Chapter 161 CORPORATIONS: ALTER EGO LIABILITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-161 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 161.14

§ 161.14 Procedure

[1] Alter Ego Liability Alleged in Complaint

[a] Essential Allegations

If a creditor or tort victim seeks to impute liability to either individual or corporate shareholders of a corporation that is alleged to be their alter ego, the following allegations of fact should appear in the complaint:

- The existence of the obligation owed to plaintiff by the corporation [see Design Associates, Inc. v. Welch (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 165, 171, 36 Cal. Rptr. 341] ;

- Unity and identity of interest between the individual and the corporation [Shea v. Leonis (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 666, 670, 96 P.2d 332 (demurrer to complaint sustained as to one individual defendant for failure to allege in complaint that defendant had any beneficial interest in the stock of the corporation); Rosen v. E.C. Losch Co., Inc. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 324, 333, 44 Cal. Rptr. 377] ; and

- That adherence to the fiction of the separate existence of the corporation would, under particular circumstances alleged, sanction fraud or promote injustice [Minifie v. Rowley (1921) 187 Cal. 481, 487, 202 P. 673 ; Pearl v. Shore (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 608, 618, 95 Cal. Rptr. 157 ; Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 837, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806] .

Although the foregoing elements are essential to a finding of alter ego liability, the issue of liability may be raised in other ways, depending on the liberality with which the court treats the pleading requirements. Thus, although not placed in issue by the pleadings, if alter ego as a basis for liability is the subject of pretrial statements and orders and thereafter tried by the parties without objection, pleading deficiencies will not be the subject of appellate concern [Carey v. Glenco Citrus Products (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 572, 576, 45 Cal. Rptr. 365] . There is also authority for the proposition that if a defendant is charged with liability, his or her denial is sufficient to authorize the reception of evidence to establish liability under the alter ego doctrine, even though the complaint is devoid of such an allegation, provided the defendant has not been misled by the variance between the pleadings and proof [Auer v. Frank (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 396, 403, 38 Cal. Rptr. 684 ; see Pan Pac. Sash & Door Co. v. Greendale Park, Inc. (1958) 166 Cal.

App. 2d 652, 655, 333 P.2d 802 (failure to plead alter ego ruled nonprejudicial); First W. Bank & Trust Co. v. Bookasta (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 910, 915-916, 73 Cal. Rptr. 657 (allegation of facts essential to finding of alter ego liability on note not signed by defendant sufficient to raise issue although that theory of liability not specifically alleged)].

[b] Plaintiff's Risk in Action on Contract

When a corporation is sued on a contract containing a provision for attorney's fees, and the complaint names an additional defendant on the alter ego theory, the alter ego defendant may move for a separate preliminary determination of the alter ego issue. If the alter ego issue is disposed of preliminarily, the party prevailing on that issue is entitled to obtain an award of attorney's fees at that point. When the moving defendant is the prevailing party, the action is at an end as far as that defendant is concerned, and it is irrelevant, for the purpose of awarding fees, how the underlying contract claim might eventually be determined [Pueblo Radiology Med. Group, Inc. v. Gerlach (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 826, 828-830, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 880]. Thus the plaintiff risks being bound to pay attorney's fees to a defendant even after winning on the contract claim. Unless the plaintiff is reasonably convinced that the alter ego issue will be determined in the plaintiff's favor, the plaintiff should consider omitting allegations on the alter ego theory in the complaint, and waiting to pursue an alter ego defendant until after a judgment has been obtained [see [3], below].

[2] Service of Process on Alter Ego Defendant Added by Amended Complaint

A defendant may be first named in an amended complaint and alleged to be the alter ego of a defendant named in the original complaint. For purposes of the three-year limitation on service of process [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210(a)], the action is commenced as to that defendant at the time when the amended complaint naming him or her is filed. The new defendant must be served with summons issued on the amended complaint for the court to acquire personal jurisdiction over him or her. This is true even though the alter ego defendant is considered to be identical with the defendant named in the original complaint. It is also true as to all causes of action alleged in the amended complaint, regardless of whether or not the cause of action would relate back to the original complaint for purposes of determining a bar by a statute of limitations [Hennessey's Tavern, Inc. v. American Air Filter Co. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1359-1360, 251 Cal. Rptr. 859] .

Apparently, the result is different if, instead of adding the alter ego as a new defendant, the alter ego is brought into the action by an amendment substituting a true name for a fictitiously named defendant [Barrington v. A. H. Robins Co. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 146, 150, 216 Cal. Rptr. 405, 702 P.2d 563 (noting general rule that action is commenced as to fictitiously named defendant for purposes of running of three-year period for service at time of filing of original complaint); see Nelson v. A.H. Robins Co. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 862, 866-868, 197 Cal. Rptr. 179 (noting that amended complaint that rests on same general set of facts as original complaint and thus relates back for purposes of avoiding statute of limitations as to fictitiously named defendants also relates back for purposes of triggering three-year period)]. Because an action may be brought against an alter ego defendant after the statute of limitations applicable to the cause of action alleged in the original complaint has expired, an alter ego defendant should always be added as a new defendant by an amended complaint, rather than as the true name of a Doe defendant [Hennessey's Tavern, Inc. v. American Air Filter Co. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1359, 251 Cal. Rptr. 859 ; § 161.33[16]]. For general discussion of these principles, see Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings , and Ch. 212, Dismissal .

[3] Binding Nonparties or Fictitious Defendants After Judgment

The following procedures may be used to obtain a judgment imposing alter ego liability on a person or other entity that was not a party to the initial action against the corporation, though not all of the procedures will be appropriate in every situation:

- Motion after trial to amend the judgment to add the controlling person as judgment debtor [

Alexander v. Abbey of the Chimes (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 44-46, 163 Cal. Rptr. 377 ; Mirabito v. San Francisco Dairy Co. (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 54, 57-60, 47 P.2d 530 ; see McClellan v. Northridge Park Townhome Owners Association, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 746, 753-756, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 702 (trial court properly granted motion to amend judgment adding successor corporation as judgment debtor in addition to bankrupt predecessor, when substantial evidence supported conclusion that successor was mere continuation of predecessor); Hall, Goodhue, Haisley & Barker, Inc. v. Marconi Conf. Center Bd. (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1551, 1555, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 286 (judgment confirming arbitration award may be amended to add alter ego as additional judgment debtor)].

- Petition for an order to show cause why the judgment should not be amended to add the controlling person as judgment debtor [Motores De Mexicali v. Superior Court (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 172, 174-176, 331 P.2d 1 ; Schoenberg v. Romike Properties (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 154, 168, 59 Cal. Rptr. 359] .

- Separate action against the controlling person or entity to establish its liability for the original judgment [Silverman v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 145, 151-152, 249 Cal. Rptr. 724 ; Taylor v. Newton (1953) 117 Cal. App. 2d 752, 753-757, 257 P.2d 68] .

- Joint debtor proceedings under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 989-994 [see Silverman v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 145, 147-148, 152, 249 Cal. Rptr. 724 ; Marcus v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 204, 211 n.3, 141 Cal. Rptr. 890 (dicta in both cases)]. Joint debtor proceedings are limited to establishing liability for contract obligations and are only available against a person who was named as a defendant, albeit a fictitious one, in the original complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 989; Vincent v. Grayson (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 899, 905-906, 106 Cal. Rptr. 733 ; McRae v. Bates (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 510, 512, 16 Cal. Rptr. 565] . Joint debtor proceedings are discussed in Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments .

Although the change in the judgment to add an additional judgment debtor is referred to as an amendment, it is not technically an amendment. What the court is actually doing is exercising its authority under Code Civ. Proc. § 187 to correct the judgment to set forth the name of the true defendant [McClellan v. Northridge Park Townhome Owners Association, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 746, 752, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 702 (trial court properly granted motion to amend judgment adding successor corporation as judgment debtor in addition to bankrupt predecessor, when substantial evidence supported conclusion that successor was mere continuation of predecessor); Alexander v. Abbey of the Chimes (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 44-45, 163 Cal. Rptr. 377 ; Mirabito v. San Francisco Dairy Co. (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 54, 57, 47 P.2d 530] . The evidence establishing alter ego liability may be presented in the original proceeding or on the hearing of the motion [Jack Farenbaugh & Son v. Belmont Construction, Inc. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1029, 240 Cal. Rptr. 78 ; Thomson v. L.C. Roney & Co. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 428-429, 246 P.2d 1017 (hearing of motion); Mirabito v. San Francisco Dairy Co. (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 54, 57, 47 P.2d 530 (original trial)]. Correcting the judgment to bind the alter ego is only appropriate if the person or entity sought to be added as a judgment debtor actually controlled the initial litigation, personally or through a representative, and had occasion to conduct it with a diligence corresponding to the risk of personal liability involved [NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 778-779, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441 ; Silverman v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 145, 151-152, 249 Cal. Rptr. 724 ; Alexander v. Abbey of the Chimes (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 45, 163 Cal. Rptr. 377] .

Actual control is necessary because without it, an individual sought to be added as a judgment debtor would never have an opportunity to litigate any question beyond his or her relationship to the corporation, and that would infringe his or her right to due process [Katzir's Floor & Home Design, Inc. v. M-MLS.COM (9th Cir. 2004) 394 F.3d 1143, 1149-1150 (reversing amended judgment adding individual as additional judgment debtor on alter ego grounds) Motores De Mexicali v. Superior Court (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 172, 176, 331 P.2d 1 ; NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 779, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441] . Actual control contemplates some active defense [NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 781, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441] , but does not require the matter to have been fully litigated. The persons sought to be added as judgment debtors need not have actually participated in the trial, but they must have had the opportunity to do so. For example, a person who controlled the initial litigation may be added as a judgment debtor to a judgment based on plaintiff's successful motion for summary judgment [Dow Jones Co. v. Avenel (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 144, 150-151, 198 Cal. Rptr. 457] . Sufficient control to overcome the due process objection may consist of a combination of factors, usually including financing the litigation, hiring the attorneys, and controlling the course of the litigation [NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 781, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441] . Another criteria of sufficient control examines whether the corporate defendant's interests and those of the alter ego were so similar that the trial strategy of the corporate defendant effectively represented the interests of the alter ego [NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 780-781, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441] . For example, the interests of the individual and the corporation are not sufficiently similar if the corporate defendant was on the verge of bankruptcy and negotiated with the plaintiff, as well as with other creditors, to compromise the claim in order to avoid bankruptcy or to agree on a plan for a Chapter 11 reorganization, but did not appear at the trial or present any defense. In that situation, there is no defense for the individual to control, and correction of the judgment to include the individual as judgment debtor is not proper [NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 780-781, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441] .

In deciding whether or not to correct the judgment, the court must also address equitable considerations, and can refuse to correct the judgment if the plaintiff did not act with due diligence after learning of the alter ego relationship [Alexander v. Abbey of the Chimes (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 47-49, 163 Cal. Rptr. 377] . Whether one proceeds by motion or by a second action to establish the controlling person's liability on the original judgment, it may also be necessary for plaintiff to establish his or her attempts to satisfy the original judgment and that all or part of the original judgment against the corporation has not been satisfied [see Alexander v. Abbey of the Chimes (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 48, 163 Cal. Rptr. 377 (failure to show attempts to satisfy judgment as equitable consideration in determining whether to grant motion); Taylor v. Newton (1953) 117 Cal. App. 2d 752, 756, 257 P.2d 68 (findings in separate action)].

[4] Statute of Limitations

An action may be brought against an alter ego defendant after the statute of limitations applicable to the cause of action alleged in the original complaint has expired [Hennessey's Tavern, Inc. v. American Air Filter Co. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1359, 251 Cal. Rptr. 859] . The allegation that one is the alter ego of a corporation asks merely to have the fictitious identity of the corporation disregarded. In effect, the alter ego is substituted for the originally named defendant, and, if the action was filed in a timely manner with regard to that defendant, it is also timely as to the alter ego [Most Worshipful Sons v. Sons etc. Lodge (1958) 160 Cal App. 2d 560, 565-567, 569, 325 P.2d 606 ; Taylor v. Newton (1953) 117 Cal. App. 2d 752, 757, 257 P.2d 68 ; see People v. Clauson (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 374, 376-380, 41 Cal. Rptr. 691 (three-year statute of limitations of Code Civ. Proc. § 359 for actions against shareholders to enforce liability created by law is inapplicable to equitable liability imposed under alter ego doctrine)].

[5] Enforcing Corporation's Arbitration Agreement

When a person is sued on the theory that a corporation is the person's alter ego, that person has standing to enforce the corporation's agreement to arbitrate the underlying dispute, even though that person was not a party to the agreement [Rowe v. Exline (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1276, 1285, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 787]. For discussion of enforcement of an arbitration agreement, see Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration .

§ 161.33 Decisions

[1] Alter Ego Doctrine Inapplicable When Plaintiff Not Misled

Alter ego theory inapplicable when plaintiff was thoroughly familiar with all facts concerning defendant's relationship to corporation. Lynch v. McDonald (1909) 155 Cal. 704, 706, 102 P. 918

Absence of representations that any person other than corporation was responsible for its debts and evidence that plaintiff looked solely to corporation in extending credit was basis for refusal to impose alter ego liability. TWM Homes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 853, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887

Plaintiff's agreement to provision in contract permitting promoter to assign contract to corporation and absolving defendant of individual liability was evidence supporting finding of no alter ego liability. Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 395, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775

Alter ego doctrine was inapplicable in attempt by bank to offset amount owed on shareholders' notes against bank account of corporation when bank loaned money to shareholders with full knowledge of their intent to lend such money to corporation and refused to make loan directly to corporation. Potts v. First City Bank (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 341, 344-346, 86 Cal. Rptr. 552

Plaintiff was estopped from asserting doctrine of disregarding corporate entity when throughout most of his relationship with corporation he acted as officer and dealt with business as that of corporation. Granoff v. Yackle (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 253, 256, 16 Cal. Rptr. 394 ; see also Petersen v. Cloverdale Egg Farms (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d 792, 797-799, 327 P.2d 127 ; Engineering Serv. Corp. v. Longridge Inv. Co. (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 404, 417, 314 P.2d 563

[2] Appeal

When alter ego liability is imposed by default judgment, sufficiency of evidence is not reviewable on appeal unless relief from default was sought. Bein v. Brechtel-Jochim Group, Inc. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1387, 1394, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 351

[3] Attorney's Fees

Entity determined not to be alter ego of party to collective bargaining agreement is not entitled to attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717 because California law is preempted by federal law [see 29 U.S.C. § 185(a)], which does not allow attorney's fees. Carpenters Health & Welfare Trust Fund v. Acme Industries, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 187, 190-191, 273 Cal. Rptr. 519

[4] Bankruptcy

Trial court properly granted motion to amend judgment adding successor corporation as judgment debtor in addition to bankrupt predecessor, when substantial evidence supported conclusion that successor was mere continuation of predecessor. McClellan v. Northridge Park Townhome Owners Association, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 746, 752, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 702

Former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 209, requiring that case be at issue as to all essential parties before placement on civil active list, was no bar to plaintiff's proceeding to trial on alter ego theory against officer and principal shareholder of corporation when litigation against corporation has been stayed due to bankruptcy. Maximum Technology v. Superior Court (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 935, 938, 233 Cal. Rptr. 733

[5] Crimes

Corporation may not be used by individuals who control it to circumvent statute. People v. Anderson (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 1084, 1092, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 247 (sale of liquor license for amount exceeding statutory maximum)

[6] Effect of Settlement With Original Defendant

When plaintiff sues one party as alter ego of another, plaintiff is not barred from proceeding against former (here parent corporation) after settling with its alter ego. Mesler v. Bragg Management Co. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 290, 306, 216 Cal. Rptr. 443, 702 P. 2d 601

[7] Elements of Alter Ego Doctrine

Amount of respect given to separate identity of corporation by its shareholders, fraudulent intent of incorporators, and degree of injustice visited on litigants by recognition of corporate entity are factors relied on by court in deciding whether shareholders are personally liable for debts of corporation. Laborers Clean-Up Contract v. Uriarte Clean-Up Ser. (9th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 516, 524-525

Two requirements for application of alter ego doctrine: (1) unity of interest so that separate personalities of corporation and individual no longer exist; and (2) inequitable result will follow if acts are treated as of corporation alone. Minifie v. Rowley (1921) 187 Cal. 481, 487, 202 P. 673 ; Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 394, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 ; Pearl v. Shore (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 608, 618, 95 Cal. Rptr. 157 ; Playboy Enterprises, Inc. v. Welles (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 796, 806-807

question of law, and not to be disturbed on appeal if supported by substantial evidence. Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 394, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 ; Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 837, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806

Bad faith is underlying consideration in disregarding corporate entity. Pearl v. Shore (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 608, 616, 95 Cal. Rptr. 157 ; Clejan v. Reisman (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 224, 239, 84 Cal. Rptr. 897 ; Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 838, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806

Action against alter ego of corporation was not necessarily based on fraud; complaint merely set forth additional facts of improper domination of corporation as basis for judgment against individuals dominating it. First W. Bank & Trust Co. v. Bookasta (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 910, 914, 73 Cal. Rptr. 657

Alter ego doctrine does not require that individual own every share of corporation, but that corporation is controlled by individual sought to be held and that recognition of separate existence of controlled corporation would work fraud or injustice. O'Donnell v. Weintraub (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 352, 358, 67 Cal. Rptr. 274

[8] Factors Considered

[a] Absence of One or Both Elements of Test

To impose alter ego liability on corporate president in federal securities case by piercing corporate veil, president is still required to have requisite mental state. Orloff v. Allman (9th Cir. 1987) 819 F.2d 904, 908

Alter ego liability may not be imposed on corporate president under California law in securities case by piercing corporate veil merely because president wished to limit liability when there is no abuse of corporate form, such as under-capitalization. Orloff v. Allman (9th Cir. 1987) 819 F.2d 904, 908-909

Under-capitalization alone is not sufficient to invoke alter ego doctrine. Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 842, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806 ; Harris v. Curtis (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 837, 841, 87 Cal. Rptr. 614

Failure of plaintiff to offer evidence showing that capital was inadequate or what would constitute reasonable capital is reason for not imposing alter ego liability. Carlesimo v. Schwebel (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 482, 490, 197 P.2d 167

Sole ownership and control of corporation not enough to warrant piercing corporate veil absent some showing of confusion of personal and corporate affairs, failure to disclose to creditors, or some form of bad faith. Shafford v. Otto Sales Co., Inc. (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 849, 862, 260 P.2d 269

Purpose of alter ego doctrine is not to protect every unsatisfied creditor, but rather to afford protection when some conduct amounting to bad faith makes it inequitable for equitable owner of corporation to hide behind its corporate veil. Roman Catholic Archbishop v. Superior Court (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 405, 412, 93 Cal. Rptr. 338

[b] Commingling or Manipulation of Assets and Liabilities

Intermingling of funds of two corporations by owners to assist them in evading obligations merited treatment of corporations as single entity which was alter ego of controlling shareholders. Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 579, 335 P.2d 107

Misappropriation and diversion of corporate assets by defendant occurring after pledge of shares to plaintiff as security warrant imposition of alter ego liability and nullify provision in pledge agreement absolving defendant of personal liability. Flying Tiger Line, Inc. v. U.S. Aircoach (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 199, 201-203, 331 P.2d 37

Manipulation of assets between identically owned corporations to concentrate assets in one and liabilities in the other justify imposition of personal liability on shareholders. Rosen v. E. C. Losch Co. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 324, 334, 44 Cal. Rptr. 377 ; Thomson v. L.C. Roney & Co., Inc. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 428-430, 246 P.2d 1017 ; Temple v. Bodega Bay Fisheries, Inc. (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 279, 283, 4 Cal. Rptr. 300

Failure to keep internal controls and to prevent improper disbursements along with use of corporate funds to discharge personal liabilities were factors warranting charging shareholders with debts of corporation. McKee v. Peterson (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 515, 530-531, 29 Cal. Rptr. 742

[c] Equitable Considerations

Fact that subsidiary's worth exceeded judgment does not vitiate need to pierce veil to do justice when parent was actively involved in transaction from beginning, subsidiary's staff and operations had been substantially curtailed since beginning of transaction, and possibility existed that subsidiary would totally deplete its assets before plaintiff could realize on judgment. Las Palmas Associates v. Las Palmas Center Associates (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1220, 1251, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301

Court's discretion to amend judgment to add judgment debtor is equitable; granting of motion made seven years after entry of original judgment without any showing that facts were newly discovered or that attempts had been made to satisfy original judgment was abuse of discretion. Alexander v. Abbey of the Chimes (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 48-49, 163 Cal. Rptr. 377

[d] Failure to Observe Corporate Formalities

Failure to follow normal corporate procedures with respect to holding meetings and keeping records was evidence supporting trial court's finding of alter ego liability. Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 581, 335 P.2d 107

Failure of corporation to maintain accurate minutes of meetings is another factor which may be relied upon to disregard corporate entity. McKee v. Peterson (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 515, 531, 29 Cal. Rptr. 742 ; Rosen v. E.C. Losch Co., Inc. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 324, 334, 44 Cal. Rptr. 377

[e] Inadequate Capitalization

Fact that parent corporation (of general partner of development limited partnership) guaranteed $42 million of subsidiary's loans strongly suggested that subsidiary was undercapitalized for company in business of developing shopping centers. Las Palmas Associates v. Las Palmas Center Associates (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1220, 1250, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301

Loans or advances by shareholders of under-capitalized corporation tended to show that corporation was not regarded as separate entity by shareholders. Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 581, 335 P.2d 107

Alter ego liability imposed when capital is illusory or trifling compared with business to be done and risks of loss. Automotriz etc. De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 797, 306 P.2d 1 ; Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 580, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473 ; CFTC v. Topworth Int'l, Ltd. (9th Cir. 2000) 205 F.3d 1107, 1112-1113 (extreme under-capitalization found)

Failure to issue stock or apply for permit and under-capitalization were factors to be considered in determining whether individuals dealing through corporation should be held personally responsible for corporate obligations. Automotriz Del Golfo De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 796-797, 306 P.2d 1 ; Claremont Press Pub. Co. v. Barksdale (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 813, 816-817, 10 Cal. Rptr. 214

Under-capitalization was factor to be considered along with all other factors in determining whether alter ego doctrine should be applied, but did necessitate, by itself, application of doctrine. Harris v. Curtis (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 837, 841-843, 87 Cal. Rptr. 614 ; see also Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 396, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775

Guaranty of under-financed corporation's debt was indicative of promoter's intent to invite public to deal with corporation, thus supplying element of bad faith necessary to ignore corporate entity. Linco Servs., Inc. v. DuPont (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 841, 844, 49 Cal. Rptr. 196

Excessive salaries contributed to under-capitalization of corporation. McKee v. Peterson (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 515, 531, 29 Cal. Rptr. 742

Burden of showing inadequate capitalization of corporation is on plaintiff. Carlesimo v. Schwebel (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 482, 490, 197 P.2d 167

[f] Representations to Creditors

Agreement absolving defendant of personal liability for corporate obligations was ineffective in light of court's finding that corporation was his alter ego. Flying Tiger Line, Inc. v. United States Aircoach (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 199, 201-204, 331 P.2d 37

Statements by shareholder that he and wife were in effect the corporation obligated on note created inference that note accepted under belief that shareholder and wife were true parties obligated. Stark v. Coker (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 839, 848, 129 P.2d 390

Guaranty of corporate obligations and loans by promoter created impression that corporation was financially stable. Linco Servs. Inc. v. DuPont (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 841, 843-844, 49 Cal. Rptr. 196

Assurances that recently incorporated business is under same ownership as predecessor and that individual shareholder will meet obligations supported finding of inequitable result if corporate entity not disregarded. Talbot v. Fresno-Pac. Corp. (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 425, 429, 5 Cal. Rptr. 361

[9] Federal Standard

In determining whether to disregard corporate form, federal court applies federal substantive law, but may look to state law for guidance; federal standard considers three factors: amount of respect given to separate identity of corporation by shareholders; degree of injustice that would result from recognition of corporate entity; and any fraudulent intent of incorporators. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local Union No. 332 v. Hyland Wilson Electrical Contractors, Inc., (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 820, 821 ; Bd. of Trustees v. Valley Cabinet & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1989) 877 F.2d 769, 772

[10] Jurisdiction

When foreign corporation is alter ego of its stockholders so as to justify disregard of corporate entity, jurisdiction over corporation supports jurisdiction over stockholders. Sheard v. Superior Court (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 207, 210, 114 Cal. Rptr. 743 (holding, however, that there was insufficient proof of alter ego doctrine to justify jurisdiction of stockholders)

[11] Liability Not Imposed

In case applying Delaware law, in which surviving corporation claimed shareholders of acquired corporation benefitted from pre-merger fraud by acquired entity and sought recovery for unjust enrichment, court held that longstanding principles of corporate law and policies favoring maintenance of corporate form were so compelling that it could not permit corporation to pierce corporate veil and obtain remedy against its own shareholders. McKesson HBOC, Inc. v. New York State Common Retirement Fund, Inc. (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1087, 1089, 1094-1096

Although spouse's community property interest [Civ. Code § 5105 (repealed and replaced by Fam. Code § 751, operative January 1, 1994)] in shares held in name of officer/director spouse satisfies ownership requirement for imposition of alter ego liability, mere passive acceptance of benefits of disregarding corporate entity is insufficient basis for imposition of alter ego liability; alter ego liability can only be imposed on one who has actively influenced or governed corporation in course of conduct that constitutes abuse of corporate privilege. Firstmark Capital Corp. v. Hempel Financial Corp. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 92, 94-95

Former employee of subsidiary failed to show that subsidiary was parent corporation's alter ego for purposes of holding parent liable for employment discrimination against employee; there was no evidence that parent exercised day-to-day control over subsidiary's employment decisions or that parent exercised greater control over subsidiary's operations than that which parent corporation would normally exercise over its subsidiary, and there was no showing of common management. Laird v. Capital Cities/ABC Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 727, 738-739, 741-742, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454

Alter ego doctrine is not applicable to require county to pay obligations of county regional justice financing agency, because both acted in good faith in accordance with Legislative mandate and justice did not require county to be derivatively liable. Rider v. County of San Diego (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1410, 1425, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 885

[12] Parent-Subsidiary Relationship

Parent corporation can be held liable as owner under CERCLA for its subsidiary's actions in operating polluting facility if there are factors that would allow piercing corporate veil under general corporate law principles. United States v. Bestfoods (1998) 524 U.S. 51, 118 S. Ct. 1876, 1885-1886, 141 L.Ed. 2d 43

[13] Persons Liable

Difference in wording may be used, but elements are same, when entity sought to be held liable under alter ego doctrine is another corporation rather than individual. Mesler v. Bragg Management Co. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 290, 300, 216 Cal. Rptr. 443, 702 P. 2d 601

Organizing attorney serving as director was liable under alter ego doctrine when he functioned as promoter of corporation. Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 580, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473

President and managing employee of family corporation was not liable when he owned no stock in corporation. Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 580, 335 P.2d 107

Disregard of corporate entity for purpose of calculating assets from which husband could pay support was proper when corporations were formed for purpose of tax avoidance and to created shelter from creditors. In re Marriage of Dick (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 144, 161, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 743

Promoters of corporation liable when corporation has never issued shares. Automotriz Del Golfo De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 796, 306 P.2d 1 ; Claremont Press Pub. Co. v. Barksdale (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 813, 816, 10 Cal. Rptr. 214

Shareholder exercising no control over corporate activities was liable under alter ego theory when his failure to exercise responsibilities as director warranted imputation of bad faith. McKee v. Peterson (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 515, 531, 29 Cal. Rptr. 742

Donor of shares to members of family corporation which he controlled, although not as shareholder, was liable under alter ego theory. Goldsmith v. Tub-O-Wash (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 132, 139-140, 18 Cal. Rptr. 446

Parent corporation liable for obligations of subsidiary under alter ego doctrine. Marr v. Postal Union Life Ins. Co. (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d 673, 681, 105 P.2d 649

[14] Pleading

When defendant is charged with liability, his denial thereof was sufficient to authorize reception of evidence to establish alter ego theory even though complaint did not allege that theory, provided defendant was not misled by variance between pleadings and proof. Auer v. Frank (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 396, 403, 38 Cal. Rptr. 684 (action on common counts); Pan Pac. Sash & Door Co. v. Greendale Park, Inc. (1958) 166 Cal. App. 2d 652, 655, 333 P.2d 802 (failure to plead alter ego theory nonprejudicial); see also Los Angeles Cemetery Ass'n v. Superior Court (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 492, 494, 74 Cal. Rptr. 97 (dictum)

Necessity of pleading existence of corporate obligation owed to plaintiff in complaint seeking to charge dominant shareholders on alter ego theory. Design Associates, Inc. v. Welch (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 165, 171, 36 Cal. Rptr. 341

Pleading that subsidiary is owned, managed, and operated by parent corporation and is therefore the alter ego of parent corporation was ineffective. Luis v. Orcutt Town Water Co. (1962) 204 Cal. App. 2d 433, 443-444, 22 Cal. Rptr. 389

[15] Postjudgment Application

Amended judgment adding individual as additional judgment debtor on alter ego grounds reversed to avoid violation of due process rights. Katzir's Floor & Home Design, Inc. v. M-MLS.COM (9th Cir. 2004) 394 F.3d 1143, 1149-1150

Necessity that alter ego of defendant exercise control of litigation before it may be bound by judgment and subsequently named as judgment debtor. Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 581, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473 ; Motores De Mexicali v. Superior Court (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 172, 175-176, 331 P.2d 1

Court has authority under Code Civ. Proc. § 187 (implied powers) to impose liability after judgment on alter ego who has had control of litigation. Schoenberg v. Romike Properties (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 154, 168, 59 Cal. Rptr. 359 ; Thomson v. L.C. Roney & Co., Inc. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 426-427, 246 P.2d 1017 ; Mirabito v. San Francisco Dairy Co. (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 54, 57-61, 47 P.2d 530

Statute of limitations applicable to corporation also applicable to alter ego when corporate entity disregarded. People v. Clauson (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 374, 380, 41 Cal. Rptr. 691

[2] Use of Form

This skeletal form for a complaint is for use when the plaintiff seeks to impose liability for a corporate obligation on the dominant shareholders or the promoter(s) on the alter ego theory.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges:

- The capacity of the parties (Paragraphs 1-3);

- That there is a unity of ownership and interest between the corporation and the individual defendants (Paragraph 4) [see Minifie v. Rowley (1921) 187 Cal. 481, 487, 202 P. 673] ; and

- That adherence to the fiction of separate existence of the corporation would sanction fraud or promote injustice (Paragraph 5) [see Minifie v. Rowley (1921) 187 Cal. 481, 487, 202 P. 673 ; see also People v. Clauson (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 374, 379, 41 Cal. Rptr. 691] .

To these allegations must be added those alleging the underlying cause of action against the corporation (Paragraph 6) [see Design Associates, Inc. v. Welch (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 165, 171, 36 Cal. Rptr. 341] . For the essential allegations to be pleaded in a particular cause of action, see the applicable chapter in this publication.

[4] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification also will preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[5] Jurisdiction

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const. art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)]. In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the first paper must state whether the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

Allegation that defendant owns more than majority of capital stock of corporation and controls, dominates, and manages corporation and all of its shares was insufficient to raise issue of alter ego theory. Dos Pueblos Ranch & Improvement Co. v. Ellis (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 617, 621, 67 P.2d 340

Necessity of pleading cause of action against corporation in action to hold shareholder liable. Design Associates, Inc. v. Welch (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 165, 171, 36 Cal. Rptr. 341

Denial by defendant charged with liability is sufficient to put alter ego doctrine in issue even though complaint is devoid of that allegation. Auer v. Frank (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 396, 403, 38 Cal. Rptr. 684 (action on common counts); *Pan Pac. Sash & Door Co. v. Greendale Park, Inc. (1958) 166 Cal. 14-161 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 161.51

§ 161.51 Allegation(s)--Failure to Issue Stock and/or Inadequate Capitalization

[1] FORM Allegation(s)--Failure to Issue Stock and/or Inadequate Capitalization

Defendant _____ [name of corporation] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a mere shell and sham without capital, assets, stock, or stockholders. Defendant _____ [name of corporation] was conceived, intended, and used by defendant _____ [name of shareholder] as a device to avoid individual liability and for the purpose of substituting a financially insolvent corporation in the place of defendant _____ [name of shareholder]. At no time after defendant _____ [name of corporation] became incorporated was any stock authorized to be issued or issued, nor has any permit for issuance of stock been applied for with the Commissioner of Corporations.

[AND/OR]

Defendant _____ [name of corporation] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, so inadequately capitalized that, compared with the business to be done by the defendant and the risks of loss, its capitalization was _____ [illusory or trifling].

[2] Use of Form

This allegation is for use in a pleading seeking to disregard the corporate entity on the grounds of lack of capitalization and failure to issue stock. These factors would be considered as bearing on the element of unity of interest. The allegation must be combined with allegations showing that there will be an inequitable result if the corporate entity is not disregarded [see Minifie v. Rowley (1921) 187 Cal. 481, 487, 202 P. 673] .

[3] Nonissuance of Stock

The failure to issue stock or to apply at any time for a permit, although not conclusive evidence, is an indication that persons controlling the corporation were doing business as individuals. While the fact standing alone that a corporation remains inchoate without stockholders or stock is not of itself determinative of an alter ego relationship on its part, nevertheless it does indicate that the corporation may exist merely to serve the interests of another--a corporation or an individual [Automotriz etc. De California v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 796, 306 P.2d 1] .

[4] Inadequate Capitalization

A factor to be considered in determining whether individuals dealing through a corporation should be held personally responsible for the corporate obligations is whether there was an attempt to provide adequate capitalization for the corporation [Automotriz etc. De California v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 796-797, 306 P.2d 1 ; see CFTC v. Topworth Int'l, Ltd. (9th Cir. 2000) 205 F.3d 1107, 1112-1113 (extreme under-capitalization found)]. Inadequate capitalization, per se, does not necessarily render the shareholders, officers, and directors liable for the obligations of the corporation. Rather, the rule is that under-capitalization is a factor to be considered along with all other factors present in the case in determining whether those individuals should be declared the alter ego of the corporation [Harris v. Curtis (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 837, 841-843, 87 Cal. Rptr. 614 ; see also Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 396, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 ; cf. Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 580, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473 (court indicated by dicta that undisputed evidence that there was no attempt to provide adequate capitalization could be a proper ground to affirm judgment disregarding entity but reversed judgment on other grounds)].

§ 161.52 Allegation--Commingling or Manipulation of Assets

[1] FORM Allegation--Commingling or Manipulation of Assets

[EITHER]

Defendant _____ [name of corporation] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, the alter ego of defendant _____ [name of shareholder] and there exists, and at all times herein mentioned has existed, a unity of interest and ownership between the defendants such that any separateness has ceased to exist, in that defendant _____ [name of shareholder] used assets of the corporation for his/her personal uses, caused assets of the corporation to be transferred to him/her without adequate consideration, and withdrew funds from the corporation's bank accounts for his/her personal use.

[OR]

Defendant _____ [name of parent corporation] and defendant _____ [name of subsidiary corporation] are, and at all times herein mentioned were, the alter egos of defendant _____ [name of shareholder], and there exists, and at all times herein mentioned has existed, a unity of interest and ownership between defendants such that any separateness between them has ceased to exist, in that defendant _____ [name of shareholder] completely controlled, dominated, managed, and operated both corporate defendants and intermingled the assets of each to suit the convenience of defendant _____ [name of shareholder] by placing the fixed assets of defendant _____ [name of plaintiff's debtor] in the name of defendant _____ [name of transferee corporation] in order to evade payment of the obligations owed to creditors of defendant _____ [name of plaintiff's debtor].

[2] Use of Form

This form sets forth alternative allegations relating to the misappropriation or manipulation of corporate assets, either between the shareholder and the corporation, or between two corporations controlled by the shareholders.

[3] Commingling of Assets

The failure to keep internal controls and prevent improper disbursements of corporate funds to discharge personal liabilities of shareholders have been considered significant factors by the courts when reviewing the trial court's imposition of alter ego liability [McKee v. Peterson (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 515, 530-531, 29 Cal. Rptr. 742 ; Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 838, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806] .

[4] Manipulation of Assets

Another factor supporting a finding of alter ego liability is the manipulation of assets between identically owned corporation in order to concentrate the assets in one corporation and the liabilities in another to the detriment of creditors of the latter [Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 579, 335 P.2d 107 ; Rosen v. E.C. Losch Co., Inc. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 324, 334, 44 Cal. Rptr. 377] .

[5] Decisions

Commingling of funds and other assets, failure to segregate funds of the separate entities, and unauthorized diversion of corporate funds or assets to other than corporate uses as factors pertinent to trial court's determination of whether corporate entity should be disregarded. Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 581-582, 335 P.2d 107 ; Rosen v. E.C. Losch Co., Inc. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 324, 334, 44 Cal. Rptr. 377 ; *Goldberg v. Engelberg (1939) 34 Cal. 14-161 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 161.53

§ 161.53 Allegation--Corporation Is Mere Conduit for Business of Shareholder

[1] FORM Allegation--Corporation Is Mere Conduit for Business of Shareholder

Defendant _____ [name of corporation] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a mere shell, instrumentality, and conduit through which defendant _____ [name of shareholder] carried on his/her _____ [type of business] business in the corporate name exactly as he/she had conducted it previous to incorporation, exercising complete control and dominance of such business to such an extent that any individuality or separateness of defendant _____ [name of corporation] and defendant _____ [name of shareholder] does not, and at all times herein mentioned did not, exist.

[2] Use of Form

Allegations that the defendant corporation is the mere shell, instrumentality, and business conduit of its dominant shareholder have been held proper to raise the alter ego issue [First W. Bank & Trust Co. v. Bookasta (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 910, 915, 73 Cal. Rptr. 657] .

To apply the alter ego doctrine, it must appear that the dominant shareholder and the corporation are the business conduits and alter ego of one another, and that to recognize their separate entities would aid the consummation of a wrong. The mere circumstance that all the capital stock of a corporation is owned or controlled by one or more persons does not destroy its separate existence [Erkenbrecher v. Grant (1921) 187 Cal. 7, 11, 200 P. 641] .

[3] Decisions

Mere ownership or control of corporation is insufficient to warrant application of business conduit rule. Erkenbrecher v. Grant (1921) 187 Cal. 7, 11, 200 P. 641

Corporation as business conduit for controlling shareholder is ground for disregarding corporate entity. Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 839, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806 (recognizing rule); McCombs v. Rudman (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 46, 49-51, 17 Cal. Rptr. 351 ; Pan Pac. Sash & Door Co. v. Greendale Park, Inc.

14-161 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 161.54

§ 161.54 Allegation--Failure to Observe Corporate Formalities

[1] FORM Allegation--Failure to Observe Corporate Formalities

Defendant _____ [name of corporation] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, controlled, dominated, and operated by defendant _____ [name of shareholder] as his/her individual business and alter ego, in that the activities and business of defendant corporation were carried out without the holding of directors' or shareholders' meetings, no records or minutes of any corporate proceedings were maintained, and defendant _____ [name of shareholder] entered into personal transactions with defendant corporation without the approval of other directors or shareholders.

[2] Use of Form

Although not the most persuasive of reasons for disregarding the corporate entity, the failure to maintain records, hold meetings, and otherwise follow established corporate formalities have been considered as factors tending to support imposition of alter ego liability [Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 581, 335 P.2d 107 ; Rosen v. E. C. Losch Co. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 324, 334, 44 Cal. Rptr. 377] . When it appears that the defendant corporation was operated in this manner, this allegation should be used.

[3] Disregard of Corporate Formalities by Close Corporations

Factors other than the nonobservance of corporate formalities tend to play a greater role in the court's determination of alter ego liability. Furthermore, "close corporations" [see Corp. Code § 158] operating under a shareholders' agreement may dispense with the formalities relating to the holding of meetings of shareholders or directors [Corp. Code § 300(b)], and the failure of a close corporation to observe such formalities must not be considered a factor tending to establish that the shareholders have personal liability for corporate obligations [Corp. Code § 300(e)]. Note, however, that a close corporation is nevertheless required to maintain adequate records of its financial transactions and other matters [Corp. Code § 300(c); see Corp. Code §§ 1500-1605 and C. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports].

[5] Decisions

Failure to follow normal corporate procedures with respect to holding meetings, keeping records, and obtaining shareholder and director approval of transactions with interested director is evidence supporting finding of alter ego liability. Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 581, 335 P.2d 107

Failure of corporation to maintain accurate minutes of meetings is another factor which may be relied upon to disregard corporate entity. McKee v. Peterson (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 515, 531, 29 Cal. Rptr. 742

§ 161.55 Allegation--Shareholder Fraud in Diverting or Concealing Corporation's Assets

[1] FORM Allegation--Shareholder Fraud in Diverting or Concealing Corporation's Assets

Adherence to the fiction of the separate existence of defendant _____ [name of corporation] as an entity distinct from defendant _____ [name of shareholder] would permit abuse of the corporate privilege and would sanction a fraud in that defendant _____ [name of shareholder] caused the sum of $ _____ to be withdrawn from the funds of defendant _____ [name of corporation] and _____ [specify, e.g., distributed to himself/herself without any consideration to defendant _____ (name of corporation) or deposited in safety deposit boxes], all for the purpose of avoiding and preventing attachment and execution by creditors, including plaintiff, thereby rendering defendant _____ [name of corporation] insolvent and unable to meet its obligations.

[2] Use of Form

This allegation alleges facts which may be pleaded to show that to recognize the corporate defendant as an entity distinct from its shareholder(s) would tend to sanction a fraud [see Flying Tiger Line, Inc. v. U.S. Aircoach (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 199, 201, 202, 331 P.2d 37] .

[3] Decisions

Mere ownership and control of corporation, standing alone, is insufficient ground for holding corporation to be alter ego of shareholders. Erkenbrecher v. Grant (1921) 187 Cal. 7, 11, 200 P. 641 ; Shafford v. Otto Sales Co., Inc. (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 849, 862, 260 P.2d 269

Showing that creditor will remain unsatisfied if corporate veil not pierced is insufficient proof of "inequitable result." Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 842, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806

Alter ego doctrine does not depend on presence of actual fraud but rather on showing that doctrine must be applied to prevent what would be fraud or injustice if accomplished. Clejan v. Reisman (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 224, 239, 84 Cal.

§ 161.56 Allegation--Controlling Shareholder's Representations That Shareholder Will Be Responsible for Corporate Obligations

[1] FORM Allegation--Controlling Shareholder's Representations That Shareholder Will Be Responsible for Corporate Obligations

Adherence to the fiction of the separate existence of defendant _____ [name of corporation] as an entity distinct from defendant _____ [name of shareholder] would permit abuse of the corporate privilege and produce an inequitable result in that defendant _____ [name of shareholder] represented to the plaintiff that _____ [specify, e.g., the note signed on behalf of the corporation was in fact the obligation of defendant _____ (name of shareholder) and such note was accepted under the belief that defendant _____ (name of shareholder) was in reality the true party obligated].

[2] Use of Form

This allegation illustrates the type of fact situation which would establish that the shareholder held himself or herself out to the plaintiff as liable for the obligations of the corporation which the shareholder controls. Such a holding out has been held a sufficient showing that the creditor was misled and an inequitable result would follow if the corporate entity were not disregarded [Stark v. Coker (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 839, 848, 129 P.2d 390 ; see also Talbot v. Fresno-Pac. Corp. (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 425, 429, 5 Cal. Rptr. 361] .

[3] Decisions

Assurances that recently incorporated business is under same ownership as predecessor and that individual shareholder will meet obligations of corporation supports finding of inequitable result if corporate entity not disregarded. *Talbot v. Statements by shareholder that he and wife were in effect the corporation obligated on note creates inference that note was accepted under belief that shareholder and wife were true parties obligated. Stark v. Coker (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 839, 848, 129 P.2d 390

§ 161.57 Allegation--Shareholder's Acts Led Public to Deal With Inadequately Financed Corporation

[1] FORM Allegation--Shareholder's Acts Led Public to Deal With Inadequately Financed Corporation

Adherence to the fiction of the separate existence of defendant _____ [name of corporation] as an entity distinct from defendant _____ [name of shareholder] would permit abuse of the corporate privilege and would produce an inequitable result in that defendant _____ [name of shareholder] made loans to defendant corporation and guaranteed certain of its obligations thereby enabling defendant _____ [name of corporation] to return to active business, without adequate financing and without capital stock, which return to business invited the public generally, and plaintiff in particular, to deal with defendant _____ [name of corporation] to plaintiff's loss.

[2] Use of Form

This allegation is for use when the "inequitable result" element of the alter ego doctrine is to be supplied by evidence that defendant shareholder, by financing the corporation's return to business, misled creditors.

[3] Holding Out to Creditors

These allegations are based on the holding in Linco Servs., Inc. v. DuPont (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 841, 843-844, 49 Cal. Rptr. 196 , in which the court stated that the absence of direct misrepresentation to the plaintiff, and plaintiff's lack of knowledge of the defendant's participation in the corporation, were not decisive. It was a sufficient showing of inequitable result that the defendant enabled the corporation to return to business, thereby inviting the general public to deal with the corporation as a going concern [Linco Servs., Inc. v. DuPont (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 841, 844, 49 Cal. Rptr. 196] .

Defendant _____ [name of shareholder] demurs to the complaint herein on the ground that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against defendant _____ [name of shareholder] in that it fails to allege facts showing that _____ [this defendant and defendant _____ (name of corporation) were the same entity at the times mentioned in the complaint or

CAUTION:

A party filing a demurrer must serve and file a notice of hearing with the demurrer [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320(c)], as well as a supporting memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(c) (law and motion rules apply to demurrers); see also Ch. 417, Points and Authorities].

[2] Use of Form

This demurrer is for use when the complaint against the corporation and the shareholder who is allegedly liable for its obligations under the alter ego theory is deficient on its face because it fails to allege facts establishing the unity of interest requirement and/or the inequitable result requirement.

[3] Pleading Elements of Alter Ego

To state a cause of action against an individual based on his or her liability for the acts and obligations of a corporation, the complaint must show that there is such a unity of interest and ownership between the individual and the corporation that their individuality or separateness has ceased; and that the facts are such that an adherence to the fiction of the separate existence of the corporation would, under the particular circumstances, sanction a fraud or promote injustice [Minifie v. Rowley (1921) 187 Cal. 481, 487, 202 P. 673] .

[4] Mere Ownership and Control

An allegation that an individual owns a majority of the capital stock of a corporation and that he or she controls and dominates its affairs does not allege facts sufficient to satisfy the requirement of the alter ego doctrine, which requires that there be a unity of interest and ownership such that the separate identities of the shareholder and the corporation have disappeared [Dos Pueblos Ranch & Improvement Co. v. Ellis (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 617, 621, 67 P.2d 340] . Assuming that the defendant does operate the corporation as a business conduit, the separate identity of the corporation will not be disregarded unless there are facts showing that failure to ignore the corporate entity would produce an inequitable result [Erkenbrecher v. Grant (1921) 187 Cal. 7, 11, 200 P. 641 ; Shafford v. Otto Sales Co., Inc. (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 849, 862, 260 P.2d 269 ; *Norins Realty Co., Inc. v. Consolidated Abstract Title Co. Bad faith as underlying consideration in disregarding corporate entity. Pearl v. Shore (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 608, 616, 95 Cal. Rptr. 157 ; Clejan v. Reisman (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 224, 239, 84 Cal. Rptr. 897 ; Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 838, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806

Action against alter ego of corporation are not necessarily based on fraud; complaint merely sets forth additional facts of improper domination of corporation as basis for judgment against individuals dominating it. First W. Bank & Trust Co. v. Bookasta (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 910, 914, 73 Cal. Rptr. 657

[b] Factors Considered

Failure to issue stock or apply for permit and under-capitalization are factors to be considered in determining whether individuals dealing through corporation should be held personally responsible for corporate obligations. Automotriz Del Golfo De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 796-797, 306 P.2d 1 ; Claremont Press Pub. Co. v. Barksdale (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 813, 816-817, 10 Cal. Rptr. 214

Factors generally considered in determining whether to disregard corporate entity. Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 394-395, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 ; Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 838-840, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806

Under-capitalization is factor to be considered along with all other factors in determining whether alter ego doctrine should be applied, but by itself does not necessitate application of doctrine. Harris v. Curtis (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 837

, 841-843, 87 Cal. Rptr. 614 ; see also Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 396, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775

Excessive salaries by controlling parties are factor in determining whether to disregard corporate entity. McKee v. Peterson (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 515, 531, 29 Cal. Rptr. 742

§ 161.59 Demurrer to Complaint Against Individual on Corporate Obligation--Failure to Allege That Individual Defendant Had Beneficial Ownership in Corporation

[1] FORM Demurrer to Complaint Against Individual on Corporate Obligation--Failure to Allege That Individual Defendant Had Beneficial Ownership in Corporation

[Caption. See § 161.58.]

The complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against defendant _____ [name of individual] in that the complaint does not allege that defendant _____ [name of individual] holds, or held at any time mentioned in the complaint, any beneficial interest in defendant _____ [name of corporation].

[Prayer, if desired. See § 161.58.]

Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

CAUTION:

A party filing a demurrer must serve and file a notice of hearing with the demurrer [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320(c)], as well as a supporting memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(c) (law and motion rules apply to demurrers); see also Ch. 417, Points and Authorities].

[2] Use of Form

This ground for demurrer should be urged when the defendant does not own any shares, directly or beneficially, in the corporation which is alleged to be the defendant's alter ego.

[3] Requirement of Beneficial Ownership

Unity of interest and ownership between an individual sought to be charged with liability for a corporation's debts and the corporation does not exist when the individual held none of the corporation's stock and had no other interest or right to share in the profits of the enterprise [Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 580, 335 P.2d 107 ; Shea v. Leonis (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 666, 670, 96 P.2d 332] . However, one case has held the donor of shares in a family corporation liable under the alter ego doctrine, even though he held no shares himself, when he completely dominated the affairs of the corporation [Goldsmith v. Tub-O-Wash (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 132, 139, 18 Cal. Rptr. 446] . The case could be distinguished on its facts from those stating the requirement that there be some ownership interest, since there were only two shares issued to the defendant's daughter and son-in-law and they could properly be viewed as merely the nominees of the defendant.

[4] California Points and Authorities

For a memorandum supporting a demurrer to a complaint alleging alter ego liability on the ground that there is no allegation that the individual defendant owns a beneficial interest in the corporation, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 52, Corporations (Matthew Bender)

[5] Decisions

President and managing employee of family corporation was not liable under alter ego theory when he owned no shares nor had any interest other than as salaried employee in corporation. Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 580, 335 P.2d 107

Failure to aver individual defendant had any beneficial interest in shares of corporation stated no cause of action against that individual. Shea v. Leonis (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 666, 670, 96 P.2d 332

Ownership in corporation is necessary element for application of alter ego doctrine under California law; asset freeze against brokerage, however, did not require alter ego relationship. SEC v. Hickey (9th Cir. 2003) 322 F.3d 1123, 1128, 1131

§ 161.60 Affirmative Defense to Shareholder's Liability Under Alter Ego Doctrine--Plaintiff's Knowledge of Facts Regarding Relationship Between Shareholder and Corporation

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense to Shareholder's Liability Under Alter Ego Doctrine--Plaintiff's Knowledge of Facts Regarding Relationship Between Shareholder and Corporation

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

1. Plaintiff at all times mentioned in the complaint dealt with _____ [name of corporation] as a corporation separate and distinct from this defendant.

2. Plaintiff at all times mentioned in the complaint was fully aware of defendant's relationship with the corporation and of _____ [specify facts relied on by plaintiff in complaint to disregard corporate entity, e.g., the fact that the corporation was thinly capitalized] as alleged in plaintiff's complaint.

3. This defendant relied on the fact that plaintiff at all times dealt with the corporation as a separate entity.

4. Equity does not require application of the "alter ego" doctrine in favor of plaintiff to disregard the corporate entity, and such an application would be inequitable as to this defendant.

This form is an affirmative defense to a complaint asserting liability on the alter ego theory. The form alleges that [see Lynch v. McDonald (1909) 155 Cal. 704, 706, 102 P. 918 ; Hiehle v. Torrance Millworks, Inc. (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 624, 629-630, 272 P.2d 780] :

- Plaintiff dealt with the corporation at all times as a separate entity (Paragraph 1) with full knowledge of the facts (Paragraph 2).

- Defendant relied on the fact that plaintiff dealt with the corporation as a separate entity (Paragraph 3).

- Equity does not require disregarding the corporate entity on plaintiff's behalf and that doing so would be inequitable to defendant (Paragraph 4).

[3] Plaintiff's Knowledge of Facts as Defense

The court may properly refuse to disregard the corporate entity at the behest of one who was thoroughly familiar with all the facts concerning the alleged alter ego's relationship with the corporation [Lynch v. McDonald (1909) 155 Cal. 704, 706, 102 P. 918 ; see also Hiehle v. Torrance Millworks, Inc. (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 624, 629-630, 272 P.2d 780] . This defense has been said to be essentially one of estoppel [see Engineering Serv. Corp. v. Longridge Inv. Co. (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 404, 417, 314 P.2d 563] .

[4] Decisions

Alter ego theory was inapplicable when plaintiff was thoroughly familiar with all facts concerning defendant's relationship to corporation. Lynch v. McDonald (1909) 155 Cal. 704, 706, 102 P. 918 ; see also Granoff v. Yackle (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 253, 256, 16 Cal. Rptr. 394 (plaintiff officer of corporation held estopped from asserting doctrine); Engineering Serv. Corp. v. Longridge Inv. Co. (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 404, 417, 314 P.2d 563 ; Hiehle v. Torrance Millworks, Inc. (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 624, 629-630, 272 P.2d 780

Absence of representations that any other than corporation responsible for its debts and evidence that plaintiff looked solely to corporation in extending credit was basis for refusal to impose alter ego liability. TWM Homes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 853, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887

Plaintiff's agreement to provision in contract permitting promoter to assign contract to corporation and absolving defendant of individual liability was evidence supporting finding of no alter ego liability. Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 395, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

CAUTION:

This notice of motion must be accompanied by a supporting memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); for discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities]. A copy of any paper on which the motion is to be based must also accompany the notice if that paper has not previously been served on the party to be notified and was not filed by him or her [Code Civ. Proc. § 1010]. The notice of motion may also be, and most often is, accompanied by a declaration establishing the facts on which the motion is based [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2003, 2009, 2015.5].

[2] Use of Form

This notice of motion is for use to obtain an order to add the name of a corporate defendant's alter ego to a judgment rendered against the corporation. The notice states when, and the grounds on which, the motion will be made, and the papers on which it will be based [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1010].

[3] Amending Judgment to Add Alter Ego

The trial court may amend its judgment at any time so that the judgment properly designates the real defendants [Mirabito v. San Francisco Dairy Co. (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 54, 57, 60, 47 P.2d 530 ; Jack Farenbaugh & Son v. Belmont Construction, Inc. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1028-1029, 240 Cal. Rptr. 78] . In Mirabito v. San Francisco Dairy Co., the court, after stating the foregoing rule, held that "where ... , as here, ... the evidence is sufficient to warrant the conclusion that in effect the two corporations are identical; where, as here, the action was fully and fairly tried with at least the direct financial assistance of [the alter ego]; and where, as here, nothing appears in the record to show that [the alter ego] could have produced a scintilla of evidence that would have in any way affected the results of the trial, there is no basis for a different rule" [Mirabito v. San Francisco Dairy Co. (1935) 47 P.2d 530] .

The alter ego relationship may be established either during the initial trial [Jack Farenbaugh & Son v. Belmont Construction, Inc. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1028-1029, 240 Cal. Rptr. 78 ; Mirabito v. San Francisco Dairy Co. (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 54, 58, 47 P.2d 530] or during the hearing on the motion [Thomson v. L.C. Roney & Co. (1952)

112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 427, 246 P.2d 1017 (applying Code Civ. Proc. § 187, giving court power to adopt suitable procedure to effectuate jurisdiction)].

A judgment confirming an arbitration award may be amended to add an alter ego as an additional judgment debtor [Hall, Goodhue, Haisley & Barker, Inc. v. Marconi Conf. Center Bd. (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1551, 1555, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 286] .

[4] Control of Litigation

In order that a person in control of the litigation is bound by the judgment, it is necessary that the one in whose favor or against whom the rules of res judicata operate participate in the control of the action and, if judgment is adverse, be able to determine whether or not an appeal should be taken. It is not sufficient that he or she appear as a witness or cooperate without having control [Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 581, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473 ; see also Motores De Mexicali v. Superior Court (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 172, 175-176, 331 P.2d 1 ; Schoenberg v. Romike Properties (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 154, 168, 59 Cal. Rptr. 359] .

I, _____ [name], declare:

I am the plaintiff in this _____ [action or proceeding].

On _____ [date] judgment was entered in my favor against _____ [name of defendant], a corporation, in the amount of $ _____.

On _____ [date], I conducted a creditor's examination of _____ [name of defendant] pursuant to an order by this court under Code Civ. Proc. § 708.110(a), whereat _____ [name] as _____ [position, e.g., president] of defendant appeared and was examined on behalf of defendant. [A copy of the transcript of the examination is attached to this declaration as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference.]

The examination disclosed that _____ [set forth facts establishing alter ego relationship on the basis of unity of interest and ownership and inequity resulting from recognition of separate corporate entity].

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

This declaration is for use to factually establish the relationship between defendant and its alter ego, in support of a motion to include the name of the alter ego in the judgment as judgment debtor. The declaration is based on facts discovered during plaintiff's examination of an officer of the defendant corporation pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 708.110(a) (examination of debtor supplemental to execution) [see Thomson v. L.C. Roney & Co. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 422, 246 P.2d 1017] . To establish the alter ego relationship the declaration and exhibits must show that there exists a unity and identity of interest between defendant and its alter ego [see Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 394, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 , disapproved on other grounds, Reynolds Metals Co. V. Alperson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 124 ; Rosen v. E.C. Losch Co., Inc. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 324, 333, 44 Cal. Rptr. 377] and that if the acts are treated as those of the corporation alone, an inequitable result will follow [see Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 394, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 , disapproved on other grounds, Reynolds Metals Co. V. Alperson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 124 ; Schoenberg v. Romike Properties (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 154, 167, 59 Cal. Rptr. 359 ; Thomson v. L.C. Roney & Co., Inc. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 427-429, 246 P.2d 1017] .

Counsel may wish to modify this form to include references to trial or deposition testimony of the corporate officer or shareholder sought to be added as a judgment debtor. If the declarant was also plaintiff's trial counsel, his or her personal observations as to the alter ego's actual participation in and control of the trial may also be used as evidence to support alter ego liability [Jack Farenbaugh & Son v. Belmont Construction, Inc. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1032-1034, 240 Cal. Rptr. 78] .

Counsel may also wish to modify the statements regarding discovery of the facts to describe circumstances of the particular situation. Because of the equitable nature of the motion to amend, the declaration should describe plaintiff's due diligence to discover the true facts and to act on them after discovery, as well as any attempts made to satisfy the original judgment against the corporation and the extent to which it remains unsatisfied [Alexander v. Abbey of the Chimes (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 47-49, 163 Cal. Rptr. 377] .

[3] Decisions

Declaration and deposition testimony of alter ego and declaration of attorney who tried case for plaintiff held sufficient to establish alter ego liability. Jack Farenbaugh & Son v. Belmont Construction, Inc. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1033-1034, 240 Cal. Rptr. 78

§ 162.03 Governing Statutes

[1] Corporations Code

Provisions concerning the share structure of a California corporation that are required or permitted to appear in the articles of incorporation are governed by Corp. Code §§ 202(d),(e), 203, and 203.5.

Issuance of shares is the subject of Chapter 4 of the General Corporation Law [see generally Corp. Code § 400 et seq.]. Specifically, Chapter 4 addresses the following matters:

- Legal consideration for shares [Corp. Code § 409].
- Issuance of partly paid shares, and civil liabilities of holders and transferees of those shares [Corp. Code §§ 410-415].
- Shareholders' entitlement to certificates [Corp. Code § 416].
- Contents of share certificates [Corp. Code §§ 417, 418].
- Issuance of assessable shares and collection of assessments [Corp. Code § 423].

The Corporate Securities Law [see generally Corp. Code § 25000 et seq.] generally governs subscriptions for shares [see generally Corp. Code §§ 25019, 25102(a), 25110].

[2] Commercial Code

[a] In General

Division 8 of the Commercial Code, concerning investment securities [see generally Com. Code § 8101 et seq.], governs transactions in corporate shares (as well as other types of securities). Although most of the provisions of Division 8 concern transfers of issued shares [see Ch. 163, Corporations: Transfers of Shares, § 163.11], some rules apply to the issuance of shares and to the corporation in its role as an issuer of securities, and those rules are discussed in this chapter. Com. Code § 8210, for instance, governs the effect of an overissue of shares and the remedies for a holder of overissued shares.

A writing that is a share certificate is governed by Division 8 and not by Division 3, which governs negotiable instruments [see generally Com. Code § 3101 et seq.], even if the certificate also meets the requirements of that division [Com. Code § 8103(d)].

[b] Validity of Shares

In the case of a California corporation, Division 8 of the Commercial Code (along with other California law generally) will govern the validity of the corporation's shares and other equity securities [Com. Code § 8110(a)(1)], unless the corporation has made an election to have the law of another jurisdiction govern that matter. A California corporation is empowered to make such an election [Com. Code § 8110(a), (d)].

When the validity of a foreign corporation's shares is in issue in a California action, the matter generally will be governed by the law of the jurisdiction in which the corporation is organized. If the foreign corporation has elected, under the law of the jurisdiction in which the corporation is organized, to have the matter governed by the law of a different jurisdiction, the validity of the corporation's shares will be governed by the law of that jurisdiction [Com. Code § 8110(a)(1), (d)].

When a corporation has made the foreign law election described above, any subsequent agreement to the contrary is effective only to the extent permitted by the foreign law so specified [Com. Code § 1301(c)].

[1] Articles

In the Corporations Code, references to the "articles," respecting provisions affecting the issuance of shares (or any other provisions), include the articles of incorporation, amendments, amended articles, restated articles, the certificate of incorporation, and certificates of determination [Corp. Code § 154].

[2] Shares and Related Terms

[a] Shares and Securities

"Shares" are the units into which the proprietary interest in a corporation is divided in the articles of incorporation [Corp. Code § 184].

Shares (and similar equity interests, such as warrants, for example) issued by a corporation are "securities" [see generally Com. Code § 8102(a)(15)], the issuance and transfer of which are subject to Division 8 of the Commercial Code [Com. Code § 8103(a)]. A federally registered investment company's shares and similar equity interests also are securities under Division 8 [Com. Code § 8103(b)]. (A mutual fund is the most common example of a registered investment company.)

Shares also are "securities" under the Corporate Securities Law of 1968 [Corp. Code § 25019], which regulates the issuance and transfer of securities.

[b] Common and Preferred Shares

Common shares are shares that have no preference over any other shares with respect to the distribution of assets on liquidation or with respect to the payment of dividends [Corp. Code § 159]. Preferred shares are shares other than common shares [Corp. Code § 176].

[c] Certificated and Uncertificated Shares

Shares represented by a certificate are "certificated securities" under Division 8 of the Commercial Code, and shares not represented by a certificate are "uncertificated securities" [Com. Code § 8102(a)(4),(18)]. The Commercial Code definitions are also applied in the Corporations Code [see Corp. Code §§ 156.1, 191.1]. Rules governing transfers of shares may differ, depending on whether shares are certificated or uncertificated [see generally Ch. 163, Corporations: Transfers of Shares]. The application of some rules affecting the corporation's rights and duties as an issuer will also depend on whether shares are certificated or uncertificated.

[d] Registered or Bearer Form

Certificated shares usually are issued to specifically named holders. Thus, certificated shares in most cases are issued in "registered form" [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(13)].

It is possible, but would be very unusual, for a share certificate to be issued in "bearer form"; that status, meaning "payable to the bearer of the ... certificate according to its terms and not by reason of an endorsement" [Com. Code § 8102(a)(2)], usually is reserved for bonds and other debt securities.

All uncertificated shares are necessarily in registered form because, in the absence of a certificate, there is no evidence of the holder's ownership other than an entry in the corporation's shareholder records and a corresponding statement sent to the holder [see [e], below].

[e] Initial Transaction Statement and Written Statements

"Initial transaction statement" means a statement referring to uncertificated shares, signed by or on behalf of the corporation and sent to the new registered owner, describing the issue of which the uncertificated shares are part. "Written statements," when used in connection with uncertificated shares, means the written statements that are periodically, or at the request of the registered owner, sent by the corporation to the registered owner, describing the issue of which the uncertificated shares are part [Corp. Code § 171.1].

[f] Classes and Series of Shares

Shares, whether common or preferred, may be issued in classes, and classified shares may be issued in series [Corp. Code § 400]. A "series" of shares means those shares within a class that have the same rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions, but differ from other shares within the same class in one or more of the rights, preferences, privileges, or restrictions. Certificated and uncertificated shares do not constitute different series if the only difference is certificated and uncertificated status [Corp. Code § 183].

[g] Overissue

"Overissue" means an issue of shares in excess of the number that the corporation is authorized to issue. An overissue does not occur if appropriate action has cured the overissue [Com. Code § 8210(a)].

[3] Shareholder and Shareholders' Agreement

"Shareholder" means a holder of record of shares [Corp. Code § 185]. "Shareholders' agreement" means a written agreement among all of the shareholders of a close corporation, or, if a close corporation has only one shareholder, between the shareholder and the corporation, as authorized by Corp. Code § 300(b) [Corp. Code § 186].

Chapter 162 CORPORATIONS: ISSUANCE OF SHARES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-162 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 162.11

§ 162.11 Issuance of Shares

[1] Authorization

A corporation has broad powers to issue and otherwise deal with its shares [see Corp. Code § 207(d) (enumerating powers)]. These powers, however, may be limited by provisions of the General Corporation Law [see, e.g., Corp. Code § 500 et seq. (provisions governing distributions, which apply to redemptions of shares)] or by provisions in the articles. Subject to those limitations, a corporation may issue one or more classes or series of shares, or both, with full, limited, or no voting rights, and with any other rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions that are stated or authorized in the articles [Corp. Code § 400(a)]. However, no denial or limitation of voting rights will be effective unless at the time one or more classes of outstanding shares or debt securities, singly or in the aggregate, are entitled to full voting rights. No denial or limitation of dividend or liquidation rights will be effective unless at the time one or more classes of outstanding shares, singly or in the aggregate, are entitled to unlimited dividends and liquidation rights [Corp. Code § 400(a)].

If the articles authorize more than one class of shares, or if any class is to have two or more series, the articles may also give the board of directors the power to establish the number of shares in any series, to designate any series, and to determine or alter the rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions granted to or imposed on any wholly unissued class of shares or any wholly unissued series of any class [Corp. Code § 202(e)(3)]. The procedure that the board of directors must follow to make the determinations is spelled out in Corp. Code § 401.

[2] Uncertificated Shares

Because the effective use of certificates is severely limited when trading in the shares of a corporation produces a high volume of transactions, the Corporations Code authorizes corporations to adopt a system of electronic or other means of issuance, recordation, and transfer of shares. When a book entry system is either approved by the Securities and Exchange Commission, authorized by a federal statute, or in accordance with applicable provisions of Division 8 of the Commercial Code [see generally Com. Code § 8101 et seq.], the corporation may forgo the use of certificates [Corp. Code § 416(b)].

If a book entry system is used, it must include a method for transmitting notice to purchasers as a substitute for the notices that would be required to appear on share certificates [see generally Corp. Code §§ 417, 418, 1302]. This requirement is met by the use of an initial transaction statement and subsequent written statements [see § 162.10[2][e]]. The system must not become effective as to issued and outstanding certificated shares until the certificates have been surrendered to the corporation [Corp. Code § 416(b)].

[3] Unauthorized Issuance and Overissue

Since the power of a corporation to issue shares is governed by the articles [Corp. Code § 207(d)], it may not issue more than the number of shares authorized in the articles for each class [see Corp. Code § 202(d),(e)] or more than the total number of shares authorized in the articles or fixed by the board of directors for each series [Corp. Code § 202(e)(1)]. To the extent that directors approving an overissue of shares performed their duties in accordance with the prescribed standard of care [see Corp. Code § 309], those directors would not be personally liable for an overissue.

None of the provisions of Division 8 of the Commercial Code that validate shares or compel the issue or reissue of shares apply to the extent that the validation, issue, or reissue would result in an overissue [Com. Code § 8210(b)]. However, if identical shares that do not also constitute an overissue are reasonably available for purchase, the person entitled to issue or validation may compel the corporation to purchase and deliver those shares, if the shares are certificated, or register the transfer, if the shares are uncertificated, against surrender of any share certificate that the person holds [Com. Code § 8210(c)]. In the alternative, if shares are not available for purchase, the person entitled to issue or validation may recover from the corporation the price that he or she or the last purchaser for value paid, with interest from the date of demand [Com. Code § 8210(d)].

[4] Implied Terms

[a] Certificated Shares

Even against a purchaser for value [Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(29), (30), 1204 8102(c)] and without notice, the terms of certificated shares include terms stated on the certificate and terms made part of the certificate by reference on the certificate to another instrument, indenture, or document or to a constitution, statute, ordinance, rule, regulation, order, or the like, to the extent the terms referred to do not conflict with terms stated on the certificate [Com. Code § 8202(a)].

A reference to Com. Code § 8202(a) does not of itself charge a purchaser for value with notice of a defect going to the validity of the shares, even if the certificate expressly states that a person accepting it admits notice [Com. Code § 8202(a)].

[b] Uncertificated Shares

The terms of uncertificated shares include those stated in any instrument, indenture, or document pursuant to which the shares are issued [Com. Code § 8202(a)].

[5] Preincorporation Subscriptions

[a] In General

Every subscriber to shares and every person to whom shares are originally issued is liable to the corporation for the full consideration agreed to be paid for the shares [Corp. Code § 410(a)]. This liability is distinct from the liability of a shareholder of partly paid shares [see Corp. Code §§ 409(d), 410(b); see also § 162.12[4]] because, although both the subscriber and the holder of partly paid shares are liable for the full price, the latter's liability also runs in favor of creditors [Corp. Code § 414] and is based on an agreement with a corporation already in existence, the articles of which authorize the issuance of partly paid shares [Corp. Code § 409(d)]. Subscriptions for shares executed between the organizers and the prospective shareholders before the formation of a corporation, known as preincorporation subscription agreements, do not involve the issuance of shares (except insofar as they may create enforceable contract rights leading to the issuance of shares). The subscriber's contractual obligation is to purchase shares "when, as, and if issued" or "when distributed" or the like.

A subscription agreement may empower the subscriber to cancel the contract in the event of a material change in the character of the shares contemplated by the contract or in the plan or arrangement pursuant to which the shares are to be issued or distributed [see Com. Code § 8202(e)].

[b] Enforceability

A preincorporation subscription is a contract with reference to a corporation to be formed. When formed, the corporation must be the one contemplated by the preincorporation subscription agreement [Marysville Elec. Light & Power Co. v. Johnson (1895) 109 Cal. 192, 194-196, 41 P. 1016 ; Harlie R. Norris Co., Ltd. v. Lovett (1932) 123 Cal. App. 640, 645, 12 P.2d 141] .

In an early case holding the subscriber bound to take and pay for the shares subscribed to, the California Supreme Court stated that the subscriber became irrevocably obligated "[u]pon the formation of the plaintiff corporation ... and plaintiff's acceptance of the agreement" [Marysville Elec. Light & Power Co. v. Johnson (1892) 93 Cal. 538, 546-547, 29 P. 126] . In a later case in which the revocability of a preincorporation subscription agreement was raised in connection with the alleged negligence of an attorney in representing his corporate client, the court stated that "in California, the subscription becomes binding upon the subscriber and the corporation when the corporation is formed, in the absence of special circumstances or an agreement to the contrary" [Moser v. Western Harness Racing Assn. (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 1, 9, 200 P.2d 7] . However, a board of directors' resolution to apply to the Corporations Commissioner for a permit to issue shares pursuant to the subscription agreement was also viewed as an acceptance of the offer of the subscriber [Moser v. Western Harness Racing Assn. (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 1, 10, 200 P.2d 7] .

For a form of complaint to recover the unpaid portion of a share subscription amount, see § 162.41.

[c] Noncompliance With Securities Law as Defense

In connection with any litigation involving preincorporation subscription agreements, the fact that those agreements are "securities" as that term is defined in the Corporate Securities Law [Corp. Code § 25019] should be kept in mind. Since there is no exemption from qualification for subscription agreements as securities, they can only be offered and accepted pursuant to the transactional exemption permitting nonpublic offerings of agreements for the sale of securities. The Corporate Securities Law exempts from qualification a nonpublic offer [see Corp. Code § 25017(b)] (but not a sale [see Corp. Code § 25017(a)]) and the execution and delivery of any agreement for the sale of securities pursuant to the offer, if both of the following conditions are satisfied [Corp. Code § 25102(a)]:

- The agreement contains substantially the following provision: "The sale of the securities which are the subject of this agreement has not been qualified with the Commissioner of Corporations of the State of California and the issuance of such securities or the payment or receipt of any part of the consideration therefor prior to such qualification is unlawful. The rights of all parties to this agreement are expressly conditioned upon such qualification being obtained."

- No part of the purchase price is paid or received and no shares are issued until their sale is qualified under the Corporate Securities Law.

If the conditions of this exemption were not satisfied, the offer of shares through the preincorporation subscription would be unlawful unless the underlying shares were qualified for sale or not subject to qualification under the Corporate Securities Laws [Corp. Code § 25110; see Corp. Code §§ 25100, 25100.1, 25101, 25101.1, 25102.1, 25104

(exempt securities and securities not subject to qualification); 10 Cal. Code Reg § 260.105 et seq.]. Further, an offer or sale of shares is an unqualified offer or sale if it varies or differs from, exceeds the scope of, or fails to conform with, a material term or material condition of qualification of the offering as set forth in the permit or qualification order or a material representation as to the manner of offering that is set forth in the application for qualification [Corp. Code § 25110].

Thus, in addition to whatever defenses generally might exist in favor of a subscriber as a matter of contract law [see Ch. 140, Contracts], failure of the persons offering the preincorporation subscription to either qualify the offer (which would amount to qualifying the underlying shares) or satisfy the conditions of Corp. Code § 25102(a) for exemption from qualification would make the subscription agreement contrary to law [see Corp. Code § 25110] and unenforceable [Civ. Code § 1667].

For a form for an affirmative defense based on noncompliance with the Corporate Securities Law, see § 162.42. For further discussion and additional forms relating to liabilities of issuers and others under the Corporate Securities Law, see Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation . For discussion and forms concerning preincorporation contracts with promoters, see Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity .

[6] Preemptive Right

The common-law preemptive right accorded to shareholders, to purchase shares of the corporation before they are offered to the public, has been abolished by statute in California. Unless the articles of incorporation provide otherwise, the board of directors may issue shares, options, or securities having conversion or option rights without first offering them to shareholders of any class [Corp. Code § 406].

Shareholders have the right, sometimes called a quasi-preemptive right, to demand that directors and officers not use their positions for their own personal advantage, or to discriminate between shareholders, or to cause shares to be issued in order to make a profit for themselves or to obtain or retain control of the corporation [Schwab v. Schwab-Wilson Mach. Corp. (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 1, 3, 55 P.2d 1268 ; see Sheppard v. Wilcox (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 53, 60, 26 Cal. Rptr. 412 (issuance of majority of common shares to preferred shareholders during their exercise of corporate control pursuant to voting switch constituted violation of fiduciary duty of board)]. For a form for a complaint based on a shareholder's quasi-preemptive right, see § 162.43.

The statutory abolition of the preemptive right does not relieve directors of the obligation of good faith, nor does it permit them to issue shares to favored individuals at a low price [Shaw v. Empire Sav. & Loan Asso., (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 401, 404-406, 9 Cal. Rptr. 204] . However, that obligation runs in favor of the corporation rather than the individual shareholders, and unless the action of the directors was intended to oust a shareholder from control, an allegation that shares had been issued for insufficient consideration would be proper only in a derivative action on behalf of the corporation [Shaw v. Empire Sav. & Loan Asso., (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 401, 409, 9 Cal. Rptr. 204] . For a form for a complaint asserting a derivative action in this context, see § 162.44.

Chapter 162 CORPORATIONS: ISSUANCE OF SHARES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-162 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 162.12

§ 162.12 Consideration for Shares

[1] Permissible Consideration

Shares may be issued for such consideration as is determined from time to time by the board, or by the shareholders if the articles so provide, consisting of any or all of the following [Corp. Code § 409(a)(1)]:

- Money paid.
- Labor done.
- Services actually rendered to the corporation or for its benefit or in its formation or reorganization.
- Debts or securities canceled.
- Tangible or intangible property actually received either by the corporation or by a wholly owned subsidiary.

Neither promissory notes of the purchaser, unless adequately secured by collateral other than the shares acquired or unless permitted by Corp. Code § 408 (stock purchase plan), nor future services may constitute payment or part payment for shares [Corp. Code § 409(a)].

Alternatively, shares may be issued as a share dividend or on a stock split, reverse stock split, reclassification of outstanding shares into shares of another class, conversion of outstanding shares into shares of another class, exchange of outstanding shares for shares of another class, or other change affecting outstanding shares [Corp. Code § 409(a)(2)].

[2] Fixing Consideration

[a] Duties of Directors

In the absence of fraud in the transaction, the judgment of the directors as to the value of the consideration for shares is conclusive [Corp. Code § 409(b)]. If the consideration for shares is not money, then the board of directors must state by resolution its determination of the fair value to the corporation of the consideration, but this requirement does not affect the accounting treatment of any transaction, which must be in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles [Corp. Code § 409(e)]. For discussion of how a court may be expected to deal with the reference to generally accepted accounting principles, see Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports, § 165.25[2]. If the articles of incorporation reserve to the shareholders the right to determine the consideration for any shares, the determination must be made by approval of the outstanding shares [Corp. Code § 409(c); see Corp. Code § 152 (approval of outstanding shares)].

[b] Liability of Directors

Since the directors have a fiduciary obligation to the corporation and the shareholders in connection with the issuance of shares [see Shaw v. Empire Sav. & Loan Asso., (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 401, 406, 9 Cal. Rptr. 204 ; see also § 162.12[2][b]] and since, in the presence of fraud, their determination as to the value of consideration for shares will not be conclusive [see Corp. Code § 409(b)], the directors may incur liability to the corporation for the fraudulent overvaluation of consideration [James v. Steifer Mining Co. (1918) 35 Cal. App. 778, 783-786, 171 P. 117 (complaint alleging that shares were issued for no consideration or for overvalued property was good against general demurrer)]. The directors' violation of their fiduciary duty to the corporation may also take the form of an undervaluation of shares sold to a principal shareholder [Shaw v. Empire Sav. & Loan Asso., (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 401, 405-406, 9 Cal. Rptr. 204] . In either case, the cause of action is derivative in nature and must be prosecuted on behalf of the corporation [Shaw v. Empire Sav. & Loan Asso., (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 401, 406-409, 9 Cal. Rptr. 204 ; James v. Steifer Mining Co. (1918) 35 Cal. App. 778, 783, 171 P. 117] , unless the injury is personal to an individual shareholder and he or she seeks to prevent the issuance of shares from being used to obtain or retain control at the expense of the other shareholders [Shaw v. Empire Sav. & Loan Asso., (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 401, 409, 9 Cal. Rptr. 204] . For a form of complaint in a derivative action against directors in this context, see § 162.44.

[3] Liability of Shareholders for Overvalued Consideration

Except in the case of the issuance of shares that are expressly issued as partly paid shares [see Corp. Code § 409(d); see generally [4], below], shares issued for any legal consideration [see Corp. Code § 409(a); see also [1], above] in a transaction not tainted by fraud must be declared and taken to be fully paid shares and not liable to any further call. The holder will not be liable for any further payments under the provisions of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 409(b)].

The judgment of the board of directors is conclusive as to the value of consideration for shares, unless there is fraud in the making of that judgment [Corp. Code § 409(b)]. A shareholder who, as a promoter of the corporation, misleads other promoters as to the value of his or her contribution to the corporation, will be liable to the corporation and to the other promoters [Topanga Corp. v. Gentile (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 681, 688-689,58 Cal. Rptr. 713] . The corporation may either recover damages [Victor Oil Co. v. Drum (1920) 184 Cal. 226, 238, 193 P. 243] , or set aside the transaction and reclaim the shares issued to the misrepresenting shareholder [Topanga Corp. v. Gentile (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 681, 688, 58 Cal. Rptr. 713] . In addition, because the shareholder's liability is based on fraud, the corporation may recover punitive damages [Civ. Code § 3294] even when seeking cancellation of the shares instead of damages [Topanga Corp. v. Gentile (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 681, 691, 58 Cal. Rptr. 713] .

For a form of complaint by the corporation against a shareholder based on the shareholder's fraud leading to overvaluation of the consideration for shares, see § 162.40.

[4] Partly Paid Shares

[a] How Created

A corporation may issue shares as partly paid and subject to call for the remainder of the consideration to be paid for the shares. The total amount of the consideration to be paid and the amount already paid must be conspicuously stated on the certificate issued to represent partly paid shares or on the initial transaction statement for uncertificated shares. When any dividend is declared on fully paid shares, the corporation must also declare a proportional dividend on partly paid shares of the same class, on the basis of the percentage of the consideration actually paid [Corp. Code § 409(d)].

[b] Liability of Original Purchaser to Corporation

Every subscriber to shares, and every person to whom shares are originally issued, is liable to the corporation for the full consideration agreed to be paid for the shares [Corp. Code § 410(a)]. The full agreed consideration for shares must be paid before or concurrently with the issuance of the shares, unless the shares are issued as partly paid, in which case the consideration must be paid in accordance with the agreement of subscription or purchase [Corp. Code § 410(b)]. The corporation may recover unpaid balances on partly paid shares only by an action against the shareholder [see Corp. Code § 423(a),(n)].

[c] Liability of Transferee Without Knowledge

A transferee of shares for which the full agreed consideration has not been paid to the corporation, who acquired them in good faith, without knowledge that the consideration was not paid in full or to the extent stated on the certificate representing the shares or on the initial transaction statement, is liable only for the amount shown by the certificate or statement to be unpaid on the shares, until the transferee transfers the shares to one who becomes liable for payment of the amount owed. However, the transferor will remain personally liable if the certificate or statement so provides, or the personal liability is agreed on in writing. The liability of any holder of the shares who derives title through such a transferee and who is not a party to any fraud affecting the issuance of the shares is the same as that of the transferee through whom title is derived [Corp. Code § 411].

[d] Liability of Transferee With Knowledge

Every transferee of partly paid shares who acquired them under a certificate showing the fact of part payment, and every transferee of such shares who acquired them with actual knowledge that the full agreed consideration had not been paid to the extent stated on the certificate, other than a transferee who derives title through a holder in good faith without knowledge and who is not a party to any fraud affecting the issuance of the shares, is personally liable to the corporation for installments of the amount unpaid becoming due, until the shares are transferred to one who becomes liable for the unpaid amount. The transferor remains personally liable if the certificate so provides or personal liability is agreed on in writing [Corp. Code § 412].

[e] Liability of Representatives and Fiduciaries

A person holding shares as pledgee, executor, administrator, guardian, conservator, trustee, or receiver, or in any other representative or fiduciary capacity, is not personally liable for any unpaid balance of the subscription price of the shares because the shares are so held, but the estate and funds in the hands of the fiduciary or representative are liable, and the shares are subject to sale for recovery of the unpaid balance [Corp. Code § 413].

[f] Actions by Corporation's Creditors

No action may be brought by or on behalf of any creditor of the corporation, to reach and apply the liability of a shareholder to pay the amount due on shares, unless final judgment has been rendered in favor of the creditor against the corporation and execution has been returned unsatisfied in whole or in part, or unless proceeding against the corporation would be useless [Corp. Code § 414(a)]. All creditors of the corporation, with or without reducing their claims to judgment, may intervene in any such creditor's action to reach and apply unpaid subscription money, and any or all shareholders who hold partly paid shares may be joined in the action. Several judgments may be rendered for and against the parties to the action or in favor of a receiver for the benefit of the respective parties [Corp. Code § 414(b)]. All amounts paid by any shareholder in any action brought by creditors must be credited on the unpaid balance due to the corporation on the shareholder's shares [Corp. Code § 414(c)].

The creditor's action is like an equitable garnishment to enforce the corporation's debt to the creditor, and the creditor would stand in the shoes of the corporation [see Spencer v. Anderson (1924) 193 Cal. 1, 5, 222 P. 355] . Since the shareholder's obligation is based on a contract with the corporation, the shareholder may assert any contract defenses against the corporation in the suit brought by the creditor [Spencer v. Anderson (1924) 193 Cal. 1, 8-9, 222 P. 355] . The three-year limitation period [Code Civ. Proc. § 338] begins to run at the time the individual installments become due under the contract with the corporation [Spencer v. Anderson (1924) 193 Cal. 1, 9-10, 222 P. 355] .

Chapter 162 CORPORATIONS: ISSUANCE OF SHARES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-162 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 162.13

§ 162.13 Share Certificates and Initial Transaction Statements

[1] Contents of Certificate or Statement

[a] Classified and Serial Shares

If the shares of the corporation are classified or any class of shares has two or more series, the certificate or on the initial transaction statement and written statements must bear one of the following [Corp. Code § 417]:

- A statement of the rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions granted to or imposed on each class or series of shares authorized to be issued, and on the holders.

- A statement setting forth the office or agency of the corporation from which shareholders may obtain, on request and without charge, a copy of the statement referred to in the above.

- A summary of the rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions with reference to the provisions of the articles and any certificate of determination establishing them.

"On the certificate" means that a statement appears on the face of a share certificate or on the reverse of the certificate with a reference to it on the face or, in the case of uncertificated shares, that the applicable provisions of Com. Code §§ 8202(a) and 8204 have been complied with [Corp. Code § 174]. For discussion of those code sections, see § 162.11[4] and [c], below.

[b] Additional Statements When Applicable

Unless the rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions of the shares are stated or summarized on certificates or statements [see generally Corp. Code § 417(a), (b); see also [a], above], a certificate or an initial transaction statement and other written statements must bear the following, when applicable [Corp. Code § 418(a)]:

- A conspicuous statement, if it is the case, that the shares are subject to restrictions on transfer [see Ch. 163, Corporations: Transfers of Shares, § 163.12[2][c]].

- A statement, if it is the case, that the shares are subject to a voting agreement [see Corp. Code § 706(a)] or an irrevocable proxy [see Corp. Code § 705(e)] or restrictions on voting rights contractually imposed by the corporation.

- A statement, if it is the case, that the shares are redeemable or that the shares are convertible, specifying the period for conversion.

- If the shares are assessable, a conspicuous statement that they are assessable; and if the shares are not fully paid, the statements required by Corp. Code § 409(d) [see § 162.12[4][a]].

[c] Effect of Failure to Include Statements

A restriction on transfer imposed by the corporation, even if otherwise lawful, is ineffective against a person without knowledge of the restriction unless the restriction is noted conspicuously on the share certificate or, if the shares are uncertificated, the registered owner has been notified of the restriction [Com. Code § 8204; Corp. Code § 418(b); see Corp. Code § 174 ("on the certificate" defined); see also § 162.13[1][a]]. For further discussion of restrictions on transfer, see Ch. 163, Corporations: Transfers of Shares .

Unless the prescribed statements appear on the certificate or the initial transaction statement and other written statements [see Corp. Code § 418(a); see also § 162.13[1][b]], no right of redemption, voting agreement, irrevocable proxy, or voting restriction imposed by the corporation will be enforceable against a transferee of the shares without actual knowledge of the right, agreement, proxy, or restriction, and no liability for assessment or for the unpaid portion of the subscription price will be enforceable against a transferee. In this context, "transferee" includes a purchaser from the corporation [Corp. Code § 418(b)].

[d] Close Corporation Share Certificates

All certificates representing shares of a close corporation [see Corp. Code § 158] must contain, in addition to any other required statements, the following conspicuous legend on the face of the certificate [Corp. Code § 418(c)]:

> "This corporation is a close corporation. The number of holders of record of its shares of all classes cannot exceed _____ [number not more than 35]. Any attempted voluntary inter vivos transfer which would violate this requirement is void. Refer to the articles, bylaws, and any agreements on file with the secretary of the corporation for further restrictions."

Any attempted voluntary inter vivos transfer of the shares of a close corporation that would result in the number of holders of record exceeding the maximum number specified in the articles is void if the certificate contains the legend [Corp. Code § 418(d)]. By accepting legended shares of a close corporation, each shareholder agrees and consents that he or she will not make any transfer of the shares that would result in an excessive number of shareholders. Each shareholder also waives any right that he or she might have under any other law to sell the shares to a greater number of purchasers or to demand any registration of the shares under the Securities Act of 1933 [see generally 15 U.S.C. § 77a et seq.], for as long as the corporation is a close corporation [Corp. Code § 421].

No operating agreement by the shareholders of a close corporation [see generally Corp. Code § 300(b)] may alter or waive the provisions of Corp. Code § 417 [see § 162.13[a]] and Corp. Code § 418 [see § 162.13[b], [c]] regarding the contents of share certificates [Corp. Code § 300(c)].

[e] Corporation's Lien on Certificated Shares

A lien on certificated shares in favor of the corporation is valid against a purchaser [see generally Com. Code §§

1201(b)(29), (30), 8102(c)] only if the right of the corporation to the lien is noted conspicuously [see generally Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(10), 8102(c)] on the share certificate [Com. Code § 8209].

[2] Shareholder's Entitlement to Certificate

Except when the corporation issues uncertificated shares, a holder of shares is entitled to have a duly signed certificate stating the number of shares and the class or series of shares that the holder owns [Corp. Code § 416(a)]. An action for specific performance is appropriate to enforce this right [Wait v. Kern River Mining, Etc., Co. (1909) 157 Cal. 16, 24, 106 P. 98] , provided the shareholder first demanded the certificate [Lowe v. Copeland (1932) 125 Cal. App. 315, 325, 13 P.2d 522] .

[3] Lost, Destroyed, or Stolen Certificate

[a] When Owner Entitled to New Certificate

If an owner of certificated shares, whether in registered form [Com. Code § 8102(a)(13)] or bearer form [Com. Code § 8102(a)(2)], claims that the certificate has been lost, destroyed, or wrongfully taken, the corporation must issue a new certificate if the owner does all of the following [Com. Code § 8405(a)]:

- Requests a new certificate before the corporation has notice that the missing certificate has been acquired by a protected purchaser [Com. Code § 8303].

- Files with the corporation a bond or other adequate security sufficient to indemnify the corporation against any claim that may be made against it (including any expense or liability) on account of the alleged loss, theft, or destruction of the certificate or the issuance of a new certificate [Corp. Code § 419(a)].

- Satisfies other reasonable requirements imposed by the corporation.

If, after the issue of a replacement certificate, a protected purchaser [Com. Code § 8303] of the original certificate presents it for registration of transfer, the corporation must register the transfer unless an overissue [Com. Code § 8210(a)] would result. In that case, the corporation's liability is governed by Com. Code § 8210. In addition to any rights on the indemnity bond, an corporation may recover the replacement certificate from a person to whom it was issued or any person taking under that person, except a protected purchaser [Com. Code § 8405(b)].

[b] When Owner Precluded From Asserting Claim

If a share certificate has been lost, apparently destroyed, or wrongfully taken, and (1) the owner fails to notify the corporation of that fact within a reasonable time after the owner has notice of it, and (2) the corporation registers a transfer of the shares before receiving notification, the owner may not assert against the corporation a claim for replacement of the certificate [Com. Code § 8406].

Both of the above conditions must be satisfied. Thus, the owner is not precluded even if he or she fails to notify the corporation of the loss, destruction, or theft of the certificate within a reasonable time, provided that when the corporation does receive notice, it has not registered a transfer of the shares [Ibanez v. Farmers Underwriters Asso. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 390, 398, 121 Cal. Rptr. 256, 534 P.2d 1336] . If the corporation has registered the transfer prior to receiving the notice that the certificate is lost, destroyed, or stolen, then the issue becomes whether the delay between the owner's acquiring actual or constructive notice of the loss and notifying the corporation of that fact is reasonable, which is a question for the trier of fact [Ibanez v. Farmers Underwriters Asso. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 390, 397-398, 121 Cal. Rptr. 256, 534 P.2d 1336] .

[c] Action to Obtain Replacement Certificate

If the corporation refuses to issue a new certificate, the owner may bring an action in the superior court of the proper county [see Corp. Code § 177 (definition of proper county)] for an order requiring the corporation to issue a new certificate [Corp. Code § 419(b)]. For a form for a complaint that may be used in an action seeking such an order, see § 162.45.

If the court is satisfied that the plaintiff is the lawful owner of the shares described in the complaint and that the certificate has been lost, destroyed,or stolen, and no sufficient cause has been shown why a new certificate should not be issued, it must issue an order requiring the corporation to issue and deliver a new certificate to the plaintiff [Corp. Code § 419(c)]. In its order the court must direct that prior to the issuance and delivery to the plaintiff of the new certificate, the plaintiff give the corporation a bond or other adequate security sufficient to indemnify the corporation against any claim that may be made against it (including any expense or liability) on account of the alleged loss, theft, or destruction of the certificate or the issuance of a new certificate [Corp. Code § 419(c)].

A person acting as authenticating trustee, transfer agent, registrar, or other agent for the corporation in the issuance of new certificates has the same obligation to the holder or owner of the shares with regard to the particular functions performed as the corporation has in regard to those functions [Com. Code § 8407].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-162 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 162.14

§ 162.14 Corporation's Right to Cancel and Reissue Shares

[1] Certificated Shares

When the articles are amended in any way affecting statements contained in share certificates, or it becomes desirable for any reason, in the discretion of the board, to cancel any share certificate and issue a new certificate conforming to the rights of the holder, the board may order any holders to surrender and exchange their certificates for new certificates within a reasonable time to be fixed by the board [Corp. Code § 422(a)].

The surrender order may provide that a holder is not entitled to vote or to receive dividends or exercise any of the other rights of shareholders until the holder has complied with the order; but the order operates to suspend the shareholder's rights only after notice and until compliance. The shareholder's duty of surrender may be enforced by civil action [Corp. Code § 422(b)].

[2] Uncertificated Shares

When the articles are amended in any way affecting the initial transaction statement or other written statements for uncertificated shares, or it becomes desirable for any reason, in the discretion of the board, to amend, revise, or supersede outstanding initial transaction statements or other written statements, the board may order the issuance and delivery to holders of record of amended, revised, or superseding initial transaction statements or other written statements [Corp. Code § 422(c)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-162 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 162.15

§ 162.15 Corporation's Denial of Validity of Issued Shares

[1] Validity of Certificated Shares

[a] Validity of Signatures on Certificate

Any share certificate, or any assignment or endorsement of a certificate executed or entered into by the corporation and any other person, is not invalidated as to the corporation by any lack of authority of the signing officers if the other party to the instrument has no actual knowledge of the lack of authority [Corp. Code § 313; see Snukal v. Flightways Manufacturing, Inc. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 754, 786-787, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 3 P.3d 286 (interpreting Corp. Code § 313 in context of lease agreement to hold that signature of one person alone is sufficient to bind corporation, as long as individual holds corporate offices in both "operational group" and "financial group" described in that statute)].

In an action on certificated shares, against the corporation, each signature on a share certificate or in a necessary endorsement [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(11)] is admitted unless specifically denied in the pleadings [Com. Code § 8114(a)]. If the effectiveness of a signature is put in issue, the burden of establishing effectiveness is on the party claiming under the signature, but the signature is presumed to be genuine or authorized [Com. Code § 8114(b)].

If signatures on a share certificate are admitted or established, production of the certificate entitles a holder to recover on it unless the defendant establishes a defense or a defect going to the validity of the shares [Com. Code § 8114(c)]. If it is shown that a defense or defect exists, the plaintiff has the burden of establishing that the plaintiff or some person under whom the plaintiff claims is a person against whom the defense or defect cannot be asserted [Com. Code § 8114(d)].

[b] Defect in Shares

Shares that are issued with a defect going to validity are valid in the hands of a purchaser for value [see Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(29), (30), 1204, 8102(c)] and without notice of the particular defect unless the defect involves a violation of a constitutional provision. In that case, the shares are valid in the hands of a purchaser for value and without notice of the defect, other than one who takes by original issue [Com. Code § 8202(b)(1)].

After an act or event, other than a call that has been revoked, setting a date on or after which shares are to be presented or surrendered for redemption or exchange, a purchaser is charged with notice of any defect in the issue or any defense of the corporation, if the act or event either [Com. Code § 8203]:

- Requires the payment of money, delivery [see generally Com. Code § 8301(a)] of certificated securities, or registration of transfer ofuncertificated securities, on presentation or surrender of any share certificate, and the money is available or securities are available on the date set for payment or exchange, and the purchaser takes the shares more than one year after that date; or

- Is not covered by the preceding item, and the purchaser takes the shares more than two years after the date set for surrender or presentation.

[c] Lack of Genuineness

Generally, lack of genuineness of certificated shares is a complete defense, even against a purchaser for value [see generally Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(29), (30), 1204, 8102(c)] and without notice [Com. Code § 8202(c)].

An unauthorized signature placed on a share certificate before or in the course of issuance is ineffective, but (and notwithstanding the first paragraph, above) the signature is effective in favor of a purchaser for value if the purchaser is without notice of the lack of authority and the signing has been done by one of the following [Com. Code § 8205]:

- An authenticating trustee, registrar, transfer agent, or other person entrusted by the corporation with the signing of the certificate or of similar certificates, or the immediate preparation of any of them for signing; or

- An employee of the corporation, or of any of the persons listed above, entrusted with responsible handling of the certificate.

[d] Other Defenses

All other defenses of the corporation as issuer, including nondelivery and conditional delivery [see generally Com. Code § 8301] of certificated shares, are ineffective against a purchaser for value [see generally Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(29), (30), 1204, 8102(c)] who has taken the certificated shares without notice of the particular defense [Com. Code § 8202(d)].

[e] Incomplete Certificate

If a share certificate contains the signatures necessary to its issuance or transfer, but is incomplete in any other respect, any person may complete it by filling in the blanks as authorized. Even if the blanks are incorrectly filled in, the certificate as completed is enforceable by a purchaser who took it for value [see generally Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(29), (30), 1204, 8102(c)] and without notice of the incorrectness [Com. Code § 8206(a)].

[f] Altered Certificate

A complete share certificate that has been improperly altered, even if fraudulently, remains enforceable, but only according to its original terms [Com. Code § 8206(b)].

[g] Warranties by Signers

A person signing a share certificate as authenticating trustee, registrar, transfer agent, or the like, warrants all of the following to a purchaser for value [see generally Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(29), (30), 1204, 8102(c)] of the certificated shares, if the purchaser is without notice of a particular defect [Com. Code § 8208(a)]:

- The certificate is genuine.

- The signer's own participation in the issuance of the shares is within the signer's capacity and within the scope of the authority received by the signer from the corporation.

- The signer has reasonable grounds to believe that the certificate is in the form, and the number of shares is within the limit, that the corporation is authorized to issue.

Unless otherwise agreed, the person signing the certificate does not assume responsibility for the validity of the shares in other respects [Com. Code § 8208(b)].

[2] Guarantor as Issuer

With respect to an obligation on or defense to shares, a guarantor is an issuer to the extent of the guaranty, whether or not the guarantor's obligation is noted on a share certificate [Com. Code § 8201(b)]. The guarantor is in the same position as the corporation, which is the actual issuer [see generally Com. Code § 8201(a) (issuer defined)], regarding the validity of shares [see § 162.15[1]].

[1] FORM Complaint for Reformation of Agreement [Civ. Code § 3399] and for Surrender and Cancellation of Share Certificates [Civ. Code § 3412; Corp. Code § 422] and Reissuance to Reflect Actual Contributions to Corporation--By Corporation Against Shareholder

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name], a Corporation,	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [names],	)	COMPLAINT FOR REFORMATION OF AGREE-Defendants.	)	MENT AND CANCELLATION OF SHARE CERTI-)	FICATES

Plaintiff alleges:

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION
(Reformation of Agreement)

1. Plaintiff is, and at all times mentioned in this pleading was, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of California.

2. _____ [Allege capacity and residence, e.g., Defendant is a resident of _____ County, California].

3. On or about _____ [date], defendant commenced discussion with _____ [names of copromoters] ("the promoters") concerning the advisability of forming a corporation to purchase certain real property known as _____ [name of property]. During the discussions, defendant represented that the property could be acquired for a purchase price of $_____ with a down payment of $_____ in cash and another parcel of real property, title to which defendant represented that he/she held. Defendant represented that the parcel would be accepted by the owners of _____ [name of property] at an agreed value of $_____.

4. Defendant further represented to the promoters that after defendant had acquired _____ [name of property], defendant would assist in forming a corporation to which the property would in turn be conveyed, in return for which, defendant and the promoters would be issued shares of the corporation's common stock in proportion the amounts agreed to be contributed by each of the promoters and defendant toward the total purchase price of _____ [name of property].

5. On _____ [date], defendant entered into an escrow agreement with the owners of _____ [name of property] to purchase the property for a total price of $_____ [actual price paid], payable as follows: $_____ [actual value allowed for defendant's property] in an exchange for the parcel, title to which defendant represented that he/she held; $_____ [cash contribution of copromoters]; and a promissory note secured by a deed of trust for $_____. A copy of the escrow agreement is attached as Exhibit A and made part of this pleading.

6. On _____ [date], the promoters, believing and relying on defendant's representation as alleged in Paragraphs 3 and 4, entered a written agreement with defendant embodying defendant's representations. A copy of the agreement is attached as Exhibit B and made part of this pleading.

7. On _____ [date], plaintiff was incorporated pursuant to the agreement alleged in Paragraph 6 and adopted that agreement. Pursuant to the agreement, the promoters paid to defendant $_____ as the cash down payment on _____ [name of property].

8. On _____ [date], the terms of the escrow agreement between defendant and the owners of _____ [name of property] were satisfied, escrow was closed, and title to the property was conveyed by deed to defendant. On _____ [date], defendant conveyed the property to plaintiff, and plaintiff in turn issued defendant certificate number _____ representing _____ [number] shares of plaintiff's common stock.

9. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff discovered the false and fraudulent representations made by defendant as to the actual purchase price of _____ [name of property] and as to the actual value of the property representing defendant's contribution to the purchase price of _____ [name of property], and plaintiff discovered that at the time of entering the agreement with the promoters alleged in Paragraph 6, defendant had no right or interest in the property.

10. Because of the fraud and deceit practiced by defendant on the promoters, and because defendant's acts and conduct are a breach of his/her fiduciary duty to the plaintiff, the agreement between defendant and the promoters, which was adopted by plaintiff, does not truly express the intention of the parties.

11. The acts of defendant were oppressive, fraudulent, and malicious in that defendant intentionally inflated the price of the property that he/she intended for the plaintiff to acquire from him/her and intentionally deceived the promoters and plaintiff as to the actual value of his/her contribution toward the purchase of _____ [name of property ], thereby receiving shares of plaintiff's stock to which defendant is not entitled. Plaintiff therefore seeks punitive and exemplary damages.

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION
(Surrender and Cancellation of Shares)

1. Plaintiff alleges and incorporates by reference each and every allegation in Paragraphs 1-9 of the First Cause of Action.

2. On _____ [date], after learning of defendant's fraud and deceit, plaintiff ordered all outstanding share certificates to be surrendered at its principal office. Notice of the order was received by defendant on _____ [date].

3. Defendant has not surrendered his/her share certificate in compliance with the order. Defendant's share certificate represents _____ [number] more shares than he/she is entitled to own, and defendant should now be required to surrender the certificate in order that the certificates representing all shares outstanding may be canceled and certificates may be reissued to reflect the agreement alleged in Paragraph 6 of the First Cause of Action, as reformed to state defendant's actual contribution of $_____ toward the purchase of _____ [name of property].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. That the agreement dated _____ [date] and attached as Exhibit B be reformed to show that the purchase price of _____ [name of property] is $_____ and that defendant's contribution to that price is $_____;

2. That defendant be ordered to surrender certificate number _____ to plaintiff for cancellation in exchange for the issuance of a new certificate for _____ [number] shares;

3. For exemplary and punitive damages;

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the _____ [specify title, e.g., President] of _____ [name], the plaintiff in this action, and I have been authorized to make this verification on its behalf. I have read the foregoing complaint and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters which are therein stated on information and belief, and, as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [typed name]

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in enforcing a shareholder's liability to the corporation for his or her misrepresentation of the value of the consideration that he or she paid for the shares [see § 162.12[3]]. The facts recited in the complaint are based on the classic promoter's secret-profit situation [see, e.g., Topanga Corp. v. Gentile (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 681, 58 Cal. Rptr. 713] , although a secret profit is usually in the form of cash instead of shares [see, e.g., Lomita Land & Water Co. v. Robinson (1908) 154 Cal. 36, 50-51, 97 P. 10] .

[3] Causes of Action

The first cause of action is for reformation of a preincorporation agreement to reflect the actual facts of the property transactions out of which liability is alleged to have arisen [see Civ. Code § 3399 (contract revised for fraud)].

The second cause of action is to force surrender of the defendant's share certificate for the purpose of canceling it and issuing another certificate for the number of shares that the defendant is entitled to receive pursuant to the reformed agreement [see Corp. Code § 422 (board of directors' discretion to order cancellation of certificates if desirable for any reason); see also Civ. Code § 3412 (written instrument may be ordered to be delivered up or canceled on application of person against whom it is void or voidable); for discussion, see § 162.14].

[4] Jurisdiction and Venue

An action seeking reformation of an agreement and cancellation of instruments is in the jurisdiction of the superior court and is not a limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(b)].

Ordinarily, the action may be commenced in any of the following counties [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]:

- The county where any defendant resides at the commencement of the action; or
- If a defendant contracted to perform the obligation, on which the action is founded, in a particular county, then either:
  - The county where the obligation is to be performed, or
  - The county where the contract in fact was entered into.

In special cases, other counties also may be proper [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 395(b) (action arising from consumer transaction), 395.1 (action against executor, administrator, guardian, or trustee), 395.2 (action against unincorporated association), 395.5 (action against corporation or association)].

[5] Verification

Verification of this complaint is not required, but verification of the complaint requires the defendant to file a verified answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 446] and precludes a general denial [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion of the effect that verifying a complaint has on the answer, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action to recover the subscription price of shares that the defendant agreed to purchase in a preincorporation subscription agreement [see Corp. Code § 410 (subscriber is liable to corporation for full subscription price); see also Civ. Code § 1717 (attorney's fees); Civ. Code § 3287 (interest); Code Civ. Proc. § 1021 (attorney's fees)]. For discussion, see § 162.11[5].

[3] Allegations

The complaint in [1], above, alleges the following facts constituting the cause of action:

- The parties made a subscription agreement for the consideration agreed to be paid (Paragraph 3).

- The plaintiff was incorporated as contemplated by the agreement, by the filing of the articles with the Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 200(c)] (Paragraph 4). When formed, the corporation must be the one contemplated in the subscription agreement [Marysville Elec. Light & Power Co. v. Johnson (1895) 109 Cal. 192, 194-195, 41 P. 1016] , and this fact must be alleged in the complaint to recover the subscription price [Harlie R. Norris Co., Ltd. v. Lovett (1932) 123 Cal. App. 640, 645, 12 P.2d 141] .

- The plaintiff's articles authorized the issuance of shares to the defendant, and the agreement was accepted by the board of directors [see Corp. Code § 202(d), (e) (shares authorized by articles); Marysville Elec. Light & Power Co. v. Johnson (1892) 93 Cal. 538, 546-547, 29 P. 126 (subscriber is obligated under agreement on corporation's organization and acceptance of agreement)] (Paragraph 5).

- On the date payment for the shares was due from the defendant, the plaintiff was ready and willing to deliver the shares to the defendant [see Coast Amusements, Inc. v. Stineman (1931) 115 Cal. App. 746, 752, 2 P.2d 447 (tender of certificate is unnecessary if plaintiff is ready and willing to deliver)] (Paragraph 6).

- The defendant refused to pay the price due for the shares (Paragraph 7).

[4] Jurisdiction and Venue

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const. art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)]. In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the first paper must state whether the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

For discussion of venue, see § 162.40[4].

[5] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

§ 162.42 Affirmative Defense to Action on Preincorporation Subscription Agreement--Illegal Contract [Civ. Code § 1667(1)]--Noncompliance With Corporate Securities Law [Corp. Code §§ 25102(a), 25110]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense to Action on Preincorporation Subscription Agreement--Illegal Contract [Civ. Code § 1667(1)]--Noncompliance With Corporate Securities Law [Corp. Code §§ 25102(a), 25110]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that the preincorporation subscription agreement alleged in the complaint is unenforceable. The shares offered for sale pursuant to the agreement have not been qualified pursuant to the Corporate Securities Law. The offer and sale are subject to qualification, and no exemption from qualification is provided, under the Corporate Securities law. Therefore, the agreement violates Corp. Code § 25110, which declares unlawful the offer or sale in California of any shares in an issuer transaction unless the sale has been qualified, is not subject to qualification, or is exempt from qualification.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is an affirmative defense to an action on a preincorporation subscription contract. It is based on the contract's illegality [Civ. Code § 1667(1)] resulting from failure to meet the requirements of the Corporate Securities Law [see generally Corp. Code § 25102(a); for discussion, see § 162.11[5][c]]. The form may be used if the preincorporation subscription is an unlawful contract in either of these cases:

- The agreement would have been exempt from qualification but one or more of the conditions for the exemption have not been satisfied.

- The offer and sale were subject to qualification, no exemption from qualification was available, and the shares to which the agreement refers were not qualified.

On the other hand, if the offer through the subscription agreement was exempt from qualification, but the sale of the shares was not qualified at the time of the action on the subscription, the defendant's response could be either a simple denial that the plaintiff was ready, willing, and able to perform its obligation to deliver shares or an affirmative defense alleging noncompliance with the Corporate Securities Law, depending on the allegations of the complaint.

For discussion and forms of answers generally, see Ch. 26, Answers .

On _____ [date] the director defendants obtained a permit from the California Commissioner of Corporations for the corporation to issue _____ [number] shares of common stock ("the additional shares"), and on that date the director defendants caused the corporation to issue the additional shares to themselves for the sole purpose of converting their status from minority shareholders to majority shareholders and obtaining control of the corporation.

6. As a result of the acts of the director defendants and the corporation, plaintiff has been _____ [specify, e.g., deprived of the power to elect a majority of the board of directors or ousted from equal control of corporate affairs in contravention of the understanding between plaintiff and the director defendants that none of them would own shares of stock sufficient to exercise voting control of the corporation].

7. Plaintiff is, and at all times mentioned in this pleading was, ready, willing, and able to purchase and pay for _____ [number] of the additional shares, in proportion to plaintiff's shares in the corporation before the issuance of the additional shares to the director defendants.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants as follows:

1. Declaring that the director defendants hold _____ [number] of the additional shares in trust for plaintiff;

2. Compelling _____ [the director defendants to endorse and deliver certificates for or the corporation to register a transfer, from the director defendants, of] that number of the additional shares to plaintiff, so as to restore plaintiff to his/her proportional voting interest that existed before the additional shares were issued to the director defendants;

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the plaintiff in this action. I have read the foregoing complaint and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters which are therein stated on information and belief, and as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use by a shareholder seeking to enforce a quasi-preemptive right to purchase shares after the board of directors caused the corporation to issue shares to certain shareholders (in this case the directors themselves) for the sole purpose of converting their interests into majority interests, against the plaintiff's interest. For discussion, see § 162.11[6]. This form of complaint normally will be used when the corporation is closely held.

[3] Jurisdiction and Venue

An action seeking imposition of a constructive trust and an order to effect equitable relief is in the jurisdiction of the superior court and is not a limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(b); see Cal. Const. art. VI, § 10 (original jurisdiction of superior court)].

In addition to the venue alternatives for actions against individual defendants [see § 162.40[4]], when a corporation is a defendant, the action may be filed in the county where the obligation or liability arose or the county in which the corporation's principal place of business is situated [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5].

[4] Verification

Verification of this complaint is not required, but verification of the complaint requires the defendant to file a verified answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 446] and precludes a general denial [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion of the effect that verifying a complaint has on the answer, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[5] Corporation as Defendant

When one group of shareholders causes shares to be issued to themselves in order to change their status from minority to majority shareholders, the essence of the case is not fraud against the corporation, but fraud against the other group of shareholders [Sheppard v. Wilcox (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 53, 64, 26 Cal. Rptr. 412] . In the cases upholding the shareholder's claim of a quasi-preemptive right, the corporation has been joined as a defendant [Sheppard v. Wilcox (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 53, 59-60, 26 Cal. Rptr. 412 ; Schwab v. Schwab-Wilson Mach. Corp. (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 1, 3-4, 55 P.2d 1268] . The corporation's agents will have to carry out any transfers of shares on the books of the corporation, and if the corporation is a party, no claim could be made that the judgment is not binding on it.

[6] Constructive Trust as Remedy

Imposition of a constructive trust on shares issued to directors, without the plaintiff's knowledge, is a proper remedy because the corporation then could retain the proceeds of the issue while the former alignment of voting interests would be restored [Sheppard v. Wilcox (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 53, 60, 26 Cal. Rptr. 412 ; see Civ. Code § 2224 (person gaining property through wrongful act is involuntary trustee for benefit of person who would otherwise have benefitted)]. For discussion and forms related to constructive trusts, see Ch. 560, Trusts .

The allegation in the complaint that the plaintiff is ready, willing, and able to purchase a proportional number of shares of the additional issue (Paragraph 7) may or may not be an essential allegation [see Schwab v. Schwab-Wilson Mach. Corp. (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 1, 2, 55 P.2d 1268] . It appears that the plaintiff's ability to purchase shares would not be a condition precedent to asserting a quasi-preemptive right, but would be merely evidence favorable to the plaintiff's demand for equitable cognizance of his or her claim [see Schwab v. Schwab-Wilson Mach. Corp. (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 1, 4, 55 P.2d 1268] . On the other hand, if the plaintiff seeks an order to have a number of shares transferred to the plaintiff, it may be assumed that equity will require that he or she pay for the shares, since the purpose of impressing property with a constructive trust is to prevent unjust enrichment [Day v. Greene (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 404, 410-411, 29 Cal. Rptr. 785, 380 P.2d 385] .

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,

_____ [names],	)	DUCIARY DUTY

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant _____ [name of corporation] is, and at all times mentioned in this pleading was, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of _____ ("the corporation") and having its principal place of business in [the _____ (name) Judicial District in] _____ County, California.

2. Defendants _____ [names of directors who approved consideration received for shares] are, and at all times mentioned in this pleading were, duly elected directors of the corporation ("the defendant directors") and owe, and did at all times mentioned in this pleading owe, a fiduciary duty to the corporation.

3. Defendants _____ [names of recipients of shares] are [the majority] shareholders [and directors] of the corporation ("the defendant shareholders").

4. Plaintiff is, and at all times mentioned in this pleading was, a _____ [shareholder of record or beneficial owner of shares or holder of voting trust certificates representing shares] of the corporation.

5. On _____ [date] the defendant directors conspired among themselves and with the defendant shareholders to defraud, and they did defraud, the corporation of its assets in that, contrary to the best interests of the corporation, and in violation of their duty to obtain the largest possible return from the sale of the corporation's stock, the defendant directors authorized the issuance of _____ [number] shares of the common stock of the corporation to the defendant shareholders at a price of $_____ per share.

6. All defendants knew that the price was substantially lower than the _____ [book value or market price] per share of outstanding shares of the same class. The issuance of the shares was unjust and unreasonable to the corporation. The shares issued to the defendant shareholders were not offered to plaintiff or other shareholders, nor was any attempt made to obtain a higher price for the shares.

[EITHER]

7. On or about _____ [date] plaintiff made the following efforts to cause the corporation to pursue its claim against the defendants. On _____ [date] plaintiff _____ [informed the board of directors in writing of the ultimate facts of each cause of action or delivered to the board of directors a true copy of the complaint that plaintiff proposed to file], and plaintiff demanded that the board of directors take action as necessary for the corporation to prosecute its claim against the defendants. The board of directors and the corporation refused, and they continue to refuse, to prosecute this action. In refusing to prosecute this action, the board of directors did not act in good faith or in any reasonable belief that its refusal to commence this action was a good business judgment or in the best interest of the corporation. Rather, this refusal by the board of directors was in the exercise of bad faith and breach of the directors' fiduciary duty to maintain and defend the interests of the corporation.

[OR]

7. Plaintiff did not make any effort to cause the board of directors to prosecute this action because _____ [set forth facts demonstrating futility of demand].

8. As a result of the breach of fiduciary duty owed by defendants to the corporation, the corporation has been damaged in the sum of $_____.

[9. The acts and conduct of defendants were oppressive, fraudulent, and malicious, in that defendants knew that the consideration received for shares issued to the defendant shareholders was unjust and unreasonable to the corporation and substantially below the price at which the shares could have been sold to others. Plaintiff therefore seeks punitive and exemplary damages.]

10. If plaintiff is successful in this action, a substantial benefit and common fund will accrue to the corporation, and plaintiff will be entitled to reasonable attorney's fees in the sum of $_____ against the corporation.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For general damages in the sum of $_____;

2. For interest on $_____ from and after _____ [date];

3. For exemplary and punitive damages;

4. For reasonable attorney's fees in the sum of $_____;

5. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

6. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use in attacking the directors' actions in connection with the valuation of consideration for shares, or, as is alleged in this form, the undervaluation of, the shares themselves. For discussion of the consideration for shares, see § 162.12.

[3] Allegations

In addition to the allegations that are required in a derivative suit [see Corp. Code § 800; see also Ch. 168, Corporations: Derivative Actions], regarding the plaintiff's status (Paragraph 4) and efforts to produce board action (Paragraph 7), the complaint alleges the following facts constituting the cause of action:

- The directors' breach of their fiduciary duty to the corporation to obtain the largest possible return from the sale of shares [see Shaw v. Empire Sav. & Loan Asso., (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 401, 409, 9 Cal. Rptr. 204 (distinguishing duty to obtain highest return from duty not to issue shares for sole purpose of retaining or obtaining control)] (Paragraphs 5 and 6).

- The corporation's resulting damages (Paragraph 8).

- Optionally, depending on the facts, the directors' liability for punitive damages [see Civ. Code § 3294] (Paragraph 9).

- The corporation's liability for attorney's fees [see Winslow v. Harold G. Ferguson Corp. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 274, 277, 153 P.2d 714 (allowance of attorney's fees in derivative suit when common fund is created for benefit of corporation)] (Paragraph 10).

[4] Directors' Duty

The duty of directors is, generally, to act in the best interest of the corporation and the shareholders [Corp. Code § 309(a)]. It is possible that a director may negligently breach the duty of care in connection with the valuation of property transferred to the corporation or the value assigned to shares [see Corp. Code § 309(a), (b) (what information director may lawfully rely on); see also § 162.12[2]]. This complaint alleges a knowing and fraudulent breach of a director's duty to act in the best interest of the corporation. It is assumed that if share transactions take place between the corporation and directors, the interested directors will not participate in either shareholder approval or board approval of the transactions [see Corp. Code § 310(a) (what kinds of approval or ratification of transaction with interested director will render transaction immune from attack); see also Corp. Code § 153 (approval by shareholders)]. For further discussion of transactions between the corporation and interested directors, see Ch. 167, Corporations: Directors and Management .

[5] Form of Action and Relief

When directors have accepted less money for shares than could be received in an arm's-length sale, or overvalued property to be received by the corporation, the injury is to the corporation. Any action based on those wrongs is derivative, not personal to any shareholder [Shaw v. Empire Sav. & Loan Asso., (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 401, 409, 9 Cal. Rptr. 204 ; James v. Steifer Mining Co. (1918) 35 Cal. App. 778, 784, 171 P. 117 (allegation that defendant directors issued shares in exchange for worthless land stated cause of action for breach of duty to corporation)]; but see Jones v. H.F Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 107, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 (holding that shareholder could maintain cause of action based on diminished value of stock if the injury in question was not incidental to an injury to the corporation; minority shareholder need not not show that injury was unique to that shareholder)].

The plaintiff may elect either of two remedies: let the transaction stand and seek damages, or set it aside and reclaim the shares [see Victor Oil Co. v. Drum (1920) 184 Cal. 226, 238, 193 P. 243 (inadequacy of consideration received for shares); Topanga Corp. v. Gentile (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 681, 688, 58 Cal. Rptr. 713] . For example, if property conveyed to the corporation is worthless, then voiding the transaction might be advisable [cf. James v. Steifer Mining Co. (1918) 35 Cal. App. 778, 782, 171 P. 117 (plaintiff prayed that issuance of shares for worthless property be declared void, but court did not review that remedy)]. On the other hand, damages might be appropriate if a majority shareholder connived to have shares issued to him or her at a discount [cf. Shaw v. Empire Sav. & Loan Asso. (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 401, 409, 9 Cal. Rptr. 204 (unless plaintiff could show that issuance of shares at discount to majority shareholder was intended to allow him to gain or retain control, plaintiff's action was derivative, and constructive trust on defendant's shares was inappropriate)].

[6] Jurisdiction

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const. art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)]. In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the first paper must state whether the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

PART I. SCOPE

14-163 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 163.03

§ 163.03 Governing Statutes

[1] Commercial Code

[a] In General

Division 8 of the Commercial Code, entitled "Investment Securities," generally governs rights, duties, and liabilities of sellers, buyers, and issuing corporations arising from transactions in corporations' issued shares [see generally Com. Code § 8101 et seq.]. A writing that is a share certificate is governed by Division 8 and not by Division 3, which governs negotiable instruments [see generally Com. Code § 3101 et seq.], even if the certificate also meets the requirements of that division [Com. Code § 8103(d)].

Actions commenced before 1997 are governed by the former Division 8, which was superseded January 1, 1997, by the current Division 8 [Com. Code §§ 8601, 8603(a)].

[b] Corporation as Issuer of Transferred Shares

In the case of a California corporation, Division 8 of the Commercial Code (along with other California law generally) will govern each of the following matters in particular, unless the corporation has made an election to have the law of another jurisdiction govern the matter [Com. Code § 8110(a), (d)]:

- The rights and duties of the corporation as an issuer [see Com. Code § 8201 (issuer defined)], with respect to the registration of a transfer of shares.

- The effectiveness of a registration of transfer by the corporation.

- Whether the corporation owes any duties to an adverse claimant [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(1) (adverse claim defined)] respecting issued shares.

- Whether an adverse claim can be asserted against a person to whom a transfer of shares is registered or a person who has obtained control of uncertificated shares [see Com. Code § 8106(c) (control defined)].

When any such matter respecting shares of a foreign corporation is in issue in a California action, the matter generally will be governed by the law of the jurisdiction in which the corporation is organized. If the foreign corporation has elected, under the law of the jurisdiction in which the corporation is organized, to have the matter governed by the law of a different jurisdiction, the matter will be governed by the law of that jurisdiction [Com. Code § 8110(a)(1), (d)].

When a corporation has made the foreign-law election described above, any subsequent agreement to the contrary is effective only to the extent permitted by the foreign law so specified [Com. Code § 1301(c)].

[c] Adverse Claims to Certificated Shares

The local law of the jurisdiction in which a share certificate is located at the time of delivery [see generally Com. Code § 8301 (delivery)] governs whether an adverse claim [see generally Com. Code § 8102(a)(1); § 163.11[6][a]] can be asserted against a person to whom the certificate is delivered [Com. Code § 8110(c)].

[2] Other Statutes

Transfers of shares in California also are governed by the following statutes:

- Corp. Code §§ 416-422, which govern the contents, execution, and exchange of share certificates and the extent of a corporation's liability for registering certain transfers.

- Corp. Code § 25100 et seq. (especially Corp. Code § 25130 et seq. concerning nonissuer transactions), which govern the qualification of shares under the Corporate Securities Law [see generally Corp. Code § 25000 et seq.], exemptions from qualification, and conditions on qualification.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-163 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 163.10

§ 163.10 Definitions

[1] Shares and Securities

"Shares" are the units into which the proprietary interest in a corporation is divided in the articles of incorporation [Corp. Code § 184].

Shares (and similar equity interests, such as warrants, for example) issued by a corporation (or business trust, joint stock company, or similar entity) are "securities" [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(15)] the issuance and transfer of which are subject to Division 8 of the Commercial Code [Com. Code § 8103(a)]. A federally registered investment company's shares and similar equity interests also are securities under Division 8 [Com. Code § 8103(b)]. A mutual fund is the most common example of a registered investment company.

Shares also are "securities" under the Corporate Securities Law [Corp. Code § 25019], which generally regulates the issuance and transfer of securities.

[2] Certificated and Uncertificated Shares

Shares represented by a certificate are "certificated securities" under Division 8 of the Commercial Code, and shares not represented by a certificate are "uncertificated securities" under Division 8 [Com. Code § 8102(a)(4), (18)]. The Commercial Code definitions are also applied in the Corporations Code [see Corp. Code §§ 156.1, 191.1]. Rules governing transfers of shares may differ depending on whether shares are certificated or uncertificated. The application of some rules affecting the corporation's rights and duties as an issuer will also depend on whether shares are certificated or uncertificated.

[3] Registered or Bearer Form

Certificated shares usually are issued to specifically named holders. Thus, certificated shares in most cases are issued in "registered form" [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(13)].

It is possible for a share certificate to be issued in "bearer form," but it would be very unusual; that status, meaning

"payable to the bearer of the ... certificate according to its terms and not by reason of an endorsement" [Com. Code § 8102(a)(2)], usually is reserved for bonds and other debt securities.

All uncertificated shares are necessarily in registered form because, in the absence of a certificate, there is no evidence of the holder's ownership other than an entry in the corporation's shareholder records and a corresponding statement sent to the holder [see [4], below].

[4] Initial Transaction Statement and Written Statements

"Initial transaction statement" means a statement referring to uncertificated shares, signed by or on behalf of the corporation and sent to the new registered owner, describing the issue of which the uncertificated shares are part. "Written statements," when used in connection with uncertificated shares, means the written statements that are periodically, or at the request of the registered owner, sent by the corporation to the registered owner, describing the issue of which the uncertificated shares are part [Corp. Code § 171.1].

[5] Purchaser and Purchaser for Value

"Purchaser" means a person who takes shares by purchase. "Purchase" includes taking by sale, lease, discount, negotiation, mortgage, pledge, lien, security interest, issue or reissue, gift, or any other voluntary transaction creating an interest in the shares [Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(29), (30), 8102(c)]. A purchaser gives "value" for shares if he or she acquires them in any of the following ways [Com. Code §§ 1204, 8102(c)]:

- Generally, in return for any consideration sufficient to support a simple contract.
- By accepting delivery pursuant to a preexisting contract for purchase.
- As security for, or in total or partial satisfaction of, a preexisting claim.
- In return for a binding commitment to extend credit or for the extension of immediately available credit, whether or not drawn on and whether or not a chargeback is provided for in the event of difficulties in collection.

§ 163.11 Transfers of Shares

[1] Delivery

[a] Definition of Delivery

"Delivery" with respect to an instrument or document of title means voluntary transfer of possession [Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(15), 8102(c)]. Delivery of certificated shares to a purchaser occurs when any of the following occurs [Com. Code § 8301(a)]:

- The purchaser acquires possession of the certificate.

- A securities intermediary [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(14)] (normally, a broker) acting on behalf of the purchaser acquires possession of the certificate, provided the certificate is in registered form, has not been endorsed to the securities intermediary or in blank, and is either (1) registered in the name of the purchaser, (2) payable to the order of the purchaser, or (3) specially endorsed to the purchaser by an effective endorsement [Com. Code § 8102(a)(11)].

- Another person, other than a securities intermediary, either acquires possession of the certificate on behalf of the purchaser or, having previously acquired possession of the certificate, acknowledges holding it for the purchaser.

Delivery of uncertificated shares to a purchaser occurs when either of the following happens [Com. Code § 8301(b)]:

- The corporation registers the purchaser as the registered owner, on original issue or registration of transfer.

- Another person, other than a securities intermediary, either becomes the registered owner of the shares on behalf of the purchaser or, having previously become the registered owner, acknowledges holding them for the purchaser.

[b] Purchaser's Acquired Rights

A shareholder's legal or contractual duty to put a purchaser in possession of shares is discharged by delivery of the shares [see generally Com. Code § 8301] to the purchaser [see Com. Code § 8104(a)(1), (d)].

In general, on delivery of shares to a purchaser, the purchaser acquires all rights in the shares that the transferor had or had power to transfer [Com. Code § 8302(a)]. A purchaser of a limited interest acquires rights only to the extent of the interest purchased [Com. Code § 8302(b)].

However, a purchaser of certificated shares who takes from a protected purchaser [see Com. Code § 8303; for discussion, see § 163.11[1][c]] and who as a previous holder had notice of an adverse claim [see Com. Code § 8105; for discussion, see § 163.11[6][a]] does not improve his or her position by taking from the protected purchaser [Com. Code § 8302(c)].

[c] Protected Purchaser's Acquired Rights

"Protected purchaser" means a purchaser who does all of the following [Com. Code § 8303(a)]:

- Gives value.
- Does not have notice of any adverse claim [see Com. Code § 8105; for discussion, see § 163.11[6][a]] to the shares.
- Obtains control of the shares [see Com. Code § 8106].

In addition to acquiring the rights of a purchaser, a protected purchaser also acquires his or her interest in the shares free of any adverse claim [Com. Code § 8303(b)].

[2] Endorsement for Transfer of Certificated Shares

[a] Definition and Effect of Endorsement

"Endorsement" means a signature that, alone or accompanied by other words, is made on a share certificate in registered form or on a separate document, for the purpose of transferring (or assigning or redeeming) certificated shares or granting a power to transfer (or assign or redeem) them [Com. Code § 8102(a)(11)]. An endorsement, whether special or in blank [see § 163.11[2][b]], does not constitute a transfer until delivery [see generally Com. Code § 8301] of the certificate on which it appears or, if the endorsement is on a separate document, until delivery of both the document and the certificate [Com. Code § 8304(c)].

Endorsement of a share certificate in bearer form is not necessary for a transfer. An endorsement of a certificate in bearer form may give notice of an adverse claim [see generally Com. Code § 8105; for discussion, see § 163.11[6][a]] to the certificate, but it does not otherwise affect a right to registration that the holder possesses [Com. Code § 8304(e)].

Unless otherwise agreed, a person making an endorsement assumes only the obligations of the statutory warranties [see § 163.13] and not an obligation that the shares will be honored by the corporation [Com. Code § 8304(f)].

[b] Blank or Special Endorsement

An endorsement on a share certificate may be in blank or special. An endorsement in blank includes an endorsement to bearer. A special endorsement specifies to whom the shares are to be transferred or who has power to transfer them. A holder may convert a blank endorsement to a special endorsement [Com. Code § 8304(a)].

[c] Partial Endorsement

An endorsement purporting to be only of part of a certificate representing numerous shares is effective to the extent of the endorsement [see Com. Code § 8304(b)]. For example, a certificate representing 100 shares could be delivered with an endorsement for the transfer of only 25 shares.

[d] Missing Endorsement

If a share certificate in registered form has been delivered [see generally Com. Code § 8301] to a purchaser without a necessary endorsement, the purchaser may become a protected purchaser [see generally Com. Code § 8303; for discussion, see § 163.11[1][c]] only when the endorsement is supplied. However, against the transferor, the transfer is complete on delivery, and the purchaser has a specifically enforceable right to have any necessary endorsement supplied [Com. Code § 8304(d)].

[3] Instruction for Transfer of Uncertificated Shares

[a] Definition and Effect of Instruction

"Instruction" means a notification communicated [see generally Com. Code § 8102(a)(6)] to the corporation and directing that a transfer of uncertificated shares be registered [Com. Code § 8102(a)(12)]. Unless otherwise agreed, a person initiating an instruction assumes only the obligations of the statutory warranties [see § 163.13] and not an obligation that the shares will be honored by the corporation [Com. Code § 8305(b)].

[b] Incomplete Instruction

If an instruction has been originated by an appropriate person [see Com. Code § 8107(a); for discussion, see § 163.11[4][a]] but is incomplete in any other respect, any person may complete it as authorized, and the corporation may rely on it as completed, even if it has been completed incorrectly [Com. Code § 8305(a)].

[4] Effective Endorsement or Instruction

[a] Appropriate Person to Endorse or Instruct

Endorsements and instructions are effective if made by appropriate persons (or an agent on behalf of an appropriate person) [see § 163.11[4][b]]. Generally "appropriate person" means either [Com. Code § 8107(a)(1), (2)]:

- With respect to an endorsement, the person specified by the share certificate, or by an effective special endorsement, to be entitled to the shares.

- With respect to an instruction, the registered owner of the uncertificated shares.

If the appropriate person is deceased, then a successor taking under other law, or the personal representative acting for the estate, or the beneficiary of a security [see Prob. Code § 5501(d)] registered in beneficiary form [see Prob. Code § 5501(a)] who has survived the death of all registered owners, is an appropriate person. If the appropriate person lacks capacity, then a guardian, conservator, or other similar representative, who has power under other law to transfer the shares, is an appropriate person [Com. Code § 8107(a)(4), (5)].

[b] Conditions for Effectiveness

An endorsement or instruction is effective if one of the following conditions has been satisfied [Com. Code § 8107(b)]:

- It was made by the appropriate person.

- It was made by a person who has power under the law of agency to transfer the shares on behalf of the appropriate person, including, in the case of an instruction, a purchaser who has control of the shares because the corporation has agreed that it will comply with instructions originated by the purchaser without further consent by the registered owner [see Com. Code § 8106(c)(2)].

- The appropriate person has ratified it or is otherwise precluded from asserting its ineffectiveness.

Effectiveness of an endorsement or instruction is determined as of the date the endorsement or instruction is made, and an endorsement or instruction does not become ineffective by reason of any later change of circumstances [Com. Code § 8107(e)]. An effective endorsement or instruction is not rendered ineffective by any of the following circumstances:

- It was made by a representative who failed to comply with a controlling instrument or with the law of the state having jurisdiction of the representative relationship, including any law requiring the representative to obtain court approval of the transaction [Com. Code § 8107(c)(1)].

- It was made by a representative whose action in making it or using the proceeds of the transaction was otherwise a breach of duty [Com. Code § 8107(c)(2)].

- The shares are registered in the name of, or are specially endorsed to, or are held in a securities account [see Com. Code § 8501(a)] maintained in the name of, a person described as a representative, and the endorsement or instruction was made by that person even though the person was no longer serving in the described capacity [Com. Code § 8107(d)].

[5] Proof of Transfer Authority

Unless otherwise agreed, the transferor on due demand must supply the purchaser with proof of authority to transfer or with any other required assistance necessary to obtain registration of the transfer of the shares, but if the transfer is not for value, the transferor need not comply unless the purchaser pays the necessary expenses. If the transferor fails within a reasonable time to comply with the demand, the purchaser may reject or rescind the transfer [Com. Code § 8307].

[6] Notice of Adverse Claims

[a] In General

"Adverse claim" means a claim that the claimant has a property interest in the shares and that it is a violation of the rights of the claimant for another person to hold, transfer, or deal with the shares [Com. Code § 8102(a)(1)]. A person has notice of an adverse claim if any of the following conditions is satisfied [Com. Code § 8105(a); see Com. Code §§ 1202, 8102(c) (person having knowledge or actual notification of fact or reason to know it has notice of that fact)]:

- The person knows of the adverse claim.

- The person is aware of facts sufficient to indicate that there is a significant probability that the adverse claim exists, and he or she deliberately avoids information that would establish the existence of the adverse claim [see Decker v. Yorkton Securities, Inc. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 1315, 1322-1324, 1327, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 645 (in case involving stolen certificate, court held that Com. Code § 8105(a)(2) sets forth subjective standard; introducing broker does not have actual notice of adverse claim unless it believes there is significant probability of adverse claim and nevertheless deliberately avoids further information that would confirm its suspicion)].

- The person has a duty, imposed by statute or regulation, to investigate whether an adverse claim exists, and the required investigation would establish the existence of the adverse claim.

Filing of a financing statement under Division 9 [Com. Code § 9101 et seq.], governing secured transactions in certain personal property, is not notice of an adverse claim to shares [Com. Code § 8105(e)].

[b] Purchaser of Certificated Shares

A purchaser of certificated shares has notice of an adverse claim if either of the following conditions is satisfied [Com. Code § 8105(d)]:

- Whether in bearer form or registered form, the certificate has been endorsed "for collection" or "for surrender" or for some other purpose not involving transfer.

- The certificate is in bearer form and has on it an unambiguous statement that it is the property of a person other than the transferor. However, the mere writing of a name on the certificate is not such a statement.

[c] Transfer by Representative

A person having knowledge that a representative has transferred or will transfer shares or an interest in shares has no consequent duty of inquiry into the rightfulness of the transaction, and that knowledge is not notice of an adverse claim. However, a person who knows that a representative has transferred shares or an interest in shares in a transaction that is, or whose proceeds are being used, for the individual benefit of the representative or otherwise in breach of duty has notice of an adverse claim [Com. Code § 8105(b)].

[7] Illegality as Defense to Action for Price

An action to recover the purchase price of shares tendered to the purchaser may be defended on the basis of the contract's illegality becauseof the seller's failure to comply with the Corporate Securities Law [Corp. Code § 25000 et seq.]. It is unlawful for any person to offer or sell securities in California in any nonissuer transaction [see Corp. Code § 25011] unless the securities are qualified for sale, exempt from qualification, or not subject to qualification, under the Corporate Securities Law [Corp. Code § 25130; see Corp. Code §§ 25100, 25100.1, 25101, 25101.1, 25102.1, 25104 (exempt securities and securities not subject to qualification); 10 Cal. Code Reg § 260.105 et seq.]. Although by far the largest number of nonissuer transactions involve offers and sales of publicly held shares and are therefore exempt from qualification [see Corp. Code § 25101] or not subject to qualification [see Corp. Code § 25101.1] (or are conducted through brokers, and the purchaser's liability is on his or her account with the broker), transactions involving shares that are not publicly held may require qualification. For example, a shareholder may sell his or her shares in a closely held corporation for his or her own account, but the sale will be exempt only if it is not accompanied by the publication of any advertisement and is not effected by or through a broker-dealer in a public offering [Corp. Code § 24104(a)]. Moreover, even if the sale is exempt as a private sale, the shares may be subject to a currently effective legend condition requiring that the Commissioner of Corporations consent to a transfer. It is unlawful to consummate the sale or transfer of such shares without first obtaining the Commissioner's consent [Corp. Code § 25133].

For forms for affirmative defenses based on illegality under the Corporate Securities Law, see §§ 161.41, 161.42. For additional discussion and forms related to the purchaser's actions against the seller for violations of the Corporate Securities Law, see Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation .

[8] Purchaser's Right to Specific Performance

If the shares that are the subject of a purchase contract represent control of the corporation or otherwise have a peculiar value for the purchaser and are not readily available on the open market, the contract may be specifically enforceable [Kaneko v. Okuda (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 217, 235, 15 Cal. Rptr. 792 ; Glascock v. Sukumlyn (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 587, 592-593, 281 P.2d 90] . Generally the purchaser must prove tender of performance conforming to the terms of the contract [Glascock v. Sukumlyn (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 587, 594, 281 P.2d 90] . Specific performance will not be withheld in a case of a nonconforming tender of performance, however, if the variance from the terms of the contract is unavoidable [see Addiego v. Hill (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 842, 847, 48 Cal. Rptr. 240] or the tendered performance constituted substantial performance based on a mistaken interpretation of the terms [see Piedmont Publishing Co. v. Rogers (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 171, 192, 14 Cal. Rptr. 133 (mistake in computation under buy-out formula made by independent accountant was not fatal to action for specific performance)]. On the other hand, an option providing that "all" of the optionor's shares would be purchased did not entitle the optionee to elect to purchase only some of the optionor's shares [Stewart Title Co. v. Herbert (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 957, 962-963, 96 Cal. Rptr. 631] .

§ 163.12 Restrictions on Transfer

[1] How Imposed

[a] By Corporation

Reasonable restrictions on the right to transfer or hypothecate shares of any class or classes or series may be imposed by the articles of incorporation, but no restriction will be binding with respect to shares issued before the adoption of the restriction unless the holders of those shares voted in favor of the restriction [Corp. Code § 204(b)]. Restrictions also may be imposed by a bylaw provision [Corp. Code § 212(b)(1)].

The share certificates of a close corporation [see generally Corp. Code § 158] must contain, in addition to other statements allowed or required, a statement that a transfer is void if it would increase the number of shareholders above the number authorized by the articles [Corp. Code § 418(c); see Corp. Code § 418(d) (attempted voluntary inter vivos transfer of legended shares that would result in number of shareholders exceeding maximum number specified in articles is void); see also Corp. Code § 158(a) (requirement that articles must specify number of shareholders)].

Closely held corporations taking advantage of the exemption from qualification under the Corporate Securities Law [see generally Corp. Code § 25102(h)] must require each purchaser to represent that the purchaser is purchasing for the purchaser's own account, or for a trust account if the purchaser is a trustee, and not with a view to, or for sale in connection with, any distribution of the shares [Corp. Code § 25102(h)(5)].

[b] By Shareholders

Restrictions on transfer, including the terms for purchasing a deceased or withdrawing shareholder's shares, may be the subject of an agreement between the shareholders [see, e.g., Addiego v. Hill (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 280, 288-289, 73 Cal. Rptr. 901 (upholding restriction giving remaining shareholders right of first refusal to purchase shares)] or between the corporation and the shareholders [see, e.g., Yeng Sue Chow v. Levi Strauss & Co. (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 315, 322, 122 Cal. Rptr. 816 (upholding repurchase option given to corporation pursuant to employee stock purchase plan)]. Restrictions on transfer are also may appear in statutory shareholders' agreements [see Corp. Code § 186], which are written agreements by and between all shareholders of a close corporation [see Corp. Code § 158]. Under a buy-sell agreement (which is merely an executory contract to buy and sell shares), a shareholder is entitled to the benefits of ownership until delivery is made or tendered to the buyer, unless the contract specifies or implies a different intention [see Stephensen v. Drever (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1167, 1173-1174, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764, 947 P.2d 1301 (holding that agreement at issue did not imply any intention by parties to deny shareholder his rights during the post-employment period used to determine share value)].

[2] Enforcement

[a] Validity

Reasonable restrictions on transfer may appear in the articles and in the bylaws of the corporation [Corp. Code §§ 204(b), 212(b)(1)]. The test of reasonableness has been held to involve two requirements: (1) the restriction must not constitute an unreasonably restrictive curtailment of the right of alienation, and (2) the restriction must not otherwise unreasonably deprive the shareholder of substantial rights [Tu-Vu Drive-In Corp. v. Ashkins (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 283, 286, 38 Cal. Rptr. 348, 391 P.2d 828] .

Courts have shown less inclination to inquire into the reasonableness of the price terms of a buy-sell agreement between shareholders, and such agreements have been upheld even when the price at which the selling shareholder was required to sell was alleged to be unfairly low [Vannucci v. Pedrini (1932) 217 Cal. 138, 144, 17 P.2d 706 ; Yeng Sue Chow v. Levi Strauss & Co. (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 315, 324, 122 Cal. Rptr. 816 ; Cutter Laboratories, Inc. v. Twining (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 302, 316, 34 Cal. Rptr. 317] . In any event, a bylaw granting a right of first refusal to other shareholders or the corporation does not unreasonably restrict the right of alienation or deprive the owner of substantial rights [Tu-Vu Drive-In Corp. v. Ashkins (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 283, 286, 38 Cal. Rptr. 348, 391 P.2d 828] .

However, any restriction on the transfer of shares must be noted conspicuously on the share certificate, or the initial transaction statement and other written statements concerning uncertificated shares, in order to be enforceable against a transferee, including a purchaser from the corporation, unless the transferee or purchaser has actual knowledge of the restriction [Corp. Code § 418(a), (b); see Com. Code § 8204; see also § 163.12[2][d]].

[b] Specific Performance

A restriction imposed by an agreement between shareholders requiring each shareholder to first offer his or her shares to the corporation or other shareholders may be enforced by an action for specific performance [Addiego v. Hill (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 280, 288, 73 Cal. Rptr. 901 ; Polinsky v. Vaughan (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 183, 187, 73 Cal. Rptr. 764] . The right to specific performance will not be denied on the ground of inadequate consideration if the purchase money tendered is the wrong amount but the error is based solely on an inadvertent misinterpretation or misapplication of a buy-out formula [Polinsky v. Vaughan (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 183, 195, 73 Cal. Rptr. 764 ; Piedmont Publishing Co. v. Rogers (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 171, 192, 14 Cal. Rptr. 133] .

If the agreement is between the shareholders and does not involve a right of first refusal on behalf of the corporation, the corporation need not be joined in the action for specific performance [Piedmont Publishing Co. v. Rogers (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 171, 182, 14 Cal. Rptr. 133] .

The same remedy may be available if the transfer restriction and buy-sell provisions are contained in the bylaws or articles. It has long been held that the bylaws are in the nature of a contract between shareholders and the corporation [Vannucci v. Pedrini (1932) 217 Cal. 138, 144, 17 P.2d 706 ; Casady v. Modern Metal Spinning & Mfg. Co. (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 728, 733, 10 Cal. Rptr. 790] , and articles of incorporation have been referred to as part of the contract between the shareholders and the corporation [Silva v. Coastal Plywood & Timber Co. (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 276, 278, 268 P.2d 510] .

[c] Enforcement Against Transferees

A restriction on transfer imposed by the corporation, even if otherwise lawful, is ineffective against a person without knowledge of the restriction unless the restriction is noted conspicuously on the share certificate or, if the shares are uncertificated, the registered owner has been notified of the restriction [Com. Code § 8204; Corp. Code § 418(b); see Corp. Code § 174 ("on the certificate" defined); Mancini v. Patrizi (1930) 110 Cal. App. 42, 44-45, 293 P. 828 (transferee of shares subject to transfer restriction of which he had no knowledge and that was not noted on certificate takes shares free of restriction)]. The restriction is conspicuously noted if it is so written, displayed, or presented that a reasonable person against whom it is to operate out to have noticed it. A heading in capitals equal to or greater in size than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same or lesser size is conspicuous. Language in the body of a record or display in larger type than the surrounding text of the same size, or set off from surrounding text of the same size by symbols or other marks that call attention to the language is conspicuous [Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(10), 8102(c)].

In the case of statutory close corporations [see generally Corp. Code § 158], restrictions on transfer contained in a shareholders' agreement [see Corp. Code § 186] that is filed with the secretary of the corporation are binding on transferees who were not parties to the agreement, provided the existence of the agreement is noted on the share certificate or the purchaser has actual knowledge of the agreement [Corp. Code § 300(b)].

[d] Reacquisition by Corporation

If a buy-out agreement is an entity purchase plan, and the corporation is either given first refusal rights or under an obligation to purchase theshares of a terminating or deceased shareholder, the corporation's ability to specifically enforce the agreement could be subject to the defense of illegality [see Civ. Code § 1667(1)]. The corporation, in order to purchase the shares, must meet the balance-sheet test or the liquidity test for a distribution [see generally Corp. Code § 500] because the reacquisition of a shareholder's shares is a distribution [see Corp. Code § 166 (definition of distribution to shareholders)] and cannot be legally made unless the applicable test is met [Corp. Code § 500].

A shareholder who receives an unlawful distribution with knowledge of the facts of its impropriety is liable to the corporation for the benefit of creditors and other shareholders [Corp. Code § 506(a)]. If the shareholder accepted the buy-out payment and later discovered its illegality as a prohibited distribution, the shareholder could rescind the transaction and recover the shares [Tiedje v. Aluminum Taper Milling Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 450, 454-455, 296 P.2d 554] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-163 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 163.13

§ 163.13 Statutory Warranties in Transfers of Shares

[1] Warranties to Purchaser

[a] Transfer of Certificated Shares

A person who transfers certificated shares to a purchaser for value warrants to the purchaser, and an endorser, if the transfer is by endorsement, warrants to any subsequent purchaser, all of the following [Com. Code § 8108(a)]:

- The certificate is genuine and has not been materially altered.
- The transferor or endorser does not know of any fact that might impair the validity of the shares.
- There is no adverse claim [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(1); for discussion, see § 163.11[6][a]] to the shares.
- The transfer does not violate any restriction on transfer.
- If the transfer is by endorsement, the endorsement is made by an appropriate person [see Com. Code § 8107(a); for discussion, see § 163.11[4][a]], or if the endorsement is by an agent, the agent has actual authority to act on behalf of the appropriate person.
- The transfer is otherwise effective and rightful.

[b] Agent's Delivery of Certificate

If a person acts as agent of another in delivering [see Com. Code § 8301; for discussion, see § 163.11[1]] a share certificate to a purchaser, the agent warrants only that the agent has authority to act for the principal and does not know of any adverse claim [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(1); for discussion, see § 163.11[6][a]] to the shares, provided the identity of the principal is known to the person to whom the certificate is delivered, and the certificate delivered by the agent was received by the agent from the principal or received by the agent from another person at the direction of the principal [Com. Code § 8108(g)].

[c] Transfer of Uncertificated Shares

A person who originates an instruction for registration of transfer of uncertificated shares to a purchaser for value warrants to the purchaser all of the following [Com. Code § 8108(b)]:

- The instruction is made by an appropriate person [see generally Com. Code § 8107(a); for discussion, see § 163.11[4][a]] or, if the instruction is by an agent, the agent has actual authority to act on behalf of the appropriate person.

- The shares are valid.

- There is no adverse claim [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(1); for discussion, see § 163.11[6][a]] to the shares.

- At the time the instruction is presented to the corporation, all of the following will be applicable [Com. Code § 8108(b)(4)]:

  - The purchaser will be entitled to the registration of transfer.

  - The transfer will be registered by the corporation free from all liens, security interests, restrictions, and claims other than those specified in the instruction.

  - The transfer will not violate any restriction on transfer.

  - The requested transfer will otherwise be effective and rightful.

A person who transfers uncertificated shares to a purchaser for value and does not originate an instruction in connection with the transfer warrants all of the following [Com. Code § 8108(c)]:

- The shares are valid.

- There is no adverse claim to the shares.

- The transfer does not violate any restriction on transfer.

- The transfer is otherwise effective and rightful.

[2] Warranties to Issuer

[a] Corporation as Issuer

A person who endorses a share certificate warrants to the issuer, that is, the corporation [see Com. Code § 8201(a)], that there is no adverse claim [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(1); for discussion, see § 163.11[6][a]] to the shares and that the endorsement is effective [Com. Code § 8108(d)].

A person who originates an instruction for registration of transfer of uncertificated shares warrants to the corporation that the instruction is effective and that at the time the instruction is presented to the corporation the purchaser will be entitled to the registration of transfer [Com. Code § 8108(e)].

A person who presents a share certificate for registration of transfer warrants to the corporation that the person is entitled to the registration, but a purchaser for value and without notice of adverse claims [see Com. Code § 8105; for discussion, see § 163.11[6][a]] to whom a transfer is registered warrants only that he or she has no knowledge of any unauthorized signature in a necessary endorsement [Com. Code § 8108(f)].

[b] Guarantor as Issuer

With respect to an obligation on or defense to shares, a guarantor is an issuer to the extent of the guaranty, whether or not the guarantor's obligation is noted on a share certificate [Com. Code § 8201(b)].

[3] Guarantor's Warranties

[a] Guarantor of Endorser's Signature

A person who guarantees a signature of an endorser of a share certificate warrants that, at the time of signing, all of the following were true [Com. Code § 8306(a)]:

- The signature was genuine.

- The signer was an appropriate person [see Com. Code § 8107(a); for discussion, see § 163.11[4][a]] to endorse, or if the signature is by an agent, the agent had actual authority to act on behalf of the appropriate person.

- The signer had legal capacity to sign.

The guarantor does not otherwise warrant the rightfulness of the transfer [Com. Code § 8306(d)].

[b] Guarantor of Signature of Originator of Instruction

A person who guarantees a signature of the originator of an instruction warrants that at the time of signing all of the following were true [Com. Code § 8306(b)]:

- The signature was genuine.

- The signer was an appropriate person [see Com. Code § 8107(a); for discussion, see § 163.11[4][a]] to originate the instruction, or if the signature is by an agent, the agent had actual authority to act on behalf of the appropriate person, if the person specified in the instruction as the registered owner was, in fact, the registered owner, as to which fact the signature guarantor does not make a warranty.

- The signer had legal capacity to sign.

A person who specially guarantees the signature of an originator of an instruction makes the foregoing warranties and also warrants that at the time the instruction is presented to the corporation all of the following are true [Com. Code § 8306(c)]:

- The person specified in the instruction as the registered owner of the shares will be the registered owner.

- The transfer of the shares requested in the instruction will be registered by the corporation free from all liens, security interests, restrictions, and claims other than those specified in the instruction.

The corporation may not require a special guaranty of signature as a condition to the registration of a transfer [Com. Code § 8306(g)].

The guarantor or special guarantor does not otherwise warrant the rightfulness of the transfer [Com. Code § 8306(d)].

[c] Guarantor of Endorsement or Instruction

A person who guarantees an endorsement of a share certificate makes the warranties of a signature guarantor [see Com. Code § 8306(a); for discussion, see [a], above] and also warrants the rightfulness of the transfer in all respects [Com. Code § 8306(e)].

A person who guarantees an instruction requesting the transfer of uncertificated shares makes the warranties of a special signature guarantor [see Com. Code § 8306(c); for discussion, see [b], above] and also warrants the rightfulness of the transfer in all respects [Com. Code § 8306(f)].

The corporation may not require a guaranty of endorsement or a guaranty of instruction as a condition to the registration of a transfer [Com. Code § 8306(g)].

[d] Liability on Guarantor's Warranty

The warranties of a guarantor are made to a person taking or dealing with the shares in reliance on the guaranty, and the guarantor is liable to the person for loss resulting from their breach. An endorser or originator of an instruction whose signature, endorsement, or instruction has been guaranteed is liable to a guarantor for any loss suffered by the guarantor as a result of breach of the warranties of the guarantor [Com. Code § 8306(h)].

Chapter 163 CORPORATIONS: TRANSFERS OF SHARES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-163 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 163.14

§ 163.14 Registration of Transfers

[1] Corporation's Right and Duty

[a] Recognition of Registered Owner

Before due presentment for the registration of a transfer of a share certificate in registered form, or of an instruction requesting the registration of a transfer of uncertificated shares, the corporation may treat the registered owner as the person exclusively entitled to vote, receive notifications, and otherwise exercise all of the rights and powers of an owner [Com. Code § 8207(a)].

[b] Duty to Register Transfer

If a share certificate in registered form is presented to the corporation with a request to register a transfer, or an instruction is presented to the corporation with a request to register a transfer of uncertificated shares, the corporation must register the transfer as requested, if the following conditions are satisfied [Com. Code § 8401(a)]:

- Under the terms of the shares, the person seeking registration of the transfer is eligible to have the shares registered in that person's name.

- The endorsement or instruction is made by an appropriate person [Com. Code § 8107(a)] or by an agent who has actual authority to act on behalf of an appropriate person.

- Reasonable assurance is given, if the corporation requires reasonable assurance [see generally Com. Code § 8402; for discussion, see [2], below], that the endorsement or instruction is genuine and authorized.

- Any applicable law relating to the collection of taxes has been complied with.

- The transfer does not violate any restriction on transfer imposed by the corporation in accordance with statutory provisions [see Com. Code § 8204; for discussion, see § 163.12].

- A demand that the corporation not register the transfer has not become effective [see Com. Code § 8403; for discussion, see [3], below]; or the corporation has complied with a statutory requirement to give notice of such a demand [see Com. Code § 8403(b); for discussion, see [3][b], below], but no legal process or indemnity bond has been obtained as a result [see Com. Code § 8403(d); for discussion, see [3][c], below].

- The transfer is in fact rightful or is to a protected purchaser [see generally Com. Code § 8303; for discussion, see § 163.11[1][c]].

For a form of complaint to compel a corporation to register a transfer of shares, see § 163.45.

[2] Corporation's Requirement of Assurance

The corporation may require any reasonable assurance [see Com. Code § 8402(b)], and specifically the following assurances, that each necessary endorsement or each instruction is genuine and authorized [Com. Code § 8402(a)]:

- In all cases, a guaranty of the signature of the person making an endorsement or originating the instruction [see generally § 163.13[3][a], [b] (guarantor's warranties)], including, in the case of an instruction, reasonable assurance of identity. "Guaranty of the signature" means a guaranty signed by or on behalf of a person reasonably believed by the corporation to be responsible. The corporation may adopt standards with respect to responsibility if they are not manifestly unreasonable [Com. Code § 8402(c)(1)].

- If the endorsement is made or the instruction is originated by an agent, appropriate assurance of actual authority to sign.

- If the endorsement is made or the instruction is originated by a fiduciary for a decedent's estate or an incapacitated person [see generally Com. Code § 8107(a)(4), (5)], appropriate evidence of appointment or incumbency. "Appropriate evidence of appointment or incumbency" means [Com. Code § 8402(c)(2)]:

  - In the case of a fiduciary appointed or qualified by a court, a certificate issued by or under the direction or supervision of the court or an officer of the court and dated within 60 days before the date of presentation for transfer.

  - In any other case, a copy of a document showing the appointment or a certificate issued by or on behalf of a person reasonably believed by the corporation to be responsible or, in the absence of that document or certificate, other evidence that the corporation reasonably considers appropriate.

- If there is more than one fiduciary, reasonable assurance that all who are required to sign have signed.

- If the endorsement is made or the instruction is originated by a person not covered by one of the foregoing alternatives, assurance appropriate to the case corresponding as nearly as may be to the foregoing alternatives.

[3] Demand to Withhold Registration

[a] Making of Demand

A person who is an appropriate person [see Com. Code § 8107(a); for discussion, see § 163.12[4][a]] to make an endorsement or originate an instruction may demand that the corporation not register a transfer of shares. The demand is to be made by communicating [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(6) ("communicate" means to send signed writing unless parties have agreed otherwise)] to the corporation a notification that identifies the registered owner and the issue of which the shares are part, and provides an address for communications directed to the person making the demand. The demand is effective only if it is received by the corporation at a time and in a manner affording the corporation a reasonable opportunity to act on it [Com. Code § 8403(a)].

The demand is commonly referred to as a stop-transfer notice. Under prior and similar provisions of law, it was held that a stop-transfer notice was adequate if it informed the corporation of all facts known to the owner at the time the notice was sent [Ibanez v. Farmers Underwriters Asso. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 390, 397, 121 Cal. Rptr. 256, 534 P.2d 1336] .

[b] Notification That Demand Was Made

If, after a stop-transfer notice has become effective, a share certificate in registered form is presented to the corporation with a request to register a transfer, or an instruction is presented to the corporation with a request to register a transfer of uncertificated shares, the corporation must promptly communicate [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(6) ("communicate" means to send signed writing unless parties have agreed otherwise)] to both the person who initiated the demand, at the address provided in the demand, and the person who presented the share certificate for registration of transfer or initiated the instruction requesting registration of transfer, a notification stating all of the following [Com. Code § 8403(b)]:

- The fact that the share certificate has been presented for registration of a transfer, or the instruction for registration of a transfer of the uncertificated shares has been received.

- The fact that a demand that the corporation not register the transfer was previously received.

- A statement that the corporation will withhold registration of the transfer for a period of time stated in the notification, in order to provide the person who initiated the demand an opportunity to obtain legal process or an indemnity bond [see [c], below]. The stated period may not exceed 30 days after the date of communication of the notification, but the corporation may specify a shorter period if that period is not manifestly unreasonable [Com. Code § 8403(c)].

[c] Corporation's Relief From Liability

The corporation is not liable to a person who initiated a stop-transfer notice [see [b], above] for any loss the person suffers as a result of registration of a transfer pursuant to an effective endorsement or instruction, if the person who initiated the notice fails, within the time stated in the corporation's communication, to take one of the following steps [Com. Code § 8403(d)]:

- Obtain an appropriate restraining order, injunction, or other process from a court of competent jurisdiction enjoining the corporation from registering the transfer.

- File with the corporation an indemnity bond that is sufficient, in the corporation's judgment, to protect the corporation and any transfer agent, registrar, or other involved agent of the corporation from any loss that may be suffered by refusing to register the transfer.

The corporation is not relieved from liability for registering a transfer pursuant to an endorsement or instruction that was not effective [Com. Code § 8403(e)].

[4] Wrongful Refusal or Failure to Register

[a] Corporation's Liability

If the corporation is under a duty to register a transfer of shares [see [1][b], above], the corporation is liable to a person presenting a share certificate or an instruction for registration, or to the person's principal, for loss resulting from an unreasonable delay in registration or a failure or refusal to register the transfer [Com. Code § 8401(b)].

[b] Corporation Officer's Penalty

If a corporate officer is charged with the duty of entering a transfer of shares on the books of the corporation and issuing a share certificate, and the officer unreasonably neglects, fails, or refuses to perform that duty after written request by any person entitled to the entry, the officer will be subject to a penalty of $100 plus $10 for each day the default continues, beginning five days after receipt of the request, up to a maximum of $500 [Corp. Code § 2201]. Every director or other officer unreasonably causing the neglect, failure, or refusal is subject to a like penalty [Corp. Code § 2201]. The penalty must be paid to each person aggrieved, is enforceable by action, and is in addition to all other remedies by way of injunction, mandate, or action for damages [Corp. Code §§ 2201, 2202]. For a form of complaint stating a cause of action for a penalty, see § 163.45.

The court in which the action for a penalty is brought may reduce, remit, or suspend the penalty on such terms and conditions as the court may deem reasonable, when the neglect, failure, or refusal was inadvertent or excusable [Corp. Code § 2202].

Officers are not liable for a refusal to register a transfer of shares that the transferee acquired with knowledge that they had been transferred in violation of a bylaw restricting their transfer [Vannucci v. Pedrini (1932) 217 Cal. 138, 143, 17 P.2d 706] .

[5] Wrongful Registration of Transfer

[a] Corporation's Liability

Except in certain cases [see [b], [c], below], the corporation is liable for wrongful registration of a transfer if the corporation registered a transfer of shares to a person not entitled to them, in any of the following circumstances [Com. Code § 8404(a)]:

- Pursuant to an ineffective endorsement or instruction [see generally Com. Code § 8107 (effectiveness of endorsement or instruction); for discussion, see § 163.11[4]].

- If the corporation received a demand not to register the transfer, that demand became effective [see generally Com. Code § 8403(a); for discussion, see [3][a], above], and the corporation did not duly communicate a notification that the demand was made [see generally Com. Code § 8403(b); for discussion, see [3][b], above]

- After the corporation was served with an injunction, restraining order, or other legal process enjoining it from registering the transfer, issued by a court of competent jurisdiction, if the corporation had a reasonable opportunity to act on the injunction, restraining order, or other legal process.

- By the corporation acting in collusion with the wrongdoer.

Except as otherwise stated above or provided in the law relating to the collection of taxes, the corporation is not liable to an owner or other person suffering loss as a result of the registration of a transfer of shares if registration was made pursuant to an effective endorsement or instruction [Com. Code § 8404(c)].

If the corporation is liable, then on demand the corporation must provide the person entitled to the shares with like shares and any payments or distributions that the person did not receive as a result of the wrongful registration [Com. Code § 8404(b)]. However, if an overissue would result, the corporation's liability to provide the person with like shares is governed by the rules on overissue [see Com. Code § 8210]. For discussion of the problem of overissue, see Ch. 162, Corporations: Issuance of Shares, § 162.11.

[b] Exception for Missing Certificate

If a share certificate has been lost, apparently destroyed, or wrongfully taken, but the owner fails to notify the corporation of that fact within a reasonable time after the owner has notice of it, and the corporation registers a transfer of the shares before receiving notification, then the owner may not assert a claim against the corporation for registering a transfer of the shares [Com. Code § 8406]. For discussion of the owner's right to obtain a replacement certificate, see Ch. 162, Corporations: Issuance of Shares, § 162.13.

[c] Exceptions Under General Corporation Law

Neither a domestic corporation or foreign corporation, nor its transfer agent or registrar, is liable in any of the following situations:

- For transferring or causing to be transferred on the books of the corporation to the surviving joint tenant or tenants any shares issued to two or more persons in joint tenancy, whether or not the transfer is made with actual or constructive knowledge of the existence of any understanding, agreement, condition, or evidence that the shares were held otherwise than in joint tenancy or evidence of a breach of trust by any joint tenant [Corp. Code § 420(a)].

- To a minor or incompetent person in whose name shares are of record on its books, or to any transferee from or transferor to the minor or incompetent person, for transferring the shares on its books at the request of the minor or incompetent person or to the minor or incompetent person or for recognizing or dealing with the minor or incompetent person as a shareholder, whether or not the corporation, transfer agent, or registrar had actual or constructive notice of the minority or incompetency, unless a guardian or conservator of the property of the minor or incompetent person has been appointed and the corporation, transfer agent, or registrar has received written notice of the appointment [Corp. Code § 420(b)].

- To any married person or to any transferee from a married person, for transferring shares on its books at the request of the person in whose name they are registered, in the same manner as if the person were unmarried, without the signature of the person's spouse, regardless of whether the registration indicates that the shares are community property [Corp. Code § 420(c)].

- For transferring shares or causing shares to be transferred on the books of the corporation pursuant to a judgment or order of a court that has been set aside, modified, or reversed, unless, before the registration of the transfer on the books of the corporation, written notice is served on the corporation or its transfer agent, in the mannerprovided by law for the service of a summons in a civil action, stating that an appeal or other further court proceeding has been or is to be taken from or with regard to the judgment or order [Corp. Code § 420(d)].

After the service of the notice referred to above, neither the corporation nor its transfer agent has any duty to register the requested transfer until the corporation or its transfer agent has received a certificate of the county clerk of the county in which the judgment or order was made, showing that the judgment or order has become final [Corp. Code § 420(d)].

The provisions of the Commercial Code do not affect the foregoing limitations and liability. Provisions of the Family Code governing management of community property [see Fam. Code § 1100] are subject to the foregoing limitations and liability, and may not be construed to prevent transfers, or result in liability to the corporation, transfer agent, or registrar permitting or effecting transfers, in compliance with Corp. Code § 420 [Corp. Code § 420(e)].

14-163 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 163.32

§ 163.32 Decisions

[1] Contracts to Purchase Shares

In action by terminated executive for breach of contract and fraud after former employer refused to allow exercise of stock options a year after termination, stock option agreements provided that options would not vest after termination and had to be exercised within 30 days of termination or ceased to be exercisable, and agreements were not altered by severance agreement. Barton v. Elexsys International Inc. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1182, 1188, 1189, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 212

Option granted to corporation to repurchase shares issued to employee pursuant to stock option plan was not void for want of mutuality and was contract of adhesion. Yeng Sue Chow v. Levi Strauss & Co. (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 315, 324-325, 122 Cal. Rptr. 816

Enforceability of stock options granted to employees if employee continues employment knowing of options. Newberger v. Rifkind (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 1070, 1073, 104 Cal. Rptr. 663

When offer under option contract is rejected, party rejecting is not allowed subsequently to accept offer and thereby convert it to agreement by acceptance; well settled rule is that attempt to exercise option on terms varying from those offered is tantamount to rejection of original offer and is the making of counteroffer, but rule is not applied when optionor in original offer, or optionee in counteroffer, states that in spite of counteroffer, original offer will not be terminated. Landberg v. Landberg (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 742, 757, 101 Cal. Rptr. 335

Interest on purchase price but not exceeding increase in proportional net worth of corporation attributable to shares of sellers was awardable incident to decree for specific performance of agreement to sell shares of close corporation. Addiego v. Hill (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 453, 461-462, 95 Cal. Rptr. 151

Order enjoining defendants from all activities in connection with corporation was proper pending appeal of decree of specific performance of agreement to sell control shares, defendants having threatened to drain all cash from corporation during pendency of appeal. Addiego v. Hill (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 280, 289, 73 Cal. Rptr. 901

Improper determination by independent accountants of value of shares to be sold under option did not preclude specific performance of option agreement to sell shares. Polinsky v. Vaughan (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 183, 193, 73 Cal. Rptr. 764 ; Piedmont Publishing Co. v. Rogers (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 171, 191-192, 14 Cal. Rptr. 133

[2] Financing Share Transfers

Code Civ. Proc. § 580b (barring deficiency judgments after foreclosure of real property purchase-money mortgage) is not applicable to deed of trust given by acquired entity pledging its real property to secure note taken by seller of all of acquired entity's shares; transaction having been structured as purchase of shares by individuals, those individuals' liability is not affected by fact that acquired corporation later pledged its assets. Union Bank v. Anderson (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 941, 949-950, 283 Cal. Rptr. 823

[3] Notice of Adverse Claims

If circumstances justify conclusion that failure to make inquiry arose from suspicion that inquiry would disclose vice or defect in instrument or transaction, purchaser is charged with knowledge. Christian v. California Bank (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 421, 425, 182 P.2d 554

Com. Code § 8105(a)(2) sets forth subjective standard; in case involving stolen certificate, introducing broker held not to have had actual notice of adverse claim unless it believed there was significant probability of adverse claim and nevertheless deliberately avoided further information that would confirm its suspicion; no reasonable jury could find that brokers believed there was significant probability of adverse claim. Decker v. Yorkton Securities, Inc. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 1315, 1322-1324, 1327, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 645

Generally, whether person has notice of adverse claim is question of mere knowledge of facts sufficient to put prudent person on inquiry, without actual knowledge; mere suspicion of infirmity or defect of title does not preclude purchaser from being bona fide purchaser unless circumstances or suspicions are so cogent and obvious that to remain passive would amount to bad faith. Popp v. Exchange Bank (1922) 189 Cal. 296, 303, 208 P. 113

Lender that accepted stolen share certificates as collateral had reason to know they were stolen, and lender's claim to bona fide purchaser status was rejected. Hollywood Nat. Bank v. International Business Machines Corp. (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 607, 613-615, 113 Cal. Rptr. 494

[4] Transfer Restrictions

Provision for division of shares in marital property settlement agreement could not be specifically enforced although shares were subject to transfer restriction, since neither corporation nor other shareholders were parties to settlement agreement. Casady v. Modern Metal Spinning & Mfg. Co. (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 728, 732-733, 10 Cal. Rptr. 790

[5] Violation of Bylaws

Owner of half of pharmacy corporation's shares, who intended to sell all of those shares, had fiduciary duty to owner of other half not to violate bylaw giving right of first refusal to buy those shares or bylaw forbidding transfer of shares to anyone else for price lower, or on terms more favorable, than price and terms stated in notice of intent to sell. Le v. Pham (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1201, 1207-1212, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 606

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use by a seller of shares to recover the purchase price from the buyer. This form illustrates the language appropriate to a complaint based on an installment contract.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges the following facts constituting the cause of action:

- The making of the purchase agreement and its material terms (Paragraph 2).
- The defendant's failure to pay the price according to the agreement (Paragraphs 3-5).
- The plaintiff's tender of the shares to the defendant and the defendant's refusal to pay (Paragraph 6).

[4] Jurisdiction

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const. art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)]. In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the first paper must state whether the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

[5] Venue

Ordinarily, the action may be commenced in any of the following counties [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]:

- The county where any defendant resides at the commencement of the action; or
- If a defendant contracted to perform the obligation, on which the action is founded, in a particular county, then either:
    - The county where the obligation is to be performed, or
    - The county where the contract in fact was entered into.

In special cases, other counties also may be proper [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b) (action arising from consumer transaction); Code Civ. Proc. § 395.1 (action against executor, administrator, guardian, or trustee); Code Civ. Proc. § 395.2 (action against unincorporated association)]. When a corporation is the defendant, the action may be filed in the county where the obligation or liability arose or the county in which the corporation's principal place of business is situated [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5].

[6] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

§ 163.41 Affirmative Defense to Action to Recover Purchase Price of Shares--Illegal Contract [Civ. Code § 1667(1)]--Noncompliance With Qualification Requirement Under Corporate Securities Law [Corp. Code § 25130]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense to Action to Recover Purchase Price of Shares--Illegal Contract [Civ. Code § 1667(1)]--Noncompliance With Qualification Requirement Under Corporate Securities Law [Corp. Code § 25130]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that the contract alleged in the complaint is unenforceable. The offer and sale of the shares that are the subject of the contract were not qualified by the Commissioner of Corporations as required by Corporations Code Section 25130. The offer and sale are subject to qualification, and no exemption from qualification is provided, under the Corporate Securities Law.

The affirmative defense in [1], above, may be asserted in an action to recover the purchase price of shares. The defense is based on illegality of the contract [Civ. Code § 1667] for failure of the seller (the plaintiff) to comply with the qualification requirements of the Corporate Securities Law [see generally Corp. Code § 25000 et seq.], assuming that the offer and sale of the shares would be subject to qualification and that no exemption from qualification exists. For discussion of the qualification requirements, see § 163.11[7] and Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation .

This defense would be appropriate only if the contract was wholly executory; that is, if the defendant has not yet paid any consideration for the shares. If the defendant has made partial payment, he or she is left to the remedy under the Corporate Securities Law and could seek rescission and restitution [see Corp. Code § 25503]. For a discussion and forms related to actions for rescission of transactions that violate of the Corporate Securities Law, see Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation .

For discussion and forms of answers generally, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense to Action to Recover Purchase Price of Shares--Illegal Contract [Civ. Code § 1667(1)]--Noncompliance With Legend Requirement [Corp. Code § 25133]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that the contract alleged in the complaint is unenforceable. The shares that are the subject of the contract are required to bear, but they do not bear, a legend to the effect that the written consent of the Commissioner of Corporations must be obtained before any sale or transfer of the shares. No written consent to sale or transfer or these shares was obtained from the Commissioner. The attempted sale or transfer of the shares pursuant to the contract therefore violates Corp. Code § 25133.

[2] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, may be asserted in an action to recover the purchase price of shares based on illegality of the contract [Civ. Code § 1667]. If the purchaser has partially or fully paid for the shares, however, his or her remedy is rescission and restitution under the Corporate Securities Law [see Corp. Code § 25503]. For a discussion and forms related to actions for rescission of transactions that violate of the Corporate Securities Law, see § 163.11[7] and Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation .

For discussion and forms of answers generally, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[3] Required Consent to Transfer

It is unlawful for any person, without the written consent of the Commissioner of Corporations, to consummate the sale or transfer of any shares that are subject to a currently effective legend condition requiring the Commissioner's consent or concerning which the Commissioner has issued a written notice to the holders pursuant to Corp. Code § 25534 ordering the share certificates to be stamped or printed with a legend as provided in that section [Corp. Code § 25133].

7. Plaintiff has performed all terms, covenants, and conditions on his/her part to be performed under the agreement. Plaintiff has always been, and now is, ready, willing, and able to pay in cash the amount of the purchase price agreed, and plaintiff hereby offers to comply with and perform each and every requirement imposed on him/her by the agreement in order to enable him/her to acquire the shares.

8. The consideration set forth in the agreement is the fair and reasonable value of the shares, and the contract is, as to defendant, just and reasonable.

9. The total number of shares of the capital stock of the corporation issued and outstanding is _____ [number] shares, all of which are owned in the aggregate by _____ [number] persons including defendant. The shares that defendant agreed to sell to plaintiff would permit plaintiff to obtain control of the corporation. Plaintiff has no plain, speedy, or adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law in that the shares that defendant has agreed to sell to plaintiff have a peculiar value to plaintiff as control shares and are not traded on any open market. Damages cannot be properly ascertained and will be inadequate to compensate plaintiff for the detriment suffered by him/her.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. That defendant sell _____ [number] shares of the stock of _____ [name of corporation] to plaintiff for the total purchase price of $_____, pursuant to the agreement between plaintiff and defendant;

2. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

3. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for specific performance of an agreement [see Civ. Code § 3384 et seq.] to sell shares representing control of a corporation and not obtainable on any open market [see, e.g., Glascock v. Sukumlyn (1955)

131 Cal. App. 2d 587, 593, 281 P.2d 90 (specific performance was proper to enforce contract to sell shares having peculiar value to plaintiff because they could not have been purchased readily on open market, could be acquired from only one person, and were acquired by plaintiff as part of his business plan)]. For discussion, see § 163.11[8], and, for additional discussion and forms relating to specific performance of contracts, see Ch. 528, Specific Performance .

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges the following facts constituting the cause of action:

- The agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant (Paragraph 4).

- The plaintiff's performance of all terms on his or her part pursuant to the agreement to the extent permitted by the defendant [see Reyburn v. Young (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 478, 479, 54 P.2d 86 (failure to plead performance, tender, or excuse in specific performance action)] (Paragraphs 5-7).

- Failure by the defendant to perform under the agreement (Paragraph 6).

- That the consideration is adequate and the contract is just and reasonable as to the defendant [see Rose v. Lawton (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 18, 19, 29 Cal. Rptr. 844 (complaint for specific performance must allege that defendant received adequate consideration or that contract was, as to defendant, just and reasonable)] (Paragraph 8).

- That the plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law because the shares have a peculiar value as control shares and are not obtainable on an open market [see Civ. Code § 3384; Kaneko v. Okuda (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 217, 233-234, 15 Cal. Rptr. 792 ; Sherwood v. Wallin (1905) 1 Cal. App. 532, 536-537, 82 P. 566] (Paragraph 9).

The corporation is not a proper party in the action if the corporation is not a party to the agreement and has no first-refusal rights [Piedmont Publishing Co. v. Rogers (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 171, 182, 14 Cal. Rptr. 133] .

[4] Jurisdiction

An action for specific performance of a contract is in the jurisdiction of the superior court and is not a limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(b)].

_____ [names],	)	TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER, AND

Plaintiff alleges:

1. _____ [Allege capacity and residence of defendant, e.g., Defendant is a resident of _____ County, California].

2. _____ [Name of corporation] is, and at all times mentioned in this pleading was, a California corporation ("the corporation"). The corporation is authorized by the articles of incorporation to issue _____ [number] shares of stock.

3. Plaintiff is, and at all times mentioned in this pleading was, _____ [specify relationship with corporation, e.g., the duly elected, qualified, and acting president] of the corporation, and until _____ [date], plaintiff owned _____ [number] shares of the stock of the corporation. Plaintiff's share holding composed _____ percent of the total authorized issue of the stock.

4. On or about _____ [date], defendant was employed by the corporation as _____ [specify position].

5. On or about _____ [date], in order to provide incentive to key employees and to induce them to foster and promote the business of the corporation, plaintiff inaugurated a program by which certain key employees could acquire some of plaintiff's shares.

6. In accordance with the program, on _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant entered into a written agreement with respect to defendant's acquiring _____ [number] of plaintiff's shares ("the incentive shares"). A copy of the agreement is attached as Exhibit A and made part of this pleading.

7. Pursuant to the agreement, defendant purchased the incentive shares for the total price of $_____.

8. By the terms of the agreement, the parties agreed that if for any reason defendant should leave employment with the corporation, plaintiff would have the right and exclusive option to repurchase the inventive shares at fair market value as determined by _____ [specify manner of determining value, e.g., the firm of _____ (name)], provided, however, that plaintiff would pay no less than $_____ a share for the shares. The option exists for _____ [specify term] after defendant's termination of employment. During that term defendant could not to sell or transfer the incentive shares to any other person.

9. On _____ [date], defendant voluntarily left employment with the corporation.

10. On _____ [date], plaintiff notified defendant in writing that plaintiff exercised the option to repurchase all of the incentive shares and tendered the full amount of the fair market value, $_____, as determined in accordance with the method provided in the agreement.

11. Defendant repudiated his/her obligation under the agreement, refused to accept the price tendered by plaintiff, and refused to sell, transfer, or deliver the incentive shares to plaintiff.

12. The consideration set forth in the agreement is adequate and the contract is, as to defendant, just and reasonable.

13. Plaintiff has performed all of the covenants and conditions contained in the agreement on his/her part to be performed. Defendant has refused, and continues to refuse, to sell and transfer the incentive shares pursuant to the agreement.

14. Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law in that the incentive shares have a unique and peculiar value to plaintiff in the pursuit of his/her business, and shares of the corporation are not available on the open market. Damages would be extremely difficult to ascertain and would not afford adequate relief.

[15. Plaintiff is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that defendant, unless restrained by the court, will sell the incentive shares to other persons. That act would render a judgment for plaintiff ineffectual.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

[1. For a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction restraining defendant from transferring, selling, assigning, or otherwise disposing of the incentive shares pending a hearing and trial of this action;]

2. That the court order defendant to sell, transfer, and convey _____ [number] shares of the stock of _____ [name of corporation] to plaintiff for the total price of $_____;

3. For costs of suit incurred; and

4. For other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action for specific performance of an option agreement to resell shares held by a key employee whose employment is terminated, and to obtain a preliminary injunction pending trial to restrain the defendant from disposing of the shares in violation of the agreement. For discussion of the enforcement of restrictions on the transfer of shares, see § 163.12[2].

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges the following facts constituting the cause of action:

- The plaintiff's incentive program for transferring shares to key employees (Paragraphs 5-7).

- The agreement with the defendant pursuant to that program, by which the defendant purchased incentive shares and agreed that the plaintiff would have an option to repurchase the shares on termination of the defendant's employment (Paragraphs 7 and 8).

- The termination of the defendant's employment (Paragraph 9).

- The plaintiff's exercise of the option [see Glascock v. Sukumlyn (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 587, 594, 281 P.2d 90 (right to specific performance of option to purchase shares is conditioned on proof that plaintiff's tender of performance conformed with terms of offer)] (Paragraph 10).

- The defendant's repudiation of the agreement and refusal to sell the incentive shares to the plaintiff (Paragraph 11).

- That the contract is supported by adequate consideration [see Glascock v. Sukumlyn (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 587, 592, 281 P.2d 90 (adequacy of consideration for option to purchase shares is determined at date option was granted, not date option was exercised)] and is just and reasonable as to the defendant (Paragraph 12).

- That the plaintiff has performed all conditions required of him or her under the agreement [see Reyburn v. Young (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 478, 479, 54 P.2d 86 (failure to plead performance, tender, or excuse in specific performance actions)] (Paragraph 13).

- That the plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law [see Civ. Code § 3384; Polinsky v. Vaughan (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 183, 187, 73 Cal. Rptr.764 (option agreement to sell shares is subject to specific performance)] (Paragraph 14).

- Facts to support an application for pendente lite injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 526, 527 (grounds for injunction; temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction)] (Paragraph 15).

[4] Additional Papers

A temporary restraining order may not be granted unless it appears from facts shown by affidavit or declaration executed under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], or by a verified complaint, that great or irreparable injury would result to the applicant before the matter can be heard on notice [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(d)]. For further discussion and forms relating to temporary restraining orders and injunction, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

[5] Jurisdiction

An action for specific performance of a contract and injunctive relief is in the jurisdiction of the superior court and is not a limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(b)].

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, may be used to compel a corporation and its responsible officers and agents to register a transfer of shares [see Com. Code § 8401; for discussion, see § 163.14[1][a]] and to recover statutory penalties against the officers of the corporation causing the neglect, failure, or refusal to register the shares (and issue the plaintiff a new certificate) [see Corp. Code § 2201; for discussion, see § 163.14[4][b]; see also Spangenberg v. Western Heavy Hardware & Iron Co. (1913) 166 Cal. 284, 285, 135 P. 1127 (suit in equity rather than mandate proceeding is appropriate remedy to compel corporation to register transfer of shares); Hagan v. Fairfield (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 240, 248, 16 Cal. Rptr.14] .

[3] Allegations

On the first cause of action the complaint alleges the following facts:

- The shares in question were rightfully transferred to the plaintiff (Paragraph 7).
- The plaintiff presented a certificate in registered form (along with a guaranty of the endorser's signature) or an instruction, with a request for registration of the transfer, and all applicable tax laws have been complied with (Paragraph 8).
- There was no notice of an adverse claims, nor any stop-transfer notice (Paragraph 9).
- The defendants refused to register the transfer (Paragraph 12).
- The plaintiff has suffered damages (Paragraph 13).

On the second cause of action the complaint additionally alleges that the president and secretary, as officers of the corporation, unreasonably caused the neglect, failure, or refusal by the corporation, its transfer agent, and registrar to register the transfer (and to issue a new certificate to the plaintiff), entitling the plaintiff to recover a statutory penalty against them [see Corp. Code § 2201; for discussion, see § 163.14[4][b]].

Volume 14: Corporations: Capacity thru Corporations: Dissolution and Winding Up-Chs. 160-173
Chapter 164 CORPORATIONS: DIVIDENDS AND REACQUISITIONS OF SHARES
PART I. SCOPE

§ 164.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses corporate dividends and a corporation's reacquisition of its shares whether by redemption or by repurchase. Since these transactions will in most instances involve a "distribution to shareholders" [Corp. Code § 166], and therefore be subject to legal tests based on the corporation's financial condition, this part first discusses the nature of these transactions as distributions, the applicable tests, and the liabilities that may be incurred in connection with unlawful distributions. This part next covers matters particularly related to the declaration and payment of dividends, the repurchase of shares, and the procedures related to the issuance of redeemable shares and their ultimate redemption.

Although this chapter also covers the statutory tests governing the legality of a distribution to shareholders, the accounting concepts which form an integral part of these tests are beyond its scope. For a discussion of these concepts and other matters related to distributions generally, see Ballantine and Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares (Matthew Bender).

The forms in this chapter include complaints against directors [see § 164.50] and shareholders [see § 164.51] based on their participation in an improper distribution, cross complaints by directors and shareholders to implead others liable for such distributions [§§ 164.52, 164.53], and a complaint for damages for wrongful refusal to make a distribution [see § 164.54].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-164 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 164.10

§ 164.10 Governing Statutes

The provisions of the General Corporation Law governing the payment of dividends and the reacquisition of shares, including the propriety of such transactions and the liability of shareholder recipients of unlawful distributions, are found in Corp. Code §§ 500-508. Corp. Code §§ 309 and 316 govern the liability of directors who authorize unlawful distributions. General provisions and definitions applicable to this chapter may be found in Chapter 1 [Corp. Code §§ 100-195] of the General Corporation Law. Various provisions of Chapter 4 [Corp. Code §§ 400-423] govern the issuance of redeemable shares and the dividend rights of certain types of shares. Corp. Code § 701 prescribes the method for determining the record date of shareholders entitled to receive dividends.

§ 164.11 Distribution to Its Shareholders

[1] Defined

"Distribution to its shareholders" means the transfer of cash or property by a corporation to its shareholders without consideration, whether by way of dividend or otherwise, except a dividend in shares of the corporation. The term also means the purchase or redemption by a corporation of its shares for cash or property [Corp. Code § 166].

[2] By Subsidiary

A distribution to its shareholders by a corporation includes the foregoing transfers, purchases, or redemptions by a subsidiary of the corporation [Corp. Code § 166; see Corp. Code § 189 (defining "subsidiary")].

[3] Time of Distribution

[a] Dividends

The time of any distribution by way of dividend is deemed to be the date of its declaration [Corp. Code § 166].

[b] Repurchase or Redemption

The time of any distribution by purchase or redemption of shares is deemed to be the date cash or property is transferred by the corporation, whether or not pursuant to a contract of an earlier date. However, when a debt obligation that is a security [see Com. Code § 8102] is issued in exchange for shares, the time of the distribution is the date when the corporation acquires the shares in such an exchange [Corp. Code § 166].

[c] Sinking Fund Payment

In the case of a sinking fund payment, cash or property is transferred as a distribution at the time that it is delivered to a trustee for the holders of preferred shares [see Corp. Code § 176 (defining "preferred shares")] to be used for the redemption of those shares, or the time that it is physically segregated by the corporation in trust for that purpose [Corp.

Code § 166].

[4] Exclusions

"Distribution to its shareholders" does not include [Corp. Code § 166]:

- Satisfaction of a final judgment of a court or tribunal of appropriate jurisdiction ordering the rescission of the issuance of shares;

- The rescission by a corporation of the issuance of the shares, if the board determines (with any director who is, or would be, a party to the transaction not being entitled to vote) that it is reasonably likely that the holder or holders of the shares in question could legally enforce a claim for the rescission, that the rescission is in the best interests of the corporation, and that the corporation is likely to be able to meet its liabilities (except those for which payment is otherwise adequately provided) as they mature; or

- The repurchase by a corporation of the shares issued by it pursuant to Corp. Code § 408 (employee stock purchase or stock option plans), if the board determines (with any director who is, or would be, a party to the transaction not being entitled to vote) that the repurchase is in the best interests of the corporation and that the corporation is likely to be able to meet its liabilities (except those for which payment is otherwise adequately provided) as they mature.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-164 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 164.12

§ 164.12 When Distributions Are Permissible

[1] Use of Generally Accepted Accounting Principles

Whether or not the tests for determining the propriety of a distribution to shareholders are satisfied will depend almost exclusively on the use of generally accepted accounting principles. Generally speaking, all references in the General Corporation Law to financial statements, balance sheets, income statements, and statements of cashflows, and all references to assets, liabilities, earnings, retained earnings, and similar accounting items of a corporation mean those financial statements or comparable statements or items prepared or determined in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles then applicable, and fairly presenting, in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles, the matters that they purport to present, subject to any specific accounting treatment required by a particular provision of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 114]. For discussion of how a court may be expected to deal with the reference to generally accepted accounting principles, see Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports, § 165.25[2].

[2] Use of Consolidated Statements

Unless otherwise provided in the General Corporation Law, all references to financial statements mean, in the case of a corporation which has subsidiaries, consolidated statements of the corporation and such of its subsidiaries as are required or permitted to be included in such consolidated statements under generally accepted accounting principles then applicable [Corp. Code § 114].

[3] Two Basic Tests

[a] Generally

The corporation's ability to legally make a distribution to its shareholders will depend initially on whether or not the corporation meets either of the two prescribed tests of its financial position at the time of the distribution [see Corp. Code § 166 (stating when a distribution is made); see also discussion in § 164.50[3]]. Neither of these two tests, however, applies to a corporation licensed as a broker-dealer under Corp. Code § 25210 et seq., if immediately after giving effect to any distribution, the corporation is in compliance with the net capital rules of the Commissioner of Corporations and the Securities and Exchange Commission [Corp. Code § 500(e)].

[b] Retained Earnings Test

The first test prohibits a corporation from making a distribution unless the amount of the retained earnings of the corporation immediately prior thereto equals or exceeds the amount of the proposed distribution [Corp. Code § 500(a); but see Corp. Code § 500(e) and discussion in § 164.50[4][a]].

[c] Remaining Assets Test

If the retained earnings test is not met, the second basic test prohibits a distribution unless, immediately after giving effect to the distribution:

- The sum of the assets of the corporation, exclusive of goodwill, capitalized research and development expenses, and deferred charges, would be at least equal to one and one-fourth times its liabilities, not including deferred taxes, deferred income, and other deferred credits [Corp. Code § 500(b)(1)]; and

- The current assets of the corporation would be at least equal to its current liabilities or, if the average of the earnings of the corporation before taxes on income and before interest expense for those two preceding fiscal years was less than the average of the interest expense of the corporation forthose fiscal years, at least equal to one and one-fourth times its currentliabilities. However, in determining the amount of the assets of the corporation, profits derived from an exchange of assets shall not be included unless the assets received are currently realizable in cash. Furthermore, for the purposes of this section, "current assets" may include net amounts which the board has determined in good faith may reasonably be expected to be received from customers during the 12-month period used in calculating current liabilities pursuant to existing contractual relationships obligating those customers to make fixed or periodic payments during the term of the contract or, in the case of public utilities, pursuant to service connection with customers, after in each case giving effect to future costs not included in current liabilities but reasonably expected to be incurred by the corporation in performing those contracts or providing service to utility customers [Corp. Code § 500(b)(2)].

The second part of this test [Corp. Code § 500(b)(2)] does not apply to a corporation that does not classify its assets into current and fixed under generally accepted accounting principles [Corp. Code § 500(b)(2); but see Corp. Code § 500(e); see also discussion in § 164.50[4][a]].

For the purpose of applying Corp. Code § 500 to a distribution by a corporation of cash or property in payment by the corporation in connection with the purchase of its shares, there must be added to retained earnings all amounts that had been previously deducted with respect to obligations incurred in connection with the corporation's repurchase of its shares and reflected on the corporation's balance sheet, but not in excess of the principal of the obligations that remain unpaid immediately before the distribution. In addition, there must be deducted from liabilities all amounts that had been previously added with respect to the obligations incurred in connection with the corporation's repurchase of its shares and reflected on the corporation's balance sheet, but not in excess of the principal of the obligations that will remain unpaid after the distribution, provided that no addition to retained earnings or deduction from liabilities under Corp. Code § 500(b)(2) may occur on account of any obligation that is a distribution to the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 166 (when distribution is made)] at the time the obligation is incurred [Corp. Code § 500(d)].

[4] Distribution of Property

For the purpose of both the retained earnings and remaining assets tests, and for the purposes of other tests set forth in

Corp. Code § 500 et seq., the amount of any distribution payable in property must be determined on the basis of the value at which the corporation carries the property on its financial statements in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles [Corp. Code § 500(c)].

[5] Overriding Solvency Test

In addition to the two basic tests, Corp. Code § 501 provides that neither a corporation nor any of its subsidiaries may make any distribution to the corporation's shareholders if the corporation or the subsidiary making the distribution is, or as a result of the distribution would be, likely to be unable to meet its liabilities, except for those whose payment is otherwise adequately provided for, as they mature.

[6] Tests Protecting Liquidation and Dividend Preferences

Neither a corporation nor any of its subsidiaries is permitted to make any distribution to the corporation's shareholders on any shares of its stock of any class or series that are junior to outstanding shares of any other class or series with respect to distribution of assets on liquidation if, after giving effect to the distribution, the excess of its assets (exclusive of goodwill, capitalized research and development expenses, and deferred charges) over its liabilities (not including deferred taxes, deferred income, and other deferred credits) would be less than the liquidation preference of all shares having a preference on liquidation over the class or series to which the distribution is made [Corp. Code § 502]. Nevertheless, for the purpose of applying Corp. Code § 502 to a distribution by a corporation of cash or property in payment by the corporation in connection with the purchase of its shares, there must be deducted from liabilities all amounts that had been previously added with respect to obligations incurred in connection with the corporation's repurchase of its shares and reflected on the corporation's balance sheet, but not in excess of the principal of the obligations that will remain unpaid after the distribution [Corp. Code § 502]. Furthermore, no deduction from liabilities may occur on account of any obligation that is a distribution to the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 166 (when distribution is made)] at the time the obligation is incurred [Corp. Code § 502].

Neither a corporation nor any of its subsidiaries is permitted to make any distribution to the corporation's shareholders on any shares of its stock of any class or series that are junior to outstanding shares of any other class or series with respect to payment of dividends, and as to which senior class or series the corporation has cumulative dividends in arrears, unless the amount of the retained earnings of the corporation immediately prior thereto equals or exceeds the amount of proposed distribution plus the aggregate amount of the cumulative dividend in arrears on all shares having a preference with respect to payment of dividends over the class or series to which the distribution is made [Corp. Code § 503]. "Cumulative dividends in arrears" means only cumulative dividends that have not been paid as required on a scheduled payment date set forth in, or determined pursuant to, the articles of incorporation, regardless of whether those dividends had been declared prior to that scheduled payment date [Corp. Code § 163.1]. Nevertheless, for the purpose of applying Corp. Code § 503 to a distribution by a corporation of cash or property in payment by the corporation in connection with the purchase of its shares, there must be added to retainedearnings all amounts that had been previously deducted therefrom with respect to obligations incurred in connection with the corporation's repurchase of its shares and reflected on the corporation's balance sheet, but not in excess of the principal of the obligations that remain unpaid immediately before the distribution. Furthermore, no addition to retained earnings may occur on account of any obligation that is a distribution to the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 166 (when distribution is made)] at the time the obligation is incurred [Corp. Code § 503].

[7] Other Tests or Restrictions Affecting Distributions

Nothing in Corp. Code §§ 500-510 prohibits additional restrictions on the declaration of dividends or the purchase or redemption of a corporation's own shares by provisions in the articles or bylaws or in any indenture or other agreement entered into by the corporation [Corp. Code § 505]. For example, in the case of a statutory close corporation [see Corp. Code § 158 (defining "close corporation")], the shareholders could enter a shareholders' agreement pursuant to Corp.

Code § 300(b) which agreement would impose restrictions on distributions. However, the statutory tests described above could not be waived or altered by such an agreement [Corp. Code § 300(c)].

[8] Applicability of Tests to Foreign Corporations

While the directors of a foreign corporation that transacts intrastate business in California [see Corp. Code § 191 (defining "transact intrastate business")] are liable for, among other transgressions, the making of unauthorized dividends, the purchase of shares or the distribution of assets in accordance with any applicable law of the state of incorporation [Corp. Code § 2116], the directors (and shareholders) of a nominally foreign corporation [see Corp. Code § 2115; see also Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity , discussing nominally foreign corporations] will be liable under California law when distributions are made which do not meet the tests of Corp. Code §§ 500-505 [Corp. Code § 2115(b)].

[9] Applicability of Tests to Dissenting Shareholders

To the extent that any of the tests described above prevent payment to any holders of dissenting shares [see Corp. Code § 1300(b)(defining "dissenting shares"); see also Ch. 169, Corporations: Reorganizations], for example, shareholders who have elected to require that the corporation purchase their shares upon its reorganization or merger, then those shareholders will become subordinated creditors of the corporation until the debt to them can be legally paid under the tests discussed above [Corp. Code § 1306].

[10] Inapplicability of Tests

[a] Investment Companies and Real Estate Investment Trusts

The retained earnings and remaining assets tests [see Corp. Code § 500] do not apply to any dividend declared by a regulated investment company, as defined in I.R.C. § 851, to the extent that the dividend is necessary to maintain the status of the corporation as a regulated investment company under the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code [Corp. Code § 504(a)(1); see I.R.C. §§ 851-855 (governing regulated investment companies)].

Those tests also do not apply to a real estate investment trust, as defined in the Internal Code, to the extent that the dividend is necessary to maintain the status of the corporation as a real estate investment trust under that code [Corp. Code § 504(a)(2)].

None of the restrictions on distributions described above [see Corp. Code §§ 500-503] apply to any purchase or redemption of shares redeemable at the option of the holder by a registered open-end investment company under the Investment Company Act of 1940 [15 U.S.C. § 80a-1 et seq.], so long as the right of redemption remains unsuspended under the provisions of that act and under the articles of incorporation and bylaws of the corporation [Corp. Code § 504(b)].

[b] Corporations in Dissolution

None of the provisions relating to distributions contained in Corp. Code § 500 et seq. apply in connection with any proceeding for winding up and dissolution of a corporation pursuant to Corp. Code §§ 1800-1907 [Corp. Code § 508; see Ch. 170, Corporations: Dissolution , regarding distributions on dissolution].

[c] Insurance--Funded Share Retirements

None of the restrictions on distributions in Corp. Code §§ 500-503 will apply to a purchase or redemption of shares of a deceased shareholder from the proceeds of insurance on the shareholder's life in excess of the total of all premium payments by the corporation, provided that the redemption or repurchase is pursuant to an agreement between the shareholder and the corporation [Corp. Code § 503.1].

[d] Disability

Corp. Code §§ 500-503 do not apply to the purchase or redemption of the shares of a disabled shareholder from the proceeds of disability insurance applicable to the disabled shareholder in excess of the total amount of all premiums paid by the corporation for the insurance, in order to carry out the provisions of an agreement between the corporation and the shareholder to purchase or redeem shares on the disability of the shareholder as defined in that policy. "Disability insurance" means an agreement of indemnification against the insured's loss of the ability to work because of accident or illness [Corp. Code § 503.2].

§ 164.13 Liability for Improper Distributions

[1] Shareholders' Liability

[a] Generally

Any shareholder who receives any distribution prohibited by Corp. Code § 500 et seq. with knowledge of facts indicating the impropriety of the distribution is liable to the corporation for the benefit of all of the creditors or shareholders entitled to institute an action for the amount so received by the shareholder, with interest on that amount at the legal rate on judgments until paid, but not exceeding the liabilities of the corporation owed to nonconsenting creditors at the time of the violation and the injury suffered by nonconsenting shareholders, as the case may be [Corp. Code § 506(a)]. Further, in the event that any shareholder receives any distribution of the corporation's property prohibited by Corp. Code § 500 et seq., the shareholder receiving that illegal distribution is liable to the corporation for an amount equal to the fair market value of the property at the time of the illegal distribution, plus any interest on that amount from the date of distribution at the legal rate on judgments until paid, together with all reasonably incurred costs of appraisal or other valuation, if any, of that property, but not exceeding the liabilities of the corporation owed to nonconsenting creditors at the time of the violation "and" [sic: or] the injury suffered by nonconsenting shareholders, as the case may be [Corp. Code § 506(a)].

[b] Action to Enforce Liability of Shareholders

Suit may be brought in the name of the corporation to enforce the liability of shareholders:

- To creditors for a distribution which violates Corp. Code § 500 or 501 (retained earnings or remaining assets test or insolvency test), against any or all shareholders liable, by any one or more creditors of the corporation whose debts or claims arose prior to the time of the distribution and who have not consented to the distribution, whether or not they have reduced their claims to judgment; or

- To preferred shareholders for distributions in derogation of their liquidation or dividend preferences [see Corp. Code §§ 502, 503], against any or all shareholders liable, by any one or more holders of preferred shares whose shares were outstanding at the time of the distribution and who have not consented to the distribution. The preferred shareholders may bring such an action in the name of the corporation without complying with the requirements for derivative suits set forth in Corp. Code § 800 [Corp. Code § 506(b)].

[c] Right to Implead Other Shareholders Liable

Any shareholder sued under Corp. Code § 506 may implead all other shareholders liable and may compel contribution, either in that action or in an independent action, against shareholders not joined in that action [Corp. Code § 506(c)]. Nothing contained in Corp. Code § 500 affects any liability which any shareholder may have under Civ. Code § 3439 et seq. (fraudulent conveyances) [Corp. Code § 506(d)].

[3] Liability of Directors

[a] Generally

Directors of a corporation who approve the making of any distribution to its shareholders are, to the extent the distribution is contrary to the provisions of Corp. Code §§ 500-503, jointly and severally liable to the corporation for the benefit of all the creditors or shareholders entitled to institute an action to enforce the liability. The directors' liability, however, is subject to Corp. Code § 309 which sets forth the standard of care that a director must observe [Corp. Code § 316(a)]. Under Corp. Code § 309(c), a person who performs the duties of a director in accordance with the prescribed standard of care will have no liability based on any alleged failure to discharge the person's obligations as a director [Corp. Code § 309(c)]. In addition, the liability of a director for monetary damages may be eliminated or limited in the articles of incorporation to the extent provided in Corp. Code § 204(a)(10) [Corp. Code § 309(c); see Fin. Code § 8501 (governing directors of federal savings associations)]. For a complete discussion of the standard of care and the right of a director to rely on the opinions, reports, and data supplied by others, see Ch. 167, Corporations: Directors and Management .

[b] Damages

The damages recoverable from a director are computed as the amount of the illegal distribution (or if the distribution consists of property, the fair market value of the property at the time of the distribution), plus interest on that amount from the date of the distribution at the legal rate on judgments until paid, together with all reasonable incurred costs of appraisal and other valuation, if any, of the property distributed, or the loss suffered by the corporation as a result of the illegal loan or guaranty, as the case may be, but not exceeding the liabilities of the corporation owed to nonconsenting creditors at the time of the violation "and" [sic: or] the injury suffered by nonconsenting shareholders, as the case may be [Corp. Code § 316(d)].

[c] Action to Enforce Liability of Directors

Suit in the name of the corporation to enforce the liability of directors whoapproved of an improper distribution to its shareholders may be brought against any or all directors liable by the same creditors and shareholders, and under the same conditions, as are prescribed in Corp. Code § 506(b) relating to the persons entitled to sue shareholders receiving improper distributions [Corp. Code § 316(c); see § 164.13[2]].

[d] Director's Right to Contribution or Action Against Shareholders

Any director sued because of an improper distribution may implead in the suit all other directors liable and may compel contribution from the other directors liable for the improper distribution either in that action or in an independent action against directors not joined as parties in that action [Corp. Code § 316(e)]. A director held liable for an improper distribution by the corporation is also entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the corporation against shareholders who received the distribution [Corp. Code § 316(f)]. The director may proceed against these shareholders either by filing a cross complaint against them in the action in which the director is sued, or by bringing an independent action against them [Corp. Code § 316(f)].

14-164 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 164.14

§ 164.14 Dividends

[1] Determination of Shareholders of Record

The time of any "distribution" by way of dividend is the date of declaration of the dividend [Corp. Code § 166]. In order that the corporation may determine that the shareholders are entitled to receive payment of any dividend or other distribution or allotment of any rights, the board may fix, in advance, a record date, which must not be more than 60 days prior to the date set for payment in the declaration [Corp. Code § 701(a)]. If no record date is fixed, the record date for determining shareholders will be at the close of business on the day on which the board adopts the resolution relating thereto, or the 60th day prior to the date of the action, whichever is later [Corp. Code § 701(b)(3)]. The shareholders at the close of business on the record date are entitled to receive the dividend, distribution, or allotment of rights, notwithstanding any transfer of any shares on the books of the corporation after the record date, except as otherwise provided in the articles or by agreement or in the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 701(d)].

[2] Identification of Source

Each dividend other than one chargeable to retained earnings must be identified in a notice to shareholders as being made from a source other than retained earnings, stating its accounting treatment. The notice must accompany the dividend or must be given within three months after the end of the fiscal year in which the dividend is paid [Corp. Code § 507].

[3] Dividends on Partly Paid Shares

On the declaration of any dividend on fully paid shares, the corporation must declare a dividend on partly paid shares of the same class, but only on the basis of the percentage of the consideration actually paid thereon [Corp. Code § 409(d)].

[4] Shareholders' Right to Dividends

A shareholder has no vested right to a dividend until it has been declared by the corporation's board of directors [

Miller v. McColgan (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 432, 436, 110 P.2d 419] . However, while the board of directors may exercise its judgment as to the best use of funds available for distribution as dividends, the discretion of the board must be exercised fairly and honestly, and not arbitrarily. Thus, a court may interfere with the board's financial judgment if it appears that dividends are being paid in the form of wages to shareholder-employees but not to other shareholders [De Martini v. Scavenger's Protective Asso. (1935) 3 Cal. App. 2d 691, 698, 40 P.2d 317 ; O'Hare v. Marine Elec. Co. (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 33, 37, 39 Cal. Rptr. 799] . Nevertheless, as a general rule the courts are reluctant to interfere with the board's discretion in the matter of dividends [Richards v. Pacific S.W. Discount Corp. (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 551, 558, 112 P.2d 698] .

[b] Preferred Shares

The preferred shareholders usually hold shares which have a preference, either cumulative or noncumulative, as to dividends. This means that those shareholders are entitled to receive a regular periodic dividend payable before dividends may be declared on common shares. When those dividends are "cumulative," all accumulated and unpaid dividends must be paid before common shareholders may receive dividends or payments upon liquidation. The general rule is that an action to compel payment of a dividend is equitable in nature, for example, for specific performance, and thus it would seem that the action is not derivative but rather is a direct claim upon the corporation [see Ballantine and Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares, § 142.05[3] , (Matthew Bender)]. However, as in the case of dividends on common shares, the board of directors has considerable discretion with respect to declaring dividends on preferred shares absent some language in the preferred share provisions which require payment of dividends "if earned" or "if legally permissible" [see Cavitch, Business Organizations, Ch. 141, Rights and Duties of Directors and Shareholders with Respect to Dividends, § 141.02[2] (Matthew Bender) (contractual dividend provisions)].

[c] Right to Declared Dividend

When a dividend has lawfully been declared by the board of directors, theportion of the dividend to which each shareholder is entitled vests in the shareholder as an individual [Meyers v. El Tejon Oil & Refining Co. (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 184, 188, 174 P.2d 1] . That declaration creates a debtor-creditor relationship between the corporation and the shareholder which cannot be altered without the consent of each shareholder [Meyers v. El Tejon Oil & Refining Co. (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 184, 188, 174 P.2d 1] . When the funds for payment of the dividend have been set aside, either in the corporation's own treasury or in a depository, the insolvency of either the corporation or the depository will not affect the shareholders' paramount right to the declared dividend [In re Associated Gas & Elec. Co. (2nd Cir. [NY] 1943) 137 F.2d 607, 610] . However, the declaration of a dividend must be complete in order for the right thereto to vest in the shareholders [United States v. Southwest Portland Cement Co. (9th Cir. [Cal] 1938) 97 F.2d 413, 415] . For examples of dividend declarations held to be incomplete, see Ballantine and Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 8, Dividends and Reacquisition of Shares § 142.05[4][a][v] (Matthew Bender).

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-164 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 164.15

§ 164.15 Repurchase of Shares

[1] Corporation's Authority to Repurchase; Restrictions

In the absence of some specific restriction on a corporation's purchase of its own shares, such as the restrictions on distributions to shareholders [see Corp. Code §§ 166, 500-505] or those which may be imposed by the articles or by contract, a corporation may purchase, redeem, receive, take or otherwise acquire its own shares [Corp. Code § 207(d); see also Corp. Code § 402(d) (providing that nothing in Corp. Code § 402 regarding issuance of redeemable shares shall prevent a corporation from entering into an agreement for the redemption or purchase of its shares to the extent permitted by Corp. Code §§ 500-510, the restrictions on distributions)].

[2] Other Limitations on Repurchase

Apart from statutory restrictions on distributions which would impair the corporation's financial position, or contractual or charter limitations, the power to repurchase shares is subject to restrictions based on the duty of the directors to act in the best interests of the corporation [see Cavitch, Business Organizations, Ch. 147, Acquisition by a Corporation of Its Own Shares, § 147.04 (Matthew Bender)]. For example, if shares are repurchased to quell a takeover attempt by the owners of those shares and the directors' motivation for the repurchase was the desire to retain their positions of power and control, not only will the directors be liable for breach of fiduciary duty, but the selling shareholders may be jointly liable as aiders and abettors [Heckmann v. Ahmanson (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 119, 127, 214 Cal. Rptr. 177] . Similarly, the corporation must fully and fairly disclose the factual circumstances surrounding its purchase of its own shares [see Corp. Code § 25401(misrepresentation or omission of material facts in connection with purchase or offer to purchase a security as unlawful)].

[3] Executory Contracts

[a] Enforceability

Prior to January 1, 1977, the effective date of the present General Corporation Law, there was some uncertainty as to the enforceability of executory contracts for the repurchase of shares. The decisions under prior law indicated that in order for such a contract to be enforceable, the corporation must be able to purchase the shares both at the time the contract is made and at the time it is to be performed [Cutter Laboratories, Inc. v. Twining (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 302, 313-314, 34 Cal. Rptr. 317 ; Goodman v. Global Indus. (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 583, 589, 182 P.2d 300] . Thus, under prior law, mutuality of obligation was apparently a requirement from the time the contract was entered, although the contract could later become unenforceable if a repurchase would violate the statutory provisions analogous to those [see Corp. Code §§ 500, 501] which now prohibit distributions inimical to the interests of creditors [Cutter Laboratories, Inc. v. Twining (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 302, 313-314, 34 Cal. Rptr. 317] . Since present law requires that a corporation be able to make a distribution in the form of a repurchase only as of the date of the performance (i.e., the transfer of cash or property), whether or not pursuant to a contract of an earlier date [Corp. Code § 166, see also Corp. Code §§ 500, 501 (relating tests as to legality of distributions to the time either immediately prior to or after the distribution)], it appears that the cases requiring that the corporation have the capability to perform at the time the contract is entered have been overruled.

[b] Persons Who May Attack Validity

The statutory restrictions on distributions in the form of repurchases of a corporation's own shares are enacted for the benefit of the corporation, creditors, and innocent shareholders [Tiedje v. Aluminum Taper Milling Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 450, 455, 296 P.2d 554] . However, a shareholder who is a party to a repurchase agreement which is performed at a time when the corporation cannot legally make a distribution is entitled to rescission and restitution of his or her shares if he or she can prove that he or she did not know that the conditions allowing the corporation to repurchase did not in fact exist [Tiedje v. Aluminum Taper Milling Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 450, 454-455, 296 P.2d 554] . On the other hand, if the contract to repurchase can be construed as obligating individuals rather than the corporation to purchase the shares, the contract's validity will not be subject to attack on the ground of the corporation's inability to perform [Fenolio v. McDonald (1959) 171 Cal. App. 2d 508, 509-510, 340 P.2d 657 (transfer of all assets of corporation to individuals pursuant to agreement providing that shares would be transferred to them if corporation defaulted on agreement to pay forthem as not preventing selling shareholders from recovering on promissory notes)].

[4] Issuance of Negotiable Instrument--Rights of Holder Test

Notwithstanding the provisions of Corp. Code §§ 500-510, a negotiable instrument issued by a corporation for the purchase of shares is enforceable by a holder in due course [see Com. Code § 3302] without notice that it was issued for that purpose or by a person who acquired the instrument through such a holder [Corp. Code § 511].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-164 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 164.16

§ 164.16 Redemption of Shares

[1] Authority to Issue Redeemable Shares

A corporation may provide in its articles for one or more classes or series of shares which are redeemable, in whole or in part, at the option of the corporation only (with one exception discussed below), at such price or prices, within such time or upon the happening of one or more specified events, and upon such terms and conditions as are stated in the articles [Corp. Code § 402(a)]. A corporation may not issue shares which purport by their terms to grant the shareholder the right to compel the corporation to redeem them. An exception to this rule is made for open-end investment companies registered under the United States Investment Company Act of 1940 [15 U.S.C. §§ 80a-1-80a-52], which may provide in their articles for redemptions at the option of the shareholder at net-asset value [Corp. Code § 402(b)]. A corporation is also prohibited from issuing redeemable common shares unless it has another outstanding class of common shares not subject to redemption. The exceptions to this rule are for:

- Shares of registered open-end investment companies;

- Shares of a corporation holding a license or franchise from a governmental agency to conduct business or which are member corporations of a national securities exchange when the license, franchise, or membership is conditioned upon some or all of the holders of its stock possessing prescribed qualifications, but the shares are only redeemable to the extent necessary to prevent the loss of the license, franchise, or membership, or to reinstate it; and

- Shares of a professional corporation as defined in Corp. Code § 13401(b) [Corp. Code § 402(c)].

[2] Creation of Sinking Fund

Corp. Code § 402(d) provides that nothing in Corp. Code § 402 (authorizing the issuance of redeemable shares) will prevent a corporation from creating a sinking fund or similar provision for the redemption or purchase of its shares to the extent permitted by the financial restrictions on distributions contained in Corp. Code §§ 500-503 [Corp. Code § 402(d); see § 164.12]. A corporation can either transfer cash or property to a trustee for the holders of preferred shares to be used for the redemption of those shares, or it may physically segregate cash or property in trust for that purpose. In either case, a "distribution to its shareholders" takes place at the time of the transfer or physical segregation [Corp. Code § 166].

[3] Procedure for Redeeming Shares

[a] Generally

With the exception of registered open-end investment companies under the United States Investment Company Act of 1940 [15 U.S.C. §§ 80a-1 et seq.], real estate investment companies, and corporations in the process of winding up and dissolution, Corp. Code § 509 provides for the method by which shares are redeemed [Corp. Code §§ 504, 508]. A corporation may redeem any or all redeemable shares by: (1) giving notice of redemption, and (2) paying or depositing the redemption price of the shares as provided in its articles or depositing the redemption price pursuant to the provisions of Corp. Code § 509(d) [Corp. Code § 509(a)].

[b] Notice

Subject to any provisions in the articles with respect to the notice required for redemption, the corporation may give notice of the redemption of any or all shares subject to redemption by causing a notice of redemption to be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the principal executive office of the corporation is located at least once a week for two successive weeks, in each instance on any day of the week, commencing not earlier than 60 nor later than 20 days before the date fixed for redemption. The notice of redemption must set forth all of the following:

- The class or series of shares or part of any class or series to be redeemed;
- The date fixed for redemption;
- The redemption price; and
- If the shares are certificated securities, the place at which the shareholders may obtain payment of the redemption price upon surrender of their share certificates [Corp. Code § 509(b)].

[c] Mailing of Notice

If the corporation gives notice by publication as provided above, it must also mail a copy of the notice to each holder of record of shares to be redeemed as of the date of mailing or the record date fixed in accordance with Corp. Code § 701 [Corp. Code § 509(c)]. The record date may be fixed by the corporation's boardof directors as any date not more than 60 days prior to the date fixed for redemption of the shares [Corp. Code § 701(a)]. When not fixed by the board, the record date is the date on which the board adopted the redemption resolution or the sixtieth day prior to the date set for redemption, whichever is later [Corp. Code § 701(b)(3)].

The notice must be addressed to the holder at the address of the holder appearing on the books of the corporation or given by the holder to the corporation for the purpose of notice. If no address appears on the books or none has been given by a holder, notice must be mailed to the holder at the place where the principal executive office of the corporation is located. The notice must be mailed not earlier than 60 nor later than 20 days before the date fixed for redemption. However, failure to comply with the notice provisions of Corp. Code § 509(c) will not invalidate the redemption of shares [Corp. Code § 509(c)].

[d] Payment or Deposit of Redemption Price

Payment or deposit of the redemption price may be made as provided in the articles of incorporation or may be made as provided in Corp. Code § 509(d) [Corp. Code § 509(a)]. Under the procedure set forth in Corp. Code § 509(d), if, on or before the date fixed for redemption of any of its redeemable shares, a corporation deposits with any bank or trust company in California, as a trust fund, a sum sufficient to redeem, on the date fixed for their redemption, the shares called for redemption, the shares must be redeemed as of the date of the deposit. The funds must be accompanied by irrevocable instructions and authority to the depositary to publish the notice of redemption (or to complete publication if it has already been commenced), and to pay, on and after the date fixed for redemption or prior thereto, the redemption price of the shares to their respective holders upon the surrender of their share certificates [Corp. Code § 509(d)].

Although the date of deposit may, and normally will be, prior to the date fixed for redemption, the deposit will constitute full payment of the shares to their holders. From and after the date fixed for redemption, holders of redeemed shares have no right to dividends on the shares. From and after the date of the deposit, the shares are no longer outstanding, and the holders cease to be shareholders with respect to the shares and have no rights except the right to receive payment of the redemption price or any right to convert these shares which may exist for a period fixed by their terms, which period will continue [Corp. Code § 509(d)].

In the case of the redemption of uncertificated securities, the corporation must deposit with the bank or trust company an officer's certificate setting forth the holders of the uncertificated securities registered on its books and the number of shares held by each. In those cases, payment to the holder is not conditioned on surrender of the share certificate, but on delivery of the officer's certificate. In determining the holders of uncertificated securities, the bank or trust company is entitled to rely on any officer's certificate deposited with it in accordance with Corp. Code § 509(d) [Corp. Code § 509(d)].

[4] Issuance of Negotiable Instrument

[a] Rights of Holder

Notwithstanding the provisions of Corp. Code §§ 500-510, a negotiable instrument issued by a corporation for the redemption of shares is enforceable by a holder in due course [see Com. Code § 3302] without notice that it was issued for that purpose or by a person who acquired the instrument through such a holder [Corp. Code § 511].

PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

14-164 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 164.32

§ 164.32 Decisions

[1] Dividends

[a] Defined

"Dividend," under common use of word among shareholders of private corporations organized for profit, more often designates share of profits to be apportioned among shareholders as return on their investment. Estate of Talbot (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 526, 535, 74 Cal. Rptr. 920

Distribution of earnings to corporate shareholders were dividends when shareholder-employee received wages of almost one-half corporate earnings for year in return for nominal services. Kohn v. Kohn (1950) 95 Cal. App. 2d 708, 715-716, 214 P.2d 71

Share dividend is not true distribution in sense of adding anything to shareholder's holdings or taking anything away from corporation's property. Eisner v. Macomber (1920) 252 U.S. 189, 202-203, 40 S. Ct. 189, 64 L. Ed. 521

Dividend declared by one corporation of shares in another corporation is cash distribution in terms of actual value of shares on declaration date. Commissioner v. Scatena (9th Cir. [Cal] 1936) 85 F.2d 729, 731

[b] Power to Declare; Discretion of Board

Allocation of earnings to payment of cash dividends is largely one of policy, entrusted to discretion of directors acting honestly and intelligently in management of corporate affairs, and not misappropriating money. Zellerbach v. Allenberg (1893) 99 Cal. 57, 70-71, 33 P. 786

Whether dividend declared and for how much rests totally within the directors' fair and honestly exercised discretion. Mulcahy v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc'y (1904) 144 Cal. 219, 223-225, 77 P. 910

Issuance of preferred share dividend is managerial decision belonging to board of directors, for which, if made in good faith, court will not substitute its own judgment. Marble v. Latchford Glass Co. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 171, 178-179, 22 Cal. Rptr. 789

In absence of showing of fraud or bad faith, directors have absolute discretion to dispose of funds available for dividends; burden of proof of bad faith is on complainant. Richards v. Pacific S.W. Discount Corp. (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 551, 558, 112 P.2d 698

Merely describing distribution to shareholder-employees as "wages" does not allow corporation to distribute its profits so as to deprive any shareholder otherwise of rights, although valid contract of employment otherwise may be made providing for distribution of profits to shareholding employees. De Martini v. Scavenger's Protective Asso. (1935) 3 Cal. App. 2d 691, 698, 40 P.2d 317

[c] Right to Dividend

[i] Between Transferor and Transferee of Shares

Buyer under executory contract for sale of shares not entitled to dividends until passage of legal title in absence of agreement to contrary. Richards v. Pacific S.W. Discount Corp. (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 551, 555, 112 P.2d 698

[ii] Preferred Shares

Preferred noncumulative shares are only entitled to fixed return on earnings if declared in particular year of returns, but without cumulative entitlement to dividends passed in any particular year. Wabash Ry. Co. v. Barclay (1930) 280 U.S. 197, 202-203, 50 S. Ct. 106, 74 L. Ed. 368

[iii] Prior to Declaration

Action to compel payment of dividend do not require joinder of board of directors as defendants; judgment against corporation alone is effective. Muggill v. Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 239, 241, 42 Cal. Rptr. 107, 398 P.2d 147 (dictum)

Directors have exclusive authority to declare dividends; in absence of which act shareholders have no direct proprietary interest in corporate earnings, there being no dividend in earnings until one is declared. Gibbons v. Mahon (1890) 136 U.S. 549, 558, 568, 10 S. Ct. 1057, 34 L. Ed. 525

Scheme or device for distribution of profits to shareholders generally but excluding minority from payments gives rise to individual cause of action against corporation for profits withheld. O'Hare v. Marine Elec. Co. (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 33, 37, 39 Cal. Rptr. 799 ; De Martini v. Scavenger's Protective Asso. (1935) 3 Cal. App. 2d 691, 698, 40 P.2d 317

Shareholder-employee is able to quit job with corporation but, in absence of agreement, articles, or bylaws to contrary, is still entitled to dividend portion of payments; and when no breakdown has been previously decided on, court is able to determine dividend portion by contrasting wages given to nonshareholding employees doing same work, or otherwise using observations based on common knowledge, and subtracting such portion as wages. Perata v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 378, 384-389, 393, 244 P.2d 940

Corporation is owner of its property and earnings, rather than shareholder, who has expectancy of sharing in earnings

but right to share in earnings only as they may be declared in dividends arising from use of property. Miller v. McColgan (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 432, 436-437, 110 P.2d 419

[iv] Upon Declaration

Declaration of dividend creates nonrescindable debt in favor of shareholders unless qualified otherwise within the declaration; key characteristics of fully declared dividend are definite, final, irrevocable, and enforceable in nature. United States v. Southwest Portland Cement Co. (9th Cir. [Cal] 1938) 97 F.2d 413, 415

Plaintiff demanding payment of dividend already declared does not need to allegecorporation had available proper source of funds from which to pay dividend--that issue being one which defendant corporation must assert. Meyers v. El Tejon Oil & Refining Co. (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 184, 188, 174 P.2d 1

Phrase "otherwise acquires its own shares" in Corp. Code § 510(a) (when corporation purchases, redeems, acquires by way of conversion to another class or series, or otherwise acquires its own shares, shares are restored to status of authorized by unissued shares, unless articles prohibit reissuance) recognizes reacquisition through surrender by stockholder. Simon v. Steelman (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 1006-1007, 274 Cal. Rptr. 218 (note that although this case was decided before Corp. Code § 510(a) was amended in 1995 [see 1995 Stats., ch. 154 § 5 (when a corporation reacquires its own shares)], it appears that the holding would remain unchanged).

[2] Unlawful Distributions

Trustee in bankruptcy of debtor, which was surviving corporation after leveraged buyout ("LBO"), does not have standing to attack distributions made to selling shareholders at time of sale when no creditors existed then; later payments, if they were distributions to which Corp. Code § 500 or 501 was applicable, are to be scrutinized at time they were made, not at time parties executed LBO agreement that provided that they would be made; later payments were not distributions to which Corp. Code §§ 500 and 501 apply. Kupetz v. Wolf (9th Cir. 1988) 845 F.2d 842, 846-850

For the limited purpose of determining creditor plaintiff's standing to sue directors approving distribution in the form of purchase by corporation of its shares, the term "debt" includes preexisting contractual obligation to pay future rent. UMF Sys., Inc. v. Eltra Corp. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 753, 757, 132 Cal. Rptr. 129, 553 P.2d 225

Requirement that, in order to be liable for receiving improper distribution, shareholder have knowledge of facts indicating impropriety thereof does not require that shareholder reach subjective conclusion or belief that the distribution is illegal. England v. Christensen (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 413, 429-432, 52 Cal. Rptr. 402

Question of corporation's ability to meet liabilities on maturity is one of fact; while evidence that corporation is overdue in payment of some accounts and may not be operating at profit is some evidence tending to show inability to satisfy debts when due, other evidence may be overcome by showing ability to pay debts when due. Flynn v. California Casket Co. (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 196, 204-205, 233 P.2d 131

[i] In General

FSLIC, in its corporate capacity and as assignee of FSLIC acting as receiver of insolvent state-chartered association, is entitled to collect dividends paid to sole shareholder, who was also director, out of paid-in surplus in violation of Fin. Code § 6522 [see Corp. Code § 316(a)(1) (liability of director for illegal dividends)]. Federal Sav. and Loan Ins. Corp. v. Molinaro (9th Cir. 1990) 901 F.2d 1490, 1492-1493

Question of corporation's ability to meet liabilities on maturity is one of fact; and while evidence that corporation is overdue in payment of some accounts and may not be operating at profit is some evidence tending to show inability to satisfy debts when due, other evidence is able to overcome such facts by showing ability to pay debts when due. *Flynn v. [2] Use of Form

This form is a complaint that may be used by either creditors or preferred shareholders of a corporation to recover damages from shareholders who have received an improper distribution with knowledge of the facts indicating its impropriety. The allegations closely parallel those in a complaint against directors for approving the improper distribution [see Comments to § 164.50]. Unique to this complaint are the allegations:

- That the defendants are shareholders of the corporation (Paragraph 4).

- That the defendants received the distribution with knowledge of facts indicating its impropriety (Paragraph 7) [Corp. Code § 506(a)].

- That the defendants are severally liable up to the amount of the distribution received plus interest (Paragraph 9) [Corp. Code § 506(a)].

[3] Shareholder's Liability for Improper Distributions

[a] Scope

Any shareholder who receives any distribution prohibited by Corp. Code §§ 500-510 with knowledge of facts indicating its impropriety is liable to thecorporation for the benefit of all of the creditors or shareholders entitled to institute an action for the amount received by that shareholder with interest at the legal rate on judgments until paid, but not exceeding the liabilities of the corporation owed to nonconsenting creditors at the time of the violation and the injury suffered by nonconsenting shareholders, as the case may be [Corp. Code § 506(a)]. Further, in the event that any shareholder receives any distribution of the corporation's property prohibited by Corp. Code § 500 et seq., the shareholder receiving that illegal distribution is liable to the corporation for an amount equal to the fair market value of the property at the time of the illegal distribution, plus any interest on that amount from the date of distribution at the legal rate on judgments until paid, together with all reasonably incurred costs of appraisal or other valuation, if any, of that property, but not exceeding the liabilities of the corporation owed to nonconsenting creditors at the time of the violation "and" [sic: or] the injury suffered by nonconsenting shareholders, as the case may be [Corp. Code § 506(a)].

[b] Shareholder's Knowledge of Impropriety

The shareholder's liability for receiving an improper distribution is conditioned on his or her having knowledge of the facts indicating the impropriety [Corp. Code § 506(a)]. "Impropriety" means unlawfulness or illegality [England v. Christensen (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 413, 430, 52 Cal. Rptr. 402] . Knowledge of facts indicating that a distribution is unlawful is to be distinguished from knowledge of the unlawfulness itself. The shareholder need only know the facts on the basis of which the law declares the distribution unlawful, but he or she need not know that it was in fact illegal [England v. Christensen (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 413, 429-432, 52 Cal. Rptr. 402] . Proof of the shareholder's knowledge of such facts may be difficult, particularly in the case of publicly held corporations. However, in the case of closely held corporations the shareholder is likely to be more intimately acquainted with the corporation's financial condition, or have reason to be.

[c] Several Liability

Since each shareholder receiving an improper distribution is liable only for the amount he or she received, plus interest at the legal rate on judgments until it is repaid (or, in the case of an improper distribution of the corporation's property, for an amount equal to the fair market value of the property at the time of the illegal distribution, plus any interest on that amount from the date of distribution at the legal rate on judgments until paid, together with all reasonably incurred costs of appraisal or other valuation, if any, of that property) [Corp. Code § 506(a)], it may be necessary to join the largest number of shareholders possible to recover an amount adequate to cover the liabilities of the corporation to nonconsenting creditors or the injury to nonconsenting preferred shareholders. If the plaintiff creditor or shareholder is claiming an amount less than the total distribution, although equal to or in excess of the distribution to a particular shareholder, and only that shareholder is sued, the defendant may bring in all other shareholders who are similarly liable and compel contribution, or the defendant may initiate a separate action to compel contribution against those shareholders [Corp. Code § 506(c)].

[d] Persons Who May Enforce Liability

Suit in the name of the corporation to enforce the liability of shareholders who received an improper distribution may be brought by the same creditors and shareholders, and under the same conditions, as are entitled, under Corp. Code § 506(b), to maintain an action against directors for approving an improper distribution [see § 164.50[5][b]].

[4] State Statutes

Shareholder's liability for receipt of improper distribution. Corp. Code § 506

[5] Decisions

Requirement that, in order to be liable for the receiving improper distribution, shareholder have knowledge of facts indicating impropriety does not require that shareholder reach subjective conclusion or belief that the distribution is illegal. England v. Christensen (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 413, 429-432, 52 Cal. Rptr. 402

Cross complainant alleges:

1. Cross complainant is a defendant in the above-entitled action, which plaintiff commenced by filing his/her complaint on _____[date], and in which plaintiff seeks to recover damages from cross complainant, alleging that cross complainant was a _____ [director or shareholder] of _____ [name of corporation], hereafter called "corporation," and is liable to the corporation for the benefit of its _____ [creditors or shareholders] for _____ [approving or receiving] an improper distribution of the corporation's _____ [cash or property] on _____ [date], to which distribution plaintiff did not consent.

2. At all times, in this complaint mentioned, cross defendants were _____ [directors or shareholders] of the corporation and each of them did _____ [approve or receive with knowledge of the impropriety thereof] the distribution alleged to be improper in plaintiff's complaint.

3. In plaintiff's complaint it is alleged that the alleged distribution was improper in that _____ [specify ground of impropriety. See § 164.50, Paragraph 6].

4. If all allegations of plaintiff's complaint are true, then it is also true that cross defendants are _____ [if directors : jointly and severally liable with cross complainant for approving the alleged distribution or, if shareholders : severally liable with cross complainant to the extent of the distribution received by each with knowledge of the impropriety thereof, plus interest thereon until repaid].

5. Cross complainant hereby impleads cross defendants to compel contribution toward any judgment of this court rendered in favor of the plaintiff against cross complainant.

WHEREFORE, cross complainant prays judgment as follows:

1. That cross defendants must contribute _____ [equally with cross complainant or in proportion as the distribution received by each bears to the total judgment, plus interest,] to the payment of any judgment that might be rendered against cross complainant in the above-entitled action against him/her by plaintiff;

2. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

[2] Use of Form

This form is a cross complaint for use by either a director or shareholder who is a defendant in an action brought to enforce their liability for, respectively, approving or receiving an improper distribution [see Corp. Code §§ 316(a) (directors' liability), 506(a) (shareholder's liability); see also §§ 164.50, 164.51]. The cross complaint may be used to implead nonparty directors or shareholders who may be liable on the same grounds as the plaintiff in the main action. Although an independent action to compel contribution is authorized [see Corp. Code §§ 316(e), 506(c)], and may be necessary when nonparties cannot be served in the main action, the procedure authorized for impleading the main action is probably most satisfactory from the defendant's point of view.

[3] Director's Right to Contribution or Action Against Shareholders

For a discussion of the rights of a director sued in an action arising from an improper distribution, see § 164.13[3][d]. For a form of cross complaint to obtain subrogation against shareholders who have received the distribution, see § 164.53.

[4] Shareholder's Right to Contribution

Any shareholder sued under Corp. Code § 506 for receiving an improperdistribution may implead all other shareholders not joined who received the distribution with knowledge of the facts indicating its impropriety and may compel contribution against them either in the same action in which the defendant is sued or in an independent action [Corp. Code § 506(c)].

Ability of defendant director to implead other directors in action to recover illegal distribution. Corp. Code § 316(e)

Ability of defendant shareholder to implead other shareholders in action to recover illegal distribution. Corp. Code § 506(c)

[6] Decisions

[a] Discretion of Board to Declare--Dividends

Directors have exclusive authority to declare dividends; in absence of which act shareholders have no direct proprietary interest in corporate earnings, there being no dividend in earnings until one is declared. Gibbons v. Mahon (1890) 136 U.S. 549, 558, 568, 10 S. Ct. 1057, 34 L. Ed. 525

Whether dividend declared and for how much rests totally within the directors' fair and honestly exercised discretion. Mulcahy v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc'y (1904) 144 Cal. 219, 223-225, 77 P. 910

Issuance of preferred share dividend is managerial decision belonging to board of directors, for which, if made in good faith, court will not substitute its own judgment. Marble v. Latchford Glass Co. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 171, 178-179, 22 Cal. Rptr. 789

[b] Shareholder's Right To Dividend

[i] Prior to Declaration

Corporation is owner of its property and earnings, rather than shareholder, who has expectancy in sharing in earnings but right to share in such earnings only as they may be declared in dividends arising from use of such property. Miller

v. McColgan (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 432, 436-437, 110 P.2d 419

Discretion of board is not absolute where dividends paid in form of wages to shareholder-employees but not to other shareholders. De Martini v. Scavenger's Protective Asso. (1935) 3 Cal. App. 2d 691, 698, 40 P.2d 317 ; O'Hare v. Marine Elec. Co. (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 33, 37, 39 Cal. Rptr. 799

[ii] Right to Declared Dividend

Declaration of dividend creates nonrescindable debt in favor of the shareholders, unless qualified otherwise within the declaration; key characteristics of fully declared dividend are definite, final, irrevocable, and enforceable in nature. United States v. Southwest Portland Cement Co. (9th Cir. [Cal] 1938) 97 F.2d 413, 415

Incomplete or contingent declaration of dividend does not vest right to payment thereof in shareholders. United States v. Southwest Portland Cement Co. (9th Cir. [Cal] 1938) 97 F.2d 413, 415

Action to compel payment of dividend do not require joinder of board of directors as defendants; judgment against corporation alone as effective. Muggill v. Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 239, 241, 42 Cal. Rptr. 107, 398 P.2d 147 (dictum)

Plaintiff demanding payment of dividend already declared not required to allege corporation had available proper source of funds from which to pay dividend--that issue being one which defendant corporation must assert. Meyers v. El Tejon Oil & Refining Co. (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 184, 188, 174 P.2d 1

A corporation, other than an association or a nonprofit corporation, incorporated in a state other than California, but not a corporation or association chartered under the laws of the United States [see Corp. Code § 171], is considered nominally foreign if the average of the property factor [Rev. & Tax. Code § 25129], the payroll factor [Rev. & Tax. Code § 25132], and the sales factor [Rev. & Tax. Code § 25134] equals more than 50 percent during the corporation's latest full income year and more than one-half of the corporation's outstanding voting shares are held of record by persons having addresses in California appearing on the books of the corporation on the record date for the latest meeting of shareholders held during its latest full income year (or, if no meeting was held during that year, on the last day of the latest full income year) [Corp. Code § 2115(a)]. For discussion of the three-factor test for nominally foreign corporations, see § 160.12[2].

§ 165.12 Obligation to Keep Certain Records

[1] Bylaws

Each domestic corporation must keep at its principal executive office in California the original or a copy of its bylaws as amended to date. If a corporation's principal executive office is not in this state, the original or copy of the bylaws as amended to date must be kept at its principal business office in California [Corp. Code § 213].

[2] Books and Minutes

Each domestic corporation, and each nominally foreign corporation [Corp. Code § 2115(b)], must keep adequate and correct books and records of account and must keep minutes of the proceedings of its shareholders, board, and committees of the board. These minutes must be kept in written form. Other books and records must be kept either in written form or in any other form capable of being converted into written form [Corp. Code § 1500].

[3] Record of Shareholders

Each domestic corporation, and each nominally foreign corporation [Corp. Code § 2115(b)], must keep at its principal executive office, or at the office of its transfer agent or registrar, a record of its shareholders, giving the names and addresses of all shareholders and the number and class of shares held by each. These records must be kept either in written form or in another form capable of being converted into clearly legible tangible form, or in any combination of the foregoing. When minutes and other books and records are kept in a form capable of being converted into clearly legible paper form, the clearly legible paper form into which those minutes and other books and records are converted will be admissible in evidence, and accepted for all other purposes, to the same extent as an original paper record of the same information would have been, provided that the paper form accurately portrays the record [Corp. Code § 1500].

[4] Sales and Proceeds of Securities

Every corporate issuer qualifying securities for sale in California must keep and maintain a complete set of books, records, and accounts of the sales and the disposition of proceeds from the sale of the securities. Every issuer must thereafter, as required by the Commissioner of Corporations, make and file with the Commissioner a report setting forth the securities sold by it under the qualification, the proceeds derived from the sale, and the disposition of those proceeds [Corp. Code § 25145].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-165 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 165.13

§ 165.13 Shareholder's Right to Inspect Books and Minutes

[1] In General

The accounting books and records and the minutes of proceedings of the shareholders, the board, and the committees of the board of a corporation must be open to inspection on written demand on the corporation by any shareholder or holder of a voting trust certificate [see § 165.70] at any reasonable time during usual business hours [Corp. Code § 1601(a)]. The corporation may not thwart the exercise of these rights by failing to respond to proper requests, by sending communications that make further requests futile, or by actions impeding the inspection process. However, the corporation is required only to allow inspection at corporate offices, not to mail or otherwise provide copies, and the corporation is not required to respond to demands for disclosure falling outside scope of what the statute requires [Jara v. Suprema Meats, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1263-1265, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187] .

[2] Applicable to Domestic and Certain Foreign Corporations

The rights of inspection granted under Corp. Code § 1601 apply to any domestic corporation and to any foreign corporation keeping records in California or having its principal executive office in California [Corp. Code § 1601(a)], as well as to any nominally foreign corporation [Corp. Code § 2115(b); see Corp. Code § 2115(a) (nominally foreign corporation defined)]. In addition, the rights of inspection under Corp. Code § 1601 apply to each subsidiary of any of the foregoing corporations [Corp. Code § 1601(a)].

[3] Right to Inspect Not Absolute

Shareholders do not have an absolute right to inspect and copy a corporation's books and minutes. Rather, their right to inspect exists only for a purpose reasonably related to their interests as shareholders or holders of voting trust certificates [Corp. Code § 1601(a)]. Ordinarily, the purpose referred to is that purpose existing in the mind of a shareholder at the time of inspection of the corporate records, whether or not the shareholder is likely to succeed in accomplishing that purpose [Capron v. Pacific Southwest D. Corp. (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 436, 441, 44 P.2d 629] .

For instance, in demanding the right to inspect corporate records, a shareholder expressed a purpose reasonably related to his interest as a shareholder when he stated his belief that the president of the corporation lent corporate funds for the purchase of outstanding shares of stock with the ultimate objective of vesting all shares of stock in one individual and thus depreciating the value of shares of stock held by other shareholders [Capron v. Pacific Southwest D. Corp. (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 436, 437-438, 439, 44 P.2d 629] . Likewise, a purpose reasonably related to a shareholder's interest in a corporation was found when a shareholder desired to inspect a corporation's books due to the disparity in value between the published annual report of the corporation and the market value of its outstanding stock and thereby to determine whether the outstanding stock was held by a few shareholders who dictated the corporation's accounting policies, to determine whether the relation of the directors was against the interests of the minority shareholders, and to ascertain the present value of stock owned by the shareholder [Private Investors v. Homestake Min. Co. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 488, 496, 54 P.2d 535] .

On the other hand, a corporation put at issue a purpose not reasonably related to a shareholder's interest in denying a shareholder the right of inspection when it alleged that the shareholder's purpose was to secure the names of other shareholders in order to secure options to purchase shares of those individuals and then to offer the shares to the corporation at a higher price to the detriment of the corporation [Capron v. Pacific Southwest D. Corp. (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 436, 440, 44 P.2d 629 (corporation's answer to shareholder's petition for writ of mandate to inspect corporate records as raising issues which, if proved, would warrant denial of writ)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-165 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 165.14

§ 165.14 Shareholder's Right to Inspect Property of Corporation

If the books of a corporation do not afford a shareholder information as to the condition of a corporation and the value of his or her interest in the corporation, or if the condition and value of corporate property are susceptible to concealment and misrepresentation, a shareholder may have the right to inspect corporate property [see § 165.71]. For example, a shareholder may inspect mining property held by a corporation in order to determine the nature of the ore bodies or the manner in which the work is being carried on [Hobbs v. Tom Reed Gold Min. Co. (1913) 164 Cal. 497, 501, 129 P. 781 (reversal of judgment denying writ of mandate to shareholder to inspect mine where new body of ore may have been discovered)]. Since the few cases discussing a shareholder's right to inspect corporate property concern corporate mining property [Hobbs v. Tom Reed Gold Min. Co. (1913) 164 Cal. 497, 129 P. 781] and since the right of a shareholder to inspect mining property is guaranteed by statute [Pub. Res. Code § 3984 (shareholder's absolute right to inspect corporate mining property)], the right to inspect other kinds of corporate property is questionable. However, commentators have suggested that the right to inspect corporate property follows logically from the right to inspect corporate books [see Ballantine and Sterling, California Corporation Laws (4th ed.), Ch. 13, Records, Reports, and Inspection Rights, § 272.01 (Matthew Bender)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-165 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 165.15

§ 165.15 Shareholder's Right to Inspect Record of Shareholders

[1] In General

The record of shareholders must be open to inspection and copying by any shareholder or holder of a voting trust certificate [see § 165.70] at any time during usual business hours on written demand on the corporation [Corp. Code § 1600(c)].

[2] Applicable to Domestic and Certain Foreign Corporations

These rights of inspection apply to any domestic corporation and to any foreign corporation having its principal executive office in California or customarily holding meetings of its board in California [Corp. Code § 1600(d)], as well as to any nominally foreign corporation [Corp. Code § 2115(b); see Corp. Code § 2115(a) (nominally foreign corporation defined)].

[3] Rights of Five-Percent Shareholder

A shareholder, or shareholders, holding at least five percent in the aggregate of the outstanding voting shares of a corporation or holding at least one percent of those voting shares and filing a Schedule 14A with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission relating to the election of directors of the corporation have an absolute right to do either or both of the following [see § 165.72]:

- Inspect and copy the record of shareholders' names, addresses, and shareholdings during usual business hours on five business days' prior written demand on the corporation; or

- Obtain from the transfer agent for the corporation on five business days' prior demand and on tender of the corporation's usual charges for such a list (the amount of those charges are required to be stated to the shareholder by the transfer agent on request) a list of the names, addresses, and shareholdings of the shareholders entitled to vote for the election of directors as of the most recent record date for which such a list has been compiled or as of a date specified by the shareholder subsequent to the date of demand.

The list must be made available on or before the later of five business days after the demand is received or the date specified in the demand as the date as of which the list is to be compiled. A corporation has the responsibility for causing its transfer agent to comply with these rules [Corp. Code § 1600(a)].

[4] Right to Inspect Not Absolute

Except as noted in § 165.15[3], shareholders do not have an absolute right to inspect and copy the record of shareholders. Rather, their right to inspect exists only for a purpose reasonably related to their interests as shareholders or holders of voting trust certificates [Corp. Code § 1600(c)]. However, a shareholder must be accorded the right to inspect a record of shareholders and to make extracts therefrom unless it is clearly shown that the shareholder's demand is not for any purpose reasonably related to his or her interest as a shareholder [Gilmore v. Emsco Derrick & Equip. Co. (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 64, 67, 70 P.2d 251] . For instance, a shareholder was entitled to inspect the record of shareholders of a corporation even though she was the attorney for a detective agency and acted to some extent in an executive capacity for the detective agency. Her right of inspection was upheld because the corporation failed to establish that she desired the information for use in the course of the detective agency's business [Gilmore v. Emsco Derrick & Equip. Co. (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 64, 67, 70 P.2d 251] . For additional discussion of when a purpose is reasonably related to a shareholder's interest, see § 165.13[3].

[5] Applicable to Domestic and Certain Foreign Corporations

These rights of inspection apply to any domestic corporation and to any foreign corporation having its principal executive office in California or customarily holding meetings of its board in California [Corp. Code § 1600(d)], as well as to any nominally foreign corporation [Corp. Code § 2115(b); see Corp. Code § 2115(a) (nominally foreign corporation defined)].

§ 165.19 Director's Right to Inspect Records

[1] In General

Every director may inspect and copy all books, records, and documents of every kind and may inspect the physical properties of a corporation [see § 165.76] of which he or she is a director [Corp. Code § 1602]. This right of inspection extends to the records of each subsidiary corporation, domestic or foreign, of the corporation of which he or she is a director [Corp. Code § 1602].

[2] Applicable to Directors of Certain Foreign Corporations

The rights of inspection under Corp. Code § 1602 apply to the directors of any domestic corporation and to the directors of any foreign corporation having its principal executive office in California or customarily holding meetings of its board in California [Corp. Code § 1602], as well as to directors of any nominally foreign corporation [Corp. Code § 2115(b); see Corp. Code § 2115(a) (nominally foreign corporation defined); see also Havlicek v. Coast-To-Coast Analytical Services, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 1854-1856, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696 (holding that Corp. Code § 1602 does not violate commerce clause or full faith and credit clause, and that court may impose just and proper conditions on "absolute right" of inspection)].

[3] Right to Inspect Absolute

The right of a director to inspect records under Corp. Code § 1602 is absolute. A director may exercise his or her right at any reasonable time [Corp. Code § 1602; but see NFL Properties Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 100, 109-110, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893 (if director sues in capacity as shareholder rather than director, attorney-client and work product privileges are properly asserted by corporation)]. Thus, by statute, a director has a greater right to acquire corporate information than does a shareholder [see Goldstein v. Lees (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 614, 621, 120 Cal. Rptr. 253] . It has been suggested that directors are accorded the unqualified right of inspection because they occupy a fiduciary relationship to the corporation and its shareholders [see Hartman v. Hollingsworth (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 579, 581-582, 63 Cal. Rptr. 563 (reversing judgment granting writ of mandate to director of corporation at time of dissolution to inspect corporate books and records because corporation ceased to exist after filing certificate of dissolution except for purpose of winding up)].

Although a court may impose just and proper conditions on this "absolute right" of inspection in an egregious case [see Havlicek v. Coast-To-Coast Analytical Services Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 1854-1856, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696] , this principle should only be applied in extreme circumstances in which a preponderance of the evidence establishes a director's clear intent to use documents to commit a tort against the corporation [Saline v. Superior Court (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 909, 915-916, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813 (holding that trial court failed to make findings necessary to justify limitation on director's right to corporate documents, and that there was no legal basis for prior restraint on his right to discuss corporate documents with persons other than board members)].

A corporate director does not have the right to access documents that are covered by the attorney-client privilege and were generated in defense of a suit for damages that the director filed against the corporation [Tritek Telecom, Inc. v. Superior Court (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1385, 1391-1392, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 455].

§ 165.24 Judicial Enforcement of Right to Inspect Records

[1] In General

On a corporation's refusal of a lawful demand for inspection, the superior court of the proper county may enforce the right of inspection with just and proper conditions [see §§ 165.70-165.72, 165.76, 165.78]. The proper county in which to bring an action involving a corporation is the county where the principal execut ive office of the corporation is located. However, if the principal executive office of a corporation is not in California or if the corporation has no such office, the proper county is Sacramento County [Corp. Code § 177]. The judicial enforcement of rights of inspection applies to any domestic corporation or any foreign corporation keeping records in California [Corp. Code § 1603(a)] as well as to any nominally foreign corporation [Corp. Code § 2115(b)]. In addition, judicial enforcement of inspection rights applies to any subsidiary corporation of the foregoing corporations which keeps records in California [Corp. Code § 1603(a)].

[2] Mandate an Appropriate Remedy

A proceeding in mandate [see §§ 165.70-165.72, 165.76] is an appropriate remedy by which a shareholder or director may seek to enforce his or her right to inspect corporate records [see Most v. First Nat. Bank of San Diego (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 425, 54 Cal. Rptr. 669 (affirming judgment granting writ of mandate to shareholder permitting shareholder to inspect and make copies of list of shareholders of bank); see Hagan v. Fairfield (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 703, 7 Cal. Rptr. 248 (affirming judgment denying writ of mandate when petitioner was an assignee of shares and thus not a shareholder of record for the purpose of inspection of corporate records)]. The purpose of a writ of mandate is to enforce a clear legal right of a particular petitioner, such as a shareholder, against one who has a legal duty to perform an act necessary to the enjoyment of that right, such as a corporation with its duty to allow shareholder inspection of its corporate records [see Farrington v. Fairfield (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 237, 239, 16 Cal. Rptr. 119 (denying motion for substitution of one party for another in mandate proceeding to allow inspection of corporate records)].

[3] Inspection or Audit Permitted

If good cause is shown, the court may appoint one or more competent inspectors or accountants to audit the books and records kept in California, to investigate the property, funds, and affairs of the corporation, and to report thereon in any manner that the court may direct [Corp. Code § 1603(a)]. All officers and agents of the corporation are required to produce for the appointed inspectors or accountants all books and documents in their custody or power. Failure to comply with this requirement subjects those officers and agents to punishment for contempt of court [Corp. Code § 1603(b)].

[4] Expenses

All expenses of an investigation or audit are defrayed by the applicant unless the court orders them to be paid or shared by the corporation [Corp. Code § 1603(c)]. In ordering the expenses of an investigation to be paid or shared by a corporation, the court may exercise expeditious and timesaving methods [see Koshaba v. Koshaba (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 302, 312, 132 P.2d 854] . For instance, a court acted properly in fixing the amount of an audit, making it a preferred charge against the corporation, and issuing a writ of execution without requiring a cost bill to be filed by the shareholder where the accountant performing the audit was appointed by the court with the consent of all parties [Koshaba v. Koshaba (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 302, 311-312, 132 P.2d 854] . Furthermore, if the court finds in any action or proceeding under Corp. Code §§ 1600 or 1601 that the failure of the corporation to comply with a proper demand thereunder was without justification, the court may award an amount sufficient to reimburse the shareholder or holder of a voting trust certificate for the reasonable expenses incurred by the holder, including attorney's fees, in connection with the action or proceeding [Corp. Code § 1604].

[5] Penalty Against Corporation

In addition to any remedy by writ of mandate [Corp. Code § 2202], a shareholder may seek to collect a penalty from a corporation neglecting, failing, or refusing to comply with a request for inspection of the record of shareholders or books of account, or, if the corporation is a foreign corporation, to comply with a shareholder request regarding the application of California law [Corp. Code § 2200; see Corp. Code § 2115(b), (f); see also § 160.12[2][f]]. For discussion of civil penalties against corporations, see § 165.28[1].

[6] Postponement of Shareholders' Meeting

Any delay by a corporation or its transfer agent in complying with a demand under Corp. Code § 1600(a) (inspection rights of five-percent shareholders) beyond the time limits specified therein gives the shareholder or shareholders properly making the demand the right to obtain from the superior court, on the filing of a verified complaint [see § 165.84] in the proper county [see Corp. Code § 177 (proper county defined)] and after a hearing, notice [§§ 165.81, 165.82] of which must be given to the persons and in the manner that the court directs, an order [see § 165.83] postponing any shareholders' meeting previously noticed for a period equal to the period of delay. This right exists in addition to any other legal or equitable remedies to which the shareholder may be entitled [Corp. Code § 1600(b)]. For discussion of the special inspection rights of five-percent shareholders, see § 165.53[8].

[7] Appeal as Not Staying Judgment

In the absence of an order of the trial court providing otherwise or of a writ of supersedeas, the perfecting of an appeal does not stay proceedings if the judgment or order directs a corporation, or any of its officers or its agents to give a person adjudged to be a director, stockholder, or member of the corporation a reasonable opportunity to inspect or make copies of the corporation's books, papers, or documents which the court finds the director, stockholder, or member of the corporation entitled by law to inspect or copy [Code Civ. Proc. § 917.8(b)]. Thus, mandate proceedings to inspect corporate records are summary in character and the right of inspection is not suspended during the long process of appeal except for some special reason [Private Investors, Inc. v. Homestake Min. Co. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 488, 491, 54 P.2d 535 (writ of supersedeas restraining enforcement or writ of mandate permitting inspection of corporate records is matter of discretion with appellate court)]. For discussion of when judgments are not stayed on appeal, see Ch. 43, Appeal: Stay of Proceedings .

Chapter 165 CORPORATIONS: CORPORATE RECORDS AND REPORTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-165 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 165.25

§ 165.25 Obligation to Make Annual Reports and Financial Statements

[1] Applicable to Domestic and Certain Foreign Corporations

The rights to annual reports and financial statements granted by Corp. Code § 1501 apply to any domestic corporation and also to any foreign corporation having its principal executive office in California or customarily holding meetings of its board in California [Corp. Code § 1501(g)] as well as to nominally foreign corporations [Corp. Code § 2115(b)].

[2] Annual Report to Shareholders

[a] Requirement

The board must send an annual report to the shareholders not later than 120 days after the close of the fiscal year, unless in the case of a corporation with less than 100 holders of record of its shares as determined by Corp. Code § 605, this requirement is expressly waived in the bylaws [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1); see § 165.73]. Unless so waived, the report must be sent to the shareholders at least 15 days (or 35 days, if sent by third-class mail) prior to the annual meeting of the shareholders to be held during the next fiscal year. (However, this requirement does not limit the requirement for holding an annual meeting as required by Corp. Code § 600.) [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(2)] Unless otherwise provided by the articles or bylaws, and if approved by the board of directors, the report and any accompanying material may be sent by electronic transmission by the corporation [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1); see Corp. Code § 20 (definition); see also § 165.26].

The report must contain a balance sheet as of the end of that fiscal year and an income statement and a statement of cashflows for that fiscal year, accompanied by any report of independent accountants or, if there is no report, the certificate of an authorized officer of the corporation that the statements were prepared without audit from the books and records of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1); see § 165.25[2]].

These reporting requirements [see Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1), (2)] will be considered satisfied if a corporation with an outstanding class of securities registered under Section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [15 U.S.C. § 78a] complies with 17 C.F.R. § 240.14a-16 (relating to Internet availability of annual report) with respect to the obligation of a corporation to furnish an annual report to shareholders pursuant to 17 C.F.R. § 240.14a-3(b) [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(4)

Notwithstanding Corp. Code § 114 [see § 165.25[2]], the financial statements of any corporation with fewer than 100 shareholders of record (as determined by Corp. Code § 605) required to be furnished by Corp. Code § 1501(a) and (c) are not required to be prepared in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles if they reasonably set forth the assets and liabilities and the income and expense of the corporation and disclose the accounting basis used in their preparation [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(3)].

[b] Generally Accepted Accounting Principles

Generally speaking, all references in the General Corporation Law to financial statements, balance sheets, income statements, and statements of cashflows, and all references to assets, liabilities, earnings, retained earnings, and similar accounting items of a corporation mean those financial statements or comparable statements or items prepared or determined in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles then applicable, and fairly presenting, in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles, the matters that they purport to present, subject to any specific accounting treatment required by a particular provision of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 114].

Accountants long have recognized that "generally accepted accounting principles" (GAAP) are far from being a canonical set of rules that will ensure identical accounting treatment of identical transactions. Instead, GAAP will tolerate a range of reasonable treatments, leaving the choice among alternatives to management [Thor Power Tool Co. v. Commissioner (1979) 439 U.S. 522, 544, 99 S. Ct. 773, 58 L. Ed. 2d 785] . In the United States, GAAP are an amalgam of statements issued by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants through the successive groups that it has established to promulgate accounting principles: the Committee on Accounting Procedure, the Accounting Principles Board, and the Financial Accounting Standards Board. GAAP include broad statements of accounting principles amounting to aspirational norms as well as more specific guidelines and illustrations. The lack of an official compilation allows for some debate over whether particular announcements are encompassed within GAAP [Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 382, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745 (observing that one standard text purporting to comprehensively restate GAAP includes 90 major sections and more than 500 pages)]. GAAP are found in "a hodgepodge of accounting sources, which [in the United States] find their respective places in the hierarchical structure established by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants" [Bolt v. Merrimack Pharm., Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 503 F.3d 913, 918 n.6 (describing that hierarchy)].

When a court must determine whether a particular financial accounting result is in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, the court should not try to apply those principles but should defer to the professional judgment of the accountant who audited or prepared the financial statements, "unless a GAAP authority demands a contrary accounting treatment" [Bolt v. Merrimack Pharm., Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 503 F.3d 913, 918 (original emphasis; corporation's net worth, as disclosed on audited balance sheet, was determined in accordance with GAAP)].

[3] Annual Report When 100 or More Shareholders

In addition to the financial statements required by Corp. Code § 1501(a), the annual report of any corporation having 100 or more holders of record of its shares as determined by Corp. Code § 605, either not subject to the reporting requirements of Section 13 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. § 78m) or exempted from those reporting requirements by Section 12(g)(2) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. § 78l(g)(2)), must also briefly describe any transaction, excluding compensation of officers and directors, during the previous fiscal year involving an amount in excess of $40,000, other than contracts let at competitive bid or services rendered at prices regulated by law, to which the corporation or its parent or subsidiary was a party and in which any director or officer of the corporation or of a subsidiary or any holder of more than 10 percent of the outstanding voting shares of the corporation had a direct or indirect material interest. The report must name the director, officer, subsidiary, or 10-percent shareholder and must state that party's relationship to the corporation, the nature of that party's interest in the transaction, and, when practicable, the amount of that party's interest in the transaction. It is further provided that in the case of a transaction with a partnership of which that person is a partner, only the interest of the partnership need be stated and that no such report need be made in the case of transactions approved by the shareholders [Corp. Code § 1501(b)(1)].

The annual report must also describe briefly the amount and circumstances of any indemnification or advances aggregating more than $10,000 paid during the fiscal year to any officer or director of the corporation pursuant to Corp. Code § 317 (corporate power to indemnify); provided that no such report need be made in the case of indemnification approved by the shareholders under Corp. Code § 317(e)(3) (entitlement to vote) [Corp. Code § 1501(b)(2)].

[4] Obligation to Report Results of Voting at Shareholder Meetings

For a period of 60 days following the conclusion of an annual, regular, or special meeting of shareholders, a corporation, on written request from a shareholder, must forthwith inform the shareholder of the result of any particular vote of shareholders taken at the meeting, including the number of shares voting for, the number of shares voting against, and the number of shares abstaining or withheld from voting. If the matter voted on was the election of directors, the corporation must report the number of shares (or votes if voted cumulatively) cast for each nominee for director. If more than one class or series of shares voted, the report must state the appropriate numbers by class and series of shares [Corp. Code § 1509]. A foreign corporation qualified to transact intrastate business in California must provide this information to a shareholder resident in California [Corp. Code § 1510(a); see Corp. Code § 1510(b) (defining shareholder resident)]. A foreign corporation that is not qualified to transact intrastate business in California but has one or more subsidiaries that are domestic corporations or foreign corporations qualified to transact intrastate business in California must provide the information specified in Corp. Code § 1509, at the request of a shareholder resident in California, as defined in Corp. Code § 1510(b) [Corp. Code § 1511].

For the purposes of Corp. Code §§ 1509-1511, a shareholder includes (1) any person named in a share certificate as a shareholder, or (2) any person named as a shareholder on the records of a central depository, bank, or broker-dealer with respect to shares that are subject to the control of the central depository, bank, or broker-dealer [Corp. Code § 1512(a)]. A beneficiary of a trust, a beneficiary of the estate of a decedent, or an employee with respect to a pension, retirement, or health care trust or fund is not a shareholder of any shares standing in the name of the trust, the fund, the decedent, or the decedent's estate [Corp. Code § 1512(b); but see Corp. Code § 711 (beneficial owners may have right to obtain this information through other channels, discussed in Ch. 166, Shareholders' Meetings and Voting)]. A person who is a shareholder by reason of being named as such on the records of a bank or broker [see Corp. Code § 1512(a), discussed above] must provide the corporation with a photocopy of a receipt of a statement from the central depository, bank, or broker-dealer showing the person to be a shareholder [Corp. Code § 1512(c)]. The corporation must accept the photocopy as sufficient evidence [Corp. Code § 1512(c)].

[5] Financial Statement at Shareholder's Request

If no annual report for the last fiscal year has been sent to shareholders, the corporation, on written request of any shareholder made more than 120 days after the close of that fiscal year, must deliver or mail to the person making the request, within 30 days thereafter, the financial statements [see § 165.74] required by Corp. Code § 1501(a) for that year [Corp. Code § 1501(c)].

Since Corp. Code § 1501(c) appears to distinguish between the annual report and "the financial statements required by [Corp. Code § 1501(a)]," the fact that a corporation with fewer than 100 shareholders has waived the annual report requirement [see § 165.25[2]] would not seem to deprive a shareholder of such a corporation of the right to receive the "financials" which are required to appear in an annual report. Note, however, that such a corporation's financials are not held to the generally accepted accounting principles standard [see Corp. Code § 1501(a)].

[6] Special Financial Statement at Request of Five-Percent Shareholder

A shareholder, or shareholders, holding at least five percent of the outstanding shares of any class of a corporation may make a written request to the corporation for an income statement of the corporation for the three-month, six-month, or nine-month period of the current fiscal year ended more than 30 days prior to the date of the request and a balance sheet of the corporation as of the end of that period [see § 165.75] and, in addition, if no annual report for the fiscal year has been sent to shareholders, the statements required by Corp. Code § 1501(a), for the last fiscal year. The statements must be delivered or mailed to the person making the request within 30 days thereafter. A copy of the statements must be kept on file in the principal office of the corporation for 12 months and they must be exhibited at all reasonable times to any shareholder demanding an examination of them or a copy must be mailed to the shareholder [Corp. Code § 1501(c)].

The quarterly income statement and balance sheets referred to in Corp. Code § 1501 must be accompanied by the report thereon, if any, of any independent accountants engaged by the corporation or the certificate of an authorized officer of the corporation that the financial statements were prepared without audit from the books and records of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1501(d)].

§ 165.26 Electronic Transmission

[1] By the Corporation

For the purpose of giving notice by electronic transmission, when permitted [see, e.g., § 165.25], the following definitions apply. "Electronic transmission by the corporation" means a communication that is delivered to a recipient that has provided an unrevoked consent to the use of one of the following means of transmission for communications under or pursuant to the Corporations Code [Corp. Code § 20]:

- Facsimile telecommunication or electronic mail when directed to the facsimile number or electronic mail address, respectively, for that recipient on record with the corporation;

- Posting on an electronic message board or network which the corporation has designated for those communications, together with a separate notice to the recipient of the posting, which transmission will be validly delivered upon the later of the posting or delivery of the separate notice thereof; or

- Other means of electronic communication.

The communication must create a record that is capable of retention, retrieval, and review, and that may thereafter be rendered into clearly legible tangible form [Corp. Code § 20]. However, an electronic transmission under the Corporations Code by a corporation to an individual shareholder or member of the corporation who is a natural person (and if an officer or director of the corporation, only if communicated to the recipient in that person's capacity as a shareholder or member), is not authorized unless in addition to satisfying the requirements of Corp. Code § 20, the consent to the transmission has been preceded by or includes a clear written statement to the recipient as to the following [Corp. Code § 20(c)]:

- Any right of the recipient to have the record provided or made available on paper or in nonelectronic form;

- Whether the consent applies only to that transmission, to specified categories of communications, or to all communications from the corporation; and

- The procedures the recipient must use to withdraw consent.

[2] To the Corporation

"Electronic transmission to the corporation" means a communication delivered by one of the following means, as to which the corporation has placed in effect reasonable measures to verify that the sender is the shareholder (in person or by proxy) or director purporting to send the transmission, and that creates a record that is capable of retention, retrieval, and review, and that may thereafter be rendered into clearly legible tangible form [Corp. Code § 21]:

- Facsimile telecommunication or electronic mail when directed to the facsimile number or electronic mail address, respectively, which the corporation has provided from time to time to shareholders or members and directors for sending communications to the corporation;

- Posting on an electronic message board or network which the corporation has designated for those communications, and which transmission will be validly delivered upon the posting; or

- Other means of electronic communication.

14-165 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 165.27

§ 165.27 Judicial Enforcement of Right to Annual Report or Financial Statement

[1] In General

The superior court of the proper county may enforce a corporation's duty of making, mailing, or delivering the information and financial statements required by Corp. Code § 1501 [see §§ 165.73-165.75], and, if good cause is shown, may extend the time therefor [Corp. Code § 1501(e)]. The proper county in which to bring an action involving a corporate defendant is the county where the principal executive office of the corporation is located. However, if the principal executive office of a corporation is not in California or if the corporation has no such office, the proper county is Sacramento County [Corp. Code § 177]. The judicial enforcement of rights to annual reports and financial statements is applicable to any domestic corporation and to any foreign corporation having its principal executive office in California or customarily holding meetings of its board in California [Corp. Code § 1501(g)], as well as to any nominally foreign corporation [Corp. Code § 2115(b)].

[2] Expenses

If the court in any action or proceeding under Corp. Code § 1501 finds that the failure of a corporation to comply with the requirements of Corp. Code § 1501 has been without justification, the court may award an amount sufficient to reimburse the shareholder for the reasonable expenses incurred by the shareholder, including attorney's fees, in connection with the action or proceeding [Corp. Code § 1501(f)].

[3] Penalty Against Corporation

In addition to any remedy by writ of mandate [Corp. Code §§ 1501(e), 2202], a shareholder may seek to collect a penalty from a corporation neglecting, failing, or refusing to prepare or submit financial statements [Corp. Code § 2200]. For discussion of civil penalties against corporations, see § 165.28[1].

§ 165.28 Civil Penalties and Liabilities

[1] Failure to Keep Records, Prepare Financial Statements, or Advise Shareholder Regarding Application of California Law

In addition to any remedies by injunction, by action for damages, or by writ of mandate [Corp. Code § 1501(e), (f)], a corporation is subject to a penalty if it neglects, fails, or refuses to do any of the following [Corp. Code § 2200]:

- Keep or maintain a record of shareholders or books of account.
- Prepare or submit financial statements as required.
- If the corporation is a foreign corporation, give any shareholder of record advice regarding the application of California law [see Corp. Code § 2115(b), (f); see also § 160.12[2][f]].

The penalty imposed is $25 per day, beginning 30 days after a corporation's receipt of a written request that it perform the above duties, up to a maximum of $1,500. In the case of a foreign corporation's failure to give a shareholder of record advice regarding the application of California law, the 30-day period runs from the date of receipt of the request made pursuant to Corp. Code § 2115(f) [see § 160.12[2][f]] and no additional request is required [Corp. Code § 2200]. The penalty is payable to a shareholder who institutes suit within 90 days after making a written request to the corporation, including any request made pursuant to Corp. Code § 2115(f). The maximum daily penalty for failure to comply with any number of separate requests made on any one day or for the same act is $250.

The court in which an action for a penalty is brought may reduce, remit, or suspend the penalty when it appears that the corporation's neglect, failure, or refusal to comply with its duties was inadvertent or excusable [Corp. Code § 2202].

[2] Liability for Failure to Report Misleading Statements

A publicly traded corporation [see Corp. Code § 2207(f)] is subject to a civil penalty up to $1 million if the corporation acquires actual knowledge that its officer, director, manager, or agent makes a materially false or misleading statement that affects the public's perception of its financial condition, and if it knowingly fails to notify appropriate government authorities and its shareholders [Corp. Code § 2207(a); see Stats 2003, ch. 477, § 1 (statement of legislative intent that publicly traded corporations act in responsible manner with respect to statements about financial condition)]. For further discussion, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 13, Records, Reports, and Inspection Rights § 277 , (Matthew Bender).

[3] False Statements or Reports

Any officers, directors, employees, or agents of a corporation who do any of the following are liable jointly and severally for all the resulting damage to the corporation or any person injured thereby who relied thereon, or to both [Corp. Code § 1507]:

- Make, issue, deliver, or publish any prospectus, report, circular, certificate, financial statement, balance sheet, public notice, or document respecting the corporation or its shares, assets, liabilities, capital, dividends, business, earnings, or accounts which is false in any material respect, knowing it to be false, or who knowingly participate therein.

- Make or cause to be made in the books, minutes, records, or accounts of the corporation any entry which is false in any material particular, knowing that entry is false.

- Remove, erase, alter, or cancel any entry therein with intent to deceive.

§ 165.29 Criminal Penalties and Liabilities

[1] False Reports

Every director, officer, or agent of any corporation, domestic or foreign, is guilty of a felony if he or she knowingly concurs in making, publishing, or posting, either generally or privately, to the stockholders or other persons, any of the following [Corp. Code § 2254]:

- Any written report, exhibit, or statement of the corporation's affairs or pecuniary condition, or book or notice containing any material statement which is false.

- Any untrue or willfully or fraudulently exaggerated report, prospectus, account, statement of operations, values, business, profits, expenditures, or prospects.

- Any paper or document intended to produce or give, or having a tendency to produce or give, the shares of stock in the corporation a greater value or a less apparent or market value than they really possess.

A director, officer, or agent of a corporation, domestic or foreign, who refuses to make any books or post any notice required by law in the manner required by law, is also guilty of a felony [Corp. Code § 2254].

[2] Fraudulent Nondisclosure

Every director, officer, or agent of any corporation, domestic or foreign, who knowingly receives or possesses himself or herself of any property of the corporation, other than in payment of a just demand, and, with intent to defraud, omits to make, or to cause or direct to be made, a full and true entry of that fact in the books or accounts of the corporation, is guilty of a public offense punishable by imprisonment in a state prison, or by imprisonment in a county jail, not exceeding one year, and a fine not exceeding $500, or by both fine and imprisonment [Corp. Code § 2255(a), (c)].

[3] Fraudulent Alteration

Every director, officer, agent, or shareholder of any corporation, domestic or foreign, who, with intent to defraud, destroys, alters, mutilates, or falsifies any of the books, papers, writings, or securities belonging to the corporation, makes or concurs in making any false entries, or omits or concurs in omitting to make any material entry in any book of accounts or other record or document kept by the corporation, is guilty of a public offense punishable by imprisonment in a state prison, or by imprisonment in a county jail, not exceeding one year, and a fine not exceeding $500, or by both fine and imprisonment [Corp. Code § 2256].

[5] Fraudulent Advertising

Every person who, without being authorized to do so, subscribes the name of another to or inserts the name of another in any prospectus, circular, or other advertisement, or announcement of any corporation, domestic or foreign, whether existing or intended to be formed, with intent to permit the document to be published, and thereby to lead persons to believe that the person whose name is so subscribed is an officer, agent, shareholder, or promoter of that corporation, is guilty of a misdemeanor [Corp. Code § 2257].

Code § 1601(a)*. Schnabel v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 704, 715, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200, 854 P.2d 1117

[1] FORM Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--By Shareholder [Corp. Code §§ 1600(c), 1601(a)] Against Corporation--To Compel Inspection of Corporate Records [Corp. Code § 1603]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Petitioner,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name of	)	PETITION FOR WRIT OF MANDATE corporation and names of individual respondents, if	) any],	)
Respondent(s)	)

Petitioner alleges:

1. Respondent _____ [name], hereinafter referred to as "respondent corporation," is a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of _____ [state of incorporation] [_____ if state of incorporation is other than California, add: and _____ (keeps its corporate records or has its principal executive office or customarily holds meetings of its board) in _____ County, California].

[2. Respondent _____ (name) is, and at all times herein mentioned was, _____ (state corporate title held by individual respondent, e.g., secretary of respondent corporation).]

[3. Petitioner is ignorant of the true names and capacities of respondents sued herein as DOES I-_____, inclusive, and therefore sues these respondents by these fictitious names. Petitioner will amend this petition to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. (Petitioner is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named respondents is responsible in some manner for each act or omission herein alleged.)]

[4. At all times herein mentioned, each of the respondents was the agent and employee of each of the remaining respondents, and, in doing the things hereinafter alleged, was acting within the course and scope of that agency.]

5. Petitioner is the owner of record of _____ [number] shares of _____ [describe, e.g., Class A common] stock of respondent corporation. On or about _____ [date], petitioner made written demand on respondent(s) to make available to petitioner for inspection and the making of extracts therefrom the _____ [specify, e.g., record of shareholders' names, addresses, and shareholdings or respondent corporation's accounting books and records and minutes of proceedings of the shareholders, the board, and the committees of the board]. A copy of petitioner's demand is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference. Petitioner's demand was refused and is still refused by respondent(s)[, and each of them].

6. Petitioner's purpose in demanding inspection is reasonably related to his/her interest as a shareholder in respondent corporation in that _____ [specify relevant facts, such as circumstances placing petitioner's interest in respondent corporation in jeopardy and what petitioner's inspection of respondent corporation's records is anticipated to reveal, e.g., petitioner is informed and believes that the president of respondent corporation has lent corporate funds for the purchase of outstanding shares of stock in respondent corporation with the objective of vesting all such shares in one individual and thus depreciating the value of shares held by other shareholders]. Therefore, respondent corporation's failure to allow petitioner to inspect its records is without justification.

[7. An audit of the books and records and an investigation of the property, funds, and affairs of respondent corporation are necessary because _____ (specify why review of books and records by shareholder would not reveal true status of respondent corporation, e.g., petitioner is informed and believes that the president of respondent corporation has misappropriated corporate funds for various purposes and that such misappropriations would not be disclosed by a simple review of respondent corporation's books and records). _____ (Name) is a _____ (describe qualifications, e.g., certified public accountant), is competent to conduct the audit and inspection requested, and has consented to do so.]

8. Petitioner has no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law, other than the relief sought in this petition, in that _____ [state facts showing absence of an adequate legal remedy, e.g., petitioner has no means by which to otherwise discover the condition of respondent corporation and the value of his/her shares in respondent corporation or the penalties imposed by Corporations Code Section 2200 will not provide petitioner with information regarding the condition of respondent corporation and the value of petitioner's shares therein].

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays:

1. That the court issue an alternative writ of mandate commanding respondent(s) [, and each of them,] to make available to petitioner [and to _____(name), petitioner's _____ (agent or attorney),] at _____ [street address], _____ [city], California, on _____ [date], for inspection and the making of extracts therefrom, the following records of respondent corporation: _____ [specify, e.g., the record of shareholders' names, addresses, and shareholdings or respondent corporation's accounting books and records and minutes of proceedings of the shareholders, the board, and the committees of the board], or to show cause before this court at a time specified by court order why _____ [it has or they have] not done so and why a peremptory writ should not issue;

2. That on the return of the alternative writ and the hearing of this petition, this court issue its peremptory writ of mandate commanding respondent(s) [, and each of them,] to _____ [describe duty to be performed by respondent corporation, e.g., make available to petitioner (and to _____ (name), petitioner's _____ (agent or attorney),) at _____ (street address), _____ (city), California, for inspection and the making of extracts therefrom, the following records of respondent corporation: _____ (specify, e.g., the record of shareholders' names, addresses, and shareholdings or respondent corporation's accounting books and records and minutes of proceedings of the shareholders, the board, and the committees of the board)];

[3. That this court appoint _____ (name) to _____ (describe duties to be performed by auditor or investigator, e.g., audit the books and records of respondent corporation and to investigate the property, funds, and affairs of respondent corporation) and to report thereon as the court may direct;]

[4. That this court direct the expenses of the audit and investigation to be paid by respondent corporation;]

[5. For the penalty prescribed by Corporations Code Section 2200, commencing on _____ (date);]

6. For attorney's fees in the sum of $_____;

7. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

8. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

VERIFICATION [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 1086, 1109, 2015.5]

I, _____ [name], am the petitioner in this proceeding. I have read the foregoing petition and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters which are therein stated on information and belief, and, as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

CAUTION:

A petition for writ of mandate must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086]. Proof of service of a copy of a petition that seeks an alternative writ on each respondent and real party in interest must accompany the petition when it is offered for filing (except when, in its discretion and for good cause, the court has granted the application for the writ ex parte) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107; for discussion of method of serving petition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition]. A supporting memorandum also customarily accompanies a petition filed in a superior court, although it does not appear to be expressly required by statute [but see Code Civ. Proc. § 1090, referring to the proceeding as a "motion" and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a), requiring a memorandum in support of a motion other than a motion listed in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1114; for discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities].

[2] Use of Form

This petition is to obtain a writ of mandate to enforce the right of a shareholder to inspect corporate records. The accounting books and records and minutes of proceedings of the shareholders, board of directors, and board committees of a corporation are subject to inspection by any shareholder, on written demand, if the inspection is reasonably related to the holder's interest as a shareholder [Corp. Code § 1601(a)]. Further, the record of shareholders must be open to inspection and copying by any shareholder if inspection is for a purpose reasonably related to the holder's interest as a shareholder [Corp. Code § 1600(c)].

[3] Allegations

The petition alleges the following:

- Corporate status of respondent (Paragraph 1).
- Capacity of individual respondents (Paragraph 2).
- Fictitious name and agency allegations, if applicable (Paragraphs 3, 4).
- That petitioner is a shareholder of record in the respondent corporation (Paragraph 5) [Hagan v. Fairfield (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 703, 706, 7 Cal. Rptr. 248 (no proper basis for issuing writ of mandate when petitioner fails to allege that he or she is a shareholder of record)].
- That petitioner demanded in writing to inspect respondent corporation's records (Paragraph 5) [Corp. Code §§ 1600(c), 1601(a)].
- That respondent corporation refused petitioner's demand (Paragraph 5) [see Corp. Code § 1603(a)].
- That petitioner's demand was reasonably related to his or her interest as a shareholder (Paragraph 6) [Corp. Code §§ 1600(c), 1601(a); Capron v. Pacific Southwest D. Corp. (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 436, 439, 44 P.2d 629 (allegation that purpose is reasonably related to interest as shareholder as necessary element of cause of action)].
- That respondent corporation's refusal to allow inspection by petitioner is without justification (Paragraph 6) [Corp. Code § 1604].
- Petitioner's demand for an audit or investigation, if desired (Paragraph 7) [Corp. Code § 1603(a)].
- Petitioner's lack of any other plain, speedy, or adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law (Paragraph 8) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086].

[4] Jurisdiction

Although mandate proceedings may generally be brought in the Supreme Court, courts of appeal, and superior courts [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1108], mandate proceedings to enforce the right of a shareholder to inspect corporate records or to enforce the right of a shareholder to receive an annual report from a corporation are brought in the superior court [Corp. Code §§ 1501(e), 1603(a)].

[5] Venue

The proper county in which to bring an action involving a corporate defendant is the county where the principal executive office of the corporation is located. However, if the principal executive office of a corporation is not in California, or if the corporation has no such office, the proper county is Sacramento County [Corp. Code § 177].

[6] Penalty Against Corporation

A corporation failing to keep records of shareholders or books of account, failing to prepare financial statements as required, or a foreign corporation failing to comply with a shareholder request regarding the application of California law [see Corp. Code § 2115(b), (f); see also § 160.12[2][f]], is subject to a penalty of $25 for each day that its failure or refusal continues, beginning 30 days after receipt of a written request that the duty be performed from one entitled to make the request. In the case of a foreign corporation's failure to give a shareholder of record advice regarding the application of California law, the 30-day period runs from the date of receipt of the request made pursuant to Corp. Code § 2115(f) [see § 160.12[2][f]] and no additional request is required [Corp. Code § 2200]. The penalty may accrue to a maximum of $1,500. The penalty is paid to a shareholder, or jointly to shareholders, making the request that the duty be performed and damaged by the corporation's failure or refusal to comply if suit is commenced against the corporation within 90 days after the written request is made, including any request made pursuant to Corp. Code § 2115(f) [Corp. Code § 2200]. This penalty is in addition to an action brought in the superior court of the proper county to enforce a shareholder's right to annual reports or financial statements [Corp. Code §§ 1501(e), 2202].

[7] Costs and Attorney's Fees

A court may award an amount sufficient to reimburse a shareholder for expenses, including attorney's fees, if it appears that a corporation's refusal to allow inspection of corporate records or failure to send an annual report was without justification [Corp. Code §§ 1501(f), 1604].

§ 165.71 Allegation--To Compel Inspection of Corporate Property

[1] FORM Allegation--To Compel Inspection of Corporate Property

5. Petitioner is the owner of record of _____ [number] shares of _____ [describe, e.g., Class A common] stock of respondent corporation. On _____ [date], petitioner made written demand on respondent(s) to allow petitioner to inspect the property held by respondent corporation. A copy of petitioner's demand is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference. Petitioner's demand was refused and is still refused by respondent(s)[, and each of them].

6. Petitioner's purpose in demanding inspection is reasonably related to his/her interest as a shareholder in respondent corporation in that _____ [specify relevant facts, such as circumstances placing petitioner's interest in respondent corporation in jeopardy and what petitioner's inspection of respondent corporation's property is anticipated to reveal, e.g., petitioner is informed and believes that the mining property held by respondent corporation may have increased in value due to the discovery of new ore bodies and thus increased the value of shares held by all shareholders] and in that _____ [specify why inspection of corporate records would be insufficient for this purpose, e.g., petitioner is informed and believes that the condition and value of respondent corporation's mining property is susceptible to concealment or misrepresentation and thus an inspection of such books and records would not adequately inform him/her as to the condition of respondent corporation and the value of his/her shares].

[2] Source of Form

These allegations are based on Hobbs v. Tom Reed Gold Min. Co. (1913) 164 Cal. 497, 129 P. 781 . That case suggested that a shareholder may have the right to inspect corporate property when the books of a corporation do not afford him or her information as to the condition of the corporation or the value of his or her interest therein or when the condition and value of corporate property are susceptible to concealment and misrepresentation. Therefore, the shareholder was allowed to inspect the mining property held by the corporation in order to determine the nature of the ore bodies or the manner in which the work was being carried on [Hobbs v. Tom Reed Gold Min. Co. (1913) 164 Cal. 497, 501, 129 P. 781] .

[3] Use of Form

These allegations are for use in a petition to obtain a writ of mandate to enforce the right of a shareholder to inspect corporate property in lieu of an inspection of corporate records [see Hobbs v. Tom Reed Gold Min. Co. (1913) 164 Cal. 497, 501, 129 P. 781 (reversing judgment denying writ of mandate to shareholder to compel corporation to allow shareholder to inspect mine where new body of ore may have been discovered)] and may be substituted for Paragraphs 5 and 6 of § 165.70.

A shareholder's right to inspect corporate property is questionable because the few cases that discuss the right of inspection concern mining property only and because the right to inspect mining property is guaranteed by Pub. Res. Code § 2605 (shareholder's absolute right to inspect corporate mining property). However, commentators have suggested that the right to inspect corporate property follows logically from the right to inspect corporate books [see Ballantine and Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 13, Records, Reports, and Inspection Rights, § 272.01 (Matthew Bender)].

[5] State Statutes

Shareholder's absolute right to inspect corporate mining property; penalties to corporation for noncompliance. Pub. Res. Code § 3984

[6] Decisions

Right of shareholder to inspect corporate mining property and, as part of inspection, to take ore samples since purpose of inspection is to arrive at value of property in which shareholder is interested. Symmes v. Sierra Nev. Mining Co. (1915) 171 Cal. 427, 429, 153 P. 710

Right of shareholder to inspect corporate mining property when new body of ore may have been discovered in order to determine nature of ore bodies or manner in which work is being carried out. Hobbs v. Tom Reed Gold Min. Co. (1913) 164 Cal. 497, 501, 129 P. 781

Right of shareholder to inspect corporate property when books of corporation do not afford shareholder information as to condition of corporation and value of shareholder's interest or when condition and value of corporate property susceptible to concealment and misrepresentation. *Hobbs v. [1] FORM Allegation--By Five-Percent Shareholder [Corp. Code § 1600(a)]--To Compel Inspection of Record of Shareholders

5-6. Petitioner is the owner of record of _____ [number] shares of _____ [describe e.g., Class A common stock of respondent corporation, which constitutes at least _____ [five percent of the outstanding voting shares of the corporation or one percent of the outstanding voting shares of the corporation and has filed Schedule 14A with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission]. On _____ [date], petitioner made written demand on respondent(s) to make available to petitioner for inspection the _____ [specify, e.g., record of shareholders' names, addresses, and shareholdings or list of names, addresses, and shareholdings of shareholders entitled to vote for directors as of the most recent record date for which the list was compiled]. A copy of petitioner's demand is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference. Petitioner's demand was refused and is still refused by respondent(s)[, and each of them].

[2] Use of Form

This allegation is for use in a petition to obtain a writ of mandate to enforce the right of a shareholder to inspect corporate records. A shareholder, or shareholders, holding at least five percent of the outstanding voting shares of a corporation, or holding at least one percent of those voting shares and who has filed with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission a Schedule 14A relating to solicitation of proxies for the election of directors, has an absolute right to do either or both of the following [Corp. Code § 1600(a)]:

- On five business days prior written demand, to inspect and copy, in person or by agent or attorney, during usual business hours, the record of shareholders' names, addresses, and shareholdings

- On written demand and tender of the usual charges, to obtain from the corporation's transfer agent a list of the names, addresses, and shareholdings of shareholders entitled to vote for directors as of the most recent record date for which the list was compiled or as of a date specified by the shareholders subsequent to the date of the demand

This allegation may be substituted for Paragraphs 5 and 6 of § 165.70.

CAUTION:

A petition for writ of mandate must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086]. Proof of service of a copy of a petition that seeks an alternative writ on each respondent and real party in interest must accompany the petition when it is offered for filing (except when, in its discretion and for good cause, the court has granted the application for the writ ex parte) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107; for discussion of method of serving petition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition]. A supporting memorandum also customarily accompanies a petition filed in a superior court, although it does not appear to be expressly required by statute [but see Code Civ. Proc. § 1090, referring to the proceeding as a "motion" and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a), requiring a memorandum in support of a motion other than a motion listed in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1114].

[2] Use of Form

This petition is for use in obtaining a writ of mandate to enforce the right of a shareholder to be mailed an annual report. The board of a domestic corporation or foreign corporation having its principal executive office in California or customarily holding its board meetings in California [see Corp. Code § 1501(g)] is required to send its shareholders an annual report no later than 120 days after the close of the corporation's fiscal year, unless such reports are expressly waived by a corporation having fewer than 100 shareholders of record [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1)].

The reporting requirements [see Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1),(2)] will be considered satisfied if a corporation with an outstanding class of securities registered under Section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [15 U.S.C. § 78a] complies with 17 C.F.R. § 240.14a-16 (relating to notice of Internet availability of annual report) with respect to the obligation of a corporation to furnish an annual report to shareholders pursuant to 17 C.F.R. § 240.14a-3(b) [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(4)].

[3] Allegations

This petition alleges the following:

- Corporate status of respondent (Paragraph 1).

- Capacity of individual respondents and fictitious name and agency allegations, if applicable (Paragraphs 2-4).

- That petitioner is a shareholder of record in the respondent corporation (Paragraph 5) [Hagan v. Fairfield (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 703, 706, 7 Cal. Rptr. 248 (no proper basis for issuing writ of mandate when petitioner fails to allege that he or she is a shareholder of record)].

- That the board of respondent corporation has failed to send the shareholders an annual report within 120 days after the close of respondent corporation's fiscal year or, in a corporation with registered securities [see [2], above], provide a notice of Internet availability of the annual report (Paragraph 6) [Corp. Code § 1501(a)(1), (4)].

- That respondent corporation's refusal to make and send petitioner an annual report is without justification (Paragraph 7) [Corp. Code § 1501(f)].

- Petitioner's lack of any other plain, speedy, or adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law (Paragraph 8) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086].

6. On _____ [date], petitioner made written demand on respondent(s) to mail to petitioner a copy of the financial statements prepared for respondent corporation as of the end of the last fiscal year. A copy of petitioner's demand is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference. Petitioner's demand was refused and is still refused by respondent(s) [, and each of them].

[2] Use of Form

This allegation is for use in a petition to obtain a writ of mandate to enforce the right of a shareholder to be mailed financial statements for the last fiscal year. If no annual report for the last fiscal year has been sent to shareholders, the corporation must, on written request of any shareholder made more than 120 days after the close of that fiscal year, deliver or mail to the person making the request, within 30 days, the financial statements required by Corp. Code § 1501(a) for that year [Corp. Code § 1501(c)]. This allegation may be substituted for Paragraph 6 of § 165.73.

[Verification. See § 165.70.]

CAUTION:

A petition for writ of mandate must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086]. Proof of service of a copy of a petition that seeks an alternative writ on each respondent and real party in interest must accompany the petition when it is offered for filing (except when, in its discretion and for good cause, the court has granted the application for the writ ex parte) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107; for discussion of method of serving petition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition]. A supporting memorandum also customarily accompanies a petition filed in a superior court, although it does not appear to be expressly required by statute [but see Code Civ. Proc. § 1090, referring to the proceeding as a "motion" and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a), requiring a memorandum in support of a motion other than a motion listed in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1114; for discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities].

[2] Use of Form

This petition is for use in obtaining a writ of mandate to enforce the right of a director to inspect corporate records or property. All books, records, and documents of every kind and the physical properties of a corporation are subject to inspection by any director at any reasonable time [Corp. Code § 1602].

[3] Allegations

This petition alleges the following:

- Corporate status of respondent (Paragraph 1);
- Capacity of individual respondents and fictitious name and agency allegations, if applicable (Paragraphs 2-4);
- That petitioner is a director of the respondent corporation (Paragraph 5) [Corp. Code § 1602];
- That respondent corporation refused to allow petitioner to inspect its corporate records or properties (Paragraph 6) [Corp. Code §§ 1602, 1603(a)];
- Petitioner's demand for an audit or investigation, if desired (Paragraph 7) [Corp. Code § 1603(a)]; and
- Petitioner's lack of any other plain, speedy, or adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law (Paragraph 8) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086].

[2] Use of Form

This alternative writ is for use by a shareholder to enforce his or her rights of inspection of corporate records. The alternative writ requires the corporation to produce the records for inspection by the shareholder and the shareholder's agent or attorney at a specified time and place or to show cause before the court why the records were not produced for inspection [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1087]. This alternative writ incorporates an order issuing the writ, which may be permitted under local court rules. When an order may not be incorporated in the same form, use the order shown in § 165.78. When a director seeks to enforce his or her rights of inspection, this form of alternative writ may be adapted for use by the director.

[3] Issuance of ex Parte Alternative Writs

Code Civ. Proc. § 1107 provides that a petition for a writ of mandate that seeks an alternative writ must be accompanied by proof of service of a copy of it on the respondent. The section also provides an exception that the court may, in its discretion and for good cause, grant the petition ex parte without notice or service of the petition. The practice with regard to how narrowly or broadly this exception is interpreted varies throughout the state. Thus, local court rules and local practice should be consulted before a petition is served.

[4] Service of Alternative Writ of Mandate

The alternative writ must be served in the same manner as a summons in a civil action unless the court expressly directs otherwise. Service of the alternative writ of mandate on a majority of the members of any board or body is service on the board or body whether or not, at the time of the service, the board or body was in session [Code Civ. Proc. § 1096]. See generally Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

Respondent _____ [name], as a return to the alternative writ of mandate issued by this court, demurs to the petition for writ of mandate herein on [each of] the following ground(s):

1. This court has no jurisdiction to issue a writ of mandate in this proceeding in that _____ [specify why court has no jurisdiction, e.g., the petitioner fails to allege that respondent corporation is a _____ (domestic corporation or foreign corporation _____ (having its principal executive office or customarily holding meetings of its board or keeping its records) in California or nominally foreign corporation within the meaning of Corporations Code Section 2115(a))].

2. The petition fails on its face to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action for issuance of a writ of mandate in that _____ [specify insufficiency in petition, e.g., the petition fails to allege that petitioner is a shareholder of record holding at least _____ (five percent of the outstanding voting shares of stock or one percent of the outstanding voting shares of stock and having filed Schedule 14B with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission) in respondent corporation at the present time].

CAUTION:

A demurrer must state on the first page immediately below the case number the name of the party filing the demurrer and the name of the party whose pleading is the subject of the demurrer [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320(e)]. In addition, the first page of each paper must specify immediately below the case number [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110(b)]:

- The date, time, and location, if ascertainable, of any scheduled hearing, and the name of the hearing judge, if ascertainable;
- The nature or title of any attached document other than an exhibit;
- The date of filing of the action; and
- The trial date, if set.

A party filing a demurrer must serve and file a notice of hearing with the demurrer [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320(c)], as well as a supporting memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(c) (law and motion rules apply to demurrers); see also Ch. 417, Points and Authorities].

[2] Use of Form

This demurrer is for use by a respondent corporation as a return to an alternative writ of mandate secured by one of its shareholders. A respondent may make its return to an alternative writ of mandate by demurrer, verified answer, or both. In a superior court, if the return is by demurrer alone, the court may allow an answer to be filed within such time as it may designate [Code Civ. Proc. § 1089]. This form may be adapted for use by an individual respondent. In addition, this form may be adapted for use where the petitioner is a director seeking inspection of corporate records.

[3] Grounds for Demurrer

This demurrer alleges the following grounds for relief:

- Lack of jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(a)] over the respondent corporation (Paragraph 1) [see Corp. Code §§ 1600(d), 1601(a), 2115(b)].
- Insufficient facts to state a cause of action (Paragraph 2) [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e); Hagan v. Fairfield (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 703, 706, 7 Cal. Rptr. 248 (no proper basis for issuing writ of mandate when petitioner fails to allege that he or she is a shareholder of record)].

- Uncertainty (Paragraph 3) [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(f); see Corp. Code §§ 1600(c), 1601(a)].

These grounds are illustrative only, and a respondent may also demur on any of the other grounds specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10.

[4] Time for Return

A demurrer or answer must be filed on the date of the return of the alternative writ [Code Civ. Proc. § 1089]. However, if the petitioner follows the noticed motion procedure [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.113(a)] in setting a date for a hearing on the application, the demurrer or answer must be filed on the date noticed [Code Civ. Proc. § 1089; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.113(a)].

[6] State Statutes

Part Two of Code of Civil Procedure is applicable to mandate proceedings. Code Civ. Proc. § 1109

[7] Decisions

Demurrer was interposed solely to delay proceedings when none of four grounds alleged in demurrer were sufficient to discharge writ and last of four grounds called for conclusion of law by petitioner. Private Investors, Inc. v. Homestake Min. Co. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 488, 497, 54 P.2d 535

[2] Use of Form

This answer is for use by a respondent corporation as a return to an alternative writ of mandate secured by one of its shareholders. A respondent may make its return to an alternative writ of mandate by demurrer, verified answer, or both. In a superior court, if the return is by demurrer alone, the court may allow an answer to be filed within such time as it may designate [Code Civ. Proc. § 1089]. The grounds for denial and for affirmative defenses set forth in the answer are illustrative only. This form may be adapted for use by an individual respondent. In addition, this form may be adapted for use where the petitioner is a director seeking inspection of corporate records.

[4] Decisions

Reply or answer by petitioner to respondent's return is proper. Scott v. Superior Court (1928) 205 Cal. 525, 526-527, 271 P. 906

Answer alleging that petitioner's sole purpose for inspection was to procure names of shareholders and other information concerning corporation in order to carry out plan to serious detriment and harassment of corporation was insufficient to warrant denial of writ of mandate when answer was not supported by substantial evidence. Gilmore v. Emsco Derrick & Equip. Co. (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 64, 65-66, 70 P.2d 251

Denial of allegation that inspection was for purpose reasonably related to petitioner's interest as shareholder held sufficient to put petitioner's purpose in seeking inspection in issue. Capron v. Pacific Southwest D. Corp. (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 436, 439-440, 44 P.2d 629

Answer sufficient, and not merely conclusory, when it alleges that petitioner's purpose in demanding inspection was to secure names of shareholders in order to secure options to purchase stock from those shareholders and then to offer to resell stock to corporation at higher price to corporation's detriment. Capron v. Pacific Southwest D. Corp. (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 436, 440, 44 P.2d 629

Allegations in answer that petitioner's purpose was to use corporate records to injury of corporation and that petitioner's demand was influenced by and made with bad motives as failing to state facts showing petitioner was not acting in good faith; petitioner's demurrer to respondent's answer as sustained. *Gertridge v. [2] Use of Form

This notice of motion is for use by a shareholder to postpone a noticed shareholders' meeting when a corporation, or its transfer agent, fails to comply with the shareholder's demand for inspection or delivery of certain records of shareholders. This motion seeks to postpone a shareholders' meeting for a period of time equal to the period of delay by the corporation or its transfer agent in complying with a shareholder's request and may be brought in addition to any other legal or equitable remedies to which the shareholder is entitled [Corp. Code § 1600(b)], such as a petition for writ of mandate [see §§ 165.70, 165.72] to compel a corporation's compliance with the request for corporate records. Thus, this notice, together with the declaration in support of the motion [see § 165.82] and order [see § 165.83], are for use in conjunction with a pending action in mandate. For a form seeking a temporary restraining order, a preliminary and a permanent injunction against a corporation complying with a shareholder's demand in an untimely fashion, see § 165.84.

Shareholders who may bring this motion are shareholders holding at least five percent of the outstanding shares of a corporation or shareholders holding at least one percent of the outstanding shares of a corporation and having filed a Schedule 14A with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission relating to the election of directors [see Corp. Code § 1600(a)]. This motion may be brought against a corporation that fails to permit a shareholder to inspect the record of shareholders' names, addresses, and shareholdings on five days written demand by the shareholder. In addition, this motion may be brought against a corporation and its transfer agent that fails to provide a list of names, addresses, and shareholdings of shareholders entitled to vote for the election of directors on five days written demand by the shareholder or on a later date specified in such a demand [Corp. Code § 1600(a), (b)].

[3] Jurisdiction

A motion to delay a shareholders' meeting for a period of time equal to the period of delay in complying with a shareholder's demand for records of shareholders must be brought in a superior court [Corp. Code § 1600(b)].

The notice of motion is accompanied by a declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5] by the shareholder making the motion [Corp. Code § 1600(b)]. § 166.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses shareholders' meetings and the manner in which shareholders vote at meetings, as well as the duties of persons possessing the power to vote shares of stock on behalf of another.

This chapter includes forms for use in proceedings to compel a corporation to hold an annual [see §§ 166.70-166.72], or special [see §§ 166.73-166.78], shareholders' meeting. It also includes forms for use in seeking a declaration of the invalidity of a shareholders' meeting for want of proper notice [see § 166.79], injunctive relief when a corporation has improperly solicited or voted consents or proxies [see §§ 166.80-166.82], for seeking and specific performance of a voting agreement among shareholders [see § 166.83]. In addition, it includes forms for use in actions attacking the validity of an election or appointment of directors [see §§ 166.84-166.87] and a form to compel disclosure of the voting record of a third person who held and exercised the power to vote shares of stock on behalf of another.

Chapter 166 CORPORATIONS: SHAREHOLDERS' MEETINGS AND VOTING
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.11

§ 166.11 Annual Meeting Required

[1] In General

Unless, to effectuate a voting shift, the articles provide that directors hold office for a shorter term, directors must be elected at each annual meeting of the shareholders to hold office until the next annual meeting [Corp. Code § 301(a); see Corp Code § 194.7 (defining voting shift); see also Corp. Code § 301.5(b) (elections when directors are divided into classes, discussed in Ch. 167, Corporations: Directors and Management)]. Therefore, subject to the provision of Corp. Code § 603 (permitting the election of directors without a prior meeting if the requisite consent of the shareholders has been obtained), an annual meeting of shareholders must be held for the election of directors [Corp. Code § 600(b)].

The meeting must be held on a date and at a time stated in or fixed in accordance with a corporation's bylaws. Any other proper business may be transacted at the annual meeting [Corp. Code § 600(b)].

[2] Shareholder's Remedy for Failure to Hold Annual Meeting

If there is a failure to hold the annual meeting of shareholders for a period of 60 days after the date designated therefor or, if no date has been designated, for a period of 15 months after the organization of the corporation or after its last annual meeting, the superior court of the proper county [see Corp. Code § 177 (proper county defined)] may summarily order a meeting to be held on the application of any shareholder after notice to the corporation giving it an opportunity to be heard [Corp. Code § 600(c); see §§ 166.70-166.72]. The court may issue, in addition, such orders as may be appropriate, including, without limitation, orders designating the time and place of the meeting, the record date for determination of shareholders entitled to vote, and the form of notice of the meeting [Corp. Code § 600(c)].

The shares represented at the meeting, either in person or by proxy, constitute a quorum [see Corp. Code § 602(a) (quorum defined)] for the purpose of that meeting, notwithstanding any provisions of the articles, bylaws, or General Corporation Law to the contrary [Corp. Code § 600(c)]. This provision prevents directors and shareholders from obstructing a court ordered election of which due notice is given by staying away from the election [see Burnett v. Banks (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 631, 637, 279 P.2d 579] .

[3] Applicability to Nominally Foreign Corporations

The requirement that a corporation hold an annual meeting [Corp. Code § 600(b)] and the remedy provided for its failure to do so [Corp. Code § 600(c)] extend to nominally foreign corporations [Corp. Code § 2115(b)]. For a discussion of nominally foreign corporations, see Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity .

Chapter 166 CORPORATIONS: SHAREHOLDERS' MEETINGS AND VOTING
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.12

§ 166.12 Special Meetings

[1] In General

Special meetings of shareholders may be called by the board, the chairperson of the board, the president, or the holders of shares entitled to cast not less than 10 percent of the votes at a shareholders' meeting or by any additional persons as may be provided in the corporation's articles or bylaws [Corp. Code § 600(d)].

Special meetings may also be called by any holder or holders of an aggregate of five percent or more of the total number of shares outstanding to elect a new board of directors. This right matures only when, as a result of vacancies on the board being filled by the directors [Corp. Code § 305(a)], the number of directors who are elected by shareholders constitutes less than a majority of the directors in office [Corp. Code § 305(c)].

[2] Written Request for Notice of Special Meeting

On the request in writing to the corporation, addressed to the attention of the chairperson of the board, president, vice-president, or secretary of the corporation by any person, other than the board, entitled to call a special meeting, notice of a special meeting must be given forthwith to the shareholders entitled to vote at that meeting [Corp. Code § 601(c)]. The written request may be either mailed or personally delivered. However, the corporate officer to whom the request is addressed need not be formally named on the face of the request itself [Humboldt Oil Co. v. Hoagland (1924) 70 Cal. App. 454, 457-458, 233 P. 404] . The notice, as given by the corporate officer, must state that the meeting will be held at a time requested by the person or persons calling the meeting not less than 35 nor more than 60 days after receipt of the written request for the special meeting [Corp. Code § 601(c)].

[3] Remedy for Failure to Give Notice of Special Meeting

If the notice requested by a person entitled to call a special meeting is not given by a corporation within 20 days after receipt of the request, that person may either give notice instead [Corp. Code § 601(c); Dedrick v. California Whaling Co. (1936) 16 Cal. App. 2d 284, 287-288, 60 P.2d 551 (notice as given by any director or shareholder when proper officer refuses or neglects to give notice)] or apply to the superior court for the proper county for an order compelling the corporation to give notice of the special meeting [see §§ 166.74-166.76]. The corporation is given an opportunity to be heard with respect to the application [Corp. Code § 601(c); see Corp. Code § 177 (proper county defined)]. At the conclusion of the hearing, the court may issue such orders as may be appropriate, including, without limitation, orders designating the time and place of a meeting, the record date for determination of shareholders entitled to vote, and the form of notice for the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(c)].

[4] Remedy if Majority of Directors Are Not Elected by Shareholders

If the reason for a special meeting is to elect a new board when less than a majority of directors on the board are elected by the shareholders as a result of vacancies being filled by the remaining directors, a holder of five percent of the outstanding shares may give notice [Corp. Code § 305(c)(1)] or that person may apply [Corp. Code § 305(c)(2)] to the superior court for the proper county for an order compelling the corporation to hold a special shareholders' meeting [Corp. Code § 305(c)(2); see Corp. Code § 177 (proper county defined); see also §§ 166.74, 166.77, and 166.78].

[5] Hearing on Applications

The hearing on an application is held on not less than 10 business days notice [see § 166.75] to the corporation. If the corporation intends to oppose the application, it must file with the court a notice of opposition not later than five business days prior to the date set for the hearing. The application and any notice of opposition [see § 166.76] must be supported by appropriate affidavits (or declarations [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]). The court's determination is based on the papers in the record. However, if good cause is shown, the court may receive and consider at the hearing additional evidence, oral or documentary, and additional points and authorities. The hearing on this application takes precedence over all other matters not of a similar nature pending on the date set for the hearing [Corp. Code §§ 305(c), 601(c)].

Meetings of shareholders may be held at any place stated in or fixed in accordance with the bylaws, whether or not that place is in California. If no place is stated in or fixed by the bylaws, shareholders' meetings must be held at the principal executive office of the corporation [Corp. Code § 600(a)].

Shareholders not physically present in person or by proxy at a meeting of shareholders may do the following, pursuant to electronic transmission by and to the corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 20, 21 (defined); see also Electronic Transmission in Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports] or electronic video screen communication [Corp. Code § 600(a)]:

- Participate in a meeting of shareholders;
- Be deemed present in person or by proxy; and
- Vote at a meeting of shareholders, whether that meeting is to be held at a designated place or in whole or in part by means of electronic transmission by and to the corporation or by electronic video screen communication [see § 166.14].

This procedure is applicable unless prohibited by the bylaws of the corporation. It must be authorized by the board of directors in its sole discretion, and is subject to the requirement of consent [see Corp. Code § 20(b)] and to those guidelines and procedures that the board of directors may adopt [Corp. Code § 600(a)].

§ 166.14 Electronic Meetings

A meeting of the shareholders may be conducted, in whole or in part, by electronic transmission by and to the corporation or by electronic video screen communication, if [Corp. Code § 600(e)]:

- The corporation implements reasonable measures to provide shareholders (in person or by proxy) a reasonable opportunity to participate in the meeting and to vote on matters submitted to the shareholders, including an opportunity to read or hear the proceedings of the meeting substantially concurrently with those proceedings; and

- Any shareholder votes or takes other action at the meeting by means of electronic transmission to the corporation or electronic video screen communication, a record of that vote or action is maintained by the corporation.

Any request by a corporation to a shareholder pursuant to Corp. Code § 20(b) ("electronic transmission by the corporation" defined) for consent to conduct a meeting of shareholders by electronic transmission by and to the corporation must include a notice that, absent consent of the shareholder pursuant to Corp. Code § 20(b), the meeting will be held at a physical location in accordance with Corp. Code § 600(a) [Corp. Code § 600(a); see § 166.13].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.15

§ 166.15 Notice Requirements for Shareholders' Meetings

[1] In General

Whenever shareholders are required or permitted to take any action at a meeting, written notice of the meeting must be given to each shareholder entitled to vote at the meeting no less than 10 (or if sent by third-class mail, 30) nor more than 60 days prior to the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)]. For a discussion related to the determination of shareholders entitled to receive notice, see § 166.24.

[2] Contents of Notice

In every case, the notice must state the place, date, and hour of the meeting and the means of electronic transmission by and to the corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 20, 21 (definitions); see also Ch. 165, Corporations Corporate Records and Reports, § 165.26] or electronic video screen communication, if any, by which shareholders may participate in that meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a); San Buenaventura Mfg. Co. v. Vassault (1875) 50 Cal. 534, 537 (annual meeting not sufficiently noticed when time of meeting not specified); Grant v Hartman Ranch Co. (1961) 193 Cal App 2d 497, 501, 14 Cal Rptr. 531 (meeting invalid when notice failed to specify hour of meeting)].

Notice of an annual meeting of shareholders must state those matters which the board, at the time notice is mailed, intends to present for action by the shareholders. However, any proper matter may be presented at the meeting for shareholder action [Corp. Code § 601(a)]. If directors are to be elected at the meeting, the notice must also include the names of nominees intended to be presented by management for election as of the date of notice [Corp. Code § 601(a)].

Notice of a special meeting of shareholders must state the general nature of the business to be transacted [Corp. Code § 601(a)]. No business other than that stated in the notice of the meeting may be transacted at a special meeting [Corp. Code § 601(a)]. Hence, a special meeting is not authorized to elect directors when the notice of the meeting fails to specify that the election of directors is one of the purposes of the meeting [Dolbear v. Wilkinson (1916) 172 Cal 366, 370, 156 P. 488 (notice stating that purpose of meeting to transact any business that comes before the meeting insufficient)]. However, shareholders were held to have had ample notice that a special meeting may involve a change in officers and directors responsible for corporate management when the notice stated that the purpose of the meeting was to consider and determine all questions related to the property, management, and business policy of the corporation and to take action expedient or necessary in connection with these matters [Lawrence v. I.N. Parlier Estate Co. (1940) 15 Cal 2d 220, 233-234, 100 P2d 765 (decided under former Civ. Code § 314, which similarly required notice of special meeting to state general nature of business to be transacted)].

Corp. Code § 601(f) provides that any shareholder approval at an annual or special meeting, other than unanimous approval by those entitled to vote, is valid only if the general nature of the proposal so approved was stated in the notice of the meeting and involved any of the following matters:

- Contracts in which a director is financially interested [Corp. Code § 310].
- Amendment of the articles [Corp. Code § 902].
- Conversion of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1152].
- Reorganization of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1201].
- Voluntary dissolution of the corporation by the shareholders [Corp. Code § 1900].
- The plan of distribution at dissolution of the corporation [Corp. Code § 2007].

[3] Notice of Adjourned Meeting

Unless the bylaws of a corporation require otherwise, notice need not be given when a shareholders' meeting is adjourned to another time or place if the time and place (or the means of electronic transmission by and to the corporation or electronic video screen communication, if any, by which the shareholders may participate) are announced at the meeting at which the adjournment is taken. However, notice must be given to each shareholder of record entitled to vote at the meeting if the adjournment is for more than 45 days or if a new record date is fixed for the adjourned meeting after the adjournment. At the adjourned meeting, the corporation may transact any business it might have transacted at the original meeting [Corp. Code § 601(d)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.16

§ 166.16 Manner in Which Notice Given

Notice of a shareholders' meeting or any report must be given personally, by electronic transmission by the corporation [see Corp. Code § 20 (definition); see also Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports, § 165.26], by first-class mail, or, in the case of a corporation with outstanding shares held of record by 500 or more persons (as determined under Corp. Code § 605 [see § 166.21]), on the record date for the shareholders' meeting, notice may be sent third-class mail, or by other means of written communication to each shareholder. Notice is addressed to a shareholder at the address for that shareholder appearing on the books of the corporation or at the address given to the corporation by a shareholder for the purpose of notice. If no address appears or is given, notice is either addressed to the place where the principal executive office of the corporation is located or published at least once in a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the corporation's principal executive office is located. The notice is deemed to have been given at the time when it is delivered personally, sent by electronic transmission by the corporation [see Corp. Code § 20 (definition); see also Electronic Transmission in Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports], deposited in the mail, or sent by other means of written communication. An affidavit of mailing or electronic transmission by the corporation [see Corp. Code § 20 (definition); see also Electronic Transmission in Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports] executed by the secretary, assistant secretary, or any transfer agent is prima facie evidence of the giving of notice [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

If any notice addressed to a shareholder at the address of the shareholder appearing on the books of the corporation is returned to the corporation by the United States Postal Service marked to indicate that the postal service was unable to deliver the notice to the shareholder at that address, all future notices to the shareholder are deemed to be duly given without further mailing, provided the notices are available on written demand of the shareholder at the principal executive office of the corporation for one year from the date of the notice to all other shareholders [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

Notice given by electronic transmission by the corporation is valid only if it complies with Corp. Code § 20 [see Electronic Transmission in Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports, for discussion]. However, notice may not be given by electronic transmission by the corporation after the corporation is unable to deliver two consecutive notices to the shareholder by that means, or the inability to so deliver the notices to the shareholder becomes known to the secretary, any assistant secretary, the transfer agent, or other person responsible for the giving of the notice [Corp. Code § 601(b)].

§ 166.17 Waiver of Notice

[1] When Shareholder Is Not Present

Either before or after a shareholders' meeting, a person entitled to vote, who is not present at the meeting in person or by proxy, may sign a written waiver of notice, a consent to the holding of the meeting, or an approval of the minutes of the meeting. The waiver, consent, or approval must be filed with the corporate records or made a part of the minutes of the meeting. Unless the articles, bylaws, or Corp. Code § 601(f) (specific notice required for certain matters) require otherwise, the written waiver of notice need not specify the business to be transacted or the purpose of any regular or special meeting of shareholders [Corp. Code § 601(e)].

[2] When Shareholder Is Present

A person entitled to vote at a shareholders' meeting may waive notice of the meeting by his or her attendance at the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(e)]. The notice requirement is only for the benefit of a shareholder and the necessity of protecting a shareholder does not arise when the shareholder is present and acting at a meeting [Guaranty Loan Co. v. Treadwell (1921) 53 Cal. App. 538, 542, 200 P. 653] . The shareholder's attendance and participation is a waiver of any objection to the regularity of the call or to the place of the meeting [Guaranty Loan Co. v. Fontanel (1920) 183 Cal. 1, 9, 190 P. 177] .

However, attendance does not constitute a waiver of notice when the person objects at the beginning of the meeting to the transaction of any business because the meeting is not lawfully called or convened [Corp. Code § 601(e)]. In addition, attendance at a shareholders' meeting is not a waiver of the right to object to the consideration of matters required to be included in the notice [see Corp. Code § 601(a), (f)] and not so included, provided an objection is expressly made at the meeting [Corp. Code § 601(e)].

§ 166.18 Quorum

[1] In General

Except as provided in Corp. Code § 602(b) (effect on quorum by withdrawal), the affirmative vote of a majority of the shares represented and voting at a duly held meeting at which a quorum is present is the act of the shareholders, provided (1) that the shares voting affirmatively also constitute at least a majority of the required quorum and (2) that the vote of a greater number or voting by classes is not required by the General Corporation Law or the articles [Corp. Code § 602(a)].

[2] Effect of Withdrawal on Quorum

The shareholders present at a duly called or held meeting at which a quorum is present may continue to transact business until adjournment even though enough shareholders withdraw from the meeting to leave less than a quorum. Any action taken, other than adjournment, must be approved by at least a majority of the shares required to constitute a quorum, or if required by law or by the articles, the vote of a greater number or voting by classes [Corp. Code § 602(b)].

[3] If Quorum Is Absent

In the absence of a quorum, any meeting of shareholders may be adjourned from time to time by the vote of a majority of the shares represented either in person or by proxy, but no other business may be transacted, except as provided in Corp. Code § 602(c) (effect of withdrawal on quorum) [Corp. Code § 602(c)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.20

§ 166.20 Action Taken Without Meeting

[1] Shareholder Consent

Unless the articles provide otherwise, any action which may be taken at an annual or special meeting of shareholders may be taken without a meeting and without prior notice if a consent in writing (as specified in Corp. Code § 195), setting forth the action to be taken, is provided by the holders of outstanding shares having no less than the minimum number of votes necessary to authorize that action at a meeting at which all shares entitled to vote were present and voting [Corp. Code § 603(a)]. For instance, two of the directors and shareholders of a corporation, who between themselves control a majority of shares, may consent to sell certain corporate property without conducting a formal meeting or keeping minutes. The consent of the third director and minority shareholder is unnecessary to authorize the action [Mannon v. Pesula (1943) 59 Cal. App. 2d 597, 604-605, 139 P.2d 336] . Likewise, written consent to voluntary dissolution of a corporation by the holder of 50 percent of the voting shares [see Corp. Code § 1900(a)] is effective to authorize the voluntary dissolution even if there is no special notice of a meeting of shareholders and no approval of the action by all shareholders [In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 381, 317 P.2d 1] . For a discussion of voluntary dissolution of a corporation by a majority shareholder, see Ch. 170, Corporations: Dissolution .

However, directors may not be elected by written consent except by unanimous written consent of all shares entitled to vote for the election of directors. The shareholders may elect a director to fill a vacancy, other than a vacancy created by removal, by the written consent of a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote [Corp. Code § 603(d)].

[2] Prompt Notice of Shareholder Approval

Unless the consents of all shareholders are solicited in writing, notice of shareholder approval without a meeting by less than unanimous written consent must be promptly given to those shareholders entitled to vote who have not consented in writing. Corp. Code § 601(b) governs the giving of that notice [Corp. Code § 603(b)(2)].

[3] Ten-Day Notice of Shareholder Approval for Certain Acts

Corp. Code § 603(b)(1) provides that unless the consents of all shareholders are solicited in writing, notice of shareholder approval without a meeting by less than unanimous written consent must be given at least 10 days prior to the consummation of the action authorized by that approval when the action approved involves any of the following matters:

- Contracts in which a director is interested [Corp. Code § 310].
- Indemnification of a corporate agent [Corp. Code § 317].
- Conversion of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1152].
- Reorganization of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1201].
- The plan of distribution at dissolution of the corporation [Corp. Code § 2007].

Notice must be given as provided in Corp. Code § 601(b) [Corp. Code § 603(b)(1)].

[4] Revocation of Consent

Any shareholder giving a written consent may revoke the consent personally or by proxy by a writing received by the corporation prior to the time that written consents of the number of shares required to authorize the proposed action are filed with the secretary of the corporation. However, a shareholder may not revoke his or her written consent after that time. The revocation is effective on its receipt by the secretary of the corporation. This applies to a shareholder's proxyholders, a transferee of the shares, a personal representative of the shareholder, or their respective proxyholders, as well as to the shareholder [Corp. Code § 603(c)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.21

§ 166.21 Form of Consent When There Are 100 or More Shareholders

[1] In General

A written consent distributed to 10 or more shareholders of a corporation with outstanding shares held of record [see Corp. Code § 605(a) (shares deemed held of record)] by 100 or more persons must offer an opportunity on the form of written consent to specify a choice between approval and disapproval of each matter or group of related matters intended to be acted on by the written consent, other than elections to office. In addition, a written consent must provide, subject to reasonable specified conditions, that, where a person solicited specifies a choice with respect to any matter, the shares are voted in accordance with that choice. The above rules do not apply to any corporation with an outstanding class of securities registered under Section 12 of the Securities and Exchange Act [15 U.S.C. § 781] or whose securities are exempted from such registration by Section 12(g)(2) [15 U.S.C. § 781(g)(2)] of that act [Corp. Code § 604(a)].

Every form of written consent which provides an opportunity for the shareholder to approve or disapprove any proposal must also contain an appropriate space marked "abstain," by which a shareholder may indicate his or her desire to abstain from voting on that proposal. When a written consent is marked "abstain" by a shareholder with respect to a particular proposal, that written consent is not voted either for or against that proposal [Corp. Code § 604(b)].

[2] Determination of Number of Shareholders

[a] In General

For the purpose of determining whether or not a corporation has outstanding shares held of record by 100 or more persons, shares are deemed held of record by each person identified as the owner of the shares on the record of shareholders maintained by or on behalf of the corporation [Corp. Code § 605(a)]. However, when the record of shareholders is not maintained in accordance with accepted practice, any additional person is included as a shareholder of record if he or she would be identified as an owner of shares in the record of shareholders if the records were maintained in accordance with accepted practice [Corp. Code § 605(a)(1)].

[b] Shares Held by Entity, Fiduciary, or Trustee

When shares are identified as held of record by a corporation, a partnership, a limited liability company, a trust, whether or not trustees are named, or other organization, the shares are included as so held by one person [Corp. Code § 605(a)(2)]. Similarly, when shares are identified as held of record by one or more persons as trustees, executors, guardians, custodians, or in any other fiduciary capacity with respect to a single trust, estate, or account, the shares are included as held of record by one person [Corp. Code § 605(a)(3)].

[c] Shares Held by Two or More Persons

When shares are held by two or more persons as coowners, the shares are included as held of record by one person [Corp. Code § 605(a)(4)].

[d] Shares Held in Similar Names

When a corporation, or other person soliciting proxies, has reason to believe that shares registered in substantially similar names are owned by the same person because of the address or other indications, the shares held in the substantially similar names may be included as held of record by one person [Corp. Code § 605(a)(5)].

[3] Shares Subject to Voting Agreement or Trust

Notwithstanding the provisions of Corp. Code § 605(a) [see § 166.21[1]], shares held, to the knowledge of a corporation, or other person soliciting proxies, which are subject to a voting trust, deposit agreement, or similar arrangement are included as shares held of record by the recordholders of the voting trust certificates, certificates of deposit, receipts, or similar evidences of interest in the securities. The corporation, or other person soliciting proxies, may rely in good faith on information received in response to its request from a nonaffiliated issuer of the certificates or evidences of interest [Corp. Code § 605(b)(1)]. Furthermore, if the corporation, or other person soliciting proxies, knows or has reason to know that the form of holding shares of records is used primarily to circumvent the provisions of Corp. Code § 605 (shares deemed held of record), the beneficial owners of the shares are deemed owners of record [Corp. Code § 605(b)(2)].

[4] Shareholder's Remedy for Noncompliance

Although corporate actions are not invalidated by failure to comply with the provisions of Corp. Code § 604(a), (b) (form for written consent), a corporation's failure to comply may be the basis for a shareholder's suit [§§ 166.79, 166.80] in the superior court to compel compliance [Corp. Code § 604(d)].

§ 166.22 Amendment or Revision of "Referenced Agreements"

If a reference in the corporation's articles is to an agreement or contract to which the corporation is a party (a "referenced agreement"), any amendment or revision of the referenced agreement requires shareholder approval, in addition to approvals otherwise required, in the following instances and no other [Corp. Code § 109.5(c)]:

- If the amendment or revision of the referenced agreement would result in a material change in the rights, preferences, privileges, or restrictions of a class or series of shares, the amendment or revision of the referenced agreement is required to be approved by the outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 152] of that class or series.

- If the amendment or revision of the referenced agreement would result in a material change in the rights or liabilities of any class or series of shares with respect to the subject matter of Corp. Code § 204(a)(1), (2), (3), (5), or (9), the amendment or revision of the referenced agreement is required to be approved by the outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 152] of that class or series.

- If the amendment or revision of the referenced agreement would result in a change of any of the principal terms of an agreement of merger, the amendment or revision of the referenced agreement is required to be approved in the same manner as required by Corp. Code § 1104 for a change in the principal terms of an agreement of merger.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.23

§ 166.23 Voting Rights of Shares

[1] In General

Unless the articles or any shareholders' agreement specify otherwise, no distinction exists between classes or series of shares or the holders thereof [Corp. Code § 203; see Corp. Code § 203.5 (series within class)]. Thus, each outstanding share, regardless of class, is entitled to one vote on each matter submitted to a vote of shareholders [Corp. Code § 700(a)], except as otherwise provided in the articles.

However, pursuant to its articles a corporation may issue one or more classes or series of shares with full, limited, or no voting rights. In such a case, it is required that one or more classes or series of outstanding shares have full voting rights [Corp. Code § 400(a)], that all shares of any one class have the same voting rights unless the class is divided into series, and that all shares of any one series have the same voting rights [Corp. Code § 400(b)].

A corporation's unlawful interference with a shareholder's right to vote may be restrained. For instance, an order enjoining any interference with a shareholder's right to vote certain shares of stock is a proper exercise of a court's power to protect the property rights incidental to the ownership of shares and is not an unwarranted interference with a corporation's internal affairs [Meyberg v. Superior Court (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 336, 341-342, 121 P.2d 685 (order holding corporate officers in contempt of court for refusing to allow shareholder to vote all shares owned by him in the election of directors after court's temporary restraining order permitting all such shares to be voted)].

[2] Manner of Voting Shares

A shareholder entitled to vote on any matter may vote part of the shares in favor of the proposal and refrain from voting the remaining shares or vote them against the proposal, in matters other than elections to office. The shareholder may not, in the absence of a contrary provision in the articles or bylaws or good reason shown by the shareholder, split whole shares into multiple fractional votes [Garnier v. Garnier (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 255, 259, 56 Cal. Rptr. 247 (only those directors elected by whole shares validly elected)]. If the shareholder fails to specify the number of shares he or she is voting affirmatively, it is conclusively presumed that the shareholder's approving vote is with respect to all the shares he or she is entitled to vote [Corp. Code § 700(b)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.24

§ 166.24 Record Owner Entitled to Vote

[1] In General

A shareholder has the right to vote at a shareholders' meeting only those shares of stock standing of record in his or her name in the corporation's books [Los Angeles v. Owens River Canal Co. (1932) 120 Cal. App. 380, 386, 7 P.2d 1064] . For a corporation to determine which shareholders are entitled to notice of a meeting or to vote, the board may fix, in advance, a record date no more than 60 nor less than 10 days prior to the date of the meeting [Corp. Code § 701(a)]. If no record date is fixed, the record date for determining shareholders entitled to notice of or to vote at a meeting of shareholders is the close of business on the business day next preceding the day on which notice is given or, if notice is waived, at the close of business on the business day next preceding the day on which the meeting is held [Corp. Code § 701(b)(1)]. A determination of shareholders of record entitled to notice of or to vote at a shareholders' meeting applies also to any adjournment of a meeting unless the board fixes a new record date for the adjourned meeting. When the meeting is adjourned for more than 45 days from the date set for the original meeting, the board is required to fix a new record date for the adjourned meeting [Corp. Code § 701(c)].

[2] Transfer of Shares After Record Date

Unless the articles, an agreement, or the General Corporation Law provide otherwise, shareholders on the record date are entitled to notice and to vote even though they may have transferred any of their shares on the books of the corporation after the record date [Corp. Code § 701(d)].

§ 166.25 Voting by One Other Than Shareholder

[1] Shares Held by Administrator or Guardian

Shares held by an administrator, executor, guardian, conservator, or custodian may be voted by the holder of those shares either in person or by proxy without a transfer of the shares to the holder's name [Corp. Code § 702(a)]. Thus, the legal representative of a shareholder's estate obtains the authority and power of a shareholder during the period of administration [Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 17, 108 P.2d 906 (shareholder's executor entitled to bring derivative action prior to distribution of shares to legatees)].

[2] Shares Held by Trustee

Shares standing in the name of a trustee may be voted by the trustee either in person or by proxy. However, a trustee is not entitled to vote shares held by him or her without a transfer of shares to his or her name [Corp. Code § 702(a)].

[3] Shares in Minor's Name

Shares standing in the name of a minor may be voted and the corporation may treat all rights incident to those shares as exercisable by the minor, in person or by proxy, whether or not the corporation has notice, actual or constructive, of the nonage, unless a guardian of the minor's property has been appointed and written notice of that appointment has been given to the corporation [Corp. Code § 702(d)].

[4] Vote Authorized by Power of Attorney

Shares held by or under the control of an attorney in fact may be voted if the power of attorney by which the attorney in fact was appointed authorizes the attorney in fact to vote the shares. In such a case, the corporation may treat all rights incident to the shares as exercisable by the attorney in fact, in person or by proxy, without the transfer of the shares into the name of the attorney in fact [Corp. Code § 702(e)]. When a durable power of attorney gives an attorney in fact the power to exercise voting rights, a proxy given by the attorney in fact to another to exercise the voting rights is not subject to the Power of Attorney Law [Prob. Code § 4050(b)(3)]; see Prob. Code § 4000 et seq. (Power of Attorney Law)].

[5] Shares in Receiver's Name

Shares standing in the name of a receiver may be voted by the receiver. In addition, shares held by or under the control of a receiver may be voted by the receiver without a transfer of the shares to his or her name if the authority to do so is contained in the court order by which the receiver was appointed [Corp. Code § 702(b)].

[6] Pledged Shares

Except when the parties agree otherwise in writing, a shareholder whose shares are pledged is entitled to vote his or her shares until the shares have been transferred to the name of the pledgee [Corp. Code § 702(c)]. After the shares are transferred to the name of the pledgee, the pledgee is entitled to vote the shares [Corp. Code § 702(c)], unless the pledgor and pledgee agree to the retention of the right to vote in the pledgor after the transfer of shares [Lawrence v. I.N. Parlier Estate Co. (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 220, 229, 100 P.2d 765 (implied agreement that pledgors retain right to vote their shares)].

[7] Shares Held in Name of Other Corporation

Shares standing in the name of another corporation, domestic or foreign, may be voted by an officer, agent, or proxyholder as the bylaws of the other corporation prescribe. In the absence of a bylaw provision, the shares may be voted as the board of the other corporation may determine, or in the absence of such a determination, by the chairperson of the board, president, or any vice-president of the other corporation or by any person authorized to do so by the chairperson of the board, president, or vice-president of the other corporation. Unless the contrary is shown, shares purported to be voted or any proxy purported to be executed in the name of a corporation, whether or not the title of the person signing it is indicated, are presumed to be voted or executed in accordance with the foregoing rules [Corp. Code § 703(a)].

[a] By Subsidiary Corporation

Shares of a corporation owned by its subsidiary corporation are not entitled to vote on any matter [Corp. Code § 703(b)].

[b] In Fiduciary Capacity

Shares held by an issuing corporation in a fiduciary capacity and shares of an issuing corporation held in a fiduciary capacity by that corporation's subsidiary are not entitled to vote on any matter. However, they may vote to the extent that the settlor or beneficial owner possesses and exercises a right to vote or to give the corporation binding instructions as to how to vote its shares, or, when there are one or more cotrustees who are not affected by the prohibition of Corp. Code § 703(c), the shares may be voted by the cotrustees as if they are the sole trustee [Corp. Code § 703(c)].

[8] Shares Held by Two or More Persons

Shares may stand of record in the names of two or more persons, such as fiduciaries, members of a partnership, joint tenants, tenants in common, husband and wife holding community property, tenants by the entirety, voting trustees, persons entitled to vote under a shareholder voting agreement, and others. And, two or more persons, including proxyholders, may have the same fiduciary relationship with respect to the same shares [Corp. Code § 704].

Unless the secretary of a corporation is given written notice to the contrary and is furnished with a copy of the instrument or order appointing one of them or creating the relationship whereby one of them is entitled to vote, the votes of persons with shares in their names have the following effect [Corp. Code § 704]:

- If only one of them votes, that vote binds all of them.

- If more than one of them votes, the vote of the majority binds all of them.

- If more than one of them votes and the vote is evenly split on a particular matter, each faction may vote the securities proportionately.

Chapter 166 CORPORATIONS: SHAREHOLDERS' MEETINGS AND VOTING
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.26

§ 166.26 Proxy

[1] Defined

A proxy is a written authorization signed, or an electronic transmission authorized, by a shareholder or a shareholder's attorney giving another person or persons power to vote with respect to the shares of that shareholder. A proxy is signed when the shareholder's name or other authorization is placed on the proxy by manual signature, typewriting, telegraphic or electronic transmission, or otherwise, by either the shareholder or the shareholder's attorney [Corp. Code § 178].

[2] Right to Authorize Proxy

Every person entitled to vote shares may authorize another person or persons to act by proxy with respect to his or her shares [Corp. Code § 705(a)]. The corporation may not restrict a shareholder's right to choose whomever he or she considers advisable for the object of voting his or her shares [People's Bank v. Superior Court (1894) 104 Cal. 649, 652-653, 38 P. 452 (corporate bylaw requiring all proxyholders to be shareholders invalid as restriction on shareholder's selection of proxy)].

Any proxy executed in accordance with the provisions of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 100-2319] is presumed valid [Corp. Code § 705(a)].

[3] Right of Pledgor or Owner to Compel Issuance of Proxy

Except when the parties agree otherwise in writing, the recordholder of shares which such person holds as a pledgee or otherwise as security or which belong to another must issue to the pledgor or to the owner of the shares a proxy to vote or take other action thereon on the demand therefor and payment of necessary expenses thereof [Corp. Code § 705(d)].

[4] Expiration

Unless otherwise provided in the proxy, a proxy is not valid after the expiration of 11 months from the date of the proxy [Corp. Code § 705(b)].

[5] Revocable Proxies

Subject to its 11-month expiration period, a proxy continues in full force and effect until it is revoked by the person executing it prior to a vote [Corp. Code § 705(b)], unless the proxy is made irrevocable [see § 166.26[6]]. Thus, a proxy for any term is revocable at the pleasure of a shareholder [Simpson v. Nielson (1926) 77 Cal. App. 297, 300, 246 P. 342] . A proxy may be revoked by a writing delivered to the corporation stating that the proxy is revoked [Corp. Code § 705(b)]. In addition, a proxy may be revoked by a subsequent proxy executed by the person executing the proxy. The dates contained on the forms of proxy presumptively determine the order of execution of the proxies regardless of the postmark dates on the envelopes in which they are mailed. A proxy is also revoked by attendance at the shareholders' meeting and voting in person by the person executing the proxy [Corp. Code § 705(b)].

In addition, a proxy is not revoked by the death or incapacity of the maker of the proxy unless written notice of the death or incapacity is received by the corporation before the vote is counted [Corp. Code § 705(c)].

[6] Irrevocable Proxies

A proxy stating that it is irrevocable is irrevocable for the period specified therein, notwithstanding Corp. Code § 705(i) (death or incapacity of maker), when the proxy is held by any of the following or a nominee of any of the following [Corp. Code § 705(e)]:

- A pledgee.
- A person who has purchased, agreed to purchase, or holds an option to purchase the shares or a person who has sold a portion of such person's shares in the corporation to the maker of the proxy.
- A creditor or creditors of the corporation, a shareholder who extended or continued credit to the corporation, or a shareholder in consideration of the proxy if the proxy states that it was given in consideration of the extension or continuation of credit and states the name of the person extending or continuing credit.
- A person who has contracted to perform services as an employee of the corporation, if a proxy is required by the contract of employment and if the proxy states that it was given in consideration of the contract of employment, the name of the employee, and the period of employment contracted for.
- A person designated by or under an agreement under Corp. Code § 706 (shareholder and voting trust agreements).
- A beneficiary of a trust with respect to shares held by the trust.

In addition, a proxy may be made irrevocable if it is given to secure the performance of a duty or to protect a title, either legal or equitable, until the happening of events which, by its terms, discharge the obligations secured by it [Corp. Code § 705(e)].

Notwithstanding the period of specified irrevocability, an irrevocable proxy is revoked when one of the following occurs [Corp. Code § 705(e)]:

- The pledge is redeemed,
- The option or agreement to purchase is terminated or the seller no longer owns any shares of the corporation or dies,

- The debt of the corporation or the shareholder is paid,
- The period of employment provided for in the contract of employment has terminated,
- The agreement under Corp. Code § 706 has terminated, or
- The person ceases to be a beneficiary of the trust.

In addition, an irrevocable proxy is revoked by the happening of events which, by the terms of the proxy, discharge the obligations secured by it [Corp. Code § 705(e)].

A proxy may be revoked, notwithstanding a provision making it irrevocable, by a transferee of shares without knowledge of the existence of the provision, unless the existence of the proxy and its irrevocability appears, in the case of certificated securities, on the certificate representing the shares, or in the case of uncertificated securities, on the initial transaction statement and written statements [Corp. Code § 705(f)].

[7] Form of Proxy

[a] In General

Generally, no particular words are required to create a proxy. In fact, the instrument creating the proxy may be informal in nature [Smith v. San Francisco & N. P. R. Co. (1897) 115 Cal. 584, 598, 47 P. 582] , such as a letter acknowledging the right of one who is not a shareholder to vote 51 percent of the shares [Shamel v. Lite Prod. Sales, Inc. (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 33, 36-37, 279 P.2d 1020 , questioned on other grounds in Columbia Eng'r Co. v. Joiner (1965) 231 Cal. App. 2d 837, 848-849, 42 Cal. Rptr. 241] .

[b] If There Are 100 or More Shareholders

A proxy distributed to 10 or more shareholders of a corporation with outstanding shares held of record [see Corp. Code § 605(a) (shares deemed held of record)] by 100 or more persons must offer an opportunity on the proxy to specify a choice between approval and disapproval of each matter or group of related matters intended to be acted on at the meeting for which the proxy is solicited, other than elections to office. In addition, a proxy must provide, subject to reasonable specified conditions, that, when a person solicited specifies a choice with respect to any matter, the shares are voted in accordance with that choice. These rules do not apply to any corporation with an outstanding class of securities registered under Section 12 of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934 [15 U.S.C. § 781] or whose securities are exempted from registration by Section 12(g)(2) [15 U.S.C. § 781(g)(2)] of that act [Corp. Code § 604(a)].

Every form of proxy which provides an opportunity for the shareholder to approve or disapprove any proposal must also contain an appropriate space marked "abstain," by which a shareholder may indicate his or her desire to abstain from voting on that proposal. When a proxy is marked "abstain" by a shareholder with respect to a particular proposal, that proxy is not voted either for or against that proposal [Corp. Code § 604(b)].

[c] If Directors Are to Be Elected

If directors are to be elected, a shareholder may mark his or her proxy "withhold" or mark it in some manner indicating that the authority to vote for the election of directors is withheld. When any form of proxy in any election of directors is so marked, it is not voted either for or against the election of a director. However, with respect to election of directors this rule is not applicable to any corporation with an outstanding class of securities registered under Section 12 of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934 [15 U.S.C. § 781] or whose securities are exempted from registration by Section 12(g)(2) [15 U.S.C. § 781(g)(2)] of that act [Corp. Code § 604(c)].

[d] Shareholder's Remedy for Noncompliance

Although corporate actions are not invalidated by failure to comply with the provisions of Corp. Code § 604(a)-(d) (form of proxy), a corporation's failure to comply may be the basis for challenging any proxy at a meeting or for a shareholder's suit in the superior court to compel compliance [Corp. Code § 604(d); see §§ 166.80-166.82].

Chapter 166 CORPORATIONS: SHAREHOLDERS' MEETINGS AND VOTING
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.27

§ 166.27 Voting Agreements

[1] In General

Under the General Corporation Law, voting agreements generally are permitted between two or more shareholders of a corporation [see Corp. Code § 706(a)]. Voting trust agreements as provided in Corp. Code § 706(b) are also permitted. In addition, Corp. Code § 706(a) or (b) does not invalidate any voting or other agreement among shareholders or any irrevocable proxy which states that it is irrevocable and which is held by a person designated by or under the voting agreement, if the agreement or proxy is not otherwise illegal [Corp. Code § 706(d); see also Corp. Code § 300 (permitting shareholders' agreements relating to any phase of the affairs of a close corporation)].

The agreement between two or more shareholders may provide that in exercising any voting rights, the shares held by them are to be voted as provided in the agreement, as the parties may thereafter agree, or as determined in accordance with a procedure agreed on by them [Corp. Code § 706(a)]. In addition, the parties to the agreement may (but need not) transfer the shares covered by the agreement to a third party, or parties, with authority to vote the shares in accordance with the agreement. The voting agreement must be in writing and signed by the parties [Corp. Code § 706(a)]. The fact that shares are subject to a voting agreement under Corp. Code § 706(a) must appear on the certificate [Corp. Code § 418(a)(3)].

[2] Specific Performance Not Denied

A voting agreement may not be denied specific performance [see Civ. Code §§ 3384-3395 (when specific performance of obligation compelled)] by a court on the ground that the remedy at law is adequate or other grounds relating to the jurisdiction of a court of equity [Corp. Code § 706(a); see § 166.83].

[3] Not Invalid as Failed Voting Trust

Even though the parties to a voting agreement may transfer the shares covered by the agreement to a third party [Corp. Code § 706(a)], a voting agreement is not invalid or unenforceable on the ground it does not comply with provisions governing voting trusts or that it is a proxy that does not comply with Corp. Code § 705 [Corp. Code § 706(c); see Corp. Code § 706(b) (form of voting trust)].

Chapter 166 CORPORATIONS: SHAREHOLDERS' MEETINGS AND VOTING
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.28

§ 166.28 Voting Trust Agreement

[1] In General

Shareholders in any corporation may transfer their shares to a trustee or trustees in order to confer on the trustee or trustees the right to vote and otherwise represent their shares for a given period [Corp. Code § 706(b)]. The validity of a voting trust agreement is not dependent on the delivery of stock certificates to a trustee or trustees; rather, a voting trust agreement is in the nature of a contract which becomes binding at the time it is executed [Boericke v. Weise (1945) 68 Cal. App. 2d 407, 420, 156 P.2d 781] . The transfer of shares to a trustee or trustees must be by written agreement [Corp. Code § 706(b)].

The voting trust agreement may contain restrictions on the power of the trustee, and a trustee is bound to comply with restrictions in casting ballots at a shareholders' meeting [see Bryson v. Bryson (1923) 62 Cal. App. 170, 175-176, 216 P. 391 (trustee voting outside the authority given in trust instrument to elect director)]. Moreover, the trustee acts in a fiduciary capacity and is subject to removal whenever his or her private interests conflict with the trust duties in order to preserve the trust property [Moore v. Bowes (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 162, 165, 64 P.2d 423 (misappropriation of money by trustee as basis for action by shareholders who are beneficiaries of voting trust agreement)].

[2] Period of Validity

A voting trust agreement is valid for a period of time, not exceeding 10 years, as may be specified in the agreement. However, the validity of the agreement, otherwise lawful, is not affected during a period of 10 years from the date when it was created (or last extended, as is discussed below) by the fact that under its terms it will or may last beyond the 10-year period [Corp. Code § 706(b)].

At any time during the two years prior to expiration of a voting trust agreement as originally fixed or last extended, one or more beneficiaries under the agreement may extend the duration of the agreement for an additional period of time not exceeding 10 years from the expiration date of the trust as originally fixed or last extended. The beneficiaries extending an agreement do so with respect to their own shares only. A beneficiary's extension must be by written agreement and with the written consent of the trustee or trustees [Corp. Code § 706(b)].

Except for the provisions governing the maximum period of time that a voting trust agreement is valid, the General Corporation Law does not set out the conditions for the termination of a voting trust.

Presumably, provisions governing trusts generally apply, in which case a trust that is revocable by the settlor may be revoked in whole or in part by (1) compliance with any method of revocation provided in the trust instrument or (2) a writing (other than a will) signed by the settlor and delivered to the trustee during the lifetime of the settlor (unless the trust instrument explicitly makes the method of revocation provided in the trust instrument the exclusive method of revocation) [Prob. Code § 15401(a)]. Unless otherwise provided in the instrument, if a trust is created by more than one settlor, each settlor may revoke the trust as to the portion of the trust contributed by that settlor, except as provided in Fam. Code § 761 (community property in certain revocable trusts) [Prob. Code § 15401(b)]. A trust may not be modified or revoked by an attorney in fact under a power of attorney unless modification or revocation by the attorney in fact is expressly permitted by the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 15401(c)]. However, this rule does not limit the authority to modify or terminate a trust according to Prob. Code §§ 15403 (modification or termination of irrevocable trust by all beneficiaries), 15404 (modification or termination by settlor and all beneficiaries) [Prob. Code § 15401(d)]. Moreover, the manner of revocation of a trust revocable by the settlor that was created by an instrument executed before July 1986 is governed by prior law and not by Prob. Code § 15401 [Prob. Code § 15401(e)]. Under prior law, every voluntary trust (unless expressly made irrevocable by the instrument creating the trust) was revocable by the trustor by a writing filed with the trustee [see former Civ. Code § 2280].

If the trust agreement so provides, the transfer of shares during the period of the voting trust agreement does not free the transferred shares from the operation of the restrictive clauses of the agreement [Bodkin v. Silveira (1942) 49 Cal. App. 2d 1, 10, 120 P.2d 910 (notice of intention to sell stock by shareholder owning shares covered by voting trust agreement does not free stock from terms of agreement)].

[3] Filing and Dispersement of Agreement

A duplicate of the voting trust agreement and any extension of it must be filed with the secretary of the corporation [Corp. Code § 706(b)]. Furthermore, a copy of the voting trust agreement and any extension of it must be open to inspection on the same terms as the record of shareholders of the corporation is open to inspection [see Corp. Code § 1600 (right to inspect record of shareholders)] by a shareholder, a holder of a voting trust certificate, or the agent of either [Corp. Code § 706(b)].

[4] Cause of Action for Breach or Enforcement

Because a valid voting trust agreement is a contract binding at execution, a cause of action for breach of contract by a trustee against a shareholder may lie if the shareholder fails to deliver the shares to the trust after a demand by the trustee to do so [Boericke v. Weise (1945) 68 Cal. App. 2d 407, 420, 156 P.2d 781]. Shareholders owning stock covered by a voting trust agreement also may enforce their rights under the agreement by a suit in equity as well as by an action for damages against another shareholder violating the agreement [Bodkin v. Silveira (1942) 49 Cal. App. 2d 1, 13, 120 P.2d 910 (shareholder violates voting trust agreement granting option to purchase shares to other shareholders in trust by offering those shares to outsiders)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.29

§ 166.29 Inspectors of Election

[1] In General

In advance of any shareholders' meeting, the board may appoint inspectors of election to act at the meeting and at any adjournment of the meeting. Either one or three inspectors may be appointed. If the board does not appoint inspectors of election or if the persons appointed fail to appear or refuse to act, the chairperson of the meeting may appoint inspectors of election or inspectors to replace those who fail to appear or refuse to act. On the request of a shareholder or shareholder's proxy, the chairperson is required to appoint inspectors of election. If inspectors are appointed at a meeting at the request of one or more shareholders or proxies, a majority of shares represented in person or by proxy determines whether one or three inspectors are appointed [Corp. Code § 707(a)].

[2] Duties

Inspectors of election determine the number of shares outstanding and the voting power of each, the shares represented at the meeting, the existence of a quorum, and the authenticity, validity, and effect of proxies [Corp. Code § 707(b)]. In addition, inspectors of election are empowered to [Corp. Code § 707(b)]:

- Receive votes, ballots, or consents [see Clopton v. Chandler (1915) 27 Cal. App. 595, 600, 150 P. 1012 (inspectors of election as empowered to decide all questions as to acceptance or rejection of votes in their exercise of reasonable discretion)].

- Hear and determine all challenges and questions in any way arising in connection with the right to vote.

- Count and tabulate all votes or consents.

- Determine when the polls shall close [see Clopton v. Chandler (1915) 27 Cal. App. 595, 600, 150 P. 1012 (inspectors empowered to keep polls open for any reasonable period of time that they deem necessary to enable shareholders to vote their shares)].

- Determine the result.
- Do those acts that are proper to conduct the election or vote with fairness to all shareholders.

The inspectors of election are required to perform their duties impartially, in good faith, to the best of their ability, and as expeditiously as is practical [Corp. Code § 707(c)]. For instance, an inspector of election fails to act impartially or fairly when he or she challenges the validity of a shareholder's vote in secret and weighs and determines the challenge in secret [Kauffman v. Meyberg (1943) 59 Cal. App. 2d 730, 739-740, 140 P.2d 210] .

[3] Effect of Actions

If there are three inspectors of election, the decision, act, or certificate of a majority is effective in all respects as the decision, act, or certificate of all. Furthermore, any report or certificate made by the inspectors of election is prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein [Corp. Code § 707(c)].

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.30

§ 166.30 Election of Directors

[1] Candidates Winning Election

The power of electing directors of a corporation is lodged by statute in the hands of the shareholders [Corp. Code §§ 301(a), 600(b) (annual meeting at which shareholders elect directors); Brewster v. Hartley (1869) 37 Cal. 15, 24 (corporation unable to give or take away right to elect directors)]. In any election of directors, those candidates are elected who receive the highest number of votes of the shares entitled to be voted for them up to the number of directors to be elected by the shares [Corp. Code § 708(c)]. However, a listed corporation that has eliminated cumulative voting may amend its articles or bylaws to require approval of the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 153] to elect a director in an uncontested election [Corp. Code §§ 708(c), 708.5(b)].

[2] Ballots

Unless the bylaws require election by ballot, the election of directors need not be by ballot. However, a shareholder may demand election by ballot at the shareholders' meeting before the voting begins [Corp. Code § 708(e)]. Additionally, ballots may be returned to shareholders to be corrected so that they may express the shareholders' true intentions, at least if the ballots are returned before the final votes are cast and before the votes are counted or the results announced [Zierath Combination Drill Co. v. Croake (1913) 21 Cal. App. 222, 223-224, 131 P. 335] .

Chapter 166 CORPORATIONS: SHAREHOLDERS' MEETINGS AND VOTING
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.31

§ 166.31 Cumulative Voting

[1] Defined

Cumulative voting, in effect, permits a shareholder to cast for any candidate a number of votes greater than the number of votes that the shareholder normally is entitled to cast by giving the shareholder a number of votes equal to the number of directors to be elected multiplied by the number of votes to which his or her shares are normally entitled. The total number of votes the shareholder is entitled to cast under cumulative voting may be cast for one candidate or may be distributed among as many candidates as the shareholder thinks fit [see Corp. Code § 708(a), (b)]. For a discussion of the calculation of shares that are necessary to elect a specific number of directors, see Ballantine and Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 9, Shareholders' Meetings and Voting, § 176.03[3] (Matthew Bender).

Note, however, that listed corporations may eliminate cumulative voting in accordance with Corp. Code § 301.5. Corp. Code § 301.5 is discussed in Ch. 167, Corporations: Directors and Management .

[2] When Permitted

A shareholder is entitled to cumulate votes only if (1) the candidate's name has or the candidates' names have been placed in nomination prior to the voting and (2) the shareholder gave notice of his or her intention to cumulate votes at the meeting prior to the vote. If any one shareholder gives notice of his or her intention to cumulate votes, all other shareholders may cumulate their votes for candidates in nomination [Corp. Code § 708(b); see also Corp. Code § 708(b) (when cumulative voting permitted among shareholders of mutual water companies)].

[3] Applicability to Nominally Foreign Corporations

The right of a shareholder to cumulate his or her votes under Corp. Code § 708(a), (b), and (c) extends to nominally foreign corporations [Corp. Code § 2115(b)]. There are no constitutional obstacles to the application of the cumulative voting requirements of Corp. Code § 708(a), (b), and (c) when extended to nominally foreign corporations under Corp. Code § 2115(b). Cumulative voting may be included in the qualifying company's articles of incorporation by judicial addendum, entitling all of the company's shareholders to cumulative voting, whether or not they are California residents [Wilson v. Louisiana-Pacific Resources, Inc. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 216, 222-231, 187 Cal. Rptr. 852] . For a more detailed discussion of nominally foreign corporations, see Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity .

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.32

§ 166.32 Supermajority Vote

[1] Defined

A "supermajority vote" is a requirement set forth in the articles or in a certificate of determination [see Corp. Code § 401] that specifies corporate action or actions be approved by a larger proportion of the outstanding shares than a majority, or by a larger proportion of the outstanding shares of a class or series than a majority [Corp. Code § 710(b)]. No supermajority vote that is subject to Corp. Code § 710 may require a vote in excess of 662/3 percent of the outstanding shares or 662/3 percent of the outstanding shares of any class or series of those shares [Corp. Code § 710(b)].

[2] Applies to Nominally Foreign Corporations

The provisions of Corp. Code 710 regarding supermajority votes apply to nominally foreign corporations [Corp. Code § 2115(b)]. Corp. Code 2115 is discussed in Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity .

[3] Adoption of Supermajority Requirement

An amendment of the articles or a certificate of determination that includes a supermajority vote requirement must be approved by at least as large a proportion of the outstanding shares, as defined in Corp. Code § 152, as is required pursuant to that amendment or certificate of determination for the approval of the specified corporation action or actions [Corp. Code § 710(c)]. Corp. Code § 710 applies to a corporation with outstanding shares held of record by 100 or more persons (determined as provided in Corp. Code § 605) that files an amendment of articles or certificate of determination containing a supermajority vote provision on or after January 1, 1989 [Corp. Code § 710(a)].

However, Corp. Code § 710 does not apply to a corporation that files an amendment of articles or certificate of determination on or after January 1, 1994, if, at the time of filing, the corporation has all of the following [Corp. Code § 710(a)]:

- Outstanding shares of more than one class or series of stock;

- No class of equity securities registered under Section 12(b) or 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934; and

- Outstanding shares held of record by fewer than 300 persons determined as provided by Corp. Code § 605.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.33

§ 166.33 Action to Challenge Validity of Election or Appointment

[1] Availability in General

Any shareholder or any person claiming to have been denied the right to vote [e.g., Haah v. Kim (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 45, 55, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 515 (persons with standing include those who have entered into agreements to take shares in corporation but whose shares have not yet been issued)] may file an action in the superior court of the proper county [see Corp. Code § 177 (proper county defined)] to determine the validity of the election or appointment of any director [Corp. Code § 709(a); see §§ 166.84-166.87].

The action is equitable in nature [see Braude v. Havenner (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 526, 113 Cal. Rptr. 386] , and constitutes a special and summary proceeding [see Elberta Oil Co. v. Superior Court (1925) 74 Cal. App. 114, 118-119, 239 P. 415] . In the case of a shareholder, it is not necessary that he or she be entitled to vote at the election to be entitled to bring the action [Fritz v. Superior Court (1936) 18 Cal. App. 2d 232, 234-235, 63 P.2d 872] .

In addition, the action may be brought to uphold a corporate election or appointment as well as to challenge the validity of such an election or appointment [Boericke v. Weise (1945) 68 Cal. App. 2d 407, 411, 156 P.2d 781] .

However, it may not be brought or heard to challenge the election of a director after the director sued has been supplanted by others at a subsequent election [see Fritz v. Superior Court (1936) 18 Cal. App. 2d 232, 236, 63 P.2d 872 ; see Braude v. Havenner (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 526, 530, 113 Cal. Rptr. 386 (case not dismissed as moot when general public interest and future rights of parties involved and when issues likely to be litigated again)].

Because a proceeding under Corp. Code § 709 is equitable in nature, equitable defenses, such as unclean hands, may be asserted [DeGarmo v. Goldman (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 755, 765, 123 P.2d 1 (clean hands doctrine applicable in shareholder's action to remove directors); Boericke v. Weise (1945) 68 Cal. App. 2d 407, 419, 156 P.2d 781 (denial of relief not proper when moving party comes to court with unclean hands with respect to transaction not before the court)].

[2] Application to Foreign Corporations

An action under Corp. Code § 709(a) may also be brought to try and determine the validity of any election or appointment of any director of a foreign corporation if the election was held or the appointment was made in California. In such a case, the plaintiff has the option to bring the action in the county in which the corporation has its principal office in California or in the county in which the election was held or the appointment was made [Corp. Code § 709(a)].

[3] Notice of Hearing; Service of Notice

On the filing of the complaint and before any other proceedings, the court must enter an order fixing a date for a hearing. The date must be within five days unless a later date is fixed on a showing of good cause. The court's order requires notice of the date set for a hearing and copy of the complaint to be served on the corporation, on the person whose purported election or appointment is questioned, and on any other person (other than the plaintiff) whom the plaintiff alleges to have been elected or appointed [Corp. Code § 709(b)].

Service of the notice and complaint may be made in the manner in which a summons is required to be served [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 413.10-417.40 (service of summons)] or, if the court directs, by registered mail. The court may make additional requirements as to notice as appear proper under the circumstances [Corp. Code § 709(b)].

Ordinarily, a corporation makes only a pro forma appearance at the hearing since the issue at the hearing is who controls the corporation and the corporation is not in a position to speak for itself [American Center for Educ., Inc. v. Cavnar (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 26, 36-37, 102 Cal. Rptr. 575 (corporation not a necessary party on appeal from summary judgment finding election valid)].

[4] Relief Available

The court may determine at the hearing of the complaint the person entitled to the office of director or may order a new election to be held or appointment to be made. It may also determine the validity, effectiveness, and construction of voting agreements and voting trusts, the validity of the issuance of shares, and the right of persons to vote. Finally, it may direct such other relief as may be just and proper [Corp. Code § 709(c)]. This power includes the power to grant injunctive relief and damages [Corp. Code § 709(c); see Edward Sidebotham & Son v. Chandler (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 823, 831, 7 Cal. Rptr. 216 (holding that trial court acted properly in issuing injunction restraining director from seeking election for period of three years, rendering personal money judgment against removed director, and canceling corporation's uncashed salary checks to removed director); Simpson v. Nielson (1926) 77 Cal. App. 297, 299, 246 P. 342 (permitting injunctive relief even when complaint failed to plead all elements essential to granting of injunctive relief)].

In determining a challenge to a corporate election, the court should consider all factors bearing on the validity of the election, including such things as the manner in which proxies were solicited and the sufficiency of the notice of the meeting, and give effective direction to the relief required. Thus, the scope of inquiry is not limited to technical and procedural questions involved in the corporate election [Braude v. Havenner (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 526, 530, 533, 113 Cal. Rptr. 386] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-166 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 166.34

§ 166.34 Shares Voted on Behalf of Another

[1] Duty to Disclose Voting Record

Beginning January 1, 1990, every person possessing the power to vote shares of stock on behalf of another must maintain a record of the manner in which the shares were voted. The record must be maintained for a period of 12 consecutive months from the effective date of the vote [Corp. Code § 711(d), (k)]. On reasonable written request, the person possessing the power to vote shares of stock on behalf or another, or a designated agent, must disclose the voting record with respect to any matter involving a specific security or securities in accordance with the procedures discussed in § 166.34[7] [Corp. Code § 711(e)].

[2] Alternative Compliance by Retirement Plan Investment Manager

In the event that a statute or regulation pursuant to the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. §§ 1001-1461, hereinafter "ERISA"), imposes on investment managers (as defined in Section 2(38) of ERISA (29 U.S.C. § 1002(38))) duties substantially the same as those set forth in Corp. Code § 711, compliance with those statutory and regulatory requirements by persons subject to Corp. Code § 711 will be deemed to fulfill the obligations contained in Corp. Code § 711 [Corp. Code § 711(a)].

[3] Purpose and Construction of Statute

Corp. Code § 711 was enacted pursuant to a legislative finding and declaration that many California residents are the legal and beneficial owners or otherwise the ultimate beneficiaries of shares of stock of domestic and foreign corporations, title to which may be held by a variety of intermediate owners, as defined in Corp. Code § 711(b). The informed and active involvement of those beneficial owners and beneficiaries in holding legal owners and, through them, management accountable in their exercise of corporate power is essential to the interest of those beneficial owners and beneficiaries and to the economy and well-being of California [Corp. Code § 711(a)]. The purpose of Corp. Code § 711 is to serve the public interest by ensuring that voting records are maintained and disclosed as provided in Corp. Code § 711. Corp. Code § 711 must be liberally construed to achieve that purpose [Corp. Code § 711(a)].

[4] Who Is Entitled to Disclosure

The legislative declaration describes the protected class as California residents who are the legal and beneficial owners, and those who are otherwise the ultimate beneficiaries of, shares of stock that are voted by another, whether that stock is issued by a California corporation or a foreign corporation [Corp. Code § 711(a)]. For purposes of Corp. Code § 711, a person on whose behalf shares are voted includes, but is not limited to the following [Corp. Code § 711(b)]:

- A participant or beneficiary of an employee benefit plan with regard to shares held for the benefit of the participant or beneficiary [but see § 166.34[2]]; and

- A shareholder, beneficiary, or contract owner of any entity (or of any portfolio of an entity) as defined in Section 3(a) of the federal Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. § 80a-3(a)), as amended, to the extent the entity (or portfolio) holds the shares for which the record is requested.

[5] Persons Not Entitled to Disclosure

[a] Those Who Can Withdraw Without Penalty

For purposes of Corp. Code § 711, the phrase "a person on whose behalf shares are voted" does not include a person who possesses the right to terminate or withdraw from the shareholder, contract owner, participant, or beneficiary relationship with an entity (or of any portfolio of an entity) as defined in Section 3(a) of the federal Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. § 80a-3(a)), as amended. This exclusion does not apply in the event the right of termination or withdrawal cannot be exercised without automatic imposition of a tax penalty. The right to substitute a relationship with an entity or portfolio, the shares of which are voted by or subject to the direction of the investment advisor as defined in Section 2 of the federal Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. § 80a-2(a)(20)), as amended, or of the prior entity or portfolio, or an affiliate of the investment advisor, will not be deemed to be a right of termination or withdrawal within the meaning of Corp. Code § 711(c)(1) [Corp. Code § 711(c)(1)].

[b] Beneficiaries of Trusts Governed by Probate Code

Also excluded from the phrase "a person on whose behalf shares are voted" is a person entitled to receive information about a trust pursuant to Prob. Code § 16061 [Corp. Code § 711(c)(2)]. Prob. Code § 16061, which requires a trustee to report regarding his or her actions at the request of a trust beneficiary, is discussed in Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts [Prob. Code § 16061]. For discussion of whether or not a particular trust is governed by Prob. Code § 16061, see Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts .

[c] Beneficiaries of Certain Insurance Contracts

The phrase "a person on whose behalf shares are voted" does not include a beneficiary, participant, contract owner, or shareholder whose interest is funded through the general assets of a life insurance company authorized to conduct business in California [Corp. Code § 711(c)(3)].

[6] Proxies

Signing a proxy on another's behalf and forwarding it for disposition or receiving voting instructions does not constitute power to vote [Corp. Code § 711(g)]. However, a person forwarding proxies or receiving voting instructions must disclose the identity of the person having the power to vote the shares on reasonable written request by a person entitled to request a voting record under Corp. Code § 711(c) (sic) [Corp. Code § 711(g)].

[7] Procedures for Disclosure

[a] Verification of Requester's Identity

Except as set forth in Corp. Code § 711(e)(2) (discussed in § 166.34[7][b]), disclosure must be made to the person making the request [Corp. Code § 711(e)(1)]. The person making the disclosure may require identification sufficient to identify the person making the request as a person on whose behalf the shares were voted. A request for identification, if made, must be reasonable, must be made promptly, and may include a request for the person's social security number [Corp. Code § 711(e)(1)].

[b] Voting Authority Derives From Third Person

If the person possessing the power to vote shares of stock on behalf of another holds that power pursuant to an agreement entered into with a party other than the person making the request for disclosure, the person maintaining and disclosing the record, may, instead, make the disclosure to that party. Disclosure to that party will be deemed compliance with the disclosure requirement of Corp. Code § 711 [Corp. Code § 711(e)(2)]. If disclosure is made to that party instead of the person making the request, Corp. Code § 711(i) (discussed in § 166.34[7][e]) does not apply. However, nothing in Corp. Code § 711 prohibits that party and the person possessing the power to vote shares from entering into an agreement between themselves for the payment or assessment of a reasonable charge to defray the expenses of disclosing the record [Corp. Code § 711(e)(2)].

[c] Voting Power Held by Unit Investment Trust

If an entity subject to these disclosure requirements is organized as a unit investment trust as defined in Section 4(2) of the federal Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. § 80a-4(2)), the open-ended investment companies underlying the unit investment trust must, on evidence of a bona fide request for voting record information pursuant to Corp. Code § 711(e), promptly make their proxy voting records available to the unit investment trust [Corp. Code § 711(f)].

[d] Voting Power Held by Two or More Persons

For purposes of Corp. Code § 711, if one or more persons has the power to vote shares on behalf of another, unless a governing instrument provides otherwise, the person or persons may designate an agent who must maintain and disclose the record in accordance with Corp. Code § 711(b) and (c) (sic) [Corp. Code § 711(h)].

[e] Charge for Disclosure

Except as provided in Corp. Code § 711(e)(2) (discussed in § 166.34[7][b]), or as otherwise provided by law or a governing instrument, a person maintaining and disclosing a record pursuant to Corp. Code § 711 may assess a reasonable charge to the requesting person in order to defray the expenses of disclosing the record in accordance with Corp. Code § 711(e) [Corp. Code § 711(i)]. Disclosure must be made within a reasonable time after payment is received [Corp. Code § 711(i)].

[8] Action for Enforcement; Attorney's Fees

On the petition of any person who successfully brings an action pursuant to or to enforce Corp. Code § 711, the court awards costs and reasonable attorney's fees if the court finds that the defendant willfully violated Corp. Code § 711 [Corp. Code § 711(j); see § 166.88].

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the applicant in the above-entitled action. I have read the foregoing application and know the contents thereof. I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

CAUTION:

A supporting memorandum must accompany a motion, other than a motion listed in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1114, in law and motion proceedings as defined in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(a) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); for discussion, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities]. Although it is not clear that the definition in Rule 3.1103(a) extends to this form of application, it is better practice to support the application with a memorandum. If this is considered a law and motion proceeding within the meaning of Rule 3.1103(a), the format requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110 will apply to the notice of motion. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

[2] Use of Form

This application is for use by a shareholder seeking an order to compel a corporation to hold an annual shareholders' meeting. A shareholder may bring this action when a corporation fails to hold an annual meeting for a period of 60 days after the date designated for the meeting or, if no date has been designated, 15 months after the organization of the corporation or 15 months after the corporation's last annual meeting [Corp. Code § 600(c)]. The shareholder must give notice of the hearing on the application to the respondent corporation [see §§ 166.70[3], 166.71].

[3] Procedure in Obtaining Summary Order

Other than authorizing the superior court to order summarily a meeting to be held on the application of any shareholder after notice to the corporation giving it an opportunity to be heard [see Corp. Code § 600(c)], the Corporations Code does not specify the precise procedures the shareholder should follow in obtaining the order.

To give the corporation an opportunity to be heard, it would appear that the safest procedure to follow is to file the application and serve on the corporation an endorsed copy of the application and a notice of motion specifying the time for the hearing on the application [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010-1013 (requisites of written notice and service of notice)]. The noticed motion procedure may, in fact, be required regardless of whether the procedure in Corp. Code § 600(c) is considered a proceeding or an action, since the definitions of motions and orders provided in civil actions apply to special proceedings [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1064], and an application for an order is a motion in a civil action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1003].

The time requirements for the notice of the hearing on the application may be the minimum of 15 days, plus additional time when service is by mail, fax, or overnight delivery as provided in Civ. Code § 1005, or may be greater as required by local rules of court.

The application should be accompanied by a supporting memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1103(a), 3.1113(a)].

[4] Verification

Verification of this application is not required [see Corp. Code § 600(c)]. However, a verified application could be substituted for an affidavit (or declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) if the noticed motion procedure is followed as suggested in § 166.70[3]. If local practice permits an ex parte proceeding in which a hearing is not required unless the corporation requests one (Corp. Code § 600(c) only requires that the corporation be given an opportunity to be heard), the application should be verified or be accompanied by an affidavit (or declaration).

[5] Jurisdiction

A shareholder's application for an order compelling a corporation to hold an annual shareholders' meeting must be brought in a superior court and is not a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 85; Corp. Code § 600(c)].

[6] Venue

A shareholder's application for an order compelling a corporation to hold an annual shareholders' meeting must be brought in a proper county [Corp. Code § 600(c)]. A proper county is that county where the corporation's principal executive office is located or, if the corporation's principal executive office is not located in California or if the corporation has no principal executive office, Sacramento County [Corp. Code § 177].

[2] Use of Form

This form is a notice of motion for use by a shareholder to notify a corporation of a hearing on that shareholder's application for an order compelling the corporation to hold an annual shareholder's meeting. Such an order may be granted on a shareholder's application after notice to the corporation giving it an opportunity to be heard [Corp. Code § 600(c)].

The notice should be served on the corporation along with the application and then filed with the clerk of the superior court, accompanied by a proof of service [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010, 1013]. If the application has been verified, it would not appear that a separate affidavit (or declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) need be filed. Sixteen court days' notice, plus additional time if service is by mail, fax, express mail, or overnight delivery, must be given to the corporation [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)], but it may be a longer period if required by local court rule.

[5] Verification

Verification of this application is not required under Corp. Code § 305(c), but a verified application may eliminate the need for an accompanying affidavit or declaration.

[6] Jurisdiction

An application for an order compelling a corporation to hold or give notice of a special shareholders' meeting must be brought in a superior court and is not a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 85; Corp. Code §§ 305(c)(2), 601(c)].

[7] Venue

An application for an order compelling a corporation to hold or give notice of a special shareholders' meeting must be brought in a proper county [Corp. Code §§ 305(c)(2), 601(c)]. CAUTION:

A supporting memorandum must accompany a motion, other than a motion listed in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1114, in law and motion proceedings as defined in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(a) [*Cal. Although it is not clear whether the definition in Rule 3.1103(a) extends to this form, it is better practice to support the application with a memorandum.

[2] Use of Form

The application is for use by a shareholder, or shareholders, holding an aggregate of at least five percent of the outstanding shares of a corporation [Corp. Code § 305(c)] seeking an order to compel a corporation to hold a special shareholders' meeting for the purpose of electing a new board of directors [Corp. Code § 305(c)(2)]. Notice of this application must be given to the corporation [see Corp. Code § 305(c)(2); see § 166.75]. The application authorized in Corp. Code § 305(c)(2) is for use when, as a result of vacancies on the board of directors being filled by the remaining directors [Corp. Code § 305(a)], the directors elected by the shareholders constitute less than a majority of the directors on the board. As an alternative to the application procedure, the shareholder or shareholders holding an aggregate of five percent of the outstanding shares at the time outstanding may call the special meeting of the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 305(c)(1)].

CAUTION:
A supporting memorandum must accompany a motion, other than a motion listed in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1114, in law and motion proceedings as defined in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(a) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); for discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities]. Although it is not clear whether the definition in Rule 3.1103(a) extends to this form, it is better practice to support the application with a memorandum.

[2] Use of Form

This notice is for use in notifying a corporation of a hearing on an application for an order compelling the corporation to hold [Corp. Code § 305(c)(2); see § 166.74] or to give notice of [Corp. Code § 601(c); see § 166.73] a special shareholders' meeting. Such an order may be granted on an application after notice to the corporation giving it an opportunity to be heard.

[3] Form and Service of Notice

No particular form of notice is prescribed in Corp. Code § 305(c) in giving notice to a corporation of an application under Corp. Code § 350(c)(2) or 601(c). However, it is recommended that the notice comply with the requirements for notice of motion. Following such a procedure would remove the problem of whether or not a memorandum of points and authorities and/or affidavit (or declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) should be filed with the application. Under provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1003 and 1064, an application is a motion, whether it is an application in a special proceeding or a civil action, and, therefore, may be subject to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010-1013 (contents of notices of motion and service of notice), as well as Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1600 (failure to accompany notice of motion with a memorandum within prescribed time as cause for its denial).

[4] Notice Period

The corporation must receive no less than 10 business days notice of the impending hearing on the application. If the corporation intends to oppose the application, it must file with the court a notice of opposition no less than five business days prior to the date set for the hearing [Corp. Code § 305(c); see § 166.76].

[5] Hearing Takes Precedence on Calendar

A hearing on an application brought under Corp. Code §§ 601(c) and 305(c) takes precedence over all other matters not of a similar nature pending on the date set for the hearing [Corp. Code § 305(c)].

[2. Capacity and residence of defendant. See § 166.70, Paragraph 2.]

3. On or about _____ [date], defendant gave notice of _____ [an annual or a special] shareholders' meeting to be held on _____ [date]. The notice given by defendant was defective and improper in that it _____ [specify manner in which notice was improper, e.g., failed to specify the time of the shareholders' meeting or was not sent to all shareholders entitled to vote at the meeting].

4. On _____ [date], the _____ [annual or special] shareholders' meeting convened at _____ [address], _____ [city], _____ County, California. [If any actions were approved or authorized at the meeting, specify, e.g., The shareholders present at the meeting voted to approve and authorize the transfer of corporate assets.]

5. An actual controversy has arisen and now exists between plaintiff and defendant concerning their respective rights and duties in that plaintiff contends that the meeting of shareholders held on _____ [date], was invalid for want of proper notice to shareholders and that any actions approved or authorized at the meeting are invalid, whereas defendant disputes these contentions and contends that the meeting of shareholders on _____ [date], was properly noticed to shareholders and that all actions approved or authorized at that meeting are valid.

6. Plaintiff desires a judicial determination of his/her rights and duties, and declaration as to the validity of the meeting of shareholders held on _____ [date], and as to the validity of acts approved or authorized at that meeting.

7. Such a declaration is necessary and appropriate at this time in order that plaintiff may ascertain his/her right and duties. [8. Unless and until defendant's (threatened) wrongful conduct in acting with the approval and authorization of the purported shareholders' meeting held on _____ (date), is enjoined and restrained by order of this court, defendant's actions will cause great and irreparable injury to plaintiff in that _____ (specify injury to plaintiff, e.g., the value of plaintiff's shares of stock in defendant may be adversely affected).]

[9. Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law for the injuries _____ (currently being suffered or which are threatened) in that _____ (specify facts in addition to those previously alleged which tend to show the inadequacy of any legal remedy, especially monetary damages, which plaintiff might pursue, e.g., it will be impossible for plaintiff to determine the precise amount of damage which he/she will suffer if defendant's conduct is not restrained).]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment as follows:

1. That the court declare the respective rights, duties, and responsibilities of plaintiff and defendant with respect to any meeting of shareholders held on _____ [date]; and that by such declaration and judgment it be declared that any actions approved or authorized at the meeting of shareholders on _____ [date], are invalid and have no effect;

[2. That the court issue a temporary restraining order, a preliminary injunction, and a permanent injunction enjoining defendant from exercising its power to _____ (specify act, e.g., transfer corporate assets) as purportedly approved or authorized at the shareholders' meeting on _____ (date);]

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

CAUTION:

If a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction is sought in addition to a declaratory judgment on the basis of facts alleged in the complaint, the complaint must be verified. However, the facts to be verified may be set forth in an affidavit [Code Civ. Proc. § 527] (or declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]).

[2] Use of Form

This form is a complaint for use by a shareholder seeking a declaratory judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 1060] stating that a shareholders' meeting and any transactions at the shareholders' meeting are invalid [Corp. Code § 601(e)] for want of proper notice [Corp. Code § 601(a)]. When appropriate, it may also be used to enjoin any actions decided on at the shareholders' meeting.

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- That plaintiff is a shareholder (Paragraph 1).
- That defendant is a corporation (Paragraph 2).
- The giving of notice of an annual or special shareholders' meeting by defendant (Paragraph 3) [Corp. Code § 601(a)].

Vassault (1875) 50 Cal. 534, 537* (notice insufficient in failing to state time of meeting); Boericke v. Weise (1945) 68 Cal. App. 2d 407, 414-415, 156 P.2d 781 (substantial compliance with notice requirement is met only if notice specific as to time, place, and purpose of meeting and all shareholders receive seasonable and actual notice)].
- The holding of the shareholders' meeting on the defective notice (Paragraph 4).

- An actual controversy between plaintiff and defendant concerning whether or not the notice was insufficient and the subsequent meeting therefore invalid (Paragraph 5) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1060].

- That plaintiff desires a declaration of his or her rights and duties with respect to the meeting and the actions taken at the meeting (Paragraph 6) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1060].

- That declaratory relief is necessary (Paragraph 7).

- That plaintiff will suffer great and irreparable harm (Paragraph 8) for which plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law (Paragraph 9), entitling plaintiff to temporary and permanent injunctive relief.

[4] Limitations on Shareholder's Remedy

A shareholder's remedy for the failure of the corporation to notice properly a shareholders' meeting is not clear in the Corporations Code. The Code merely provides that defective or improper notice does not invalidate transactions at a shareholders' meeting if (1) a quorum is present, either in person or by proxy, and (2) either before or after the meeting, each person entitled to vote not present in person or by proxy provides a waiver of notice, a consent to the holding of the meeting, or an approval of the minutes of the meeting in writing, or attends the meeting and does not offer any objection to its holding [Corp. Code § 601(e)]. Whether or not defective or improper notice does invalidate the shareholders' meeting if these two conditions are not met is unclear.

Generally, however, an improper or defective notice entitles a shareholder to bring a declaratory relief action to declare invalid both the meeting and any action taken as a consequence of the meeting [see Grant v. Hartman Ranch Co. (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 497, 499-501, 14 Cal. Rptr. 531] . The basis of the action does not appear to be only in Corp. Code § 601(e), but, more fundamentally, in the breach of the contract relationship between the shareholders and the corporation, since the provisions of the Corporation Code are considered to form a part of the contract between the shareholders and the corporation [see In re Mayellen Apts. Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 298, 304, 285 P.2d 943] . For this reason, the corporation itself does not have a cause of action, even though a shareholders' meeting was improperly noticed, if the requisite number of shareholders approved the action which is sought to be held invalid [McDermott v. Bear Film Co. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 607, 611, 33 Cal. Rptr. 486] .

Moreover, regardless of the form of the action, a stranger dealing with the corporation in good faith cannot be put to the necessity of confirming the directors' compliance with internal notification procedures. Thus, the failure to follow statutory formalities for obtaining shareholders' approval will not vitiate a corporate transaction if, in fact, the requisite number of shareholders have consented. The statutes governing shareholders' meetings in this respect are mandatory in requiring shareholders' consent, but only directory in specifying the procedure of obtaining consent [McDermott v. Bear Film Co. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 607, 612, 33 Cal. Rptr. 486] .

[5] Jurisdiction

An original action for declaratory relief must be brought in a superior court and is not a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86, 580(b)(4), 1060].

[2] Use of Form

This form is a complaint for use by a shareholder seeking injunctive relief against a corporation with outstanding shares held of record by 100 or more persons to compel compliance with statutory rules for consent and proxy forms [Corp. Code § 604(e)]. These rules require that in distributing written consent forms and proxy forms, the corporation afford its shareholders an opportunity on the form to specify a choice between approval and disapproval of each matter or group of matters, other than election of officers, for which the consent is sought or the proxy solicited [Corp. Code § 604(a)]. The corporation must also provide a space marked "abstain," whereby its shareholders may indicate a desire to abstain from voting on a proposal [Corp. Code § 604(b)]. Corp. Code § 604(d) provides that failure to comply with these requirements does not invalidate any corporate action, but it may be the basis for challenging any proxy at a meeting and the superior court may compel compliance therewith at the suit of any shareholder. The code does not provide a similar remedy for the shareholder seeking to compel compliance with the statutory requisites for forms of consents, but it would appear that a shareholder's suit would also be a proper remedy [see Ballantine and Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 9, Shareholders' Meetings and Voting, § 169.01[1]] .

[3] Allegations

This complaint for injunctive relief alleges:

- That plaintiff is a shareholder (Paragraph 1).
- That defendant is a corporation (Paragraph 2).
- That defendant has outstanding shares held of record by 100 or more persons (Paragraph 3) [Corp. Code § 604(a)].
- That defendant distributed improper forms of proxy or consent (Paragraph 4) [Corp. Code § 604(a) (form as required to give shareholder opportunity to approve or disapprove each proposal or group of proposals presented), 604(b) (form as required to give shareholder opportunity to abstain with respect to any proposal presented)].
- That defendant has acted or threatened to act on the improper proxies or consents (Paragraph 5).
- That defendant's conduct will cause great and irreparable harm to plaintiff (Paragraph 6) [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(2)].

- That plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law (Paragraph 7) [see Civ. Code § 3422(1)-(3); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(4)-(6)].

[4] Jurisdiction

An action to compel compliance with Corp. Code § 604 must be brought in the superior court and is not a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 580(b)(2); Corp. Code § 604(d)].

In corporation having outstanding shares held of record by 100 or more persons, written consent or proxy form is improper if not offering opportunity to specify choice between approval or disapproval of each proposal presented. Corp. Code § 604(a)

[2] Use of Form

This form is a complaint for specific performance [Civ. Code § 3384] for use by one shareholder against other shareholders violating the terms of a voting agreement [Corp. Code § 706(a)]. A voting agreement between shareholders of a corporation may not be denied specific performance on the ground that the remedy at law is adequate or on other grounds relating to the jurisdiction of a court of equity [Corp. Code § 706(a)].

[3] Allegations

This complaint for specific performance alleges the following:

- That plaintoff and defendant are shareholders of a corporation (Paragraphs 1-3) [Corp. Code § 706(a) (voting agreements between shareholders in close corporation)].

- That plaintiff and defendant entered into a written, signed voting agreement with respect to their shares (Paragraph 4) [Corp. Code § 706(a) (formation of voting agreements between shareholders)].

- Any additional terms, such as the transfer of shares to a third party (Paragraph 5) [Corp. Code § 706(a)] or an option to purchased shares governed by the agreement (Paragraph 6) [Bodkin v. Silveira (1942) 49 Cal. App. 2d 1, 10, 120 P.2d 910 (each party to voting agreement has option to purchase his or her proportion of stock from any party intending to sell)].

- That plaintiff performed his or her obligation under the agreement (Paragraph 7) [Civ. Code § 3386(b)].

- That defendant violated the terms of the agreement (Paragraph 8).

- That plaintiff is without an adequate remedy at law (Paragraph 9) [see Corp. Code § 706(a) (specific performance may not denied on ground that remedy at law is adequate)].

[4] Verification

Verification of this complaint is not required, but verification of the complaint requires that defendant file a verified answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 446]. It also precludes a general denial [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)].

[2] Use of Form

This form is a complaint for use in an action contesting the validity of any election of directors of a corporation. The complaint may be brought by any shareholder or by any person who claims to have been denied the right to vote [e.g., Haah v. Kim (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 45, 55, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 515 (persons with standing include those who have entered into agreements to take shares in corporation but whose shares have not yet been issued)]. The complaint also may be brought with respect to the election of directors by any domestic corporation or by a foreign corporation holding its election in California [Corp. Code § 709(a)].

An action to contest the validity of an election of a director is a summary proceeding. On the filing of the complaint, the court must enter an order fixing a date for the hearing [see § 166.86].

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- Plaintiff's capacity as shareholder or other person claiming to have been denied right to vote (Paragraphs 1, 4, 5) [Corp. Code § 709(a)].
- The capacity and residence of corporate defendant (Paragraph 2).
- That an election was held to elect directors (Paragraph 3).
- That the election was invalid (Paragraph 6) [see Corp. Code § 709(a), (c)].
- Facts entitling plaintiff to injunctive relief (Paragraph 7).

[4] Jurisdiction

A proceeding to contest the election or appointment of directors must be brought in the superior court and is not a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 85.1; Corp. Code § 709(a)].

[5] Venue

A proceeding to determine the validity of the election or appointment of directors must be brought in a proper county [Corp. Code § 709(a)]. A proper county is that county where the corporation's principal executive office is located or, if the corporation's principal executive office is not located in California or if the corporation has no principal executive office, Sacramento County [Corp. Code § 177]. If a foreign corporation [see Corp. Code § 171 (foreign corporation defined)] is involved, the proceeding may be brought, at the plaintiff's option, in the county where the corporation has its principal office in California or in the county in which the election was held or the appointment made [Corp. Code § 709(a); see Elberta Oil Co. v. Superior Court (1925) 74 Cal. App. 114, 121, 239 P. 415 (action required to be brought in Fresno County where corporation maintained principal California office and held challenged election)].

[6] Parties

A proceeding under Corp. Code § 709 may be brought by any shareholder [see Corp. Code §§ 185, 701 (who are shareholders entitled to vote)] or by any person who claims to have denied the right to vote [Corp. Code § 709(a)]. Hence, persons who may bring suit include the following:

- Proxyholders [Corp. Code § 178 (proxy as giving authority to vote shares)],
- Administrators, executors, guardians, conservators, or custodians [Corp. Code § 702(a)],
- Receivers [Corp. Code § 702(b)],
- Pledgees holding shares in their own names [Corp. Code § 702(c),
- Officers, agents, or proxyholders of another corporation holding shares [Corp. Code § 703(a)],
- Trustees of voting agreements [Corp. Code § 706(a)] and voting trust agreements [Corp. Code § 706(b)], and
- Persons who have entered into agreements to take shares in the corporation but whose shares have not yet been issued [Haah v. Kim (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 45, 55, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 515].Persons who have entered into agreements to take shares in the corporation but whose shares have not yet been issued [Haah v. Kim (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 45, 55, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 515].

A proceeding under Corp. Code § 709 should be brought against the corporation and against the person whose purported election or appointment is questioned. In addition, the plaintiff may want to join as a party the person (other than the plaintiff) whom the plaintiff alleges to have been elected [see Corp. Code § 709(b)].

[7] State Statutes

Record date for shareholders entitled to vote. Corp. Code § 701

Voting of shares by fiduciaries of shareholder. Corp. Code § 702

Voting of shares held by another corporation. Corp. Code § 703

[2] Use of Form

This form is a judgment for use by a successful plaintiff in an action seeking to hold a corporate election or appointment of a director invalid under Corp. Code § 709. In giving its judgment in an election of appointment contest, a court may do all of the following [Corp. Code § 709(c)]:

- Determine the person entitled to the office of director.
- Order a new election to be held or appointment made.
- Determine the validity, effectiveness, and construction of voting agreements and voting trusts.
- Determine the validity of the issuance of shares and the right of persons to vote.
- Direct such other relief as may be just and proper.

[3] Stay of Enforcement Pending Appeal

The perfecting of an appeal stays proceedings in the trial court on the judgment appealed from, or on the matters embraced therein or affected thereby, including enforcement of the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 916(a)]. However, the perfecting of an appeal does not prevent duly elected directors from acting as such, nor does it authorize an appellate court to restrain the directors from acting as such pending determination of the appeal [Dulin v. Pacific Wood & Coal Co. (1893) 98 Cal. 304, 307-309, 33 P. 123] .

On the other hand, if the judgment invalidates the election and determines that a particular person is entitled to a contested directorship, an appeal prevents the superior court from giving effect to the judgment by, for example, enforcing an award of mandatory injunctive relief included in the judgment [Foster v. Superior Court (1896) 115 Cal. 279, 284-285, 47 P. 58 (judgment that plaintiff entitled to contested directorship and that defendant directors were to be enjoined from interfering with plaintiff's exercise of that office; after appeal perfected, order finding one defendant director in contempt for violating injunction requiring director not to interfere with plaintiff's directorship held erroneous and vacated because of statutory foreclosure of further trial court proceedings on the judgment)].

Attorney for Petitioner

[Verification. See § 165.70.]

CAUTION:

A petition for a writ of mandate must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086]. Proof of service on each respondent and real party in interest of a copy of a petition that seeks an alternative writ must accompany the petition when it is offered for filing except when, in its discretion and for good cause, the court has granted the application for the writ ex parte [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107; for a discussion of serving the petition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition]. Points and authorities also customarily accompany a petition filed in a superior court, although they do not appear to be expressly required by statute. When no alternative writ is sought, proof of service of a copy of the petition need not accompany the application, but proof of service of a copy of the filed petition must be lodged with the court prior to a hearing or any action by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1088.5].

[2] Use of Form

This form is a petition for a writ of mandate for use to obtain a writ to compel disclosure of a voting record from a respondent who voted shares of stock on behalf of petitioner. The voting record need only be maintained for a period of 12 consecutive months from the effective date of the vote; and the requirement of maintaining such a record only became operative January 1, 1990 [see Corp. Code § 711(d), (e), (k) (see § 166.34)].

Corp. Code § 711does not specify the type of action or proceeding to be used to compel disclosure, but only refers to "an action pursuant to or to enforce this section' [see Corp. Code § 711(j)]. An action for declaratory relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060 (relief in addition to declaration as may be granted)], or a mandatory injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 526] would probably also be available, but the proceeding for writ of mandate seems likely to provide relief sooner. Mandate is appropriate to compel a corporation or person to perform a duty resulting from an office, trust, or station [Code Civ. Proc. § 1085; see also Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition].

[3] Allegations

This petition for a writ of mandate alleges:

- Respondent's corporate capacity and principal office (Paragraph 1).

- Respondent's type of business and any registrations, licenses, or authorizations held by it (Paragraph 1).

- The capacity of individual respondents (Paragraph 2).

- Fictitious name and agency allegations, if applicable (Paragraphs 3, 4) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1109 (regular rules of pleading set forth in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 307-1062.10 as applicable to petition for writ of mandate unless otherwise provided in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1084-1097)].

- The relationship between petitioner and respondent (Paragraph 5).

- Petitioner's status as a person entitled to disclosure of the record of the manner in which respondent voted shares on petitioner's behalf (Paragraph 5) [Corp. Code § 711(a)-(c), (g)].

- Petitioner's written request for disclosure of the record of a specific vote or votes by respondent after January 1, 1990, and effective within the previous 12 months (Paragraph 6) [Corp. Code § 711(d), (e), (k)].

- Petitioner's compliance with any request made by respondent for information to verify petitioner's identity, or the fact that respondent did not ask for any such information (alternative Paragraphs 7) [Corp. Code § 711(e)(1)].

- Petitioner's payment or tender of any reasonable fee requested by respondent, or the fact that respondent did not request any fee (alternative Paragraphs 8) [Corp. Code § 711(i)].

- Respondent's continued failure to disclose the voting record to respondent (Paragraph 9).

- Petitioner's lack of any other plain, speedy, or adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law (Paragraph 10) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086].

[4] Jurisdiction

Mandate proceedings may be brought in the Supreme Court, courts of appeal, and superior courts [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1108]. When the writ sought is not directed to a court, however, the petition is usually filed in superior court [see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition].

[5] Venue

A corporation may be sued in the county where the obligation sued on arises or in the county where it has its principal place of business [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]. With regard to individual respondents, the county in which the respondent, or any of them, resides at the commencement of the proceedings is the proper venue [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]. If there is a contract between the parties designating a particular place for disclosures pursuant to Corp. Code § 711, that county or the county in which the contract was made are also proper venues [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 395(a), 395.5].

The proper county in which to bring an action involving a corporate defendant is the county where the principal executive office of the corporation is located. However, if the principal executive office is not located in California, or if the corporation has no principal executive office, the proper county is Sacramento County [Corp. Code § 177; *see also*Los Angeles Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 2.0(b), (c) (districts for filing petitions for writ of mandate in Los Angeles County)].

[6] Costs and Attorney's Fees

One who successfully brings an action pursuant to or to enforce Corp. Code § 711 may recover costs and reasonable attorney's fees if the court finds that the defendant willfully violated Corp. Code § 711 [Corp. Code § 711(j)]. For forms for use to recover costs and attorney's fees authorized by statute, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.50 et seq.

[7] Subsequent Papers

For alternative writs and orders directing issuance of an alternative writ, modify §§ 165.77 and 165.78, respectively, by deleting text referring to inspection or audit of records and substituting text similar to that found in the prayer of the above form referring to disclosure of the record of a particular vote, or see more general forms in Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition . Similarly, forms for a return to an alternative writ, by demurrer and answer, respectively, may be composed by modifying the forms in §§ 166.79 and 166.80 to set forth grounds, allegation, or defenses applicable under Corp. Code § 711 or by using the more general forms in Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

§ 167.11 Direction and Management of Corporate Affairs

Subject to the provisions of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 100-2319] and any limitations in the articles relating to action required to be approved by the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 153] or by the outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 152], "the business and affairs of the corporation shall be managed and all corporate powers shall be exercised by or under the direction of the board [of directors]. The board may delegate the management of the day-to-day operation of the business of the corporation to a management company or [an]other person provided that the business and affairs of the corporation shall be managed and all corporate powers shall be exercised under the ultimate direction of the board" [Corp. Code § 300(a)]. The shareholders of a close corporation, by agreement, may allocate management duties among themselves [see Corp. Code § 300(b)-(e)].

The board, by resolution adopted by a majority of the authorized number of directors, may designate committees, each consisting of two or more directors, to serve at the pleasure of the board. Any such committee, to the extent provided in the resolution or in the bylaws, will have all the authority of the board except with respect to the matters specified in Corp. Code § 311.

As a matter of general corporate law, a board of directors has no power to delegate the performance of its basic powers and functions unless there is specific statutory authority for them to do so. Corp. Code §§ 300, 309, and 311 are examples of this type of specific statutory authority [Wells Fargo Bank v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1082, 1095-1096, 282 Cal. Rptr. 841, 811 P.2d 1025] .

§ 167.12 Selection of Directors

[1] Designation in Articles or Bylaws

The articles of incorporation of a corporation organized under the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 100-2319] may set forth the names of the persons designated by the incorporators to act as initial directors [Corp. Code § 204]. If the initial directors are not designated in the articles, they may be designated in the bylaws [Corp. Code § 212(b)(1)].

If no initial directors are named in the articles, the incorporators may perform corporate acts until the election of directors [Corp. Code § 210]. If the incorporators adopt bylaws designating initial directors, which they have the power to do when no initial directors are designated in the articles [see Corp. Code § 210], then presumably the incorporators lose power to perform corporate acts when the designated directors assume office.

[2] Election by Shareholders

[a] Elected at Large

Except as provided in Corp. Code § 301.5 (discussed in § 167.12[2][b]), at each annual meeting of shareholders, directors must be elected to hold office until the next annual meeting [Corp. Code § 301(a)]. Nevertheless, to effectuate a voting shift, the articles may provide that directors hold office for a shorter term [Corp. Code § 301(a); see Corp. Code § 194.7 (voting shift as change, pursuant to articles, in relative rights of one or more classes or series of shares to elect one or more directors)].

The shareholders may elect a director at any time to fill a vacancy on the board which the directors have not filled [Corp. Code § 305(b); § 167.12[4]].

The election of a director or directors may be contested in a judicial proceeding [see § 167.30 et seq.].

[b] Election by Classes; Elimination of Cumulative Voting

A listed corporation, as defined in Corp. Code § 301.5(d) (discussed in § 167.12[3]), by amendment of its articles or bylaws, may adopt provisions to divide the board of directors into two or three classes to serve for terms of two or three years respectively, or to eliminate cumulative voting, or both [Corp. Code § 301.5(a); see also Corp. Code § 301.7 (applicable to listed corporations engaged in operation of recreation venture)]. After the issuance of shares, a corporation that is not a listed corporation, by amendment of its articles or bylaws, may adopt provisions to be effective when the corporation becomes a listed corporation to divide the board of directors into two or three classes to serve for terms of two or three years respectively, or to eliminate cumulative voting, or both [Corp. Code § 301.5(a); see also Corp. Code § 301.5(j) (legend required on amendment to become effective when corporation becomes listed)].

An article or bylaw amendment providing for division of the board of directors into classes, or any change in the number of classes, or the elimination of cumulative voting may only be adopted by the approval of the board and the outstanding shares (Corp. Code § 152) voting as a single class, notwithstanding Corp. Code § 903, relating to shareholder approval of amendments [Corp. Code § 301.5(a); see also Corp. Code § 301.5(e) (additional formalities of certificate of amendment)].

If the board of directors is divided into two classes, the authorized number of directors must be no less than six; and one half of the directors, or as close an approximation as possible, must be elected at each annual meeting of the shareholders [Corp. Code § 301.5(b)]. If the board of directors is divided into three classes, the authorized number of directors must be no less than nine; and one third of the directors, or as close an approximation as possible, must be elected at each annual meeting of the shareholders [Corp. Code § 301.5(b)]. Directors of a listed corporation may be elected by classes at a meeting of shareholders at which an amendment to the articles or bylaws described in Corp. Code § 301.5(a) is approved, but the extended terms for directors are contingent on that approval, and in the case of an amendment to the articles, the filing of any necessary amendment pursuant to Corp. Code § 905 or 910 [Corp. Code § 301.5(b)]. If directors of more than one class are to be elected by the shareholders at any one meeting and the election is by cumulative voting pursuant to Corp. Code § 708, votes may be cumulated only for directors to be elected within each class [Corp. Code § 301.5(c)].

A listed corporation that has eliminated cumulative voting may amend its articles or bylaws to require that in an uncontested election, approval of the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 153] will be required to elect a director [Corp. Code §§ 708(c), 708.5(b); see § 166.30[1]].

[3] Corporation's Status as Listed Corporation

For purposes of Corp. Code § 301.5, a "listed corporation" means a corporation with outstanding shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the NYSE Amex, the NASDAQ Global Market, or the NASDAQ Capital Market [Corp. Code § 310.5(d)].

Subject to Corp. Code § 301.5(h) (discussed below), if a listed corporation having a board of directors divided into classes pursuant to Corp. Code § 301.5(a) ceases to be a listed corporation for any reason, unless the articles of incorporation or bylaws of the corporation provide for the elimination of classes of directors at an earlier date or dates, the board of directors of the corporation will cease to be divided into classes as to each class of directors on the date of the expiration of the term of the directors in that class and the term of each director serving at the time the corporation ceases to be a listed corporation (and the term of each director elected to fill a vacancy resulting from the death, resignation, or removal of any of those directors) will continue until its expiration as if the corporation had not ceased to be a listed corporation [Corp. Code § 301.5(e)]. If a listed corporation having a provision in its articles or bylaws eliminating cumulative voting pursuant to Corp. Code § 301.5(a), or permitting noncumulative voting in the election of directors pursuant to that subdivision, or both, ceases to be a listed corporation for any reason, the shareholders will be entitled to cumulate their votes pursuant to Corp. Code § 708 at any election of directors occurring while the corporation is not a listed corporation notwithstanding that provision in its articles of incorporation or bylaws [Corp. Code § 301.5(f); see Corp. Code § 301.5(h)].

Subject to Corp. Code § 301.5(i) (discussed below), if a corporation that is not a listed corporation adopts amendments to its articles of incorporation or bylaws to divide its board of directors into classes or to eliminate cumulative voting, or both, pursuant to Corp. Code § 301.5(a) and then becomes a listed corporation, unless the articles of incorporation or bylaws provide for those provisions to become effective at some other time and, in cases in which classes of directors are provided for, identify the directors who, or the directorships that, are to be in each class or the method by which those directors or directorships are to be identified, the provisions will become effective for the next election of directors after the corporation becomes a listed corporation at which all directors are to be elected [Corp. Code § 301.5(g)].

If a corporation ceases to be a listed corporation on or after the record date for a meeting of shareholders and prior to the conclusion of the meeting, including the conclusion of the meeting after an adjournment or postponement that does not require or result in the setting of a new record date, then, solely for purposes of Corp. Code § 301.5(e), (f), the corporation will not be deemed to have ceased to be a listed corporation until the conclusion of the meeting of shareholders [Corp. Code § 301.5(h)]. If a corporation becomes a listed corporation on or after the record date for a meeting of shareholders and prior to the conclusion of the meeting, including the conclusion of the meeting after an adjournment or postponement that does not require or result in the setting of a new record date, then, solely for purposes of Corp. Code § 301.5(g) (discussed above), the corporation will not be deemed to have become a listed corporation until the conclusion of the meeting of shareholders [Corp. Code § 301.5(i)].

[4] Appointment by Other Directors

Unless otherwise provided in the articles or bylaws, and (in some cases) except for a vacancy created by removal of a director [see Removal of Directors, below], a vacancy on the board may be filled by approval of the board as defined in Corp. Code § 151 or, if the number of directors then in office is less than a quorum, by (1) the unanimous written consent of the directors then in office; (2) the affirmative vote of a majority of the directors then in office at a meeting held pursuant to notice or waivers of notice complying with Corp. Code § 307; or (3) a sole remaining director. When a vacancy is created by removal of a director, the remaining directors may fill it only if the articles or a bylaw adopted by the shareholders give the remaining directors, or a sole remaining director, that power [Corp. Code § 305(a)].

If, after the directors have filled a vacancy on the board, the directors then in office who have been elected by the shareholders comprise less than a majority of the directors then in office, shareholders may compel the calling of a special meeting for the election of directors [Corp. Code § 305(c)].

Appointment of a director by other directors may be contested in a judicial proceeding [see Corp. Code § 2236].

[5] Appointment by Superior Court

If a corporation has not issued shares, and all directors have resigned, died, or become incompetent, or if initial directors were not named in the articles and all the incorporators have resigned, died, or become incompetent prior to election of the initial directors, any party in interest may apply to the superior court for appointment of directors [Corp. Code § 306; see § 167.164 and Comments].

In certain circumstances, the superior court may appoint a provisional director or provisional directors [see § 167.31].

If the superior court has removed a director in an involuntary proceeding for winding up [§ 167.13[3]], the court may order an election to fill the vacancy so caused, and may enjoin, for such time as it considers proper, the reelection of the director so removed; or the court, in lieu of ordering an election, may appoint a director to fill the vacancy [Corp. Code § 1806(g)].

In an involuntary winding up proceeding, the court's jurisdiction includes the filling of any vacancies on the board which the directors or shareholders are unable to fill [Corp. Code § 1806(f)].

§ 167.13 Removal of Directors

[1] By Shareholders

Any director or directors, or the entire board, may be removed by the vote of the shareholders, subject to two limitations for the protection of cumulative voting rights and, if they exist, of rights to elect directors according to classes or series of shares [Corp. Code § 303].

Removal by the shareholders may be without cause [Corp. Code § 303(a)]. However, if a director is removed in violation of either of the two limitations for the protection of voting rights, the election of a successor may be contested on that ground and the wrongfully removed director may sue for a writ of mandate to get his or her position restored [see § 167.168 and Comments].

[2] By Other Directors

The board (i.e., a majority of the directors, unless the articles or bylaws provide otherwise [Corp. Code § 307(a)(7)]) may declare vacant the office of a director who has been declared of unsound mind by a court or convicted of a felony [Corp. Code § 302].

[3] By Superior Court

Any director who has committed fraudulent or dishonest acts or a gross abuse of authority or discretion with reference to the corporation may be removed by the superior court on the complaint of a shareholder or shareholders holding at least 10 percent of the shares in the corporation or, if the shares are divided into classes, at least 10 percent of any class [Corp. Code § 304; see § 167.32].

When an involuntary proceeding for winding up the corporation has begun, the jurisdiction of the court includes the removal of any director if it appears that the director has been guilty of dishonesty, misconduct, neglect, or abuse of trust in conducting the winding up or if the director is unable to act [Corp. Code § 1806(g); see Part X, "Dissolution and Winding Up"]. The court may fill any vacancy created by the court's removal of a director in those circumstances [§

§ 167.14 Officers

A corporation is required to have a chief executive officer, a secretary, and a chief financial officer. A corporation may have other officers. The chief executive officer, who is the chairman of the board unless there is a president and that office is occupied by someone else, is the "general manager" of the corporation except as otherwise provided in the articles or bylaws [Corp. Code § 312(a)].

Except as otherwise provided by the articles or bylaws, officers are chosen by the board and serve at the pleasure of the board, subject to the rights, if any, of an officer under a contract of employment. Any officer may resign at any time on written notice to the corporation without prejudice to the rights, if any, of the corporation under any contract to which the officer is a party [Corp. Code § 312(b)]. The presumption of at-will employment created by Corp. Code § 312(b) is no greater than that created by Lab. Code § 2922. Thus, a corporate officer may have a cause of action for wrongful termination by breach of an implied contract of employment created by conduct of the parties or personnel policies and practices [Bell v. Superior Court (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1108-1111, 263 Cal. Rptr. 787] .

§ 167.15 Tort Liability of Officers and Directors

Other than by application of the alter ego doctrine (discussed in Part II, "Alter Ego Liability"), corporate directors and officers cannot be held vicariously liable for the corporation's torts in which they do not participate. Their liability, if any, stems from their own tortious conduct, not from their status as officers or directors of the enterprise. For example, in a case arising under the Fair Housing Act [42 U.S.C. § 3601 et seq.], the U.S. Supreme Court held that the right of a real estate corporation's president to control the conduct of a corporate employee did not create a principal/agent or employer/employee relationship that would give rise to vicarious liability of that officer for the employee's alleged violation of the Act [Meyer v. Holley (2003) 537 U.S. 280 , (Act imposes liability without fault on employer in accordance with traditional agency principles, i.e., it imposes vicarious liability on corporation but not on its officers or owners)]. An officer or director will not be liable for torts in which he or she does not personally participate, of which he or she has no knowledge, or to which he or she did not consent. Although the corporation itself may be liable for the tortious acts, the individual officer or director will be immune unless he or she authorized, directed, or in some meaningful sense actively participated in the wrongful conduct [Michaelis v. Benavides (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 681, 685-687, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 776 (involving corporate officer's personal tortious conduct and breach of duty to a third party who suffered physical damage to property); Frances T. v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 490, 503-505, 229 Cal. Rptr. 456, 723 P.2d 573 (directors liable for failure to correct dangerous condition in common area of condominium project); PMC, Inc. v. Kadisha (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1368, 1372, 1379, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 (directors and officers alleged to be liable for co-defendants' misappropriation of plaintiffs' trade secrets); Seagate Technology v. A.J. Kogyo Co. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 696, 701, 268 Cal. Rptr. 586 (officer/director alleged to have fraudulently induced plaintiff to extend credit to corporation); Taylor-Rush v. Multitech Corp. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 103, 113, 265 Cal. Rptr. 672 (officers alleged to have fraudulently induced plaintiff to enter into contracts with corporation); see also Armato v. Baden (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 885, 894-895, 84 Cal. Rptr.2d 294 (independent contractor doctors for professional medical corporation not liable for allegedly negligent treatment plaintiff received from physician assistant because they did not personally direct or participate in tortious conduct, and there was no special relationship between doctors and plaintiff to support liability for failing to supervise assistant)]. Owners and officers of corporations, however, have been held vicariously liable for compensatory damages for an employee's violations of the Fair Housing Act (FHA) [42 U.S.C. § 3601 et seq.]. Although under general principles of tort law corporate shareholders and officers usually are not held vicariously liable for an employee's action, the criteria for the FHA is different as liability is specified for those who direct or control (or have the right to direct or control) the conduct of another with respect to the sale of or provision of brokerage services to the sale of a dwelling [see Holley v. Crank (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1127, 1130-1132 (citing HUD regulations allowing complaint to be filed against any person who directs or controls conduct of another, and finding individual liable in capacity as sole owner of company and as president of corporation)].

Officers or directors are jointly liable with the corporation and may be joined as defendants if they personally directed or participated in the tortious conduct. Directors are liable to third persons injured by their tortious conduct regardless of whether they acted on behalf of the corporation and regardless of whether the corporation is also liable. This liability does not depend on the same grounds as "piercing the corporate veil" on account of inadequate capitalization, for example, but rather on the officer's or director's personal participation or specific authorization of the tortious act. This rule has its roots in the law of agency. Directors are said to be agents of their corporate principal. The rule is that the agent is liable for his or her own acts regardless of whether the principal is liable or amenable to judicial action. Moreover, directors are not subordinate agents of the corporation. Rather, their role is as their title suggests: they are the policymakers who direct and ultimately control corporate conduct. Unlike ordinary employees or other subordinate agents under their control, a corporate officer is under no compulsion to take action unreasonably injurious to third parties. Like any other employee, however, directors individually owe a duty of care, independent of the corporate entity's own duty, to refrain from acting in a manner that creates unreasonable risk of personal injury to third parties. The reason for this rule is that otherwise a director could inflict injuries on others and then escape liability behind the shield of his or her representative character, even though the corporation might be insolvent or irresponsible. Director status neither immunizes a person from individual liability nor subjects an individual to vicarious liability [Frances T. v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 490, 503-505, 229 Cal. Rptr. 456, 723 P.2d 573 ; PMC, Inc. v. Kadisha (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1368, 1372, 1379, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 ; Seagate Technology v. A.J. Kogyo Co. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 696, 701-702, 268 Cal. Rptr. 586] .

A director's duty to a third person is not governed by the business judgment rule [Frances T. v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 490, 507 n.15, 229 Cal. Rptr. 456, 723 P.2d 573] . Nor does the business judgment standard abrogate the common law duty that every person owes to others; that is, a duty to refrain from conduct that imposes an unreasoanble risk of injury to third persons [Kurtz, Richards, Wilson & Co. v. Insurance Communicators Marketing Corp. (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1259, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 259 ; Frances T. v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 490, 507, 229 Cal. Rptr. 456, 723 P.2d 573] . To impose tort liability on a director or officer, one must show that the director or officer specifically authorized, directed, or otherwise participated in the tortious conduct, or that, although the director or officer knew or reasonably should have known that some hazardous condition or activity under their control could injure plaintiff, he or she negligently failed to take or order appropriate action to avoid the harm [Michaelis v. Benavides (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 681, 685-687, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 776 (involving corporate officer's personal tortious conduct and breach of duty to a third party who suffered physical damage to property); Frances T. v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 490, 508, 229 Cal. Rptr. 456, 723 P.2d 573 ; but see Grosvenor Properties, Ltd. v. Southmark Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 896 F.2d 1149, 1153-1154 (under California law, officer or employee of corporation has no independent duty to parties with whom corporation contracts and thus cannot be liable for inducing breach of the corporation's contract or conspiring to breach it)].

In one action for misappropriation of trade secrets, unfair competition, and interference with prospective economic action, the court of appeal held that a corporate director or officer may be liable for an intentional tort if (1) the officer or director purchased or invested in the corporation, the principal assets of which were the result of unlawful conduct; (2) the officer or director took control of the corporation and appointed personnel to run the corporation which was engaging in unlawful conduct; and (3) the officer or director did so with knowledge or, with regard to trade secret misappropriation, when he or she had reason to know, of the unlawful conduct [PMC, Inc. v. Kadisha (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1368, 1372, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 (reversing summary judgment, finding that plaintiffs raised triable issue of material fact as to individual defendants' active meaningful participation in, consent to, or approval of, tortious conduct)].

California boards, commissions, and agencies that regulate a particular profession may require that the shareholders of a professional corporation bear some degree of personal liability for the acts of the corporation. Shareholders of a foreign professional corporation that has been qualified to do business in California in any profession on which such a condition is imposed by a California agency are subject to the same degree of personal liability, if any, as is prescribed by the governing agency for shareholders of a California professional corporation rendering services in the same profession [Corp. Code § 13404.5(c)].

Indemnification of corporate officers and directors is discussed in Subpart C. For further discussion of tort liability of corporate officers and directors, see the particular chapter regarding that tort, for example, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, Ch. 380, Negligence, Ch. 460, Products Liability, and Ch. 565, Unfair Competition. Liability of corporate officers and directors for violations of securities and franchise laws is discussed in Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation .

§ 167.31 Appointment of Provisional Director

If a corporation has an even number of directors, one half representing one of two opposing factions among the shareholders and the other half representing the other faction, the directors may become deadlocked, that is, unable to get a majority vote on corporate matters. This can occur even when the opposing shareholder blocs do not hold equal numbers of shares. For example, in a corporation having four directors, a majority (three) of the board cannot be elected, with cumulative voting, by fewer than 60 percent of the shares plus one share. (If there are 400 shares, 241 are needed to elect three of four directors.) If opposing blocs hold any combination between 50-50 percent and 60-40 percent, inclusive, neither bloc can elect a majority on a four-director board. Consequently, a divided board will be perpetuated in office unless something is done to break the deadlock.

Similarly, in a corporation having an uneven number of directors, if opposing shareholder blocs each hold 50 percent of the shares, neither bloc will be able to elect a majority of the board. (Regardless of the number of directors, a majority of an uneven number cannot be elected, with cumulative voting, by fewer than 50 percent of the shares plus one share.) Each bloc can elect two out of five, or three out of seven, and so on, necessarily leaving the odd director to hold over from year to year because of an inability to elect a successor. The situation effectively gives control of the corporation to the hold-over director, who can manipulate the corporation by siding with one bloc's director(s) against the other bloc's director(s). Thus, a deadlock among equally divided shareholders in a corporation having an uneven number of directors can be as deleterious to the corporation as a deadlock among an even number of directors who are equally divided.

In either case, one available remedy, although a drastic one, is dissolution of the corporation [see Corp. Code § 1800(b)(2); see Ch. 170, Corporations: Dissolution]. As an alternative, the General Corporation Law authorizes appointment of a provisional director or provisional directors for the purpose of breaking a deadlock among directors or shareholders. The remedy is not available, however, in the case of a corporation governed by the Public Utilities Act, Pub. Util. Code § 201 et seq. [Corp. Code § 308(d)].

[1] Deadlock on Even-Numbered Board

If a corporation has an even number of directors who are equally divided and cannot agree as to the management of the corporation's affairs, so that the corporation's business can no longer be conducted to advantage or there is danger that the corporation's property and business will be impaired or lost, any director or the holder(s) of not less than 331/3 percent of the voting power of the corporation may petition the superior court for appointment of a provisional director to break the deadlock. A provisional director may be appointed in such a case notwithstanding any contrary or conflicting provision in the articles or bylaws (such as a provision limiting the number of directors) and whether or not a proceeding is pending for an involuntary winding up or dissolution of the corporation [Corp. Code § 308(a); see § 167.160; see also In re Jamison Steel Corp. (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 27, 36, 322 P.2d 246 (discussing facts which will justify appointment)].

[2] Deadlocked Shareholders Unable to Elect New Board

If the shareholders of a corporation are deadlocked so that they cannot elect the directors to be elected at an annual meeting of shareholders, any shareholder(s) holding 50 percent of the voting power of the corporation may petition the superior court for appointment of a provisional director or provisional directors, notwithstanding any contrary or conflicting provision in the articles or bylaws, or for any other appropriate relief [Corp. Code § 308(b); see § 167.161].

[3] Equitable Remedy

The wording of Corp. Code § 308(b) suggests that the proceeding is equitable in nature ("order such other equitable relief as the court deems appropriate"). However, it is an unusual kind of equitable remedy in that the good or bad faith of interested parties, the question of estoppel, and similar equitable issues are of no concern to the court. If there is a deadlock on the board and the business of the corporation can no longer be conducted to advantage or the business or property of the corporation will be impaired or lost unless a provisional director is appointed, the court should not inquire into why the deadlock exists [In re Jamison Steel Corp. (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 27, 39, 322 P.2d 246] . In such a case, a provisional director should be appointed whether or not the regular directors are justified in causing a deadlock. Similarly, if shareholders are deadlocked, provisional directors should be appointed, or other appropriate relief should be given, whether or not the deadlock is justifiable.

[4] Procedure

Corp. Code § 308 does not specify the procedure to be followed in appointment of a provisional director. Since the proceeding under that section is a special proceeding, the provisions of Part 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 307-1062.10], governing civil actions, are generally not applicable. However, the court is empowered to adopt "any suitable process or mode of proceeding ... which may appear most conformable to the spirit of" the Code of Civil Procedure [Code Civ. Proc. § 187].

Since the need for speedy relief is apparent from the nature of the proceeding, the court may decide to order issuance and service of an order to show cause [see § 167.162], followed by a prompt hearing and rendition of judgment. It has been held, however, that such a case may not be decided on affidavits alone [Desert Club v. Superior Court (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 346, 347, 221 P.2d 766] .

The court may appoint a receiver pending determination of the proceeding [Boyle v. Superior Court (1917) 176 Cal. 671, 673-675, 170 P. 1140] . For discussion and forms relating to appointment of a receiver, see Ch. 486, Receivers .

[5] Powers of Provisional Directors

A provisional director has all of the rights and powers of a regular director until the deadlock on the board or among the shareholders is broken or until he or she is removed by order of the court or by approval of the outstanding shares [Corp. Code § 308(c)]. "Approval of the outstanding shares" generally means approval by the affirmative vote of a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote [Corp. Code § 152].

[6] Compensation of Provisional Directors

A provisional director is entitled to any compensation that he or she and the corporation may agree on or, in the absence of such an agreement, any compensation that the court may fix [Corp. Code § 308(c)].

§ 167.32 Action for Removal of Director

If a director of a corporation governed by the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 100-2319] has committed fraudulent or dishonest acts or a gross abuse of authority or discretion with reference to the corporation, a shareholder or shareholders holding at least 10 percent of the shares in the corporation or, if the shares are divided into classes, 10 percent of any class, may sue in the superior court for a judgment removing the director from office [Corp. Code § 304; see § 167.166].

A lawsuit seeking removal of a corporate director is an equitable remedy. Therefore, among other consequences, the equitable defenses (such as unclean hands) may be raised to defeat the claim for relief [DeGarmo v. Goldman (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 755, 759-761, 123 P.2d 1] .

[1] Grounds for Relief

Corp. Code § 304 specifies four grounds for removal of directors:

- Fraudulent acts with reference to the corporation.
- Dishonest acts with reference to the corporation.
- Gross abuse of authority with reference to the corporation.
- Gross abuse of discretion with reference to the corporation.

When a director acts within his or her authority and without committing fraud or lapsing into dishonesty, he or she may not be removed for a "gross abuse of discretion" if he or she acts in the good faith belief that what he or she does is in the best interest of the corporation; and in the absence of evidence of fraud, dishonesty, or acts outside the director's authority, it will be presumed that in the management of corporate affairs, a director acts in good faith [see Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 255, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280 ; Fornaseri v. Cosmosart Realty & Bldg. Corp. (1929) 96

If a director becomes subject to removal under Corp. Code § 304 and is thereafter reelected to office, he or she may not be removed on account of grounds arising in the previous term of office [Remillard Brick Co. v. Remillard-Dandini (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 405, 424, 241 P.2d 66] .

C. Fiduciary Duties Of Directors, Officers, And Controlling Shareholders

14-167 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 167.51

§ 167.51 Director's Standard of Care

A director must perform the duties of a director [see § 167.11], including duties as a member of any committee of the board on which the director may serve, in good faith, in a manner the director believes to be in the best interests of the corporation and its shareholders and with such care, including reasonable inquiry, as an ordinarily prudent person in a like position would use under similar circumstances [Corp. Code § 309(a); see Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1263, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 (discussed below, adding requirement that director be without conflict of interest), disapproved on other grounds in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184] . A person who performs the duties of a director in accordance with this standard must have no liability based on any alleged failure to discharge the person's obligations as a director [Corp. Code § 309(c)]. In addition, the liability of a director for monetary damages may be eliminated or limited in a corporation's articles to the extent provided in Corp. Code § 204(a)(10), discussed in § 167.58 [Corp. Code § 309(c); see also Fin. Code § 8501 (governing directors of federal savings associations)].

Corp. Code § 309 is a codification of the "business judgment rule" [Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1040, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1264, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184] . The common law business judgment rule refers to a judicial policy of deference to the business judgment of corporate directors in the exercise of their broad discretion in making corporate decisions. The business judgment rule is premised on the notion that the directors are better able than the courts to judge whether or not a particular act or transaction is in the best interests of the corporation [Desaigoudar v. Meyercord (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 173, 179, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 408 (holding that judicial review of decision of special litigation committee is governed by business judgment rule); Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1040, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1263, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184] . Under the business judgment rule, a director is not liable for a mistake in business judgment that is made in good faith and in what the director believes is in the best interests of the corporation, if no conflict of interest exists [Biren v. Equality Emergency Medical Group, Inc. (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 125, 136-138, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 325 (director/officer's dismissal of billing contractor without obtaining required board approval was protected by business judgment rule); Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal.

App. 3d 1250, 1265-1266, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 ; but see Everest Investors 8 v. McNeil Partners (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 411, 429-430, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 31 (in limited partners' action for breach of fiduciary duty, triable issues of fact existed regarding general partner's defense that actions were protected by business judgment rule; summary judgment could not be upheld based on theory that general partner conducted good faith and reasonable investigation into whether merger transaction was in best interests of limited partners)]. For example, this rule has been held to immunize the directors of a federally insured national bank from liability for purely negligent acts [see FDIC v. Castetter (9th Cir. 1999) 184 F.3d 1040, 1044-1046 (non-officer directors entitled to rely on company employees and advisors without duty of further inquiry, absent special circumstances)].

Corp. Code § 309 is not applicable to determine the liability of a director who is also an officer of the corporation ("inside director") for acts that were not "perform[ing] the duties of a director" as specified in Corp. Code § 309, but were undertaken in his or her capacity as an officer or employee. For instance, in recommending and seeking the approval of a "golden parachute" for his or her own benefit, a director is not performing the duties of a director, but is acting as an officer or employee [Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1265-1266, 1268, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184] .

In applying Corp. Code § 309, a distinction also must be made between disinterested directors who were members of a committee of the board that made recommendations to the other disinterested directors on a particular action and those who were not [see Corp. Code § 309(b), (c); Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1269-1272, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702] . Greater scope of inquiry is required by committee members; the extent to which they may rely on an expert retained by the corporation who also advises the other parties to the transaction is a question of fact [Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1269-1271, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184] .

§ 167.53 Director's and Officer's Duties Are Fiduciary

"Corporate officers and directors are not permitted to use their position[s] of trust and confidence to further their private interests. While technically not trustees, they stand in a fiduciary relation to the corporation and its stockholders. A public policy ... demands of a corporate officer or director, peremptorily and inexorably, the most scrupulous observance of his duty, not only affirmatively to protect the interests of the corporation committed to his charge, but also to refrain from doing anything that would work injury to the corporation, or to deprive it of profit or advantage which his skill and ability might properly bring to it, or to enable it to make in the reasonable and lawful exercise of its powers" [Bancroft-Whitney Co. v. Glen (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 327, 345, 49 Cal. Rptr. 825, 411 P.2d 921 ; GAB Business Services, Inc. v. Lindsey & Newsom Claim Services, Inc. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 409, 420-424, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665 (concluding that officer who participates in management of corporation, exercising some discretionary authority, is fiduciary of corporation as a matter of law; trial court erred in failing to instruct jury accordingly)].

Civ. Code § 1668 provides that all contracts that have for their object, directly or indirectly, to exempt any one from responsibility for his own fraud, or willful injury to the person or property of another, or violation of law, whether willful or negligent, are against the policy of the law. This provision has been successfully used to invalidate a contractual provision that waived the fiduciary duties of the corporation's officers, directors, and majority shareholders to the minority shareholder [see Neubauer v. Goldfarb (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 47, 54-57, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 218] . In Neubauer v. Goldfarb, the minority shareholder brought an action for fraud in connection with his agreement to sell his shares to majority shareholders. The court held that waiver of corporate directors' and majority shareholders' fiduciary duties to the minority shareholder in a private close corporation is against public policy and a contract purporting to effect such a waiver is void so that, among other things, Civ. Code § 1668 applied [Neubauer v. Goldfarb (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 47, 57, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 218] .

In performing the duties of a director, a director is entitled to rely on information, opinions, reports, or statements, including financial statements [see Corp. Code § 114] and other financial data, in each case prepared or presented by (1) one or more of the officers or employees of thecorporation whom the director believes to be reliable and competent in the matters presented, or (2) counsel, independent accountants [see Corp. Code § 115], or other persons, as to matters which the director believes to be within the person or persons' professional or expert competence, or (3) a committee of the board on which the director does not serve, as to matters within its designated authority, which committee the director believes to merit confidence. In any such case of reliance, the director must act in good faith, after reasonable inquiry when the need therefor is indicated by the circumstances, and without knowledge that would cause the reliance to be unwarranted [Corp. Code § 309(b); *Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1264, 256 Cal. A person who performs the duties of a director in accordance with this standard will have no liability based on any alleged failure to discharge the person's obligations as a director [*Corp. No contract or other transaction between a corporation and another corporation or an association having any director in common is either void or voidable because the common director was present at the meeting of the board or a committee of the board in which the transaction was authorized, approved, or ratified, if either of two conditions is met.

One of those conditions is that the material facts as to the transaction and the common directorship were fully disclosed or known to the board or committee, and the board or committee authorized, approved, or ratified the transaction in good faith by a vote sufficient without counting the vote of any common director, or the transaction was approved by the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 153] in good faith [Corp. Code § 310(b)(1)].

The other condition is that, as to transactions not authorized, approved, or ratified in that way, the transaction was just and reasonable as to the corporation when it was authorized, approved, or ratified [Corp. Code § 310(b)(2)].

Common directors may be counted in determining the presence of a quorum at a meeting of the board or committee of the board in which the transaction is authorized, approved, or ratified [Corp. Code § 310(c)].

§ 167.56 Serving "Best Interests" of Corporation

[1] Director Interested in Corporate Contract or Transaction

No contract or other transaction between a corporation and any of its directors, or between a corporation and any corporation, firm, or association in which any of its directors has or have a material financial interest, is either void or voidable because a director or the other corporation, firm, or association, is a party, or because any such interested director was present at the meeting of the board or a committee of the board in which the contract or transaction was authorized, approved, or ratified, if any of the following conditions are met [Corp. Code § 310(a)]:

- The material facts as to the transaction and as to any director's interest were fully disclosed or known to the shareholders, and the transaction was approved by the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 153] in good faith, with the shares owned by any interested director not being entitled to vote on the question.

- The material facts as to the transaction and as to any director's interest were fully disclosed or known to the board or committee, and the board or committee authorized, approved, or ratified the transaction in good faith by a vote sufficient without counting the vote of any interested director, provided the transaction was just and reasonable as to the corporation when it was authorized, approved, or ratified.

- As to transactions not authorized, approved, or ratified in one of the ways mentioned above, the person asserting the validity of the transaction sustains the burden of proving that the transaction was just and reasonable as to the corporation when it was authorized, approved, or ratified.

A mere common directorship does not constitute a "material financial interest." A director is not "interested" in a resolution fixing the compensation of another director as director, or as an officer or employee of the corporation, whether or not he or she (the first director) also receives compensation from the corporation [Corp. Code § 310(a)].

An interested director may be counted in determining the presence of a quorum at a meeting of the board or a committee of the board in which the transaction is authorized, approved, or ratified [Corp. Code § 310(c)].

The bargain to be enforced by a director cannot be harsh or unfair. The burden is on the director to prove not only the good faith of the transaction but also its inherent fairness from the point of view of the corporation. The test is whether the transaction carries the earmarks of an arm's length bargain. A transaction unfair to the corporation may be avoided by it, and a director is charged with the knowledge that an unfair agreement may be avoided. Factors to be considered in determining whether a transaction is fair and reasonable include: whether the director was dependent on the transaction for his livelihood; if so, whether the other directors know that; whether the director is foregoing other opportunities by performing the sevice or making the sale to the corporation and if so, whether the other directors are aware of that; how the director became involved in the transaction in question; how the price or fee compares with prevailing fees in the market; whether the bylaws specifically allow or prohibit compensation of directors for professional services [Tenzer v. Superscope, Inc. (l985) 39 Cal. 3d 18, 31-34, 216 Cal. Rptr. 130, 702 P.2d 212] .

Corp. Code § 310 only addresses the voidness or voidability of the contract or transaction. The fact that the requirements of Section 310 were met does not render a contract or transaction immune from attack on other grounds, and does not render directors immune from liability for breach of fiduciary duty as a result of their approval of the contract or transaction [Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1273, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 ; see Walczak v. EPL Prolong, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 198 F.3d 725, 732-733 (district court did not abuse discretion in issuing preliminary injunction prohibiting completion of company's agreement to license patent and liquidate, because factual findings that agreement was unfair and appellants engaged in pattern of improper transfer of corporate assets were not clearly erroneous)].

[2] Dealing With Corporate Property

If a director acquires property of the corporation in good faith, taking title in his or her own name, he or she becomes a resulting trustee with the duty (his or her only duty) to convey the property to the corporation. If he or she acquires property of the corporation for himself or herself, he or she becomes a constructive trustee, with the same duty [Bainbridge v. Stoner (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 423, 428-429, 106 P.2d 423] .

[3] Competition With Corporation

The mere fact that a corporate officer makes preparations to compete before he or she resigns his or her office is not sufficient to constitute a breach of duty.

There is no requirement that an officer disclose his or her preparations to compete with the corporation in every case, and failure to disclose such acts will render the officer liable for a breach of his or her fiduciary duties only if particular circumstances render nondisclosure harmful to the corporation. Conversely, the mere act of disclosing his or her activities cannot immunize the officer from liability when his or her conduct in other respects amounts to a breach of duty. The significant inquiry in each situation is whether the officer's acts or omissions constitute a breach under the general principles applicable to the performance of his or her trust [Bancroft-Whitney Co. v. Glen (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 327, 346-347, 49 Cal. Rptr. 825, 411 P.2d 921] . A former director may provide services to clients of the corporation that the corporation cannot provide. For instance, an injunction against a former attorney-employee of a labor relations consulting firm was was overbroad in prohibiting the attorney from providing legal services to clients of the firm because the firm was not licensed to provide those services [John F. Matull & Associates, Inc. v. Cloutier, (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1049, 1056, 240 Cal. Rptr. 211] .

§ 167.57 Action on Behalf of Corporation Against Wrongdoing Director

A director or group of directors has no authority to bring an action on behalf of the corporation against another director or group of directors to redress an injury to the corporation. When the gravamen of the complaint is injury to the corporation, the appropriate form of action is a shareholder's derivative action [Anmaco, Inc. v. Bohlken (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 891, 898-900, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 675 ; Sealand Inv. Corp. v. Emprise, Inc. (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 305, 313, 12 Cal. Rptr. 153] . The issue in Anmaco required analysis of a president's power in the event of a deadlock or division of directors, to initiate litigation in the corporation's name. The California Supreme Court has not addressed this issue [see Holt v. College of Osteopathic Physicians & Surgeons (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 750, 755-756, n.4, 40 Cal. Rptr. 244, 394 P.2d 932] , but on the Anmaco facts, that court found there is no presumption of implied authority in the president to institute litigation in the name of the corporation against a codirector and equal shareholder. Pressing the corporation into litigation as a plaintiff is inappropriate when the other shareholder-director can claim equal authority to bring suit in the corporate name [Anmaco, Inc. v. Bohlken (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 891, 899-900, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 675] .

Anmaco, Inc. had only two directors, each of whom was a 50-percent shareholder. One was president and the other was the chief executive officer. The president sued the other director, naming the corporation as plaintiff, on 14 causes of action including breach of fiduciary duty by appropriating corporate assets, conversion of corporate property, fraud on the corporation, interference with contractual and business relations, and constructive trust on corporate benefits. The corporation's bylaws authorized the president to institute legal actions on behalf of the corporation when the other 50 percent owner did not consent, but also provided that the president's exercise of office was subject to the control of the board of directors. The court concluded those bylaws did not confer authority to institute litigation in the corporate name against the other 50 percent shareholder [Anmaco, Inc. v. Bohlken (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 891, 898, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 675] .

Sealand Inv. Corp. v. Emprise [Sealand Inv. Corp. v. Emprise, Inc. (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 305, 12 Cal. Rptr. 153] was a suit by two directors, who owned 50 percent of the stock, against the two other directors, who also owned 50 percent of the stock, for diversion of corporate assets, breach of fiduciary duty, misappropriation of corporate opportunities, and to impose a constructive trust. Plaintiffs in Sealand included the secretary-treasurer, and the president was one of the defendant directors.

Derivative actions are discussed in Ch. 168, Corporations: Derivative Actions . In some cases, a deadlock may be resolved by appointment of a provisional director [see Corp. Code § 308; see §§ 167.160-167.163], removal of a dishonest director [see Corp. Code § 304; see §§ 167.166-167.167], appointment of a receiver [see Code Civ. Proc. § 564(b)(6)], or involuntary dissolution [see Corp. Code § 1800, discussed in Ch. 170, Corporations: Dissolution].

§ 167.58 Limitations on Director's Liability

The articles of incorporation may contain provisions eliminating or limiting the personal liability of a director for monetary damages in an action brought by or in the right of the corporation for breach of a director's duties to the corporation and its shareholders, as set forth in Corp. Code § 309 [Corp. Code §§ 204(a)(10), 309(c); see also Fin. Code § 8501 (governing directors of federal savings associations)]. However, liability may not be eliminated or limited in the following instances [Corp. Code § 204(a)(10); see also Fin. Code § 8501 (governing directors of federal savings associations)]:

- For acts or omissions that involve intentional misconduct or a knowing and culpable violation of law;

- For acts or omissions that a director believes to be contrary to the best interests of the corporation or its shareholders or that involve the absence of good faith on the part of the director;

- For any transaction from which a director derived an improper personal benefit;

- For acts or omissions that show a reckless disregard for the director's duty to the corporation or its shareholders in circumstances in which the director was aware, or should have been aware, in the ordinary course of performing a director's duties, of a risk of serious injury to the corporation or its shareholders;

- For acts or omissions that constitute an unexcused pattern of inattention that amounts to an abdication of the director's duty to the corporation or its shareholders;

- Under Corp. Code § 310 (pertaining to actions in which a director has a conflict of interest);

- Under Corp. Code § 316 (pertaining to prohibited actions that subject a director to joint and several liability);

- For acts or omissions occurring prior to the effective date of the provision limiting or eliminating liability; and

- For acts or omissions of an officer, acting in his or her capacity as an officer, even if the officer is also a director or the actions, if negligent or improper, have been ratified by the directors.

Although other methods of adopting a provision under Corp. Code § 204(a)(10) are permitted, a provision in the articles in substantially the following form is sufficient to limit or eliminate liability of a director: "The liability of the directors of the corporation for monetary damages shall be eliminated to the fullest extent permissible under California law" [Corp. Code § 204.5(a), (b)].

For an affirmative defense to assert immunity under Corp. Code § 204(a)(10), see § 167.184.

C. Fiduciary Duties Of Directors, Officers, And Controlling Shareholders

14-167 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 167.59

§ 167.59 Controlling Shareholder's Duties

[1] Fiduciary

The rule in California is that "majority shareholders, either singly or acting in concert to accomplish a joint purpose, have a fiduciary responsibility to the minority [shareholders] and to the corporation to use their ability to control the corporation in a fair, just, and equitable manner" [Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 108, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 ; but see Skarbrevik v. Cohen, England & Whitfield (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 692, 707, 712, 282 Cal. Rptr. 627 (attorney for majority as not owing any duty to minority and thus is not liable to minority for professional negligence or conspiracy to defraud)]. This rule may be described as a "comprehensive rule of inherent fairness from the viewpoint of the corporation and those interested therein" [Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 110, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464] .

[2] Sale or Transfer of Control

[a] Duty to Avert Looting

A majority shareholder has a duty to investigate a potential buyer of the controlling shares so as not to pass control to a person who intends, or can reasonably be expected, to loot the corporation. The majority shareholder who knows facts which would lead a prudent person to suspect that the potential buyer will loot the corporation, has a duty to investigate [DeBaun v. First W. Bank & Trust Co. (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 686, 696-697, 120 Cal. Rptr. 354 (reporting rule)]. This duty is owed both to the corporation and to minority shareholders [DeBaun v. First W. Bank & Trust Co. (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 686, 698, 120 Cal. Rptr. 354] .

If a majority shareholder transfers control to a looter in violation of the duty to investigate the circumstances and avert the consequences when looting will probably occur, damages may be the aggregate of (1) the sum necessary to wipe out a negative net worth, if the looting buyer has rendered the corporation insolvent, and (2) the value of the corporation's tangible assets when control was transferred to the looter, and (3) the corporation's "going business value" at that time, determined with reference to future profits reasonably estimated (if there is a record of earnings on which to base the estimate) [DeBaun v. First W. Bank & Trust Co. (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 686, 699-700, 120 Cal. Rptr. 354] .

[3] Marketability of Shares

If no market exists for a corporation's shares, the controlling shareholders may not use their power to control the corporation for the purpose of promoting a marketing scheme that benefits themselves alone to the detriment of the minority shareholders [Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 115, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464] .

This rule does not require controlling shareholders to make a market for (i.e., to facilitate public trading of) the shares. Neither does it prevent controlling shareholders from selling their shares or transferring them to a holding company. The rule is only that controlling shareholders may not make a market for their own shares, to the exclusion of minority shares, by using their power to control the corporation [Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 115, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464] .

[4] Dissolution of Corporation

Majority shareholders have the power to cause a voluntary dissolution of a corporation [see Corp. Code § 1900(a)], but they do not have an absolute right to exercise this power. For instance, they have no right to dissolve a corporation for the purpose of defrauding minority shareholders or squeezing them out [In re Security Finance Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 376-377, 317 P.2d 1] . Majority shareholders are required to use their power to dissolve the corporation in good faith. Thus, majority shareholders may dissolve a corporation for the purpose of protecting their investments where alternative methods are foreclosed, no advantage is secured over other shareholders, and no rights of third parties will be adversely affected [In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 378, 317 P.2d 1] .

§ 167.60 Liability of Director of Foreign Corporation

The directors of a foreign corporation [see Corp. Code § 171] transacting intrastate business [see Corp. Code § 191] are liable to the corporation, its shareholders, creditors, receiver, liquidator, or trustee in bankruptcy for violations of official duty according to any applicable laws of the state or place of incorporation or organization, whether committed in California or elsewhere; and that liability may be enforced in California courts [Corp. Code § 2116].

Further, the provisions of Corp. Code § 309 (director's standard of care) apply to directors of foreign corporations which are subject to Corp. Code § 2115 [Corp. Code § 2115(b)]. These corporations are called "nominally foreign corporations" in this chapter. For discussion, see Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity .

14-167 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 167.61

§ 167.61 Directors' Duty to Creditors When Corporation Is Insolvent

Some California cases are in accord with a so-called "trust fund doctrine," to the effect that all of the assets of a corporation, immediately on its becoming insolvent, become a trust fund for the benefit of all of its creditors, in order to satisfy their claims [Berg & Berg Enters. v. Boyle (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1020, 1040, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 875] . However, this does not mean that the directors of an insolvent corporation are in the position of a trustee with respect to the corporation's creditors. In California, the directors of an insolvent corporation owe no fiduciary duty of due care or loyalty the corporation's creditors solely because the corporation is insolvent. The scope of any noncontractual duty owed by corporate directors to the insolvent corporation's creditors is limited, in California, to the avoidance of acts that divert, dissipate, or unduly risk corporate assets that might otherwise be used to pay creditors' claims [cf. Civ. Code § 1708 (every person is bound, without contract, to abstain from "injuring the person or property of another, or infringing upon any of his or her rights")]. This includes acts that involve self dealing or the preferential treatment of creditors. Furthermore, there is no fiduciary duty prescribed under California law that is owed to creditors by directors of a corporation solely by virtue of its operating in any so-called zone of insolvency (or in the "vicinity of insolvency," as some courts have described it) without being actually insolvent [Berg & Berg Enters. v. Boyle (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1020, 1041, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 875 (disgruntled creditor failed to allege facts stating cause of action when gist of complaint was that directors effected assignment for benefit of creditors rather than investigating, exploring, or pursuing bankruptcy reorganization through which, plaintiff theorized, value of corporation's accumulated net operating losses could have been maximized for benefit of plaintiff and other creditors; moreover, common law business judgment rule [see § 167.51] would have shielded directors even if cause of action had been stated)].

D. Indemnification For Defense Expenses

14-167 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 167.80

§ 167.80 Governing Law

[1] Statutes

Indemnification of corporate agents is governed by Corp. Code § 317. The indemnification authorized by Corp. Code § 317 will not be deemed exclusive of any additional rights to indemnification for breach of duty to the corporation and its shareholders while acting in the capacity of a director or officer of the corporation to the extent the additional rights of indemnification are authorized in an article adopted pursuant to Corp. Code § 204(a)(11) (discussed in § 167.58) [Corp. Code § 317(g)].

The indemnification provided by Corp. Code § 317 for acts, omissions, or transactions while acting in the capacity of, or serving as, a director or officer of the corporation, but not involving breach of duty to the corporation and its shareholders, will not be deemed exclusive of any other rights to which those seeking indemnification may be entitled under any bylaw, agreement, vote of shareholders or disinterested directors, or otherwise, to the extent that the additional rights to indemnification are authorized in the articles of the corporation [Corp. Code § 317(g)].

An article provision authorizing indemnificaiton "in excess of that otherwise permitted by Corp. Code § 317," or "to the fullest extent permitted by California law," or any substantial equivalent will be construed to be both (1) a provision for additional indemnification for breach of duty to the corporation and its shareholders as referred to in, and subject to the limitations of, Corp. Code § 204(a)(11), and (2) a provision for additional indemnification for acts, omissions, or transactions while acting in the capacity of, or serving as, a director or officer of the corporation but not involving breach of duty to the corporation and its shareholders [Corp. Code § 317(g)].

The rights to indemnity of Corp. Code § 317 continue as to a person who has ceased to be a director, officer, employee, or agent and inures to the benefit of the heirs, executors, and administrators of the person. Nothing in Corp. Code § 317 affects any right to indemnification to which persons other than the directors and officers may be entitled by contract or otherwise [Corp. Code § 317(g)].

[2] Articles, Bylaws, Shareholder Resolutions, and Agreements

The articles of incorporation may authorize, whether by bylaw, agreement, or otherwise, the indemnification of agents in excess of that expressly permitted by Corp. Code § 317 for breach of duty to the corporation and its stockholders, except to the same extent that directors may not be relieved of liability under Corp. Code § 204(a)(10), discussed in § 167.58 [Corp. Code § 204(a)(11); see Corp. Code § 317(a) (agents defined to include, among others, directors, officers, and employees), Corp. Code § 317(g); see also Fin. Code § 8501 (governing directors of federal savings associations)]. In the case of close corporations, any of the provisions authorized by Corp. Code § 204(a)(11) may be validly included in a shareholder's agreement. Despite Corp. Code § 204(a)(11), bylaws may require for all or any actions by the board, the affirmative vote of a majority of the authorized number of directors. Nothing in Corp. Code § 204(a)(11) affects the enforceability, as between the parties thereto, of any lawful agreement not otherwise contrary to public policy [Corp. Code § 204(a)(11)].

If the articles or bylaws, as of January 1, 1977, contain any statement relating to indemnification of corporate agents, that statement will not be construed as a limitation on the corporation's power to indemnify as given in Corp. Code § 317 unless it is expressly stated to be such a limitation [Corp. Code § 2306].

Subject to the two exceptions noted below, no indemnification or advance may be made under Corp. Code § 317 if it would be inconsistent with a provision in the articles or bylaws, a resolution of the shareholders, or an agreement that prohibits or otherwise limits indemnification, if the article, bylaw, resolution, or agreement was in effect at the time of the accrual of the alleged cause of action asserted in the proceeding in which the expenses were incurred or other amount was paid [Corp. Code § 317(h)(1)]. However, that does not prevent indemnification to the extent that the agent of the corporation has been successsful on the merits in the defense of any proceeding under Corp. Code § 317(b) or (c) [see Corp. Code § 317(d) (discussed §§ 167.81[2], 167.82[1])], or when indemnification is authorized by a court under Corp. Code § 317(e)(4) [Corp. Code § 317(h)(1)].

[3] Court Order Approving Settlement

When the proceeding in question (for the defense of which the corporation wishes to indemnify its agent) is or was an action or a judicial proceeding settled with the court's approval, the corporation may not elect to provide indemnity if that would be inconsistent with any condition expressly imposed by the court in approving the settlement [Corp. Code § 317(h)(2)].

[4] Corporate Agents Connected With Employee Benefit Plans

Indemnification of fiduciaries of employee benefit plans is governed by Corp. Code § 207(f) [Corp. Code § 317(j)]. That provision gives a corporation power, subject to limitations in the articles and requirements of other provisions of the General Corporation Law (Corp. Code §§ 100-2319) and any other applicable laws, to indemnify, purchase, and maintain insurance on behalf of any fiduciary of any pension, profit-sharing, share bonus, share purchase, share option, savings, thrift, or other retirement, incentive, or benefit plan, trust, or provision for any or all of the directors, officers, and employees of the corporation or any of its subsidiary or affiliated corporations [Corp. Code § 207(f)].

[5] Foreign Corporations

Corp. Code § 317 applies to foreign corporations that are subject to Corp. Code § 2115(a) [Corp. Code § 2115(b)]. Those corporations are called "nominally foreign corporations" in this chapter. For discussion, see Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity .

§ 167.81 Eligibility for Indemnification

[1] Status of Claimant

To be eligible for indemnification, a claimant must have been a party (in the position of a defendant) in some civil, criminal, administrative, or investigative proceeding, by reason of the fact that he or she is or was an agent of the corporation in one of the following categories [Corp. Code § 317(a)]:

- Director, officer, employee, or other agent of the corporation.

- Serving at the request of the corporation as director, officer, employee, or agent of another foreign or domestic corporation, partnership, joint venture, trust, or other enterprise.

- Director, officer, employee, or agent of a foreign or domestic corporation that was a predecessor corporation of the present corporation.

- Director, officer, employee, or agent of another enterprise at the request of the predecessor corporation.

When outside counsel (as opposed to in-house counsel) is retained by a corporation to represent it at trial, and then is sued by the corporation for legal malpractice while representing the corporation, the outside counsel is a party to the malpractice suit by reason of the outside counsel's actions in the capacity of an independent contractor, not "by reason of the fact that he or she is or was an agent of the corporation" within the meaning of Corp. Code § 317 [Channel Lumber Company, Inc. v. Porter Simon (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1222, 1225, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 482 (reversing order awarding attorney fees and expenses to counsel under *Corp. [2] Success in Defense or Good Faith

[a] As Prerequisite

A claimant whose status makes him or her eligible for indemnification is entitled to be indemnified for expenses actually and reasonably incurred in connection with a successful defense on the merits as to any claim, issue, or matter in the proceeding in question [Corp. Code § 317(d)].

A claimant who was not successful in defense on the merits, even if successful in a technical or procedural defense, is not entitled to be indemnified but remains, nevertheless, eligible for indemnification if he or she performed his or her duties as a corporate agent in compliance with whichever of three standards of conduct applies, depending on the nature of the proceeding in which defense expenses were incurred [see Corp. Code § 317(e)].

[b] Action by Corporation; Derivative Action

To be eligible for indemnification for defense expenses incurred in an action by the corporation or a derivative action on behalf of the corporation, a claimant who was not successful in defense on the merits must have performed his or her duties as a corporate "agent" in good faith, in a manner he or she believed to be in the best interests of the corporation and its shareholders [see Corp. Code § 317(c)].

[c] Other Civil Action or Proceeding

To be eligible for indemnification for defense expenses incurred in a civil action or proceeding other than an action by the corporation or a derivative action on behalf of the corporation, or in an administrative proceeding or a noncriminal investigative proceeding, a claimant who was not successful in defense on the merits must have performed his or her duties as a corporate agent in good faith, in a manner he or she reasonably believed to be in the best interests of the corporation. The termination of the action or proceeding by judgment, order, settlement, or the like, or the equivalent of a plea of nolo contendere, does not, of itself, create a presumption that the claimant failed to adhere to this standard of conduct [Corp. Code § 317(b)].

Actions taken by a corporate agent for his or her own benefit, unrelated to his or her corporate duties, will not establish entitlement to indemnification under Corp. Code § 317(b). For instance, corporate marketing officers who resigned and formed their company, which became the corporation's exclusive Northern California sales agent, and which resulted in termination of the corporation's contract with its existing sales agent, were not entitled to be indemnified against a judgment against them in the terminated agent's action for interference with economic advantage [Plate v. Sun-Diamond Growers (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1115, 1126, 275 Cal. Rptr. 667] ; see Wilshire-Doheny Associastes, Ltd. v. Shaprio (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1380, 1390, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478 (trial court erred in determining as matter of law that Corp. Code § 317 did not apply, because question of its application is factual one; trial on allegations of complaint was necessary to determine whether appellants' alleged acts were taken on behalf of corporation, or whether they were acting to further their own personal interests). Similarly, a finding that the agent's conduct consisted of intentional wrongdoing against a third party precludes a finding of good faith as required for indemnification under Corp. Code § 317(b). The fact that the wrongdoing did not harm the corporation or was not against the best interests of the corporation does not establish that the agents acted in good faith in participating in the wrongful conduct [Plate v. Sun-Diamond Growers (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1115, 1126, 275 Cal. Rptr. 667] .

[d] Criminal Proceeding or Investigation

To be eligible for indemnification for defense expenses incurred in a criminal proceeding or investigation, a claimant who was not successful in defense on the merits must have performed his or her duties as a corporate "agent" in good faith, in a manner he or she reasonably believed to be in the best interests of the corporation, with no reasonable cause to believe that his or her conduct was unlawful. The termination of the proceeding by judgment, order, settlement, conviction, or a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent, does not, of itself, create a presumption that the claimant failed to adhere to this standard of conduct or had reasonable cause to believe that his or her conduct was unlawful [Corp. Code § 317(b)].

§ 167.82 Corporation's Duty to Provide Indemnity

[1] Under Statute

Where a claimant eligible for indemnification is entitled to be indemnified (because of a successful defense on the merits), the corporation is required to provide indemnity [see Corp. Code § 317(d)] and can be compelled to do so by a court.

[2] Pursuant to Court Order

[a] Defense of Action Brought by Corporation or Derivative Action

Where a claimant eligible for indemnification is not entitled to be indemnified, because of a defense successful otherwise than on the merits, if the proceeding in which defense expenses were incurred was an action by the corporation or a derivative action on behalf of the corporation, the court in which the action is or was pending may, on the application of the corporation, or the claimant, or the attorney or any other person who rendered services in connection with the defense, and whether or not the corporation opposes the application, authorize or direct the corporation to provide indemnity, on determining that the claimant has conformed to the applicable standard of conduct in performing his or her duties as a corporate agent [see Corp. Code § 317(e)(4)]. Regarding the applicable standard of conduct, see § p167.81[2].

When a claimant eligible for indemnification is not entitled to be indemnified, because of an unsuccessful defense, if the proceeding in which defense expenses were incurred was an action by the corporation or a derivative action on behalf of the corporation, the court in which the action is or was pending may, on application, direct the corporation to provide indemnity for such expenses as the court determines should be subject to indemnity, if the court determines that indemnification is fair and reasonable in view of all the circumstances, and notwithstanding that the claimant has been adjudged liable to the corporation [see Corp. Code § 317(c)(1)].

[b] Defense of Other Action or Proceeding

When a claimant eligible for indemnification is not entitled to be indemnified, because of an unsuccessful defense or a defense successful otherwise than on the merits, if the proceeding in which defense expenses were incurred was a civil action or proceeding other than an action by the corporation or a derivative action on behalf of the corporation, or was a criminal proceeding, the court in which that proceeding is or was pending, on the application of the corporation, or the claimant, or the attorney or any other person who rendered services in connection with the defense, and whether or not the corporation opposes the application, may authorize or direct the corporation to provide indemnity, on determining that the claimant has conformed to the applicable standard of conduct in performing his or her duties as a corporate "agent" [see Corp. Code § 317(e)(4)]. Regarding the applicable standard of conduct, see § 167.81[2].

§ 167.83 Corporation's Election to Provide Indemnity

When a claimant eligible for indemnification is not entitled to be indemnified, because of an unsuccessful defense or a defense successful otherwise than on the merits, the corporation may elect to provide indemnity, by any of the three following methods:

- If there are enough disinterested directors to form a quorum of the board, they may meet and, on determining that the claimant has conformed to the applicable standard of conduct in performing his or her duties as a corporate agent [see § 167.81[2]], by the votes of a majority of them may authorize indemnification [see Corp. Code § 317(e)(1)].

- If a quorum of directors is not obtainable, indemnification may be authorized by written opinion of independent legal counsel [see Corp. Code § 317(e)(2)].

- Alternatively, indemnification may be authorized by the approval of the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 153], with the shares owned by the claimant not being entitled to vote, on the shareholders' determining that the claimant has conformed to the applicable standard of conduct in performing his or her duties as a corporate "agent" [see Corp. Code § 317(e)(3)].

§ 167.84 Expenses Subject to Indemnity

[1] In General

Except as to certain expenses incurred in an action by the corporation or a derivative action on behalf of the corporation, a corporation may elect to provide, or may be authorized or directed by court order to provide, indemnity for all "expenses" actually and reasonably incurred by the claimant in connection with the defense in question, including attorney's fees, judgments, fines, and settlements [Corp. Code § 317(a), (b), (d)].

[2] Exception in Case of Action by Corporation or Derivative Action

The corporation may not indemnify an agent in connection with an action by or in the right of the corporation for amounts paid in settling or otherwise disposing of a pending action with out court approval or for expenses incurred in defending a pending action that is settled or otherwise disposed of without court approval [Corp. Code § 317(c)(2), (3)].

[3] Costs of Court Order Directing Corporation to Provide Indemnity

If a claimant is obliged to seek a court order or a judgment directing the corporation to provide indemnity, and such an order or judgment is obtained, the claimant's expenses incurred in that proceeding are also subject to indemnity [see Corp. Code § 317(a)].

§ 167.85 Advancement of Expenses

If a claimant will be eligible for indemnification on the conclusion of some pending civil, criminal, administrative, or investigative proceeding or civil action, the corporation may elect to advance the claimant's defense expenses already incurred, on receiving an undertaking by or on behalf of the claimant to repay the amounts advanced unless it be ultimately determined that the corporation has a duty (under the statute or pursuant to court order) to provide indemnity [see Corp. Code § 317(f)]. Corp. Code § 315(a), which requires shareholder approval for any loan by the corporation to any officer or director, or any guarantee by the corporation of any obligation of an officer or director, does not apply to any such advances [Corp. Code § 317(f)].

§ 167.86 Liability Insurance

A corporation may purchase and maintain insurance on behalf of any "agent" of the corporation [see Corp. Code § 317(a)] against any liability asserted against or incurred by the agent in that capacity or arising out of the agent's status as such, whether or not the corporation would have the power to indemnify the agent against the liability under Corp. Code § 317 [Corp. Code § 317(i)]. The fact that a corporation owns all or a portion of the shares of the insurance company does not render the authorization to purchase insurance inapplicable if either of the following conditions met [see Corp. Code § 317(i)]:

- The articles authorize indemnification in excess of that authorized in Corp. Code § 317 and the insurance provided by this provision is limited as indemnification is required to be limited by Corp. Code § 204(a)(11); or

- All of the following conditions are satisfied:

  - The insurer is organized, licensed, and operated in compliance with the insurance laws and regulations applicable to its jurisdiction of organization;

  - The insurer processes claims in a manner that prohibits the corporation that purchased the policy from directly controlling the insurer; and

  - The policy provides for a manner of risk sharing between the insurer and purchaser on one hand, and an unaffiliated person or persons on the other.

§ 167.122 Decisions

[1] Business Judgment Rule; Corp. Code § 309

Business judgment rule held to immunize directors of federally-insured national bank from liability for purely negligent acts; nonofficer directors entitled to rely on company employees and advisors without duty of further inquiry, absent special circumstances. FDIC v. Castetter (9th Cir. 1999) 184 F.3d 1040, 1044-1046

Business judgment rule applied as matter of law, because decision-making process was not tainted by fraud, oppression, or illegality, when (1) board of directors could and did properly rely on information from company's management and financial analysis department in its deliberative process; (2) board was sufficiently informed, through written financial materials, oral presentations from company officers, and discussions during board meetings, to make independent decisions about dividends; (3) board did not engage in fraud by failing to disclose information of type it had no duty to disclose; and (4) there was nothing fraudulent about annual financial reports that were based on audits prepared by independent accountants in compliance with applicable principles of accounting. Hill v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1438, 1449, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 651 (applying principles of corporation law of Illinois, where company was incorporated, and other states, in nationwide class action)

Triable issues of fact existed regarding general partner's business judgment rule defense in limited partners' action for breach of fiduciary duty; summary judgment could not be upheld based on theory that general partner conducted good faith and reasonable investigation into whether merger transaction was in best interests of limited partners. Everest Investors 8 v. McNeil Partners (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 411, 429-430, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 31

Emergency room physician serving as officer/director of ER physicians' corporation who dismissed billing contractor and hired another without obtaining required board approval was protected by business judgment rule. Biren v. Equality Emergency Medical Group, Inc. (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 125, 136-138, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 325

Various defensive measures taken by board of directors of oil company to combat perceived hostile action by competing oil company were a reasonable good faith exercise of power in best interest of corporation. Katz v.

Chevron Corp. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1352, 1367-1370, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 681

Policyholder of mutual insurance company enjoys same rights as shareholder in company; however, such a policyholder is without standing to challenge insurer's use of profits/premium revenues to influence political activity; use of revenues is within sound discretion of insurer's directors and officers. Barnes v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 365, 375-380, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87

Shareholder ratification [Corp. Code § 310(a)(1)] is no defense to allegation that directors breached their fiduciary duty in approving agreements; Corp. Code § 310 only goes to contract's voidness or voidability and does not prevent attack on other grounds. Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1273, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184

"Under similar circumstances" in Corp. Code § 309(a) requires (1) consideration of director's alleged mistake in judgment in context of size, complexity, and location of activities involved; and (2) limiting assessment to time of action or nonaction, thus avoiding harsher judgments that may be made with benefit of hindsight. Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1265, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other ground in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184

Because form and amount of executive compensation are fundamentally business decisions, Corp. Code § 309 is applicable to determine whether disinterested directors ("outside directors") breached their fiduciary duty in approving golden parachutes for "inside directors." Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1265, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other ground in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184

Members of board's compensation committee did not breach their fiduciary duty in recommending $1 million, four-year consulting agreement with president and chief operating officer who would be going with spun-off corporation after merger because their inquiry and evaluation of corporation's interest in retaining particular expertise was sufficient; fact that consultant devoted less than one day to performance of agreement is not relevant because that was not known when agreement was recommended and approved. Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1260-1261, 1263, 1271, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other ground in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184

Presumption established by business judgment rule that directors' decisions are based on sound business judgment is rebuttable only by factual showing of fraud, bad faith, or gross overreaching; usual rule that fraud must be pleaded with particularity is not applicable when specific facts are within knowledge and control of defendant, as when defendant is fiduciary. Eldridge v. Tymshare, Inc. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 767, 776, 230 Cal. Rptr. 815

[2] Golden Parachutes

Golden parachutes are special termination agreements that shelter executives from effects of corporate takeover. Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1256, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other ground in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184

Recognized functions of golden parachutes are (1) to foster executive objectivity toward merger and tender offers, and (2) to allow corporations that are likely takeover targets to attract top executives; those functions are best accomplished if golden parachute is negotiated before corporation becomes takeover target. Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1266, 1266-1267, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other ground in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184

For purposes of evaluating golden parachutes alleged to have been made in breach of fiduciary duty, Corp. Code § 309 is standard applicable only to "outside directors," not to "inside directors" who were officers of corporation and beneficiaries of parachutes and abstained from voting on their approval by other directors. Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1265-1266, 1268, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other ground in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184

[3] Mergers

Directors of corporation targeted for takeover have no duty to disclose merger negotiations to shareholders until agreement in principle has been reached even though withdrawal from prior agreement in principle and termination of earlier merger negotiations had been publicly announced. Eldridge v. Tymshare, Inc. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 767, 772-776, 230 Cal. Rptr. 815

Shareholder challenging directors' decision to resist or accept takeover bid is required to make specific allegations of malfeasance or bad faith; only improper motive which was sole or primary reason for directors' action constitutes malfeasance or bad faith. Eldridge v. Tymshare, Inc. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 767, 776, 230 Cal. Rptr. 815

Shareholder's complaint for damages for directors' wrongful rejection of tender offers at price higher than that for which plaintiff sold his shares is demurrable for failure to allege that wrongful rejection occurred while plaintiff owned shares. Eldridge v. Tymshare, Inc. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 767, 777-778, 230 Cal. Rptr. 815

Directors do not owe fiduciary duty to preferred shareholders to structure reorganization in manner which will give preferred shareholders continued market for their shares, profitable return on their shares, or anything above rights enumerated in certificate of determination. Kirschner Brothers Oil, Inc. v. Natomas Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 784, 792-800, 229 Cal. Rptr. 899

Directors authorizing repurchase of shares to quell takeover attempt breach fiduciary duty if their motivation was desire to retain their positions of power and control. Heckmann v. Ahmanson (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 119, 127, 214 Cal. Rptr. 177

[4] Officers and Directors

Bank's expectancy interest in certain ventures had not matured into type of vested, direct property interest for which Victim and Witness Protection Act (VWPA) [18 U.S.C. §§ 3663, 3664] allows restitution under usurption of corporate opportunities doctrine; however, to extent that chairman usurped association's vested contractual interests, restitution would be proper. United States v. Rodrigues (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 842, 846-847

Under Corp. Code § 313 regarding lack of authority by officer to sign instrument, signature of one person is sufficient to bind corporation if he or she holds corporate offices in both "operational group" and "financial group" described in that statute, even when instrument lists only one of his or her offices. Snukal v. Flightways Manufacturing, Inc. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 754, 786-787, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 3 P.3d 286 (interpreting section in context of real property lease agreement)

Director not prohibited as matter of law from asserting corporation's estoppel to raise statute of frauds in action on transaction with corporation. Tenzer v. Superscope, Inc. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 18, 31-34, 216 Cal. Rptr. 130, 702 P.2d 212 (discussing factors for determining if contract may be enforced by director against corporation)

Corporate officers and directors occupy fiduciary positions similar to trustee's position. Bancroft-Whitney Co. v. Glen (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 327, 345, 49 Cal. Rptr. 825

Officer who assists rival corporation in recruiting personnel is guilty of breach of fiduciary duty. Bancroft-Whitney Co. v. Glen (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 327, 346-356, 49 Cal. Rptr. 825, 411 P.2d 921

Director for "accommodation" only is nevertheless subject to rules and statutes respecting director's fiduciary duties. Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 580, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473

Director acquiring property of corporation is thereby becoming resulting or constructive trustee with duty to convey or deliver to corporation. Bainbridge v. Stoner (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 423, 428-429, 106 P.2d 423

Waiver of corporate directors' and majority shareholders' fiduciary duties to minority shareholder in private close corporation is against public policy and contract provision in buy-sell agreement purporting to effect such a waiver is void. Neubauer v. Goldfarb (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 47, 54-57, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 218

Plaintiff corporate officer who signed licensing agreements (providing for arbitration) with defendant corporation in representative capacity rather than in individual capacity was not third party beneficiary of contract; officer thus could not be compelled to arbitrate libel action he had brought against other corporation and its president. Benasra v. Marciano (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 987, 991-993, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 358

If third party knowingly participates in perpetration of fraud upon corporation, that participation is defense or ground of invalidity as to that party for purposes of Corp. Code § 208. Saks v. Charity Mission Baptist Church (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 1116, 1140-1142, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 45 (investor who knowingly participated in scheme with church pastor to obtain money from public agency and real property for himself and partners through use of church's name was not permitted to claim lack of actual knowledge of contents of church's bylaws regarding pastor's lack of authority to enter into real estate transactions)

Trial court erred in failing to instruct jury that officer who participates in management of corporation, exercising some discretionary authority, is fiduciary of corporation as a matter of law. GAB Business Services, Inc. v. Lindsey & Newsom Claim Services, Inc. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 409, 420-424, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665

Debenture holders, even of debentures convertible into stock, are unsecured creditors and thus corporation and directors do not owe any fiduciary duty to debenture holders to manage corporation in manner that will cause bonds to maintain their value or rating. Pittelman v. Pearce (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1436, 1441-1447, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 (decided under Delaware law, after determining there was no conflict between California and Delaware law; see Fox v. MGM Grand Hotels, Inc. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 524, 527, 187 Cal. Rptr. 141 , Kessler v. General Cable Corp. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 531, 538-540, 155 Cal. Rptr. 94)

If nonresident president and major shareholder fraudulently induced plaintiff to extend credit to corporation, minimum contacts jurisdiction would be established for California jurisdiction over officer/shareholder. Seagate Technology v. A. J. Kogyo Co. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 696, 704-707, 268 Cal. Rptr. 586

Minimum contacts jurisdiction found over nonresident officers alleged to have fraudulently induced plaintiff to enter into contract for sale of California corporation. Taylor-Rush v. Multitech Corp. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 103, 117-118, 265 Cal. Rptr. 672 (officers alleged to have fraudulently induced plaintiff to enter into contracts with corporation)

As general rule, board of directors of corporation are not personally liable to third parties for negligence amounting to breach of duty that officer owes to corporation alone. Jaffe v. Huxley Architecture (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 1191, 246 Cal. Rptr. 432

Minimum contacts found for personal jurisdiction in California over both president and corporate counsel of foreign corporation; foreign corporate counsel, whether in-house or independent, are not entitled to same "official capacity" shield from personal jurisdiction in California as corporate officers and directors. Mihlon v. Superior Court (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 703, 715-716, 215 Cal. Rptr. 442

[5] Shareholders

Majority shareholders have fiduciary duty to corporation and minority shareholders to use controlpower in fair, just, and equitable manner. Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 108, 110, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464

Minority shareholder as an individual had no standing to bring action for breach of fiduciary duty against majority shareholder, but should have brought derivative action on behalf of corporation of which the two were sole shareholders; because all acts alleged to have caused individual's injury amounted to alleged misfeasance or negligence in managing corporation's business, causing business to be total failure, any obligations violated were duties owed directly and immediately to corporation. Nelson v. Anderson (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 111, 124-126, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 753

Shareholders owning 12 percent of shares are jointly liable as aiders and abettors of directors who breached their fiduciary duty by authorizing repurchase of those shares to quell takeover attempt; imposition of constructive trust on shareholders' profits on sale of shares to corporation is proper remedy, therefore, preliminary injunction restraining disposal of profits during pendency of suit is also proper. Heckmann v. Ahmanson (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 119, 127, 135-136, 214 Cal. Rptr. 177

Allegation by minority shareholder that allocation of tax savings to parent corporation accrued by parent and subsidiary corporation filing consolidated tax return under provisions of Internal Revenue Code properly raised question as to whether or not allocation was inherently fair and equitable to plaintiff and was entered in good faith under California rule that majority shareholders have fiduciary duties toward minority shareholders as well as to corporation. Smith v. Tele-Communication, Inc. (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 338, 343-346, 184 Cal. Rptr. 571

Majority shareholder has duty to investigate buyer's intentions before selling control, so as to avert looting. DeBaun v. First W. Bank & Trust Co. (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 686, 696-700, 120 Cal. Rptr. 354

Majority shareholders have fiduciary duty to minority shareholders, when no public market for the shares exists, not to use controlpower to make market for their own shares only. Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 115, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464

Majority shareholder has fiduciary duty to minority shareholders not to use controlpower to dissolve corporation for purpose of defrauding or squeezing out minority. In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 378, 317 P.2d 1

§ 167.141 Decisions

Insurer of corporation under comprehensive general liability (CGL) policy had no duty to defend plaintiff (a minority shareholder who remained a director after leaving corporation's business to work elsewhere) in federal counterclaim action for defamation, when plaintiff was sued as an individual and offered no evidence to support his claim that he was acting in his capacity as a director when he allegedly defamed the corporation. Lomes v. Hartford Financial Services Group, Inc. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 127, 132-135, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471

Trial court erred in determining as matter of law that Corp. Code § 317 did not apply, because question of its application is factual one; trial on allegations of complaint was necessary to determine whether appellants' alleged acts were taken on behalf of corporation, or whether they were acting to further their own personal interests. Wilshire-Doheny Associastes, Ltd. v. Shaprio (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1380, 1390, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478

Outside counsel retained by corporation to represent it at trial, and then sued by corporation for legal malpractice while representing corporation, is not party to malpractice suit "by reason of the fact that he or she is or was an agent of the corporation" within meaning of Corp. Code § 317. Channel Lumber Company, Inc. v. Porter Simon (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1222, 1225, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 482 (reversing order awarding attorney fees and expenses to counsel under Corp. Code§ 317(d))

Primary right to seek authorization for indemnity under Corp. Code § 317(b) is not same cause of action as one for breach of contract for indemnity or one asserted under doctrine of equitable estoppel. Branson v. Sun-Diamond Growers (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 327, 343, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 314

Findings of fact regarding whether agent is sued by reason of his or her official corporate position and whether agent acted in good faith and for best interests of corporation must be upheld if supported by substantial evidence, reviewed in light most favorable to trial court's findings. APSB Bancorp v. Thorton Grant (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 926, 932, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 736 ; Plate v. Sun-Diamond Growers (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1115, 1125, 275 Cal. Rptr. 667

Corp. Code § 317(b), requiring corporation to indemnify its agent who has acted in good faith and in manner reasonably believed to be in best interests of corporation, requires judicial determination of actual merits of agent's defense. American Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Schigur (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 790, 793, 148 Cal. Rptr. 116

Former Corp. Code § 830 does not permit motion for order compelling indemnification to be made in court after conclusion of criminal proceeding in which defense expenses were incurred. P.S. & S., Inc. v. Superior Court (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 354, 359-360, 94 Cal. Rptr. 738

Former Corp. Code § 830 is legislative application, in favor of corporate personnel, of theory that principal is obligated to indemnify agent for expenses arising from performance of agency. Fletcher v. A.J. Indus., Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 313, 327, 72 Cal. Rptr. 146

Former Corp. Code § 830(f) empowered corporation to indemnify agent whose defense was not successful on the merits. Brokate v. Hehr Mfg. Co. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 133, 140-141, 52 Cal. Rptr. 672

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am [one of] the petitioner(s) in the above-entitled proceeding. I have read the foregoing petition and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to matters therein alleged on information and belief, and, as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

CONSENT TO APPOINTMENT

I, _____ [name], being nominated in the foregoing petition for appointment to serve as a director of _____ [name of corporation], hereby consent to be so appointed pursuant to such judgment and orders as the court shall make in the above-entitled proceeding.

_____ [signature]

_____ [address]

[2] Use of Form

This petition is for use by a director or shareholder or shareholders wishing to obtain appointment of a provisional director for the purpose of breaking a deadlock on a board of an even number of directors.

[3] Jurisdiction and Venue

The petition must be filed in the superior court in the county where the principal executive office of the corporation is located or, if the principal executive office of the corporation is not located in California or the corporation has no such office, in Sacramento County [Corp. Code §§ 177, 308(a)].

[4] Standing

The holder or holders of "not less than 331/3 percent of the voting power" of a domestic corporation, or any director or directors of the corporation, may petition for appointment of a provisional director in order to break a deadlock on a board of an even number of directors [Corp. Code § 308(a); see Corp. Code §§ 162 ("corporation" defined), 194.5 ("voting power" defined)]. However, Corp. Code § 308(a) does not apply in the case of a corporation subject to the Public Utilities Act, Pub. Util. Code § 201 et seq.[Corp. Code § 308(d)].

[5] Grounds for Appointment

A provisional director may be appointed if a corporation has an even number of directors who are equally divided and cannot agree as to the management of the corporation's affairs so that the corporation's business can no longer be conducted to advantage or there is danger that the corporation's property and business will be impaired or lost. When these grounds for appointment exist, a provisional director may be appointed notwithstanding any contrary provisions in the articles or bylaws and whether or not an action is pending for an involuntary winding up or dissolution of the corporation [Corp. Code § 308(a)].

[6] Qualifications for Appointment

A provisional director must be an impartial person who is neither a shareholder nor a creditor of the corporation and who is not related by consanguinity or affinity within the third degree according to the common law to any of the other directors of the corporation or to any judge of the court by which the provisional director is appointed [Corp. Code § 308(c)]. Relatives within the third degree according to the common law are the (1) children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren, and (2) parents, grandparents, and great-grandparents, and (3) brothers and sisters, uncles and aunts, and nephews and nieces of the subject.

[7] Nomination of Appointee; Consent

Although the statute does not so require, the petitioner should nominate a person for appointment in the petition. This is customary in other similar proceedings, and the court will expect the petitioner to say whom the petitioner wishes to be appointed.

Again, although not required, it is good practice to append the nominee's consent so that the court knows the nominee will accept appointment.

[8] Verification

The petition is not required to be verified, but verification will enable counsel to use the petition as an affidavit if the occasion should arise.

[9] State Statutes

"Corporation" as used in Corp. Code § 308(a) as meaning domestic corporation. Corp. Code § 162

3. Petitioner(s) is/are [a] shareholder(s) holding 50 percent of the voting power of the corporation.

4. The corporation is authorized by its articles to have, and does have, a board of _____ [number] directors. The present directors are _____ [names].

5. The shareholders of the corporation are divided into two blocs, each holding 50 percent of the voting power of the corporation. At the last previous annual meeting on _____ [date], [and at the annual meeting(s) in _____ (prior year or years),] the shareholders were unable because of that division to elect a successor board not reflecting the division between them; and they remain so divided that the election of a successor board not reflecting the division is impossible.

6. Unless provisional directors are appointed, or other appropriate relief is obtained, the deadlock between the shareholders will continue to perpetuate the present board in office or will prevent the election of a successor board not reflecting the division between the shareholders.

[2] Use of Form

This petition is for use by a shareholder or shareholders who wish to obtain appointment of a provisional director or directors for the purpose of breaking a deadlock among the shareholders that prevents the shareholders from electing a new board of directors.

[3] Standing

The holder or holders of 50 percent of the voting power of a domestic corporation may petition for appointment of a provisional director or provisional directors in order to break a deadlock among the shareholders that prevents them from electing a new board [Corp. Code § 308(b); see Corp. Code §§ 162 ("corporation" defined), 194.5 ("voting power" defined)]. However, Corp. Code § 308(b) does not apply in the case of a corporation subject to the Public Utilities Act, Pub. Util. Code §§ 201-2115 [Corp. Code § 308(d)].

[4] Grounds for Appointment

A provisional director or provisional directors may be appointed if the shareholders are deadlocked so that they cannot elect a successor board at an annual meeting of shareholders [Corp. Code § 308(b)].

[5] Two Appointees

Two provisional directors should be appointed when the board has an uneven number of directors and the appointment of only one provisional director might lead to a deadlock on an even-numbered board.

Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

This judgment is for use in the event a petition for appointment of a provisional director or provisional directors is granted. A provisional director serves until removed by the court or the vote of the shareholders, and is entitled to compensation [Corp. Code § 308(c)]. It is appropriate, therefore, for the court to retain jurisdiction for the purposes of deciding a motion for removal of a provisional director and of deciding a motion to fix compensation [cf. Braude v. Havenner (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 526, 534, 113 Cal. Rptr. 386 (corporate election contest; retention of jurisdiction to compel use of fair election procedure)].

[2] Use of Form

This petition is for use by any "party in interest" to obtain appointment of a board of directors for a corporation that has not issued any shares, if all the directors resign, die, or become incompetent, or if initial directors were not named in the articles and all the incorporators resign, die, or become incompetent prior to election of initial directors [Corp. Code § 306]. The governing statutes specify that the superior court of any county may appoint directors on "application" by any party in interest. The statutes do not provide any additional guidance as to the form of the pleading by which this "application" is to be made [Corp. Code § 306], and local practice in this regard should be ascertained if possible. This form is drafted in the form of a petition. For a similar form for use in connection with nonprofit corporations, drafted as an "application" but in substantially the form of a petition, see Ch. 388, Nonprofit Corporations, § 388.168.

The petition may be filed in the superior court in any county [Corp. Code § 306]. Verification is not required.

[3] Notice

The statute [Corp. Code § 306] contains no procedural provisions. Since the judgment will not bind any person who did not have actual or constructive notice of the pendency of the proceeding [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1908], it would be advisable to publish a citation, directed to all interested persons. An order for publication may be obtained ex parte. For discussion of the analogous subject of publication of summons, and related forms, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

2. _____ [Other appropriate terms of the judgment, such as that the appointed directors must make periodic reports and accountings to the court, that they will have compensation from the corporation in a stated amount, that they will not do certain acts as directors without the court's approval, and so forth].

3. The court will retain jurisdiction of this cause for any further proceedings that may be necessary. Leave is hereby granted to any person, if that person has standing to sue for the relief herein given at the time the motion is made, to move for any appropriate order or modification of this judgment, on _____ [number] days written notice filed and served on the corporation and, if the motion concerns removal of any appointed director, on the director or directors affected.

_____ [signature]

Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

This form of judgment is for use in the event a petition for appointment of the entire board of directors [see § 167.164] is granted. Since the relief is apparently equitable, the court may include any provisions which seem proper; and the court may appropriately retain jurisdiction for further proceedings, since the corporation is being placed in the hands of the court's appointees.

_____ [date]

[2] Use of Form

This form is a complaint for use by a shareholder or shareholders holding 10 percent or more of the outstanding shares of any class, to remove a director or directors from office under Corp. Code § 304. Whether that section authorizes a civil action or a special proceeding is unclear. Early cases considered that a lawsuit for removal of a corporate director was a special proceeding [see, e.g., Chollar M. Co. v. Wilson (1885) 66 Cal. 374, 376, 5 P. 670] , but the majority of cases, including all recent cases, seem to treat such a lawsuit as a civil action. The language of Corp. Code § 304 is compatible with the modern view; and since that view permits joining a cause of action for damages, which will often be desirable, it is the view taken in this chapter.

[3] Parties

[a] Plaintiff

The statute gives standing to "shareholders holding at least 10 percent of the number of outstanding shares of any class" [Corp. Code § 304]. It is necessary to include in the complaint an appropriate allegation showing the plaintiff(s) to have standing under the statute [see Mason v. San-Val Oil & Water Co., Ltd. (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 670, 673, 36 P.2d 616] .

[b] Defendant

Since the action authorized by Corp. Code § 304 is for the removal of a director, it is necessary to allege that the defendant is now, and at all times mentioned in the complaint was, a director of the corporation. A person who is not now a director cannot be removed [Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 258-259, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280] ; and a director who was not in office when the acts complained of were committed is not subject to removal [see § 167.166[5]].

The statute requires that the corporation be made a party [Corp. Code § 304], but it is not specified that the corporation must be made a defendant. The corporation can be only a defendant [see, e.g., DeGarmo v. Goldman (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 755, 758, 123 P.2d 1] since shareholders have no control of the corporation and cannot make it a plaintiff. In any event, only "shareholders" have standing to sue, and a corporation cannot be its own shareholder.

[4] Nominally Foreign Corporation

Corp. Code § 304 applies in the case of a "foreign corporation" [see Corp. Code § 171] (to the exclusion of the law of the jurisdiction in which it is incorporated) if it is subject to Corp. Code § 2115(a) [Corp. Code § 2115(b)]. Such corporations are called "nominally foreign corporations" in this chapter [see Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity]. If a nominally foreign corporation is involved, the allegation of the corporation's identity in Paragraph 1 will have to be in the style illustrated in Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity, §§ 161.51-161.53.

[5] Allegations

A director may be removed from office by the court "in case of fraudulent or dishonest acts or gross abuse of authority or discretion with reference to the corporation" [Corp. Code § 304]. General allegations of fraud or dishonesty or abuses of discretion or abuses of authority are not sufficient. Facts showing a ground for removal must be specifically alleged [Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 255, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280] .

The basis for the action is a director's commission of fraudulent or dishonest acts or gross abuse of authority or discretion "with reference to the corporation" [Corp. Code § 304]. Therefore, it is necessary to allege facts connecting the defendant director's acts with the corporation [Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 257, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280] .

[6] Jurisdiction and Venue

The complaint must be filed in the superior court in the county where the principal executive office of the corporation is located or, if the principal executive office of the corporation is not located in California or the corporation has no such office, in Sacramento County [Corp. Code §§ 177, 304]. The venue requirement is probably "jurisdictional."

[7] Verification

Verification is not required, but verification of the complaint requires that the defendant file a verified answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 446] and precludes a general denial [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)].

[8] State Statutes

§ 167.168 Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Restore Wrongfully Removed Director to Office [and to Oust Usurper]

[1] FORM Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Restore Wrongfully Removed Director to Office [and to Oust Usurper]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Petitioner,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name of corporation], [and	)	PETITION FOR WRIT OF MANDATE
_____ (name of usurper),]	)

Petitioner respectfully represents:

1. Respondent _____ [name of corporation] is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of California.

2. _____ [Facts about corporate structure, as necessary, e.g., The corporation is authorized by its articles of incorporation to have, and it does have, a board of five directors. Shares in the corporation are of one class. There are 1,000 shares outstanding].

3. On, and for some time continuously before, _____ [date], petitioner was a duly _____ [elected or appointed] director of the corporation.

4. _____ [Circumstances of petitioner's removal, e.g., At a special meeting of shareholders on that date, held for the purposes of voting on the question whether petitioner should be removed and of electing a successor in the event of such removal, a total of 750 votes were cast, 624 votes in favor of removal and 126 votes against removal. The chairman of the board, presiding at the meeting, tallied the votes and announced the result, declaring that petitioner was thereupon duly removed from the office of director].

[5. _____ (Circumstances of election of successor, if any, e.g., Immediately thereafter, the chairman of the board announced that nominations would be received of candidates for election to fill the vacancy on the board purportedly existing because of petitioner's purported removal. Petitioner and respondent _____ (name of usurper) were duly nominated; nominations were closed; and a total of 750 votes were cast, 624 votes for respondent _____ (name of usurper) and 126 votes for petitioner. The chairman of the board tallied the votes and announced the result, declaring that respondent _____ (name of usurper) was thereupon duly elected to the office of director).]

6. Petitioner's purported removal from the office of director was invalid in that _____ [specify, e.g., pursuant to Section 303 of the Corporations Code, where a corporation has five directors and a total of 750 votes are cast at a meeting of shareholders voting on the question of removing one of the directors, the director in question may not be removed if 126 of the votes cast are against removal].

7. Since _____ [date], petitioner has attempted without success to exercise his/her rights and powers as a director of the corporation. Petitioner is not, and since that date has not been, recognized by the corporation or any of its officers and agents as a director. Petitioner is unlawfully precluded by respondent(s) from the use and enjoyment of the office of director to which petitioner is entitled. Thus, petitioner has no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law, other than the relief sought in this petition.

8. As director, petitioner was and is entitled to a compensation of $_____ per _____ [period; add other particulars, if any, as to compensation]. Since _____ [date], petitioner has not received $_____ of compensation to which petitioner was and is entitled.

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays:

[1. _____ (If using an alternative writ instead of notice : That an alternative writ of mandate be issued commanding the corporation to restore petitioner to the office of director effective as of _____ (date of removal), (add, if appropriate : to set aside the election of respondent _____(name of usurper) as a director and remove him/her from office,) and to pay petitioner all compensation which petitioner would have received as director if petitioner had not been removed, or to show cause why it has not done so and why a peremptory writ of mandate should not issue;)]

2. For judgment that petitioner was unlawfully removed from the office of director on _____ [date] [that respondent _____ (name of usurper) was unlawfully elected to succeed petitioner,] and that petitioner is entitled to be restored to the office of director effective as of _____ [date of removal]; and that petitioner have and recover from the corporation damages in the sum of $_____;

3. That a peremptory writ of mandate be issued commanding the corporation to _____ [as in Paragraph 1, above, omitting command to show cause];

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

Attorney for Petitioner

[Verification. See Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports, § 165.70.]

CAUTION:
A petition for writ of mandate must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086].

[2] Use of Form

This form of petition is for use by a wrongfully ousted director seeking a writ of mandate commanding the corporation to restore him or her to office and pay such compensation as he or she would have received if in office during the period of ouster.

For discussion of mandate proceedings generally and other related forms (such as an alternative writ of mandate), see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

[3] Wrongful Removal of Director

No director may be removed from office by the shareholders (unless the entire board is removed) when the votes cast against removal, or not consenting in writing to the removal, would be sufficient to elect the director if voted cumulatively at an election at which the same total number of votes were cast (or, if the action is taken by written consent, all shares entitled to vote were voted) and the entire number of directors authorized at the time of the director's most recent election were then being elected [Corp. Code § 303(a)(1)].

When, by the provisions of the articles, the holders of the shares of any class or series, voting as a class or series, are entitled to elect one or more of the directors, any director so elected may be removed only by the applicable vote of the holders of the shares of that class or series [Corp. Code § 303(a)(2)].

A director of a corporation whose board of directors is divided into classes pursuant to Corp. Code § 301.5 may not be removed if the votes cast against removal of the director, or not consenting in writing to the removal, would be sufficient to elect the director if voted cumulatively (without regard to whether the shares may otherwise be voted cumulatively) at an election at which the same total number of votes were cast (or, if the action was taken by written consent, all shares entitled to vote were voted) and either the number of directors elected at the most recent annual meeting of the shareholders, or if greater, the number of directors for whom removal is being sought, were being elected [Corp. Code § 303(a)(3)].

If a director is removed in contravention of any of the foregoing provisions, the removal is wrongful as contrary to a statutory protection of voting rights.

[4] Availability of Remedy

A writ of mandate may be issued "to compel the admission of a party to the use and enjoyment of a right or office to which the party is entitled, and from which the party is unlawfully precluded" [Code Civ. Proc. § 1085], if that person has no "plain, speedy, and adequate remedy, in the ordinary course of law" [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086].

There is no statutory proceeding available to a wrongfully removed director seeking restoration to the office. Therefore, it appears that the proper remedy is a suit for a writ of mandate, and there is some authority in the California cases for this conclusion [see Potomac Oil Co. v. Dye (1909) 10 Cal. App. 534, 539, 102 P. 677] . By analogy to cases in which a writ of mandate has been issued to restore a person to union membership after wrongful expulsion [see, e.g., Cason v. Glass Bottle Blowers Asso. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 134, 140, 147, 231 P.2d 6] , the remedy is appropriate.

Although the aggrieved director might be a shareholder and entitled to contest the election of a successor, an election contest would only oust the successor; it would not restore the office to the wrongfully removed director. Therefore, an election contest is not an equivalent "plain, speedy, and adequate remedy, in the ordinary course of law."

[2] Use of Form

This skeletal complaint form is for use by a corporation to obtain damages for a director's breach of fiduciary duty. For a complaint for use by a shareholder in a derivative action, see Ch. 168, Corporations: Derivative Actions . For a complaint illustrating a specific case (wrongful appropriation of corporate property), see § 167.181.

[3] Limitation of Action

An action to enforce a director's liability arising from a statute or the Constitution (as distinguished from a liability existing at common law) must be begun within three years "after ... the liability was created" [Code Civ. Proc. § 359], that is, after the last act was done on which the liability depends [see Coombes v. Getz (1933) 217 Cal. 320, 333-335, 18 P.2d 939 ; see also Hoover v. Galbraith (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 519, 524-525, 102 Cal. Rptr. 733, 498 P.2d 981 (when a liability is created, for purpose of applying Code Civ. Proc. § 359)].

A split of authority exists with respect to the applicability of the three-year period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 359 to actions against directors under Corp. Code § 309. In Smith v. Superior Court (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 950, 266 Cal. Rptr. 253 , the court held that actions against directors for negligence or breach of their fiduciary duty to the corporation involve liability created by law, specifically Corp. Code § 309, and are subject to the three-year limitation of Code Civ. Proc. § 359 [Smith v. Superior Court (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 950, 953-954, 266 Cal. Rptr. 253] . The court in Smith concluded that when the Legislature enacted Corp. Code § 309 in 1975, it codified the standard of care for directors. Corp. Code § 309(c) precludes liability if the standard is met. By codifying the standard of care and precluding further liability, Corp. Code § 309 conveys the Legislature's intent that any action by a beneficiary of the fiduciary relationship must necessarily flow from the statute [Smith v. Superior Court (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 950, 953, 266 Cal. Rptr. 253] .

However, another court subsequently reached the opposite conclusion. The court in Briano v. Rubio (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1179-1180, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 408] found that Corp. Code § 309 did not create a new form of liability against directors of corporations, but merely codified and refined existing common law. The court in Briano concluded that therefore, under Coombes v. Getz (1933) 217 Cal. 320, 333-335, 18 P.2d 939 (cited above), Corp. Code § 309 does not constitute a "liability created by law." Since Corp. Code § 309 is not such a liability, the limitations period set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 359 is inapplicable [Briano v. Rubio (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1179-1180, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 408] . The Briano court found that the court in Smith v. Superior Court (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 950, 266 Cal. Rptr. 253 , discussed above misapplied the phrase "liability created by law" by concluding that if there was a statutory basis for an action, it automatically constituted a "liability created by law," regardless of whether the statute merely codified existing common law [Briano v. Rubio (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1175, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 408 ; accord, Lehman v. Superior Court (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 109, 116-122, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 411] .

Directors' liability for failure to cause the corporation to commence litigation against a third party in a timely manner is created when the statute of limitations on the corporation's cause of action against the third party expires [see Smith v. Superior Court (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 950, 953-954, 266 Cal. Rptr. 253] .

[4] Jurisdiction

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const. art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)]. In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the first paper must state whether the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

7. On _____ [date], defendant resigned as _____ [specify] of plaintiff corporation.

8. On _____ [date], defendant established a business _____ [state location, e.g., next door to the principal office and place of business of plaintiff corporation]; the business so established by defendant consists of the manufacture, sale, and repair of _____ [specify] identical with the invention being manufactured, repaired, and sold by plaintiff corporation and which was so manufactured, repaired, and sold during the time defendant was employed by plaintiff corporation.

9. Immediately prior to the resignation of defendant as _____ [specify office] of plaintiff and immediately thereafter, defendant contacted plaintiff's customers and notified them that he/she was now producing and selling the invention for his/her own account; defendant utilized the personal contacts he/she had made while he/she was employed by plaintiff to take the customers of plaintiff corporation away from plaintiff corporation and to make them customers of his/her own business; as a result of the actions of defendant, plaintiff's business has deteriorated so badly that plaintiff will soon be forced to discontinue operations and thereby suffer irreparable injury unless the situation is remedied and defendant's actions are restrained and enjoined by this court.

10. An actual controversy exists between plaintiff and defendant relating to the legal rights and duties of the respective parties arising out of the fiduciary relationship between defendant and plaintiff corporation and the agreements relative to the rights to the production and sale of the invention.

11. Plaintiff contends that:

a. Defendant does not have any right to produce or sell the invention or any modifications, alterations, or improvements thereof.

b. The aforementioned acts of defendant were performed in direct contravention of and with an utter disregard for his/her prior agreements, promises, declarations, and the fiduciary duty of defendant to plaintiff.

c. _____ [Continue enumerating in separately numbered paragraphs each of plaintiff's contentions].

12. Defendant contends that:

a. He/She has every right to produce and sell the invention and any modifications, alterations, or improvements thereof.

b. He/She is not acting in contravention of or disregard for his/her agreements, promises, declarations, and fiduciary duty to plaintiff.

c. _____[Continue enumerating in separately numbered paragraphs each of plaintiff's contentions].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. That it be adjudged and determined that defendant, his/her agents, servants, employees, and attorneys have no right to manufacture or sell _____ [specify invention] of the types produced and sold by plaintiff during the course of defendant's employment by plaintiff, or alterations, improvements, and modifications thereof, and that the rights to produce and sell such invention, as between plaintiff and defendant, are the sole and exclusive property of plaintiff;

2. That the defendant be permanently enjoined and restrained from manufacturing or selling _____ [specify invention] of the types produced and sold by plaintiff during the course of defendant's employment by plaintiff, or alterations, improvements, or modifications thereof;

3. That defendant be required to account for and pay to plaintiff all the proceeds received by him/her from the production and sale of the aforesaid _____ [specify invention] since _____ [date];

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

- That defendant's improper sales, modifications, alterations, or improvements to the invention have so damaged plaintiff's business that injunctive relief is required (Paragraph 9) [see Civ. Code § 3422; Code Civ. Proc. § 526];

- That an actual controversy exists between the parties with contentions with respect to rights on each side (Paragraph 10) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060]; and

[2] Use of Form

This form is a complaint for use by a shareholder or shareholders to enforce the liability of directors of their corporation for making an illegal loan or guaranty as a result of which the corporation suffered a loss [see Corp. Code §§ 315, 316]. The action is derivative, but it is not governed by the general derivative-action statute, Corp. Code § 800. For discussion of other derivative actions, and appropriate forms, see Ch. 168, Corporations: Derivative Actions .

By changing the allegation in Paragraph 3, a creditor may also use this form. Regarding a creditor's right to sue, see § 167.183[5].

[3] Loan of Money or Property or Guaranty of Obligation

The General Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 100-2319] prohibits most corporations subject to it (banks, industrial loan companies, and credit unions excepted) from making any loan of money or property to or guarantying the obligations of certain persons (with some exceptions; see § 167.183[3][b]), or from loaning to or guarantying the obligations of anyone on the security of shares of the corporation or its parent, without shareholder approval [see Corp. Code § 315(a), (c), (f); regarding similar prohibitions applicable to financial corporations, see Fin. Code §§ 780-787 (banks), 7177-7181 (savings and loan associations), 15050 (credit unions), 18436, 18442 (industrial loan companies)]. In the event that a corporation makes an illegal loan or guaranty (§ 167.183[3][a]) and suffers a loss as a result, the directors who approved making the loan are liable to the corporation for the amount of the loss [see Corp. Code § 316(a), (d)].

[a] Illegal Loans or Guaranties

Any loan by a corporation of money or property to, or a guaranty of an obligation of, any director or officer of the corporation or its parent or subsidiary is illegal, unless the transaction or an employee benefit plan authorizing such loans or guaranties, after disclosure of the right under such a plan to include officers or directors, is (1) approved by the shareholders, with shares owned by the director or officer, or by the directors or officers then eligible to participate in the plan not being entitled to vote thereon, or (2) approved by the unanimous vote of the shareholders [Corp. Code § 315(a); see Corp. Code §§ 175 ("parent" defined), 189 ("subsidiary" defined)].

Additionally, any loan by a corporation of money or property to, or a guaranty of an obligation of, any person on the security of shares of the corporation or of its parent is illegal, unless the loan or guaranty is (1) otherwise adequately secured, (2) made pursuant to an employee benefit plan permitted by Corp. Code § 408, (3) approved by the shareholders with the shares owned by the borrower not entitled to vote, or (4) approved by unanimous vote of the shareholders [Corp. Code § 315(c)].

[b] Permissible Loans or Guaranties

Notwithstanding Corp. Code § 315(a) [§ 167.183[3][a]], if the corporation has outstanding shares held of record by 100 or more persons [see Corp. Code § 605] on the date of approval by the board, and has a bylaw approved by the outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 152] authorizing the board alone to approve such a loan or guaranty to an officer, whether or not a director, or an employee benefit plan authorizing such a loan or guaranty to an officer, such a loan or guaranty or employee benefit plan may be approved by the board alone by a vote sufficient without counting the vote of any interested director or directors if the board determines that the loan or guaranty or plan may reasonably be expected to benefit the corporation [Corp. Code § 315(b)].

Also notwithstanding Corp. Code § 315(a), a corporation may advance money to a director or officer of the corporation or of its parent or any subsidiary for any expenses reasonably anticipated to be incurred in the performance of the duties of the director or officer, provided that in the absence of such advance the director or officer would be entitled to be reimbursed for such expenses by the corporation, its parent, or any subsidiary [Corp. Code § 315(d)].

[4] Premium on Life Insurance

The provisions of Corp. Code § 315(a) [§ 167.183[3][a]] do not apply to the payment of premiums in whole or in part by a corporation on a life insurance policy on the life of a director or officer so long as repayment to the corporation of the amount paid by it is secured by the proceeds of the policy and its cash surrender value [Corp. Code § 315(e)].

[5] Directors' Liability for Illegal Loan or Guaranty

Directors who approved the making of an illegal loan or guaranty without adhering to the standard of care mandated by Corp. Code § 309 are jointly and severally liable to the corporation for the amount of any loss suffered by the corporation as a result of the illegal loan or guaranty, but not exceeding the liabilities of the corporation owed to the nonconsenting creditors at the time of the distribution "and [sic: or]" the injury suffered by the nonconsenting shareholders, as the case may be [Corp. Code § 316(a), (d)]. A director who was present at the meeting but abstained when the vote was taken to approve the loan or guaranty is deemed to have approved making it [Corp. Code § 316(b)].

A director's liability is established only when all of the following facts are proved:

- The board, or a committee duly empowered to act on those matters, approved the making of a loan or guaranty which is prohibited by Corp. Code § 315(a) unless approved by the prescribed shareholder vote.

- The director in question voted to approve the loan or guaranty or was present at the meeting but abstained when the vote was taken to approve it.

- In so voting or abstaining, the director did not adhere to the standard of care mandated by Corp. Code § 309.

- The corporation suffered a loss as a result of making the loan or guaranty.

- The making of the loan or guaranty was not approved by the prescribed shareholder vote.

[6] Parties

Any shareholder at the time of the making of an illegal loan or guaranty, who has not consented to it, may sue the culpable directors in the name of the corporation to enforce their liability, without regard to the provisions of Corp. Code § 800 governing shareholders' derivative actions generally [Corp. Code § 316(c)].

Any creditor having a debt or claim that arose before the making of the illegal loan or guaranty, who has not consented to it, may also sue the culpable directors in the name of the corporation to enforce their liability, whether or not the creditor's claim has been reduced to judgment [Corp. Code § 316(c)]. A debt or claim may be deemed to have arisen before the making of the illegal loan or guaranty not only if it was due and payable at that time but also when it is based on a contractual obligation of the corporation existing at that time [cf. UMF Sys., Inc. v. Eltra Corp. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 753, 757-758, 132 Cal. Rptr. 129, 553 P.2d 225 (interpreting language of former Corp. Code § 826)]. In a creditor's action the directors' liability is limited to the liabilities of the corporation owed to nonconsenting creditors at the time of the violation "and [sic or]" the injury suffered by the nonconsenting shareholders, as the case may be [Corp. Code § 316(d)].

The action may be brought by any one or more of the holders of shares outstanding at the time of the making of the illegal loan or guaranty who have not consented to the corporate action [Corp. Code § 316(c)].

The corporation must be a party [see, e.g., Beyerbach v. Juno Oil Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 11, 27-28, 265 P.2d 1] , necessarily a defendant. When the culpable directors are no longer in control, shareholders may nevertheless sue on behalf of the corporation without appealing to the present board to sue (a necessary condition to ordinary shareholder derivative actions [see Corp. Code § 800]) because, in this case, they are specifically relieved of that burden [see Corp. Code § 316(c)].

[a] Contribution and Subrogation

Any director sued under Corp. Code § 316 may implead all other directors liable and may compel contribution, either in that action or in an independent action against directors not joined in that action [Corp. Code § 316(e)].

Directors liable under Corp. Code § 316 are entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the corporation against the person who received, that is, benefited from, the illegal loan or guaranty. Any such director may file a cross complaint against the person liable to him or her as a result of this subrogation or may proceed against that person in an independent action [Corp. Code § 316(f)].

For discussion and forms relating to these subjects, see Ch. 395, Parties , and Ch. 536, Subrogation , respectively; see also Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints .

[7] Limitation of Action

The action is limited by the three-year period of Code Civ. Proc. § 359 [Hoover v. Galbraith (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 519, 521-522, 102 Cal. Rptr. 733, 498 P.2d 981] .

[8] Attorney's Fees

If judgment is given for the plaintiff in a derivative action, the court may award the plaintiff a reasonable attorney's fee, payable (along with the plaintiff's costs) out of the fund recovered for the corporation or from other corporate funds, the award being a charge against the corporation rather than the individual defendants [see, e.g., Beyerbach v. Juno Oil Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 11, 19-20, 265 P.2d 1] . Since the action under Corp. Code § 316(c) is a derivative action, there appears to be no reason why the plaintiff may not apply for and receive an award of attorney's fees.

[9] Verification

Verification is not required, but verification of the complaint requires the defendant to file a verified answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 446] and precludes a general denial [Code Civ. Proc. § 413.30].

[10] Undertaking for Costs

In an ordinary shareholder's derivative action, the plaintiff can be compelled to furnish an undertaking for costs [see Corp. Code § 800(c)-(e)]. In an action governed by Corp. Code § 316, however, the cost-bond provisions of Corp. Code § 800 do not apply [Corp. Code § 316(c)].

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], DEFENDANT _____ [name] ALLEGES that he/she is not personally liable to plaintiff for any monetary damages incurred as a result of the actions alleged in the complaint because Article _____ [specify number and section, if applicable] of the Articles of Incorporation of _____ [name of corporation], adopted _____ [date], specifically _____ [eliminates or limits] the personal liability of a director for monetary damages for breach of duty to the corporation and its shareholders as set forth in *Corp. [2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense is for use in an answer to a complaint based on negligence for breach of a director's duty to the corporation or its shareholders, as set forth in Corp. Code § 309, when the corporation has eliminated or limited the personal liability of a director for monetary damages for breach of such a duty. The extent to which the articles of corporation may shield a director is limited by Corp. Code § 204(a)(10), and among other things, the defense does not apply when the action is based on *Corp. the above-entitled _____ [action or proceeding] because of such status, and is eligible for indemnification for his/her defense expenses under that section.

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, the attached declaration of _____ [name], the attached memorandum of points and authorities, the records and file herein, and such evidence as may be presented at the hearing.

Attorney for Defendant

CAUTION:
A memorandum must accompany the notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

[2] Use of Form

This notice of motion is for use by a corporate agent [see Corp. Code § 317(a)] claiming that he or she is entitled to indemnity from the corporation for defense expenses incurred in an action or proceeding in which he or she was sued because of being an agent of the corporation and in which the corporation is a party as of the time of entry of the judgment.

With appropriate modification, this form may be used by the attorney or any other person rendering services in connection with the defense to seek an order compelling or authorizing the corporation to provide indemnity, or by the corporation to seek an order authorizing it to provide indemnity [see Corp. Code § 317(e)(4)].

[3] Criminal Proceedings

It is not clear whether a motion for an order compelling or authorizing a corporation to indemnify an agent for defense expenses [see Corp. Code § 317] may be made in a criminal proceeding. There are no cases deciding the point under the 1975 revision of the General Corporation Law. It was decided under the former law [former Corp. Code § 830] that such a motion was improper in a criminal proceeding [P.S. & S., Inc. v. Superior Court (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 354, 359-360, 94 Cal. Rptr. 738] .

[4] Timing of Motion

The statute provides that an order directing the corporation to provide indemnity for expenses incurred in a judicial (as distinguished from an administrative or investigative) proceeding may be issued by the court "in which such proceeding is or was pending" [Corp. Code § 317(e)(4)]. This language ("or was pending") suggests that the court's power to issue the order continues indefinitely. However, when a judgment becomes final, the court which rendered it loses jurisdiction of the cause except to the extent that a statute continues the court's jurisdiction for a specific purpose. Thus, the probable meaning of the quoted language, as respects timing of the motion, is that the motion may be made after, as well as before, the judgment is entered, as long as the court retains jurisdiction of the cause--that is, ordinarily, until the judgment becomes final. Thereafter, a claimant for indemnification would be obliged to begin a new action [see § 167.203].

[5] Attorney's Fees and Costs

Attorney's fees and costs incurred by the moving party in obtaining an order compelling or authorizing the corporation to provide indemnity are also subject to indemnity [see Corp. Code § 317(a)].

Judge of the _____ Court

[2] Use of Form

The order to show cause is for use by a corporate "agent" [see Corp. Code § 317(a)] claiming that he or she is entitled to have, or should have, indemnity from the corporation for defense expenses incurred in a civil action or proceeding in which he or she was sued because of being an agent of the corporation but in which the corporation is not a party at the time of entry of the judgment. The form may also be used by the attorney or any other person rendering services in connection with the defense, if the motion is made by the attorney or such other person [see Corp. Code § 317(e)(3)].

[3] Necessity for Personal Jurisdiction of Corporation

An order directing the corporation to provide indemnity will not be effective unless the court has obtained personal jurisdiction of the corporation. Where the corporation is not already a party to the action or proceeding, it will be necessary to obtain jurisdiction by appropriate service of process [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1917 ("The jurisdiction sufficient to sustain a record is jurisdiction over the cause, [and] over the parties ... ."); cf. Tiffany Records, Inc. v. M.B. Krupp Distributors, Inc. (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 610, 615, 81 Cal. Rptr. 320 ("Jurisdiction over the parties is necessary to the validity of the judgments in personam ... sought here by appellants"; action for money due on account and damages)].

One method of obtaining the necessary jurisdiction is to begin a new action and serve a summons on the corporation. But the statute [Corp. Code § 317] contemplates that the added expense and delay involved in a new action will be avoided by moving for an order in the action or proceeding in which the expenses subject to indemnification were incurred. An order to show cause appears to be the appropriate process by which jurisdiction is obtained, since it can be used for that purpose in other contexts.

The order to show cause must be served on the corporation (not on the corporation's attorney) in the manner of serving a summons; and if the corporation fails to appear at the hearing after being duly served, it will be necessary to present (for filing) a proof of service before going ahead with the hearing. For discussion of service of process and forms for proof of service, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

[4] Applicable Standard of Conduct

The applicable standard of conduct (the sixth finding) varies depending on the nature of the action or proceeding [see Corp. Code § 317(b), (c); see § 167.81[2]].

§ 168.10 Governing Statutes

Shareholder's derivative actions are governed generally by Corp. Code § 800. Corp. Code § 800 was enacted in 1975 as part of the repeal and reenactment of the General Corporation Law and is in most respects identical to its predecessor, former Corp. Code § 834. Former Corp. Code § 834 applied to derivative actions that were pending on January 1, 1977, the effective date of the present General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 2312].

A derivative action by a shareholder of a savings and loan association is governed by Fin. Code § 6052.

14-168 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 168.12

§ 168.12 When Shareholder Suit Is Derivative

A derivative suit is essentially an equitable action [Rosenfeld v. Zimmer (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 719, 722, 254 P.2d 137] in which the shareholder filing the action represents the corporation which must itself have a cause of action [McDermott v. Bear Film Co. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 607, 611, 33 Cal. Rptr. 486] . A shareholder's derivative suit seeks to recover for the benefit of the corporation and its whole body of shareholders when injury is caused to the corporation that may not otherwise be redressed because of the failure of the corporation to act. Thus, the action is derivative if the gravamen of the complaint is injury to the corporation or to the whole body of its stock and property without any severance or distribution among individual holders, or if the complaint seeks to recover assets for the corporation or to prevent the dissipation of its assets. Therefore, although the corporation is made a defendant in a derivative suit, the corporation nevertheless is the real plaintiff and it alone benefits from the decree; the stockholders derive no benefit except the indirect benefit resulting from a realization on the corporation's assets [Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 106-107, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464] .

For example, in an action for breach of fiduciary duty arising from alleged management improprieties and the attendant decline in the corporation's stock value, the gravamen of the complaint was harm to the corporation and thus the action was a derivative action that the plaintiff lacked standing to pursue [Schuster v. Gardner (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 305, 309, 312-315, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468 (affirming judgment of dismissal entered after trial court sustained demurrers without leave to amend)]. Similarly, in a case in which plaintiffs' allegations regarding mismanagement amounted to a claim of injury to the corporation itself, the court of appeal held that the trial court properly dismissed the shareholders' complaints [Avikian v. WTC Financial Corp. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 1115-1117, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243] . Furthermore, in a case in which causes of action for fraudulent transfer of a company's assets were brought by members of LLC, the court held that the action could be brought only as a derivative action on behalf of the LLC [Paclink Communications International, Inc. v. Superior Court (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 958, 964-965, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436] .

Thus, two essential elements must exist to provide a basis for a derivative action. The first element is an injury to the corporation or to the whole body of its stockholders, and the second element is the derivative aspect of the cause of action which arises because the responsible official has failed or refused to act [Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 255, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280] .

§ 168.13 When Shareholder Suit Is Nonderivative

A shareholder's suit is nonderivative or individual when it is brought to enforce a right against the corporation which the stockholder possesses as an individual. The individual wrong necessary to support a suit by a shareholder need not be unique to the shareholder but may affect a substantial number of shareholders. If the injury is not incidental to an injury to the corporation, an individual cause of action exists [Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 107-108, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 ; see Vega v. Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 282, 296-297, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 26 (plaintiff's action was individual, not derivative, because in alleging defendant had deceived him into exchanging valuable stock in acquired corporation for worthless stock in acquiring corporation, he sought recovery for injury to himself); Denevi v. LGCC (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1223, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 276 (LLC member entitled to bring individual claim for fraudulent representations that induced him to transfer real estate purchase rights to LLC, notwithstanding facts that he had already successfully prosecuted derivative claim on behalf of LLC and damages awards in the two suits might be overlapping or duplicative); see also Jara v. Suprema Meats, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1258, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187 (minority shareholder's claim that majority stockholders paid themselves excessive compensation, thus depriving him of his proportionate share of corporate profits, came "within the scope of allowable individual actions"); Nelson v. Anderson (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 111, 124-126, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 753 (minority shareholder as individual had no standing to bring action for breach of fiduciary duty against majority shareholder, but should have brought derivative action, when all acts allegedly causing injury constituted misfeasance in managing corporate business)]. For a shareholder to obtain a personal right of action there must be relations between him or her and the defendant independent of those which the shareholder derives through his or her interest in the corporate assets and business [Shenberg v. DeGarmo (1943) 61 Cal. App. 2d 326, 333, 143 P.2d 74] .

§ 168.14 Distinction Between Derivative and Nonderivative Suits

The significance of the distinction between derivative and nonderivative shareholder suits is that the conditions and security requirements prescribed by Corp. Code § 800 apply exclusively to the former [Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 501-503, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896 (writ of prohibition may be used to restrain trial court from requiring plaintiff to post security in nonderivative suit)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-168 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 168.15

§ 168.15 Parties

[1] Plaintiff Must Be Shareholder

The derivative action provisions of Corp. Code § 800 apply to actions maintained in the right of any domestic or foreign corporation by any holder of shares or voting trust certificates. In order to sue derivatively, the plaintiff must allege in the complaint that he or she was a shareholder, of record or beneficially, or the holder of voting trust certificates at the time of the transaction or any part of the transaction of which plaintiff complains, or that plaintiff's shares or voting trust certificates thereafter devolved on plaintiff by operation of law from a holder who was a holder at the time of the transaction or any part of the transaction of which plaintiff complains [Corp. Code § 800(b) see, e.g., Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 17, 108 P.2d 906 (if deceased shareholder met contemporaneous-ownership requirement before dying, then legal representative of shareholder's estate has standing to sue until distribution of shares to heirs and legatees, who thereupon acquire standing to sue)]. Although equitable ownership sometimes may confer standing on a plaintiff to sue derivatively [see discussion, below], a holder of an option to buy stock is not an equitable shareholder of the corporation for purposes of Corp. Code § 800(b)(1) and does not have standing to sue derivatively on a cause of action arising before the option is converted into actual ownership of stock [Daly v. Yessne (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 52, 61, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 420] .

Any shareholder who does not meet the contemporaneous ownership requirement may nevertheless be allowed in the discretion of the court to maintain a derivative action on a preliminary showing to, and determination by, the court, by motion and after a hearing, at which the court will consider the evidence, by affidavit or testimony, as it deems material, that all of the following conditions have been satisfied [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)]:

- There is a strong prima facie case in favor of the claim asserted on behalf of the corporation.
- No other similar action has been, or is likely to be, instituted.
- The plaintiff acquired the shares before there was disclosure to the public or the plaintiff of the wrongdoing of which plaintiff complains.

- Unless the action can be maintained, the defendant may retain a gain derived from defendant's willful breach of a fiduciary duty.

- The requested relief will not result in unjust enrichment of the corporation or any shareholder of the corporation.

Since Corp. Code § 800(b)(1) permits a shareholder who was a beneficial owner at the time of the wrong to maintain a derivative action, shareholders who are not record shareholders, for example, those whose shares are held in "street name," are entitled to maintain a derivative action.

The concept of standing based on the beneficial ownership of shares extends also to a plaintiff who alleges that, at the critical time, the plaintiff (or a predecessor in interest) had a community property interest in shares of the corporation [Patrick v. Alacer Corp. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1011-1013, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 642].

[2] Loss of Shareholder Status

Although Corp. Code § 800(b) does not explicitly deal with the question, the California Supreme Court has elected to follow the majority rule and, applying the basic principles that govern corporation law and shareholder litigation, hold that Corp. Code § 800(b) is properly construed as containing a continuous ownership requirement. That is, California law generally requires a plaintiff in a shareholder's derivative action to maintain continuous stock ownership throughout the pendency of the litigation. Consequently, when the shareholder relationship is terminated, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, the derivative-action plaintiff loses standing [Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1115, 1119, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184]. Under this rule, for example, a derivative plaintiff who ceases to be a stockholder by reason of a merger ordinarily loses standing to continue the litigation, although equitable considerations may warrant an exception to the continuous ownership requirement if the merger itself is used to wrongfully deprive the plaintiff of standing, or if the merger is merely a reorganization that does not affect the plaintiff's ownership [Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1115, 1119, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 ; e.g., Haro v. Ibarra (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 823, 837, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 340 (former shareholders of professional corporation presented equitable considerations that warranted exception to continuous ownership requirement, since complaint alleged that plaintiffs' shares were forfeited because plaintiffs refused to pay assessments imposed by controlling shareholders who were not required to pay assessments and did not suffer their shares to be forfeited)].

For a form for a notice of motion for dismissal of a derivative action based on the plaintiff's loss of shareholder status, see § 168.74; and for a form for a judgment of dismissal on that ground, see § 168.75.

[3] Corporation Must Be Party

The corporation is an indispensable party to a derivative action [Beyerbach v. Juno Oil Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 11, 27-28, 265 P.2d 1 (decided prior to enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 389, dealing with compulsory joinder of parties)] and must be made a defendant on the ground that its consent to sue as plaintiff could not be obtained [Code Civ. Proc. § 382]. Dismissal of the corporation at any stage in a derivative action results in a discontinuance of the action against all other defendants for lack of jurisdiction [Beyerbach v. Juno Oil Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 11, 27-28, 265 P.2d 1] .

The nominal defendant corporation, being actually interested as a reluctant plaintiff, generally may not defend a derivative action filed on its behalf. The corporation may only assert defenses contesting the plaintiff's right or decision to bring suit; for example, the corporation may assert the plaintiff's lack of standing [see § 168.15[1]] or the "special litigation committee" defense [see § 168.19]. The corporation has no ground to challenge the merits of a derivative claim filed on its behalf and from which it stands to benefit [Patrick v. Alacer Corp. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1005, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 642 (corporation could demur on ground that plaintiff lacked standing but not any other ground)]. To put this another way: because any defense on the merits would benefit only the real defendants (for instance, culpable directors), it follows that if the real defendants were allowed to rely on the corporation to assert their defenses on the merits, the effect would be to shift the burden and cost of their defense to the corporation, which is the party they are alleged to have harmed [Patrick v. Alacer Corp. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1008, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 642 (trial court erred not merely in sustaining but even in entertaining, rather than striking, corporation's demurrer on all grounds except plaintiff's lack of standing)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 168.16 Demand on Board of Directors

The plaintiff in a derivative action must allege in the complaint with particularity his or her efforts to secure from the board such action as desired, or the reasons for not having made such an effort, and allege further that plaintiff has either informed the corporation or the board in writing of the ultimate facts of each cause of action against each defendant or delivered to the corporation or the board a true copy of the complaint which plaintiff proposes to file [Corp. Code § 800(b)(2); see Bader v. Anderson (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 775, 796, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 821 (no exception to demand requirement in instances in which underlying wrong concerns alleged misrepresentations or omissions in proxy statement)].

The plaintiff need not plead a demand and a refusal to act on the part of the board of directors if the facts that he or she alleges demonstrate that such a demand would have been futile [Koshaba v. Koshaba (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 302, 308, 132 P.2d 854] . No demand is necessary when conspiracy, fraud, or criminal conduct of the defendants is charged [Reed v. Norman (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 892, 898, 314 P.2d 204] . However, the conclusionary allegation "that further demand as stockholder would be futile" would not appear to meet the requirements of the statute [Shields v. Singleton (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 1621-1622, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459 ; Fairchild v. Bank of America (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 252, 259, 13 Cal. Rptr. 491] . The test for proving demand futility is whether the facts show a reasonable doubt that (1) the directors are disinterested and independent, and (2) the challenged transaction was otherwise the product of a valid exercise of business judgment [Oakland Raiders v. National Football League (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 572, 587, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 255] .

The demand futility rule is not a mere pleading requirement that drops out of the case once a derivative suit survives a demurrer [Oakland Raiders v. National Football League (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 572, 584-586, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 255 (rejecting contention that trial court erred by considering demand futility as element of derivative claims that is subject to proof)].

The following actions may be brought by shareholders in the name of the corporation without regard to the derivative suit requirements of Corp. Code § 800:

- Suits by one or more "holders of shares outstanding" at the time of any loan or guarantee prohibited by Corp. Code § 315 against any directors liable for approving those loans or guarantees if the holder has not consented to the action of the directors [Corp. Code § 316(c)(3)].

- Suits to enforce the liability of shareholders who have received distributions which violate the liquidation and dividend preferences of preferred shareholders who held shares outstanding at the time of the unlawful distribution [Corp. Code § 506(b)(2)].

- Depending upon the construction given Corp. Code § 316(c) (dealing with directors' liability for distributions, loans, and guarantees), it would also seem that suits to enforce the liability of directors for distributions described immediately above may be brought without regard to the derivative suit requirements of Corp. Code § 800 [Corp. Code § 316(c)(1)].

The provisions of the present General Corporation Law generally do not apply to savings and loan associations [see Corp. Code § 102]. Chapter 8, respecting derivative actions in the right of a corporation, does apply, however, to all domestic corporations and applies to savings and loan associations except to the extent that other laws applicable to them supersede the General Corporation Law. Under Fin. Code § 6052, the requirements for instituting or maintaining an action are the same as under Corp. Code § 800 except that Fin. Code § 6052 adds the requirement that the Savings and Loan Commissioner must have determined, after a hearing upon at least 20 days written notice to the association and each of its directors, that the action (1) is proposed in good faith and (2) is reasonably likely to benefit the association and its stockholders [*Fin. PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 168.19 Discretionary Power of Board of Directors or Litigation Committee

The management of a corporation owes a duty to its stockholders to take proper steps to enforce all claims which the corporation may have. When management fails to perform this duty, the stockholders have the right to do so by derivative suit [Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 107, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464] . Nevertheless, the directors have the same discretion with respect to the prosecution of claims on behalf of the corporation as they have in other business matters. A derivative action may not be maintained when the board of directors has acted in good faith within the scope of its discretionary power and reasonably believes its refusal to commence an action is good business judgment in the best interest of the corporation [Findley v. Garrett (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 166, 174, 240 P.2d 421] .

The rule regarding the board's discretion is an application of the business judgment rule, which is codified by Corp. Code § 309. The business judgment rule is premised on the notion that those to whom the management of the corporation has been entrusted, and not the courts, are best able to judge whether a particular transaction is one that is helpful to the conduct of the corporate affairs or expedient for the attainment of corporate purposes. The business judgment rule establishes a presumption that director's actions are based on sound business judgment [Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1040, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; but see Everest Investors 8 v. McNeil Partners (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 411, 429-432, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 31 (triable issues of fact existed regarding general partner's business judgment rule defense in limited partners' action for breach of fiduciary duty in merger transaction)].

The business judgment rule permits a corporation to appoint a special litigation committee to decide whether the maintenance of a shareholder's derivative suit is in the corporation's best interests [Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1040, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868] . If the committee decides that the suit should be dismissed, its procedural options are demurrer, motion to dismiss, or motion for summary judgment [Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1041, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868] . The disinterested independence and good faith of the committee and the appropriateness and sufficiency of the investigative techniques chosen and pursued by the committee are subject to judicial review [Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1041-1042, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868] . However, if the committee proceeds by motion for summary judgment, traditional rules apply. The court cannot weigh any evidence regarding the aforementioned issues. If a triable issue of fact is raised regarding the disinterested independence or good faith of the committee or the appropriateness or sufficiency of the investigative techniques chosen and pursued by the committee, the shareholders are entitled to a trial on those issues [Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1041-1044, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; see Desaigoudar v. Meyercord (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 173, 179, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 408 (when asserted in connection with summary judgment motion, material issues of fact relevant to special litigation committee defense are independence of committee members and their good faith; neither merits of claim nor substance of committee's decision to reject claim are subject to judicial review at that stage)].

The "special litigation committee defense" has been held to be legally valid in California. Furthermore, it may be used by a homeowners association. The defense must be allowed whenever a committee of disinterested directors acting in good faith has determined that a derivative action is not in the best interests of the corporation--if possible on motion, but if necessary in a full trial [Finley v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1161-1163, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 128 (finding that trial court did not abuse its discretion by bifurcating the trial on the defense)].

For further discussion of the business judgment rule, see § 167.30 et seq..

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-168 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 168.20

§ 168.20 Court Control of Litigation

A shareholder bringing a derivative suit on behalf of the corporation does so as a fiduciary similar to a guardian ad litem [Whitten v. Dabney (1915) 171 Cal. 621, 630-632, 154 P. 312 ; see also Hogan v. Ingold (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 802, 809-812, 243 P.2d 1] . Thus the plaintiff is not entitled to voluntarily dismiss the action without the consent of the trial court [Ensher v. Ensher, Alexander & Barsoom (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 407, 410, 9 Cal. Rptr. 732 ; Spellacy v. Superior Court (1937) 23 Cal. App. 2d 142, 147-148, 72 P.2d 262] , nor may he or she enter into any effective settlement with the defendants until, after scrutiny and examination, the court determines that the corporation's rights are fully protected [Whitten v. Dabney (1915) 171 Cal. 621, 632, 154 P. 312] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-168 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 168.21

§ 168.21 Motion for Security

[1] In General

In any derivative action, at any time within 30 days after service of summons on the corporation or on any defendant who is or was an officer or director of the corporation at the time of the acts complained of, the corporation or the defendant may move the court for an order, upon notice and hearing, requiring the plaintiff to furnish security. The motion should be based on one or both of the following grounds [Corp. Code § 800(c)]:

- That there is no reasonable possibility that the prosecution of the cause of action alleged in the complaint against the moving party will benefit the corporation or its shareholders; and/or

- That the moving party, if other than the corporation, did not participate in the transaction complained of in any capacity.

In making a determination as to whether or not there is a reasonable possibility that the prosecution of an action will benefit the corporation, the reviewing court must evaluate the possible defenses which plaintiffs would have to overcome before they could prevail at a trial [Marble v. Latchford Glass Co. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 171, 175, 22 Cal. Rptr. 789] .

[2] Extension of Time to File Motion

The court, on application of the corporation or any defendant, may, for good cause shown, extend the 30-day period for an additional period or periods not exceeding 60 days [Corp. Code § 800(c)].

In addition, the parties themselves may generally stipulate to an extension of time in which to file motions and pleadings, and such a stipulation will suffice to extend the time allowed to file a motion for security [see Consolidated Dock & Storage Co. v. Superior Court (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 949, 952, 96 Cal. Rptr. 254] .

[3] Hearing

At the hearing on any motion pursuant to Corp. Code § 800(c), the court must consider any evidence, written or oral, by witnesses or affidavit, that may be material (1) to the ground or grounds on which the motion is based, or (2) to a determination of the probable reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, that the corporation and the moving party will incur in the defense of the action [Corp. Code § 800(d)].

The burden of proof is on the party moving for security to show by a preponderance of the evidence, either that there is no fair likelihood of benefit to the corporation or its security holders or that he or she did not participate in the transaction complained of [Wood v. Gordon (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 374, 376, 246 P.2d 84] .

[4] Ruling by Court Not Determination on Merits

A ruling by the court on the motion for security is not a determination of any issue in the action or of the merits thereof [Corp. Code § 800(d)].

[5] Fixing Nature and Amount of Security

If the court determines, after hearing the evidence adduced by the parties, that the moving party has established a probability in support of any of the grounds on which the motion is based, the court must fix the nature and amount of security, not to exceed $50,000, to be furnished by the plaintiff for reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees [see § 168.22], which the moving party and the corporation may incur in connection with the action, including expenses for which the corporation may become liable pursuant to Corp. Code § 317 (indemnification by the corporation of corporate agents for expenses incurred in defense of certain proceedings) [Corp. Code § 800(d)]. The aggregate amount of security that a plaintiff may be required to provide pursuant to Corp. Code § 800 is limited to $50,000 as to all moving parties [Hale v. Southern California IPA Medical Group (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 919, 927-928, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 773 (examining legislative history of Corp. Code § 800 and concluding that trial court erred in ordering plaintiff in derivative action against corporation and five directors to post six bonds for total of $250,000)].

Thereafter, the court, on its own motion or on a party's noticed motion supported by affidavit, may determine that the bond is or has become insufficient or is excessive, and may order that the amount of the bond be increased or decreased [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 996.010, 996.030].

If the court determines that a bond is insufficient, a sufficient bond must be given within the time required by the court order, or the court will on ex parte motion order that all rights obtained by giving the original bond immediately cease [Code Civ. Proc. § 996.010(d)].

The beneficiary may also object by noticed motion to the bond on the ground that the sureties are insufficient or the amount of the bond is insufficient. The motion must be made within 10 days after being served with a copy of the bond [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 995.920, 995.930]. For discussion and forms relating to objections to bonds, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings .

[6] Effect of Failure to Furnish Security

If the court, upon a motion to furnish security, determines that security must be furnished by the plaintiff as to any one or more defendants, the action must be dismissed as to that defendant or defendants, unless plaintiff furnishes the security required within a reasonable time fixed by the court [Corp. Code § 800(d)].

[7] Voluntary Compliance With Security Requirements

If the plaintiff, either before or after a motion is made pursuant to Corp. Code § 800(c) or any order or determination pursuant to the motion, posts a bond in the aggregate amount of $50,000 to secure the reasonable expenses of the parties entitled to make the motion, the plaintiff has complied with the requirements of Corp. Code § 800 and with any order for a bond made, and any such motion then pending must be dismissed and no further or additional bond or other security will be required [Corp. Code § 800(e)].

[8] Enforcement of Liability on Bond

Liability on a bond given as security in a shareholder's derivative action may be enforced on noticed motion without the necessity of an independent action [Code Civ. Proc. § 996.440(a)]. The motion cannot be made until after entry of the final judgment in the action and after the time for appeal has expired or, if an appeal is taken, until after the appeal is finally determined [Code Civ. Proc. § 996.440(b)].

[9] Stay of Action When Motion for Security Is Filed

If a motion is filed pursuant to Corp. Code § 800(c), no pleadings need be filed by the corporation or any other defendant and the prosecution of the action will be stayed until 10 days after the motion has been disposed of [Corp. Code § 800(f)].

Chapter 168 CORPORATIONS: DERIVATIVE ACTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-168 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 168.22

§ 168.22 Attorney's Fees

Ordinarily a successful litigant is not entitled to attorney's fees as costs in the absence of special statutory authorization [Freeman v. Goldberg (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 622, 625-626, 12 Cal. Rptr. 668, 361 P.2d 244]. Corp. Code § 800 [see § 168.21] is merely a security statute and does not provide for a prevailing defendant's recovery of attorney's fees and costs except by recourse to the bond that is posted pursuant to the statute, until the full amount of the bond has been exhausted. In order to recover attorney's fees or costs independently of the bond, or beyond the amount of the bond, a prevailing defendant would have to look to case law and statutory authority other than Corp. Code § 800 [West Hills Farms, Inc. v. RCO Ag Credit, Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 710, 719, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 458].

It is a well-established doctrine of equity jurisprudence that when a common fund exists to which a number of persons are entitled and in their interest successful litigation is maintained for its preservation and protection, an allowance of counsel fees may properly be made from that fund. By this means all of the beneficiaries of the fund pay their share of the expense necessary to make it available to them [Winslow v. Harold G. Ferguson Corp. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 274, 277, 153 P.2d 714] . If the successful party is a defendant against whom the case was dismissed, attorney's fees would only be payable out of any security posted under Corp. Code § 800(d). If no security was posted or sought, such a successful defendant cannot recover attorney's fees [Alcott v. M.E.V. Corp. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 797, 799-800, 238 Cal. Rptr. 520] . If security was voluntarily posted [see Corp. Code § 800(e); 168.21[7]], the defendant may seek to enforce the security as the prevailing party at the conclusion of the case without having to meet retrospectively the normal statutory requirement [see Corp. Code § 800(c)(1); § 168.21[1]] that, to force the posting of security, a defendant must show that the derivative suit has no reasonable possibility of benefitting the corporation or shareholders [Donner Management Co. v. Schaffer (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1296, 1305-1306, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 534 (as practical matter, defendant was prevailing party after plaintiff dismissed derivative suit without prejudice in view of board-appointed litigation committee's conclusion that maintaining suit was not in corporation's interest)].

Under the "substantial benefit" rule, a variant of the common fund doctrine, the successful plaintiff in a stockholder's derivative action may be awarded attorney's fees against the corporation if the latter received "substantial benefits" from the litigation, even though the benefits were not pecuniary and the action had not produced a fund from which they might be paid. Under the California rule, (1) an award of attorney's fees to a successful plaintiff may properly be measured by, and paid from, a common fund when his or her derivative action on behalf of a corporation has recovered or protected a fund in fact; but (2) the existence of a fund is not a prerequisite of the award itself [Fletcher v. A.J. Indus., Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 313, 320-322, 72 Cal. Rptr. 146] .

The substantial benefit theory is not extended to successful defendants on the theory of reciprocity [Alcott v. M.E.V. Corp. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 797, 800-801, 238 Cal. Rptr. 520] . The trial court has a duty to review an agreement to pay attorney's fees negotiated as part of the settlement of a shareholder derivative suit, but unlike the obligation of a court when fashioning a fee award, the court's task is simply to determine if the negotiated fee is fair and reasonable. The negotiated fee need not perfectly duplicate the fees that would be awarded under the "substantial benefit doctrine" [Robbins v. Alibrandi (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 438, 443-444, 449, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 387 (reversing order approving settlement of attorney fees and remanding to trial court to determine if negotiated fee was fair and reasonable settlement of attorney's claim for fees)].

When the gravamen of a derivative action is breach of contract, and the contract contains an attorney's fee provision, Civ. Code § 1717 governs the rights of parties to attorney's fees, and the bond provided for in Corp. Code § 800 need not be applied [Brusso v. Running Springs Country Club, Inc. (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 92, 103-108, 278 Cal. Rptr. 758 (majority had purchased country club shares from minority; purchase and sale agreement and lease both contained attorney's fees provision)]. In a derivative action for breach of contract, when the contract contains an attorney's fee provision, even the nonsignatory plaintiffs can be liable for the payment of attorney's fees to signing defendants if they would have been entitled to attorney's fees under the substantial benefit doctrine had they prevailed [Brusso v. Running Springs Country Club, Inc. (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 92, 109-111, 278 Cal. Rptr. 758] .

§ 168.23 Essential Allegations

A complaint in a shareholder's derivative suit should allege facts showing all of the following:

- That plaintiff was a shareholder, of record or beneficially, or the holder of voting trust certificates at the time of the transaction or any part of the transaction of which plaintiff complains, or that plaintiff's shares or voting trust certificates thereafter devolved upon plaintiff by operation of law from a holder who was a holder at the time of the transaction or any part of the transaction complained of; provided, however, that any shareholder who does not meet those requirements may nevertheless be allowed in the discretion of the court to maintain the action on a preliminary showing to, and determination by, the court, by motion and after a hearing, at which the court may consider any evidence, by affidavit or testimony, that it deems material, that [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)]:

    - There is a strong prima facie case in favor of the claim asserted on behalf of the corporation;

    - No other similar action has been, or is likely to be, instituted;

    - The plaintiff acquired the shares before there was disclosure to the public or the plaintiff of the wrongdoing of which plaintiff complains;

    - Unless the action can be maintained, the defendant may retain a gain derived from defendant's willful breach of a fiduciary duty; and

    - The requested relief will not result in unjust enrichment of the corporation or any shareholder of the corporation (in this case, plaintiff should allege that he or she is a shareholder).

- The plaintiff's efforts to secure from the board such action as the plaintiff desires, or the reasons for not having made such an effort, and that he or she has either informed the corporation or the board in writing of the ultimate facts of each cause of action against each defendant or delivered to the corporation or the board a true copy of the complaint which he or she proposes to file [Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)].

- A cause of action in the right of the corporation [see Corp. Code § 800(b); see also Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 106-107, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 ; McDermott v. Bear Film Co. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 607, 611, 33 Cal. Rptr. 486] .

[1] Actions by Shareholders

[a] Derivative

Shareholder's action is derivative if gravamen of complaint is injury to corporation or to whole body of its stock or property without any severance or distribution among individual holders, or if the complaint seeks to recover assets for corporation or to prevent the dissipation of its assets. Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 106-107, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 ; Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 453, 289 P.2d 466 ; Sutter v. General Petroleum Corp. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 525, 530, 170 P.2d 898

In shareholder's derivative suit, cause of action belongs to corporation and not to shareholder bringing action. Melancon v. Superior Court (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 698, 708, 268 P.2d 1050

In action for breach of fiduciary duty arising from alleged management improprieties and attendant decline in stock value, gravamen of complaint was harm to corporation and thus action was derivative action that plaintiff lacked standing to pursue; judgment of dismissal entered after trial court sustained demurrers without leave to amend affirmed. Schuster v. Gardner (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 305, 309, 312-315, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468

Derivative plaintiff in action against securities brokerage was bound by arbitration clause in client agreement executed by corporation and brokerage; shareholder in derivative action is standing in shoes of corporation, and dispute fell with terms of arbitration clause. Frederick v. First Union Securities, Inc. (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 694, 696-697, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 774

When appellants' core claim was that defendants mismanaged corporation and entered into self-serving deals to sell its assets to third parties, trial court properly dismissed complaints. Avikian v. WTC Financial Corp. (2002) 98 Cal. App 4th 1108, 1115-1117, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243

Members of LLC, who hold no direct ownership in company's assets, improperly pleaded causes of action for fraudulent transfer; injury was to company itself and action could only be brought as derivative action on behalf of LLC. Paclink Communications International, Inc. v. Superior Court (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 958, 964-965, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436

Minority shareholder as individual had no standing to bring action for breach of fiduciary duty against majority shareholder, but should have brought derivative action on behalf of corporation of which the two were sole shareholders; because all acts alleged to have caused individual's injury amounted to alleged misfeasance or negligence in managing corporation's business, causing business to be total failure, any obligations violated were duties owed directly and immediately to corporation. Nelson v. Anderson (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 111, 124-126, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 753

Secret profit to director is recoverable by derivative suit; officer and director who knowingly approved and participated in transaction is liable for loss suffered by corporation even though he or she personally received no consideration. Burt v. Irvine Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 851, 47 Cal. Rptr. 392

Shareholder's right to sue directors or wrongdoers when ultra vires, fraudulent, or illegal transaction has been consummated and wrong done to corporation is derivative and not primary, since any recovery must go to corporation for benefit of all stockholders. Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 254-255, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280

[b] Nonderivative

Stockholder's individual suit is suit to enforce right against corporation which stockholder possesses as individual; individual wrong necessary to support suit is not required to be unique to that plaintiff but may affect substantial number of shareholders. Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 107, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 ; Crain v. Electronic Memories & Magnetics Corp. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 509, 521-522, 123 Cal. Rptr. 419

Sole minority shareholder of subsidiary corporation who brought action against parent corporation and directors of subsidiary for allocating entire state and federal tax savings resulting from consolidated tax return to parent corporation properly stated causes of action in his individual capacity, rather than in derivative capacity, since he was seeking redress for injuries as sole minority shareholder rather than for injury to subsidiary. Smith v. Tele-Communication, Inc. (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 338, 342-343, 184 Cal. Rptr. 571

[2] Appellate Court's Review of Trial Court Decision

In determining whether trial judge abused discretion in deciding there was no reasonable possibility that prosecution of derivative suit would benefit corporation, appellate court is required to evaluate possible defenses plaintiffs would have to overcome at trial in order to prevail. Marble v. Latchford Glass Co. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 171, 175, 22 Cal. Rptr. 789

[3] Attorney's Fees

Trial court has duty to review agreement to pay attorney fees negotiated as part of settlement of shareholder derivative suit; unlike obligation of court when fashioning fee award, court's task is to determine if negotiated fee is fair and reasonable; negotiated fee need not perfectly duplicate fees that would be awarded under "substantial benefit doctrine." Robbins v. Alibrandi (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 438, 443-444, 449, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 387

[5] Defenses

"Special litigation committee defense" must be allowed whenever committee of disinterested directors acting in good faith has determined that derivative action is not in best interests of corporation--if possible on motion, but if necessary in full trial; defense can apply to homeowners association. Finley v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1161-1163, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 128

Doctrine of corporate ratification is not applicable in shareholder derivative actions in which shareholders, not corporation directly, claim breach of fiduciary duty by directors in approving contract or transaction. Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1274, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16,72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184

Shareholder ratification [Corp. Code § 310(a)(1)] is no defense to allegation in derivative action that directors breached their fiduciary duty in approving agreements; Corp. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16,72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184

[6] Demand on Corporation

State law governs "demand" requirements in federal derivative action; federal court may not require demand if it would be excused as futile under state law. Kamen v. Kemper Financial Services, Inc. (1991) 500 U.S. 90, 108-109, 111 S. Ct. 1711, 114 L. Ed. 2d 152 (action under Investment Securities Act of 1940, 15 U.S.C. § 80a-1 et seq., remanded for determination whether plaintiff had adequately pleaded futility)

General rule that plaintiff in derivative action must plead demand on, and refusal by, directors to act, but demand and refusal are not required to be alleged if facts pleaded demonstrate it would have been futile. Reed v. Norman (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 892, 898, 314 P.2d 204 ; Pourroy v. Gardner (1932) 122 Cal. App. 521, 526 ; see also Wickersham v. Crittenden (1895) 106 Cal. 329, 331, 39 P. 603 ; *Ashton v. When demand on board of directors was made and board was dominated by controlling shareholder, waiting for formal refusal before bringing derivative action was unnecessary because futile. Koshaba v. Koshaba (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 302, 308, 132 P.2d 854

[7] Equitable Action

Stockholders' derivative suit is equitable action to which doctrine of unclean hands applies. Rosenfeld v. Zimmer (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 719, 722, 254 P.2d 137

Corporation is indispensable party to shareholder's derivative action; dismissal of action against corporation at any stage of proceeding results in discontinuance of action as to all other defendants for lack of jurisdiction. Beyerbach v. Juno Oil Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 11, 28, 265 P.2d 1 (decided prior to 1972 amendment of Code Civ. Proc. § 389)

Duty of plaintiff in derivative suit is analogous to duty of volunteer rescuer in that plaintiff's action must not increase harm or risk of harm to corporation or other shareholders. Heckmann v. Ahmanson (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 119, 132-133, 214 Cal. Rptr. 177

Shareholders who commenced derivative suit as part of their takeover strategy and later settled suit and sold their shares to corporation breached their fiduciary duty; imposition of constructive trust on shareholders' profits on sale of shares to corporation was proper remedy, and therefore, preliminary injunction restraining disposal of profits during pendency of suit was also proper. *Heckmann v. Derivative lawsuit for malpractice against corporate outside counsel could not proceed due to unique attorney-client privilege issues; because shareholders are not holders of privilege, they cannot waive it merely by filing their action on corporation's behalf; in absence of corporate client's waiver, third party attorney is effectively foreclosed from mounting any meaningful defense to action. McDermott, Will & Emery v. Superior Court (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 378, 383-385, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 622

Garrett (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 166, 177, 240 P.2d 421*

Petition for writ of mandate is proper remedy when court refuses to hear motion for security on ground it was not timely. Consolidated Dock & Storage Co. v. Superior Court (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 949, 953, 96 Cal. Rptr. 254

Defendants in derivative suit entitled to order requiring plaintiff to furnish security when trial court found that there was no reasonable probability that prosecution of one out of three causes of action alleged would result in benefit to corporation or its security holders. Bailey v. Fosca Oil Co. (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 289, 295-296, 4 Cal. Rptr. 474

[g] Nature and Amount of Security

Trial court has discretion in fixing nature and amount of security. Beyerbach v. Juno Oil Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 11, 27, 265 P.2d 1

Aggregate amount of security that plaintiff may be required to provide pursuant to Corp. Code § 800 is limited to $50,000 as to all moving parties. Hale v. Southern California IPA Medical Group (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 919, 927-928, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 773

In derivative action, value or percentage of plaintiff's stock holdings in corporation has no bearing on issue whether security is to be required. Suburban Water Sys. v. Superior Court (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 956, 961, 71 Cal. Rptr. 45

[h] When Applicable

Requirement of security does not apply only to strike suits. Wood v. Gordon (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 374, 377-378, 246 P.2d 84

[i] When Inapplicable

Posting security was inapplicable to action by shareholders seeking to vindicate personal rights; prohibition was appropriate remedy to restrain court from requiring security. Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 501-503, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896

[15] Statutory Limits on Derivative Suits

Power of state over derivative actions is plenary. Hogan v. Ingold (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 802, 812, 243 P.2d 1

Corp. Code § 834 (predecessor of Corp. Code § 800) does not of itself create any liability; statute merely prescribes conditions on which equity suit may be brought and maintained. Hogan v. Ingold (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 802, 812, 243 P.2d 1

Corp. Code § 834 is not limited in application to strike suits, but applies as well to actions by bona fide shareholders holding very substantial interest in corporation. Suburban Water Sys. v. Superior Court (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 956, 960, 71 Cal. Rptr. 45

[16] Stay Provisions

Taking of depositions is step in "prosecution" of action and therefore is within stay provisions of Corp. Code § 834. Melancon v. Superior Court (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 698, 707, 268 P.2d 1050

[17] Termination of Derivative Actions

Federal courts are required to apply state law governing authority of independent directors to discontinue derivative suits to extent state law is consistent with policies of Investment Company Act (15 U.S.C. § 80a-1 et seq.) and Investment Advisers Act (15 U.S.C. § 80b-1 et seq.); neither states nor federal courts are required to absolutely forbid director termination of all nonfrivolous actions. Burks v. Lasker (1979) 441 U.S. 471, 486, 99 S. Ct. 1831, 60 L. Ed. 2d 404

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in shareholder's derivative actions. It alleges:

- That plaintiff was a record or beneficial holder of shares, or a holder of voting trust certificates at the time of all or part of the transaction complained of, or that his or her shares or voting trust certificates devolved on him or her by operation of law from one who was a holder at the time of all or part of the transaction complained of, or, if plaintiff is going to seek an order excepting him or her from the contemporaneous ownership requirement, that plaintiff is presently a record or beneficial holder of shares or a holder of voting trust certificates (Paragraph 5) [see Corp. Code § 800(b)];

- The cause of action that accrued to the corporation (Paragraph 6) [see Corp. Code § 800(b); see also McDermott v. Bear Film Co. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 607, 611, 33 Cal. Rptr. 486] ; and

- Plaintiff's efforts to secure the desired action from the board of directors, plaintiff's written notice informing the board of the ultimate facts of each cause of action or delivery of a copy of the proposed complaint, and the reasons for plaintiff's failure to obtain the desired action or the reasons for not making such an effort (Paragraph 7) [see Corp. Code § 800(b); see also Reed v. Norman (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 892, 898, 314 P.2d 204 (allegations demonstrating futility of demand as justifiable reason for not making or pleading demand)].

The complaint also alleges that plaintiff's success in prosecuting the action will result in a substantial benefit to the corporation for which plaintiff is entitled to an award of his or her attorney's fees against the corporation (Paragraph 8) [Fletcher v. A.J. Indus., Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 313, 323-324, 72 Cal. Rptr. 146 ; see also Robbins v. Alibrandi (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 438, 443-444, 448, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 387 (discussing substantial benefit rule in context of court's duty to review agreement to pay attorney fees negotiated as settlement of derivative suit)].

For a complaint for a derivative action based on an illegal loan to a director or guaranty of a director's obligation, see § 167.183.

[3] Allegations Regarding Futility of Prefiling Demand

The demand futility rule is not a mere pleading requirement that drops out of the case once a derivative suit survives a demurrer [Oakland Raiders v. National Football League (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 572, 584-586, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 255 (rejecting contention that trial court erred by considering demand futility as element of derivative claims that is subject to proof)]. The test for proving demand futility is whether the facts show a reasonable doubt that (1) the directors are disinterested and independent, and (2) the challenged transaction was otherwise the product of a valid exercise of business judgment [Oakland Raiders v. National Football League (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 572, 587, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 255] .

Broad conclusionary allegations that directors participated in, conspired in, aided, abetted, or benefitted from the activities alleged to have harmed the corporation are insufficient to establish that it would have been futile for plaintiff to demand action by the board of directors prior to filing a derivative action. The complaint must allege facts that show directors had knowledge of, participated in, or benefitted from the wrongdoing, or were otherwise disabled from exercising independent business judgment. The complaint must allege facts specific to each director from which the court can conclude that the particular director could or could not be expected to fairly evaluate the claims of the shareholder plaintiff [Corp. Code § 800(b)(2); Shields v. Singleton (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 1621-1622, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459] .

[4] Verification

Verification is not required, but verification of the complaint requires that each defendant file a verified answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 446], precluding a general denial [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)].

[5] Jurisdiction

A stockholder's derivative suit is an equitable action [Rosenfeld v. Zimmer (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 719, 722, 254 P.2d 137] and, therefore, is within the residual equity jurisdiction of the superior court as an unlimited civil case [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86].

[6] State Statutes

Conditions on right to bring shareholder's derivative action. Corp. Code § 800(b); Fin. Code § 7616

[7] Decisions

Corporation is indispensable party to shareholder's derivative action. Beyerbach v. Juno Oil Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 11, 28, 265 P.2d 1 (decided prior to 1972 amendment of Code Civ. Proc. § 389)

Plaintiff's attorney's fees is recoverable in derivative action. Fox v. Hale & Norcross S.M. Co. (1895) 108 Cal. 475, 477, 41 P. 328 ; Fletcher v. A.J. Indus., Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 313, 323-324, 72 Cal. Rptr. 146

Plaintiff in derivative action represents corporation which must itself have cause of action. McDermott v. Bear Film Co. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 607, 611, 33 Cal. Rptr. 486

Essential elements of derivative actions. Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 254-255, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280

General rule that plaintiff must plead demand on, and refusal by, directors to act, but such an allegation is not required if facts pleaded demonstrate demand would have been futile. Reed v. Norman (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 892, 898, 314 P.2d 204

Shareholder is not entitled to bring derivative suit where board of directors in good faith and within scope of discretionary powers refuses to commence suit. Findley v. Garrett (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 166, 174, 240 P.2d 421 ; see also Pourroy v. Gardner (1932) 122 Cal. App. 521, 526, 10 P.2d 815

[Caption. See § 168.60.]

To defendants _____ [name of corporation and other defendant(s)] and their attorneys of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on _____ [date], at _____ [time], or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] this court, plaintiff will, and hereby does, move for an order allowing plaintiff to maintain this derivative action under the exception to the contemporaneous ownership requirement contained in California Corporations Code Section 800(b)(1). The motion will be made on the following grounds:

1. That there is a strong prima facie case in favor of the claim asserted on behalf of the corporation;

2. That no other similar action has been, or is likely to be, instituted;

3. That the plaintiff acquired the shares of the corporation before there was disclosure to the public or to the plaintiff of the wrongdoing of which plaintiff complains;

4. That unless the action can be maintained, the defendant may retain a gain derived from his/her willful breach of a fiduciary duty; and

5. That the requested relief will not result in unjust enrichment of the corporation or any shareholder of the corporation.

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, on the declaration of _____ [name] and the memorandum served and filed herewith, on the papers and records on file herewith, and on such oral and documentary evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion.

Dated _____.

Attorney for Plaintiff

CAUTION:

A memorandum must be filed and a copy served with this notice of motion [Cal Rules of Ct, Rule 3.1113(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010].

The first page of the notice of motion must specify immediately below the case number: (1) the date, time, and, if ascertainable, location of the hearing and the name of the hearing judge; (2) the nature or title of any attached document (other than an exhibit); (3) the date of filing of the action; and (4) the trial date, if set [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110(a), (b)].

[2] Use of Form

When it appears on the face of the complaint that the plaintiff in a derivative action does not satisfy the contemporaneous ownership rule of Corp. Code § 800(b)(1), a defendant may raise the issue, probably by way of demurrer. Since Corp. Code § 800(b)(1) states that a shareholder who does not meet the contemporaneous ownership requirements may be allowed to maintain a derivative action on a preliminary showing to, and determination by, the court by motion and after a hearing, this motion will be filed to meet the defendant's challenge to the plaintiff's capacity. However, since it is unlikely that the plaintiff will be able to file the motion quickly enough that the motion can be heard at the same time as the hearing on the demurrer, the plaintiff should probably move for a shortening of time for the hearing on the plaintiff's motion or for a continuance so that the hearing on the demurrer will be held at a later date.

At the hearing, plaintiff will rely on the statutory exception [see Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)] to the contemporaneous ownership rule, which contains the five grounds for excusing a shareholder from the requirements of Corp. Code § 800(b)(1).

§ 168.62 Affirmative Defense to Shareholder's Derivative Action--That Prosecution of Suit Is Not in Best Interests of Corporation

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense to Shareholder's Derivative Action--That Prosecution of Suit Is Not in Best Interests of Corporation

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that immediately on receipt of plaintiff's demand, alleged in Paragraph _____ of the complaint, that the corporation prosecute this action, this defendant, through and by its board of directors, caused an investigation to be made of all the facts relating to the cause of action alleged in the complaint and referred the matter to its attorney. After that investigation, and on advice of defendant's attorney, defendant's board of directors resolved, in good faith and in the exercise of its business judgment, that due to the expense and disruption of defendant's business which would result from prosecuting this action, it was not, and is not, in the best interests of defendant to comply with plaintiff's demand or to bring this action.

[2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense is for use in an answer to a shareholder's derivative action. It alleges that the board of directors of the corporation had decided in good faith that prosecution of the suit would not be in the best interests of the corporation due to the expense and disruption of business which would result [Findley v. Garrett (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 166, 174, 178-179, 240 P.2d 421] .

Other procedural alternatives available to the board or board litigation committee are demurrer, motion to dismiss, or motion for summary judgment [Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1041, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; see Desaigoudar v. Meyercord (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 173, 179, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 408 (affirming trial court's grant of defense motion for summary judgment on ground that special litigation committee made good faith determination not to prosecute claim)]. In any case, the disinterested independence and good faith of the committee and the appropriateness and sufficiency of the investigative techniques chosen and pursued by the committee are subject to judicial review [Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1041-1042, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; see § 168.19].

[3] State Statutes

Statement in answer of new matter constituting defense. Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)

[4] Decisions

Judicial review of decision of special litigation committee is governed by business judgment rule; when asserted in connection with summary judgment motion, material issues of fact are independence of committee members and good faith in conducting investigation; neither merits of derivative claim nor substance of committee's decision to reject claim is subject to judicial review at that stage. Desaigoudar v. Meyercord (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 173, 179, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 408

"Special litigation committee defense" must be allowed whenever committee of disinterested directors acting in good faith has determined that derivative action is not in best interests of corporation--if possible on motion, but if necessary in full trial; defense can apply to homeowners association. Finley v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1161-1163, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 128

Stockholder not authorized to bring derivative suit when board of directors, in refusing to commence action to redress alleged wrong to corporation, acts in good faith within scope of discretionary power and reasonably believes its refusal to commence action is good business judgment in best interest of corporation. Findley v. Garrett (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 166, 174, 240 P.2d 421

Directors have same discretion with respect to prosecution of claims on behalf of corporation as they have in other business matters; mere fact that recovery for corporation would probably result from litigation does not require that action be commenced to enforce claim. Findley v. Garrett (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 166, 177, 240 P.2d 421 ; see also Fornaseri v. Cosmosart Realty & Bldg. Corp. (1929) 96 Cal. App. 549, 557, 274 P. 597

Duty of board of directors weighing advantages of recovery against cost of litigation in money, time, and disruption of business. Findley v. Garrett (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 166, 178, 240 P.2d 421

[Caption. See § 168.60.]

To plaintiff and his/her attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on _____ [date] at _____ [time], or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] this court, defendant _____ [name of officer or director] will, and hereby does, move for an order pursuant to Corporations Code Section 800(c) extending the 30-day period in which this defendant may move the court for an order requiring plaintiff to furnish security [if a responsive pleading has not yet been filed, add: or file a responsive pleading to the complaint herein]. Such motion will be for an additional period of _____ [specify number not more than 60] days. The motion will be made on the grounds that _____ [specify, e.g., such further time is necessary so that this defendant may determine whether there is a reasonable possibility that the prosecution of the cause of action alleged in the complaint against this defendant will benefit the corporation or its security holders].

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, on the declaration of _____ [name] and the memorandum served and filed herewith, on the papers and records on file herein, and on such oral and documentary evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion.
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Attorney for Defendant

CAUTION:

A memorandum to be relied on is required to be served and filed with this notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)].

The notice of motion must state in the opening paragraph the nature of the order being sought and the grounds for issuance of the order. The first page of each paper must specify immediately below the case number: (1) the date, time, and, if ascertainable, location of the hearing and the name of the hearing judge; (2) the nature or title of any attached document (other than an exhibit); (3) the date of filing of the action; and (4) the trial date, if set [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110(a), (b)].

[2] Use of Form

This notice of motion is used to apply for an extension of the 30-day period prescribed by Corp. Code § 800(c) for making a motion to require plaintiff to furnish security. As an optional provision the form also gives notice that the moving defendant will move for an extension of time to file a responsive pleading to the complaint if he or she has not already filed one. The latter extension would be important to avoid default in the event the motion to require security is not filed [see § 168.66[3]]. A defendant who is, or was at the time of the acts complained of, an officer or director of the corporation makes the motion [see Corp. Code § 800(c)]. The corporation also could make it [see Corp. Code § 800(c)]. The notice of motion states when, and the grounds on which the motion will be made, and the papers on which it will be based [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1010].

[3] Extension of Time

The court on application of the corporation or "any defendant" may for good cause shown, extend the 30-day period in which a motion to furnish security is to be made, for an additional period or periods not exceeding 60 days [Corp. Code § 800(c)]. Though Corp. Code § 800(c) indicates that "any defendant" may move for the extension of time, the same section also provides that only the corporation or "any defendant who is an officer or director of the corporation, or held such a office at the time of the acts complained of" may move the court for an order requiring plaintiff to furnish security. Apparently, only a defendant who has standing to make the motion for security would have "good cause" to move for an extension of time to make such motion.

If a motion to furnish security is filed, no pleadings need be filed by the corporation or any other defendant, and the prosecution of the derivative action is stayed, until 10 days after the motion is disposed of [see Corp. Code § 800(f)]. If the motion is not filed, defendant would be required to file his or her responsive pleading within the 30-day period directed by the summons [see Code Civ. Proc. § 412.20(a)(3)]. Thus if there is any chance that the motion to furnish security will not be filed, an extension of time in which to plead should also be requested [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1054 (extension of time allowed for any act required which relates to the pleadings in the action)]. Caution should be exercised in specifying the number of days requested since, absent the consent of the adverse party, an extension under Code Civ. Proc. § 1054 "shall not exceed" 30 days, while an extension under Corp. Code § 800(c) may be of a period not exceeding 60 days.

The first page of each paper must specify immediately below the case number: (1) the date, time, and, if ascertainable, location of the hearing and the name of the hearing judge; (2) the nature or title of any attached document (other than an exhibit); (3) the date of filing of the action; and (4) the trial date, if set [*Cal. [2] Use of Form

This declaration is used to support a motion made by a defendant who is, or was at the time of the transaction complained of, a director or officer of the corporation to require the plaintiff in a derivative action to furnish security pursuant to Corp. Code § 800(c). The declaration under penalty of perjury executed in California is used in lieu of an affidavit [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]. It establishes the standing of the party to make the motion as a defendant who is a director or officer of the corporation or who held such an office at the time of the acts complained of and sets forth facts supporting the grounds of the motion and the amount of the security to be furnished [see Corp. Code § 800(c)].

Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110(b)*].

[2] Use of Form

This order is used to grant a motion to require a derivative-suit plaintiff to furnish security pursuant to Corp. Code § 800(d). The form sets forth the judge's direction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1003] to the plaintiff to furnish security not to exceed $50,000. The time for furnishing security, as fixed by the court, must be reasonable [Corp. Code § 800(d)].

The aggregate amount of security that a plaintiff may be required to provide pursuant to Corp. Code § 800 is limited to $50,000 as to all moving parties [Hale v. Southern California IPA Medical Group (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 919, 927-928, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 773 (defendants argued that trial court could require plaintiff to post up to $50,000 in security for each moving defendant)].

[3] Determination on Hearing

[a] In General

At the hearing on a motion to furnish security, the court considers any evidence, written or oral, by witnesses or affidavit, that may be material to the ground or grounds on which the motion is based, or to a determination of the probable reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, that the corporation and the moving party will incur in the defense of the action. If the court determines after hearing the evidence that the moving party has established a probability in support of any of the grounds on which the motion is based, the court fixes the nature and amount of security, not to exceed $50,000, that plaintiff is to furnish for the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, that the moving party and the corporation may incur in connection with the action, including expenses for which the corporation may become liable pursuant to Corp. Code § 317 (indemnification of officers, directors, or employees of corporation) [Corp. Code § 800(d)].

[b] No Determination on Merits

A determination by the court that security must or must not be furnished as to one or more defendants and not as to others is not deemed a determination of any one or more of the issues in the action or of the merits thereof [Corp. Code § 800(d)].

[4] State Statutes

Deposit in lieu of bond. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 995.710 (applicable only to deposits made before January 1, 1999, for Determinations by court on hearing of motion to furnish security in shareholder's derivative suit. Corp. Code § 800(d)

[5] Decisions

Trial court has discretion in fixing nature and amount of security under Corp. Code § 834. Beyerbach v. Juno Oil Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 11, 27, 265 P.2d 1

In derivative action, value or percentage of plaintiff's stock holdings in corporation has no bearing on issue whether security is to be required under Corp. Code § 834(b). Suburban Water Sys. v. Superior Court (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 956, 961, 71 Cal. Rptr. 45

Order granting or denying motion to furnish security is nonappealable order. Woodman v. Ackerman (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 644, 652, 57 Cal. Rptr. 687 (order granting motion); Efron v. Kalmanovitz (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 149, 152, 156-157, 8 Cal. Rptr. 107 (order denying motion)

In determining whether trial judge abused discretion in deciding that there is no reasonable possibility that prosecution of derivative action would benefit corporation or its security holders, appellate court is required to evaluate possible defenses plaintiffs would have to overcome at trial. Marble v. Latchford Glass Co. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 171, 175, 22 Cal. Rptr. 789

Defendants in derivative suit are entitled to order requiring plaintiff to furnish security when trial court found that there was no reasonable probability that prosecution of one out of three causes of action alleged would result in benefit to corporation or its security holders. Bailey v. Fosca Oil Co. (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 289, 295-296, 4 Cal. Rptr. 474

NOW, THEREFORE, IT IS ADJUDGED, ORDERED, AND DECREED that this action against defendant _____ [name] be dismissed without prejudice and that plaintiff take nothing by his/her complaint against defendant _____ [name] and that _____ [name] defendant be awarded his/her costs of suit in the sum of $ _____ against plaintiff.
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

This judgment is used to dismiss a shareholder's derivative action on failure by plaintiff to furnish security as ordered by the court for the reasonable expenses of defendant [see Corp. Code § 800(d)]. The judgment directs that the action against defendant be dismissed without prejudice and that plaintiff take nothing by his or her complaint against defendant [see Corp. Code § 800(d)], and that defendant be awarded his or her costs of suit [see Code Civ. Proc. §

1032(a)(4), (b)].

[3] Dismissal for Failure to Furnish Security

[a] In General

If the court, on a motion for security, makes a determination that plaintiff is to furnish security as to any one or more defendants, the action must be dismissed as to such defendant or defendants, unless the security required by the court has been furnished within such reasonable time as may be fixed by the court [Corp. Code § 800(d)].

[b] Not Bar to Another Action

The usual rule is that the dismissal of an action does not operate as a bar to another suit for the same cause of action as was stated in the suit which was dismissed. When the dismissal of an action does not purport to go to the merits of the case, the trial court has no authority to include within the judgment of dismissal an order which in effect precludes the plaintiff from instituting another action in which the merits of the controversy may be litigated. In a proceeding under Corp. Code § 800 (derivative action), determination as to the furnishing of security is not a determination of the merits of any issue in the action and, therefore, a dismissal for failure to furnish security is without prejudice and does not bar another action [Ensher v. Ensher, Alexander & Barsoom (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 407, 411, 9 Cal. Rptr. 732] .

[4] State Statutes

Written order for dismissal. Code Civ. Proc. § 581d

"Prevailing party" as used in costs statutes includes party with net monetary recovery, defendant in whose favor dismissal is entered, defendant when neither plaintiff nor defendant obtains any relief, and defendant as against those plaintiffs who do not recover any relief against that defendant. Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4)

When party recovers other than monetary relief and in situations other than as specified, "prevailing party" is determined by court, which has discretion to allow costs or not and, if allowed, to apportion costs between parties on same or adverse sides pursuant to rules adopted [by Judicial Council] under Code Civ. Proc. § 1034. Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4)

Except as otherwise expressly provided by statute, prevailing party is entitled to recover costs in any action or proceeding as matter of right. Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(b)

Dismissal of shareholder's derivative suit for failure to furnish security ordered by court. Corp. Code § 800(d)

[5] Decisions

Attorney's fees not awardable to defendant on dismissal of shareholder's derivative suit for failure to furnish security. Freeman v. Goldberg (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 622, 626, 12 Cal. Rptr. 668, 361 P.2d 244

Trial court erred in entering judgment dismissing derivative action against corporation and five directors for plaintiff's failure to post six bonds for total of $250,000; aggregate amount of security that plaintiff may be required to provide pursuant to Corp. Code § 800 is limited to $50,000 as to all moving parties. Hale v. Southern California IPA Medical Group (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 919, 927-928, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 773

Order requiring plaintiff to furnish security is not appealable. Woodman v. Ackerman (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 644,

652, 57 Cal. Rptr. 687

Dismissal of derivative suit for failure to furnish security is not a determination of merits of any issue in acton.

§ 169.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses the various forms of corporate reorganization and merger, and the procedures prescribed to ensure that shareholders will be dealt with fairly. This chapter focuses on the rights of shareholders; an extensive discussion of the methods of corporate reorganization, related securities law and tax considerations, as well as the accounting treatment of corporate reorganizations are beyond the scope of this part. Some aspects of directors' duties and disclosure obligations in regard to mergers are discussed in Ch. 167, Corporations: Directors and Management , and in Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation , § 515.20 et seq. For a detailed discussion of corporate acquisitions and reorganizations, see Ballantine and Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 12, Corporate Acquisitions, Mergers, and Reorganizations , and California Legal Forms, Ch. 11, Mergers and Acquisitions (Matthew Bender).

This chapter includes the following forms:

- A demand that a corporation pay its shareholder the fair market value of his or her shares [see § 169.60].

- A complaint to determine that the shares are dissenting shares and the fair market value of the dissenting shares [see § 169.61].

- An order appointing an appraiser to determine the value of dissenting shares [see § 169.62], an appraiser's report [see § 169.63], and a notice of motion [see § 169.64] and order [see § 169.65] to confirm the report.

- A judgment awarding a shareholder the fair market value of his or her dissenting shares [see § 169.66].

§ 169.10 Governing Law

[1] Overview

The General Corporation Law essentially classifies and regulates the following categories of business combinations involving corporations:

- Sales of all or substantially all of a corporation's assets.
- Mergers by or among corporations (including mergers involving foreign corporations and wholly owned or 90 percent or more owned subsidiaries) and mergers by or among corporations and other business entities.
- Transfers or exchanges of shares of one or more corporations to another corporation.
- Conversion of a corporation into a domestic other business entity.

Each of these types of combinations can take a variety of forms and involve varying types and amounts of consideration. Some of these combinations constitute "reorganizations" under the General Corporation Law. In general, if a combination is a reorganization, shareholders' consents or approvals may be required and the shareholders may have dissenting rights.

Sales of assets are governed by Corp. Code §§ 1000-1002. Mergers of corporations, including short-form mergers and mergers involving close corporations or foreign corporations, are governed by Corp. Code §§ 1100-1112. Corporate mergers involving other business entities are governed by Corp. Code § 1113. "Reorganizations," as that term is defined in Corp. Code § 181, are the subject of Corp. Code §§ 1200-1203. The rights of dissenting shareholders opposing a corporate reorganization to receive the fair market value for their shares are covered in Corp. Code §§ 1300-1312. Conversions of corporations are governed by Corp. Code §§ 1150-1160.

Foreign corporations governed by Corp. Code § 2115, that is, those referred to as "nominally foreign" for the purposes of this chapter [see Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity], are subject to certain provisions of the General Corporation Law with respect to sales of assets and reorganizations [Corp. Code § 2115(b)]. Specifically, Corp. Code § 1001(d) applies to foreign corporations [§ 169.11[2][b]]. Also applicable are the provisions governing conversion of shares in mergers [see Corp. Code § 1101; see also § 169.14]. Furthermore, Corp. Code § 1151 (first sentence only), regarding limitations on conversions, and Corp. Code § 1152, listing the requirements of conversions [see § 169.16], apply to nominally foreign corporations. In addition, all provisions governing approval of reorganizations and dissenters' rights [Corp. Code §§ 1200-1312] apply to nominally foreign corporations.

[2] Types of Reorganizations Defined

[a] Merger Reorganizations

"Merger reorganizations" are mergers conducted pursuant to Corp. Code §§ 1100-1113, other than short-form mergers [Corp. Code § 181(a)]. The term "merger" is not specifically defined in the General Corporation Law; the law merely provides that any two or more corporations may be merged into one of those corporations, and that a corporation may merge with one or more domestic or foreign corporations [see Corp. Code §§ 167, 171] or other business entities [see Corp. Code § 174.5 (defining "other business entity" to mean a domestic or foreign limited liability company, limited partnership, general partnership, business trust, real estate investment trust, unincorporated association other than a nonprofit association, or a domestic reciprocal insurer)] in accordance with procedures prescribed by statute [Corp. Code §§ 1100, 1113]. For discussion of mergers involving limited partnerships, see Ch. 404, Partnerships: Actions Between Limited Partners and Partnerships, § 404.21. For more detailed coverage of merger procedures involving various types of business entities, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 11, Merger and Acquisition Issues, Ch. 11C, Merger, Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies, Ch. 15, General Partnerships, Part C, Conversions and Mergers of General Partnerships; and Ch. 15C, Conversions and Mergers of Limited Partnerships (Matthew Bender).

A "short-form merger," which does not constitute a merger reorganization, is a merger pursuant to Corp. Code § 1110 [Corp. Code § 187]. A short-form merger takes one of two forms: (1) a corporation merges with another corporation of which the former corporation owns all of the outstanding shares; and (2) a parent corporation owns at least 90 percent but not all of the outstanding shares of each class of its subsidiary and merges the subsidiary into the parent.

[b] Exchange Reorganizations

"Exchange reorganizations" are acquisitions by one domestic corporation, foreign corporation, or other business entity in exchange in whole or in party for its equity securities (or those of a domestic corporation, foreign corporation, or other business entity in control of the acquiring entity) of equity securities of another domestic corporation, foreign corporation, or other business entity if, immediately after the acquisition, the acquiring entity has control of the other entity [Corp. Code § 181(b)].

A "share exchange tender offer" is an acquisition by one corporation in exchange in whole or in part for its equity securities, or the equity securities of a corporation that is in control of the acquiring corporation, of shares of another corporation, other than an exchange reorganization [Corp. Code § 183.5]. Thus, a share exchange tender offer has the same elements as an exchange reorganization except that after the exchange the acquiring corporation is not in control of the corporation whose shares were acquired [Corp. Code §§ 181(b), 183.5]. Even though a share exchange tender offer is not an exchange reorganization, it is subject to similar approval requirements [see Corp. Code § 1201.5].

[c] Sale-of-Assets Reorganizations

A "sale-of-assets reorganization" is the acquisition by a domestic corporation, foreign corporation, or other business entity, in exchange wholly or partly for its equity securities (or the equity securities of a domestic corporation, a foreign corporation, or other business entity that is in control of the buyer), or for the buyer's debt securities (or the debt securities of a domestic corporation, a foreign corporation, or other business entity that is in control of the buyer) that are not adequately secured and that have a maturity date in excess of five years after the consummation of the reorganization, or both of these types of equity and debt securities, of all or substantially all of the assets of another domestic corporation, foreign corporation, or other business entity [Corp. Code § 181(c)]. A sale-of-assets reorganization is subject to the reorganization provisions of the General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code §§ 1200-1203]; a sale-of-assets transaction that is not a reorganization is governed by Corp. Code §§ 1000-1002 [see § 169.11[1]].

[3] Additional Definitions

The significance of the definitional provisions of the General Corporation Law in the area of corporate reorganizations cannot be overemphasized. The General Corporation Law makes a radical departure from prior law by regulating corporate combinations according to their substantive result rather than the particular method used. Accordingly, the three types of reorganizations are governed by substantially similar requirements regarding approvals by boards of directors and holders of outstanding shares and the rights of dissenting shareholders. To this end, the General Corporation Law relies heavily on terms of art specifically defined in Chapter 1 [Corp. Code §§ 100-195]. The term "reorganization" is defined in § 169.10[2][a] and subsequent headings; other key definitions are set forth below.

- "Approved by the board" or "approval of the board" means approved or ratified by the vote of the board of directors, or by the vote of a committee authorized to exercise the powers of the board (except as to matters not within the competence of the committee under Corp. Code § 311) [Corp. Code § 151; see Corp. Code § 311 (committees lack authority to approve reorganizations that require shareholder approval)].

- "Approved by the outstanding shares" or "approval of the outstanding shares" means approved by the affirmative vote of a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote. The approval must include the affirmative vote of a majority of the outstanding shares of each class or series entitled, by any provision of the articles or of the General Corporation Law, to vote as a class or series on the subject matter of the vote and must also include the affirmative vote of any greater proportion (including all) of the outstanding shares of any class or series if that greater proportion is required by the articles or the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 152].

- "Approved by the shareholders" or "approval of the shareholders" means approved or ratified by (1) the affirmative vote of a majority of the shares represented and voting at a duly held meeting at which a quorum is present, which shares voting affirmatively also constitute at least a majority of the required quorum; (2) the written consent of the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 603]; or (3) the affirmative vote or written consent of any greater proportion (including all) of the shares of any class or series if that greater proportion is required by the articles or the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 153].

- "Control," for the purposes of Corp. Code §§ 181 (defining "reorganization"), 1001 (governing sales of assets), and Corp. Code § 1200 (governing board approval of reorganizations), means the ownership, directly or indirectly, of shares or equity securities possessing more than 50 percent of the voting power of a domestic corporation, a foreign corporation, or an other business entity [Corp. Code § 160(b)]. In all other situations, "control" means the possession, direct or indirect, of the power to direct or cause the direction of the management and policies of a corporation [Corp. Code § 160(a)].

- "Constituent corporation" means a corporation that is merged with or into one or more corporations or one of more other business entities and includes a surviving corporation [Corp. Code § 161].

- "Disappearing corporation" means a constituent corporation that is not the surviving corporation [Corp. Code § 165].

- "Equity security" as used in Corp. Code §§ 181 (defining "reorganization"), 1001 (governing sale of assets), 1113 (governing mergers of corporations and other business entities), 1200 (governing board approval of reorganizations), and 1201 (governing shareholder approval of reorganizations), means any share or membership of a domestic or foreign corporation; any partnership interest, membership interest, or equivalent equity interest in an other business entity; and any security convertible, with or without consideration into, or any warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase, any of the above [Corp. Code § 168].

- "Other business entity" means a domestic or foreign limited liability company, limited partnership, general partnership [see Corp. Code § 16101(9)], business trust (i.e., a business organization formed as a trust), real estate investment trust [see I.R.C. § 856(a)], unincorporated association (other than a nonprofit association) [see Corp. Code § 18035], or a domestic reciprocal insurer organized after 1974 to provide medical malpractice insurance [see Ins. Code § 1550 et seq.].

- "Parent," as used in Corp. Code § 1001 (governing sales of assets), Corp. Code § 1101 (governing agreements of mergers), and Corp. Code § 1113 (governing mergers of corporations and other business entities), means a person in control of a domestic or foreign corporation, or other business entity, as "control" is defined in Corp. Code § 160(b), set forth above [Corp. Code § 175]. Except as used in Corp. Code §§ 1001 (governing sales of assets), 1101 (governing agreements of mergers), and Corp. Code § 1113 (governing mergers of corporations and other business entities), a "parent" of a specified corporation is an affiliate in control [see Corp. Code § 160(a), discussed above] of that corporation directly or indirectly through one or more intermediaries [Corp. Code § 175].

- "Proper county" means the county where the principal executive office of the corporation is located or, if the principal executive office is not located in California, or the corporation has no principal executive office, the County of Sacramento [Corp. Code § 177].

- "Surviving corporation" means a corporation into which one or more corporations or one or more limited partnerships are merged [Corp. Code § 190]. In a merger of a limited partnership and a corporation, the survivor could be a limited partnership. "Surviving limited partnership" means a limited partnership into which one or more other limited partnerships or one or more corporations are merged [Corp. Code § 190.5].

- "Voting power" means the power to vote for the election of directors at the time any determination of voting power is made, but does not include the right to vote on the occurrence of some condition or event that has not yet occurred. When different classes of shares are entitled to vote as separate classes for different members of the board, the determination of the percentage of voting power may be made on the basis of the total number of authorized directors that the shares in question (whether of one or more classes) have the power to elect in an election at which all shares then entitled to vote for the election of any directors are voted [Corp. Code § 194.5].

Chapter 169 CORPORATIONS: REORGANIZATIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-169 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 169.11

§ 169.11 Sales of Assets That Are Not Reorganizations

[1] Separate Treatment

Sales of assets that are not reorganizations [see Corp. Code § 181(c); § 169.10[2][c]] are governed by Corp. Code §§ 1000-1002 [Corp. Code § 1001(a)]. Thus, unless the assets of the corporation are sold for equity securities or debt securities that are inadequately secured and have a maturity date in excess of five years after consummation of the acquisition, the board of directors and shareholder approvals prescribed by Corp. Code §§ 1000 and 1001 apply.

[2] Approvals Required

[a] Generally

A corporation may sell, lease, convey, exchange, transfer, or otherwise dispose of all or substantially all of its assets provided that the principal terms of the transaction are approved by the board [Corp. Code § 1001(a); see Corp. Code § 151; see also Jeppi v. Brockman Holding Co., (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 11, 15-16, 206 P.2d 847] . The sale or other type of disposition may be made on any terms and conditions, and for any consideration (money, securities or other property), that the board deems in the best interest of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1001(c)]. Further, unless the transaction is in the usual and regular course of business of the corporation, the principal terms of the transaction must also be approved by the outstanding shares of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1001(a); see Corp. Code § 152]. The approval by the outstanding shares may occur before or after the approval by the board, and before or after the transaction [Corp. Code § 1001(a)(2)]. However, notwithstanding the approval of the outstanding shares, the board may abandon the proposed transaction without further action by the shareholders, subject to any contractual rights of third parties [Corp. Code § 1001(b)].

In contrast, any mortgage, deed of trust, pledge, or other hypothecation of all or any part of a corporation's property to secure the payment or performance of any contract or obligation of the corporation may be approved by the board [Corp. Code § 1000]. Unless the articles of incorporation otherwise require, this action need not be approved by the shareholders [see Corp. Code § 153] or the outstanding shares [Corp. Code § 1000; see Corp. Code § 152].

[b] Sale to Controlling Buyer

If the acquiring party in a transaction governed by Corp. Code § 1001(a) is in control of, or under common control with, the disposing corporation, the principal terms of the sale must be approved by at least 90 percent of the voting power of the disposing corporation [Corp. Code § 1001(d); see Corp. Code §§ 160(b), 194.5]. This rule does not apply when the disposition is to a domestic or foreign corporation or other business entity in consideration of the nonredeemable common shares or nonredeemable equity securities of the acquiring party or its parent [Corp. Code § 1001(d)]. This rule is designed to prevent the freezing out of minority shareholders that own more than 10 percent of the voting power.

The 90-percent approval requirement does not apply to a transaction if the terms and conditions of the transaction, and their fairness, have been approved by the Commissioner of Corporations [Corp. Code § 25142], the Superintendent of Banks [Fin. Code § 696.5], the Insurance Commissioner [Ins. Code § 838.5], or the Public Utilities Commission [Corp. Code § 1001(e); see Pub. Util. Code § 822].

[c] Effect of Failure to Obtain Approval

A failure to obtain the approval of the outstanding shares [Corp. Code § 152] before the sale of assets is not fatal to the transaction because the statute expressly permits approval either before or after board approval, and either before or after the transaction [Corp. Code § 1001(a)].

If the sale of a corporation's assets must be approved by the outstanding shares and that approval is never secured, apparently only the shareholders, and possibly creditors of the selling corporation, have the right to object to a sale in violation of the approval requirements [Bickston v. Federal Firearms Corp. (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 574, 579-580, 38 Cal. Rptr. 793 ; Long Construction Co. v. Empire Drive-In Theatres, Inc. (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 726, 735-738 ; see Gunther v. Thompson (1931) 211 Cal. 631, 634, 296 P. 611 (transferee has no standing); Associates Discount Corp. v. Tobb Co. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 541, 549, 50 Cal. Rptr. 738 (corporation cannot rely on failure to obtain shareholders' consent to invalidate sale)]. It has been held that sales in violation of this approval requirement are only voidable [see Solorza v. Park Water Co. (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 653, 658, 195 P.2d 523] . For example, in Long Construction Co. v. Empire Drive-In Theatres, Inc., the court held that even a creditor cannot object to a transfer of the corporation's assets on the ground that the transfer violated the statutory approval requirements; such a transfer was voidable because the requisite approval could be given after the transfer was complete, which would terminate any voidability [Long Construction Co. v. Empire Drive-In Theatres, Inc. (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 726, 735]. However, despite a shareholder's right to object to the sale, a shareholder who does not act promptly will be barred by laches [Alhambra-Shumway Mines, Inc. v. Alhambra Gold Mine Corp. (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 322, 326-327, 19 Cal. Rptr. 208 ; King v. Los Angeles County Fair Association (1945) 70 Cal. App. 2d 592, 596, 161 P.2d 468] . Although these cases were decided under prior law, there is no reason why they would not be equally applicable to the current law.

[3] Interested Party's Proposal for Sale of Assets

If a written proposal for approval of a sale of assets governed by Corp. Code § 1001(a) is made to some or all of a corporation's shareholders by an interested party, an affirmative written opinion as to the fairness of the consideration to the shareholders is required [Corp. Code § 1203(a)]. The requirements applicable to the fairness opinion are discussed in § 169.12[4][a] and subsequent headings. However, this requirement is inapplicable to an interested party proposal if (1) the subject corporation does not have shares held of record by 100 or more persons [see Corp. Code § 605]; or (2) the transaction has been qualified under Corp. Code § 25113 or 25121 and no stop order under Corp. Code § 25140 or 25143(a) is in effect regarding that qualification [Corp. Code § 1203(a)].

Similarly, if a a vote or written consent is being sought pursuant to an interested party proposal and a later written proposal for a sale of assets governed by Corp. Code § 1001(a) that would require a vote or written consent of shareholders is made to the corporation or its shareholders by a person other than an interested party ("later proposal") at least 10 days before the date for the vote or notice of shareholder approval, the provisions of Corp. Code § 1203(b) apply [Corp. Code § 1203(b)]. These provisions are discussed under § 169.12[4][d].

Volume 14: Corporations: Capacity thru Corporations: Dissolution and Winding Up-Chs. 160-173
Chapter 169 CORPORATIONS: REORGANIZATIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-169 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 169.12

§ 169.12 Reorganizations

[1] Generally

The General Corporation Law generally treats the three types of reorganizations (merger reorganizations, exchange reorganizations, and sale-of-assets reorganizations) [Corp. Code § 181; see § 169.10[2][a] and subsequent headings] similarly; these reorganizations are governed by substantially similar requirements as to approvals of the boards of participating corporations, the rights of holders of outstanding shares to approve the reorganization, and the rights of dissenting interest to receive cash in lieu of the proposed consideration. The focus of this Part is on the application of the provisions of Chapter 12 of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 1200-1203], which govern the approvals necessary in any corporate reorganization [§ 169.12[2]]. Whether the approval of the shareholders is necessary will in turn determine whether they have dissenters' rights under Chapter 13 of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 1300-1312; see § 169.60[6]].

Of the three types of corporate reorganizations, only a merger reorganization follows a specific statutory pattern with respect to the execution and filing of documents. These procedures are detailed in Chapter 11 of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 1100-1113] and are not discussed here.

[2] Approval by Board of Directors

A reorganization [Corp. Code § 181] or a share exchange tender offer [Corp. Code § 183.5] must be approved by the board of directors of the following [Corp. Code § 1200]:

- Each constituent corporation in a merger reorganization;
- The acquiring corporation in an exchange reorganization;
- The acquiring corporation and the corporation whose property and assets are acquired in a sale-of-assets reorganization;
- The acquiring corporation in a share exchange tender offer [Corp. Code § 183.5]; and

- The corporation in control [see Corp. Code § 160(b) (defining "control")] of any constituent or acquiring domestic or foreign corporation or other business entity under Paragraph (1)-(3), and whose equity securities [see Corp. Code § 168] are issued, transferred, or exchanged in the reorganization.

The controlling corporation discussed in Paragraph (5), above is referred to as a "parent party" [Corp. Code § 1200(e)].

[3] Approval of Outstanding Shares

[a] General Rule

The principal terms of a reorganization must be approved by the outstanding shares [Corp. Code § 152] of each class of each corporation the approval of whose board is required under Corp. Code § 1200 [Corp. Code § 1201(a); see § 169.12[2]]. The type of vote required is a class vote of a majority of each class (unless the articles require a greater proportion), regardless of limitations or restrictions on their voting rights [Corp. Code §§ 152, 1201(a); see Corp. Code § 117].

The approval of the outstanding shares may be given before or after the approval by the board. However, even after approval by the shareholders, the board may abandon the proposed reorganization without further action by the shareholders [Corp. Code § 1201(h) (board's abandonment of reorganization subject to any contractual rights of third parties)].

The two primary exceptions to this rule concerning certain preferred shares and de minimis dilutions in voting power [Corp. Code § 1201(a), (b)] are discussed in [b] and [c], below. The special rules apply to close corporations, surviving other business entities, and surviving nonprofit corporations [Corp. Code §§ 1112, 1201(e), (f)] are discussed in [e] and [g], below.

A special rule applies to sale-of-asset reorganizations involving a sale to a party that is in control of, or under common control with, the selling corporation [Corp. Code § 1001(a), (d), (e); see § 169.11[2][b]]. Additional requirements are imposed on reorganizations proposed by interested parties [see § 169.12[4][a], and subsequent headings] and on share exchange tender offers [see § 169.13].

[b] Exception; Certain Preferred Shares

Unless otherwise provided in the articles, no approval of any class of outstanding preferred shares of a surviving or acquiring corporation or parent party is required if the rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions granted to or imposed on that class remain unchanged [Corp. Code § 1201(a)]. However, in a merger reorganization, if any amendment is made to the articles of the surviving corporation that would otherwise require approval of such a class of outstanding preferred shares (such as an amendment creating a new class with priority over those shares [see Corp. Code §§ 900-911]) the approval of the outstanding preferred shares is still required [Corp. Code § 1201(a), (c)].

[c] Exception; Dilution Test

Because the fundamental purpose of requiring shareholder approval of a reorganization by shareholders of the continuing corporation is to prevent their interests in that corporation from being diluted, the General Corporation Law dispenses with the approval requirement when the dilution is not significant [see Corp. Code § 1201(b)]. No approval of the outstanding shares is required with respect to any corporation if it, or its shareholders immediately before the reorganization, or both, own immediately after the reorganization equity securities, other than any warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase equity securities, of the surviving or acquiring corporation or a parent party possessing more than five-sixths of the voting power of the surviving or acquiring corporation or parent party [Corp. Code § 1201(b)]. In calculating the more than five-sixths requirement, equity securities that were owned immediately before the reorganization by shareholders who held shares in another party to the reorganization are disregarded [Corp. Code § 1201(b)]. That is, when Corporation A acquires Corporation B and a shareholder owns equity securities in both corporations, those securities will be disregarded in determining whether the dilution test is met with respect to either corporation. Further, for this purpose, the voting power of a corporation is to be calculated by assuming the conversion of all equity securities convertible (immediately or at some future time) into shares entitled to vote, but not assuming the exercise of any warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase such shares [Corp. Code § 1201(b)].

The dilution exception does not apply (and the principal terms of the reorganization must be approved by the outstanding shares of the surviving corporation) in a merger reorganization when an amendment is made to the articles of incorporation that would otherwise require shareholder approval [Corp. Code § 1201(c)]. An additional qualification to the dilution exception requires that the outstanding shares of any class of a corporation that is a party to a merger or sale-of-assets reorganization must approve the principal terms of the reorganization if the holders of shares of that class receive shares of the surviving or acquiring corporation or parent party that have different rights, preferences, privileges, or restrictions than those surrendered. Shares in a foreign corporation received in exchange for shares in a domestic corporation are deemed to have different rights, preferences, privileges, or restrictions [Corp. Code § 1201(d)].

[d] Surviving Other Business Entities

Notwithstanding the preferred shares and dilution exceptions discussed above [Corp. Code § 1201(a), (b)], the principal terms of a reorganization must be approved by the outstanding shares of any class of a corporation that is a party to a merger reorganization if the holders of shares of that class receive interests in a surviving other business entity in the merger [Corp. Code § 1201(f); see also Corp. Code § 1113(g)(2)].

[e] Close Corporations

Notwithstanding the majority vote requirement and the preferred shares and dilution exceptions discussed above [Corp. Code § 1201(a), (b)], the principal terms of a reorganization must be approved by the affirmative vote of at least two-thirds of each class of the outstanding shares of any close corporation [see Corp. Code § 158] if the reorganization would result in the shareholders receiving shares of a corporation that is not a close corporation [Corp. Code § 1201(e); see Corp. Code § 1111 (mergers)]. However, the articles of a close corporation may provide for a less than two-thirds vote, but not less than a majority of the outstanding shares of each class [Corp. Code § 1201(e); see Corp. Code § 1111 (mergers)].

[f] Personal Liability Imposed

Notwithstanding the preferred shares and dilution exceptions discussed above [Corp. Code § 1201(a), (b)], the principal terms of a reorganization must be approved by all shareholders of any class or series if, as a result of the reorganization, the holders of that class or series become personally liable for any obligations of a party to the reorganization, unless all holders of that class or series have the dissenters' rights set forth in Corp. Code § 1300 et seq. [Corp. Code § 1201(g); see § 169.17[1]].

[g] Surviving Nonprofit Corporations

Notwithstanding the majority vote requirement and the preferred shares and dilution exceptions discussed above [Corp. Code § 1201(a), (b)], if a disappearing corporation in a merger is governed by the General Corporation Law and the surviving corporation is a nonprofit public benefit corporation, a nonprofit mutual benefit corporation, or a nonprofit religious corporation, the merger must be approved by all outstanding shares of all classes of the disappearing corporation, regardless of any limitations or restrictions on those shares [Corp. Code § 1112].

[h] Foreign Parents

If a parent party [see Corp. Code § 1200(e)] is a foreign corporation other than one to which Corp. Code § 2115(a) applies, any requirement or lack of requirement for approval by the outstanding shares of the foreign corporation must be based, not on Corp. Code §§ 1200 and 1201, but on the laws of the state of place of incorporation of the foreign corporation [Corp. Code § 1202(c)]. Corp. Code § 2115 is discussed in Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity .

[i] Cancellation of Shares Without Consideration

In addition to the requirements of Corp. Code § 1201, the principal terms of a merger reorganization must be approved by all the outstanding shares of a corporation if the agreement of merger provides that all of the outstanding shares of that corporation are canceled without consideration in the merger [Corp. Code § 1202(a)].

[j] Preferred Shares Receiving Less Than Articles Provide

In addition to the requirements of Corp. Code § 1201, if the terms of a merger reorganization or a sale-of-assets reorganization provide that a class or series of preferred shares is to have distributed to it a lesser amount than would be required by applicable article provisions, the principal terms of the reorganization must be approved by the same percentage of outstanding shares of that class or series that would be required to approve an amendment to the article provisions to provide for the distribution of that lesser amount [Corp. Code § 1202(b)].

[4] Additional Requirements When Reorganization Proposed by Interested Party

[a] Opinion of Fairness

When a tender offer, including a share exchange tender offer [see Corp. Code § 183.5], or a written proposal for approval of a reorganization [Corp. Code § 1200], or for a sale of assets subject to Corp. Code § 1001(a), is made to some or all of a corporation's shareholders by an interested party [§ 169.12[4][b]], a written affirmative opinion on the fairness of the consideration to the shareholders of the corporation must be delivered to the corporation's board or shareholders [Corp. Code § 1203(a); see § 169.12[4][c]]. However, this opinion is not required if (1) the corporation does not have shares held of record by 100 or more persons [see Corp. Code § 605]; or (2) if the transaction has been qualified under Corp. Code § 25113 or 25121 and no order under Corp. Code § 25140 or 25143(a) is in effect with respect to that qualification [Corp. Code § 1203(a)].

The opinion of fairness must be provided by a person who is not affiliated with the offeror and who, for compensation, engages in the business of advising others regarding the value of properties, businesses, or securities. A person is not deemed to be affiliated with the offeror because he or she (1) has provided services for the offeror or a related entity, or (2) is simultaneously providing advice or assistance on the proposed transaction in a manner that makes his or her compensation contingent on the success of the proposed transaction [Corp. Code § 1203(a)].

[b] Interested Party Defined

An "interested party" is a person who is a party to the proposed transaction and satisfies one of the following requirements [Corp. Code § 1203(a)]:

- Directly or indirectly controls the corporation that is the subject of the tender offer or proposal;

- Is, or is directly or indirectly controlled by, an officer or director of the subject corporation; or

- Is an entity in which a material financial interest [see Corp. Code § 310(a)] is held by any director or executive officer of the subject corporation. An executive officer is a president; any vice-president in charge of a principal business unit, division, or function such as sales, administration, research or development, or finance; and any other officer or other person who performs policymaking functions or has the same duties as those of a president or vice-president [Corp. Code § 1203(a)].

[c] Time for Delivery of Opinion

If no shareholder approval or acceptance is required for the consummation of the transaction, the opinion must be delivered to the corporation's board of directors no later than the time that the board authorizes and approves the consummation of the transaction [Corp. Code § 1203(a)(1)]. If a tender offer is made to the shareholders, the opinion must be delivered to the shareholders when the written tender offer is first made to them [Corp. Code § 1203(a)(2)]. If the tender offer is commenced by publication, and tender offer materials are subsequently mailed or otherwise distributed to the shareholders, the opinion may be omitted in that publication if the opinion is included in the materials distributed to the shareholders [Corp. Code § 1203(a)(2)].

If a shareholders' meeting is to be held to vote on approval of the transaction, the opinion must be delivered to the shareholders with the notice of the meeting [Corp. Code § 1203(a)(3)]. If shareholders' consents are solicited in writing, the opinion must be delivered at the same time as the solicitation [Corp. Code § 1203(a)(4)]. If shareholders' consents are not solicited in writing, the opinion must be delivered to each shareholder whose consent is solicited before that shareholder gives consent, and to all other shareholders when they are given the notice required by Corp. Code § 603(b) [Corp. Code § 1203(a)(5)].

[d] Later Proposal Made While Interested Party's Proposal Is Pending

When a tender offer or a written proposal for approval of a reorganization [see Corp. Code § 1200] or a sale of assets governed by Corp. Code § 1001(a) that would require a vote or written consent of shareholders is made to the corporation or its shareholders by a person other than an interested party at least 10 days before the date for acceptance of the tendered shares or the vote or the notice of shareholder approval on the interested party's proposal, the shareholders must be informed of that later proposal, and any written material provided by the later offeror must be forwarded to the shareholders at that offeror's expense. In addition, the shareholders must be afforded a reasonable opportunity to withdraw any vote, consent, or proxy previously given before the vote or written consent on the interested party's proposal becomes effective, or they must be given a reasonable time to withdraw any shares tendered before the purchase of the shares pursuant to the interested party's proposal. A delay of 10 days from the notice or publication of the later proposal constitutes a reasonable opportunity or time to effect withdrawal [Corp. Code § 1203(b)].

§ 169.13 Approval of Share Exchange Tender Offers

The principal terms of a share exchange tender offer [see Corp. Code § 183.5; see § 169.10[2][b]] must be approved by the outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 152] of each class of the corporation making the tender offer or whose shares are to be used in the tender offer.

There are two exceptions to this rule. First, no approval of the outstanding shares is required if the corporation, or its shareholders immediately before the tender offer, or both, will own (immediately after the completion of the share exchange proposed in the tender offer) equity securities (other than any warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase the equity securities) of the corporation making the tender offer or of the corporation whose shares were used in the tender offer, possessing more than five-sixths of the voting power of either corporation. In determining ownership by the shareholders of a corporation immediately after the tender offer of equity securities pursuant to the preceding sentence, equity securities that they owned immediately before the tender offer as shareholders of another party to the transaction are disregarded. For the purposes of Corp. Code § 1201.5 only, the voting power of a corporation is calculated by assuming the conversion of all equity securities convertible (immediately or at some future time) into shares entitled to vote, but not assuming the exercise of any warrant or right to subscribe to, or purchase, shares [Corp. Code § 1201.5(b)].

Second, unless otherwise provided in the articles, no approval of any class of outstanding preferred shares of either corporation is required if the rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions granted to or imposed on that class of shares remain unchanged. For purposes of this requirement, two classes of common shares differing only as to voting rights are considered as a single class of shares [Corp. Code § 1201.5(a)].

A share exchange tender offer must also be approved by the board of the acquiring corporation [Corp. Code § 1200(d); see § 169.12[2]].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-169 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 169.14

§ 169.14 Protection of Minority Interests in Mergers; Conversion of Shares

The General Corporation Law requires that agreements of merger must state the manner of converting the shares of each constituent corporation into shares or other securities of the survivor [Corp. Code §§ 1101(d), 1113(b)(4)]. If any shares of any constituent corporation are not to be converted solely into shares or other securities of the survivor, the agreement must state (1) the cash, rights, securities, or other property that the shareholders will receive in exchange (which cash, rights, securities, or other property may be in addition to or in lieu of of shares or other securities of the survivor) or (2) that the shares are canceled without consideration [Corp. Code §§ 1101(d), 1113(b)(4); see § 169.12[3][i]].

Special provisions govern merger reorganizations with respect to the conversion of the shares of the constituent corporations into those of the survivor, which may involve shareholder approval requirements in addition to those that would apply to the transaction as a reorganization under Corp. Code § 1201 [see § 169.12[3]]. To prevent the unfair treatment of minority shareholders through the conversion of shares incident to a merger, the General Corporation Law requires that each share of the same class or series of any constituent corporation (other than the cancellation of shares held by a party to the merger or its parent or a wholly owned subsidiary of either in another constituent corporation) must, unless all shareholders of the class or series consent and except as provided in Corp. Code § 407 (fractional shares), be treated equally with respect to any distribution of cash, rights, securities, or other property [Corp. Code §§ 1101, 1113(c)]. Except in a short-form merger and in a merger of a corporation into its subsidiary in which it owns at least 90 percent of the outstanding shares of each class, the unredeemable common shares of a constituent corporation may be converted only into unredeemable common shares of the surviving corporation or a parent party, or unredeemable equity securities of a surviving party other than a corporation if another party to the merger or its parent directly or indirectly owns shares of another constituent corporation representing more than 50 percent of the voting power of the other constituent corporation before the merger, unless all of the shareholders of the class consent and except as provided in Corp. Code § 407 (fractional shares) [Corp. Code §§ 1101, 1113(c)]. Corp. Code § 407 essentially permits cashing out the minority by issuing fractional shares, holders of which are then paid cash, in accordance with the conversion schedule of the merger agreement, but only if that action would result in not more than 10 percent of the outstanding shares of any class being canceled [Corp. Code §§ 407, 1101].

The above requirements do not apply to any transaction if the Commissioner of Corporations, Commissioner of Financial Institutions, the Insurance Commissioner, or the Public Utilities Commission has approved the terms and conditions of the transaction and the fairness of those terms and conditions [Corp. Code § 1101.1; see Corp. Code § 25142; Ins. Code § 838.5; Fin. Code §§ 696.5, 5750, 5802; Pub. Util. Code § 822]. Under both California and federal law, a finding of fairness by the appropriate commissioner under Corp. Code § 1101.1 collaterally estops further challenge regarding the fairness of the merger price even if no review of that fairness decision is sought under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 [Plaine v. McCabe (9th Cir. 1986) 797 F.2d 713, 718-721, 719 n.12]. However, an action under 15 U.S.C. § 78n(e) to recover damages sustained because of misstatements or omissions in the tender offer is not precluded by the fact that the merger occurred at a fair price [Plaine v. McCabe (9th Cir. 1986) 797 F.2d 713, 718-722, 721, 722] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-169 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 169.15

§ 169.15 Short-Form Mergers

There are two types of short-form mergers [see Corp. Code § 1110(a)]:

- The merger of a parent with one or more wholly owned subsidiaries.

- The merger of a parent and one or more subsidiaries of which the parent owns at least 90 percent but not all of the outstanding shares of each class.

In either situation, the merger may be effected by a resolution or plan of merger adopted and approved by the board of the parent corporation [Corp. Code § 1110(g); but see Corp. Code § 1110(h) (conditions for merger when parent is foreign corporation and at least one subsidiary is domestic corporation)]. If the parent corporation owns at least 90 percent but less than all the outstanding shares of each class of the subsidiary corporation, the board of that subsidiary must also approve both the resolution or plan of merger and the consideration to be received for each share of the subsidiary corporation that is not owned by the parent [Corp. Code § 1110(b)].

In either type of merger, if the parent is merged into a subsidiary, the boards of both the parent corporation and the surviving subsidiary corporation must approve the resolution or plan of merger [Corp. Code § 1110(a), (c)]. If the parent is merged into a subsidiary, and, but for the operation of Corp. Code § 1110, the merger would be a merger reorganization [see Corp. Code § 181(a)], the principal terms of which would be required to be approved by the outstanding shares of any class of the parent corporation pursuant to Corp. Code § 1201(d) [§ 169.12[3]], the principal terms of the resolution or plan of merger must be approved by the outstanding shares of that same class of the parent corporation [Corp. Code § 1110(c)].

If the parent owns less than all the outstanding shares of a domestic subsidiary corporation party to a short-form merger, the shareholders of that subsidiary corporation are entitled to 20 days notice before the effective date of the merger. The notice must contain a copy of the resolution or plan of merger and the information required by Corp. Code § 1301(a) [Corp. Code § 1110(h)]. The shareholders of that subsidiary have the right to demand payment of cash for their shares pursuant to Corp. Code § 1301 et seq. [Corp. Code § 1110(h); see § 169.17[1]; see also §§ 169.60, 169.61].

§ 169.16 Conversions

[1] When Conversion is Permitted

Under Chapter 11.5 of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code §§ 1150-1160 (see Stats. 2002, ch. 480, § 6); see also Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 12, Corporate Acquisitions, Mergers, and Reorganization s, § 265], a corporation may be converted into a domestic "other business entity" (that is, a limited liability company, limited partnership, general partnership, business trust, real estate investment trust, unincorporated association other than a nonprofit association, or domestic reciprocal insurer organized after 1974 to provide medical malpractice insurance pursuant to Ins. Code § 1550 et seq.) [Corp. Code § 1150(g); see Corp. Code § 174.5] if, pursuant to the proposed conversion [Corp. Code § 1151(a)]:

- Each share of the same class or series of the converting corporation would be treated equally with respect to any cash, rights, securities, or other property to be received by, or any obligations or restrictions to be imposed on, the holder of that share, unless all the shareholders of the class or series consent; and

- Nonredeemable common shares of the converting corporation would be converted only into nonredeemable equity securities of the converted entity unless all of the shareholders of the class consent.

The conversion of a corporation to a domestic other business entity may be effected only if both of the following conditions are met [Corp. Code § 1151(b)]:

- The law under which the converted entity will exist expressly permits the formation of that entity pursuant to a conversion.

- The corporation complies with any and all other requirements of any other law that applies to conversion to the converted entity.

[2] When Conversion is Effective

After the approval of a plan of conversion by the board and the outstanding shares of a corporation converting into a domestic other business entity [see Corp. Code § 1152; see also § 169.16[4]], the converting corporation must file all documents required by law to effect the conversion and create the converted entity, including a certificate of conversion or a statement of conversion [see Corp. Code § 1155; see § 169.16[6]]. The conversion will thereupon be effective [Corp. Code § 1153(a)].

A copy of the statement of partnership authority, certificate of limited partnership, or articles of organization complying with Corp. Code § 1155, duly certified by the Secretary of State on or after the effective date, is conclusive evidence of the conversion of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1153(b)].

[3] Applicable Definitions

Chapter 11.5 sets forth several definitions applicable to conversion procedures [Corp. Code § 1150]:

- "Converted corporation" means a corporation that results from a conversion of an other business entity or a foreign other business entity or a foreign corporation pursuant to Corp. Code § 1157.

- "Converted entity" means a domestic other business entity that results from a conversion of a corporation under Chapter 11.5.

- "Converting corporation" means a corporation that converts into a domestic other business entity pursuant to Chapter 11.5.

- "Converting entity" means an other business entity or a foreign other business entity or foreign corporation that converts into a corporation pursuant to Corp. Code § 1157.

For purposes of these definitions,"other business entity" means a domestic or foreign limited liability company, limited partnership, general partnership, business trust, real estate investment trust, an unincorporated association (other than a nonprofit association), or a domestic reciprocal insurer organized after 1974 to provide medical malpractice insurance pursuant to Ins. Code § 1550 et seq. [Corp. Code § 1150(g); see Corp. Code § 174.5]. "Domestic other business entity" means an other business entity organized under the laws of California [Corp. Code § 1150(e); see Corp. Code § 167.7]. "Foreign other business entity" means an other business entity organized under the laws of any state other than California, or of the District of Columbia, or under the laws of a foreign country [Corp. Code § 1150(e); see Corp. Code § 171.07].

[4] Plan of Conversion

[a] Contents, Approvals, and Parties

A corporation that desires to convert to a domestic other business entity must approve a plan of conversion that states the terms and conditions of the conversion, as well as other information required by statute [Corp. Code § 1152(a)].

The plan of conversion must be approved by the board of the converting corporation [Corp. Code § 151], and the principal terms of the plan of the conversion must be approved by the outstanding shares [Corp. Code § 152] of each class of the converting corporation. The approval of the outstanding shares may be given before or after approval by the board [Corp. Code § 1152(b)]. Notwithstanding the above provisions, if a converting corporation is a close corporation, the conversion must be approved by the affirmative vote of at least two-thirds of each class of outstanding shares of that converting corporation. The articles, however, may provide for a lesser vote, but not less than a majority of the outstanding shares of each class [Corp. Code § 1152(b)].

If the corporation is converting into a general or limited partnership or into a limited liability company, then in addition to the approval of the shareholders set forth above, the plan of conversion must be approved by each shareholder who will become a general partner or manager, as applicable, of the converted entity pursuant to the plan of conversion unless the shareholders have dissenters' rights pursuant to Corp. Code § 1159 and Chapter 13 of the Corporations Code [Corp. Code § 1152(c); see Corp. Code § 1300 et seq.; see also § 169.17].

When the conversion becomes effective, all shareholders of the converting corporation, except those that exercise dissenters' rights as provided in Corp. Code § 1159 and Chapter 13 will be deemed parties to any agreement or agreements constituting the governing documents for the converted entity adopted as part of the plan of conversion, irrespective of whether or not a shareholder has executed the plan of conversion or those governing documents for the converted entity. Any adoption of governing documents made pursuant thereto will be effective at the effective time or date of the conversion [Corp. Code § 1152(d)].

[b] Amending Plan

A plan of conversion may be amended before the conversion takes effect. The amendment must be approved by the board and, if it changes any of the principal terms of the plan of conversion, by the shareholders of the converting corporation in the same manner and to the same extent as was required for approval of the original plan of conversion [Corp. Code § 1152(e)].

[5] Abandoning Conversion

A plan of conversion may be abandoned by the board of a converting corporation, or by the shareholders of a converting corporation if the abandonment is approved by the outstanding shares, in each case in the same manner as required for approval of the plan of conversion, subject to the contractual rights of third parties, at any time before the conversion is effective [Corp. Code § 1152(f)].

[6] Certificate or Statement of Conversion

[a] Requirements

Upon conversion of a corporation, one of the following applies:

- If a corporation is converting into a domestic limited partnership, a statement of conversion must be completed on the certificate of limited partnership for the converted entity [Corp. Code § 1155(a)(1)].

- If the corporation is converting into a domestic partnership, a statement of conversion must be completed on the statement of partnership authority for the converted entity, or if no statement of partnership authority is filed, a certificate of conversion must be filed separately [Corp. Code § 1155(a)(2)].

- If the corporation is converting into a domestic limited liability company, a statement of conversion must be completed on the articles of organization for the converted entity [Corp. Code § 1155(a)(3)].

For the purposes of Chapter 11.5, the certificate of conversion must be on a form prescribed by the Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 1155(c)].

Any statement or certificate of conversion of a converting corporation must be executed and acknowledged by those officers of the converting corporation that would be required to sign an officers' certificate [Corp. Code § 173] and must set forth all of the following [Corp. Code § 1155(b)]:

- The name and the Secretary of State's file number of the converting corporation.

- A statement of the total number of outstanding shares of each class entitled to vote on the conversion, that the principal terms of the plan of conversion were approved by a vote of the number of shares of each class which equaled or exceeded the vote required under Corp. Code § 1152, specifying each class entitled to vote, and the percentage vote required of each class.

- The name, form, and jurisdiction of organization of the converted entity.

The filing with the Secretary of State of a statement of conversion on an organizational document or a certificate of conversion as set forth above will have the effect of the filing of a certificate of dissolution by the converting corporation. No converting corporation that has made the filing is required to file a certificate of election under Corp. Code § 1901 or a certificate of dissolution under Corp. Code § 1905 as a result of that conversion [Corp. Code § 1155(d)].

[b] California Tax Liability

The Secretary of State will notify the Franchise Tax Board of the conversion [Corp. Code § 1155(e)].

Upon the effectiveness of a conversion pursuant Chapter 11.5, a converted entity that is a domestic partnership, domestic limited partnership, or domestic limited liability company will be deemed to have assumed the liability of the converting corporation [Corp. Code § 1155(e)]:

- To prepare and file or cause to be prepared and filed all tax and information returns otherwise required of the converting corporation under the Bank and Corporation Tax Law [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23001 et seq].

- To pay any tax liability determined to be due pursuant to the Bank and Corporation Tax Law.

[7] Conversion of Other Business Entity or Foreign Other Business Entity into Corporation

An other business entity, foreign other business entity, or a foreign corporation may be converted into a corporation pursuant to Chapter 11.5 only if the converting entity is authorized by the laws under which it is organized to effect the conversion [Corp. Code § 1157(a)]. An other business entity, foreign other business entity, or a foreign corporation that desires to convert into a corporation must approve a plan of conversion or other instrument that is required to be approved to effect the conversion pursuant to the laws under which that entity is organized [Corp. Code § 1157(b)].

The conversion must be approved by the number or percentage of the partners, members, shareholders, or other holders of interest of the converting entity that is required by the laws under which that entity is organized, or a greater or lesser percentage as may be set forth in the converting entity's partnership agreement, articles of organization, operating agreement, articles of incorporation or other governing document in accordance with applicable laws [Corp. Code § 1157(c)].

The conversion will be effective under Chapter 11.5 upon the filing with the Secretary of State of the articles of incorporation of the converted corporation, containing a statement of conversion that complies with specific requirements [Corp. Code § 1157(d), (e)]. The filing of such a statement will have the effect of the filing of a certificate of cancellation by a converting foreign limited liability company or foreign limited partnership, and no converting foreign limited liability company or foreign limited partnership that has made the filing is required to file a certificate of cancellation under Corp. Code §§ 15696, 15909.07, or 17455 as a result of that conversion. If a converting entity is a foreign corporation qualified to transact business in California, the foreign corporation will, by virtue of the filing, automatically surrender its right to transact intrastate business [Corp. Code § 1157(f)].

The requirements of Corp. Code § 1157 do not apply to a foreign corporation's conversion into another foreign corporation. Therefore, the capacity of a qualified foreign corporation to do business, and to appear in legal proceedings, in California cannot be affected by the corporation's noncompliance with that code section in the event that the corporation converts, for example, from a Nevada corporation into a Delaware corporation [Capital Gold Group, Inc. v. Nortier (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1119, 1130-1132, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 439].

[8] Effect of Conversion on Rights and Liabilities of Converting Entity and Members

[a] Converting Entity Unchanged

An entity that converts into another entity pursuant to Chapter 11.5 is for all purposes (other than for the purposes of Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17001 et seq., 18401 et seq., and 23001 et seq.) the same entity that existed before the conversion [Corp. Code § 1158(a)]. When the conversion takes effect, all of the following apply [Corp. Code § 1158(b)]:

- All the rights and property, whether real, personal, or mixed, of the converting entity or converting corporation are vested in the converted entity or converted corporation.

- All debts, liabilities, and obligations of the converting entity or converting corporation continue as debts, liabilities, and obligations of the converted entity or converted corporation.

- All rights of creditors and liens upon the property of the converting entity or converting corporation will be preserved unimpaired and remain enforceable against the converted entity or converted corporation to the same extent as against the converting entity or converting corporation as if the conversion had not occurred.

- Any action or proceeding pending by or against the converting entity or converting corporation may be continued against the converted entity or converted corporation as if the conversion had not occurred.

[b] Liability of Shareholders

A shareholder of a converting corporation is liable for [Corp. Code § 1158(c)]:

- All obligations of the converting corporation for which the shareholder was personally liable before the conversion, but only to the extent that the shareholder was personally liable for the obligations of the converting corporation before the conversion.

- All obligations of the converted entity incurred after the conversion takes effect if either:

  - The shareholder becomes a general partner of a converted entity that is a general or limited partnership and, as a general partner, has liability under the laws under which the converted entity is organized or under the converted entity's governing documents; or

  - The shareholder becomes a holder of other interests in the converted entity and, as a holder, has liability under the laws under which the converted entity is organized or under the converted entity's governing documents.

A shareholder of a converted corporation remains liable for any and all obligations of the converting entity for which the shareholder was personally liable before the conversion, but only to the extent that the shareholder was personally liable for the obligations of the converting entity prior to the conversion [Corp. Code § 1158(d)].

If a party to a transaction with a converted corporation that converted from a partnership reasonably believes when entering into the transaction that a shareholder of the converted corporation continues to be a general partner of the converting entity after the conversion is effective, and the shareholder was a general partner of the partnership that converted into the converted corporation, the shareholder is liable for an obligation incurred by the converted corporation within 90 days after the conversion takes effect. The shareholder's liability for all other obligations of the converted corporation incurred after the conversion takes effect is that of a shareholder of a corporation [Corp. Code § 1158(e)].

A converted entity must cause written notice of the conversion to be given by mail within 90 days after the effective date of the conversion to all known creditors and claimants whose addresses appear on the records of the converting entity. Failure to comply with this requirement, however, will not affect the validity of the conversion, extend the 90-day period set forth in Corp. Code § 1158(e) or otherwise affect the rights of a creditor or claimant [Corp. Code § 1158(f)].

[c] Rights of Shareholders

The shareholders of a converting corporation will have all of the rights under Chapter 13 [see Corp. Code § 1300 et seq.; see also § 169.17] of the shareholders of a corporation involved in a reorganization requiring the approval of its outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 152], and the converting corporation will have all of the obligations under Chapter 13 of a corporation involved in the reorganization. Solely for purposes of applying the provisions of Chapter 13 (and not for purposes of Chapter 12) [see Corp. Code § 1200 et seq.; see also § 169.12], a conversion pursuant to Corp. Code § 1151 or 1157 will be deemed to constitute a reorganization [Corp. Code § 1159].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-169 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 169.17

§ 169.17 Dissenters' Rights

[1] Rights Determined by Shareholder Voting Requirement

If the approval of the outstanding shares [Corp. Code § 152] is required for a reorganization pursuant to Corp. Code § 1201(a), (b), (e), or (f) [§ 169.12[3]], each shareholder of that corporation entitled to vote on the transaction and each shareholder of a subsidiary corporation in a short-form merger may, by complying with Corp. Code §§ 1300-1312, require the corporation in which the shareholder holds shares to purchase for cash at their fair market value the shares owned by the shareholder that are dissenting shares [Corp. Code § 1300(a)]. Shareholders of subsidiary corporations in short-form mergers are also entitled to require the corporation to make a cash purchase of their dissenting shares [Corp. Code § 1300(a)].

The fair market value of dissenting shares is determined as of the day before the first announcement of the terms of the proposed reorganization or short-form merger, excluding any appreciation or depreciation in consequence of the proposed action, but adjusted for any subsequent stock split, reverse stock split, or share dividend [Corp. Code § 1300(a)].

Note that the shareholder will only have appraisal rights if he or she has the right under the enumerated subdivisions of Corp. Code § 1201. Thus, appraisal rights do not exist when the right to vote on a reorganization is conferred by Corp. Code § 1201(c) or (d), that is, when the right to vote is premised on either an amendment to the articles of the surviving corporation or on a modification of the rights, preferences, privileges, or restrictions on shares received in a merger or sale-of-assets reorganization. The exception to the requirement that the shareholder have the right to vote in order to exercise dissenters' rights is in the case of a shareholder of a subsidiary corporation in a short-form merger [see Corp. Code § 1300(a)].

[2] Application to Conversions

Conversions pursuant to Chapter 11.5 of the Corporations Code [see Corp. Code § 1150 et seq., discussed in § 169.41[4]] are deemed to constitute a reorganization for purposes of applying the provisions of Chapter 13 only [Corp. Code § 1313]. The shareholders of a converting corporation will have all of the rights under Chapter 13 [see Corp. Code § 1300 et seq.] of the shareholders of a corporation involved in a reorganization requiring the approval of its outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 152], and the converting corporation will have all of the obligations under Chapter 13 of a corporation involved in the reorganization. Solely for purposes of applying the provisions of Chapter 13 (and not for purposes of Chapter 12) [see Corp. Code § 1200 et seq.; see also § 169.12], a conversion pursuant to Corp. Code §§ 1151 or 1157 will be deemed to constitute a reorganization [Corp. Code § 1159].

[3] Dissenting Shares Defined

Even when dissenters' rights ordinarily would exist because the shareholders have the right to approve a reorganization (including one in which shareholders receive interests of a surviving limited partnership), the definition of "dissenting shares" in Corp. Code § 1300(b) further limits the right to dissent when the shares are publicly traded and can be sold at their fair market value, thus avoiding the costly and time-consuming appraisal process. The definition of dissenting shares also sets forth other requirements that, unless exactly complied with, may also disqualify shares from appraisal rights.

The term "dissenting shares" means shares that come within all of the following descriptions:

- Shares that were not immediately before the reorganization or short-form merger listed on any National Securities Exchange certified by the Commissioner of Corporations under Corp. Code § 25100(o), and the notice of meeting of shareholders to act on the reorganization summarizes the provisions of Corp. Code §§ 1300-1304. However, this exclusion does not apply to any shares if their transfer is restricted by the corporation or by any law or regulation. This exclusion also is inapplicable to any class of shares if demands for payment are filed with respect to 5 percent or more of the outstanding shares of that class [Corp. Code § 1300(b)(1)];

- Shares that were outstanding on the record date for determination of the shareholders entitled to vote on the reorganization and either (1) were not voted in favor of the reorganization, or (2) if they were described in Corp. Code § 1300(b)(1), above, (without regard to the exclusions of that paragraph), were voted against the reorganization, or were held of record on the effective date of a short-form merger. However, clause (1) rather than clause (2) of this paragraph applies when the approval required by Corp. Code § 1201 (reorganizations) is sought by written consent rather than at a meeting [Corp. Code § 1300(b)(2)];

- Shares that the dissenting shareholder has demanded that the corporation purchase at their fair market value in accordance with Corp. Code § 1301 [Corp. Code § 1300(b)(3)]; and

- Shares that the dissenting shareholder has submitted for endorsement, in accordance with Corp. Code § 1302 [Corp. Code § 1300(b)(4)].

"Dissenting shareholder" means the record holder of dissenting shares and includes a transferee of record [Corp. Code § 1300(c)].

[4] Rights Abrogated if Shares Provide for Specific Payment

The dissenters' rights, other than those in Corp. Code § 1312 [see § 169.42[1]], do not apply to classes of shares whose terms and provisions specifically set forth the amount to be paid in respect to those shares in the event of a reorganization or merger [Corp. Code § 1311]. Any holder of shares of a class whose terms and provisions specifically state the amount to be paid in respect to those shares in the event of a reorganization or merger is entitled to payment in accordance with those terms [Corp. Code § 1312(a)]. However, if the holders of a class or series of preferred shares having specified rights of payment in a reorganization approve, by a vote sufficient to approve the amendment of the articles provision that creates that right, reorganization terms providing for a lesser amount than they would otherwise be entitled to, the holders are entitled to payment in accordance with the terms and provisions of the approved reorganization [Corp. Code § 1312(a); see Corp. Code § 1202(b); see also § 169.12[3][j]].

Chapter 169 CORPORATIONS: REORGANIZATIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-169 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 169.18

§ 169.18 Procedure for Enforcing Dissenters' Rights

[1] Notice by Corporation of Reorganization Approval

When any shareholders of a corporation that is party to a reorganization have a right under Corp. Code § 1300 to require the corporation to purchase their shares for cash, the corporation must mail to each such shareholder a notice of the approval of the reorganization by the corporation's outstanding shares within 10 days after the date of that approval. The notice must be accompanied by a copy of Corp. Code §§ 1300-1304, which set forth dissenting shareholders' rights and the initial procedure required to enforce those rights, a statement of the price determined by the corporation to represent the fair market value of the dissenting shares, and a brief description of the procedure to be followed if a shareholder desires to exercise the shareholder's right under those statutes [Corp. Code § 1301(a)]. The statement of price constitutes an offer by the corporation to purchase any dissenting shares at that price unless the shares cease to be dissenting [Corp. Code § 1301(a)]. The notice need not, however, contain information regarding the corporation's rights [Sturgeon Petroleums, Ltd. v. Merchants Petroleum Co. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 134, 138, 195 Cal. Rptr. 29] .

Similarly, a surviving parent in a short-form merger of a nonwholly owned domestic subsidiary must give notice to each shareholder of the subsidiary at least 20 days before the effective date [Corp. Code § 1110(h); see § 169.15].

Shareholders on notice that the corporation is obligated by statute to provide a statement of the price determined by the corporation to represent the fair market value of the dissenting shares and that the statement constitutes an offer by the corporation to purchase the dissenting shares at the price stated [Corp. Code § 1301(a)] can act to protect their interests as potential dissenters by promptly demanding a buyout price from the corporation. If unsuccessful, the shareholders can seek judicial relief by petitioning for a writ of mandate to compel the corporation to immediately provide a statement of the buyout price as required by statute [Singhania v. Uttarwar (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 416, 432, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 861 (there is no reason for derailing statutory buyout procedure if corporation sends notice of approval of reorganization which omits statement of fair market price for dissenters' shares, when corporation provides full text of Corp. Code §§ 1300-1304); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1085 (right to petition for writ of mandate); see also Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1027, 1032 (costs recoverable by prevailing party)].

[2] Demand by Shareholder That Corporation Purchase Shares

Any shareholder who has a right to require the corporation to purchase the shareholder's shares for cash, that is, a "dissenting shareholder" [see Corp. Code § 1300; see also § 169.17[3]], and who desires the corporation to purchase those shares, must make written demand on the corporation to purchase those shares and make payment to the shareholder in cash of their fair market value [Corp. Code § 1301(b)]. The demand must (1) state the number and class of the shares held of record by the shareholder for which purchase is demanded, and (2) contain a statement of what the shareholder claims to be a fair market value of those shares as of the day before the announcement of the proposed reorganization or short-form merger [Corp. Code § 1301(c)]. This demand constitutes an offer by the shareholder to sell at the demand price [Corp. Code § 1301(c)].

If the shares referred to in the demand are listed on a certified national securities exchange, the demand is not effective for any purpose unless it is received by the corporation or its transfer agent not later than the date of the shareholders' meeting to vote on the proposed reorganization [Corp. Code § 1301(b)]. In all other cases, the demand is not effective unless it is received by the corporation or its transfer agents within 30 days after the notice of approval by the outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 1301(a)] or the announcement of a short-form merger [see Corp. Code § 1110(h)] was mailed to the shareholder [Corp. Code § 1301(b)].

A failure to timely perfect dissenters' rights is a de facto choice by a shareholder to accept a merger or other reorganization and forgo dissenters' rights [Singhania v. Uttarwar (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 416, 434-435, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 861 (allegations or evidence of fraud might prevent application of this rule)].

[3] Submission of Share Certificates

Within 30 days after the date on which notice of the approval by the outstanding shares, or the notice pursuant to Corp. Code § 1110(h) (short-form mergers), was mailed to the shareholder, the shareholder must submit the following to the corporation at its principal office or at the office of its transfer agent [Corp Code § 1302]:

- If the shares are certificated securities, the shareholder's certificates representing any shares that the shareholder demands that the corporation purchase, to be stamped or endorsed with a statement that the shares are dissenting shares or to be exchanged for certificates of appropriate denomination so stamped or endorsed.

- If the shares are uncertificated securities, written notice of the number of shares that the shareholder demands that the corporation purchase.

On subsequent transfers of the dissenting shares on the books of the corporation, the new certificates, the initial transaction statement, and other written statements [see Corp. Code § 171.1] issued to the transferees must bear a like statement that the shares are dissenting shares and the name of the original dissenting holder of the shares [Corp. Code § 1302].

[4] Agreement and Payment for Shares

If the corporation and a dissenting shareholder agree that the shares are dissenting shares and agree on the price of the shares, the dissenting shareholder is entitled to the agreed price, with interest at the legal rate payable on judgments from the date of the agreement. Any agreement fixing the fair market value of any dissenting shares as between the corporation and the holders of the dissenting shares must be filed with the secretary of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1303(a)].

Unless otherwise provided by the agreement, payment of the fair market value of the dissenting shares must be made within the later of (1) 30 days after the agreement on the value of the shares or (2) 30 days after any statutory or contractual conditions to the reorganization are satisfied, and in the case of certificated securities, subject to surrender of the certificates [Corp. Code § 1303(b)]. However, payment for dissenting shares is contingent on compliance with all requirements applicable to distributions involving share repurchases [see Corp. Code § 1306; see also Corp. Code §§ 500-511]. If the corporation is unable to comply with these requirements, a dissenting shareholder becomes a creditor of the corporation for the agreed value of the shares, with interest at the legal rate payable on judgments until paid. The debt becomes payable when the corporation can comply with these requirements. However, the shareholder-creditor is subordinate to all other creditors in any liquidation proceeding [Corp. Code § 1306].

[5] Court Action to Enforce Dissenting Shareholders' Rights

[a] Right to Bring Action

If a corporation denies that the shares are dissenting shares, or if a corporation and a dissenting shareholder fail to agree on the fair market value of dissenting shares, either the shareholder demanding purchase of the dissenting shares or any interested corporation, may file a complaint in the superior court of the proper county [see Corp. Code § 177; see also § 169.10[3]] praying the court to determine the issues [Corp. Code § 1304(a)]. The complaint must be filed within six months after the date on which notice of the reorganization's approval by the outstanding shares, or notice that the short-form merger will become effective [see Corp. Code § 1110(h)], was mailed to the shareholder [Corp. Code § 1304(a)]. The complaint may request that the court determine whether the shares are dissenting shares, the fair market value of the dissenting shares, or both [Corp. Code § 1304(a)].

Two or more dissenting shareholders may join as plaintiffs, or be joined as defendants, in any enforcement action, and two or more such actions may be consolidated [Corp. Code § 1304(b)]. In addition, an interested corporation or a dissenting shareholder may intervene in any pending enforcement action [Corp. Code § 1304(a)].

On the trial of the action, the court must determine the issues. If the status of the shares as dissenting shares is in issue, the court must first determine that issue. If the fair market value of the dissenting shares is in issue, the court must determine the fair market value of those shares or appoint one or more impartial appraisers to determine that value [Corp. Code § 1304(c)]. However, if litigation is instituted to test the sufficiency or regularity of the votes of the shareholders in authorizing a reorganization, any action brought to determine whether the shares are dissenting [see Corp. Code § 1304], or the fair market value of dissenting shares in an appraisal proceeding [see Corp. Code § 1305; see also § 169.18[5][b]], must be suspended until final determination of that litigation [Corp. Code § 1310; see § 169.19].

[b] Determination of Value

When the fair market value of dissenting shares is in issue, the court may determine that value itself, or may appoint appraisers [see Corp. Code § 1304(c)]. Particularly when there is no active market for his or her shares [see Gallois v. West End Chemical Co. (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 765, 771-774, 8 Cal. Rptr. 596] , a dissenting shareholder will most likely urge the appointment of appraisers. In the context of an actively-traded stock, for which there is an existing market, a court will be less likely to appoint an appraiser [see Gallois v. West End Chemical Co. (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 765, 772-773, 8 Cal. Rptr. 596 (shareholder precluded from attacking fairness of market price by showing board informally determined not to call preferred shares)]. However, the mere existence of a market for the shares is not conclusive evidence of their fair market value: the fact that appraisal rights are generally withheld from listed securities is indicative of the conclusiveness with which their market prices are regarded [see Corp. Code § 1300(b)], but other securities traded over the counter may or may not be sold at prices that reflect their fair value; the volume of transactions in the shares and the actual sale prices as opposed to bid and ask prices should be considered in determining the fair market value [Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 12, Corporate Acquisitions, Mergers, and Reorganizations (Matthew Bender)].

If the court appoints an appraiser or appraisers, they must proceed forthwith to determine the fair market value per share of the dissenting shares [Corp. Code § 1305(a)]. Within the time fixed by the court, the appraisers (or a majority of them) must make and file a report in the office of the clerk of the court. After its filing, and on the motion of any party, the report must be submitted to the court and considered on the evidence that the court deems relevant. If the court finds the report reasonable, the court may confirm it [Corp. Code § 1305(a)].

If a majority of the appointed appraisers fail to make and file a report within 10 days from the date of their appointment (or any extension allowed by the court) or the report is not confirmed by the court, the court must determine the fair market value of the dissenting shares [Corp. Code § 1305(b)]. In determining fair market value, the court may also consider evidence of fraud or other misconduct that negatively affected fair market value [Sturgeon Petroleums Ltd. v. Merchants Petroleum Co. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 134, 142, 195 Cal. Rptr. 29] .

[c] Judgment

Subject to any restrictions on a corporation's right to repurchase its own shares [see Corp. Code § 1306; see also § 169.18[4]], judgment must be rendered against the corporation for payment of an amount equal to the fair market value of each dissenting share multiplied by the number of dissenting shares that any party or intervening dissenter is entitled to require the corporation to purchase. The judgment draws interest at the legal rate from the date on which the judgment is entered [Corp. Code § 1305(c)].

The judgment is payable immediately with respect to uncertificated securities, and on the endorsement and delivery to the corporation of the certificated securities, described in the judgment. Any party may appeal the judgment [Corp. Code § 1305(d)].

[d] Costs

The costs, including reasonable compensation to the appraisers as fixed by the court, may be assessed or apportioned as the court considers equitable [Corp. Code § 1305(e)]. However, if the appraised value exceeds the amount of the original corporate offer, the corporation must pay costs. If the value awarded by the court for the dissenting shares is more than 125 percent of the price offered by the corporation in the notice mailed to the shareholder [see Corp. Code § 1301(a)], the court may in its discretion impose additional costs on the corporation, including attorney's fees, fees of expert witness, and interest dating from the date of the submission of the dissenting shares for endorsement (certificated securities) or the submission of written notice (uncertificated securities) at the legal rate payable on judgments [Corp. Code § 1305(e); see Corp. Code §§ 1300-1302].

[6] Dividend and Other Rights of Dissenting Shares

Cash dividends declared and paid by the corporation on dissenting shares after the date of approval of the reorganization by the outstanding shares and before payment by the corporation for the shares are credited against the total amount to be paid by the corporation for the dissenting shares [Corp. Code § 1307]. The price paid by the corporation must also be adjusted for any stock split, reverse stock split, or share dividend that becomes effective after the day before the first announcement of the terms of the proposed reorganization [Corp. Code § 1300(a)].

Except as expressly limited by the dissenters' rights provisions [see Corp. Code §§ 1300-1312], dissenting shareholders continue to have all the rights and privileges incident to their shares until the fair market value of their shares is determined [Corp. Code § 1308]. Thus, a dissenting shareholder would be entitled to new shares resulting from a stock split or stock dividend, but the price paid per share will have to be adjusted downward before it is multiplied by the number of shares now held by the dissenting shareholder.

The dissenting shareholder is not entitled, however, to dividends in shares or cash that are declared by the surviving corporation after consummation of the reorganization [Gallois v. Stauffer Chemical Co. (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 328, 332-333, 34 Cal. Rptr. 411] . Once a shareholder has made a demand for payment for his or her shares, the dissenting shareholder may not withdraw a demand without the corporation's consent [Corp. Code § 1308].

[7] Termination of Dissenting Share Status

Dissenting shares lose their status as such, and their holders cease to be dissenting shareholders entitled to require the corporation to purchase their shares, if any of the following occurs [Corp. Code § 1309]:

- The corporation abandons the reorganization. On abandonment, the corporation must pay on demand to any dissenting shareholder who has initiated proceedings in good faith to qualify the shares as dissenting or to have their fair market value determined, all necessary expenses incurred in those proceedings and reasonable attorney's fees.

- The shares are transferred before their submission for endorsement as dissenting shares [see Corp. Code § 1302] or are surrendered for conversion into shares of another class in accordance with the articles of incorporation.

- The dissenting shareholders and the corporation do not agree on the status of the shares as dissenting shares or on the purchase price, and neither files a complaint or intervenes in a pending action [see Corp. Code § 1304], within six months after the date on which notice of the approval by the outstanding shares or the announcement of a short-form merger was mailed to the shareholder.

- The dissenting shareholder, with the consent of the corporation, withdraws the shareholder's demand for purchase of the dissenting shares.

§ 169.19 Attacking Validity of Reorganization

[1] Dissenters' Rights as Exclusive Remedy

In general, no shareholder who has the right under Corp. Code §§ 1300-1312 to demand payment in cash for dissenting shares has any right at law or in equity to attack the validity of a reorganization or short-form merger, or to have one set aside or rescinded [Corp. Code § 1312(a); Steinberg v. Amplica, Inc. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1198, 1205-1206, 233 Cal. Rptr. 249, 729 P.2d 683] , except in an action to test whether the number of shares required to authorize or approve the reorganization were legally voted in favor of it [Corp. Code § 1312(a); Sturgeon Petroleums, Ltd. v. Merchants Petroleum Co. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 134, 139-140, 195 Cal. Rptr. 29] . This rule is subject to two qualifications:

- First, if the rights of holders of shares of a class whose terms and provisions specifically set forth the amount to be paid in respect to those shares in the event of a reorganization or merger or, if the principal reorganization terms are approved, in accordance with the terms of the approved reorganization, the holders are entitled to payment in accordance with those terms [Corp. Code § 1312(a); see § 169.17[4]].

- Second, if one of the parties to a reorganization or short-form merger is controlled by or under common control with another party, the exclusive remedy rule does not apply to a shareholder of that party who has not demanded payment for dissenting shares [Corp. Code § 1312(b), (c); see also § 169.19[2]]. Absent one of these qualifications, a dissenting shareholder's sole remedy for contesting the amount determined to be the dissenting shares' fair market value is to seek an appraisal proceeding [see Corp. Code § 1304; see also Steinberg v. Amplica, Inc. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1198, 1209, 1214, 233 Cal. Rptr. 249, 729 P.2d 683 ; Sturgeon Petroleums, Ltd. v. Merchants Petroleum Co. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 134, 139-141, 195 Cal. Rptr. 29] .

Corp. Code § 1312(a) precludes dissenters, after a merger is completed, from seeking damages based on alleged breaches of fiduciary duty involving a failure to comply with a lawful demand for inspection by dissenters seeking to evaluate whether to exercise their dissenters' rights [Singhania v. Uttarwar (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 416, 431, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 861] .

[2] Election of Remedies When Corporations Under Common Control

If one of the parties to a reorganization or a short-form merger is directly or indirectly controlled by, or under common control with, another party to the reorganization, the restriction on attacks on the validity of a reorganization discussed above does not apply to any shareholder of such party who has not demanded payment of cash for dissenting shares [Corp. Code § 1312(b)]. Because "control" means the power to direct or cause the direction of the management and policies of a corporation [Corp. Code § 160(a)], a parent-subsidiary short-form merger would always involve the control of one party by another. However, if a shareholder institutes an action to challenge the validity of the reorganization or short-form merger, or to have it set aside or rescinded, the shareholder forfeits his or her right to demand payment for dissenting shares [Corp. Code § 1312(b)]. The court, in any action attacking the validity of the reorganization or short-form merger, or to have the reorganization or merger set aside or rescinded, may not restrain or enjoin the consummation of the transaction except on 10 days prior notice to the corporation and on a determination by the court that clearly no other remedy will adequately protect the complaining shareholder or the class of shareholders of which the shareholder is a member [Corp. Code § 1312(b)]. In such an action, a party to a reorganization or short-form merger that controls another party to the transaction has the burden of proving that it is just and reasonable as to the shareholders of the controlled party. Similarly, a person controlling two or more parties to a reorganization has the burden of proving that it is just and reasonable as to the shareholders of any controlled party [Corp. Code § 1312(c)].

§ 169.42 Decisions

[1] Attacking Validity of Reorganization--Dissenters' Rights as Exclusive Remedy

Recovery of fair market value of shares is only state remedy of dissenting shareholder except to test whether or not merger or consolidation was approved by requisite number of shares. Steinberg v. Amplica, Inc. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1198, 1204-1206, 233 Cal. Rptr. 249, 729 P.2d 683 ; Sturgeon Petroleums, Ltd. v. Merchants Petroleum Co. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 134, 139-140, 195 Cal. Rptr. 29

Dissenting shareholder may not forgo appraisal and seek recovery from directors, majority shareholders, and corporations in connection with alleged self-dealing and insider misconduct in connection with merger because dissenters' rights can be fully vindicated in appraisal proceeding. Steinberg v. Amplica, Inc. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1198, 1207-1209, 233 Cal. Rptr. 249, 729 P.2d 683

Neither failure of initial offering prospectus to state that merger candidates were being sought, nor any alleged misrepresentations in proxy statement relating to merger, constitute basis for action for damages by dissenting shareholders. Steinberg v. Amplica, Inc. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1198, 1206-1207, 233 Cal. Rptr. 249, 729 P.2d 683

Dissenting shareholders have no right to require unwinding of merger, or, if they did, to require disgorgement by directors and majority shareholders of allegedly ill-gotten gain because any disgorgement would return to corporation. Steinberg v. Amplica, Inc. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1198, 1204 n.7, 233 Cal. Rptr. 249, 729 P.2d 683

Corp. Code § 415 is not applicable to Corp. Code § 1312(a), which limits rights of dissenting shareholders in connection with merger to appraisal and recovery of appraised value. Steinberg v. Amplica, Inc. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1198, 1213-1214, 233 Cal. Rptr. 249, 729 P.2d 683

[2] Dissenters' Rights

Corp. Code § 1301 requires corporation to provide only brief description of procedure to be followed if shareholders desire to exercise rights under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1300-1304; there is no corresponding duty to advise of the corporation's rights. Sturgeon Petroleums, Ltd. v. Merchants Petroleum Co. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 134, 138, 195 Cal. Rptr. 29

Dissenting shareholder are not entitled to dividends in shares or cash declared by surviving corporation after consummation of merger but during pendency of shareholder's appeal in action for appraisal of shares owned in disappearing corporation. Gallois v. Stauffer Chemical Co. (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 328, 332-333, 34 Cal. Rptr. 411

[3] Duty of Disclosure

In civil 10b-5 (15 U.S.C. § 78j(b)) fraud actions, materiality of preliminary merger negotiations is dependent on probability that transaction will be consummated and on significance of merger to issuer; thus, materiality of preliminary merger negotiations is question of fact to be determined on case by case basis; factors to be considered include size of companies involved, indicia of interest of board members, whether investment banks have become involved, whether directors' resolution has been passed, and potential for stock involved to command premium in excess of market value. Basic Incorporated v. Levinson (1988) 485 U.S. 224, 238-240, 250, 108 S. Ct. 978, 99 L. Ed. 2d 194

In civil 10b-5 fraud actions relating to disclosure of preliminary merger negotiations, "agreement-in-principle" standard of materiality (no disclosure required until agreement in principle exists as to price and structure) is abrogated for artificially excluding from definition of materiality information that would otherwise be significant to trading decision of reasonable investor. Basic Incorporated v. Levinson (1988) 485 U.S. 224, 236, 249, 108 S. Ct. 978, 99 L. Ed. 2d 194 ; see Eldridge v. Tymshare, Inc. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 767, 772-776, 230 Cal. Rptr. 815 (agreement in principle is standard used by California law)

In civil 10b-5 fraud actions relating to disclosure of preliminary merger negotiations, rule that negotiations become material by virtue of statement denying their existence is abrogated; falsity or incompleteness of statement is not sufficient to confer materiality on otherwise insignificant fact. Basic Incorporated v. Levinson (1988) 485 U.S. 224, 237-238, 249 108 S. Ct. 978, 99 L. Ed. 2d 194

Directors of corporation targeted for takeover have no duty to disclose merger negotiations to shareholders until agreement in principle has been reached even though withdrawal from prior agreement in principle and termination of earlier merger negotiations had been publicly announced. Eldridge v. Tymshare, Inc. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 767, 772-776, 230 Cal. Rptr. 815 ; but see Basic Incorporated v. Levinson (1988) 485 U.S. 224, 238-240, 249, 108 S. Ct. 978, 99 L. Ed. 2d 194 (probably applicable to abrogate agreement-in-principle standard under California law)

[4] Effect of Merger Agreement

Merger agreement between boards of directors is valid, binding contract that governs their conduct before submission to shareholders for approval; directors are not barred by fiduciary duties from entering into exclusive merger agreement in which they agree to refrain from negotiating or accepting other offers until shareholders consider initial proposal; competitive justification is not defense in suit against third corporation for tortious interference with exclusive merger agreement. Jewel Companies v. Pay Less Drug Stores Northwest (9th Cir. 1984) 741 F.2d 1555, 1564, 1568

[5] Fairness Hearing

Under federal and state tests, California Corporations Commissioner's fairness finding under Corp. Code § 1101.1 is collateral estoppel to challenge regarding fairness of merger price even if no review of fairness decision is sought under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5. Plaine v. McCabe (9th Cir. 1986) 797 F.2d 713, 718-721

[6] Federal Law

Indiana protective statute that imposes conditions on acquisition of "control shares" of Indiana corporations that opt for protection under it does not violate Williams Act (15 U.S.C. §§ 78m(d), (e), 78n(d)-(f)) or commerce clause. CTS Corp. v. Dynamics Corp. of America (1987) 481 U.S. 69, 94, 107 S. Ct. 1637, 95 L. Ed. 2d 67

Sale of 50 or 100 percent of stock of closely held business is "security" within meaning of Securities Exchange Acts of 1933 and 1934 so as to allow defrauded purchaser antifraud remedies of Acts; when instrument is stock, court need not look to economic substance of transaction to determine if it is "security"; sale of business doctrine, which would compel contrary result, is abrogated in sale of traditional stock of closely held corporation. Gould v. Ruefenacht (1985) 471 U.S. 701, 704-706, 105 S. Ct. 2308, 85 L. Ed. 2d 708 ; Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth (1985) 471 U.S. 681, 685-692, 694-697, 105 S. Ct. 2297, 85 L. Ed. 2d 692

Shareholders responding to tender offer have private right of action against corporation offering more favorable terms to some tendering shareholders than are offered to others under Williams Act requirement of equality of treatment among all shareholders tendering shares [15 U.S.C. § 78n(d)(7)]. Epstein v. MCA (9th Cir. 1995) 50 F.3d 644, 652

If ICC has approved tender offer and merger [see 49 U.S.C. § 11341(a)], transaction is exempt from attack under all other laws and no cause of action can be stated against directors of railroad for dishonesty or obtaining too low price; result not altered because merger was accomplished through voting trust. Deutsch v. Flannery (9th Cir. 1989) 883 F.2d 60, 62-63 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 818 (1990)

California Corporations Commissioner's fairness finding under Corp. Code § 1101.1 collaterally estops federal challenge to fairness of merger price; however, fair price does not preclude injury on account of misstatements or omissions in tender offer under 15 U.S.C. § 78n(e). Plaine v. McCabe (9th Cir. 1986) 797 F.2d 713, 718-722

[7] Liabilities of Combined Entities

When successor was sued for injuries arising from predecessor's chemical products, any assignment of predecessor's insurance benefits required consent of insurers, and no coverage existed when policy had no-assignment clause and insurers did not consent to assignment; although corporate successor that is involuntarily liable for the torts of its predecessor by operation of law may seek coverage for that liability under its predecessor's insurance policies, when a corporation voluntarily assumes liability by contract its rights are defined and limited by that contract. Henkel Corp. v. Hartford (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 934, 941-943, 945, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828, 62 P.3d 69

Policies underlying strict liability in tort for defective product require departure from rule of nonliability of successor corporation when assets purchased in transaction; although corporation is not liable under any exception to general rule of nonliability, plaintiff would be without remedy and requiring successor to assume liability for products of predecessor was fair. Ray v. Alad Corp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 22, 30-31, 136 Cal. Rptr. 574, 560 P.2d 3 ; Kaminski v. Western MacArthur Co. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 445, 451-459, 220 Cal. Rptr. 895 (applied to successor distributor); see also Maloney v. American Pharmaceutical Co. (1988) 207 Cal. App. 3d 282, 289-290, 255 Cal. Rptr. 1 (refusing to extend doctrine to include liability for negligence)

Successor by merger that did not itself discriminate is liable for attorney's fees expended by employees to compel enforcement of injunction issued against predecessor under Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (29 U.S.C. §§ 621-634) when there is continuity of operations and work force and successor had notice of predecessor's legal obligation and ability to provide adequate relief directly. Criswell v. Delta Air Lines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 869 F.2d 449, 450-452

General rule that successor corporation that purchases assets in arms length transaction is liable for injuries caused by products manufactured by predecessor if predecessor has liquidated itself after sale of assets requires that sale contribute to liquidation; if predecessor operated for 20 years after sale and then filed for reorganization in bankruptcy, successor corporation is not liable. Kline v. Johns-Manville (9th Cir. 1984) 745 F.2d 1217, 1219-1221

In personal injury action for cancer caused by childhood exposure to second-hand asbestos carried home from workplace by decedent's parents, successor corporation did not expressly or impliedly assume tort liabilities of its predecessor, there was no de facto merger or mere continuation of predecessor, and successor was not a product line successor in interest to predecessor under Ray v. Alad; thus defendant corporation was not liable for injuries as successor in interest to company where decedent's parents had worked. Franklin v. USX Corporation (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 615, 629-630, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 11

Although finding of successor liability in tort does not entitle successor corporation, by operation of law, to insurance coverage of corporate predecessor, in case of de facto merger the benefits of insurance policies inure to successor entity; change in form of ownership company from one of corporate to limited partnership ownership--with same operations as before, under same name, with same equity interests, and under same control--fell within merger exception. Westoil Terminals Co. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 634, 639-640, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 636

For purposes of successor liability in tort for asbestos-related injuries, successor did not expressly or impliedly assume other than specifically-identified obligations of predecessor from whom successor purchased line of business; corporate merger did not effectuate adoption of that liability; and corporation was not product line successor under principles set forth in Ray v. Alad Corp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 22, 30-31, 136 Cal. Rptr. 574, 560 P.2d 3 , discussed above. Chaknova v. Wilbur-Ellis Co. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 962, 967-970

Judgment against corporation for products liability affirmed based on theory of successor liability set forth in Ray v. Alad Corp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 22, 30-31, 136 Cal. Rptr. 574, 560 P.2d 3 , discussed above; question of whether it is fair to impose successor liability is for court, but error in permitting jury to decide that question was harmless. Rosales v. Thermex-Thermatron, Inc. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 187, 191, 194-195, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 861

Surviving corporation under statutory merger is responsible for all liabilities, whether known or unknown, of merged corporation. Petrini v. Mohasco Corp. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 1091, 1098-1099, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 910

Corporation that purchased assets of manufacturer from its trustee in bankruptcy is not liable for injury caused by product when purchaser did not cause bankruptcy; this policy aided policy of discharge in bankruptcy. Stewart v. Telex Communications, Inc. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 190, 200, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 669

Imposition of strict products liability on successor of manufacturer is not proper, although successor carried on manufacturing and marketing operations of acquired company, when successor was not cause of acquired company's dissolution. Phillips v. Cooper Laboratories (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1648, 1657-1659, 264 Cal. Rptr. 311 (acquired company operated as warehouse for related companies for 10 years after acquisition and then was dissolved)

Imposition of strict products liability on successor of manufacturer is generally not proper unless acquisition is by merger and successor is only surviving entity, or if acquired company continues operating as separate corporation and acquiring company expressly assumed its liabilities. Phillips v. Cooper Laboratories (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1648, 1660-1662, 264 Cal. Rptr. 311

Corporation that was formed by former officer of defunct predecessor and that purchased approximately 10 percent of defunct predecessor's assets for fair consideration from creditor that liquidated predecessor is not continuation for fraudulent purpose that would make successor liable for injuries caused by products manufactured by predecessor.

Maloney v. American Pharmaceutical Co. (1988) 207 Cal. App. 3d 282, 287-289, 255 Cal. Rptr. 1

Successor is not liable for predecessor's defective products unless it played some role in curtailing or destroying injured plaintiff's remedy; changes in nature and size of business, other relevant considerations. Lundell v. Sidney Machine Tool Co. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1546, 1553-1557, 236 Cal. Rptr. 70

Surviving corporation is liable for liabilities, including punitive damages, of former subsidiary that manufactured defective product, merged into it, and became operating unit of it. Marks v. Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1429, 1437-1438, 232 Cal. Rptr. 594

[8] Sales of Assets

Transferee of corporation's assets has no standing to attack sale for want of shareholder approval of sale. Gunther v. Thompson (1931) 211 Cal. 631, 634, 296 P. 611

Failure to observe procedures for calling meeting or giving notice in connection with seeking approval of sale of all assets does not invalidate sale if sufficient number of shareholders did in fact consent. McDermott v. Bear Film Co. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 607, 612, 33 Cal. Rptr. 486

Corporation lacks standing to complain that sale of its assets had not received shareholder approval. Associates Discount Corp. v. Tobb Co. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 541, 549, 50 Cal. Rptr. 738

[9] Shareholder's Rights

When corporate entity of target corporation is preserved as surviving corporation in "reverse triangular phantom merger," no approval of outstanding preferred shares is required under Corp. Code § 1201(a) if rights, preferences, privileges, and restrictions on those shares remain unchanged. Kirschner Brothers Oil, Inc v. Natomas Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 784, 790-791, 229 Cal. Rptr. 899

Certificate of determination under which preferred shares were issued is inapplicable to merger in which issuer was surviving entity because certificate was silent as to voting rights except when issuer was merged into another entity. Kirschner Brothers Oil, Inc v. Natomas Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 784, 791-792, 229 Cal. Rptr. 899

Neither California law nor certificate of determination under which preferred shares were issued entitles preferred shareholders to continued existence of public market for their shares. Kirschner Brothers Oil, Inc v. Natomas Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 784, 792-793, 229 Cal. Rptr. 899

When reorganization involves surrender of shares in California corporation in exchange for shares of foreign corporation, shareholder approval is required by Corp. Code § 1201(a). Kirschner Brothers Oil, Inc v. Natomas Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 784, 793-794, 229 Cal. Rptr. 899

Directors do not owe fiduciary duty to preferred shareholders to structure reorganization in manner that ensure preferred shareholders profitable return on their shares or anything above rights enumerated in certificate of determination. Kirschner Brothers Oil, Inc v. Natomas Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 784, 794-800, 229 Cal. Rptr. 899

[10] Short-Form Mergers

Short-form merger statutes permitting minority shareholders to be cashed out of subsidiary create valid procedure that does not contravene Rule 10b-5 [17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5] under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Santa Fe Industries, Inc. v. Green (1977) 430 US 462, 97 S. Ct. 1292, 51 L. Ed. 2d 480

[11] Stock Purchases

Generally, corporate entity does not assume rights, duties and benefits of another entity that it acquires in stock purchase; the two entities are assumed to remain separate absent circumstances justifying their treatment as single entity, such as alter ego showing or asset purchase; corporation therefore did not have standing to seek dismissal of action based on forum selection clause in agreement signed by its subsidiary. Berclain America Latina v. Baan Co. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 401, 407-408, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745

[12] Successor in Interest

To be successor in interest one must continue to retain same rights as original owner without change in ownership and change must be in form only, not in substance, such as when corporation changes name; transferee is not successor in interest. California Concrete Co. v. Beverly Hills Savings & Loan Assn. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 260, 271-272, 261 Cal. Rptr. 484

DEMAND FOR PURCHASE OF SHARES

To _____ [name of corporation]:

1. I am the owner of _____ [number] of the _____ [specify class] shares of _____ [name of corporation]. These shares are held of record in my name, and are evidenced by Certificate No. _____.

2. I demand that _____ [name of corporation] purchase _____ [number] of these shares for cash at the price of $ _____ per share. This price is the fair market value of these shares as of _____ [date], the day that _____ [name of corporation] has stated is the day before the first announcement of the terms of the proposed reorganization between _____ [name of shareholder's corporation] and _____ [name of other entity].

3. I submit the certificate representing the shares for which I make this demand for purchase for the purpose of _____ [either, if purchase demanded with respect to all shares : stamping or endorsing the certificate with a statement that the shares are dissenting shares or, if purchase demanded with respect to only portion of shares : exchanging this certificate for a certificate representing _____ (number of shares to be purchased) shares, stamped or endorsed with a statement that these shares are dissenting shares, and a certificate representing _____ (number of shares not to be purchased) shares, as to which no demand for purchase is made]. The certificate(s) _____ [is or are] to be returned to me at the address stated below.
Dated:_____.

_____ [signature]
_____ [typed name of shareholder]
_____ [address]

[2] Use of Form

This form is a written demand that a corporation purchase all or a specific number of the shares of a shareholder who is dissenting to a proposed reorganization or short-form merger. The demand must state the number and class of the shares held of record by the shareholder that the shareholder demands that the corporation purchase, and must contain a statement of what the shareholder claims to be the fair market value of those shares as of the day before the announcement of the proposed reorganization or short-form merger [Corp. Code § 1301(c)].

The statement of fair market value constitutes an offer by the shareholder to sell the shares at that price [Corp. Code § 1301(c)]. If the price is the same as that specified by the corporation in its notice [see § 169.60[4][b]], it follows that the shareholder's demand would constitute acceptance of the corporation's offer.

This form also provides for the submission of certificates evidencing shares as to which the shareholder makes the demand for purchase. Although the certificates may be submitted under separate cover [see Corp. Code § 1302; see also § 169.60[4][d]], it may be more expeditious to make the demand and submit the certificates simultaneously. If the demand is for the purchase of uncertificated securities, this form satisfies the requirement that the shareholder submit, in lieu of certificates, a written notice of the number of securities to be purchased by the corporation [see Corp. Code § 1302].

[3] Right to Demand Purchase--Shareholder Approval of Reorganization

The right of a shareholder to demand purchase of his or her shares rather than accept a proposed reorganization or short-form merger depends, in the case of a reorganization [see Corp. Code § 181; see also § 169.10[2]], on whether that shareholder has the right to approve the reorganization, and whether the shares are "dissenting shares" [see Corp. Code § 1300(b); see also § 169.17[3]]. In general, the principal terms of a reorganization must be approved by the outstanding shares of each class of each corporation whose board is required to approve the proposed reorganization [see Corp. Code § 1201(a)]. The rules applicable to these approvals are discussed in § 169.12[2] and [3][a], and subsequent headings.

[4] Dissenters' Rights Applicable in Conversions

[a] Generally

Conversions pursuant to Chapter 11.5 of the Corporations Code [see Corp. Code § 1150 et seq., discussed in § 169.16] are deemed to constitute a reorganization for purposes of applying the provisions of Chapter 13 only [Corp. Code § 1313]. The shareholders of a converting corporation will have all of the rights under Chapter 13 [see Corp. Code § 1300 et seq.] of the shareholders of a corporation involved in a reorganization requiring the approval of its outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 152], and the converting corporation will have all of the obligations under Chapter 13 of a corporation involved in the reorganization. Solely for purposes of applying the provisions of Chapter 13 (and not for purposes of Chapter 12) [see Corp. Code § 1200 et seq.; see also § 169.12], a conversion pursuant to Corp. Code § 1151 or 1157 will be deemed to constitute a reorganization [Corp. Code § 1159].

[b] Notice by Corporation of Reorganization Approval or Short-Form Merger

When any shareholders of a corporation that is a party to a reorganization have the right to require the corporation to purchase their shares for cash, that corporation must mail to each shareholder holding dissenting shares a notice of the approval of the reorganization by its outstanding shares within 10 days after the date of the approval, accompanied by a copy of Corp. Code §§ 1300-1304 (governing dissenters' rights generally), a statement of the price that the corporation believes represents the fair market value of the dissenting shares, and a brief description of the procedure to be followed if the shareholder desires to exercise his or her right to demand purchase of his or her shares. This statement of price constitutes the corporation's offer to purchase any dissenting shares at that price unless they lose their status as dissenting shares [Corp. Code § 1301(a); see Corp. Code § 1309; see also § 169.18[7]].

In the case of short-form merger of a nonwholly owned domestic subsidiary, the surviving parent must give notice to each shareholder of the subsidiary at least 20 days before the effective date of the merger [Corp. Code § 1110(h)].

For forms for giving notice of approval of a reorganization and notices of the effective date of a short-form merger, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 11C, Mergers (Matthew Bender).

[c] Time for Demand

Any dissenting shareholder who desires the corporation to purchase his or her shares and has the right to require purchase must make a written demand on the corporation to the purchase the shares and make payment to the shareholder in cash of their fair market value [Corp. Code § 1301(b)]. If the shares specified in the demand are listed on a certified national securities exchange, the demand is only effective if it is received by the corporation or its transfer agent no later than the date of the shareholders' meeting to vote on the reorganization [Corp. Code § 1301(b)]. In all other cases, the demand is effective if it is received by the corporation or its transfer agent within 30 days after the date on which the notice of the approval of the reorganization by the outstanding shares, or notice of the effective date of a short-form merger, was mailed to the dissenting shareholder [Corp. Code § 1301(b)].

[d] Time for Submitting Dissenting Share Certificates

A shareholder who is demanding that the corporation purchase his or her shares must submit the certificate representing those shares to the corporation at its principal office or at the office of any transfer agent of the corporation. The certificates must be submitted within 30 days after the date on which the notice of the approval by the outstanding shares was mailed to the shareholder, or, in the case of a short-form merger, within 30 days after giving notice of the effective date of the short-form merger [Corp. Code § 1302; see Corp. Code § 1110(h)].

The certificates are submitted for the purpose of stamping or endorsing them with a statement that the shares are dissenting shares, or, if purchase is demanded with respect to only a portion of the shares represented by the certificate, for the purpose of exchanging the certificate for certificates of appropriate denominations so stamped or endorsed [Corp. Code § 1302].

[7] Decisions

[a] Dissenters' Rights

Recovery of fair market value of shares is only state remedy of dissenting shareholder except to test whether or not merger or consolidation was approved by requisite number of shares. Steinberg v. Amplica, Inc. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1198, 1204-1206, 233 Cal. Rptr. 249, 729 P.2d 683 ; Sturgeon Petroleums, Ltd. v. Merchants Petroleum Co. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 134, 139-140, 195 Cal. Rptr. 29

Dissenting shareholder is not entitled to dividends in shares or cash declared by surviving corporation after consummation of merger but during pendency of shareholder's appeal in action for appraisal of shares owned in disappearing corporation. Gallois v. Stauffer Chemical Co. (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 328, 332-333, 34 Cal. Rptr. 411

[b] Fair Market Value

Use of appraisers in determining fair market value of dissenting shares generally unnecessary when stock is actively traded. Gallois v. West End Chemical Co. (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 765, 771-774, 8 Cal. Rptr. 596

[c] Short-Form Mergers

which does not contravene Rule 10b-5 [17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5] under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Santa Fe Industries, Inc. v. Green (1977) 430 U.S. 462, 473-474 97 S. Ct. 1292, 51 L. Ed. 2d 480

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action by a dissenting shareholder to determine that his or her shares are dissenting shares, if the corporation denies that contention, and to determine the fair market value of those dissenting shares as of the day before the first announcement of the terms of the proposed reorganization or short-form merger to which plaintiff dissents.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges the following:

- The capacity and principal office of the corporation (Paragraph 2) [see Corp. Code § 1304(a) (venue of action in superior court of proper county); see also Corp. Code § 177].

- That defendant is a party to a reorganization or the subsidiary in a short-form merger (Paragraph 3) [see Corp. Code §§ 181, 187, 1110, 1313].

- That plaintiff was a shareholder of record on the date of the approval of the reorganization, that plaintiff's shares are not listed securities or otherwise disqualified as dissenting shares, that the approval of the outstanding shares was required and that plaintiff did not vote in favor of the reorganization (Paragraph 4, first alternative) [see Corp. Code §§ 1201(a), (b), (e), 1300], or that plaintiff was a shareholder of record on the effective date of a short-form merger of the corporation whose shares plaintiff holds (Paragraph 4, second alternative) [see Corp. Code § 1300].

- That plaintiff made a timely demand for purchase and payment for his or her shares, including their claimed fair market value (Paragraph 5) [see Corp. Code § 1300(b); see also Corp. Code § 1301].

- That plaintiff submitted his or her shares for endorsement as dissenting shares (Paragraph 6, first alternative) [see Corp. Code § 1300(b); see also Corp. Code § 1302 (procedure for submitting certificates)], or that plaintiff submitted written notice of the number of dissenting shares in the case of uncertificated securities (Paragraph 6, second alternative).

- That defendant denies dissenting status of plaintiff's shares and/or is unable to agree with plaintiff as to their fair market value (Paragraph 7) [see Corp. Code § 1304].

[4] Modification of Form

Paragraph 3 of the complaint, which alleges that defendant is a party to a reorganization or the subsidiary in a short-form merger [see Corp. Code §§ 181, 187, 1110, 1313], contains several alternatives relating to the type of transaction. The second and third alternatives, which relate to exchange reorganizations and sale-of-assets reorganizations in which the dissenter is a shareholder of the acquiring corporation, need to be amended if (1) the equity securities of a corporation in control of the acquiring corporation will be issued in the transaction; or (2) the equity or debt securities of a corporation in control of the acquiring corporation will be issued in the transaction.

As noted above, Paragraph 4 of the complaint alleges that the plaintiff's shares are not listed securities. Ordinarily listed securities cannot be "dissenting shares" [see Corp. Code § 1300(b)(1)], and therefore the holder of those shares has no right to demand cash payment for them. However, if any restriction on transfer imposed by the corporation, any law, or regulation exists, or if 5 percent of any class of listed shares file demands for payment with the corporation, the shares will be "dissenting shares," provided that the other conditions of Corp. Code § 1300(b) are satisfied [Corp. Code § 1300(b)(1)]. In either situation, Paragraph 4 of this form will have to be modified to allege that the shares are listed and that they are subject to restrictions on transfer, or that demands for payment have been filed with respect to 5 percent or more of the outstanding shares of that class. This situation is unlikely, because few, if any, nationally traded securities are subject to transfer restrictions and nationally listed securities have an active market, limiting the probability of establishing a higher fair market value price than the market price [see Gallois v. West End Chemical Co. (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 765, 772-773, 8 Cal. Rptr. 596] .

The above-entitled action, having come on for trial on _____ [date], on the complaint of plaintiff and the answer of defendant, _____ [name of corporation], and the action having been tried before the court, plaintiff being represented by counsel, _____ [name], and defendant by counsel, _____ [name], and evidence, both oral and documentary, having been introduced and certain stipulations of facts having been made, and the court having considered all evidence and facts and the arguments of counsel and being fully advised in the premises, and having directed that judgment be entered in accordance therewith;

NOW, THEREFORE, IT IS HEREBY ADJUDGED, ORDERED, AND DECREED that:

1. Plaintiff have judgment entered against defendant in the sum of $ _____, representing the fair market value on _____ [date] of _____ [number] of _____ [ specify class] shares of _____ [name of corporation] owned by plaintiff, at the rate of $ _____ per share, with interest on that sum at the rate of 10 percent per annum from the date that judgment is entered in this action; provided, however, that the judgment shall be payable only on the endorsement and delivery to defendant of the certificates for the shares; and provided further, that to the extent Sections 500 through 511 of the California Corporations Code prevent payment of all or any part of the judgment, the part not payable shall be payable when permissible under those sections and that until payment plaintiff shall become a creditor of _____ [name of corporation or successor] for the amount remaining unpaid, together with interest at 10 percent per annum from the date that judgment is entered in this action.

[EITHER]

2. Plaintiff and defendant shall bear their respective costs of suit except that each party shall pay one-half the reasonable compensation of the appraiser(s) appointed in this action in the amount of $ _____.

[OR, if value awarded exceeds corporation's offer :]

2. Defendant shall pay plaintiff his/her costs of suit incurred in this action in the amount of $ _____, including the reasonable compensation of the appraiser(s) appointed in this action in the amount of $ _____.

[OR, if value awarded plaintiff exceeds 125 percent of corporation's original offer :]

2. Defendant shall pay plaintiff his/her costs of suit incurred in this action in the amount of $ _____, including the reasonable compensation of the appraiser(s) appointed in this action in the amount of $ _____, plaintiff's attorney's fees in the amount of $ _____, the fees of plaintiff's expert witnesses in the amount of $ _____, plus interest at 10 percent per annum from _____ [date], the date on which plaintiff complied with Sections 1300, 1301, and 1302 of the California Corporations Code].

[2] Use of Form

This judgment is for use in determining the fair market value of dissenting shares and will reflect the court's determination, whether made with or without the aid of appraisers, of the amount per share multiplied by the number of dissenting shares that the plaintiff is entitled to require the corporation to purchase, with interest at the legal rate [Corp. Code § 1305(c)]. Any party may appeal from the judgment [Corp. Code § 1305(d)].

[3] Judgment Subject to Restrictions on Distributions

The judgment of the court for payment to plaintiff of the fair market value of his or her dissenting shares is subject to the provisions of Corp. Code § 1306 [Corp. Code § 1305(c)]. Corp. Code § 1306 provides that to the extent the provisions of Chapter 5 [Corp. Code §§ 500-511] of the General Corporation Law prohibit the payment to any dissenting shareholders, they will become creditors of the corporation for the amount that cannot be paid, together with interest at the legal rate on judgments until the date of payment, but subordinate to all other creditors in any liquidation proceeding. The debt is payable when permissible under Chapter 5 [Corp. Code § 1306]. In particular, Corp. Code §§ 500 and 501 prohibit distributions to shareholders when the distributions would jeopardize the corporation's financial position to the detriment of creditors and preferred shareholders. See Ch. 164, Corporations: Dividends and Reacquisitions of Shares , for a discussion of distributions to shareholders.

[4] Delivery of Certificates

With respect to certificated securities, any judgment for the fair market value of a dissenting shareholder's shares is payable only on the endorsement and delivery to the corporation of the certificates for the shares described in the judgment [Corp. Code § 1305(d)].

[5] Costs

The costs of an action to determine the fair market value of dissenting shares, including reasonable compensation to the appraisers as fixed by the court, must be assessed or apportioned as the court considers equitable [Corp. Code § 1305(e)]. However, if the appraisal exceeds the price offered by the corporation pursuant to the notice of approval of reorganization or notice of short-form merger [see Corp. Code §§ 1110(h), 1301(a)], then the corporation must pay costs [Corp. Code § 1305(e)]. If the value awarded by the court for the shares is more than 125 percent of the price offered by the corporation under Corp. Code § 1301(a), the court may in its discretion, impose additional costs on the corporation, including attorney's fees, fees of expert witnesses, and interest at the legal rate on judgments from the date of the shareholder's compliance with Corp. Code §§ 1300-1302 [Corp. Code § 1305(e)]. This form presents the alternative dates from which judgment interest with regards to costs accrues in Paragraph 2.

Chapter 170 CORPORATIONS: DISSOLUTION AND WINDING UP
PART I. SCOPE

14-170 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 170.01

§ 170.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses the dissolution and winding up of California corporations. It covers both voluntary proceedings initiated by the board of directors or shareholders and involuntary dissolution by court proceedings This part focuses chiefly on the power of the court to supervise both voluntary and involuntary dissolution and winding up, including its powers and duties in connection with the provisions [see Corp. Code § 2000] permitting some shareholders or the corporation to avoid dissolution by purchasing the shares of the parties seeking dissolution. Also covered here are the steps taken in winding up the corporation's affairs including payment of creditors, the distribution of assets to shareholders, and the liabilities of directors and shareholders for improper distributions. For a detailed discussion of the matters covered in this part, see Ballantine and Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 15, Dissolution and Winding Up (Matthew Bender).

The forms in this chapter include:

- A petition for court supervision [see § 170.50] and related order to show cause [see § 170.51], and order granting the petition [see § 170.52].

- A complaint for involuntary dissolution [see § 170.53] and related order to wind up and dissolve [see § 170.54].

- A notice to creditors [see § 170.55] applicable in either voluntary or involuntary proceedings.

This chapter also contains forms related to staying both voluntary and involuntary dissolution for the purpose of purchasing the shares of the persons initiating the dissolution proceedings [see §§ 170.56-170.62].

This chapter additionally provides forms for final dissolution by court order applicable in voluntary and involuntary proceedings alike:

- A petition [see § 170.63]

- An order to show cause [see § 170.64].
- Final order [see § 170.65].

§ 170.10 Governing Statutes

The General Corporation Law's provisions governing dissolution and winding up comprise three separate chapters of that law:

- Chapter 18 [Corp. Code §§ 1800-1809] contains the provisions governing involuntary dissolution.
- Chapter 19 [Corp. Code §§ 1900-1907] deals with voluntary dissolution.
- Chapter 20 [Corp. Code §§ 2000-2011] sets forth the general provisions relating to both voluntary and involuntary dissolutions.

Although separated in this manner, the three chapters are interrelated. Thus, to the extent that a voluntary dissolution is conducted under court supervision, the provisions of Chapter 18, governing involuntary dissolutions, will apply [Corp. Code § 1904].

In addition, as noted, the general provisions of Chapter 20 will apply to both voluntary and involuntary dissolutions. In the interests of brevity and coherence, the discussion of voluntary dissolution in this part covers the general provisions of Chapter 20, except those relating to postdissolution actions, and cross references is made where the same provisions apply to involuntary dissolution. On the other hand, the scope of the court's jurisdiction will be covered in detail in connection with the discussion of involuntary dissolution, although this discussion will apply equally to voluntary proceedings under court supervision.

Chapter 170 CORPORATIONS: DISSOLUTION AND WINDING UP
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-170 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 170.11

§ 170.11 Voluntary Dissolution

[1] Commencement of Proceedings

Voluntary proceedings for winding up the corporation are deemed to commence on the adoption of the resolution of the shareholders or directors of the corporation electing to wind up and dissolve, or on the filing with the corporation of a written consent of shareholders to the winding up and dissolution [Corp. Code § 1903(a)]. When proceedings for voluntary winding up have commenced, the board continues to act as a board and has full powers to wind up and settle the affairs of the corporation, both before and after the filing of the certificate of dissolution [Corp. Code § 1903(b)].

[2] Authorization to Wind Up and Dissolve

Any corporation may elect voluntarily to wind up and dissolve by the vote of shareholders holding shares representing 50 percent or more of the voting power [Corp. Code § 1900(a); see also Corp. Code § 194.5 (defining "voting power")]. However, shareholders representing 50 percent of the voting power do not have an absolute right to dissolve the corporation, and equity will intervene when the purpose of those seeking dissolution is to defraud other shareholders, freeze out a minority, or sell the assets at an inadequate price [In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 376-377, 317 P.2d 1] . On the other hand, as was held in In re Security Fin. Co. [In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 378, 317 P.2d 1] , a shareholder representing the requisite voting power is entitled to protect his or her investment by dissolving the corporation where all alternative methods are foreclosed, no advantage is secured over other shareholders, and no rights of third parties will be adversely affected. The Security Financial Company case was decided under the law as it existed prior to enactment of the present General Corporation Law and the shareholders opposing dissolution in that case did not have the statutory alternative of buying out the shareholder initiating dissolution, although the facts of that case indicate that they clearly had the resources to do so. Under present law, the opposing shareholders could compel the 50 percent shareholder to sell his or her shares to them [Corp. Code § 2000; see discussion in § 170.57[8]].

Apart from an opportunity to avoid dissolution, shareholders under the present General Corporation Law also enjoy the protection of provisions designed to prevent cash-outs through the technique of dissolution and sale of the corporation's assets to the controlling shareholders. This device has been condemned in some decisions as a violation of the controlling shareholders' fiduciary duty to the minority [see, e.g., Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 110, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464] . What may have been a breach of a fiduciary duty under prior law is, under present law, simply expressly prohibited. Thus, shareholder approval of the terms of a sale of assets for cash after dissolution proceedings have commenced is required when the buyer is in control of or under common control with the seller. Such a sale must be approved by 90 percent of the voting power of the disposing corporation [see Corp. Code § 194.5 (defining "voting power")] unless the consideration for the sale is nonredeemable common shares or nonredeemable equity securities of the acquiring party or its parent [Corp. Code §§ 1001(d), 2001(g); see also Corp. Code § 175 (definition of "parent")].

When no purpose would be served in requiring shareholder approval of a dissolution, the law permits the board, acting alone, to elect to dissolve. Any of the following corporations may elect by approval of the board [see Corp. Code § 151 (defining "approval of the board")] to wind up and dissolve [Corp. Code § 1900(b)]:

- A corporation which has been adjudged a bankrupt as to which an order for relief has been entered under Chapter 7 of the federal bankruptcy law;

- A corporation which has disposed of all its assets and has not conducted any business for a period of five years immediately preceding the adoption of the resolution electing to dissolve the corporation; or

- A corporation which has issued no shares.

[3] Statutory Procedure Mandatory

A voluntary dissolution of a corporation, whether by the election of shareholders or directors and with or without the supervision of the court, must be initiated under Corp. Code § 1900, and may only be accomplished under the conditions prescribed in the General Corporation Law [Keeler v. Schulte (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 801, 803, 306 P.2d 430 ; In re O'Brien Mach. Inc. (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 563, 570, 36 Cal. Rptr. 782] . However, some deviation from the prescribed procedure will not necessarily invalidate the dissolution, for example, failure to file the certificate of election to wind up and dissolve with the Secretary of State, particularly in the absence of any showing of injury, will not undo a dissolution [Herschfelt v. Knowles-Raymond Granite Co. (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 347, 351, 279 P.2d 104] .

In addition, a corporation may be de facto wound up and dissolved even though the statutory procedure is largely ignored, although the corporation will not be regarded as actually dissolved [see ABC Brewing Corp. v. Commissioner of Int. Rev. (9th Cir. [Cal] 1955) 224 F.2d 483, 485-487 (holding corporation which formally commenced voluntary dissolution and distributed assets but failed to file certificate of dissolution had undergone de facto dissolution for purpose of determining eligibility for tax credits)].

[4] Certificate of Election

When a corporation has elected to wind up and dissolve, a certificate evidencing that election must be filed in the office of the Secretary of State. The certificate must be an officers' certificate [see Corp. Code § 173 (defining "officers' certificate")] or must be signed and verified [see Corp. Code § 193 (defining "verified")] by at least a majority of the directors then in office or by at least one shareholder authorized to do so by shareholders holding shares representing 50 percent or more of the voting power. The required contents of the certificate are set forth in the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 1901].

[5] Cessation of Business

When a voluntary proceeding for winding up has commenced, the corporation must cease to carry on business except to the extent necessary for the beneficial winding up thereof, and except during that period as the board of directors may deem necessary to preserve the corporation's goodwill or going-concern value pending the sale of its business or assets or both, in whole or in part [Corp. Code § 1903(c)].

[6] Notice of Commencement of Proceedings

The directors must forthwith cause written notice of the commencement of the proceeding for voluntary winding up to be given by mail to all shareholders, except those who voted in favor of the dissolution, and to all known creditors and claimants whose addresses appear on the records of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1903(c)].

[7] Revocation of Election

A voluntary election to wind up and dissolve may be revoked prior to distribution of any assets by the vote of shareholders holding shares representing a majority of the voting power, or by approval by the board if the election was by the board. A certificate evidencing such revocation must be signed, verified, and filed in the same manner as the original certificate of election [§ 170.11[4]]. The required contents of the certificate of revocation of the election are set forth in the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 1902].

[8] Powers of Directors and Officers During Dissolution

[a] Generally

When voluntary proceedings for dissolution and winding up of a corporation have commenced, the board of directors continues to act as a board and has full powers to wind up and settle the corporation's affairs. The powers of the board, or other persons appointed by a court when it has assumed jurisdiction [§ 170.33[9][b]], are enumerated in but not limited by Corp. Code § 2001, which specifically authorizes directors and officers to perform the following acts in the name of the corporation after commencement of a dissolution proceeding [Corp. Code § 2001]:.

- Elect officers and employ agents and attorneys to liquidate or wind up the corporation's affairs.

- Continue the conduct of the business insofar as necessary for the disposal or winding up of that business.

- Carry out contracts and collect, pay, compromise and settle debts and claims for or against the corporation.

- Defend suits brought against the corporation.

- Sue, in the name of the corporation, for all sums due or owing to the corporation, or to recover any of its property.

- Collect any amounts remaining unpaid on subscriptions to shares, or recover unlawful distributions.

- Sell at public or private sale, exchange, convey or otherwise dispose of all or any part of the assets of the corporation [for more detailed discussion, see [b], below], and execute bills of sale and deeds of conveyance in the name of the corporation.

- In general, make contracts and do any and all things in the name of the corporation which may be proper or convenient for the purposes of winding up, settling and liquidating the affairs of the corporation.

[b] Sales of Assets or Exchanges

One of the duties and powers enumerated in Corp. Code § 2001 is the power to sell at public or private sale, to exchange, convey, or otherwise dispose of all or any portion of the assets of the corporation:

- For cash in an amount deemed reasonable by the board and without the shareholder approval normally required for a cash sale of all or substantially all the corporate assets [see Corp. Code § 1001(a); see also Chapter 169, Reorganizations], unless the buyer controls or is under common control with the dissolving corporation [Corp. Code § 2001(g); see Corp. Code § 162 (definition of "control")]. If the buyer controls or is under common control with the seller (the dissolving corporation), a cash sale must be approved by at least 90 percent of the corporation's voting power [see Corp. Code § 1001(d); see also discussion of significance of this rule in § 170.11[2]]; or

- Upon the other terms and conditions and for any consideration other than cash as the board deems reasonable or expedient, with the approval of the board and either the approval of the outstanding shares or approval of the outstanding shares of each class, depending on precisely the kind of consideration received [Corp. Code § 2001(g); see Corp. Code §§ 151, 152 (defining, respectively, "approval of the board" and "approval of the outstanding shares")]. These are the approvals normally required for a sale of assets or a "sale-of-assets reorganization" as the latter term is defined in Corp. Code § 181(c) [see Corp. Code §§ 1001, 1201; see also Ch. 169, Reorganizations , for a complete discussion of the approvals required for a sale of assets and a sale-of-assets reorganization].

[9] Vacancy on Board

A vacancy on the board of directors can be filled during the winding up proceeding by approval of the board as defined in Corp. Code § 151, or, if the number of directors then in office is less than a quorum, by [Corp. Code § 2002; see Corp. Code § 305(a) and discussion in Ch. 167, Directions and Management with respect to filling vacancies on the board]:

- Unanimous written consent of the directors then in office;

- The affirmative vote of a majority of the directors then in office at a meeting held pursuant to notice or waivers of notice complying with Corp. Code § 307; or

- A sole remaining director.

Unless the articles or a bylaw adopted by the shareholders provide that the board may fill vacancies occurring in the board by reason of the removal of directors, such vacancies may be filled only by approval of the shareholders [Corp. Code § 305(a)].

The shareholders may elect a director at any time to fill any vacancy not filed by the directors. Any such election by written consent other than to fill a vacancy created by removal requires the consent of a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote [Corp. Code §§ 305(a), 2002].

[10] Identity and Capacity of Directors

When the identity of the directors or their right to hold office is in doubt, or if they are dead or unable to act, or if they fail or refuse to act, or their whereabouts cannot be ascertained, any interested person may petition the superior court of the proper county [see Corp. Code § 177 (defining "proper county")] to determine the identity of the directors or, if there are no directors, to appoint directors to wind up the affairs of the corporation. Notice of the hearing to identify or appoint the directors must be given to the persons that the court directs [Corp. Code § 2003].

[11] Court Supervision

[a] Petition

If a corporation is in the process of voluntarily winding up, the superior court of the proper county, that is, the county in which the principal executive office of the corporation is located (or if that office is not located in California, Sacramento County) [Corp. Code § 177], may take jurisdiction over the winding up if it appears to be necessary for the protection of any parties in interest. Jurisdiction may be invoked on petition of:

- The corporation;

- A shareholder or shareholders holding shares representing five percent or more of the total number of any class of outstanding shares;

- Any shareholder or shareholders of a close corporation [see Corp. Code § 158 (defining "close corporation")]; or

- Three or more creditors [Corp. Code § 1904].

The statute provides that the court "may take jurisdiction ... if that appears necessary for the protection of any parties in interest" [Corp. Code § 1904]. Former Corp. Code § 4607 also used the permissive "may" (without the additional language just quoted), and it was construed as absolutely entitling those given the right to petition for court supervision to such supervision [In re Mayellen Apts., Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 298, 303-308, 285 P.2d 943] . However, the Supreme Court refused to decide whether court supervision may be invoked when there is no possibility of disputes arising between the shareholders during dissolution [In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 380, 317 P.2d 1] . It was also held under prior law that court supervision was not violative of the right of minority shareholders, granted to them in the articles of incorporation, to purchase shares of persons desiring to sell, since the statutory provisions for court supervision form part of the contract between the corporation and the shareholders under the reserved power clause [In re Mayellen Apts., Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 298, 304, 306, 285 P.2d 943] . The present General Corporation Law appears to grant discretion to the court as to whether it will assume jurisdiction over the voluntary winding up of the corporation. Therefore, it becomes particularly important that the petitioner allege the basic facts or grounds of actual controversy which would warrant the supervision of the court.

Nonpetitioning shareholders are not automatically parties to the voluntary dissolution proceeding. Those shareholders are not parties unless they are named as defendants or they intervene, and they cannot be effectively named as defendants unless the petition seeks relief against them [In re FairWageLaw (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 279, 286-288, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 652 (court's adjudication, in voluntary dissolution proceeding, of corporation's claim against nonpetitioning shareholder, who was not named as defendant in that proceeding, violated shareholder's right to due process, even though shareholder had intervened so as to pursue claim against corporation)].

[b] Advantage of Court Supervision

Even when neither shareholders nor creditors would be inclined to petition for court supervision of a voluntary dissolution, it may be to the corporation's advantage to do so, particularly when there are unmatured or contingent claims against the corporation. The court has the power to finally settle claims against the corporation and must award holders of unmatured claims the present value of the claim [Corp. Code §§ 1807, 1808]. Another advantage, at least for shareholders who are not directors, lies in the fact that court ordered distributions are immune from attack as having been made in derogation of the rights of creditors [Corp. Code § 2009(a); see discussion in § 170.32[2]].

[c] Scope of Court's Jurisdiction

If the court assumes jurisdiction over winding up proceedings, it may make any orders as to any and all matters concerning the winding up of the affairs of the corporation and for the protection of its shareholders that justice and equity require [Corp. Code § 1904]. The provisions governing the court's jurisdiction over involuntary dissolutions, except Corp. Code §§ 1800 and 1801, apply to those proceedings [Corp. Code § 1904]. For a full discussion of the jurisdiction conferred on the court during involuntary dissolution and court supervised voluntary dissolution, see § 170.12[6]. Keep in mind that although many of the decisions under prior law concerning matters relating to the jurisdiction over involuntary proceedings were construing statutes that applied only to such proceedings, the present General Corporation Law makes no distinction with respect to the court's power in involuntary and voluntary proceedings under court supervision, and therefore, such decisions should remain good law when the statutory language is essentially unchanged.

[12] Avoidance of Dissolution

[a] Purchase of "Moving Parties' " Shares

Subject to any contrary provision in the articles, in any suit for involuntary dissolution, or in any proceeding for voluntary dissolution initiated by the vote of shareholders representing only 50 percent of the voting power, the corporation, or, if it does not elect to purchase, the holders of 50 percent or more of the voting power of the corporation (the "purchasing parties") may avoid the dissolution of the corporation and the appointment of any receiver by purchasing for cash the shares owned by the plaintiffs or by the shareholders so initiating the proceeding (the "moving parties") at their fair value [Corp. Code § 2000(a)].

Under prior law [see former Corp. Code § 4658], purchase of the shares of the parties seeking dissolution was only possible in involuntary proceedings, and had the purpose of preventing the minority from abusing its power to cause an involuntary dissolution [Stumpf v. C.E. Stumpf & Sons, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 230, 234, 120 Cal. Rptr. 671] . Under present law, the statutory buy-out right has been extended to voluntary dissolutions when the shareholders are evenly divided on the issue of whether or not to dissolve. To avoid repetition, the procedures governing buy-out in both voluntary and involuntary proceedings are described here.

[b] Purchase Price

The fair value of the shares of the "moving parties" must be determined on the basis of the liquidation value as of the valuation date but taking into account the possibility, if any, of sale of the entire business as a going concern in a liquidation [Corp. Code § 2000(a)]; see, e.g., Mart v. Severson (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 521, 535-536, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 717 (holding that trial court erred in finding that fair value was piecemeal liquidation value of $1.48 million, when appraisers unanimously had concluded that corporation could have been sold as ongoing concern for $5.6 million)]. The valuation date is the date on which the proceeding for voluntary dissolution was initiated. Upon the motion of any party, however, the court may designate some other date as the valuation date for good cause shown [Corp. Code § 2000(f); see, e.g., Trahan v. Trahan (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 62, 76-78, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 814 (substantial evidence supported court's confirmation of appraiser's determination of fair value as piecemeal sale of assets, even though it did not take into account existing but uncompleted contracts; parties could have requested court to set later valuation date to allow completion of unperformed contracts)].

In fixing the value, the amount of any damages resulting if the initiation of the dissolution is a breach by any moving party or parties of an agreement with the purchasing party or parties may be deducted from the amount payable to the moving party or parties, unless the ground for dissolution is that specified in Corp. Code § 1800(b)(4), relating to fraud and mismanagement. Election by the corporation to purchase may be made by the approval of the outstanding shares [Corp. Code § 152] excluding shares held by the moving parties [Corp. Code § 2000(a)].

A determination of the fair value of the shares of the corporation must include an assessment of the value, if any, of a pending derivative action and the effect of the action on the fair value of the shares [Cotton v. Expo Power Sys., Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1374, 1380-1381, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 112 (derivative claim is property right that belongs to corporation and is properly viewed as asset of corporation)].

[c] Determination of Fair Value by Court

On application of the purchasing parties, the court must stay the winding up and dissolution, and proceed to ascertain and fix the fair value of the moving parties' shares, if the purchasing parties [Corp. Code § 2000(b)]:

- Elect to purchase the shares owned by the moving parties; and
- Are unable to agree with the moving parties on the fair market value of the shares; and
- Give bond with sufficient security to pay the estimated reasonable expenses (including attorney's fees) of the moving parties if those expenses are recoverable under Corp. Code § 2000(c) (i.e., dissolution granted because of failure of purchasing parties to make payment within time specified).

The application for court determination, in the case of involuntary proceedings, would be made to the court in which the involuntary dissolution proceeding is pending. Where dissolution has commenced voluntarily, the application is made by initiating a proceeding in the superior court of the "proper county" [Corp. Code § 2000(b); see Corp. Code § 177 (definition of "proper county")].

The statutory provisions for purchase of the "moving parties' " shares are mandatory [Alvak Enterprises v. Phillips (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 69, 75, 334 P.2d 148] , but when an involuntary dissolution proceeding has been dismissed, the court is without jurisdiction to order appraisers to be appointed to ascertain the value of the plaintiff's shares and cannot grant the relief sought by the defendant, that is, the buy-out of plaintiff's shares [Cubalevic v. Superior Court (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 557, 562, 49 Cal. Rptr. 698] . The court is also without jurisdiction to entertain further proceedings to determine the fair value of the shares when the conditions listed above are not met. Thus, the allegation that "if" the parties are unable to agree as to the purchase price, "then and in such event" court determination of the value of the shares would be sought has been held insufficient to stay proceedings for involuntary dissolution [Merlino v. Fesno Macaroni Mfg. Co. (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 462, 464-465, 148 P.2d 884] . While this narrow treatment of pleadings might no longer hold, it is probably sound practice to make a written offer to the moving parties which, when rejected, will stand as a factual allegation in the application for court determination.

[d] Appointment of Appraisers; Orders

The court must appoint three disinterested appraisers to appraise the fair value of the shares owned by the moving parties, and must make an order referring the matter to the appraisers and setting forth the time and manner of producing evidence, if evidence is required. The award of the appraisers, or a majority of them, when confirmed by the court, will be final and conclusive on all parties [Corp. Code § 2000(c)]. The court may not postpone the appraisal, or the completion of the appraisal, until some related matter is concluded (for instance, until a pending derivative action comes to an end), because Corp. Code § 2000 contemplates a summary procedure. The court is required either to obtain a complete appraisal of the fair value of the shares from the appraisers, without delay, or to conduct a hearing forthwith to resolve the matter [Cotton v. Expo Power Sys., Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1381-1382, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 112] .

The trial court has the duty, when convinced that an award of the appraisers is erroneous, to examine matters de novo and fix its own valuation [Venables v. Credential Ins. Agency, Inc. (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 724, 727, 295 P.2d 547] . However, a trial court that is convinced that one of two highly discordant appraisal reports accurately reflects the value of the shares in question may confirm that report without reinvestigating the matter [Brown v. Allied Corrugated Box

Co. (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 477, 491, 154 Cal. Rptr. 170 (former Corp. Code §§ 4658, 4659, now see Corp. Code § 2000)].

A shareholder is not entitled to an evidentiary hearing on the valuation set by the appraisers, nor is a shareholder entitled to depose the neutral appraiser [Abrams v. Abrams-Rubaloff & Associates, Inc. (1980) 114 Cal. App. 3d 240, 247-248, 170 Cal. Rptr. 656] .

[e] Decree and Appeal

When the award of the appraisers is confirmed by the court, the court must enter a decree which provides in the alternative for winding up and dissolution of the corporation unless payment is made for the shares of the moving parties within the time specified by the decree. This decree is appealable by any shareholder aggrieved [Corp. Code § 2000(c); see Esparza v. Kadam, Inc. (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 303, 305-306, 338 P.2d 492 (holding appraiser's award subject to review)]. However, since it has been held that findings of fact need not be made by either the court or the appraisers [Esparza v. Kadam, Inc. (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 802, 807, 6 Cal. Rptr. 450] , review of the appraisers' or court's award may be hampered by failure to make an adequate record in the trial court.

There is no automatic stay of the court's decree in the event of an appeal (because Corp. Code § 2000 provides for a special proceeding, rather than a civil action, and does not expressly incorporate the Civil Code sections governing appeals in civil actions), but a reviewing court has discretion to issue a writ of supersedeas if a proper and sufficient showing is made [Veyna v. Orange County Nursery, Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 146, 154-156, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 658 ; see generally Ch. 43, Appeal: Stay of Proceedings, § 43.21].

If the purchasing parties do not make payment for the shares within the time specified, judgment must be entered against them and the surety or sureties on the bond provided by the purchasing parties for the amount of the expenses (including attorney's fees) of the moving parties [Corp. Code § 2000(c)]. On the other hand, if the moving parties resist all efforts of the purchasing parties to purchase the former's shares, including the appointment of appraisers to determine the value of the shares, the court may properly award the purchasing parties one-half of the appraisers' fees as prevailing parties under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(c) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4)) [Merlino v. Fresno Macaroni Mfg. Co. (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 120, 125, 168 P.2d 182] .

[f] Payment and Transfer

If the purchasing parties desire to prevent the winding up and dissolution, they must pay to the moving parties the value of their shares, as ascertained and decreed, within the time specified or, in case of appeal, as fixed on appeal. On receiving payment or tender, the moving parties must transfer their shares to the purchasing parties [Corp. Code § 2000(d)].

[13] Distribution of Assets

[a] When and How Made

After determining that all the known debts and liabilities of a corporation in the process of winding up have been paid or adequately provided for [see Corp. Code § 2005 (specifying two nonexclusive means for adequately providing for liabilities)], the board of directors must distribute all the remaining corporate assets among the shareholders according to their respective rights and preferences, or, if there are no shareholders, to the persons entitled to the assets. When dissolution of the corporation is by court proceeding or subject to court supervision, no distributions of assets may be made until after the expiration of any period for the presentation of claims which has been prescribed by the court [Corp. Code § 2004].

Distributions to the shareholders can be made either in money, property, or securities, and either in installments from time to time or in whole, if this can be done fairly and ratably and in conformity with the provisions of the articles and the rights of the shareholders. The distributions must be made as soon as is reasonably consistent with the beneficial liquidation of the corporate assets [Corp. Code § 2006]. However, the corporation cannot adopt a plan of distribution which provides that the majority shareholders will take the plants and business property while the minority are compelled to take cash as their distributive share of the assets [In re San Joaquin L. & P. Corp. (1942) 52 Cal. App. 2d 814, 824, 127 P.2d 29 ; see also Zimmerman v. Tide Water etc. Co. (1943) 61 Cal. App. 2d 585, 592-594, 143 P.2d 409 (holding minority shareholder not barred by laches to assert claim for distribution of corporate assets in kind where majority shareholder not misled as to nonacquiescence in plan of distribution and no evidence to support view that plaintiff had notice of action taken at meeting to consider dissolution)].

[b] Dissenting and Unknown Shareholders or Creditors

When a corporation in the process of winding up has both preferred and common shares outstanding, a plan of distribution of its assets that is not in accordance with the liquidation rights of the preferred shares may nevertheless be adopted if it is approved by the board and the outstanding shares of each class. The plan may provide that the distribution will be in complete or partial satisfaction of the right of any of the shareholders upon distribution and liquidation of the assets [Corp. Code § 2007(a)]. If the plan is approved, it will be binding on all shareholders except those having a liquidation preference who dissent from the plan and file the written demand and follow the other procedures set forth in Corp. Code § 2007(c) [Corp. Code § 2007(b)]. Corp. Code 2007 does not apply to a distribution in accordance with a reorganization plan, the principal terms of which had been approved pursuant to Corp. Code § 1202(b) (discussed in Ch. 169, Reorganizations) [Corp. Code § 2007(e)].

Another procedure is spelled out in Corp. Code § 2008 for dealing with shareholders and creditors who are unknown, fail or refuse to accept payment, cannot be found, hold contingent, contested, or undetermined claims, or whose share ownership is the subject of dispute. The corporation may deposit any payment, dividend, or distribution, or the maximum amount of any claim, with the Controller in trust for the benefit of those lawfully entitled to the payment, dividend, distribution, or the amount of the claim [Corp. Code § 2008(a)]. With respect to money or property deposited with the Controller, it will be deemed paid or delivered under the Unclaimed Property Law [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1500 et seq.], and may be recovered in the manner prescribed therein [Corp. Code § 2008(b)]. For a procedural guide and forms relating to making claims under the Unclaimed Property Law, see Ch. 252, Escheat (Unclaimed Property).

[c] Liability of Directors for Improper Distribution

Directors of a corporation who approve the distribution of assets to shareholders after institution of dissolution proceedings without paying or adequately providing for all known liabilities of the corporation, excluding any claims not filed by creditors within the time limit set by the court in a notice given to creditors, may be jointly and severally liable to the corporation for the benefit of all creditors entitled to sue [Corp. Code § 316(a)].

The liability of directors will depend on whether they have breached the duty of care set forth in Corp. Code § 309. The extent of this duty, including the directors' right to rely on information, opinions, reports, or statements of others is fully discussed in Ch. 167, Directions and Management . Directors may also incur criminal liability by approving an unlawful distribution [Corp. Code § 2253].

The creditors entitled to sue in the name of the corporation to enforce the directors' liability are those whose debts or claims arose prior to the time of the distribution, whether or not the creditors have reduced their claims to judgment, provided that they have not consented to the distribution [Corp. Code § 316(c)].

The damages recoverable from a director under Corp. Code § 316 consist of the amount of the illegal distribution, plus interest at the legal rate from the date of date of distribution until paid, together with reasonable appraisal or valuation costs. If the distribution consists of property, the damages consist of the fair market value of the property at the time of the distribution. However, damages may not exceed the liabilities of the corporation owed to nonconsenting creditors at the time of the violation and the injury suffered by the nonconsenting shareholders, as the case may be [see Corp. Code § 316(d)].

Creditors will be barred from recovering amounts unlawfully distributed if they have not filed their claims within the time limit set "by the court in a notice given to creditors under Chapters 18 (commencing with Section 1800), 19 (commencing with Section 1900) and 20 (commencing with Section 2000)" [Corp. Code § 316(a)(2)]. The statutory language is curious since the only provision for the court's setting a time limit appears in Corp. Code § 1807. There is a reference to Corp. Code § 1807 in Corp. Code § 1907 (dealing with a petition for an order declaring a corporation wound up and dissolved, which corporation conducted the dissolution voluntarily), but Chapter 20 [Corp. Code §§ 2000-2011] has no provision for court set time limits. In any event, the reference in Corp. Code § 316(a)(2) to a time limit set by the court means that unless the jurisdiction of the court is sought at some point in the dissolution proceedings, directors of a corporation that has voluntarily dissolved might remain liable for improper distributions regardless of the fact that they notified all creditors pursuant to Corp. Code § 1903(c). Under prior law [see former Corp. Code § 826] there was no time limit that would bar recovery by a creditor in an action against directors, and it was held that the creditor's cause of action was created at the time of the improper distribution and subject to the three-year statute of limitations contained in Code Civ. Proc. § 359 [Hoover v. Galbraith (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 519, 524-526, 102 Cal. Rptr. 733, 498 P.2d 981] . This decision would still appear to be applicable, at least with respect to voluntary dissolutions where there is no court supervision nor any order declaring the corporation wound up and dissolved [see Corp. Code § 1907; see also § 170.11[16]].

[d] Liability of Shareholders for Improper Distribution

Whenever in the process of winding up a corporation any distribution of assets has been made, other than under an order of the court, without prior payment or adequate provision for payment of any of the debts and liabilities of the corporation, any amount so improperly distributed may be recovered by the corporation. Any of the shareholders who have received the improper distribution may be joined as defendants in the same action or brought in on the motion of any defendant [Corp. Code § 2009(a)]. For the purpose of applying all provisions imposing liability on shareholders for distributions in liquidation, "process of winding up" includes any proceedings in involuntary dissolution or voluntary dissolution whether or not court-supervised, and any other distribution of assets to shareholders made in contemplation of termination or abandonment of the business [Corp. Code § 2009(d)].

Suit to enforce the liability of the shareholders receiving improper liquidation distributions may be brought in the name of the corporation against any or all such shareholders by any one or more creditors of the corporation, whether or not they have reduced their claims of judgment [Corp. Code § 2009(b)]. The creditor's or corporation's right against the shareholder is in personam, and recovery can be had against the shareholders who received the improper distribution even though the assets are no longer in the hands of the shareholder [Zinn v. Bright (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 188, 192, 87 Cal. Rptr. 736 ; Penasquitos, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1180, 1188-1191, 283 Cal. Rptr. 135, 812 P.2d 154 (discussed in § 170.13[3]; rationale for allowing post-dissolution claims against dissolved corporation but not against shareholders)].

The right of a creditor under Corp. Code § 2009(b) to sue the shareholders of a dissolved corporation is limited to pursuing causes of action that arose before dissolution [Pacific Scene, Inc. v. Penasquitos, Inc. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 407, 411-414, 250 Cal. Rptr. 651, 758 P.2d 1182 ; see also Corp. Code §§ 2010, 2011(a) (discussed in § 170.13[1] and [6], respectively]. The "equitable trust fund" theory available under prior law was abrogated by enactment of Corp. Code §§ 2009, 2011(a) in 1977 [United States v. Oil Resources (9th Cir. 1987) 817 F.2d 1429, 1433 ; Pacific Scene, Inc. v. Penasquitos, Inc. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 407, 410, 412-414, 250 Cal. Rptr. 651, 758 P.2d 1182] .

Shareholders satisfying any liability to the corporation are granted a right of ratable contribution from other distributees similarly liable [Corp. Code § 2009(c)]. Any shareholder who has been compelled to return to the corporation more than the shareholder's ratable share of the amount needed to pay the debts and liabilities of the corporation may require that the corporation recover from any or all of the other distributees such proportion of the amounts received by them upon the improper distribution as to give contribution to those held liable and make the distribution of the assets fair and ratable, according to the respective rights and preferences of the shares, after payment or adequate provision for the payment of all debts and liabilities of the corporation [Corp. Code § 2009(c)].

Note that if the court has ordered the distribution, the shareholders receiving it are not liable under Corp. Code § 2009(a). This raises the question of whether the creditor could attack a decree of dissolution that had been procured on the basis of a petition for an order declaring the corporation wound up and dissolved [see Corp. Code § 1907; see also § 170.11[16]], on the grounds that the petition falsely alleged payment or provision for all creditors. One decision, in dictum, has stated that the jurisdiction of the court and the decree of dissolution are not collaterally assailable on the ground the decree was procured by fraud [Crossman v. Vivienda Water Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 575, 579, 89 P. 335] . Under these circumstances, the creditor's remedy would be against the directors pursuant to Corp. Code § 316(a).

[14] Certificate of Dissolution

[a] Preparation

When a corporation has been completely wound up without court proceedings therefor, a majority of the directors then in office must sign and verify a certificate of dissolution containing the information required by the statute [Corp. Code § 1905(a)].

Except as otherwise provided by law, if the term of existence for which any corporation was organized expires without renewal or extension, the board must terminate its business and wind up its affairs. When the business and affairs have been wound up, the board must then execute and file a certificate of dissolution conforming to the requirements of Corp. Code § 1905(a) [Corp. Code § 1906].

[b] Filing; When Effective

The certificate of dissolution must be filed in the office of the Secretary of State. When the certificate of dissolution is filed, the corporate powers, rights, and privileges cease [Corp. Code § 1905(b); see Catalina Investments, Inc. v. Jones (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1, 7-8, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 256 (as consequence of dissolved status, former corporation lacked capacity to submit purported certificate of revocation of dissolution more than four years later, in attempt to reinstate corporate existence)]. The Secretary of State notifies the Franchise Tax Board of the dissolution. The corporation is dissolved as of the date of filing the certificate of dissolution [Corp. Code § 1905(b)].

If a corporation filed a certificate of dissolution after January 1, 1992, and before September 29, 2006 (the effective date of the 2006 legislation amending Corp. Code § 1905) [see Stats. 2006, ch. 773], and the Franchise Tax Board had not made the determination required under former Corp. Code § 1905(c) relative to the corporation's outstanding tax liability as of September 29, 2006, the corporation will be dissolved as of the date of filing the certificate of dissolution, and its corporate existence will cease as of that date [Corp. Code § 1905.1].

[15] Corporation That Has Not Issued Shares

Notwithstanding any other provisions regarding dissolution, when a corporation has not issued shares, a majority of the directors (or, if no directors have been named in the articles or been elected, the incorporator or a majority of the incorporators) may sign and verify a certificate of dissolution that states the following [Corp. Code § 1900.5(a)]:

- That the certificate of dissolution is being filed within 12 months from the date the articles of incorporation were filed.

- That the corporation does not have any debts or other liabilities, except as provided below.

- That the tax liability will be satisfied on a taxes paid basis or that a person or corporation or other business entity assumes the tax liability, if any, of the dissolving corporation and is responsible for additional corporate taxes, if any, that are assessed and that become due after the date of the assumption of the tax liability.

- That a final franchise tax return has been or will be filed with the Franchise Tax Board as required [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18401 et seq.].

- That the corporation has not conducted any business from the time of the filing of the articles of incorporation.

- That the known assets of the corporation remaining after payment of, or adequately providing for, known debts and liabilities have been distributed to the persons entitled to them or that the corporation acquired no known assets, as the case may be.

- That a majority of the directors, or, if no directors have been named in the articles or been elected, the incorporator or a majority of the incorporators authorized the dissolution and elected to dissolve the corporation.

- That the corporation has not issued any shares, and if the corporation has received payments for shares from investors, those payments have been returned to those investors.

- That the corporation is dissolved.

A signed and verified certificate of dissolution must be filed with the Secretary of State, who will and notify the Franchise Tax Board of the dissolution [Corp. Code § 1900.5(b)]. Upon filing the certificate of dissolution, a corporation will be dissolved and its powers, rights, and privileges will cease [Corp. Code § 1900.5(c)].

[16] Petition for Order Declaring Corporation Wound Up and Dissolved

In lieu of filing the certificate of dissolution, the board may petition the superior court of the proper county for an order declaring the corporation duly wound up and dissolved. The petition is filed in the name of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1907(a)].

On the filing of the petition, the court must make an order requiring all persons interested to show cause why an order should not be made declaring the corporation duly wound up and dissolved and must direct that the order be served by notice to all creditors, claimants, and shareholders in the same manner as the notice given to creditors in an involuntary proceeding under Corp. Code § 1807(b) [Corp. Code § 1907(b); see § 170.12[7][b]].

Any person claiming to be interested as shareholder, creditor, or otherwise, may appear in the proceeding at any time before the expiration of 30 days from the completion of publication of the order to show cause and contest the petition. On failure to do so, that person's claim is barred [Corp. Code § 1907(c)]. Thereafter an order must be entered and filed and will have the effect prescribed in Corp. Code §§ 1808 and 1809--that is, the contents of the order and its filing with the Secretary of State will be governed by those provisions prescribing the final order of dissolution in involuntary or court-supervised dissolution [Corp. Code § 1907(d)]. For discussion of the contents and filing of the order declaring the corporation wound up and dissolved, see § 170.12[10].

Chapter 170 CORPORATIONS: DISSOLUTION AND WINDING UP
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-170 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 170.12

§ 170.12 Involuntary Dissolution

[1] Persons Entitled to Initiate Proceedings

A verified complaint for involuntary dissolution of a corporation other than one subject to the Banking Law (Fin. Code § 99 et seq.), the Public Utilities Act (Pub. Util. Code § 201 et seq.), the Savings and Loan Association Law (Fin. Code § 5000 et seq.), or Ins. Code § 1010 et seq. may be filed in the superior court of the proper county [see Corp. Code § 177 (definition of "proper county")] by any of the following persons:

- One half or more of the directors in office;

- A shareholder or shareholders holding shares representing not less than 331/3 percent of (1) the total number of outstanding shares (assuming conversion of any preferred shares convertible into common shares), (2) the outstanding common shares, or (3) the equity of the corporation, exclusive in each case of shares owned by persons who have personally participated in any of the transactions described in Corp. Code § 1800(b)(4) [see Kline Hawkes California v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 183, 196, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 581 (proper interpretation of Corp. Code § 1800(a)(2)(iii) gives preferred shareholders right to file for involuntary dissolution if their preferred shares represent 331/3 percent of corporation's equity)];

- Any shareholder or shareholders of a close corporation;

- Any shareholder if the ground for dissolution is that the period for which the corporation was formed has terminated without extension; or

- Any other person expressly authorized to do so in the articles [Corp. Code § 1800(a)].

With respect to the right granted to 331/3-percent share or equity holders described in the second item above, jurisdiction of the court, once acquired in involuntary proceedings, cannot be subsequently defeated by redemption of the plaintiff's shares so that he or she holds less than 331/3 percent [Buss v. J.O. Martin Co. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 123, 131-133, 50 Cal. Rptr. 206] . The term "shareholder," for the purposes of Corp. Code § 1800(a), includes a beneficial owner of shares who has entered into a voting trust or voting pool under Corp. Code §§ 300 or 706.

The Attorney General also may bring an action to procure a judgment dissolving the corporation against any domestic corporation or purported domestic corporation in the name of the people of the State of California, either upon the Attorney General's own information or upon the complaint of a private party. The grounds and procedures to be followed in such an action are set forth in Corp. Code § 1801 [see, e.g., 81 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 240, 241 (1998), 81 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 244, 245 (1998) (both concluding that defendant was not, by virtue of single complaint of alleged unlawful deceptive practice, unlawfully holding or exercising its corporate franchise; leave to sue in quo warrento denied)]. For a complaint by the Attorney General to obtain forfeiture of a corporation's existence, see Ch. 483, Quo Warranto .

[2] Grounds

The grounds for involuntary dissolution are as follows:

- The corporation has abandoned its business for more than one year.

- The corporation has an even number of directors who are equally divided and cannot agree as to the management of its affairs, so that its business can no longer be conducted to advantage or so that there is danger that its property and business will be impaired or lost, and the holders of the voting shares of the corporation are so divided into factions that they cannot elect a board consisting of an uneven number.

- There is internal dissension and two or more factions of shareholders in the corporation are so deadlocked that its business can no longer be conducted with advantage to its shareholders or the shareholders have failed at two consecutive annual meetings at which all voting power was exercised, to elect successors to directors whose terms have expired or would have expired on election of their successors.

- Those in control of the corporation have been guilty of or have knowingly countenanced persistent and pervasive fraud, mismanagement, or abuse of authority or persistent unfairness toward any shareholders or its property is being misapplied or wasted by its directors or officers.

- In the case of a corporation with 35 or fewer shareholders (determined as provided in Corp. Code § 605), liquidation is reasonably necessary for the protection of the rights or interests of the complaining shareholder or shareholders.

- The period for which the corporation was formed has terminated without extension of that period [Corp. Code § 1800(b)].

[3] Intervention

At any time prior to the trial of the action for involuntary dissolution, any shareholder or creditor may intervene [Corp. Code § 1800(d)]. A shareholder's right to intervene is unqualified and is not subject to any requirement that security be posted even if some of the intervenor's allegations are derivative in nature rather than personal [Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 503, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896] . Even when a default is entered against the corporation, its only effect is to admit that grounds exist for winding up and dissolution and that creditors or shareholders should make known their claims. Thus, prior to the hearing to determine whether an order to wind up and dissolve should be made [see Corp. Code § 1804; see also § 170.12[5]], intervention by shareholders is proper [Rosner v. Benedict Heights, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 32 Cal. Rptr. 764] . An intervenor in involuntary dissolution proceedings is entitled to any relief the court has jurisdiction to grant, including compelling registration of a shareholder's shares, enjoining expenditures pendente lite, or appointing a receiver to press claims of the corporation against directors or others [Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 504, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896] .

[4] Court's Power to Issue Provisional Orders

[a] Provisional Directors

If the ground for the complaint for involuntary dissolution of the corporation is a deadlock in the board as set forth in Corp. Code § 1800(b)(2), the court may appoint a provisional director. The provisions of Corp. Code § 308(c) apply to any such appointed provisional director [Corp. Code § 1802]. The purpose in appointing a provisional director would be to attempt to avoid the necessity of dissolving the corporation by breaking the deadlock which is the ground for dissolution. Although it would seem that the court could appoint such a director on its own motion, the only decision under the predecessor of Corp. Code § 1802 [see former Corp. Code § 4655] reveals that the motion to appoint a provisional director was made by one of the parties, and the order was made on the basis of the complaint and affidavits submitted by the parties, with no hearing nor evidence taken [Edlund v. Los Altos Builders (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 350, 354, 235 P.2d 28] . On appeal, it was held that an order appointing a provisional director in involuntary dissolution proceedings was a nonappealable interlocutory order [Edlund v. Los Altos Builders (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 350, 354-355, 235 P.2d 28 ; see also In re O'Brien Machinery Inc. (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 563, 571-572, 36 Cal. Rptr. 782 (order by court in voluntary dissolution proceedings appointing provisional director and enjoining disposition of corporate assets prior to approval of plan or liquidation was nonappealable)]. Thus, although a provisional director could be sought in an independent action (regardless of the pendency of the involuntary proceedings) by 331/3 percent of the voting power [Corp. Code § 308(a); see Ch. 169, Directions and Management , for a discussion and forms related to appointment of a provisional director], and such a proceeding would result in an appealable judgment, an order appointing such a director during the pendency of involuntary dissolution proceedings can be reviewed only upon appeal from the order granting or denying dissolution [Edlund v. Los Altos Builders (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 350, 356, 235 P.2d 28] . An exception to this rule exists when the court somehow exceeds its jurisdiction, such as by appointing a provisional director who is a creditor or relative [see Corp. Code § 308(c) (prohibiting such persons from acting as provisional directors)], in which case a writ of prohibition would be the appropriate method of challenging the appointment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1102].

[b] Appointment of Receiver

If, at the time of the filing of a complaint for involuntary dissolution or at any time thereafter, the court has reasonable grounds to believe that unless a receiver of the corporation is appointed the interests of the corporation and its shareholders will suffer pending the hearing and determination of the complaint, upon the application of the plaintiff, and after a hearing upon notice to the corporation as the court may direct, and upon the giving of security pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 566 and 567, the court may appoint a receiver to take over and manage the business and affairs of the corporation and to preserve its property pending the hearing and determination of the complaint for dissolution [Corp. Code § 1803]. Unlike an order appointing a provisional director, an order appointing a receiver is an appealable interlocutory order [Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1(a)(7); see Gold v. Gold Realty Co. (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 791, 804, 807-809, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 118 (order appointing receiver affirmed on appeal; no abuse of discretion in appointment of receiver to implement judgment calling for dissolution of corporation and liquidation of its sole assets)].

[c] Other Discretionary Orders

After hearing, the court may decree a winding up and dissolution of the corporation if cause therefor is shown, or, with or without winding up and dissolution, the court may make such orders and decrees and issue such injunctions as justice and equity require [Corp. Code § 1804].

[5] Conduct of Involuntary Proceedings

[a] When Proceedings Commence

Involuntary proceedings for winding up a corporation commence when the order for winding up is entered under Corp. Code § 1804, that is, after a hearing on the complaint [Corp. Code § 1805(a)]. Although this order merely commences the proceeding, it was held under prior law [see former Corp. Code § 4661] that the order was final for the purposes of appeal [Reynolds v. Special Projects, Inc. (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 496, 499, 67 Cal. Rptr. 374] .

[b] Powers and Duties of Board of Directors

When an involuntary proceeding for winding up has commenced, the board conducts the winding up of the affairs of the corporation, subject to supervision by the court, unless the court, on good cause shown, has appointed other persons to wind up the corporation. The directors or those other persons may, subject to any restrictions imposed by the court, exercise all their powers through the executive officers without any order of court [Corp. Code § 1805(b)].

The powers and duties of the board of directors (or other persons appointed by the court) include all the powers enumerated in Corp. Code § 2001 [§ 170.11[8]], but the court has the power to countermand any actions taken by directors and does not merely act as a rubber stamp for the directors [In re Trinity Tractor Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 441, 83 Cal. Rptr. 783 (holding court properly overturned preference given certain creditors of corporation by directors)].

[c] Cessation of Business

When an involuntary proceeding for winding up has commenced, the corporation must cease to carry on business except to the extent necessary for the beneficial winding up thereof and except during any period that the board deems necessary to preserve the corporation's goodwill or going-concern value pending a sale of its business or assets, or both, in whole or in part [Corp. Code § 1805(c)].

[d] Notice to Shareholders and Creditors

The directors must cause written notice of the commencement of the proceedings for involuntary winding up or dissolution to be given by mail to all shareholders and to all known creditors and claimants whose addresses appear on the records of the corporation, unless the order for winding up has been stayed by appeal therefrom or otherwise, or the execution of the order has been enjoined [Corp. Code § 1805(c); see Barnett v. Lewis (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1079, 1086-1093, 217 Cal. Rptr. 80 (bankruptcy of minority shareholder does not toll period for enforcement of judgment of dissolution)].

[6] Jurisdiction of Court During Winding Up

In addition to its general authority to make orders and decrees and to issue injunctions [Corp. Code § 1804], the jurisdiction of the superior court during involuntary proceedings includes:

- The requirement of the proof of all claims and demands against the corporation, whether due or not yet due, contingent, unliquidated, or sounding only in damages, and the barring from participation of creditors and claimants failing to make and present claims and proof as required by any order [Corp. Code § 1806(a)].

- The determination or compromise of all claims of every nature against the corporation or any of its property, and the determination of the amount of money or assets required to be retained to pay or provide for the payment of claims [Corp. Code § 1806(b)].

- The determination of the rights of shareholders and of all classes of shareholders in and to the assets of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1806(c)].

- The presentation and filing of intermediate and final accounts of the directors or other persons appointed to conduct the winding up and hearing, the allowance, disallowance, or settlement of accounts and the discharge of the directors or other persons from their duties and liabilities [Corp. Code § 1806(d)].

- The appointment of a commissioner to hear and determine any or all matters, with such power or authority as the court may deem proper [Corp. Code § 1806(e)].

- The filling of any vacancies on the board which the directors or shareholders are unable to fill [Corp. Code § 1806(f)].

- The removal of any director if it appears that the director has been guilty of dishonesty, misconduct, neglect, or abuse of trust in conducting the winding up or if the director is unable to act. The court may order an election to fill the vacancy so caused, and may enjoin, for any time that it considers proper, the reelection of the director so removed; or the court, in lieu of ordering an election, may appoint a director to fill the vacancy caused by removal. Any director so appointed by the court serves until the next annual meeting of shareholders or until a successor is elected or appointed [Corp. Code § 1806(g)].

- Staying the prosecution of any suit, proceeding, or action against the corporation and requiring the parties to present and prove their claims in the manner required of other creditors [Corp. Code § 1806(h)].

- The determination of whether adequate provision has been made for payment or satisfaction of all debts and liabilities not actually paid [Corp. Code § 1806(i)].

- The making of orders for the withdrawal or termination of proceedings to wind up and dissolve, subject to conditions for the protection of shareholders and creditors [Corp. Code § 1806(j)].

- The making of an order, on allowance or settlement of the final accounts of the directors or other persons, that the corporation has been duly wound up and is dissolved. On the making of the order, the corporate existence ceases except for purposes of further winding up if needed [Corp. Code § 1806(k)].

- The making of orders for the bringing in of new parties as the court deems proper for the determination of all questions and matters [Corp. Code § 1806(l)].

[7] Creditors' Claims

[a] Time for Presentation

All creditors and claimants may be barred from participation in any distribution of the general assets if they fail to make and present claims and proofs within the time that the court may direct, which must not be less than four nor more than six months after the first publication of notice to creditors unless it appears by affidavit that there are no claims, in which case the time limit may be three months. If it is shown that a claimant did not receive notice because of absence from the state or other cause, the court may allow a claim to be filed or presented at any time before distribution is completed [Corp. Code § 1807(a)].

[b] Notice to Creditors

Notice to creditors must be published not less than once a week for three consecutive weeks in some newspaper of general circulation published in the county in which the proceeding is pending, or if no such newspaper is published in that county, in a newspaper designated by the court, directing creditors and claimants to make and present claims and proofs to the person, at the place, and within the time limited by the order. A copy of the notice must be mailed to each person shown as a creditor or claimant by the books of the corporation at his or her last known address [Corp. Code § 1807(b)].

[8] Secured Claims

Holders of secured claims may prove for the whole debt in order to realize any deficiency. If creditors fail to present their claims they are barred only as to any right to claim against the general assets for any deficiency in the amount realized on their security [Corp. Code § 1807(c)].

[a] Unmatured, Contingent, or Disputed Claims

Before any distribution is made, the amount of any unmatured, contingent, or disputed claim against the corporation which has been presented and has not been disallowed, or the part of any such a claim that the holder would be entitled to if the claim were due, established, or absolute, must be paid into court and remain there to be paid over to the party when he or she becomes entitled to it. If he or she fails to establish his or her claim, the amount must be paid over or distributed with the other assets of the corporation to those entitled to it, or any other provision for the payment of the claim must be made that the court may deem adequate. If the creditor whose claim has been allowed but is not yet due consents to the payment of the present value of his or her claim, he or she is entitled to its present value on distribution [Corp. Code § 1807(d)].

[b] Suits on Rejected Claims

Suits against the corporation on claims which have been rejected must be commenced within 30 days after written notice of rejection is given to the claimant [Corp. Code § 1807(e)].

[9] Statutory Buy-Out to Avoid Dissolution

Subject to any contrary provision in the articles of incorporation, the shares of shareholders initiating involuntary dissolution proceedings may be purchased by the corporation, or, if it does not elect to purchase, by the holders of 50 percent or more of the voting power of the corporation [Corp. Code § 2000(a)]. The procedure and requirements for such a purchase are discussed in § 170.57[8].

[10] Order Declaring Corporation Wound Up and Dissolved

[a] Contents

Upon the final settlement of the accounts of the directors or other persons appointed pursuant to Corp. Code § 1805 and the determination that the corporation's affairs are in condition for it to be dissolved, the court may make an order declaring the corporation duly wound up and dissolved [Corp. Code § 1808(a)]. The order must declare:

- That the corporation is duly wound up, that a final franchise tax return [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23332] has been filed with the Franchise Tax Board, and that its other known debts and liabilities have been paid or adequately provided for, or that Those debts and liabilities have been paid as far as its assets permitted, as the case may be. If there are known debts or liabilities for payment of which adequate provision has been made, the order must state what provision has been made, setting forth the name and address of the corporation, person, or governmental agency that has assumed or guaranteed the payment, or the name and address of the depositary with which deposit has been made or any other information necessary to enable the creditor or other person to whom payment is to be made to appear and claim payment of the debt or liability.

- That its known assets have been distributed to the persons entitled to receive them, or that it acquired no known assets, as the case may be.

- That the accounts of directors or other persons have been settled and that they are discharged from their duties and liabilities to creditors and shareholders.

- That the corporation is dissolved [Corp. Code § 1808(a)].

[b] Additional Orders

The court may make any additional orders and grant further relief that it deems proper on the evidence submitted [Corp. Code § 1808(a)].

[c] Effect of Order

On the making of the order declaring the corporation dissolved, corporate existence ceases except for the purposes of further winding up if needed, and the directors are discharged from their duties and liabilities, except in respect to completion of the winding up [Corp. Code § 1808(b)].

[d] Filing Court Order

When a corporation is dissolved or its existence forfeited by order, decree, or judgment of a court, a copy of the order, decree, or judgment, certified by the clerk of court, must immediately be filed in the office of the Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 1809].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-170 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 170.13

§ 170.13 Corporate Existence After Dissolution

[1] In General

A corporation that is dissolved nevertheless continues to exist for the purpose of winding up its affairs, prosecuting and defending actions by or against it, and enabling it to collect and discharge obligations, dispose of and convey its property, and collect and divide its assets, but not for the purpose of continuing business except so far as necessary for the winding up thereof [Corp. Code § 2010(a)]. For example, as a consequence of its dissolved status, a former corporation lacked the capacity to submit a purported certificate of revocation of dissolution more than four years later, in an attempt to reinstate its corporate existence [Catalina Investments, Inc. v. Jones (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1, 7-8, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 256 (citing Corp. Code §§ 1905, 2010(a))].

The dissolution of a corporation does not terminate its ability to enforce contracts [see Trubowitch v. Riverbank Canning Co. (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 335, 345-346, 182 P.2d 182 (holding copartnership formed by shareholders of dissolved corporation to carry on corporation's business could enforce contract for sale of goods entered into by corporation)]. Actions or proceedings to which a corporation is a party do not abate as a result of its dissolution [Corp. Code § 2010(b); see Katenkamp v. Superior Court (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 696, 700, 108 P.2d 1 (injunctive relief granted against corporation in action commenced prior to dissolution as binding on sole shareholder and distributee of corporation's assets)]. Any assets inadvertently or otherwise omitted from the winding up continue in the dissolved corporation for the benefit of the persons entitled to those assets upon dissolution of the corporation, and on realization must be distributed accordingly [Corp. Code § 2010(c)].

[2] Actions Against Corporation Dissolved on or After January 1, 1992

A cause of action against a corporation dissolved on or after January 1, 1992, whether arising before or after the dissolution, may be enforced against the dissolved corporation to the extent of its undistributed assets, including any insurance assets held by the corporation that may be available to satisfy claims [Corp. Code § 2011(a)(1)(A), (4)].

[3] Actions Against Corporation Dissolved Before January 1, 1992

were limited to those based on predissolution activities [Penasquitos, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1180, 1193-1194, 283 Cal. Rptr. 135, 812 P.2d 154 ; North American Asbestos Corp. v. Superior Court (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 902, 904-905, 225 Cal. Rptr. 877 ; see Allen v. Southland Plumbing, Inc. (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 60, 63-64, 246 Cal. Rptr. 860 (reaching same conclusion based on policies underlying former Corp. Code § 2011(a))]. Although an injured party whose claim arose after dissolution was generally precluded from pursuing a dissolved corporation's assets in the hands of its former shareholders, there was no legal barrier to suit against a dissolved corporation itself for injury or damage caused by the corporation's predissolution activities but that occurred or was discovered after the dissolution [Penasquitos, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1180, 1193-1194, 283 Cal. Rptr. 135, 812 P.2d 154 (distinguishing Levin Metals Corp. v. Parr-Richmond Terminal Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 817 F.2d 1448 , to extent cause of action therein was based on statute enacted after dissolution, and concluding Levin is incorrect to extent it may be construed as holding that dissolved corporation cannot be sued on claim that arose after dissolution)]. Defending a lawsuit brought for injuries caused by predissolution activity is not the "doing of business by a going concern." A claim for damages based on a corporation's predissolution activities is an affair of the corporation needing to be wound up after the corporation's normal business activities have ceased. Participating in a judicial resolution of those claims is part of the winding-up process for which Corp. Code § 2010 expressly requires the dissolved corporation's existence to continue [Penasquitos, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1180, 1188, 283 Cal. Rptr. 135, 812 P.2d 154] .

Once the corporation's assets have been properly distributed to its shareholders, the assets are beyond the reach of plaintiffs possessing postdissolution claims and the dissolved corporation will not have any assets with which to satisfy any judgment against it. The only prospects of recovery are the dissolved corporation's liability insurance, undistributed assets, if any, or any assets the corporation discovers after dissolution [Penasquitos, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1180, 1191-1192, 283 Cal. Rptr. 135, 812 P.2d 154 ; see also Westoil Terminals Co. v. Harbor Ins. Co. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 634, 642, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 636 (under Penasquitos, dissolved corporation may bring suit against insurers to obtain insurance benefits for which it paid, assuming that its policies were not transferred to successor entity)].

Whether or not Corp. Code § 2010 applies to suits against dissolved foreign corporations is a function of traditional conflict of law analysis. Thus, Corp. Code § 2010 will be applicable to allow suit against a dissolved foreign corporation when necessary to protect California's interest in allowing California residents to recover for injuries incurred within California [North American Asbestos Corp. v. Superior Court (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 902, 906-910, 225 Cal. Rptr. 877 ; but see Riley v. Fitzgerald (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 871, 877-883, 223 Cal. Rptr. 889 (Texas law is determinative in suit involving rights of shareholders of dissolved Texas corporation)].

The proper procedure for determining the capacity of the dissolved corporation to sue and be sued under Corp. Code § 2010 is a demurrer, motion for summary judgment, or other procedure, not a motion to quash service that was made in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 412.20 [North American Asbestos Corp. v. Superior Court (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 138, 141-143, 179 Cal. Rptr. 889 (motion to quash as only addressing court's jurisdiction)].

[4] Quiet Title Action

Every dissolved corporation continues to exist indefinitely for the purpose of being sued in any quiet title action. Any judgment rendered in any such action is binding on all of its shareholders or other persons having any equity or other interest in the corporation to the extent of their interest therein [Corp. Code § 2011(c)]. Such an action has the same force and effect as an action brought under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.50 and 410.60. Service of summons in such an action can either be made as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 413.10 et seq., or under the method provided in Corp. Code § 2011(b), discussed in § 170.13[5] [Corp. Code § 2011(c)].

[5] Service of Summons on Corporation

Summons or other process against a dissolved corporation may be served by delivering a copy to an officer, director, or person having charge of its assets, or, if no such person can be found, to any agent upon whom process might be served at the time of dissolution. If none of these persons can be found with due diligence and it is so shown by affidavit to the satisfaction of the court, the court may make an order that summons or other process be served on the dissolved corporation by personally delivering a copy, together with a copy of the order, to the Secretary of State or an assistant or deputy Secretary of State. Service in this manner is deemed complete on the 10th day after deliver of the process to the Secretary of State. On receipt of process and the fee therefor, the Secretary of State is required to give notice to the corporation as provided in Corp. Code § 1702 [Corp. Code § 2011(b); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 412.20 (discussed in Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers)].

[6] Suit Against Former Shareholders

[a] Corporation Dissolved Before January 1, 1992

As an alternative to suing a corporation after its dissolution, former Corp. Code § 2011(a)(1) as it existed prior to January 1, 1992, permitted any person having a cause of action against the corporation that arose prior to the dissolution to bring the action in the corporate name against the former shareholders [see Corp. Code § 2011(a)(4) (former law as applicable to corporation dissolved before January 1, 1992)].

[b] Corporation Dissolved on or After January 1, 1992

If any of the assets of a corporation dissolved on or after January 1, 1992, have been distributed to shareholders, a cause of action against that corporation, whether arising before or after the dissolution, may be enforced against shareholders of the dissolved corporation either to the extent of each shareholder's pro rata share of the claim or to the extent of the corporate assets distributed to them on the dissolution, whichever is less [Corp. Code § 2011(a)(1)(B), (4)]. A shareholder's liability under Corp. Code § 2011(a)(1)(B) may not exceed the total amount of assets of the dissolved corporation distributed to that shareholder on dissolution [Corp. Code § 2011(a)(1)(B)].

Except for quiet title actions, discussed in [4], above, proceedings on all claims against shareholders of corporations dissolved after January 1, 1992, must be commenced before the expiration of the statute of limitations applicable to the cause of action, but in no case later than four years after the dissolution of the corporation [Corp. Code § 2011(a)(2), (4)].

As a matter of procedure only, and not for purposes of determining liability, shareholders of a corporation dissolved on or after January 1, 1992, may be sued in the corporate name on any cause of action against the corporation. This authority does not affect the rights of the corporation or its creditors under Corp. Code § 2009, or the rights, if any, of creditors under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act, which may arise against the shareholders of a corporation [Corp. Code § 2011(a)(3), (4); for discussion of Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act, see Ch. 270, Fraudulent Conveyances].

Amendment of Corp. Code § 2011 in 1977 abrogated antecedent common law causes of action, including the "equitable trust fund" theory [United States v. Oil Resources, Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 817 F.2d 1429, 1433 ; Pacific Scene, Inc. v. Penasquitos, Inc. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 407, 410, 414-418, 250 Cal. Rptr. 651, 758 P.2d 1182] .

[1] Appeal

Order appointing provisional director during involuntary dissolution proceedings is nonappealable interlocutory order. Edlund v. Los Altos Builders (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 350, 354-355, 235 P.2d 28

Decree confirming award of commissioners as to value of plaintiff's shares is appealable order. Esparza v. Kadam, Inc. (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 303, 305-306, 338 P.2d 492

Order for winding up of corporation pursuant to complaint for involuntary dissolution had sufficient finality to support immediate appeal. Reynolds v. Special Projects, Inc. (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 496, 500-501, 67 Cal. Rptr. 374

[2] Avoidance of Dissolution

[a] Purchase of Moving Parties' Shares

Rule that justifies devaluation of minority shares in closely-held corporations for their lack of control has little validity when shares are to be purchased by one already in control of corporation. Brown v. Allied Corrugated Box Co. (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 477, 486, 154 Cal. Rptr. 170 (former Corp. Code §§ 4658, 4659, now see Corp. Code § 2000)

Allegation that "if" plaintiffs and defendants unable to agree on price for plaintiffs' shares, defendants would seek court appointment of commissioners was insufficient allegation to stay appointment of a receiver pending hearing and determination of involuntary dissolution complaint. Merlino v. Fresno Macaroni Mfg. Co. (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 462, 464-465, 148 P.2d 884

Code provisions providing for stay of proceedings and purchase of plaintiffs' shares [former Corp. Code §§ 4658, 4659; see now Corp. Code § 2000] are mandatory. Alvak Enterprises v. Phillips (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 69, 75, 334 P.2d 148

Former Corp. Code § 4658 (now Corp. Code § 2000), giving "holders" of 50 percent or more of "outstanding" shares right to avoid involuntary dissolution proceedings and receivership of corporation on election to purchase plaintiffs' shares, afforded such right to subscribers of 50 percent or more of stock when no shares were outstanding. Brodsky v. Seaboard Realty Co. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 504, 516, 24 Cal. Rptr. 61

Defendant's right, in involuntary dissolution proceedings, to seek stay in order to have appraisers appointed to ascertain value of plaintiff's shares is a right dependent on and ancillary to dissolution proceedings and upon dismissal of those proceedings, court is without jurisdiction to grant relief sought by defendant. Cubalevic v. Superior Court (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 557, 562, 49 Cal. Rptr. 698

Right of shareholder to be relieved of election to purchase shares of plaintiff in involuntary dissolution proceedings was within discretion of trial court. Brodsky v. Seaboard Realty Co. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 504, 517, 24 Cal. Rptr. 61

Action for involuntary dissolution is special proceeding not requiring findings of fact by either the court or the commissioners appointed to determine the respective interests of the parties pursuant to defendant's motion to avoid dissolution and purchase plaintiff's shares. Esparza v. Kadam, Inc. (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 802, 807, 6 Cal. Rptr. 450

Trial court has duty, when convinced that award of commissioners is erroneous, to examine matters de novo and fix proper value. Venables v. Credential Ins. Agency, Inc. (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 724, 727, 295 P.2d 547

[b] Costs

When plaintiffs sought involuntary dissolution and appointment of receiver and resisted appointment of commissioners to appraise their shares, trial court properly awarded one-half of commissioners' fees to defendants as costs to which they were entitled as prevailing parties obtaining relief sought in form of order denying dissolution and ordering plaintiffs to surrender shares to defendants. Merlino v. Fresno Macaroni Mfg. Co. (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 120, 125, 168 P.2d 182

[3] De Facto Dissolution

Corporation that has formally commenced voluntary dissolution and distributed major assets, but that has failed to file certificate of dissolution with Secretary of State has undergone de facto dissolution for purpose of federal tax law provisions for excess profits carryback credit. ABC Brewing Corp. v. Commissioner (9th Cir. [Cal] 1955) 224 F.2d 483, 485-487

Corporate good will is property of corporation alone; award for loss of good will, based on one shareholder's breach of fiduciary duty by using corporation's good will for personal advantage while winding up corporation, is erroneous when made directly to plaintiff shareholder in dissolution action; award should be made to corporation for allocation among all parties. Baker v. Pratt (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 370, 380-381, 222 Cal. Rptr. 253

[4] Involuntary Dissolution and Costs

Action for dissolution is special proceeding in which prevailing party is entitled to costs under former Code Civ. Proc.

§ 1032(c) (now see Code Civ. Proc § 1032(a)(4)). Merlino v. Fresno Macaroni Mfg. Co. (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 120, 124, 168 P.2d 182

[5] Default

[a] Grounds

Corporation, by defaulting in proceedings for involuntary dissolution, in effect admits only that grounds exist for winding up and dissolving corporation and that creditors or shareholders should be required to make known their claims to be recognized in disposition of corporate assets. Rosner v. Benedict Heights, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7, 32 Cal. Rptr. 764

Minority shareholders failed to raise triable issue of material fact as to right to involuntary dissolution under Corp. Code § 1800(b)(5); dissolution of corporation was not reasonably necessary to protect their rights when, despite hostility between majority and minority shareholders, plaintiffs continued to receive dividends from corporation until filing of lawsuit. Stuparich v. Harbor Furniture Manufacturing, Inc. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1268, 1279, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 313

Corp. Code 1800(b)(4) "persistent unfairness" standard not interpreted in terms of minority shareholders' "reasonable expectations"; Corp. Code 1800(b)(5) requires trial court to determine whether minority shareholders require protection by considering relative misconduct of parties. Bauer v. Bauer (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1106, 1113-1114, 1116, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377

Involuntary dissolution pursuant to former Corp. Code § 4651(f) (as necessary for protection of rights and interests of complaining shareholders) was properly granted when evidence showed plaintiff excluded from corporation, received no salary, dividends or other revenue from corporation's investments. Stumpf v. C.E. Stumpf & Sons, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 230, 235, 120 Cal. Rptr. 671

Protection of minority shareholders does not require establishment of other grounds such as persistent unfairness or deadlock, since ground specified by Corp. Code § 1800(b)(5) is independent and addressed to discretion of trial court which must be convinced that plaintiff's case is meritorious. Stumpf v. C.E. Stumpf & Sons, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 230, 234-235, 120 Cal. Rptr. 671

In involuntary dissolution suit by minority shareholders, demurrer was properly sustained as to defendant shareholders alleged to be guilty of persistent unfairness to minority, when no relief was sought as to them and only dissolution of corporation was sought. Weisman v. Odell (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 494, 499, 83 Cal. Rptr. 563

Dissolution on grounds of deadlock and protection of shareholders was properly ordered when facts revealed diversion of corporate assets and revocation of license, use of which was sole purpose for corporation's existence. Reynolds v. Special Projects, Inc. (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 496, 501, 67 Cal. Rptr. 374

Complaint alleging lost business and personnel, destruction of goodwill of business, and operation of corporation as defendant's private affair alleged persistent mismanagement and abuse of authority and unfairness to minority, sufficient grounds for dissolution and was good against general demurrer. Buss v. J.O. Martin Co. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 123, 135, 50 Cal. Rptr. 206

Decree ordering involuntary dissolution of corporation which had ceased lumber business but continued as holding company was proper when complaint based on ground that corporation had abandoned its business for more than one year and when dissolution appeared necessary to protect interest of minority shareholder. Geisendorfer v. Rainbow

Mill & Lbr. Co. (1945) 70 Cal. App. 2d 705, 709-710, 161 P.2d 561

[b] Intervenors

Shareholder's right to intervene in involuntary dissolution proceedings is unqualified right and not subject to requirement that security be posted even when some claims of shareholder are derivative in nature. Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 503, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896

Intervenor in involuntary dissolution proceedings is entitled to any relief court has jurisdiction to grant including compelling registration of shareholder's shares, enjoining expenditures pendente lite, or appointing receiver to press claims of corporation against directors or others. Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 504, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896

Entry of default against corporation in involuntary dissolution proceeding is not equivalent of trial for purpose of determining right of shareholder to intervene before trial when court did not enter order under former Corp. Code § 4660 (now Corp. Code § 1804) that corporation be wound up and dissolved and therefore proceedings had not commenced. Rosner v. Benedict Heights, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 32 Cal. Rptr. 764

[c] Nature of Proceeding

Action for involuntary dissolution of corporation is in nature of special proceeding in that proceedings and relief sought are created by statute. Weisman v. Odell (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 494, 496, 83 Cal. Rptr. 563

Former Corp. Code § 4650 (now Corp. Code § 1800), permitting involuntary proceedings by shareholders to dissolve a corporation, is strictly construed. Cardoza v. Millington (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 26, 34, 297 P.2d 778

[d] Parties

When no direct relief or damages were sought against majority shareholders joined as defendants in involuntary dissolution proceedings, trial court acted properly by sustaining demurrer. Weisman v. Odell (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 494, 497-499, 83 Cal. Rptr. 563

[e] Receivers

Judge had authority under Code Civ. Proc. § 564(b)(3), (4) and Corp. Code § 1803 to appoint receiver in order to carry dissolution judgment into effect and dispose of corporate property; order appointing receiver affirmed on appeal. Gold v. Gold Realty Co. (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 791, 804-805, 809, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 118

[f] Persons Entitled to File Complaint

Shareholder who told corporation's attorney that he wished to be removed immediately from corporate records as shareholder had constructively surrendered or abandoned his shares, and thus did not have standing to maintain action for involuntary dissolution. Simon v. Steelman (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 1006-1007, 274 Cal. Rptr. 218

Reference in former Corp. Code § 4650 (now Corp. Code § 1800(a)) to shareholders holding 331/3 percent of outstanding shares includes both voting and nonvoting shares. Buss v. J.O. Martin Co. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 123, 130-131, 50 Cal. Rptr. 206

Jurisdiction of court, once acquired in involuntary proceeding, is not subsequently defeated by redemption of plaintiff's shares to reduce holdings below required 331/3 percent. Buss v. J.O. Martin Co. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 123, 131-133, 50 Cal. Rptr. 206

[6] Interest

Shareholder not entitled to interest on value of shares to be purchased from date of valuation. Abrams v. Abrams-Rubaloff & Associates, Inc. (1980) 114 Cal. App. 3d 240, 250, 170 Cal. Rptr. 656

[7] Jurisdiction of Court Generally

Procedural requirements for establishing personal jurisdiction over persons to be joined as necessary parties to involuntary dissolution actions are satisfied by (1) proper notice to appear and be heard if joinder is on court's own motion, or (2) hearing in court in which matter has been proceeding after personal service of noticed motion or order to show cause if joinder is by motion of party. Howard v. Data Storage Associates Inc. (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 689, 697-698, 178 Cal. Rptr. 269

Court has jurisdiction in involuntary dissolution action to make orders after interlocutory judgment of dissolution, surcharging individual directors who were not named as parties in original complaint, if due process requirements for acquiring personal jurisdiction over directors were satisfied and directors had opportunity to be heard at dissolution hearing at which misconduct of directors was established. Howard v. Data Storage Associates Inc. (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 689, 697, 698-699, 178 Cal. Rptr. 269

Court is without jurisdiction to declare terms and conditions of dissolution "when and if it occurred at some future time" when there had been no election to dissolve corporation. Escondido Mut. Water Co. v. George A. Hillebrecht, Inc. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 410, 415-416, 50 Cal. Rptr. 495

Jurisdiction of superior court to decree dissolution of any corporation exists only by virtue of statutory authority; superior court does not possess this authority by virtue of inherent general jurisdiction in equity. Barber v. Irving (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 560, 564, 38 Cal. Rptr. 142

Exercise of court jurisdiction in supervising winding up and dissolution of corporation does not violate any vested contract or property rights of shareholders. In re Mayellen Apts., Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 298, 307, 285 P.2d 943

[8] Postdissolution Proceedings

California law not preempted by CERCLA for purposes of determining corporation's capacity to be sued. Levin Metals Corp. v. Parr-Richmond Terminal Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 817 F.2d 1448, 1451

Injunctive relief granted against corporation in action commenced prior to its dissolution is binding on sole shareholder and distributee of corporation's assets on theory that he or she was bound as agent of corporation and action against corporation did not abate by reason of its dissolution. Katenkamp v. Superior Court (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 696, 700, 108 P.2d 1

Since assets of corporation are distributed to shareholders who become personally liable to creditors of corporation on existing contracts, suit by shareholders to enforce contract alleged by defendant to be nonassignable was properly maintained by copartnership formed by shareholders of dissolved corporation to carry on its business. Trubowitch v.

Riverbank Canning Co. (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 335, 345-346, 182 P.2d 182

Corporation that acted as subcontractor is subject to cross complaint by general contractor for indemnity in owner's suit filed only against general contractor prior to dissolution and based on construction defects that were known prior to dissolution; for purposes of former Corp. Code § 2011(a), general contractor's claim for indemnity was cause of action arising before dissolution. Allen v. Southland Plumbing, Inc. (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 60, 63-65, 246 Cal. Rptr. 860

[9] Voluntary Dissolution

[a] Certificate of Election to Dissolve

Provisions for filing certificate of election to dissolve was enacted for convenience of Secretary of State and public and for protection of directors; strict compliance with filing requirement was unnecessary in absence of any showing of injury resulting from failure to comply. Herschfelt v. Knowles-Raymond Granite Co. (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 347, 351, 279 P.2d 104

[b] Court Supervision

Preservation of assets for payment of all creditors ratably as among purposes of court-supervised dissolution of corporation. In re Trinity Tractor Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 441, 83 Cal. Rptr. 783

Corporation filing petition for court supervision of voluntary dissolution had permitted or suffered "appointment of a receiver" within meaning of Bankruptcy Act (see former 11 U.S.C. § 21(a)(5)) when, under California law, effect of corporate action was to require board of directors to operate as trustees under court supervision. Crateo, Inc. v. Intermark, Inc. (9th Cir. [Cal] 1976) 536 F.2d 862, 865-866

Attempt by majority shareholder to effect voluntary dissolution and plan of distribution which violate statutory dissolution provisions was grounds entitling minority shareholders to seek court supervision to determine controversy arising from plan of distribution; merger could not be accomplished through dissolution proceeding. In re San Joaquin L. & P. Corp. (1942) 52 Cal. App. 2d 814, 826, 127 P.2d 29

Provision in former Corp. Code § 4607 that court may take jurisdiction over voluntary dissolution entitled shareholder to court supervision as a matter of right. In re Mayellen Apts., Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 298, 303-304, 285 P.2d 943

Court's judicial supervision of voluntary dissolution did not violate of rights of minority under articles of incorporation to purchase shares of persons desiring to sell since statutory provisions authorizing dissolution and court's jurisdiction form part of contract between shareholders and corporation under reserved power clause. In re Mayellen Apts., Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 298, 304-306, 285 P.2d 943

Jurisdiction of court and decree of dissolution was not collaterally assailable upon ground that decree procured by fraud by reason of false allegation that all creditors of corporation had been paid or adequate provision made for payment. Crossman v. Vivienda Water Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 575, 579, 89 P. 335

[c] Good-Faith Requirement

Shareholder's agreement to unanimous consent requirement for corporate actions and to transfer restrictions which made shares virtually unsalable did not prevent him or her from dissolving corporation when unanimous consent provisions were abused by other shareholders to benefit themselves at shareholder's expense. In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 380, 317 P.2d 1

Shareholders representing 50 percent of voting power did not have absolute right to dissolve corporation and, thus, had no right to dissolve corporation to defraud other shareholders or to freeze out minority shareholders, or to sell assets of dissolved corporation at inadequate price. In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 376-377, 317 P.2d 1

Dissolution of corporation through voluntary election by consent of shareholders was subject to equitable limitations. In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 377, 317 P.2d 1

Shareholder representing requisite voting power is entitled to protect investment by dissolution when all alternative methods are foreclosed, no advantage is secured over other shareholders, and no rights of third parties will be adversely affected. In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 378, 317 P.2d 1

[d] Plan of Distribution

Minority shareholder's complaint to compel distribution in kind of corporation's assets on dissolution was not barred by laches when shareholder refused to accept cash value of shares, did not mislead majority shareholder as to his or her nonacquiescence in plan of distribution, and no evidence offered to support view that plaintiff had notice of action taken at meeting to consider dissolution, or the time at which plaintiff first objected to plan of distribution. Zimmerman v. Tide Water Associated Oil Co. (1943) 61 Cal. App. 2d 585, 592-594, 143 P.2d 409

Corporation in process of voluntary winding up did not have right to adopt and carry out plan of distribution whereby business properties are distributed in kind to majority stockholder while minority stockholders are compelled to take their share of distributable assets in cash. In re San Joaquin L. & P. Corp. (1942) 52 Cal. App. 2d 814, 824, 127 P.2d 29

[e] Rights and Duties of Directors

Directors of corporation in process of winding up under court supervision are required to exercise powers subject to court's orders as to any and all matters concerning winding up. In re Trinity Tractor Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 441, 83 Cal. Rptr. 783

Director of dissolved corporation did not have right to inspect corporate records when there was no intimation that "further winding up" was needed. Hartman v. Hollingsworth (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 579, 582-583, 63 Cal. Rptr. 563

[f] Statutory Procedure Mandatory

Voluntary dissolution of corporation is invalid if statutory requirements regarding notice, waiver of notice, and voting are not met. Ovadia v. Abdullah (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1100, 1109-1111, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 527

Keeler v. Schulte (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 801, 803, 306 P.2d 430* ; In re O'Brien Machinery Inc. (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 563, 570, 36 Cal. Rptr. 782

[10] Trial

Voluntary dissolution petition was triable on basis of affidavits when parties, their counsel, and court are agreeable to that procedure and no objection was made prior to appeal. In re O'Brien Machinery Inc. (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 563, 569, 570, 36 Cal. Rptr. 782

Findings of fact not required in proceedings for dissolution of corporation. Esparza v. Kadam, Inc. (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 802, 806-807, 6 Cal. Rptr. 450

[b] Liability of Shareholder

Right of corporation under former Corp. Code § 5012 (see now Corp. Code § 2009) to recover improper distribution from shareholder is right in personam permitting recovery even though assets are no longer in hands of shareholder. Zinn v. Bright (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 188, 192, 87 Cal. Rptr. 736

[12] Valuation

Consideration of only price-earnings method in valuing minority interest in closely held corporation under Corp. Code § 2000(a) was prejudicial error; although price-earnings method may be used, consideration of only that method was improper; minority interest was not to be devalued because of its being minority or noncontrolling interest. Ronald v. 4-C's Electronic Packaging, Inc., (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 290, 297-299, 214 Cal. Rptr. 225

[2] Use of Form

This petition is used to invoke jurisdiction of the superior court in order that it may supervise a voluntary winding up and dissolution as authorized under Corp. Code § 1904. Jurisdiction may be taken only if it appears that it is necessary for the protection of a party in interest. Once the court has assumed jurisdiction, it may make any orders as to any and all matters concerning the winding up of the affairs of the corporation and for the protection of its shareholders and creditors that justice and equity may require [Corp. Code § 1904].

Note that Paragraph 4 of the petition calls for detailed facts concerning the propriety of the court's assuming jurisdiction. Although it was held under former Corp. Code § 4607 (now, in substance, Corp. Code § 1904) that even though that statute was couched in permissive language, stating that the court "may" take jurisdiction, the court nevertheless had a duty of doing so [In re Mayellen Apts., Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 298, 303-304, 285 P.2d 943] .

The California Supreme Court, however, refused to decide whether judicial supervision could be invoked where there is no possibility of dispute between shareholders [In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 380, 317 P.2d 1] . Under present law, the issue appears to have been resolved in favor of granting the court discretion as to whether to assume jurisdiction, and it therefore becomes necessary to indicate in the petition those facts warranting court supervision of the dissolution [Corp. Code § 1904].

[3] Who May Petition; Venue

If a corporation is in the process of voluntary winding up, the superior court of the "proper county," that is, the county in which the corporation's principal executive office is located, or Sacramento County if the corporation has no such office or it is not located in California [Corp. Code § 177] may assume jurisdiction over the voluntary winding up proceeding, upon the petition of:

- The corporation; or
- A shareholder or shareholders representing five percent or more of the total number of any class of outstanding shares; or
- Any shareholder or shareholders of a close corporation [see Corp. Code § 158 (definition of "close corporation")]; or
- Three or more creditors [Corp. Code § 1904].

[4] Notice of Proceedings; Orders

Corp. Code § 1904 provides that the superior court may assume jurisdiction upon petition of the persons listed above, "... upon such notice to the corporation and to other persons interested in the corporation as shareholders and creditors as the court may order. ..." see § 170.51, for such an order. At the point it assumes jurisdiction, the court will determine the case under the provisions governing involuntary dissolution, Corp. Code §§ 1802-1809 [Corp. Code § 1904]. Under Corp. Code § 1804, the court is given discretion to either order a winding up and dissolution or to make any orders and decrees, with or without winding up or dissolution, that justice and equity require.

Service of notice on nonpetitioning shareholders does not make them parties to the voluntary dissolution proceeding. Those shareholders are not parties unless they are named as defendants or they intervenem, and they cannot be effectively named as defendants unless the petition seeks relief against them [In re FairWageLaw (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 279, 286-288, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 652 (court's adjudication, in voluntary dissolution proceeding, of corporation's claim against nonpetitioning shareholder, who was not named as defendant in that proceeding, violated shareholder's right to due process, even though shareholder had intervened so as to pursue claim against corporation)].

The petition of _____ [names] for supervision by this court of the voluntary winding up and dissolution of _____ [name], a California corporation, came on regularly for hearing by the court on this date. Petitioners appeared by counsel _____ [name]; _____ [specify other appearances].

On proof made to the satisfaction of the court that the petition should be granted, the court hereby takes jurisdiction of the winding up and dissolution of _____ [name], a California corporation, pursuant to Corporations Code Section 1904, and

IT IS ORDERED:

1. That the directors of the aforementioned corporation cause written notice of the commencement of these proceedings to be given by mail to all shareholders and to all known creditors and claimants whose addresses appear on the records of the corporation.

2. That notice to all creditors and claimants be published not less than once a week for three consecutive weeks in _____ [name of newspaper], a newspaper of general circulation printed and published in _____ County, California and that a copy of that notice be mailed to each person shown as a creditor or claimant by the books of the corporation at his/her last known address. The notice shall be sufficient if it is substantially in the following form: _____ [set forth form of notice; see § 170.53].

3. 4. That _____ [name] be appointed as commissioner in this proceeding to hear and determine _____ [specify, e.g., all matters that might arise during the winding up of the corporation].

[5. Set forth any other appropriate order authorized by Corp. Code § 1806 within the scope of relief sought by the petition.]

Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

This order is for use by the court in assuming jurisdiction over the voluntary winding up and dissolution of a corporation pursuant to Corp. Code § 1904. That section makes applicable the provisions of the General Corporation Law which govern involuntary dissolution [see Corp. Code §§ 1802-1809]. However, some of these provisions are clearly inapplicable [see Corp. Code § 1802 (referring to the court's power to break a deadlock by appointment of a provisional director if deadlock is the ground for involuntary dissolution)], and others seem to overlap the provisions in Corp. Code § 1904.

For example, Corp. Code § 1904 provides for notice to all persons interested in the corporation as shareholders or creditors that voluntary proceedings are underway under court supervision [Corp. Code § 1904; see § 170.51 (order to show cause complying with this requirement)]. This would be the second notice received by shareholders and creditors, since the board of directors is required to mail notices at the time the corporation has elected to wind up and dissolve [Corp. Code § 1903(c)]. Corp. Code § 1805(c), which literally applies to court-supervised dissolutions by virtue of Corp. Code § 1904, requires yet another notice to shareholders and creditors "whose addresses appear on the records of the corporation," and this notice is to be mailed at the direction of the directors. Separate provision is made for the notice to creditors and claimants, by both publication and mail, as the court may direct [Corp. Code § 1807]. It would seem proper to combine at least the last two of these notices to creditors, and simply mail a single notice setting the time limits for presenting claims, that is, the notice sent on order of the court which is published in the newspaper. See § 170.55 for this notice.

[3] Other Orders

This form illustrates two of the orders that may be sought in connection with court supervision of voluntary dissolution, the requirement of proof of claims [Corp. Code § 1806(a)], and appointment of a commissioner [Corp. Code § 1806(e)]. Any other appropriate order authorized by Corp. Code § 1803 or 1806 could be sought.

[4] Appeal

The order granting the petition for court supervision of a voluntary dissolution is apparently a final order for purposes of appeal [see In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 375, 317 P.2d 1] . However, that portion of an order appointing a provisional director or restraining disposition of corporate assets is probably not appealable [see In re O'Brien Mach., Inc. (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 563, 571-572, 36 Cal. Rptr. 782 (assuming, without deciding, that such orders nonappealable); but see Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1 (a)(6), (7) which provide that orders granting an injunction or appointing a receiver are appealable orders].

[5] State Statutes

Matters within jurisdiction of court generally in proceedings for voluntary winding up. Corp. Code §§ 1802-1809

Jurisdiction of court includes presentation and proof of claims against corporation. Corp. Code §§ 1806(a), 1807(a)

Jurisdiction of court includes appointment of commissioner. Corp. Code § 1806(e)

[6] Decisions

Orders made by court in voluntary dissolution proceedings appointing provisional director and restraining disposition of assets prior to approval of plan of distribution are nonappealable. In re O'Brien Mach., Inc. (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 563, 571-572, 36 Cal. Rptr. 782

[5] Decisions

[a] Default

Corp. Code 1800(b)(4) "persistent unfairness" standard not interpreted in terms of minority shareholders' "reasonable expectations"; Corp. Code 1800(b)(5) requires trial court to determine whether minority shareholders require protection by considering relative misconduct of parties. Bauer v. Bauer (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1106, 1113-1114, 1116, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377

Corporation, by defaulting in proceedings for involuntary dissolution, in effect admitted only that grounds exist for winding up and dissolving corporation and that creditors or shareholders should be required to make known their claims to be recognized in disposition of corporate assets. Rosner v. Benedict Heights, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7, 32 Cal. Rptr. 764

[b] Grounds

Minority shareholders failed to raise triable issue of material fact as to right to involuntary dissolution under Corp. Code § 1800(b)(5); dissolution of corporation was not reasonably necessary to protect their rights when, despite hostility between majority and minority shareholders, plaintiffs continued to receive dividends from corporation until filing of lawsuit. Stuparich v. Harbor Furniture Manufacturing, Inc. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1268, 1279, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 313

Involuntary dissolution pursuant to former Corp. Code § 4651(f) (now Corp. Code § 1800(b)(5)) (as necessary for protection of rights and interests of complaining shareholders) was properly granted when evidence showed plaintiff excluded from corporation, received no salary, dividends or other revenue from corporation's investments. Stumpf v. C.E. Stumpf & Sons, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 230, 235, 120 Cal. Rptr. 671

Protection of minority shareholders did not require establishment of other grounds such as persistent unfairness or deadlock, since ground specified by Corp. Code § 1800(b)(5) is independent and addressed to discretion of trial court which must be convinced that plaintiff's case is meritorious. Stumpf v. C.E. Stumpf & Sons, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 230, 234-235, 120 Cal. Rptr. 671

In involuntary dissolution suit by minority shareholders, demurrer was properly sustained as to defendant shareholders alleged to be guilty of persistent unfairness to minority, when no relief was sought as to them and only dissolution of corporation was sought. Weisman v. Odell (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 494, 499, 83 Cal. Rptr. 563

Dissolution on grounds of deadlock and protection of shareholders was properly ordered when facts revealed diversion of corporate assets and revocation of license, use of which was sole purpose for corporation's existence. Reynolds v. Special Projects, Inc. (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 496, 501, 67 Cal. Rptr. 374

Complaint alleging lost business and personnel, destruction of goodwill of business and operation of corporation as defendant's private affair alleged persistent mismanagement and abuse of authority and unfairness to minority, sufficient grounds for dissolution and good against general demurrer. Buss v. J.O. Martin Co. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 123, 135, 50 Cal. Rptr. 206

Decree ordering involuntary dissolution of corporation which had ceased lumber business but continued as holding company was proper when complaint based on ground that corporation had abandoned its business for more than one year and when dissolution appeared necessary to protect interest of minority shareholder. *Geisendorfer v. [c] Intervenors

Shareholder's right to intervene in involuntary dissolution proceedings is unqualified right and not subject to requirement that security be posted even when some claims of shareholder are derivative in nature. Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 503, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896

An intervenor in involuntary dissolution proceedings is entitled to any relief court has jurisdiction to grant including compelling registration of shareholder's shares, enjoining expenditures pendente lite, or appointing receiver to press claims of corporation against directors or others. Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 504, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896

Entry of default against corporation in involuntary dissolution proceeding is not equivalent of trial for purpose of determining right of shareholder to intervene before trial when court did not enter order under former Corp. Code § 4660 (now Corp. Code § 1804) that corporation be wound up and dissolved and therefore proceedings had not commenced. Rosner v. Benedict Heights, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 32 Cal. Rptr. 764

[d] Nature of Proceeding

Action for involuntary dissolution of corporation is in nature of special proceeding in that proceedings and relief sought are created by statute. Weisman v. Odell (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 494, 496, 83 Cal. Rptr. 563

Former Corp. Code § 4650 (now Corp. Code § 1800), permitting involuntary proceedings by shareholders to dissolve a corporation, is strictly construed. Cardoza v. Millington (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 26, 34, 297 P.2d 778

[e] Parties

When no direct relief or damages sought against majority shareholders joined as defendants in involuntary dissolution proceedings, trial court acted properly by sustaining their general demurrer. Weisman v. Odell (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 494, 497-499, 83 Cal. Rptr. 563

[f] Persons Entitled to File Complaint

Preferred shareholders have right under Corp. Code § 1800(a)(2)(iii) to file for involuntary dissolution if their preferred shares represent 331/3 percent of corporation's equity. Kline Hawkes California v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 183, 196, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 581

The verified complaint of _____ [name], for involuntary winding up and dissolution of _____ [name], a California corporation, came on regularly for hearing before this court on this date. Plaintiff(s) appeared by counsel _____ [name]; _____ [specify any other appearances].

On proof to the satisfaction of the court that an order should be made directing that defendant corporation be wound up and dissolved,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED AND DECREED:

1. That _____ [name], a California corporation, be wound up and dissolved.

2. That the present directors of the corporation, namely, _____ [name of each director], are directed to conduct the winding up of the affairs of the corporation, subject to the supervision of the court.

3. That the corporation shall cease to carry on business except to the extent necessary for the beneficial winding up thereof and except during the period that the board may deem necessary to preserve the corporation's goodwill or going-concern value pending a sale of its business or assets, or both, in whole or in part.

4. That the directors of the corporation cause written notice of the commencement of these proceedings to be given by mail to all shareholders and to all known creditors and claimants whose addresses appear on the records of the corporation.

5. That notice to all creditors and claimants be published not less than once a week for three consecutive weeks in _____ [name of newspaper], a newspaper of general circulation printed and published in _____ County, California and that a copy of the notice be mailed to each person shown as a creditor or claimant by the books of the corporation at his/her last known address. Notice shall be sufficient if it is substantially in the following form: _____ [set forth form of notice; see § 170.55].

6. That all persons having or making claims or demands against the aforementioned corporation, whether those claims or demands be due or not yet due, contingent, unliquidated, or sounding only in damages, file their claims with the proof thereof with _____ [name] at the principal office of the corporation located at _____ [address], within _____ [specify period not less than four nor more than six months] after the first publication of the notice herein specified, or be barred from participation in any distribution of the general assets of the corporation if they fail to make and present claims and proofs within the time herein specified.

[7. (Set forth any other appropriate order authorized by Corp. Code § 1806 within the scope of relief sought by the complaint).]

Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

This order is used to decree the involuntary winding up and dissolution of a corporation. After a hearing on the complaint for involuntary winding up and dissolution, the court may enter this order if cause is shown, or, with or without winding up and dissolution, may make any orders and decrees and issue any injunctions in the case that justice and equity require [Corp. Code § 1904]. An example of the type of order which the court might make without ordering a winding up is one appointing a provisional director when the ground for the complaint is a deadlock on the board as set forth in Corp. Code § 1800(b)(2) [Corp. Code § 1802].

This form also serves as an order requiring the directors to give notice of the commencement of the proceedings to all known claimants and creditors whose addresses appear on the records of the corporation. Notice is required unless the order for winding up has been stayed by appeal or otherwise, or the proceeding or the execution of the order has been enjoined [Corp. Code § 1805(c)]. Since there is a separate provision under Corp. Code § 1807 for notice to creditors and claimants, by both publication and mail, as the court may direct, it seems entirely proper and expeditious to include in the court's order its directions as to the manner of publication and the time and manner for presenting claims to avoid being barred from participation in the distribution of the corporation's assets [Corp. Code §§ 1806(a), 1807]. See § 170.55 for the notice to be published and mailed to creditors.

[3] Effect of Order to Wind Up and Dissolve

When the order for winding up is entered under Corp. Code § 1904, involuntary dissolution proceedings are deemed to commence [Corp. Code § 1805(a)]. Prior to this order being entered, there is no provision for notice to be given to any party except the corporation and any other defendants joined in the proceedings. As stated above, notice is given after the proceedings have "commenced" [Corp. Code § 1805(c)]. What effect commencement of the proceedings might have on the right of a shareholder or creditor to intervene "prior to the trial" [Corp. Code § 1800(c)] is uncertain, but case authority suggests that the trial has commenced once the order for winding up and dissolution has been entered [see Rosner v. Benedict Heights, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 32 Cal. Rptr. 764 (holding entry of default against corporation was not equivalent of trial when court did not enter order that corporation be wound up and dissolved)].

and	)	PETITION TO AVOID VOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION AND ASCERTAIN VALUE OF MOVING PARTIES' SHARES
_____ [name of corporation], a Corporation,	)

Petitioners allege:

1. Respondent _____ [name of corporation] (herein called "corporation") is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, with its principal office in _____ County, California.

2. Petitioners are the holders of 50 percent of the voting power of the corporation.

3. Respondents _____ [names of shareholders initiating dissolution] (hereinafter called "moving parties") are the holders of 50 percent of the voting power of the corporation.

4. On _____ [date], at a special meeting of shareholders duly called and noticed, the moving parties voted to elect to voluntarily wind up and dissolve the corporation.

5. The petitioners have elected to purchase the shares of stock in the corporation held by the moving parties, but are unable to agree with the moving parties upon the fair value of the shares. A copy of petitioners' written offer to purchase the moving parties' shares, which was rejected by them, is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference.

6. Petitioners will furnish a bond with sufficient security, as determined by the court, to pay the estimated reasonable expenses (including attorney's fees) of the moving parties if petitioners fail to make payment for the moving parties' shares within the time specified by the court's order.

WHEREFORE, petitioners pray as follows:

1. That the court stay the winding up and dissolution of the corporation and fix the fair value of the shares owned by the moving parties;

2. That the court appoint three disinterested appraisers to appraise the fair value of the shares owned by the moving parties, and make an order referring the matter to the appraisers so appointed for the purpose of ascertaining that value;

3. That the court enter a decree providing in the alternative for the winding up and dissolution of the corporation unless payment is made for the shares of the moving parties within the time specified by the court in that decree; and

4. For any other and further relief that the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This petition is for use when the shareholders of a corporation are evenly divided on the issue of whether to voluntarily dissolve the corporation, and one faction wishes to avoid dissolution by purchasing the shares of the parties initiating voluntary dissolution.

[3] Allegations

The petition alleges:

- Venue of the proceeding in the "proper county" (Paragraph 1) [Corp. Code § 2000(b); see Corp. Code § 177 (defining "proper county")].

- Petitioners' status as holders of 50 percent of the corporation's voting power (Paragraph 2) [Corp. Code § 2000(a)].

- Respondents' status as "moving parties" (Paragraph 3) [Corp. Code § 2000(a)].

- That the corporation is in the process of winding up and dissolution and that the petitioners have sought, unsuccessfully, to avoid dissolution by making an offer to purchase the moving parties' shares (Paragraphs 4, 5) [Corp. Code § 2000(b)].

- The willingness of petitioners to furnish a bond with sufficient security to pay the moving parties' estimated reasonable expenses in the event the petitioners fail to make payment for the shares of the moving parties (Paragraph 6) [Corp. Code § 2000(b), (c)].

- That the purchase of the moving parties' shares by petitioners will not violate an agreement or the articles of incorporation (Paragraph 7) [Corp. Code § 2000(a)].

The petition prays for a stay of all dissolution proceedings, appointment of commissioners under order to evaluate the shares, and an alternative decree ordering dissolution in the event petitioners fail to purchase the moving parties' shares [Corp. Code § 2000(c)].

[4] Avoidance of Dissolution

[a] Generally

Prior to January 1, 1977, the effective date of the present General Corporation Law, purchase of the shares of the shareholders seeking dissolution of a corporation was possible only in involuntary proceedings [see former Corp. Code § 4658]. Under present law, the buy-out option is available in voluntary proceedings as well, and, except for the manner in which the option is exercised, the same procedures will apply whether the dissolution is voluntary or involuntary. Consequently, the statutory provisions governing purchase of the moving parties' shares will be discussed here and not repeated following those forms relevant to the same procedure in involuntary proceedings [see §§ 170.57 and 170.58].

[b] Purchase of Plaintiffs' Shares

Subject to any contrary provision in the articles, in any suit for involuntary dissolution, or in any proceeding for voluntary dissolution initiated by the vote of shareholders representing only 50 percent of the voting power, the corporation, or, if it does not elect to purchase, the holders of 50 percent or more of the voting power of the corporation (the "purchasing parties") may avoid the dissolution of the corporation and the appointment of any receiver by purchasing for cash the shares owned by the plaintiffs or by the shareholders so initiating the proceeding (the "moving parties") at their fair value [Corp. Code § 2000(a)]. Note that the corporation has the option of purchasing the shares of the moving parties. Election by the corporation to purchase the shares may be made by approval of the outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 152 (defining "approval of the outstanding shares")], excluding the shares held by the moving parties [Corp. Code § 2000(a)]. If the corporation has the funds to make the purchase, and elects to do so, then the caption of this form will have to be altered to show that the corporation is the petitioner. As a practical matter, most small corporations would not have sufficient retained earnings on hand to repurchase 50 percent of their shares.

[c] Determining Fair Value

The fair value is determined on the basis of the liquidation value, taking into account the possibility, if any, of sale of the entire business as a going concern in a liquidation [Corp. Code § 2000(a); see, e.g., Mart v. Severson (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 521, 535-536, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 717 (holding that trial court erred in finding that fair value was piecemeal liquidation value of $1.48 million, when appraisers unanimously had concluded that corporation could have been sold as ongoing concern for $5.6 million)]. The valuation date is the date on which the proceeding for voluntary dissolution was initiated. Upon the motion of any party, however, the court may designate some other date as the valuation date for good cause shown [Corp. Code § 2000(f); see, e.g., Trahan v. Trahan (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 62, 76-78, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 814 (substantial evidence supported court's confirmation of appraiser's determination of fair value as piecemeal sale of assets, even though it did not take into account existing but uncompleted contracts; parties could have requested court to set later valuation date to allow completion of unperformed contracts)].

A determination of the fair value of the shares of the corporation must include an assessment of the value, if any, of a pending derivative action and the effect of the action on the fair value of the shares [Cotton v. Expo Power Sys., Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1374, 1380-1381, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 112 (derivative claim is property right that belongs to corporation and is properly viewed as asset of corporation)].

In fixing the value, the amount of any damages resulting if the initiation of the dissolution is a breach by any moving party or parties of an agreement with the purchasing party or parties may be deducted from the amount payable to that moving party or parties, unless the ground for dissolution is that specified in Corp. Code § 1800(b)(4), relating to fraud and mismanagement [Corp. Code § 2000(a)].

[d] Appraisal

If the purchasing parties elect to purchase the shares owned by the moving parties, but are unable to agree with the moving parties on the fair value of those shares, and give bond with sufficient security to pay the estimated reasonable expenses (including attorney's fees) of the moving parties if those expenses are recoverable under Corp. Code § 2000(c), the court, on application of the purchasing parties, either in the pending action or in a proceeding initiated in the superior court of the proper county by the purchasing parties in the case of a voluntary election to wind up and dissolve, must stay the winding up and dissolution proceeding and must proceed to ascertain and fix the fair value of the shares owned by the moving parties [Corp. Code § 2000(b)].

The court must appoint three disinterested appraisers to appraise the fair value of the shares, and must make an order referring the matter to the appointed appraisers [Corp. Code § 2000(c)]. The order must prescribe the time and manner of producing evidence, if evidence is required [Corp. Code § 2000(c)]. For a form for this order, see § 170.61.

The award of the appraisers, or a majority of them, when confirmed by the court, shall be final and conclusive upon all parties. The trial court has the duty, when convinced that an award of the appraisers is erroneous, to examine matters de novo and fix its own valuation [Venables v. Credential Ins. Agency, Inc. (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 724, 727, 295 P.2d 547] .

[e] Decree

The order confirming the appraisal of the moving parties' shares will normally be combined with the decree which the court is required to enter in the alternative, that is, for the winding up and dissolution of the corporation unless the purchasing parties make payment for the moving parties' shares within the time limit specified in the decree [Corp. Code § 2000(c); Gov. Pacific Health Servs. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 522, 530-531, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 736 (once *Corp. Code § 2*000 is invoked, it mandates entry of such alternative decree; summary proceeding authorized in that code section supplants any pending action for involuntary dissolution, and party in that action is not entitled to have it continue after invoking Corp. Code § 2000); see § 170.61]. This decree is appealable by any shareholder aggrieved thereby [Corp. Code § 2000(c); see Esparza v. Kadam, Inc. (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 303, 305-306, 338 P.2d 492

(holding appraiser's award subject to review)]. There is no automatic stay of the court's decree in the event of an appeal (because Corp. Code § 2000 provides for a special proceeding, rather than a civil action, and does not expressly incorporate the Civil Code sections governing appeals in civil actions), but a reviewing court has discretion to issue a writ of supersedeas if a proper and sufficient showing is made [Veyna v. Orange County Nursery, Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 146, 154-156, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 658 ; see generally Ch. 43, Appeal: Stay of Proceedings, § 43.21].

If the purchasing parties do not make payment for the shares within the time specified, judgment must be entered against them and the surety or sureties on the bond provided by the purchasing parties for the amount of the expenses (including attorney's fees) of the moving parties [Corp. Code § 2000(c); see § 170.62].

[f] Payment and Transfer

If the purchasing parties desire to prevent the winding up and dissolution, they must pay to the moving parties the value of their shares, as ascertained and decreed, within the time specified or, in case of appeal, as fixed on appeal. On receiving payment or tender, the moving parties must transfer their shares to the purchasing parties [Corp. Code § 2000(d)].

[6] Decisions

Consideration of only price-earnings method in valuing minority interest in closely held corporation under Corp. Code § 2000(a) was prejudicial error; although price-earnings method may be used, consideration of only that method was improper; minority interest not to be devalued because of its being minority or noncontrolling interest. Code provisions providing for stay of proceedings and purchase of plaintiff's shares [see former Corp. Code §§ 4658, 4659; now Corp. Code § 2000] are mandatory. Alvak Enterprises v. Phillips (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 69, 75, 334 P.2d 148

Order confirming award of commissioners as to value of plaintiff's shares is appealable order. Esparza v. Kadam, Inc. (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 303, 305-306, 338 P.2d 492

Intervenor, _____ [name], alleges:

1. Intervenor is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a holder of 50 percent or more of the voting power of defendant corporation.

2. Intervenor intervenes in this proceeding on the ground that intervenor has a substantial interest in the success of defendant in this proceeding in that the intervenor is a shareholder of the corporation which plaintiff is seeking to dissolve and intervenor's interest in the corporation will be directly affected by the result of this proceeding, as hereinafter set out more particularly.

3. On _____ [date], plaintiff commenced this proceeding against defendant to cause defendant to be involuntarily wound up and dissolved. The action is now pending in this court and trial thereof has not been had.

4. Intervenor intervenes in this proceeding pursuant to Corporations Code Section 1800(c) in order to exercise his/her right, under Corporations Code Section 2000, to avoid the involuntary dissolution of defendant by purchasing for cash the shares held by plaintiff. The purchase of plaintiff's shares by intervenor is not contrary to any provision contained in the defendant's articles of incorporation, nor will it constitute a breach of any agreement between intervenor and plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a complaint in intervention in involuntary dissolution proceedings. Its purpose is to invoke the provisions of Corp. Code § 2000, which permit a shareholder or shareholders owning 50 percent or more of the voting power of a corporation to avoid the involuntary dissolution of the corporation by purchasing the plaintiff's shares. For a more detailed discussion of the provisions of Corp. Code § 2000, see § 170.56.

[3] Appropriateness of Proceeding by Intervention

Under the General Corporation Law as it existed prior to January 1, 1977, the provisions for staying winding up and dissolution by purchasing the shares of the plaintiffs initiating involuntary dissolution proceedings did not specify how those holding 50 percent or more of the voting power should proceed [see former Corp. Code §§ 4658, 4659]. Present law provides that the court shall stay the winding up and dissolution "upon application of the purchasing parties ... in the pending action" [Corp. Code § 2000(b)]. Under prior law, the purchasing parties generally sought the relief authorized either by way of motion [see, e.g., Cubalevic v. Superior Court (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 557, 562, 49 Cal. Rptr. 698 ; Esparza v. Kadam, Inc. (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 802, 807, 6 Cal. Rptr. 450] or by answer [see, e.g., Venables v. Credential Ins. Agency, Inc. (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 724, 295 P.2d 547 ; Merlino v. Fresno Macaroni Mfg. Co. (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 120, 168 P.2d 182] . However, Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(c) provides that affirmative relief may not be claimed in an answer. The motion procedure would only be appropriate: (1) when the purchasing parties were made parties defendant to the involuntary proceedings, which may be the case when some form of remedy, for example, restraints or damages, is sought against the majority shareholders; or (2) when the corporation is the purchasing party. Absent allegations that the majority shareholders are liable in damages or should be restrained from taking some action, the majority shareholders as such may not be joined against their will in the involuntary dissolution proceedings [Weisman v. Odell (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 494, 83 Cal. Rptr. 563] . On the other hand, the majority shareholders would be unlikely to object to being joined as defendants, even if no relief is sought against them, since presumably involuntary dissolution will vitally affect their interests. For a motion to stay involuntary dissolution proceedings, see § 170.61.

When plaintiff, either for tactical reasons or because he or she seeks no relief against the majority shareholders, names only the corporation as defendant in involuntary proceedings, the purchasing shareholders would file a complaint in intervention. Intervention by any shareholder at any time prior to trial is an unqualified right [Corp. Code § 1800(c); Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 503-504, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896] , but is accomplished by leave of the court in accordance with the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 387. To obtain leave to intervene, the intervenor may present the complaint in intervention ex parte or on noticed motion. For a detailed discussion of the procedure for filing a complaint in intervention, including a procedural guide and forms for motions, see Ch. 395, Parties .

[4] Proper Time to Intervene

Intervention must take place "before trial" [Corp. Code § 1800(c); Code Civ. Proc. § 387]. Involuntary dissolution proceedings commence when the order for winding up the corporation is entered pursuant to Corp. Code § 1804 [Corp. Code § 1805; see Rosner v. Benedict Heights, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 32 Cal. Rptr. 764 (holding entry of default against corporation was not equivalent of trial where court did not enter order that corporation be wound up and dissolved)]. That order is entered "after hearing" [Corp. Code § 1804], although there is no provision for notice of such a hearing to parties other than the defendant. In fact, except where the majority shareholders are made parties as explained above, they would receive no formal notice of the proceedings until they had "commenced," that is, the trial had begun and the time for intervention had therefore passed [see Corp. Code § 1805(c) (requiring the directors to send written notice to shareholders of commencement of the proceedings)]. However, as a practical matter, the majority would of course have notice of the proceedings by virtue of the service on the corporation, and would seek to intervene either prior to or at the hearing prescribed by Corp. Code § 1804.

[6] Decisions

[a] Avoidance of Dissolution

Defendant's right, in involuntary dissolution, to seek stay in order to have appraisers appointed to ascertain value of plaintiff's shares is right dependent on and ancillary to dissolution proceedings and upon dismissal of those proceedings court is without jurisdiction to grant relief sought by defendant. Cubalevic v. Superior Court (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 557, 562, 49 Cal. Rptr. 698

Action for involuntary dissolution is special proceeding not requiring findings of fact be made by either court or appraisers appointed to determine the respective interests of the parties pursuant to defendant's motion to avoid dissolution and purchase plaintiff's shares. Esparza v. Kadam, Inc. (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 802, 807, 6 Cal. Rptr. 450

Right of shareholder to be relieved of election to purchase shares of plaintiff in involuntary dissolution proceedings is within discretion of trial court. Brodsky v. Seaboard Realty Co. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 504, 517, 24 Cal. Rptr. 61

[b] Intervention

Shareholder's right to intervene in involuntary dissolution proceedings is unqualified right and not subject to requirement that security be posted even when some claims for relief are derivative in nature. Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 503, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896

Entry of default against corporation in involuntary dissolution proceeding is not equivalent of trial for purpose of determining right of shareholder to intervene before trial when court did not enter order under former Corp. Code § 4660 [now Corp. Code § 1804] that corporation be wound up and dissolved and therefore proceedings had not commenced. Rosner v. Benedict Heights, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 32 Cal. Rptr. 764

CAUTION:

A supporting memorandum must accompany notices of motion in law and motion proceedings as defined in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(a)(2) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]; for discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities]. Although it is not clear whether the definition in Rule 3.1103(a)(2), extends to the motion noticed in the form above, it is better practice to support the motion with a memorandum. Note that if this is a law and motion proceeding within the meaning of Rule 3.1103(a)(2), the format requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110 will apply to the notice of motion. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

[2] Use of Form

This notice of motion is used by either the corporation or the shareholders holding 50 percent or more of the corporation's voting power [see Corp. Code § 194.5 (defining "voting power")] when either has elected to purchase the shares of plaintiffs initiating involuntary dissolution proceedings pursuant to the provisions of Corp. Code § 2000. When the shareholders have elected to purchase, this motion would be the appropriate method of staying the involuntary dissolution proceedings only if the shareholders have been joined as defendants in the involuntary proceedings. See the discussion in § 170.57 with respect to the rights of nonparty shareholders to intervene. For a detailed discussion of the right of the corporation or the shareholders holding 50 percent or more of the voting power to stay dissolution, see § 170.56.

[2] Use of Form

This order is used to stay proceedings for either voluntary [see Corp. Code §§ 1900-1907] or involuntary [*see Corp. The appraisers heretofore appointed by the court to ascertain the fair value of the shares of _____ [name of corporation] held by _____ [specify moving party, e.g., plaintiffs] have made their report ascertaining such value to be $_____ per share and awarding to _____ [specify moving party, e.g., plaintiffs] the sum of $_____ for _____ [number] shares.

IT IS THEREFORE DECREED:

1. That the award by the appraisers be, and it is, confirmed, final, and conclusive upon all parties.

2. That _____ [specify moving party, e.g., plaintiffs] have payment of the sum of $_____ [amount of appraisers' award] against _____ [name(s) of purchasing party], payment to be made within _____ [number] days after entry of this decree; provided, however, that if payment is not made within that time, the winding up and dissolution of _____ [name of corporation] shall proceed forthwith and judgment shall be entered against _____ [specify purchasing party, e.g., defendants] and against _____ [name of surety on bond] for the amount of the expenses, including attorney's fees, of _____ [specify moving party, e.g., plaintiffs].

Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

This decree is used to alternatively award the moving parties the amount ascertained by appraisers to be the fair value of their shares, or to order the winding up and dissolution of the corporation and judgment against the purchasing parties and their surety for the moving parties' expenses, including attorney's fees [Corp. Code § 2000(c)]. If the purchasing parties wish to avoid winding up and dissolution, they must pay the amount awarded to the moving parties within the time specified in the court's decree. On receiving payment or tender, the moving parties must transfer their shares to the purchasing parties [Corp. Code § 2000(d)]. Although the provisions governing purchase of the moving parties' shares do not specify what further action must be taken to collect on the surety's bond should the purchasing parties fail to pay for the moving parties' shares, it would seem tha such a failure would have to be brought to the court's attention in the form of a motion stating that payment has not been made and that the moving parties are therefore entitled to collect on the bond.

[1] FORM Final Dissolution--Petition for Order Declaring Corporation Duly Wound Up and Dissolved [Corp. Code § 1907(a)]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

In re _____ [name], _____ a Corporation in Process of Winding Up.	))))	NO. _____ PETITION FOR ORDER DECLARING CORPORATION DULY WOUND UP AND DISSOLVED

Petitioners allege:

1. _____ [Name] is a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of California and has its principal office in _____ County, California.

2. Petitioners are the duly elected, qualified, and acting directors of the corporation and constitute all of the directors thereof.

3. On _____ [date], an election was made by the corporation through _____ [specify, e.g., the vote of shareholders representing 50 percent or more of the voting power of the corporation] to voluntarily wind up and dissolve the corporation. A certificate evidencing that election was filed in the office of the Secretary of State of California on _____ [date]. A copy of such certificate is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference.

4. On or about _____ [date], the directors of the corporation caused written notice of the commencement of the proceeding for voluntary winding up to be given by mail to all shareholders and all known creditors and claimants whose addresses appear on the records of the corporation.

5. The affairs of the corporation have been completely wound up in that:

a. A final franchise tax return has been filed with the Franchise Tax Board as required by Revenue and Taxation Code Section 18401.

b. The corporation's known debts and liabilities have been paid _____ [or adequately provided for or as far as its assets permitted].

c. All assets of the corporation remaining after payment of or adequate provision for the debts, liabilities, and taxes have been distributed among the shareholders according to their rights and preferences.

6. A copy of the final accounts of petitioners as directors of the corporation is attached as Exhibit B and incorporated by reference.

WHEREFORE, petitioners pray:

1. That the court give and make its order directing all persons interested to show cause why an order should not be made declaring the corporation duly wound up and dissolved, and directing that the order be served by publication of a copy thereof in a newspaper of general circulation in _____ County, California, once a week for three consecutive weeks; and

2. That on hearing the petition the court make its order, as provided in Section 1808 of the Corporations Code, declaring the corporation duly wound up and dissolved, and discharging petitioners from their duties and liabilities to creditors and shareholders of the corporation.

Petitioner
_____ [signature]

[Verification, if desired. See § 170.50.]

[2] Use of Form

This petition is filed if the winding up has been accomplished without court proceedings and the directors seek an order declaring the corporation duly wound up and dissolved in lieu of filing the certificate of winding up and dissolution specified in Corp. Code § 1905 [Corp. Code § 1907(a)]. Use of this petition is not mandatory; the directors may instead file a certificate of winding up and dissolution with the Secretary of State. However, use of the instant procedure would seem advisable if there is a possibility that disputes may arise over payment of claims and distribution of assets; the alternative procedure of filing the certificate appears to be for informational purposes only.

[3] Allegations

The petition states:

- The location of the principal office of the corporation (Paragraph 1) [Corp. Code § 1907(a) (venue in proper county); see Corp. Code § 177 (defining "proper county")].

- The status of petitioners as the directors of the corporation (Paragraph 2) [Corp. Code § 1907(a)].

- That the winding up was accomplished without court proceedings; in other words, that it is a voluntary proceeding (Paragraph 3) [see Corp. Code § 1905(a].

- That the directors of the corporation caused written notice of commencement of the proceedings for voluntary winding up to be mailed to shareholders and creditors (Paragraph 4) [see Corp. Code § 1903(c)].

- That the affairs of the corporation have been completely wound up and dissolved (Paragraph 5) [see Corp. Code § 1905(a)].

The petition requests that the court issue its order to show cause why the corporation should not be declared duly wound up and dissolved and that on hearing the petition the court order that the corporation is duly wound up and dissolved and that petitioners are relieved of their obligations and liabilities as directors of the corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 1808, 1809]. The order to show cause is set forth in § 170.64.

This chapter covers the general subject of damages in both tort and contract actions. The chapter discusses the damages that may be awarded in tort actions involving personal injuries and property damage. It includes general forms of allegations of tort damages for personal injuries and property damage [see §§ 177.140 -177.155] as well as a prayer for such damages [see § 177.157]. In addition, it includes forms for use in proceedings to obtain discovery of a defendant's financial condition in cases involving punitive damages [see §§ 177.158 -177.157.3]. It also includes forms for use in procedures to amend a complaint to state the amount of damages being sought in a personal injury or wrongful death action [see §§ 177.162 -177.167]. In addition, it includes a form for use in moving for a new trial on the ground of excessive or inadequate damages [see § 177.168] and forms of consent to an addition to [see § 177.169] or reduction of [see § 177.170] damages.

This chapter does not discuss the damages that may be awarded in specific categories of tort actions. For a discussion of damages in various specific categories of tort actions, see the following chapters: Ch. 58, Assault and Battery, Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery, Ch. 150, Conversion, Ch. 257, False Imprisonment, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, Ch. 334, Landlord and Tenant: Claims for Damages, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress, Ch. 380, Negligence, Ch. 391, Nuisance, Ch. 421, Premises Liability, Ch. 429, Privacy , and Ch. 550, Trespass . For a discussion of damages in actions for injuries that resulted in death, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

For discussion of the taxation of tort damages, see Levy, Golden, & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 57 (Matthew Bender).

This chapter also discusses damages that occur because of the breach of an obligation arising from contract. It includes a form of allegation of general damages [see § 177.190], forms of allegations of damages for use in specific contract actions [see §§ 177.191 -177.195], and forms of allegation of liquidated damages [§§ 177.196, 177.197]. In addition, it includes a form of a prayer for compensatory damages and interest [see § 177.198] and a form of affirmative defense alleging that the plaintiff failed to mitigate damages [see § 177.199]. For discussion, procedures, and forms for use in pleading a cause of action in contract, see Ch. 140, Contracts . Attorney's fees recoverable pursuant to a contract provision for attorney's fees are an element of costs [Civ. Code § 1717(a); see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees].

This chapter does not discuss damages awarded in actions involving specific contracts or damages based on fiduciary and statutory obligations arising from particular contracts, such as those between broker and client, employer and employee, partners, shareholders, or officers and directors. Damages for breach of warranties, whether determined under Division 2 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code §§ 2714-2719], under the Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act [see Civ. Code §§ 1794, 1794.1], or under the Magnuson-Moss Act [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 2301, 2310] are discussed in Ch. 502, Sales: Warranties .

§ 177.12 Pleading Damages

[1] General Requirements

A complaint or cross complaint must contain a demand for judgment for the relief to which the pleader claims he or she is entitled. With two important exceptions, noted below, a cause of action seeking money damages must allege the amount of damages being sought [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)]. If this amount is not known, the complaint may state that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when it is ascertained. In this event counsel must remember to amend the complaint accordingly before judgment.

The first exception applies to an action that seeks to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death. In this case the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this particular cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a)(2)]. The amount of damages sought in this type of cause of action is specified in a separate statement of damages, either on the defendant's request or before seeking entry of a default [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11; and for further discussion of statements of damages, see § 177.43].

The second exception applies to any claim for punitive damages, regardless of the type of case or cause of action. No such claim may state an amount sought [Civ. Code § 3295(e); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 425.115 (notice of reservation of right to recover punitive damages on default)]. Further, in a cause of action for damages based on the malpractice of a health care provider, no claim for punitive damages may be alleged initially, and a claim may added by subsequent amendment only in accordance with the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.13. For further discussion of punitive damages, see § 177.51.

It is common practice to allege damages "according to proof." However, if there is no answer to the complaint or cross complaint, the relief granted cannot exceed the relief demanded in the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 580]. Therefore, the amount of damages sought must be specified if a default judgment is to be entered [see Debbie S. v. Ray (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 193, 200, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 814 (failure to serve statement of damages precluded entry of default judgment in personal injury action in superior court); Pino v. Campo (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1, 4-6 (allegation in municipal court complaint seeking damages "according to proof" and exceeding jurisdictional limit of municipal court could not be basis for default judgment of $25,000); cf. Brown v. McAdoo (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 20, 23 (complaint in municipal court seeking damages according to proof, and remitting any amounts beyond jurisdiction of court, sufficient to support default judgment of $25,000)]. Given the conflict among the courts regarding the sufficiency of an allegation seeking the jurisdictional maximum, in a limited civil case, counsel should specify the amount of that limit. For detailed discussion of the requirements that must be satisfied before a default judgment may be entered, see Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments .

[2] General Damages Need Not Be Specially Pleaded

General damages [see § 177.13[3] for definition] need not be specially pleaded, but may be proved under a general allegation of damage. A defendant is presumed to be aware of the damages that necessarily result from the act complained of, so that he or she is not taken by surprise when evidence of these damages is presented at trial [Stoltz v. Converse (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 909, 914-915, 172 P.2d 78 ; see Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 104, 120, 43 Cal. Rptr. 420] .

[3] Special Damages Require Specific Pleading

A defendant cannot be presumed to be aware of the special damages [see § 177.13[3] for definition] resulting from his or her act. Therefore, in order to prevent surprise, this type of damage must be specially set out in the complaint or the plaintiff will not be permitted to give evidence of it at trial [Shook v. Pearson (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 348, 351-352 ; Stoltz v. Converse (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 909, 914-915, 172 P.2d 78] .

The plaintiff may allege lack of present knowledge in pleading the amounts of special damages in a complaint if he or she also requests leave to insert these amounts in the complaint when they are ascertained [Hunter v. Freeman (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 129, 133, 233 P.2d 65] . In such a situation, the allegation of special damages must be made definite by amendment before the close of trial [Wilcox v. Sway (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 560, 574, 160 P.2d 154] . These rules do not apply to a personal injury or wrongful death action, because the amounts of damages in those actions cannot be stated in the complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

[4] Specification of Damages

If a plaintiff fails to pray for compensatory damages in the complaint, he or she cannot recover compensatory damages for the detriment suffered [Weiss v. Blumencranc (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 536, 542, 131 Cal. Rptr. 298 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a)(2)]. For examples of prayers for use in tort or contract actions, see §§ 177.157 and 177.198, respectively.

Chapter 177 DAMAGES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

15-177 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 177.13

§ 177.13 Compensatory Damages

[1] Nature and Purpose

Compensatory damages are for the purpose of justly compensating an injured person to a degree commensurate with the injury sustained by him or her [People v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 593, 604, 128 Cal. Rptr. 697] . In a contract case the purpose of contractual damages is to give the nonbreaching party the benefit of its contractual bargain, and the threshold inquiry is what performance the parties bargained for [Lewis Jorge Constr. Mgmt., Inc. v. Pomona Unified Sch. Dist. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 960, 971, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 340, 102 P.3d 257] .

Any award of compensatory damages must be reasonable, but what constitutes a reasonable amount of damages in a particular instance is a question on which there legitimately may be a wide range of opinion [Civ. Code § 3359; People v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 593, 604, 128 Cal. Rptr. 697 ; Risley v. Lenwell (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 608, 644-645, 277 P.2d 897] . The selection of which measure of damages to apply is within the discretion of the trier of fact [Acree v. General Motors Acceptance Corp. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 385, 396-398, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 99 (jury was presented with reasonable basis for computing damages resulting from contract breach involving method used to calculate premium refunds); GHK Assocs. v. Mayer Group, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 856, 874, 274 Cal. Rptr. 168 (court emphasized that difficulty in quantifying plaintiff's loss was due to defendant's wrongful conduct; under those circumstances, award based on defendant's actual profit was within trial court's discretion)].

[2] Requirement of Certainty

The general rule is that before a plaintiff may recover compensatory damages, he or she must show with reasonable certainty that he or she has suffered damages by reason of the defendant's wrongful act [Stott v. Johnston (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 864, 875, 229 P.2d 348 ; see Civ. Code § 3301; see also Lewis Jorge Constr. Mgmt., Inc. v. Pomona Unified Sch. Dist.(2004) 34 Cal. 4th 960, 975, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 340, 102 P.3d 257 (lost profits are often denied in breach of contract cases as too speculative); Vestar Dev. v. General Dynamics Corp. (9th Cir. 2001) 249 F.3d 958, 961-962 (action for breach of agreement to negotiate was properly dismissed when the only damages sought were lost profits, which could not be proven with reasonable certainty as required by Civ. Code § 3301); Copeland v. Baskin Robbins U.S.A. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1251, 1260-1264, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 875 (defendant entitled to summary judgment in action for breach of agreement to negotiate when it showed that plaintiff could not establish reliance damages; no recovery for lost profits when no way to know what ultimate terms of agreement, if any, would be)]. Damages that are uncertain, contingent, or speculative cannot be recovered because they are not susceptible to the exactness of proof that is required to fix a liability [Automatic Poultry Feeder Co. v. Wedel (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 509, 516, 28 Cal. Rptr. 795] .

However, although uncertainty over whether any damages were sustained at all is fatal to recovery, uncertainty concerning the amount is not [GHK Assocs. v. Mayer Group, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 856, 873, 274 Cal. Rptr. 168 ; Bruckman v. Parliament Escrow Corp. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1051, 1061, 235 Cal. Rptr. 813 ; Fisher v. Hampton (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 741, 748, 118 Cal. Rptr. 811] . Once the cause and existence of damages have been established, recovery is not denied because the amount of damage is not susceptible of exact proof or is uncertain, contingent, or difficult to ascertain [Aronowicz v. Nalley's, Inc. (1972) 30 Cal. App. 3d 27, 53, 106 Cal. Rptr. 424] . If some reasonable basis of computation can be used, the result reached may be only an approximation because the wrongdoer must bear the risk of the uncertainty that his or her own wrong created [GHK Associates v. Mayer Group, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 856, 873-876, 274 Cal. Rptr. 168 ; Distribu-Dor, Inc. v. Karadanis (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 463, 470, 90 Cal. Rptr. 231] .

If damages are uncertain but may be made certain by future acts or events, the court may properly reserve continuing jurisdiction to amend a judgment to insert the amount of additional damages when those amounts are determined [GHK Assocs. v. Mayer Group, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 856, 880, 274 Cal. Rptr. 168 (damages for lost profits depended on future sale price of property placed in receivership)].

[3] General and Special Damages

Compensatory or actual damages are classified as either general or special [see Lewis Jorge Constr. Mgmt., Inc. v. Pomona Unified Sch. Dist. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 960, 968-969, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 340, 102 P.3d 257 (differences between and pleading requirements for general and special damages in contract cases); Beeman v. Burling (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1586, 1601, 265 Cal. Rptr. 719 ; Colvig v. RKO Gen., Inc. (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 56, 69, 42 Cal. Rptr. 473] . General damages are those that necessarily result from the act complained of and are implied by law to have thereby accrued to the plaintiff [Lewis Jorge Constr. Mgmt., Inc. v. Pomona Unified Sch. Dist. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 960, 968, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 340, 102 P.3d 257 (nature of general damages in contract cases); Beeman v. Burling (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1586, 1599, 265 Cal. Rptr. 719 ; Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 104, 120, 43 Cal. Rptr. 420 ; see Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 101, 125, 135 Cal. Rptr. 802 ; Stoltz v. Converse (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 909, 914, 172 P.2d 78] . Pain and suffering, including emotional distress, that results from tortious conduct is often the principal component of general damages [see Beeman v. Burling (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1586, 1599, 265 Cal. Rptr. 719 ; Niles v. City of San Rafael (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 230, 244, 116 Cal. Rptr. 733] . For discussion, see § 177.45[1] and Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress .

Special damages are those that do not arise from the wrongful act itself but depend on the circumstances peculiarliar to the infliction of each respective injury. They are the natural consequences of the act or omission complained of but not the necessary result [Lewis Jorge Constr. Mgmt., Inc. v. Pomona Unified Sch. Dist. (2004) 34 Cal.4th 960, 968-969, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 340, 102 P.3d 257 (nature of special damages in contract cases); Beeman v. Burling (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1586, 1599, 265 Cal. Rptr. 719 ; Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 104, 120-121, 43 Cal. Rptr. 420 ; Brunvold v. Johnson (1939) 36 Cal. App. 2d 226, 230, 97 P.2d 489] .

For discussion of general and special damages in contract actions, see § 177.75.

[4] Future Damages

A plaintiff is entitled to recover damages for all the detriment certain to result in the future [Civ. Code § 3283]. Because of the fundamental principle that damages should be compensatory only, future damages are reduced to present value [Noble v. Tweedy (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 738, 747, 203 P.2d 778] .

Future damages are subject to the same requirement with respect to certainty as are other compensatory damages. Thus, a claim for future damages may be maintained despite uncertainty of amount but may not be maintained if there is uncertainty as to its occurrence [Guntert v. City of Stockton (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 131, 153, 126 Cal. Rptr. 690] .

Certainty as to occurrence is satisfied by a showing of reasonable certainty that substantial future damages will result. An award of damages cannot be granted on the basis of anticipated future injuries or other purely hypothetical events. However, by analogy, hypothetical events do not constitute a sufficient basis for denying a recovery for damages that are otherwise reasonably certain to occur. In general, in estimating future damages, a court should consider only those contingencies that are reasonably probable to occur and are reducible to a present monetary value. Any degree of uncertainty introduced by the possibility of future events affecting the extent of injury is disregarded. The fact that the amount thereof may be difficult of exact measurement, or subject to various possible contingencies, does not bar a recovery. If there is a satisfactory method for obtaining a reasonably proximate estimation of the damages, the defendant whose wrongful act gave rise to the injury cannot complain that the amount thereof cannot be determined with mathematical precision [Noble v. Tweedy (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 738, 745-746, 203 P.2d 778 ; see Caminetti v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1943) 23 Cal. 2d 94, 103, 142 P.2d 741] .

§ 177.14 Recovery of Nominal Damages

[1] Generally

A person may recover nominal damages when a breach of duty has caused no appreciable detriment to him or her [Civ. Code § 3360]. However, nominal damages properly may be awarded in only two circumstances. First, they may be recovered if no loss or injury has resulted from an act but the law recognizes a technical invasion of a plaintiff's rights or a breach of duty by a defendant [Avina v. Spurlock (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 1086, 1088, 105 Cal. Rptr. 198] . In this circumstance, the award of nominal damages is a trifling or token allowance, which compensates for the invasion of the right and, therefore, constitutes a recognition of that right and an admonition that it cannot be invaded with impunity [see Kluge v. O'Gara (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 207, 210, 38 Cal. Rptr. 607 ; Siminoff v. Jas. H. Goodman & Co. Bank (1912) 18 Cal. App. 5, 15, 121 P. 939] .

The second circumstance in which nominal damages may be recovered is if real, actual injury has occurred and damages have been suffered, but the extent and amount of the injury and damages cannot be determined from the evidence presented [Avina v. Spurlock (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 1086, 1088, 105 Cal. Rptr. 198] . In an appropriate case, punitive damages may be awarded in addition to nominal damages of this type since actual damages are shown [Kluge v. O'Gara (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 207, 210, 38 Cal. Rptr. 607] .

Nominal damages are limited to an amount of a few cents or a dollar. An award other than a token or trifling sum would not be supported by substantial evidence [Avina v. Spurlock (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 1086, 1089, 105 Cal. Rptr. 198] .

[2] Appeal of Failure to Award Nominal Damages

The general rule is that the failure to award nominal damages is not alone ground for reversal of a judgment or a new trial. However, if a judgment awarding nominal damages would entitle the prevailing party to an award of costs, the failure to award nominal damages can constitute reversible error [Sweet v. Johnson (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 630, 633, 337 P.2d 499 ; cf. Staples v. Hoefke (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1397, 1406, 235 Cal. Rptr. 165 (failure to award nominal damages not reversible when costs award would be discretionary under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(d))]. Moreover, if the object of the action is to determine some question of permanent right, the fact that a party can only recover nominal damages will not prevent a reversal [Sweet v. Johnson (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 630, 633, 337 P.2d 499] .

Chapter 177 DAMAGES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

15-177 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 177.15

§ 177.15 Limitation on Amount of Damages

[1] Compensatory Damages Only

Unless otherwise expressly provided by statute, no person can recover a greater amount in damages for the breach of an obligation than he or she could have gained by the full performance thereof on both sides [Civ. Code § 3358]. The injured party may not be placed in a better position than he or she would have been in had the wrong not been done [Basin Oil Co. v. Baash-Ross Tool Co. (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 578, 606, 271 P.2d 122 ; see GHK Assocs. v. Mayer Group, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 856, 873-875, 274 Cal. Rptr. 168 (Civ. Code § 3358 not violated by award of 40 percent of profits ordered by 1988 judgment for breach of contract to pay 40 percent of profits from sales that should have occurred in 1984)].

Therefore, damages for the same loss that are recoverable under different claims, counts, causes of action, or theories of recovery must be merged into a single amount in order to avoid a double recovery. Conversely, separate items of compensable damages are recoverable when shown by distinct and independent evidence, whether the amounts are reflected in a single verdict or in multiple verdicts referring to different claims [Michelson v. Hamada (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1582-1583, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 343] .

[2] Unconscionable or Oppressive Damages

Damages must be reasonable, and if an obligation of any kind appears to create a right to unconscionable and grossly oppressive damages contrary to substantial justice, no more than reasonable damages can be recovered [Civ. Code § 3359; Coughlin v. Blair (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 587, 600, 262 P.2d 305 ; Fisher v. Hampton (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 741, 747, 118 Cal. Rptr. 811 ; see Postal Instant Press v. Sealy (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 1704, 1717, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 365 (franchisor could not recover for "lost future profits" under franchise agreement when franchisor elected to terminate franchise because franchisee failed to make past royalty payments; award would be "unconscionable and oppressive" within meaning of Civ. Code § 3359 under circumstances)]. This requirement applies to actions in both tort and contract and to other causes of action involving obligations [People v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 593, 604, 128 Cal. Rptr. 697] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

15-177 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 177.16

§ 177.16 Election of Remedies

The primary object of an award of damages in a civil action, and the fundamental principle on which it is based, are just compensation or indemnity for the loss or injury sustained by the plaintiff and no more [Pat Rose Assocs. v. Coombe (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 9, 19, 275 Cal. Rptr. 1 ; see § 177.16]. One means of preventing excessive or duplicative recovery is the application of the doctrine of election of remedies. The doctrine of election of remedies allows a plaintiff to plead several causes of action or inconsistent remedies based on the same facts, but requires him or her to make an election after trial to collect only one award, so there is no duplicate recovery [see Mansfield v. Pickwick Stages (1923) 191 Cal. 129, 130-131, 215 P. 389 (stating doctrine but holding it inapplicable); Roam v. Koop (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 1035, 1039, 116 Cal. Rptr. 539 (tort claim and contract claim; attachment may have amounted to election to pursue only contract claim, but defendant never raised issue until appeal, so award of punitive damages was affirmed)].

The doctrine applies if a plaintiff seeks duplicate remedies in separate counts, one in contract and another in tort, for a single cause of action arising from the same set of facts [DuBarry Int'l, Inc. v. Southwest Forest Indus., Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 552, 564, 282 Cal. Rptr. 181 ; Pat Rose Assocs. v. Coombe (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 9, 18, 275 Cal. Rptr. 1 ; see Barrett v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1176, 1182, 272 Cal. Rptr. 304 (distinction between cause of action and counts)]. The doctrine does not preclude a plaintiff from recovering distinct damages on two separate causes of action, one for breach of contract and the other in tort, if each action arose out of different obligations and different operative facts [Pat Rose Assocs. v. Coombe (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 9, 18, 275 Cal. Rptr. 1 (election of remedies inapplicable to buyer's actions for fraud in sale of property and for breach of lease by seller-tenant); see also Denevi v. LGCC, L.L.C. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1218-1219, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 276 (plaintiff's derivative suit to recover on behalf of limited liability company did not bar suit to recover for harm caused to plaintiff personally by earlier fraud used to induce plaintiff to join limited liability company)]. However, it does preclude recovery of the same measure of damages twice, even if distinct causes of action and invasions of different rights are involved [DuBarry Int'l, Inc. v. Southwest Forest Indus., Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 552, 564, 282 Cal. Rptr. 181] . In such a case, the jury should be instructed that duplicate damages may not be awarded [DuBarry Int'l, Inc. v. Southwest Forest Indus., Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 552, 565 n.16, 282 Cal. Rptr. 181] .

§ 177.17 Duty to Mitigate Damages

The doctrine of mitigation of damages holds that a plaintiff who suffers damage as a result of a tort has a duty to take reasonable steps to mitigate those damages and will not be able to recover for any losses that could have been avoided [Shaffer v. Debbas (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 33, 41, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 110 ; see Seaboard Music Co. v. Germano (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 618, 622-623, 101 Cal. Rptr. 255] . A plaintiff may not recover for damage avoidable through ordinary care and reasonable exertion [Mayes v. Sturdy N. Sales, Inc. (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 69, 85, 154 Cal. Rptr. 43 , disapproved on other grounds, Applied Equipment Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503, 521 n.10, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475, 869 P.2d 454 ; see Valle de Oro Bank v. Gamboa (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1686, 1691, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329] . However, a person who reasonably acts to minimize damages can recover the costs of such minimization as damages [Sheffet v. County of Los Angeles (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 720, 730, 84 Cal. Rptr. 11] .

There are, however, limitations on the application of the rule. The rule has no application if its effect would be to require the innocent party to sacrifice and surrender important and valuable rights [Seaboard Music Co. v. Germano (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 618, 623, 101 Cal. Rptr. 255 ; see Valle de Oro Bank v. Gamboa (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1686, 1691, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329] . It is doubtful whether a duty to mitigate, alone, imposes any obligations on a plaintiff to take any action before the injury-producing event occurs [see Valle de Oro Bank v. Gamboa (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1686, 1691, 1694, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 (duty of mitigate does not, alone, impose duty on plaintiff to insure)]. Also, it is doubtful whether there is a duty to mitigate if the defendant's breach of duty consists solely of the failure to pay a liquidated sum of money when due [see Vitagraph, Inc. v. Liberty Theatres Co. (1925) 197 Cal. 694, 698-699, 242 P. 709 ; Valle de Oro Bank v. Gamboa (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1686, 1692, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329] .

The rule requiring mitigation of damages does not require an injured person to do what is unreasonable or impracticable [Guerrieri v. Severini (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 12, 23, 330 P.2d 635 ; Valle de Oro Bank v. Gamboa (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1686, 1691, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 ; Davis v. Local Union No. 11, Int'l Bhd. of Elec. Workers (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 686, 696-697]. What is reasonable must be judged in the light of the situation confronting the injured person at the time the loss was threatened and not by the judgment of hindsight. The fact that reasonable measures other than the one taken would have avoided damage is not, in and of itself, proof of the fact that the one taken, though unsuccessful, was unreasonable. It is sufficient if the party acted reasonably and with due diligence in good faith [Green v. Smith (1968)

261 Cal. App. 2d 392, 396, 67 Cal. Rptr. 796 ; see Zanker Dev. Co. v. Cogito Sys., Inc. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1377, 1381-1383, 264 Cal. Rptr. 76 (commercial tenant is not required to relet premises to evicted tenant under terms and conditions other than those in defaulted lease)]. Moreover, the duty to mitigate has no application if its effect would be to require an innocent person to sacrifice and surrender important and valuable rights [Seaboard Music Co. v. Germano (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 618, 623, 101 Cal. Rptr. 255] .

The burden of proving the duty to mitigate damages is on the party asserting that duty [Stiner v. Travelers Indem. Co. (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 128, 133, 37 Cal. Rptr. 813 ; see Healdsburg Police Officers Assn. v. City of Healdsburg (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 444, 456, 129 Cal. Rptr. 216 (trial court did not err in ordering back pay to police officers because city failed to show that during their absence officers made or could have made earnings that would have mitigated their damages)]. The failure to mitigate is an affirmative defense that must be pleaded and proved [Mayes v. Sturdy N. Sales Inc. (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 69, 86, 154 Cal. Rptr. 43 , disapproved on other grounds, Applied Equipment Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503, 521 n.10, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475, 869 P.2d 454] .

The question of whether a party has acted reasonably to mitigate damages is ordinarily one of fact, which is subject to review on appeal only to determine whether substantial evidence supports the judgment [Jarchow v. Transamerica Title Ins. Co. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 917, 949, 122 Cal. Rptr. 470] . However, if all of the facts are uncontested and the credibility of witness is not a factor, the issue of the reasonableness of steps taken is a question of law reviewable on appeal [see Green v. Smith (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 392, 397-398, 67 Cal. Rptr. 796] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

15-177 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 177.18

§ 177.18 Interest on Awarded Damages

Every person who is entitled to recover damages certain or capable of being made certain by calculation as of a particular day is entitled to recover interest on those damages as of that day, except during time when the debtor was prevented by law or by the act of the creditor from paying the debt. This rule applies to the recovery of damages and interest from any debtor, including public entities [Civ. Code § 3287(a); see Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010(a) (legal rate of interest is 10 percent); but see Gov. Code § 970.1(b); San Francisco Unified School Dist. v. San Francisco Classroom Teachers Assn. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 146, 150-152, 272 Cal. Rptr. 38 (judgment against public entity as governed by Gov. Code § 970 et seq., not Code Civ. Proc. § 680.010 et seq., so postjudgment interest is payable at 7 percent under Cal. Const. art. XV, § 1, rather than at 10 percent under Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010(b))]. Damages are deemed certain or capable of being made certain if there is essentially no dispute between the parties concerning the basis for computing damages should liability be resolved against the defendant [Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1172-1174, 286 Cal. Rptr. 146 ; Esgro Cent., Inc. v. General Ins. Co. of Am. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1060, 98 Cal. Rptr. 153 ; accord, Adams v. Johns-Manville Corp. (9th Cir. 1989) 876 F.2d 702, 710 (applying California law)]. Although this situation is most likely to occur with regard to a contract action, it may arise in certain tort actions, such as for damages for injury to property [see, e.g., Adams v. Johns-Manville Corp. (9th Cir. 1989) 876 F.2d 702, 710 (applying California law); Levy-Zentner Co. v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 762, 769, 770, 142 Cal. Rptr. 1 ; see also Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1172-1174, 286 Cal. Rptr. 146 (in declaratory relief action arising from dispute between insurers regarding which was primary insurer, amount was certain when settlement was paid to insured; interest was payable from that date)]. It may also arise in the context of benefits owedunder a governmental program [see,e.g., Tripp v. Swoap (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 671, 682, 131 Cal. Rptr. 789, 552 P.2d 749 , overruled on other grounds, Frink v. Prod (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 166, 180, 181 Cal. Rptr. 893, 643 P.2d 476 ; Aguilar v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 239, 242, 272 Cal. Rptr. 696] .

Entitlement to prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287(a) on benefits owed under a governmental program is entirely unrelated to any distinction in the goals of various governmental programs. All that is necessary is that there be some underlying monetary obligation, including the obligation of a governmental entity [Tripp v. Swoap (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 671, 681-682, 131 Cal. Rptr. 789, 552 P.2d 749 , overruled on other grounds, Frink v. Prod (1982) 31 Cal. 3d

Code § 3287(a)* entitles civil servants to interest on each installment of back salary awards from the date the salary fell due [Goldfarb v. Civil Service Comm'n (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 633, 636, 275 Cal. Rptr. 284] .

If an action involves both breach of contract and tort claims, prejudgment interest may be awarded under Civ. Code § 3287(a) if damages are readily ascertainable [Marine Terminals Corp. v. Paceco, Inc. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 991, 995, 193 Cal. Rptr. 687 (negligence and breach of contract)].

Requests for prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287 by a successful plaintiff must be made by way of motion prior to entry of judgment, or the request must be made in the form of a motion for new trial no later than the time allowed for filing such a motion. In a case in which damages were awarded but no interest was included in the verdict, and neither court nor jury had determined whether damages were liquidated or unliquidated, this rule was applied retroactively to plaintiffs who never sought prejudgment interest as part of damages and instead sought interest at the last minute as part of an order awarding costs [North Oakland Med. Clinic v. Rogers (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 824, 829-831, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 743] .

For further discussion of prejudgment interest in a tort action, see § 177.53 and Ch. 520, Settlement and Release . For further discussion of prejudgment interest in a contract action, see § 177.80. For further discussion of postjudgment interest, see Ch. 318, Judgments . PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

15-177 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 177.19

§ 177.19 Excessive or Inadequate Damages

The assessment of damages is generally left to the unbiased judgment of a jury. However, if a trial judge determines that an award of damages by a jury is either excessive or inadequate, he or she may grant the complaining party a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5); see Butler v. Peluso (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 624, 630, 317 P.2d 57 ; Sullivan v. Matt (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 134, 143, 278 P.2d 499 ; see §§ 177.168 -177.170]. Reduction of excessive damages must be through a motion for new trial and remittitur. A court may not grant judgment notwithstanding the verdict for a lesser amount of damages than awarded by the jury [Teitel v. First Los Angeles Bank (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1593, 1602-1606, 282 Cal. Rptr. 916] .

The court should not grant a new trial on the ground of excessive or inadequate damages unless, after weighing the evidence, it is convinced from the entire record, including reasonable inferences therefrom, that the jury clearly should have reached a different verdict or decision [Code Civ. Proc. § 657]. However, if an award of compensatory damages does appear to be excessive, and especially if there is evidence or at least a presumption that the award was the result of passion or prejudice, the court may be required to act [see California Shoppers, Inc. v. Royal Globe Ins. Co. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 1, 67-68, 221 Cal. Rptr. 171 (plaintiff's counsel improperly raised issue of punitive damages and urged jury to render excessive compensatory damages to justify award of punitive damages)].

If the court determines that an award is inadequate, it may grant an order for a new trial on the issue of damages unless the party against whom the verdict was rendered consents to an addition to the damages already awarded of an amount that the court determines to be fair and reasonable [Code Civ. Proc. § 662.5(a)]. Similarly, if the court decides that a jury's award of damages is excessive, it may grant an order for a new trial on the issue of damages unless the prevailing party agrees to a reduction of the damages by the amount determined by the court to be excessive [Code Civ. Proc. § 662.5(b)]. An addition to the amount of damages is termed additur and a reduction in the amount is referred to as remittitur [see Jehl v. Southern Pac. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 821, 827-833, 59 Cal. Rptr. 276, 427 P.2d 988] .

A motion for a new trial is a condition precedent to urging that damages are excessive or inadequate on appeal. Nevertheless, a party who has not moved for a new trial may appeal a decision claiming errors in the admission of evidence and errors in instructions even though the errors also affected the amount of damages [Schroeder v. Auto

Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 908, 918, 114 Cal. Rptr. 622, 523 P.2d 662 ; Mendoyoma, Inc. v. Mendocino County (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 873, 877-878, 87 Cal. Rptr. 740] .

In ruling on a motion for a new trial on the ground of excessive or inadequate damages, the trial court sits not in an appellate capacity but as an independent trier of fact. In granting an order for a new trial conditioned on additur or remittitur, the court, in effect, grants the order unless the affected party consents to the addition or reduction of so much of the verdict as the court, in its independent judgment, determines from the evidence to be fair and reasonable. On appeal, the order is reversed only if the trial court has plainly abused its discretion; and there is no abuse of discretion if there is a material conflict in the evidence regarding the extent of damage [Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 910, 932-933, 148 Cal. Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980 ; see Wallis v. Farmers Group, Inc. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 718, 739, 269 Cal. Rptr. 299 , disapproved on other grounds, Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 384, 394 n.2].

If a trial court grants a new trial, it must specify the reasons for the order in writing [Code Civ. Proc. § 657]. The requirement of a written specification of reasons for granting a new trial on damages serves the dual purpose of encouraging careful deliberation by the trial court before ruling on the motion, and of making a record sufficient to permit meaningful appellate review [see Hasson v. Ford Motor Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 388, 420, 185 Cal. Rptr. 654, 650 P.2d 1171 ; Stewart v. Truck Ins. Exch. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 468, 484, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 338] .

The court must either give its written statement of reasons in the order granting new trial or in a separate statement filed within 10 days. The court may not delegate the task to counsel [Code Civ. Proc. § 657; see Stewart v. Truck Ins. Exch. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 468, 484, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 338] . Oral statements are not sufficient, and substantial compliance is likewise insufficient; full and timely compliance with the statute is required [Stewart v. Truck Ins. Exch. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 468, 484-485, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 338] .

§ 177.41 Recovery of Compensatory Damages

[1] Generally

Except as otherwise provided, the measure of damages for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract is the amount that will compensate for all the detriment proximately caused by the defendant's breach, whether it could have been anticipated or not [Civ. Code § 3333]. The purpose of Civ. Code § 3333 is to make a successful plaintiff whole [Overgaard v. Johnson (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 821, 824, 137 Cal. Rptr. 412] . Damages are limited to those damages proximately caused by the tort forming the basis of the action [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 508, 528, 88 Cal. Rptr. 246] .

In general, one who has been tortiously injured need not prove the extent of his or her damages with the same degree of certainty that is required for proof of the underlying tort and causation. The injured party need only establish the extent of the harm and the amount of money that will represent adequate compensation with as much certainty as the nature of the tort and the circumstances permit. Although it is desirable that an injured person prove the amount of damages with as much certainty as is reasonably possible, it is even more desirable that an injured person not be deprived of substantial compensation merely because he or she cannot prove with complete certainty the extent of harm suffered [Clemente v. State of California (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 202, 219, 219 Cal. Rptr. 445, 707 P.2d 818] .

[2] Nominal Damages

Nominal damages are not permitted in an action in which actual damages constitute an element of plaintiff's cause of action. For example, an action for negligence does not lie unless the plaintiff proves actual damages. A failure to prove actual damages, therefore, also defeats any right to nominal damages [Fields v. Napa Milling Co. (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 442, 448, 330 P.2d 459 ; see Walker v. Pacific Indem. Co. (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 513, 517, 6 Cal. Rptr. 924] . For a further discussion of nominal damages, see § 177.14.

§ 177.43 Statement of Damages

In an action for the recovery of actual or punitive damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the amount of damages are not to be stated in the complaint or cross complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)]. The amount of damages may not be stated even by a later amendment to the pleading [Austin v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 354, 359, 152 Cal. Rptr. 420] . Instead, the party against whom the action is brought may request, at any time, a statement setting forth the nature and amount of damages being sought. The request must be served on the party seeking damages, and that party must then serve a responsive statement within 15 days [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11(b); see Beeman v. Burling (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1586, 1599, 265 Cal. Rptr. 719 ; Plotitsa v. Superior Court (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 755, 761-762, 189 Cal. Rptr. 769 (statement that does not include breakdown between general and special damages is insufficient)]. If a response is not served, the party requesting the statement of damages, on notice to the party seeking damages, may petition the court to order the party seeking damages to serve a responsive statement [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11(b)].

If no request is made for a statement of damages, the plaintiff must still serve the statement on the defendant before a default may be taken [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11(c)]. A default that has been entered even though the plaintiff failed to serve the required notice must be set aside [Schwab v. Rondel Homes, Inc. (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 428, 431-435, 280 Cal. Rptr. 83, 808 P.2d 226 (decided under former version of statute; disapproving language in Morgan v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 976, 987, 237 Cal. Rptr. 756 , permitting award of damages in amount of superior court's minimum jurisdictional amount on default, even if no statement of damages is served)].

The plaintiff preserves the right to seek punitive damages under Civ. Code § 3294 on a default judgment by serving on the defendant a statement as set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.115 [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.115(b); see § 177.157.5]. If the defendant appears in the action, the plaintiff is not limited to the amount set forth in the statement [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.115(c)]. Notice of the amount of punitive damages sought must be given to a defendant before a default judgment including punitive damages may be entered [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.115(f); see Wiley v. Rhodes (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1470, 1472-1474, 273 Cal. Rptr. 279 (due process requires notice of amount of punitive damages)]. The plaintiff may serve the statement preserving the right to seek punitive damages on the defendant pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.115, and may serve the statement as a part of the statement required by Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11 (statement of nature and amount of damages being sought) [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.115(e)].

The statement of damages must be served on a party who has not appeared in the action in the same manner as a summons [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11(d)(1); see Code Civ. Proc. § 415.10 et seq. (manner of service of summons)]. If a party has appeared in the action, the statement shall be served on his or her attorney, or on the party if he or she has appeared without an attorney, in the manner provided for service of a summons or in the manner provided by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010-1020 [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11(d)(2)].

It is not clear how much time must elapse after the statement of damages is served before a default may be entered. The Supreme Court has merely held that a defendant is entitled to actual notice of the liability to which he or she may be subjected, a reasonable period of time before default may be entered [Schwab v. Rondel Homes, Inc. (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 428, 435, 280 Cal. Rptr. 83, 808 P.2d 226] . Some courts of appeal had held, before the Supreme Court's decision in Schwab, that the defendant must be given 30 days to respond before a default may be entered [Plotitsa v. Superior Court (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 755, 761, 189 Cal. Rptr. 769 (likening statement of damages to amendment of complaint, which gives defendant 30 days to answer under Code Civ. Proc. § 471.5)]. However, the Court's statement of the requirement in terms of reasonableness indicates that less than 30 days may be reasonable under some circumstances, and at least one court of appeal has upheld a default entered less than 30 days after receiving the statement of damages [California Novelties, Inc. v. Sokoloff (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 936, 944-945, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 795 (defendant accepted notice by mail 17 days before entry of default)]. The 1993 amendment of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11, to specify that a defendant who has not appeared in the action must be served in the manner of a summons, may indicate that courts will require that defendants be given comparable time to respond.

There also appears to be a split of authority over whether a statement of damages is required before judgment may be entered against a defendant who has been served by publication and failed to respond [compare Parish v. Peters (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 202, 210-214, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 836 (service required by due process); with Candelaria v. Avitia (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1436, 1440-1442, 269 Cal. Rptr. 32 (second service by publication is "idle act"); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 585(c) (entry of default not required before judgment may be entered against defendant served by publication)].

If an answer is filed and no request for a statement is made, the party seeking damages must give the notice at least 60 days prior to the date set for trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11]. The failure to give the notice can be the basis for an order vacating a judgment, at least if the defendant has not appeared at trial [Debbie S. v. Ray (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 193, 200, 200 n.3, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 814 (noting that, had defense counsel appeared at trial and presented defense without objecting to lack of statement, defect might have been waived; anomaly of giving nonappearing defendant greater remedy than defendant who appears held to be for legislature to address)]. If the notice is given and the case proceeds to trial, the plaintiff's damages are not limited to the amount requested in the statement of damages [Damele v. Mack Trucks, Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 29, 38-42, 267 Cal. Rptr. 197] . The proper procedure is to move after trial to amend the statement to conform to proof, although a failure to do so does not require reversal and retrial [Damele v. Mack Trucks, Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 29, 42, 267 Cal. Rptr. 197 ; see Castaic Clay Mfg. Co. v. Dedes (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 444, 450, 240 Cal. Rptr. 652] .

An action for legal malpractice is not considered to be an action for personal injury for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11. Thus, no statement of damages is required under that statute, although a plaintiff is limited to the amount of damages specified in the complaint if a default judgment is entered [Levine v. Smith (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 1136-1137, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 197] . If the complaint fails to state an amount of damages sought, constructive notice of the amount of potential liability on the part of the defendant is insufficient to support an award of damages through default judgment [Stein v. York (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 320, 326-327, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1] .

§ 177.44 Economic and Noneconomic Damages

For purposes of the doctrine of joint and several liability, damages are classified as either economic or noneconomic damages [see Civ. Code §§ 1431.1-1431.5]. Economic damages are defined as objectively verifiable monetary losses, including medical expenses, loss of earnings, burial costs, loss of use of property, costs of repair or replacement, costs of obtaining substitute domestic services, loss of employment, and loss of business opportunities [Civ. Code § 1431.2(b)(1)]. Noneconomic damages are defined as subjective, nonmonetary losses, including but not limited to pain, suffering, inconvenience, mental suffering, emotional distress, loss of society and companionship, loss of consortium, injury to reputation, and humiliation [Civ. Code § 1431.2(b)(2)].

In any action for personal injury, property damage, or wrongful death, the liability of each defendant for noneconomic damages is several only. Each defendant is liable only for the percent of noneconomic damages that corresponds to that defendant's percentage of fault. Tortfeasors are jointly and severally liable for economic damages [Civ. Code § 1431.2(a)]. As a result, the effect of a settlement of one joint tortfeasor on the liability of nonsettling joint tortfeasors depends on an allocation of the settlement award between economic and noneconomic damages. Only the portion of the settlement that represents economic damages offsets the liability of the nonsettling tortfeasors for economic damages [see Code Civ. Proc. § 877; Espinoza v. Machonga (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 268, 275-276, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 498] . For further discussion of allocation of damages between joint tortfeasors, see Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution .

There is a similar distinction between economic and noneconomic damages that applies to an action for professional negligence against a health care provider [see Civ. Code § 3333.2]. For discussion, see § 177.45[2].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Tort Damages

15-177 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 177.45

§ 177.45 Elements of Compensatory Damages for Personal Injuries

[1] General Damages for Pain and Suffering

Under Civ. Code § 3333, pain and suffering is a detriment for which a plaintiff may be compensated. Damages for pain and suffering are general damages and may be recovered under a general allegation of damages [Beeman v. Burling (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1586, 1599-1600, 265 Cal. Rptr. 719 ; Niles v. City of San Rafael (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 230, 244, 116 Cal. Rptr. 733] . Damages for pain and suffering include future pain and suffering as well as that incurred up to the time of trial [see Mendoza v. Rudolf (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 633, 636-637, 295 P.2d 445] .

Generally, the terms "pain" and "suffering" are not distinguished but constitute a single concept under which a plaintiff may recover for physical pain and mental suffering [Capelouto v. Kaiser Found. Hosps. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 889, 892-893, 103 Cal. Rptr. 856, 500 P.2d 880] . The terms include physical pain, fright, nervousness, grief, anxiety, worry, mortification, shock, humiliation, indignity, embarrassment, apprehension, terror, and ordeal [Capelouto v. Kaiser Found. Hosps. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 889, 892-893, 103 Cal. Rptr. 856, 500 P.2d 880 ; Huff v. Tracy (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 939, 943, 129 Cal. Rptr. 551] .

A pain and suffering award may include compensation for the plaintiff's loss of enjoyment of life, called hedonic damages. However, loss of enjoyment of life is only one component of a general damage award for pain and suffering. It is not calculated as a separate award [Loth v. Truck-A-Way Corp. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 757, 763, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 571] . Expert testimony on the value of life and how to compute hedonic damages is inadmissible in a personal injury trial. Such expert testimony has the potential for misleading the jury to award double damages for the same injury; once based on pain and suffering and once based on loss of enjoyment of life. Further, the method of computing hedonic damages is not a matter for which expert testimony is admissible under Evid. Code § 801 [Loth v. Truck-A-Way Corp. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 757, 766-767, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 571] .

For a further discussion of the recovery of damages for mental distress and pain and suffering, see Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress , and Levy, Golden, & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 51 (Matthew Bender).

[2] Limit on Amount in Action Against Health Care Provider

In an action for injury against a health care provider based on professional negligence, the injured plaintiff may not recover more than $250,000 for noneconomic losses such as pain and suffering [see Civ. Code § 3333.2]. Civ. Code § 3333.2 has been held to apply in a wrongful death action to limit the total recovery of noneconomic damages to $250,000, regardless of the number of heir-plaintiffs who bring the action [Yates v. Pollock (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 195, 200-201, 239 Cal. Rptr. 383] . However, it has been held to apply separately to a primary claim for professional medical negligence and to a spouse's adjunct claim for loss of consortium, permitting recovery of up to $250,000 on each claim [Atkins v. Strayhorn (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1380, 1394-1396, 273 Cal. Rptr. 231] .

The trier of fact must first find the entire amount of the plaintiff's noneconomic damages. The amount is then reduced by the percentage of the plaintiff's comparative fault, if any. If what remains exceeds $250,000, the award is further reduced to that amount [Atkins v. Strayhorn (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1380, 1391-1393, 273 Cal. Rptr. 231 ; see McAdory v. Rogers (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1276-1281, 264 Cal. Rptr. 71] .

It has been held that if more than one health care provider jointly contributes to a single injury, the plaintiff may recover only $250,000 for noneconomic damages from all defendants, not that amount from each defendant [Gilman v. Beverly Cal. Corp. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 121, 128, 283 Cal. Rptr. 17 ; see Yates v. Pollock (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 195, 200-201, 239 Cal. Rptr. 383 (in wrongful death action, all plaintiffs are limited to single $250,000 recovery)]. Therefore, under the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986 (Proposition 51), which ended joint liability for noneconomic damages [see Civ. Code § 1431.2(a); see also Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution], a plaintiff may recover only the proportionate share of $250,000 that corresponds to a defendant's comparative fault from that defendant. The court first must reduce the total award for noneconomic damages as found by the jury to $250,000; then $250,000 is to be multiplied by each defendant's percentage of comparative fault to determine the amount of noneconomic damages for which each defendant is severally liable [see Mayes v. Bryan (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1101, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 14 ; Gilman v. Beverly Cal. Corp. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 121, 126-130, 283 Cal. Rptr. 17 ; see also Bell v. Sharp Cabrillo Hosp. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1038, 260 Cal. Rptr. 886 (court, without discussion, first reduced damages to $250,000, and then further reduced damages under Code Civ. Proc. § 877 by amount of settlement with another defendant)].

[3] Medical Expenses

[a] Generally

A plaintiff may recover as special damages the reasonable value of necessary medical services rendered to him or her in the treatment of an injury attributable to the defendant's wrongful conduct [see Miller v. San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 555, 561, 28 Cal. Rptr. 126 ; Guerra v. Balestrieri (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 511, 520 ; Wilcox v. Sway (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 560, 573-574, 160 P.2d 154] . Such damages include medical expenses that he or she has incurred but not yet paid [Brown v. Guarantee Ins. Co. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 679, 691, 319 P.2d 69] . Additionally, damages may be recovered for future medical expenses if the expenses are reasonably certain and are not speculative [Augustus v. Shaffer (1959) 171 Cal. App. 2d 160, 340 P.2d 37 ; see also § 177.13[2]]. Examples of medical expenses for which a plaintiff may becompensated include fees for a doctor's services, even if the treating physician is not licensed to practice medicine in the state [Gastine v. Ewing (1944) 65 Cal. App. 2d 131, 143, 150 P.2d 266] ; costs of restorative surgery and necessary home nursing care [Rodriguez v. Bethlehem Steel Corp. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 382, 409, 115 Cal. Rptr. 765, 525 P.2d 669 ; Johnston v. Long (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 54, 77, 181 P.2d 645] ; and costs of special care necessitated by the accident, such as nursing or other services, provided by members of the injured person's family [Bradford v. Edmands (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 159, 168, 30 Cal. Rptr. 185] .

A plaintiff may also be able to recover for the change the injury causes in the family relationship resulting in a different allocation of comfort, care, protection, and support among family members, if the change can be measured economically [see Custodio v. Bauer (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 303, 323-324, 59 Cal. Rptr. 463 ; Hair v. Monterey County (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 538, 541-542, 119 Cal. Rptr. 639 , overruled on other grounds, Baxter v. Superior Court (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 461, 138 Cal. Rptr. 315, 563 P.2d 871] .

[b] Proof of Past Medical Expenses

In proving medical expenses, the cost alone of medical treatment or hospitalization does not govern the recovery of the expenses. It is essential to show that the amounts charged were reasonable and were for services reasonably required as a result of the defendant's tortious conduct [see McAllister v. George (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 258, 264, 140 Cal. Rptr. 702 (medical costs not recoverable if evidence shows that services were only in part attributable to tortious conduct); Calhoun v. Hildebrandt (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 70, 73, 40 Cal. Rptr. 690] .

Medical bills, if paid, are admissible to show that the charges were reasonable if offered for the limited purpose of corroborating a witness's testimony, including the plaintiff's, that the services were performed, that plaintiff was billed for them, and that the bills were paid [see McAllister v. George (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 258, 263, 140 Cal. Rptr. 702] . Uncorroborated, unpaid bills alone are inadmissible [see Calhoun v. Hildebrandt (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 70, 73, 40 Cal. Rptr. 690] . There appears to be a split of authority as to whether or not a plaintiff's testimony concerning the receipt of unpaid bills is evidence of the reasonableness of the charges [see Malinson v. Black (1948) 83 Cal. App. 2d 375, 379 (plaintiff's uncorroborated testimony as to estimate of medical expenses incurred as admissible as evidence of reasonable value); Linde v. Emmick (1936) 16 Cal. App. 2d 676, 684, 61 P.2d 338 (both plaintiff's testimony and unpaid bills as inadmissible to show reasonableness of charges)].

There is disagreement among court of appeal opinions as to how much a plaintiff is entitled to recover when a health care provider agreed to accept less than the full amount that would normally have been charged for the services provided. Under the collateral source rule, which is discussed in § 177.50[2], if a plaintiff received some benefit for his or her injuries from a source wholly independent of the tortfeasor, such as a plaintiff's own insurer, that benefit is not used to reduce the recovery from the tortfeasor. Applying the collateral source rule, one court of appeal opinion held that when a plaintiff was contractually liable for the full amount that would normally have been charged for the health care services provided, the fact that the plaintiff's private health care insurer negotiated a lesser amount as payment in full for those services did not reduce the tortfeasor's liability for the full, reasonable value of the services. That court opinion concluded that because the plaintiff had the foresight to purchase health insurance, she, rather than the tortfeasor, should receive the benefit of that foresight, one benefit of which was the insurer's ability to negotiate a lower payment amount and extinguish plaintiff's contractual liability for the unpaid amount [Howell v. Hamilton Meats & Provisions, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 686, 699-700, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 805 , review granted, depublished, 2010 Cal. LEXIS 2691].

However, not all court opinions have applied the collateral source rule to similar situations. In one case, for example, the court of appeal held that if a health care provider had an agreement with Blue Cross to accept a lesser amount as payment in full for services to a particular plaintiff, the amount that this plaintiff may recover for those past medical expenses is limited to the amount actually charged [Nishihama v. City & County of San Francisco (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 298, 306-309, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 861] , overruled, Yanez v. SOMA Environmental Engineering, Inc. (2010) 185 Cal. App. 4th 1313, 1326-1327 . The court in that case analyzed the issue as a question of the hospital's lien rights under the Hospital Lien Act [see § 177.54[3]], rather than under the collateral source rule [Nishihama v. City & County of San Francisco (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 298, 307-308, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 861] , overruled, Yanez v. SOMA Environmental Engineering, Inc. (2010) 185 Cal. App. 4th 1313, 1326-1327 . The court of appeal held in another case that if the plaintiff bears no personal liability for the underlying medical charges because the services were billed to Medi-Cal, the plaintiff is entitled to recover only the amount actually paid for the services [Hanif v. Housing Authority (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 635, 643-644, 246 Cal. Rptr. 192] . It should be noted that under these circumstances, the Director of Health Services would normally file a Medi-Cal lien against plaintiff's recovery to recoup the amount paid by the Medi-Cal program [see § 177.54[1]].

If a medical provider sells plaintiff's account and lien to a third-party financial services company at a discount, but plaintiff remains liable to the financial services company for the full amount charged for the medical services, plaintiff may recover as damages the full amount charged if that is a reasonable amount for the services rendered [Katiuzhinsky v. Perry (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1296-1298, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 309] .

Even if the health care provider has agreed to accept a compromise amount as payment in full for the services provided, evidence of the reasonable value of those services may be admitted at trial to provide a more complete picture of the extent of the injuries [Olsen v. Reid (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 200, 204, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 255 ; Katiuzhinsky v. Perry (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1295-1296, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 309 ; Greer v. Buzgheia (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 1157, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780] . If such evidence is admitted, it is incumbent on the defendant to ensure that the jury's verdict specifies what damages, if any, are being awarded for past medical expenses. This specification will make it possible for the court, on proper motion, to reduce the jury's award for past medical expenses to the amount that was actually paid for the health care services [Greer v. Buzgheia (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 1158-1159, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780] . If under the collateral source rule a plaintiff is allowed to recover the full billed amount of medical services provided, rather than a lesser amount actually paid by plaintiff's private health insurer, no post-trial motion would be needed or permitted [Howell v. Hamilton Meats & Provisions, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 686, 706-707, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 805 , review granted, depublished, 2010 Cal. LEXIS 2691].

If the plaintiff has paid for past medical services out of his or her own pocket, evidence of this payment is admissible to prove damages [Smalley v. Baty (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 977, 984-987, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 575] .

[c] Persons Who May Recover

As a general rule, it is the injured person who is entitled to recover the medical expenses resulting from the injury [Rodriguez v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 626, 662, 151 Cal. Rptr. 399] . A third party who has paid the medical expenses of an injured person is generally not entitled to bring a direct action against a negligent tortfeasor to recover for those expenses or any related economic harm [In re Tobacco Cases II (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 183, 199, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 120 (negligent misrepresentation case)]. However, under the appropriate circumstances, a third party may have a statutory lien on a plaintiff's recovery for medical expenses, as discussed in § 177.54.

If the injured person's spouse has performed nursing services, the reasonable value of those services is recoverable in the action of the injured spouse. They are not an element of damages in the spouse's action for loss of consortium [Rodriguez v. Bethlehem Steel Corp. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 382, 409, 115 Cal. Rptr. 765, 525 P.2d 669 ; for discussion of damages in loss of consortium actions, see Ch. 354, Loss of Consortium; § 177.50[1]].

The parents of an injured minor are normally responsible for medical care that is furnished to a minor, and the cause of action to recover past medical expenses normally rests with the parents [Bauman v. San Francisco (1940) 42 Cal. App. 2d 144, 163, 108 P.2d 989 ; see Black v. County of Los Angeles (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 920, 935, 127 Cal. Rptr. 916 (parent must allege own cause of action to recover medical expenses in individual capacity)]. However, a parent may waive the right to recover unpaid past medical expenses by bringing the action as guardian ad litem on behalf of the child, in which case the child may recover these items, and the parents are estopped from recovering them on their own behalf [White v. Moreno Valley Unified Sch. Dist. (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 1030, 226 Cal. Rptr. 742] . Thus, a cause of action to recover medical expenses incurred on account of a minor's personal injuries belongs to both the parents and the child [Laughner v. Bryne (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 904, 909, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671] .

Case authority appears to conflict regarding the respective rights of parents and children to recover for future medical expenses. In older cases, it has been held that the right to recover future medical expenses rests solely with the child [Apodaca v. Haworth (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 209, 217, 23 Cal. Rptr. 461 ; Rockwood v. Lansburgh (1930) 109 Cal.

App. 581, 585, 293 P. 792] . However, a recent case finds that these cases no longer accurately state prevailing California law, and that future medical expenses to be incurred on behalf of a child, both before and after the age of majority, may be recovered by either the child or the parent, but not by both [Laughner v. Bryne (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 904, 909-912, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 (release pursuant to minor's compromise of all child's damages estopped parent from recovering future medical expenses); see Turpin v. Sortini (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 220, 237 n.11, 238 n.12, 182 Cal. Rptr. 337, 643 P.2d 954 ; see also Fam. Code § 3910 (parental duty to support adult child incapacitated from earning a living and without sufficient means)].

The recovery for a minor's medical expenses may include the reasonable value of nursing services provided by a parent. However, the recovery may include only additional care required because of the injury, not the normal care that must be given to a child [Bradford v. Edmands (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 159, 164-165, 30 Cal. Rptr. 185] . Nor is recovery allowed for special care provided by a parent in excess of what would be provided by another person [see Hair v. County of Monterey (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 538, 541, 119 Cal. Rptr. 639] , disapproved on other grounds, Baxter v. Superior Court (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 461 . Recovery for parental services may be awarded to either the parent or the minor [Hair v. County of Monterey (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 538, 540-541, 119 Cal. Rptr. 639] , disapproved on other grounds, Baxter v. Superior Court (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 461 .

For further discussion of recovery of damages for medical expenses, see Levy, Golden, & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 52 (Matthew Bender).

[4] Loss of Earning Capacity

An injured plaintiff may recover for the loss or impairment of his or her capacity to work and earn money. Loss of earning capacity is an element of general damages and can be inferred from the nature of the injury [Connolly v. Pre-Mixed Concrete Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 483, 489, 319 P.2d 343 ; Beeman v. Burling (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1586, 1600, 265 Cal. Rptr. 719 ; Rodriguez v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 626, 656, 151 Cal. Rptr. 399] . The BAJI instructions classify lost earning capacity as economic damages for the purposes of imposing joint and several liability under Civ. Code § 1431.2 [see BAJI Nos. 14.11, 14.12 (7th ed.)]. For discussion of the distinctions between economic and noneconomic damages, see § 177.44. General damages for lost earning capacity are measured from the date of injury, and thus, are allowed for the period between injury and trial, as well as for lost future capacity [see Tornell v. Munson (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 123, 125, 181 P.2d 112] .

The recovery for loss of earning capacity is not measured by what a person was actually earning at the time of the injury but by what he or she was and will be capable of earning [Storrs v. Los Angeles Traction Co. (1901) 134 Cal. 91, 93, 66 P. 72 ; see Neumann v. Bishop (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 451, 462-464, 130 Cal. Rptr. 786] . Consequently, a plaintiff can recover for loss of earning capacity without proof of actual earnings before or after the injury [Handelman v. Victor Equip. Co. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 902, 907, 99 Cal. Rptr. 90] . Even the fact that an injured person was not employed at the time of the injury does not deprive him or her of the right to compensation for the loss of earning capacity [McCormack v. City & County of San Francisco (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 96, 101-102, 14 Cal. Rptr. 79] .

To recover future damages for loss of earning power, a plaintiff may present testimony of actuaries and actuarial charts. For instance, economic data with respect to whether a plaintiff would have enjoyed continuous employment until the age of 65 but for the accident and whether other employment will be available when the plaintiff recovers his or her health is relevant to the determination of future loss of earnings. However, a plaintiff is prohibited from presenting testimony of his or her mere hopes or mere prospects of advancement [Neumann v. Bishop (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 451, 462-464, 130 Cal. Rptr. 786] .

If plaintiff's life expectancy has been shorted by defendant's act, damages for diminished earnings capacity properly include earnings for the so-called "lost years" [Fein v. Permanente Med. Group (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 137, 153-154, 211 Cal. Rptr. 368, 695 P.2d 665] . If economic damages are awarded for the period of time in which plaintiff's life expectancy has been shortened, the award may include loss of future benefits such as Social Security and pension benefits, in addition to future wage loss damages [Overly v. Ingalls Shipbuilding, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 164, 172, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 626] . However, these damages may only be recovered once, and a setoff may be proper if similar damages are sought in any subsequent wrongful death action [Overly v. Ingalls Shipbuilding, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 164, 173, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 626] . For a discussion of the recovery of damages in a wrongful death action, including the effect of a shortening of the decedent's life expectancy, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions . If damages are awarded for the loss of future economic benefits based on diminished life expectancy, those damages are not reduced by the amount of the plaintiff's expected living expenses during the lost years [Overly v. Ingalls Shipbuilding, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 164, 174-175, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 626 (speculation and uncertainty would be involved in attempting to prove future uses to which lost earnings would be put)].

[5] Lost Earnings or Income

If, as a result of tortious conduct, a person is disabled or impaired from attending to his or her usual occupation or pursuits of financial gain, damages flowing from this disability or impairment are recoverable [Connolly v. Pre-Mixed Concrete Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 483, 489, 319 P.2d 343 ; McCormack v. City & County of San Francisco (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 96, 101-102]. Damages for lost earnings include lost wages from employment [Swanson v. Bogatin (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 755, 758, 308 P.2d 918 ; see, e.g., Helmer v. Bingham Toyota Isuzu (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 1130, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 136 (lost future income from prior employment is recoverable if plaintiff left prior employment due to false promises from prospective employer and if damages are not speculative or remote)]. They also include economic benefits that have been lost from a particular endeavor, such as a partnership [Hoffmann v. Lane (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 655, 659, 54 P.2d 477] .

Lost actual earnings must be distinguished from lost future earning capacity, which is an element of general damages [see Rodriguez v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 626, 656, 151 Cal. Rptr. 399 ; for discussion, see § 177.45[4]]. Courts have also distinguished between actual lost earnings and lost earning capacity between the date of injury and the date of trial, which is also recoverable as an element of general damages [Tornell v. Munson (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 123, 125, 181 P.2d 112] .

The generally held view is that loss of actual earnings between the date of injury and the date of trial is an item of special damages, which may be recovered only if specifically pleaded [Hoffmann v. Lane (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 655, 659, 54 P.2d 477 ; see Edwards v. Hollywood Canteen (1946) 27 Cal. 2d 802, 812-813, 167 P.2d 729 ; Handelman v. Victor Equip. Co. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 902, 906, 99 Cal. Rptr. 90 ; Swanson v. Bogatin (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 755, 758, 308 P.2d 918 ; Martin v. Angel City Baseball Ass'n (1935) 3 Cal. App. 2d 586, 590, 40 P.2d 287] . However, a few courts have stated that loss of earnings is an item of general damages [Gersick v. Shilling (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 641, 649, 218 P.2d 583 ; Tornell v. Munson (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 123, 125, 181 P.2d 112] . This statement appears to be based on a view that the only damages recoverable are general damages for lost earning capacity, measured from the date of injury. Lost actual earnings is merely some evidence of lost earning capacity [see Rodriguez v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 626, 656-657, 151 Cal. Rptr. 399 ; Tornell v. Munson (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 123, 125, 181 P.2d 112 ; see also BAJI No. 14.11 (characterizing earnings as factor in determining reasonable value of working time lost to date)].

This latter view more clearly avoids the possibility of a double recovery of the same amount for both lost earnings and lost earning capacity. Under the view that actual lost earnings are special damages, the same amounts might be awarded as both special damages and general damages for lost earning capacity unless it is made clear to the jury that any amounts awarded as special damages for lost income must be subtracted from any award of general damages for lost earning capacity calculated from the date of the injury.

[6] Loss of Profits

A plaintiff may recover for loss of profits resulting from personal injuries sustained instead of for loss of earning capacity. As a loss of profits does not always result from such an injury, these damages are special and must be particularly alleged [Shaw v. Southern Pac. R.R. Co. (1910) 157 Cal. 240, 242, 107 P. 108 ; Hoffmann v. Lane (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 655, 659, 54 P.2d 477] . Similar to the relationship between lost earning capacity and actual lost earnings, evidence of lost profits may be admitted as part of the proof of loss of earning capacity although damages for lost profits were not specially pleaded [Shaw v. Southern Pac. R.R. Co. (1910) 157 Cal. 240, 242, 107 P. 108] .

Lost anticipated profits cannot be recovered if it is uncertain whether any profit at all would have been derived from the undertaking. But lost prospective net profits may be recovered if the evidence shows, with reasonable certainty, both their occurrence and extent. It is enough to demonstrate a reasonable probability that profits would have been earned but for the defendant's conduct. The plaintiff has the burden to produce the best evidence available under the circumstances to attempt to establish a claim for lost profits [S.C. Anderson, Inc. v. Bank of Am. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 529, 536, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 286] .

If the lost anticipated profits are from a business that was not yet in operation when the actionable conduct occurred, damages may be established with reasonable certainty using expert testimony, economic and financial data, market surveys and analyses, business records of similar enterprises, and the like [Parlour Enterprises, Inc. v. Kirin Group, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 281, 288, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 243] . However, in order to ensure that the evidence is not deemed too speculative, the party offering such evidence must explain the factual underpinnings for the projections used and justify why the projections constitute reliable indicators of future anticipated profits [see Parlour Enterprises, Inc. v. Kirin Group, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 281, 289-292, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 243 (award for lost anticipated profits for unopened businesses reversed when projections made by expert witness lacked sufficient factual support)].

Evidence of loss of profits may be inadmissible to show plaintiff's damages to the extent that the profits are a return on capital or a result of the services of others [Lombardi v. California St. Ry. Co. (1899) 124 Cal. 311, 319, 57 P. 66] . In addition, a plaintiff cannot recover for both lost earnings and lost profits if such an award would result in double compensation for plaintiff's services [Hollander v. Wilson Estate Co. (1932) 214 Cal. 582, 587, 7 P.2d 177] .

A corporate shareholder does not have an ownership interest in corporate profits, and therefore a shareholder cannot recover individually for lost future profits suffered by the corporation [Sole Energy Co. v. Petrominerals Corp. (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 212, 232, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 798] .

15-177 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 177.46

§ 177.46 Future Damages

[1] Proof

A plaintiff may recover damages for detriment resulting after the commencement of the action or certain to result in the future [Civ. Code § 3283]. Thus, future medical expenses, future pain and suffering, and future disability are all recoverable in an action for personal injury [see, e.g., Niles v. City of San Rafael (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 230, 241-244, 116 Cal. Rptr. 733] . Also, damages for future medical monitoring may be recovered in products liability cases involving toxic exposure without present injury [Potter v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 965, 1006-1007 ; Miranda v. Shell Oil Co. (1993) 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 569] . However, when a plaintiff in such cases has an unrelated, preexisting condition that also requires future medical monitoring, the defendant is only liable for the costs of additional or different monitoring made necessary by the defendant's tortious conduct [Gutierrez v. Cassiar Mining Corp. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 148, 155-156, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132 (error to refuse to instruct jury that asbestos-exposure defendant was not liable for costs of monitoring to which plaintiff would have to submit due to smoking and abnormal growth in lung); see Potter v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 965, 1009 n.27, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 863 P.2d 795] .

In order to recover future damages, it must be shown, from all the evidence, that future consequences will occur with reasonable certainty [Bellman v. San Francisco High School Dist. (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 576, 588, 81 P.2d 894 ; Mendoza v. Rudolf (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 633, 637, 295 P.2d 445] . Reasonable certainty must be found by the trier of fact based on all of the evidence [Bauman v. San Francisco (1940) 42 Cal. App. 2d 144, 165, 108 P.2d 989 ; see Ostertag v. Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp. (1944) 65 Cal. App. 2d 795, 807, 151 P.2d 647] .

Positive proof that an impairment of health or faculties will follow from a particular injury is often impossible to demonstrate. Therefore, it is necessary, in determining the question of reasonable certainty, to rely on the testimony of expert medical witnesses [Bauman v. San Francisco (1940) 42 Cal. App. 2d 144, 165, 108 P.2d 989 ; see Kuhlmann v. Pascal & Ludwig (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 144, 153, 85 Cal. Rptr. 199] . However, the expert need not testify that he or she is reasonably certain that the future consequences will ensue [Mendoza v. Rudolf (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 633, 637, 295 P.2d 445] . Testimony of professional experience and observation is probative, and thus admissible, although the testimony alone would be insufficient to prove reasonable certainty [Bauman v. San Francisco (1940) 42 Cal. App. 2d 144, 163-165, 108 P.2d 989] .

If a plaintiff seeks damages to compensate for a liability owed to a third party caused by defendant's actionable conduct, but plaintiff has not yet paid that third-party liability, plaintiff must provide more than just evidence of an obligation to pay. As with other types of prospective damage, a plaintiff must prove to a reasonable certainty that plaintiff could and would pay the liability. A statement by plaintiff that he or she agreed to pay the third party a certain amount is insufficient [Green Wood Industrial Co. v. Forceman Internat. Development Group, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 766, 777-778, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 624].

[2] Reduction to Present Cash Value

An award for future damages should be reduced to present cash value, which is defined as the present sum of money that, together with interest thereon when invested so as to yield the highest rate of interest consistent with reasonable security, will pay to the plaintiff the equivalent of his or her loss of future benefits at the times, in the amounts, and for the period that the plaintiff would either have received the lost benefits, such as earnings, or be required to pay for future expenses, such as medical expenses [see Wilson v. Gilbert (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 607, 613 n.2, 102 Cal. Rptr. 31 ; Deshotel v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 224, 230, 300 P.2d 910 ; BAJI No. 14.70]. To eliminate confusion, when future damages are sought, juries should be instructed to determine the amount in current dollars paid at the time of judgment, and absent such an instruction, awards of future damages are considered to be stated in terms of their present or current value unless the record clearly establishes otherwise [Salgado v. County of Los Angeles (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 629, 646-647, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46, 967 P.2d 585 ; see also Wilson v. Gilbert (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 607, 613-614, 102 Cal. Rptr. 31 (jury may be instructed on necessity of finding present cash value after expert testimony on present cash value factor or when judicially noticed present cash value tables are included with instructions)]. For further discussion of calculation of future damages, see Levy, Golden, & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 52 (Matthew Bender).

In medical malpractice cases, the court must, at the request of either party, order that future damages that equal or exceed $50,000 be paid, in whole or in part, by periodic payments rather than by a lump-sum payment [Code Civ. Proc. § 667.7(a)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice .

[3] Effect of Inflation on Future Losses

A trier of fact may take into account future estimates of changes in the purchasing power of money in arriving at a damage award [Rodriguez v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 626, 662, 151 Cal. Rptr. 399 ; see United States v. English (9th Cir. 1975) 521 F.2d 63, 74] . Thus, damages may be increased to account for inflation, which may, at least partially, offset the effect of reducing damages to present value [Fox v. Pacific Sw. Airlines (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 565, 570 n.5, 184 Cal. Rptr. 87 ; see also § 177.46[2]].

Under a total offset theory, the effect of inflation is viewed as equal to the reduction-to-present-value discount rate, so that neither should be taken into account in awarding future damages [see, e.g., Neumann v. Bishop (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 451, 461, 130 Cal. Rptr. 786 (expert witness testified that inflation and reduction to present value would cancel each other)]. However, courts may not merely assume that the discount rate and the inflation rate will net to zero. The trier of fact must first compute future damages taking into account estimated changes in the purchasing power of the dollar (inflationary or deflationary), and then discount the future damages to its present value [United States v. English (9th Cir. 1975) 521 F.2d 63, 75 (applying California law)]. For further discussion of computing the effect of inflation on future losses, see Levy, Golden, & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 52 (Matthew Bender).

15-177 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 177.47

§ 177.47 Compensatory Damages for Injury to Property

[1] Generally

There is no fixed, inflexible rule for determining the measure of damages for injury to, or destruction of, property (real or personal). Whatever formula is most appropriate to compensate the injured party for the loss sustained in the particular case will be adopted [Heninger v. Dunn (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 862, 162 Cal. Rptr. 104 ; see Inyo Chem. Co. v. City of Los Angeles (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 525, 541, 55 P.2d 850] . The guiding principle is the principle generally applicable to tortious conduct, that the plaintiff should recover all of the detriment proximately caused by the injury [Frustuck v. City of Fairfax (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 345, 367, 28 Cal. Rptr. 357] .

A plaintiff must generally sustain actual property damage or personal injury to recover for economic loss caused by negligent conduct. In Aas v. Superior Court, for example, the Supreme Court refused to allow homeowners or a homeowners association to recover in negligence from housing developers and contractors for deviations from applicable building codes and industry standards that had not yet caused property damage or personal injury or ripened into involuntary out-of-pocket repair costs [Aas v. Superior Court (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 627, 643, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718, 12 P.3d 1125] . The Court noted that although any construction defect can diminish the value of a house, the difference between price paid and value received, and deviations from standards of quality that have not yet resulted in actual property damage or personal injury, are primarily the domain of contract and warranty law or the law of fraud, rather than the law of negligence [Aas v. Superior Court (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 627, 636, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718, 12 P.3d 1125] .

While the general principles of the economic loss rule as enunciated in Aas are still valid, application of that rule in the context of defects arising from new residential construction has subsequently been abrogated by the Right to Repair Act, codified at Civ. Code § 895 et seq. [see Greystone Homes, Inc. v. Midtec, Inc. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1194, 1202, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 196] . Under that Act, which establishes a set of building standards for new residential construction, homeowners have a cause of action against builders, subcontractors, individual product manufacturers, and others for violation of the standards provided in the Act [see Civ. Code §§ 896, 936]. On a showing that a defendant has violated a particular standard, a homeowner may recover for economic loss from a builder, including the reasonable value of repairing any violation of the standards provided in the Act, without having to show that the violation caused property damage or personal injury [see Civ. Code §§ 896, 942]. A builder liable under the Act may in turn recover for economic loss from a product manufacturer through an action for equitable indemnity, if the manufacturer's negligence or breach of contract caused a violation of the standards provided by the Act [Greystone Homes, Inc. v. Midtec, Inc. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1194, 1213-1214, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 196] . For further discussion of the Right to Repair Act, see Ch. 104, Building Contracts . For discussion of equitable indemnity principles generally, see Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution .

In a case dealing with an older building not covered by the Act, the court of appeal held that public entities, suing as the owners of buildings that contained lead-based paint, could not state a cause of action for negligence or strict liability against lead manufacturers because the plaintiffs could not allege any actual damage to the buildings themselves. Although persons inhaling the paint might have a cause of action, to recover as owners of the buildings, the plaintiffs were required to allege some other type of physical damage to the buildings themselves beyond the mere presence of lead-based paint on the walls [County of Santa Clara v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 325, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313] .

A plaintiff may recover tort damages for economic loss without suffering property damage or personal injury. if the defendant committed the intentional tort of fraud in conjunction with a breach of contract. In one case, the California Supreme Court held that a helicopter manufacturer was entitled to recover tort damages, including punitive damages, from a parts manufacturer that provided vital parts knowing that they were not in conformity with manufacturing specifications as detailed in the contract between the parties. The parts manufacturer had committed the intentional tort of fraud when it provided certificates of compliance with the parts, despite knowing that the parts were not in compliance. The helicopter manufacturer relied on these affirmative misrepresentations to its detriment when it accepted the nonconforming parts, and in doing so it exposed itself to potential liability should the parts fail and cause damage to other persons or property. Under these circumstances, the fraudulent act of providing the false certificates of compliance was an independent tort separate from the breach of contract itself, which was the provision of the nonconforming parts [Robinson Helicopter Co., Inc. v. Dana Corp., (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 979, 990-991, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 352, 102 P.3d 268] .

Although the Supreme Court's holding in that case dealt with fraud that accompanied a breach of contract, a subsequent court of appeal opinion has held that the Court's conclusion, which allows recovery for economic loss without accompanying property damage or personal injury, is not restricted to actions that include a breach of contract. Instead, it applies to any action involving intentional, affirmative fraudulent conduct on the part of the defendant, if that fraudulent conduct exposes the plaintiff to liability to third parties [County of Santa Clara v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 328, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313 (owners of buildings containing lead-based paint could pursue fraud action against lead manufacturers)].

Although it is unclear to what extent the Court predicated its decision on these concerns, the Court also noted that the defendant's act in providing critical helicopter parts that were not in compliance with specifications placed the lives of people flying in the helicopters at risk and exposed the helicopter manufacturer to liability for personal damages beyond any damage to the helicopters, although the defective parts were discovered before any accidents actually occurred [Robinson Helicopter Co., Inc. v. Dana Corp., (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 979, 991 n.7, 993, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 352, 102 P.3d 268] .

For additional discussion of damages for injury to property, see Levy, Golden, & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 52.

[2] Damage to Personal Property

If personal property is injured but not wholly destroyed, the general rule is that the plaintiff may recover the lesser of (1) depreciation in value, measured by the value of the property immediately before and after the injury, plus compensation for loss of use; or (2) the reasonable cost of repairs plus loss of use while the repairs are being made [Hand Elecs., Inc. v. Snowline Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 862, 870, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 ; Smith v. Hill (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 374, 388, 47 Cal. Rptr. 49] . Under these rules, the defendant has the burden of showing that recovery under the alternative measure of damages would be less than the one under which the plaintiff is claiming [Mozzetti v. City of Brisbane (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 565, 576, 136 Cal. Rptr. 751 ; Konda v. Frumpkin (1928) 90 Cal. App. 384, 386, 265 P. 955 ; Santos v. Scharz (1927) 87 Cal. App. 758, 762, 262 P. 764 ; Rhodes v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1921) 51 Cal. App. 569, 573, 197 P. 392] .

If the damaged property cannot be completely repaired, the plaintiff may recover the difference between the value before the injury and the value after the repairs have been made, plus the reasonable cost of making the repairs. This rule gives the plaintiff the difference between the value of the property before the injury and its value after the injury, the amount being made up of the cost of repairs and the depreciation notwithstanding the repairs [Merchant Shippers Ass'n v. Kellog Express & Draying Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 594, 600, 170 P.2d 923] .

If repairs have actually been made, it is not essential to introduce evidence as to the diminution in value. The court may not assume that the depreciation was of a lesser amount than the cost of the repairs. In such a case, the amount actually paid is some evidence of the reasonable value of the necessary repairs. If the repairs have not in fact been made, the estimated cost of reasonably necessary repairs requires expert testimony [Smith v. Hill (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 374, 388, 47 Cal. Rptr. 49 ; see Pfingsten v. Westenhaver (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 12, 24, 244 P.2d 395] . However, if plaintiff is claiming depreciation, the owner of the property may, without being qualified as an expert on values, testify as to his or her opinion of the value of that which he or she owns [Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 908, 921, 114 Cal. Rptr. 622, 523 P.2d 662 ; Newhart v. Pierce (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 783, 789, 62 Cal. Rptr. 553] .

[3] Destruction of Personal Property

As a general rule, the measure of damages for the loss or destruction of personal property is the reasonable market value of the property at the time of the loss or destruction. The measure of damages is neither the cost of the property nor the money expended in replacing it [Hand Elecs., Inc. v. Snowline Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 862, 870-871, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 ; Lane v. Spurgeon (1950) 100 Cal. App. 2d 460, 463, 223 P.2d 889] . The defendant, however, may show the salvage value of the property to reduce the amount of the loss [Edrington v. Strong (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 218, 224, 15 Cal. Rptr. 34] .

If the property has a peculiar value to the person recovering damages for its destruction, that value is the amount the plaintiff can recover if the defendant had notice of its peculiar value before incurring the liability for damages or willfully destroying the property [see Civ. Code § 3355; King v. Karpe (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 344, 349, 338 P.2d 979] . To recover damages for the peculiar value of the property to plaintiff under Civ. Code § 3355, the property must have some market value. If the property has no market value, the rule applied is that found in Civ. Code § 3333, which fixes the damages as the amount that would compensate the owner for all detriment proximately caused by its destruction whether or not it could have been anticipated. If the property has no market value, its value or plaintiff's damages must be ascertained in some rational way from elements such as the difficulty and expense to which plaintiff was put in acquiring the property and the nature and the character of use the plaintiff put the property to [Zvolanek v. Bodger Seeds, Ltd. (1935) 5 Cal. App. 2d 106, 109, 42 P.2d 92] . For discussion of the recoverability of damages for emotional distress caused by the tortious destruction of personal property, see Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress .

[4] Injury to Crops

[a] Annual Crops

Damages for the destruction of crops that must be replanted annually, such as vegetables or grain, are calculated in terms of loss of profit. The proper measure of damages for total destruction of an annual crop is thus calculated by determining the market value of the probable yield of the crop and deducting therefrom the costs of production and marketing [Teller v. Bay & River Dredging Co. (1907) 151 Cal. 209, 212-213, 90 P. 924 ; see Maggio, Inc. v. United Farm Workers (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 847, 871-876, 278 Cal. Rptr. 250] . To the extent that the costs of production have already been paid by the plaintiff at the time of destruction of the crop, such costs should not be deducted from market value in calculating the amount of damages [Dutra v. Cabral (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 114, 120, 181 P.2d 26] . If only part of the crop is destroyed, damages are computed by determining loss of expected profit from production of the entire crop and deducting therefrom the actual net profit received from production of the part not destroyed [see Solis v. Contra Costa County (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 844, 847-848, 60 Cal. Rptr. 99] . When the action is brought by a lessee of land on shares, the value of the landlord's share should be deducted in computing the lessee's damages [Teller v. Bay & River Dredging Co. (1907) 151 Cal. 209, 213, 90 P. 924] .

[b] Perennial Crops

A perennial crop is one that does not require annual replanting, but regenerates itself every year [Miller & Lux, Inc. v. Pinelli (1927) 84 Cal. App. 42, 47, 257 P. 573 ; see Staub v. Muller (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 221, 228, 60 P.2d 283] . The measure of damages for the destruction of a perennial crop is not totally clear, but seems to depend on the intended use for the crop. If the crop is used as pasturage for grazing, it has no market value, and thus, the measure of damages is based on the rental value of the land. The California Supreme Court has cast the proper measure as the difference between the rental value of the property with and without the crops [Wolfsen v. Hathaway (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 632, 644, 198 P.2d 1] . Another court has stated that damages are measured by the reasonable rental value of the land for pasture purposes [Miller & Lux, Inc. v. Pinelli (1927) 84 Cal. App. 42, 47, 51, 257 P. 573] . If the roots of the pasturage have been destroyed so as to prevent regeneration, damages include the cost of reseeding [Miller & Lux, Inc. v. Pinelli (1927) 84 Cal. App. 42, 49, 257 P. 573] . However, if a perennial crop is one that may be severed from the land and marketed, the measure of damages is the same as for an annual crop, that is, the lost profit from the crop, measured by the market value of the crop at the time of destruction minus the cost of production and marketing [Staub v. Muller (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 221, 228, 60 P.2d 283 (alfalfa)].

[5] Injury to Trees and Timber

In the case of the conversion of timber, damages may be determined by the market value of the timber less the cost of marketing [Crofoot Lumber, Inc. v. Ford (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 238, 249-250, 12 Cal. Rptr. 639] . In the case of injury to trees resulting from a casual or involuntary trespass or if the defendant has probable cause to believe that he or she owned the land on which a trespass was committed, the plaintiff may recover damages of twice the amount that would compensate for the actual detriment [Civ. Code § 3346(a)]. Application of this double-damages provision is mandatory, and is not limited to the value of the trees as timber [Heninger v. Dunn (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 866-869, 162 Cal. Rptr. 104] . While a 1970 court of appeal opinion held that the double damages provision of Civ. Code § 3346 was inapplicable when the damage is caused by a fire that was the result of the defendant's negligent act [Gould v. Madonna (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 404, 406-408, 85 Cal. Rptr.457] , a 2009 opinion concluded that the plain language of the statute unambiguously mandated a doubling of the damages under those circumstances [Kelly v. CB&I Constructors, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 442, 462-463, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 32] .

Statutes also provide for treble damages if the defendant acts willfully or maliciously [see Civ. Code § 3346(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 733; see also Crofoot Lumber, Inc. v. Ford (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 238, 247, 12 Cal. Rptr. 639] . The trebling provisions are discretionary [Heninger v. Dunn (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 866-869 ; see Ostling v. Loring (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1731, 1742, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 391] .

The measure of damages for the destruction of or injury to fruit, nut, or other productive trees is generally the difference in the value of the land before and after the destruction or injury, and the measure of damages may include the cost of replacing the trees or restoring the property to its pre-injury condition [Santa Barbara Pistachio Ranch v. Chowchilla

Water Dist. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 439, 447, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 856] . In making these calculations, an analysis of the injured or destroyed trees' value may conceivably include the lost profits caused by the injury to or destruction of individual trees, especially if it is impossible to replace those injured or destroyed trees with other mature fruit-bearing trees [Santa Barbara Pistachio Ranch v. Chowchilla Water Dist. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 439, 447, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 856] .

[6] Injury to Real Property

The general rule with regard to damages to real property is that, if the cost of repairing and restoring the premises to their original condition is less than the diminution in value of the property, the cost of repair is the proper measure of damages; if that cost exceeds the diminution in value, the diminution is the proper measure [Armitage v. Decker (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 887, 904, 267 Cal. Rptr. 399 ; Ferraro v. Southern Cal. Gas Co. (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 33, 49, 162 Cal. Rptr. 238 ; Heninger v. Dunn (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 862, 162 Cal. Rptr. 104 ; see Geddes & Smith, Inc. v. St. Paul Mercury Indem. Co. (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 602, 604-605, 47 Cal. Rptr. 564, 407 P.2d 868] . If the property is a total loss, the plaintiff may not recover more than the preinjury value of the land [Armitage v. Decker (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 887, 904, 267 Cal. Rptr. 399 ; Heninger v. Dunn (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 863, 162 Cal. Rptr. 104] .

If the injury can be repaired, the value of the use of the premises for the period during which the plaintiff has been deprived of the property may be added to the cost of repair [Natural Soda Prods. Co. v. City of Los Angeles (1943) 23 Cal. 2d 193, 201, 143 P.2d 12 ; see also § 177.47[8]]. For injury to commercial property, courts have also allowed damages for lost past and future profits, and increased operating expenses during repairs [see Frustuck v. City of Fairfax (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 345, 367, 28 Cal. Rptr. 357 (citing cases)].

If the plaintiff establishes damages by showing diminution in the value of the property, the defendant has the burden of coming forward with proof that the cost of repair and restoration would be less [Herzog v. Grosso (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 219, 226, 259 P.2d 429 ; Armitage v. Decker (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 887, 905, 267 Cal. Rptr. 399] . Conversely, if the plaintiff proves damages by showing the cost of repairs, the defendant must introduce evidence that the repair costs exceed the diminution in value of the property [Armitage v. Decker (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 887, 905, 267 Cal. Rptr. 399] .

Diminution in value is to be determined as of the time of injury, not the time of trial [Safeco Ins. Co. v. J & D Painting (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1199, 1203 n.1, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 903 ; see Ferraro v. Southern Cal. Gas Co. (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 33, 49, 162 Cal. Rptr. 238] . However, cost of repair may be measured as of the time of trial rather than the time of injury [Rovetti v. City & County of San Francisco (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 973, 977-978, 183 Cal. Rptr. 1] . In any event, the tortfeasor is liable only for the reasonable cost of repairs; if the plaintiff has repairs performed that exceed the amount that is reasonable, the defendant can challenge the amount of damages alleged by the plaintiff [Woodward-Gizienski & Assocs. v. Geotechnical Exploration, Inc. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 64, 69, 255 Cal. Rptr. 800 (original tortfeasor may not settle with plaintiff for amount representing alleged excessive cost of repair and then seek equitable indemnity from person doing repairs)].

It would appear that in determining whether or not there has in fact been a diminution of value of real property, inflation may not be taken into account. Thus, if the dollar value of the property has increased from time A to time B, the court may not consider that the actual purchasing power of that dollar value may have declined during the period because of inflation [see CMSH Co. v. Antelope Dev., Inc. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 174, 181-183, 272 Cal. Rptr. 605 (rejecting use of consumer price index in determination of measure of damages for nonexpungement of lis pendens)].

Diminution in market value is not an absolute limitation on damages, and the plaintiff may recover even if the defendant's tortious conduct actually increases the value of the property. Restoration costs may be awarded even though they exceed the diminution in value if there is a reason personal to the plaintiff for restoring the land to its original condition, or if there is reason to believe that the plaintiff will in fact make the repairs. The restoration must be possible at a cost that is not unreasonable in relation to the value of the land prior to the injury [Orndorff v. Christiana Cmty. Builders (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 683, 687-690, 266 Cal. Rptr. 193 ; Heninger v. Dunn (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 863-866, 162 Cal. Rptr. 104 (defendant's road across plaintiff's property increased its value; however, plaintiff desired to preserve land in its natural state); see also § 177.47[5]]. The plaintiff's personal reason for wishing to repair does not require that the property be unique. Rather, all that is required is some personal use of the property and a bona fide desire to repair or restore. A desire by a homeowner to continue to reside in the home is sufficient [Orndorff v. Christiana Cmty. Builders (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 683, 688-689, 266 Cal. Rptr. 193 (construction defects in mass-produced housing)].

Courts have not accepted the converse argument, however, that diminution in value may be awarded in unique cases even if it exceeds the cost of repair. Awarding cost of repair does not force the owners to remain in property that they prefer to sell; they may repair and then sell [Shaffer v. Debbas (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 33, 46-47, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 110] . A diminution in market value that occurs during the period of repair due to general market conditions is not a "special reason" justifying departure from the general rule, because the defendant's conduct is not a proximate cause of the decline in value attributable to market conditions [Safeco Ins. Co. v. J & D Painting (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1199, 1203-1206, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 903] .

[7] Injury to Fixtures

As a general rule, damages to fixtures are measured by the diminution of the value of the land caused by the injury to the fixture [Wilmerton v. Morton (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 891, 897, 169 P.2d 992] . However, if an item that is a part of realty is destroyed and that item has a value that can be accurately ascertained without reference to the soil on which it stands or out of which it grows, the recovery for the damage may be the value of the thing destroyed or the cost of its repair [Menzies v. Geophysical Serv., Inc. (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 419, 423, 254 P.2d 51] .

[8] Loss of Use of Property

The ownership of personal property carries with it the right to its use, and if one party has wrongfully deprived the other of the right to use the property, an award of damages based on the reasonable value of the use is proper [Story v. Gateway Chevrolet Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 705, 709, 47 Cal. Rptr. 267 ; see Valencia v. Shell Oil Co. (1944) 23 Cal. 2d 840, 844, 147 P.2d 558] . The same rule applies to real property in that a plaintiff whose real property has been injured may recover for the loss of use of the property while it is being repaired [Linforth v. San Francisco Gas & Elec. Co. (1909) 156 Cal. 58, 62, 103 P. 320 (allowance as may be made for loss of rental of building during reasonable time required to make repairs)]. However, if improvements to real property are totally destroyed and damages are to be measured by the diminution of value of the property, additional damages for loss of use may not be recovered [Ferraro v. Southern Cal. Gas Co. (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 33, 50-51, 162 Cal. Rptr. 238 ; see also § 177.47[6]].

The measure of damages for loss of use of personal property may be determined with reference to the rental value of similar property that the plaintiff can obtain during the period when he or she is deprived of the use of the property [Collin v. American Empire Ins. Co. (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 787, 818, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 391 ; see Salyer Grain & Milling Co. v. Henson (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 493, 502, 91 Cal. Rptr. 847] . It is immaterial whether personal property was merely injured or totally destroyed. Damages are limited to the time that it takes to replace the property, and if the property can be replaced immediately, damages for loss of use are inappropriate [Reynolds v. Bank of Am. (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 49, 50-51, 345 P.2d 926] .

If personal property has been damaged but is repairable, the recovery for being deprived of its use is generally determined with reference to the period of time reasonably required for making repairs [Valencia v. Shell Oil Co. (1944) 23 Cal. 2d 840, 844, 147 P.2d 558] . In computing damages for this loss, the court may consider any necessary delay in procuring parts as bearing on the reasonable time for making the repairs [Pfingsten v. Westenhaver (1952) 39

Cal. 2d 12, 23, 244 P.2d 395] .

Damages for loss of use may be recovered even if the property is not used for a commercial purpose [Malinson v. Black (1948) 83 Cal. App. 2d 375, 381, 188 P.2d 788 ; see Owens v. Pyeatt (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 840, 848, 57 Cal. Rptr. 100 (personal automobile)]. Damages are recoverable even if the plaintiff has incurred no actual loss in seeking replacement property [Malinson v. Black (1948) 83 Cal. App. 2d 375, 381, 188 P.2d 788] . However, damages for loss of use are not recoverable if the plaintiff never intended to use the property before it could have been repaired or replaced [Metz v. Soares (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1250, 1257-1258, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 743 ; see Johnson v. Central Aviation Corp. (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 102, 106, 229 P.2d 114] .

[9] Loss of Profits Resulting From Injury to Property

A person whose property has been injured may also recover for profits lost as a result of the injury. However, he or she may not recover for both loss of profits and loss of use because that would result in a double recovery [Tremeroli v. Austin Trailer Equip. Co. (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 464, 482-483, 227 P.2d 923] . A person may, however, recover for both loss of use of the property and a loss of profits that would have been made from the sale of the property [Johnson v. Central Aviation Corp. (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 102, 106, 229 P.2d 114] . A plaintiff may recover profits earned by a trespasser from the use of real property only on a showing that the plaintiff had the capacity to put the land to the same use and generate the same profits [Hammond v. County of Madera (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 797, 803-804] .

The award of damages for loss of profits depends on whether or not there is a satisfactory basis for estimating what the probable earnings would have been had there been no tort [Natural Soda Prods. Co. v. City of Los Angeles (1943) 23 Cal. 2d 193, 199, 143 P.2d 12] . If no such basis exists, it may be necessary to deny recovery on the ground that the alleged loss of profits is uncertain, speculative, or remote [Lucky Auto Supply v. Turner (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 872, 883, 53 Cal. Rptr. 628 ; Johnson v. Central Aviation Corp. (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 102, 105-106, 229 P.2d 114] . In one case, for example, owners of a children's toy store were not allowed to recover for profits that may have been lost because the defendant's tort prevented the plaintiffs from expanding their Internet web site. The plaintiffs, who had averaged only about $500 a year in revenue from their existing web site, presented no evidence that they actually would have made a profit from a greater Internet presence [Kids' Universe v. In2Labs (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 870, 887-888 (plaintiffs' expert analysis comparing lost opportunity to that of another Internet toy retailer was too speculative)].

However, if there has been an operating experience sufficient to permit a reasonable estimate of probable income and expenses, damages for loss of profits are awarded [Maggio, Inc. v. United Farm Workers (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 847, 871-876, 278 Cal. Rptr. 250 ; Lucky Auto Supply v. Turner (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 872, 883, 53 Cal. Rptr. 628] . Further, if the fact of lost profits is certain, the amount need not be established with exact certainty, particularly if it is the defendant's wrongful acts that have created the difficulty in proof [GHK Associates v. Mayer Group, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 856, 873-874, 274 Cal. Rptr. 168] .

An award of damages for profits lost by an interrupted business is limited to the period of the interruption. Once a business has been resurrected, profits allegedly lost thereafter are not necessarily attributable to a defendant's negligence and become matters of speculation and conjecture [Blake v. E. Thompson Petroleum Repair Co. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 823, 834, 216 Cal. Rptr. 568] .

The amount of damages must be reduced to their present value [Inyo Chem. Co. v. City of Los Angeles (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 525, 543, 55 P.2d 850] . For discussion, see § 177.46[2].

§ 177.48 Mitigation of Damages

A plaintiff, in both a personal injury action and an action for injury to property, is bound to exercise reasonable care and diligence to avoid loss and minimize the resulting damages and cannot recover for losses that might have been prevented by reasonable efforts and expenditures [Valencia v. Shell Oil Co. (1944) 23 Cal. 2d 840, 844, 147 P.2d 558 (action for injury to property); Pretzer v. California Transit Co. (1930) 211 Cal. 202, 208, 294 P. 382 (personal injury action); see generally § 177.17]. The doctrine of mitigation of damages applies both to negligence and to intentional torts [Green v. Smith (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 392, 396, 67 Cal. Rptr. 796] .

The plaintiff's failure to mitigate damages is an affirmative defense that must be pleaded and proved by the defendant [Mayes v. Sturdy N. Sales, Inc. (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 69, 86, 154 Cal. Rptr. 43] . For a form of affirmative defense asserting the failure to mitigate, Ch. 380, Negligence, see § 177.199.

If, in a personal injury action, a plaintiff's injuries are such that a reasonable person would seek medical treatment, medical treatment must be secured [Christiansen v. Hollings (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 332, 346, 112 P.2d 723 (plaintiff seeking medical care from doctor before turning to Christian Science)]. Generally, if a plaintiff exercises reasonable diligence in caring for his or her injury and uses reasonable means to prevent its aggravation and to effect a complete cure, he or she is not obligated to undergo a dangerous operation or amputation because it might minimize the loss to be suffered by the defendant [Dodds v. Stellar (1946) 77 Cal. App. 2d 411, 423, 175 P.2d 607 ; Karberg v. Southern Pacific Co. (1935) 10 Cal. App. 2d 234, 252, 52 P.2d 285] . Thus, if the injuries appear slight, even the use of home treatments or remedies is permissible, even though plaintiff thereafter consults a physician when complications develop or the plaintiff realizes the serious nature of the injury [Garrison v. Booth (1935) 10 Cal. App. 2d 738, 742-743, 52 P.2d 535 (home remedy used to treat abrasion that was later found to have developed blood poisoning)].

The failure or refusal of a parent to prevent the live birth of his or her child is not a defense in an action for wrongful birth and may not be considered in awarding damages [Civ. Code § 43.6(b)]. Nor are the parents required to give the child up for adoption [Stills v. Gratton (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 698, 709, 127 Cal. Rptr. 652] .

15-177 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 177.49

§ 177.49 Benefit Conferred by Defendant

If the defendant's tortious conduct has caused harm to the plaintiff, but in so doing has also conferred a special benefit to the interest of the plaintiff that was harmed, the value of the benefit conferred is considered in mitigation of damages to the extent that it is equitable [Turpin v. Sortini (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 220, 236, 182 Cal. Rptr. 337, 643 P.2d 954 ; Maben v. Rankin (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 139, 144, 10 Cal. Rptr. 353, 358 P.2d 681 ; see Morris v. Frudenfeld (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 23, 35 n.7, 185 Cal. Rptr. 76 (rule applied in wrongful birth case); Dakota Gardens Apartment Investors "B" v. Pudwill (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 346, 351, 142 Cal. Rptr. 126 (conversion)]. The "special benefits" doctrine reflects the basic compensatory theory underlying tort damages by restricting recovery to the harm actually incurred [Heckert v. MacDonald (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 832, 839, 256 Cal. Rptr. 369] .

§ 177.50 Double Recovery Barred

[1] Generally

A plaintiff is barred from a double recovery from multiple defendants or their insurers for the same injury. Consequently, if one of several tortfeasors makes a payment to a plaintiff because of an injury for which all of the tortfeasors are liable, the amount the plaintiff may recover from the remaining tortfeasors is reduced by that amount [Laurenzi v. Vranizan (1945) 25 Cal. 2d 806, 813, 155 P.2d 633 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 877(a) (effect of release or dismissal on joint tortfeasors); Carr v. Cove (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 851, 854-855 ; see generally Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution]. However, this bar against a double recovery does not apply if a plaintiff's claim involves separate injuries caused by independent tortfeasors [Ash v. Mortensen (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 654, 660, 150 P.2d 876 (personal injuries sustained in automobile accident and injuries sustained as result of malpractice in treatment following accident); Carr v. Cove (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 851, 854, 109 Cal. Rptr. 449 ; see Kardly v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 479, 485-487, 255 Cal. Rptr. 40 (negligent driver and plaintiff's own insurance company are not joint tortfeasors for purposes of collateral source rule, and payments received from negligent driver in prior action are not set off against liability of insurer for breach of duty and bad faith with regard to its handling of plaintiff's first-party insurance claims arising from same accident)].

In addition, a plaintiff is barred from a double recovery in the form of two distinct measures of damages for one type of injury [Mozzetti v. City of Brisbane (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 565, 575-576, 136 Cal. Rptr. 751 (in case involving damage to real property, plaintiff may recover lesser of cost of repairing and restoring the property or diminution in value of property but not both)]. However, the recovery of two distinct kinds of damages, such as compensatory and punitive damages, for the same injury does not constitute a prohibited double recovery [Merlo v. Standard Life & Accident Ins. Co. (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 5, 20, 130 Cal. Rptr. 416 (award of compensatory and punitive damages in action for breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing by insurer)].

Further, two different kinds of relief may not be ordered to redress the same harm. For example, problems corrected through equitable relief may not also be compensated through an award of damages for future harm [Alexander v. McKnight (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 973, 978-980, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453 (damages for diminution in property value due to nuisance improper if nuisance ordered abated)].

For discussion of the appropriate measure of damages if the same facts constitute a breach of tort and contract, see § 177.76[3].

[2] Collateral Source Rule Exception

[a] Generally

If an injured party received some compensation for his or her injuries from a source wholly independent of the tortfeasor, the payment generally may not be deducted from the damages that the plaintiff would otherwise collect from the tortfeasor [Maggio, Inc. v. United Farm Workers (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 847, 877, 278 Cal. Rptr. 250] . The rule applies to public entities and their employees as well as to private entities and individuals [Helfend v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1, 14]. However, Gov. Code § 985 provides for a post-trial motion by a public entity defendant for reduction of the judgment to reflect certain payments of medical expenses [see Scott v. County of Los Angeles (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 125, 154-155, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 643] . For further discussion, see Ch. 467, Public Entities and Officers: Enforcement of Judgments Against Public Entities .

The most typical case in which the rule is applied is if the person suffering the damage has procured insurance against the loss, and the insurer pays him or her for the loss. The rule thus permits a person who has invested years of insurance premiums to assure his or her medical care to receive the benefits of his or her thrift. The tortfeasor should not benefit from the victim's providence [Helfend v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1, 6, 9, 10-11, 84 Cal. Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61 ; see Anheuser-Busch, Inc. v. Starley (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 347, 349, 170 P.2d 448] . Moreover, any potential double recovery is often avoided because the collateral source making payment may have subrogation or lien rights against any subsequent recovery from the tortfeasor [see Helfend v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1, 10-11, 84 Cal. Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61 ; see also Lab. Code § 3856(b) (employer's lien for workers' compensation benefits)].

Applying the collateral source rule, one court of appeal opinion held that when a plaintiff was contractually liable for the full amount that would normally have been charged for the health care services provided, the fact that the plaintiff's private health care insurer negotiated a lesser amount as payment in full for those services did not reduce the tortfeasor's liability for the full, reasonable value of the services. That court opinion concluded that because the plaintiff had the foresight to purchase health insurance, she, rather than the tortfeasor, should receive the benefit of that foresight, one benefit of which was the insurer's ability to negotiate a lower payment amount and extinguish plaintiff's contractual liability for the unpaid amount [Howell v. Hamilton Meats & Provisions, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 686, 699-700, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 805 , review granted, depublished, 2010 Cal. LEXIS 2691].

The collateral source rule only applies to plaintiffs who are damaged by a tortfeasor. It does not apply to a tortfeasor who seeks to recover indemnity from a co-tortfeasor if the first tortfeasor's insurer has made payment on the tortfeasor's behalf to the underlying plaintiff. Under those circumstances, the insured tortfeasor may only recover indemnity on the amounts paid out of the insured's own pocket, although this may include deductible amounts required by the insurance policy [Miller v. Ellis (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 373, 379-382, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 667] .

Collateral sources include first-party insurance benefits, such as liability, health, medical, property, and life insurance [see Helfend v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1, 10, 84 Cal. Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61] . A fidelity bond is also a collateral source [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Superior Court (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 174, 180, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 522] . Collateral sources also include employee benefits [see Morse v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1976) 63 Cal. App. 3d 128, 133-134, 133 Cal. Rptr. 577] , workers' compensation [see De Cruz v. Reid (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 217, 222-227, 70 Cal. Rptr. 550, 444 P.2d 342] , Social Security benefits [McKinney v. California Portland Cement Co. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1214, 1224-1226, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 849] , and Medi-Cal [Hanif v. Hous. Auth. (1988) 200

Cal. App. 3d 635, 639-640, 246 Cal. Rptr. 192] .

Although employee benefits are generally considered a collateral source, the court of appeal held in one case that the collateral source rule did not prevent the defendant from introducing evidence that the plaintiff would receive disability pension benefits because of his injury [Rotolo Chevrolet v. Superior Court (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 242, 248-249, 129 Cal. Rptr.2d 283] . In that particular case, the plaintiff was forced to retire because of his injuries, and he intended to claim as damages both his lost income and his lost regular retirement pension. However, he sought to prevent the defendant from introducing evidence that he would be receiving a disability retirement pension instead of the regular retirement pension. The court of appeal concluded that it would be inequitable for the plaintiff to claim that he lost his retirement pension because of the injury, when in fact the injury merely caused him to receive a disability pension instead. The court also noted that allowing the plaintiff to prevent introduction of evidence about his disability pension would effectively allow the plaintiff to receive triple compensation for the injury, in the form of damages for lost income, damages for the lost regular pension, and benefits actually paid under the disability pension [Rotolo Chevrolet v. Superior Court (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 242, 246-247, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 283] . The court did recognize, however, that the plaintiff might be able to recover for the amount by which his regular pension would have exceeded his disability pension [Rotolo Chevrolet v. Superior Court (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 242, 248, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 283] .

One court has refused to treat uninsured motor vehicle insurance as a collateral source, instead considering the insurer as standing in the shoes of the uninsured tortfeasor [Waite v. Godfrey (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 760, 766-776, 163 Cal. Rptr. 881 ; see § 177.50[1]]. However, another court has criticized, in dicta, the reasoning of this case, stating that it used "suspect analysis and ill-considered data" [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Superior Court (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 174, 181, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 522] . In the view of the latter court, the focus of the collateral source rule must be on who paid for the insurance, not on whose acts triggered coverage by the policy [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Superior Court (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 174, 181-182, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 522 (rejecting argument that fidelity bond should not be considered collateral source because it represented payment made on account of conduct of joint tortfeasor, similar to uninsured motorist coverage)].

Some cases have stated the collateral source rule as applicable to gratuitious payments or gratuitiously provided services as well as to those provided pursuant to contract [see Fifield Manor v. Finston (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 632, 637, 7 Cal. Rptr. 377, 354 P.2d 1073 (citing cases)]. In at least one other case, a court permitted a plaintiff to recover the reasonable value of services provided gratuitously by his wife, without discussion of the collateral source rule [Rodriguez v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 626, 661-662, 151 Cal. Rptr. 399 (the court did note that payments made to plaintiff for nursing care by State Fund were deducted from jury award)]. However, the California Supreme Court has specifically reaffirmed its adherence to the collateral source rule only in those cases in which the collateral source is one for which the plaintiff has actually or constructively paid (such as insurance or pension benefits), or in which the collateral source will be recompensed from the plaintiff's tort recovery through subrogation or some other arrangement [Helfend v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1, 13-14, 84 Cal. Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61] .

At least one subsequent court of appeal opinion has rejected the argument that the Supreme Court in Helfend created an exception to the collateral source rule for gratuitous benefits if the injured party has incurred no expense, obligation, or liability [Arambula v. Wells (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1010, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 584] . Therefore, the court of appeal held that the plaintiff in the case before it was entitled to seek damages for lost wages, even though the plaintiff had been gratuitously paid his full weekly salary by his brother, who controlled the employing business, during a period when the plaintiff was unable to work [Arambula v. Wells (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1008, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 584; see also Smock v. State of California (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 883, 887-888, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 857 (collateral source rule applied to payment by law firm of partner's full salary during convalescence period, even if payment was considered gratuitous)] . The court, noting that the plaintiff had not promised to repay the gratuitous salary [see Arambula v. Wells (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1008, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 584] , concluded that the same public policy concerns that support application of the collateral source rule to receipt of insurance benefits support application of the doctrine to receipt of gratuitous charitable assistance, especially if the assistance is received from a family member. The court concluded that a tortfeasor should not be entitled to reap a benefit merely because a family member of the victim chose to provide monetary assistance [Arambula v. Wells (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1012-1014, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 584] . Thus, whether a truly gratuitious payment or service is a collateral source is currently open to question.

One court of appeal opinion has noted in dicta that collateral sources seem universally to involve payments that, if recovered in a tort action, would be characterized as special damages. The court questioned whether the collateral source rule should ever be applied to allow double recovery of general damages for pain and suffering [Waite v. Godfrey (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 760, 773-774, 163 Cal. Rptr. 881] . Nevertheless, another court has rejected such a limitation and invoked the collateral source rule to deny set off for general damages awarded in one action against a potential award of general damages in a second action [Kardly v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 479, 487, 255 Cal. Rptr. 40 (involving subsequent first-party insurance bad faith action after recovery against negligent driver in original action)].

The collateral source rule applies in legal malpractice actions, with the defendant attorney standing in the shoes of the underlying tortfeasor from whom recovery is impossible because of the malpractice. If the plaintiff's recovery would not be reduced with regard to the tortfeasor on account of the collateral source rule, it is not reduced with regard to the negligent attorney [see Norton v. Superior Court (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1750, 1758, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217] .

The collateral source rule is a rule of evidence as well as a rule of damages, and evidence of receipt of benefits from the collateral source is inadmissible unless relevant for purposes other than to reduce damages. However, even if arguably relevant for other purposes, it usually should be excluded under Evid. Code § 352 because its prejudicial impact outweighs its probative value [see Hrnjak v. Graymar, Inc. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 725, 729-734, 94 Cal. Rptr. 623, 484 P.2d 599] .

The fact that collateral source evidence may not be admissible at trial does not necessarily preclude discovery of the evidence; as long as the evidence sought in discovery is either admissible (regardless of whether it might be excluded at trial under Evid. Code § 352 or some other objection) or reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence, the evidence is likely to be subject to discovery [see Norton v. Superior Court (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1750, 1760-1762, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217] .

Often, the collateral source rule does not allow the plaintiff a double recovery because the collateral source will be reimbursed from the recovery through subrogation, lien rights, or some other arrangement [see Helfend v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1, 10-11, 84 Cal. Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61 ; see also § 177.54]. However, if the collateral source waives its right to subrogation, it inures to the benefit of the injured party, not the tortfeasor [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Superior Court (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 174, 184, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 522] .

For further discussion of the collateral source rule, see Levy, Golden, & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 53 (Matthew Bander).

[b] Medical Malpractice Actions

A statutory exception to the collateral source rule has been enacted that governs personal injury actions against health care providers based on professional negligence. The defendant in such an action for personal injury may introduce evidence of any amount payable as a benefit to the plaintiff as a result of the personal injury pursuant to the United States Social Security Act; any state or federal income disability or worker's compensation act; any health, sickness, or income-disability insurance; any accident insurance that provides health benefits or income disability coverage; and any contract or agreement of any group, organization, partnership, or corporation to provide, pay for, or reimburse the cost of medical, hospital, dental, or other health care services. However, the plaintiff may introduce evidence of any amount that the plaintiff has paid or contributed to secure his or her right to the insurance benefits concerning which the defendant has introduced evidence [Civ. Code § 3333.1(a); see Fein v. Permanente Med. Group (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 137, 175-178, 211 Cal. Rptr. 368, 695 P.2d 665 (upholding constitutionality of Civ. Code § 3333.1)].

The statute dispenses with the collateral source rule as a rule of evidence rather than as a rule of damages. It does not expressly prohibit receipt of the same damages from both the tortfeasor and the collateral source, but rather relies on the fact finder to exclude payments from the collateral source in computing damages to be recovered from the tortfeasor [see Brown v. Stewart (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 331, 336 n.2, 181 Cal. Rptr. 112] . The collateral source is then prohibited from recovering its payments from the plaintiff, either by subrogation rights or otherwise [Civ. Code § 3333.1(b)].

For further discussion of limitations on the recovery of damages in actions against health care providers, see Ch. 295, Hospitals .

Chapter 177 DAMAGES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Tort Damages

15-177 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 177.51

§ 177.51 Punitive Damages

[1] Generally

In a tort action, when it is proven by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, the plaintiff may recover, in addition to actual damages, damages for the sake of example, and by way of punishing the defendant [Civ. Code § 3294(a)].

Punitive damages are not available in a contract action. In the absence of an independent tort, punitive damages may not be awarded for breach of contract even if the defendant's conduct in breaching the contract was willful, fradulent, or malicious [Applied Equip. Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503, 516, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475, 869 P.2d 454 ; see, e.g., Brewer v. Premier Golf Properties, LP (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1243, 1255-1256, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 225 (punitive damages not available for violation of statutory provisions governing employee's right to unpaid wages and meal or rest breaks, as rights arose from employment contract)]. Even if a separate tort cause of action is alleged along with a breach of contract action, a punitive damage award is improper if the verdict is based only on the contract action [Myers Bldg. Indus., Ltd., v. Interface Techn., Inc. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 949, 960, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 242] .

The fact that exemplary or punitive damages are recoverable under Civ. Code § 3294(a) in addition to actual damages reflects the fact that they are mere incidents to a cause of action and can never constitute the basis thereof [All-W. Design, Inc. v. Boozer (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1212, 1222, 228 Cal. Rptr. 736] . Absent proof of the underlying cause of action, there can be no award of punitive damages [see Orient Handel v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 684, 697, 237 Cal. Rptr. 667 (underlying fraud verdict and punitive damages award reversed)].

It is the exclusive province of the jury to determine whether or not a plaintiff is entitled to punitive damages. Absent a waiver of trial by jury, punitive damages cannot be awarded by summary judgment even if undisputed evidence establishes that the defendant committed oppression, fraud, or malice and, therefore, that punitive damages are permissible under Civ. Code § 3294(a) [see Haines v. Parra (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1553, 1559-1561, 239 Cal. Rptr. 178 (fraud)].

In the absence of a statute, punitive damages are allowed only to the immediate person injured [People v. Superior Court (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 283, 287, 107 Cal. Rptr. 192, 507 P.2d 1400 ; see also § 177.51[11]].

[2] Purpose

The primary purposes of punitive damages are to punish wrongdoers and to deter the commission of wrongful acts [Devlin v. Kearny Mesa AMC/Jeep/Renault, Inc. (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 381, 387, 202 Cal. Rptr. 204] . In other words, punitive damages are addressed to the nature and gravity of the defendant's wrongful conduct, and they serve as an example or as a warning to others not to engage in such conduct. The object of punitive damages is to make the example as well as the punishment fit the offense [Wetherbee v. United Ins. Co. of Am. (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 266, 270, 95 Cal. Rptr. 678 ; see Castaic Clay Mfg. Co. v. Dedes (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 444, 450, 240 Cal. Rptr. 652] . In this way, punitive damages are distinguished from compensatory damages which have as their object the compensation of an injured person for his or her injury [Merlo v. Standard Life & Accident Ins. Co. (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 5, 20, 130 Cal. Rptr. 416] .

[3] Compared to Statutory Damages

Punitive damages should not be equated with various statutory damages awarded in situations in which the legislature has determined that damages in excess of compensatory or actual damages are appropriate. These statutory damages may take the form of penalties, which impose damages in an arbitrary sum regardless of actual damages suffered, or may provide for the doubling or trebling of the actual or compensatory damages found by the trier of fact [see, e.g., Civ. Code § 52 (damages up to three times actual damages, but no less than $1,000, for discrimination)]. Thus, although both punitive damages and statutory damages serve to motivate compliance with the law and punish wrongdoers, they are distinct legal concepts, one of which is entrusted to the fact finder and the other entrusted to the legislature. The standards applicable to punitive damages do not apply to these other statutory damage awards [Kizer v. County of San Mateo (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 139, 146-148, 279 Cal. Rptr. 318, 806 P.2d 1353 (statutory penalties need not be based on showing of harm to plaintiff, and may be recovered from public entity notwithstanding Gov. Code § 818); Beeman v. Burling (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1586, 1597-1598, 1601, 265 Cal. Rptr. 719 (defendant's wealth irrelevant to award of statutory damages for violation of rent control ordinance)].

If a statutory penalty is imposed for a wrongful act, it does not automatically preclude recovery of punitive damages in a tort action if the necessary malice or oppression is shown [Greenberg v. Western Turf Ass'n (1903) 140 Cal. 357, 363, 73 P. 1050 ; Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transp., Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 826, 268 Cal. Rptr. 856] . However, if the purpose of the penalty (for example, treble damages) is the same as that of punitive damages, the plaintiff cannot obtain a double recovery and must elect either the award of compensatory and punitive damages or the statutory damages [Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transp., Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 826, 268 Cal. Rptr. 856 ; Marshall v. Brown (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 408, 419, 190 Cal. Rptr. 392] . If the statutory penalty is mandatory, the plaintiff has an election of remedies only if punitive damages are recoverable under another theory of liability or cause of action [Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transp., Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 827, 268 Cal. Rptr. 856] . Although a plaintiff may be required to elect between punitive damages and a statutory penalty, this election is made after a verdict is returned and need not be made at the pleading stage [Clauson v. Superior Court (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1253, 1256, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

[4] Assignability of Punitive Damages Claim

Absent a statutory basis, punitive damages are generally allowed only to those directly injured by intentional tortious acts or omissions [Murphy v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 937, 942, 132 Cal. Rptr. 424, 553 P.2d 584] . Because of this rule, and because purely personal tort causes of action are not assignable in California, a claim for punitive damages is generally not assignable [Murphy v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 937, 942, 132 Cal. Rptr. 424, 553 P.2d 584] . If a single and indivisible cause of action is assigned, the assignor cannot thereafter sue for punitive and personal tort damages arising out of that cause of action, even though the assignee is also barred from recovering those damages [see Purcell v. Colonial Ins. Co. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 807, 814, 97 Cal. Rptr. 874] .

However, the result may be different if the plaintiff makes an assignment of his or her rights to another person but retains a reservation of the right to sue an insurer. In one case, for example, an insured assigned his right to bring an action against the insurer for failure to settle, including the right to sue for the amount of an excess verdict, but explicitly reserved the right to bring an action for physical injuries caused by the failure to settle. Under these circumstances, the insured was allowed to bring an action for punitive damages for himself, because of the reservation of the right to sue and because the suits were brought within the same action, thus protecting the defendant insurer from possible inconsistent judgments [Cain v. State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 794-796, 121 Cal. Rptr. 200] .

A receiver may also pursue a claim for punitive damages for the benefit of the receivership estate without constituting an impermissible assignment [see Baron v. Fire Ins. Exchange (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1184, 1194-1196, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 502] .

[5] Constitutionality

[a] Punitive Damages Awards Generally

Punitive damages imposed under California law have been upheld by courts against several constitutional challenges [see Roberts v. Ford Aerospace & Commc'ns Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 793, 802-804, 274 Cal. Rptr. 139 ; see also Maheu v. Hughes Tool Co. (9th Cir. 1978) 569 F.2d 459, 480 (statute not vague or overbroad); Fletcher v. Western Nat'l Life Ins. Co. (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 376, 404-405, 89 Cal. Rptr. 78 (terms "oppression," "fraud," and "malice" not unconstitutionally vague); Toole v. Richardson-Merrell Inc. (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 689, 719, 60 Cal. Rptr. 398 (statute not unconstitutional for lack of standards to measure punishment and monetary limits on award)]. Many of these cases were decided prior to 1980 and 1987 amendments that further defined terms and provided for proof by clear and convincing evidence (see § 177.51[6][a], [c]).

The United States Supreme Court has stated that unlimited discretion in a finder of fact in fixing punitive damages offends the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. However, as long as discretion is exercised within reasonable constraints, due process is satisfied [Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 111 S. Ct. 1032, 113 L. Ed. 2d 1, 20-21 ; cf. BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 574 116 S. Ct. 1589, 134 L. Ed. 2d 809 (award constitutionally excessive under specific circumstances of case)].

Sufficient discretion-limiting constraints may be found in a state's procedures and common law; statutory provisions are not required. Among the factors that support the constitutionality of punitive damages under due process standards are jury instructions explaining the nature andpurpose of punitive damages, trial court review for excessiveness, and the availability of appellate review under detailed substantive commmon-law standards. The application of these standards impose a meaningful constraint on the discretion of fact finders in awarding punitive damages [see Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip (1991) 499 U.S. 1, 111 S. Ct. 1032, 113 L. Ed. 2d 1, 20-22 (construing Alabama law); see also TXO Prod. v. Alliance Res. (1993) 509 U.S. 443, 462-466 113 S. Ct. 2711, 125 L. Ed. 2d 366 (procedure under West Virginia law did not violate defendant's due process rights); cf. Honda Motor Corp. v. Oberg (1994) 512 U.S. 415, 426-430, 114 S. Ct. 2331, 129 L. Ed. 2d 336 (Oregon law precluding determination on review of whether award is excessive in amount violated defendants' due process rights)]. Several California appellate courts have found that California procedures meet the test set forth in Haslip [see, e.g., Las Palmas Associates v. Las Palmas Center Associates (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1220, 1256-1259, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301 ; Liberty Transp., Inc. v. Harry W. Gorst Co. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 417, 441, 280 Cal. Rptr. 159 , disapproved on other grounds, Adams v. Murakami (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 105, 115-116, 284 Cal. Rptr. 318, 813 P.2d 1348] . However, it remains possible that California courts may find some state-law basis for requiring review of punitive-damages awards for excessiveness beyond that already employed.

In a later case, the U.S. Supreme Court held that a specific award of punitive damages imposed by a state court against an automobile manufacturer was "grossly excessive," and therefore violative of the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. The award of $2 million in punitive damages was based on the defendant automobile manufacturer's practice of not disclosing to consmers that a particular automobile had been damaged and repainted before it was sold as a new vehicle. Plaintiff, who had purchased such a "new" vehicle, was awarded $4,000 in compensatory damages (based on diminished value of the vehicle) and $4 million in punitive damages, later remitted by the Alabama Supreme Court to $2 million [BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 563-567, 116 S. Ct.1589, 134 L. Ed. 2d 809] .

In determining whether or not a particular award is excessive, the Court held that the review must focus on the scope of the state's legitimate interests in punishing the defendant and deterring it from further misconduct. This "legitimacy" determination precludes a state from punishing a defendant for conduct in other states that is lawful in those states [BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 572-573, 116 S. Ct. 1589, 134 L. Ed. 2d 809] . In addition, the Court enunciated three guideposts to be used in determining whether the defendant received fair notice of the severity of the penalty that could be imposed for misconduct [BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 574-585, 116 S. Ct. 1589, 134 L. Ed. 2d 809] :

- The degree of reprehensibility of the misconduct;

- The disparity between the harm or potential harm suffered by the plaintiff and the punitive damages award; and

- The difference between the award and the civil penalties authorized or imposed in comparable cases.
