodside Homes v. Superior Court (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 723, 730, 736, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 35 ; see also Greenbriar Homes Communities, Inc. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 337, 344-346, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371 (provision for judicial reference in real estate purchase and sale agreements found to be neither procedurally nor substantively unconscionable)].

- An indemnity clause in a "Work Authorization and Contract," which had been used between the parties for many years, noted above the signature line that it was a contract that included all terms and conditions on the reverse side, and contained the indemnification clause among other provisions on the reverse side [Marin Storage & Trucking, Inc. v. Benco Contracting and Engineering, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 1052, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 645 (in light of low level of procedural unfairness, greater degree of substantive unfairness than that shown was required before contract could be found substantively unconscionable)].

- A provision in a substance abuse recovery agreement waiving the right to appeal any discipline, including separation from service, to the defendant's personnel board [Robison v. City of Manteca (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 452, 458-459, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 748 (provision found not even remotely material to dismissal for refusal to participate in a substanceabuse program)].

- A provision in a health care service plan giving the insurer the right to modify benefits [Williams v. California Physicians' Service (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 722, 741-744, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497 (amendments were subject to review by Department of Corporations and plan clearly allowed for type of reduction that took place)].

- A release signed by a skier as a condition of enrolling in a ski school, by which he agreed to hold the resort and its employees harmless for any injuries [Allan v. Snow Summit, Inc. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1377, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813 ; but see City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (Janeway) (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 747, 776-777, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527, 161 P.3d 1095 (agreement made in context of sports or recreational programs or services, purporting to release anyone from liability for future gross negligence, generally is unenforceable as matter of public policy)].

- An employment contract that terminated a salesperson's right to receive commissions on payments received on her accounts 30 days after severance of her employment [American Software Inc. v. Ali (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1395, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477] .

- A provision in a bank depositor's signature-card contract imposing a deposit-item-returned fee, based on an industry-wide comparison of fees [California Grocers Ass'n v. Bank of America (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 205, 215-216, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 396] .

- A provision in a television game show participant's contract disqualifying individuals who had been on three game shows and requiring contestants who misrepresented past appearances to forfeit winnings was neither a contract of adhesion nor unconscionable [Winston v. National Broadcasting Co. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 540, 550, 282 Cal. Rptr. 498] .

- A six-month limitation on a tenant's right of action was not unconscionable when the tenant had time and was advised to consult an attorney before signing the lease. The one-sided application of the limitation was justified by the fact that any litigation by the tenant could inhibit the lessor's ability to deal with the property [West v. Henderson (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1578, 1586-1588, 278 Cal. Rptr. 570] .

- A provision in a contract between a developer and an engineer limiting the engineer's liability for economic losses caused by its own negligence was enforceable because it was the result of arm's-length negotiation [Markborough California, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 705, 714-717, 277 Cal. Rptr. 919] .

- A termination fee of $50 for a self-directed IRA account was not unconscionable when other institutions offered IRAs with lower fees. Unconscionability requires a lack of meaningful alternative sources of the goods or services in question [Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 758, 768-772, 259 Cal. Rptr. 789] .

- When the parties had a 20-year commercial relationship, the conscionability of a seller's limitation of consequential damages was tested under Com. Code § 2719(3) and the limitation was a material part of the bargain [Nunes Turfgrass, Inc. v. Vaughan-Jacklin Seed Co. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1518, 1538-1539, 246 Cal. Rptr. 823] .

- A contract between a drawee bank and an agent that issued money orders was not unconscionable in placing the risk of loss on the agent, considering the purpose, effect, business setting, and reasonableness of the contract [Central Bank v. Kaiperm Santa Clara Fed. Credit Union (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 186, 205, 236 Cal. Rptr. 262] .

- A preprinted, standardized contract requiring the party with less bargaining power to provide and maintain insurance and indemnify the other party for all damages except those caused by the sole and exclusive negligence of the stronger party was not one of adhesion since it did not defeat the expectations of weaker party. The contract was not unconscionable, since the costs of indemnification were passed on to the stronger party [Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. v. Bragg Crane & Rigging Co. (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 639, 647-648, 225 Cal. Rptr. 742] .

- A dealership contract was one of adhesion and thus not enforceable. A nonassignment clause was not unconscionable, however, since the agreement was clear, unambiguous, and not susceptible to a reasonable expectation of assignability or survival [San Francisco Newspaper Printing Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 438, 442-444, 216 Cal. Rptr. 462] .

- A contract providing for a commission of 0.65 percent of the sale price if a real estate broker obtained a fully executed purchase and sale agreement that closed escrow, and a second commission of 0.35 percent of the sale price if the broker served through the successful close of escrow, with forfeiture of the latter commission if escrow was not closed on the termination of employment [Chretian v. Donald L. Bren Co. (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 385, 389, 198 Cal. Rptr. 523] .

§ 140.148 Affirmative Defense--Failure of Consideration [Civ. Code § 1689(b)(2)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Failure of Consideration [Civ. Code § 1689(b)(2)]

AS A [_____ (specify number, if more than one, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [add, if more than one cause of action was alleged, TO THE _____ (specify number, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

[1.] Defendant admits that he/she/it failed to perform the obligation described in the complaint but alleges that the failure resulted from plaintiff's failure to _____ [specify], as required by the terms of the contract, and that performance on plaintiff's part was a _____ [condition precedent to or concurrent condition with] the performance of defendant's obligation.

[2. Because of plaintiff's failure and refusal to perform the obligation on his/her/its part to be performed, defendant, on or about _____ (date), rescinded the contract by _____ (specify manner of rescission) and _____ (restored or offered to restore) to plaintiff everything of value that defendant had received under the contract.]

[2] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of contract when there has been a failure of consideration [see § 140.23[9]]. Failure of consideration through the fault of the other party is a ground for rescission [Civ. Code § 1689(b)(2)]. For a discussion of rescission, see Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution .

[3] Failure of Consideration

[a] Lack of Consideration Distinguished

In a bilateral contract, failure of consideration is a defense to an action for a breach of the contract, since it is contemplated that the performance of the promises will be in exchange for each other, the promises being considered as equal in value [Bliss v. California Coop. Producers (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 240, 248, 181 P.2d 369] . Although the terms are sometimes interchanged, "lack of consideration" involves a promise given by one party to another without anything being bargained for or given in exchange for it, while "failure of consideration" means that a performance for which the promisor bargained has not been rendered [Nault v. Smith (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 257, 265-266, 14 Cal. Rptr. 889 ; but see The Money Store v. Southern California Bank (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 722, 728-729, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58 (although contract stated that lender "was to be at no expense in this transaction," deposit of loan funds in exchange for other party's promises was adequate consideration)]. For example, when the promise of a sellerto deliver corporate stock failed without fault on the buyer's part, consideration for the buyer's promise to pay failed in a material respect [McDorman v. Moody (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 136, 141, 122 P.2d 639] .

[b] Worthlessness of Consideration Distinguished

The defense of failure of consideration is not available when the defendant received what the defendant bargained for, but it has become worthless. However, the defense of frustration of purpose may be available [FPI Development, Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 367, 397-401, 282 Cal. Rptr. 508 ; see § 140.46].

Failure of consideration is not established if the contract became unprofitable and the defendant knew that its value could be affected by a particular future event but made no provision in the contract with respect to that risk, only the defendant's error in judgment. Defendant bears the risk, and is not entitled to avoid, rescind, or reform the contract [Mosher v. Mayacamas Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1, 5-6, 263 Cal. Rptr. 373] .

[4] Defense in Action by Assignee

Failure of consideration under a bilateral contract, consisting of breach by the plaintiff's assignor, is a defense to an action by an assignee, whether it occurred before or after notice of the assignment [Dreyfuss v. Burton (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 629, 638, 54 Cal. Rptr. 843] .

§ 140.149 Affirmative Defense--Modification of Oral Contract by Writing [Civ. Code § 1697]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Modification of Oral Contract by Writing [Civ. Code § 1697]

AS A [_____ (specify number, if more than one, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [add, if more than one cause of action was alleged, TO THE _____ (specify number, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

1. On or about _____ [date], the parties consented to a modification of the oral agreement alleged in the complaint in a writing providing that _____ [specify]. A copy of the writing is attached as Exhibit _____ and made a part of this pleading.

2. Defendant has performed all of the conditions of the contract, as modified, on his/her/its part to be performed in accordance with the terms of the contract _____ [except _____ (specify conditions not performed), which defendant did not perform because _____ (specify facts showing excuse for nonperformance)].

[2] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of contract when an oral contract was subsequently modified by the parties' consent. A contract not in writing may be modified in any respect by consent of the parties in writing without a new consideration, and is extinguished to the extent of the modification [Civ. Code § 1697; see Roehm Distrib. Co. v. Burgermeister Brewing Corp. (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 678, 681, 16 Cal. Rptr. 881] .

§ 140.150 Affirmative Defense--Modification of Written Contract by Written Agreement or by Oral Agreement [Civ. Code § 1698(a), (c)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Modification of Written Contract by Written Agreement or by Oral Agreement [Civ. Code § 1698(a), (c)]

AS A [_____ (specify number, if more than one, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [add, if more than one cause of action was alleged, TO THE _____ (specify number, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

[EITHER]

1. On or about _____ [date], the contract was modified by another contract in writing between plaintiff and defendant, providing that _____ [specify]. A copy of the second contract is attached as Exhibit _____ and made a part of this pleading.

[OR]

1. The contract alleged in the complaint did not contain any provision stating that it could not be modified by an oral agreement supported by new consideration. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant made an oral agreement to _____ [specify terms of oral agreement]. The purpose of the oral agreement was to modify the written contract alleged in the complaint. The oral agreement was supported by valuable and new consideration in that _____ [specify new consideration].

[OR]

1. The contract alleged in the complaint provided that it could be modified only in writing. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant made an oral agreement to _____ [specify terms of oral agreement]. Plaintiff is estopped to deny that the contract was modified by that oral agreement because _____ [specify facts showing estoppel, e.g., defendant was misled into believing, at a time when he/she/it was ready to redeem the fur coat, that he/she/it was being given an extra week in which to repay the loan, but during that time the coat was sold by plaintiff for less than the amount of the loan.]

[CONTINUE]

2. Defendant has performed all of the conditions of the contract, as modified, on his/her/its part to be performed in accordance with the terms of the contract [except _____ (specify conditions not performed), which defendant did not perform because _____ (specify facts showing excuse for nonperformance)].

[2] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the parties modified a written contract by another written agreement or by an oral agreement supported by new consideration [see Civ. Code § 1698]. For further discussion of modification, see § 140.112[3].

The court will treat defendant's failure to plead modification of the written contract as an affirmative defense and failure to object to the introduction of evidence pertaining to the oral agreement as a waiver of the defense [James G. Freeman & Associates, Inc. v. Tanner (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 1, 9, 128 Cal. Rptr. 109] .

[3] Modification by Oral Agreement

A written contract may be modified by an oral agreement supported by new consideration [Civ. Code § 1698(c); D.L. Godbey & Sons Constr. Co. v. Deane (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 429, 432-433, 246 P.2d 946 ; Malmstrom v. Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 299, 314, 231 Cal. Rptr. 820 (employee's move after elimination of position to another facility of employer did not amount to consideration because detriment was incidental to preparation to accept out-of-state offer of employment); Raedeke v. Gibraltar Sav. & Loan Asso. (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 665, 673, 111 Cal. Rptr. 693, 517 P.2d 1157 ; see Com. Code § 2209 (modification of contract for sale of goods)]. This rule does not preclude the application of rules of law concerning estoppel, oral novation and substitution of a new agreement, rescission of a written contract by an oral agreement, waiver of a provision of a written contract, or oral independent collateral contracts [Civ. Code § 1698(d)].

An obligation a party was required to perform under the written contract is not consideration that will support an oral modification [Marani v. Jackson (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 695, 704-706, 228 Cal. Rptr. 518] .

Reliance on oral statements that allegedly modified or superseded a written agreement is not justifiable. The doctrine of estoppel is unavailable to provide a basis for an oral modification unless an unconscionable injury or unjust enrichment would result from failure to enforce the oral modification [Malmstrom v. Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 299, 319-320, 231 Cal. Rptr. 820] .

§ 140.151 Affirmative Defense--Modification of Written Contract by Executed Oral Agreement [Civ. Code § 1698(b)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Modification of Written Contract by Executed Oral Agreement [Civ. Code § 1698(b)]

AS A [_____ (specify number, if more than one, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [add, if more than one cause of action was alleged, TO THE _____ (specify number, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant made an oral agreement to _____ [specify terms of oral agreement]. The purpose of the oral agreement was to modify the written contract alleged in the complaint. The oral agreement has been executed in that _____ [specify performance of oral agreement by plaintiff and defendant].

[2] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the parties have modified a written contract by an executed oral agreement. A contract in writing may be modified by an oral agreement to the extent that the oral agreement is executed by the parties [Civ. Code § 1698(b); D.L. Godbey & Sons Constr. Co. v. Deane (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 429, 432, 246 P.2d 946] .

Whether a written contract was modified by an executed oral agreement is a question of fact [Daugherty Co. v. Kimberly-Clark Corp. (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 151, 158, 92 Cal. Rptr. 120] . An agreement to modify a written contract may be implied by conduct of the parties that is inconsistent with the written contract and warrants the conclusion that the parties intended to modify it [Garrison v. Edward Brown & Sons (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 473, 479, 154 P.2d 377 ; Daugherty Co. v. Kimberly-Clark Corp. (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 151, 158, 92 Cal. Rptr. 120] . The party asserting the oral modification must prove the elements of an oral modification of a written contract by a preponderance of the evidence [Barrett v. Bank of America (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1362, 1369, 229 Cal. Rptr. 16] .

A provision in a written contract prohibiting modification except in a writing before completion of the transaction precludes modification by an executed oral agreement [Marani v. Jackson (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 695, 704-705, 228 Cal. Rptr. 518] .

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Alteration of Written Contract Without Consent [Civ. Code § 1700]

AS A [_____ (specify number, if more than one, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [add, if more than one cause of action was alleged, TO THE _____ (specify number, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

1. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff materially modified, altered, and changed the terms of the contract alleged in the complaint, in that _____ [specify].

2. Plaintiff's modification, alteration, and change of the original contract was intentional and without the consent or knowledge of defendant. By reason of such modification, alteration, and change, all of defendant's obligations under the original contract have been extinguished.

[2] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for damages for breach of contract when the plaintiff materially altered the written contract without the defendant's consent.

[3] Material Alteration

[a] Alteration Extinguishing Defendant's Obligation

The intentional destruction, cancellation, or material alteration of a written contract by a party entitled to any benefit under it, or with that party's consent, extinguishes all the executory obligations of the contract in that party's favor against parties who do not consent to the act [Civ. Code § 1700]. The answer is demurrable if it fails to aver that the alteration was made with the plaintiff's knowledge or consent [Humphreys v. Crane & Yale (1855) 5 Cal. 173, 175] .

[b] Evidence of Alteration

The rule precluding parol evidence to vary or contradict a written contract does not exclude evidence to show that an alteration of the writing has been made [Akopoff v. Mesropian (1929) 96 Cal. App. 128, 129, 273 P. 604] . Evidence of alteration in a written contract after it was signed is admissible as relevant to the denial of the execution of the contract [Dennie v. Clark (1906) 3 Cal. App. 760, 763, 87 P. 59] .

[c] Test of Materiality

The test of materiality of an alteration is whether it changes the rights or duties of the parties, i.e., whether it works an alteration in the meaning or legal effect ofthe contract [Consolidated Loan Co. v. Harman (1957) 150 Cal. App. 2d 488, 491, 310 P.2d 450] . Lack of a fraudulent purpose does not cure a material alteration [California Savings & Commercial Bank v. Wheeler (1932) 216 Cal. 742, 746, 16 P.2d 737] .

Chapter 150 CONVERSION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-150 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 150.10

§ 150.10 Conversion Defined

[1] General Definition

Numerous definitions of conversion are found in the case law. Conversion is defined to be an act of willful interference with personal property, done without lawful justification, by which any person entitled thereto is deprived of the use and possession of the personal property [de Vries v. Brumback (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 643, 647, 2 Cal. Rptr. 764, 349 P.2d 532] . Alternatively, conversion is said to result from any act of dominion wrongfully exerted over another's personal property in denial of or inconsistent with his or her rights therein [Zaslow v. Kroenert (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 541, 549, 176 P.2d 1 ; Weiss v. Marcus (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 590, 599, 124 Cal. Rptr. 297] .

These definitions are helpful only insofar as they provide the broad framework of the tort. The actual requirements for stating a cause of action for conversion show the tort to be narrower in scope than what these definitions suggest. Thus, for example, conversion does not result from any act of wrongful dominion but only from intentional acts involving substantial interference with the plaintiff's right of possession [see Jordan v. Talbot (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 597, 610, 12 Cal. Rptr. 488, 361 P.2d 20] .

[2] Reluctance to Extend Conversion to New Contexts

The California Supreme Court, in an action for conversion brought by a medical patient against medical personnel and genetic researchers who used his excised body cells for potentially lucrative research without his permission, expressed a cautious attitude in determining whether to apply the general law of conversion to a new context of social importance. The Court ultimately declined to extend conversion, a tort theory originally used to determine whether the finder or loser of a horse had the better title, to decide issues of ownership of the results of socially important medical research [Moore v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 120, 135, 147, 271 Cal. Rptr. 146, 793 P. 2d 479] . The Court held that the plaintiff was unable to show that he retained either an expectation to retain possession of his cells or an ownership interest in the cells following their removal from his body, and, consequently, that he was unable to sue for their conversion [Moore v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 120, 136-137, 142-147, 271 Cal. Rptr. 146, 793 P. 2d 479] . The Court also stated that the "patented cell line," and the products derived from it, obtained through research, were factually and legally distinct from the cells taken from plaintiff's body. Therefore, plaintiff could not claimownership of them inconsistent with the federal patent obtained by the researchers, because federal law permits the patenting of organisms that represent the product of "human ingenuity" (although it does not allow the patenting of naturally occurring organisms) [Moore v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 120, 141-142, 143-145, 271 Cal. Rptr. 146, 793 P. 2d 479] .

Chapter 150 CONVERSION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-150 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 150.11

§ 150.11 Property Subject to Conversion

[1] Tangibles Versus Intangibles

Conversion, at common law, lay only for damage to tangible property capable of being identified and taken into actual possession [Payne v. Elliot (1880) 54 Cal. 339, 340] . Incorporeal, intangible things, which existed in idea and were incapable of being subjected to actual possession, were not subject to conversion at common law [Payne v. Elliot (1880) 54 Cal. 339, 340] .

The common law has been changed so that intangibles, if represented by a document, are also subject to conversion [see Payne v. Elliot (1880) 54 Cal. 339, 341-342 (stock)]. Thus, although the names of a laundry's customers are too intangible, uncertain, and indefinite a property interest to be subject to conversion [Olschewski v. Hudson (1927) 87 Cal. App. 282, 286, 262 P. 43] , when the names are placed in an index card file, the names become subject to conversion [Palm Springs etc. Co. v. Kieberk Corp. (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 234, 240, 115 P.2d 548] .

[2] Money

Money may be the subject of a conversion action only when the money can be described or identified as specific property since conversion deals with interference with property [Shahood v. Cavin (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 745, 748, 316 P.2d 700] . Thus, a generalized claim for money lost while playing card games at card club was insufficient to support conversion action. Plaintiffs failed to identify any specific identifiable sums the club took from them [Vu v. California Commerce Club, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 229, 235, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 31 ; see also PCO, Inc. v. Christensen, Miller, Fink, Jacobs, Glaser, Weil & Shapiro, LLP (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 384, 397 (conversion action rejected when plaintiffs could only estimate amount of cash taken and could not identify specific sum)].

Money is not considered to be specific property when only the relationship of creditor and debtor exists between the parties and the subject matter of the action is the alleged conversion of the funds representing the indebtedness [see Watson v. Stockton Morris Plan Co. (1939) 34 Cal. App. 2d 393, 403, 93 P.2d 855] . Where the money involved cannot be specifically identified, the proper action is in contract or for debt [Baxter v. King (1927) 81 Cal. App. 192, 194, 253 P. 172] .

While the money must be a specific sum capable of identification, it is not necessary that each coin or bill be earmarked. It is sufficient if a definite sum is involved [Haigler v. Donnelly (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 674, 681, 117 P.2d 331 ; Weiss v. Marcus (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 590, 599, 124 Cal. Rptr. 297] .

[3] Checks

A check, being capable of identification, is capable of being converted [McCafferty v. Gilbank (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 569, 576, 57 Cal. Rptr. 695 ; Acme Paper Co. v. Goffstein (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 175, 180, 181, 270 P.2d 505 , criticized on other grounds, Roam v. Koop (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 1035, 1042, 116 Cal. Rptr. 539 ; see Cooper v. Union Bank (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 371, 374-386, 107 Cal. Rptr. 1, 507 P.2d 609 (liability of bank for payment on forged check)].

[4] Real Property

It is generally acknowledged that conversion is a tort which may be committed only in respect to personal property and not to real property [Munger v. Moore (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 1, 7, 89 Cal. Rptr. 323 ; but see Murphy v. Wilson (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 132, 135-136, 314 P.2d 507 ; Katz v. Enos (1945) 68 Cal. App. 2d 266, 269, 156 P.2d 461 (where damages were awarded for conversion of real property without discussing the issue)]. Thus, leaseholds, as interests in real property, are not subject to conversion [Vuich v. Smith (1934) 140 Cal. App. 453, 455, 35 P.2d 365] .

Goods which are attached to real property but are severable, or become severed, are subject to conversion [Eistrat v. Western Hardwood Lumber Co. (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 374, 379, 330 P.2d 629 (lumber cut from timberlands); Kirkman Corp. v. Owens (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 193, 198, 144 P.2d 405 (crops)]. Additionally, an agreement between the parties as to the nature of fixtures is binding on the issue of whether they constitute real or personal property [Bedell v. Mashburn (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 417, 423, 197 P.2d 98 (agreement between parties that water heater affixed to land would remain personal property, disapproved on other grounds, Reynolds v. Bank of Am. (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 49, 51, 345 P.2d 926)].

Chapter 150 CONVERSION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-150 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 150.12

§ 150.12 Plaintiff's Interest in Property

[1] Actual Possession or Right to Immediate Possession

The interest which the tort of conversion seeks to protect is freedom from interference with the right of possession [Chatterton v. Boone (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 943, 946, 185 P.2d 610] . The plaintiff must be able to establish either actual possession of the property [Igauye v. Howard (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 122, 127, 249 P.2d 558] or the right to immediate possession at the time of the conversion in order to bring an action [General Motors A. Corp. v. Dallas (1926) 198 Cal. 365, 370, 245 P. 184 ; Messerall v. Fulwider (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1329, 245 Cal. Rptr. 548 ; Aero Properties, Inc. v. Gottlieb (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 711, 716, 24 Cal. Rptr. 277] .

To prevail, the plaintiff will have to prove interference with his or her ownership or right of possession [Moore v. Regents of University ofCalifornia (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 120, 136, 271 Cal. Rptr. 146, 793 P. 2d 479] .

[2] One Who Has Right to Immediate Possession

As between one who is in actual possession of personal property and one who has a right to immediate possession of the property, the latter is liable for conversion of the property if he or she obtained the property by force or threats of force or other breaches of the peace [see Henderson v. Security Nat. Bank (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 764, 770, 140 Cal. Rptr. 388 (upholding award of damages for bank's conversion of automobile obtained by breaking lock although bank had right to possession); see also § 150.65].

[3] Ownership Without Right to Possession Is Not Adequate

It is not sufficient that plaintiff is the owner of the converted property. Ownership must be coupled with actual possession or a right to possession of the property. For example, where the converted property was subject to a pledge at the time of the conversion, the owner has no right to possession of the property and, thus, has an insufficient interest to bring an action [Aero Properties, Inc. v. Gottlieb (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 711, 716, 24 Cal. Rptr. 277 ; but see Reynolds v. Lerman (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 586, 596, 292 P.2d 559 (rejecting requirement of right to immediate possession where property was in custody of sheriff under writ of attachment at time of conversion)].

[4] Ownership Not Required

The interest in the property need not be that of an owner, so long as the limited interest carries with it the right to immediate possession of the property [Camp v. Ortega (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 275, 286, 25 Cal. Rptr. 873 (chattel mortgagor); Arques v. National Superior Co. (1945) 67 Cal. App. 2d 763, 767-768, 155 P.2d 643 (worker's lien in chattel giving statutory right of possession); Perlick v. Pacific Discount Corp. (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 136, 141, 127 P.2d 647 (trustee)].

Although neither legal title nor absolute ownership of the property is necessary, a mere contractual right of payment, without more will not suffice [Farmers Ins. Exchange v. Zerin (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 445, 452, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 707] . A person entitled to immediate possession of property under a security interest in the property, may however, have a claim for conversion of the property [Farmers Ins. Exchange v. Zerin (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 445, 452, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 707 (holding that plaintiff failed to establish equitable lien on property); Messerall v. Fulwider (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1329, 245 Cal. Rptr. 548 (bailee, who was storing boat for person who was buying it, liable for conversion when he failed to turn boat over to seller who had security interest in it and demanded delivery of boat after buyer defaulted in payments)]. A promise to pay a debt out of aparticular fund, without more, will not create an equitable lien on the fund. Similarly, a promise to hold property in trust for another, standing alone, will not create an equitable interest in the property. An equitable lien may arise from such promises if detrimental reliance or unjust enrichment are present [Farmers Ins. Exchange v. Zerin (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 445, 454-455, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 707 (no lien established; no liability for conversion)].

[5] Assignee of Cause of Action Needs No Other Interest

The one situation where plaintiff need not prove any interest in the converted property is where plaintiff is the assignee of the chose in action for conversion. Plaintiff must show only that the assignor of the chose in action had sufficient interest in the property to bring an action [Lehmann v. Schmidt (1890) 87 Cal. 15, 22, 25 P. 161 ; Staley v. McClurken (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 622, 625, 96 P.2d 805] .

[6] Defendant's Superior Right of Possession Defeats Action

If the defendant has a right of possession which is superior to that of the plaintiff, conversion will not lie [Silverstin v. Kohler & Chase (1919) 181 Cal. 51, 54, 183 P. 451 (seller under installment sale contract as having superior right of possession after buyer default)].

In one case, for example, the court held that a judgment imposing a constructive trust in favor of plaintiff on funds in a brokerage account did not retroactively create an interest that was superior to a third-party creditor's claim on the same property that had previously been reduced to judgment and levied upon. Therefore, the plaintiff could not bring an action against the levying creditor for conversion of the funds [see CHoPP Computer Corp. v. U.S. (9th Cir. 1993) 5 F.3d 1344, 1348-1349 (applying California law)].

Chapter 150 CONVERSION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-150 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 150.13

§ 150.13 Defendant's Conversion

[1] Requirement of Substantial Interference

The gist of an action for conversion is the wrongful interference with the right of possession [Chatterton v. Boone (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 943, 946, 185 P.2d 610] . However, not all interferences with property constitute conversion. An action for conversion will lie only if defendant's conduct amounts to a substantial interference with plaintiff's possession or his or her rights thereto [Jordan v. Talbot (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 597, 610, 12 Cal. Rptr. 488, 361 P.2d 20] .

[2] Interference Must Be Actual to Be Substantial

The first requisite of "substantial interference" is that there must be actual interference [Home v. Kramer (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 361, 363-364]. Thus, the mere assertion of an intent to wrongfully claim title falls short of the required interference [Aronson v. Bank of America etc. Assn. (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 640, 643, 72 P.2d 548] .

For example, where one purchases property at a marshal's sale but makes no attempt to assert ownership in or take possession of the property, no actual interference has occurred [Kee v. Becker (1942) 54 Cal. App. 2d 466, 473-475, 129 P.2d 159] . Similarly, the mere execution of a quitclaim deed does not constitute actual interference with the true owner's interest since the deed purports to transfer only such title as the seller owned [Home v. Kramer (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 361, 363, 364, 60 P.2d 854] .

[3] Methods of Actual Interference

In attempting to establish actual interference with plaintiff's property, there are numerous actions which may constitute interference. While an unjustified manual taking of the property is the clearest case of interference, it is well established that such manual taking is not required [see Gruber v. Pacific States Sav. & Loan Co. (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 144, 148-149, 88 P.2d 137 ; Beverly Finance Co. v. American Casualty Co. (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 259, 264, 78 Cal. Rptr. 334] .

Conversion may result when possession of the property was obtained by fraud [Freedman v. Queen Ins. Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 454, 457, 15 Cal. Rptr. 69, 364 P.2d 245 (obtaining property by false personation)]. Conversion actions may also be based on:

- Unauthorized sales of property [Reynolds v. Lerman (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 586, 592, 292 P.2d 559 (sale by warehouseman of attached property for storage fees)];

- Purchase of converted goods [Swim v. Wilson (1891) 90 Cal. 126, 129-131, 27 P. 33 ; Culp v. Signal Van & Storage Co. (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 859, 861 , 298 P.2d 162] ;

- Misdelivery [Byer v. Canadian Bank of Commerce (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 297, 299, 65 P.2d 67 (delivery of bonds to impostor by bank)];

- Refusal to return possession [Igauye v. Howard (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 122, 126, 249 P.2d 558 (landlord's refusal to return evicted tenant's property)]; and

- Denial of access to property [Carey v. Glenco Citrus Products (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 572, 580, 45 Cal. Rptr. 365 (refusal to permit buyer of crop to enter onto land to harvest it)].

Conversion may also result from:

- Unauthorized use of the property [Igauye v. Howard (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 122, 126, 249 P.2d 558 (use of evicted tenant's property in operation of hotel)];

- Alteration of the property [Asato v. Emirzian (1918) 177 Cal. 493, 496, 171 P. 90 (planting of nursery stock trees as altering their nature to realty)];

- Destruction of the property [Bedell v. Mashburn (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 417, 423, 197 P.2d 98 , disapproved on other grounds, Reynolds v. Bank of Am. (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 49, 51, 345 P.2d 926 ; Staley v. McClurken (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 622, 628-629, 96 P.2d 805] ; and

- Willful appropriation of property [Fischer v. Machado (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1069, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 213 (commission merchant's own use of commingled proceeds of sale of consigned farm products); see also Mendoza v. Continental Sales Co. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1395, 1405, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 525 (Fischer rationale applied to subagents of grower who dealt only with intermediary commission merchant)].

Interference also occurs where defendant's wrongful claim of title to property results in the defeat of plaintiff's writ of attachment [Service v. Trombetta (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 313, 316, 28 Cal. Rptr. 68 ; but see Glasband v. Sun State Music Distributors, Inc. (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 413, 417, 71 Cal. Rptr. 482 (questioning existence of cause of action for conversion where writ of attachment was based on judgment lien subsequently invalidated by debtor's bankruptcy)].

Interference with an intangible may be the basis for a conversion action even though there is no interference with the document itself. For example, where a corporation wrongfully refuses to make a requested change in the registration of shares on its books, its actions towards those shares may be treated as a conversion despite the fact that there was no interference with the stock certificates themselves [Mears v. Crocker First Nat. Bank (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 637, 644, 645, 191 P.2d 501] .

If the defendant is lawfully entitled to possession but acquires possession by illegal means, acquisition by those means constitutes interference with the plaintiff's possessory rights [see Henderson v. Security Nat. Bank (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 764, 770, 771, 140 Cal. Rptr. 388 (defendant liable for conversion where its agent effected legal repossession of automobile by means of an illegal entry into plaintiff's garage)].

[4] Substantialness of Interference

Once it is shown that actual interference with plaintiff's property has occurred, it must be shown that the interference was substantial [Jordan v. Talbot (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 597, 610, 12 Cal. Rptr. 488, 361 P.2d 20] . This element requires the plaintiff to prove the defendant's intention or purpose to convert the goods and to exercise ownership over them, or to prevent the owner from taking possession of his or her property [Zaslow v. Kroenert (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 541, 549, 550, 176 P.2d 1] .

Conduct that falls short of an exercise of ownership over the goods cannot be the basis of a conversion action. For example, although a landlord who denies the tenant access to the building to recover his or her property has substantially interfered with that property [Gruber v. Pacific States Sav. & Loan Co. (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 144, 147-148, 88 P.2d 137 ; Kessinger v. Organic Fertilizers, Inc. (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 741, 754, 312 P.2d 345] , if the landlord removes the tenant's property from the premises and places it into storage in the tenant's name, no substantial interferencehas occurred and conversion will not lie [Jordan v. Talbot (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 597, 610, 12 Cal. Rptr. 488, 361 P.2d 20] .

Similarly, a bailee does not become a converter by making a qualified refusal to turn over property where his or her purpose, expressed and real, is to secure a reasonable opportunity to inquire into the claimant's rights [Giacomelos v. Bank of America (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 99, 100-101, 46 Cal. Rptr. 612] .

[5] Intentional Conduct Required

Assuming that some actual, substantial interference has occurred, liability for conversion results only if the conduct was intended to affect the property [Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 908, 918, 114 Cal. Rptr. 622, 523 P.2d 662] . Interference that was the result of negligence on the part of a defendant will not provide a basis for a conversion action [George v. Bekins Van & Storage Co. (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 834, 837, 838, 205 P.2d 1037] .

Although the conduct must be intentional, it need not be affirmative. If defendant's conduct is undertaken with an intent to affect the property, liability may be based on a willful omission to act that deprives plaintiff of his or her property [Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 908, 918, 114 Cal. Rptr. 622, 523 P.2d 662 (common carrier's refusal to protect, return, or account for plaintiff's goods damaged in transit)].

[6] Strict Liability

Conversion is a strict liability tort that imposes liability on all those into whose hands the property comes [see Moore v. Regents of University of California (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 120, 144, 271 Cal. Rptr. 146, 793 P. 2d 479 (dicta)]. The gist of an action for conversion is the wrongful interference with the right of possession. The motive for the interference is immaterial [Chatterton v. Boone (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 943, 946, 185 P.2d 610] . Thus, the fact that a defendant was acting in good faith, without notice, and without negligence as to his or her right to exercise such control over the property, is no defense [Byer v. Canadian Bank of Commerce (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 297, 299, 65 P.2d 67 ; Poggi v. Scott (1914) 167 Cal. 372, 376, 139 P. 815 ; Beverly Finance Co. v. American Casualty Co. (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 259, 264-265, 78 Cal. Rptr. 334] .

For example, the purchaser of converted goods is liable for conversion even though there was nothing to indicate that the seller was not authorized to sell the goods [Swim v. Wilson (1891) 90 Cal. 126, 129-131, 27 P. 33 ; Culp v. Signal Van& Storage Co. (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 859, 861 , 298 P.2d 162] . Similarly, when an automobile is lawfully repossessed the repossessor may be liable for conversion of property contained in the car, even if the repossessor did not know that the property was there [Varela v. Wells Fargo Bank (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 741, 749, 750, 93 Cal.Rptr. 428 (bank liable for conversion of diamond rings in glove compartment of repossessed car)].

[7] Demand for Return of Property

If the property was originally obtained by tort, a demand for its return is not required [Igauye v. Howard (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 122, 127, 249 P.2d 558] . If, however, a defendant comes into possession of the property lawfully, the plaintiff usually will have to demand return of the property and be refused before the cause of action arises [Flennaugh v. Heinrich (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 214, 222, 200 P.2d 580] . However, demand is not required when it can be shown that the demand would be futile [Scott's V. F. Exch. v. Growers Refrigeration Co., Inc. (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 437, 450, 184 P.2d 183 , disapproved on other grounds, Hischemoeller v. Nat. Ice etc. Storage Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 318, 328, 294 P.2d 433] . A demand is also not required when defendant's conduct in relation to the property clearly evidences a conversion [Metzler v. Foster Holding Co. (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 278, 282, 54 P.2d 447 (property either sold or consumed); Coy v. E.F. Hutton & Co. (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 386, 390, 391, 112 P.2d 639 (securities in question sold by defendant)].

§ 150.14 Duty to Avoid Further Harm

The general tort principle that a tortfeasor has a duty to come to the aid of his or her victim has been held to apply to the tort of conversion. Thus, a person who has converted the property of another has the duty to avoid further harm resulting from this wrongful act [Gladstone v. Hillel (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 977, 989, 250 Cal. Rptr. 372 (injunction against use of plaintiff's jewelry molds and designs held proper because of separate duty not to further convert property); *but see Bonito Boats v. PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-150 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 150.15

§ 150.15 Acts Not Constituting Conversion

The California Supreme Court has held that a medical patient who brought an action against medical personnel and genetic researchers, who used his excised body cells for potentially lucrative research without his permission, failed to state a cause of action in conversion because he failed to show an ownership interest in the cells or the patented products resulting from the research [Moore v. Regents of University of California (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 120, 136-142, 271 Cal. Rptr. 146, 793 P. 2d 479] . The Court also refused to extend the scope of the tort of conversion to include recovery on those facts, on the grounds that [Moore v. Regents of Universityof California (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 120, 142-143, 271 Cal. Rptr. 146, 793 P. 2d 479] :

- The relevant policy considerations (for example, protection of a competent patient's right to make autonomous medical decisions, and protection of socially beneficial researchers who are unaware of the scope of the donor's consent) counsels against extending the tort;
- Those issues are better suited to legislative resolution; and
- The tort of conversion is not necessary to protect a patient's rights.

A bank is not subject to liability in conversion for converting deposited funds to its own use, because the bank's relationship to its depositor is that of debtor to creditor, and the title to deposited funds passes immediately to the bank, which may use the funds for its own business purposes. In an action based on a bank's honoring of an unauthorized check, and the bank's subsequent reinstatement of the amount of the check to the customer on request, a demurrer to the cause of action in conversion was held to be properly sustained [Lee v. Bank of Am. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 914, 919-920, 267 Cal. Rptr. 387] . Similarly, because a bank has no duty to monitor trust accounts for breaches of fiduciary duty a bank cannot be held liable for a mortgage loan broker's conversion of note payments which are deposited in bank trust accounts [Chazen v. Centennial Bank (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 532, 541, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 462 (complaint alleging that bank charged trust accounts for obligations that loan broker personally owed to bank stated conversion cause of action)].

A person such as an attorney who, acting as a mere custodian, intermediary, or conduit, files a complaint in interpleader when faced with conflicting claims against litigation proceeds, does not exercise dominion over those funds sufficient to support an action for conversion [Shopoff & Cavallo LLP v. Hyon (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1489, 1508, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 268].

13-150 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 150.16

§ 150.16 Damages

[1] In General

Damages are an element of the plaintiff's cause of action. If the property converted is shown to be without value, no action for conversion will lie [Bentley v. Mountain (1942) 51 Cal. App. 2d 95, 100, 124 P.2d 91 (valueless union shop cards); see Oakes v. Suelynn Corp. (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 271, 279, 100 Cal. Rptr. 838] . A plaintiff may recover emotional distress damages growing out of a defendant's conversion of personal property [Gonzales v. Personal Storage, Inc. (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 464, 477, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 473] .

[2] Measure of Damages

[a] Value of Property Plus Interest or Proximate and Foreseeable Loss

The detriment caused by the wrongful conversion of personal property ispresumed to be the value of the property at the time of the conversion, plus interest from the time of conversion or an amount sufficient to indemnify the party for the proximate and foreseeable loss suffered [Civ.Code § 3336; Hamer v. Hathaway (1867) 33 Cal. 117, 120 (value of the property is to be determined at the place of conversion)]. The interest allowable under the statute is the legal rate of interest of 7 percent [see Cal. Const. art. XV, § 1; Beverly Fin. Co. v. Am. Cas. Co. (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 259, 265, 78 Cal. Rptr. 334] .

Although Civ. Code § 3336 appears to provide alternative damages formulae, the first, the value of the property at the time of the conversion, is considered to be the proper one. The alternative provision, an amount sufficient to indemnify the party for the loss suffered, is resorted to only when the determination on the basis of value at the time of the conversion would be manifestly unjust [Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 104, 116, 43 Cal. Rptr. 420] .

For example, when a plaintiff purchases a building with the disclosed intent of moving the building, renovating it, and then reselling it, and the defendant converts the building by reselling it to a third party, it would be unjust to limit the plaintiff's recovery to the $250 purchase price of the building if there was an expected profit of $3,040. In such a case, recovery of the expected profit is allowed [Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 104, 116, 43 Cal. Rptr. 420] .

However, if a plaintiff does not prove with reasonable certainty the fact of proximately caused injury, the plaintiff cannot recover regardless of how much evidence is introduced as to the appropriate measure of damages [Lueter v. State of California (2002) 94 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1303, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 68 (value of destroyed evidence to lawsuit was wholly speculative and conjectural and could not be used as measure of damages for conversion)].

Although Civ. Code § 3336 does not specifically indicate that prejudgment interest is available if the measure of damages is an amount sufficient to indemnify the party for the loss suffered, prejudgment interest may still be awarded if this measure of damages is used, pursuant to the general prejudgment interest authority of Civ. Code § 3287(a) [Moreno v. Greenwood Auto Ctr. (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 201, 210-211, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 177 ; see Civ. Code § 3287(a)].

If a plaintiff regains possession of converted goods prior to adjudication of the right to possession of those goods, either through a writ of possession under Code Civ. Proc. § 512.010 et seq. or otherwise, the plaintiff's right to prejudgment interest continues beyond the point at which the plaintiff regained possession and extends to the entry of judgment. Prior to adjudication, the plaintiff faces the prospect of losing possession of the goods after trial, effectively depriving the plaintiff of the liberty of dealing with the goods as the plaintiff sees fit until that adjudication is made [Irving Nelkin & Co. v. South Beverly Hills Wilshire Jewelry & Loan (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 692, 702-703, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 815] . If the right to possession is determined through summary adjudication and all that remains to bedetermined is the amount of damages, the right to interest extends only to the date of the order granting summary adjudication in the plaintiff's favor [Irving Nelkin & Co. v. South Beverly Hills Wilshire Jewelry & Loan (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 692, 704-705, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 815] .

[b] In Action by Merchant or Library

In an action under Penal Code § 490.5(c) against an adult or emancipated minor by a merchant or library facility for the unlawful taking of merchandise or books or other library material, statutory damages are recoverable in an amount of not less than $50 or more than $500. These damages are in addition to the retail value of the merchandise if not recovered in merchantable condition, or the fair market value of the book or other library materials if not recovered in undamaged condition. Costs are also recoverable [Penal Code § 490.5(c)]. The cause of action authorized under Penal Code § 490.5(c) is in addition to any other civil remedies available to merchants or other persons [see Penal Code § 490.5(c)].

[3] Damages Suffered in Recovering Property

Plaintiff is additionally entitled to collect fair compensation for time and money properly expended in pursuit of the property [Civ. Code § 3336]. Definite and certain evidence tending to show that money was properly paid out and time properly lost in pursuit of the property, and the amount thereof, must be shown before a party will be permitted recovery [see Sherman v. Finch (1886) 71 Cal. 68, 71-72, 11 P. 847 ; Haines v. Parra (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1553, 1559, 239 Cal. Rptr. 178] . In addition, any such compensation must be fair and reasonable [Haines v. Parra (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1553, 1559, 239 Cal. Rptr. 178 (noting that $10,000 in time and money to recover property worth $4,000 was not reasonable)].

Attorney's fees are not recoverable as damages under Civ. Code § 3336 [Viner v. Untrecht (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 261, 272, 158 P.2d 3 ; Haines v. Parra (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1553, 1558-1559, 239 Cal. Rptr. 178] . However, not all items having some connection with the litigation are excluded from the calculation under Civ. Code § 3336. The statute should at least extend to efforts that had a purpose independent of the litigation, such as preparation of lists of missing property, inspection of inventories, meetings with the other party, contacts with law enforcement authorities, and inquiries regarding appropriate courses of action [Gladstone v. Hillel (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 977, 992, 250 Cal. Rptr. 372 (apparently abrogated by Bonito Boats v. Thunder Craft Boats (1989) 489 U.S. 141, 167-168, 109 S. Ct. 971, 103 L. Ed. 2d 118 , to extent that Gladstone upheld injunction for violation of anti-direct molding statute set forth in former Bus. & Prof. Code § 17300)].

[4] Proof of Value

The cost of the property, the extent of use, its condition, and depreciation are all admissible on the issue of value [Wade v. Markwell & Co. (1953)118 Cal. App. 2d 410, 431, 258 P.2d 497 ; see Lonergan v. Monroe (1946) 77 Cal. App. 2d 223, 225, 175 P.2d 42 (contract price of property admissible but not determinative of value)]. In addition, the opinion of the owner as to value of property is admissible and often sufficient to support a judgment based on that value [see Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 908, 921, 114 Cal. Rptr. 622, 523 P.2d 662] .

With respect to the value of a security, the face value of the security is prima facie evidence of its value [Jeanese, Inc. v. Security Title & Guar. Co. (1959) 176 Cal. App. 2d 449, 454, 1 Cal. Rptr. 752] . Similarly, the face value of a bill or note is prima facie evidence of its value. If a note is secured by property and there is no personal liability of the maker, the value of the note equals the value of the property up to the face value of the note [Knudsen v. Hill (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 639, 642, 643, 38 Cal. Rptr. 859] .

[5] Exemplary Damages

An action for conversion will support a claim for punitive damages, given the required showing of oppression, fraud, or malice [see Civ. Code § 3294; Haigler v. Donnelly (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 674, 681, 117 P.2d 331 ; Cyrus v. Haveson (1976) 65 Cal. App. 3d 306, 316, 135 Cal. Rptr. 246] .

[6] Recovery by Owner of Limited Interest

When a plaintiff owns a limited interest in the property, but sues one who has no interest in it for conversion, the plaintiff may recover the full value of the property. Plaintiff is then liable to the true owner for the excess in value recovered [Goldberg v. List (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 389, 393, 79 P.2d 1087 ; Camp v. Ortega (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 275, 286, 25 Cal. Rptr. 873] . However, when the owner of a limited interest sues the owner of one having a superior right in the property for conversion, recovery is limited to the extent of plaintiff's interest [Watson v. Stockton Morris Plan Co. (1939) 34 Cal. App. 2d 393, 400, 401, 93 P.2d 855 ; see Civ. Code § 3338].

[7] Mitigation of Damages

When a plaintiff recovers the property, it is received in mitigation of the damages, and the measure of damages becomes the expense of procuring the property's return, with interest, plus any special damages proved [Blewett v. Miller (1900) 131 Cal. 149, 151, 63 P. 157 ; Beetson v. Hollywood Athletic Club (1930) 109 Cal. App. 715, 722, 293 P. 821] .

However, the subsequent application of the converted property to the benefit of the owner will not mitigate damages when the defendant's possession of the property was wrongful from the beginning and when the owner does not consent to the application of the property to his or her benefit [see Civ. Code § 3337; Goldberg v. List (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 389, 393, 79 P.2d 1087] . For example, when a landlord locks a tenant out of the building, thereby converting the tenant's property contained inside, the fact that the landlord later offers to permit the tenant to recover the property does not mitigate the damages if the tenant refuses the offer [Price v. Hovsepian (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 385, 388, 250 P.2d 252] .

Chapter 150 CONVERSION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-150 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 150.17

§ 150.17 Defenses

[1] Statute of Limitations

[a] Three-Year Statute Generally Applies

Actions for conversion are, in general, subject to a three-year statute of limitations [Fabricon Prod. v. United Cal. Bank (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 113, 118, 70 Cal. Rptr. 50 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c)].

[b] Special Rules Provide Shorter Period for Particular Situations

Certain actions are subject to different limitation periods. For example, actions to recover the value of goods seized by a tax collector or stock improperly sold for delinquent assessment must be brought within six months of the seizure or sale [Code Civ. Proc. § 341(1),(2); Corp. Code § 2713]. As another example, actions for recovery of personal property from a hotel must be brought within 90 days of the date of departure of the owner from the hotel [Code Civ. Proc. 341a; cf. Taylor v. Forte Hotels International (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1119, 1122, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 189 (limitation does not apply to actions against hotel based on negligence or breach of contract)].

When a public entity is the defendant, the plaintiff must first file a claim with the Victim Compensation and Government Claims Board within six months after the accrual of the cause of action [Gov. Code §§ 905.2, 911.2]. If the claim is denied, the action must be commenced within six months after denial of the claim [Gov. Code § 945.6]. For further discussion, procedures, and forms for use in filing a claim against a public entity, see Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

[c] Period Begins to Run at Time of Conversion

The statute begins to run at the time of the conversion, regardless of whether or not plaintiff is aware that the cause of action exists [Bennett v. Hibernia Bank (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 540, 561, 305 P.2d 20 ; Barnes v. Witt (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 441, 445, 24 Cal. Rptr. 545] . There are, however, situations in which the cause of action does not accrue until a later time, as discussed in [d], below.

[d] Delayed Accrual

[i] Concealment of Facts

If the defendant conceals facts which constitute the cause of action, the statute does not begin to run until the plaintiff discovered, or should havediscovered, those facts [Bennett v. Hibernia Bank (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 540, 561, 305 P.2d 20 ; Strasberg v. Odyssey Group, Inc. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 906, 916, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 474] .

[ii] Fiduciary Relationship

A different rule controls the running of the statute where there is a fiduciary relationship between the parties. In that situation, the statute does not begin to run until the conversion is clearly and unequivocally brought to the attention of the owner [Bennett v. Hibernia Bank (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 540, 561, 562, 305 P.2d 20 (statute as not running against shareholder in favor of corporation until conversion brought to attention of shareholder); Bufano v. City & County of San Francisco (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 61, 70, 43 Cal. Rptr. 223 (statute as not running against bailor in favor of bailee until conversion brought to attention of bailor)].

[iii] Subsequent Purchaser

The three year period of Code Civ. Proc. § 338 begins to run anew when a subsequent purchaser acquires the stolen property [Harpending v. Meyer (1850) 55 Cal. 555, 561 ; Society of Cal. Pioneers v. Baker (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 774, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 865] .

[iv] Theft of Article of Historical, Interpretive, Scientific, or Artistic Significance

If the conversion of an article of historical, interpretive, scientific, or artistic significance constitutes theft under Penal Code § 484, the cause of action for conversion is not deemed to have accrued until the aggrieved party, that party's agent, or the law enforcement agency that originally investigated the theft discovers the whereabouts of the article [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c); see Society of Cal. Pioneers v. Baker (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 774, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 865 (delayed accrual language applies to cases in which the three-year limitation period had not expired at the time of the 1983 amendment of Section 338(c) adding that language)].

[2] Consent

Plaintiff's consent to the interference complained of is a defense to a conversion action [Klett v. Security Acceptance Co. (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 770, 789, 790, 242 P.2d 873 ; Wade v. Southwest Bank (1962) 211 Cal. App. 2d 392, 406, 27 Cal. Rptr. 337] . However, if the consent was obtained by fraud, the fraud vitiates the consent, and conversion will lie [Freedman v. Queen Ins. Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 454, 457, 15 Cal. Rptr. 6, 364 P.2d 245] .

For example, if a plaintiff advises a defendant who purchased converted goods that plaintiff would pursue its rights against the seller, and for some two and one-half years makes no demand for return of the property on defendant, the plaintiff may be considered to have waived its rights against the defendant [Eistrat v. Western Hardwood Lumber Co. (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 374, 381, 382, 330 P.2d 629] .

Similarly, a plaintiff is estopped from asserting its claim against a defendant auctioneer if the defendant innocently sold converted goods belonging to plaintiff and plaintiff was in a position to learn of the sale before it took place and stop it [Jessup v. Cattle Center, Inc. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 434, 437-439, 66 Cal. Rptr. 361] .

[3] Defense of Own Interests

One is privileged to commit an act, which would otherwise be a trespass or a conversion of property in the possession of another, for the purpose of defending himself or herself againstthe other, when the actor reasonably believes that the other person intends to cause harm to the actor, or that the invasion of his or her interests is reasonably probable, and the actor reasonably believes that the apprehended harm can be safely prevented only by taking of the property of the other person [Church of Scientology v. Armstrong (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1060, 1072-1073, 283 Cal. Rptr. 917 (regarding church archive material taken by former church member in order to prevent church representatives from causing physical and emotional harm to himself and his wife based on statements he made about material)]. In so holding, an appellate court adopted the position of Restatement (Second) of Torts, § 261 [Church of Scientology v. Armstrong (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1060, 1072-1073, 283 Cal. Rptr. 917] . For a form of affirmative defense that defendant took possession of the property in defense of his or her own interests, see § 150.91.

[4] Equitable Defenses

The equitable defenses of waiver and estoppel are available in conversion actions [Eistrart v. Western Hardwood Lbr. Co. (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 374, 381, 382, 330 P.2d 629 (waiver); Jessup v. Cattle Center, Inc. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 434, 437-439, 66 Cal. Rptr. 361 (estoppel)]. The equitable defense of unclean hands is available in a conversion action, as it is in any legal action, if it satisfies the three prongs of the test first enunciated in a legal malpractice action [see Blain v. Doctor's Co. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1048, 1060, 272 Cal. Rptr. 250] and applied to an action for conversion in Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 612, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 741 [Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 612, 619, 621, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 741] . Under the test, the defense is available if:

- Analogous case law supports application of the defense [Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 612, 619-620, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 741] ;

- The nature of the misconduct alleged by the defendant is sufficient to support the defense; and

- The misconduct relates sufficiently closely to the plaintiff's claimed injuries to pertain to the subject matter involved in the case and affect the equitable relations between the parties [Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 612, 620-621, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 741] .

Chapter 150 CONVERSION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-150 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 150.18

§ 150.18 Alternative Forms of Action

[1] Waiving Tort

When personal property has been converted, the plaintiff may elect to waive the tort and sue on an implied contract [Hill v. Superior Court (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 527, 530, 106 P.2d 876] . Plaintiff, in effect, consents to the conversion and affirms the act of the wrongdoer. Plaintiff then treats it as a sale and sues to recover under an implied contract of sale or for money had and received [Bank of America etc. Ass'n. v. Hill (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 495, 499, 500, 71 P.2d 258] .

For discussion, procedures, and forms for use in an action on implied contracts, see Ch. 140, Contracts . For discussion, procedures, and forms for use in an action for money had and received, see Ch. 121, Common Counts .

There are certain advantages and disadvantages to waiving the tort. Suing in contract makes available the provisional remedy of attachment, which is not available in actions in tort [Los Angeles Drug Co. v. Superior Court (1936) 8 Cal. 2d 71, 75, 63 P.2d 1124 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010]. However, the use of the provisional remedy of attachment amounts to a binding election of the quasi-contract theory [Acme Paper Co. v. Goffstein (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 175, 178, 270 P.2d 505 , disapproved regarding allowing election issue to be raised for first time on appeal, Roam v. Koop (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 1035, 1042, 116 Cal. Rptr. 539] . Furthermore, although punitive damages are available if the action is in tort, they are not available if the suit sounds in contract [Haigler v. Donnelly (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 674, 680, 117 P.2d 331 ; see Civ. Code § 3294].

For discussion, procedures, and forms for use in an action seeking a writ of attachment, see Ch. 62, Attachment .

[2] Claim and Delivery

A person entitled to immediate possession of specific personal property may bring an action to recover the property [see Civ. Code § 3379; Commercial & Sav. Bk. v. Foster (1930) 210 Cal. 76, 79, 290 P. 583] . The action is commonly referred to as "claim and delivery," although that term properly applies to the provisional remedy employed in those actions [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 511.010-516.050]. In such an action, plaintiff is entitled to recover possession of the property, or the value of the property if redelivery is not possible, plus damages for its detention [see Code Civ. Proc. § 667].

For discussion, procedures, and forms for use in an action to recover possession of personal property, see Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery .

[3] Trespass

If the defendant has interfered with plaintiff's personal property, but the interference was not substantial enough to amount to a conversion, plaintiff's cause of action is for trespass [see Jordan v. Talbot (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 597, 610, 12 Cal. Rptr. 488] . Recovery in those cases is limited to actual damages suffered by reason of the impairment of the property or loss of its use [Zaslow v. Kroenert (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 541, 551, 176 P.2d 1] . Thus, if the defendant has taken possession of the plaintiff's property, but placed the property in storage under the plaintiff's name, no conversion has occurred and plaintiff may only recover the actual damages suffered [Jordan v. Talbot (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 597, 610, 12 Cal. Rptr. 488 ; Zaslow v. Kroenert (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 541, 551, 176 P.2d 1] .

Although a lesser interference may be actionable as a trespass to personal property, or trespass to chattels, than would be actionable as a conversion, some actual injury must have occurred to state an action for trespass. There must be some interference with the possessor's use or possession of the personal property or interference with some other legally protected interest in that property [Intel Corp. v. Hamidi (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1342, 1351, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 32, 71 P.3d 296] . For example, the California Supreme Court held that the tort did not encompass the mass sending of e-mails to the employees of a large corporation because the e-mails neither damaged nor impaired the functioning of the corporation's computer system [Intel Corp. v. Hamidi (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1342, 1347, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 32, 71 P.3d 296 (loss of employee time spent reading and responding to messages was insufficient to support recovery)]. The Court distinguished cases in which mass e-mails actually adversely affected the performance of a computer system, or threatened to do so, which might support a cause of action for trespass to chattels [see Intel Corp. v. Hamidi (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1342, 1353-1356, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 32, 71 P.3d 296] .

In another case, the court of appeal held that a triable issue of fact existed as to whether conduct by a steward of the California Horse Racing Board to prevent the owner of a horse from removing the horse from the race grounds before a race constituted intentional interference with the owner's possession of the horse sufficient to support a cause of action for trespass to chattels. In that case, the steward indicated he would not allow the owner to pull the horse from a scheduled race nor remove the horse from the grounds, and in fact went so far as to post security officers at the horse's stable, although the owner did not confront the officers and try to force removal from the grounds [Jamgotchian v. Slender (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1384, 1401-1402, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 122].

13-150 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 150.19

§ 150.19 Immunity for Delivery of Decedent's Tangible Personal Property

A public administrator, government official, law enforcement agency, hospital or institution where a decedent died, or the decedent's employer may, without the need to wait 40 days after death, deliver the tangible personal property of the decedent in its possession, including keys to the decedent's residence, to the decedent's surviving spouse, relative, or conservator or guardian of the estate acting in that capacity at the time of death [Prob. Code § 330(a)]. However, a person must not deliver the property if the person knows or has reason to believe that there is a dispute over the right to possession of the property [Prob. Code § 330(b)]. A person delivering such property must require reasonable proof of the status and identity of the person to whom the property is delivered, and he or she may rely on any document described in Prob. Code § 13104(d) as proof of identity [Prob. Code § 330(c)]. The person delivering such property must keep a record of the property delivered and the status and identity of the person to whom the property is delivered for a period of three years after the date of delivery of the property [Prob. Code § 330(d)]. Such delivery of property does not determine ownership of the property nor preclude later proceedings for administration of the decedent's estate [Prob. Code § 330(e)]. A person that delivers such property is not liable for loss or damage to the property caused by the person to whom the property is delivered [Prob. Code § 330(f)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

13-150 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 150.20

§ 150.20 Immunity of Decedent's Personal Representative

A personal representative who in good faith takes into possession real or personal property, and reasonably believes that the property is part of the estate of a decedent, is neither criminally liable, nor civilly liable to any person, for so doing [Prob. Code § 9651(a); see § 150.90]. However, the personal representative must make reasonable efforts to determine the true nature of, and title to, the property so taken into possession [Prob. Code § 9651(b)].

During his or her possession, the personal representative is entitled to receive all rents, issues, and profits of the property. If the property is later determined not to be part of the decedent's estate, the personal representative shall deliver the property, or cause it to be delivered, to the person legally entitled to it, together with all rents, issues, and profits of the property received by the personal representative, less any expenses incurred in protecting and maintaining the property and in collecting rents, issues, and profits [Prob. Code § 9651(c)].

The personal representative may request court approval before delivering the property pursuant to Prob. Code. § 9651(c) [Prob. Code § 9651(c)]. The court may allow the personal representative reasonable compensation for services rendered in connection with the duties specified in this section as to property later determined not to be part of the estate of the decedent, if the court makes one of the following findings [Prob. Code § 9651(d)]:

- The services were of benefit to the estate. If the court makes this finding, the compensation and the expenses and costs of litigation, including attorney's fees of the attorney hired by the personal representative to handle the matter, are a proper expense of administration.

- The services were essential to preserve, protect, and maintain the property. If the court makes this finding, the court shall award compensation and the expenses and costs of litigation, including attorney's fees of the attorney hired by the personal representative to handle the matter, as an expense deductible from the rents, issues, and profits received by the personal representative, or,if these are insufficient, as a lien against the property.

☐ Wrongful levy on property [see Missouri State Life Ins. Co. v. Gillette (1932) 215 Cal. 709, 711, 712, 12 P.2d 955] .

☐ Ascertain the facts establishing whether defendant's acquisition of the property was lawful or unlawful.

NOTE:
Demand for Return. If property was lawfully acquired, plaintiff must demand its return before an action may be brought [see § 150.13[7]].

☐ Ascertain the facts establishing plaintiff's interest in the property giving plaintiff a right to possession [see § 150.12]].

☐ Obtain description of property in as specific detail as possible.

☐ Determine the date of defendant's conversion.

NOTE:
The date of conversion is important for the determination of the running of the statute of limitations [see § 150.17[1]]. The date of conversion is also important in determining damages since the converted property must be valued as of the date of conversion [Civ. Code § 3336; [see § 150.16[2]]].

☐ Determine the place of defendant's conversion.

NOTE:
Value of the property is to be determined at the place of conversion [see § 150.16[2]].

NOTE:
Even if demand for return of the property is not actually required under the facts of the specific case, it is advantageous to make such demand before the action is brought to remove demand as a possible issue.

☐ If demand was made, what was defendant's response?

☐ Was defendant acting alone, or was he or she acting in concert with others [see discussion of potential defendants in [1][b], above].

☐ Any other damages suffered as a result of the conversion which would cause it to be unjust to base plaintiff's recovery on the value of the converted property [see Civ. Code § 3336; § 150.16[2]].

☐ Whether time and money were expended in the pursuit of the property and, if so, how much [see Civ. Code § 3336; § 150.16[3]]?

☐ Whether client consented to subsequent application of the converted property to his or her own benefit [see Civ. Code § 3337; § 150.16[7]].

[2] Documents to Be Obtained

NOTE:
Not all of the following documents will be obtained from the client in the first interview. Subsequent interviews may be required or, where circumstances permit, the documents might be mailed to the attorney. Also, it might be necessary to obtain these documents from persons other than the client.

☐ Copies of any correspondence relating to the property between the parties.

☐ If the property was legally obtained by the defendant, a copy of any written agreement between the parties.

☐ Instruments which may place a value on the property.

☐ Instruments which may evidence the client's ownership or other interest in the converted property [see § 150.12].

☐ Any other contracts, agreements, memoranda, or other documents concerning the converted property with relation to either the client's or the defendant's interest therein.

[3] Alternative Causes of Action

☐ Consider whether the facts that give rise to the cause of action for conversion may also give rise to remedies under alternative theories, such as:

☐ Action for quasi-contractual relief; consider that:

☐ Suing on an implied contract theory allows the provisional remedy of attachment [see § 150.18[1]].

Proc. § 339(1); § 150.17[1]].

☐ If theories of conversion and quasi contract are pleaded alternatively, plaintiff will have to elect between them at the trial level [see § 150.18[1]].

☐ Claim and delivery; consider:

☐ Action seeks recovery of the property rather than its value [see § 150.18[2]; for discussion, procedures, and forms for use in an action to recover possession of personal property, see Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery].

☐ Trespass to personal property; consider:

☐ Trespass occurs when defendant's interference with the property was not substantial enough to constitute conversion [see § 150.18[3]].

☐ Recovery for trespass is allowed when the complaint alleges conversion but the evidence shows insubstantial interference with the property [see §§ 150.13[4], 150.18[3]].

☐ Fraud; consider:

☐ If defendant fraudulently obtained possession of property, a suit seeking damages for fraud is available [see Wendling etc. Co. v. Glenwood etc. Co. (1908) 153 Cal. 411, 413] . For discussion, procedures, and forms for use in an action for fraud, see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit .

☐ Breach of contract, consider:

☐ If the acts constituting conversion also amount to a breach of contract between the parties, such as a bailment contract, a cause of action for breach of contract may be pleaded. For discussion, procedures, and forms for use in an action for breach of contract, see Ch. 140, Contracts .

☐ The statute of limitations is either four years if the contract was written [Code Civ. Proc. § 337] or two years if the contract was oral [Code Civ. Proc. § 339].

[4] Venue

☐ Determine venue:

☐ Conversion being a transitory action, the county in which the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action is the proper county for the trial of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395; Haurat v. Superior Court (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 330, 333, 50 Cal. Rptr. 520] .

☐ The enlarged venue available in actions for injuries to personal property is not available in a conversion action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395; Mason v. Buck (1929) 99 Cal. App. 219, 220, 221, 278 P. 461] .

[5] Drafting the Complaint

NOTE:
At least one attorney of record, or the party, if unrepresented, must sign the complaint in the attorney's individual name. The complaint must state the signer's address and telephone number [Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)].

☐ If complaint is to be verified, which is not required [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2009, 2015.5; see § 150.50[4]], have the verification executed by:

☐ Plaintiff, if an individual.

☐ Counsel, if plaintiff is out of the country in which counsel has his or her office, or for some cause is unable to verify it, or if facts are within attorney's knowledge.

☐ If plaintiff is a corporation, by an officer thereof.

☐ Prepare summons [for discussion of the procedures and forms for use in the preparation and service of the summons, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers].

§ 150.41 Defendant's Guide

NOTE:
Illustrative Checklist: The following checklist is illustrative only of the basic points which counsel for a defendant in a conversion action should cover.

[1] Facts to Be Ascertained

NOTE:
Not all of the following facts will be ascertainable from the client in the initial interview. Subsequent interviews may be required, or it may be necessary to ascertain the facts from other persons, including the plaintiff, by use of discovery proceedings.

[a] Facts Relating to Defendant

☐ Capacity of defendant such as minor, adult, corporation, unincorporated association, or partner in partnership.

☐ Additional facts, as desired, relating to defendant's stability and financial solvency such as:

- ☐ Employment status.
- ☐ Prior residences.
- ☐ Credit, bank, and personal references.

[b] Facts Required for Answer

☐ Ascertain which of the facts alleged in the compliant are true, which are false, and of which ones defendant does not know the truth or falsity.

[2] Documents to Be Obtained

[3] Affirmative Defenses

☐ Consider the following defenses:

☐ Immunity of personal representative of decedent's estate who takes possession of property in good faith belief that it is property of estate [see § 150.20].

☐ Determine how to raise defense [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10, 430.30]:

☐ If the defense appears on the face of the complaint or from matters of which the court must or may take judicial notice, it may be raised by demurrer as well as by answer.

☐ Otherwise, the defense must be raised by answer.

[4] Absence of Elements of Cause of Action

☐ Consider potential defects in plaintiff's cause of action:

☐ Does the plaintiff have adequate interest in the property to maintain the action [see § 150.12].

☐ Was the interference with plaintiff's property insubstantial, so that conversion cannot be established, limiting plaintiff's recovery to actual damages under a trespass theory [see §§ 150.13[4], 150.18[3]].

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is a general form for use in an action for damages for conversion. Subsequent forms provide an allegation seeking punitive damages [§ 150.51], complaints and allegations based on various methods of converting property [§§ 150.52-150.65], complaints and allegations for use by particular plaintiffs [§§ 150.73-150.76], and an allegation alleging excuse from the requirement of making a demand for the return of property [§ 150.77].

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges [see Franklin v. Municipal Court (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 884, 901, 103 Cal. Rptr. 354 (necessity of pleading plaintiff's interest, defendant's conversion, and damages in action for conversion)]:

- Plaintiff's interest in, and right to possession of, certain identified personal property (Paragraph 3) [Igauye v. Howard (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 122, 127, 249 P.2d 558 ; Hall v. Susskind (1898) 120 Cal. 559, 565, 53 P. 46 (necessity of alleging description of property); see §§ 150.11, 150.12];

- The value of the property (Paragraph 4) [Oakes v. Suelynn Corp. (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 271, 279, 100 Cal. Rptr. 838 ; see § 150.16]; and

- Defendant's conversion (Paragraph 5) [Jordan (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 597, 610, 12 Cal. Rptr. 488, 361 P.2d 20 ; see § 150.13].

If defendant's original possession was lawfully acquired, a demand for return of the property must be made on defendant before action is brought [Flennaugh v. Heinrich (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 214, 222, 200 P.2d 580 ; see § 150.13[7]]. Optional Paragraph 6 may be used to allege the demand and defendant's refusal to comply. For a form of allegation that may be used in lieu of this paragraph when no demand is required, for example, when demand would be futile [see Scott's V. F. Exch. v. Growers Refrigeration Co., Inc. (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 437, 450, 184 P.2d 183 , disapproved on other grounds, Hischemoeller v. Nat. Ice etc. Storage Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 318, 328, 294 P.2d 433] , see § 150.77.

Civ. Code § 3336, which provides for an alternative measure of damages, is employed when damages based on the value of the property would yield an unjust result [Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 104, 116, 43 Cal. Rptr. 420 ; see § 150.16[2]]. To seek damages under this alternative damage provision, include Optional Paragraph 7 in addition to the allegation of damages based on the value of the property (Paragraph 4).

Optional Paragraph 8 may be used to seek damages for expenditures properly made in the pursuit of the property [see Civ. Code § 3336; see also § 150.16[3]].

Exemplary damages [Civ. Code § 3294] may be recovered in a conversion action, given the requisite showing of malice, fraud, or oppression [Haigler v. Donnelly (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 674, 681, 117 P.2d 331 ; see § 150.16[5]]. Optional Paragraph 9 may be used to seek exemplary damages. No claim for exemplary damages may state an amount claimed [Civ. Code § 3295(e)]. For punitive damages allegations that may be used as an alternative to Paragraph 9, see § 150.51.

[4] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[5] Venue

For purposes of venue, conversion is not considered an injury to person or personal property as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) which would permit trial in the county where the conversion took place since such an injury is limited to physical or corporeal injury [Spangenberg v. Spangenberg (1932) 123 Cal. App. 387, 391, 11 P.2d 408] . Therefore, the residence of the defendant is the proper county for the trial of an action for conversion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a); Haurat v. Superior Court (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 330, 333, 50 Cal. Rptr. 520] .

[6] Copies

The following copies of this complaint should be prepared:

- Original to be filed with the court;
- One copy, together with a copy of the summons, to be served on each defendant [different forms of service require different numbers of copies; for discussion see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers];
- One copy for the office file;
- Copy for client, if desired; and
- Other copies as desired.

13-150 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 150.51

§ 150.51 Allegation--Facts Justifying Punitive Damages

[1] FORM Allegation--Facts Justifying Punitive Damages

1. At the time defendant converted the property, defendant was guilty of malice, oppression, and a willful and conscious disregard for the rights of plaintiff in that defendant, without making any investigation and with reckless indifference and willful and conscious disregard for the rights of any person whomay have had an interest in the converted property, and particularly for the rights of plaintiff, did convert the property.

2. Further, after knowledge and notice of plaintiff's interest in the converted property was given to defendant, defendant failed and refused, and continues to fail and refuse, to return the property. By reason of these acts plaintiff has been oppressed and seeks punitive and exemplary damages.

[2] Use of Form

The allegation in [1], above, states circumstances upon which an award of punitive and exemplary damages is sought. Upon proper showing, punitive damages are available in a conversion action [see Ferraro v. Pacific Fin. Corp. (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 339, 351, 87 Cal. Rptr. 226 ; Civ. Code § 3294]. No claim for exemplary damages may state an amount claimed [Civ. Code § 3295(e)].

When appropriate, these allegations may be substituted for Paragraph 9 of § 150.50[1], thereby becoming Paragraphs 9 and 10.

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action for damages for the unauthorized sale and conversion of securities by a stockbroker. It alleges:

- The manner in which defendant came into possession of the stock (Paragraphs 3, 4);
- That the stock was purchased for plaintiff's account (Paragraph 4); and
- Their unauthorized sale (Paragraph 5).

For discussion of the other allegations essential to this complaint, see § 150.50[3].

Demand for return of the stock is not required in this type of case since, the stock having already been sold, demand for its return would be futile [see Coy v. E.F. Hutton & Co. (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 386, 390, 391, 112 P.2d 639 ; for discussion, see § 150.13[7]]. However, it is advisable that a demand be made to remove this issue (Optional Paragraph 7).

13-150 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 150.55

§ 150.55 Allegation--Conversion by Purchase of Converted Property

[1] FORM Allegation--Conversion by Purchase of Converted Property

1. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [location], _____ [name] wrongfully converted the property described above in that he/she _____ [describe method of conversion].

2. Thereafter, on or about _____ [date], the property described above came into possession of defendant, and plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that defendant purchased it from _____ [name of original converter].

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegation in [1], above, is for use to allege conversion by the purchase of previously converted property. It alleges the conversion by a third party (Paragraph 1) and defendant's purchase of the previously converted goods (Paragraph 2) [see Swim v. Wilson (1891) 90 Cal. 126, 128-131, 27 P. 33] . When appropriate, these allegations may be substituted for Paragraph 5 of § 150.50[1], with subsequent paragraphs renumbered accordingly.

Although the initial converter is a possible defendant, there is nothing to indicate that plaintiff cannot select which of many possible converters against whom to pursue the case [see Culp v. Signal Van & Storage Co. (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 859, 861 , 298 P.2d 162] .

Because in the typical situation a defendant purchaser will have purchased the property in ignorance of plaintiff's interest in the property, a demand for the property's return will be necessary before an action may be brought [see Flennaugh v. Heinrich (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 214, 222, 200 P.2d 580] .

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[Verification, if desired. See § 150.50[1]; for discussion, see § 150.50[4].]

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use in an action for damages for conversionbrought against a common carrier for the misdelivery of goods.

The form alleges the delivery of the goods to defendant (Paragraph 5) and misdelivery of those goods by defendant (Paragraph 6) [see Com. Code § 7404]. For a discussion of the other allegations essential to this complaint for conversion, see § 150.50[3].

Under statute, a common carrier is relieved of liability for conversion if the misdelivery was made in good faith [see Com. Code § 7404; but see McCaslin v. Southern Pac. Co. (1922) 187 Cal. 716, 723, 724, 203 P. 742 (liability of initial carrier for conversion by connecting carrier in selling shipment for transportation charges on refusal of consignee to accept shipment)].

§ 150.57 Allegation--Conversion by Refusal to Redeliver Property--Against Agent to Sell Automobile

[1] FORM Allegation--Conversion by Refusal to Redeliver Property--Against Agent to Sell Automobile

1. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff delivered the automobile described above to defendant and it was received by defendant under an [oral] agreement [, attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof,] by which defendant was to use his/her best efforts to sell the automobile for a price not to be less than $_____ and to pay the proceeds of the sale to plaintiff [less a discount of _____ percent which defendant was entitled to retain as his/her commission on the sale]. Defendant furtheragreed, in the event that the automobile was not sold, to return it to plaintiff on _____ [date].

2. Although _____ [date], the date for return of the automobile, has passed, and defendant has failed to sell the automobile, defendant still retains possession of the automobile.

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegation in [1], above, is for use in a complaint for conversion brought against an agent authorized to sell an automobile. It alleges delivery of the property to defendant (Paragraph 1) and defendant's continued retention of the property (Paragraph 2). When appropriate, these allegations may be substituted for Paragraph 5 of § 150.50[1], with subsequent paragraphs renumbered accordingly.

Because defendant's original acquisition of possession was lawful, demand for return of the property is required [see § 150.50[1], Paragraph 6; Flennaugh v. Heinrich (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 214, 222, 200 P.2d 580] .

§ 150.58 Allegation--Conversion by Refusal to Redeliver Property--By Lessor Against Lessee

[1] FORM Allegation--Conversion by Refusal to Redeliver Property--By Lessor Against Lessee

1. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff delivered the personal property described above to defendant [for his/her use in work then being done by him/her] and defendant then and there agreed to pay plaintiff the sum of $_____ per _____ [specify period of time, e.g., day] for the use of the property and to return the property to plaintiff _____ [on demand or on _____ (date)].

2. On or about _____ [date], [and after the date for return of the property had passed,] plaintiff duly demanded of defendant that he/she return the above-mentioned property, but defendant failed and refused, and continues to fail and refuse, to return the property and has thereby converted it to his/her own use. [A copy of plaintiff's demand (and defendant's refusal) is attached hereto as Exhibit(s) A (and B, respectively,) and made a part hereof.]

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegation in [1], above, is for use in a complaint for conversion brought against a lessee who has refused to return property to the plaintiff lessor at the end of the lease period.

The form alleges that defendant leased an item of personal property from plaintiff (Paragraph 1) and that defendant failed and refused to return the property after the lease period had terminated (Paragraph 2). When appropriate, these allegations may be substituted for Paragraph 5 of § 150.50[1], with subsequent paragraphs renumbered accordingly.

The need to demand return of the property before bringing the action depends on the circumstances of the case [see Greiner v. Greiner (1881) 58 Cal. 115, 120, 121 (conversion by depositary as relieving depositor of obligation to demand return of property)]. When property is lent for a specified time or specified purpose, it must be returned when the time has expired or the purpose has been accomplished [see Civ. Code §§ 1895, 1958]. In other cases, demand for the return must be made [see Flennaugh v. Heinrich (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 214, 222, 200 P.2d 580] , in which case Optional Paragraph 6 of the form of complaint in § 150.50[1] should be included in the form.

[A copy of this contract is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof.]

2. [A copy of plaintiff's demand (and defendant's refusal) is attached hereto as Exhibit(s) B (and C, respectively,) and made a part hereof.]

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegation in [1], above, is for use in a complaint for conversion against a bailee's landlord who has refused to redeliver possession to plaintiff bailor. It alleges the existence of a bailment (Paragraph 1) and defendant's power over the property and refusal to return it on demand (Paragraph 2) [see Zaslow v. Kroenert (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 541, 549, 550, 176 P.2d 1 (conversion where possessor of realty refuses to allow owner of personal property to remove it)]. [2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action for damages for conversion brought against a sheriff or marshal for failure to follow the statutory requirements in dealing with attached property, such as allowing attached property to be sold by a warehouse worker for storage charges (Paragraph 8) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 17(b)(10), 262.7, 542(4); Reynolds v. Lerman (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 586, 592-594, 292 P.2d 559] . For a discussion of the allegations essential to this complaint, see § 150.50[3].

A demand for return of the property would not be required if the goods had been disposed of by the defendant prior to the time plaintiff sought their return [see Coy v. E.F. Hutton & Co. (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 386, 390, 391, 112 P.2d 639] . In other situations, where defendant still has possession of the property, a demand for its return and a refusal to return is required before the action may be brought [see Flennaugh v. Heinrich (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 214, 222, 200 P.2d 580] .

[3] Verification

Although normally when a complaint is verified, the answer must also be verified, verification of the complaint in [1], above, will not compel a county official who is a defendant in his or her official capacity to verify the answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 446; for further discussion of verification, see § 150.50[4]].

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action for damages for conversion of personal property brought by a lienholder against the owner of the property who had wrongfully taken the property before the extinguishment of the lien. It alleges the existence of the possessory lien on the property (Paragraphs 4, 6) [*see Civ. [2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action for damages for conversion of property of an estate after a testator's death. It alleges [see Prob. Code § 9869 (liability for twice the value of the property for wrongfully taking, concealing, or disposing of estate property)]:

- Plaintiff's representative capacity (Paragraph 3) [see Ham v. Henderson (1875) 50 Cal. 367, 369] ;

- That decedent owned and was entitled to possession of such property at the time of his or her death (Paragraph 4) [see Crill v. Doyle (1879) 53 Cal. 713, 715] ; and

- That plaintiff is entitled to possession of the converted goods (Paragraph 8).

The form further alleges that defendant, in bad faith, concealed and refused to disclose the whereabouts of the converted goods (Paragraphs 6, 9).

Pleading requirements for alleging the plaintiff's interest are lenient. It is sufficient to plead that the property was owned by the estate [see Ham v. Henderson (1875) 50 Cal. 367, 369] or that plaintiff was in possession at the time of the conversion without alleging the representative capacity [see Munch v. Williamson (1864) 24 Cal. 167, 171] . However, plaintiff must prove decedent's right to possession at the time of death [see Crill v. Doyle (1879) 53 Cal. 713, 715] .

§ 150.77 Allegation--Excuse for Failure to Make Demand for Return of Property

[1] FORM Allegation--Excuse for Failure to Make Demand for Return of Property

Plaintiff did not make a demand on defendant for the return of the above-mentioned goods because, prior to the date plaintiff sought the return of the property, defendant _____ [describe circumstances excusing the making of a demand for return, e.g., sold all of the property].

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegation in [1], above, is for use to allege facts that relieve plaintiff of the requirement of making a demand for the return of the property. Demand for the return of goods is not required where the demand would be futile [see Scott's V. F. Exch. v. Growers Refrigeration Co., Inc. (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 437, 450, 184 P.2d 183 , disapproved on other grounds, Hischemoeller v. Nat. Ice etc. Storage Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 318, 328, 294 P.2d 433] or where defendant has sold or consumed the property [see Metzler v. Foster Holding Co. (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 278, 282, 54 P.2d 447 ; for discussion of the demand requirement, see § 150.13[7]]. Although no case requires this allegation, if the complaint does not otherwise allege the facts excusing demand, this allegation should be substituted for Paragraph 6 of § 150.50[1].

Counsel should also note that it is advisable to make a demand for return of the property before bringing the action even if suchdemand is not required so as to remove this as a possible issue of contention.

PART V. FORMS

13-150 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 150.78

§ 150.78 Allegation--Request for Injunctive Relief

[1] FORM Allegation--Request for Injunctive Relief

No adequate remedy exists at law for the injuries suffered by plaintiff herein, insofar as further harm will result to plaintiff from defendant's wrongful act of conversion absent injunctive relief. If this court does not grant injunctive relief of the type and for the purpose specified herein, plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury. Therefore, plaintiff requests the following injunctive relief: _____ [specify nature and extent of injunctive relief sought, e.g., an order enjoining defendant from using plaintiff's molds in making and selling jewelry and requiring defendant to destroy all molds, designs, sketches, and representations of plaintiff's work in defendant's possession].

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegation in [1], above, is for use to seek injunctive relief on the ground that the damages requested provide an inadequate remedy at law and irreparable injury will otherwise occur to the plaintiff. A defendant owes a duty to the plaintiff to avoid further harm [see § 150.14], and it may be necessary for the plaintiff to obtain an injunction to prevent further damage to the plaintiff [see Gladstone v. Hillel (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 977, 988-990, 250 Cal. Rptr. 372 ; but see Bonito Boats v. Thunder Craft Boats (1989) 489 U.S. 141, 167-168, 109 S. Ct. 971, 103 L. Ed. 2d 118 (apparently abrogating Gladstone to the extent that it upheld injunction for violation of anti-molding statute set forth in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17300)].

When appropriate, this allegation may be used in any of the complaints in this chapter. When it is used in a complaint, counsel must also insert a request for injunctive relief in the prayer.

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Defendant Took Possession as Personal Representative and in Good Faith Belief That Property Was Part of Decedent's Estate [Prob. Code § 9651]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

1. From and after _____ [date], and at the time of the acts complained of, this defendant was[, and is,] the duly appointed, qualified, and acting _____ [administrator of the estate (with will annexed) or executor of the will] of _____ [name], deceased. [A copy of the letters _____ (testamentary or of administration) is attached hereto marked Exhibit _____ and made a part hereof].

2. When this defendant took possession of the _____ [specify, e.g., stock certificates], he/she/it did so as the acting and qualified personal representative of the estate of _____ [name of decedent] and in the good faith belief that the property was part of that estate[, after having made reasonable efforts to determine the true nature of, and title to, those _____ (specify, e.g., certificates)].

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use by the personal representative of a decedent's estate in an answer to an action for damages for conversion of property which the personal representative took in the good faith belief that it was part of the decedent's estate [see Prob. Code § 9651]. Because Prob. Code § 9651(a) provides immunity for both civil and criminal liability for taking possession of either real or personal property, this form may also be used in an action for damages for trespass to real property.

Prob. Code § 9651(b) requires that the personal representative make reasonable efforts to determine the true nature of, and title to, the property taken. The section has not yet been judicially interpreted, and it is not clear whether reasonable efforts are a necessary basis of the good faith belief in the estate's superior claim to the property.

For discussion of the representative's entitlement to issues, rents, and profits from the property, as well as expenses and compensation for preservation of the property, see § 150.20.

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use by a defendant in an answer to a cause of action for conversion when the defendant wishes to allege that he or she took the property that is the subject of the action for the purpose of defending himself or herself from being harmed by the plaintiff, when defendant reasonably believed that plaintiff intended harm, and that he or she could safely prevent the harm only by taking the property [*see Church of Scientology v. § 160.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains discussion and forms that deal with the capacity in which a corporation may sue or be sued. In addition to coverage of the disabilities that may be imposed on a corporation for failure to comply with various statutory requirements, the capacity or status of certain foreign corporations that are subject to California law is treated in this chapter. Jurisdiction over foreign corporations pursuant to California's "long-arm" statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 410], the related doctrine of forum non conveniens, and motions to quash service for lack of personal jurisdiction are discussed in Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal . For forms and discussion relating to the requirements for actually serving summons on foreign corporations, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers . The subject of venue in actions involving both domestic and foreign corporations is covered in Ch. 571, Venue .

This chapter also includes allegations of corporate capacity and principal place of business [see §§ 160.50 -160.52], and an allegation that the defendant is a foreign corporation governed by Corp. Code § 2115 (a "nominally foreign corporation" for the purposes of this chapter) [see § 160.53]. Also included is an affirmative defense to a foreign corporation's right to maintain an action in California based on its nonqualification to transact intrastate business [see § 160.54].

Several forms for motions, actions, and proceedings relating to a foreign corporation's commencement and cessation of nominally foreign status are also included [see §§ 160.55 -160.59].

Pleas and motions concerning the capacity of corporations that have suffered suspension or forfeiture of corporate powers under the tax statutes comprise the final group of forms in this part [see §§ 160.60 -160.67].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 160.11 Capacity to Sue and Be Sued

Because a corporation has all the powers of a natural person in carrying out its business activities [Corp. Code § 207], it follows that it has the capacity to sue and be sued in any court [see also Code Civ. Proc. § 17(defining person as including a corporation)]. Generally, in court matters, a corporation can act only through licensed attorneys and can appear neither in propria persona nor by an officer who is not an attorney [Himmel v. City Council (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 97, 100, 336 P.2d 996 ; Paradise v. Nowlin (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 897, 898, 195 P.2d 867] .

In small claims court, a corporation may appear only through a regular employee or a duly appointed or elected officer or director who is employed, appointed, or elected for purposes other than solely representing the corporation in small claims court [Code Civ. Proc. § 116.540(b); see Code Civ. Proc. § 116.540(i) (special rules for association managing common interest development)]. Except as otherwise provided, no attorney may take part in the conduct or defense of a small claims action [Code Civ. Proc. § 116.530(a)]. Two of the exceptions to this prohibition include if the attorney is a party or if the attorney is appearing to maintain or defend an action by or against a professional corporation of which he or she is an officer or director and of which all other officers and directors are attorneys [Code Civ. Proc. § 116.530(b)]. For further discussion of small claims procedures, see Ch. 526, Small Claims .

A dissolved corporation has a capacity to sue and defend, and otherwise continues to exist, but only for the limited purpose of winding up its affairs [Corp. Code § 2010(a)]. An action or proceeding to which a corporation is a party does not abate by the dissolution of the corporation or the proceedings for winding up and dissolution [Corp. Code § 2010(b)]. For a detailed discussion of the capacity of a dissolved corporation, and forms related to such corporations, see Ch. 170, Corporations: Dissolution and Winding Up.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-160 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 160.12

§ 160.12 Foreign Corporations

[1] Transacting Intrastate Business

[a] Test

A foreign corporation, including a business association organized as a trust under the laws of a foreign jurisdiction [Corp. Code §§ 170, 171] transacts intrastate business in California when it enters into repeated and successive transactions of its business in California, other than interstate or foreign commerce [Corp. Code § 191(a)]. Although the question of whether a corporation is transacting intrastate business will require a factual analysis of its activities in California, Corp. Code § 191(b)-(d) furnishes examples of a corporation's status and activities, one or more of which will not constitute the transaction of intrastate business by corporations generally and by lending institutions in particular. The activities listed in Corp. Code § 191(b)-(d) are not intended to exclude other activities that may not constitute the transaction of intrastate business [Corp. Code § 191(c), (d); see, e.g., United Systems of Arkansas, Inc. v. Stamison (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1001, 1007, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 407 (submitting bid in response to request for quotation by DMV was not "transacting intrastate business" and out-of-state bidder could maintain suit challenging award of contract to another bidder without obtaining certificate of qualification)].

[b] Failure to Qualify

The failure of a foreign corporation to qualify to transact intrastate business by first obtaining a certificate of qualification from the Secretary of State pursuant to Corp. Code § 2105 will bar that corporation from maintaining any action or proceeding in any court of California on any of the intrastate business so transacted if the action or proceeding is commenced prior to compliance with the certification requirements. The corporation remains under this disability until it has complied with the provisions of Corp. Code § 2105, has paid to the Secretary of State a penalty in addition to the fees due for filing the statement and designation required by Corp. Code § 2105, and has filed with the clerk of the court in which the action is pending receipts showing the payment of these fees and penalty and all franchise taxes and other taxes on business or property in California that should have been paid for the period during which it transacted intrastate business [Corp. Code § 2203(c); see also Corp. Code § 13404.5 (qualification requirements for foreign professional corporations)].

Corp. Code § 2203(c), however, does not prevent a corporation that has failed to comply with Corp. Code § 2105 from defending an action brought against it [see Mediterranean Exports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 605, 614, 174 Cal. Rptr. 169] . Furthermore, a foreign corporation transacting intrastate business that has failed to qualify may commence an action in state court [United Medical Management Ltd. v. Gatto (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 1739, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600 ; Ward Land etc. Co. v. Mapes (1905) 147 Cal. 747, 753, 82 P. 426] . The act of maintaining an action commenced prior to qualification requires compliance with Corp. Code § 2203(c). However, a foreign corporation that qualifies to transact intrastate business after transacting, but before commencing an action on, intrastate business, may maintain the action without complying with Corp. Code § 2203(c) as long as the Franchise Tax Board has not suspended the corporation for failure to pay taxes before it commences the action [United Medical Management Ltd. v. Gatto (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 1742, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600] .

Any foreign corporation that transacts intrastate business and does not hold a valid certificate from the Secretary of State is deemed to consent to the jurisdiction of California courts in any civil action arising in California in which it is named a defendant [Corp. Code § 2203(a)].

[c] Forfeiture of Qualification

A foreign corporation, other than an association, qualified to transact intrastate business in California that does not file the annual statement required by Corp. Code § 2117 is subject to a monetary penalty and, after continuous failure, to suspension of its California privileges pursuant to Corp. Code §§ 2204, 2205 [Corp. Code § 2206(a)].

A foreign corporation that is qualified for the transaction of intrastate business but that is merged into another corporation is referred to as a "foreign disappearing corporation," which surrenders its right to transact intrastate business automatically by the filings required by Corp. Code § 1108(c) if the surviving corporation is a domestic corporation, or by Corp. Code § 1108(d) if the surviving corporation is a foreign corporation [Corp. Code § 1108(c), (e)].

A qualified foreign corporation that converts into another foreign corporation (for instance, a Nevada corporation that becomes a Delaware corporation) cannot lose its capacity to do business, or to appear in legal proceedings, in California either (1) because of noncompliance with Corp. Code § 1157, governing conversion of certain entities to or from status as a corporation, since that code section does not apply to a foreign corporation's conversion into another foreign corporation, or (2) because of a failure to follow the notification procedure in Corp. Code § 2107 for a change in name or address of a qualified foreign corporation, since that code section does not require (nor does any other statute require) notification of a mere change in the state of incorporation [Capital Gold Group, Inc. v. Nortier (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1119, 1130-1133, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 439].

[2] Subject to California Law

[a] Determining Factors

Although states traditionally have been reluctant to attempt to regulate the "internal affairs" of foreign corporations, it is clear that in some cases the incorporation under the enabling statute of a foreign jurisdiction only creates a nominally foreign corporation if that corporation's activities are largely conducted in a sister state. Thus, the General Corporation Law provides that a foreign corporation (other than a foreign association or a foreign nonprofit corporation, but including a foreign parent corporation even though it does not itself transact intrastate business) transacting intrastate business [see Corp. Code § 191 (definition of transacting intrastate business)] is a foreign corporation subject to Corp. Code § 2115 if the average of its California property factor, payroll factor, and sales factor is more than 50 percent during its latest full income year and if more than one half of its outstanding voting securities are held of record by persons having addresses in California appearing on the books of the corporation on the record date for the latest meeting of shareholders held during its latest full income year (or if no meeting was held during that year, on the last day of the latest full income year) [Corp. Code § 2115(a)]. In making the calculation regarding outstanding shares, any securities held to the knowledge of the issuer in the names of broker-dealers; nominees for broker-dealers (including clearing corporations); or banks, associations, or other entities holding securities in a nominee name or otherwise on behalf of a beneficial owner (collectively "Nominee Holders") are not considered outstanding unless the Nominee Holder has made the appropriate certification [Corp. Code § 2115(a); see § 160.53 (discussing acquisition of nominally foreign status)].

Note that a foreign parent corporation need not itself be qualified to transact intrastate business in California to be a corporation subject to Corp. Code § 2115 because the characteristics of its share ownership are determined on the same basis as a qualified foreign corporation and the factors relating to property, payroll, and sales are determined on a consolidated basis according to a formula that includes the property, payroll, and sales of all 50 percent or more owned subsidiaries (less any percentage attributable to minority ownership) [Corp. Code § 2115(a)].

For the purposes of this discussion a foreign corporation that is subject to Corp. Code § 2115, and that therefore is treated as a domestic corporation with respect to certain important areas of substantive law concerned with shareholder and creditor rights, will be termed a "nominally foreign" corporation.

[b] Choice of California Law in Specified Agreements

Notwithstanding Civ. Code § 1646, which provides that a contract is to be interpreted in accordance with the law of the place of performance or, if no place of performance is indicated, the law of the place where it was made, the parties to a contract, agreement, or undertaking, contingent or otherwise, relating to a transaction involving in the aggregate not less than $250,000 may agree that California law will govern their rights and duties, in whole or in part, whether or not the contract, agreement, undertaking, or transaction bears a reasonable relation to California. This provision applies even if the transaction would otherwise be covered by Com. Code § 1301(a) (requiring reasonable connection to California and another state or country to uphold choice of law provision), but does not apply to any contract, agreement, or undertaking (1) for labor or personal services, (2) relating to any transaction primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, or (3) to the extent Com. Code § 1301(c) provides for a different result [Civ. Code § 1646.5]. Civ. Code § 1646.5 applies to contracts, agreements, and undertakings entered into before, on, or after its effective date; it is fully retroactive [Civ. Code § 1646.5]. Contracts, agreements, and undertakings selecting California law entered into before the effective date of Civ. Code § 1646.5 (September 20, 1986 for original version) are valid, enforceable, and effective as if Civ. Code § 1646.5 had been in effect on the date they were entered into; and actions and proceedings commencing in a California court before the effective date of Civ. Code § 1646.5 may be maintained as if Civ. Code § 1646.5 were in effect on the date they were commenced [Civ. Code § 1646.5].

Any person may maintain an action or proceeding in a California court against a foreign corporation or nonresident person if the action arises out of or relates to any contract, agreement, or undertaking for which a choice of California law has been made, in whole or in part, by the parties thereto if the contract, agreement, or undertaking, contingent or otherwise, (1) relates to a transaction involving in the aggregate not less than $1 million, and (2) contains a provision or provisions under which the foreign corporation or nonresident agrees to submit to the jurisdiction of the California courts. [Code Civ. Proc. § 410.40]. Code Civ. Proc. § 410.40 also applies to contracts, agreements, and undertakings entered into before, on, or after its effective date (September 20, 1986 for original version), and is fully retroactive. Contracts, agreements, and undertakings selecting California law entered into before the effective date of Code Civ. Proc. § 410.40 are valid, enforceable, and effective as if Code Civ. Proc. § 410.40 had been in effect on the date they were entered into; and actions and proceedings commencing in a California court before the effective date of Code Civ. Proc. § 410.40 may be maintained as if Code Civ. Proc. § 410.40 were in effect on the date they were commenced [Code Civ. Proc. § 410.40].

[c] Business and Shareholder Characteristics

The property, payroll, and sales factors that are employed in the determination of a foreign corporation's nominally foreign status are derived from the Bank and Corporation Tax Law [Corp. Code § 2115(a); see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 25129, 25132, 25134]. The three-factor formula is used in computing the portion of a corporation's income which is attributable to California. The operation of that formula is not discussed here [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 22, Corporate Franchise and Income Taxes in California (Matthew Bender)] since in the great majority of cases the determination as to a corporation's nominally foreign status may be made on the basis of public records as described below.

[d] Commencement and Cessation of Nominally Foreign Status

Nominally foreign status commences on the first day of the first income year of the corporation beginning on or after the 135th day of the income year immediately following the latest income year with respect to which the shareholder and business tests [see Corp. Code § 2115(a) (setting forth tests)] have been met, or beginning on or after the entry of a final order by a court of competent jurisdiction declaring that those tests have been met [Corp. Code § 2115(d)].

Nominally foreign status ceases at the end of the first income year of the corporation immediately following the latest income year with respect to which at least one of the tests is not met, or at the end of the income year of the corporation during which a final order has been entered by a court of competent jurisdiction declaring that one of those tests is not met. However, the filing of the court order will be ineffective if a contrary report or order is entered before the end of the income year [Corp. Code § 2115(e)].

[e] Exemption From Nominally Foreign Status

Nominally foreign status does not apply to a corporation with either of the following characteristics [Corp. Code § 2115(c)]:

- The corporation has outstanding securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange , the NYSE Amex, the NASDAQ Global Market, or the NASDAQ Capital Market;

- All of the corporation's voting shares (other than director's qualifying shares) are owned directly or indirectly by a corporation or corporations not subject to Corp. Code § 2115.

[f] Applicability of General Corporation Law

Foreign corporations that are nominally foreign because they satisfy the criteria set forth in Corp. Code § 2115(a) [see § 160.12[2][a]] are subject to specific provisions of the General Corporation Law otherwise only applicable to domestic corporations. The General Corporation Law will apply to such corporations to the exclusion of the law of the jurisdiction in which such corporations are incorporated [Corp. Code § 2115(b)]. The following are those provisions of the General Corporation Law that apply to nominally foreign corporations [Corp. Code § 2115(b)]:

- Chapter 1 [Corp. Code § 100 et seq. (general provisions and definitions)], to the extent applicable to the following provisions.

- Corp. Code § 301, relating to the annual election of directors.

- Corp. Code § 303, relating to the removal of directors without cause.

- Corp. Code § 304, relating to removal of directors by court proceeding.

- Corp. Code § 305(c), pertaining to the filling of director vacancies if less than a majority in office have been elected by shareholders.

- Corp. Code § 309, setting forth the directors' standard of care.

- Corp. Code § 316 (except for subdivisions (a)(3) and (f)(3)), imposing liability on directors for unlawful distributions.

- Corp. Code § 317, imposing limitations and setting procedures for the indemnification of directors, officers, and others.

- Corp. Code §§ 500-505, limiting distributions of corporate cash or property.

- Corp. Code § 506, imposing liability on shareholders receiving unlawful distributions.

- Corp. Code § 600(b), (c), requiring an annual shareholders' meeting.

- Corp. Code § 708(a)-(c), providing for the shareholders' right to cumulate votes at any election of directors.

- Corp. Code § 710, relating to supermajority vote requirements.

- Corp. Code § 1001(d), limiting the corporation's power to dispose of its assets.

- Corp. Code § 1101(e), second paragraph, respecting equal treatment of all shareholders of a given class or series, and the treatment of nonredeemable shares, in the case of mergers.

- Corp. Code § 1151 (first sentence only), regarding limitations on conversions.

- Corp. Code § 1152, regarding requirements of conversions.

- Chapter 12 [Corp. Code § 1200 et seq.], defining and setting forth required approvals for corporate "reorganizations."

- Chapter 13 [Corp. Code § 1300 et seq.], providing for dissenters' rights.

- Corp. Code §§ 1500, 1501, setting forth recordkeeping and reporting requirements.

- Corp. Code § 1508, authorizing action by the Attorney General to seek plenary relief against a corporation that is not complying with the General Corporation Law's requirements regarding shareholders' meetings [Corp. Code § 600 et seq.], voting [Corp. Code § 700 et seq.], and rights of inspection [Corp. Code § 1600 et seq.].

- Chapter 16 [Corp. Code §§ 1600-1605], providing for the rights of inspection of corporate records and property.

Any foreign corporation that is subject to the requirements of Corp. Code § 2115(b), discussed above, must advise any shareholder of record, any officer, director, employee, or other agent [see Corp. Code § 317 (definition)] and any creditor of the corporation in writing, within 30 days of receipt of written request for that information, whether or not it is subject to Corp. Code § 2115(b) at the time the request is received. If any party obtains a final determination by a court of competent jurisdiction that the corporation failed to provide the required information to the party, or provided the party incorrect information, the court in its discretion has the power to include in its judgment recovery by the party from the corporation of all court costs and reasonable attorneys' fees incurred in that legal proceeding, to the extent they relate to obtaining that final determination [Corp. Code § 2115(f)].

Chapter 160 CORPORATIONS: CAPACITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-160 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 160.13

§ 160.13 Suspension or Forfeiture of Corporate Powers

[1] Nonpayment of Taxes

Distinct from provisions of the General Corporation Law imposing disabilities on foreign corporations failing to qualify in California or forfeiting that qualification are those provisions of the Revenue and Taxation Code relating to the suspension (in the case of a domestic corporation) or forfeiture (in the case of a foreign corporation qualified to do business in California) of corporate powers resulting from failure to pay taxes or file returns. These forfeiture provisions and some other provisions [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, 23775], apply to a foreign corporation only if the corporation is qualified to do business in California. A corporation that is required under Corp. Code § 2105 to qualify to do business is not deemed to have qualified to do business for purposes of the provisions on suspension and revivor unless it has in fact qualified with the Secretary of State [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6].

Except for the purposes of filing an application for exempt status or amending the articles of incorporation as necessary either to perfect that application or to set forth a new name, the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a domestic taxpayer may be suspended, and the exercise of the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a foreign taxpayer in California may be forfeited, if any of the following conditions occur [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301]:

- If any tax, penalty, or interest, or any portion thereof, that is due and payable under the Corporation Tax Law (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23001 et seq.) or the administrative provisions (Rev. & Tax. Code § 19001 et seq.) either at the time the return is required to be filed, or on or before the 15th day of the ninth month following the close of the taxable year, is not paid on or before 6 p.m. on the last day of the 12th month after the close of the taxable year; or

- If any tax, penalty, or interest, or any portion thereof, due and payable on notice and demand from the Franchise Tax Board or due and payable under the Corporation Tax Law (Rev. & Tax Code § 23001 et seq.) or the administration provisions (Rev. & Tax Code § 18401 et seq.) is not paid on or before 6 p.m. on the last day of the 11th month following the due date of the tax; or

- If any liability, or any portion of liability, that is due and payable under Article 7 of Part 10.2 (Rev.

& Tax Code § 19131 et seq., Penalties and Additions to Tax) is not paid on or before 6 p.m. on the last day of the 11th month following the date on which tax liability is due and payable.

[2] Nonfiling of Return

Except for the purposes of filing an application for exempt status or amending the articles of incorporation as necessary either to perfect that application or to set forth a new name, the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a domestic taxpayer may be suspended, and the exercise of the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a foreign taxpayer in California may be forfeited for failure to file a tax return [Rev. & Tax. Code § 22301.5 (franchise tax)]. Again, this is only applicable to a foreign corporation required to qualify to do business in California if it has in fact qualified with the Secretary of State [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6].

[3] When Suspension Effective; Notice; Evidence

Forfeiture or suspension of a corporation's rights, powers, and privileges pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301, 23301.5, or 23775 occurs and becomes effective only as expressly provided in Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302(a)]. For a corporation's powers, rights, and privileges to be suspended or forfeited pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301, 23301.5, or 23775, the Franchise Tax Board must have mailed the corporation a notice of preliminary suspension that indicates that the corporation will be suspended by a date certain. The preliminary notice must be mailed to the corporation at least 60 days before the date certain [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 21020, 23302(b); see Ogden Martin Systems v. San Bernardino County (9th Cir. 1991) 932 F.2d 1284, 1291 (contractor that had not paid taxes as entitled to sue for rescission and restitution because its powers were never suspended by Franchise Tax Board)]. The Franchise Tax Board must transmit the name of a delinquent corporate taxpayer to the Secretary of State, and on doing so the suspension or forfeiture will become effective. The certificate of the Secretary of State is prima facie evidence of suspension or forfeiture [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302(c)]. The Secretary of State is not required to issue the certificate in order for suspension to be effective [Damato v. Slevin (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 668, 671, 262 Cal. Rptr. 879] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-160 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 160.14

§ 160.14 Relief From Suspension or Forfeiture

[1] Application

Any taxpayer that has suffered the suspension or forfeiture provided for in Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301 and 23301.5 may be relieved from the suspension or forfeiture on making application for relief in writing to the Franchise Tax Board, filing all required tax returns, and on payment of the tax, additions to tax, penalties, interest, and any other amounts for nonpayment of which the suspension or forfeiture occurred, together with all other taxes, additions to tax, penalties, interest, and any other amounts due under the Corporation Tax Law [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23001 et seq.], and on the issuance by the Franchise Tax Board of a certificate of revivor. Application for the certificate on behalf of any corporation that has suffered suspension may be made by any stockholder or creditor, by a majority of the surviving trustees or directors, by an officer, or by any other person who has interest in the relief from suspension [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305. However, the name of suspended corporation may be reserved and adopted by another corporation during period of suspension, resulting in denial of an application for revivor [see Boyer v. Jones (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 220, 221-222, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 824 (under Corp. Code § 201(b) and Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a, trial court properly denied suspended corporation's petition for writ of mandate seeking restoration of its name)].

The Franchise Tax Board may revive a corporation without full payment of taxes, penalties, and interest due if it determines that the revivor will improve the prospects for collection of the full amount due. This revivor may be limited as to time and/or functions that the revived corporation may perform, and the corporate powers, rights, and privileges may again be suspended or forfeited if the Franchise Tax Board determines that the prospects for collection have not been improved by the revivor [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305b].

[2] Satisfaction of Liability With Bond or Deposit

Notwithstanding Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23305 and 23305.1, which require a taxpayer to pay any liability to the Franchise Tax Board as a condition to revivor or relief from voidability, the Franchise Tax Board must issue a certificate of revivor under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305 or of relief from voidability under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1 if the taxpayer provides the Franchise Tax Board with an assumption of liability, or a bond, deposit, or other security for taxpayer's liability, that is acceptable to the Franchise Tax Board. The Franchise Tax Board must notify the person filing the application for revivor or relief from voidability of the amount of the bond, deposit, or other security or of the terms of an assumption of liability, which amount must be furnished as a condition of revivor or relief from voidability [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.2]. Obtaining revivor or voidability relief by securing the debt pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.2 does not constitute an admission of liability by the taxpayer or relieve the taxpayer or any individual or corporation from liability for any taxes, additions to tax, penalties, or interest imposed by Rev. & Tax. Code § 23001 et seq. A taxpayer that provides an assumption of liability or a bond, deposit, or other security to obtain revivor or relief from voidability, notwithstanding Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305 or 23305.1, may file any returns required under those sections within a reasonable time after relief is granted by the Franchise Tax Board [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.2].

[3] Revivor by Substantial Compliance

One court of appeal has held that the doctrine of substantial compliance allows a suspended corporation to prosecute or defend its action even though the certificate of revivor has not been issued [Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1514-1515, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619] . To establish substantial compliance, the suspended corporation's action must satisfy the policy of the statute, which, in this case, is to pressure corporations into paying delinquent taxes. Thus, the suspended corporation must have paid the tax and any interest and penalties for nonpayment for which the suspension or forfeiture occurred, together with all other taxes, deficiencies, interest, and penalties due [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305; Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1515-1516, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619 ; see also Damato v. Slevin (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 668, 672-673, 262 Cal. Rptr. 879 (purpose of suspension is to put pressure on corporations to pay their taxes; once that is done, there is no need to impose additional penalties)]. In Sade Shoe Co., susbstantial compliance was not established because the suspended corporation still owed $90.85 in penalties and interest [Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1516, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619] .

[4] Certificate of Revivor

On issuance of the certificate of revivor, the Franchise Tax Board must transmit to the Secretary of State the revived taxpayer's name and its corporate number or account number as issued by the Franchise Tax Board. The taxpayer's name and number, the fact that the taxpayer's corporate powers, rights, and privileges have been revived, and the effective date of the revivor are a matter of public record [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305c]. In addition, if the Franchise Tax Board determines that a suspension or forfeiture was in error by the Franchise Tax Board, the Franchise Tax Board, in connection with the revivor, must indicate that the corporation is "restored." The status of the restored corporation will be retroactive to the date of suspension or forfeiture as if there had been no suspension or forfeiture [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305c(c)]. Further, if the Franchise Tax Board determines that the mailing of the 60-day demand notice referred to in Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1(d) was in error or that the Franchise Tax Board's original determination as to compliance with the 60-day demand notice was in error, the Franchise Tax Board's revised conclusions also will be part of the public record [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305c(d)].

§ 160.15 Effect of Suspension or Forfeiture and Revivor

[1] In General

During the period of the suspension or forfeiture of its corporate powers, a corporation may neither prosecute [Ransome-Crummey Co. v. Superior Court (1922) 188 Cal. 393, 394-397] nor defend [Alhambra-Shumway Mines, Inc. v. Alhambra Gold Mine Corp. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 46, 49, 317 P.2d 649 , appeal dismissed, 356 U.S. 583, 78 S. Ct. 993, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1063 ; see Mediterranean Exports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 605, 614-615, 617-618, 174 Cal. Rptr. 169 (suspension or forfeiture under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302 only takes effect when F.T.B. transmits name of tax-delinquent foreign corporation to Secretary of State)] an action, nor may the corporation's liability insurer defend a lawsuit in the corporation's name [Kaufman & Broad Communities, Inc. v. Performance Plastering, Inc. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 212, 216-222, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 33 (insurance company may, however, intervene in lawsuit to protect rights of insured suspended corporation, and intervention is insurance company's only procedural option)], nor may the corporation appeal from an adverse judgment [Boyle v. Lakeview Creamery Co. (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 16, 20, 68 P.2d 968] . During the period of suspension, a suspended corporation that failed to revive its powers by paying delinquent taxes cannot renew a judgment obtained while it was in good standing [see Timberline, Inc. v. Jaisinghani (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1361, 1368-1369, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 4 (corporation's action in requesting court to renew judgment was unauthorized attempt to exercise rights, powers, and privileges of a going concern)]. The assignee of a suspended corporation is also subject to the corporation's disability to prosecute an action [Cleveland v. Gore Bros., Inc. (1936) 14 Cal. App. 2d 681, 682, 58 P.2d 931] .

Because the objection to a corporation's disability to sue, defend, or engage in other proceedings is a matter of abatement, not favored in law [Peacock Hill Asso. v. Peacock Lagoon Constr. Co. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 369, 372, 105 Cal. Rptr. 29, 503 P.2d 285 ; Maryland C. Co. v. Superior Court (1928) 91 Cal. App. 356, 363, 267 P. 169] , the revivor of a corporation's powers during an action or proceeding will generally have the effect of validating all prior actions of the corporation [Maryland Casualty Co. v. Superior Court of San Francisco (1928) 91 Cal. App. 356, 363, 267 P. 169 (act of filing complaint during suspension validated by revivor before motion to abate was made); Hall v. Citizens Nat. Tr. & Sav. Bank of Los Angeles (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 625, 630-632, 128 P.2d 545 (suspended corporation can validate commencement of action by securing reinstatement before trial on motion to abate); see also Traub Co. v. Coffee Break Service, Inc. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 368, 371, 57 Cal. Rptr. 846, 425 P.2d 790 (fact of corporation's suspension does not subject judgment in its favor to collateral attack); Rochin v. Pat Johnson Manufacturing Company (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1228, 1236-1237, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 719 (although manufacturer's corporate powers were suspended before personal injury action was brought against it and before subsequent action to vacate amended judgment, corporation was entitled to defend appeal from order sustaining its demurrer in second action because corporation's certificate of revivor became effective during pendency of appeal)]. For instance, the extension of an expired use permit to construct a winery at a time when the corporate applicant's powers were suspended was procedural, not substantive. The purpose of the suspension statute had been satisfied, in that the applicant paid its taxes. Thus, the corporation's revivor served to validate the extended permit [Benton v. County of Napa (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1485, 1491-1492, 277 Cal. Rptr. 541] . Furthermore, an objection to a corporation's incapacity, unlike an objection to its standing to sue, is a technical objection and must be raised at the earliest opportunity or it is waived [Color-Vue, Inc. v. Abrams (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1599, 1606, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443] . Thus, it has been held that a trial court abused its discretion by denying a corporation's motion for a continuance to pay taxes and revive corporate powers, granting the opposing party's motion to dismiss the corporation's complaint, and permitting the opposing party to proceed with default prove-up, when the opposing party was aware of the corporation's failure to pay taxes but did not raise that issue until trial [Color-Vue, Inc. v. Abrams (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1599, 1606, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443] .

When a defendant corporation's suspended status comes to light during litigation, the normal practice is for the trial court to permit a short continuance in order to enable the suspended corporation to effect reinstatement so as to defend itself in court [Timberline, Inc. v. Jaisinghani (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1361, 1366, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 4] . If a suspended corporation delays--even as late as the time its appellate brief is filed--revealing that its corporate status was revived during or soon after trial and before entry of a judgment against it, the corporation still should be granted a reversal of that judgment for the purpose of presenting a defense at trial. All acts of a suspended corporation, taken before or after judgment, are validated by revival [Peacock Hill Asso. v. Peacock Lagoon Constr. Co. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 369, 373-374, 105 Cal. Rptr. 29, 503 P.2d 285] . Any prejudice to the plaintiff, because of having to try its case, is outweighed by the strong public policy disfavoring pleas in abatement. Suspension of a corporation is intended to encourage it to pay taxes and file required documents, not to provide a boon or windfall to an adverse party [Cadle Co. v. World Wide Hospitality Furniture, Inc. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 504, 512-514, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 480] .

Prior actions will not be validated, however, when to do so would prejudice any action, defense, or right that has accrued by reason of the suspension [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a; see ABA Recovery Services, Inc. v. Konold (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 720, 724-725, 244 Cal. Rptr. 27 ; Welco Construction, Inc. v. Modulux, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 73-74, 120 Cal. Rptr. 572 (running of limitation period as substantive defense or right that cannot be prejudiced by revivor); see also Community Elec. Service v. National Elec. Contr. (9th Cir. 1989) 869 F.2d 1235, 1240-1241 (relying on Welco and ABA Recovery Services)]. Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a protects independent and superseding rights of parties other than the corporation and the taxing authorities, namely the rights of those who deal with revived corporations [Damato v. Slevin (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 668, 673-674, 262 Cal. Rptr. 879] .

In addition, contracts that were voidable pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1 but have not been rescinded pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.5 may be affirmed in accordance with Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a; see § 160.15[2]].

[2] Contracts Formed During Suspension

[a] Voidable

A contract entered into by a corporation while its powers, rights, and privileges are suspended pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301, 23301.5, or 23775 is, subject to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.5, voidable at the instance of any party to the contract other than the taxpayer [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1(a)].

A party that has a right to declare a contract to be voidable pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1 may exercise that right only in a lawsuit brought by either party to the contract in a court of competent jurisdiction. The rights of parties to the contract are not affected by Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1 except to the extent expressly provided by a final judgment of the court, which judgment cannot be issued unless the suspended corporation is allowed a reasonable opportunity to cure the voidability under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.5]. If the court finds the contract to be voidable under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1, the court must order the contract to be rescinded. In no event, however, may the court order rescission of the suspended corporation's contract unless that corporation receives full restitution of the benefits provided by it under the contract [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.5].

The other party's right to avoid a contract entered into with a corporation while that corporation was suspended is not barred by equitable estoppel unless the other party knew of the corporation's disability at the time the contract was formed [Damato v. Slevin (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 668, 675, 262 Cal. Rptr. 879 (decided under former Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304)].

[b] Unqualified Foreign Corporation Without Franchise Tax Account

If a foreign corporation that neither is qualified to do business nor has a corporate account number from the Franchise Tax Board fails to file a return required by Rev. & Tax. Code § 23101 et seq. or § 23501 et seq., any contract made in California by that corporation during the applicable period is voidable, subject to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.5 (discussed in § 160.15[2][a]), at the instance of any party to the contract other than that corporation [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1(b)]. For purposes of Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1(b), the applicable period begins on January 1, 1991, or on the first day of the taxable year for which the corporation has failed to file a return or pay taxes, whichever is later, and ends on the earlier of the date the corporation qualified to do business in California or the date the corporation obtained a corporate account number from the Franchise Tax Board [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1(c)]. In a case predating the applicability of the 1990 amendments, the court allowed a foreign corporation that had not qualified to do business in California or registered with the Franchise Tax Board until after the suit was commenced to recover based on equitable principles [Gardiner Solder Co. v. SupAlloy Corp., Inc. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1537, 1542-1545, 284 Cal. Rptr. 206] .

[c] Unqualified Foreign Corporation That Has Franchise Tax Account

If a foreign corporation that has a corporate account number from the Franchise Tax Board but has not qualified to do business under Corp. Code § 2105 fails to file a return required by Rev. & Tax. Code § 23101 et seq. or § 23501 et seq., to pay any tax or other amount owing to the Franchise Tax Board under Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23101 et seq., 23501 et seq., 23707, or 23772, or to file any statement or return required under Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23772 or 23774, within 60 days of receiving written demand from the Franchise Tax Board, any contract made in California by that corporation during the period beginning at the end of the 60-day demand period and ending on the date relief is granted under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1, or the date the taxpayer qualifies to do business in California, whichever is earlier, is voidable at the instance of any party to the contract other than that corporation [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1(d)].

[d] Application for Relief From Voidability

A suspended corporation may apply to the Franchise Tax Board for relief from the voidability provisions of Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1. To be relieved from voidability, the suspended corporation must do all of the following [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(a)]:

- Provide the Franchise Tax Board with an application for relief from contract voidability in a form and manner prescribed by the Franchise Tax Board;

- Include on the application the period for which relief is requested, which period, in the case of an application made simultaneously with an application for revivor, must begin on the date one of the taxpayer's taxable years begins and ends on the date relief is granted [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(1)(A)]. If the application for relief from voidability is filed for a period in which an application for revivor has been made and the certificate of revivor has been issued, the period for which relief from voidability is requested (and thus the period for which the penalty is imposed by Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)) begins on the date the corporation's powers, rights, and privileges were suspended or forfeited and ends on the date relief is granted [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(2)(A)];

- File any tax returns required to be filed with the Franchise Tax Board, including returns for the period for which relief is requested;

- Pay any tax, additions to tax, penalties, interest, and any other amounts owing to the Franchise Tax Board, including any liability attributable to the period for which relief is requested; and

- Pay any penalty imposed under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b) for the period for which relief is requested.

In the case of a corporation that enters into an approved voluntary disclosure agreement [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 19191], the corporation will be considered to have met the last three of the five requirements listed above, if the corporation fulfills to the satisfaction of the Franchise Tax Board all of the specifications of the voluntary disclosure agreement [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 19191(d)(2)] and if the Franchise Tax Board has not found that any of the circumstances described in Rev. & Tax. Code § 19194 rendered the agreement null and void.

The Franchise Tax Board must assess a penalty equal to $100 for each day of the period for which relief from voidability is granted, but in the case of an application made simultaneously with an application for revivor, the penalty cannot exceed the amount of tax for the period for which relief is granted [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(1)(B); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(1)(A) (relief as granted for period beginning at beginning of taxpayer's taxable year)].

In the case of an application for relief from voidability filed, for a period for which a certificate of revivor has already been issued, the penalty is $100 per day for each day of the period for which relief is requested, not to exceed the amount of tax that would be imposed under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23151, but except in the case of exempt organizations or trusts, no less than the amount of the minimum tax provided under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23153 for the period for which relief is granted [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(2)(B); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(2)(A) (penalty period begins on date of suspension or forfeiture and ends on date relief is granted)]. In the case of an exempt organization or trust that is required by Rev. & Tax. Code § 23731 et seq. to pay tax on unrelated business taxable income, the penalty cannot exceed the amount of tax imposed on its unrelated business income for the period for which relief is requested [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(2)(C)].

Any penalty imposed under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b) is, subject to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.2, due and payable on demand by the Franchise Tax Board [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(3)].

On satisfaction of the conditions specified in Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(a), including through application of Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.2 (discussed in § 160.14[2]), all contracts entered into during the period for which relief is granted that have not been rescinded by a final court order pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.5 (discussed in § 160.15[2][a]) may be enforced in the same manner and to the same extent, with regard to both parties to the contract and any third parties, as if the contract had never been voidable. On granting relief from voidability, the Franchise Tax Board must certify that relief to the applicant. The certificate must be issued or mailed to the applicant, or as directed by the applicant, and must indicate the period for which relief is granted [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(c); see also Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(c)(1)(B) (when sale, transfer, or exchange of real property is validated; discussed under § 160.15[3])].

The fact that a certificate of relief from voidability was issued pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1 and the information contained on the certificate are subject to public disclosure. The certificate is prima facie evidence of the relief from voidability for contracts entered into during the period of relief stated on the certificate, and the certificate may be recorded in the office of the county recorder of any county in California [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(d)].

[e] Transition Provisions Regarding Voidability

[i] 1993 Legislation

The version of Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1 allowing separate applications for revivor and relief from voidability and discussed in § 160.65[3] governs applications for relief filed on or after January 1, 1994, without regard to income years [Stats. 1993, ch. 680, § 2(a)]. It applies if the taxpayer both (1) received a certificate of revivor between January 1, 1991, and January 1, 1994, and (2) has contracts for which voidability relief could have been granted had the application for relief been filed simultaneously with the application for revivor [Stats. 1993, ch. 680, § 2(b)]. In addition, the 1993 legislation specified, as did the 1990 legislation, notwithstanding Stats. 1993, ch. 680, § 2(a), that the Legislature intends that Stats. 1993, ch. 680, not be construed in any manner that would affect the rights of any party to any action that has been commenced in a court of competent jurisdiction before January 1, 1994, or the rights of that party in a subsequent action based on the same claims as those asserted in the pre-1994 action, and that all those rights be determined without the application of Stats. 1993, ch. 680, but instead be determined by the law in effect before January 1, 1994 [Stats. 1993, ch. 680, § 2(a)].

[ii] 1990 Legislation

No contract entered into by a suspended corporation before January 1, 1991, is voidable under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 et seq. unless the contract was entered into while the taxpayer's powers, rights, and privileges in California were forfeited or suspended by the Franchise Tax Board through notice to the Secretary of State as provided in Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302 (discussed in § 160.13[3]) [Stats. 1990, ch. 926, § 17(a)]. Subject to the limitations set forth in Stats. 1990, ch. 926, § 17, a taxpayer that received a certificate of revivor between January 1, 1990, and January 1, 1991, may apply for relief from voidability under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1]. A corporation that entered into a contract while its powers, rights, and privileges were forfeited or suspended by the Franchise Tax Board in accordance with the procedures set forth in Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302, even if the contract was entered into before January 1, 1991, is entitled to relief from voidability pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1 (discussed in § 160.15[2][d]) in connection with an application for revivor [Stats. 1990, ch. 926, § 17(b)].

A contract entered into after January 1, 1991, by a corporation whose powers, rights, and privileges have not been forfeited or suspended by the Franchise Tax Board through notice to the Secretary of State is voidable only to the extent expressly provided in Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1(b) or (d) (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1(b) or (d)) [Stats. 1990, ch. 926, § 17(a) (amended Stats. 1991, ch. 1082, § 11)].

A corporation that received a certificate of revivor after January 1, 1990, and before January 1, 1991, may apply for relief from voidability with respect to any contract that was voidable because the contract was entered into by that corporation while its powers, rights, and privileges in California were forfeited or suspended [Stats. 1990, ch. 926, § 17(b); see Damato v. Slevin (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 668, 673-675, 262 Cal. Rptr. 879 (decided under prior law; contract entered into by corporation while its powers, rights, and privileges are suspended is voidable at option of other party to contract even after corporation had been revived)].

Notwithstanding Stats. 1990, ch. 926, § 17(a) or (b), the Legislature intends that Stats. 1990, ch. 926 not be construed in any manner that would affect the rights of any party to any action that has been commenced in a court of competent jurisdiction before January 1, 1991, or the rights of that party in a subsequent action based on the same claims as those asserted in the pre-1994 action, and that all such rights be determined without application of any provisions of Stats.

1990, ch. 926, and by the law in effect before January 1, 1991 [Stats. 1990, ch. 926, § 17(c)].

[3] Real Property Transactions

If a corporation's powers, rights, and privileges are forfeited or suspended pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, or 23775, without limiting other consequences of the forfeiture or suspension, the corporation is not entitled to sell, transfer, or exchange real property in California during the period of suspension [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302(d); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6 (discussed in § 160.32[1][d])]. However, on satisfaction of the conditions specified in Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(a), any sale, transfer, or exchange of real property in California during the period for which relief is granted and which the corporation at that time was not entitled to sell, transfer, or exchange by reason of Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302(d), and which has not been rescinded by a final court order pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.5, will be as valid as if the taxpayer had not been subject to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302(d) at the time of the sale, transfer, or exchange [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(c)(1)(B)].

Nevertheless, in a case predating the applicability of the 1990 amendments in which plaintiff, a foreign corporation, had not qualified to do business in California or registered with the Franchise Tax Board until after the suit was commenced, the court allowed plaintiff to recover based on equitable principles. The court reasoned (1) that the purpose of the suspension statute had been achieved in that the plaintiff did register and pay appropriate taxes and penalties and (2) that it would be inequitable to grant the defendant a windfall [Gardiner Solder Co. v. SupAlloy Corp., Inc. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1537, 1542-1545, 284 Cal. Rptr. 206] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-160 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 160.16

§ 160.16 Suspension of Corporate Powers for Failure to File Annual Information Statement

Corp. Code § 1502 provides that every corporation must file a statement every year containing information that includes the following:

- The corporation's current directors;
- The number of board vacancies, if any;
- The current officers;
- The street address of its principal executive office (and its mailing address, if different);
- If the principal office is in another state, the street address of its principal office in California;
- A statement of the corporation's general type of business; and
- The name and address of a person in California designated to receive service of legal process on the corporation.

For detailed discussion regarding the filing requirements, and illustrations of the official forms used for filing annual statements, see California Legal Forms (Matthew Bender), Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports.

In addition to the information required by Corp. Code § 1502, every publicly traded company [see Corp. Code § 1502.1(b)(1) (definition)] must file annually, within 150 days after the end of its fiscal year, a statement on a form prescribed by the Secretary of State that includes information such as [Corp. Code § 1502.1(a)]:

- The name of the independent auditor that prepared the most recent auditor's report on the corporation's annual financial statements;

- A description of annual compensation and loans made to any member of the board;

- Whether an order for relief has been entered in a bankruptcy case with respect to the corporation or its officers or board members within the previous 10 years; and

- Whether any officer or board member was convicted of fraud within the previous 10 years.

For discussion and an illustration of that form, see California Legal Forms (Matthew Bender), Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports, § 7.207B.

Corp. Code § 2204 provides that if a corporation fails to file its required information statement under Corp. Code § 1502, the Secretary of State will give the corporation notice of the delinquency. Sixty days after notice of the delinquency, if the corporation has not filed the required statement, the Secretary of State must certify the name of the corporation to the Franchise Tax Board, and the Franchise Tax Board imposes a penalty on the corporation [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 19141].

If a corporation fails to file a statement under Corp. Code § 1502, fails to file a statement for 24 months, and has been assessed a penalty under Corp. Code § 2204 during that 24-month period, then the corporation is subject to suspension under Corp. Code § 2205. The Secretary of State must notify the corporation that its corporate powers, rights, and privileges will be suspended after an additional 60 days, if it fails to file the required statement. If the corporation fails to comply within 60 days, the Secretary of State certifies to the Franchise Tax Board that the corporation is suspended, and mails a notice to the suspended corporation. Except for the purpose of amending the articles of incorporation to set forth a new name, the powers, rights, and privileges of the corporation are suspended [Corp. Code § 2205(c); see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 13, Records, Reports, and Inspection Rights (Matthew Bender)].

A corporation suspended for failure to file a required statement under Corp. Code § 1502 is disabled from participating in any litigation activities to the same extent as a corporation suspended for failure to pay taxes under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 [Palm Valley Homeowners Association, Inc. v. Design MTC (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 559-562, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 (holding that trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that law firm acted in bad faith by pursuing litigation activities on behalf of its client, even after the firm knew that the client was a suspended corporation, and in imposing sanctions accordingly); see also § 160.32[1][d]]. In a case of first impression, the court of appeal in Palm Valley addressed whether these two types of corporate suspensions--for nonpayment of taxes and for failure to file required information statement--both result in a disqualification from litigation. It concluded that although the statutory provisions suspending a corporation for failure to file a required statement had not yet been so construed in any published California case, those provisions would make clear to any reasonable attorney that a corporation suspended under the Corporations Code, like a corporation suspended under the Revenue and Tax Code, is also disabled from participating in litigation activities [Palm Valley Homeowners Association, Inc. v. Design MTC (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 556, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 (finding that law firm did not rely on any purported distinction between a Corporations Code suspension and a Revenue and Taxation Code suspension in deciding to conceal its knowledge of the client's suspended status from court and opposing counsel and thus affirming trial court's imposition of sanctions); see Forms 15.1, 15.2].

PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

14-160 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 160.32

§ 160.32 Decisions

[1] Capacity

[a] Failure to Assert

Failure of corporate plaintiff to plead facts of organization and existence to assert capacity to sue does not render complaint subject to general demurrer. Los Angeles Railway Co. v. Davis (1905) 146 Cal. 179, 180-181, 79 P. 865

[b] Federal Case

Under Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 17(b), corporation's capacity is determined under state law; antitrust law does not evidence any overriding federal interest to prevent application of that rule. Community Elec. Service v. National Elec. Contr. (9th Cir. 1989) 869 F.2d 1235, 1239

[c] Nonqualified Foreign Corporation

Corporation not precluded from asserting statute of limitations as defense because it is amenable to substituted service on Secretary of State if it is engaged in unauthorized transaction of intrastate business. Steiner v. 20th Century-Fox Film Corp. (9th Cir. 1956) 232 F.2d 190, 196

Bar to maintaining action or proceeding in California courts is inapplicable to federal cause of action heard in federal district court in nondiversity case. Harms, Inc. v. Tops Music Enterprises, Inc., (S.D. Cal. 1958) 160 F. Supp. 77, 78

Burden of proving that foreign corporation is transacting intrastate business and is therefore subject to qualification requirement is on party pleading nonqualification as bar to action. Automotriz etc. De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 794, 306 P.2d 1

Dismissal of lawsuit under Corp. Code § 2203(c) against plaintiff corporation that transacted intrastate business without first having obtained certificate of qualification as required by Corp. Code § 2105 does not violate commerce clause of United States Constitution. Neogard Corp. v. Malott & Peterson-Grundy (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 213, 226-227, 164 Cal. Rptr. 813

Failure of foreign corporation to qualify bars assignee of that corporation. Thorner v. Selective Cam Transmission Co. (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 89, 93, 4 Cal. Rptr. 409

[d] Suspension or Forfeiture of Powers for Nonpayment of Taxes

Reinstatement of corporate powers occurring after time for notice of appeal expired validates giving of notice during period of suspension. Peacock Hill Asso. v. Peacock Lagoon Constr. Co. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 369, 371, 105 Cal. Rptr. 29, 503 P.2d 285

Judgment in favor of suspended corporation is not subject to collateral attack. Traub Co. v. Coffee Break Service, Inc. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 368, 371, 57 Cal. Rptr. 846, 425 P.2d 790

Rule that corporation may neither prosecute nor defend action, nor appeal from adverse judgment, while its corporate powers are suspended, is inapplicable to shareholder's derivative suit alleging wrong to corporation by corporate officials. Reed v. Norman (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 338, 343, 309 P.2d 809

Corporation, having filed complaint after duly complying with statutory pre-suit notice requirement during period of suspension, and having subsequently obtained revival certificate before trial court granted defense motion for judgment on the pleadings, was entitled to reversal of judgment against it; trial court erroneously treated notice requirement as jurisdictional, whereas it was merely procedural. Center for Self Improvement & Community Dev. v. Lennar Corp. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1543, 1549, 1557, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 74

Name of suspended corporation may be reserved and adopted by another corporation during period of suspension, resulting in denial of application for revivor; under Corp. Code § 201(b) and Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a, trial court properly denied suspended corporation's petition for writ of mandate seeking restoration of its name. Boyer v. Jones (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 220, 221-222, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 824

Suspended corporation was entitled to defend appeal after having obtained certificate of revivor; revival of corporate powers validated procedural steps taken on behalf of corporation while it was under suspension and allowed it to proceed with the appeal. Rochin v. Pat Johnson Manufacturing Company (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1228, 1236-1237, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 719

Although statute of limitations defense that accrues during corporate suspension is not prejudiced on revival, that defense is capable of being waived. Electronic Equipment Express, Inc. v. Donald H. Seiler & Co. (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 834, 845, 176 Cal. Rptr. 239

Revivor of corporate powers does not validate suspended corporation's acts in commencing action if statute of limitations expired during period of suspension. Welco Construction, Inc. v. Modulux, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 73, 120 Cal. Rptr. 572 ; Cleveland v. Gore Bros., Inc. (1936) 14 Cal. App. 2d 681, 682, 58 P.2d 931

Appeal from adverse judgment denied to domestic corporation suspended for failure to pay tax if corporation has not offered to pay tax after issue raised. Gar-Lo, Inc. v. Prudential Sav. & L. Assn. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 242, 244-245, 116 Cal. Rptr. 389

Joint venturer of corporation suspended for nonpayment of franchise taxes is not necessarily prevented from bringing action on behalf of itself and joint venture. Laurel Crest, Inc. v. Vaughn (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 363, 364, 77 Cal. Rptr. 538

Fact of corporation's suspension for nonpayment of franchise taxes does not preclude trial court from recognizing existence of corporation for purpose of granting continuance to enable corporation to obtain reinstatement. Schwartz v. Magyar House, Inc. (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 182, 189, 335 P.2d 487

Taking of default judgment against suspended corporate is not a "right" accruing by reason of suspension that would be prejudiced by corporation's reinstatement. Schwartz v. Magyar House, Inc. (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 182, 190, 335 P.2d 487

Revivor of corporate powers validates acts done during corporation's period of suspension for nonpayment of franchise taxes. Hall v. Citizens Nat. Tr. & Sav. Bank of Los Angeles (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 625, 630-632, 128 P.2d 545

Lease executed by suspended corporation is voidable rather than void and valid if affirmed by other party. Depner v. Joseph Zukin Blouses (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 124, 127-128, 56 P.2d 574

Objection to suspended corporation's capacity to sue or defend constitutes merely plea in abatement. Maryland C. Co. v. Superior Court (1928) 91 Cal. App. 356, 361, 267 P. 169

[2] Choice of Law; Foreign Corporation Not Subject to California Registration

Even if valid choice of law clause applies California law, issues of continuing corporate legal existence are determined by law of state of incorporation; under Mo. Rev. Stat. §§ 351.535, 351.540(2), Missouri corporation was unable to maintain suit on contract entered into during forfeiture period even though forfeiture was rescinded during pendency of action. CM Record Corp. v. MCA Records, Inc. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 965, 967-969, 214 Cal. Rptr. 409

[3] Fictitious Business Name

Plaintiffs who sued corporation by fictitious business name could not obtain default judgement against fictitious business name as legally distinct entity after corporation responded to complaint in corporate name and obtained a dismissal. Pinkerton's Inc. v. Superior Court (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 1347-1348, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 356 .

[4] Legal Representation

Answer to complaint on behalf of corporation may not be filed by corporate officer who is not attorney. Merco Constr. Engineers, Inc. v. Municipal Court (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 724, 729-730, 147 Cal. Rptr. 631, 581 P.2d 636

General common law rule requiring corporations to be represented by counsel in proceedings before courts of record other than small claims courts does not extend to proceedings before administrative agencies and tribunals; decision of Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control, upheld by Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board, to revoke corporation's liquor license was not void for lack of jurisdiction when corporation was represented by nonattorney president at evidentiary administrative hearing before ALJ. Caressa Camille, Inc. v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1094, 1103

Written waiver of statute of limitations signed by corporation's attorney-agent is valid under Code Civ. Proc. § 360.5 even though attorney had no written authority from corporation to sign waiver; waiver of statute of limitations is not contract, so equal dignities rule (Civ. Code § 2309) did not require specific authorization from principal. Carlton

Browne & Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 35, 37, 46, 258 Cal. Rptr. 118

Corporate president who is not attorney is able to file notice of appeal on behalf of corporation from labor commissioner's decision on wage claim; notice of appeal under Lab. Code § 98(a) is different from notice of appeal of court judgment and requires no legal training or acumen. Rogers v. Municipal Court (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1314, 1318-1319, 243 Cal. Rptr. 530

Representation of corporate party in court (other than small claims court) is permitted only by licensed attorney. Himmel v. City Council (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 97, 100, 336 P.2d 996 ; Paradise v. Nowlin (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 897, 898, 195 P.2d 867 ; Van Gundy v. Camelot Resorts, Inc. (1983) 152 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 29, 31-32

Notice of appeal by corporation from superior court judgment is required to be filed by attorney. Paradise v. Nowlin (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 897, 898, 195 P.2d 867

Former Code Civ. Proc. § 117(g) (now Code Civ. Proc. § 117.4) barring attorneys from representing small claims litigants permits representation of corporation by nonlawyer. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Small Claims Court (1946) 76 Cal. App. 2d 379, 386, 173 P.2d 38

[5] Standing

Civ. Code § 49(c) does not give corporation either standing or cause of action against third party who injured employee. I. J. Weinrot & Son, Inc. v. Jackson (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 327, 332-341, 220 Cal. Rptr. 103, 708 P.2d 682

Bankruptcy trustee had standing to bring legal malpractice action against law firm on behalf of "sham" corporation, which could sustain injury even if its sole purpose was to serve as engine of fraud for its shareholders; injury was evidenced by fact that corporation remained legally distinct entity that was responsible for liability it incurred as result of allegedly fraudulent actions of its insiders. Loyd v. Paine Webber, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 208 F.3d 755, 758 (holding, however, that complaint failed to state claim for legal malpractice under California law)

[6] Suspension of Powers for Failure to File Biennial Information Statement

Corporation suspended for failure to file required statement under Corp. Code § 1502, like corporation suspended for failure to pay taxes under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301, is disabled from participating in any litigation activities. Palm Valley Homeowners Association, Inc. v. Design MTC (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 559-562, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350

14-160 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 160.50

§ 160.50 Allegation of Capacity and Principal Place of Business [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]--Domestic Corporation

[1] FORM Allegation of Capacity and Principal Place of Business [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]--Domestic Corporation

_____ [Name of corporation] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, with its principal place of business at _____ [street address and city], _____ County, California.

[2] Use of Form

This allegation of capacity and principal place of business of a domestic corporation is for insertion in a pleading. The allegation of principal place of business may be included if it is necessary to establish venue [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]. If, however, venue is to be established on a different basis, such as the county where the liability arises [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5], the allegation of principal place of business should be omitted. See generally Ch. 571, Venue .

[3] Legal Capacity of Corporations

Although it is customary to plead corporate organization and existence to assert a corporation's capacity to be sued, it has been held that failure to affirmatively allege capacity of a corporation to sue is not a proper ground for general demurrer [Los Angeles Railway Co. v. Davis (1905) 146 Cal. 179, 180-181, 79 P. 865] , and it has been suggested that the capacity of the plaintiff to sue or of the defendant to be sued need not be affirmatively alleged in the complaint [Witkin, California Procedure, vol. 5, Pleading, § 853 (4th ed. 1997)].

[4] Venue

A corporation may be sued in the county where the contract is made or is to be performed, or where the obligation or liability arises or the breach occurs, or in the county where the principal place of business of the corporation is situated, subject to the power of the court to change the place of trial as in other cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5].

For purposes of venue under Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5, a domestic corporation's designation of the location of its principal place of business in its annual domestic stock certificate filed with the Secretary of State exclusively fixes the corporation's principal place of business [Rosas v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 671, 672, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 609] .

_____ [Name of corporation] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of _____, and is not authorized to transact intrastate business in California.

14-160 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 160.53

§ 160.53 Allegation of Applicability of General Corporation Law to Foreign Corporation [Corp. Code § 2115]

[1] FORM Allegation of Applicability of General Corporation Law to Foreign Corporation [Corp. Code § 2115]

_____ [Name of corporation] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a foreign _____ [corporation transacting intrastate business in California or parent corporation] which is subject to Section 2115 of the California Corporations Code and to which Section _____ [specify provisions or sections set forth in Corp. Code § 2115(b) which are relevant to action] of the Corporations Code is applicable to the exclusion of the law of the jurisdiction of its incorporation.

[2] Use of Form

This allegation is for use in a pleading in which the plaintiff asserts rights against a foreign corporation based on substantive provisions of the General Corporation Law applicable to such a corporation by virtue of Corp. Code § 2115 [see § 160.53[3]]. This allegation should be used when the status of a foreign corporation under Corp. Code § 2115 is a matter of record and the cause of action arose during the time that the corporation was subject to the provisions of Corp. Code § 2115. Since nominally foreign status can be acquired by either a foreign corporation transacting intrastate business or a foreign parent corporation upon the first day of the first income year of the corporation beginning on or after the 135th day of the income year immediately following the latest income year with respect to which the shareholder and business tests [see Corp. Code § 2115(a) (setting forth tests)] have been met, or beginning on or after the entry of a final order by a court of competent jurisdiction declaring that those tests have been met [Corp. Code § 2115(d)], this allegation would not be appropriate where that status had not been established by one of these two methods. For a complaint to have a foreign corporation declared subject to the provisions of Corp. Code § 2115, see § 160.57. For a motion for partial summary judgment on the issue of the foreign corporation's nominally foreign status, see § 160.55.

[3] Nominally Foreign Corporations

[a] How Status Acquired

A foreign corporation becomes nominally foreign, and therefore subject to the provisions of the California General

Corporation Law set forth in Corp. Code § 2115(b), when the tests of Corp. Code § 2115(a) are satisfied. Briefly, these tests relate to business factors (payroll, property, and sales) on the one hand, and share ownership on the other. The business factors are derived from the Bank and Corporation Tax Law's provisions concerning the allocation of income to the various states in which a corporation does business [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 25129, 25132, 25134]. Use of the three-factor formula is required in the computation of taxes of most corporations conducting business in several states, and, for the purpose of determining nominally foreign status, must also be used by corporations the allocation of whose income is governed by special formulas or which are not required to file separate tax returns [Corp. Code § 2115(a)]. If the average of the property, payroll, and sales factors is more than 50 percent during its latest full income year and if more than one-half of its outstanding voting securities are held of record by persons having California addresses appearing on the books of the corporation on the record date for the latest meeting of shareholders held during its latest full income year (or if no meeting was held during that year, on the last day of the latest full income year), the corporation will be nominally foreign [Corp. Code § 2115(a)].

It is important to remember when determining whether the shareholder test is satisfied that any securities held to the knowledge of the issuer in the names of broker-dealers, nominees for broker-dealers (including clearing corporations) or banks, associations, or other entities holding securities in a nominee name of otherwise on behalf of a beneficial owner (collectively "nominee holders"), are not considered outstanding [Corp. Code § 2115(a)]. However, if the foreign corporation requests all nominee holders to certify, with respect to all beneficial owners for whom securities are held, the number of shares held for those beneficial owners having addresses (as shown on the records of the nominee holder) in California and outside of California, then all shares so certified must be considered "outstanding" and held of record by persons having addresses either in California or outside California as so certified, provided that the certification so provided must be retained with the record of shareholders and made available for inspection and copying in the same manner as is provided in Corp. Code § 1600 with respect to that record. A current list of beneficial owners of a foreign corporation's securities provided to the corporation by one or more nominee holders or their agent pursuant to the requirements of Rules 14b-1(b)(3) or 14b-2(b)(3) as adopted on January 6, 1992, promulgated under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, will constitute an acceptable certification with respect to beneficial owners [Corp. Code § 2115(a)].

[b] Parent Corporations

A foreign parent may be a nominally foreign corporation even though it does not itself transact intrastate business in California [Corp. Code § 2115(a)]. The test for outstanding shares held by California residents is the same as for corporations transacting intrastate business, but the determination of the property, payroll, and sales factors is made on a consolidated basis, including in a unitary computation (after elimination of intercompany transactions) the property, payroll, and sales of the parent and all of its subsidiaries in which it owns directly or indirectly more than 50 percent of the outstanding shares entitled to vote for the election of directors, but deducting a percentage of the property, payroll, and sales of any subsidiary equal to the percentage of minority ownership, if any, in the subsidiary [Corp. Code § 2115(a)]. Note that although the definition of parent [Corp. Code § 175] does not specify a particular percentage of ownership in a subsidiary [see Corp. Code § 189 (definition)], for the purposes of the foregoing computation, only majority-owned subsidiaries are included.

[c] When Status Commences and Ceases

Nominally foreign status begins on the first day of the first income year of the corporation commencing on or after the 135th day of the income year immediately following the latest income year with respect to which the shareholder and business tests [see Corp. Code § 2115(a) (setting forth tests)] have been met, or beginning on or after the entry of a final order by a court of competent jurisdiction declaring that those tests have been met [Corp. Code § 2115(d)]. That status ceases to be applicable to a foreign corporation at the end of the first income year of the corporation immediately following the latest income year with respect to which at least one of the tests is not met, or at the end of the income year of the corporation during which a final order has been entered by a court of competent jurisdiction declaring that one of those tests is not met, provided that a contrary order has not been entered before the end of the income year [Corp. Code § 2115(e)].

[d] Applicability of General Corporation Law

Once a foreign corporation acquires nominally foreign status, it will be subject to specific provisions of the General Corporation Law, which are listed in Corp. Code § 2115(b), to the exclusion of the law of the jurisdiction in which the corporation is incorporated [Corp. Code § 2115(b)]. These provisions are set forth in § 160.12[2][f].

[e] Exemption From Status

For discussion of exemptions from nominally foreign status, see § 160.12[2][e].

[4] State Statutes

Foreign professional corporations transacting intrastate business in California subject to General Corporation Law applicable to foreign corporations, except when those provisions are in conflict with provisions governing California professional corporations (Corp. Code § 13400 et seq.). Corp. Code § 13404.5

Chapter 160 CORPORATIONS: CAPACITY
PART IV. FORMS

14-160 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 160.54

§ 160.54 Affirmative Defense--Plaintiff Foreign Corporation Is Not Qualified to Transact Intrastate Business in California [Corp. Code §§ 191, 2105, 2203(c)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Plaintiff Foreign Corporation Is Not Qualified to Transact Intrastate Business in California [Corp. Code §§ 191, 2105, 2203(c)]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that plaintiff is a foreign corporation that has entered into repeated and successive transactions of its business in this state, other than in interstate or foreign commerce, but does not hold a valid certificate of qualification from the California Secretary of State to transact intrastate business. Plaintiff is therefore barred from maintaining this _____ [action or proceeding], which is based upon the transaction of such intrastate business.

[2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense is for use in the answer of a defendant in an action or proceeding brought by a foreign corporation which is transacting intrastate business but which has not qualified to do so. Although the failure of a foreign corporation to qualify to transact business has been raised in other ways [see Thorner v. Selective Cam Transmission Co. (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 89, 90, 4 Cal. Rptr. 409 (motion to dismiss)], it is normally set up as a defense in the answer [W. W. Kimball Co. v. Read (1919) 43 Cal. App. 342, 344, 185 P. 192 ; McMillan Process Co. v. Brown (1939) 33 Cal. App. 2d 279, 282, 91 P.2d 613] .

Failure of a foreign corporation to qualify to transact business prior to commencing an action is a matter of abatement of the action. The defendant may raise the issue of lack of capacity to maintain the action by demurrer or as an affirmative defense in the answer. If the bar of Corp. Code 2203(c) is established, the plaintiff must comply with the statute by qualifying and paying fees, penalties, and taxes. Ordinarily, the matter should be stayed to permit the corporation to comply. If it does not comply, the matter should be dismissed without prejudice [United Medical Management Ltd. v. Gatto (1996) 49 Ca. App. 4th 1732, 1740, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600 ; see also Hall v. Citizens Nat. Tr. & Sav. Bank of Los Angeles (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 625, 630, 128 P.2d 545 (revival of corporate powers prior to hearing on plea in abatement validated all prior acts of corporation)].

[3] Foreign Corporations

[a] Transacting Intrastate Business

A foreign corporation, including a business association organized as a trust under the laws of a foreign jurisdiction [Corp. Code §§ 170, 171] transacts intrastate business in California when it enters into repeated and successive transactions of its business in California, other than interstate or foreign commerce [Corp. Code § 191(a)]. Whether a foreign corporation is transacting intrastate business may present close factual questions [see Lilly & Co. v. Sav-On-Drugs (1961) 366 U.S. 276, 81 S. Ct. 1316, 6 L. Ed. 2d 288, 291-294 (holding that maintaining 18 employees in state to promote products purchased from local wholesalers constituted transaction of intrastate business)]. A corporation's status as a shareholder of a domestic corporation, a limited partner of a limited partnership, or a member or manager of a LLC; or that of a foreign corporation, limited partnership, or LLC transacting intrastate business, is excluded from the definition of transacting intrastate business [Corp. Code § 191(b). Further, certain activities are excluded by statute from the definition of transacting intrastate business, thereby providing a kind of "safe harbor" with respect to such activities. The excluded activities are listed in Corp. Code § 191(b)-(d) and refer to activities carried on by foreign corporations generally and foreign lending institutions in particular. The activities listed are not intended to exclude other activities which also may not constitute the transaction of intrastate business [Corp. Code § 191(c), (d); see, e.g., United Systems of Arkansas, Inc. v. Stamison (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1001, 1007, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 407 (submitting bid in response to request for quotation by DMV was not "transacting intrastate business" and out-of-state bidder could maintain suit challenging award of contract to another bidder without obtaining certificate of qualification)].

[b] Qualification Requirement

A foreign corporation must not transact intrastate business without having first obtained from the California Secretary of State a certificate of qualification [Corp. Code § 2105(a)]. The certificate is obtained by the filing of a statement and designation of agent for service of process on a form, the contents of which are prescribed by Corp. Code § 2105.

[e] Failure to Qualify

In addition to a penalty or fine levied for each day a foreign corporation transacts intrastate business without holding a valid certificate of qualification [Corp. Code § 2203(a), (b)], such a corporation is barred from maintaining any action or proceeding on any intrastate business so transacted, which action or proceeding is commenced prior to compliance with Corp. Code § 2105 (qualification requirement), until the corporation has complied with the provisions thereof and has paid to the Secretary of State a penalty of $250 in addition to the fees due for filing the statement and designation required by Corp. Code § 2105, and has filed with the clerk of the court in which the action is pending receipts showing the payment of said fees and penalty and all franchise taxes and any other taxes on business or property in California that should have been paid for the period during which it transacted intrastate business [Corp. Code § 2203(c)].

CAUTION:
A memorandum must accompany this notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

[2] Use of Form

This motion for summary adjudication is for use in disposing of a cause of action or affirmative defense that turns on the single issue of whether or not a foreign corporation meets the tests of Corp. Code § 2115(a) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(1), (n)-(o); see also § 160.53 (allegation that corporation is "nominally foreign")]. If the foreign corporation meets those tests, it will be subject to provisions of the California General Corporation Law enumerated in Corp. Code § 2115(b). For the purposes of this chapter, corporations meeting these tests are referred to as nominally foreign corporations. Nominally foreign status does not commence until the first day of the first income year of the corporation commencing on or after the 135th day of the income year immediately following the latest income year with respect to which the shareholder and business tests [see Corp. Code § 2115(a) (setting forth tests)] have been met, or beginning on or after the entry of a final order by a court of competent jurisdiction declaring that those tests have been met [Corp. Code § 2115(d)]. That status ceases to be applicable to a foreign corporation at the end of the first income year of the corporation immediately following the latest income year with respect to which at least one of the tests is not met, or at the end of the income year of the corporation during which a final order has been entered by a court of competent jurisdiction declaring that one of those tests is not met, provided that a contrary order has not been entered before the end of the income year [Corp. Code § 2115(e)].

A motion for summary adjudication of a cause of action or affirmative defense is appropriate when one or more causes of action within an action has no merit or there is no defense thereto [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(1)]. A cause of action has no merit if either (1) one or more of the elements of the cause of action cannot be separately established, even if that element is separately pleaded, or (2) a defendant establishes an affirmative defense to that cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(o); see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(p) (burdens and means of proof)]. A motion for summary adjudication can be granted only if it completely disposes of a cause of action, affirmative defense, claim for damages, or an issue of duty [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(1)]. Thus, use of this form, without more, is only appropriate when the only contested element of the cause of action or defense is the corporation's status as a "nominally foreign" corporation.

[3] Possibility of Declaratory Relief

Corp. Code § 2115(d) provides that nominally foreign status will commence on or after the entry of a final order by a court of competent jurisdiction declaring that the tests of Corp. Code § 2115(a) have been met. Thus, one could seek declaratory relief to establish the corporation's nominally foreign status. The wording of Corp. Code § 2115(d) strongly suggests that nominally foreign status would not commence until the court has declared the tests met, and that therefore a nunc pro tunc order is not authorized by that section. That being the case, one seeking declaratory relief could not assert in the same action a claim based on the applicability of a provision of the General Corporation Law unless the relief sought were prospective, for example, to obtain inspection rights [see Corp. Code § 2115(b) (applying Corp. Code § 1600 to nominally foreign corporations)]. For a complaint for declaratory relief to have a foreign corporation declared nominally foreign, see § 160.57.

Defendant.	)

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a foreign _____ [corporation transacting intrastate business in California or parent corporation] duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of _____ [, with its principal place of business in this state in _____ County, California].

2. _____ [Set out essential facts of transaction to which plaintiff desires to have California's General Corporation Law apply to the exclusion of the law of the state of incorporation of defendant, e.g., Defendant has announced its intention to sell substantially all of its assets for cash to a corporation more than 50 percent of whose voting power is owned _____ (directly or indirectly) by the defendant. Plaintiff, a shareholder of record of defendant, received notice of the proposed sale of assets in the notice of a shareholders' meeting to be held on _____ [date], for the purpose of approving the sale of assets. Copies of the notice, management's proxy, and accompanying proxy statement are attached as Exhibits A, B, and C, respectively, and incorporated by reference].

3. An actual controversy has arisen and now exists between plaintiff and defendant concerning their respective rights and duties in that plaintiff contends that defendant is a foreign corporation which meets the tests set forth in California Corporations Code Section 2115(a) and to which that Section is therefore applicable. [Plaintiff further contends that the proposed sale of assets for cash by defendant is a transaction which must be approved by at least 90 percent of the voting power of defendant as required by California Corporations Code Section 1001(d), made applicable to defendant to the exclusion of the law of _____ (defendant's state of incorporation) by California Corporations Code Section 2115(b).] Defendant disputes this contention and contends that it is not a foreign corporation meeting the tests set forth in California Corporations Code Section 2115(a)[, and that its proposed sale of assets for cash is a transaction governed exclusively by the law of _____ (defendant's state of incorporation), which law requires only the approval of a majority of defendant's shareholders to authorize the proposed sale of assets].

4. Plaintiff desires a judicial determination of his/her rights and duties, and a declaration as to the applicability of California Corporations Code Section 2115(a) to defendant.

5. Such a declaration is necessary and appropriate at this time in order that plaintiff may ascertain his/her rights and duties as a shareholder of record of defendant generally[, and, in particular, to avoid the loss of his/her investment in a prosperous business which will result if plaintiff is forced to take cash for his/her shares in a transaction receiving the approval of a simple majority of defendant's shareholders contrary to the requirements of applicable law governing such transactions].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. For a declaration that defendant is a foreign corporation meeting the tests set forth in California Corporations Code Section 2115(a) as of the date upon which an order of the court so declaring is entered;

[2. For a declaration that defendant's proposed sale of assets for cash is a transaction governed by California Corporations Code Section 1001(d) to the exclusion of the law of _____ (defendant's state of incorporation);]

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This petition is for use by a foreign corporation which seeks to terminate its nominally foreign status under Corp. Code § 2115(a) by obtaining a court order that it is no longer subject to that section of the law because it no longer meets one of the tests for nominally foreign status [see Corp. Code § 2115(a) (setting forth tests)].

[3] How Nominally Foreign Status Terminated

A foreign corporation which is, or will be, subject to the provisions of Corp. Code § 2115(a), and therefore a nominally foreign corporation subject to a number of substantive provisions of California's General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code § 2115(b); see also Comments to § 160.53], may have that status terminated in one of two ways:

- Corp. Code § 2115(a) will no longer be applicable to a foreign corporation at the end of any income year at least one of the tests of Corp. Code § 2115(a) is not met; or

- Corp. Code § 2115(a) will cease to be applicable at the end of any income year during which a final order shall have been entered by a court of competent jurisdiction declaring that one of the tests is not met [Corp. Code § 2115(d)].

However, the order will not be effective if a contrary report or order is made or entered before the end of that income year [Corp. Code § 2115(e)].

[4] Propriety of Proceeding by Petition

The General Corporation Law makes clear neither the purpose nor the procedure for terminating nominally foreign status by means of obtaining a final order of a court of competent jurisdiction. It may be assumed, however, that since an adversary setting in which such an order might issue is inconceivable (since the order actually only takes effect at the end of the income year in which it is issued), the logical method for obtaining such an order is by way of petition to the superior court.

By using the petition illustrated by this form, the corporation can be relieved of its nominally foreign status at the end of the income year during which it obtains the court's final order [Corp. Code § 2115(d)].

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense of Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Corporate Plaintiff's Powers Suspended or Forfeited for Failure to Comply With Tax Statutes [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that on _____ [date that Franchise Tax Board transmitted plaintiff's name to Secretary of State], the corporate powers of plaintiff were _____ [suspended or forfeited] for _____ [specify, e.g., nonpayment of taxes pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23301]. A copy of the certificate of the Secretary of State evidencing such _____ [suspension or forfeiture] is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference. Plaintiff's corporate powers have not been reinstated in the manner provided by law and plaintiff is without capacity to maintain this action.

[2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense is for use when the lack of capacity to sue results from a corporate plaintiff's failure to comply with Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 or 23301.5. Although it has been raised by motion [see Graceland v. Peebler (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 545, 546, 123 P.2d 527 (motion for judgment on the pleadings)], if a plaintiff corporation's lack of capacity to sue is treated as a plea in abatement [Maryland C. Co. v. Superior Court (1928) 91 Cal. App. 356, 361, 267 P. 169] and as a defect not appearing on the face of the complaint, it is usually raised by answer [see Ch. 26, Answers (discussion of new matter in answer)].

The forfeiture provisions of Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, and 23775 only apply to a foreign corporation that is required under Corp. Code § 2105 to qualify to do business is in California if it has in fact qualified with the Secretary of State [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6].

For a motion for summary adjudication based on a corporate defendant's lack of capacity to defend, see § 160.61. That form, with appropriate modification, could also be used in the situation contemplated by this form if it appears that the corporate plaintiff will be unable to secure reinstatement of its corporate powers or has failed to move for a continuance to accomplish that purpose.

[3] Failure to Pay Tax

Failure of a domestic corporation to pay its franchise or income taxes and assessments when due will result in suspension of its corporate powers, rights, and privileges [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 (franchise taxes)]. Failure of a foreign corporation that has qualified with the Secretary of State to do business in California to pay its franchise taxes and assessments when due will result in forfeiture of its corporate powers, rights, and privileges [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301; see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6 (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 is only applicable to foreign corporation that has qualified with Secretary of State)]. Such a suspension or forfeiture becomes effective on receipt by the Secretary of State of the name of the delinquent corporation from the Franchise Tax Board [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302 (franchise tax)].

The forfeiture prescribed by Rev. & Tax Code § 23301 is not automatic; it takes effect only when the Franchise Tax Board transmits the name of the tax-delinquent foreign corporation to the Secretary of State. If this has not been done, the corporation will continue to have the capacity to sue and defend, even though the corporation may, in fact, have failed to pay its taxes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302; see Mediterranean Exports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 605, 615, 617-618, 174 Cal. Rptr. 169] .

The certificate of the Secretary of State is prima facie evidence of the fact of the suspension or forfeiture for failure to pay franchise taxes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302]; the certificate of the Franchise Tax Board is prima facie evidence of the fact of suspension for failure to pay corporate income taxes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302].

[4] Failure to File Tax Return

Except for the purposes of filing an application for exempt status or amending the articles of incoproration as necessary either to perfect that application or to set forth a new name, under regulations prescribed by the Franchise Tax Board, the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a domestic corporation may be suspended and the exercise of the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a foreign taxpayer in this state may be forfeited if a taxpayer fails to file a tax return [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.5; see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6 (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.5 is only applicable to foreign corporation that has qualified with Secretary of State)]. The suspension or forfeiture applies whether the corporation is paying franchise or income taxes. The procedure for establishing the delinquency of a corporation that has not filed a return is the same as that followed when nonpayment of taxes is the ground for suspension or forfeiture [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23302, 23305d; see § 160.60[3]].

[5] Relief From Suspension or Forfeiture

A corporation that has suffered a suspension or forfeiture of its corporate powers may be reinstated by applying to the Franchise Tax Board for a certificate of revivor, filing all required tax returns, and paying the taxes, interest, and penalties due. Application for revivor may be made by any shareholder or creditor, by a majority of the surviving trustees or directors, by an officer, or by any other person who has interest in the relief [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305]. Reinstatement without full payment of taxes, penalties, and interest due may be allowed by the Franchise Tax Board if it determines that the revivor will improve the prospects for collection of the full amount due. The revivor may be limited as to time and/or functions that the revived corporation can perform, and the corporate powers, rights, and privileges may be again suspended or forfeited if the Franchise Tax Board determines that the prospects for full collection have not been improved by the revivor [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305b]. In addition, a suspended corporation or one whose powers have been forfeited may obtain relief by providing the Franchise Tax Board with an assumption of liability, or a bond, deposit, or other security for its liability, that is acceptable to the Franchise Tax Board [Rev. & Tax.

Code § 23305.2; see § 160.14[2]].

On issuance of the certificate of revivor, the taxpayer is reinstated, but the reinstatement is without prejudice to any action, defense, or right that has accrued by reason of the original suspension or forfeiture, except that contracts that were voidable under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1 (discussed in § 160.15[2]) but that have not been rescinded pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.5 may have that voidablity cured in accordance with Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a]. Case law indicates that perhaps the only "action, defense, or right" that might be preserved in spite of reinstatement of the corporation is the running of the statute of limitations, a true defense rather than merely a plea in abatement [Cleveland v. Gore Bros., Inc. (1936) 14 Cal. App. 2d 681, 683, 58 P.2d 931 ; Welco Construction, Inc. v. Modulux, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 73, 120 Cal. Rptr. 572] .

For a motion for continuance to secure reinstatement of a corporation, see § 160.65.

[6] Effect

The California Supreme Court has held that since objection to a suspended corporation's capacity is merely a matter of abatement, the suspended status of the corporation at the time of filing of its action does not affect the jurisdiction of the court to proceed. It follows that such a suspension after the filing of the action does not deprive the court of jurisdiction or render the judgment void and subject to collateral attack [Traub Co. v. Coffee Break Service, Inc. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 368, 371, 57 Cal. Rptr. 846, 425 P.2d 790] . Furthermore, a plea in abatement such as lack capacity to sue, unlike an objection to standing to sue, must be raised at the earliest opportunity or it is waived. Therefore, a corporation that was suspended after filing an action against a third party should have been granted a continuance in that action to allow time for it to pay its taxes and revive its powers, when the issue of incapacity was raised for the first time at trial [Color-Vue, Inc. v. Abrams (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1599, 1606, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443] .

Based on another Supreme Court decision involving a motion to dismiss an appeal on grounds of the corporation's suspension [see Peacock Hill Asso. v. Peacock Lagoon Constr. Co. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 369, 105 Cal. Rptr. 29, 503 P.2d 285] and on cases approved in that decision, revival of corporate powers will validate corporate acts that occurred during the period of suspension, and, unless the matter of suspension is asserted during such incapacity and decided at that time [see Hall v. Citizens Nat. Tr. & Sav. Bank of Los Angeles (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 625, 630-632, 128 P.2d 545 (revivor prior to hearing of plea in abatement validates acts prior to revivor)], the corporation's acts in commencing litigation will not be a nullity.

[7] Exceptions From Rule of Incapacity

Suspension or forfeiture of corporate powers resulting from failure to comply with the applicable tax statutes does not affect a shareholder's right to maintain a derivative suit [Reed v. Norman (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 338, 343, 309 P.2d 809] . In the case of a joint venture between a suspended corporation and another party, the suspension will not necessarily prevent the other party from bringing an action on behalf of itself and the joint venture [Laurel Crest, Inc. v. Vaughn (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 363, 365, 77 Cal. Rptr. 538] . If it appears that the suspended corporation would benefit from a judgment in an action brought by its joint venturer, the remedy could usually be limited in some manner to the joint venturer, and, even if not so limited, the action might be allowed on the ground that the suspension should not result in strict forfeiture [Duncan v. Sunset Agricultural Minerals (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 489, 492-493, 78 Cal. Rptr. 339] .

One court of appeal has held that the doctrine of substantial compliance allows a suspended corporation to prosecute or defend its action even though the certificate of revivor has not been issued [Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1514-1515, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619] . In that case, however, susbstantial compliance was not established because the suspended corporation still owed $90.85 in penalties and interest [Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1515-1516, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619] .

[a] Effect of Revivor

Suspension of corporate powers is defense that may be asserted so long as party-corporation is under disability; on revival of its corporate powers, party is entitled to proceed with prosecution or defense of action. *Diverco Constructors, Inc. v. [b] Suspension or Forfeiture

CAUTION:
A memorandum must accompany this notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

[2] Use of Form

This motion is for use by a plaintiff in an action by or against a corporation whose corporate powers, rights, and privileges have been suspended or forfeited for failure to pay its franchise or income taxes, or its failure to file a tax return [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5]. The forfeiture provisions of Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, and 23775 only apply to a foreign corporation that is required under Corp. Code § 2105 to qualify to do business in California if it has in fact qualified with the Secretary of State [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6]. A corporation whose corporate powers have been suspended or forfeited is without capacity to prosecute or defend against a suit until revivor of its powers by the appropriate statutory procedure [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23305-23305d]. For a motion for a continuance to secure reinstatement of corporate powers, see § 160.65.

A motion for summary adjudication of a cause of action or affirmative defense is appropriate when one or more causes of action within an action has no merit or there is no defense thereto [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(1)].

A cause of action has no merit if either (1) one or more of the elements of the cause of action cannot be separately established, even if that element is separately pleaded, or (2) a defendant establishes an affirmative defense to that cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(o); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(p) (burdens and means of proof)]. A motion for summary adjudication can be granted only if it completely disposes of a cause of action, affirmative defense, claim for damages, or an issue of duty [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(1)].

A motion for summary adjudication may also be used to dispose of a cause of action on a contract that is voidable because it was formed during the period of suspension or forfeiture [see Damato v. Slevin (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 668, 675, 262 Cal. Rptr. 879 (decided under prior law); see also § 160.15[2]]. This notice of motion form may be modified for use in connection with a cause of action on a voidable contract or an affirmative defense of voidability.

[2] Use of Form

This motion is for use by a party in an action by or against a corporation whose corporate powers, rights, and privileges have been suspended for failure to file a required information statement under Corp. Code §§ 1502, 2205.

A motion for summary adjudication of a cause of action or affirmative defense is appropriate when one or more causes of action within an action has no merit or there is no defense to the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(1)].

[3] Contents of Information Statement; Notice of Deliquency

Every corporation must file an annual statement containing information including the following [Corp. Code § 1502]:

- The corporation's current directors;
- The number of board vacancies, if any;
- The current officers;
- The street address of its principal executive office (and its mailing address, if different);
- If the principal office is in another state, the street address of its principal office in California;
- A statement of the corporation's general type of business; and
- The name and address of a person in California who is designated to receive service of legal process on the corporation.

For detailed discussion regarding the filing requirements, and illustrations of the official forms used for filing annual statements, see California Legal Forms (Matthew Bender), Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports.

In addition, Corp. Code § 1502.1 requires every publicly traded company [see Corp. Code § 1502.1(b)(1) (definition)] to file annually, within 150 days after the end of its fiscal year, a statement on a form prescribed by the Secretary of State that includes information such as [Corp. Code § 1502.1(a)]:

- The name of the independent auditor that prepared the most recent auditor's report on the corporation's annual financial statements;

- A description of annual compensation and loans made to any member of the board;

- Whether an order for relief has been entered in a bankruptcy case with respect to the corporation or its officers or board members within the previous 10 years; and

- Whether any officer or board member was convicted of fraud within the previous 10 years.

For discussion and an illustration of that form, see California Legal Forms (Matthew Bender), Ch. 7, Corporate Records and Reports, § 7.207B.

Corp. Code § 2204 provides that if a corporation fails to file its required information statement under Corp. Code § 1502, the Secretary of State will give the corporation notice of the delinquency. Sixty days after notice of the delinquency, if the corporation has not filed the required statement, the Secretary of State must certify the name of the corporation to the Franchise Tax Board, and the Franchise Tax Board imposes a penalty on the corporation [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 19141].

[4] Suspension of Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges

If a corporation fails to file a statement under Corp. Code § 1502, fails to file a statement for 24 months, and has been assessed a penalty under Corp. Code § 2204 during that 24-month period [see § 160.63[3]], then the corporation is subject to suspension under Corp. Code § 2205. The Secretary of State must notify the corporation that its corporate powers, rights, and privileges will be suspended after an additional 60 days, if it fails to file the required statement. If the corporation fails to comply within 60 days, the Secretary of State certifies to the Franchise Tax Board that the corporation is suspended, and mails a notice to the suspended corporation. Except for the purpose of amending the articles of incorporation to set forth a new name, the corporate powers, rights, and privileges are suspended [Corp. Code § 2205(c); see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 13, Records, Reports, and Inspection Rights (Matthew Bender)].

A corporation suspended for failure to file a required statement under Corp. Code § 1502 is disabled from participating in any litigation activities to the same extent as a corporation suspended for failure to pay taxes under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 [Palm Valley Homeowners Association, Inc. v. Design MTC (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 559-562, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 (holding that trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that law firm acted in bad faith by pursuing litigation activities on behalf of its client, even after the firm knew that the client was a suspended corporation, and in imposing sanctions accordingly)]. In Palm Valley Homeowners Association, Inc. v. Design MTC, the court addressed whether these two types of corporate suspensions--for nonpayment of taxes and for failure to file the required information statement--both result in a disqualification from litigation. It concluded that although the statutory provisions suspending a corporation for failure to file a required statement had not yet been so construed in any published California case, those provisions would make clear to any reasonable attorney that a corporation suspended under the Corporations Code, like a corporation suspended under the Revenue and Tax Code, is also disabled from participating in litigation activities [Palm Valley Homeowners Association, Inc. v. Design MTC (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 556, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 (finding that law firm did not rely on any purported distinction between a Corporations Code suspension and a Revenue and Taxation Code suspension in deciding to conceal its knowledge of the client's suspended status from court and opposing counsel and thus affirming trial court's imposition of sanctions)].

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, on the declaration of _____[name] and the memorandum served and filed herewith, on the papers and records on file herein, and on such oral and documentary evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion.

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

CAUTION:
A memorandum must accompany this notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

[2] Use of Form

This form is a notice of motion for a continuance is for use in opposing a plaintiff's or defendant's motion or pleading to obtain judgment based on the incapacity of a suspended corporation to sue or defend and/or the voidability of a contract entered into by the corporation while its powers were suspended or forfeited. The procedures set forth in the Revenue and Taxation Code for revivor of corporations whose powers have been suspended or forfeited for noncompliance with the tax statutes [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305 et seq.] do not provide that a continuance may be granted to obtain reinstatement. However, the decisions, although not directly holding that a motion for continuance must be granted to a party seeking reinstatement of its corporate powers, do indicate that the court may recognize the party for the limited purpose of entertaining the motion [Schwartz v. Magyar House, Inc. (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 182, 187-188, 335 P.2d 487] , and that it is error for a trial court to render a judgment based on the suspension or forfeiture once it is apprised of the defendant's effort to obtain reinstatement, and the fact of reinstatement, prior to entry of the judgment [Duncan v. Sunset Agricultural Minerals (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 489, 493, 78 Cal. Rptr. 339] .

[3] Application for Relief From Voidability

In addition, a contract entered into by a corporation during the period of its suspension or forfeiture cannot be declared void pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1 unless the suspended corporation is allowed a reasonable opportunity to cure the voidability under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.5].

Until January 1, 1994, applications for revivor and applications for relief from voidability had to be filed together [see former Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(e)]. On and after January 1, 1994, relief from voidability may be sought separately. However, to avoid a second penalty [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(2) (discussed in § 160.15[2][d])], a corporation that is aware of contracts formed during the period of suspension or forfeiture that are likely to be challenged by the other party to the contract would probably prefer to make simultaneous applications.

If the corporation obtained its certificate of revivor between January 1, 1990, and January 1, 1991, this form may be used to apply only for relief from voidability [Stats. 1993, ch. 689, § 2(b); see also § 160.66].

Payment of delinquent franchise taxes during pendency of action revives corporation and allows it to defend and present evidence. United States v. 2.61 Acres of Land, More or Less (9th Cir. 1985) 791 F.2d 666, 668-670

Denial of continuance to allow suspended corporation to pay delinquent franchise taxes is within discretion of trial court and not to be reversed, absent showing of prejudice to corporation or unless denial was arbitrary or capricious. United States v. 2.61 Acres of Land, More or Less (9th Cir. 1985) 791 F.2d 666, 670-671

Denial of continuance to allow suspended corporation to pay delinquent franchise taxes in condemnation action is reversible for prejudice when value found was 30 percent less than original government appraisal and corporation could present evidence without revival. United States v. 2.61 Acres of Land, More or Less (9th Cir. 1985) 791 F.2d 666, 671-672

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-161 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 161.10

§ 161.10 Alter Ego Doctrine

Although the general rule is that a corporation is an entity separate and distinct from its stockholders, it is also equally well settled that both law and equity, when necessary to circumvent fraud, protect the rights of third persons, and accomplish justice, will disregard the distinct existence of a corporation and its stockholders and treat them as identical [Erkenbrecher v. Grant (1921) 187 Cal. 7, 10-11, 200 P. 641] . The term "alter ego" describes a doctrine, the application of which results in either the obligations of a corporation being treated as those of its equitable owners [Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 579, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473 ; Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 580, 335 P.2d 107] or the obligations of the equitable owners being treated as those of the corporation [Wenban Estate, Inc. v. Hewlett (1924) 193 Cal. 675, 696-697, 227 P. 723] . In order to avoid an abuse of the corporate privilege the courts will look through the forms and behind the corporate entity involved to deal with the situation as justice may require [People v. Clauson (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 374, 379, 41 Cal. Rptr. 691 ; see Civ. Code § 3528 (law respects form less than substance)].

The alter ego doctrine is essentially an equitable one, and for that reason is particularly within the province of the trial court. Thus, the constitutional guaranty of the right to a jury trial does not apply and relief is obtainable only in courts of equity [Dow Jones Co. v. Avenel (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 144, 147-148, 198 Cal. Rptr. 457] .

A similar doctrine, the "integrated enterprise" test, has been applied to determine whether two entities constitute a "single employer" for federal Title VII [42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.] purposes. California courts, however, apparently have not adopted that test for California FEHA [Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.] or other purposes, although that test is functionally similar to but less exacting than California's alter ego rules [see Laird v. Capital Cities/ABC Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 727, 737-738, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454 ; see also Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 14, Litigation Involving Corporations and Shareholders (Matthew Bender) for further discussion].

Chapter 161 CORPORATIONS: ALTER EGO LIABILITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-161 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 161.11

§ 161.11 Extent of Liability Under Doctrine

[1] Persons Liable for Corporation's Debt

In most situations, the alter ego doctrine is applied to hold shareholders liable for the obligations of the corporations which they control [see, e.g., Minifie v. Rowley (1921) 187 Cal. 481, 487, 202 P. 673] , or to hold a parent corporation liable for the obligations of its subsidiary [see, e.g., Marr v. Postal Union Life Ins. Co. (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d 673, 681-682, 105 P.2d 649] . However, in some instances the corporation has never issued shares, and thus liability will fasten on the promoters, the failure to issue shares being one factor indicating that the individual defendants are doing business as such [Automotriz etc. De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 796, 306 P.2d 1 ; Claremont Press Pub. Co. v. Barksdale (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 813, 816, 10 Cal. Rptr. 214] . Similarly, an attorney who organizes a corporation and consents to act as a director may be held liable where he or she functions as one of the corporation's promoters [Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 580, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473 (holding trial court entitled to disregard defendant's contention that he was only acting as an "accommodation" director)].

Whether an individual who merely controls a corporation but owns no stock in it may be liable under the alter ego doctrine is not clear. One case has held the donor of shares held by members of the donor's family liable where he in fact controlled the corporation [Goldsmith v. Tub-O-Wash (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 132, 139-140, 18 Cal. Rptr. 446] . On the other hand, in an earlier case the California Supreme Court reversed a judgment against the president and general manager of two corporations, both of which were family corporations, holding the president's control to be only that of a salaried employee while his wife (who held one share in one of the corporations) and son were liable under the alter ego doctrine because the element of unity of ownership and interest was present in their case [Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 580, 335 P.2d 107] .

The Riddle case cited above suggests that if an individual does own shares in the corporation that is alleged to be his or her alter ego, the fact that he or she fails to take cognizance of the financial condition of the business or otherwise exercise control over its destiny will not excuse him or her from liability [see McKee v. Peterson (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 515, 531, 29 Cal. Rptr. 742 (bad faith must be imputed to defendant at least by virtue of defendant's negligence in permitting a situation to exist in which the dealings were in form with a corporation but in reality were with the individual incorporators)]. On the other hand, if the owner of a minority interest enjoys no control other than the power to vote his or her minority stock, the corporation may not be regarded as his or her alter ego [see Pearl v. Shore (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 608, 616-618, 95 Cal. Rptr. 157 (minority shareholder of corporate general partner of limited partnership not liable for loss of one limited partner's investment when shareholder exercised no control over limited partnership's investments)].

[2] Corporation Not Liable for Shareholder's Unrelated Debt

In California, a third-party judgment creditor of a shareholder--that is, a plaintiff having a judgment against a shareholder on a claim unrelated to the corporation--may not pierce the corporate veil to reach corporate assets in order to satisfy the shareholder's liability [Postal Instant Press, Inc. v. Kaswa Corp. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1510, 1513, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 96].

Some courts in other states have recognized a variant of the alter ego doctrine, called outside reverse piercing (or third-party piercing) of the corporate veil, by which the corporate veil is pierced to permit a third-party judgment creditor to reach corporate assets to satisfy claims against a shareholder. However, according to a California court of appeal that declined to accept that view, the reasoning of the cases adopting outside reverse piercing of the corporate veil is flawed. It is not a logical extension of the standard alter ego doctrine but instead addresses significantly different concerns. Outside reverse piercing can harm innocent shareholders and corporate creditors and can allow judgment creditors to bypass normal judgment-collection procedures. Other legal theories (such as agency or respondeat superior) and legal remedies (such as claims for conversion or fraudulent conveyance) adequately protect judgment creditors without the need to distort theories of corporate liability [Postal Instant Press, Inc. v. Kaswa Corp. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1510, 1513, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 96].

If the corporate veil is pierced, each defendant as to whom it is pierced is jointly and severally liable for the full amount of the corporation's obligation. Alter ego liability is not apportioned according to the ownership interests of each defendant. A person who is not made a defendant or against whom alter ego liability is not established does not have to contribute to payment of the corporate obligation [Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Co. v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1025, 1028-1029, 253 Cal. Rptr. 908] .

Chapter 161 CORPORATIONS: ALTER EGO LIABILITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-161 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 161.13

§ 161.13 Conditions Precedent for Application of Doctrine

[1] In General

Before a corporation's acts and obligations can be legally recognized as those of a particular person, and vice versa, the following conditions must exist [Minifie v. Rowley (1921) 187 Cal. 481, 487, 202 P. 673 ; Robbins v. Blecher (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 886, 892, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 815 ; Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 837, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806 ; Talbot v. Fresno-Pac. Corp. (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 425, 431, 5 Cal. Rptr. 361 ; see Stark v. Coker (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 839, 846, 129 P.2d 390 ; Watson v. Commonwealth Ins. Co. (1936) 8 Cal. 2d 61, 68, 63 P.2d 295] :

- It must appear that the corporation is not only influenced and governed by that person, but that there is such a unity of interest and ownership that the individuality, or separateness, of such person and the corporation has ceased; and

- The facts are such that an adherence to the fiction of the separate existence of the corporation would, under the particular circumstances, sanction a fraud or promote injustice.

Both of these requirements must be found to exist before the corporate existence will be disregarded. Such a determination is primarily one for the trial court and is not a question of law. The conclusion of the trier of fact will not be disturbed if it is supported by substantial evidence [Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 394, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 , disapproved on other grounds, Reynolds Metals Co. v. Alperson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 124 ; Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 837, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806 ; see Playboy Enterprises, Inc. v. Welles (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 796, 806-807 (although unity of interest was established, no showing was made that fiction of separate existence of corporation would sanction fraud or promote injustice)].

While the alter ego doctrine does not depend on the presence of actual fraud, it is designed to prevent what would be fraud or injustice, if accomplished. Accordingly, bad faith in one form or another is an underlying consideration and will be found in some form or another in those cases wherein the trial court was justified in disregarding the corporate entity [Clejan v. Reisman (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 224, 239, 84 Cal. Rptr. 897 ; Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland

Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 838, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806 ; see Pearl v. Shore (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 608, 618, 95 Cal. Rptr. 157 ; Rosen v. E.C. Losch Co., Inc. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 324, 335, 44 Cal. Rptr. 377 ; see also Laird v. Capital Cities/ABC Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 727, 742, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454 (plaintiff failed to show specific manipulative conduct by parent toward subsidiary which relegated subsidiary to status of mere instrumentality, agency, conduit, or adjunct of parent); Am. Home Ins. Co. v. Travelers Indem. Co. (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 951, 966, 175 Cal. Rptr. 826 (alter ego doctrine unavailable to extend responsibility for indemnification by insurer of subsidiary to sister subsidiary, despite numerous factors indicating ownership and control of one over other); Doney v. TRW, Inc. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 245, 251-252, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292 (alter ego doctrine unavailable to hold employer's parent corporation liable for damages suffered by employees in course of employment when employer had satisfied its obligations to employees by securing payments of workers' compensation benefits)].

The fraud or inequity, the elimination of which legitimately invokes the doctrine, must be that of the party against whom the doctrine is invoked, and that party must have been an actor in the course of conduct constituting the abuse of corporate privilege or must be seeking some inequitable advantage based on the fiction of separate existence. That is, the alter ego doctrine may not be applied so as to prejudice the rights of an innocent third party who has dealt with the corporation as such [United States Fire Ins. Co. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 456, 469-474, 165 Cal. Rptr. 726] . Further, the alter ego doctrine is not designed to unite two separate entities with opposing interests for the benefit of one claiming to control the other. Rather, the doctrine is used to prevent two parties with the same interest from inequitably using the corporate form to thwart a third party's rights [Communist Party v. 522 Valencia, Inc. (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 980, 995, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 618 (party alleged it was beneficial owner of two public benefit corporations and that alter ego doctrine established relationship between party and defendant corporations, thereby allowing party to obtain defendant corporations' assets)]. However, corporations may be allowed to disavow the corporate form when doing so prevents injustice. For example, in the context of an attorney disqualification motion, one court has determined that a corporation should be entitled to assert its status as the alter ego of a lawyer's existing client. If one entity is an attorney's client, its alter ego shares the client's expectation of loyalty from the attorney [Brooklyn Navy Yard Cogeneration Partners v. Superior Court (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 248, 258-259, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 419 (estopping corporation from asserting its alter ego status and thereby allowing attorney's breach of duty of loyalty would be inequitable result); but see Seretti v. Superior Nat. Ins. Co. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 920, 931 , discussed in § 161.13[5] (shareholders not allowed to disregard corporate form for their own benefit)].

In seeking to apply the alter ego doctrine, it is not sufficient merely to show that a creditor will remain unsatisfied if the corporate veil is not pierced, and thus set up such a circumstance as proof of an "inequitable result." The purpose of the alter ego doctrine is not to protect every unsatisfied creditor but rather to afford him or her protection where some conduct amounting to bad faith makes it inequitable for the equitable owner of a corporation to hide behind its corporate veil [Roman Catholic Archbishop v. Superior Court (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 405, 412, 93 Cal. Rptr. 338 ; Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 842, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806 (leading case)]. The requirement that there be some form of inequity present is clear from those cases emphasizing that mere ownership and control of a corporation, standing alone, is an insufficient ground for holding the corporation to be the instrumentality, conduit, or adjunct of its shareholders. It must further appear that to recognize the separateness of the corporation would aid in the consummation of a wrong [Erkenbrecher v. Grant (1921) 187 Cal. 7, 11, 200 P. 641 ; Shafford v. Otto Sales Co., Inc. (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 849, 862, 260 P.2d 269] .

[2] Specific Factors Considered by Courts

[a] Generally

The variety of factors that courts have considered in reaching their determination as to whether the alter ego doctrine should be applied were summarized, with citations to authority, in Associated Vendors Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 838-840, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806 :

- Commingling of funds and other assets, failure to segregate funds of the separate entities, and the unauthorized diversion of corporate funds or assets to other than corporate uses.

- The treatment by an individual of the assets of the corporation as his or her own.

- The failure to obtain authority to issue stock or to subscribe to or issue the same.

- The holding out by an individual that he or she is personally liable for the debts of the corporation.

- The failure to maintain minutes or adequate corporate records and the confusion of the records of the separate entities.

- The identical equitable ownership in the two entities; the identification of the equitable owners with the domination and control of the two entities; identification of the directors and officers of the two entities as the responsible supervision and management; sole ownership of all of the stock in a corporation by one individual or the members of a family.

- The use of the same office or business location and the employment of the same employees or attorneys or both.

- The failure to adequately capitalize a corporation or the total absence of corporate assets and under-capitalization.

- The use of a corporation as a mere shell, instrumentality, or conduit for a single venture or the business of an individual or another corporation.

- The concealment and misrepresentation of the identity of the responsible ownership, management, and financial interest, or concealment of personal business activities.

- The disregard of legal formalities and the failure to maintain arm's-length relationships among related entities.

- The use of the corporate entity to procure labor, services, or merchandise for another person or entity.

- The diversion of assets from a corporation by or to a stockholder or other person or entity, to the detriment of the creditors, or the manipulation of assets and liabilities between entities so as to concentrate the assets in one and the liabilities in the other.

- The contracting with another with intent to avoid performance by use of a corporate entity as a shield against personal liability, or the use of a corporation as a subterfuge of illegal transactions.

- The formation and use of a corporation to transfer to it the existing liability of another person or entity.

In most cases involving an alter ego, several of the foregoing factors were present and considered by the court but none of the factors has been deemed conclusive on the trier of fact [Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 840, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806] .

[b] Inadequate Capitalization

Inadequate capitalization and failure to issue stock are factors that have been held supportive of trial court findings that the individuals were doing business through their corporate alter ego [Automotriz etc. De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 798, 306 P.2d 1 ; see Claremont Press Pub. Co. v. Barksdale (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 813, 816-817, 10 Cal. Rptr. 214 ; CFTC v. Topworth Int'l, Ltd. (9th Cir. 2000) 205 F.3d 1107, 1112-1113 (district court did not clearly err in finding that alter ego doctrine applied in light of corporation's extreme under-capitalization)]. If a corporation is organized and carries on business without substantial capital in such a way that the corporation is likely to have no sufficient assets available to meet its debts, it is inequitable for shareholders to escape personal liability. If the capital is illusory or trifling compared with the business to be done and the risks of loss, this is a ground for denying the separate entity privilege [Automotriz Del Golfo De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 797, 306 P.2d 1] . Under-capitalization by itself, however, does not necessitate disregarding the corporate entity, but is merely a factor to be considered along with all other factors [Harris v. Curtis (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 837, 841-843, 87 Cal. Rptr. 614 ; see Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 396, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 , disapproved on other grounds, Reynolds Metals Co. v. Alperson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 124, 129, 158 Cal. Rptr. 1, 599 P.2d 83 ; cf. Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 580, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473 (dictum that inadequate capitalization was sufficient to affirm judgment disregarding corporate entity; judgment reversed on other grounds)].

It is not always clear whether the capitalization referred to is the initial capital furnished the corporation or the equity base which exists at the time of the transactions which are the subject of a creditor's action [see Pearl v. Shore (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 608, 95 Cal. Rptr. 157 (holding that financial troubles stemmed from poor management rather than initial under-capitalization)]. In any event, attempts to create solvency through loans or advances from shareholders whether initially or during a period of financial embarrassment, have been regarded as tending to show either the lack of distinction between the entity and its shareholders [see Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 581, 335 P.2d 107 (loans by shareholder made to keep once-prospering corporation afloat)] or the presence of an "inequitable result" if the corporate entity is not ignored [Linco Servs. Inc. v. DuPont (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 841, 844, 49 Cal. Rptr. 196 (although defendant did not make initial loan to corporation, he did guarantee its debt and made related financial commitments enabling the corporation to return to active business, thereby inviting the public to deal with what was an essentially under-financed company); see Claremont Press Pub. Co. v. Barksdale (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 813, 818, 10 Cal. Rptr. 214] . On the other hand, personally guaranteed loans may be viewed as an additional contribution of capital from each of the guarantors where there are no other factors indicative of unity of ownership and interest and bad faith [Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 396-397, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 , disapproved on other grounds, Reynolds Metals Co. v. Alperson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 124].

[c] Commingling or Manipulation of Assets and Liabilities

One of the most significant factors leading courts to hold that the privilege of conducting business as a corporation has been abused and that the owners of the corporation should be liable for its obligations is the commingling or rerouting of assets between entities and/or their shareholders [Flying Tiger Line, Inc. v. U.S. Aircoach (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 199, 201-203, 331 P2d 37] . Such commingling may take the form of shifting assets between two or more corporations owned by the same persons [Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 579, 335 P.2d 107] , or transferring assets to avoid liabilities between a parent and subsidiary, leading to the parent being held the alter ego of the subsidiary [Thomson v. L. C. Roney & Co., (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 428-430, 246 P.2d 1017] . Such manipulation of assets may involve the conduct of a single business enterprise by two or more separate corporations, with the assets concentrated in one and the liabilities, including lease obligations to the first corporation, in the other. In such instances both the solvent corporation and its controlling shareholders have been held liable under the alter ego theory [Talbot v. Fresno-Pac. Corp. (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 425, 429, 5 Cal. Rptr. 361 ; Temple v. Bodega Bay Fisheries, Inc. (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 279, 283, 4 Cal. Rptr. 300] . However, the intermingling of the business operations of two corporations, when clearly contemplated by all parties including creditors, may have no relevance to the liability of the individual shareholders of both corporations if there is no commingling or confusion between the assets of those individuals and either corporation [Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 396, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 , disapproved on other grounds, Reynolds Metals Co. v. Alperson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 124, 129, 158 Cal. Rptr. 1, 599 P.2d 83] ..

[d] Disregard of Corporate Formalities

Although often mentioned by the courts in their findings of alter ego liability [Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 581, 335 P.2d 107 ; Rosen v. E. C. Losch Co. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 324, 334, 44 Cal. Rptr. 377] , a corporation's failure to observe corporate formalities, such as the holding of directors' meetings or maintaining accurate records and minutes of meetings, is not as essential to a holding of alter ego liability as the presence of other factors. Nevertheless, recognition that courts may cite failure to observe corporate formalities as an additional ground for imposing alter ego liability led the drafters of the General Corporation Law to specifically exclude this consideration in the case of close corporations [see Corp. Code § 158]. Thus, the close corporation operating under a shareholders' agreement [see Corp. Code § 300(b) (stating what agreement may cover)] may ignore traditional formalities relating to directors' and shareholders' meetings in connection with the management of its affairs and such informality will not be considered a factor tending to establish that the shareholders have personal liability for corporate obligations [Corp. Code § 300(e)].

[e] Representations to Creditors

In contract actions, another important factor considered by the courts in imposing alter ego liability is whether the creditor has been led to believe that the shareholders of the corporation will be responsible for its obligations. This holding out to creditors may take the form of assurances that a recently incorporated business is under the same ownership and management as its predecessor [Talbot v. Fresno-Pac. Corp. (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 425, 429, 5 Cal. Rptr. 361 ; see Stark v. Coker (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 839, 847, 129 P.2d 390] . Another kind of misrepresentation involves creating the impression that the corporation is financially stable, thus luring creditors into the belief that it will be able to meet its obligations [Linco Servs. Inc. v. DuPont (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 841, 843-844, 49 Cal. Rptr. 196] . However, when no representations are made that any person other than the corporation will be responsible for the corporation's debts and the evidence indicates that the plaintiff has looked solely to the corporation in extending credit, the courts may rely on these facts to refuse to impose alter ego liability [TWM Homes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 853, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887] . This does not necessarily mean that express contract provisions relieving an individual of liability will immunize that person from alter ego liability [e.g., Flying Tiger Line, Inc. v. United States Aircoach (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 199, 201-204, 331 P.2d 37 (agreement absolving defendant of personal liability other than that created by pledge of shares in defendant's corporation did not prevent trial court from finding that defendant was alter ego of corporation when its funds were misappropriated by defendant without plaintiff's knowledge); but see Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 395, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 (plaintiffs agreed that individual promoter had right to assign contract to corporation pursuant to provision absolving promoter of individual liability), disapproved on other grounds, Reynolds Metals Co. v. Alperson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 124, 129, 158 Cal. Rptr. 1, 599 P.2d 83].

[3] Knowledge by Plaintiff Creating Estoppel

The court may properly refuse to disregard the corporate entity at the behest of one who was thoroughly familiar with all the facts concerning the alleged alter ego's relationship with the corporation [Lynch v. McDonald (1909) 155 Cal. 704, 706, 102 P. 918] . This matter has been said to be essentially one of estoppel [Engineering Serv. Corp. v. Longridge Inv. Co. (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 404, 417, 314 P.2d 563] .

[4] When Corporation Itself Seeks Benefit of Doctrine

The alter ego doctrine should not be applied when the corporation itself raises the issue for its own benefit. For example, the Ninth Circuit, apparently applying federal common law, has held that a corporation is not entitled to establish and use its affiliates' separate legal existence for some purposes but have its own separate corporate existence disregarded for its own benefit against third parties. The corporate veil generally can be pierced only by an adversary of the corporation, not by the corporation itself for its own benefit [Disenos Artisticos E Indus. v. Costco Wholesale (9th Cir. 1996) 97 F.3d 377, 380 ; see United Continental Tuna Corp. v. United States (9th Cir. 1977) 550 F.2d 569, 573] .

[5] When Shareholders Seek Benefit of Doctrine

Just as the corporation itself cannot raise the alter ego doctrine for its own benefit [see § 161.13[4]], the alter ego doctrine should not be applied when the corporate shareholders raise the issue for their own benefit. In a case in which the shareholders of a small, closely held corporation sought to pierce the veil of their own corporation and substitute themselves in the place of the corporation as the named insured under a workers compensation policy, the court found that the shareholders' inability to maintain individual actions against their corporation's workers' compensation carrier did not constitute the type of "grave injustice" that justified ignoring a corporation's separate existence. The fact that individual shareholders would not be able to pursue bad faith insurance claims against the corporation's insurer did not allow the insurer to escape liability for improper conduct. The corporation itself, as named insured, could pursue its own rights, and the shareholders would profit indirectly [Seretti v. Superior Nat. Ins. Co. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 920, 931 (shareholders who elect to avail themselves of benefits of corporate structure cannot complaint about their inability to take personal advantage of a right belonging to corporation alone)].
