divisible as community property after expiration of the term acquired with community funds or efforts [In re Marriage of Spengler (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 288, 293, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764 (citing Estate of Logan)], subject to consideration of the insured spouse's continued insurability. With respect to dollar coverage, it said that the insurance has no value after the term has ended without the insured having died. If the insured remains insurable, the right to renew the policy has no value because the insured could obtain comparable insurance for a comparable price in the open market. Thus, for a spouse who remains insurable, term insurance is community property only for the period beyond the date of separation for which community funds were used to pay the premium; but when the premiums for a new term have been paid from postseparation separate property earnings (and the spouse remains insurable), the policy must be confirmed to the insured as separate property. Nevertheless, it said that an exception arises if the insured spouse becomes uninsurable during a term paid with community funds, because the right to continued coverage on payment of future premiums is a valuable community asset for one who is uninsurable [Estate of Logan (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 319, 321, 325-326, 236 Cal. Rptr. 368 ; see In re Marriage of Elfmont (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1026, 1033-1034, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 590, 891 P.2d 136] . Accordingly, if the insured becomes uninsurable during a term paid with community funds, the right to future insurance coverage that cannot otherwise be purchased is a community asset to be divided on dissolution [In re Marriage of Spengler (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 288, 296, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764 (quoting from Logan and characterizing this statement as dictum); see also In re Marriage of Elfmont (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1026, 1034, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 590, 891 P.2d 136 (noting--without holding--that if spouse who is uninsurable dies during term purchased by exercising policy's renewal right, courts have held that the community has interest in insurance proceeds commensurate with its contributions to right of renewal; and stating that "[t]o provide for a former spouse's participation in [proceeds of a term life insurance policy] when premium payments from community funds have purchased policy renewal rights necessary to keep the insurance in force, may well be appropriate")].

However, in this court's view [Estate of Logan (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 319, 236 Cal. Rptr. 368] , the need to value the right to obtain continued coverage for the insurable spouse will rarely arise. If it does arise, expert testimony may be used to establish the value. The measure may be the actuarial present value of the proceeds payable under the policy, considering the shortened life expectancy, resulting from whatever has caused the uninsurability [Estate of Logan (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 319, 326 n.8, 236 Cal. Rptr. 368] .

A later (Third District) decision followed Estate of Logan, but only in agreeing that an employment-related group term policy is not a community asset beyond the expiration of the term acquired with community efforts. It disagreed with Estate of Logan on the effect of uninsurability of an insured spouse, by concluding that a policy's right of renewal without proof of current insurability is not a divisible community asset if the insured employee has no enforceable right to compel the employer to renew the policy. While a renewal right has potential value, the court reasoned, in the absence of a right by the insured to enforce that value, the renewal right is not "property," but a mere expectancy [In re Marriage of Spengler (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 288, 297-299, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 764] . Spengler only addressed group term policies concerning which an employee has no right to enforce renewal. It did not address the situation in which an insured becomes uninsurable after individually purchasing a term policy, nor the situation in which an employment or union contract requires an employer to provide group term insurance even if the insured becomes uninsurable [see Comment, 8 Cal. Fam. Law Monthly 469 (June 1992)].

[c] Division Permitted

On the other hand, some courts have held that term life insurance may be divisible as community property. The Fourth District, in In re Marriage of Gonzalez [In re Marriage of Gonzalez (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1021, 214 Cal. Rptr. 634] , held that term life insurance policies have an ascertainable value and may be divided on dissolution of marriage. The court analogized term life insurance to nonvested pension benefits and accrued vacation time and stated that the insurance should not be labeled a mere expectancy rather than divisible property. It rejected the earlier Lorenz case (§ 222.135[2][b]) as "simply incorrect" in the assertion that assets such as term life insurance have no economic value [In re Marriage of Gonzalez (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1021, 1024-1025, 214 Cal. Rptr. 634 ; see Bowman v. Bowman (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 148, 159-160, 217 Cal. Rptr. 174 (same appellate district reaffirmed and applied Gonzalez); (strongly criticized by Estate of Logan (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 319, 325, 236 Cal.Rptr. 368 for "incorrect conclusions"); cf. In re Marriage of Elfmont (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1026, 1034, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 590, 891 P.2d 136 (citing Bowman and Gonzalez in connection with characterizing insurance proceeds after an insured spouse has become uninsurable)]. To properly determine the value of a term life insurance policy, the trial court might examine several factors, such as the face value of the policy, the amount of the premium, the insured's life expectancy, whether the policy is convertible to whole life insurance, replacement cost, and when, if ever, the policy "vests" and is deemed fully paid [In re Marriage of Gonzalez (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1021, 1024-1025, 214 Cal. Rptr. 634 ("vesting" criticized in Estate of Logan (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 319, 326 n.8, 236 Cal. Rptr. 368)]. When apportioning community ad separate interests in term life insurance, the trial court must decide to what life insurance benefits, if any, the employed spouse would have been entitled had the employment terminated at the date of separation. That percentage, if any, will constitute the community property portion of the life insurance proceeds, and the nonemployed spouse's interest will be one half [Bowman v. Bowman (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 148, 160, 217 Cal. Rptr. 174] .

Gonzalez has been given the same limited retroactivity as the Supreme Court decision in In re Marriage of Brown [In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 851, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561] , which recognized nonvested pension rights as divisible community assets. Thus, Gonzalez will apply retroactively only when the property rights arising from the marriage have not yet been adjudicated, the adjudication is still subject to appellate review, or the trial court has expressly reserved jurisdiction to divide the term life insurance [Bowman v. Bowman (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 148, 160 n.10, 217 Cal. Rptr. 174 (criticized on other grounds by Estate of Logan (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 319, 325, 236 Cal. Rptr. 368)].

[3] Unauthorized Gifts of Community Insurance Benefits

[a] Right to Set Aside Gift

When insurance premiums are paid with community funds or the benefits are earned by the insured spouse during marriage, and the insured spouse designates someone else as the beneficiary, without receiving fair and reasonable value and without the spouse's consent, the surviving spouse may set aside the gift [see Fam. Code § 1100(b); Tyre v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 399, 404, 6 Cal. Rptr. 13, 353 P.2d 725] . An insured spouse may dispose of only one-half of the community property in a will, and thus, he or she may give only one-half of the community property to the named, nonspouse beneficiary [see former Prob. Code §§ 201, 202 (applicable only when decedent died before January 1, 1985); Prob. Code §§ 100, 6101(b), (c), 6103, 6401(a), (b), 6414 (applicable only when decedent died on or after January 1, 1985); cf. Cripps v. Life Ins. Co. of North America (9th Cir. 1992) 980 F. 2d 1261, 1263, 1267-1269 (without deciding on merits, appellate court remanded for determination of entitlement to life insurance proceeds as between surviving wife, who was legatee of proceeds under holographic will, and former wife, who was maintained as named policy beneficiary pursuant to divorce settlement)]. The surviving spouse may set aside such an unauthorized gift to the extent of his or her one-half community property interest [see Patillo v. Norris (1976) 65 Cal. App. 3d 209, 217, 135 Cal. Rptr. 210] . For additional discussion of the community property rights of a surviving spouse, see Ch. 122, Community Property .

[b] Insurance as Support Substitute Contrasted

No unauthorized gift of life insurance occurs when a court orders an insured spouse to change an insurance beneficiary designation to include a former spouse or child from a previous marriage as a beneficiary, as a form of support. Although the issue is unsettled of whether a community interest exists in an insured's right to change beneficiaries to a policy purchased with community funds, one court has suggested that any such purported community interest is limited to a spouse's right to avoid unauthorized gifts of community personal property. Thus, a surviving spouse ordinarily may not overturn a change of life insurance beneficiaries that was ordered by a court as a support substitute [see Fam. Code § 4360; In re Marriage of O'Connell (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 565, 571-573, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334] , for this is not a gift [see In re Marriage of O'Connell (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 565, 578-580, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334 (upholding award of two-thirds of insurance proceeds to former wife and child of prior marriage, and one-third to surviving spouse, who was policy beneficiary, pursuant to earlier court order that decedent change beneficiaries to include child and former wife); cf. Ins. Code § 10170(e) (right to change insurance beneficiary unless beneficiary's rights are irrevocable); In re Marriage of Bratton (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 791, 794, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86 (former wife could maintain policy on former husband's life, despite marital dissolution, when she had insurable interest at inception of policy during marriage; and husband lacked standing to contest her continued ownership of policy; characterization of policy was not in issue)].

[4] Military Life Insurance Policies

Military life insurance policies do not appear to be divisible as community property on marital dissolution or legal separation. The United States Supreme Court has held that federal law preempts state domestic relations law with respect to military life insurance policies. It ruled that a Maine court's imposition of a constructive trust on policy benefits, based on a divorce decree ordering a husband to maintain his military life insurance policy in favor of his children and formerwife, was preempted by the federal interest in granting the service member complete freedom to name a policy beneficiary [Ridgway v. Ridgway (1981) 454 U.S. 46, 56-57, 102 S. Ct. 49, 70 L. Ed. 2d 39] .

The Court also held that imposing a constructive trust on the policy proceeds would violate a federal statutory prohibition against attachment, levy, or seizure of the benefits. Although the case did not involve an assertion of community property interests in the policy, the Court held that federal law confers on the service member an absolute, personal right to designate the policy beneficiary, and that right is not subject to the interests of another, as is community property [Ridgway v. Ridgway (1981) 454 U.S. 46, 60, 102 S. Ct. 49, 70 L. Ed. 2d 39 ; see Wissner v. Wissner (1949) 338 U.S. 655, 658-661, 70 S. Ct. 398, 94 L. Ed. 424] .

Ridgway thus appears to preclude application of a California Supreme Court decision, which held that the federal object of securing a policyholder's choice as beneficiary is not harmed by awarding other community assets to the nonservice member spouse to offset his or her interest in the federal policy [In re Marriage of Milhan (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 765, 777-778, 166 Cal. Rptr. 533, 613 P.2d 812] .

The federal preemption of military life insurance policies contrasts with the treatment of policies issued under the Federal Employees' Group Life Insurance Program (EGLI), which can be divided as community property [see Carlson v. Carlson (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 474, 476-477, 113 Cal. Rptr. 722, 521 P.2d 1114 , cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1105 (1975)] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationInsurance BenefitsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewMilitary & Veterans LawVeteransBenefitsInsurance

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
1. Tangible And Intangible Assets In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.136

§ 222.136 Personal Injury Damages

[1] Characterization--General Status as Community Property

Personal injury damages from a cause of action that arises during marriage are a community asset, even if they are received after separation [see Fam. Code § 780; In re Marriage of Saslow (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 848, 857, 221 Cal. Rptr. 546, 710 P.2d 346 ; Estate of Powell (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 ; see also Fam. Code §§ 781(a), 2603(a)]. There are statutory exceptions to this rule, which provide, for example, that the damages are separate property if the cause of action arose while the parties were separated (§ 222.136[2]) [see Fam. Code § 781(a)].

Personal injury damages that are found to be community property are termed "community estate personal injury damages," and special rules apply to their division on marital dissolution or legal separation, as discussed in § 222.136[3] et seq. These assignment rules generally require the court to distribute such damages to the injured spouse [see Fam. Code § 2603; In re Marriage of Jackson (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 479, 483, 260 Cal. Rptr. 508 ; In re Marriage of Devlin (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 804, 808-810, 189 Cal. Rptr. 1] . Particular recoveries must be analyzed to determine whether they constitute "community estate personal injury damages" [see generally Fam. Code § 2603; see, e.g., In re Marriage of Jackson (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 479, 485-486, 260 Cal. Rptr. 508 (proceeds from uninsured motorist coverage, along with property purchased from those proceeds, were community estate personal injury damages)] For discussion of the definition of "community estate personal injury damages," see § 222.136[b].

[2] Exceptions

[a] In General

Money or other property received, or to be received, by a spouse in satisfaction of a judgment for damages for personal injuries, or pursuant to an agreement for the settlement or compromise of a claim for those damages, is the separate property of the injured spouse if the cause of action for the damages arose in the following circumstances [Fam. Code § 781(a)]:

(1) After entry of a judgment of marital dissolution or legal separation; or

(2) While either spouse, if he or she is the injured person, is living separate from the other other spouse.

However, if the uninjured spouse has paid expenses because of the personal injuries from his or her separate property or from community property, he or she is entitled to reimbursement of the separate or community property. The reimbursement should come from the separate property received by the injured spouse in connection with the injuries [Fam. Code § 781(b)]. This reimbursement rule, however, does not apply with respect to a worker's compensation permanent disability award received after a marital separation [In re Marriage of Fisk (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1698, 1706, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95] . For discussion of workers' compensation awards, see § 222.137.

A further exception to the general rule that personal injury damages are community property [Fam. Code § 780] applies when one spouse sues the other for personal injuries based on a cause of action arising during the marriage. In such a case, all money or other property paid by the tortfeasor spouse to the injured spouse in satisfaction of a damages judgment or pursuant to a settlement or compromise of the claim is the separate property of the injured spouse [Fam. Code § 781(c)]. A judgment for civil damages for domestic violence obtained by one spouse against the other before entry of final judgment in a proceeding for dissolution or legal separation may be enforced against the abusive spouse's share of community property [Fam. Code § 2603.5].

For example, a wife's recovery in her settlement of her legal malpractice action against the couple's former attorney was held to be her separate property, even though two necessary elements of her cause of action--duty and breach--occurred during marriage, when she did not suffer any loss or injury untilafter separation, and when it was the husband's actions, with the attorney's aid, in transferring funds offshore that resulted in the injury the wife claimed in the malpractice action. Although the attorney was negligent in representing the wife, it was the husband who benefited from that negligence. Under these circumstances, it would be inequitable for the husband to benefit by sharing in the wife's settlement proceeds [see In re Marriage of Klug (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1389, 1393-1403, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 327] .

[b] Imputed Negligence Problem Solved

Under prior law, the "imputed negligence rule" barred recovery by an injured spouse for injuries inflicted by a third person when the plaintiff's spouse was contributorily negligent [see Zaragosa v. Craven (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 315, 321, 202 P.2d 73] . The Legislature statutorily abolished the imputation of negligence between spouses insofar as it is based exclusively on their marital status [Fam. Code § 783 (continuing former Civ. Code § 5112)]. The statute provides that if a married person is injured by the negligent or wrongful act or omission of a person other than his or her spouse, the fact that the negligent or wrongful act or omission of the injured person's spouse was a concurring cause of the injury is not a defense in a personal injury action unless it would be a defense if the marriage did not exist [Fam. Code § 783; see Estate of Kirby (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 288, 291, 130 Cal. Rptr. 691] .

[3] Award on Division of Community Estate

[a] Assignment to Injured Party

In proceedings for marital dissolution or legal separation, amounts that constitute "community estate personal injury damages" must be assigned to the party who suffered the injuries unless the court, after taking into account the economic condition and needs of each party, the time that has elapsed since the recovery of the damages or the accrual of the cause of action, and all other facts of the case, determines that the interests of justice require another disposition. In such a case, the damages must be assigned to the parties in such proportions as the court determines to be just, except that at least one half of the damages must be assigned to the party who suffered the injuries [Fam. Code § 2603(b)].

Fam. Code § 2603 is designed to ensure that, other than in exceptional circumstances, community estate personal injury damages, or the bulk thereof, will be awarded to the injured spouse and that under no circumstances will the injured spouse receive less than one-half of the damages. On the other hand, the statute gives the court discretion in exceptional circumstances to assign community estate personal injury damages in such proportions as the court determines to be just, subject to the limitation that not less than one-half be awarded to the injured spouse [see In re Marriage of Morris (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 823, 827, 189 Cal. Rptr. 80] .

[b] "Community Estate" Damages Defined

"Community estate personal injury damages," as used in Fam. Code § 2603, means all money or other property received or to be received by a person in satisfaction of a judgment for damages for his or her personal injuries or pursuant to an agreement for the settlement or compromise of a claim for the damages, if the cause of action for the damages arose during marriage but is not separate property as defined in Fam. Code § 781, unless the money or other property has been commingled with other assets of the community estate [Fam. Code § 2603(a); cf. In re Marriage of Jackson (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 479, 483, 260 Cal. Rptr. 508 (when injured spouse received proceeds from uninsured motorist insurance, the proceeds are "community estate personal injury damages," despite existence of pending, unliquidated claim against uninsured motorist)].

Generally, "commingling" is a term of art used to describe the mixture of separate property or funds with community property or funds. As used in Fam. Code § 2603, however, "commingling" clearly refers to the mixture of community estate personal injury damages with other community assets into one indistinguishable, amorphous mass. Thus, the only time proceeds from a personal injury award lose their character as community estate personal injury damages is, in the absence of an express agreement, when such proceeds have been commingled with other community property and it is impossible to trace the source of the property or funds [see Fam. Code § 2603(a); In re Marriage of Devlin (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 804, 810, 189 Cal. Rptr. 1 ; In re Marriage of Mason (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 215, 225, 155 Cal. Rptr. 350] . For discussion of commingling of community and separate property, see Ch. 122, Community Property . For discussion of the characterization of personal injury damages as separate property, see § 222.136[2].

[c] Division of Other Community Property

Fam. Code § 2603 does not specify how the other community property of the parties should be divided after the community estate personal injury damages have been assigned to the injured spouse. Two possibilities follow: (1) to divide the remaining property equally, which will result in an unequal division of the community property in favor of the injured spouse; or (2) to offset as much as possible the award of personal injury damages to one spouse by awarding more than half of the remaining community property to the other spouse. Despite this uncertainty, the first method seems to be fairer and consistent with Fam. Code § 2600, which indicates that Fam. Code § 2603 applies notwithstanding the equal division requirement [see Fam. Code § 2600 (general provision for exceptions to equal division)].

Fam. Code § 2603 vests the trial court with broad discretion to distribute personal injury damages on dissolution, subject to the limitation that not less thanone-half be awarded to the injured spouse. Factors that the court might consider include duration of marriage after injuries occurred, effect of injuries on the noninjured spouse, and whether a major portion if not the entire award is necessary to "make whole" the injured spouse [In re Marriage of Jacobson (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 465, 474, 207 Cal. Rptr. 512] . Thus, courts have upheld an award of all personal injury damages to the injured party, even though the award resulted in a substantially unequal division of the community property [In re Marriage of Morris (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 823, 828, 189 Cal. Rptr. 80 ; In re Marriage of Mason (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 215, 222, 155 Cal. Rptr. 350 ; see In re Marriage of Jacobson (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 465, 474, 207 Cal. Rptr. 512] .

Notwithstanding the general rules for characterization and division of retrement and pension benefis set forth in the Family Code, a spouse is entitled to an award of all of his or her retirement and pension benefits if he or she is the victim of a murder attempt by the other spouse [See Fam. Code § 782.5]. For further discussion, see § 222.77.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationPersonal Injury AwardsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
1. Tangible And Intangible Assets In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.137

§ 222.137 Workers' Compensation Benefits

Workers' compensation benefits have traditionally been characterized under the community property system by analogy to personal injury damages [see Fam. Code §§ 780, 781; In re Marriage of McDonald (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 509, 512-513, 125 Cal. Rptr. 160 ; see § 222.136], rather than by analogy to earnings or retirement pay. Thus, workers' compensation payments made during marriage are community property [see Northwestern Redwood Co. v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1920) 184 Cal. 484, 486, 194 P. 31 ; In re Marriage of Robinson (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 682, 684-686, 126 Cal. Rptr. 779 ; Estate of Simoni (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 339, 344, 33 Cal. Rptr. 845 ; see also In re Marriage of Jones (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 457, 464 n.7, 119 Cal. Rptr. 108, 531 P.2d 420 (postdissolution military disability pay)].

However, courts have begun characterizing workers' compensation benefits by analogy to disability benefits rather than to personal injury benefits, and have examined the purpose of the payments to determine whether compensation received by an injured spouse is community or separate property [see Raphael v. Bloomfield (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 617, 622, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 583 (courts in majority of community property states examine purpose of postdissolution military disability pay and postseparation worker's compensation awards); see also In re Marriage of Fisk (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1698, 1701, 1705, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95 (cases construing "purpose" of disability pension do not undermine cases recognizing workers' compensation permanent disability award received after separation is injured spouse's separate property); In re Marriage of Saslow (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 848, 857, 221 Cal. Rptr. 546, 710 P.2d 346 (discussing significant 1979 amendments to law governing personal injury damages and "purpose" approach to disability benefits); see § 222.180[3]]. As a result, workers' compensation benefits received by an injured spouse after separation or dissolution have been held to be the injured spouse's separate property [In re Marriage of McDonald (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 509, 513, 125 Cal. Rptr. 160 ; see In re Marriage of Fisk (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1698, 1701, 1703, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95] .

As one court explained, a workers' compensation permanent disability award received after separation compensates the injured person for future loss of earning capacity, and is that person's separate property. Thus, the personal injury damages statutes [see Fam. Code §§ 780, 781] are inapplicable, and the injured person's spouse is not entitled to reimbursement from the permanent disability award for any community property funds used to pay expenses that resulted from the injury that occurred during the marriage [In re Marriage of Fisk (1992) 2 Cal.App.4th 1698, 1701, 1703, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95 (construing statutes prior to passage of Family Code)].

Using similar reasoning, another court has held that a lump sum permanent disability award received before separation is the injured spouse's separate property to the extent that the award is meant to compensate for the injured spouse's diminished earning capacity or medical expenses after separation [Raphael v. Bloomfield (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 617, 623, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 583] . The court stated that there was no reason to treat a lump sum permanent disability award differently based on whether it was received before or after separation, because (1) the timing of the receipt was unrelated to the purpose of the award, and (2) the noninjured spouse would receive a windfall if an award received the day before separation were deemed to be community property [Raphael v. Bloomfield (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 617, 623-624, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 583] . However, the same court also held that any portion of a permanent disability award received before separation that is intended to compensate for the injured spouse's reduced earnings during marriage or for injury-related expenses paid with community funds, is properly characterized as community property [Raphael v. Bloomfield (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 617, 624, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 583] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationWorkers' Compensation BenefitsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
1. Tangible And Intangible Assets In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.138

§ 222.138 Qui Tam Actions

A qui tam action is a type of private attorney general lawsuit that permits an individual to sue to enforce a public statutory right and retain a portion of the moneys recovered thereby. Although a qui tam plaintiff does not "own" the cause of action in the same sense that plaintiffs can own conventional causes of action, the money generated by the action that is ultimately awarded to the plaintiff is clearly property. Correspondingly, the right to that award is also capable of ownership--a contingent future interest. Thus, when a qui tam action is filed during marriage and before a couple's separation, it is divisible communityproperty [Biddle v. Biddle (In re Biddle) (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 396, 398, 400, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 569] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewGovernmentsState & Territorial GovernmentsClaims By & AgainstLabor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityFalse Claims ActCoverage & DefinitionsQui Tam Actions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
1. Tangible And Intangible Assets In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.139

§ 222.139 Social Security Benefits

A spouse's interest in federal Social Security old age and survivor's benefits is separate property that is not divisible on dissolution of marriage [In re Marriage of Cohen (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 836, 843, 164 Cal. Rptr. 672 ; In re Marriage of Hillerman (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 334, 345, 167 Cal. Rptr. 240 ; In re Marriage of Nizenkoff (1976) 65 Cal. App. 3d 136, 139, 135 Cal. Rptr. 189 ; In re Marriage of Kelley (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 82, 95-99, 134 Cal. Rptr. 259] . The Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. § 301 et seq.) creates neither a contract nor property right, but only a public benefit that may be reduced or altered so long as Congress has a rational basis for doing so [see 42 U.S.C. § 1304; In re Marriage of Nizenkoff (1976) 65 Cal. App. 3d 136, 139, 135 Cal. Rptr. 189] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
1. Tangible And Intangible Assets In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.140

§ 222.140 Stock

[1] Court's Discretion in Awarding Stock to One Party--Overview

Stock is subject to the general rules of characterization applicable to other assets of the parties [see Ch. 122, Community Property]. When stock is a community estate asset it may be subject to one of the special exceptions to equal division that is authorized by statute, the "single asset proviso," which is discussed in § 222.71 et seq. [see Fam. Code § 2601]. Courts have applied the "single asset proviso" in numerous cases to find that economic circumstances warrant special treatment of stock of a closely held corporation [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Clark (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 417, 420-421, 145 Cal. Rptr. 602] , or of publicly traded stock owned by the parties [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Connolly (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 590, 603, 153 Cal. Rptr. 423, 591 P.2d 911] .

Accordingly, when a trial court divides community property stock in proceedings for marital dissolution or legal separation, it may be proper to award all the stock to one spouse with appropriate compensation to the other spouse, provided the overall division is equitable. The trial court has broad discretion to fashion an equitable division of the community property [see In re Marriage of Connolly (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 590, 603, 153 Cal. Rptr. 423, 591 P.2d 911] .

Two additional, general considerations regarding stock concern the disclosures spouses must make to one another after separation about the extent or value of their holdings, and degree of discovery that is otherwise available about stock holdings. For discussion of general postseparation duties of disclosure between spouses, see § 222.36. Regarding discovery of matters related to publicly traded stock, the policies and requirements found in state and federal law that favor broad disclosure of matters concerning such stock may work to the benefit of a spouse seeking discovery. Nevertheless, publicly traded stock may be subject to federal securities regulations that preempt state law. Thus, when applicable, federal law may restrict the exchange of financial information regarding stocks, and may effect the manner and timing of division of the assets themselves [see In re Marriage of Reuling (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1428, 1435-1437, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 726 (value of stock and stock options was affected by federal action involving securities trading violations)]. Similarly, with respect to closely held stock, third party privacy interests may limit the exchange of financial information about such stock [see Schnabel v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 704, 714, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200, 854 P.2d 1117 (spouse's need for discovery of records of closely held corporation must be balanced against privacy interests of third party shareholder)]. However, at least one court has held that there is no legal basis for applying laws pertaining to the sales of securities to a division of stock on marital dissolution [D'Elia v. D'Elia (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 415, 427, 432, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 324 (California's securities laws do not apply to agreements between husband and wife dividing community property)].

[2] Application to Closely Held Stock

[a] In General

Courts generally treat a block of stock as a single asset, even though shares of stock frequently are highly fungible and therefore easily divided in kind [see In re Marriage of Behrens (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 562, 570, 187 Cal. Rptr. 200 (common stock in family corporation); In re Marriage of Brigden (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 380, 392-393, 392 n.6, 145 Cal. Rptr. 716 (publicly traded stock)].

A court is not compelled, however, to divide shares of common stock in kind [In re Marriage of House (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 434, 440, 165 Cal. Rptr. 145 (common stock of closely-held business)]. Courts will examine the circumstances in determining whether an award of all stock in a closely held corporation should be made to one party or some other disposition is appropriate [In re Marriage of Behrens (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 562, 570-572, 187 Cal. Rptr. 200 (record revealed no economic circumstances compelling award of entire block of stock to husband); In re Marriage of House (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 434, 439-440, 165 Cal. Rptr. 145 (award to husband of block of stock in closely-held business and to wife of equalizing note was proper); In re Marriage of Clark (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 417, 421, 145 Cal. Rptr. 602 (trial court did not abuse discretion in finding that division of stock in kind would impair community business, which was principal asset)]. For further discussion, see § 222.131[1].

[b] Publicly Traded Stock

Courts have also interpreted the "single asset proviso" [see Fam. Code § 2601] in the context of dividing publicly traded stock. Although it is possible to establish the requisite showing for an award to one spouse of the entire amount of stock,such a showing may be more difficult to make. For example, one court reversed an award of a block of publicly traded stock to a husband. It found that when stock is traded on a national exchange and its possession is merely helpful, "economic circumstances" do not warrant the award of the entire block to one spouse. The stock was subject to division without impairment and both spouses had economic concerns that caused them to desire it [In re Marriage of Brigden (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 380, 392-393, 145 Cal. Rptr. 716] . Also, even assuming that economic circumstances warranted the court's division pursuant to statute, the spouses did not receive property of substantially equal value as required by the statute. The court noted that no award was made to the wife to offset the award of stock to the husband. Moreover, the judgment awarding the stock was inequitable in terms of the financial position in which it placed the parties, the security they were given, and their tax consequences [In re Marriage of Brigden (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 380, 393-394, 145 Cal. Rptr. 716] .

In contrast, the California Supreme Court held that a trial court did not abuse its discretion in awarding a block of high-risk publicly-traded stock to a husband with an equalizing note to the wife instead of dividing the stock in kind. Strict in-kind division can sometimes cause, rather than avoid, financial inequities. A spouse with high income may be better able to afford to retain high-risk assets than an unemployed spouse wholly dependent on spousal support [In re Marriage of Connolly (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 590, 602-603, 153 Cal. Rptr. 423, 591 P.2d 911 (distinguishing In re Marriage of Brigden (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 380, 145 Cal. Rptr. 716)].

[3] Valuation

[a] Publicly Traded Stock

In general, stock, like other assets, is to be valued at fair market value. In the case of publicly traded stock, the market value of stock actively traded on a stock exchange may be ascertained by verifying the closing price for the particular stock or bond as of the day before the hearing or trial, assuming that this is as near as practicable to the time of trial [see Fam. Code § 2552(a); see also In re Marriage of Reuling (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1428, 1435, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 726 (stocks valued at time of trial, even though value was adversely affected by federal action regarding trading violations)]. Unlisted stocks and bonds may require appraisal for valuation.

[b] Closely Held Stock

Valuation of a closely held stock may be at issue when the spouses own stock in a corporation operated by some third party, or, more usually, when they own stock in a family business or professional practice [see, e.g., Schnabel v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 704, 708-710, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200, 854 P.2d 1117 (involving discovery of financial records of closely held corporation); cf. In re Marriage of Nichols (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 661, 666, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13 (involving purchase of shares in professional law corporation)]. Determining the value of closely held stock frequently proves difficult because of the lack of an established market for it. Various methods of ascertaining fair market value have been developed and are utilized by appraisers, such as the "rule of thumb" or "the gross income multiplier" method, the "comparable sales" method, and the "price-earnings ratio" method. Courts have severely criticized the use of the "price-earnings ratio" method, which uses prices paid for publicly traded stock to establish the value of closely held stock. A trial court may not rely exclusively on the opinion of an expert to establish market value when that opinion is based on the price-earnings ratio method [see In re Marriage of Hewitson (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 874, 885-886, 191 Cal. Rptr. 392] . When fair market value cannot be ascertained, "investment value" methods of valuation generally are acceptable. These include, for example, the "capitalization of earnings" method, the "capitalization of dividends" method, and the "book value" method [see In re Marriage of Hewitson (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 874, 881, 881 ns.3-5, 191 Cal. Rptr. 392] . Many factors are utilized in determining the value of closely held stock under these various methods, and only certain of the factors apply to each method.

For a related discussion of dividing community interests in a business or professional practice, see § 222.131 et seq.

[c] Consideration of Tax Consequences

Furthermore, although dispositions of property on marital dissolution are now less prone to income taxation (see Ch. 227, Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution), when an immediate and specific tax consequence results from an award of stock to one of the parties, the trial court is required to consider the tax liability in its division of assets and liabilities of the community estate [see In re Marriage of Fonstein (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 738, 747-751, 131 Cal. Rptr. 873, 552 P.2d 1169 ; In re Marriage of Nelson (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 150, 156, 222 Cal. Rptr. 790 ; In re Marriage of Clark (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 417, 145 Cal. Rptr. 602] . Divisions of stock that do not take account of such tax consequences will be held improper [see In re Marriage of Clark (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 417, 422-423, 145 Cal. Rptr. 602] . Courts are not required to speculate, however, about future actions of a party in relation to stock [In re Marriage of Clark (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 417, 423, 145 Cal. Rptr 602 ; see In re Marriage of Fonstein (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 738, 749, 131 Cal. Rptr. 873, 552 P.2d 1169 ; see also Weinberg v. Weinberg (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 557, 566, 63 Cal. Rptr. 13, 432 P.2d 709] .

For further discussion of valuing stock on marital dissolution or legal separation, see Kirland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed., Ch. 22 (Matthew Bender). For further discussion of tax consequences of dissolution, see Ch. 227, Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationStocksFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportTaxation

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
1. Tangible And Intangible Assets In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 222.141-222.159

[Reserved]

§§ 222.141[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
2. Contractual, Survivor, And Related Employment Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.160

§ 222.160 Compensation Other Than Salary, Including Rights Under Express Contracts

[1] Distinguishing Separate and Community Interests in General

In general, rights to nonsalary compensation arising from an employment relationship, including rights under an express contract, are analogous to pension rights, and when the right to payment is earned during marriage, they are community property subject to equal division, even though they may be contingent on future events [see Fam. Code § 2550; In re Marriage of Lehman (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 169, 179, 183, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825, 955 P.2d 451 ; In re Marriage of Skaden (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 679, 687-689, 139 Cal. Rptr. 615, 566 P.2d 249 ; In re Marriage of Fonstein (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 738, 746, 131 Cal. Rptr. 873, 552 P.2d 1169 ; In re Marriage of Horn (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 540, 547-548, 226 Cal. Rptr. 666 ; see In re Marriage of Lawson (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 446, 450-452, 256 Cal. Rptr. 283 ; In re Marriage of Vanderbeek (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 224, 232-233, 222 Cal. Rptr. 832 ; for discussion of pension rights, see § 222.180 et seq.].

However, some rights are clearly the employee's separate property, and therefore are not divisible on marital dissolution or legal separation. Analysis of the right involved is required to determine its characterization, as discussed in § 222.160[2]. For discussion of characterizing salaries and other earnings in general, see Ch. 122, Community Property .

[2] Termination Pay, Severance Pay, and Related Benefits

[a] Consideration of Purpose of Payment

In characterizing termination pay, severance pay, and related employee benefits, courts look beyond the label given to the benefits and examine their purpose in relation to when the right to the benefits accrues. The benefits constitute a community asset only to the extent that an employee accrues a right to them during marriage and before a spousal separation, and this factor is paramount in the analysis. The motive of the employer in providing the benefits is irrelevant [In re Marriage of Lehman (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 169, 180, 186, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825, 955 P.2d 451] . Termination or similar pay from an employer received by a spouse after separation is analogous to disability pay [§

222.180[3]] and workers' compensation [see § 222.137] in that it is compensation for a present or future loss of earnings. It is generally the separate property of the spouse receiving it, as discussed in § 222.160[2][b][ii] [In re Marriage of Wright (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 342, 344-345, 189 Cal. Rptr. 336 ; see In re Marriage of Steinberger (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1449, 1462, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 521 ; Hanson v. Gram (In re Gram) (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 859, 862, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 792 ; In re Marriage of Lawson (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 446, 450-452, 256 Cal. Rptr. 283 ; In re Marriage of DeShurley (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 992, 994, 255 Cal. Rptr. 150 ; In re Marriage of Flockhart (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 240, 243, 173 Cal. Rptr. 818] . However, termination or similar pay received after separation that is based on a contract between employer and employee and that represents deferred compensation for services previously rendered during marriage and before separation is community property, as discussed below [In re Marriage of Skaden (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 679, 687-688, 139 Cal. Rptr. 615, 566 P. 2d 249 ; see In re Marriage of Lawson (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 446, 450-452, 256 Cal. Rptr. 283] .

[b] Deferred Compensation for Services Rendered as Community Property

[i] In General

Benefits to be received by an employee after separation from his or her spouse and that represent deferred compensation for services previously rendered during marriage and before separation are generally characterized as community property [In re Marriage of Lehman (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 169, 179, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825, 955 P.2d 451 ; (citing In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 841-842, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561)]. Courts have considered a number of types of benefits in the reported cases, including, for example, severance pay and early retirement benefits. Because the cases have not been consistent, however, the guiding principle should be the fundamental rule that benefits constitute a community asset only to the extent that an employee accrues a right to them during marriage and before a spousal separation, with the employer's motive in providing the benefits being irrelevant [In re Marriage of Lehman (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 169, 179-180, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825, 955 P.2d 451] . Examination of the leading reported cases in this area is helpful to gain a more complete understanding of the courts' characterization of benefits.

For example, severance pay to which a football player had an absolute contractual right was found to be a community asset [In re Marriage of Horn (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 540, 547-548, 226 Cal. Rptr. 666] . This type of pay was found analogous to the termination benefits in an earlier leading case [In re Marriage of Skaden (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 679, 139 Cal. Rptr. 615, 566 P.2d 249] , because of a player's absolute right to payment, and it was a form of deferred compensation for past services [In re Marriage of Horn (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 540, 547-548, 226 Cal. Rptr. 666] . Note, however, that severance pay has frequently been found to be separate property, as discussed in § 222.160[2][b][i].

With respect to early retirement benefits, if an enhancement is added toretirement benefits that are themselves community property, the benefits, as enhanced, should also be community property, irrespective of the employer's motive in providing the enhancement. To the extent that the underlying benefits are partially separate and partially community in nature, the benefits, as enhanced, will follow that apportionment (between separate and community). Thus, for example, in In re Marriage of Lehman, the Supreme Court held that enhanced early retirement benefits under a defined benefit pension plan were community property to the same extent as an employee spouse's basic retirement benefits, even though the enhancement was added years after a married couple separated and divorced. The right to share in an increased benefit--in this case, "[a] stream of income that ... begins to flow on retirement, as that stream is then defined," derives from the right to share in the basic benefit; and to the extent that the basic benefit was earned during marriage and before separation, the benefit, as enhanced, will be community. In apportioning the community and separate property shares in such a case, putative years of service credited to the employee should not be added to any formula (such as the "time rule") that is used to divide the benefits [In re Marriage of Lehman (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 169, 177, 187-188, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825, 955 P.2d 451 , disapproving, to extent contrary, Hanson v. Gram (In re Gram) (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 859, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 792 ; see In re Marriage of Davis (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1007, 1015-1017, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 220 (enhanced benefits from policeman's "Deferred Retirement Option Plan" constituted community property)].

Similarly, with respect to an early retirement benefit available to certain partners between the ages of 56 and 62 and calculated on the partner's earnings, the extent to which the right to the early retirement benefit accrued during marriage before separation, was held to be a community asset. When, among other factors, all 10 years of qualifying employment occurred before the parties' separation, and the early retirement benefit was derived from a contractual right acquired during the marriage, the benefit was characterized as community property [In re Marriage of Drapeau (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1086, 1093-1095, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 6] .

By contrast, when the right to a purported "early retirement" benefit did not accrue during an employee's marriage, an appellate court deemed it to be the employee spouse's separate property, characterizing it as a severance benefit, as discussed in § 222.160[2][b][i] [see In re Marriage of Frahm (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 536, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 31 ; see also In re Marriage of Steinberger (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1449, 1469-1471, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 521] . For a general discussion of dividing nonmatured retirement benefits, see § 222.183[1].

[ii] Compensation for Present/Future Loss of Earnings as Separate Property

In characterizing severance pay and similar termination benefits received after a spousal separation, courts have utilized the principle that if the pay is compensation for present or future loss of earnings, and not for services previously performed, it generally is the employee spouse's separate property [see Hanson v. Gram (In re Gram)(1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 859, 862, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 792] .

In characterizing the benefit, no one factor is determinative, and the court must consider all relevant circumstances. Courts have not considered a tie between the benefit amount and the number of years of employment as necessarily indicative of the character of the benefit [In re Marriage of Frahm (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 536, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 31] . Thus, for example, an appellate court found that, although the severance pay at issue was partially based on years of employment it should be characterized as separate property, when (1) the entitlement to the pay was derived from a court order, rather than being based on a contract right, (2) it represented an employee's option between returning to work and accepting payment for giving up the right to return to work, and (3) it was only incidentally based on the number of years of service. The employee spouse had no absolute right to payment because he would not have received the pay if he had returned to work. The appellate court found that the severance pay was present compensation for loss of future earnings, not deferred compensation for prior services [In re Marriage of DeShurley (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 992, 995-996, 255 Cal. Rptr. 150] .

Similarly, when a former spouse's postdissolution employment separation allowance was intended as future compensation during his employment transition period, it was found to be his separate property. The pay at issue did not involve a contractual right to deferred compensation. Separate-property characterization was proper because (1) the right to participate in the separation plan was not absolute, (2) the allowance did not arise from any employment agreement with the involved employer, and (3) its purpose was to compensate the spouse for loss of future earnings and living expenses while seeking new employment. This characterization would not change simply because the amount of the allowance was based, in part, on the longevity of the spouse's employment and that the separation plan was subject to ERISA [In re Marriage of Lawson (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 446, 453-454, 256 Cal. Rptr. 283] .

A severance benefit mislabeled as a lump sum "early retirement benefit" that was offered as an incentive for an employee to leave the work force was, nevertheless, correctly characterized as an employee's separate property, despite some correlation between the amount of the benefit and length of employment. Although the appellate court in that case based its reasoning, in part, on the irrelevant fact that the payment "resulted solely from [the employer's] beneficence" it correctly determined that the right to the benefit did not accrue during the employee's marriage and before a marital separation [In re Marriage of Frahm (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 536, 542-545, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 31 (construing GTE's 1993 Voluntary Separation Incentive Program); In re Marriage of Lehman (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 169, 182 n.6, 74 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 825, 955 P.2d 451 (approving overall approach of Frahm, but indicating that issue of "employer's beneficence" was of "no consequence here")]. This holding has been otherwise cited by the Supreme Court for the soundness of its reasoning, with respect to its following of principles laid down in In re Marriage of Brown [In re Marriage of Lehman (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 169, 183, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825, 955 P.2d 451 ; see In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561] .

A severance package negotiated after an employee has been terminated may also be separate property. In one case, for example, an employee was terminated for cause and would have received nothing under her employment contract, but she negotiated for a severance package at the time of her termination by agreeing to waive certain legal rights against her employer. The court found that the severance was her separate property because it was a new right acquired after separation and did not accrue during the marriage [In re Marriage of Steinberger (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1449, 1463-1464, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 521] .

[c] Division

The proper division of nonsalary compensation and other rights in future employment benefits that are determined to be community property will be left to the trial court's sound discretion, exercised in light of the particular circumstances of the case. Essentially, the court may use any of the division methods available for dividing community interests in retirement benefits [see § 222.182[1] et seq.]. Thus, for example, the court may divide the benefits in kind between the spouses or award the benefits entirely to one spouse with an equal offsetting award (cash out) to the other spouse [see In re Marriage of Skaden (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 679, 688, 139 Cal. Rptr. 615, 566 P.2d 249 ; In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 847, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561] .

As with pension rights, rights to other benefits derived from employment relationships, including express contracts between employer and employee, are not considered mere expectancies. They are subject to the community property laws when the employee's right to receive contract benefits is subject only to conditions within the employee's control [Waite v. Waite (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 461, 472, 99 Cal. Rptr. 325, 492 P.2d 13, overruled on other grounds by In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561; In re Marriage of Fonstein (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 738, 745-746, 131 Cal. Rptr. 873, 552 P.2d 1169] . This rule has been applied to situations that involve the following:

(1) A law partner's contractual right to receive payments on voluntary withdrawal from his firm [In re Marriage of Fonstein (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 738, 745-746, 131 Cal. Rptr. 873, 552 P.2d 1169] ;

(2) The right of an insurance agent after termination of his relationship with a particular insurance company, to receive benefits based on the amount of premiums received after termination from policies such agent sold prior to termination [In re Marriage of Skaden (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 679, 685-688, 139 Cal. Rptr. 615, 566 P.2d 249] ;

(3) The absolute right of a football player to receive severance pay after leaving football, based on the number of seasons played in a professional football league [In re Marriage of Horn (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 540, 547-548, 226 Cal. Rptr. 666] ;

(4) The right of an employee to receive an enhanced early retirement benefit that was offered as an incentive to voluntarily terminate employement [see In re Marriage of Lehman (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 169, 185-186, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825, 955 P.2d 451] ; and

(5) The special features of a consulting agreement between a "key employee" and a corporate employer that accrued during marriage and before separation, including provisions for certain debt retirement of a loan made to him by the corporation [see In re Marriage of Vanderbeek (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 224,

232-233, 222 Cal. Rptr. 832 (special features of employee's agreement with respect to debt retirement that were accrued while the parties lived together had a community value; thus, court upheld trial court's allowance of credit of $85,000 to community for the agreement)].

[3] Employee Stock Options

[a] Characterization in General

Stock options may be considered as employment benefits that are alternatives to fixed salaries and that are analogous to pensions and retirement plans [see In re Marriage of Hug (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 780, 785, 201 Cal. Rptr. 676] . Fringe benefits such as stock options are community property to the extent they are earned by the time, skill, and efforts of a spouse during marriage [see In re Marriage of Hug (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 780, 791, 201 Cal. Rptr. 676 ; see also In re Marriage of Harrison (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1216, 1226, 225 Cal. Rptr. 234] .

However, no single characterization can be given to employee stock options. An employer's purpose in providing stock options to employees may vary. The character of options as community or separate property depends on the specific facts of an option plan and the size and circumstances of the employer. Thus, the characterization of a particular stock option plan as community or separate property will be determined by the purposes of the plan and the facts of each case [In re Marriage of Hug (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 780, 786-788, 201 Cal. Rptr. 676] .

Problems concerning characterization and division of stock options often arisein the context of options that are acquired during marriage and before the parties' separation, but that are not exercisable until after separation. In general, a trial court has broad discretion to select an equitable method of allocating community and separate property interests in such options [In re Marriage of Walker (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 644, 650, 265 Cal. Rptr. 32 ; In re Marriage of Nelson (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 150, 155, 222 Cal. Rptr. 790 ; In re Marriage of Hug (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 780, 782-783, 793, 201 Cal. Rptr. 676] .

[b] Division and Valuation

No single division rule or formula is applicable to every dissolution case involving employee stock options. Appellate courts have approved several division formulas, depending on the nature of the options involved and the time when they were exercisable. With respect to options granted before the spouses' date of separation, which are exercisable after separation, the court of appeal in In re Marriage of Hug [In re Marriage of Hug (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 780, 201 Cal. Rptr. 676] approved of a "time rule" formula for allocating community and separate interests. In Hug, the options were earned as of the commencement of the employment as a form of employment incentive and therefore were not compensation for future services. The community portion of the stock options was determined first by creating a fraction in which the numerator was the number of months between the commencement of the employment and the date of separation, and the denominator was the number of months between the commencement of employment and the date when each group of options first became exercisable. This fraction was then multiplied by the number of shares of stock that could be purchased with each block of options, yielding the community figure. Any remaining shares were the employee spouse's separate property. Although these particular benefits could not be valued or divided at the time of trial, the court of appeal ruled that it was appropriate to divide the benefits, using the time rule formula, as they are paid [In re Marriage of Hug (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 780, 782-783, 791, 793, 201 Cal. Rptr. 676] .

In a later decision, the court of appeal approved the use of an apportionment formula to divide stock options, although it differed from that used in Hug. The court analogized the options to a pension plan that is subject to divestment by termination of employment, because they were granted for services rendered and to be rendered [In re Marriage of Nelson (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 150, 153-154, 222 Cal. Rptr. 790] . The court affirmed an apportionment formula for the options in which the numerator was the number of months from the date each block of options was granted to the date of separation, and the denominator was the period from the date of each grant to its date of exercisability [see In re Marriage of Nelson (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 150, 155, 222 Cal. Rptr. 790 ; see also In re Marriage of Steinberger (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1449, 1463, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 521 (severance package on employment termination included extension of vesting of stock option plan for one year in exchange for waiver of certain rights against employer; one-year period was included in denominator of time rule fraction as part of "new deal" and was not derived from anything earned during marriage)].

The court of appeal in Nelson also approved the trial court's reduction in the value of the community share of the options by an assumed future income tax rate of 20 percent and a credit to the employee spouse of one half this amount. It rejected the contention that a higher assumed tax rate should have been used because a trial court is required to consider tax consequences only when it is proven that an "immediate and specific" consequences only when it is proven that an "immediate and specific" liability will arise on the ordered division [In re Marriage of Nelson (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 150, 156, 222 Cal. Rptr. 790 ; see Weinberg v. Weinberg (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 557, 566, 63 Cal. Rptr. 13, 432 P.2d 709 ; In re Marriage of Sharp (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 714, 718-719, 192 Cal. Rptr. 97] . In this case, the time at which the employee spouse's tax liability might arise and the extent of that liability were exclusively within his control, and the dissolution judgment did not require him to exercise the options immediately. The appellate court found that the trial court's tax reimbursement formula was a substitute for what, it declared, would have been a more equitable distribution: "to divide the options in kind and let each party be at the mercy of his or her own tax circumstance" [In re Marriage of Nelson (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 150, 156, 222 Cal. Rptr. 790] .

A third time-based formula was approved in In re Marriage of Harrison [In re Marriage of Harrison (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1216, 225 Cal. Rptr. 234] , which involved "qualified" and "unqualified" option agreements granted to a husband by his employer before he separated from his wife. The trial court devised a formula to value the community share of the options by applying a fraction to the gain on each option on its exercise date. The numerator of the fraction was the total number of days between the granting of the option and the date of separation, and the denominator was the total number of days from the granting of the option until the day on which each portion of the option became fully vested and not subject to divestment [In re Marriage of Harrison (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1216, 1223 n.1, 1223-1224, 225 Cal. Rptr. 234] . The court of appeal upheld the use of such a time formula, although it found the formula technically incorrect in several respects, because it determined that no reversible error occurred [In re Marriage of Harrison (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1216, 1225, 225 Cal. Rptr. 234] .

Another case applied the Harrison formula [see In re Marriage of Harrison (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1216, 1223-1225, 225 Cal. Rptr. 234] to stock options that were subject to forfeiture if a spouse's employment terminated before the receipt of purchased stock [see In re Marriage of Walker (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 644, 650-651, 265 Cal. Rptr. 32] . For a complete discussion of valuing employee stock options, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practiceand Procedure, 2nd ed., Ch. 22 (Matthew Bender).

[4] Housing Subsidized by Employer

Little authority exists for the characterization of relocation housing benefits or mortgage subsidies provided by employers. However, one appellate court has held that a mortgage subsidy commenced during marriage and continued after separation is supplemental income, rather than a vested contract right to a future benefit, when the subsidy depends on both the employee spouse's continued employment and the employer's continued desire to pay the subsidy [In re Marriage of Doherty (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 895, 899, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 919] . Such a subsidy is not vested because it is not a right that survives the employee spouse's discharge or involuntary termination [see In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal.3d 838, 842, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561] ; therefore, the continuing subsidy is not allocated between the spouses' community and separate estates at dissolution, but is treated as the employee spouse's separate property following separation [In re Marriage of Doherty (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 895, 899, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 919 ; cf. Garfein v. Garfein (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 155, 158-159, 93 Cal. Rptr. 714 (post-separation payments from movie contract that guaranteed actress payment for six films were her separate property, because payments were earned after separation)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationValuationFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
2. Contractual, Survivor, And Related Employment Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.161

§ 222.161 Survivor and Death Benefits in General--Statutory Recognition of Surviving Former Spouses

Some employment-based retirement plans provide benefits for the spouse of an employee on the employee's death, either before or after retirement. Many plans also provide alternatively for payment to former spouses, under specified circumstances. As discussed in § 222.205, plans governed by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, applicable to pension plans maintained by most private employers, must provide that a former spouse be treated as the surviving spouse for purposes of a joint and survivor annuity, to the extent provided in any qualified domestic relations order. If the plan requires that the employee and spouse have been married for at least one year, this requirement must be met [29 U.S.C. §§ 1055(f), 1056(d)(3)(F)]. Many public entity plans contain similar provisions, although the marriage duration requirement and other coverage details vary [see 5 U.S.C. § 8341(h) (federal civil service annuities to former spouses); see also Gov. Code §§ 21290(b), 21298 (Public Employees' Retirement System); Educ. Code §§ 22650 et seq. (State Teachers' Retirement System), 23812 (entitlement of surviving spouse, but not surviving domestic partner, to benefits under State Teacher's Retirement System following remarriage)]. Nevertheless, there are many public entity plans, especially municipal plans, that still do not provide survivor benefits to surviving former spouses or any means to spread the former spouse's share of the payments over the former spouse's lifetime [see e.g. Gov. Code § 31450 et seq. (County Employees Retirement Law of 1937); In re Marriage of Cramer (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 73, 78, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 372 (term "surviving spouse" in Gov. Code § 31760.1 does not include surviving former spouse)].

With respect to proceedings for marital dissolution or legal separation, Fam. Code § 2610 requires the court to make whatever orders are necessary or appropriate to ensure that each party receives his or her full community share in any retirement plan, whether public or private, including all survivor and death benefits. This includes the power to order a party to elect a survivor benefit annuity or other similar election for the benefit of the other party if the retirement plan provides for such an election, as long as the court does not order the plan to provide incresed benefits determined on the basis of actuarial value [Fam. Code § 2610; see, e.g., In re Marriage of Carnall (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1010, 1023, 1024-1026, 265 Cal. Rptr. 271 (statutory predecessor, former Civ. Code § 4800.8, as applied to County Employees Retirement Law of 1937 entitled nonemployee former spouse to receive prorated share of total survivor and death benefits provided under pension contract); but cf. In re Marriage of Cramer (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 73, 75-76, 24 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 372 (court could not order county plan to pay survivor benefits to surviving former spouse when, under plan, there was no provision for designating former spouse as surviving spouse, and term "surviving spouse" as used in County Employee's Retirement Law and in plan option included only spouse who was married to employee at time of employee's death); for general discussion of court's statutory power to make orders regarding retirement benefits, including survivor and death benefits, see § 222.182].

Furthermore, in the case of public entity plans, even if a public entity plan does not provide benefits that are denominated as "survivor benefits" to a nonemployee former spouse, the dissolution judgment must compensate that spouse fully for all community contributions made to the employee spouse's retirement plan. Thus, the court must carefully review the type of contributions made to ensure that the nonemployee spouse has been compensated for all portions of the employee spouse's retirement benefits attributable to the community [see In re Marriage of Nice (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 444, 446, 452-453, 281 Cal. Rptr. 415] .

If a nonemployee spouse is foreclosed for some reason from making a claim under Fam. Code § 2610, he or she may be able to recover a portion of community contributions to the retirement fund under a resulting trust theory, which developed before the enactment of Fam. Code § 2610 and its predecessor [see In re Marriage of Becker (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 65, 70-71, 74-77, 207 Cal. Rptr. 392 (surviving spouse holds portion of each monthly payment received from PERS as resulting trustee for former spouse, since surviving spouse in effect purchased lifetime annuity in part with former spouse's community share of decedent's retirement contributions)]. For further discussion of orders authorizedby Fam. Code § 2610, see § 222.182[1] et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Estate, Gift & Trust LawTrustsResulting TrustsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsPensionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
2. Contractual, Survivor, And Related Employment Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.162

§ 222.162 Federal Survivor and Other Former Spouse Benefits

[1] Former Spouses of Uniformed Services Members--Access to Survivor and Other Benefits

Federal legislation in 1984 broadened the scope of health care, survivorship, and other benefits of former spouses of members of the uniformed services. The Department of Defense Authorization Act (Pub. L. No. 98-525) (hereafter "act") clarified and expanded provisions governing payments of retirement pay of current and former members of the uniformed services to former spouses pursuant to court order [see, e.g., 10 U.S.C. §§ 1072(2) (definition of dependent), 1408(a)(2)(C) (definition of court order providing payment to spouse or former spouse)].

The act (Pub. L. No. 98-525) clarified the authority to elect former spouses as beneficiaries under the Survivor Benefit Plan [see 10 U.S.C. § 1448; see also 10 U.S.C. § 1450(b) (age at which remarriage terminates spouse survivor benefit; as amended by Pub. L. No. 99-661, § 643)]. A court may order a person to elect, or enter into an agreement to elect, to provide an annuity to a former spouse, or to both a former spouse and child [10 U.S.C. § 1450(f)(4) (as amended by Pub. L. No. 99-661, § 641(a)); see 10 U.S.C. § 1448(b) (specifying manner of election); cf. In re Marriage of Ziegler (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 788, 790-791, 255 Cal. Rptr. 100 (maintenance of survivor benefit plan authorized by now former Civ. Code § 4801.4)]. Furthermore, a person who fails or refuses to elect the former spouse pursuant to a written agreement or court order shall be "deemed" to have made the election if the former spouse makes a written request within one year of the date of the court order or filing involved accompanied by a copy of the agreement or order [see 10 U.S.C. § 1450(f)(3)]. Failure to meet this one-year requirement cannot be cured by issuing a new court order to provide former spouse coverage, because such a new order will not be considered a "modification" of a previous court order, as that term is used in the operative statute; and will not, therefore, serve to start a new one-year period in which to elect or deem coverage [In matter of Constance Posner (1992) 71 Comp. Gen. 478 ; In matter of Nawanna Driggers (1992) 71 Comp. Gen. 475 ; see 10 U.S.C. § 1447(9), (10)]. Members of the uniformed services may elect former spouses as beneficiaries under the Survivor Benefit Plan, even if the member has already elected a dependent child as a beneficiary [Pub. L. No. 101-189, § 1405]. The act also limits a service member's ability to change an annuity election made to a former spouse [see 10 U.S.C. §§ 1448(b), 1450(f)(1), (2)].

In addition to survivor benefits, federal legislation also expanded health benefits for certain unremarried former spouses, as well as commissary and post exchange benefits [see generally Pub. L. No. 97-252, Title X, § 1004; 10 U.S.C. §§ 1076(b), 1086(c)(3)]. For further discussion of survivor benefits of former spouses of military service members, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, Ch. 21 (Matthew Bender 2d ed.).

[2] CHAMPUS Benefits

Federal legislation has expanded eligibility for benefits under the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS) [see, generally, 10 U.S.C. §§ 1072, 1079 et seq.; 32 C.F.R. § 199.3; Pub. L. No. 98-525, § 645 (1984)]. CHAMPUS, in many respects, is similar to private medical insurance and is designed to provide financial assistance to beneficiaries of service members for certain prescribed medical care obtained from civilian sources [see 32 C.F.R. § 199.4(a)]. Former spouses are entitled to CHAMPUS benefits for a limited time after dissolution if they meet certain requirements [see 10 U.S.C. §§ 1072(2)(F)-(H), 1076(a)(2), 1086a]. In addition, if certain former spouses purchase a conversion health policy while still considered a dependent, the person is eligible for certain medical, dental and other health benefits for up to 24 months after (1) the date the person is no longer qualified as a dependent, or (2) the date of the purchase of the policy, whichever is later. This extended period of eligibility applies only with regard to a "condition of the person that (1) exists on the date on which coverage under the conversion health policy begins; and (2) for which care is not provided under the policy solely on the grounds that the condition is a preexisting condition [10 U.S.C. § 1086a(b)]. For further discussion of CHAMPUS benefits, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed., Ch. 21 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Former Spouses of Federal Civil Service Members

The federal Civil Service Retirement Spouse Equity Act of 1984 (Pub. L. No. 98-615) permits a former spouse of a federal civil service member to obtain survivor benefits by court order or by the member's voluntary election to provide a survivor annuity [see Newman v. Love (Fed. Cir. 1992) 962 F.2d 1008, 1011-1013 (bifurcation of divorce proceeding did not preclude award of survivor benefits)]. However, if the member has a current spouse when the election is sought to be made, the member may not voluntarily elect to provide an annuity for the former spouse without the current spouse's written consent, subject to limited exceptions [5 U.S.C. § 8339(j)(3)].

In addition, transitional provisions considered certain former spouses qualified for a survivor annuity [see 5 U.S.C. § 8341(b)] even if the member did not make an election for them [see Pub. L. No. 98-615 § 2(4)(b) (as amended by Pub. L. No. 99-251, § 201(b))]. For further discussion of these provisions, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed., Ch. 21 (Matthew Bender).

[4] Continued Access to Health Care Benefits (COBRA)

As a result of 1986 federal legislation (Pub. L. No. 99-272, as amended by Pub. L. No. 99-514), many plan sponsors of group health insurance plans must now offer a continuation of group insurance coverage to qualified beneficiaries who otherwise would lose their coverage because of a marital dissolution, death of an employee spouse, or other "qualifying event." The legislation was enacted as part of the Consolidated Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1985 (COBRA) [Pub. L. No. 99-272, § 10001 et seq.].

Subject to certain exceptions, COBRA is applicable to private group health plans [see 29 U.S.C. § 1161(a)], as well as to public group health plans that are maintained by any state, or any agency or instrumentality or political subdivision of a state, that receive funds under the Public Health Service Act [see 42 U.S.C. § 300bb-1(a)]. It does not apply to any group health plan for any calendar year if all employers maintaining such a plan normally employed fewer than 20 employees on a typical business day during the preceding calendar year and in certain other cases [see 29 U.S.C. § 1161(b); 42 U.S.C. § 300bb-1(b)]. COBRA's provisions generally apply to plan years beginning on or after July 1, 1986, subject to specified exceptions [Pub. L. No. 99-272, §§ 10001(e)(1), 10002(d)(1), 10003(b)(1); see 29 U.S.C. § 1166(3)(a) (60-day requirement for notification by covered employee or qualified beneficiary, effective with respect to events after October 22, 1986); see also Pub. L. No. 99-509, § 9501(e)(2), (3) (treatment of certain bankruptcy proceedings and current retirees); Pub. L. No. 99-272, §§ 10001(e)(2), 10002(d)(2), 10003(b)(2)]. For further discussion of COBRA, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed., Ch. 21 (Matthew Bender).

Apart from the federal legislation discussed above in this section, California state law also requires extended "COBRA" continuation coverage for those former employees who had worked for an employer (subject to "COBRA") for at least five years before the termination of employment and are at least 60 years old, and who elect to continue coverage for themselves (and for their spouses). The provisions for continuing benefits under California law also contain conditions under which those benefits terminate [see Health & Safety Code §§ 1373.621, 1399.63; Ins. Code §§ 10116.5, 10128.3; Lab. Code § 2800.2].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsMilitary BenefitsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewPensions & Benefits LawConsolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act (COBRA)General Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
2. Contractual, Survivor, And Related Employment Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.163

§ 222.163 Health Insurance Subsidized by Employer

Group health insurance subsidized by an employer is a typical fringe benefit of employment, and falls within the catagory of "employee benefit welfare plans" under ERISA [29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.] when the employer is otherwise subject to ERISA [In re Marriage of Havins (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 414, 418, 418 n.2, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763] . Group health insurance has been compared to both term life insurance and term disability insurance. Some plans cover both active employees as well as retirees [In re Marriage of Havins (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 414, 418, 423, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763] .

Divisibility of employer-subsidized health insurance at the time of marital dissolution has been analyzed in terms of whether the right to renew the insurance is a property right susceptible of division. Courts that have addressed the question have concluded that employer-subsidized health insurance is a fringe benefit derived from employment, but not a property right that may be divided as community property [In re Marriage of Ellis (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 400, 407-408, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 719 ; In re Marriage of Havins (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 414, 423-424, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763] . They have suggested several possible rationales: (1) the right to subsidized health insurance is not convertible to cash, (2) some employee or retiree fringe benefits are not divisible on divorce (e.g., discounts at an employer-owned cafeteria), and (3) renewal of health insurance after divorce occurs outside marriage, and additional premiums after divorce come from the separate property of the employee or retiree [In re Marriage of Ellis (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 400, 408, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 719 ; In re Marriage of Havins (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 414, 418-422, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763] .

In In re Marriage of Havins, a case of first impression, the appellate court held that although an employee's or retiree's continuing, postseparation right to renew employer-subsidized health insurance by the payment of premiums and without evidence of good health is a property right having some value, it is not divisible community property when the employee or retiree continues to pay for the insurance with separate funds. The court reasoned that (1) an employee's/retiree's continuing right to renew health insurance coverage by continued payment of premiums from separate property does not give rise to a continuing community interest in the benefits, and (2) when an employee/retiree continues to pay for health insurance with separate property funds, there there is simply no community asset to divide. In reaching its conclusion, the court analogized to renewal rights under term life and disability insurance policies, which are respectively discussed in § 222.135[2] and § 222.180[3] [In re Marriage of Havins (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 414, 416, 423-424, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763 (relying on In re Marriage of Elfmont (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1026, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 590, 891 P.2d 136 and Estate of Logan (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 319, 236 Cal. Rptr. 368); see In re Marriage of Ellis (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 400, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 719] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)General Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
2. Contractual, Survivor, And Related Employment Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 222.164-222.179

[Reserved]

§§ 222.164[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
3. Pension, Retirement, And Disability Benefits In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.180

§ 222.180 Characterizing Community and Separate Interests

[1] Pension or Retirement Benefits Based on Longevity--Scope of Interests Covered

Pension or retirement benefits based on longevity of service may be characterized as community or separate property, regardless of whether they are considered "vested," "unvested," "matured" or "nonmatured." While early case law deemed certain classes of benefits and, in particular, "nonvested" benefits, as mere "expectancies," this view has been supplanted by the current rule that such benefits constitute a property right in the family law context, even if that right is intangible and subject to a condition, or otherwise is not presently exercisable [see In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 851-852, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561] .

Accordingly, to the extent a particular retirement benefit derives from employment during marriage, it ordinarily comprises a community asset that is subject to division on dissolution or legal separation. By contrast, retirement benefits earned before marriage or after separation are the employee-spouse's separate property [see In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 851-852, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 ; In re Marriage of Judd (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 515, 519 n.1, 137 Cal. Rptr. 318] . Thus, in a particular case, if retirement benefits result from employment both before and after marriage (or before and after separation), the benefits must be apportioned between separate and community interests, as discussed in § 222.180[2] [see In re Marriage of Wilson (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 851, 854-855, 112 Cal. Rptr. 405, 519 P.2d 165] . A special exception to the above apportionment rule is made when one spouse has been convicted of attempting to murder the other spouse [Fam. Code § 782.5]. For discussion of this exception and related remedies, see § 222.77.

Provisions of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) [29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.], which govern most private pension plans and retirement benefits, do not preempt a state court's division of spouses' community property rights in a "qualified domestic relations order," as defined in the Act [see 29 U.S.C. § 1144(a), 1056(d)(3)(B)]. Thus, California courts are not precluded by federal law from dividing the parties' community interests in ERISA pensions, as discussed in § 222.200[1][a]. For discussion of dividing the longevity component of military pension and retirement benefits, see § 222.220 et seq. Division of other public employee retirement benefits is discussed in § 222.240 et seq. For discussion of employment termination benefits related to retirement, such as "enhanced early retirement" benefits, see § 222.160[2].

Notwithstanding the general rules for characterization and division of community property, a spouse is entitled to an award of all of his or her retirement and pension benefits if he or she is the victim of a murder attempt by the other spouse, as discussed in § 222.77[1] [see Fam. Code § 782.5].

[2] Apportioning Community and Separate Interests

[a] In General

Apportionment of community and separate interests in retirement or pension benefits will be required if any period of employment that is applicable to the earning of the benefits occurred before as well as during marriage, or before and after the parties' separation. Thus, the period between the date of marriage and the date of separation is generally the relevant measuring period for the purpose of determining the community interest, because benefits attributable to employment after separation are separate property [see Fam. Code §§ 760, 770, 771, 2550]. In contrast, for purposes of valuing the benefits, there is not an absolute time, though the date of trial is the usual time [see Fam. Code § 2552], and whether the date of separation or the date of trial should be used may depend on the type of benefits involved (see § 222.181[1] et seq.).

In apportioning the parties' respective interests, the most frequently used method is the "time rule" formula, which ordinarily will be applicable when the amount of retirement benefits is substantially related to the total number of years of service [see In re Marriage of Henkle (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 97, 99, 234 Cal. Rptr. 351 ; In re Marriage of Judd (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 515, 522-523, 137 Cal. Rptr. 318] . For further discussion of the "time rule" and of limitations on its use, see § 222.182[1] et seq. [see generally In re Marriage of Henkle (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 97, 99, 234 Cal. Rptr. 351 (limitations on use of time rule)].

[b] Rules for Military Retirement Benefits

Under current law, military nondisability retirement benefits, technically, "retired pay" [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)], generally may be characterized and divided as community property to the extent that the benefits are earned during marriage and before separation. However, provisions for the characterization and division of such benefits have changed over time, and a highly detailed body of law has developed in this area that contains numerous qualifications to the foregoing general rule [see generally 10 U.S.C. § 1408; McCarty v. McCarty (1981) 453 U.S. 210, 223, 232-233, 101 S. Ct. 2728, 69 L. Ed. 2d 589]. For a complete discussion of military benefits, see § 222.220 et seq. Military disability benefits are briefly discussed in § 222.180[3][c].

[3] Disability Benefits--Application of "Purpose Analysis"

[a] Pensions

A private disability pension may have both community and separate property components, and the court will examine the purpose of the benefits to characterize the parties' interests. The purpose of the disability benefits may be to compensate the employee-spouse for lost earnings and personal suffering caused by the disability and, to that extent, they have been held to constitute that spouse's separate property. In fact, disability benefits received before an employee-spouse is eligible to receive a retirement pension based on age and longevity of employment have been held to serve the principal purpose of compensating the employee for his or her injury, including loss of earnings and diminished earning capacity. After the employee-spouse reaches the minimum retirement age based on longevity, however, the predominant purpose of the payments shifts to support rather than disability compensation resulting from premature retirement [see In re Marriage of Samuels (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 122, 128, 158 Cal. Rptr. 38] .

Thus, to the extent that disability benefits are received in lieu of retirement benefits based on longevity of employment and are earned by employment during marriage, they are community property. Accordingly, if a disabled person elects to receive payments that are termed "disability payments" but that would in whole or in part replace payments that would be retirement benefits based on employment during marriage and longevity of service, the payments may, nevertheless, be community property. In that instance, the employee-spouse's separate property interest consists only of the portion of the disability benefits attributable to employment prior to marriage (or after separation), and the portion of the payments that exceed the retirement pension that would have been received if the employee-spouse had not been disabled [see In re Marriage of Stenquist (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 779, 788, 148 Cal. Rptr. 9, 582 P.2d 96 ; see also Levy v. OPM (Fed. Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1550, 1553-1554 (federal civil service disability retirement)].

The foregoing principles will not apply, however, with respect to military disability retirement benefits, as discussed in § 222.180[3][c]. Furthermore, note that a disabled employee is generally free to choose among available retirement programs so long as that choice does not defeat the community interest of the nonemployee-spouse [Willis v. Board of Administration (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 779, 782, 226 Cal. Rptr. 567 ; In re Marriage of Samuels (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 122, 127-128, 158 Cal. Rptr. 38] .

Once it has been determined that a portion of the disability payments is community property, the next step is to determine the percentage interests. The first step is to classify the portion of the payment attributable to employment before marriage or after separation. Of the balance of the payment, only the excess of the payment over the retirement pension that would have been received if the recipient had not been disabled is separate property [In re Marriage of Stenquist (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 779, 788, 148 Cal. Rptr. 9, 582 P.2d 96] .

One appellate court has held that the comparison with respect to amounts received for disability pay and retirement pay must be based on the net amount after taxes and not just on the gross amounts received [see In re Marriage of Mueller (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 66, 72, 137 Cal. Rptr. 129] . On the basis of that principle, it has been held that tax savings resulting from the tax exempt nature of a disability pension that has been elected over longevity retirement are the separate property of the employee-spouse [In re Marriage of Higinbotham (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 322, 332, 249 Cal. Rptr. 798] .

This "purpose" analysis, which originated with Stenquist [In re Marriage of Stenquist (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 779, 788, 148 Cal. Rptr. 9, 582 P.2d 96] , appears to remain valid, although the Stenquist holding with regard to the divisibility of military disability retirement benefits has now apparently been abrogated by the U.S. Supreme Court [see Mansell v. Mansell (1989) 490 U.S. 581, 109 S. Ct. 2023, 104 L. Ed. 2d 675, 688-689 (FUSFSPA does not grant state courts power to treat, as property divisible on divorce, military retirement pay that has been waived in order to receive veterans' disability benefits); but see In re Marriage of Krempin (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1008, 1020-1021, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 134 (permitting remedies for loss of military retirement benefits due to disability election under some circumstances)].

[b] Private Insurance Benefits

In general, the characterization of private disability insurance benefits requires consideration of (1) the nature of the funds used to pay the disability insurance premiums, (2) the time at which the disability benefits are paid to the insured and of when the insured spouse becomes disabled in relation to the dates of the parties' marriage and separation, (3) the parties' intent in purchasing the insurance, and (4) a special "purpose" analysis--if community funds are used during marriage to pay the premiums [see generally In re Marriage of Saslow (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 848, 860-862, 869, 221 Cal. Rptr. 546, 710 P.2d 346] . Private disability insurance purchased on a term basis is somewhat similar to term life insurance (§ 222.180[3][a]). However, the purposes of term disability and term life insurance differ; and, unlike disability insurance, a community interest in term life insurance does not depend on the requirement--discussed hereafter--that an intent to provide community retirement income accompany the premium payment for the term in which the proceeds become payable [see In re Marriage of Elfmont (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1026, 1029, 1033-1035, 39 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 590, 891 P.2d 136] .

Because the most fundamental purpose of term disability insurance is to replace lost earnings, disability benefits received during marriage and before separation--based on a spouse becoming disabled in that same time frame--are community property because they replace community earnings [In re Marriage of Elfmont (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1026, 1034, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 590, 891 P.2d 136 (citing In re Marriage of Jones (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 457, 462, 119 Cal. Rptr. 108, 531 P.2d 420)]. However, private disability benefits paid to a spouse during marriage are that spouse's separate property when the spouse acquired the right to those benefits before marriage without any contribution from the community [In re Marriage of Rossin (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 725, 730, 734-739, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 427 (pivotal factor is time of acquisition of right to benefits and secondary consideration is source of funds for acquisition)]. For property characterization purposes, the critical question is when the right to the disability benefits accrued; the timing of the receipt of those benefits is irrelevant [In re Marriage of Rossin (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 725, 736, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 427 (it is unnecessary to consider function or purpose of disability payments as either wage replacement or pension substitute)].

Characterization of disability benefits received after a spousal separation requires further analysis. If payment of disability benefits commences before separation and continues thereafter, the post-separation benefits are the separate property of the insured, disabled spouse, unless during the marriage the premiums were paid out of community funds with the intent that the benefits provide community retirement income [see In re Marriage of Elfmont (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1026, 1034, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 590, 891 P.2d 136 (citing In re Marriage of Saslow (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 848, 860-861, 221 Cal. Rptr. 546, 710 P.2d 346] . If retirement income was intended, the Stenquist [In re Marriage of Stenquist (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 779, 788, 148 Cal. Rptr. 9, 582 P.2d 96] "purpose" analysis (see § 222.180[3][a]) must be applied, under which the portion of the benefits intended by the parties to provide retirement support must be denominated community property. The portion of the benefits, if any, that was intended to replace the employee-spouse's lost earnings in the event of his or her disability must be considered his or her separate property [In re Marriage of Saslow (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 848, 869, 221 Cal. Rptr. 546, 710 P.2d 346] .

If, by contrast, the insured spouse did not become disabled during the last policy term for which a premium was paid before the parties' separation, the community will have no interest in benefits produced by renewals of the policy for subsequent (that is, post-separation) terms, because the renewal premium will not have been paid "during the marriage with community funds" and with the intent of providing community retirement income. Moreover, the fact that a term disability policy that was originally purchased and renewed during marriage with community funds includes a contractual right to renew after separation does not, as such, give rise to any community property interest in the insured's disability benefits--even if the insured spouse becomes medically ineligible for new insurance as of the time of separation [In re Marriage of Elfmont (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1026, 1034-1035, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 590, 891 P.2d 136 (citing In re Marriage of Saslow (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 848, 854, 861, 861 n.5, 221 Cal. Rptr. 546, 710 P.2d 346] . In determining the parties' interests, a trial court may consider testimony on the spouses' intent, both at the time the disability insurance was originally purchased and at the times that decisions were made to continue it in force rather than to let it lapse [In re Marriage of Elfmont (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1026, 1033, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 590, 891 P.2d 136 ; In re Marriage of Saslow (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 848, 861, 221 Cal. Rptr. 546, 710 P.2d 346] . Spousal intent at those times in which decisions were made to keep the insurance in force is especially important when a basic change of circumstances, such as the parties' separation, has intervened since the insurance was originally purchased [In re Marriage of Elfmont (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1026, 1033, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 590, 891 P.2d 136] . Absent evidence of actual intent, a trial court may ascertain a normal retirement age at which the disabled spouse would have been most likely to retire ad there been no disability [In re Marriage of Saslow (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 848, 861, 221 Cal. Rptr. 546, 710 P.2d 346] .

In applying the above standards, the California Supreme Court, in In re Marriage of Elfmont, (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1026, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 590, 891 P.2d 136 , appears to have given considerable weight to the insured spouse's intent at the time of disability policy renewals. In Elfmont, it found that disability benefits received some 32 months after a spousal separation were entirely the disabled spouse's separate property, even though the underlying insurance policies were originally purchased and maintained before separation with community funds. In that case, however, and in contrast to the facts of In re Marriage of Saslow [In re Marriage of Saslow (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 848, 861, 221 Cal. Rptr. 546, 710 P.2d 346] , none of the disability benefits became payable during a term of policy coverage for which the premiums had been paid out of community funds during marriage with the intent of providing community retirement income. Instead, the insured became entitled to draw the benefits only after he had renewed the (three) policies following the parties' separation, with premiums paid out of his separate property and with no intent to provide community retirement income [see In re Marriage of Elfmont (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1026, 1035, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 590, 891 P.2d 136] . Note that the Elfmont Court's focus on the insured's own postseparation intent has drawn criticism from both on the Court and from leading family law commentators [see In re Marriage of Elfmont (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1026, 1043-1044, 1049, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 590, 891 P.2d 136 (dissenting opinion of Kennard, J., noting that parties intended portion of benefits to provide community retirement income when policies first purchased; and majority's opinion failed to recognize value of right to renew policy with no increase in premiums; she would have apportioned benefits in accordance with Saslow); 1995 Cal. Fam. Law Monthly 131 (June 1995, commentary of Prof. Grace Ganz Blumberg, and Hugh T. Thomson, Esq.)].

[c] Federal Preemption of Military Benefits

In general, military disability retirement benefits are not subject to division as community property because of the preemptive effect of federal law. One limited exception pertains to "Chapter 61" retired pay, which is based on both length of service and a percentage disability rating. A state court may divide this pay as community property, but only after first deducting a percentage of the gross amount that is based on the service member's disability rating [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(4)(C) (effective with respect to orders issued after November 14, 1986, under Pub. L. No. 99-661, § 644(b))].

Otherwise, federal law excludes from the definition of "disposable retired pay" that is subject to division certain amounts waived by a servicemember in order to receive disability retirement benefits under specific federal statutes [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(4)(B) (referring to "Title 5" and "Title 38" benefits)]. The U.S. Supreme Court, in Mansell v. Mansell (1989) 490 U.S. 581, 109 S. Ct. 2023, 104 L. Ed. 2d 675, 688-689 , clarified that FUSFSPA does not grant state courts the power to treat, as property divisible on divorce, military retirement pay that has been waived in order to receive veterans' disability benefits [Mansell v. Mansell (1989) 490 U.S. 581, 109 S. Ct. 2023, 104 L. Ed. 2d 675, 688-689] . For further discussion of military disability benefits, see § 222.220 et seq.

[4] Benefits Terminology

[a] Vested--Defined in Dissolution Context

Some decisions that discuss pension rights generally, but do not involve division of community property, describe a pension right as "vested" if the employer cannot unilaterally repudiate that right without terminating the employment relationship. These decisions correctly define the point at which a pension right becomes a property interest [In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 842, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561] .

However, the term "vested" has acquired a special meaning in the context of a dissolution proceeding. A right that is "vested" in this context cannot be forfeited if employment ends. Rather, it survives the discharge or voluntary termination of the employee [In re Marriage of Skaden (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 679, 685, 139 Cal. Rptr. 615, 566 P.2d 249 ; In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 842, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 ; see In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 422 n.2, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1] .

[b] No Substantive Distinction Between Vested and Nonvested

The California Supreme Court in In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 , ended any substantive distinction between vested and nonvested pension rights derived as a result of employment during marriage [In re Marriage of Samuels (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 122, 127, 158 Cal. Rptr. 38] . Whatever abstract terminology courts impose, the joint effort that composes the community and respective contributions of spouses that make up its assets are the meaningful criteria. Furthermore, an employee spouse's pension rights, whether vested or not, comprise a property interest of the community [In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 851-852, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 ; see In re Marriage of Stenquist (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 779, 784, 148 Cal. Rptr. 9, 582 P.2d 96] . Thus, Brown has established that the extent to which an employee spouse's benefits are "vested" is no longer the touchstone for determining the community interest in them [see In re Marriage of Judd (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 515, 521, 137 Cal. Rptr. 318] .

[c] Matured and Nonmatured

A vested right may be either "matured" or "nonmatured." If payment is subject to one or more conditions, such as, for example, a condition of survival to a specified time, the right is said to be vested but nonmatured. If, on the other hand, it is subject to no conditions and constitutes an unconditional right to immediate payment, the right is said to be matured [In re Marriage of Skaden (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 679, 685, 139 Cal. Rptr. 615, 566 P.2d 249 ; In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 842, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 ; see In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 422 n.2, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1] . For discussion of dividing benefits based on their being matured or nonmatured, see § 222.183[1][a] et seq.

[d] Types of Plans

[i] Defined Benefit Plan

A defined benefit pension plan generally requires employee contributions [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Bowen (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1291, 1295-1298, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 431] . The employee's pension benefit, however, does not depend on the amount contributed by employee or employer, but is based on a combination of factors, including highest income level achieved, years of service at retirement, and age at retirement. Expert testimony, normally from actuaries, is necessary to determine the present value of a defined benefit plan. This testimony includes not only the expert's opinion about present value, but also the factors (economic, health, and otherwise) the expert considered in reaching his or her opinion [In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 748 n.4, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661 ; see I.R.C. § 414(j)].

[ii] Defined Contribution Plan

The other kind of retirement plan is a defined contribution plan, in which the employer's obligation is related to its annual contributions [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Bowen (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1291, 1295, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 431 (variable plan initially established as defined contribution plan became more of hybrid plan than defined contribution plan)]. The employee's benefit on retirement depends on the value of the employee's account at that time. Expert testimony is not required to establish the present value of a defined contribution plan at dissolution, because its value is the amount of contributions made between the marriage and separation, plus accruals thereon, and all accruals thereon between the date of separation and the trial of the issue [In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 748 n.4, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661 ; see I.R.C. § 414(i)]. However, the services of an accountant may be needed to properly interpret the various account statements that evidence the present value of a defined contribution plan.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsMilitary BenefitsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsPensionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty

DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
3. Pension, Retirement, And Disability Benefits In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.181

§ 222.181 Procedural Considerations in Dividing Benefits

[1] Joinder of Plan

Joinder of a pension or retirement plan as a party to a family law proceeding is considered the most prudent method of protecting the community interest of a nonemployee-spouse in the plan. Counsel also should consider sending to the plan representative a notice of a nonemployee-spouse's adverse interest in the plan, as discussed in § 222.181[2] [see Fam. Code § 755]. If the plan is joined, the court can issue injunctive orders directly against the plan. Formal discovery can also be ordered directly against the plan. Joinder also gives the court jurisdiction to award attorney's fees against the plan. In addition, a joined plan generally will be bound by the court's judgment dividing the parties' interests in the plan benefits [see In re Marriage of Baker (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 206, 219-220, 251 Cal. Rptr. 126 ; see also Fam. Code § 2060 et seq.; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.106; but see AT & T Management Pension Plan v. Tucker (C.D. Cal. 1995) 902 F. Supp. 1168, 1175-1178 (ERISA preempts state court's order for attorney's fees against ERISA-governed plan)].

In addition, some plans, such as the State Teacher's Retirement System, expressly provide that no judgment or court order is binding on the plan unless it has been joined as a party [see, e.g., Educ. Code § 22656; see also Gov. Code § 31685(a) (direct division of community benefits under County Employee's Retirement Law of 1937 contemplates joinder of plan)]. Therefore, as a general rule, it is strongly suggested that joinder be undertaken at the outset of each proceeding in which a pension or retirement plan is at issue, assuming that proper jurisdiction over the plan can be acquired. For further discussion and forms for joinder, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure .

Nonetheless, joinder is not a prerequisite for a valid division of community interest as between the parties [see Fam. Code §§ 2060, 2061], nor is it generally a prerequisite for the enforcement of a child or spousal support order against a plan [see Fam. Code § 5103; Trs. of the Dirs. Guild of America-Producer Pension Benefits Plans v. Tise (9th Cir. 2000) 234 F.3d 415, 418 n.2 (plan need not be joined to support proceeding)]. Moreover, if the plan is subject to the provisions of ERISA and the court's order dividing the benefits constitutes a Qualified Domestic Relations Order (QDRO), the ERISA plan ordinarily must honor the order even if the plan had not been joined to the proceeding.

Conversely, an order dividing an ERISA plan need not be honored by the plan if it does not constitute a QDRO, even if the plan had been joined [see In re Marriage of Baker (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 206, 209, 217-218, 251 Cal. Rptr. 126 ; see also Trs. of the Dirs. Guild of America-Producer Pension Plans v. Tise (9th Cir. 2000) 234 F.3d 415, 418 ; but see Fam. Code § 5103(a) (enforcement of support orders)]. For further discussion of dividing ERISA plans, see § 222.200 et seq.

[2] Notice of Adverse Interest

Apart from joinder, counsel for the nonemployee-spouse should also give strong consideration to sending notice of that spouse's adverse interest under the plan to the plan administrator [see, e.g., Trs. of the Dirs. Guild of America-Producer Pension Benefits Plans v. Tise (9th Cir. 2000) 234 F.3d 415 , reh'g denied, 255 F.3d 661(9th Cir. June 22, 2001) (QDRO may be obtained to enforce valid DRO after participant's death if notice of DRO has been given to plan)]. This might be done, for example, while a motion to join the plan is pending in order to help forestall the employee-spouse's improper withdrawal of the benefits before the community interest in them can be adjudicated [see Fam. Code § 755; In re Marriage of Baker (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 206, 220, 251 Cal. Rptr. 126 (procedures for notice of adverse interest and joinder as not preempted by ERISA)]. Sending notice should also be done as a matter of course with respect to any plan that is not joined as a party to the proceeding.

Note that, in the absence of a proper written notice of adverse interest, payment or refund to a plan participant of an employee benefit plan, or to the participant's, employee's, or former employee's beneficiary, or estate fully discharges the plan sponsor and the administrator, trustee, or insurance company making the payment or refund from adverse claims. Lack of a written notice of adverse interest to the plan sponsor or administrator does not, however, release or discharge the plan participant (namely, the employee spouse) from the other spouse's claims [Fam. Code § 755(b)]. For a form that may be used to send notice of adverse interest, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2d ed., Ch. 21 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Restraining Orders Against Employee Spouse

A court may issue orders concerning retirement or pension plans under Fam. Code § 2610, as discussed in § 222.182[1] et seq. Apart from orders that are expressly authorized by Fam. Code § 2610, it may be advisable to seek other protective orders under the general authority granted to the court by that statute. For example, the following orders were recommended by one court to secure a nonemployee spouse's interest against the employee spouse's death or withdrawal of employee contributions in contravention of the nonemployee spouse's community property rights [In re Marriage of Ramer (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 263, 275, 231 Cal. Rptr. 647] :

- Restraining the employee spouse from withdrawing funds from or assigning or hypothecating (pledging as security) any interest in the retirement benefits without prior court approval;

- Ordering the employee spouse to name the nonemployee spouse and keep that spouse named as the beneficiary of any benefits payable or availablein the event of the employee spouse's death; and

- Ordering that if the employee spouse should violate the orders in any fashion, the retirement benefits should immediately be valued and divided and that the employee spouse or his or her estate should indemnify the nonemployee spouse for any loss caused by the employee spouse's failure to abide by the court's orders or otherwise protect nonemployee spouse's community property interest in the retirement benefits.

[4] Valuation Date Other Than Trial

Fam. Code § 2552(a) generally requires a court in the division of the parties' community estate to value the assets and liabilities as near as practicable to the time of trial, and this valuation time is generally followed with respect to pension and retirement benefits [see In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 752, 760, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661 ; In re Marriage of Behrens (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 562, 577, 187 Cal. Rptr. 200 ; In re Marriage of Marsden (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 426, 448, 181 Cal. Rptr. 910] . This stands in contrast to the principle that the extent of community interest in the benefits is determined as of the date of the parties' separation [In re Marriage of Marsden (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 426, 448, 181 Cal. Rptr. 910] .

However, Fam. Code § 2552(b) provides that the court, for good cause shown, may value all or any portion of the community estate at a date other than that of trial. In some cases, because of the type of retirement or pension plan involved or because of the parties' special circumstances, it may be necessary to move under Fam. Code § 2552 for an alternate valuation date, such as the date of separation [see e.g., Bowman v. Bowman (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 148, 158, 217 Cal. Rptr. 174 ; In re Marriage of Behrens (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 562, 577, 187 Cal. Rptr. 200] . If so, the party seeking the alternate valuation date must give at least 30 days' notice to the other party [Fam. Code § 2552(b)], by means of a noticed motion [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.126; Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-315; see also In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 760 n.15, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661] . For further discussion of moving for an alternate valuation date, see § 222.37.

[5] Bifurcation and Reservation of Jurisdiction

California law permits the bifurcation of trial of various issues in a proceeding for marital dissolution or legal separation. Bifurcation is commonly sought concerning the termination of the parties' marital status from the remaining issues. However, bifurcation may be sought regarding other issues as well, including the division of the parties' community interest in pension or retirement benefits [see Fam. Code § 2337; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.175; In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 755, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661] . When bifurcation is granted for the purpose of terminating marital status only, the court must reserve jurisdiction over all other pending issues, including the division of community pension or retirement benefits [see Fam. Code § 2337(b), (c)].

As a condition of granting bifurcation for a marital "status only" dissolution, the court may order, pursuant to Fam. Code § 2337, that until judgment has been entered on all remaining issues and has become final, the bifurcating party must indemnify and hold the other party harmless from any adverse consequences resulting to the other party if the bifurcation results in the loss of the other party's rights to pension benefits, elections, or survivor's benefits to which that party would otherwise have been entitled [Fam. Code § 2337(b)(5)]. Such losses appear preventable, however, because the court may also impose the condition that, before entry of a judgment terminating marital status, both of the following must occur: (1) the party's retirement or pension plan must be joined as a party to the proceeding, and (2) "if applicable, an order pursuant to Section 2611 shall be entered with reference to the defined benefit or similar plan pending the ultimate resolution of the distribution of benefits under the employee benefit plan." Note that the preceding reference to "Section 2611" in Fam. Code § 2337 is erroneous, as there is no such statute, and it apparently was intended to refer to orders under Fam. Code § 2610 [see Fam. Code § 2337(b)(6)].

For further discussion of bifurcation, including discussion of other conditions that a court may impose to bifurcate the issue of marital status, see § 222.32, and Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.18[5].

In addition to bifurcation authority as discussed above, a court has general authority to render a judgment of dissolution or legal separation that reserves its jurisdiction to determine the parties' interests in particular assets, including retirement or pension benefits, and parties can generally stipulate to such provisions, as well [see Fam. Code § 2550; In re Marriage of Carl (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 542, 546, 136 Cal. Rptr. 703] . While this general authority exists and has, in fact, been utilized in dissolution matters, the practice by some courts of making open-ended reservations of jurisdiction to determine interests in retirement benefits has been strongly criticized as being unauthorized and not in keeping with the spirit underlying Fam. Code § 2550 [see In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 756-757, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661] .

Thus, it has been suggested that trial courts should at least make a determination of the extent of the parties' community interest in the benefits using the "time rule" or other applicable apportionment formula and thereby make a present division, and resort to a reservation of jurisdiction only for the purpose of supervising payment of the benefits [see In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 758, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661 ; see also In re Marriage of Gowan (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 80, 86, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453] . This approach helps avoid protracted litigation over the parties' interests and, when coupled with any necessary protective orders, helps assure that the nonemployee-spouse will notforfeit his or her community share in the benefits. Courts otherwise have broad discretion in determining whether the benefits, once apportioned, are amenable to a present valuation and cash-out, or whether they must be divided in-kind, as discussed in § 222.182[3] and § 222.183[1][b], et seq. [see In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 759, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive JoinderFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsPensionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationValuationFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
3. Pension, Retirement, And Disability Benefits In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.182

§ 222.182 Court's Discretion in Dividing Benefits

[1] Duty of Court to Avoid Termination of Community Interest--Necessary or Appropriate Orders

Subject to special rules and limitations described hereafter (§ 222.182[2]), trial courts are required by statute to make whatever orders are necessary or appropriate to ensure that each party receives his or her full community property share in any retirement plan, whether public or private, including all survivor and death benefits, in a proceeding for marital dissolution or legal separation [see Fam. Code § 2610(a); In re Marriage of Higinbotham (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 322, 334-335, 249 Cal. Rptr. 798] .

Under current law, the orders authorized by statute include, but are not limited to, any of the following [Fam. Code § 2610(a)]:

1. Ordering the disposition of any retirement benefits payable on or after the death of either party in a manner consistent with the Family Code provisions for division of the community estate [see Fam. Code § 2500 et seq.], which generally require an equal division, in the absence of the parties' agreement otherwise [Fam. Code § 2550];

2. Ordering a party to elect a survivor benefit annuity or other similar election for the benefit of the other party, as specified by the court, in any case in which a retirement plan provides for such an election, provided that no court shall order a retirement plan to provide increased benefits determined on the basis of actuarial value [see In re Marriage of Cooper (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 574, 580-581, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 71 (because equal division requirement applies to retirement plan survivor benefits, court cannot allocate entire amount of these benefits to one spouse without compensating other spouse for his or her community property interest in these benefits)];

3. On the agreement of the nonemployee spouse, ordering the division of accumulated community property contributions and service credit as provided in the following or similar enactments: (a) Gov. Code § 21215 et seq. (now see Gov. Code § 21290 et seq.), pertaining to benefits under the Public Employees' Retirement System (PERS); (b) Educ. Code § 22650 et seq., pertaining to benefits under the State Teachers' Retirement System (STRS); (c) Gov. Code § 31685 et seq., pertaining to benefits under the County Employee's Retirement Law of 1937; or (d) Gov. Code § 75050 et seq., pertaining to state Judge's Retirement Law; and

4. Ordering a retirement plan to make payments directly to a nonmember party of his or her community property interest in retirement benefits, subject to the limitations discussed in § 222.182[2].

For discussion of dividing state public employees' benefits, see § 222.241.

[2] Express Limitations on Orders

[a] In General

A court's authority under Fam. Code § 2610 to make any of the orders set forth in § 222.182[1] is limited by the provision that a court must not make any order that requires a retirement plan to do either of the following [Fam. Code § 2610(b)]:

1. Make payments in any manner that will result in an increase in the amount of benefits provided by the plan [Fam. Code § 2610(b)(1); In re Marriage of Cramer (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 73, 78, 79-80, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 372 (potential for increase in plan liability precluded order for payment of survivor's benefits to decedent's former spouse under county retirement plan; only spouse married to decedent at time of his death could have survivor's benefits under plan)]; or

2. Make the payment of benefits to any party at any time before the member retires, except as provided in Fam. Code § 2610(a)(3) (concerning certain public employee benefits, as set forth in § 222.182[1]), unless the plan so provides.

The first of these limitations is consistent with case law governing private and public entity retirement plans. The second is consistent with case law regarding public entity plans; however, it may disrupt the judicial treatment of private retirement plans governed by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) that has been established under ERISA and In re Marriage of Gillmore [see Fam. Code § 2610(b)(2); 9 Cal. Fam. Law Monthly 150 (Dec. 1992) (Matthew Bender) (article and commentary of Prof. Grace Ganz Blumberg, UCLA School of Law); see also In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1] . Nevertheless, the second limitation may have been intended to apply only to public entity pensions, but further legislative or judicial clarification will be required for a definitive interpretation [see 9 Cal. Fam. Law Monthly 150 (Dec. 1992) (Matthew Bender) (article and commentary of Prof. Grace Ganz Blumberg, UCLA School of Law); but cf. In re Marriage of Oddino (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 67, 82 n.8, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 566, 939 P.2d 1266 , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1021 (noting that Fam. Code § 2610(b)(2) prohibits court from ordering preretirement payment of benefits by a plan unless plan provides for such benefits or such benefits are provided for in certain California statutes regarding public employee retirement benefits, or in "similar enactments")].

Fam. Code § 2610, which sets forth the foregoing orders and limitations, maynot be applied retroactively to payments made by a retirement plan to any person who retired or died before January 1, 1987, or to payments made to any person who retired or died prior to June 1, 1988, for plans subject to Fam. Code § 2610(a)(3) (concerning certain public employee benefits) [Fam. Code § 2610(c); see Stats. 1988, ch. 542, §§ 8, 9, 11 (prior law making provisions for PERS and STRS benefits retroactive to June 1, 1988); see also Stats. 1992, ch. 176, §§ 1, 13 (urgency legislation, signed July 11, 1992, and chaptered July 13, 1992, amending former Civ. Code § 4800.8 retroactively to make reference to certain judge's retirement benefits, but superseded on and after January 1, 1993, by other provisions of former Civ. Code § 4800.8 in Stats. 1992, ch. 431].

[b] Construction of Authorizing Statute

Fam. Code § 2610, the authorizing statute for the orders set forth in § 222.182[1] is a recodification of former Civ. Code § 4800.8. Since former Civ. Code § 4800.8 was first enacted, a substantial body of case law interpreting the statute has developed, and courts are also now construing its Family Code successor [see Fam. Code § 2610; see, e.g., In re Marriage of Cramer (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 73, 78, 79-80, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 372] .

Case law has established that an order that alters or enlarges the pension contract obligation of a third party is neither "necessary" nor "appropriate" under the section. Thus, for example, Fam. Code § 2610 may not be used to alter or enlarge a third party's liability under a pension contract to pay survivor or death benefits to a former spouse. The section was intended to permit an equitable distribution of the benefits payable under the third party's plan, based on the proportion of the various community contributions used to fund the plan [see In re Marriage of Carnall (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1010, 1023, 265 Cal. Rptr. 271] . Likewise, an order that has the potential to alter or enlarge a retirement plan's liability is improper, even though, under the facts, the order does not actually result in an increase in the plan's liability [see In re Marriage of Cramer (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 73, 78, 79-80, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 372 (order to pay survivor benefits to former spouse risked impairment of contractual obligation to pay survivor benefits to potential minor children)].

Even before the statute [see former Civ. Code § 4800.8; now see Fam. Code § 2610] was amended to expressly set forth such a limitation, a trial court could not require a public entity pension plan, such as a plan covering state or county employees, to distribute pension benefits directly to a nonemployee former spouse before the time the employee spouse actually retires, absent a specific provision in the plan for such distribution, although a private pension plan might, in a particular case, be subject to the direct payment requirements of applicable federal law (see § 222.200[1][a] et seq.). Instead, when a public employee continues to work after becoming eligible to retire under a plan that does not provide for direct payment to a former spouse, the employee spouse must himself or herself compensate the former spouse for that spouse's community interest in the plan [see In re Marriage of Jensen (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1137, 1141-1143, 286 Cal. Rptr. 911 ; In re Marriage of Nice (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 444, 446, 450, 281 Cal. Rptr. 415 ; see also In re Marriage of Crook (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1606, 1608, 1612, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 905] .

By contrast, even if a public entity plan does not provide benefits that are denominated as "survivor benefits" to a nonemployee former spouse, the dissolution judgment must compensate that spouse fully for all community contributions made to the employee spouse's retirement plan. Thus, the court must carefully review the type of contributions made to ensure that the nonemployee spouse has been compensated for all portions of the employee spouse's retirement benefits attributable to the community [see In re Marriage of Nice (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 444, 446, 452-453, 281 Cal. Rptr. 415] . For further discussion of survivor's benefits in general, see § 222.161 et seq.

Other special statutory provisions also apply with respect to public entity plans, which are discussed in § 222.241 [see Educ. Code § 22656; Gov. Code §§ 31685(b), 75050(b)]. Moreover, additional protective orders concerning pension and retirement benefits may be advisable in a given case, apart from those specified in Fam. Code § 2610. For a discussion of such protective orders, see § 222.161 et seq. [see In re Marriage of Ramer (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 263, 275, 231 Cal. Rptr. 647 (citing former Civ. Code § 4800.8, but noting its later operative date)].

[c] Abolition of Terminable Interest Rule

As part of the legislation enacting former Civ. Code § 4800.8, the predecessor to Fam. Code § 2610, an uncodified provision stated that it intended to abolish the "terminable interest rule" set forth in Waite v. Waite [Waite v. Waite (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 461, 99 Cal. Rptr. 325, 492 P.2d 13, overruled on other grounds by In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15

Cal. 3d 838, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561] and Benson v. City of Los Angeles [Benson v. City of Los Angeles (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 355, 33 Cal. Rptr. 257, 384 P.2d 649] in order that retirement benefits be divided in accordance with former Civ. Code § 4800 (now recodified as Fam. Code § 2550) [Stats. 1986, ch. 686, § 2]. The terminable interest rule, which has been criticized frequently [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Powers (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 626, 634-639, 267 Cal. Rptr. 350 ; Bowman v. Bowman (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 148, 154-156, 217 Cal. Rptr. 174] , provides that a nonemployee spouse's community property interest in a pension terminates on the death of either spouse [see Waite v. Waite (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 461, 472-474, 99 Cal. Rptr. 325, 492 P.2d 13, overruled on other grounds by In re Marriage of Brown, 15 Cal. 3d 838, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561; Benson v. City of Los Angeles (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 355, 360-361, 33 Cal. Rptr. 257, 384 P.2d 649] .

As the result of former Civ. Code § 4800.8 (as recodified in Fam. Code § 2610), one court held that the estate of a nonemployee spouse is entitled to receive that spouse's share of community benefits in any plan when that spousepredeceases the employee spouse. The statute also entitles the nonemployee spouse to receive his or her community share of survivor benefits when the employee spouse dies first [see In re Marriage of Taylor (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 435, 440-443, 234 Cal. Rptr. 486 ; see also In re Marriage of Powers (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 626, 634-639, 267 Cal. Rptr. 350] . Prior to 1992 amendments that restricted its retroactive application (see § 222.182[2]), courts had held that the statute can be applied retroactively, at least to decisions not yet final on January 1, 1987, the date the legislation became operative, and in cases in which the trial court reserved jurisdiction regarding the retirement benefits [see In re Marriage of Powers (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 626, 639-642, 267 Cal. Rptr. 350 ; In re Marriage of Taylor (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 435, 440-443, 234 Cal. Rptr. 486 (both cases decided before amendments, operative January 1, 1993, precluding certain retroactive applications of former Civ. Code § 4800.8)]. In any event, however, with respect to private pension plans subject to ERISA, a deceased nonemployee spouse may not make a testamentary transfer of any community interest in the employee spouse's fully vested ERISA pension benefits while the employee spouse is still living, because of federal preemption [see Ablamis v. Roper (1991) 937 F.2d 1450, 1459-1460] .

[3] Choice of Division Method

[a] Trial Court's Broad Discretion

A trial court possesses broad discretion in determining the most appropriate method of dividing the parties' community retirement or pension benefits so as to comply with the equal division requirement of Fam. Code § 2550. In general, the court may either divide the benefits in-kind between the spouses, or "cash out" the nonemployee spouse, although some other disposition may be appropriate in a given case [see In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 848 n.10, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 ; In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 749, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661 ; In re Marriage of Verlinde (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 918, 922-923, 234 Cal. Rptr. 694 ; see also In re Marriage of Colvin (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1570, 1580, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 323 ; Fam. Code § 2601]. For example, economic circumstances may justify awarding all of the community property pension rights to one spouse to effect a substantially equal division of the community estate [see Fam. Code § 2601; In re Marriage of Emmett (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 753, 759-760, 169 Cal. Rptr. 473] .

Moreover, Fam. Code § 2610 requires a court to make whatever orders are necessary or appropriate to ensure that each party receives his or her full community property share in any retirement plan, including all survivor and death benefits, as discussed in § 222.182[1] et seq. For discussion of a so-called judicial preference for awarding an entire pension to an employee spouse and property of equal value to the nonemployee spouse (cash out), see § 222.182[3][b].

[b] "Preference" for Pension Award to Employee Spouse

Prior to its well-known pension decision in In re Marriage of Brown [In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561] , the California Supreme Court had expressed a "preference," when feasible, for a trial court to award an employee spouse all of the community interest in his or her pension rights and to compensate the other spouse with other property of equal value [see In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 749, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661 (discussing pre-Brown decision of Phillipson v. Board of Administration (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 32, 46, 89 Cal. Rptr. 61, 473 P.2d 765 , disapproved on another point, In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 851 n.14, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561)]. Many courts have relied on this earlier case, Phillipson v. Board of Administration, in attempting to fashion a division of pension benefits by the so-called "preferable" method [see Phillipson v. Board of Administration (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 32, 46, 89 Cal. Rptr. 61, 473 P.2d 765 , disapproved on another point, In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 851 n.14, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561] .

However, in In re Marriage of Bergman, the court of appeal noted that the Supreme Court in deciding Brown had referred to its statement in Phillipson and expressly stated it had not intended to specify a preference. Therefore, the Bergman court emphasized that the trial court "retains the discretion to divide the community assets in any fashion that complies with the [equal division] provisions of [now former] Civil Code Section 4800" (recodified, in part, in Fam. Code § 2550) [In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 749, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661 ; see In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 848 n.10, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 ; In re Marriage of Verlinde (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 918, 922-923, 234 Cal. Rptr. 694] . Thus, courts have broad discretion over the method of division and need not demonstrate a "preference" for one method over another. Nevertheless, there may be circumstances when awarding an entire pension to the employee spouse (with off-setting property to the other spouse) is clearly preferable. For discussion of this "preference" in connection with matured benefits, see § 222.183[1][a] et seq.

[c] Overview of Considerations in Dividing Benefits

In making its division, the court must first determine the parties' respective interests in the pension or retirement benefits using the most appropriate apportionment method, which frequently is the time rule formula (see § 222.182[4]). If the court makes an in-kind division, it normally would order that the apportioned benefits be paid to each spouse at the earlier of the time at which the employee-spouse begins receiving the benefits, or when the employee-spouse is first eligible to receive them, depending on whether the benefits have vested and matured. In some cases, this may be immediately.

If the retirement or pension plan has been joined to the proceeding and anin-kind division is involved, the court may order the plan to make the payments directly to each spouse, unless the nature of the plan is such that this is not permissible [see Fam. Code § 2610(a)(4), (b)(2); see also In re Marriage of Jensen (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1137, 1141-1143, 286 Cal. Rptr. 911] . If the plan has not been joined to the proceeding or the plan is not otherwise required to make direct payment to the nonemployee-spouse, the employee-spouse remains responsible for compensating the nonemployee-spouse for his or her community share of the benefits. Thus, in some cases, the employee-spouse will have to pay over a share of the benefits as they are being received. In any event, the court may also reserve jurisdiction to supervise the payment of benefits by the plan or the employee-spouse, and make appropriate protective orders under Fam. Code § 2610 [see In re Marriage of Jensen (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1137, 1141-1143, 286 Cal. Rptr. 911 ; In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 746, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661] .

Alternatively, if the benefits are amenable to valuation, the court may determine their present value, usually from the testimony of experts presented by the parties, and award the benefits to one spouse, with an offsetting award of other property to the other spouse to accomplish an equal division [see In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 746, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661] . For discussion of a court's discretion in choosing a "cash out" versus an in-kind division of benefits, see § 222.182.

In determining present value, courts are guided by the general principal that the benefit must be valued as near as practicable to the time of trial [see Fam. Code § 2552(a)], and this appears to be the preferred time of valuation [see In re Marriage of Jacobson (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 465, 475, 207 Cal. Rptr. 512 (wife's interest in military retirement benefits properly calculated as though husband retired at date of trial and not separation when he worked after separation and increased benefits were affected by community contributions accrued before separation); In re

Marriage of Marsden (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 426, 447-448, 181 Cal. Rptr. 910 , citing In re Marriage of Skaden (1977) 139 Cal. Rptr. 615, 566 P.2d 249); see also In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 752, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661 (value of husband's right to retirement benefits after age 62 determined at time of trial)], particularly when the benefit involved can be characterized as an "individual appreciating asset" [see In re Marriage of Behrens (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 562, 577, 187 Cal. Rptr. 200 ; In re Marriage of Crook (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1606, 1612, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 905 (appropriate valuation date is date of trial or date of payment benefits; when, as in this case, payments were ordered to commence on first eligibility to receive pension, they are to be based on rate of pay at that time)]. However, courts have recognized that the unique circumstances of the parties, including, particularly, the nature of the benefit involved, may justify valuation as of an alternate date, such as the date of separation [see Bowman v. Bowman (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 148, 158, 217 Cal. Rptr. 174 ; see also In re Marriage of Stephenson (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 1057, 1083, 209 Cal. Rptr. 383 (actuary properly valued husband's future right to receive pension as of date of separation, adding only interest that had accrued since separation); In re Marriage of Shattuck (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 683, 687, 184 Cal. Rptr. 698 ; Fam. Code § 771 (postseparation earnings and accumulations as separate property of earning spouse)]. In the case of benefits such as profit-sharing plans, the value of which can be readily divided between preseparation and postseparation increments, it may be proper to use as a "baseline" community value the amount of contributions in the employee's account as of the time of separation, plus any postseparation increases attributable to that baseline amount up to the date of trial [In re Marriage of Behrens (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 562, 577, 187 Cal. Rptr. 200 ; In re Marriage of Marsden (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 426, 447-448, 181 Cal. Rptr. 910 ; see also In re Marriage of Stephenson (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 1057, 1083, 209 Cal Rptr. 383] . The date of separation also may be apporpriate if, in a particular case, other "good cause" can be determined for using it as an alternative valuation date [Fam. Code § 2552(b); for discussion of making a motion for valuation at other than the time of trial, see § 222.181[4]]. In some cases, the cash-out may be accomplished through the making of monthly payments to the nonemployee spouse but there may be factors, including tax consequences, that affect the precise method of equalizing the division [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 429, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1 (husband with matured benefits could buy out spouse's share by paying her present value of benefits or by paying her share on monthly basis, with exact distribution method left to trial court's discretion)].

Whether, in a particular case, it is appropriate to use a cash-out or an in-kind division method may depend on many factors, including, for example, the type of pension or retirement plan involved ("defined benefit" or "defined contribution"), the degree of vesting or maturation of the employee-spouse's interest in the plan, the age and health of the parties, and the existence of sufficient other community property from which an offsetting award could be made. One appellate court has stated that it is not possible to develop comprehensive guidelines for courts to follow in deciding which division method to use, because this decision is reached primarily by weighing equitable and factual considerations. Thus, it appears that the court must weigh the totality of the circumstances, and so long as its exercise of discretion is reasonable, its choice of division method will be upheld [see In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 746, 751, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661] .

Special considerations in choosing a division method that relate to the degree of maturation of an employee-spouse's benefits are discussed in § 222.183[1][a] et seq.

[4] Use of "Time Rule" and Other Apportionment Methods

[a] Description and Acceptance of Time Rule Formula

The most frequently employed method of apportioning retirement benefits between the community and separate estates is the "time rule" formula. The formula is described and limitations on its use are discussed in § 222.182[4][b]. As described by the California Supreme Court, under the time rule "... the community property interest in retirement benefits is the percentage representing the fraction whose numerator is the employee spouse's length of service during marriage before separation ..., and whose denominator is the employee spouse's length of service in total ...; the separate property interest is the percentage representing the remainder of 100 minus the community property interest percentage"

[In re Marriage of Lehman (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 169, 176, 187-188, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825, 955 P.2d 451] .

Therefore, to determine the total community interest (expressed in dollar amounts) in retirement or pension benefits using the time rule, multiply the employee's benefit amount by a fraction, the numerator consisting of the employee's service period during marriage but before separation, and the denominator consisting of the employee's total service period--but not exceeding the period necessary to earn maximum benefits under the plan, and not including certain amounts of putative service credit (§ 222.182[4][b][i]). This resulting amount is divided equally between the spouses, as their respective community shares. The remaining benefit amount, after subtracting the community interest from the total pension, is the employee spouse's separate property, because it is not attributable to employment during marriage [see In re Marriage of Lehman (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 169, 176, 187-188, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825, 955 P.2d 451 ; In re Marriage of Gowan (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 80, 88, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453 ; In re Marriage of Henkle (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 97, 99, 99 n.3, 234 Cal. Rptr. 351 ; In re Marriage of Judd (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 515, 522, 137 Cal. Rptr. 318 ; see, e.g., In re Marriage of Wilson (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 851, 855, 112 Cal. Rptr. 405, 519 P.2d 165 ; In re Marriage of Jacobson (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 465, 475, 207 Cal. Rptr. 512 ; In re Marriage of Webb (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 335, 343, 156 Cal. Rptr. 334] .

Months, weeks, or even days may be used instead of years in the numerator and denominator to facilitate calculation of the apportionment [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Taylor (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 435, 437 n.2, 234 Cal. Rptr. 486 (appellate court stated without approval or disapproval that trial court had used months in apportioning benefits under time rule formula); In re Marriage of Ward (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 150, 154 n.1, 123 Cal. Rptr. 234 (court suggested numerator and denominator consisting of number of days) (disapproved on another point in In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 851 n.14, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561] .

The court of appeal in one leading case [see In re Marriage of Judd (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 515, 522-523, 137 Cal. Rptr. 318] described the reasons for courts' broad acceptance of the time rule formula, as follows:

The reason why California courts have accepted this manner of division as properly implementive of the "equal division" requirement of [now former] Civil Code Section 4800 is apparent: Where the total number of years served by an employee-spouse is a substantial factor in computing the amount of retirement benefits to be received by that spouse, the community is entitled to have its share based upon the length of service performed on behalf of the community in proportion to the total length of service necessary to earn those benefits. The relation between years of community service to total years of service provides a fair gauge of that portion of retirement benefits attributable to community effort.

The time rule may be used to divide retirement benefits even if an employee spouse has had a break in periods of employment with the same employer, when the benefit amount is calculated on the basis of that person's total cumulative service time with the employer. In other words, the mere fact that employment is not continuous will not preclude application of the time rule, when the benefit is based on the total service period. The time rule fairly accounts for both marital and postmarital periods of service because it assigns to the community only the portion of the benefits that correspond to the portion of service during marriage and before separation [In re Marriage of Gowan (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 80, 89-90, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453] .

[b] Limitations on Application

[i] When Application Inappropriate

Apportionment on the basis of the time rule is appropriate only when the amount of the retirement benefits is substantially related to the total number of years of service. Thus, for example, the time rule does not apply when retirement benefits are based on a point system that depends on the nature and frequency of the service rendered, not the number of years served [In re Marriage of Poppe (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 1, 8-9, 158 Cal. Rptr. 500 ; see In re

Marriage of Henkle (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 97, 99, 234 Cal. Rptr. 351 (Poppe did not govern because employee spouse's retirement benefits were substantially related to number of years served)].

[ii] Maximum Years in Denominator

Once maximum retirement benefits have been earned, further employment thereafter during marriage does not count as service during marriage for the purpose of applying the time rule to determine the community interest in an employee spouse's retirement pay. Thus, the time rule formula's denominator can be no greater than the number of years "necessary to earn the benefits," that is, thenumber of years required to earn the maximum amount of benefits payable under the provisions of the plan [In re Marriage of Henkle (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 97, 98, 99-100, 234 Cal. Rptr. 351] .

In one case, for example, a husband had served 26 years in the Air Force prior to marrying his wife and retired with 32 years of service. After 30 years of service, the husband had been eligible to retire with a pension consisting of 75 percent of his base pay, the maximum amount available under the plan. At the time of the husband's retirement, he and his wife had separated. The former wife contended that under the time rule formula, the community estate was entitled to 6/32 of the value of the pension. However, the court of appeal concluded that the community was entitled only to 4/30 of the pension. It reasoned that the former husband's service during the last two years of marriage was not necessary to earn any benefits nor did it earn any additional benefits [In re Marriage of Henkle (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 97, 99-100, 234 Cal. Rptr. 351] . The court distinguished cases in which courts have held that the first few years of service during the marriage must be given just as much weight in computing total service as the last few years after separation. In those cases, the pension's postseparation increase in value attributable to continued employment was not entirely separate property because the amount of the pension was dependent on the total number of years of service. By contrast, the last two years of the ex-husband's military service in this case did not contribute to the total number of years of service (30) on which the amount of retirement pay depended [In re Marriage of Henkle (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 97, 100, 234 Cal. Rptr. 351] .

Similarly, additional years of service with an employer's successor in a merger that did not affect and was not necessary to earn any benefits under the relevant plan could not be included in the denominator of the time rule fraction [In re Marriage of Bowen (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1291, 1296-1297, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 431 (benefits in question were fully earned by date of merger, successor employer offered alternative pension plan, and pension benefits would have been same amount whether or not husband continued working for successor employer)].

In addition, when an employer credits an employee with putative years of service that is unrelated to time actually worked as part of a retirement plan enhancement, this credit is not utilized in the denominator of the time rule fraction. To the extent that the retirement plan is a community asset, the marital community must also share in the enhancement [In re Marriage of Lehman (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 169, 188, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825, 955 P.2d 451] . Thus, for example, in In re Marriage of Lehman, the Supreme Court held that enhanced early retirement benefits under a defined benefit pension plan were community property to the same extent as an employee spouse's basic retirement benefits, even though the enhancement was added years after a married couple separated and divorced. The right to share in an increased benefit derives from the right to share in the basic benefit; and to the extent that the basic benefit was earned during marriage and before separation, the benefit, as enhanced, will be community [In re Marriage of Lehman (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 169, 183, 185, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825, 955 P.2d 451 (disapproving, to extent contrary, Hanson v. Gram (In re Gram) (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 859, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 792)].

However, in a case in which the wife's employment was terminated and her stock options were subject to forfeiture, but she negotiated a new severance package with her employer that included an extension of the vesting of her stock option plan for one year after termination, the court held that the additional one-year period was included in the denominator of the time rule fraction because it was part of a "new deal" and was not derived from anything earned during marriage [In re Marriage of Steinberger (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1449, 1463-1464, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 521] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsPensionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionFactorsDuration of Marriage

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
3. Pension, Retirement, And Disability Benefits In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.183

§ 222.183 Effect of Benefit's "Maturity" on Division

[1] Division of Nonmatured Benefits

[a] Benefits Paid When Employee Spouse Retires

When an employee spouse's rights to a future pension have not matured as of the date the judgment is entered, the court has discretion to choose the most appropriate method of dividing the benefits. First, a court may order the employee spouse to pay to the nonemployee spouse his or her apportioned share in each pension payment as it is later received, assuming the community has some interest in the pension [see In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 848, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 ; In re Marriage of Peterson (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 642, 656-657, 115 Cal. Rptr. 184 , disapproved on another point, In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 851 n.14, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561)].

Subject to limited exceptions, the court also may order direct payment by a pension plan that has been joined in the dissolution proceeding [see Fam. Code § 2060 et seq.] or that is otherwise subject to the provisions of ERISA for qualified domestic relations orders (QDROs), as discussed in § 222.201[1] et seq. However, Fam. Code § 2610(b) sets forth limitations on ordering direct payment by a plan prior to the time an employee retires and has created some uncertainty over which plans can be ordered to make direct payment before the employee's retirement [see discussion in § 222.182[2]]. In addition, joinder alone of a plan subject to ERISA will not subject the plan to direct payment requirements if the court order does not constitute a QDRO [see In re Marriage of Baker (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 206, 209, 217-218, 251 Cal. Rptr. 126] .

[b] Cash Out

Alternatively, the court may make a present valuation of the benefits to effecta "cash out" of the nonemployee spouse, but it must take into account the possibility that death or termination of employment may destroy those rights before they mature, and the court is otherwise required to make protective orders under Fam. Code § 2610 (see § 222.182[1] et seq.). If the court concludes, because of uncertainties affecting the vesting or maturation of the pension, that it should not attempt to divide the present value, it can instead make an in-kind division, as discussed above [see In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 848, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561] . The choice between a present valuation and an in-kind division may be guided, at least in part, by whether a present valuation is feasible. The feasibility of a present valuation will depend partially on the number of variables and amount of time until the rights mature [In re Marriage of Skaden (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 679, 689, 139 Cal. Rptr. 615, 566 P.2d 249 ; see In re Marriage of Stenquist (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 779, 784-785, 148 Cal. Rptr. 9, 582 P.2d 96 ; see also In re Marriage of Alarcon (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 544, 558-559, 196 Cal. Rptr. 887] .

When a nonemployee spouse waits until the employee spouse's retirement to receive the pension benefits, the nonemployee spouse's share can be based on the employee's salary at retirement, despite the fact it may have risen due to a promotion after separation [In re Marriage of Andreen (1978) 76 Cal. App. 3d 667, 675, 143 Cal. Rptr. 94] . Thus, it has been held that if a dissolution judgment awards a nonemployee spouse a percentage of gross monthly benefits to which an employee spouse becomes entitled in the future, the nonemployee spouse is entitled to share in the increased value of the pension plan that might accrue due to the employee spouse's increased age, longer service, and higher salary [In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 428, 428 n.9, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1] .

[2] Disposition After Benefits Mature

[a] In General

After the pension benefits mature and if the employee spouse does not retire, the nonemployee spouse generally may then choose whether to obtain immediate compensation for his or her interest in the benefits or to wait until the employee spouse actually retires and share in the possibly larger benefits then payable. An election to receive compensation before the employee spouse's actual retirement, however, constitutes an irrevocable election to give up increased payments in the future, which might accrue due to increased age, longer service, and a higher salary [In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418 n.9, 428, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1 ; In re Marriage of Luciano (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 956, 960-961, 164 Cal. Rptr. 93] . The nonemployee spouse cannot be forced by the employee spouse to make a "Gillmore election" [In re Marriage of Davis (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1007, 1020-1021, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 220 (nonemployee spouse's election to begin receiving pension payments would have terminated spousal support obligation of employee spouse)]. For further discussion of dividing matured benefits, see § 222.183[3][a] et seq.

[b] Risks of Awarding Future Payment

If a nonemployee spouse is awarded a portion of each pension payment as it is paid to the employee spouse, and thereby defers receipt of his or her community share of the benefits until the employee spouse retires, the nonemployee spouse accepts the risk that the benefits may be divested or may never mature [In re Marriage of Foster (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 1068, 1071-1073, 227 Cal. Rptr. 446] . For discussion of protective orders a court is required to make in dividing retirement benefits, see § 222.182[1] et seq. [see Fam. Code § 2610].

[3] Division of Matured Benefits

[a] "Preference" for Award to Employee Spouse

Historically, courts have often stated that, if the community has sufficient assets, the preferable method of dividing retirement benefits is to award the entire pension to the employee spouse and property of equal value to the nonemployee spouse ("cash out" method) [In re Marriage of Judd (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 515, 520, 137 Cal. Rptr. 318 ; see, e.g., Waite v. Waite (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 461, 473-474, 99 Cal. Rptr. 325, 492 P.2d 13 ; Phillipson v. Board of Administration (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 32, 46, 89 Cal. Rptr. 61, 473 P.2d 765 ; In re Marriage of Kasper (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 388, 390-391, 147 Cal. Rptr. 821 ; Bensing v. Bensing (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 889, 894, 102 Cal. Rptr. 255 (

Waite, Phillipson, and Bensing were disapproved on another point in In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 851 n.14, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561); but see In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 749, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661 (Supreme Court expressly stated in Brown that it had not intended to specify preference for cash-out method; see § 21.42[2])]. This expressed preference is not intended, however, to tie the hands of the trial court. Thus, the court retains the discretion to divide the community assets in any fashion that complies with the equal division provisions of Fam. Code § 2550 [In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 848 n.10, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 ; In re Marriage of Judd (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 515, 520, 137 Cal. Rptr. 318] .

If a nonemployee spouse elects to receive his or her community share of vested and matured benefits immediately, however, it is an abuse of discretion for the trial court to delay distribution until the employee spouse actually retires [In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 426, 428, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1] , as discussed in § 222.183[3][c][i]. Therefore, the issue in reviewing a trial court's disposition of a community pension interest is not whether an alternative division was preferable, but whether the trial court abused its discretion in dividing the pension in the manner it selected [In re Marriage of Judd(1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 515, 520, 137 Cal. Rptr. 318] .

[b] Insufficient Community Assets

The "preferable" (cash out) method of dividing pension rights presupposes the existence of other community assets equivalent in worth to the discounted (present) value of the nonemployee spouse's community interest in the retirement benefits. When the community does not have sufficient other assets, however, the court will be required to fashion division by some other method, such as awarding the nonemployee spouse a share of each monthly payment as it is received [see Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 362, 118 Cal. Rptr. 621, 530 P.2d 589 (disapproved on another point in In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 851 n.14, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561); In re Marriage of Judd (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 515, 520, 137 Cal. Rptr. 318 ; Bensing v. Bensing (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 889, 893-894, 102 Cal. Rptr. 255 (disapproved on another point in In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 851 n.14, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561)].

Alternatively, the court may divide the accumulated contributions and order the employee spouse to pay the nonemployee spouse his or her share immediately, if he or she has sufficient separate property with which to do so, or at a future date, in installments, or otherwise [see Ball v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 624, 630, 106 Cal. Rptr. 662] . If the court simply divides the contributions and requires payment out of retirement benefits when received, and retains jurisdiction to supervise the future payments, the court's order should require the employee spouse to make appropriate provisions to secure payment to the nonemployee spouse in the event of the employee spouse's death, or the nonemployee spouse might lose his or her interest [see Fam. Code § 2610; In re Marriage of Foster (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 1068, 1073-1074, 227 Cal. Rptr. 446 ; Berry v. Board of Retirement (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 757, 758-759, 100 Cal. Rptr. 549 ; see also Ball v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 624, 627, 630, 106 Cal. Rptr. 662] .

[c] Nonemployee Spouse's Right to Immediate or Future Distribution

[i] Election of Time of Distribution

A nonemployee spouse may elect to receive the present value of his or her community share in a vested, matured pension as of the date of the employee spouse's eligibility to retire, or may elect, or to delay receipt until the employee spouse retires and receives payments under the pension plan [In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 428, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1 ; In re Marriage of Castle (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 206, 216, 225 Cal. Rptr. 382 ; In re Marriage of Scott (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 251, 253-254, 202 Cal. Rptr. 716] . The nonemployee spouse's decision to receive immediate payments, however, constitutes an irrevocable election to give up increased payments in the future that might accrue due to the employee spouse's increased age, longer service, and higher salary [In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 428 n.9, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1 ; In re Marriage of Castle (1986) 180 Cal.

App. 3d 206, 216, 225 Cal. Rptr. 382 ; In re Marriage of Scott (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 251, 253-254, 202 Cal. Rptr. 716 ; In re Marriage of Luciano (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 956, 960-961, 164 Cal. Rptr. 93 ; see § 222.183[3][a]]. The nonemployee spouse cannot be forced by the employee spouse to make a "Gillmore election" [In re Marriage of Davis (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1007, 1020-1021, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 220 (nonemployee spouse's election to begin receiving pension payments would have terminated spousal support obligation of employee spouse)]. For discussion of obtaining immediate payment, see § 222.183[3][iii].

[ii] Limitation on Trial Court's Discretion

If a nonemployee spouse elects to receive immediately his or her community share of matured benefits, it is an abuse of discretion for the trial court to delay distribution until the employee spouse actually retires. There are no uncertainties affecting vesting or maturation that could lead the trial court to conclude that distribution of such a pension must be delayed [In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 426, 428, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1 ; In re Marriage of Luciano (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 956, 960, 164 Cal. Rptr. 93 ; see In re Marriage of Scott (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 251, 253-254, 202 Cal. Rptr. 716] . However, the nonemployee spouse may not compel the employee spouse actually to retire at the time of first eligibility for retirement benefits [In re Marriage of Becker (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 65, 72, 207 Cal. Rptr. 392] .

In addition, the court's power to make orders against the retirement or pension plan in dividing benefits and ordering their distribution is limited both by state statute [see Fam. Code § 2610] and by any supervening federal law, such as the requirements for qualified domestic relations orders (QDROs) under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) as amended by the Retirement Equity Act, as discussed in § 222.183[3][d] [In re Marriage of Oddino (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 67, 82, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 566, 939 P.2d 1266 , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1021 ; see also § 222.201].

[iii] Election by Nonemployee Spouse to Receive Immediate Payment

A nonemployee spouse's election to receive his or her community share of the employee spouse's pension can be made by motion in the trial court, at any time after the pension becomes matured; that is, after the employee spouse becomes eligible to retire [In re Marriage of Cornejo (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 381, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 81, 916 P.2d 476 ; In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 428-429, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1 ; In re Marriage of Luciano (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 956, 960-961, 164 Cal. Rptr. 93] . For discussion of the effect of making anelection for an immediate distribution, see § 222.183[3][g].

[iv] Formal Motion Required

If an employee spouse continues to work after becoming eligible to retire and the nonemployee spouse choose immediate payment, the nonemployee spouse is entitled to payment as of the date of filing a motion seeking immediate payment. A mere written demand, although unequivocal in nature, is insufficient. A formal motion clearly puts the employee spouse on notice of the nonemployee spouse's choice of immediate payment [In re Marriage of Cornejo (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 381, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 81, 916 P.2d 476] .

[v] Demonstration of Financial Need Unnecessary

A nonemployee spouse is not required to demonstrate a financial need to justify immediate distribution of the retirement benefits. Financial status is not relevant when dividing community property [In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 427-428, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1] .

[vi] Distribution When Employee Spouse Retires

Instead of immediate distribution at trial, or division on posttrial motion after benefits mature, the nonemployee spouse can elect to postpone division of a pension until the employee spouse's actual retirement, whenever that may occur. If he or she makes that election, the nonemployee spouse's community interest is calculated as of the parties' separation but the entitlement to the community's share in the pension will include any increases in the pension amount before retirement. The nonemployee spouse would also in such circumstances take the risk of nonpayment of the benefit if the employee spouse were to die, or in the case of a military pension, be dishonorably discharged before retiring [see In re Marriage of Castle (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 206, 216, 217, 225 Cal. Rptr. 382 ; In re Marriage of Adams (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 181, 186, 134 Cal. Rptr 298 ; Fam. Code § 771 (earnings and accumulations after separation are separate property)].

[d] Payment Amount on Immediate Distribution

[i] Amount Equivalent to Present Interest

A nonemployee spouse who elects to receive immediate distribution of his or her community property share of the parties' pension fund before the employee spouse actually retires is entitled at the time of trial to receive an amount equivalent to his or her community interest [In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 427, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1 ; In re Marriage of Shattuck (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 683, 686-687, 184 Cal. Rptr. 698] . In other words, if an election for immediate distribution is made, the employee spouse will not be required to pay to the nonemployee spouse the same amount that he or she would receive if the employee spouse were actually retired at the time of trial [see In re Marriage of Shattuck (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 683, 686-687, 184 Cal. Rptr. 698 ; see also In re Marriage of Castle (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 206, 215-216, 225 Cal. Rptr. 382] . The nonemployee spouse would be entitled to his or her community share of the actual payments, however, if the employee spouse were retired and receiving benefits at the time of trial [see In re Marriage of Judd (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 515, 521-522, 137 Cal. Rptr. 318] .

When the benefits at issue include an employer-provided "early retirement subsidy," such as an enhancement to the benefits under the "Rule of 75" (a subsidy for employees aged 55 or older whose age and years of service add up to 75), a court may not order the employee benefit plan to pay a purported community share of that subsidy to a nonemployee spouse when an employee spouse who is eligible for early retirement continues to work. Thus, for example, while a nonemployee spouse may, under In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1 be entitled to an immediate distribution of a community property share of matured retirement or pension benefits earned during marriage under an ERISA-governed plan, a court that divides the benefits on dissolution using a QDRO is limited by the technical QDRO rules, as well as by Fam. Code § 2610 in making orders against the plan and may not order the plan to pay the nonemployee spouse a share of an early retirement subsidy--even if it is a community asset [In re Marriage of Oddino (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 67, 82, 88, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 566, 939 P.2d 1266 , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1021] .

This limitation, however, does not preclude a court with reserved jurisdiction over the benefits from recalculating the nonemployee spouse's share of them if the employee spouse actually takes early retirement with employer-subsidized early retirement benefits, because ERISA does not prohibit modification of a prior order on early retirement so that the nonemployee spouse ("alternate payee") also receives a share of the subsidized benefit. Moreover, this limitation, arguably, does not preclude a court at the time of the dissolution from ordering the employee spouse to pay over to the nonemployee spouse a community property share of the subsidized benefit outside the QDRO [In re Marriage of Oddino (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 67, 82 n.8, 88, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 566, 939 P.2d 1266 , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1021] .

If an election for immediate distribution is made after the trial in the dissolution proceeding and before the employee spouse actually retires, the nonemployee spouse is only entitled to receive his or her community share of the amount to which the employee is entitled as of the time a formal motion is brought to obtain immediate payment, and not of the amount the employee would receive if later actually retired, as discussed in § 222.183[3][c][iii] [In re Marriage of Cornejo (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 381, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 81, 916 P.2d 476] .

[ii] Immediate Distribution Based on Future Value Not Permitted

A nonemployee spouse may not elect between receiving immediately (1) thepresent value of the retirement if the employee spouse were to retire at the time of trial, or (2) the value of the retirement at some later time when the employee spouse becomes entitled, because of longer service, to a higher pension. Permitting the nonemployee spouse to elect to base his or her immediate entitlement on a higher pension amount due to the employee spouse's increased length of service contemplated in the future, long after the parties' separation and the time of trial, would violate the Gillmore rule [In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 428-429, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1] that a spouse electing a preretirement payment foregoes later appreciation due to salary increases [see In re Marriage of Castle (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 206, 215-216, 225 Cal. Rptr. 382] .

[e] Payment Amount on Employee Spouse's Actual Retirement

If the nonemployee spouse waives the right to receive a present distribution of matured pension rights and elects to commence receiving his or her share of these benefits when the employee spouse actually retires, the nonemployee spouse will be entitled to 50 percent of the community portion of each pension payment as it is paid, even though the amount of each pension payment may have substantially increased because of the continued employment of the employee spouse after separation of the parties [see In re Marriage of Adams (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 181, 185-186, 134 Cal. Rptr. 298] .

By making such an election, however, the nonemployee spouse would not then be entitled to an early distribution of any portion of the matured benefits as of the time the employee spouse first becomes eligible to retire, assuming that the employee spouse retires at a later time. Morever, absent protective orders [see Fam. Code § 2610], the nonemployee spouse will receive nothing if either spouse should die before the employee spouse actually retires [see In re Marriage of Foster (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 1068, 1072-1073, 227 Cal. Rptr. 446] . For discussion of protective orders a court is required to make to ensure that a spouse receives his or her share of pension or retirement benefits, see § 222.182[1] et seq.

[f] Methods of Payment

[i] Options for Immediate Distribution

A court may order an employee spouse to compensate a nonemployee spouse who desires immediate payment of his or her community share of pension or retirement benefits in one of several ways, depending on the circumstances. First, the employee spouse could be ordered to "buy out" the nonemployee spouse's share of the benefits by paying to him or her the present value (at trial) of his or her community interest in the benefits. Alternatively, the employee spouse could begin paying the present value of the benefits to the nonemployee spouse on a monthly basis [In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 429, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1 ; see Waite v. Waite (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 461, 472, 99 Cal. Rptr. 325, 492 P.2d 13 , rev'd on other grounds, In re Marriage of Brocon (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 851 n.14, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 ; In re Marriage of Taylor (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 435, 440-443, 234 Cal. Rptr. 486 ; see also Fam. Code § 2610]. The exact payment method is within the court's discretion based on the parties' preferences and may include consideration of numerous factors, such as the tax consequences of alternative payment plans [see In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 429, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1 ; In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 848 n.10, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 ; In re Marriage of Shattuck (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 683, 687, 184 Cal. Rptr. 698] .

[ii] Benefits Presently Being Paid

When pension or retirement benefits have matured at the time judgment is entered and are presently being paid, the court may simply divide them in kind and order the employee spouse to pay to the nonemployee spouse half of the gross amount of the community property portion of each payment [see In re Marriage of Judd (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d

515, 522, 137 Cal. Rptr. 318 ; see also In re Marriage of Scott (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 251, 253-254, 202 Cal. Rptr. 716] . The award of matured benefits being presently paid may be made retroactive to the date of separation. In that case, the retroactive award of a percentage of undivided, paid-out pension benefits is a money judgment enforceable by writ of execution [see In re Marriage of Farner (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1370, 1375-1376, 265 Cal. Rptr. 531 (military pension)].

[iii] Direct Payment by Pension Plan

In general, if a pension plan has been joined as a party to the proceeding, the court may make orders directly against the plan, including an order to send an applicable portion of each payment, as it becomes due, directly to the nonemployee spouse [see Fam. Code § 2060 et seq.]. However, this general authority is subject to qualification, because in some instances, such as with respect to private pension plans subject to ERISA, joinder alone is not sufficient to assure direct payment to the nonemployee spouse. Pension plans governed by ERISA must permit payment of a portion of the participant's (employee spouse's) benefits directly to a former spouse, but only under a qualified domestic relations order (QDRO), whether or not the plan is joined [see 29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3); In re Marriage of Baker (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 206, 217-218, 251 Cal. Rptr. 126 (order that is not a "QDRO," but divides marital interests in employee benefit plan, would not be binding or enforceable against plan, even if plan had been joined in proceeding); for further discussion, see § 222.201[1] et seq.]. In addition, many public plans now provide for the establishment of separate retirement accounts for and direct payment to the member and a nonmember spouse (including a former spouse) [see Fam. Code § 2610; Educ. Code § 22650 et seq. (State Teachers' Retirement System); Gov. Code §§ 21290 et seq., 31685 et seq. (Public Employees' Retirement System; County Employees Retirement Law, respectively)].

However, Fam. Code § 2610(b) sets forth limitations on ordering direct payment by a plan prior to the time an employee retires and has created some uncertainty over which plans can be ordered to make direct payment before the employee's retirement [see discussion in § 222.182[2]; see also In re Marriage of Jensen (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1137, 1141-1143, 286 Cal. Rptr. 911 ; In re Marriage of Nice (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 444, 446, 450, 281 Cal. Rptr. 415] .

A court that divides retirement or pension benefits subject to ERISA is subject to both the technical requirements for QDROs and Fam. Code § 2610 in making orders for direct payment against an employee benefit plan, which can affect both the mode of payment (i.e., payment by plan versus payment by employee spouse) and the nature of benefits ordered to be paid [see In re Marriage of Oddino (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 67, 82 n.8, 88, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 566, 939 P.2d 1266 , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1021 ; see also § 222.201].

[g] Risks of Future Increases and Decreases

[i] In General

If the nonemployee spouse has elected immediate distribution of a pension benefit, the choice is irrevocable and he or she gives up the right to any future increases in the pension resulting from the employee spouse's longevity of service, increased age, or higher salary. The nonemployee spouse may, however, share in any increase in benefits that would have been received had the employee spouse retired on the date the nonemployee spouse elected to receive his or her interest, such as automatic cost-of-living adjustments. Likewise, the value of the nonemployee spouse's interest will decrease proportionately if the benefits are adjusted downward. A decrease is possible (although unlikely), for example, with respect to military pensions that depend on Congress for funding [In re Marriage of Castle (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 206, 214-216, 225 Cal. Rptr. 382 ; In re Marriage of Scott (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 251, 254-255, 202 Cal. Rptr. 716 ; see In re Marriage of Crook (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1606, 1612, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 905] .

[ii] Pension Forfeited Through Wrongful Act

As a matter of equity, criminal conduct by an employee spouse that directly causes forfeiture of community pension benefits entitles the nonemployee spouse to reimbursement for his or her share of the lost community property [In re Marriage of Beltran (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 292, 294-295, 227 Cal. Rptr. 924] . In one case, for example, a military employee spouse who was convicted of child abuse was required to reimburse the community for the amount of military pension forfeited as part of the sentence in a military court-martial. In dicta, the court stated that the same reasoning should apply if the loss is incurred by contractual obligation, tort liability, or criminal penalty [In re Marriage of Beltran (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 292, 295, 227 Cal. Rptr. 924 ; see In re Marriage of Stitt (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 579, 588, 195 Cal. Rptr. 172 (spouse required to reimburse community for attorney's fees to defend charges of embezzlement); see also 10 U.S.C. § 1408(h) (providing for military benefits for spouse or former spouse who was abuse victim of military service member whose rights to retired pay were lost because of misconduct involving abuse of spouse or dependent child while service member)].

[4] Relationship to Spousal Support

In general, courts are required by Fam. Code § 2550 to divide community property equally. In addition, a court may consider the equities of the parties' financial situations in determining spousal support, but only after the community property has been equitably divided. Adjustments in the amount of spousal support will not mitigate the hardship caused to a nonemployee spouse by the denial of his or her community interest in pension payments. Spousal support lies within the discretion of the trial court and may be modified with changing circumstances. A spouse should not be dependent on the discretion of the court to provide him or her with the equivalent of community property that should be his or hers as a matter of absolute right. Thus, spousal support cannot be used to compensate a nonemployee spouse for his or her community interest in retirement benefits [In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 427-428, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1 ; In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 848, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 ; see In re Marriage of Stenquist (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 779, 787 n.8, 148 Cal. Rptr. 9, 582 P.2d 96 (Stenquist I); In re Marriage of Luciano (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 956, 960, 164 Cal. Rptr. 93 ; but cf. In re Marriage of Olsen (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1702, 1706-1707, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 306 (trial court, in motion to reinstate spousal support that was waived on obtaining judgment partitioning military retirement benefits, had inherent equitable power to set aside order terminating support and make new support order, when termination order was based on mistake of fact that supported spouse would receive share of military benefits and this did not occur due to changes in federal law; prior order was not res judicata on spouse's right to receive support, given that neither spouse nor court could envision that her entitlement to military benefits would be taken away)].

Nevertheless, after the community interest in retirement benefits has been divided equally, if the nonemployee spouse has elected immediate distribution, the employee spouse may move for modification of spousal support in light of this new distribution of the community property. Any inequities caused by the immediate distribution of retirement benefits can be resolved through adjustments in spousal support [In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 428 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P.2d 1] . Also, if the nonemployee spouse defers receipt of benefits, the spouses can agree that the employee spouse will pay spousal support until the pension payments to the nonemployee spouse commence [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Davis (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1007, 1019, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 220] .

For further discussion of spousal support, see Ch. 225, Dissolution of Marriage: Spousal Support .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsPensionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
3. Pension, Retirement, And Disability Benefits In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 222.184-222.199

[Reserved]

§§ 222.184[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
4. Division of ERISA Pension and Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.200

§ 222.200 ERISA and Federal Preemption Issues

[1] Qualified Domestic Relations Orders Not Preempted

[a] Effect of 1984 Retirement Equity Act

Congress enacted the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) in 1974 to establish a uniform national law governing employee pension benefits. A broad ERISA preemption provision stated that, with the specific exception of state criminal law [see 29 U.S.C. § 1144(b)(4)], ERISA superseded "any and all State laws insofar as they may ... relate to any employee benefit plan" to which ERISA applied [see 29 U.S.C. § 1144(a), (b)(4); see, e.g., Egelhoff v. Egelhoff (2001) 532 U.S. 141, 121 S. Ct. 1322, 1327-1329, 149 L. Ed. 2d 264 (Washington statute providing that designation of spouse as beneficiary of nonprobate asset, including employee benefit plan, is revoked automatically on divorce, was expressly preempted)]. The original ERISA provisions raised the question of whether California community property law was preempted [see 29 U.S.C. § 1144]. However, California courts consistently held that the ERISA preemption clause did not include California community property law, though the precedential value of these earlier decisions is now highly questionable, in light of subsequent amendments to ERISA [see Boggs v. Boggs (1997) 520 U.S. 833, 849-850, 117 S. Ct. 1754, 138 L. Ed. 2d 45] .

The Retirement Equity Act of 1984 (REA) [Pub. L. No. 98-397], operative January 1, 1985, clarified ERISA preemption provisions. It specifically provides that the ERISA preemption provision "shall not apply to qualified domestic relations orders within the meaning of Section 206(d)(3)(b)(i)" [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(B)(i); see Ablamis v. Roper (1991) 937 F.2d 1450, 1454 ; In re Marriage of Baker (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 206, 217-218, 251 Cal. Rptr. 126] . The REA further provides that the ERISA "spendthrift" provision, which prohibits assignment or alienation of plan benefits [see 29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(1)], "shall apply to the creation, assignment, or recognition of a right to any benefit payable with respect to a participant pursuant to a domestic relations order, except that paragraph (1) [the spendthrift provision] shall not apply if the order is determined to be a qualified domestic relations order" [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(A) (emphasis added); I.R.S. Letter Ruling 8538063 (October 4, 1985); see In re Nelson (8th Cir. 2003) 322 F.3d 541, 545-546 (funds transfer from retirement plan to alternate payee by QDRO is not subject to "spendthrift" provision, but funds transfer from alternate payee's bankruptcy estate to creditors is subject to "spendthrift" provision); see § 222.201[1] et seq.].

Conversely, under the REA, an order that is not "qualified" (that is, not a "QDRO"), but divides marital interests in an employee benefit plan subject to ERISA, would not be binding or enforceable against the plan, even if the plan had been joined in the proceeding [In re Marriage of Baker (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 206, 217-218, 251 Cal. Rptr. 126 (California's statutory procedure for notice of adverse interest and/or joinder is not preempted by ERISA; however, order must be qualified or is not binding or enforceable against plan)]. Thus, while ERISA (as modified by the REA) does not preempt California's statutory procedures for joinder or for notifying a plan of adverse interest, the court's order must qualify as a QDRO in order to be recognized by the plan [In re Marriage of Baker (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 206, 217-219, 251 Cal. Rptr. 126] .

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, however, has taken a somewhat expansive view in permitting nonemployee spouses to assert their community property interests in employee benefits. Thus, it has said that even though a state court order does not meet the requirements of a QDRO, the order may recognize a party's interest in the proceeds of the pension plan, giving the bearer of that interest "the right to obtain a proper QDRO" [Stewart v. Thorpe Holding Co. (9th Cir. 2000) 207 F.3d 1143, 1156] . The bearer can "stake a claim" in the pension proceeds, and return to state court to seek a revised order that would constitute a QDRO, to enforce his or her interest [Trs. of the Dirs. Guild of America-Producer Pension Benefits Plans v. Tise (9th Cir. 2000) 234 F.3d 415] . The Ninth Circuit rejected the "no QDRO-no interest" analysis of another court; and held that the QDRO provisions of ERISA do not suggest that the alternate payee has no interest in the plan until he or she obtains a QDRO, they merely prevent the alternate payee from enforcing that interest (against the plan) until the QDRO is obtained [Trs. of the Dirs. Guild of America-Producer Pension Benefits Plans v. Tise (9th Cir. 2000) 234 F.3d 415 (citing In re Gendreau (9th Cir. 1997) 122 F.3d 815, 819 ; see In re Carbaugh (10th Cir. B.A.P. 2002) 278 Bankr. 512, 526-527 (10th Circuit bankruptcy appellate panel decision rejecting "no QDRO-no interest" analysis, and following Gendreau)].

The federal circuits disagree about whether a nonemployee spouse may obtain a nunc pro tunc QDRO for survivor's benefits after the death of the employee spouse, when employee benefits have been inadvertently omitted from a domestic relations order [see Patton v. Denver Post Corp. (10th Cir. 2003) 326 F.3d 1148,1151-1153 , (nunc pro tunc order considered as entered before employee spouse's death did not increase plan benefits, and constituted QDRO); Samaroo v. Samaroo (3d Cir. 1999) 193 F.3d 185, 189-191 (nunc pro tunc order entered after date of plan participant's death, even though back-dated to date prior to death, was attempt to obtain increased benefits, and could not be QDRO)].

Domestic relations orders entered before January 1, 1985, generally will be treated as qualified domestic relations orders (QDROs) under the transitional provisions of REA, though some discretion is given to plan administrators [see Pub. L. No. 98-397, § 303(d) (plan administrators required to treat orders as QDROs if benefits were being paid pursuant to the order on that date, but permitted to treat other orders as QDROs even if they did not otherwise meet current QDRO requirements); In re Marriage of Williams (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 753, 766, 209 Cal. Rptr. 827] . For discussion of preemption issues and court orders for the payment of attorney's fees, see Part VI [see AT & T Management Pension Plan v. Tucker (C.D. Cal. 1995) 902 F. Supp. 1168, 1175-1178 (ERISA preempts state court's order for attorney's fees against ERISA-governed plan)].

[b] Limitations on Applicability

[i] Inapplicable Plans

The qualified domestic relations order (QDRO) provisions [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)] do not apply to pension plans to which the assignment or alienation restrictions of ERISA do not apply, such as plans maintained by certain government employers [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 1003, 1051, 1056(d)(3)(L) (as amended by Tax Reform Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-514, § 1898(c)(4)(B)); I.R.C. § 414(p)(9) (as amended by Tax Reform Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-514, § 1898(c)(4)(A)); but see I.R.C. § 414(p)(11) (at least for taxation purposes, distribution from specified types of plan, including "governmental plan," as defined, will be treated as made pursuant to qualified domestic relations order if made pursuant to domestic relations order meeting requirements of I.R.C. § 414(p)(1)(A)(i))]. The QDRO provisions also do not apply to plans that do not have employee participants [see 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-3(b)]. A plan participant is not an employee if the business, whether incorporated or unincorporated, is wholly owned by the participant and his or her spouse [see 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-3(c)(1)]. Therefore, a plan covering only the owner and his or her immediate family members is not covered by ERISA [In re Watson (9th Cir. 1998) 161 F.3d 593, 596-597 ; Peterson v. American Life & Health Ins. Co., 48 F.3d 404 (9th Cir. 1995) ; see also In re Stern (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1036, 1040-1041 (pension plan was not ERISA-qualified when bankruptcy filed because owner had married his sole employee)].

[ii] Death and Testamentary Dispositions

A participant spouse retains any interest that a QDRO does not assign to an alternate payee. Therefore, if a QDRO provides that payments to the alternate payee will terminate on his or her death, the participant spouse will become entitled to the full amount of the pension benefit under the terms of the plan on the death of the alternate payee [In re Marriage of Rich (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 419, 422-423, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 452 (when QDRO provided that payments would continue until participant or alternate payee's death, plan was required to pay participant husband full amount of benefits on wife's death)].

ERISA, as amended by the REA, preempts a state law that allows a nonparticipant spouse to make a testamentary transfer of an interest in undistributed ERISA pension plan benefits [Boggs v. Boggs (1997) 520 U.S. 833, 835-836, 117 S. Ct. 1754, 138 L. Ed. 2d 45]. As explained by the U.S. Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, ERISA's concerns for the economic security of surviving spouses would be undermined by allowing a predeceasing spouse's heirs and legatees to have a community property interest in such plan benefits [Boggs v. Boggs (1997) 520 U.S. 833, 852, 117 S. Ct. 1754, 138 L. Ed. 2d 45 ; see Ablamis v. Roper (9th Cir. 1991) 937 F.2d 1450, 1459-1460] . Except with respect to qualified domestic relations orders (QDROs), ERISA's spendthrift provision precludes an assignment or alienation of ERISA benefits during an employee's lifetime, and a probate transfer is not a QDRO [see Boggs v. Boggs (1997) 520 U.S. 833, 851-852, 117 S. Ct. 1754, 138 L. Ed. 2d 45 ; Ablamis v. Roper (1991) 937 F.2d 1450, 1459-1460 (court did not decide whether California community property laws confer right of testamentary disposition by nonemployee spouse, but said that federal preemption would overcome any such laws); see also Branco v. Northern Cal. Employers Joint Pension Plan, 279 F.3d 1154, 1157-1160 (9th Cir. 2002) (ERISA preempts California statute allowing predeceased spouse's interest in former spouse's pension plan to pass to predeceased spouse's heirs)].

Note that the U.S. Supreme Court has not determined whether ERISA would permit a nonparticipant spouse to obtain a devisable community property interest in pension plan benefits that have already been paid out during the existence of the marital community [see Boggs v. Boggs (1997) 520 U.S. 833, 845, 117 S. Ct. 1754, 138 L. Ed. 2d 45] .

A domestic relations order requiring an ERISA plan administrator to pay benefits to a person who does not fall within the definition of an "alternate payee" will not meet QDRO requirements. The Retirement Equity Act (REA) defines "alternate payee" to mean "any spouse, former spouse, child, or other dependent of a participant who is recognized by a domestic relations order as having a right to receive all, or a portion of, the benefits payable under a plan with respect tosuch participant" [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(K); but cf. Trs. of the Dirs. Guild of America-Producer Pension Benefits Plans v. Tise (9th Cir. 2000) 234 F.3d 415, 420 n.3 (question is still open about whether "alternate payee" can be a "significant other" who was never married to participant)]. An order that may require a qualified pension plan administrator to pay benefits to an individual such as an alternate payee's designated successor, who may not fit the definition of an alternate payee within the meaning of ERISA, will for that reason fail to constitute a QDRO [In re Marriage of Shelstead (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 893, 904, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 365] . However, not yet ruled on by the courts is the remaining possibility that a domestic relations order would be valid under ERISA if it specifically identifies the alternate payee's "successor in interest" to be a particular individual who comes within the "alternate payee" definition--such as, for example, the plan participant's child [In re Marriage of Shelstead (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 893, 904-905, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 365] .

[iii] Enforcement of Obligations

ERISA's antiassignment ("spendthrift") provision [see 29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(1)] has been vigorously enforced and exceptions to it have been narrowly construed, particularly in the area of enforcing obligations set forth in judgments. The statutory provisions that define "domestic relations orders" effectively limit the manner in which QDROs may be used by requiring that they relate "to the provision of child support, alimony payments, or marital property rights to a spouse, former spouse, child or other dependent of a [pension plan] participant" [see 29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(B)(ii); Marshall v. Marshall (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1175, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 38 ; § 222.201[1]].

One federal circuit court has held that an alternate payee who acquires an interest in an ERISA plan via a QDRO may exclude that interest from a bankruptcy estate in the same way as a plan participant, because ERISA's plain language grants beneficiary status to alternate payees, and thus entitles them to protection under ERISA's "spendthrift" provision [In re Nelson (8th Cir. 2003) 322 F.3d 541, 544-545] .

Garnishment of ERISA benefits is generally a precluded "assignment or alienation" under the "spendthrift" provision [Marshall v. Marshall (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1174, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 38 ; Guidry v. Sheet Metal Workers Pension Fund (1990) 493 U.S. 365, 371-372, 110 S. Ct. 680, 107 L. Ed. 2d 782 ; but see Guidry v. Sheet Metal Workers Int'l Ass'n (10th Cir. 1993) 10 F.3d 700, 712 (on remand from Supreme Court, finding law ambiguous and holding that garnishment of ERISA benefits may be permitted, once paid to pension holder)]. Thus, for example, a QDRO may not be used to enforce, through garnishment of an annuity account under an ERISA plan, a collateral obligation assumed by an employee spouse under a dissolution judgment; that is, an obligation, such as a tax liability assumed by a spouse, that does not fall within the statutory purposes of a "domestic relations order" defined above (relating to support or marital property rights) [see Marshall v. Marshall (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1175-1176, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 38 (postdissolution order enforcing wife's rights as creditor under dissolution judgment did not "relate to the provision of marital property rights" so as to permit garnishment of husband's annuity account under ERISA pension plan); but cf. Fam. Code § 5103 (enforcement of order for child, family, or spousal support is permitted against employee benefit plan)].

However, the Internal Revenue Service is not constrained by ERISA's "anti-alienation" or "spendthrift" provision and has authority to garnish the delinquent taxpayer's community property interest in benefits from an ERISA-governed plan. ERISA does not preempt the Internal Revenue Code, because it contains a savings clause, which prohibits construction of the anti-alienation provision to alter, amend, modify, invalidate, impair, or supersede any law of the United States. The tax levy extends to the whole community property interest, and therefore also affects the other spouse's share in the pension plan benefits. Under California law, each spouse has an equal undivided interest in the whole of the community property, as opposed to exclusive interests in only half of the community property [McIntyre v. United States (9th Cir. 2000) 222 F.3d 655, 660 (citing Babb v. Schmidt, (9th Cir. 1974) 496 F.2d 957 ; by granting creditors recourse against whole community estate on debts of only one spouse, California law "implicitly" establishes that spouse's "interest" in whole of community property, at least to degree sufficient for IRS to impose tax liens under Internal Revenue Code)].

For an additional discussion of garnishment by use of a QDRO, see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Enforcement of Support, § 259.11[8]. For a complete discussion of QDROs, see § 222.201.

[2] Jurisdictional Limits by Federal Law

[a] Scope of State Court's Jurisdiction

Federal law limits state court jurisdiction to hearing only those actions brought to recover benefits due under the terms of a pension plan, to enforce rights under the plan's terms, or to clarify rights to future benefits under the terms of the plan [In re Marriage of Allison (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 849, 855, 234 Cal. Rptr. 671 (citing 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(1)(B), (e)(1)); see In re Marriage of Levingston (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1303, 1304, 1306, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 100] . This restriction is not significant, however, because generally any attempt to establish a right to benefits will involve a determination of the terms of the plan, thus conferring jurisdiction on the state court. Furthermore, the federal law limits the actions that a state court can hear; it does not deny state courts the jurisdiction to interpret federal law [In re Marriage of Allison (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 849, 855-856, 234 Cal. Rptr. 671] .

[b] Applicability to Determinations of Pension Plan Administrators

State courts have jurisdiction concurrently with federal district courts over actions brought by a participant or beneficiary to obtain or clarify benefits under the terms of an ERISA plan. This concurrent state-federal jurisdiction extends to determinations of whether a domestic relations order is a QDRO, including determinations made by retirement plan administrators regarding a particular state court domestic relations order. In fact, when a retirement plan administrator determines that a marital judgment dividing community interests in the plan is not a qualified domestic relations order (QDRO) as defined by federal law, state and federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction to review that determination [In re Marriage of Levingston (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1303, 1304, 1306, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 100 (construing 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(1)(B), (e)(1); accord In re Marriage of Oddino (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 67, 78-81, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 566, 939 P.2d 1266 , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1021 ; Board of Tr. of Laborers Pension Tr. v. Levingston (N.D. Cal. 1993) 816 F. Supp. 1496, 1498-1501] . When Congress amended ERISA through the REA in 1984, it did not intend to strip state courts of the power to enforce QDROs against plan administrators [In re Marriage of Oddino (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 67, 80, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 566, 939 P.2d 1266] .

A plan participant must exhaust any administrative remedies available under the plan before bringing suit in state or federal court. However, the exhaustion requirement does not apply if an administrative review is "demonstrably doomed to fail" [Diaz v. United Agr. Employee Welf. Benefit Plan (9th Cir. 1995) 50 F.3d 1478, 1485 ; In re Marriage of Rich (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 419, 424, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 452 (attempt to exhaust administrative remedies would have been futile when trust fund opposed participant's motion on substantive grounds)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsPensionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)Participation & VestingAlienation & Assignment of BenefitsPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)Participation & VestingQualified Domestic Relations Orders

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
4. Division of ERISA Pension and Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.201

§ 222.201 Requirements for Qualified Domestic Relations Orders (QDROs)

[1] Definitions

A "domestic relations order" means any judgment, decree, or order, including approval of a property settlement agreement, that does the following: (1) relates to the provision of child support, alimony payments, or marital property rights to a spouse, former spouse, child or other dependent of a participant; and (2) is made pursuant to a state domestic relations law, including a community property law [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(B)(ii)].

A domestic relations order is "qualified" if it does the following [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(B)(i),(C), (D); see Marshall v. Marshall (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1175-1176, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 38] :

1. Creates or recognizes the existence of an alternate payee's right to, or assigns to an alternate payee the right to, receive all or a portion of the benefits payable with respect to a participant under a plan;

2. Clearly specifies certain necessary information (§ 222.201[2]); and

3. Does not alter the form or amount of benefits (§ 222.201[2][b]).

Finally, the term "alternate payee" means any spouse, former spouse, child, or other dependent of a participant, who is recognized by a domestic relations order as having a right to receive all or a portion of the benefits payable under a plan with respect to such participant [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(K)].

Note, however, that the question is still open about whether the alternate payee can be a "significant other" who was never married to the participant [Trs. of the Dirs. Guild of America-Producer Pension Benefits Plans v. Tise (9th Cir. 2000) 234 F.3d 415, 420 n.3 (former cohabitant was appropriate alternate payee when DRO was intended to benefit couple's children when they were minors, and as their mother, she correctly represented their legal interests)].

[2] Necessary Information and Other Requirements

[a] Clear Specification in Order

A domestic relations order will be "qualified" only if it clearly specifies the following information [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(C)]:

1. The name and the last known mailing address, if any, of the participant;

2. The name and mailing address of each alternate payee covered by the order;

3. The amount or percentage of the participant's benefits to be paid by the plan to each alternate payee, or the manner in which such amount or percentage is to be determined;

4. The number of payments or period to which the order applies; and

5. Each plan to which the qualified domestic relations order applies.

All California domestic relations orders dividing ERISA pensions should be drafted in accordance with the foregoing requirements for "qualified" orders to avoid the ERISA preemption and spendthrift provisions [see § 222.200[1][a] et seq.]. Most practitioners set forth the required information in a separate "QDRO document" that is referred to as an exhibit in the judgment of marital dissolution. Use of a separate document is preferable because it enables the pension division provisions to be contained in one instrument, for submission to, and convenient reference by, the pension plan. However, a dissolution judgment that otherwise amounted to a domestic relations order and set forth the required information has been held to constitute a valid QDRO, even though some of the information, such as the address to which payments were to be sent, had to be ascertained from thenonpension portions of the judgment [see Stewart v. Thorpe Holding Co. Profit Sharing Plan (2000) 207 F.3d 1143, 1146, 1153, 1157 n.14 ; see also Trs. of the Dirs. Guild of America-Producer Pension Benefits Plans v. Tise (9th Cir. 2000) 234 F.3d 415] .

The Senate Finance Committee Report on the Retirement Equity Act states that an order should not fail to qualify merely because it does not specify the current mailing address of the participant and alternate payee, if the plan administrator has reason to know that address independently of the order. The report gives the following example: if a plan administrator is aware that the alternate payee is also a participant under the plan and the plan records include a current address for each participant, the plan administrator may not treat the order as failing to qualify.

Items (3) and (4) of the required information can be satisfied by using the "time rule" formula [cf. In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 848, 848 n.10, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 (if court concludes that, because of uncertainties concerning maturation or vesting, it should not attempt to divide present value of pension rights it can award each spouse appropriate portion of each pension payment as it is paid; in any event, trial court retains discretion to divide community estate in any fashion that complies with former Civ. Code § 4800--now Fam. Code § 2550] for determining the appropriate percentage or amount of benefits that will be paid to an alternate payee. For a description of the time rule formula, see § 222.182[4] [see In re Marriage of Judd (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 515, 522, 137 Cal. Rptr. 318] .

Item (5) may be satisfied by using discovery methods to determine the correct name of the plan and by making sure that the judgment or order accurately states the name.

For a form of qualified domestic relations order (QDRO) that may be included in a judgment or marital agreement, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, Ch. 21 (Matthew Bender 2d ed.).

[b] No Alteration of Form or Amount of Benefits

In addition to the matters set forth in § 222.201[2][a], a domestic relations order must meet the following requirements to be "qualified":

- It does not require a plan to provide any type or form of benefit, or any option, not otherwise provided under the plan [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(D)(i); see I.R.C. § 414(p)(3)(A)];

- It does not require the plan to provide increased benefits, determined on the basis of actuarial value [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(D)(ii); see I.R.C. § 414(p)(3)(B); In re Marriage of Oddino (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 67, 82-84, 88, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 566, 939 P.2d 1266] ; and

- It does not require the payment of benefits to an alternate payee when the benefits are required to be paid to another alternate payee under another order previously determined to be a qualified domestic relations order [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(D)(iii); see I.R.C. § 414(p)(3)(C)].

The Senate Finance Committee Report on the Retirement Equity Act states that an order does not require a plan to provide "increased benefits" if the order does not provide for the payment of benefits in excess of the amount that the participant (employee spouse) would be entitled to receive without the order [see 29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(D)(ii); see also I.R.C. § 414(p)(3)(B)].

[c] Former Spouse Treated as Surviving Spouse

To the extent provided in any qualified domestic relations order, the former spouse of a plan participant is to be treated as the surviving spouse for purposes of joint and survivor annuity requirements under the plan [see 29 U.S.C. § 1055; see also Treas. Reg. § 1.40(a)-(11), (a)-(13); I.R.S. Notice 97-11, 1997-1 C.B. 379]. Consequently, any current spouse of a participant would not be treated as a spouse for those purposes [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(F)(i); see I.R.C. § 414(p)(5)(A)]. The former spouse, if married to the participant for at least one year, shall be treated as meeting any one-year marriage duration requirements of the joint and survivor annutiy provisions, if such a requirement is imposed by the plan [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 1055(f), 1056(d)(3)(F)(ii); I.R.C. §§ 414(p)(5)(B), 417(d)]. For further discussion, see § 222.205.

[d] Reservation of Jurisdiction

In an appropriate case, counsel may wish to consider requesting the court to retain jurisdiction to supervise the payment of retirement benefits, even though there should be a reduced need for court supervision if the QDRO has been properly drafted and sent to the pension plan administrator [see In re Marriage of Bergman (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 742, 755 n.10, 214 Cal. Rptr. 661] . Counsel also may wish to consider a reservation of jurisdiction to redetermine the percentage awarded to the nonemployee spouse in the event that the employee spouse selects a retirement option that makes the current percentage inappropriate. For instance, a pension holder who has remarried may attempt to select an option of lower retirement payments and higher death benefits for the new spouse. If the pension election is altered, the former spouse's percentage of benefits may then have to be adjusted to accomplish equal division of the community property [see In re Marriage of Lionberger (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 56, 66-71, 158 Cal. Rptr. 535] .

When the plan participant dies or retires before the former spouse secures an order awarding that spouse any interest in the plan, a domestic relations order entered before the plan participant's death that does not award the former spouse an interest in the plan, but simply "reserves jurisdiction" over the plan, provides an inadequate basis for entry nunc pro tunc of either a QDRO or an order determining the former spouse's interest in the plan that later may be qualified as a QDRO [In re Marriage of Padgett (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 830, 836, 855, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 475]. Entry of a nunc pro tunc order following the retirement or preretirement death of the plan participant to facilitate qualification of a domestic relations order as a QDRO when that order was obtained before the benefit-triggering event is proper in circumstances in which the record indicates that the parties or the court intended the order to create an interest in surviving spouse benefits in the former spouse [In re Marriage of Padgett (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 830, 854-855, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 475].

[3] Effect of Benefits Being Payable at Earliest Retirement Age

[a] Permissible Provisions for Payment

A domestic relations order shall not be treated as violating the prohibitionagainst requiring a plan to provide any type or form of benefits not otherwise provided under the plan [see 29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(D)(i); see also I.R.C. § 414(p)(3)(A)] solely because the order requires that payment of benefits be made to an alternate payee as follows [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(E)(i)(I)-(III); see I.R.C. § 414(p)(4)(A)]:

(1) In the case of any payment before a participant has separated from service on or after the date on which the participant attains, or would have attained, the earliest retirement age;

(2) As if the participant had retired on the date payment is to begin under the order, but taking into account only the present value of benefits actually accrued and not taking into account the present value of any employer subsidy for early retirement; and

(3) In any form in which the benefits may be paid under the plan to the participant, other than in the form of a joint and survivor annuity with respect to the alternate payee and his or her subsequent spouse.

[b] "Earliest Retirement Age" Defined

The term "earliest retirement age" means the earlier of the following [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(E)(ii) (as amended by Tax Reform Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-514, § 1898(c)(7)(B)(iv); see I.R.C. § 414(p)(4)(B)]:

(1) The date on which the participant is entitled to a distribution under the plan; or

(2) The later of (a) the date the participant attains age 50, or (b) the earliest date on which the participant could begin receiving under the plan if the participant separated from service.

It appears that the rationale of In re Marriage of Gillmore (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 418, 174 Cal. Rptr. 493, 629 P. 2d 1 , has been imposed on the retirement plan itself. Under the Gillmore doctrine, the nonparticipant spouse may obtain an order requiring the participant spouse to begin immediate payments of a community share of the monthly pension at the earliest possible retirement date, even though the participant has chosen to work past that date. Until the Retirement Equity Act, however, no statute or case had required the retirement plan to commence early payments.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceJurisdictionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProceduresFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsPensionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)Participation & VestingQualified Domestic Relations Orders

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
4. Division of ERISA Pension and Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.202

§ 222.202 Plan Procedures and Duties

[1] Requirements of Plan Procedures

Each pension plan must establish reasonable, written procedures to determine the qualified status of domestic relations orders and to administer distributions under qualified orders [see 29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(G), (ii)(I)], and it is suggested that counsel ask the plan administrator for the plan involved to furnish a copy of the procedures relating to that particular plan in advance of submitting the domestic relations order to the administrator (see § 222.202[2] regarding the administrator's duty, on receipt of the domestic relations order, to notify the parties of the procedures). The procedures must provide for notification of each person specified in a domestic relations order as entitled to payment of benefits under the plan promptly on the plan's receipt of the order [see 29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(G)(ii)(II)]. The plan must also permit an alternate payee to designate a representative for receipt of notices sent to the alternative payee with respect to a domestic relations order [see 29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(G)(ii)(III)].

[2] Duties of Plan Administrator

The REA outlines procedures to be followed by plan administrators. For example, when the administrator receives a domestic relations order, he or she must (1) promptly notify the participant and each alternate payee of the receipt of the order and the plan's procedures for determining the qualified status of domestic relations orders; (2) determine whether the order is a qualified domestic relations order within a reasonable period after receiving it; and (3) notify the participant and each alternate payee of the determination [see 29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(G)(i)(I), (II); see also I.R.S. Notice 97-11, 1997-2 I.R.B. 1 (only receipt of actual issued order triggers statutory compliance by plan adminstrator)].

During any period in which the qualified status of a domestic relations order is being determined by a plan administrator, court, or otherwise, the plan administrator must separately account for the amounts (referred to as "segregated amounts") that would have been payable to the alternate payee for that period if the order had been determined to be qualified [see 29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(H)(i); see also Stewart v. Thorpe Holding Co. Profit Sharing Plan (2000) 207 F.3d 1143, 1157 n.14 (29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(H)(i) gave alternate payee right to challenge, in "court of competent jurisdiction," plan's determination that her marital dissolution order was not QDRO)]. If the order, or a modification of it, is determined to be qualified within 18 months, beginning with the date on which the first payment would be required under the order [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(H)(v)], the plan administrator must pay the segregated amounts, including interest, to the person or persons entitled [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(H)(ii)]. However, if during this same period the order is found not to be qualified or the issue of qualification is not resolved, the plan administrator must pay the segregated amounts, including any interest, to the person or persons who would have been entitled to the amounts if there had been no order [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(H)(iii)]. Any determination that an order is qualified, which is made after the close of this 18-month period, shall be applied prospectively only [29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(H)(iv) (as amended by Tax Reform Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-514, § 1898(c)(2)(B)(iv)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsPensionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)Disclosure, Notice & ReportingGeneral OverviewPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)FiduciariesGeneral OverviewPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)Participation & VestingQualified Domestic Relations Orders

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
4. Division of ERISA Pension and Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.203

§ 222.203 Effective Dates

Except as indicated in § 222.204, the ERISA and related Internal Revenue Code amendments, including those made to ERISA by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 [see Pub. L. No. 99-514, § 1898(j) (amendments to take effect as if included in applicable provisions of Retirement Equity Act of 1984)], became effective on January 1, 1985. The plan administrator must treat an order entered before that date as a qualified domestic relations order if the administrator is paying benefits pursuant to the order on January 1, 1985. In addition, the administrator may treat any other order entered before January 1, 1985, as a qualified domestic relations order even if the order does not meet the requirements of the amendments [Pub. L. No. 98-397, Retirement Equity Act, § 303(d)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsPensionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)Disclosure, Notice & ReportingGeneral OverviewPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)OperabilityPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)Participation & VestingQualified Domestic Relations Orders

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
4. Division of ERISA Pension and Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.204

§ 222.204 Consideration of Tax Consequences

The Retirement Equity Act of 1984 created special rules for the tax treatment of distributions under qualified domestic relations orders governed by ERISA. Any alternate payee who is the spouse or former spouse of the participant shall be treated as the distributee of any distribution or payment made to the alternate payee under a qualified domestic relations order [I.R.C. § 402(e)(1)(A); see I.R.C. § 414(p) (defining qualified domestic relations order); cf. Darby v. Commissioner (1991) 97 T.C. 51 (under pre-1984 law, no recognition of distribution other than to plan participant for tax purposes)]. An amendment enacted by the Tax Reform Act of 1986, limited this tax treatment to an alternate payee who is the spouse or former spouse of the plan participant [see Pub. L. No. 99-514, § 1898(c)(1)(A)]. Thus, if the alternate payee is another dependent, such as a child [see 29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(K); I.R.C. § 414(p)(8) (defining alternate payee to include spouse, former spouse, child, or other dependent of participant who is recognized by qualified order as having right to receive all or portion of benefits)], the participant may be required to include the distribution in his or her gross income [see I.R.C. § 402(e)(1)(A)].

According to another provision of the 1986 Act, this amendment applies to payments made "after the date of the enactment of this Act," which apparently means after October 22, 1986 [see Tax Reform Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-514, § 1898(c)(1)(C)].

The foregoing is but a brief introduction to the tax considerations involved in distributions under a QDRO, and numerous special rules apply that are beyond the scope of this work [see, e.g., I.R.C. § 402(c), (e)(1)(B) (pertaining to "rollover" rules); I.R.C. § 414(p)(11) (distribution or payment from specified types of plan will be treated as made pursuant to qualified domestic relations order if made pursuant to domestic relations order meeting requirements of I.R.C. § 414(p)(1)(A)(i), regarding transfers after Dec. 19, 1989, in tax years ending after that date); I.R.S. Letter Rul. 8712066 (rel. May 20, 1987) (alternate payee permitted to roll over distribution without tax or penalty); I.R.S. Letter Ruling 8546133 (August 26, 1985; released November 29, 1985) (alternate payee's rollover required to be within 60 days after receipt pursuant to qualified domestic relations order under particular facts of case)]. For additional general discussion of tax considerations in dividing or distributing retirement benefits, see Part VII, Tax Effects of Dissolution.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsPensionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)Disclosure, Notice & ReportingGeneral OverviewPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)Participation & VestingQualified Domestic Relations Orders

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
4. Division of ERISA Pension and Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.205

§ 222.205 Survivor Benefits Under ERISA Plans

Retirement plans subject to ERISA must provide joint and survivor annuities that benefit the spouse of a retired employee, unless the plan has a one-year marriage requirement and the employee and the spouse have not been married for the full year preceding retirement or death [see 29 U.S.C. § 1055(a), (f)]. All pensions must be taken as joint and survivor annunities unless the employee's spouse waives the right in writing [see 29 U.S.C. § 1055(c); see also Hearn v. Western Conference of Teamsters Pension Trust Fund (9th Cir. 1995) 68 F.3d 301 (surviving wife of retiree who lied about his marital status was not entitled, under ERISA, to recover benefits from plan already paid to decedent, but could recover remaining amount of benefits that would be provided under "joint and survivor annuity")]. ERISA grants the state courts flexibility in dividing ERISA plan pensions by providing that the trial court may make a qualified domestic relations order that provides that a former spouse has the same right to a joint and survivor annuity as a current spouse. Any plan requirement that the parties be married for one full year preceding the annuity is satisfied if the participant and former spouse were married at any time for at least one year [see 29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(F)].

When dissolution proceedings are bifurcated and the employee spouse retires after entry of the dissolution judgment but before a qualified domestic relations order is in effect, a trial court has jurisdiction to issue a qualified domestic relations order awarding the nonemployee spouse an annuity under the plan [see In re Marriage of Allison (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 849, 852-857, 234 Cal. Rptr. 671] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceJurisdictionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsPensionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)Participation & VestingQualified Domestic Relations OrdersPublic Health & Welfare LawSocial

SecurityRetirement & Survivor BenefitsEligibility

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
4. Division of ERISA Pension and Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 222.206-222.219

[Reserved]

§§ 222.206[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
5. Division Of Military Pension And Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.220

§ 222.220 Historical Background

[1] Pre-1981 Law

California law regarding the characterization of military pensions was unsettled until 1974, when the Supreme Court held in In re Marriage of Fithian (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 592, 111 Cal. Rptr. 369, 517 P.2d 449 , that vested military pensions arecommunity property. After 1974, California courts uniformly characterized military pensions as community property [Casas v. Thompson (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 131, 139, 228 Cal. Rptr. 33, 720 P.2d 921] . In 1976, the California Supreme Court held that nonvested retirement benefits are also divisible as community property on dissolution [In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 841, 846-847, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 (overruling French v. French (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 775, 112 P.2d 235 , which held that nonvested rights were mere expectancy and thus not a community asset subject to division on dissolution)].

[2] McCarty and Enactment of FUSFSPA

The community property characterization of military pensions changed in 1981, when the United States Supreme Court held in McCarty v. McCarty (1981) 453 U.S. 210, 101 S. Ct. 2728, 69 L. Ed. 2d 589 , that the federal legislative scheme authorizing military pensions impliedly preempted state community property law and prohibited the division of military retirement pay in dissolution proceedings [McCarty v. McCarty (1981) 453 U.S. 210, 223, 232-233, 101 S. Ct. 2728, 69 L. Ed. 2d 589 ; see Mansell v. Mansell (1989) 490 U.S. 581, 583, 109 S. Ct. 2023, 104 L. Ed. 2d 675] .

The law again changed when Congress, reacting to McCarty, enacted the Federal Uniformed Services Former Spouses' Protection Act (FUSFSPA) [10 U.S.C. § 1408], effective February 1, 1983. It currently provides, in part, that "[s]ubject to the limitations of this section, a court may treat disposable retired pay payable to a member for pay periods beginning after June 25, 1981, either as property solely of the member or as property of the member and his spouse in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction of such court" [10 U.S.C. § 1408(c)(1); see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(7) (term "retired" pay includes "retainer" pay); see also In re Marriage of Hughes (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 34, 38, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 250 (retired and retainer pay are synonymous)]. In other words, under current law (FUSFSPA), military nondisability retirement benefits, technically, "retired pay," generally may be characterized and divided as community property [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)].

"Disposable retired pay" is statutorily defined as the total monthly retired pay to which a member is entitled less the following amounts that [10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(4)(A)-(D) (applicable with respect to divorces, dissolutions, annulments, and legal separations that become effective after the end of the 90-day period beginning on Nov. 5, 1990); see Mansell v. Mansell (1989) 490 U.S. 581, 583, 109 S. Ct. 2023, 104 L. Ed. 2d 675 ; In re Marriage of Stephens (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 616, 622-629, 229 Cal. Rptr. 238 (decided before amendment of 10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(4) by Pub. L. No. 99-661, § 644, which changed definition of disposable retired pay in relation to "Chapter 61" disability pay)]:

> (1) Are owed by that member to the United States for previous overpayments of retired pay and for recoupments required by law resulting from entitlement to retired pay;
>
> (2) Are deducted from the retired pay of such member as a result of forfeitures of retired pay ordered by a court-martial or as a result of a waiver of retired pay required by law in order to receive compensation under Title 5 or Title 38 of the United States Code;
>
> (3) In the case of a member entitled to retired pay under Title 10 of the United States Code, Chaper 61 [10 U.S.C. § 1201 et seq.], are equal to the amount of retired pay of the member under that chapter computed using the percentage of the member's disability on the date when the member was retired (or the date on which the member's name was placed on the temporary disability retired list); or
>
> (4) Are deducted because of an election under Title 10 of the United States Code, Chapter 73 [10 U.S.C. § 1431 et seq.] to provide an annuity to a spouse or former spouse to whom payment of a portion of such member's retired pay is being made pursuant to a court order under this section.

Because, as noted above, "retired pay" includes "retainer pay," even if longevity retirement benefits are denomintaed as "retainer pay" this designation will not preclude a court's division of community interest in the benefits. Moreover, if a service member has completed sufficient active duty service to qualify for retired pay but chooses to remain in a "reserve status" for some period thereafter during which he or she receives "retainer pay," the community interest in the benefits (based on the active duty service) can be divided and a court can order that the spouse of the service member be paid his or her community share without waiting until the period of reserve service ends. Furthermore, in that situation, it is not appropriate to "add-in" the period of reserve service to the formula for computing the community interest. In general, the scheme underlying the military retirement system bases retired pay on the years of active duty, and the service member cannot delay the division of community benefits or "dilute" the community interest by remaining in a reserve status after the qualifying period of active duty service has been met [see In re Marriage of Hughes (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 34, 38, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 250] .

Note, however, that whether the service member or the military is responsible for paying over the community share of the non-service member to him or her pursuant to a court order dividing the benefits depends on whether eligibility for direct payment is met under the governing federal statute and regulations [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(d); 32 C.F.R. § 63.3 et seq.]. For discussion of direct payment, see § 222.223.

For discussion of federal legislation that has restricted the scope of priorjudgments that could be reopened to adjudicate military retirement benefits, see § 222.220[4] [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(c)(1) (as amended by Pub. L. No. 101-510, § 555, precluding division of military retired pay as community property if final decree in a family law proceeding was issued before June 25, 1981, and neither divided nor reserved jurisdiction to divide the pay; also limiting duration of payments required under certain court orders issued before Nov. 5, 1990)].

[3] California Legislation Covering "Window Period"

FUSFSPA became effective February 1, 1983, thereby creating an 18-month "window period" between June 26, 1981 and February 1, 1983, during which McCarty was the supreme law of the land. The result was that dissolution judgments entered during the McCarty "window period" routinely denied any interest in military retirement benefits to nonmilitary spouses [In re Marriage of McDonough (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 45, 49, 227 Cal. Rptr. 872] .

To address this inequity, and pursuant to what it perceived as the intent of Congress in passing FUSFSPA, the California Legislature enacted former Civ. Code § 5124 in 1983 to allow division of military pensions that had been awarded to the military spouse as separate property during the "window period" between the filing of McCarty and the effective date of FUSFSPA. This statute, which was automatically repealed on January 1, 1986, provided that community property settlements, judgments, or decrees that had become final on or after June 25, 1981, and before February 1, 1983, could be modified to include a division of military benefits payable on or after February 1, 1983, in a manner consistent with federal law and the law of California as it has existed since February 1, 1983 [former Civ. Code § 5124(a)].

Modification of community property settlements, judgments, or decrees under former Civ. Code § 5124 could be granted regardless of whether the property settlement, judgment, or decree expressly reserved the pension issue for further determination, omitted any reference to a military pension, or assumed in any manner, implicitly or otherwise, that a pension divisible as community property before June 25, 1981, and on or after February 1, 1983, was not, as of the date the property settlement judgment or decree became final, divisible community property [former Civ. Code § 5124(b); see Mueller v. Walker (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 600, 606-607, 213 Cal. Rptr. 442] . Any proceeding pursuant to former Civ. Code § 5124 must have been brought before its repeal date, January 1, 1986 [see former Civ. Code § 5124(c), (d); In re Marriage of Flack (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 18, 20-22, 245 Cal. Rptr. 745 (motion under former Civ. Code § 5124 was timely "brought" when filed on December 31, 1985, even though not served or heard until 1986)]. However, former Civil Code Section 5124 did not bar common law equitable partition actions for pensions omitted from judgments falling within the statute's "window period" [Berry v. Berry (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1155, 1160-1161, 265 Cal. Rptr. 338] .

The California Supreme Court upheld former Civ. Code § 5124 as constitutional, ruling that the statute's retroactive application did not violate constitutional guarantees of due process or freedom from impairment of contracts [In re Marriage of Barnes (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1371, 1377-1378, 240 Cal. Rptr. 855, 743 P.2d 915] . Courts of appeal have also upheld the former statute's consitutionality and its application to "window judgments" that became final between the rendition of McCarty and the enactment of FUSFSPA [10 U.S.C. § 1408; In re Marriage of Deryck (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 293, 298, 235 Cal. Rptr. 381 ; In re Marriage of Carpenter (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 604, 615, 231 Cal. Rptr. 783 ; In re Marriage of McDonough (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 45, 53-56, 227 Cal. Rptr. 872 ; In re Marriage of Doud (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 510, 519-522, 226 Cal. Rptr. 423 ; In re Marriage of Van Dyke (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 145, 147, 150, 218 Cal. Rptr. 11 ; Mueller v. Walker (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 600, 607-609, 213 Cal. Rptr. 442] .

[4] Effect of Legislation Amending FUSFSPA

Federal legislation enacted in 1990 that amended FUSFSPA [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408] has created some uncertainty regarding the continuing validity of prior decisional law [see Pub. L. No. 101-510, § 555]. It is presently unclear, for example, whether and to what extent, if any, challenges may now be made as a result of the legislation to judgments entered before its enactment pursuant to former Civ. Code § 5124.

In general, the legislation precludes the reopening of "pre-McCarty" [McCarty v. McCarty (1981) 453 U.S. 210, 101 S. Ct. 2728, 69 L. Ed. 2d 589] judgments in order to divide previously undivided military retired pay, and applies to judgments or orders issued "before, on, or after" the enactment date (November 5, 1990), which determine that a pre-McCarty judgment should be reopened [see In re Marriage of Curtis (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 1, 15, 15 n.7, 16, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 145 ; Pub. L. No. 101-510, § 555; see also In re Marriage of Olsen (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1702, 1705, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 306 (note that court uses Nov. 8, 1990, as effective date of amendments)].

The legislation also provides that, with respect to a judgment issued before the November 5, 1990, enactment date, the amendment "shall not relieve any obligation, otherwise valid, to make a payment that is due to be made before the end of the two-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act" In other words, the service member must only continue to make those current payments that become due under such a judgment until November 5, 1992, though any past benefits that were awarded to the nonmilitary former spouse must still be paid [see In re Marriage of Curtis (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 1, 16, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 145 ; Pub. L. No. 101-510, § 555].

Construing these amendments, one court concluded that (1) on and afterNovember 5, 1990, state courts may no longer reopen a pre-McCarty dissolution in order to divide unadjudicated military retirement benefits because they lack subject matter jurisdiction to do so; (2) with respect to an order to "reopen" a judgment (subject to the amendments) that was issued before November 5, 1990, to the extent that the order provides that a portion of military retirement benefits be paid to a nonmilitary spouse as the benefits become payable to the military spouse, that order will be given effect up to November 5, 1992, but no payment of future benefits would be made pursuant to such an order after November 5, 1992; and (3) the amendments do not disturb any finding in such pre-November 5, 1990, proceedings that the military spouse owes a portion of past benefits to the nonmilitary spouse, nor do they place any limitation on the court's power to order payments of those past benefits in such manner as the court deems proper [see In re Marriage of Curtis (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 1, 14, 16, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 145 (referring interchangeably to "pre-McCarty" and "pre-FUSFSPA" judgments); see also In re Marriage of Olsen (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1702, 1705, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 306 (wife's share of military benefits, obtained in postdissolution partition action, terminated pursuant to 1990 FUSFSPA amendments; orginal 1974 dissolution did not adjudicate or mention benefits)]. The court in Curtis did not specifically address the issue of whether a pre-McCarty judgment in which a court had reserved jurisdiction to divide the benefits as community property could still be reopened, as the amendments appear to suggest. Therefore, that aspect of the amendments remains subject to further court interpretation, as does the effect of the amendments on judgments entered pursuant to former Civ. Code § 5124.

With respect to pre-November 5, 1990, judgments, the legislation appears to be directed at those judgments that divided military retired pay after a court previously (by a judgment that was final before June 25, 1981) neither divided, nor reserved jurisdiction to divide, such pay [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(c)(1)]. Given a narrow construction, the legislation possibly may not affect judgments entered pursuant to former Civ. Code § 5124, because modifications under that statute were authorized for judgments that became final on or after June 25, 1981, and before February 1, 1983 (the so-called "window period") [see former Civ. Code § 5124 (applicable to community property settlements, judgments, or decrees that became final on or after June 25, 1981, and before February 1, 1983); but see In re Marriage of McDonough (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 45, 52-56, 227 Cal. Rptr. 872 (statute permitted party to modify final dissolution judgment, although interlocutory judgment was entered before rendition of McCarty but was modified after McCarty and before FUSFSPA)].

However, if the legislation is more broadly construed, additional judgments, including those entered pursuant to former Civ. Code § 5124, could be affected. Pending any further clarification, judgments entered pursuant to this section appear to remain valid and enforceable, though the legislation raises the possibility of a limitation on enforcement that counsel for a military spouse may wish to raise.

[5] FUSFSPA Jurisdictional Requirements

Another limitation imposed by FUSFSPA is its jurisdictional requirement with respect to the service member spouse. A state court may only divide military retirement benefits as community property if it has jurisdiction over the service member based on the member's (1) residence, other than by military assignment, in the court's territorial jurisdiction, (2) domicile in the court's territorial jurisdiction, or (3) consent to the court's jurisdiction [10 U.S.C. § 1408(c)(4); In re Marriage of Tucker (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1249, 1255-1256, 277 Cal. Rptr. 403 (trial court property declined to divide military pension, given FUSFSPA's jurisdictional requirements)]. As used in FUSFSPA, "domicile" refers to present, not past, domicile within the court's territorial jurisdiction. Moreover, a court may not base personal jurisdiction on a "minimum contacts" analysis; it must determine jurisdiction using the three defined categories set forth in FUSFSPA [see In re Marriage of Hattis (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1162, 1167, 1170, 242 Cal. Rptr. 410 (postdissolution partition action); see also In re Marriage of McDonough (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 45, 52, 227 Cal. Rptr. 872] .

[6] Treatment of Military Separation Pay

Certain military benefits may not be divisible as community property, despite the benefits having been earned during marriage or based on service during marriage. For example, "separation pay" received on involuntary discharge from the military was in one case held to be a service member's separate property when it was a one-time payment and was not designed to be compensation for past services [In re Marriage of Kuzmiak (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1152, 1159, 222 Cal. Rptr. 644] . Nevertheless, the appellate court in that case also found that the service member's former spouse had a present community interest in the member's nonmatured longevity retirement benefits, including the separation pay the government would withhold from the benefits. It said that if the member were to reenlist after involuntary discharge and then receive a longevity pension after the requisite period of service, the purposes of the separation pay (such as, to make an adjustment to civilian life) would not have been fulfilled. There would then be no reason to find the separation pay to be the service member's separate property once the member reenlists and earns a longevity pension [In re Marriage of Kuzmiak (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1152, 1159, 222 Cal. Rptr. 644] .

However, in the case of voluntary separation pay, a different analysis may apply. Subject to federal regulations, a service member with fewer than 20 years of service may opt to forego retired pay and instead receive voluntary separation incentive pay (VSI), a monthly benefit, or Special Separation Benefits (SSB), a single lump-sum payment, under 10 U.S.C. § 1175 [In re Marriage of Babauta (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 784, 788 ; 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 281] . In In re Marriage of Babauta, the court held that VSI benefits are within the jurisdiction of a state trial court for purposes of dividing the benefits on marital dissolution [In re Marriage of Babauta (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 784, 788, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 281] . The court held that such benefits constitute a form of retirement benefits subject to division as community property, based on the fact that the member might choose to obtain them earlier than, and in lieu of disposable retired pay [In re Marriage of Babauta (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 784, 788, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 281 (relying on In re Marriage of Lehman (1998) 18 Cal.4th 169, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825, 955 P.2d 451] . The Babauta court cited a Department of Defense (DOD) brochure to the effect that "[t]he treatment of VSI or SSB [by a state court in a divorce] is not dictated by Federal law[;] [i]t will be up to the state courts to rule on the divisibility of these incentives" [In re Marriage of Babauta (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 784, 788, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 281 (citing with approval the holding and analysis of In re Marriage of Heupel (Colo., 1997) 936 P.2d 561, 562)] . Although Babauta involved the VSI benefit, the result, arguably, should be the same for benefits payable under the Special Separation Benefits (SSB) program [10 U.S.C. § 1174a], but no reported decision has yet expressly so held. In addition, note that the analysis that gave rise to separate property treatment of the separation pay in Kuzmiak may have been undermined by the Babauta case, and resolution of their holdings remains subject to further court interpretation [In re Marriage of Babauta (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 784, 788, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 281] .

Furthermore, military disability pensions generally may not be treated as divisible community property, as discussed in § 222.221 [see Mansell v. Mansell (1989) 490 U.S. 581, 109 S. Ct. 2023, 104 L. Ed. 2d 675, 688-689] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceJurisdictionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty

DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsMilitary BenefitsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
5. Division Of Military Pension And Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.221

§ 222.221 Military Disability Pensions

[1] Controlling Federal Law

In general, military disability retirement benefits are no longer subject to division as community property because of the preemptive effect of federal law. One limited exception pertains to "Chapter 61" retired pay, which is based on both length of service and a percentage disability rating. It appears that a state court may divide this pay as community property, but only after first deducting a percentage of the gross amount that is based on the service member's disability rating [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(4)(C) (effective with respect to orders issued after November 14, 1986, under Pub. L. No. 99-661, § 644(b))]. In addition, if military retired pay is waived for disability benefits after an order or judgment has been entered that divides the retired pay as community property, at least one decision supports using a resulting trust remedy to compensate the nonmilitary spouse, as discussed in § 222.221[2] [In re Marriage of Krempin (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1008, 1021, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 134] .

Otherwise, however, FUSFSPA itself excludes from the definition of "disposable retired pay" that is subject to division certain amounts waived by a service member in order to receive disability retirement benefits under specific federal statutes [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(4)(B) (referring to "Title 5" and "Title 38" benefits)]. The U.S. Supreme Court, in Mansell v. Mansell [Mansell v. Mansell (1989) 490 U.S. 581, 109 S. Ct. 2023, 104 L. Ed. 2d 675] , clarified that FUSFSPA does not grant state courts the power to treat, as property divisible on divorce, military retirement pay that has been waived in order to receive veterans' disability benefits. The Court found that in enacting FUSFSPA, Congress intended both to create new benefits for former spouses and to place limits designed to protect military retirees. Thus, FUSFSPA did not remove the preemptive effect of federal law on which McCarty v. McCarty [McCarty v. McCarty (1981) 453 U.S. 210, 223, 232-233, 101 S. Ct. 2728, 69 L. Ed. 2d 589] was based with respect to the treatment of military disability benefits [Mansell v. Mansell (1989) 490 U.S. 581, 109 S. Ct. 2023, 104 L. Ed. 2d 675, 688-689] .

An issue left undecided in Mansell is whether the doctrine of res judicata, as applied in California, should have barred the reopening of pre-McCarty settlements. Whether additional pre-McCarty or other cases are subject to being reopened as a result of Mansell is presently unclear. However, in the Mansell case itself, the California appellate court, on remand from the U.S. Supreme Court, reaffirmed the original trial court's denial of the military retiree's request for modification of his long-final, pre-McCarty, pre-FUSFSPA dissolution judgment, although the judgment divided his disability benefits according to California community property law rather than federal law. The appellate court stated that it never intended to reopen the judgment, and reasoned that the judgment was not void for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, because the trial court had jurisdiction to divide military benefits, rightly or wrongly, at the time of the original decree [In re Marriage of Mansell (1989) 217 Cal. App. 3d 219, 225, 227-229, 265 Cal. Rptr. 227] .

A separate issue has been whether state courts are precluded by FUSFSPA from considering disability retirement pay in calculating underpayment of a community property obligation contained in a judgment that was final long before the enactment of FUSFSPA. One California court had held that FUSFSPA does not preclude such consideration [see In re Marriage of Stier (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 42, 49-55, 223 Cal. Rptr. 599] , but this issue was not before the U.S. Supreme Court in Mansell. However, to the extent that the California court relied on a lack of federal preemption over military disability benefits in reaching its conclusion, its reasoning would appear inconsistent with that in Mansell, and its decision is now possibly abrogated by Mansell.

[2] Remedies to Compensate Nonmilitary Spouse

Despite the preemptive effect of federal law in the treatment of militarydisability retirement benefits (§ 222.221[1]), courts in various states have increasingly sought means to ensure that former spouses' marital property interests are protected in the event of a future award of veteran's disability benefits to the service member [In re Marriage of Krempin (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1008, 1013-1015, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 134 (analyzing out-of-state cases)]. California has been slow to follow that trend. However, at least one published decision, In re Marriage of Krempin, supports using a resulting trust remedy to compensate the nonmilitary spouse if military retired pay is waived for disability benefits after an order or judgment has been entered that divides the retired pay as community property [In re Marriage of Krempin (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1008, 1021, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 134 (involving "Title 38" veteran's disability benefits)].

In Krempin, the parties divorced while the military service member (husband) was still in the Air Force. They stipulated to a division of the community interest in his (longevity) retired pay, providing for a percentage of future military retirement to be paid to the nonmilitary spouse (wife). Their incorporated marital settlement agreement provided for a reservation of the court's jurisdiction to "to make such orders relating to these retirement benefits as are necessary to carry out this agreement." After the former husband's retirement, the parties filed a stipulation with the court requiring a specific retirement dollar amount to be paid to the former wife--by the husband initially, and then by the Defense Accounting and Finance Center. Thereafter, the husband elected to waive retired pay for disability pay in several increments, ultimately resulting in a waiver of all of longevity-based retired pay [In re Marriage of Krempin (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1008, 1010-1011, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 134] . On appeal of the denial of the former wife's motion to restore the monthly payments, an appellate court reversed and remanded. It found that her claim hinged on the scope of the judgment's reservation of jurisdiction and the agreements in the judgment and postjudgment stipulation regarding the payments. It concluded that the resulting trust theory, which had been advanced by an earlier case [In re Marriage of Daniels (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1084, 1092, 231 Cal. Rptr. 169] , could well apply, because Mansell did not derogate any equitable doctrine; and, although the resulting trust would adhere to money received as disability benefits, there would be no impermissible division of the benefits if the husband remained free to satisfy the obligation with other assets. The court noted that the underlying basis for a resulting trust might not apply when military retirement had already been waived in favor of disability pay at the time that the order or judgment were entered, as had occurred in Mansell, On remand, the trial court was directed to consider whether the payment provisions of the judgment and stipulation, together with the reservation language--and, in this instance, any extrinsic evidence proffered to support the parties' positions--would be sufficient to show an intent that the nonmilitary former wife continue to receive her original share of the retired pay even if the service member husband waived all or a portion of it to receive disability benefits. If so, the court could impose a resulting trust in favor of the former wife, with payments to her directly from the former husband [In re Marriage of Krempin (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1008, 1020-1021, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 134 (also noting that laches or other principles to assure fairness might apply regarding past payments owing from husband); cf. Mansell v. Mansell (1989) 490 U.S. 581, 109 S. Ct. 2023, 104 L. Ed. 2d 675] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationDisability BenefitsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsMilitary BenefitsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
5. Division Of Military Pension And Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.222

§ 222.222 Division of Gross Versus "Disposable" (Net) Pay

Language in FUSFSPA [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(c)(1)] that permits a state to treat "disposable retired pay" either as separate or community property has been subject to dispute. Prior to the United States' Supreme Court decision in Mansell v. Mansell [Mansell v. Mansell (1989) 490 U.S. 581, 109 S. Ct. 2023, 104 L. Ed. 2d 675] , the California Supreme Court had construed this language. It held in Casas v. Thompson [Casas v. Thompson (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 131, 228 Cal. Rptr. 33, 720 P.2d 921] that, under FUSFSPA [10 U.S.C. § 1408], a court may divide the community interest in a military pension by using a retiree's gross pay and not simply his or her "disposable" (net) pay. FUSFSPA defines disposable pay and states that state courts "may treat" it as separate or community property according to their own laws [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(4), (c)(1)]. The Court in Casas stated that under FUSFSPA, "disposable" pay is essentially gross pay less statutorily specified deductions, which, except for the retiree's withholding tax liability, are under the retiree's direct or indirect control and will significantly vary among retirees with the same gross retirement pay [Casas v. Thompson (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 131, 143-151, 228 Cal. Rptr. 33, 720 P.2d 921 ; see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(4); In re Marriage of Daniels (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1084, 1090-1091, 231 Cal. Rptr. 169 (both partially superseded by Mansell v. Mansell (1989) 490 U.S. 581, 583, 109 S. Ct. 2023, 104 L. Ed. 2d 675 ; and by 1990 federal legislation under which 10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(4) no longer includes as a deduction from "disposable retired pay" amounts withheld for federal, state, or local income tax purposes, or amounts withheld under I.R.C. § 3402(i))].

However, in Mansell, the United States Supreme Court implicitly rejected this analysis, because it found that under FUSFSPA's plain and precise language, state courts have been granted the authority to treat only disposable retired pay as community property; they have not been granted the authority to treat total retired pay as community property. It also rejected the proposition that the "disposable retired or retainer pay" language only applies to the garnishment aspects of FUSFSPA [see Mansell v. Mansell (1989) 490 U.S. 581, 583, 109 S. Ct. 2023, 104 L. Ed. 2d 675] . While the Court in Mansell was construing FUSFSPA in the context of military retirement pay waived in order to receive veterans' disability benefits, it appears that its view on "total" versus "net" pay would extend to other types of deductions embraced within the concept of "disposable retired pay" Thus,it appears that the Casas view would no longer be applicable to the extent that it is inconsistent with Mansell 's.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationDisability BenefitsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsMilitary BenefitsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
5. Division Of Military Pension And Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.223

§ 222.223 Direct Payment to Nonmilitary Spouse

[1] What Benefits May Be Paid

Title 10 U.S.C. § 1408 provides a means of direct payment to a former spouse of his or her community share of military retirement benefits acquired by the service member spouse under a court-ordered division of the benefits, as well as direct payment of child or spousal support [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(d)(1); 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(c)(7); Casas v. Thompson (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 131, 147, 151, 228 Cal. Rptr. 33, 720 P.2d 921 , cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1012 (1986)] . The benefits include only disposable "retired" pay, as defined by statute [10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(4), (d)(1); see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(7)]. Use of the terms "retirement benefits" or "retired pay" in this discussion refers only to retired pay.

Title 10 U.S.C. § 1408 also authorizes direct payment of amounts from disposable retired pay to enforce a division of other property [10 U.S.C. § 1408(d)(5); 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(d)]. Payments made under 10 U.S.C. § 1408(d) to a spouse or former spouse with respect to a division of retired pay between the spouses under 10 U.S.C. § 1408(c) are not to be treated as amounts received as retired pay for service in the uniformed services [10 U.S.C. § 1408(c)(2) (applicable to divorces, dissolutions, annulments, and legal separations that become effective after the end of the 90-day period beginning on the Nov. 5, 1990, date of enactment)].

For discussion of garnishment of earnings of federal employees, including military personnel, to enforce a support obligation, see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement, § 259.11[8].

[2] Eligibility

In order to be eligible for direct payment under an order dividing a pension, a former spouse must have been married to the service member for 10 or more years, during which time the member must have performed 10 or more years of "creditable" service for retirement purposes. By contrast, this 10-year requirement is inapplicable to direct payment of benefits for child and spousal support [10 U.S.C. § 1408(d)(2); 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(a)(2); see also 32 C.F.R. § 63.3(f) (creditable service defined)]. Although failure to satisfy the 10 years of "marriage-during-service" requirement precludes direct payment to a former spouse, it does not prevent division of the military pension as community property as between the parties [see Mansell v. Mansell (1989) 490 U.S. 581, 109 S. Ct. 2023, 104 L. Ed. 2d 675 ; see also In re Marriage of Beltran (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 292, 296-298, 227 Cal. Rptr. 924] .

[3] Enforceable Court Orders

[a] Types of Enforceable Orders

Court orders that are enforceable by direct payment from a former spouse's military pension include final decrees of divorce, dissolution, annulment, or legal separation, as well as property settlements incident to those decrees that are ordered, ratified, or approved by a court [10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(2); 32 C.F.R. §§ 63.3(e), 63.6(c)(3); see also 10 U.S.C. § 1408(d)(1), (5) (support and property division orders, respectively)]. As used in the direct payment provisions, a final decree is one from which no appeal may be, or has been, taken, or from which appeal has been taken and finally decided [10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(3); 32 C.F.R. § 63.3(j)]. Enforceable orders also include final modifications of these previously issued decrees, or property settlements that are ordered, ratified, or approved by a court [10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(2); 32 C.F.R. §§ 63.3(e), 63.6(c)(3)].

[b] Requirements for All Orders

To be enforceable by direct payment from a former spouse's military pension, an order must be "regular on its face" [10 U.S.C. § 1408(b)(1)(B); see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(b)(2) (defining "regular on its face")]. It must also be authenticated or certified within 90 days immediately preceding its service (§ 222.223[4]) on the designated agent for the secretary of the relevant uniformed service [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(c)(2)]. If the order was issued while the service member was on active duty and was not represented in court, the order or other court documents must certify that there has been compliance under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act [50 U.S.C. App. § 501 et seq.] with the service member's rights [10 U.S.C. § 1408(b)(1)(D); 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(c)(4)]. Additionally, an enforceable order must show sufficient information to identify the service member, including his or her social security number if it can be obtained [10 U.S.C. § 1408(b)(1)(C); 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(c)(5)].

[c] Additional Requirements for Orders Dividing Property

An order allocating military retirement benefits to a nonmilitary spouse in a division of property must specifically provide that payment must be made from the service member's disposable retired pay to the spouse or former spouse of that member. It must also specify a fixed dollar amount, percentage, or fraction of that pay. This requirement is not satisfied by a formula for division whose elements are not specifically set forth or are not readily apparent on the face of the order, unless the court clarifies the formula [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(a)(2)(C); 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(c)(8)].

In addition, the order for property division must have been made by a court having jurisdiction over the military spouse either through residence, domicile, or consent. However, jurisdiction based on residence must not have been founded onthe service member's residence for military assignment. Furthermore, treatment of the benefits as separate or community property must have been in accordance with the jurisdiction's law [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(c)(1), (4); 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(c)(6)(i), (ii)].

Finally, a spouse who seeks to enforce a property division must present an order showing that he or she has satisfied the 10-year eligibility criteria for direct payment [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(c)(6)(iii); see discussion under § 222.223[2]]. If the order fails to state that the former spouse meets the eligibility criteria, the former spouse must submit sufficient evidence with an application for direct payment so that the designated agent can verify that the eligibility criteria are satisfied [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(b)(2)].

[4] Procedure

[a] Required Request and Accompanying Documents

To obtain direct payment of military retirement pay, a former spouse must deliver to the designated agent of the involved uniformed service a signed Defense Department Form DD 2293, "Request for Former Spouse Payments from Retired Pay" [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(b)(1)]. A copy of this form may be obtained from the designated agent for the relevant uniformed service branch. The address and telephone number for each designated agent is listed in 32, C.F.R. § 63.6(b)(5). Some service branches have developed their own versions of this form, so counsel should ascertain which form is required by the relevant service branch.

The form must be accompanied by a certified copy of the operative court order and copies of any other certified documents that provide for payment of child support, spousal support, or a division of property [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(b)(1)(ii)]. The court order accompanying the form must have been authenticated or certified within 90 days immediately preceding its service on the designated agent [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(c)(2)]. If the court order for a division of retired pay as property fails to state that the applicant satisfies the "10-year" eligibility criteria (§ 222.223[2]), the form also must be accompanied by evidence that the applicant was married to the service member for 10 years or more, during which the member performed 10 years' creditable service [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(b)(2); see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(d)(2); 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(a)(2)].

Instead of the official form, the former spouse may submit a signed statement that includes the following [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(b)(1)]:

- Notice to make direct payment to the former spouse from the service member's retired pay;

- A copy of the court order and other accompanying documents certified by an official of the issuing court that provides for child support, spousal support, or division of property;

- A statement that the court order has not been amended, superseded, or set aside;

- Sufficient identifying information about the service member to enable processing of the application, and this should include the service member's full name, Social Security number, and uniformed service;

- The full name, address, and Social Security number of the former spouse;

- Agreement by the former spouse, before payment, that any future overpayments are recoverable and subject to involuntary collection from the former spouse or his or her estate; and

- Agreement by the former spouse to personally notify the designated uniformed service agent promptly if the court order is vacated, modified, or set aside, which must include (a) notice of the former spouse's remarriage, if all or part of the payment is for spousal support, or (b) notice of a change in eligibility for child support payments under the circumstances of death, emancipation, adoption, or attainment of majority of a child whose support is provided through direct payment to a former spouse from retired pay.

Furthermore, if the court order for property division does not state that the former spouse satisfies the "10-year" eligibility criteria (see § 222.223[2]), the former spouse must furnish sufficient evidence for the designated agent to verify that the requirement was met [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(b)(2)].

[b] Service of Notice and Response

Notification of the designated uniformed service agent must be made by certified or registered mail, return receipt requested, or by personal service. Effective service is not made until a complete application providing all information required (§ 222.223[1]) is received in the office of the designated agent, who must note the date and time of receipt on the notification document [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(b)(3); see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(b)(1)(A)].

Not later than 90 days after effective service, the designated agent must respond by informing the former spouse if the court order will be honored. If it will be honored, the designated agent must inform the former spouse of (1) the date payments will tentatively begin; (2) the amount of each payment; (3) the amount of gross retired pay; (4) total deductions; and (5) disposable retired pay, except if full payment of a court-ordered fixed amount will be made. If the order will not be honored, the agent must explain the reasons in writing [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(b)(4)].

The designated agents for each uniformed service are set forth in 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(b)(5).

[5] Notification of Service Member

As soon as possible, but not more than 30 calendar days after effective service of a court order (or garnishment action) under 10 U.S.C. § 1408, the uniformed service's designated agent must send written notice to the affected service member at his or her last known address [10 U.S.C. § 1408(g); 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(f)(1)]. This notice must include [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(f)(2)]:

- A copy of the court order and accompanying documentation;
- An explanation of the limitations placed on the direct payment to a former spouse from a service member's retired pay;
- A request that the service member notify the designated agent if the court order has been amended, superseded, or set aside;
- The amount or percentage that will be deducted if the service member fails to respond to the notification as prescribed;
- The effective date that direct payments to the former spouse will tentatively begin;
- Notice that the service member's failure to respond within 30 days from the date the notice is mailed may result in the payment of retired pay as provided in the notification; and
- Notice that if the service member submits information in response to the notification, he or she thereby consents to the disclosure of that information to the former spouse or his or her agent.

If the service member responds to the notification, the uniformed service's designated agent must consider the response and will not honor the court order if it is shown to be defective, or that the order is modified, superseded, or set aside [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(f)(3)].

[6] Payment Procedure

[a] Commencement and Frequency of Payments

If the service member is entitled to receive retired pay when the court order is served,the uniformed service involved must begin payments to the former spouse not later than 90 days after the date of effective service of the order. If the member is not entitled to receive that pay as of the date of service, the payments must begin not later than 90 days after the date on which he or she first becomes entitled to receive it [10 U.S.C. § 1408(d)(1); 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(h)(1), (7)].

Payments to the former spouse must not be made more frequently than once each month and must conform to the normal pay and disbursement cycle of the uniformed service for retired pay [10 U.S.C. § 1408(d)(3); 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(h)(2)]. With regard to payments based on a percentage or fraction of disposable retired pay, the amount will change in direct proportion and at the effective date of future cost-of-living adjustments that are authorized, unless the court order directs otherwise [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(h)(2)].

[b] Limitations on Amount Payable

Payments to the former spouse are prospective in terms of the amount stated in the court order. Arrearages will not be considered in determining the amount payable [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(h)(10)]. Furthermore, the total amount payable of the member's disposable retired pay for all court orders and garnishment actions paid under 10 U.S.C.§ 1408, and garnishments paid under 42 U.S.C. § 659 [see discussion in Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement] may not exceed [10 U.S.C. § 1408(e)(1), (4)(B); 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(e)(1)]:

- 50 percent of the disposable retired pay for all court orders and garnishment actions paid under 10 U.S.C. § 1408; or

- 65 percent of the amount of the retired pay payable to the member that is considered under Section 462 of the Social Security Act [42 U.S.C. § 662] to be remuneration for employment that is payable by the United States.

[c] Treatment of Multiple Orders

If several court orders are served with regard to a service member's retired pay, payment must be satisfied on a first-come, first-served basis within the amount limitations prescribed [10 U.S.C. § 1408(e)(2); 10 U.S.C. § 1408(e)(4)(A) (garnishment orders); 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(h)(4)] (§ 222.223[6][b]). If conflicting court orders are served directing different amounts to be paid during a month to the same former spouse, payment of the least amount must be made. The difference in amounts of conflicting court orders must be retained by the uniformed service's designated agent pending resolution by the court that has jurisdiction, or by agreement of the parties. The amount retained must be paid as provided in a subsequent court order or agreement, but the total of all payments plus monies retained must be within the limitations prescribed [10 U.S.C. § 1408(e)(3); 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(h)(5); see also Steel v. U.S. (9th Cir. 1987) 813 F.2d 1545] (see § 222.223[6][b]).

[d] Termination of Payments

Direct payments terminate on the death of the service member, death of the former spouse, or as stated in the applicable court order, whichever occurs first [10 U.S.C. § 1408(d)(4); 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(h)(3)]. Furthermore, payments must be terminated or reduced on the occurrence of a condition requiring termination orreduction under applicable state law, such as the remarriage of a spouse receiving spousal support [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(h)(3); see Fam. Code § 4337].

[e] Request for Reconsideration by Former Spouse or Service Member

A former spouse or service member may request that the designated agent reconsider the determination made in response to service of an application for direct payments from retired pay [see 32 C.F.R. § 63.6(b)(4)] (§ 222.223[4]) or to the member's answer to the designated agent with respect to notice of such service [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(f)(3)] (§ 222.223[5]). For reconsideration, the request must express the issues that the former spouse or the member believes were incorrectly resolved by the designated agent. The designated agent must respond to the request for reconsideration, giving an explanation of the determination reached [32 C.F.R. § 63.6(i)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProceduresFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsMilitary BenefitsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewMilitary & Veterans LawServicemembersRetirement

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
5. Division Of Military Pension And Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.224

§ 222.224 Division of Omitted Pensions

[1] Postjudgment Motion Versus Partition Action-Motions

Under current law, a court has continuing jurisdiction to award community estate assets or liabilities to the parties that have not been previously adjudicated by a judgment in the proceeding. A party may file a postjudgment motion or an order to show cause in the proceeding in order to obtain adjudication of any community estate asset or liability omitted or not awarded by the judgment [Fam. Code § 2556].

However, special provisions of FUSFSPA appear to limit the operation of this statutory provision for postjudment relief. First, 1990 federal legislation [Pub. L. No. 101-510, § 555] amended FUSFSPA [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(c)(1)] to preclude a division of military retired pay as community property if a final decree of divorce, dissolution, annulment, or legal separation (or property settlement incident to the decree) was issued before June 25, 1981, and neither divided (nor reserved jurisdiction to divide) the pay.

Moreover, FUSFSPA sets forth requirements for personal jurisdiction over a military service member that may limit the practical ability of a nonmilitary former spouse to bring a postjudgment motion [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(c)(4)]. Nevertheless, whether the moving party must reestablish jurisdiction over the military spouse using the criteria set forth in FUSFSPA at the time the motion or order to show cause is filed, or whether the court's original personal jurisdiction over that spouse is sufficient, is unclear. In a case decided before the enactment of former Civ. Code § 4353, the predecessor to Fam. Code § 2556, an appellate court held that if a trial court has originally obtained personal jurisdiction over a military spouse under one of the bases set forth in FUSFSPA, the court still has personal jurisdiction for purposes of modifying the disposition that was addressed by a modified judgment [see In re Marriage of McDonough (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 45, 52, 227 Cal. Rptr. 872] .

Arguably, this holding could apply with regard to a postdissolution motion to divide an omitted or unadjudicated benefit. On the other hand, when a very long period has elapsed between the original judgment and the motion, the same considerations that underlie reestablishing jurisdiction in independent partition actions [see In re Marriage of Hattis (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1162, 1167, 1170, 242 Cal. Rptr. 410 , discussed below] may be present. Hence, the jurisdiction issue remains subject to court interpretation. Pending interpretation, the most prudent approach appears to be to attempt to acquire jurisdiction over the military spouse using the FUSFSPA criteria, as discussed in § 222.220[5].

[2] Partition Actions

A former spouse may bring an independent partition action to divide a pension omitted from a dissolution judgment if the spouse had a divisible interest in the asset at the time of the original dissolution decree [Casas v. Thompson (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 131, 139, 228 Cal. Rptr. 33, 720 P.2d 921 (superseded on other grounds in Mansell v. Mansell (1989) 490 U.S. 581, 583, 109 S. Ct. 2023, 104 L. Ed. 2d 675); Henn v. Henn (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 323, 328-329, 161 Cal. Rptr. 502, 605 P.2d 10 ; Shaver v. Shaver (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 788, 794, 165 Cal. Rptr. 672 ; see Berry v. Berry (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1155, 1161, 265 Cal. Rptr. 338 ; In re Marriage of Graves (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 1050, 244 Cal. Rptr. 110] . However, as in the postjudgment motion situation discussed above, federal law limits the scope of judgments that may be reopened in order to divide omitted military retirement benefits [see 10 U.S.C. § 1408(c)(1) (as amended by Pub. L. No. 101-510, § 555; precluding division of military retired pay as community property if final decree of divorce, dissolution, annulment, or legal separation (or property settlement incident to decree) was issued before June 25, 1981, and neither divided, nor reserved jurisdiction to divide, the pay)].

Furthermore, to entertain the partition action, the court must acquire personal jurisdiction over the service member spouse on one of the bases specified in FUSFSPA, as presently applied to the service member. "Minimum contacts" with California will not sustain jurisdiction [see In re Marriage of Hattis (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1162, 1167, 1170, 242 Cal. Rptr. 410 (court lacked jurisdiction over service member under FUSFSPA)].

In Casas v. Thompson, a former husband argued that the partition of a military pension omitted from a 1966 dissolution judgment was improper because McCarty v. McCarty (1981) 453 U.S. 210, 101 S. Ct. 2728, 69 L. Ed. 2d 589 (federal legislative scheme impliedly preempts state community property law and prohibits division of military retirement pay), applied retroactively to their 1966 divorce and precluded a former wife from having a community interest in thepension. The California Supreme Court refused, however, to give McCarty retroactive application. The Court also held that the former wife's community interest in the pension arose under In re Marriage of Fithian (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 592, 111 Cal. Rptr. 369, 517 P.2d 449 , which held that vested military pensions are community property. The Court further concluded that Fithian, which was decided in 1974, should be given full retroactive effect because it did not overturn a settled rule of law and its purposes are achieved by retroactive application. Finally, the Court in Casas held that res judicata and collateral estoppel did not bar the former wife's new partition action to determine her interest in the pension [Casas v. Thompson (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 131, 140-142, 228 Cal. Rptr. 33, 720 P.2d 921 (superseded on other grounds in Mansell v. Mansell (1989) 490 U.S. 581, 583, 109 S. Ct. 2023, 104 L. Ed. 2d 675); see Henn v. Henn (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 323, 328-329, 161 Cal. Rptr. 502, 605 P.2d 10] .

For additional discussion of dividing omitted community property, see § 222.53[5][e][i] et seq.

[a] Retroactive Award of Benefits

[i] Postjudgment Motions

In the case of a postdissolution motion or order to show cause to divide an omitted or unadjudicated community estate asset, the court must equally divide the asset, unless the court finds on good cause shown that the interests of justice require an unequal division [Fam. Code § 2556]. Though this provision does not expressly address the issue of retroactivity of the award, it seems to confer implicit authority on the court to adjust the award according to the interests of justice, which may take into account the retroactivity issue. However, no court has expressly so held, and the issue remains subject to court interpretation.

[ii] Partition Actions

In appropriate circumstances, a trial court may award by restitution to a former spouse a community share of pension payments received by the retiree spouse before a partition action to divide an omitted pension. The trial court must apply "equitable principles," both defenses and general considerations, in determining whether to enforce in whole or part a spouse's community share in retirement benefits received. The trial court is not limited to consideration of "equitable defenses" such as waiver, estoppel, and laches in deciding whether to award retroactive pension payments. It may consider any facts relevant to the fairness of retroactive payments. If the court decides that retroactive benefits should be awarded, it must then determine whether to tailor the form of that award to avoid placing an undue burden on the spouse ordered to pay [Casas v. Thompson (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 131, 151-152, 228 Cal. Rptr. 33, 720 P.2d 921 (under circumstances, trial court did not abuse discretion in determining that it would be inequitable to award to former wife retroactive pension benefits received by retiree spouse during 10 years preceding partition action)].

A retroactive award of a percentage of undivided, paid-out military pension benefits can be in the form of a money judgment enforceable by writ of execution [see In re Marriage of Farner (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1370, 1375-1376, 265 Cal. Rptr. 531 (award retroactive to date of separation in dissolution action)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProceduresFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsMilitary BenefitsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionPartition

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
5. Division Of Military Pension And Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 222.225-222.239

[Reserved]

§§ 222.225[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
6. Division Of Other Public Employee Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.240

§ 222.240 Federal Railroad Retirement Benefits

[1] "Tiered" System

Annuities under the Railroad Retirement Act [45 U.S.C. § 231 et seq.] are composed of independently calculated levels called "tiers." Tier I is calculated using Social Security benefit formulas and includes earnings in the railroad industry and in employment covered by the Social Security Act. Tier II is based on railroad retirement earnings alone [see 45 U.S.C. §§ 231b(a), 231b(b)]. Railroad employees that meet certain eligibility requirements on January 1, 1974 (or in certain cases, as of an earlier date) for dual benefits under both the Railroad Retirement Act and the Social Security Act may receive a third component called the "dual benefit" component. Furthermore, some pensioners may receive a supplemental annuity up to a specified maximum amount per month, depending on their length of service and other requirements [45 U.S.C. §§ 231a(b), 231b(h)].

[2] Characterization and Division of Benefits

In 1979, the United States Supreme Court held in Hisquierdo v. Hisquierdo (1979) 439 U.S. 572, 99 S. Ct. 802, 59 L. Ed. 2d 1 , that the Federal Railroad Retirement Act preempted state community property law and precluded any division of railroad retirement benefits as community property [Hisquierdo v. Hisquierdo (1979) 439 U.S. 572, 581, 99 S. Ct. 802, 59 L. Ed. 2d 1] .

On August 12, 1983, however, Congress amended the antiassignment statute of the Railroad Retirement Act on which Hisquierdo was based. The statute does not now prohibit the characterization of supplemental annuities and specified components of railroad retirement annuities as community property in accordance with a court decree of dissolution, annulment, or legal separation, or a court-approved marital termination property agreement incident to any such court decree. Thus, the Tier II annuity component, the dual benefit component, and the supplemental annuity is subject to division by dissolution decrees in accordance with state law. This amendment is effective with respect to any benefits payablefor months beginning in September 1983. Because Congress specifically exempted other annuity components from the amendment, federal law continues to preempt state community property law with respect to these components pursuant to Hisquierdo [see the Railroad Retirement Act of 1983 (45 U.S.C. § 231m, amended by Pub. Law 98-76, § 419); Hisquierdo v. Hisquierdo (1979) 439 U.S. 572, 581, 99 S. Ct. 802, 59 L. Ed. 2d 1] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewPensions & Benefits LawRailroad WorkersGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
6. Division Of Other Public Employee Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.241

§ 222.241 Employee Benefits of California Public Entities

[1] Public Employees' Retirement System (PERS) Benefits

Pursuant to legislation that initially was deemed retroactive to June 1, 1988, a court has authority, on the agreement of the nonemployee spouse, to make certain direct divisions of community benefits earned by a member of the Public Employees' Retirement System (PERS) in dissolution or legal separation proceedings [see Fam. Code § 2610(a)(3) (amendments operative January 1, 1995, provide that order directly dividing benefits be made on agreement of nonemployee spouse, but this was not previously required); see also Stats. 1988, ch. 542, §§ 8, 9, 11 (applicable to public retirement benefits having undivided community property interest and in dissolution or legal separation cases pending on effective date of act or in which court reserved jurisdiction over benefit or has not yet awarded benefit); but see Fam. Code § 2610(c) (prohibiting retroactive application of that statute to payments made by retirement plan to any person who retired or died before January 1, 1987, or to payments made to any person who retired or died before June 1, 1988, for plans subject to Fam. Code § 2610(a)(3),(4), involving PERS, STRS, or similar public entity benefits)].

The original authorizing legislation also added a new chapter of the Government Code [see Gov. Code § 21290 et seq.] setting forth the requirements for dividing community PERS benefits. It includes provisions for dividing accumulated contributions and service credits into two separate accounts, provisions for the contents of court orders, and for obtaining retirement allowances, refunds, and other benefits by both members and nonmembers (including former spouses) [see Gov. Code § 21290 et seq.]. It also specifies that a PERS member may not designate a beneficiary in derogation of the community property share of any nonmember spouse, unless he or she has previously obtained an alternative order for division pursuant to Fam. Code § 2610 [see Gov. Code § 21490]. For additional information, see Gov. Code § 21215 et seq.

[2] State Teachers' Retirement System (STRS) Benefits

The legislation discussed in § 222.241[1], which was initially deemed retroactive to June 1, 1988, also established the authority of a court to make certain direct divisions of community benefits earned by a member of the State Teachers'

Retirement System (STRS), on the agreement of the nonemployee spouse [see Fam. Code § 2610(a)(3) (amendments operative January 1, 1995, provide that order directly dividing benefits be made on agreement of nonemployee spouse, but this was not previously required); see also Stats. 1988, ch. 542, §§ 8, 9, 11 (applicable to public retirement benefits having an undivided community property interest and in dissolution or legal separation cases pending on effective date of act or in which court reserved jurisdiction over benefit or has not yet awarded benefit); but see Fam. Code § 2610(c) (prohibiting retroactive application of statute to payments made by retirement plan to any person who retired or died before January 1, 1987, or to payments made to any person who retired or died before June 1, 1988, for plans subject to Fam. Code § 2610(a)(3),(4), involving PERS, STRS, or similar public entity benefits). The original authorizing legislation created a new chapter within the Education Code [see Educ. Code § 22650 et seq.]. This chapter establishes the court's power over community property rights in accounts with the system and defines the rights of nonmember spouses and domestic partners in the system [see Educ. Code § 22650(a)].

The legislation prescribes the contents of court orders to divide the benefits and includes court authorization to order the establishment of separate accounts within STRS for both member and nonmember spouses, including former spouses. It also specifies the rights of nonmember spouses, such as the right to a retirement allowance, or to a refund of accumulated retirement contributions, which must be addressed in a court order [see Educ. Code § 22652; see also Educ. Code § 22655; cf. Educ. Code § 23812 (entitlement of surviving spouse, but not surviving domestic partner, to benefits under State Teacher's Retirement System following remarriage)]. The legislation further clarifies that a member or retiree may not designate a beneficiary in derogation of the community property share of any nonmember spouse, unless the nonmember spouse has previously obtained an alternative order for distribution under Fam. Code § 2610 [see Educ. Code § 23300].

However, no judgment or court order issued pursuant to these provisions is binding on STRS until it has been joined as a party to the action and served with a certified copy of the judgment or order [Educ. Code § 22656]. For additional information, see Educ. Code § 22650 et seq.

[3] Judge's Retirement System Benefits

Retirement and related benefits acquired by California state judges for service during marriage are subject to special rules concerning division on marital dissolution or legal separation. If community property is divided pursuant to Fam. Code § 2610, which authorizes certain direct divisions of public entity benefits on the agreement of the nonemployee spouse [see Fam. Code § 2610(a)(3)], the accumulated contributions and service credit attributable to periods of service during marriage must be divided into two separate and distinct accounts in the name of the member and nonmember (spouse or former spouse), respectively.Any service credit or accumulated contributions that are not explicitly awarded by the judgment or order will be deemed the exclusive property of the member [Gov. Code § 75050(b) (as amended by Stats. 1993, ch. 219; earlier urgency legislation, Stats. 1992, ch. 176, §§ 1, 4, 13, 14; signed July 11, 1992; chaptered July 13, 1992, was made retroactive to June 1, 1988, but was not intended to authorize an unequal division of community property on marital dissolution)].

Furthermore, on receipt of a court order separating the account of a member and nonmember, the administrative board must determine the nonmember's rights, taking into consideration the court order and member's account. These rights may include (1) the right to a retirement allowance, (2) the right to a refund of accumulated retirement contributions, (3) the right to redeposit eligible accumulated contributions, (4) the right to purchase eligible service credit, (5) the right to designate a beneficiary to receive accumulated contributions that are payable if death occurs before retirement, and (6) the right to designate a beneficiary for any unpaid allowance payable at the time of the nonmember's death [Gov. Code § 75050(c) (as amended by Stats. 1993, ch. 219; and by earlier urgency legislation, Stats. 1992, ch. 176, §§ 1, 4, 13, 14; signed July 11, 1992; chaptered July 13, 1992, made retroactive to June 1, 1988, and not intended to authorize an unequal division of community property on marital dissolution); see In re Marriage of Colvin (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1570, 1579-1582, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 323 (court properly divided judge's retirement benefits using "time rule" formula pursuant to 1979 stipulated order and was not required to apply statutory formula under circumstances; decided prior to 1992 amendments to Judge's Retirement Law)].

Other sections address each of the above subject areas, along with actual calculation of the parties' retirement allowances [see Gov. Code §§ 75033.6, 75051-75058, 75076.1; see also Gov. Code § 75058(a) (nonemployee spouse's retirement allowance based on judicial service during marriage and in accordance with property settlement agreement, subject to prescribed calculation method)]. Special rules apply for electing to come within the terms of these retirement provisions [see Gov. Code § 75090].

Uncodified legislation originally set forth provisions for applicability of the property division statutes, and these have subsequently been amended [see Stats. 1989, ch. 1379, §§ 6, 7; but see Stats. 1992, ch. 176, § 12 (urgency legislation, signed July 11, 1992, and chaptered July 13, 1992, amending Stats. 1989, ch. 1379, to provide that certain provisions of that act are deemed retroactive to June 1, 1988, and are not applicable to any action in which the division of retirement benefits was adjudicated before that date); Stats. 1992, ch. 176, § 13 (making certain amended provisions of Judge's Retirement Law retroactive to June 1, 1988)].

[4] County Benefits

Counties within California may choose to provide retirement benefits to their employees under the County Employees' Retirement Law of 1937 [see Gov. Code § 31450 et seq.]. As in the case of other retirement or pension benefits provided by California public entities, a court in proceedings for marital dissolution or legal separation will adjudicate the community interest of the employee-spouse and nonemployee-spouse in county benefits, and must make orders to assure that each party receives his or her full community share, including a share in any survivor benefits, pursuant to Fam. Code § 2610. Important limitations on the court's ability to make orders that directly affect the plan regarding the benefits (as opposed to rights between the spouses themselves) are set forth in that statute, as well as in the Government Code [see Fam. Code § 2610(b); Gov. Code § 31685 et seq.; see also Fam. Code § 2610(c) (limitations on retroactivity of that section)].

Pursuant to legislation operative January 1, 1995, a court in dissolution or legal separation proceedings may, after joinder of the county retirement plan, make orders dividing the parties' community interest in the plan into separate accounts for the employee and nonemployee spouse, and on receipt of such a court order the plan's administative governing board will determine the rights of the nonemployee to various allowances and refunds of accumulated contributions and sevice credit [see Gov. Code § 31685]. A court order for the division of accumulated community property contributions and service credit of the county plan may be made on the agreement of the nonemployee spouse [see Fam. Code § 2610(a)(3) (amendments operative January 1, 1995, provide that an order directly dividing the benefits be made on the agreement of the nonemployee spouse; however, the statute did not require this prior to that date)]. Detailed provisions for distribution of the community interest in county benefits are set forth in Gov. Code § 31685 et seq. Note, however, that, those provisions are only operative in any particular county when the county board of supervisors passes a resolution adopting them. Accordingly, counsel should verify whether adoption has taken place in the particular county before proceeding.

For a related general discussion of adjudicating rights to survivor and other benefits under public entity plans, see §§ 222.161 and 222.182[2][b].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsPensionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewPensions & Benefits

LawGovernmental EmployeesState PensionsPensions & Benefits LawGovernmental EmployeesTeacher Pensions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Division And Valuation Of Specific Personal Property
6. Division Of Other Public Employee Retirement Benefits

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 222.242-222.259

[Reserved]

§§ 222.242[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
1. Overview Of Debt Liability And Division Issues

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.260

§ 222.260 Need for Characterization Before Division

Debts and other obligations (referred to as "debts" collectively) must be characterized as separate or community before they can be divided or assigned on dissolution of marriage or legal separation [Fam. Code § 2550].

Fam. Code § 2620 et seq. sets forth a method of dividing and confirming those debts for which the community estate is liable that are unpaid at the time of trial or for which the community estate becomes liable after trial. However, as discussed in this subpart, certain classes and types of debts are subject to additional division rules [see, e.g., Fam. Code § 2625 (division of debts not incurred for community's benefit)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Estate, Gift & Trust LawCommunity PropertyGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionMarital Liabilities

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
1. Overview Of Debt Liability And Division Issues

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.261

§ 222.261 Application of Characterization Principles

[1] In General

Determining the character of a particular debt requires consideration of both general and specialized characterization principles. General principles include, for example, those that facially apply because of the time at which a debt was incurred in relation to the parties' marriage or separation, or because the debt was the subject of an agreement between the parties. For example, the general presumption that property acquired by a married person during marriage while domiciled in California is community property facially applies to debts as well as assets, because "property" in the context of family law litigation includes both of these [see Fam. Code § 760; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.10(d)].

However, the general characterization rules that otherwise might be applied to debts have been largely supplanted by a statutory scheme for debt liability that serves both to define interspousal rights, and to identify property available to satisfy the claims of third-party creditors [see Fam. Code § 900 et seq.].

As a result, counsel should not limit evaluation of the character of a particular debt to an application of the general rules of community property characterization. A court's characterization and division of debts will usually involve the following analytical process:

- Characterization pursuant to Fam. Code § 900 et seq.;

- Application, if appropriate, of more specialized characterization principles, such as, for example, transmutation of property [see Fam. Code § 850 et seq.];

- Application, if appropriate, of specialized reimbursement rules, such as, for example, the "credit" for postseparation payment of community obligations using separate property [see In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 80, 84, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 ; see also Fam. Code § 2626];

and

- Application of the statutory division rules set forth in Fam. Code § 2620 et seq.

A discrepancy may exist between the characterization of a particular asset and a debt that was incurred to acquire the asset. While characterization of a given asset as separate or community frequently results in a like characterization of its attendant debt, this may not necessarily follow. For example, the parties may have agreed to change the character of the debt or one party may have intentionally incurred separate debt in order to finance a community acquisition as a gift. Whether a right of reimbursement arises in any particular case is a separate issue.

In addition, while not common, credit acquisition rules may occasionally compel a different result. As discussed in Ch. 122, Community Property , a lender's intent will affect the characterization of loan proceeds. While these rules are applied in most instances to divide an asset acquired by the proceeds of a loan, there may be reasons to argue their applicability when the asset has a present value of less than the remaining loan. If the lender relied solely on one spouse's separate property, it may be argued that the debt is separate.

For discussion of reimbursement under Fam. Code § 2640, see § 222.302. For discussion of apportioning interests in a family residence, see § 222.91[2][a] et seq. For discussion of grounds on which a court may deny imposition of a family law attorney's real property lien, including that the encumbrance may result in an unequal division of community property because it would impair the encumbering party's ability to meet his or her fair share of community obligations, see § 222.35[1] et seq. [see Fam. Code §§ 1102(e), 2034].

[2] Effect of Liability Statutes

[a] Scope and Applicability of Statutes

Fam. Code § 900 et seq. sets forth the liability of community, quasi-community, and separate property for both contract and tort debts. These statutes distinguish between liability with regard to such property both before and after its division by a court in proceedings for marital dissolution or legal separation. Because characterization of debts is required to be made "[f]or the purposes of division and in confirming or assigning the liabilities of the parties for which the community estate is liable," each debt at issue must be evaluated in the light ofthese statutes [see Fam. Code § 2551 (emphasis added)].

The predecessor to Fam. Code § 900 et seq., former Civ. Code § 5120.010 et seq., became operative on January 1, 1985. Except as otherwise provided by statute, the provisions of Fam. Code § 900 et seq. [see former Civ. Code § 5120.010 et seq.] govern the liability of separate and community estate property and the personal liability of a married person for a debt enforced on or after January 1, 1985, regardless of whether the debt was incurred before, on, or after that date [Fam. Code § 930; see American Olean Tile Co. v. Schultze (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 359, 366-367, 215 Cal. Rptr. 184 (retroactive application of enacting legislation to debts incurred before operative date of amendments does not violate due process)].

In addition, the debt liability statutes contain provisions governing rights of reimbursement between spouses, which may be at issue on marital dissolution or legal separation. The provisions of Fam. Code § 900 et seq. governing reimbursement apply to all debts, regardless of whether satisfied before, on, or after January 1, 1985 [Fam. Code § 931; see Fam. Code § 920].

[b] Definitions and Construction of Terms

[i] Community Estate Defined

For purposes of liability for debts, as for other purposes, the term "community estate" includes both community property and quasi--community property [Fam. Code § 63]. Also for purposes of debt liability, quasi-community property is liable to the same extent, and must be treated the same in all other respects, as community property [see Fam. Code § 912 (discussed in § 222.261[2][c])].

[ii] Debt Defined and When Incurred

A "debt" is an obligation incurred by a married person before or during marriage, whether based on contract, tort, or otherwise [see Fam. Code § 902]. Thus, except for specific statutory distinctions, the same general rules apply to contract and tort debts [see Fam. Code §§ 902, 903].

A contract debt is "incurred" at the time the contract is made [Fam. Code § 903(a)]. A contract is "made" when the consideration for the contract is exchanged, without regard to the time of the performance required under the contract. Thus, for example, a contract to construct a building was held to be "made during marriage" when the consideration given and received--namely, the promise to build (and, if necessary, to do any remedial work to assure compliance with agreed on plans), and the right to payment, respectively--was exchanged before a spousal separation. A postseparation breach of a contract that was "made during marriage" gives rise to a community liability, subject to the rules for credit and reimbursement if the community is diminished for a separate wrongful act [In re Marriage of Feldner (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 617, 619-620, 622, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 312] .

Note that if the liability flowing from a breach of contract results from "emotional distress damages" it is more properly treated within the framework of tort debts [In re Marriage of Feldner (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 617, 627-628, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 312] .

A tort debt is "incurred" at the time the tort occurs. In other cases, a debt is incurred at the time the obligation arises [Fam. Code § 903(b), (c)]. For complete discussion of liability for tort debts, see § 222.320 et seq.

[c] Liability of Quasi-Community Property

Effective January 1, 1985, for purposes of debt liability [see Fam. Code § 900 et seq.], quasi-community property is liable for the parties' debts to the same extent, and must be treated the same in all other respects, as community property [Fam. Code § 912; see Fam. Code § 902 ("debt" defined); cf. Recommendation Relating to Liability of Marital Property for Debts, 17 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 1 (1983) (under pre-1985 law, quasi--community property was treated as separate property for debt liability purposes)].

Under the statutory scheme embodied in Fam. Code § 912 and case law interpreting its predecessor, former Civ. Code § 5120.120, no constitutional problem appears to have been presented in treating quasi-community property as community property for debt purposes at death, dissolution, or legal separation. On the occurrence of these events, property may be constitutionally reclassified as quasi-community property provided that, in marital situations, both parties have changed their domicile to California and seek to have a California court alter their marital status [see Fam. Code §§ 125, 912; Prob. Code § 66; In re Marriage of Roesch (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 96, 106-107, 147 Cal. Rptr. 586 ; Estate of Rogers (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 101, 106, 53 Cal. Rptr. 572] . For further discussion of quasi-community property in general, see § 222.13.

[d] Liability of Quasi-Marital Property

Quasi-marital property, which is property acquired by the parties during a void or voidable marriage (that at least one spouse believed in good faith was valid), is liable on division for the debts of the parties to the same extent as if the property had been community property or quasi-community property [see Fam. Code § 2252; see Fam. Code § 2251].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDebt LiabilityFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionMarital Liabilities

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
1. Overview Of Debt Liability And Division Issues

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.262

§ 222.262 Statutory Division Rules for Contract and Tort Debts

Because the parties' "community estate" includes both "assets and liabilities," community debts are subject to the general rule of equal division and theexceptions to that rule set forth by statute [see Fam. Code § 2550 et seq.] unless the parties have executed a written agreement or made an oral stipulation in open court governing the division of their debts [see Fam. Code § 2550; cf. Fam. Code § 2556 (division of previously unadjudicated or omitted assets or debts)].

When no such agreement has been made, the court is required to "characterize liabilities as separate or community, and confirm or assign them to the parties in accordance with [Fam. Code § 2620 et seq.]." Fam. Code § 2620 provides that the debts for which the community estate is liable that are unpaid at the time of trial or for which it becomes liable after trial, are to be confirmed or divided based on the following classification scheme [see Fam. Code § 2620 et seq.]:

- Premarital debts [see Fam. Code § 2621];
- Debts incurred during marriage and before separation [see Fam. Code § 2622];
- Debts incurred during marriage, but after separation and before entry of a judgment of marital dissolution or legal separation [see Fam. Code § 2623]; and
- Postjudgment debts incurred before termination of the parties' marital status [see Fam. Code § 2624].

However, special provisions apply to certain types of debts. For example, tort liabilities subject to Fam. Code § 1000(b)(2) (arising from activities not for community's benefit) are required to be assigned to the spouse whose act or omission provided the basis for the liability, without offset. Furthermore, educational loans are to be assigned pursuant to Fam. Code § 2641 [see Fam. Code § 2627; § 222.301].

In addition, all separate debts, including those incurred by a spouse during marriage and before the date of separation that were not incurred for the benefit of the community, must be confirmed without offset to the spouse who incurred the debt [Fam. Code § 2625].

Finally, the court may order reimbursement in cases it deems appropriate for debts paid after separation but prior to trial, and it may make such orders as it deems necessary to carry out the purposes of Fam. Code § 2500 et seq. [Fam. Code §§ 2553, 2626].

A separate issue is whether, and to what extent, a spouse may avoid property-related obligations imposed by a dissolution judgment in favor of the other spouse or of a third party by filing bankruptcy [see, e.g., Farrey v. Sanderfoot (1991) 500 U.S. 291, 111 S. Ct. 1825, 114 L. Ed. 2d 337, 342, 346-347 (bankrupt former husband could not avoid lien that secured former wife's interest in marital realty)]. For a discussion of bankruptcy-related issues, see Ch. 258, Family Law Enforcement: General Enforcement Principles and Remedies , and Collier, Family Law and The Bankruptcy Code (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDebt LiabilityFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionMarital Liabilities

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
1. Overview Of Debt Liability And Division Issues

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 222.263-222.279

[Reserved]

§§ 222.263[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
2. General Rules For Debt Liability, Including Contract Debts

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.280

§ 222.280 Premarital Debts

[1] Characterization--General Rules

The separate property of a married person is liable for a debt incurred by the person before marriage [Fam. Code § 913(a)]. Except as otherwise expressly provided by statute, the spouses' community estate also is liable for a debt incurred by either spouse before or during marriage, regardless of which spouse has management and control of the property and regardless of whether one or both spouses are parties to the debt or to a judgment for the debt [Fam. Code § 910(a); see, e.g., In re Marriage of Orchard (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 155, 157, 161, 273 Cal. Rptr. 499 (real estate was community property despite husband's quitclaim to his wife; property could be sold to satisfy lien for husband's child support arrearages from previous marriage); cf. 11601 Wilshire Associates v. Grebow (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 453, 457, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 912 (although wife's share of community property ultimately could be subject to execution in creditor's action against husband, it was improper to name wife as defendant when creditor did not and could not state cause of action against her)]. For purposes of determining liability of community property under these statutory provisions, the term "during marriage" does not include the period during which the spouses are living separate and apart before a judgment of marital dissolution or legal separation [Fam. Code § 910(b)].

Under certain conditions, a spouse's earnings are not liable for a premarital debt incurred by the other spouse, as discussed in § 222.280[2] [see Fam. Code § 911].

[2] Exception for Spouse's Earnings

[a] In General

A spouse's earnings during marriage are not liable for a debt incurred by the other spouse before marriage [Fam. Code § 911(a)]. For this purpose, effective January 1, 1990, the term "during marriage" does not include any period during which the spouses live separate and apart before receiving a judgment of marital dissolution or legal separation [Fam. Code § 910(b)]. To remain not liable for a debt incurred by the other spouse before marriage, the earnings (1) must be held in a deposit account in which the other spouse has no right of withdrawal and (2)must remain uncommingled with other community property, except property insignificant in amount [Fam. Code § 911(a); see Fam. Code § 911(b)(1) ("deposit account" has meaning prescribed in Com. Code § 9102(2)(29))]. "Earnings" are defined as compensation for personal services performed, whether as an employee or otherwise [Fam. Code § 911(b)(2)].

[b] Exception for Spouse's Separate Property

Except as otherwise provided by statute, the separate property of a married person is not liable for a debt incurred by the person's spouse before or during marriage [Fam. Code § 913(b)(1)]. Furthermore, for this purpose, the joinder or consent of a married person to an encumbrance of community estate property to secure payment of a debt incurred by the person's spouse does not subject the person's separate property to liability for the debt unless the person also incurred the debt [Fam. Code § 913(b)(2)].

For discussion of the liability of property for necessaries, an exception to the rule generally exempting the separate property of one spouse from liability for debts incurred by the other before or during marriage,§ 222.281[2][a] [see Fam. Code § 914].

[c] Preexisting Support Obligations

For purposes of debt liability [see Fam. Code § 900 et seq.], a married person's child or spousal support obligation that does not arise out of the marriage must be treated as a debt incurred before marriage, regardless of whether a court order for support is made or modified before or during marriage, and regardless of whether any installment payment on the obligation accrues before or during marriage [Fam. Code § 915(a)]. If community estate property is applied to the satisfaction of such a support obligation, the community estate is entitled to reimbursement from the married person if nonexempt separate income was available to him or her when property from the community estate was applied [see Fam. Code § 915(b); In re Marriage of Williams (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1239, 1244-1246, 262 Cal. Rptr. 317 (if community funds were applied after date of separation but before date of dissolution trial to satisfy married person's debt for child support arrearages from prior marriage, community is entitled to reimbursement)].

Fam. Code § 915 does not limit the matters a court may take into consideration in determining or modifying the amount of a support order [Fam. Code § 915(c)].

[3] Division

If the debts are unpaid at the time of trial or the community estate becomes liable after trial, debts incurred by either spouse before the date of marriage must be confirmed without offset to the spouse who incurred the debts [Fam. Code § 2621]. This is further reinforced by the provision that all separate debts are to be confirmed without offset to the spouse who incurred the debt [see Fam. Code § 2625].

Note, however, that an agreement made by the parties to transmute debt can alter the division requirements [see Fam. Code § 850 et seq.]. In addition, another statute governs the liability of property for premarital debt after division of the community estate [see Fam. Code § 916].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDebt LiabilityFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionMarital

Liabilities

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
2. General Rules For Debt Liability, Including Contract Debts

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.281

§ 222.281 Debts Incurred During Marriage and Before Separation

[1] Characterization--General Rule of Community Characterization

Except as otherwise expressly provided by statute, the spouses' community estate property is liable for any debt incurred by either spouse during marriage, regardless of which spouse has management and control of the property and regardless of whether one or both spouses are parties to the debt or to a judgment for the debt [Fam. Code § 910; cf. Collection Bureau of San Jose v. Rumsey (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 301, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 792, 6 P.3d 713 (under Probate Code, on death of debtor spouse, surviving spouse becomes personally liable for "any debts" of deceased spouse, but only to extent such debts are chargeable against community property, and deceased spouse's separate property passing to surviving spouse without formal probate administration);]. For purposes of determining the liability of community property under these circumstances, however, the term "during marriage" does not include the period during which the spouses are living separate and apart before entry of a judgment of marital dissolution or legal separation [Fam. Code § 910(b); see In re McCoy (1990) 111 Bankr. 276] .

Note that another statute governs the liability for debt of community estate property after division of the parties' community and quasi--community property [see Fam. Code § 916].

[2] Treatment of Separate Property in General

The separate property of a married person is liable for a debt incurred by the person during marriage [Fam. Code § 913(a)]. Except as otherwise provided by statute, the separate property of a married person is not liable for a debt incurred by the person's spouse during marriage [Fam. Code § 913(b)(1)]. Furthermore, for this purpose, the joinder or consent of a married person to an encumbrance of community estate property to secure payment of a debt incurred by the person's spouse does not subject the person's separate property to liability for the debt unless the person also incurred the debt [Fam. Code § 913(b)(2)].

For discussion of the liability of property for necessaries, an exception to the rule generally exempting the separate property of one spouse from liability for debts incurred by the other during marriage,§ 222.281[2][a] [see Fam. Code § 914].

[a] Rules for "Necessaries" and "Common Necessaries"

[i] Personal Liability of Spouse

Despite the statutory rule generally governing separate property liability [see Fam. Code § 913(a)], a married person is personally liable for the following debts incurred by the person's spouse during marriage [Fam. Code § 914(a)]:

(1) Any debt incurred for necessaries of life of the person's spouse while the spouses are living together; and

(2) Except as provided in Fam. Code § 4302, which provides that a spouse is not liable for the support of the other spouse when they are living separate from each other by agreement unless the support is stipulated in the agreement, any debt incurred for common necessaries of life of the person's spouse while the spouses are living separately.

A distinction is made between "necessaries of life" and "common necessaries of life." Under this statutory scheme, a spouse is personally liable for the other spouse's debt incurred for "necessaries" while the parties are living together, but is personally liable only for the other spouse's "common necessaries" while the spouses are living separately [Fam. Code § 914(a)]. Unfortunately, however, the statute does not define the terms "necessaries" and "common necessaries" [see Fam. Code § 914(a)] Nevertheless, the phrase "common necessaries of life," which appears more restrictive, also is used in Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051, which governs the exemption of certain earnings from attachment and execution. In that section, the phrase is defined as meaning those essentials that are necessary for the support of the individual or the individual's family supported or partially supported by the individual. The phrase has been judicially interpreted to include those items commonly required by all persons for the sustenance of life, whatever their employment status, including medical care [J.J. MacIntyre Co. v. Duren (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 16, 173 Cal. Rptr. 715 (interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. § 723.051, which essentially contained same provision); see Ratzlaff v. Portillo (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 1013, 1016, 92 Cal. Rptr. 722 (automobile is not necessary to sustain life and cannot be viewed as "common necessary of life" under former Code Civ. Proc. § 690.11)].

Note that, although Fam. Code § 914 addresses debts incurred during marriage for a spouse's "necessaries of life," and the availability of a nondebtor spouse's separate property to satisfy such debts, § 914 was not drafted to govern creditors' claims made after a community estate is terminated by a spouse's death [Collection Bureau of San Jose v. Rumsey (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 301, 311, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 792, 6 P.3d 713] . A surviving spouse's liability for a deceased spouse's debts is generally governed by the Probate Code. Thus, a surviving spouse is liable for a deceased spouse's debts only to the extent of his or her own share of the community property, plus those portions of the deceased spouse's share of the community property and the deceased spouse's separate property that passed to him or her without formal administration [Collection Bureau of San Jose v. Rumsey (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 301, 306-307, 309, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 792, 6 P.3d 713 ; see Prob. Code §§ 13550, 13551, 13554]. Furthermore, while there is a general four-year limitations period on claims by creditors on open book accounts, chargeable against the value of a spouse's separate property, to satisfy debts incurred by the other spouse for "necessaries of life," [see Code Civ. Proc. § 337] if the debtor spouse has died, creditors are bound by a one-year limitations period [see Fam. Code § 914(c)(1)]. However, if the surviving spouse has actual knowledge of the debt before the expiration of the one-year period and the personal representative of the deceased spouse's estate failed to provide the creditor with a timely written notice of the probate administration of the estate, the statute of limitations set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 337 (four years) or Section 339 (two years), as applicable, will apply [Fam. Code § 914(d)].

"Necessaries" is a relative term, the application of which has been restricted or enlarged according to the circumstances and conditions of the parties. Under any application it certainly includes things that are requisite for survival and sustenance [see Evans v. Noonan (1912) 20 Cal. App. 288, 293, 128 P. 794] , such as lodging, shelter [Taggart v.

Shepherd (1932) 122 Cal. App. 755, 759, 10 P.2d 808] , and food [Evans v. Noonan (1912) 20 Cal. App. 288, 293, 128 P. 794] . It also includes medical expenses incurred to relieve physical suffering and pain, and to overcome or conquer disease [see Follansbee v. Benzenberg (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d 466, 476, 265 P.2d 183 ; Credit Bureau of San Diego v. Johnson (1943) 142 P.2d 963] , as well as dental expenses [see Credit Bureau of Santa Monica Bay Dist., Inc. v. Terranova (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 854, 93 Cal. Rptr. 538] .

[ii] Creditor's Action for Debt

A creditor who supplies necessaries to an indigent spouse while the spouses are living together may sue the other spouse directly to satisfy the debt from that spouse's separate property [see In re Marriage of Higgason (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 476, 488, 110 Cal. Rptr. 897, 516 P.2d 289 , disapproved on another ground, In re Marriage of Dawley (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 342, 352, 131 Cal. Rptr. 3, 551 P.2d 323] . To be successful, the creditor must plead and prove that (1) the debt was incurred for necessaries of life and (2) the spouses were living together at the time the debt was incurred. An allegation that the nondebtor-spouse has separate property from which the judgment may be satisfied is permitted, but not required [see Credit Bureau of Santa Monica Bay Dist., Inc. v. Terranova (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 854, 860, 93 Cal. Rptr. 538] . Although the reported cases setting forth the required allegations in a creditor's action were decided before amendment of the law, operative January 1, 1985, they appear equally applicable to a creditor's action on a debt for furnishing "necessaries of life" while the spouses are living together[see Fam. Code § 914(a)(1) (former Civ. Code § 5120.140(a)(1))].

No court appears to have interpreted the "common necessaries" provision of Fam. Code § 914(a)(2), the successor to former Civ. Code § 5120.140(a)(2), which also became operative on January 1, 1985. A creditor's action on a debt for "common necessaries of life" furnished while the parties are living separately seemingly requires pleading and proof that (1) the debt was incurred for common necessaries of life and (2) the spouses lived separately at the time the debt was incurred [see Fam. Code § 914(a)(2)]. When the spouses were living separately by agreement, it is unclear whether the creditor also would be required to plead and prove that the agreement stipulated that one spouse is to support the other [see Fam. Code §§ 914(a)(2), 4302].

An allegation that a spouse incurred a debt for necessaries generally will be accepted without question in cases in which the creditor supplied a spouse with food, clothing, or shelter [see Taggart v. Shepherd (1932) 122 Cal. App. 755, 759, 10 P.2d 808] . The burden of proof required in other situations, however, such as expenses incurred for some of the less fundamental conveniences of modern society, is more substantial. It requires a showing that the claimed necessaries are in keeping with the standard of living to which the parties to the marriage are accustomed [see Wisnom v. McCarthy (1920) 48 Cal. App. 697, 701, 192 P. 337 (expenses required for domestic servants)].

[iii] Satisfaction From Spouse's Separate Property

The separate property of a married person may be applied to the satisfaction of a debt for which the person is personally liable for necessaries or common necessaries pursuant to Fam. Code § 914. If separate property is applied at a time when nonexempt property in the community estate or separate property of the person's spouse is available but not applied to the satisfaction of the debt, the married person is entitled to reimbursement to the extent the property was available [Fam. Code § 914(b)].

[3] Division

[a] General Rules

On dissolution or legal separation, debts incurred by either spouse after the date of marriage but before the date of separation must be divided as set forth in Fam. Code §§ 2550-2552 and 2601-2604. In general, and with certain exceptions, this means that debts incurred by either spouse after the date of marriage but before the date of separation usually must be divided equally [see Fam. Code § 2622(a)], subject to specified exceptions [see Fam. Code §§ 2550 et seq., 2600 et seq.; In re Marriage of Partridge (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 120, 124-125, 276 Cal. Rptr. 8] . Because each asset in the community estate need not be divided in half, a court may award different assets to each party, balanced by the award of debts so that the residual assets are equal [In re Marriage of Barnert (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 413, 421, 149 Cal. Rptr. 616 ; see In re Marriage of Schultz (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 846, 853, 164 Cal. Rptr. 653] .

In applying the equal division mandate to community debts, courts have considerable discretion. Nevertheless, when a debt is associated with a particular asset, courts often award the asset along with its corresponding debt to the same party. For example, if an asset is encumbered by a mortgage or lien, the party receiving that asset generally receives, for computation purposes, the value of the asset minus the lien and the same party becomes primarily liable for the lien debt. The debt then ceases to play a part in the further considerations of the court. Thus, when a trial court awarded the net equity in a family residence to a wife after deducting the amount of the encumbrance from the fair market value, and then used the encumbrance amount in its computation of the amount of debt awarded to her, the debt award was reversed on appeal. The trial court should not have added the amount of the encumbrance back into its computation of total outstanding debt being awarded, according to the appellate court [see In re Marriage of Barnert (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 413, 421-422, 149 Cal. Rptr. 616] .

Prominent exceptions to the equal division requirement are educational loans, which are to be assigned pursuant to Fam. Code § 2641 [see § 222.301], and tort liabilities subject to Fam. Code § 1000(b)(2), which are to be assigned to the spouse whose act or omission provided the basis for the liability, without offset [Fam. Code § 2627; for discussion, see § 222.321[1][a] et seq.].

In addition, all separate debts, including those debts incurred during marriage and before separation that were not incurred for the benefit of the community, are to be confirmed without offset to the spouse who incurred the debt [Fam. Code § 2625; see In re Marriage of Cairo (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1255, 1267, 251 Cal. Rptr. 731 (credit card charges for gambling money were assigned to spouse who gambled)]. A special exception for "negative estate" cases is discussed below.

Apart from the statutes governing the division of debts referred to above, principles of reimbursement and credit may apply. For example, if a contract that is "made during marriage" is breached by a spouse after separation, the community may have a right of reimbursement if the breaching spouse's "separate" conduct has diminished the community's value, even though liability for the breach is community in nature because the debt is "incurred" when the contract is made. Likewise, a credit may be appropriate for a spouse who uses his or her separate property resources, including personal services, to fulfill a contractual obligation that is community in nature. However, the party claiming entitlement to reimbursement or credit has an affirmative duty to assert that entitlement and to show that the claim is meritorious under controlling law [In re Marriage of Feldner (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 617, 619-620, 622, 625-626 ,].

[b] "Negative Estate" Cases

To the extent that community debts exceed total community and quasi-community assets, the excess of debt must be assigned as the court deems just and equitable. In making this determination, the court must take factors into account such as the parties' relative ability to pay [Fam. Code § 2622(b); see In re Marriage of Vanderbeek (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 224, 233-237, 222 Cal. Rptr. 832 ; In re Marriage of Eastis (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 459, 463-464, 120 Cal. Rptr. 861] .

[c] Reimbursement Issues

Apart from the general reimbursement provisions under the debt liability statutes, Fam. Code § 2626 confers jurisdiction on the court to order reimbursement in cases that it deems appropriate for debts paid after separation but prior to trial. Debts paid at this time by one or both parties often include debts incurred during marriage and before separation, as well as those incurred after separation and before trial. Reimbursement for the payment of such debts is discussed in § 222.300[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDebt LiabilityFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionMarital Liabilities

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
2. General Rules For Debt Liability, Including Contract Debts

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.282

§ 222.282 Debts Incurred After Separation and Before Judgment

[1] Characterization--General Exclusion From Community Liability

Community property is not liable for a debt incurred by either spouse while the spouses are living apart before a judgment of marital dissolution or legal separation [Fam. Code § 910; see In re McCoy (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1990) 111 Bankr. 276] . Although the separated spouses are still married, the statute on community debt liability is expressly limited, in that "during marriage" is defined to exclude the separation period [Fam. Code § 910(b)]. The definitional statute applies to all debts enforced on or after January 1, 1985, the operative date for overall revisions to the debt liability statutes [Fam. Code § 930; former Civ. Code § 5120.310; see In re McCoy (1990) 111 Bankr. 276 ; cf. Fam. Code § 931 (for purposes of reimbursement, definition applies to all debts, regardless of whether satisfied before, on, or after January 1, 1985)], even though the legislation that added the provision was passed during 1989]. Thus, as the result of the passage of former Civ. Code § 5120.110(c) [now see Fam. Code § 910], creditors could not reach one spouse's share of community property to satisfy debts incurred by the other spouse after separation, but before entry of a judgment of dissolution [In re McCoy (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1990) 111 Bankr. 276] .

[2] Common Necessaries of Life

A married person is personally liable for the debts incurred for common necessaries of life of the person's spouse while the spouses are living separately, except as provided in Fam. Code § 4302 (governing separations by agreement) [Fam. Code § 914(a)(2); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051(c) (referring to common necessaries of life)]. Common necessaries of life are those essentials commonly required by all persons for the sustenance of life, whatever their employment status, and may include medical care in a particular case [see J.J. MacIntyre Co. v. Duren (1981) 173 Cal. Rptr. 715 ; Ratzlaff v. Portillo (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 1013, 1016, 92 Cal. Rptr. 722] .

Therefore, the nonincurring spouse's separate property, as well as the parties' community property, would be subject to the claims of creditors for such debts, unless the parties provided otherwise in a written separation agreement under Fam. Code § 4302 [see Fam. Code § 914(a)].

Nevertheless, if the nonincurring spouse's separate property is applied to the satisfaction of the debt at a time when nonexempt community property or separate property of the incurring spouse is available but is not applied to the satisfaction of the debt, the nonincurring spouse is entitled to reimbursement to the extent the property was available [see Fam. Code § 914(b)].

[a] Division/Confirmation of Debts to Parties

The court in a dissolution or legal separation proceeding must confirm or divide unpaid debts that are incurred by either spouse after separation but before entry of the decree, and for which the community estate is liable at the time of trial or may become liable after trial [Fam. Code § 2551]. Fam. Code § 2623 provides that debts incurred by either spouse after the date of separation but before entry of a judgment of marital dissolution or legal separation are to be confirmed to the parties as follows:

1. Debts incurred by either spouse for the common necessaries of life of either spouse or the necessaries of life of the children of the marriage for whom support may be ordered, absent a court order or written agreement for the payment of support or for the payment of these debts, must be confirmed to either spouse according to the parties' respective needs and abilities to pay at the time the debt was incurred; and

2. Debts incurred by either spouse for nonnecessaries of that spouse or children of the marriage for whom support may be ordered must be confirmed without offset to the spouse who incurred the debt.

For discussion of special division rules regarding educational loans and tort liabilities subject to Fam. Code § 1000(b)(2), see § 222.301 and § 222.321[1][a] et seq., respectively [see Fam. Code § 2627]. Also, note the general provision that all separate debts are to be confirmed without offset to the spouse who incurred the debt [see Fam. Code § 2625]. General authority for reimbursement for debts paid after separation and prior to trial is set forth in Fam. Code § 2626, as discussed in § 222.300 et seq.

The division and assignment of debts between the parties does not necessarily affect the rights of creditors. Thus, if a party to whom a debt has been assigned as part of the division of property and liabilities fails to pay, the creditor may be able to collect from the other party [cf. Fam. Code § 916(b) (right of reimbursement)].

[b] Creditor's Rights When Property Transmuted

If the community property is transmuted into the separate property of a spouse after the spouses separate but before a judgment is rendered dissolving their marriage, it appears that a creditor of one of the spouses generally will be limited to the separate property of the debtor spouse in satisfying the debt, provided:

(1) The transmutation was not made to defraud an existing creditor of either spouse [American Olean Tile Co. v. Schultze (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 359, 364, 215 Cal. Rptr. 184 ; see Fam. Code § 851; Robertson v. Willis (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 358, 363, 143 Cal. Rptr. 523 ; Gould v. Fuller (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 18, 24, 57 Cal. Rptr. 23] ;

(2) The creditor was not misled to its detriment by the failure of the spouses to inform it that by virtue of an agreement between them the supposed community assets on which the creditor relied were, in fact, separate assets [In re Marriage of Dawley (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 342, 357 n.11, 131 Cal. Rptr. 3, 551 P.2d 323 ; American Olean Tile Co. v. Schultze (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 359, 364, 215 Cal. Rptr. 184] ; and

(3) All statutory notice requirements are met, as described below [see Fam. Code § 852(b) (notice to third parties regarding real property)].

Although third-party contract-creditors are not entitled to recover against former community assets transmuted into the separate property of the noncontracting spouse, they easily can avoid the risk of unknown interspousal transfers by obtaining both spouses' signatures on contracts or notes [American Olean Tile Co. v. Schultze (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 359, 365, 215 Cal. Rptr. 184 ; see Kennedy v. Taylor (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 126, 130, 201 Cal. Rptr. 779] . Furthermore, on or after January 1, 1985 [Fam. Code § 852(e)], transmutations are subject to the laws governing fraudulent transfers [Fam. Code § 851; see State Board of Equalization v. Woo (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 481, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 206 (wife's attempt to transmute community earnings to separate property was subject to laws governing fraudulent transfers)]. Transmutations of real property, unless recorded, are not effective as to third parties without notice [Fam. Code § 852(b)].

Transmutations that take place by way of marital settlement agreements executed during the course of dissolution proceedings are subject to fraudulent transfer law [Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 657, 668-669, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 74 P.3d 166] . Thus, a marital property division may be challenged as a fraudulent transfer, and set aside because of either actual [Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)] or constructive [Civ. Code §§ 3439.04(b), 3439.05] fraud [Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 657, 661, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 74 P.3d 166] . However, when deciding whether a transfer constitutes constructive fraud under fraudulent transfer law, courts should not consider the discounted value of future child support in determining a debtor's solvency, because child support is usually paid from future income rather than from current assets [Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 657, 661, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 74 P.3d 166 ; see Civ. Code § 3439.05].

The California Supreme Court has observed that the state legislature has a general policy of protecting creditors from fraudulent transfers, including transfers between spouses: a transfer before dissolution can be set aside as a fraudulent conveyance under Fam. Code § 851; a transfer after dissolution can be set aside under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act [Civ. Code § 3439 et seq.]. And if a court divides the marital property, a creditor of only one spouse receives some protection under the equal division requirement of Fam. Code § 2550. Consequently, the Court has concluded that the state legislature's enactment of Fam. Code § 916, which protects property transferred to a spouse incident to divorce from the debts of the other spouse, was not intended to grant married couples a one-time-only opportunity to defraud creditors by including a fraudulent transfer in a marital settlement agreement [Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 657, 668-669, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 74 P.3d 166] . The Court has expressly rejected the argument that allowing marital settlement agreement transfers to be considered fraudulent to creditors would needlessly complicate marital settlement negotiations [Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 657, 668-669, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 74 P.3d 166 ; see Gagan v. Gouyd (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 835, 842-843, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 733 , disapproved to the extent that it is inconsistent with Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 657, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 74 P.3d 166] .

To be found fraudulent, a transfer must be made with a debtor's actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud a creditor [Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)]. Thus, in one case, a former husband's transfer of retirement assets from a nonexempt Individual Retirement Account into an exempt retirement plan, executed immediately after the husband lost a multimillion dollar arbitration and just before he filed for bankruptcy, was held not to be a fraudulent transfer under state law, because the purposeful conversion of nonexempt to exempt assets on the eve of bankruptcy is not fraudulent per se under federal bankruptcy law [In re Stern (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1036, 1039, 1044-1045 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 704.115(b) (exempting private retirement plans from enforcement of money judgments)]. In that case, the husband divorced his wife after losing the arbitration, and, under a stipulated property settlement agreement, transferred his nonexempt community property (more than two million dollars' worth) to the wife, retaining his exempt assets and assuming the arbitration award (a community debt) [In re Stern (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1036, 1045 (dissenting opinion)]. However, the federal circuit courtdecided that the sole "unspectacular" fact that the husband had lost a multimillion dollar arbitration did not satisfy the burden of proving fraud by a preponderance of the evidence [In re Stern (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 1036, 1045] .

For additional discussion of transmutations of property, see Ch. 122, Community Property . For discussion of Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act [Civ. Code § 3439 et seq.], see Ch. 270, Fraudulent Conveyances .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDebt LiabilityFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationTransmutationFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionMarital Liabilities

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
2. General Rules For Debt Liability, Including Contract Debts

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.283

§ 222.283 Postjudgment Debts Incurred Before Marital Status Terminated

[1] Characterization

Debts incurred by a spouse after entry of a decree of marital dissolution or legal separation and prior to the termination of his or her actual marital status are ordinarily the separate liability of the incurring spouse. This characterization follows from the parties' separation in connection with the family law proceeding, the court's judgment that they are entitled to be restored to the status of single persons as of a particular date and, unless bifurcated for later trial, the complete adjudication of their rights in marital property [see Fam. Code §§ 910, 913, 1000(b)(2), 2340].

However, one of the debt liability statutes sets forth the property to which creditors may resort for satisfaction of debts after a division of community and quasi-community property. A special right of reimbursement is provided if property of a spouse is applied to the satisfaction of a money judgment pursuant to the liability statute [see Fam. Code § 916].

[2] Division

Fam. Code § 2624 provides that debts incurred by either spouse after entry of a judgment of dissolution but prior to termination of the parties' marital status, or after entry of a judgment of legal separation, must be confirmed without offset to the spouse who incurred the debt [cf. Fam Code §§ 2625 (separate debts as required to be confirmed without offset to incurring spouse), 2627 (exception to equal division for educational loans and tort liability subject to Fam. Code § 1000(b)(2))].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDebt LiabilityFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital

Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionMarital Liabilities

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
2. General Rules For Debt Liability, Including Contract Debts

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.284

§ 222.284 Debt Liability After Division of Community Estate

[1] Property Liable

After a court divides property in a proceeding for marital dissolution or legal separation, Fam. Code § 916 governs the personal liability of a party and the liability of particular property for a debt incurred before or during marriage, as well as the right of a spouse to be reimbursed for property applied to the satisfaction of a money judgment for such debt. This section is important primarily with respect to actions by creditors against one or both of the spouses. Creditor's actions, of course, might take place at various times, including, for example, during marriage, on dissolution, or thereafter [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Katz (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1711, 1720-1722, 286 Cal. Rptr. 495 (judgment creditor filed lien in dissolution action)].

Notwithstanding any other provision of the general marital property liability statutes [see Fam. Code § 910 et seq.], after division of community and quasi-community property [see Fam. Code § 2500 et seq.], the married person is personally liable, and the property he or she owns at the time of division or receives in the division is liable, for the following debts:

(1) A debt incurred by the married person before or during marriage, regardless of whether the debt was assigned for payment by the person's spouse in the division [Fam. Code § 916(a)(1)]; and

(2) A debt incurred by the married person's spouse before or during marriage if the debt was assigned for payment by the married person in the division of the property. If a money judgment for the debt is entered after the division, the judgment may not be enforced against the property or the married person unless the person is made a party to the judgment to pay the debt assigned in the division of property [Fam. Code § 916(a)(3); see In re Chenich (9th Cir. 1988) 87 Bankr. 101 (former wife's share of community property was protected from liability for torts committed by husband before property division; tort judgment was not entered until after property division)].

For discussion of possible reimbursement for property applied to satisfaction of a money judgment assigned for payment to the payor's spouse, see § 222.284[3].

[2] Property Not Liable

Notwithstanding any other provision of the general marital property liability statutes [see Fam. Code §§ 910-916], after division of community and quasi-community property [see Fam. Code § 2500 et seq.], the married person is not personally liable, and the property he or she owns at the time of division or receives in the division is not liable, for any debt incurred by the person's spouse before or during the marriage unless payment of the debt was assigned to the person in the property division. Nothing in the operative statute, however, affects the liability of property for the satisfaction of a lien on the property [Fam. Code § 916(a)(2); see also Gagan v. Gouyd (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 835, 841-842, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 733 , disapproved on other grounds in Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 657, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 74 P.3d 166 (former wife's postdivision property was not liable for creditor's claim, when transfer of assets provided in marital settlement agreement was not fraudulent conveyance and former husband's debt was not assigned to wife); cf. In re Marriage of Katz (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1711, 1721-1722, 286 Cal. Rptr. 495 (under circumstances of case, wife's transferto husband of property subject to third party creditor's lien as part of community property settlement gave rise to wife's liability to creditor); see In re Marriage of Braendle (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1037, 1042, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 397] .

A married person's separate property or property received in the division of the community property is not liable for payment of a money judgment entered after the division if the person is not made a party [Fam. Code § 916(a)(3)]. This rule applies to all debts enforced on or after January 1, 1985, regardless of whether the debt was incurred before, on, or after that date [Fam. Code § 930; see, e.g., In re Chenich (9th Cir. 1988) 87 Bankr. 101 (tort claim that arose before January 1, 1985, but that was not reduced to money judgment until after that date, could not be collected from former community property of former spouse because she was not made party to tort suit); see In re Marriage of Braendle (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1037, 1042, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 397] .

[3] Property Applied to Satisfaction of Judgment

If property of a married person is applied to satisfy a money judgment for a debt incurred by the person but assigned in the court's property division for payment to the person's spouse, the person is entitled to reimbursement from the spouse to the extent of the property applied, plus interest at the legal rate. The person also may recover reasonable attorneys' fees incurred in enforcing the reimbursement right [Fam. Code § 916(b)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentDischarge, Release & SatisfactionFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsDebt LiabilityFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionMarital Liabilities

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
2. General Rules For Debt Liability, Including Contract Debts

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 222.285-222.299

[Reserved]

§§ 222.285[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
3. Reimbursement Issues In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.300

§ 222.300 Debt Reimbursement in General

[1] Applicable Law

Before 1985, case law established a limited right of reimbursement in cases in which community property was used to pay separate property debts, or when separate property was used to pay community debts or the separate debts of the other spouse [see, e.g., Weinberg v. Weinberg (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 557, 563-564, 63 Cal. Rptr. 13, 432 P.2d 709 ; see also In re Marriage of Smaltz (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 568, 147 Cal. Rptr. 154] . Operative January 1, 1985, the provisions of Fam. Code § 900 et seq. (former Civ. Code § 5120.010 et seq.) that govern reimbursement apply to all debts, regardless of whether satisfied before, on, or after January 1, 1985 [Fam. Code § 931]. In addition, specific statutory provisions govern reimbursement for separate property contributions to the acquisition of community property [Fam. Code § 2640].

While specific reimbursement provisions must be applied to particular types of debts, as discussed hereafter, the following general provisions apply regarding rights of reimbursement pursuant to Fam. Code § 900 et seq. First, a reimbursement right provided by those statutes arises regardless of which spouse applies the property to the satisfaction of the debt, regardless of whether the application of the property is voluntary or involuntary, and regardless of whether the debt is satisfied in whole or in part. The right is subject to an express written waiver by the spouse in whose favor the right arises [Fam. Code § 920(a)].

Second, the measure of reimbursement under the debt liability statutes is the value of the property or interest at the time the right arises [Fam. Code § 920(b)]. Third, the reimbursement right must be exercised not later than the earlier of the following times [Fam. Code § 920(c); see In re Marriage of Curtis (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 387, 391-392, 256 Cal. Rptr. 76 ; but see Fam. Code § 1000(c) (special reimbursement rule for certain tort liabilities)]:

(1) Within three years after the spouse in whose favor the right arises has actual knowledge of the application of the property to the satisfaction of the debt; or

(2) In proceedings for the division of community and quasi-community property pursuant to Fam. Code § 2500 et seq., or in proceedings on the death of a spouse.

[2] Debts Incurred Before or During Marriage--When Reimbursement Available

[a] Satisfaction of Debt Assigned to Spouse

A married person may obtain reimbursement from the spouse if the married person's property is applied to the satisfaction of a money judgment pursuant to Fam. Code § 916 for a debt incurred by the married person that is assigned for payment by the person's spouse on division of the parties' community and quasi-community property [see Fam. Code § 2500 et seq.]. The married person has a right of reimbursement to the extent of the property applied, with interest at the legal rate, and also may recover reasonable attorney's fees incurred in enforcing the reimbursement right [Fam. Code § 916(b)].

[b] Satisfaction of Support Obligation

For purposes of the general rules of liability [see Fam. Code § 900 et seq.], a married person's child or spousal support obligation that does not arise out of the marriage is treated as a debt incurred before marriage, regardless of whether a court order is made or modified before or during marriage, and regardless of whether any installment payment on the obligation accrues before or during marriage [Fam. Code § 915(a)]. If property in the community estate is applied to the satisfaction of a married person's child or spousal support obligation that does not arise out of the marriage at a time when nonexempt separate income of theperson is available but is not applied to the satisfaction of the obligation, the community estate is entitled to reimbursement from the person in the amount of the separate income, not exceeding the community estate property so applied [Fam. Code § 915(b)]. Thus, if community funds are used to satisfy a married person's debt for child support arrearages from a prior marriage after the date of separation but before the date of a trial for dissolution, the community is entitled to reimbursement for the funds used [In re Marriage of Williams (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1239, 1244-1246, 262 Cal. Rptr. 317 ; see Fam. Code §§ 915, 2621, 2626].

A court must treat each support payment as a separate obligation or debt. To secure reimbursement under Fam. Code § 915, a party must show that the other spouse had nonexempt separate income available at the time that spouse used community funds to make a support payment. A spouse has a right to use community funds to make a support payment when the spouse does not have nonexempt separate income available to use for that purpose [In re Marriage of Sherman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 795, 805, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 137] .

Accordingly, a child or former spouse may enforce a support obligation not only against the separate property of the support obligor, but also against all community property of the subsequent marriage [see Fam. Code §§ 910, 915; see also In re Marriage of Ramer (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 263, 272-273, 231 Cal. Rptr. 647 (community earnings of obligor's new spouse increased amount available for support to obligor's former spouse)]. The earnings of the nonobligor spouse are not liable for the other spouse's premarital support obligations, however, so long as his or her earnings (1) remain uncommingled with other community property (unless insignificant in amount) and (2) are held in a deposit account in which the person's spouse has no right of withdrawal [Fam. Code § 911]. Nothing, however, in Fam. Code § 915 limits the matters a court may take into consideration in determining or modifying the amount of a support order [see Fam. Code § 915(c) (specifically providing that this statute does not preclude court from considering earnings of parties' spouses with regard to setting or modifying support; but Fam. Code § 4057.5, a more specific statute on "new mate" income, greatly restricts consideration of new spouse's or partner's income for support modification purposes, as discussed in Ch. 224, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Support)]. For discussion of special rules that apply with respect to the determination of support orders, see Ch. 224, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Support , and Ch. 225, Dissolution of Marriage: Spousal Support .

A married person's obligation to support an indigent parent is also a community obligation for which the person is not required to reimburse the community. An individual has an obligation under Fam. Code § 4400 to support an indigent parent to the extent the individual is able, and such an obligation imposed by statute is a "debt" within the meaning of Fam. Code § 910 [In re Marriage of Leni (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1087, 1096-1098, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 886].

[c] Satisfaction of Debt for Necessaries

A married person is personally liable for debts incurred by the person's spouse for necessaries of life while the spouses are living together and, except as provided in Fam. Code § 4302 (governing spouses living apart by agreement), for common necessaries of life incurred by the spouse while the spouses are living separately [Fam. Code § 914]. The separate property of a married person may be applied to the satisfaction of a debt for which the person is personally liable under this rule. If separate property is applied at a time when nonexempt community estate property or separate property of the person's spouse is available but is not used to satisfy the debt, however, the married person is entitled to reimbursement to the extent the property was available [Fam. Code § 914(b)].

For additional discussion of spouses' liability for necessaries and common necessaries, see § 222.281[2][a][i] et seq.

[3] Debts Incurred or Paid After Separation

[a] Debts Incurred After Separation

Under current law, and unless the parties have altered the usual characterization principles by their own agreement, debts incurred while married persons are living separate and apart before entry of a judgment of marital dissolution or legal separation generally are not subject to a community property presumption [see Fam. Code § 910; see also In re McCoy (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1990) 111 Bankr. 276, 281-282 (statutory rule applies to all debts enforced on or after January 1, 1985)]. Unlike prior law, which generally did not distinguish between preseparation and postseparation debts, current law generally limits liability for postseparation debts to the separate property of the incurring spouse. An exception to this rule of limited liability and special rules on division exist for debts incurred for "necessaries" and "common necessaries" of the parties and their minor children [see Fam. Code §§ 913, 914(a)(2), 2623]. Thus, reimbursement by the community to a spouse's separate property for payments made on a debt incurred after separation is not a common issue.

A court, in dividing community property, has jurisdiction to order reimbursement in cases it deems appropriate for debts paid after separation but before trial [Fam. Code § 2626]. Although this statute often is applied to postseparation payments made on preseparation debts, it also may apply to postseparation payments made on a debt incurred after separation and before trial. In addition, the parties may have altered the usual characterization principles by their own agreement.

Debts incurred by a spouse after entry of a decree of marital dissolution or legal separation and before the termination of the parties' marital status also ordinarily are the separate liability of the incurring spouse [see Fam. Code §§ 910, 913]. Thus, reimbursement by the community to separate property for payments made on a debt incurred after entry of the decree is not a common issue.

Nevertheless, one of the debt liability statutes lists the property to which third party creditors may resort for satisfaction of debts after a division of community estate property [Fam. Code § 916]. Under this statute, a special right ofreimbursement is provided in cases in which the property of one spouse is applied to the satisfaction of a money judgment assigned to the other spouse for payment pursuant to that liability statute, as discussed in § 222.284[3] [see Fam. Code § 916(b)].

For discussion of reimbursement to the community for payment of a separate debt with community property, see §

222.304.

[b] Debts Paid After Separation

[i] Overview of Considerations

After spouses have separated with no intention of resuming their marital relationship, one or both of them may have paid debts with separate or community property. Most litigation concerning postseparation payment of debts arises out of a spouse's use of his or her separate property, usually earnings, to pay a community debt that was incurred before separation. Often, the debt involves monthly loan payments on a family residence. In other cases, community income may have been used after separation to discharge a separate debt. In either case, the issue of reimbursement may arise.

In the case of paying a separate debt with community property, it appears that the long-standing rule entitling the community to reimbursement is still valid, if the spouses have not agreed to the contrary [see In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 89, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 ; see also Fam. Code § 915(b) (reimbursement to community for payment of premarital support obligation)]. In addition, Fam. Code § 2626 permits a court to order reimbursement "in cases it deems appropriate" for debts paid after separation but prior to trial.

With respect to the payment of a community debt with separate property, at least two bases for reimbursement must be considered. First, as in the case of a separate debt, the court has statutory authority to order reimbursement for the postseparation payment of a community debt [see Fam. Code § 2626]. Second, case law has established a right of reimbursement when certain criteria are met, which is called Epstein reimbursement [see In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 82-85, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165] .

A related consideration concerns the application of Fam. Code § 2640, which requires reimbursement in certain cases for separate property contributions to the acquisition of community property. Although it is not limited by its terms to preseparation "contributions," the reported appellate cases appear to have so construed its application. Thus, for example, one court found that the limitations on reimbursement imposed by Fam. Code § 2640 are inapplicable to and do not limit a trial court's discretion in ordering reimbursement for postseparation payments from separate property on community debts under In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 82-85, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 , or Fam. Code § 2626 [see In re Marriage of Hebbring (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1271-1272, 255 Cal. Rptr. 488] .

Thus, pending any further construction of its application, Fam. Code § 2640 appears not to limit reimbursement for postseparation payments on community debts that is otherwise available under Epstein or by statute. Reimbursement under Fam. Code § 2640 is discussed in § 222.302[1] et seq.

In addition, a related issue concerns reimbursement for postseparation payment from separate property of improvements to community property, when the improvements were unilaterally made after separation by one spouse without any agreement between the spouses regarding them. One court approved, in general, of permitting reimbursement to the extent it can be demonstrated the expenditure increased the fair market value of the property, after determining that Fam. Code § 2640 was inapplicable, but suggested that an increase in value may not be the only measure of reimbursement in a particular case, depending on the equitable factors involved [see In re Marriage of Reilley (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1119, 1124, 1124 n.3, 242 Cal. Rptr. 302] . Reilley appears to be consistent with the principles underlying Epstein to the extent that it found that there should be no presumption that the contributing spouse intended to make a postseparation gift of separate property, but it did not involve postseparation payment of a preseparation community debt, which is usually involved in Epstein reimbursment.

[ii] Statutory Authorization for Reimbursement

The court has jurisdiction to order reimbursement when it deems appropriate for debts paid after separation but before trial [Fam. Code § 2626]. Thus, for example, a spouse who uses separate property after separation but before trial to pay a community debt incurred before separation may be reimbursed by means of a set-off in the division of community property interests [see In re Marriage of Jeffries (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 548, 278 Cal. Rptr. 830] .

This statutory provision became operative on January 1, 1987, and does not distinguish between the payment of separate or community debts. It appears to apply to both, as discussed above.

The effect of Fam. Code § 2626 on the rules of reimbursement established by preexisting case law has been uncertain. However, it appears that this section clarifies the right of a court to order reimbursement in appropriate cases and does not conflict with the reimbursement rights outlined in In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 82-85, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 , which are discussed in § 222.300[3][b][iii] and [iv] [see In re Marriage of Hebbring (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1271-1272, 255 Cal. Rptr. 488] .

Thus, for example, pursuant to Fam. Code § 2626, a court ordered reimbursement for postseparation payment (from community funds) of a spouse's supportobligation from a prior marriage, even though this tended to enlarge the reimbursement remedy to which he otherwise would have been entitled under the debt liability statutes [see In re Marriage of Williams (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1239, 1244-1246, 262 Cal. Rptr. 317] .

[iii] Epstein Reimbursment in General

The California Supreme Court set forth reimbursement guidelines in In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 82-85, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 , for postseparation payment of community debts using separate property, before the enactment of comprehensive "debt liability" statutes or the statutory authorization for reimbursement [see Fam. Code § 2626; see also Fam. Code § 900 et seq.].

In Epstein, the Court concluded that, although a spouse is generally not entitled to reimbursement for separate property utilized to meet community debts (because of a long-standing gift presumption) unless there is an agreement for reimbursement, that rule does not apply to postseparation expenditures. The Court adopted the reasoning of an earlier appellate decision to the effect that when parties have separated in anticipation of marital dissolution, the rational basis for presuming an intention by the paying spouse to make a gift no longer exists [In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 84, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 (quoting from In re Marriage of Smith (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 725, 745-747, 145 Cal. Rptr. 205 ; and decided before enactment of Fam. Code § 2640)].

Furthermore, because of the practical realities of most situations, application of a no-reimbursement rule would discourage payment of community debts after separation, exacerbate the financial and emotional disruption that often accompanies a marital breakup, and possibly result in impaired credit reputations of both spouses [In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 84, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 (quoting from In re Marriage of Smith (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 725, 745-747, 145 Cal. Rptr. 205)].

Thus, in Epstein, the Court held that a husband could claim reimbursement for amounts paid after separation to preserve and maintain the parties' family residence, unless these amounts were spent to fulfill his support obligations. It said that as a general rule, a spouse who, after separation, uses earnings or other separate funds to pay preexisting community debts should be reimbursed for these out of community property on dissolution. However, reimbursement should not be ordered automatically, because there are several situations in which reimbursement would be inappropriate, including the following [In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 84-85, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165] :

1. Payment made under circumstances in which it would be unreasonable to expect reimbursement, such as, for example, when there was an agreement for no reimbursement, when the paying spouse truly intended a gift, or generally, when payment was made on account of a debt for the acquisition or preservation of an asset the paying spouse was using and the amount paid was not substantially in excess of the value of the use; or

2. Payment which constituted in reality a discharge of the paying spouse's duty to support the other spouse or dependent child of the parties.

In determining whether a given payment was in reality a discharge of the paying spouse's support duty, there are two primary factors to be considered (absent a court order determining the right to reimbursement), namely (1) whether there was a need for spousal or child support at the time the payment was made, and (2) whether the payment was made in addition to the reasonable support already being provided by the paying spouse, with or without a court order [In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 86 n.5, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 ; see In re Marriage of Green (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 14, 22, 261 Cal. Rptr. 294] .

As indicated above, the use of In re Marriage of Epstein as authority for reimbursement appears to have survived the enactment of later reimbursement-related legislation, including Fam. Code § 2640 [see In re Marriage of Hebbring (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1264, 1269-1270, 255 Cal. Rptr. 488 ; see also In re Marriage of Green (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 14, 22 n.4, 261 Cal. Rptr. 294 ; Fam. Code § 2640 is discussed in § 222.302].

Although Epstein reimbursement is largely associated with the payment of community debts, its linkage to any support duty of a spouse who claims reimbursement also makes it a support issue. In fact, the court in In re Marriage of Hebbring [In re Marriage of Hebbring (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 255 Cal. Rptr. 488] distinguished Epstein from Fam. Code § 2640 reimbursement and stated that the issue of Epstein credits is "almost never a property issue, but a support issue." If, as in Epstein, no temporary support order has been made, but support is otherwise at issue, the right of reimbursement is restricted so that a spouse's support obligation is considered before allowing that spouse credits for postseparation payments on community debts. If a temporary support order has issued, the issuing court has several alternatives if it has allocated the payment of community debts between the parties pending trial. The best practice, in the view of the Hebbring court, is a combination of ordering reimbursement from the community for payment of certain community debts and ordering none for others, using Epstein guidelines [see In re Marriage of Hebbring (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1271, 255 Cal. Rptr. 488 (dictum on applying Epstein); see also In re Marriage of Katz (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1029, 1038, 247 Cal. Rptr. 562 ; In re Marriage of Stallworth (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 742, 750-751, 237 Cal. Rptr. 829] .

Under the Epstein guidelines, in the Hebbring court's view, if one spouse hasused separate property to pay community debts, the failure to provide reimbursement from the community would, in effect, result in an unequal division of community property (assuming reimbursement would otherwise be proper). However, the Hebbring court suggested that when the paying spouse has actually been using the asset that is the subject of the debt, such as a residence or vehicle, no reimbursement ordinarily should be ordered, unless the amount of the debt payment greatly exceeds the value of the asset's use [In re Marriage of Hebbring (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1271, 255 Cal. Rptr. 488 (dictum); see also In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 85, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 ; In re Marriage of Garcia (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 885, 891, 274 Cal. Rptr. 194] .

Therefore, in addition to considering the paying spouse's support obligation, counsel must fully consider the relationship between an entitlement to reimbursement for payment of a debt and use of the asset for which the debt was incurred, as discussed in § 222.300[3][b][iv].

[iv] Relationship to "Use" Charges

The issue of the relationship between reimbursement "credits" under Epstein, for postseparation payment of a community debt, and "use charges," (also known as "Watts charges") for the asset that is the subject of the debt has arisen with some frequency, and often in connection with a family residence. It has been held that if one spouse has the exclusive use of a community asset during the period between separation and trial, that spouse may be required to compensate the community for the reasonable value of the use [see In re Marriage of Garcia (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 885, 890, 274 Cal. Rptr. 194 ; In re Marriage of Watts (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 366, 372-374, 217 Cal. Rptr. 301 (use of family residence and medical practice)].

However, no compensation for exclusive use is ordinarily required if the "user" spouse also pays monthly finance payments for the asset out of his or her separate property, if these payments equal or exceed the reasonable value of the asset's use. The same result is reached when a user spouse makes separate property payments on the debt that equal or exceed the reasonable use value and he or she has not been awarded Epstein credits for making the payments [In re Marriage of Garcia (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 885, 890-891, 274 Cal. Rptr. 194 (occupying wife, in effect, made mortgage payments because of husband's payments in lieu of spousal support)]. Although a spouse who exclusively uses an asset would not ordinarily receive Epstein credits, he or she may receive credits when the amount of the debt payment substantially exceeds the use value [In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 85, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 ; In re Marriage of Hebbring (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1271, 255 Cal. Rptr. 488] .

When one spouse exclusively uses a community asset while the other spouse is making postseparation debt payments from separate property, the issue of Epstein credits and "use" charges also arises. In one decision, an appellate court held that a trial court achieved a net equal division of a couple's community estate, even though it allocated Epstein credits to one spouse, who made postseparation payments on a community residence from separate property, while allocating "usage charges" to the other spouse, who exclusively occupied the residence. In that instance, a trial court had reduced the total (overall) value of community property awarded to the paying spouse as separate property by a certain amount as credit for advances made by that spouse for house payments while the house was exclusively used by the other spouse. In addition, the trial court awarded to the occupying spouse as her separate property a use value attributed to her exclusive occupation, based on reasonable rental value [In re Marriage of Jeffries (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 548, 551, 278 Cal. Rptr. 830] .

In upholding the trial court's method of division in Jeffries, the appellate court reasoned that the net effect of the allocation was an equal sharing of Epstein credits by both spouses and an equal bearing of use charges, in view of the fact that the credits and charges are, respectively, to be paid from, or paid to, the community [In re Marriage of Jeffries (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 548, 553, 278 Cal. Rptr. 830] .

Thus, in any particular case, counsel must determine whether "use" charges are at issue by themselves, or in addition to, Epstein credits. If both are involved, the court may properly allocate an appropriate amount for "credits" and "use charges" as set forth in Jeffries [In re Marriage of Jeffries (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 548, 553-554, 278 Cal. Rptr. 830] , so as to achieve a net equal division of the community estate. Counsel must also take into account the effect of any support duty of the spouse who has been paying the debt on the asset being used [see In re Marriage of Garcia (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 885, 890-891, 274 Cal. Rptr. 194 (occupying wife, in effect, made mortgage payments because of husband's payments in lieu of spousal support and was not required to compensate community for use value)].

For a general discussion of determining interests in a family residence, see § 222.90 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentDischarge, Release & SatisfactionFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsDebt LiabilityFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionMarital Liabilities

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
3. Reimbursement Issues In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.301

§ 222.301 Treatment of Educational Loans

Subject to the parties' express written agreements to the contrary [Fam. Code § 2641(e)], educational loans must be assigned pursuant to the terms of Fam. Code § 2641 notwithstanding the general statutory provisions applicable to division of the community estate (Fam. Code § 2550 et seq.) and confirmation and division of community estate debts (Fam. Code § 2620 et seq.) [Fam. Code § 2627]. Section 2627 governs both reimbursement and assignment of "community contributions to education or training," a phrase defined as meaning payments made with community or quasi--community property for education or training, orfor the repayment of a loan incurred for education or training, regardless of whether the payments were made while the parties were California residents [Fam. Code § 2641(a); see generally In re Marriage of Sullivan (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 762, 767-768, 209 Cal. Rptr. 354, 691 P.2d 1020 ; In re Marriage of Watt (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 340, 353-354, 262 Cal. Rptr. 783] .

Under Fam. Code § 2641, the community must be reimbursed for any community contributions to education or training of a party that substantially enhance the earning capacity of that party [but see In re Marriage of Graham (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1321, 1325-1326, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 685 (no reimbursement when spouse's enhanced earning capacity from legal education was only speculative)]. The amount reimbursed is to be made with interest at the legal rate, accruing from the end of the calendar year in which the contributions were made [Fam. Code § 2641(b)(1)]. Furthermore, any loans incurred during the marriage for the education or training of one of the spouses is not included among the liabilities of the community for purposes of division, but is assigned for payment to the party who received the education or training [Fam. Code § 2641(b)(2)].

The required reimbursement and assignment can be reduced or modified to the extent that circumstances render such a disposition unjust. Circumstances qualifying for this exception include, but are not limited to, any of the following [Fam. Code § 2641(c)]:

(1) The community has benefitted substantially from the education, training, or loan incurred for the party's education or training;

(2) The education or training received by the party is offset by the education or training received by the other party for which community contributions have been made; and/or

(3) The education or training enables the party receiving the education or training to engage in gainful employment that substantially reduces the need of the party for support that otherwise would be required.

Reimbursement for community contributions and assignment of loans as discussed above is the exclusive remedy available to a party or to the community [Fam. Code § 2641(d); see In re Marriage of Weiner (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 235, 239-240, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288 (medical education received before marriage)]. This rule of exclusivity, however, does not limit the court's consideration of the effect of the education, training, or enhancement, or the amount reimbursed, on the circumstances of the parties for purposes of an order for support [Fam. Code § 2641(d); see Fam. Code § 4320 (factors considered in awards of spousal support)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Education LawAdministration & OperationStudent Financial AidGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsDebt LiabilityFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionMarital Liabilities

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
3. Reimbursement Issues In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.302

§ 222.302 Separate Property Contributions to Acquisition of Community Property

[1] Statutory Reimbursement--General Rule and Applicable Proceedings

For the purpose of dividing the community estate in proceedings for marital dissolution or legal separation, unless a party has made a written waiver of the right to reimbursement or has signed a writing that has the effect of a waiver [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Weaver (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 858, 870, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 (spouse does not waive right to reimbursement of contribution of separate property interest in real property by adding other spouse's name to deed for this property); In re Marriage of Carpenter (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 424, 427-429, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 526 (written waiver must show actual intention to waive reimbursement right)], the party must be reimbursed for his or her contributions to the acquisition of the property to the extent the party traces the contributions to a separate property source [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Cochran (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1059, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 920, 929 (parties stipulated regarding portions of separate and community property deposited in bank; under family expense presumption, once community property funds were exhausted, it could be presumed that subsequent payments were expenditures from separate property funds)]. The amount reimbursed must be without interest or adjustment for change in monetary values and must not exceed the net value of the property at the time of the division [Fam. Code § 2640(b); see former Civ. Code § 4800.2]. The separate property contribution is reimbursed before the division of the community asset to which the contribution was made [see In re Marriage of Walrath (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 907, 913, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 856, 952 P.2d 1124] . For discussion of "contributions to the acquisition of property" [see Fam. Code § 2640], see § 222.302[2].

A contributing spouse's right of reimbursement under this provision is not defeated, absent an effective written waiver, even if he or she intended to make a gift of separate property [see In re Marriage of Witt (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 103, 108, 242 Cal. Rptr. 646 ; see also In re Marriage of Perkal (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1198, 1202-1203, 250 Cal. Rptr. 296 (use of words "for a gift" in joint tenancy deed did not constitute waiver of right to reimbursement)].

However, because reimbursement under Fam. Code § 2640 only arises in the context of dividing community property on dissolution or legal separation [Fam. Code § 2640(b)], the fact that a separate property contributor has a potential reimbursement claim will not prevent a community asset, or the proceeds of its sale, from being treated as entirely community in a forum such as bankruptcy court--prior to the time that the reimbursement right is adjudicated in family court [In re Mantle (9th Cir. 1998) 153 F.3d 1082, 1086] .

In addition, Fam. Code § 2640 does not apply to a separate property businessthat was incorporated during marriage, absent a transmutation that complies with the requirements of Fam. Code § 852. Instead, the spouse who owned the business prior to the marriage is entitled to a share of the business based on the Pereira method of apportionment [In re Marriage of Koester (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1036-1038, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 76 (trial court should have applied Pereira method, rather than awarding husband value of his separate property business on date of marriage with no return for his capital investment)]. For a discussion of transmutation, see Ch. 122, Community Property . For a discussion of the Pereira apportionment method, see § 222.134 [see Pereira v. Pereira (1909) 156 Cal. 1, 7, 103 P. 488] .

For discussion of the applicability of Fam. Code § 2640 in various proceedings, see Ch. 122, Community Property [see Fam. Code § 2580; In re Marriage of Heikes (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1211, 1225, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 155, 899 P.2d 1349 (reimbursement statute may not constitutionally be applied to property acquired before January 1, 1984); In re Marriage of Bankovich (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 49, 54-56, 249 Cal. Rptr. 713 ; see also In re Mantle (9th Cir. 1998) 153 F.3d 1082 (because Fam. Code § 2640 reimbursement right does not arise until adjudication of asset as part of community estate, unadjudicated property will be treated as community property of both spouses for bankruptcy estate purposes)]. For discussion of the treatment of separate property contributions when the property involved is subject to a deferred sale of home order, see § 222.302[2][e].

[2] Reimbursable Contributions

[a] In General

"Contributions to the acquisition of property," as used in the separate property reimbursement statute [Fam. Code § 2640], include down payments, payments for improvements, and payments that reduce the principal of a loan used to finance the purchase or improvement of the property. The term does not, however, include payments of interest on the loan or payments made for maintenance, insurance, or taxation of the property [Fam. Code § 2640(a); see In re Marriage of Cochran (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1062, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 920, 939 (payment of school fee required to obtain building permit for home was reimbursable as "home improvement" expense; but evidence was unclear on whether amount paid into "interest reserve" fund was used for interest, and husband failed to meet burden of establishing that amount was not used for interest--and was not reimbursable)]. Payments specifically included as "contributions to the acquisition of the property" are those that either directly contribute to equity acquisition, or are expenses or costs of making improvements that may increase equity, assuming that the improvement actually results in an increase in property value. On the other hand, payments specifically excluded are those that do not contribute to equity acquisition, despite the fact that they are expenses necessary to retain ownership, or preserve, and protect the owner's interest [In re Marriage of Nicholson & Sparks (2002)104 Cal. App. 4th 289, 296, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 882 (no reimbursement of separate property funds used to reduce preexisting community debt so that couple could qualify for home loan)].

Property covered by Fam. Code § 2640 includes not only specific community property to which separate property was originally contributed, but any other community property that is later acquired from the proceeds of refinancing the initial property and to which the separate property contribution can be traced [see In re Marriage of Walrath (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 907, 918, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 856, 952 P.2d 1124 ; In re Marriage of Cochran (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 920] .

The value of separate contributions is to be determined as of the time they were made, and is expressed in terms of separate equity. These "contributions" include, for example, separate property gifts to a spouse that are used to acquire property placed in joint tenancy. Such joint tenancy property, of course, is rebuttably presumed to be community property on marital dissolution or legal separation under current law [see Fam. Code § 2580, 2581]. Assuming the community presumption is not rebutted, the reimbursement amount is limited to the fair market value of the property at the time it was transferred to the spouses, less any outstanding encumbrances for which the community was obligated [see In re Marriage of Perkal (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1198, 1202, 250 Cal. Rptr. 296 ; In re Marriage of Martinez (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 20, 31, 202 Cal. Rptr. 646 (disapproved on other grounds in In re Marriage of Buol (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 751, 764 n.10, 218 Cal. Rptr. 31, 705 P.2d 354 , and In re Marriage of Fabian (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 440, 451 n.13, 224 Cal. Rptr. 333, 715 P.2d 253)].

Similarly, when property has been converted from separate property to joint tenancy, and the applicable community presumption [see Fam. Code §§ 2580, 2581] is not rebutted, the measure of separate property reimbursement is the value of the separate property equity at the time of its conversion to joint tenancy form; that is, the property's fair market value, less outstanding encumbrances and less any community property contributions prior to its conversion that are found not to be a gift to separate property. The reimbursement cannot include any appreciation in the property's value [see Fam. Code § 2640; In re Marriage of Weaver (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 858, 869-870, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 ; In re Marriage of Neal (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 117, 123, 123 n.11, 200 Cal. Rptr. 341 (disapproved on other grounds in In re Marriage of Buol (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 751, 764 n.10, 218 Cal. Rptr. 31, 705 P.2d 354 , and In re Marriage of Fabian (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 440, 451 n.13, 224 Cal. Rptr. 333, 715 P.2d 253); see also In re Marriage of Perkal (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1198, 1202, 250 Cal. Rptr. 296] .

By contrast, if the value of the community property is less than the original equity value of the separate property contributed, the court may award the entireproperty to the contributing spouse as the measure of reimbursement [In re Marriage of Witt (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 103, 108, 242 Cal. Rptr. 646 (dairy farm declined in value from time contributing spouse made gift of farm to community; court restored entire farm to contributing spouse); accord In re Marriage of Walrath (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 907, 913, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 856, 952 P.2d 1124] .

With respect to real property, in addition to any other evidence of value, a party who converted real property from separate to joint form is competent to testify about its value as of the time of its conversion. The requirement of Fam. Code § 2640 that a party claiming reimbursement be able to "trace" a contribution to a separate property source does not impose a rigid requirement that a spouse submit authenticated written documentation establishing an exact value for separate realty later transmuted to community property; thus, it does not preclude the property owner from giving an opinion on value [In re Marriage of Stoll (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 837, 843, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 506] .

The form of the separate contribution includes, for example, money used towards the purchase of property derived from a spouse's inheritance proceeds [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Palmer (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 190, 193, 214 Cal. Rptr. 79 (loan and inheritance); In re Marriage of Koppelman (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 627, 636, 205 Cal. Rptr. 629 ; both cases disapproved on other grounds in In re Marriage of Fabian (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 440, 451 n.13, 224 Cal. Rptr. 333, 715 P.2d 253] ; money derived from stock, profit-sharing funds, or real property [In re Marriage of Cochran (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1054, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 920 (separate contribution from profit-sharing funds); In re Marriage of Grinius (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 1179, 1190-1191, 212 Cal. Rptr. 803] ; and one spouse's separate property that is converted to community property [In re Marriage of Carpenter (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 424, 427, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 526 (husband's home purchased before marriage)], joint tenancy [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Perkal (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1198, 1202, 250 Cal. Rptr. 296 (husband's home acquired before marriage); In re Marriage of McNeill (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 548, 562-563, 206 Cal. Rptr. 641 (disapproved on other grounds in In re Marriage of Fabian (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 440, 451 n.13, 224 Cal. Rptr. 333, 715 P.2d 253); In re Marriage of Benart (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 183, 188, 206 Cal. Rptr. 495 (disapproved on other grounds in In re Marriage of Buol (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 751, 764 n.10, 218 Cal. Rptr. 31, 705 P.2d 354 , and In re Marriage of Fabian (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 440, 451 n.13, 224 Cal. Rptr. 333, 715 P.2d 253)], or other joint title during marriage [see, e.g, In re Marriage of Witt (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 103, 106-108, 242 Cal. Rptr. 646 (separate property deeded to grantor and spouse as "husband and wife")].

Because reimbursement is made on a dollar-for-dollar basis and without adjustment for monetary values [see Fam. Code § 2640(b)], the reimbursable amount may not exceed the amount of the separate property contribution even if the contribution produces a monetary benefit to the community that is greater than the contribution. Thus, for example, a spouse's reimbursement was limited to the exact dollar amount of her $40,000 separate contribution toward acquisition of a family residence, even though by making the contribution the creditor forgave the spouses' entire debt on the property, totaling $53,000, and thereby allowed the community to realize an additional $13,000 benefit. The $13,000 savings inured to the community's benefit, rather than being reimbursable to the spouse who made the separate contribution [In re Marriage of Tallman (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1697, 1699-1700, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 323] .

When the community asset to which the separate property contribution was made is refinanced and the resulting loan proceeds are used in part to purchase or pay down the indebtedness on that original asset and other community assets, reimbursement through tracing is still possible. However, the court must ascertain what percentage of loan proceeds traceable to each asset is based on the separate property contribution. Thus, for example, a trial court would calculate the ratio of the separate property contribution to the original property's total equity at the time of refinancing to ascertain what portion of the loan proceeds represented the contributor's separate property contribution traceable to that original property and any other community assets acquired with the proceeds [see In re Marriage of Walrath (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 907, 922, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 856, 952 P.2d 1124 ; see also In re Marriage of Cochran (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 920] .

[b] Effect of Contributions by Both Spouses

If both spouses made traceable separate contributions to the acquisition of community property, both may be entitled to reimbursement under Fam. Code § 2640, unless one has made a written waiver of the right to reimbursement or signed a writing that has the effect of a waiver [In re Marriage of Taylor (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 471, 473-474, 206 Cal. Rptr. 557 (disapproved on other grounds in In re Marriage of Buol (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 751, 764 n.10, 218 Cal. Rptr. 31, 705 P.2d 354 , and In re Marriage of Fabian (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 440, 451 n.13, 224 Cal. Rptr. 333, 715 P.2d 253)]. This principle also applies if the original property to which the contributions were made has been refinanced, and the loan proceeds from refinancing have been used in part to purchase or pay down the indebtedness on the original and other community assets. In that event, the calculation method discussed in § 222.302[2], would be used [see In re Marriage of Walrath (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 907, 922, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 856, 952 P.2d 1124] . For related discussion of the valuation of reimbursable contributions in the context of a division of real property, see § 222.90 et seq.

[c] Waiver of Reimbursement Right

Although Fam. Code § 2640 provides that the right to reimbursement may be relinquished by making a written waiver or by signing a writing that has the effectof a waiver, it does not otherwise define the elements of an effective waiver. However, no waiver will be inferred, for example, from the mere execution of a joint tenancy deed [In re Marriage of Perkal (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1198, 1202-1203, 250 Cal. Rptr. 296 ; In re Marriage of Kahan (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 63, 71-72, 219 Cal. Rptr. 700] , from placement of title to property in community property form [In re Marriage of Fabian (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 440, 448 n.9, 224 Cal. Rptr. 333, 715 P.2d 253] , or from execution of other property-related documents not clearly intended as waivers [In re Marriage of Carpenter (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 424, 426, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 526 (premarital agreement); In re Marriage of Lange (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 360, 365, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 379 (promissory note and deed of trust)]. In addition, a spouse's conveyance of his or her separate property to both spouses as joint tenants by a deed reciting that the transfer is "for a gift" and not "for a valuable consideration" is not necessarily a waiver of the right to reimbursement under Fam. Code § 2640, if the conveying spouse has no intention of relinquishing that right [see In re Marriage of Perkal (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1198, 1202-1204, 250 Cal. Rptr. 296 (words "for a gift" were used to avoid payment of transfer taxes and reassessment of property value on transfer)].

[d] Application to Postseparation Contributions

By its terms, Fam. Code § 2640 does not distinguish between preseparation and postseparation contributions to the acquisition of community property. The Legislature apparently intended it to apply to reimbursement for preseparation contributions, but it is not limited literally to that time frame [see In re Marriage of Reilley (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1119, 1124 n.3, 242 Cal. Rptr. 302] .

Nevertheless, the statute's limitations on reimbursement do not apply to postseparation separate property payments on community obligations [In re Marriage of Hebbring (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1264, 1272, 255 Cal. Rptr. 488] . Instead, trial courts retain broad discretion under Fam. Code § 2626 and under In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P. 2d 1165 , to order reimbursement of separate property income used after separation to pay existing community property obligations [In re Marriage of Hebbring (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1272, 255 Cal. Rptr. 488 (construing former Civ. Code §§ 4800(e), 4800.2)].

Reimbursement may also be possible, despite the inapplicability of Fam. Code § 2640, with respect to postseparation improvements to community property. One court of appeal held that reimbursement was possible when separate property was used to make postseparation improvements to a community residence. However, because the improvements were made unilaterally, the reimbursement was authorized only to the extent that the improvements increased the property's fair market value, rather than on a dollar-for-dollar basis. However, there may be situations in which factors exist that, in equity, will justify reimbursement in an amount that discounts a pure benefit approach. These might include, for example, situations in which the parties agreed that the improvement should be made, or the improvement may have been necessary to preserve the asset [see In re Marriage of Reilley (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1119, 1124, 242 Cal. Rptr. 302 (statute inapplicable because it could not be applied retroactively)].

[e] Treatment of Home Subject to Deferred Sale Order

Under certain conditions, a court will defer the sale of the family home in order to minimize the adverse impact of marital dissolution or legal separation on the welfare of a child, as discussed in § 222.92 [Fam. Code § 3800 et seq.]. Because of the potential for long-term delay in the ultimate sale of the home under such an order, an argument has been raised that a mere "tracing right of reimbursement" under Fam. Code § 2640 insufficiently compensates a party who has made a separate property contribution to the acquisition of the property, and that this party's separate interest should share in the appreciation of the property over the period of the court-ordered deferral of sale. One court of appeal, in In re Marriage of Braud (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 797, 820-822, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179 , has agreed with this position. It held that when a deferred sale of home order has been entered, a party who made traceable separate property contributions to a home's acquisition before the parties' separation is not limited to recovering the amount of those contributions when the home is eventually sold, but effectively acquires a separate property percentage interest in the home that permits the contributor to share in any appreciation in the home's value over time, but also requires him or her to share in any possible depreciation in value. In essence, the contributor in that situation "trades the certainty of recovering [the amount of his or her separate property contribution] at the time of sale, for a chance to recover more, but with a risk of recovering less" [see In re Marriage of Braud (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 797, 820-822, 821 n.25, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179] .

The Braud court reasoned that there is no indication that Fam. Code § 2640 was intended to apply in this type of situation, in which the "out-spouse" has a separate property interest (by way of contributions) in a family home as to which a deferred sale order has been entered, effectively tying up that ex-spouse's separate property interest, without affording him or her the opportunity to benefit from any appreciation (or be subject to the potential loss in value) during the deferral period. At the point at which the deferred sale order is made, the court said, there is no longer any reason to apply marital property presumptions to either party's interests, and except for the fact that the family law court retains jurisdiction to enforce, modify, or terminate the order, the former spouses' respective interests should be viewed as ordinary joint ownership interests, in the nature of a tenancy in common. Thus, it suggested, a trial court may reconfigure title to the family home, recognizing the parties as tenants in common with unequal ownership interests, and, concomitantly, order that they be paid in proportion to those ownership interests at the time of sale of the family home [see In re Marriage of Braud (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 797, 820-822, 821 n.25, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179] .

[3] Reimbursement Under Prior Law

[a] Presumption of Gift

Before the enactment of former Civ. Code § 4800.2 [now see Fam. Code § 2640(a), (b)], it was presumed that unless an agreement between the parties specified that the contributing party would be reimbursed, a party who utilized his or her separate property for community purposes intended a gift to the community [In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 82, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 ; In re Marriage of Heikes (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1211, 1218, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 155, 899 P.2d 1349 (husband's 1976 transfer of separate realty to joint tenancy with wife during marriage was unconditional gift; reimbursement statute inapplicable as property was acquired before January 1, 1984); see In re Marriage of Reilley (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1119, 1123, 242 Cal. Rptr. 302 (husband was not presumed to have made gift in making postseparation separate property improvements to community residence)]. The rule of See v. See [See v. See (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 778] stated that a party who uses his or her separate property for community purposes is entitled to reimbursement from the community or separate property of the other only if there is an agreement of the parties to that effect [See v. See (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 778, 785]. Under this rule, for example, if there was no understanding or agreement that joint tenancy property was to be separate property on division of the property, or an agreement providing for reimbursement, a party would be barred from reimbursement for his or her separate property contributions [see In re Marriage of Lucas (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 808, 816, 166 Cal. Rptr. 853, 614 P.2d 285] .

On the other hand, if there was an agreement for reimbursement, the courts devised a formula that allowed the contributing party to receive the benefit of the appreciation in the value of the property. Thus, when the down payment on a residence was made with separate funds and the loan was based on a community or joint obligation, the court would allow the contributing party to receive a pro rata share, apportioning the equity appreciation between the separate and community property contributions to the purchase price [see In re Marriage of Aufmuth (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 446, 456-457, 152 Cal. Rptr. 668 (disapproved in part in In re Marriage of Lucas (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 803, 815, 166 Cal. Rptr. 853, 614 P.2d 285); see also In re Marriage of Lucas (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 808, 813, 816, 816 n.3, 166 Cal. Rptr. 853, 614 P.2d 285] .

[b] Effect of Statutory Reimbursement Provision

However, because of the enactment of former Civ. Code § 4800.2 and its successor, Fam. Code § 2640(a), (b), a party is now entitled to reimbursement for "contributions to the acquisition of property" absent a written waiver of the right to reimbursement, assuming the property was acquired on or after January 1, 1984 [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Heikes (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1211, 1225, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 155, 899 P.2d 1349 (reimbursement statute may not constitutionally be applied to property acquired before January 1, 1984); In re Marriage of Craig (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 683, 686-687, 268 Cal. Rptr. 396 (quasi-community property); In re Marriage of Lockman (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 782, 251 Cal. Rptr. 434 ; In re Marriage of Bankovich (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 49, 249 Cal. Rptr. 713] . A separate property down payment on a residence will no longer be presumed to be a "gift" to the community even if there is no agreement for reimbursement [see In re Marriage of Cairo (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1255, 251 Cal. Rptr. 731 (property acquired before January 1, 1984)]. Furthermore, the amount reimbursed is apparently dollar for dollar and cannot be adjusted for change in monetary values. Thus, the pro rata calculation devised in Aufmuth [see In re Marriage of Aufmuth (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 446, 456-457, 152 Cal. Rptr. 668] appears to be abrogated with regard to reimbursement for contributions to the acquisition of property under Fam. Code § 2640. The reimbursement must also be without interest [see Fam. Code § 2640; but cf. In re Marriage of Braud (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 797, 820-822, 821 n.25, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179 (if court ordered deferred sale of home, party who made separate property contributions to acquisition of property before separation is not limited to return of traceable contributions, but acquires separate property percentage ownership in home, as discussed in § 222.302[2][e])].

Furthermore, the no-reimbursement rule of See v. See [See v. See (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 778, 785, 51 Cal. Rptr. 888, 415 P.2d 776] appears to have been voided only insofar as the separate property contributions are within the category of "contributions to the acquisition of property" as defined in Fam. Code § 2640(a), which includes down payments, payments for improvements, and payments that reduce the principal of a loan used to finance the purchase or improvement of the property. It appears that payments of interest on the loan or payments made for maintenance, insurance, or taxation of the property, if made from separate property funds of the contributing spouse without an agreement for reimbursement, will be rebuttably presumed to be a gift to the community [see Fam. Code § 2640]. For discussion of apportioning interests in a family residence, see § 222.90 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationTracingFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionPresumptionsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
3. Reimbursement Issues In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.303

§ 222.303 Separate Property Contributions to Acquisition of Separate Property of Other Spouse

A party's separate property contributions to the acquisition of property of the other spouse's separate property estate during marriage are reimbursable, unless there is a written transmutation or waiver of the right to reimbursement [Fam. Code § 2640(c) (operative January 1, 2005)]. This rule covers contributions made on or after January 1, 2005 [see In re Marriage of Heikes (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1211, 1225, 44 CAl. Rptr. 2d 155, 899 P.2d 1349 (reimbursement statute for separate property contributions to acquisition of community property may not constitutionally be applied to property acquired before effective date of statute)].

Reimbursable separate property contributions to acquisition of separate property of the other spouse are subject to the same definition as reimbursable separate property contributions to acquisition of community property [see Fam. Code § 2640(a)]. Thus, reimbursable contributions include down payments, payments for improvements, and payments that reduce the principal of a loan used to finance the purchase or improvement of the property; but do not include payments of interest on the loan or payments made for maintenance, insurance, or taxation of the property [Fam. Code § 2640(a)].

The amount of reimbursement for separate property contributions to acquisition of separate property of the other spouse is determined in the same manner as for reimbursement of separate property contributions to acquisition of community property [see Fam. Code § 2640(b), (c)]. Thus, reimbursement is made on a dollar-for-dollar basis without interest or adjustment for change in monetary values, and the amount of reimbursement may not exceed the net value of the property at the time of the division [Fam. Code § 2640(c)].

A written waiver of the right to reimbursement will prevent any right to reimbursement for separate property contributions to acquisition of separate property of the other spouse from arising [see Fam. Code § 2640(c)]. Waiver of the right to reimbursement is discussed in § 222.302[1] and [2][c].

Likewise, a valid transmutation will prevent any right to reimbursement for separate property contributions to acquisition of separate property of the other spouse from arising [Fam. Code § 2640(c)]. However, such a transmutation must meet the requirements of Fam. Code § 850 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationTransmutationFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionPresumptionsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
3. Reimbursement Issues In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.304

§ 222.304 Payment of Separate Debt With Community Property

The community is entitled to reimbursement, absent an agreement to the contrary, when a spouse pays a separate debt, such as taxes due on separate property, with community funds [In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 89, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 ; see In re Marriage of Fabian (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 440, 447, 451, 224 Cal. Rptr. 333, 715 P.2d 253 (affirming trial court's order for reimbursement to community for separate expenditures)]. The effect of statutory amendments operative January 1, 1985, remains somewhat uncertain because the affected statutes apparently do not address this reimbursement issue [see Fam. Code § 900 et seq. (former Civ. Code § 5120.010 et seq.)].

Fam. Code § 2626, whose predecessor (former Civ. Code § 4800(e)) became operative January 1, 1987, states that the court has jurisdiction to order reimbursement in cases it deems appropriate for debts paid after separation but before trial. The apparent broadness of the language indicates that it probably applies to reimbursement of separate debt payments to the community. One court of appeal, construing former Civ. Code § 4800(e), held that this statute, when read together with former Civ. Code § 5120.150(b) [now see Fam. Code § 915(b)], creates a limited exception to the rule against community reimbursement for debts paid during marriage for premarital support obligations that are paid by one spouse using community property after the date of separation [see In re Marriage of Williams (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1239, 1245-1246, 262 Cal. Rptr. 317] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceJurisdictionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
3. Reimbursement Issues In General

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 222.305-222.319

[Reserved]

§§ 222.305[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
4. Rules Specific To Tort Liability

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.320

§ 222.320 Applicable Law

For purposes of debt liability, no distinction is made between contract and tort. As defined by statute, a "debt" is an obligation incurred by a married person before or during marriage, whether based on contract, tort, or otherwise [Fam. Code § 902]. Notwithstanding the general statutes governing the liability of community estate property for debts [Fam. Code §§ 2620-2624], all separate debts, including debts incurred by a spouse during marriage and before separation that were not incurred for the benefit of the community, must be confirmed without offset to the spouse who incurred the debt [Fam. Code § 2625]. A debt based on tort is incurred at the time the tort occurs [Fam. Code § 903(b)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionMarital LiabilitiesTortsVicarious LiabilityFamily MembersSpouses

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
4. Rules Specific To Tort Liability

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.321

§ 222.321 Torts Committed During Marriage

[1] General Rule

[a] Personal Liability

Neither spouse is personally liable for any injury or damage caused by the other spouse except when he or she would have been held be liable for the injury or damage if the marriage did not exist [Fam. Code § 1000(a)]. Although imputed negligence between spouses based solely on the marriage relationship has been abolished [Fam. Code § 783], negligence sometimes may be imputed between spouses on grounds independent of the fact that the spouses are married, such as when one spouse is driving an automobile with the other's consent [see, e.g., Cooke v. Tsipouroglou (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 660, 664, 31 Cal. Rptr. 60, 381 P.2d 940 ; see Veh. Code § 17150; cf. International Service Ins. Co. v. Gonzales (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 110, 115, 239 Cal. Rptr. 341 (insurance coverage denied to husband who drove wife's vehicle when insurance had been issued during wife's former marriage)]. If one spouse is found vicariously liable for the other's tort, theseparate property of the passively liable spouse is subject to execution for the tort committed by the actively liable spouse [see Fam. Code § 913(a)].

[b] Corporate Liability

Similarly, one spouse may be personally liable for a tortious act of a corporation that is controlled primarily by the other spouse if the requirements for imposing alter ego liability on the first spouse are met. One spouse's mere community interest in a corporation controlled by the other spouse and passive receipt of benefits from the other spouse's mishandling of the corporation, however, are insufficient to impose such liability [see Firstmark Capital Corp. v. Hempel Fin. Corp. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 92, 94-95 ; cf. Coppola v. Superior Court (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 848, 862, 259 Cal. Rptr. 811] .

[2] Satisfaction of Liability

[a] In General

The liability of a married person for death or injury to person or property must be satisfied in the following manner [Fam. Code § 1000(b)]:

(1) If the liability of the married person is based on an act or omission that occurred while the married person was performing an activity for the benefit of the community, the liability must be satisfied first from property of the community estate, then from the person's separate property;

(2) If the liability of the married person is not based on an act or omission that occurred while the married person was performing an activity for the benefit of the community, the liability must be satisfied first from the person's separate property, then from the community estate property.

This rule does not apply to the extent that the liability is satisfied out of the liability insurance proceeds, regardless of whether the proceeds are community estate property or separate property [Fam. Code § 1000(c)]. In addition, notwithstanding the general statutory reimbursement provisions [Fam. Code § 920], this right of reimbursement must be exercised within seven years after the spouse in whose favor the right arises has actual knowledge of the application of the property to the satisfaction of the debt [Fam. Code § 1000(c); see In re Marriage of Stitt, (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 579, 195 Cal. Rptr. 172] .

Liabilities not stemming from an act or omission of a married person while performing an activity for the benefit of the community must be assigned, without offset, to the spouse whose act or omission provided the basis for liability [Fam. Code § 2627; see Fam. Code § 1000(b)(2)].

The order in which creditors may satisfy tort claims from the spouses' property if the tort was not an act or omission that occurred while a spouse was performing an activity for the benefit of the community is set forth by statute [Fam. Code § 1000(b)(2)]. This provision does not forbid one spouse from later disclaiming responsibility for the tort liability of the other spouse in a dissolution proceeding [In re Marriage of Stitt (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 579, 588, 195 Cal. Rptr. 172 ; but see In re Marriage of Hirsch (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 104, 110, 259 Cal. Rptr. 39 (opinion in Stitt is incorrect to extent it holds that negligent conduct of spouse engaged in activity for benefit of community provides sufficient justification to characterize debt as separate obligation)]. The underlying statute does not constitute a legislative return to the pre-1970 "fault" concept in dividing marital property, however--it is a creditor's statute. Thus, tortious conduct that benefits the community, whether intentional or negligent, can create a community debt [In re Marriage of Hirsch (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 104, 110, 259 Cal. Rptr. 39 ; see In re Marriage of Bell (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 300, 309-310, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 623] .

[b] Criminal Activity or Intentionally Tortious Conduct

A court may order that the remaining community property be divided in a manner that will carry out the law's intention that only responsible participants in crime or tort bear the loss, at least when it has conclusive evidence of criminal activity that culminated in financial consequences at the time the marriage was coming to an end [In re Marriage of Stitt (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 579, 588, 195 Cal. Rptr. 172 ; see In re Marriage of Bell (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 300, 309-310, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 623] . A shared community debt is created, however, when criminal or intentionally tortious conduct results in obtaining substantial ill-gotten assets for the community. Conversely, an innocent spouse is not required to share in losses incurred by intentionally tortious or criminal conduct of the other spouse if the community derives no benefit. [In re Marriage of Hirsch (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 104, 110-111, 259 Cal. Rptr. 39 ; see In re Marriage of Bell (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 300, 309-310, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 623] . An executed tort judgment is not necessary to establish the nature of the obligation; a settlement agreement made out of community assets when the separate property of the wrongdoing spouse has been exhausted is sufficient to prompt an adjustment of the community property distribution [In re Marriage of Stitt (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 579, 587-588, 195 Cal. Rptr. 172] .

In bankruptcy proceedings, one spouse's fraud may be imputed to the other spouse under agency principles when the spouses are business partners, thus making a debt incurred by one spouse's fraudulent activity nondischargeable by either spouse. However, fraud is imputed on the basis of the spouses' business partnership or agency relationship, and not on the basis of the marriage relationship alone [Tsurukawa v. Nikon Precision, Inc. (In re Tsurukawa) (9th Cir. B.A.P. 2002) 287 B.R. 515, 526] .

[3] Community Torts

California first introduced the concept of community torts, or torts stemming from an act or omission that occurred while a married person was performing an activity for the benefit of the community, in 1975 [see Fam. Code § 1000(b) (former Civ. Code § 5122, as amended by Stats. 1973, ch. 987 (eff. Jan. 1, 1975))]. Ascertaining those acts or omissions that "benefit the community" can pose some difficulty. In interpreting similar statutes, courts in Arizona and Washington have resorted to the application of agency law to determine the respective liability of community and separate property [see Babcock v. Tam (9th Cir. 1946) 156 F.2d 116 ; see also Aichlmayr v. Lynch (1972) 6 Wash. App. 434, 493 P.2d 1026] .

In California, tortious activity for the benefit of the community may include conduct that either is intentional or negligent [In re Marriage of Hirsch (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 104, 110-111, 259 Cal. Rptr. 39 ; see In re Marriage of Bell (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 300, 309-310, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 623 (community benefited from wife's embezzled funds and had to share costs of settlement, but wife was liable for attorney's fees in actions arising from embezzlement and related taxes because husband did not participate in her fraud and could not avoid it; cf. United States v. Hooper (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 818, 823 (federal statute subjects innocent spouse's community property interest in drug-sale proceeds or items purchased with drug-sale proceeds to forfeiture)]. One court suggested that community liability could result in the following instances, which it gave as examples [In re Marriage of Hirsch (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 104, 110, 110 n.8, 111, 259 Cal. Rptr. 39 (although unable to determine whether tortious conduct was negligent or intentional, court found that conduct was for community's benefit)]:

(1) A spouse who is an attorney commits malpractice and is held liable for a substantial judgment--if the law practice was an activity intended to produce income for the community, the malpractice judgment would be a shared community debt, even though it results from one spouse's negligence;

(2) A spouse's negligence in driving the family car on a personal errand should have the same result as in (1), above--neither spouse should bear the entire financial burden of such a loss; and

(3) Intentionally tortious (or even criminal) conduct, such as placing embezzled funds into a community account, that results in obtaining substantial ill-gotten assets for the community creates a shared community debt.

The operative statute, Fam. Code § 1000(b), is a creditors' statute, designed for creditors' protection [In re Marriage of Hirsch (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 104, 110, 259 Cal. Rptr. 39] , that permits recovery both from separate and community property. The distinction between community and separate torts exists solely for purposes of characterizing the property to which the plaintiff must resort first. For example, when the tort is characterized as not arising from an activity for the benefit of the community, the plaintiff first must exhaust the tortfeasor's separate property before looking to the community estate property for satisfaction. The community property is available, however, in the event the tortfeasor's separate property either is nonexistent or insufficient [Fam. Code § 1000(b)(2)].

Before relying on out-of-state authority to define the concept of "community tort," counsel should examine the statute under which the sister state case was decided. In some community property states, community property may be reached to satisfy a tort judgment only if the tort occurred in the course of community activity [see Babcock v. Tam (9th Cir. 1946) 156 F.2d 116 ; see also Gagan v. Sharar (2004) 376 F.3d 987, 992 (federal judgment obtained in Indiana against one spouse could be executed in Arizona on community property of both spouses); Aichlmayr v. Lynch (1972) 6 Wash. App. 434, 493 P.2d 1026] . In those states, when the tortfeasor has lacked separate property it has sometimes been necessary to strain the concept of "activity for the benefit of the community" to subject community property to liability and avoid injustice. In California, however, as discussed above, community property is ultimately available to satisfy a tort judgment regardless of whether the tortfeasor was acting for the benefit of the community [Fam. Code § 1000(b)(2)].

[4] Reimbursement of Community

Fam. Code § 1000(c) does not specifically state a right of reimbursement, but obviously contemplates such a right by setting a time limit for exercising a reimbursement right arising out of the statute. Thus, the statute states that a right of reimbursement under Fam. Code § 1000(c) must be exercised within seven years after the spouse in whose favor the right arises has actual knowledge of the application of the property to the satisfaction of the debt [Fam. Code § 1000(c); cf. Fam. Code § 920(c) (general reimbursement time limit)]. As a result, to the extent the liability is not satisfied out of insurance proceeds (regardless of their character), reimbursement appears to be available to the community when community property is used to satisfy a tort obligation arising out of one spouse's act or omission that was not for the community's benefit [see Fam. Code § 1000(c)].

The measure of reimbursement is the value of the property or interest in property at the time the right arises [Fam. Code § 920(b)]. Because of the continuing nature of the marital relationship, in most cases principles of waiver, condonation, and laches prevent any belated attempt at the time of the dissolution proceedings to seek an accounting of all community property losses attributable to the independent wrongs of the spouses. Thus, whether a right to reimbursement will be found in a given case may depend on evidence that the innocent spouse did not waive or condone the other spouse's acts, or the repayment of the obligation created by the other spouse's acts by the community [In re Marriage of Stitt (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 579, 588, 195 Cal. Rptr. 172 (decided before enactment of former Civ. Code § 5122(c) (now see Fam. Code § 1000(c)), operative January 1, 1985)].

[5] Retroactivity of Debt Provisions

Except as otherwise provided by statute, Fam. Code § 1000 governs the liability of separate and community property and the personal liability of a married person for a debt enforced on or after January 1, 1985, regardless of whether the debt was incurred before, on, or after that date [Fam. Code § 930]. Furthermore, the general provisions of Fam. Code § 900 et seq. that govern reimbursement apply to all debts, regardless of whether satisfied before, on, or after January 1, 1985 [Fam. Code § 931].

[6] Interspousal Torts

If the negligent or wrongful act or omission of one spouse causes, in whole or in part, injury to the other spouse, the tortfeasor spouse may not use community property to discharge his or her liability to the injured spouse, or to make contribution to any joint tortfeasor, until the separate property of the tortfeasor spouse that is not exempt from enforcement of a money judgment is exhausted [Fam. Code § 782(a)]. This rule does not apply if the injured spouse gives written consent to the use of community property to satisfy the tortfeasor spouse's liability after the injury occurs [Fam. Code § 782(b)]. These rules do not affect the right to indemnity provided by any insurance or other contract to discharge the tortfeasor spouse's liability, however, regardless of whether the consideration given for the contract consisted of community property [Fam. Code § 782(c)].

Notwithstanding any other provisions of the Family Code, a spouse is entitled to an award of all of his or her own retirement and pension benefits if he or she is the victim of a murder attempt by the other spouse [see Fam. Code § 782.5]. For further discussion, see § 222.77.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionMarital LiabilitiesTortsVicarious LiabilityFamily MembersSpouses

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Characterization And Division Of Debts And Related Reimbursement Issues
4. Rules Specific To Tort Liability

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 222.322-222.339

[Reserved]

§§ 222.322[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.340

§ 222.340 California Family Law

For discussion of the property rights of parties to a nonmarital relationship, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed., Chs. 1, 2 (Matthew Bender)

For discussion of general principles regarding characterization and division of property, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed., Ch. 20 (Matthew Bender)

For discussion of issues regarding characterization and division of particular types of property, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed., Ch. 21 (Matthew Bender)

For discussion of valuation of property, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed., Ch. 22 (Matthew Bender)

For discussion of liability for and division of debts, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed., Ch. 23 (Matthew Bender)

For discussion of management and control of property, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed., Ch. 24 (Matthew Bender)

For discussion of succession to marital property, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed., Ch. 25 (Matthew Bender)

For discussion and forms relating to agreements dividing marital property, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law, Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed., chs. 211- 216 (Matthew Bender)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationValuationFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionMarital Liabilities

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.341

§ 222.341 California Family Law Trial Guide

For discussion and trial scripts relating to the trial of general property issues, see California Family Law Trial Guide, Unit 40 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

For discussion and trial scripts relating to the trial of issues regarding family homes, small businesses, and retirement and disability benefits, see California Family Law Trial Guide, Unit 60 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationDisability BenefitsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.342

§ 222.342 Federal Statutes

Federal Uniformed Services Former Spouses' Protection Act (FUSFSPA). 10 U.S.C. § 1408

Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA). 29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Military & Veterans LawServicemembersRetirementPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)General Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.343

§ 222.343 State Statutes

[1] General Provisions

Restraining orders regarding disposition of property pending proceedings. Fam. Code §§ 2045, 6325

Separate property defined. Fam. Code § 2502

Orders. Fam. Code § 2553

Judicial arbitration of property issues. Fam. Code § 2554

Revision on appeal of trial court disposition of property. Fam. Code § 2555

Continuing jurisdiction to award omitted assets and liabilities. Fam. Code § 2556

Division of jointly-held separate property interests. Fam. Code § 2650

Deferred sale of home. Fam. Code § 3800 et seq.

[2] Characterization

Characterization of liabilities. Fam. Code § 2551

Community property presumption when title held in joint form. Fam. Code §§ 2580, 2581

[3] Rules for Division of Property

Equal division. Fam. Code § 2550

Assignment of liabilities. Fam. Code § 2551

Valuation date. Fam. Code § 2552

Single-asset award when economic circumstances warrant. Fam. Code § 2601

Offset for misappropriated property. Fam. Code § 2602

Personal injury damages. Fam. Code § 2603

Domestic violence damages. Fam. Code § 2603.5

Disposition of small estate when one spouse cannot be located. Fam. Code § 2604

Retirement benefits. Fam. Code §§ 782.5, 2610

Debts. Fam. Code § 2620 et seq.

Division of real property outside California. Fam. Code § 2660

[4] Reimbursement

Reimbursement for separate property contributions to community asset or to separate property of other spouse. Fam. Code § 2640

Reimbursement for community contributions to education or training. Fam. Code § 2641

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationValuationFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionMarital LiabilitiesFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionPresumptionsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.344

§ 222.344 Law Reviews

[1] Miscellaneous Subjects

Ellis, Divorce Cases After the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 (With Forms), 41(5) Prac. Law. 79 (1995)

Comment, Survey: Women and California Law--Community Property, 16 Golden Gate U.L. Rev. 574 (1986)

Abney, Joint Tenancy/Community Property Presumption and Separate Property Reimbursement: Legislative History of California Law Provides Guidance, 11 Com. Prop. J. 275 (1984)

Pedlar, Community Property and the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, 7 Com. Prop. J. 283 (1981)

Reppy, Debt Collection for Married Californians: Problems Caused by Transmutations, Single-Spouse Management, and Invalid Marriage, 18 San Diego L. Rev. 143 (1981)

Stinehart, Tax Implications of the Forms of Spousal Co-Ownership, 6 Com. Prop. J. 25 (1979)

[2] Character of Property

Hume, Enhanced Earning Capacity of One Spouse as a Factor in the Property Settlement or in Maintenance, 15 Com. Prop. J. 31 (Jan. 1989)

Schlueter & Gott, The Diploma Dilemma: Whether a Professional Degree or License Should Be Treated as a Marital Asset on Divorce, 15 Com. Prop. J. 28 (April 1989)

Blumberg, Marital Property Treatment of Pensions, Disability Pay, Workers' Compensation, and Other Wage Substitutes: An Insurance, or Replacement, Analysis, 33 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1250 (1986)

Comment, Retroactive Application of California Civil Code Section 4800.1: Procedural Rule or Violation of Due Process? 16 Pac. L.J. 1007 (1985)

Weekley, Appreciation of a Closely-Held Business Interest Owned Prior to Marriage--Is It Separate or Community Property, 7 Com. Prop. J. 261 (1981)

Young, Community Property Classification of Credit Acquisitions in California: Law Without Logic, 17 Cal. W.L. Rev. 173 (1981)

Comment, Form of Title Presumptions in California Community Property Law: The Test for a "Common Understanding or Agreement," 15 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 95 (1981)

Traverse, In re Marriage of Stenquist: Equal Protection for the Disability Pension Recipient in California Community Property Law, 7 Hast. Const. L.Q. 1061 (1980)

Reppy, Learning to Live With Hisquierdo, 6 Com. Prop. J. 5 (1979)

Comment, Community Property Interests in the Right of Publicity: Fame and/or Fortune, 25 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1095 (1978)

McNamara, California Community Property Aspects of Executive Compensation, 13 U.S.C. Tax Inst. 151 (1978)

Peschel and Spurgeon, Community Property Trusts, 5 Com. Prop. J. 164 (1978)

Note, Community Property--For Apportionment of Community Business Where Appreciation Is Attributable to the Husband's Efforts After Separation-- In re Marriage of Imperato, 45 Cal. App. 3d 432, 119 Cal. Rptr. 590 (1975) , 16 Santa Clara Law. 682 (1976)

[3] Division of Property

Chernow, Sommer, Mcdonald and LaGuardia, Valuation of Real Property, 27 Bev. Hills B.A.J. 5 (Winter 1993)

Rosenson, Disposition of Community Property Partnership Interests: Current Approaches in Need of a Statutory Solution, 27 Bev. Hills B.A.J. 39 (Winter 1993)

Hume, Enhanced Earning Capacity of One Spouse as a Factor in the Property Settlement or in Maintenance, 15 Com. Prop. J. 31 (Jan. 1989)

Reppy, Jr. (Ed.), Forum: Applying New Law at Divorce to Preenactment Acquisitions: Must Prior Law Be "Rankly Unjust"? Part Two, 15 Com. Prop. J. 1 (Jan. 1989)

Roman, The Division of Marital Property in California Before and After In re Marriage of Buol and In re Marriage of Fabian, 16 Sw. U.L. Rev. 563 (1986)

Shue & Velman, California Civil Code §§ 4800.1 and 4800.2: Review, Analysis, and Suggestions for Reform, 12 Com. Prop. J. 5 (1985)

Comment, Retroactive Application of California Civil Code Section 4800.1: Procedural Rule or Violation of Due

Process? 16 Pacific L.J. 1007 (1985)

Glazer, Divorce and the Financial Planner, 18 Bev. Hills B.J. 170 (1984)

Lintner, Marital Property Rights and Conflict of Laws When Spouses Reside in Different States, 11 Com. Prop. J. 283 (1984)

Sims, Consequences of Depositing Separate Property in Joint Bank Accounts, 54 Cal. St. B.J. 452 (1979)

Comment, Preemption of California Community Property Law by ERISA: Congressional Intent and Judicial Interpretation, 10 Pac. L.J. 881 (1979)

Comment, Dissolution of Marriage After Discharge in Bankruptcy: The Not-So-Fresh Start Doctrine, 10 Pac. L.J. 861 (1979)

Comment, The Mix-Hicks Mix: Tracing Troubles Under California's Community Property System, 26 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1231 (1979)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsPensionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationValuationFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionPresumptionsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportTaxation

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.345

§ 222.345 Text References

California Community Property With Tax Analysis (Matthew Bender)

Ch. 1, The Accountant's Role as an Expert and Consultant in Community Property Litigation

Ch. 2, Characterization of Community Property

Ch. 5, Division of Property on Dissolution of Marriage

Ch. 6, Accountant's Valuation of Property

Valuation and Distribution of Marital Property (Matthew Bender)

Ch. 22, Valuation of a Closely Held Corporation, Small Business or Professional Practice

Ch. 27, Valuation of Real Property

Ch. 45, Pension Evaluation for Marriage Dissolution Actions: A Pension Evaluator's Perspective

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationBusiness & PracticeFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationRetirement BenefitsPensionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionClassificationValuationFamily LawMarital

Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 222.346-222.359

[Reserved]

§§ 222.346[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 18: Dissolution of Marriage: Master Procedural Guide thru Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation-Chs. 220-222
Chapter 222 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: PROPERTY DIVISION AND VALUATION
PART IV. FORMS

18-222 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 222.360

§ 222.360 Order for Deferred Sale of Home [Fam. Code § 3800 et seq.]

[1] FORM Order for Deferred Sale of Home [Fam. Code § 3800 et seq.]

THE COURT FURTHER FINDS AS FOLLOWS:

[SET FORTH court's findings]

1. It is economically feasible for the parties to continue to pay the note secured by the trust deed on their family residence, property taxes, and insurance for the deferral period, and to maintain the condition of the home comparable to that at the time of trial.

2. A deferred sale of the residence would minimize the adverse impact of the dissolution on the parties' minor child, _____ [state child's name, e.g., George B. Brown], in that _____ [state relevant factors, e.g., the child has resided in the home for more than 10 years, is well established in a convenient neighborhood school, and shows emotional disturbance over a possible change in residence, and in that the resident parent, _____ (name, e.g., Mary P. Brown), is employed near the home, the parents would incur substantial financial difficulties and tax consequences in providing other suitable housing, and the nonresidential parent, _____ (name, e.g., Robert Q. Brown), will not be substantially burdened economically by the deferred sale].

THEREFORE, THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS AS FOLLOWS:

[SET FORTH terms of order]

1. The sale of the following community property, referred to hereafter as the "family residence," is temporarily deferred: The real property _____ [state legal description, e.g., in the County of Pacifica, State of California, more particularly described as follows: Lot 17A of Matton as shown on the official plat thereof, recorded November 12, 1965, in Book M of Maps, Map No. 56, in the Official Records in the office of the County Recorder of Pacifica County, California].

2. _____ [Set forth party awarded home, e.g., Petitioner Mary P. Brown] is awarded temporary exclusive use and possession of the family residence, as custodial parent of the parties' minor children, _____ [set forth names of child/children, e.g., George B. Brown and Ellen C. Brown].

3. The period of temporary deferral and exclusive use and possession shall terminate _____ [state termination time, e.g., at the time the youngest child of the parties, George B. Brown, reaches the age of 18 years].

4. _____ [State responsibilities of party awarded home, e.g., Petitioner Mary P. Brown is responsible for the payment of insurance premiums to maintain adequate coverage on the marital residence during the deferral period and for the payment of property taxes].

5. _____ [State responsibilities of other party, e.g., Respondent Robert Q. Brown is responsible for payment of the note secured by the trust deed on the family residence].

[Continue, with other terms of order]

6. Petitioner and Respondent must maintain the family residence in a condition comparable to that at the time of trial. The parties shall share equally the costs of routine maintenance and capital improvements to the residence.

7. Neither party may encumber the family residence with any other encumbrances than those existing at the time of trial.

8. The court hereby reserves jurisdiction over the deferral of the sale of the family residence for the purpose of determining any and all issues that arise with respect to the order, including maintenance of the home and tax consequences to each party.

[2] Use of Form

This form is an order for the deferred sale of a family home, pursuant to Fam. Code § 3800 et seq. The order may be used as an attachment to a judgment of marital dissolution or legal separation. In an appropriate case, the form may be modified for use as an order for temporary relief pending trial. For forms that illustrate attachments to dissolution judgments, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.90.

[3] State Statutes

Deferred sale of home order. Fam. Code § 3800 et seq.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 223.syn

§ 223.syn Synopsis to Chapter 223: DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY

§ 223.01 Scope

§ 223.02 Cross References

§§ 223.03-223.09 [Reserved]

§ 223.10 Governing Law

§ 223.11 Jurisdiction to Make Custody Orders

[1] In General

[2] Meaning of "Children of Marriage"

[3] Jurisdictional Conflict

[a] Interstate

[b] Intrastate

[c] Juvenile Court Jurisdiction

[4] Federal Court Jurisdiction

§ 223.12 Discretion of Court and Factors Considered in Custody Determinations

[1] In General

[2] Effect of Preference of Child

[3] Effect of Temporary Custody Order

[4] Effect of Agreement of Parents

[5] "Best Interests of Child" Standard

[a] General Parameters of Best Interest Test

[b] Bonding, Stability, and Continuity

[c] Care and Health of Child

[d] Education of Child

[e] Relative Wealth of Parents

[f] Past Conduct of Parent

[g] Sexual Conduct of Parent

[h] Gay or Lesbian Parent

[i] Physical Disability of Parent

[j] Mental Condition of Parent

[k] Religion of Parents

[l] Domestic Violence

[m] Substance Abuse

[n] Separation of Siblings

[6] Reported Sexual Abuse of Child

[7] Absence or Relocation From Family Residence

§ 223.13 Custody Rights as Between Parents

[1] Basic Right to Custody

[2] Policy Favoring Continuing Contact With Both Parents

[3] No Gender Preference

[4] Noncustodial Parent's Right of Access to Child's Records

§ 223.14 Supervised Visitation and Exchange Services, Education, and Counseling

§ 223.15 Child Abduction Prevention

[1] In General

[2] Risk Factors

[3] Preventative Measures

[4] Requirements for Orders

§ 223.16 Types of Custody Arrangements

[1] Legal and Physical Custody

[2] Sole or Joint Custody

[a] In General

[b] Sole vs. Joint Legal Custody

[c] Sole vs. Joint Physical Custody

[d] Characterization of Physical Custody Arrangement as Joint or Sole

[e] Standards for Ordering Joint Custody

[f] Requirements for Orders Granting or Denying Joint Custody

§ 223.17 Custody Rights of Nonparents

[1] Order of Preference in Granting Custody

[2] Detriment Test for Granting Custody to Nonparent

[3] Findings and Standard of Proof

[4] Parental Custody Resulting in Actual Physical Custody to Nonparents

§ 223.18 Visitation Rights of Parents

[1] "Reasonable" Visitation

[2] Child Support and Visitation as Independent Rights of Child

[3] Showing Required to Deny Parental Visitation

[4] Showing Required to Restrict Parental Visitation

[5] Effect of Noncustodial Parent's Mental Condition

[6] Effect of Domestic Violence

§ 223.19 Visitation Rights of Nonparents

[1] In General

[2] Rights of Grandparents

[3] Rights of Relatives of Deceased Parent

[4] Rights of Stepparents

§ 223.20 Initiating a Contested Custody Proceeding

[1] Decision to Contest Custody

[2] Temporary Custody Orders

[3] Ex Parte Custody Orders

[4] Ex Parte Visitation Orders

[5] Orders Restraining Removal of Child From State

[6] Submission of Birth Certificate to Determine Whether Child Is Missing Person

[7] Appointment of Counsel

[a] For Child

[b] For Parent

[8] Court-Ordered Parental Counseling

[9] Appointment of Interpreter

§ 223.21 Mandatory Mediation

[1] Requirement

[2] Governing Statutes and Rules

[3] Role of Mediator

[4] Procedural Issues

[5] Confidentiality of Mediation

[6] Attendance of Counsel

[7] Cases Involving History or Allegations of Domestic Violence

[8] Meeting With Children

[9] Participation of Nonparty Natural or Adoptive Parent

[10] Agreement Reached Through Mediation

[11] Modification of Agreement

[12] No Agreement

[13] Mediator's Recommendation to Court

[14] Procedure for Complaints Against Mediator

§ 223.22 Custody Investigation and Report

[1] Appointment of Investigator

[2] Cost of Investigation

[3] Conduct of Investigation

[4] Confidentiality of Report

[5] Use of Report at Trial

[6] Special Rules for Investigation of Child Sexual Abuse

§ 223.23 Use of Psychiatrist or Other Expert

§ 223.24 Calendar Preference

§ 223.25 Conduct of Hearing

§ 223.26 Appellate Review

§ 223.27 Modification of Custody and Visitation Orders

[1] Jurisdiction to Modify Orders

[2] Change-of-Circumstances Requirement

[a] In General

[b] Between Parents

[c] Between Parent and Nonparent

[d] Situations in Which Showing of Change in Circumstances Not Required

[e] What Constitutes Change of Circumstances

[3] Death of Custodial Parent

[4] Modification of Legal Custody

[5] Modification of Visitation Orders

§ 223.28 Change of Child's Residence

[1] Temporary Removal of Child From State

[2] Permanent Change of Residence

[a] Notice of Intent to Change Child's Residence

[b] Kinds of Move-Away Cases

[c] Effect of Move on Initial Custody Determination

[d] Restraint on Move Without Change of Custody

[e] Move as Ground for Change of Custody

[i] Proposed Move as Changed Circumstance

[ii] Importance of Custodial Designation

[iii] Sole or Primary Physical Custody Cases

[iv] Joint or Shared Custody Cases

[f] Effect of Right to Travel

§§ 223.29-223.39 [Reserved]

§ 223.40 California Family Law

§ 223.41 Federal Statutes

§ 223.42 State Statutes

[1] Definitions and General Principles

[2] Determining Custody

[3] Paternity

[4] Restraining Orders

[5] Visitation

§ 223.43 California Rules of Court

§ 223.44 Decisions

§ 223.45 Law Reviews

§§ 223.46-223.59 [Reserved]

§ 223.60 Declaration in Support of Petition for Temporary Custody and Visitation Order [Fam. Code § 3060]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] State Statutes

§ 223.61 Child Custody and Visitation Order--Attachment to Findings and Order After Hearing and Supervised Visitation Order [Cal. Judicial Council Forms FL-341, FL-341(A)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 223.62 Declaration Supporting Petition for Mediation of Dispute Relating to Existing Custody Order [Fam. Code § 3173(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] State Statutes

§ 223.63 Parenting Plan Provision for Joint Legal Custody

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] State Statutes

§ 223.64 Parenting Plan Provision for Sole Physical Custody With Visitation Rights

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] State Statutes

§ 223.65 Parenting Plan Provision for Joint Physical Custody [Fam. Code § 3004

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] State Statutes

[4] Cross References

§ 223.66 Notice of Intended Change of Custodial Parent's Residence [Fam. Code § 3024]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] State Statutes

§ 223.67 Declaration Supporting Motion to Modify Custody--Change of Primary Custodian's Residence

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] State Statutes

§ 223.68 Declaration Supporting Motion for Order Restraining Change of Residence

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 223.69 Declaration Supporting Motion for Order Authorizing Change of Residence

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] State Statutes

§ 223.70 Order Permitting Removal of Children From California

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 223.71 Nonparent's Declaration in Support of Motion for Joinder and Custody or Visitation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.154]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] State Statutes

[4] State Regulations

§ 223.72 Order of Joinder of Nonparent

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 223.73 Child Custody and Visitation Application Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-311]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 223.74 Request for Child Abduction Prevention Orders [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-312]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 223.75 Child Abduction Prevention Orders Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(B)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 223.76 Children's Holiday Schedule Attachment; Additional Provisions--Physical Custody Attachment; and Joint Legal Custody Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Forms FL-341(C), FL-341(D), FL-341(E)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 223.77 Stipulation and Order for Custody and/or Visitation of Children [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-355]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 223.78 Declaration of Counsel for a Child Regarding Qualifications [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-322]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 223.79 Order Appointing Counsel for a Child [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-323]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 223.80 Order Appointing Child Custody Evaluator [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-327]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239

Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY

PART I. SCOPE

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.01

§ 223.01 Scope

This chapter discusses child custody and related issues in the context of a marital dissolution. It covers the court's jurisdiction to make custody and visitation determinations in a dissolution proceeding; the factors considered by the court in making custody and visitation determinations, including the "best interests of the child" standard and parenting plans [see §§ 223.63 -223.65]; types of custody arrangements; the procedures for initiating temporary [see §§ 223.60, 223.61] and permanent custody proceedings; mandatory mediation of custody disputes; custody trials; and modification of custody and visitation orders generally and specifically with respect to change of the custodial parent's residence [see §§ 223.66 -223.68]. Custody and visitation rights of nonparents are also addressed [see §§ 223.61, 223.62]. For discussion of interstate and international custody jurisdiction issues under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act (UCCJEA--Fam. Code § 3400 et seq.), as well as discussion of nonparent custody and visitation issues not arising within the context of the termination of a marriage, see Ch. 394, Parent and Child . Parental custody and visitation issues not arising in this context are also discussed in that chapter.

For discussion of child support issues, which are ordinarily litigated at the same time as custody issues in marital dissolution proceedings, see Ch. 224, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Support . The Uniform Parentage Act (UPA) [Fam. Code § 7600 et seq.] is discussed only peripherally in this part, since children of a marriage are not typically the subjects of parentage actions. For discussion of actions under the UPA, see Ch. 412, Paternity . Proceedings to enforce interstate custody orders are discussed in Ch. 260, Family Law Enforcement: Foreign Judgments .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART I. SCOPE

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.02

§ 223.02 Cross References

For forms and discussion relating to child support, see Ch. 224, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Support

For discussion of child custody and visitation issues in annulment proceedings, see Ch. 25, Annulment (Nullity) of Marriage and Related Spousal Rights

For forms and discussion relating to juvenile court dependency proceedings, see Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings

For forms and discussion relating to custody and visitation issues not arising within the context of the termination of a marriage, see Ch. 394, Parent and Child

For discussion of actions under the Uniform Parentage Act, and general discussion and forms relating to establishment of the parent--child relationship, see Ch. 412, Paternity

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART I. SCOPE

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 223.03-223.09

[Reserved]

§§ 223.03[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.10

§ 223.10 Governing Law

Child custody proceedings in California are governed by Fam. Code § 3000 et seq. If more than one state may have jurisdiction to make a custody determination, California's version of the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act (UCCJEA) may also apply [Fam. Code § 3400 et seq.].

Although child custody issues are generally governed by state law, including the forum state's version of the UCCJEA, certain federal statutes address interstate and international custody problems. The federal Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act [28 U.S.C. § 1738A] provides remedies for custodial interference on an interstate or international level. The federal Parent Locator Service [see 42 U.S.C. § 663] and the Federal Fugitive Felon Act [see 18 U.S.C. § 1073; Pub. L. No. 96-611 § 10(a)] also contain provisions dealing with this problem.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.11

§ 223.11 Jurisdiction to Make Custody Orders

[1] In General

In a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, or for legal separation of the parties, the court has subject matter jurisdiction to inquire into, and render any judgment, and make appropriate orders concerning the custody of minor children of the marriage [Fam. Code § 2010(b); see Fam. Code § 3022]. A court has no jurisdiction to order visitation between a noncustodial parent and an adult child, even a disabled adult child for whom the noncustodial parent is paying child support [see In re Marriage of Jensen (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 587, 592-598, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 701 (marital settlement agreement did not give court continuing jurisdiction to order visitation between noncustodial father and adult disabled child or to order custodial mother to cooperate and encourage visitation)]. All subject matter jurisdiction under the Family Code is in the superior court [Fam. Code § 200; see Greene v. Superior Court (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 307, 312, 231 P.2d 821 (venue may be transferred to superior court in another county if child moves there)].

Family Code Section 2010 is not a jurisdictional statute in the fundamental sense of involving an entire absence of power to hear or determine the matter. Rather, it simply places a limit on the court's authority. While fundamental jurisdiction can never be conferred by consent, acts in excess of statutory jurisdictional limitations are subject to principles of consent and waiver [In re Marriage of Hinman (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 711, 716-718, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 245 (waiver by natural parent of right to object to order awarding custody to stepparent by listing children as children of marriage in pleadings); see In re Marriage of Johnson (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 848, 849-852, 152 Cal. Rptr. 121 (estoppel of right to deny that child is issue of marriage by representing child as own and holding child out to others as own); cf. Weir v. Ferreira (Estate of Kelm) (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1509, 1521, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33 (prior dissolution judgment found parentage as to child for whom party was only guardian)].

In child custody matters, a family court retains jurisdiction and a family law case remains pending even after a judgment of dissolution to monitor a child's welfare [In re Marriage of Kreiss (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 1084, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 260 (error to refuse to enforce parental discovery stipulation in postdissolution custody matter)].

[2] Meaning of "Children of Marriage"

The phrase "children of the marriage" as used in Fam. Code § 2010(b) includes the parties' natural and adopted children, but does not include children as to whom a party's parental rights have previously been terminated [see Marckwardt v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 471, 475-476, 198 Cal. Rptr. 41 ; see also Fam. Code §§ 8616 (adoptive parents have all legal rights of parent-child relationship), 8617 (adoption relieves natural parents of all rights over child)] or children who are the natural children of one party but the stepchildren of the other [see In re Marriage of W. (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 68, 72-75, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 461 ; Perry v. Superior Court (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 480, 484, 166 Cal. Rptr. 583 (court may not issue custody orders with regard to stepchildren in dissolution proceeding); but see Fam. Code § 3101(a)(1) (stepparent visitation)].

The presumption that a child born to a married woman cohabiting with her husband is a child of the marriage [Fam. Code § 7540] is discussed in Ch. 412, Paternity .

[3] Jurisdictional Conflict

[a] Interstate

California's subject matter jurisdiction over child custody disputes is subject to the federal Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act [28 U.S.C. § 1738A; see § 223.11[4]] and California's version of the Uniform Child Custody and Jurisdiction Act [Fam. Code § 3400 et seq.; see Ch. 394, Parent and Child]. These statutes must be considered in any custody dispute with interstate or international aspects.

[b] Intrastate

If two or more courts in California have concurrent jurisdiction, the general rule is that the court first assuming jurisdiction retains it to the exclusion of all other courts in which the action might have been initiated. Thus, the California court that first makes a custody award retains exclusive jurisdiction over custody, and no other court in California has jurisdiction. For example, a court cannot appointa guardian of the person of a minor if another court in California has made an earlier custody award in a dissolution proceeding [Greene v. Superior Court (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 307, 310-313, 231 P.2d 821] . However, if circumstances change or the child moves to a different county within the state, a motion for change of venue, made in the county of original jurisdiction, may be appropriate [Greene v. Superior Court (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 307, 312, 231 P.2d 821 ; see Ferreira v. Ferreira (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 824, 843, 109 Cal. Rptr. 80, 512 P.2d 304 ; for discussion of motions to change venue, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure].

[c] Juvenile Court Jurisdiction

An important exception to the rule that the first court to assume jurisdiction generally retains jurisdiction (§ 223.11[3]) is that the juvenile court has exclusive jurisdiction over custody matters regarding minors adjudged dependent children of the juvenile court [see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 302, 304; Dupes v. Superior Court (1917) 176 Cal. 440, 441-442, 168 P. 888 ; In re Farley (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 474, 478-479, 328 P.2d 230] . No other division of the superior court may hear proceedings under the Family Code regarding the custody of a dependent minor [Welf. & Inst. Code § 304; see In re William T. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 790, 797, 799-800, 218 Cal. Rptr. 420 (court with concurrent jurisdiction over related custody matters involving minor may not enforce custody orders that conflict with orders properly issued by juvenile court)]. However, the domestic relations division of a superior court may hear custody issues involving a minor who was, but is no longer, a dependent of the juvenile court [Fam. Code § 304].

There is some uncertainty whether exclusive juvenile court jurisdiction is limited by collateral estoppel principles. In one case, the court stated, in dicta, that a juvenile court may not take jurisdiction over a child solely on the basis of allegations that have been fully considered in a previous family law proceeding [In re Brendan P. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 910, 916-920, 230 Cal. Rptr 720] . However, other courts, while refusing to find collateral estoppel applicable on the facts, have indicated that such a limitation is unsound and should not be applied [see In re Travis C. (1991) 233

Cal. App. 3d 492, 501-504, 284 Cal. Rptr. 469 ; In re Benjamin D. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1464, 1471-1472, 278 Cal. Rptr. 468] .

The juvenile court may terminate its jurisdiction over a dependent minor and transfer its custody and visitation order to the general jurisdiction of the superior court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 362.4; see In re Jennifer R. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 704, 711-713, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 759] . Such a transfer is sometimes referred to as an "exit order" [see In re Marriage of David & Martha M. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 96, 102, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 388 ; In re Katherine M. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 91, 96, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 298] , but is more properly termed a juvenile court custody or visitation order on termination of jurisdiction. If there was another marital or paternity proceeding concerning the minor, the juvenile court's order must be filed in that proceeding. If no other proceeding was filed or is pending relating to the custody of the child, the juvenile court order may be used as the sole basis for opening a file with an assigned case number in the superior court in the county in which the custodial parent resides [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.475 (procedure for filing juvenile court order with superior court)]. Thereafter, the parties may move to modify the order in the superior court proceeding in which it was filed [Welf. & Inst. Code § 362.4; In re Michael B. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1698, 1704-1705, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 290 ; see In re Jennifer R. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 704, 712-714, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 759] .

For further discussion of juvenile dependency proceedings, see Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings .

[4] Federal Court Jurisdiction

Federal courts do not have jurisdiction to issue child custody decrees [Ankenbrandt v. Richards (1992) 504 U.S. 689, 112 S. Ct. 2206, 119 L. Ed. 2d 468, 482] . Federal habeas corpus is also not available as a remedy in child custody matters [Lehman v. Lycoming County Children's Services (1982) 458 U.S. 502, 513-516, 102 S. Ct. 3231, 73 L. Ed. 2d 928] . Moreover, the federal Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act of 1980 [28 U.S.C. § 1738A] does not create an implied private cause of action in federal court to determine which of two conflicting state custody decisions is valid [Thompson v. Thompson (1988) 484 U.S. 174, 187, 108 S. Ct. 513, 98 L. Ed. 2d 512] .

Parents have, however, brought actions in federal court against their former spouses and various governmental defendants, based on alleged tortious conduct and constitutional violations arising from the wrongful deprivation of the plaintiff's right to child custody [see, e.g., Coats v. Woods (9th Cir. 1987) 819 F.2d 236, 236-237 , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 802 (alleging deprivation of liberty interest in violation of 42 U.S.C. §§ 1983, 1985(2), and 1985(3)); Meyers v. Contra Costa County Dep't of Social Services (9th Cir. 1987) 812 F.2d 1154, 1155 , cert denied, 484 U.S. 829 (alleging defendants conspired under color of state law and without due process to prevent plaintiff from associating with his children in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983)]. Some of these actions have been dismissed from federal court under the doctrine of equitable abstention, because the subject matter of domestic relations cases has traditionally been considered an area of state interest [see, e.g., Coats v. Woods (9th Cir. 1987) 819 F.2d 236, 236-237 , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 802 ; Peterson v. Babbitt (9th Cir. 1983) 708 F.2d 465, 466] . The United States Supreme Court has now limited the scope of domestic relations abstention to situations in which related issues are pending in other proceedings in state court [Ankenbrandt v. Richards (1992) 504 U.S. 689, 112 S. Ct. 2206, 119 L. Ed. 2d 468, 483-484] .

In addition, under Younger v. Harris (1971) 401 U.S. 37, 91 S. Ct. 746, 27 L. Ed. 2d 669 , the U.S. Supreme Court espoused a strong federal policy against federal court interference with pending state judicial proceedings. " Younger" abstention is required if state proceedings are (1) on-going, (2) implicate important state interests, and (3) provide a plaintiff with an adequate opportunity to litigate federal claims. In such instances, federal cases must be dismissed [H.C. v. Koppel (9th Cir. 2000) 203 F.3d 610, 613] .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.12

§ 223.12 Discretion of Court and Factors Considered in Custody Determinations

[1] In General

Fam. Code § 3040(b) grants the court the widest discretion to choose a parenting plan that is in the best interests of the child [In re Marriage of Brown & Yana (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 947, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 610, 127 P.3d 28 ; see § 223.12[5]]. There is no abuse of discretion if there is substantial evidence to support the findings of the trial court [Sanchez v. Sanchez (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 118, 126, 10 Cal. Rptr. 261, 358 P.2d 533 ; In re Marriage of Russo (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 72, 86, 98 Cal. Rptr. 501] . Substantial evidence has been defined as evidence that is reasonable in nature, credible, and of solid value [Forslund v. Forslund (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 476, 499-500, 37 Cal. Rptr. 489 ; Stack v. Stack (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 357, 368, 11 Cal. Rptr. 177] . An abuse of discretion exists, however, if the court rules on the basis of preexisting bias, rather than on the evidence adduced [In re Marriage of Schwartz (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 92, 95, 163 Cal. Rptr. 408 (bias against joint custody arrangement)].

To guide the courts in exercising discretion, the Legislature has set forth in Fam. Code § 3011 certain specific issues that the court must consider [see Fam. Code § 3040(a)]. These include the following [Fam. Code § 3011]:

(1) The child's health, safety, and welfare,

(2) An history of domestic violence or substance abuse (see § 223.12[1]), and

(3) The nature and amount of contact with both parents (see § 223.12[5][b]).

[2] Effect of Preference of Child

If a child is of sufficient age and capacity to reason so as to form an intelligent preference as to custody, the court must consider and give due weight to his or her wishes in making a custody order [Fam. Code § 3042(a); see In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1101, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 (in move-away case, court should consider wishes of children if they are mature enough for such inquiry to be appropriate)]. Although the court must consider the child's preference, it is not bound by that preference. The preference is evidence to be weighed by the court with all other evidence concerning the best interests of the child [Sanchez v. Sanchez (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 118, 124-125, 10 Cal. Rptr. 261, 358 P.2d 533 ; see In re Marriage of Mehlmauer (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 104, 110, 131 Cal. Rptr. 325 (child's preference may be rejected if court finds it is not supported by mature reasoning)].

There is no automatic chronological age below which a child is not of sufficient age and capacity to reason. The court in its discretion may consider the preference of children as young as seven or eight years [Stuart v. Stuart (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 478, 482-483, 25 Cal. Rptr. 893 ; Kelly v. Kelly (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 408, 413-414, 171 P.2d 95] . The likelihood that the child's preference will be honored, however, increases with the child's age. It has been observed that there are practical difficulties involved in placing court-coerced restraints on adolescents that require them to live with one parent when they prefer to live with the other parent [Barton v. Barton (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 43, 49, 40 Cal. Rptr. 676] .

The child's preference is entitled to greater consideration in a modification proceeding than in an initial custody determination, because there is less uncertainty regarding how the custody arrangement will work out at the time of modification proceedings than when the parents first separated. A child's preference must be given serious consideration by the court in acting on a motion for modification of custody if the following circumstances exist: (1) the issue is whether children will be moved from the community where they have lived for most of their lives; (2) an excellent parent who remains in that community wishes to have the children reside with him or her; and (3) the children, for valid reasons, express a preference to remain in the community [In re Marriage of Rosson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1094, 1098, 1102-1103, 224 Cal. Rptr. 250] .

The court must control the examination of the child so as to protect his or her interests. The court may preclude the calling of the child as a witness if the child's interests so indicate, and may provide alternative means of obtaining information regarding the child's preferences [Fam. Code § 3042(b); see Evid. Code § 765].

[3] Effect of Temporary Custody Order

The general rule is that custody is to be decided de novo at trial. The court's permanent custody order is made according to the child's best interests despite a different temporary order or a stipulation of the parties [In re Marriage of Lewin (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1482, 1487-1489, 231 Cal. Rptr. 433 ; see Montenegro v. Diaz (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 249, 258, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 575, 27 P.3d 289 ("temporary custody orders serve an important role in child custody proceedings" and parties should not be discouraged from entering into these stipulations)]. It is not necessary to show a change of circumstances from those that existed when the existing custodial arrangement was established, whether by pendente lite order or extrajudicial agreement [Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 535-539, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486 ; In re Marriage of Lewin (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1482, 1487-1489, 231 Cal. Rptr. 433 ; see Catherine D. v. Dennis B. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 922, 927-930, 269 Cal. Rptr. 547 (change of circumstances not required unless there has been prior actual judicial determination that particular custodial plan is in best interests of child); see also In re Marriage of Rose & Richardson (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 941, 952, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 45] . For purposes of determining when a stipulated order is temporary or permanent in order to apply either the best interests or changed circumstances standard, a stipulated custody order will not be considered a permanent custody order unless there is a clear, affirmative indication that the parties intended that it be a permanent order [Montenegro v. Diaz (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 249, 258, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 575, 27 P.3d 289 ; see In re Marriage of Rose & Richardson (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 941, 944,126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 45 (custody orders in stipulated dissolution judgment were nonfinal orders)].

However, counsel should not misconstrue this general rule as meaning that the temporary custodial arrangement will not be a significant factor in making a permanent custody order. In Burchard v. Garay [Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486] , the California Supreme Court stressed the importance of continuity and stability in custody arrangements [Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 535, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486 ; see Adoption of Matthew B. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1239, 1264, 284 Cal. Rptr. 18 (stability, continuity, and loving relationship are the most important criteria for determining best interests of child [emphasis in original])]. Thus, the length of time that the child has been in the custody of the parent who has custody at the time of the hearing must be considered by the court [Cochran v. Cochran (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 418, 421, 49 Cal. Rptr. 670] . Obviously, the longer the temporary custodial arrangement is in effect, the greater the difficulty in convincing a court that it should be altered [see In re Marriage of Lewin (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1482, 1488, 231 Cal. Rptr. 433] . As between two relatively equal custodial proposals of parents who are both able to provide an appropriate home, it is unlikely that a court will remove the child from a home where appropriate care is being provided. Therefore, the parent who does not obtain temporary custody should expect to have to make some affirmative showing of detriment if the child is left in the home of the other parent [see In re Marriage of Lewin (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1482, 1489 n.3, 231 Cal. Rptr. 433] .

[4] Effect of Agreement of Parents

Parental agreements regarding child custody, while not void or illegal, are not binding on the court. The best interests of the child control custody determinations, regardless of the parents' agreement [Adoption of Matthew B. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1239, 1258-1259, 284 Cal. Rptr. 18 ; Stewart v. Stewart (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 186, 193, 278 P.2d 441 ; see § 223.12[5][a] et seq]. Nevertheless, in the overwhelming majority of cases, parental agreements will be approved by the court. In nearly every case, it is preferable that the parents come to some resolution of custody themselves rather than litigate the issue for determination by the court [see Montenegro v. Diaz (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 249, 255, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 575, 27 P.3d 289 (although statutory scheme provides for court determinations of custody and visitation, private resolutions are preferred)].

Stipulations between parents that attempt to divest the court of continuing jurisdiction over child custody are void and unenforceable regardless of any possible estoppel argument [In re Marriage of Goodarzirad (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1020, 1026, 230 Cal. Rptr. 203 (stipulation to give up custody rights and agree to termination of parental rights in exchange for forbearance on child support)]. A court acts in excess of its jurisdiction if it approves such a stipulation [In re Marriage of Goodarzirad (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1020, 1030, 230 Cal. Rptr. 203] .

Conversely, the parties cannot, by their agreement, confer jurisdiction on the court that it does not have [In re Marriage of Jensen (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 587, 593, 598, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 701] . For example, a court does not have subject matter jurisdiction to enforce provisions of a marital settlement agreement that require the mother to encourage and implement visitation by the parties' adult disabled child with his father [In re Marriage of Jensen (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 587, 593-598, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 701] . Under the Family Code, a court may only make custody and visitation orders concerning the parties' minor children [see Fam. Code §§ 2010(b), 3022].

[5] "Best Interests of Child" Standard

[a] General Parameters of Best Interest Test

The guiding principle followed by the courts in making child custody determinations is the best interest of the child [see Fam. Code § 3011; In re Marriage of Brown & Yana (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 947, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 610, 127 P.3d 28 ; In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1088, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 ; Keith R. v. Superior Court (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1047, 1053, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 298 (child's welfare is paramount and overarching concern)].

Courts must determine the child's best interests solely from the child's standpoint, and should not consider the feelings and desires of the parents, except insofar as they affect the child's best interests [Taber v. Taber (1930) 209 Cal. 755, 757 ; Adoption of Matthew B. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1239, 1264, 284 Cal. Rptr. 18] . Custody may not be granted to one parent as a disciplinary action to punish the other for conduct unrelated to the best interests of the child [In re Marriage of Stoker (1977) 65 Cal. App. 3d 878, 881-882, 135 Cal. Rptr. 616 (father's coercive acts, including threats to withhold child support, do not in themselves support grant of custody to mother)].

Finally, the best-interests standard is a relative one. The question is not simply whether a particular set of circumstances is in the best interests of the child, butwhether a particular set of circumstances relative to an alternative set of circumstances is in the best interests of the child [Adoption of Matthew B. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1239, 1264, 284 Cal. Rptr. 18 ; see Adoption of Michelle T. (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 699, 707, 117 Cal. Rptr. 856] .

When the parents are unable to agree on a custody arrangement, the court must determine the child's best interest by setting the matter for an adversarial hearing and considering all relevant factors, including the child's health, safety, and welfare, any history of abuse by one parent against any child or the other parent, and the nature and amount of the child's contact with the parents [In re Marriage of Brown & Yana (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 947, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 610, 127 P.3d 28] . The court must look to all of the circumstances bearing on the child's best interests before devising a parenting plan [Keith R. v. Superior Court (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1047, 1053, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 298] .

The Family Code contemplates that, in making a custody determination, consideration of the child's best interest may lead the court to award custody either to both parents (joint or shared custody) or to only one parent (sole custody) [In re Marriage of Brown & Yana (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 947, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 610, 127 P.3d 28 ; see § 223.16].

[b] Bonding, Stability, and Continuity

An understanding of the importance of stability and continuity in the life of a child, and of the harm that may result from the disruption of established patterns of care and emotional bonds, is crucial to a best-interests determination [Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 539-541, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486 ; Adoption of Matthew B. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1239, 1264, 284 Cal. Rptr. 18] . Indeed, stability, continuity, and a loving relationship are generally considered the most important criteria for determining the best interests of the child [Adoption of Matthew B. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1239, 1264, 284 Cal. Rptr. 18 ; see Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 542, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486 (opinion of Bird, C.J., concurring)]. Therefore, the length of time that the child has been in the continuous, actual, physical custody of the parent who has custody at the time of the hearing must be considered by the court [Cochran v. Cochran (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 418, 421, 49 Cal. Rptr. 670] .

[c] Care and Health of Child

The court may consider the quality of the care given to the child by the custodial parent [Stack v. Stack (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 357, 370, 11 Cal. Rptr. 177] , and may grant custody to the other parent if the child is not being properly cared for by the custodial parent [Harris v. Harris (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 788, 790-792, 9 Cal. Rptr. 300] . However, the fact that the child is placed in day care or with a baby sitter during the parent's working hours does not establish that the custodial parent is not properly caring for the child. In an era in which a majority of single parents must work, courts must not presume that a working parent is a less satisfactory parent or is less fully committed to the child's care than a parent who provides full-time care [Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 540, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486] .

The fact that the child does not receive proper medical attention while with one parent may be a factor supporting an order of custody to the other parent [see Gobar v. Gobar (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 129, 133-135, 345 P.2d 480 ; In re Bensfield (1929) 102 Cal. App. 445, 449-451 (child's health factor in finding father unfit)].

[d] Education of Child

If the child has special educational needs, a parent's willingness to provide for those needs may be a significant factor in granting custody to that parent, particularly if the other parent refuses to acknowledge the child's special needs [see Holsinger v. Holsinger (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 132, 133-134, 279 P.2d 961] .

Furthermore, a court may properly order a custodial parent to send the child to an appropriate public, private, or parochial school, instead of being home-schooled by the custodial parent, on a showing that this would be in the child's best interests [Cassady v. Signorelli (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 55, 61-62, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 545] .

[e] Relative Wealth of Parents

Comparative income or economic advantage is not a permissible basis for a custody determination [Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 539, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486] . In addition to presuming an unsupportable connection between material wealth and emotional well-being, any rule based on the relative wealth of the parents would almost invariably favor men, and have the effect of discriminating against women [In re Marriage of Fingert (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 1575, 1581, 271 Cal. Rptr. 389] . If the income of the preferred custodial parent is insufficient to provide proper care for the child, the remedy is to grant increased child support, not to deny custody [Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 539, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486] . Similarly, a custody determination may not be based on the assumption that a parent who can afford to care for the children at home would provide better care than a working parent who would rely on child care while working [In re Marriage of Loyd (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 754, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 80 citing Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal.3d 531, 539, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486] .

[f] Past Conduct of Parent

Whether a parent should have custody of a child is determined on the basis of conditions existing at the time of the hearing and is not necessarily controlled by the parent's prior conduct [In re Marriage of Russo (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 72, 85-86, 98 Cal. Rptr. 501 ; Munson v. Munson (1946) 27 Cal. 2d 659, 166 P.2d 268]. Prior conduct, however, may be considered by the court in determining the best interests of the child [In re Marriage of Russo (1971) 98 Cal. Rptr. 501 ; Sanchez v. Sanchez (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 118, 124, 10 Cal. Rptr. 261, 358 P.2d 533 ; see In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1095, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 (in determining whether change of custody should be ordered based on parent's proposed move with children, court may consider parent's consistent attempts to limit contact between children and other parent as indication that move would be detrimental to children)]. Evidence of prior conduct should only be admitted if it has a direct bearing on the issue of the present best interests of the child and should be limited to that issue alone [Morgan v. Morgan (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 704, 705, 294 P.2d 45 ; Stewart v. Stewart (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 186, 194, 278 P.2d 441] .

[g] Sexual Conduct of Parent

Sexual conduct of a parent that offends the other parent, or even the public at large, does not in itself render a parent unfit to have custody of his or her children [In re Marriage of Russo (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 72, 88-89, 98 Cal. Rptr. 501] . In determining the custody of children, the courts are not engaged in a disciplinary action to punish parents for their shortcomings as individuals or to reward the unoffending parent for any wrong suffered by the acts of the other [Clarke v. Clarke (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 583, 589, 84 Cal. Rptr. 393 ; Ashwell v. Ashwell (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 211, 217, 286 P.2d 983] . In order for a parent's sexual conduct to justify depriving him or her of custody, the conduct must be shown to affect directly the welfare and best interest of the child [In re Marriage of Biggums-Slayton (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 653, 662, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 545 (wife did not show that former husband's adultery would adversely affect child's home environment); Washburn v. Washburn (1942) 49 Cal. App. 2d 581, 587, 122 P.2d 96 ; see Bialac v. Bialac (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 940, 946-947, 50 Cal. Rptr. 12 (welfare of children is less likely to be placed in jeopardy by conduct of which they are not aware)].

There are a number of older cases in which custody has been denied to parents, almost always mothers, because of their involvement in adulterous relationships or other behavior deemed licentious or immoral by the standards of the time [see, e.g., Dahl v. Dahl (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 407, 411-412, 46 Cal. Rptr. 881 ; Coil v. Coil (1962) 211 Cal. App. 2d 411, 413-416, 27 Cal. Rptr. 378 ; Mathewson v. Mathewson (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 532, 538-539, 24 Cal. Rptr. 466 ; Santens v. Santens (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 809, 818-819, 4 Cal. Rptr. 635 ; Kelly v. Kelly (1959) 173 Cal. App.

2d 469, 473-476] . All of these cases were decided before the Legislature legalized all sex acts between consenting adults and repealed the law against adultery [Stats. 1975, Ch. 71]. In one case decided after this legislation was enacted, an order providing that the mother should have no overnight visitation with a member of the opposite sex in the presence of the children until or unless she was married to him was held to be an abuse of discretion because it was intrusive on the privacy and association interests of the mother and lacked evidentiary support in terms of the interests of the children [In re Marriage of Wellman (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 992, 999, 164 Cal. Rptr. 148] .

[h] Gay or Lesbian Parent

The fact that one parent is lesbian or gay is not as a matter of law sufficient reason to deny custody to that parent [Nadler v. Superior Court (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 523, 525, 63 Cal. Rptr. 352] . This fact is merely one of many that the court may consider in making a custody decision [Immerman v. Immerman (1959) 176 Cal. App. 2d 122, 126-127, 1 Cal. Rptr. 298] .

One court has stated that, in exercising a choice between a heterosexual and a lesbian or gay household, a trial court could conclude that permanent residence in a lesbian or gay household would be detrimental to the children and contrary to their best interests [Chaffin v. Frye (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 39, 47, 119 Cal. Rptr. 22 (decision based on homosexuality plus other factors)]. That statement was made, however, before homosexual conduct was decriminalized in 1975 [Stats. 1975, ch. 71].

The reasonable conclusion to be drawn from the early cases, when considered with the modern trend toward increased sexual tolerance, is that a parent's sexual preference can be considered as a factor by the court but only as it is related to the best interests of the child. A party who bases his or her case on the fact that the other parent is lesbian or gay should be prepared to present specific evidence that the parent's sexual preference adversely affects the child.

[i] Physical Disability of Parent

It is impermissible for the court to rely solely on a parent's physical handicap as evidence of the person's unfitness as a parent or of probable detriment to the child. Rather, the court must view the handicapped person as an individual and the family as a whole. The court should inquire into the person's actual potential physical capabilities, learn how he or she has adapted to the disability and manages its problems, consider how the other members of the household have adjusted to it, and take into account the special contributions the person may make to the family despite, or even because of, the disability. Weighing these and all other relevant factors together, the court should then determine whether the parent's condition will in fact have a substantial and lasting adverse effect on the best interests of the child [In re Marriage of Carney (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 725, 736, 157 Cal. Rptr. 383, 598 P.2d 36] .

[j] Mental Condition of Parent

The mental condition of a parent is obviously a factor that may be consideredin a custody determination. Nevertheless, harm to the child cannot be presumed from the mere fact of mental illness of the parent, and it is fallacious to assume that the child will somehow be "infected" by the parent. Rather the focus must be on how the parent's conduct that is caused by the disability has affected and will adversely affect the child or jeopardize the child's safety [In re David D. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 941, 953, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 861 ; see Combs v. Combs (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 33, 35, 327 P.2d 164 (abuse); Colombo v. Colombo (1945) 71 Cal. App. 2d 577, 582-584, 162 P.2d 995 (neglect); In re Elizabeth R. (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 1774, 1789-1790, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200] .

The physician-patient and psychotherapist-patient privileges [see Evid. Code §§ 990 et seq., 1010 et seq.] apply in custody proceedings. Thus, a parent may not be compelled to disclose privileged communications between himself or herself and his or her physician or psychotherapist, absent a valid waiver. A parent does not voluntarily "tender" the issue of his or her mental or physical condition, thereby automatically waiving the privilege [see Evid. Code §§ 996, 1016], merely by claiming child custody or visitation rights [see Simek v. Superior Court (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 169, 176-177, 172 Cal. Rptr. 564 ; Koshman v. Superior Court (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 294, 297-299, 168 Cal. Rptr. 558 ; see also Cutter v. Brownbridge (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 836, 846-847, 228 Cal. Rptr. 545 (psychotherapist's voluntary disclosure of father's confidential information subjected psychotherapist to tort action)].

Nevertheless, a parent with a history of mental illness and treatment may prejudice his or her likelihood of obtaining custody or visitation by invoking the psychotherapist-patient privilege. Without the testimony, there will be no profssional evidence before the court that the person's mental state is such that the child will not be adversely affected. It is unlikely that the court will grant custody to the parent without that evidence [but see In re David D. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 941, 952-953, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 861 (inappropriate for juvenile court to suspend reunification and parental visitation because parent refused to waive privilege and produce records without considering interests of children)].

[k] Religion of Parents

A parent's religion or the religion in which the child is being raised is not per se a basis for denying custody to that parent [see Cory v. Cory (1945) 70 Cal. App. 2d 563, 565-576, 161 P.2d 385] . Religion may be a factor in a custody determination if some aspect of a parent's religious observance is detrimental to the child. However, the fact that a parent's religion prohibits resort to standard medical procedures under some circumstances is not, by itself, sufficient grounds to grant custody to the other parent [In re Marriage of Urband (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 796, 797-798, 137 Cal. Rptr. 433 (blood transfusions)].

Under current law and practice, the child's religion may be dealt with as an aspect of granting either joint or sole legal custody [see Fam. Code §§ 3003, 3006; § 223.16[2]]. The fact that the parents cannot agree on religious training may indicate in some situations that sole legal custody is preferred, giving the sole legal custodian the right to make the determination of religion. However, in one case in which the father was Jewish and the mother Christian, the court of appeal upheld a trial court decision ordering joint legal custody with a substantial schedule of activities in both religions. The court stated there is no presumption of harm from a mixed religious upbringing and that a parent should not be enjoined from involving a child with the parent's religious activities, absent a clear, affirmative showing of harm [In re Marriage of Weiss (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 106, 117, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 339] .

There are protections, however, for the rights of the noncustodial parent. A court will not enjoin the noncustodial parent from discussing religion with the child or involving the child in his or her religious activities absent a showing that the child will be harmed by such discussion or involvement [In re Marriage of Mentry (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 260, 269-270, 190 Cal. Rptr. 843] . A court's decision to intervene in a parent's religious upbringing of a child, even after dissolution of the marriage, must be based on the court's judgment that the harm or threatened harm to the child caused by the parent's behavior outweighs the harm caused by coercive intervention in matters of family privacy [In re Marriage of Mentry (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 260, 269-270, 190 Cal. Rptr. 843] .

[l] Domestic Violence

In making a determination of the best interest of the child, the court must consider any history of abuse by one parent or any other person seeking custody against any of the following: (1) any child to whom he or she is related by blood or affinity or with whom he or she has had a caretaking relationship, no matter how temporary; (2) the other parent; or (3) a parent, current spouse, or cohabitant, of the parent or person seeking custody, or a person with whom the parent or person seeking custody has a dating or engagement relationship [Fam. Code § 3011(b)]. "Abuse against a child" means "child abuse" as defined in Penal Code § 11165.6. Abuse against any of the other persons listed above (parents, current spouse, and so on) means "abuse" as defined in Fam. Code § 6203. As a prerequisite to considering allegations of abuse, the court may require substantial independent corroboration of the facts [Fam. Code § 3011(b) (sources of corroboration include, but are not limited to, written reports by law enforcement agencies, child protective services or other social welfare agencies, courts, medical facilities, or other public agencies or private nonprofit organizations providing services to victims of sexual assault or domestic violence)].

When allegations about a parent under Fam. Code § 3011(b) are brought to the court's attention, and the court makes an order for sole or joint custody to that parent, the court must state its reasons for doing so in writing or on the record, andmust ensure that any order regarding custody or visitation is specific as to time, day, place, and manner of transfer of the child [Fam. Code § 3011(e)(1)]. These requirements do not apply if the parties stipulate in writing or on the record regarding custody and visitation [Fam. Code § 3011(e)(2)].

There is a rebuttable presumption that an award of sole or joint physical or legal custody of a child to a person who has perpetrated domestic violence against the other party seeking custody of the child, or against the child or the child's siblings, within the previous five years, is detrimental to the child's best interest under Fam. Code § 3011 [Fam. Code § 3044(a)]. The presumption may be rebutted only by a preponderance of the evidence [Fam. Code § 3044(a)]. In determining whether the presumption has been overcome, the court must consider all of the following factors [Fam. Code § 3044(b)]:

> 1. Whether the perpetrator of domestic violence has demonstrated that giving him or her sole or joint physical or legal custody of the child is in the child's best interest. In determining the best interest of the child, the preference for frequent and continuing contact with both parents set forth in Fam. Code § 3020(b), or with the noncustodial parent set forth in Fam. Code § 3040(a)(1) [see discussion in § 223.13[2]], may not be used to rebut the presumption, in whole or in part.
>
> 2. Whether the perpetrator has successfully completed a batterer's treatment program that meets the criteria outlined in Penal Code § 1203.097(c).
>
> 3. Whether the perpetrator has successfully completed a program of alcohol or drug abuse counseling when the court has determined that counseling is appropriate.
>
> 4. Whether the perpetrator has successfully completed a parenting class if the court has determined that a class is appropriate.
>
> 5. Whether the perpetrator is on probation or parole, and whether he or she has complied with the terms and conditions of probation or parole.
>
> 6. Whether the perpetrator is restrained by a protective order or restraining order, and whether he or she has complied with its terms and conditions.
>
> 7. Whether the perpetrator has committed any further acts of domestic violence.

A person has "perpetrated domestic violence" if he or she has intentionally or recklessly caused or attempted to cause bodily injury or sexual assault, or has placed a person in reasonable apprehension of imminent serious bodily injury to that person or to another [Fam. Code § 3044(c)]. A person perpetrates domestic violence by engaging in any behavior involving, but not limited to, threatening, striking, harassing, destroying personal property, or disturbing the peace of another, for which a court may issue an ex parte order under Fam. Code § 6320 to protect the other party who is seeking custody or to protect the child and the child's siblings [Fam. Code § 3044(c)].

For these purposes, the requirement of a court finding is satisfied by, among other things, and not limited to, evidence that a party seeking custody has been convicted within the previous five years, after a trial or a plea of guilty or no contest, of any crime against the other party that comes within the definition of domestic violence in Fam. Code § 6211 and of abuse in Fam. Code § 6203, including, but not limited to, a crime described in Pen. Code §§ 243(e), 261, 262, 273.5, 422, or 646.9. The requirement of a court finding is also satisfied if any court, whether or not that court hears or has heard the child custody proceedings, has made a finding pursuant to Fam. Code § 3044(a) based on conduct occurring within the previous five years [Fam. Code § 3044(d)]. When a court makes a finding that a party has perpetrated domestic violence, the court may not base its findings solely on conclusions reached by a child custody evaluator or on the recommendation of the Family Court Services staff. The court must consider any relevant, admissible evidence submitted by the parties [Fam. Code § 3044(e)].

In any custody or restraining order proceeding in which a party has alleged that the other party has perpetrated domestic violence in accordance with Fam. Code § 3044, the court must inform the parties of section 3044 and give them a copy of section 3044 prior to any custody mediation [Fam. Code § 3044(f)]. This obligation does not arise during the proceeding in which a party is seeking a domestic violence protection order unless the parties are entering into custody mediation [Sabbah v. Sabbah (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 818, 823-825, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 175].

The court may not grant custody to a person who has been convicted under Penal Code §§ 273a (abusing or endangering child's health), 273d (inflicting corporal injury on child), or 647.6 (child molesting), or who is required to be registered as a sex offender under Penal Code § 290 if the victim was a minor, unless the court finds that there is no significant risk to the child, and states its reasons in writing or on the record [Fam. Code § 3030(a)(1)]. A court may not grant physical or legal custody of a child to a person if anyone residing in the person's household is required, as a result of a felony conviction in which the victim was a minor, to register as a sex offender under Penal Code § 290, unless the court finds that there is no significant risk to the child and states its reasons in writing or on the record [Fam. Code § 3030(a)(2)]. The child may not be placed in a home in which that person resides, nor may the child be permitted to have unsupervised visitation with that person, unless the court states the reasons for its findings in writing or on the record [Fam. Code § 3030(a)(1), (2)]. The fact that a child is permitted unsupervised contact with a person who is required to register as a sex offender is prima facie evidence that the child is at significant risk. This prima facie evidence constitutes a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence; but the presumption does not apply if there are factors mitigating against its application, including whether the party seeking custody is also required, as the result of a felony conviction in which the victim was a minor, to register as a sex offender [Fam. Code § 3030(a)(3)].

In addition, the court may not grant custody to an individual who has been convicted of rape under Penal Code § 261 when the child was conceived as aresult of that crime [Fam. Code § 3030(b)]. Further, the court may not grant custody of, or unsupervised visitation with, a child to a person who has been convicted of the first-degree murder of the child's other parent unless the court finds that there is no risk to the child's health, safety, and welfare, and states the reasons for its finding in writing or on the record [Fam. Code § 3030(c)]. In making its finding, the court may consider the child's wishes if the child is of sufficient age and capacity to reason so as to form an intelligent preference, credible evidence that the convicted parent was a victim of abuse committed by the deceased parent, and testimony of an expert witness qualified under Evid. Code § 1107 that the convicted parent experiences intimate partner battering [Fam. Code § 3030(c)]. No person may permit the child to visit or remain in the custody of the convicted parent without the consent of the child's custodian or legal guardian until a custody or visitation order is issued granting the convicted parent custody or visitation [Fam. Code § 3030(c)].

The court may order an individual convicted of any of the above described offenses to pay child support through the local child support agency's office [Fam. Code § 3030(d)]. The court may not disclose the custodial parent's place of residence or employment, or the child's school, unless the court finds that the disclosure would be in the child's best interests [Fam. Code § 3030(e)].

In a custody proceeding, the court is encouraged to make a reasonable effort to ascertain whether or not any civil restraining orders or criminal protective orders are in effect that concern the parties or the child. The court is also encouraged not to make a custody order that is inonsistent with the civil restraining order or criminal protective order, unless the court finds that (1) the custody order cannot be made consistent with the civil restraining order or criminal protective order; and (2) the custody order is in the best interest of the child [Fam. Code § 3031(a)].

If an emergency protective order, protective order, or other restraining order has been issued, the court must consider whether the best interests of the child, based on the circumstances of the case, require that custody or visitation be suspended or denied, or limited to situations in which a third person specified by the court is present [Fam. Code § 3031(c)]. Any order made must specify the time, day, place, and manner of transfer of the child for custody or visitation to limit the child's exposure to potential domestic conflict or violence and to ensure the safety of all family members. If the court finds that a party is staying in a place designated as a shelter for victims of domestic violence or other confidential location, the court's order for time, day, place, and manner of transfer of the child for custody or visitation must be designed to prevent disclosure of the location of the shelter or other confidential location [Fam. Code § 3031(b)].

[m] Substance Abuse

In making a determination of the best interest of the child, the court must consider the habitual or continual illegal use of controlled substances or habitual or continual abuse of alcohol by either parent. However, before considering these allegations, the court may first require independent corroboration, including, but not limited to, written reports from law enforcement agencies, courts, probation departments, social welfare agencies, medical facilities, rehabilitation facilities, or other public agencies or nonprofit organizations providing drug and alcohol abuse services. "Controlled substances" has the same meaning as defined in the California Uniform Controlled Substance Act [Fam. Code § 3011(d); see Health & Safety Code § 11000 et seq.].

When allegations about a parent under Fam. Code § 3011(d) are brought to the court's attention, and the court makes an order for sole or joint custody to that parent, the court must state its reasons for doing so in writing or on the record, and must ensure that any order regarding custody or visitation is specific as to time, day, place, and manner of transfer of the child [Fam. Code § 3011(e)(1)]. These requirements do not apply if the parties stipulate in writing or on the record regarding custody and visitation [Fam. Code § 3011(e)(2)].

A court may also order alcohol or drug testing for a parent or legal custodian who is seeking child custody or visitation if the court determines by a preponderance of the evidence that there is habitual or continual abuse of alcohol or habitual, frequent, or continual illegal use of controlled substances by the parent or legal custodian [Fam. Code § 3041.5(a)]. In that event, the court must order the least intrusive method of testing, and the testing must be performed according to standards established for drug testing of federal employees [Fam. Code § 3041.5(a); Deborah M. v. Superior Court (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1181, 1189-1192, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 757 ("least intrusive method of testing" means urine testing and that testing must comply with strict federal standards; hair follicle drug testing is not permitted)]. Either or both parties may be ordered to pay the costs of the testing [Fam. Code § 3041.5(a)].

The test results must be kept confidential, be maintained as a sealed record in the court file, and may not be released to any person other than the court, the parties, their attorneys, the Judicial Council (for purposes of completing a study of the testing process), and persons to whom the court expressly grants access by written order made with prior notice to all parties [Fam. Code § 3041.5(a)]. These results may only be used to assist the court in determining the child's best interest and the content of the custody or visitation order or judgment. They may not be used for any other purpose, including criminal, civil, or administrative proceedings. Any breach of these confidentiality requirements is punishable by civil sanctions of up to $2,500 [Fam. Code § 3041.5(a)].

A parent or legal custodian who undergoes drug or alcohol testing is entitled to a hearing to challenge a positive test result [Fam. Code § 3041.5(a)]. A positive test result that is upheld by the court does not, by itself, constitute grounds for anadverse custody decision. Instead, to determine the best interests of the child, the court must weigh all relevant factors [see Fam. Code § 3041.5(a)].

[n] Separation of Siblings

A court may enter a custody order that has the effect of separating siblings only when compelling circumstances require it for the children's best interests, and there is supporting evidence in the record. Children have, at a minimum, a right to the society and companionship of their siblings; they are not community property to be divided equally for the benefit of their parents [In re Marriage of Heath (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 444, 449, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 760 ; In re Marriage of Williams (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 808, 814, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 923] . In a decision involving a parent who sought to move out of state with all four children of the marriage, the family court had ordered two of the siblings to move with the moving parent and two to remain in California with the other parent [In re Marriage of Williams (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 808, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 923 ; for discussion of modification of custody in "move-away" cases, see § 223.28]. In reversing the trial court's order, the appellate court examined cases from other states and concluded that many states afford strong protection to sibling relationships. The court found that the rule and rationale of Florida jurisprudence provide a practical and workable rule to guide family law courts considering sibling separation orders in California, and remanded the case with instructions that the trial court could only order a separation of siblings on a showing of compelling circumstances, and was required to articulate those circumstances in a manner permitting meaningful appellate review [In re Marriage of Williams (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 808, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 923 ; see Fam. Code, § 3087; see also In re Marriage of Heath (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 444, 449-451, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 760 (abuse of discretion in splitting custody of siblings based on speculation by father and children's counsel and trial court's "hunch" presuming detriment to younger brother from older brother's autism)].

[6] Reported Sexual Abuse of Child

A parent may not be placed on supervised visitation or denied custody of or visitation with his or her child, and the parent's custody or visitation rights may not be limited, solely because the parent lawfully reported suspected sexual abuse of the child, otherwise acted lawfully to determine if the child was the victim of sexual abuse (based on a reasonable belief), or sought treatment for the child from a licensed mental health professional for suspected sexual abuse [Fam. Code § 3027.5(a)].

A court may, however, order supervised visitation or limit a parent's custody or visitation if the court finds substantial evidence that the parent, with the intent to interfere with the other parent's lawful contact with the child, made a false report of child sexual abuse during a child custody proceeding or at any other time, and that he or she knew the report was false at the time it was made [Fam. Code § 3027.5(b)]. Any limitation of custody or visitation, including an order for supervised visitation, may be imposed only if the court determines that the limitation is necessary to protect the child's health, safety, and welfare, and after the court has considered the state's policy of assuring that children have frequent and continuing contact with both parents [Fam. Code § 3027.5(b)].

Any supervised visitation maintained or imposed by the court must be administered in accordance with Section 26.2 of the California Standards of Judicial Administration [Fam. Code § 3201].

A party who has been falsely accused of child abuse or neglect in a child custody proceeding may move for sanctions under Fam. Code § 3027.1 against the person or persons who made the allegations. Any motion for sanctions must be filed on or before the earlier of 60 days after the judgment or order exonerating the moving party is served or 180 days from the entry of the judgment or order [Robert J. v. Catherine D. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1500, 1504, 1522-1527, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 6] .

[7] Absence or Relocation From Family Residence

If a party is absent or relocates from the family residence, the court may not consider this absence or relocation as a factor in determining custody or visitation in the following circumstances [Fam. Code § 3046]:

1. The absence or relocation is of short duration, and the court finds that during the period of absence or relocation, the party has demonstrated an interest in maintaining custody or visitation, the party maintains or makes reasonable efforts to maintain regular contact with the child, and the party's behavior demonstrates no intent to abandon the child.

2. The party is absent or relocates because of an act or acts of actual or threatened domestic or family violence by the other party.

3. The court may consider attempts by one party to interfere with the other party's regular contact with the child in determining if the party has satisfied the foregoing requirements.

These provisions do not apply to (1) a party who has abandoned the child as provided in Fam. Code § 7822, or (2) a party against whom a protective or restraining order has been issued excluding the party from the dwelling of the other party or the child, or otherwise enjoining the party from assault or harassment against the other party or the child [Fam. Code § 3046(c)(1)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.13

§ 223.13 Custody Rights as Between Parents

[1] Basic Right to Custody

The most basic of parents' rights with respect to their children is the right to custody [see Odell v. Lutz (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 104, 106, 177 P.2d 628] . A parent's interest in the custody of his or her children is a cognizable and substantial right that extends to all parents, and is within the protection of the federal due-process and equal-protection clauses [Stanley v. Illinois (1972) 405 U.S. 645, 649-659, 92 S. Ct. 1208, 31 L. Ed. 2d 551 ; see U.S. Const. amend. XIV; In re Carmaleta B. (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 482, 489, 146 Cal. Rptr. 623, 579 P.2d 514 ; see also City of Carmel-by-the-Sea v. Young (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 259, 266-267, 85 Cal. Rptr. 1, 466 P.2d 225 (canvassing cases finding constitutionally protected rights in family relationship)].

This constitutional right underlies the statutory parental preference doctrine [Fam. Code § 3040(a)(1)], which gives first preference to parents in custody contests (see § 223.17[1]).

[2] Policy Favoring Continuing Contact With Both Parents

It is the public policy of California to assure children of frequent and continuing contact with both parents after the parents have separated or dissolved their marriage, and to encourage parents to share the rights and responsibilities of child-rearing, unless contact would not be in the best interests of the child [Fam. Code § 3020]. In making an order for custody to either parent, the court must consider which parent is more likely to allow the children frequent and continuing contact with the noncustodial parent [Fam. Code § 3040(a)(1); see Wilson v. Shea (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 887, 893, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 880 (need to assure frequent and continuing contact with noncustodial parent may justify variance from guideline amount for support to provide for necessary travel expense in move-away case)]. The Legislature has not defined "frequent and continuing" or specified a preference for any particular form of contact, and the California Supreme Court has indicated that the policy of considering which parent will provide such contact is not as all-powerful as often advocated by counsel for noncustodial parents [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 35, 38-40, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473] .

[3] No Gender Preference

The court may not prefer one parent as custodian because of that parent's sex [Fam. Code § 3040(a)(1); see Lester v. Lennane (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 536, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86 (court does not unlawfully prefer parent as custodian because of that parent's gender by making temporary custody order that does not give other parent equal time)]. Prior statutory preferences for the mother as the custodian of very young children (the "tender years" doctrine) [see Messer v. Messer (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 507, 509, 65 Cal. Rptr. 417] and for the father as custodian of children of an age to require education and preparation for business or labor [see Cunningham v. Cunningham (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 65, 67, 31 Cal. Rptr. 448] have been discarded.

Although there is no longer a gender-based tender-years doctrine, counsel should anticipate a judicial preference for a mother who has stayed home with young children over an employed father, particularly if the father has worked long hours and spent little time with the children. This preference will take the form of a gender-neutral favoring of the primary parent based on the need to maintain the continuity of existing parent-child relationships.

[4] Noncustodial Parent's Right of Access to Child's Records

Access to records and information pertaining to a minor child, including, but not limited to, medical, dental, and school records, may not be denied to a parent because he or she is not the child's custodial parent [Fam. Code § 3025]. However, this statutory right does not override other legal principles, such as the psychotherapist-patient privilege, that may preclude parental access to such records [see In re Daniel C.H. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 814, 827, 269 Cal. Rptr. 624] .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.14

§ 223.14 Supervised Visitation and Exchange Services, Education, and Counseling

Subject to the availability of federal funding, the family law division of the superior court in each county may establish and administer a supervised visitation and exchange program, a program for education about protecting children during family disruption [Fam. Code § 3201(b)], and group counseling programs for parents and children [Fam. Code § 3203]. These programs must allow parties and children to participate in supervised visitation between a custodial party and a noncustodial party or joint custodians, and to participate in the education and group counseling programs, regardless of whether the parties are or are not married to each other or are currently living separately and apart on a permanent or temporary basis [Fam. Code § 3203]. The family law division may contract with eligible providers of supervised visitation and exchange services, education, and group counseling, to provide services under these provisions [Fam. Code § 3202(a); see Fam. Code § 3203(b) ("eligible provider" defined)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.15

§ 223.15 Child Abduction Prevention

[1] In General

If a court becomes aware of facts which may indicate that there is a risk of abduction of a child, it must consider imposing conditions to prevent abduction [Fam. Code § 3048(b)]. The court must consider specified factors in determining the risk, and it must consider imposing specified conditions. All custody and visitation orders, whether or not there is any perceived risk, must contain certain basic information [Fam. Code § 3048(a)]. For remedies when children have been abducted, including the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act and the Hague Convention, see Ch. 260, Family Law Enforcement, Enforcement of Foreign Judgments .

[2] Risk Factors

In cases in which a court becomes aware of facts which may indicate that there is a risk of abduction of a child, the court must, either on its own motion or at therequest of a party, determine whether measures are needed to prevent abduction of the child by one parent. The court must consider the risk of abduction of the child; obstacles to location, recovery, and return if the child is abducted; and potential harm to the child if he or she is abducted. To determine whether there is a risk of abduction, the court must consider specified factors that mostly relate to the previous behavior and mobility of the party who poses the risk of abduction [see generally Fam. Code § 3048(b)(1)].

[3] Preventative Measures

The court must consider taking one or more of a list of specified measures if it finds there is a need for preventative measures after considering the risk factors [Fam. Code § 3048(b)(2)]. The measures initially specified include custody modifications, travel restrictions and conditions, and preparations for response if an abduction is carried out.

The measures to be considered include supervised visitation; requiring a bond; restricting the right of either the custodial or the noncustodial parent to remove the child; placing conditions on the right of the custodial parent to relocate with the child; requiring the surrender of passports; prohibiting a parent from applying for a passport for the child; requiring notice to foreign officials of passport restrictions; requiring registration of a California order in another state or requiring a foreign order with the same terms as the U. S. order; requiring a traveling parent to provide the child's itinerary, copies of round trip airline tickets, addresses and telephone numbers where the child can be reached, or an open airline ticket for the left-behind parent; including provisions in the custody order to facilitate use of the UCCJEA or the Hague Convention; and authorizing the assistance of law enforcement [Fam. Code § 3048(b)].

[4] Requirements for Orders

Every custody or visitation order must contain all the following: (1) The basis for the court's exercise of jurisdiction; (2) the manner in which notice and opportunity to be heard were given; (3) a clear description of the custody and visitation rights of each party; (4) provision stating that a violation of the order may subject the party in violation to civil or criminal penalties, or both; and (5) identification of the country of habitual residence of the child or children [Fam. Code § 3048(a)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.16

§ 223.16 Types of Custody Arrangements

[1] Legal and Physical Custody

The right of custody has two components: legal custody and physical custody. Legal custody refers to the right and the responsibility to make decisions relating to the health, education, and welfare of the child [Fam. Code §§ 3003, 3006]. Physical custody refers to with whom the child actually resides [see Fam. Code § 3007].

[2] Sole or Joint Custody

[a] In General

Both legal and physical custody may be sole or joint. A court may grant joint legal custody without granting joint physical custody [Fam. Code § 3085]. Arrangements involving sole legal custody and either joint physical custody or sole physical custody in the parent without legal custody, while not specifically prohibited by statute, would probably be unworkable.

The term "joint custody," when used without reference to legal or physical custody, means joint legal and joint physical custody [Fam. Code § 3002].

[b] Sole vs. Joint Legal Custody

Joint legal custody means the parents share the right and responsibility to make decisions relating to the health, education, and welfare of the child [Fam. Code § 3003]. Sole legal custody means one parent has the sole right and responsibiliy to make these decisions [Fam. Code § 3006]. In making an order of joint legal custody, the court must specify the circumstances, if any, under which the consent of both parents must be obtained in order to exercise legal control of the child and the consequences of the failure to obtain mutual consent. In all other circumstances, either parent acting alone may exercise legal control of the child. An order of joint legal custody may not be construed to permit an action that is inconsistent with the physical custody order unless the action is expressly authorized by the court [Fam. Code § 3083; see In re Marriage of Buser (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 639, 643-644, 235 Cal. Rptr. 785

(specification need only be made if order contemplates that there will be circumstances requiring joint consent; if no such circumstances are contemplated by court, no specification is required)].

[c] Sole vs. Joint Physical Custody

Joint physical custody means that each parent has significant periods of physical custody, shared in such a way so as to assure the child of frequent and continuing contact with both parents [Fam. Code § 3004; see § 223.28[2][iv]]. Sole physical custody means that the child resides with and is under the supervision of one parent, subject to the power of the court to order visitation [Fam. Code § 3007].

[d] Characterization of Physical Custody Arrangement as Joint or Sole

Joint physical custody contemplates that each parent will have significant,although not necessarily equal, periods of physical custody [see Fam. Code § 3004; In re Marriage of Birnbaum (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1508, 1515, 260 Cal. Rptr. 210] . There is no statutory or other bright line that demarcates a joint physical custody arrangement involving something other than a 50-50 time share from a sole custodial arrangement under which the noncustodial parent has substantial visitation [see In re Marriage of Biallas (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 755, 759-760, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 717 (examples of joint custody and sole custody situations)]. Although the significance of being labeled the custodial or noncustodial parent is diminishing, particularly with regard to child support [see Fam. Code § 4055(b)(1)(D) (statewide uniform child support guideline does not distinguish between "custodial" and "noncustodial" parents, but rather considers the respective amount of time during which each parent has "primary physical responsibility" for the children), discussed in Ch. 224, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Support], there may still be areas in which rights depend on the label [see, e.g., Fam. Code 3800 et seq. (deferred sale of home order available to "custodial" parent)]. Also, in "move-away" cases (see § 223.28[2][b]), the question of whether the "primary" custodial parent has de facto "sole" or "joint" custody is highly significant [see In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 37-38, 40 n.12, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 (parent with sole custody has presumptive right to relocate, but relocation by parent with joint custody requires de novo custody review); In re Marriage of Lasich (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 702, 714-716, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 356 ("joint physical custody" label disallowed, in international move-away case)]. For these reasons, physical custody arrangement should also address the issue of whether a parent with something like 35 percent physical custody should be labelled as noncustodial, or whether he or she should be considered a joint custodial parent.

In making an order of joint custody, the court may specify one parent as the primary caretaker of the child and one home as the primary home of the child, for purposes of determining eligibility for public assistance [Fam. Code § 3086].

[e] Standards for Ordering Joint Custody

Joint custody may be ordered in the court's discretion on the application of either parent if it is in the best interests of the child [Fam. Code § 3081; see Fam. Code § 3040(a)(1)]. The determining factor as to whether joint physical custody is in the child's best interests is the nature of the relationship between the parents with regard to their parental responsibilities [see In re Marriage of Birnbaum (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1508, 1515-1516, 260 Cal. Rptr. 210] . The court's opinion in Birnbaum includes a significant analysis of the actual variations on joint physical custody arrangements according to the parents' attitudes toward eah other at pages 1515-1518. The opinion is recommended reading for all parents and their counsel who are considering a joint physical custody plan. For discussion of the best interests standard [see Fam. Code § 3011], see also § 223.12[5][a] et seq.].

There is no general statutory preference or presumption for or against any particular custody arrangement [Fam. Code § 3040(b)]. However, if the parents have agreed to joint custody, there is a presumption that affects the burden of proof [see Evid. Code §§ 605, 606] that joint custody is in the best interests of the child [Fam. Code § 3080].

Joint custody may be ordered, if it is in the best interests of the child, between a father and an intended surrogate mother whose parental rights are subsequently established [In re Marriage of Moschetta (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1218, 1234 n.21, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893] . However, the father's litigation position of vigorously opposing establishment of the surrogate's rights is not a factor that may be taken into account [In re Marriage of Moschetta (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1218, 1231-1234, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893] .

[f] Requirements for Orders Granting or Denying Joint Custody

In granting or denying joint custody, the court, on request of any party, must state in its decision the reasons for granting or denying the request. A statement that joint physical custody is or is not in the best interests of the child is not sufficient [Fam. Code § 3082]. There is no statutory time limit within which a statement of reasons must be requested. However, one court has applied the time limits within which a statement of decision must be requested under Code Civ. Proc. § 632 [In re Marriage of Buser (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 639, 643, 235 Cal. Rptr. 785] . Thus, the request should be made within a reasonable time that is no more than 10 days after the court announces its intended decision. If the trial lasts less than one day, the request should be made before submitting the joint custody issue for decision [Code Civ. Proc. § 632].

In making an order of joint physical custody, the court must specify the right of each parent to the physical control of the child in sufficient detail to enable a parent deprived of that control to implement laws for relief from child snatching and kidnapping [Fam. Code § 3084].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.17

§ 223.17 Custody Rights of Nonparents

[1] Order of Preference in Granting Custody

Custody should be granted in the following order of preference, according to the best interests of the child [Fam. Code § 3040(a); see Fam. Code § 3021]:

(1) To both parents jointly (see § 223.16[1] et seq.) or to either parent;

(2) To the person or persons in whose home the child has been living in a wholesome and stable environment; and

(3) To any other person or persons deemed by the court to be suitable and able to provide adequate and proper care and guidance for the child.

All parents are entitled to custody as against all nonparents, unless the trial court finds that parental custody would be detrimental and that nonparental custody is in the best interest of the child, as discussed in § 223.12[5] [Adoption of Daniele G. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1403, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 341] . Denying custody to biological fathers and mothers once it has been proven that such custody would be detrimental to their children is directly and substantially related to the state's important and valid interest in the well-being of children [Adoption of Kelsey S. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 816, 844, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615, 823 P.2d 1216 ; Adoption of Daniele G. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1404, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 341 (constitutional to apply detriment standard to natural fathers as well as to mothers and presumed fathers)]. Although parents generally have the right to custody of their children over a third party, this right is not absolute and must be balanced against the child's fundamental right to have a placement that is stable and permanent [H.S. v. N.S. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 1139, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 470] .

If the court determines that custody must be granted to a nonparent, it must consider and give due weight to a parent's nomination of a guardian of the person of the child [Fam. Code § 3043; see In re Vanessa P. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1763, 1769-1770, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 760 ; for discussion of nominations, see Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians, § 280.45, and Ch. 281, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Conservators, § 281.31]. This rule would appear to require the court to at least consider a parent's nomination for guardian, even if the child currently has a different nonparent custodian who would otherwise have a preferential right to custody under category (2), above.

[2] Detriment Test for Granting Custody to Nonparent

Before granting custody to a nonparent over the objection of a parent, the court must find that granting custody to a parent would be detrimental to the child and that granting custody to a nonparent is required to serve the best interest of the child [Fam. Code § 3041; see Adoption of Daniele G. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1401, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 341 (under parental preference doctrine, award of custody to nonparent as against parent cannot be based on child's best interest alone, but must be supported by express finding that parental custody would be detrimental to child); for discussion of findings and standard of proof, see § 223.17[3]]. Allegations that parental custody would be detrimental to the child, other than a statement of that ultimate fact, may not appear in the pleadings [Fam. Code § 3041; Guardianship of Olivia J. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1154-1155, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 364 (nonparent need not allege specific facts showing detriment in pleadings)]. The court may, in its discretion, exclude the public from the hearing on this issue [Fam. Code § 3041; see Adoption of Daniele G. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1404-1405, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 341 (detriment standard may constitutionally apply to natural fathers as well as to mothers and presumed fathers; unlike adoption statutes, there is no distinction in guardianship and custody statutes between natural mother's and natural father's right to withhold consent)].

A showing that parental custody would be detrimental to the child requires a clear showing that nonparent custody is essential to avert harm to the child. A finding that nonparent custody will promote the best interests or the welfare of the child will not suffice [In re B.G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 699, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244 ; see Guardianship of Diana B. (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1766, 1774-1775, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 447] . The question of whether parental custody is detrimental to the child is highly dependent on facts unique to each child and parent [Guardianship of Olivia J. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1157, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 364] . Custody may be awarded to a nonparent without a finding of parental unfitness [H.S. v. N.S. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 1141, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 470 (detriment standard comports with constitutional due process)]. The legislature's imposition of a detriment-to-the-child requirement, instead of a parental-unfitness requirement, focuses on the child's interest. There may be circumstances in which placement with a parent is detrimental to the child even though the parent is not unfit [H.S. v. N.S. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 1141-1143, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 470 (because parental relationship can still be maintained even when custody is awarded to nonparent and because of state's compelling interest in protecting child's well-being, legislature could properly conclude that determinative factor should be harm to child rather than parental fitness)].

Current law requires that a finding that parental custody would be detrimental to the child must be supported by clear and convincing evidence [Fam. Code § 3041(b)], and that "detriment to the child" includes the harm of removing a child from a stable placement with a person who has assumed the role of the child's parent, fulfilling the child's physical and psychological needs on a day-to-day basis for a substantial period of time; no showing of parental unfitness is required to establish detriment [Fam. Code § 3041(c)]. A finding by a preponderance of the evidence that the nonparent seeking custody is such a person who has assumed the role of parent will serve as a finding that the custody is in the best interest of the child and that parental custody would be detrimental to the child, unless there is a showing by a preponderance of the evidence to the contrary [Fam. Code § 3041(d); see H.S. v. N.S. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 1137-1138, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 470 (under this provision, showing of de facto parent status creates rebuttable presumption that it would be detrimental to place child in parent's custody and child's best interest requires nonparental custody)].

Prior to statutory amendments that became operative in 2003, what is "detriment to the child" was not set forth with further particularity in the statutes, and courts utilized the flexibility they were given to respond to the particular circumstances of each case [see Guardianship of Olivia J. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1155-1156, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 364 ; Guardianship of Zachary H. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 51, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 7 ; Guardianship of Phillip B. (1983)

139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 188 Cal. Rptr. 781 ; Guardianship of Marino (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 952, 959-960 n.5, 106 Cal. Rptr. 655] . Because the detriment test focuses on the child rather than the parent, the application of the test appears to vary depending on the existing custodial situation [see In re B.G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 699, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244 ; In re Angelica M. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 210, 214-215, 216 Cal. Rptr. 18 (in contest between parent and nonparent, neither of whom currently has custody, parental preference and detriment test requires court to do more than compare child's likely well-being in the respective homes and determine that child's interests would be best served by nonparent custody); In re Volkland (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 674, 679-680, 141 Cal. Rptr. 625 ; In re Reyna (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 288, 302-303, 126 Cal. Rptr. 138 (when child is currently living and thriving with nonparent and parent attempts to obtain orregain custody, court can conclude that it would be detrimental to uproot child and grant custody to parent with whom child has had little or no contact); see H.S. v. N.S. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 1138, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 470 (removing child from stable, continuous, and successful placement is detrimental to child in absence of contrary proof)].

A nonparent can establish that parental custody is detrimental to a child even in the absence of an allegation of serious abuse, neglect, or abandonment by the parent [Guardianship of Olivia J. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1152-1157, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 364] . For example, a finding of detriment may be based on harm the child would suffer from being separated from a nonparent caregiver [Adoption of Daniele G. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1403-1406, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 341 (child will not necessarily become bonded to nonparent caregiver in time it takes biological father to obtain custody hearing); Guardianship of Olivia J. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1158-1161, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 364 (loss of relationship with nonparent who has acted as de facto or psychological parent is factor court may consider in determining whether parental custody is detrimental to child); Guardianship of Zachary H. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 51, 65, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 7 ; In re Bridget R. (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1483, 1520, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507 ; In re Brittany H. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 533, 551-552, 243 Cal. Rptr. 763] . The absence of a meaningful parent-child relationship in the face of a strong relationship with a nonparent is a significant fact that would weigh in support of a court's ultimate conclusion that the loss of a relationship with a nonparent is sufficiently detrimental to the child to warrant an award of custody to a nonparent [Guardianship of Olivia J. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1160, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 364] .

A parent who loses legal and/or physical custody in a family law custody proceeding is not foreclosed from regaining custody based on changed circumstances [H.S. v. N.S. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 1143, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 470] .

The detriment test of Fam. Code § 3041 may not be used by a nonparent to wrest custody from a current custodial parent. To remove a child from parental custody, there must first be sufficient facts of parental misconduct to bring the matter within the dependency jurisdiction of the juvenile court [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 et seq.]. There must also be clear and convincing evidence of one or more of the standards on which a minor may be removed from the home under Welf. & Inst. Code § 361(c). A less stringent standard under the Family Code may not be applied to remove a child from parental custody [see In re James T. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 58, 65-67, 235 Cal. Rptr. 127 ; but see Guardianship of Phillip B. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 419-424, 426, 188 Cal. Rptr. 781 and In re Phillip B. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 796, 156 Cal. Rptr. 48 (nonparent guardians appointed under detriment test even though juvenile court jurisdiction was previously denied on essentially same facts). Phillip B. was a highly publicized and unusual case of parents who refused to authorize a life-extending operation for their Down's-syndrome child. Because the child was institutionalized rather than living with the parents, it is questionable whether the case supports the proposition that a change of custody from a parent to a nonparent can be accomplished through a guardianship under the detriment test without facts sufficient to bring the child under juvenile court dependency jurisdiction].

[3] Findings and Standard of Proof

Before granting custody to a nonparent over a parent, the court must make a specific finding that a grant of custody to a parent would be detrimental to the child and that granting custody to a nonparent is required to serve the best interests of the child [Fam. Code § 3041; see H.S. v. N.S. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 1138, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 470]. The court's finding must be supported by evidence showing that parental custody would actually harm the child [In re

B.G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 683, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244 ; Adoption of Daniele G. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1401, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 341] . However, if it is clear that the trial court used the proper standard and no request was made for written findings, the appellate court can presume that the requisite finding was made [Chaffin v. Frye (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 39, 44-45, 119 Cal. Rptr. 22] or make the finding itself [Code Civ. Proc. § 909; Guardianship of Marino (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 952, 960-961, 106 Cal. Rptr. 655] .

By statute, an award of custody to the nonparent must be based on a finding supported by clear and convincing evidence that parental custody would be detrimental to the child [Fam. Code § 3041(b); but see Fam. Code § 3041(d) (showing by preponderance that nonparent has assumed parental role for substantial period of time suffices to show detriment to child)]. This showing of detriment may be established by a rebuttable presumption in cases involving de facto parents [H.S. v. N.S. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 1138, 1140, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 470] (rebuttable presumption comports with due process). In cases involving nonparental custody, the detriment requirement is imposed in addition to the requirement of the child's best interest. These standards and criteria represent an appropriate balancing of the competing interests involved in nonparental custody cases [H.S. v. N.S. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 1138, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 470] .

[4] Parental Custody Resulting in Actual Physical Custody to Nonparents

One issue that has arisen involving the doctrine of parental preference is the propriety of granting legal custody to a parent and physical custody to a nonparent as against the rights of the other parent. Several older cases have held that custody may not be given to a parent who intends to leave the child in the actual physical custody of a nonparent unless the other parent consented or was found to be unfit [Roche v. Roche (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 141, 142-144, 152 P.2d 999 ; Moffitt v. Moffitt (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 580, 582-583, 51 Cal. Rptr. 683 ; see Stauffacher v. Stauffacher (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 735, 737-738, 39 Cal. Rptr. 31 (grant of custody to father who intended to place child in foster home held to be grant to nonparent); cf. Booth v. Booth (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 496, 501-502, 159 P.2d 93 (fact that children were residing with grandparents in father's home while father was in armed forces and stationed overseas did not mean that custody had beengranted to nonparent and did not entitle mother to custody absent a finding of her unfitness)].

The situation in which a custodial parent provides a home for the child but places the child in day care or with a baby sitter during his or her working hours (discussed in § 223.12[5][c]) should be distinguished from this situation.

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.18

§ 223.18 Visitation Rights of Parents

[1] "Reasonable" Visitation

In making an order for custody in a dissolution or other marital termination proceeding, the court must grant reasonable visitation rights to a parent unless it is shown that visitation would be detrimental to the best interests of the child [Fam. Code § 3100(a); see Fam. Code § 3021; see also § 223.18[3]]. This provision is made applicable in the Family Code to a variety of domestic relations proceedings [see Fam. Code § 3021]. However, it would appear that visitation as a fundamental parental right should not be abridged by statute absent a powerful countervailing state interest. Thus, it would seem that visitation should not be denied to a noncustodial parent, regardless of the procedural stance in which the matter comes before the court, absent the requisite showing [see Stanley v. Illinois (1972) 405 U.S. 645, 649-659, 92 S. Ct. 1208, 31 L. Ed. 2d 551]. On the other hand, after parental rights have been terminated, the parent no longer has any right to visitation [see In re Jacob E. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 909, 925, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 15 (having failed to appeal termination order, mother's attempt to obtain visitation was in substance collateral attack on termination of her parental rights and request to reinstate her as parent, for which juvenile court had no jurisdiction)].

As to what constitutes "reasonable" visitation, each case must be decided on its particular circumstances. The court may specify the times and conditions for the exercise of visitation rights in detail if necessary [Fay v. Fay (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 279, 282, 83 P.2d 716] . For example, the court may require a noncustodial parent to pick up and return the children to the grandparents' home, rather than the home of the custodial parent, in order to avoid parental confrontation that may be detrimental to the children [In re Marriage of Oldfield (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 259, 261-262, 156 Cal. Rptr. 224] . Another case held that there was no abuse of discretion in giving a noncustodial parent midweek overnight visitation rights with a child because the parents lived in close proximity and the custodial parent's concerns about excessive driving time were purely speculative and not substantiated by evidence presented [Cassady v. Signorelli (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 55, 61, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 545] .

[2] Child Support and Visitation as Independent Rights of Child

Child support and visitation are independent rights, both accruing to the child's benefit. Therefore, visitation may not be conditioned on the noncustodial parent's payment of support [Camacho v. Camacho (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 214, 219, 218 Cal. Rptr. 810 ; see Fam. Code § 3556].

[3] Showing Required to Deny Parental Visitation

Parental visitation may be denied only if it is shown that the visitation would be detrimental to the best interest of the child [Fam. Code § 3100(a)]. This standard requires evidence of specific conduct that is harmful to the child [see Friedland v. Friedland (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 874, 879-880, 345 P.2d 322 (potential for abduction of child by noncustodial parent); Runsvold v. Runsvold (1943) 61 Cal. App. 2d 731, 733-734, 143 P.2d 746 (domestic violence); Cheeseman v. Cheeseman (1929) 99 Cal. App. 290, 291-292, 278 P. 242 (sexual abuse)].

It is an abuse of discretion to deny visitation rights to a parent if there is no showing that the child's best interests require isolation from the parent [Brasher v. Brasher (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 867, 869, 61 Cal. Rptr. 136 ; Devine v. Devine (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 549, 553-555, 29 Cal. Rptr. 132] .

[4] Showing Required to Restrict Parental Visitation

In some cases in which the custodial parent cannot meet the standard for completely denying visitation to the other parent (§ 223.18[3]), grounds may exist for restricting the time, place, frequency, or other aspects of visitation. An affirmative showing of harm or likely harm to the child is necessary to restrict parental visitation [In re Marriage of Birdsall (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 1030, 243 Cal. Rptr. 287] . Also a causal connection must exist between the conduct of the noncustodial parent and the harm. Evidence that the child is upset or confused by the conduct is insufficient [In re Marriage of Mentry (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 260, 266-269, 190 Cal. Rptr. 843] . The unconventional life-style of one parent, or the opposing moral positions of the parties, or the outright condemnation of one parent's beliefs by the other parent's religion, any of which may result in confusion to the child, does not provide an adequate basis for restricting visitation rights absent a showing of detriment to the child [In re Marriage of Birdsall (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 1031, 243 Cal. Rptr. 287 (abuse of discretion to restrict visitation rights of homosexual parent); see In re Marriage of Mentry (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 260, 266-269, 190 Cal. Rptr. 843 (abuse of discretion to prohibit noncustodial parent from engaging children in religious activity or discussion during visitation)].

It has been held to be an abuse of discretion to allow visitation only at the uncontrolled discretion of the custodial parent [Messer v. Messer (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 507, 510, 66 Cal. Rptr. 417] .

[5] Effect of Noncustodial Parent's Mental Condition

To protect the best interests of the child, the court may consider the noncustodial parent's emotional condition or behavior in relation to visitation [Simek v. Superior Court (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 169, 177, 172 Cal. Rptr. 564 ; see In re David D. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 941, 953, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 861] . If the mental health of the parent is at issue, the court may order the parent to submit to a mental examination under (Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.020(a)). However, unless there is evidence in the record to justify subjection of the parent to involuntary psychiatric treatment, a requirement of treatment as a condition on visitation is a violation of due process. It constitutes a fundamental restriction on liberty unaccompanied by any procedural safeguards [Camacho v. Camacho (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 214, 220-221, 218 Cal. Rptr. 810 ; In re Marriage of Matthews (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 811, 817-818, 161 Cal. Rptr. 879 ; cf. In re Chantal S. (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 196, 212 n.2, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866, 913 P.2d 1075 (expressing no opinion regarding correctness of Matthews and Camacho)]. However, the court may order a parent to participate in out-patient counseling for up to one year under Fam. Code § 3190 et seq. [see In re Katherine M. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 91, 99-100, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 298 , disapproved on other grounds in In re Chantal S. (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 196, 212, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866, 913 P.2d 1075 ; see § 223.20[8]].

[6] Effect of Domestic Violence

The court may not grant unsupervised visitation to a parent who has been convicted under Penal Code § 273a (abusing or endangering child's health), 273d (inflicting corporal injury on child), or 647.6 (child molesting), or who is required to be registered as a sex offender under Penal Code § 290 if the victim was a minor, unless the court finds that there is no significant risk to the child and states its reasons in writing or on the record [Fam. Code § 3030(a)(1), (b)]. The child may not be placed in a home in which that person resides, nor may the child be permitted to have unsupervised visitation with that person, unless the court states the reasons for its findings in writing or on the record [Fam. Code § 3030(a)(1)].

In addition, a court may not grant unsupervised visitation with a child to a person if anyone residing in the person's household is required, as a result of a felony conviction in which the victim was a minor, to register as a sex offender under Penal Code § 290, unless the court finds that there is no significant risk to the child and states its reasons in writing or on the record [Fam. Code § 3030(a)(2)]. The child may not be placed in a home in which that person resides, nor may the child be permitted to have unsupervised visitation with that person, unless the court states the reasons for its findings in writing or on the record [Fam. Code § 3030(a)(2)]. The fact that a child is permitted unsupervised contact with a person who is required to register as a sex offender is prima facie evidence that the child is at significant risk. This prima facie evidence constitutes a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence; but the presumption does not apply if there are factors mitigating against its application, including whether the party seeking visitation is also required, as the result of a felony conviction in which the victim was a minor, to register as a sex offender [Fam. Code § 3030(a)(3)].

A court is also prohibited from granting visitation to an individual who has been convicted of rape under Penal Code § 261 when the child was conceived as a result of that crime (§ 223.12[5][l]).

When a court makes an order for supervised visitation, it must require this visitation to be administered in accordance with the "standards for practice for providers of supervised visitation" recommended by the Judicial Council [Fam. Code § 3201]. The standards are set forth as Cal. Rules of Ct., App., Div. I, § 26.2.

The court is encouraged to make a reasonable effort to ascertain whether or not any civil restraining orders or criminal protective orders are in effect that concern the parties or the child. The court is also encouraged not to make a visitation order that is inconsistent with the civil restraining order or criminal protective order, unless the court finds that (1) the visitation order cannot be made consistent with the civil restraining order or criminal protective order; and (2) the visitation order is in the best interest of the child [Fam. Code § 3031(a)].

If a domestic violence protective order [see Fam. Code § 6218] has been directed to a parent, the court must consider whether the best interests of the child require that visitation by that parent be suspended or denied, or limited to situations in which a third person specified by the court is present. In its deliberations, the court must consider the nature of the acts from which the parent was enjoined and the period of time that has elapsed since the order. A parent may submit to the court the name of a person that he or she deems suitable to be present during visitation [Fam. Code § 3100(b)]. Any visitation order made must specify the time, day, place, and manner of transfer of the child for custody or visitation to limit the child's exposure to potential domestic conflict or violence and to ensure the safety of all family members [Fam. Code § 3100(c)]. If a criminal protective order has been issued under Penal Code § 136.2, the visitation order must refer to, and acknowledge the precedence of enforcement of, any appropriate criminal protective order [Fam. Code § 3100(c)]. If the court finds a party is staying in a place designated as a shelter for victims of domestic violence or other confidential location, the court's order for time, day, place, and manner of transfer of the child for custody or visitation must be designed to prevent disclosure of the location of the shelter or other confidential location [Fam. Code § 3100(d)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.19

§ 223.19 Visitation Rights of Nonparents

[1] In General

Family Code Section 3100(a) provides that, in the discretion of the court, reasonable visitation rights may be granted to any person "having an interest in the welfare of the child."

It has been held that visitation may not be granted to a nonparent over the joint opposition of parents having custody of the children merely on a finding that itwould promote the best interests of the child [cf. Fam. Code §§ 3103(d), 3104(e) (rebuttable presumption that grandparent visitation is not in best interests of child if both parents are opposed), discussed in § 223.19[2]]. If the parents are unified in opposition, nonparent visitation may not be ordered unless it is clearly and convincingly shown that denial would be detrimental to the child [In re Marriage of Gayden (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1510, 1520, 280 Cal. Rptr. 862 ; see Nancy S. v. Michele G. (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 831, 835 n.1, 837-838, 279 Cal. Rptr. 212] .

One California court denied visitation to a biological father who was barred from establishing his paternity because the mother's husband was conclusively presumed to be the father of the child under Family Code Section 7540 (issue of wife cohabiting with her husband who is not impotent or sterile is presumed child of the marriage, discussed in Ch. 412, Paternity). The court found that visitation would not be in the best interests of the child. It is not entirely clear from the court's language whether it was holding that, under the circumstances (opposition of mother and presumed father), it had no discretion under the statute to award visitation to the biological father, or whether the court was exercising its discretion to deny visitation [see Vincent B. v. Joan R. (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 619, 627-628, 179 Cal. Rptr. 9] . In the view of one United States Supreme Court justice, the latter view is required, on at least some facts, to support the constitutionality of the conclusive presumption [see Michael H. v. Gerald D. (1989) 491 U.S. 110, 133-134, 109 S. Ct. 2333, 105 L. Ed. 2d 91, 112-113 (opinion of Stevens, J., concurring in judgment)].

The Due Process Clause of the U.S. Const., Amend. XIV protects the fundamental right of parents to make decisions concerning the care, custody, and control of their children [Troxel v. Granville (2000) 530 U.S. 57, 66, 120 S. Ct. 2054, 147 L. Ed. 2d 49 (plurality opinion by O'Connor, J.)]. The U.S. Supreme Court has held that a nonparent visitation statute that allows visitation in the child's best interest and allows a judge, based solely on the judge's determination of the child's best interests, to overturn a decision by a fit custodial parent concerning visitation, can exceed the bounds of the Due Process Clause as applied to a particular set of circumstances. The Court has not stated, however, whether the Due Process Clause requires all nonparent visitation statutes to include a showing of harm or potential harm to the child as a condition precedent to granting visitation [Troxel v. Granville (2000) 530 U.S. 57, 73, 120 S. Ct. 2054, 147 L. Ed. 2d 49 (plurality opinion by O'Connor, J.)].

[2] Rights of Grandparents

Under Family Code Section 3103, grandparents may be granted reasonable visitation with a minor child of a party to any of the proceedings enumerated in Fam. Code § 3021 if the court determines that the visitation is in the best interest of the child. Visitation rights may not be ordered that would conflict with custody or visitation rights of a birth parent who is not a party to the proceeding [Fam. Code § 3103(e); see Fam. Code § 8512 ("birth parent" defined)]. If a protective order under Fam. Code § 6218 (domestic violence) has been directed to the grandparent during the pendency of the proceeding, the court must consider whether the best interest of the child requires denial of grandparent visitation [Fam. Code § 3103(b)].

There is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof that grandparent visitation is not in the best interest of a minor child if the child's parents agree that the grandparent should not be granted visitation rights [Fam. Code § 3103(d)]. If there is no other proceeding pending, and a grandparent has petitioned for visitation, there is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof that the visitation is not in the best interest of the minor child if there is objection from (1) the parent who has been granted sole legal and physical custody of the child in another proceeding, or (2) the parent with whom the child resides if there is currently no operative custody order [Fam. Code § 3104(f)].

Fam. Code § 3104 does not violate federal or California Constitutions, either on its face or as applied [In re Marriage of Harris (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 210, 223-230, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 842, 96 P.3d 141] . The presumption that visitation is not in the child's best interest if there is objection from the parent must be applied by the court when Fam. Code § 3104 applies [see In re Marriage of Harris (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 210, 230, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 842, 96 P.3d 141 (trial court erred in expressly utilizing best interest of child standard and not considering presumption, where mother was awarded sole custody and objected to paternal grandparent visitation)].

An order for grandparent visitation may not create a basis for or against a change of residence of the child, but may be one of the factors for the court to consider in ordering a change of residence [Fam. Code § 3103(f)].

When there is no allegation or finding that the parent is unfit, and the parent agrees to some visitation, a court order establishing a grandparent visitation schedule over the parent's objection infringes on the parent's fundamental parenting right to make decisions about the care, custody and control of his or her children [see Kyle O. v. Donald R. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 848, 862-863, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 476 ; Punsly v. Ho (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1099, 1105, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 139 (citing Troxel v. Granville (2000) 530 U.S. 57, 120 S. Ct. 2054, 147 L. Ed. 2d 49)]. There is a presumption that a fit parent acts in the best interest of his or her children, and deference should be given to the parent's decision regarding the amount of visitation [Kyle O. v. Donald R. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 848, 863, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 476 ; see In re Marriage of Ross & Kelley (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 130, 139-140, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 287 (court abused discretion by refusing to grant grandparents visitation rights agreed to by both parents based on erroneous conclusion that it lacked jurisdiction to do so under Troxel and Punsley v. Ho)].

If a court orders grandparent visitation, it may, based on the relevantcircumstances of the case, allocate the percentage of grandparent visitation between the parents for purposes of the calculation of child support pursuant to the statewide uniform guideline [Fam. Code § 3103(g)(1); see Fam. Code § 4050 et seq. (child support guideline)]. The court may also order a parent or grandparent to pay to the other an amount for the costs related to visitation, such as transportation and medical expenses and day care costs [Fam. Code § 3103(g)(2)]. In addition, a court may order a grandparent to pay litigation expenses in an appropriate case [see In re Marriage of Perry (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 295, 313, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499 ; but see Punsly v. Ho (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 102, 129 Cal. Rptr.2d 89 (mother's request for private attorney general fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 incurred in grandparent visitation dispute was denied)].

Grandparents may also bring a separate petition for visitation if there is no other proceeding pending regarding the child [see Fam. Code § 3104]. For further discussion, see Ch. 394, Parent and Child . In addition, grandparents may petition for visitation under Fam. Code § 3102 if the parent of an unemancipated minor is deceased [see, e.g., Fenn v. Sherriff (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1466, 1470, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 185 (pursuant to Fam. Code § 3102, maternal grandparents petitioned for visitation with grandchildren following death of their daughter, which father opposed)]. For discussion of Fam. Code § 3102 generally, see § 223.19[3].

[3] Rights of Relatives of Deceased Parent

If a parent of an unemancipated minor is deceased, the children, parents, siblings, and grandparents of the deceased parent may be granted reasonable visitation with the child during the child's minority on a finding that visitation would be in the child's best interests [Fam. Code § 3102(a)]. This situation may occur in a termination of marriage proceeding if one of the parties to the marriage dies before the proceeding is completed. Note that with respect to grandparents, several California appellate decisions have found Fam. Code § 3102 unconstitutional, as applied, without an allegation of parental unfitness [Zasueta v. Zasueta (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 245 ; Punsly v. Ho (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1099, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 139 ; Kyle O. v. Donald R. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 848, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 476] . However, one California appellate decision found Fam. Code § 3102 constitutional as applied to grandparents, even without an allegation of parental unfitness. Although the decision of one or two fit parents about whether and under what conditions grandparents should have visitation is entitled to special weight, it does not insulate the parent's determination from court intervention [see Fenn v. Sherriff (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1466, 1470, 1473-1494, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 185] .

With respect to a sibling, at least one appellate decision has found Fam. Code § 3102 unconstitutional, as applied, without an allegation of parental unfitness [Herbst v. Swan (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 813, 814, 820, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 836 (adult sibling)].

In granting visitation under Fam. Code § 3102 to a person other than a grandparent of the child, the court must consider the amount of personal contact between the person and the child before the application for the visitation order [Fam. Code 3102(b)]. In addition, absent a finding that the parent is unfit, when the parent agrees to some visitation then deference should be given to the parent's decision regarding the amount of visitation or even the parent's preference for a "less structured and more normal and spontaneous manner of visitation" [Kyle O. v. Donald R. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 848, 863, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 476 ; see also Zasueta v. Zasueta (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1254-1255, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 245 (fit parent's decision not to allow any visitation was entitled to deference); § 223.19[2]]. Termination of the visitation order is proper if friction between the child's surviving parent and the relative becomes a "battle" in which the children are likely to be hurt and if it is clearly in the best interests of the children that the surviving parent have complete discretion to determine the question of visitation [see Adoption of Berman (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 687, 696-697, 118 Cal. Rptr. 804 (father and stepmother battling maternal grandparents)].

Note that in the case of an adoption of a child following a parent's death, Fam. Code § 3102 does not apply if the child has been adopted by someone other than a stepparent or grandparent of the child, and any visitation rights granted under the section before an adoption (by someone other than a stepparent or grandparent) automatically terminate [Fam. Code § 3102(a)].

[4] Rights of Stepparents

The court may grant reasonable visitation to a stepparent if it is determined to be in the child's best interest [Fam. Code §§ 3100(a), 3101(a)]. If a protective order under Fam. Code § 6218 (domestic violence) has been directed to the stepparent, the court must consider whether the best interests of the child require that stepparent visitation be denied [Fam. Code § 3101(b)]. Visitation rights may not be ordered for a stepparent that would conflict with custody or visitation rights of a birth parent who is not a party to the proceeding [Fam. Code § 3101(c); see Fam. Code § 8512 ("birth parent" defined)].

The rationale of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Troxel v. Granville (2000) 530 U.S. 57, 120 S. Ct. 2054, 147 L. Ed. 2d 49 applies to a proceeding involving stepparent visitation under Fam. Code § 3101, namely, a court must apply a presumption favoring the parents' decision that visiting the stepparent is not in the best interest of their child [In re Marriage of W. (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 68, 75, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 461 (Fam. Code § 3101 not facially unconstitutional, but was unconstitutionally applied because court failed to accord special weight to parents' position)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.20

§ 223.20 Initiating a Contested Custody Proceeding

[1] Decision to Contest Custody

An attorney who is consulted by a parent concerning a custody proceeding must first help the client decide whether to contest custody. In nearly all cases, a contested custody proceeding should be avoided if at all possible. Such proceedings are almost always costly, stressful to the child, and damaging to the parents' relationship and ability to cooperate in the future for the best interests of the child.

The attorney must realistically evaluate the parent-client's chances for success. He or she should also evaluate the client's motives to determine if there are legitimate child-related concerns, or whether the parent is motivated primarily by hostility toward the other parent. The attorney should emphasize to the client that if the court senses that the parent has a punitive motive, it is likely to adversely affect the determination [see Fam. Code § 3040(a)(1) (court is to consider which parent is more likely to allow child frequent and continuing contact with noncustodial parent)].

[2] Temporary Custody Orders

In dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, legal separation, and certain other proceedings in which child custody is at issue [see Fam. Code § 3021], a petition for a temporary custody order may be included with the initial filing or may be filed at any time after the initial filing, and the Judicial Council form of that declaration should be utilized [Fam. Code § 3060; see Fam. Code § 3429 (Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act declaration, which must be included with petition)]. For the Judicial Council form of petition, see § 223.60, and for the form of declaration, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.311.

If the parties have agreed to or reached an understanding on the custody or temporary custody of their children, a copy of the agreement or a declaration as to their understanding must be attached to the petition or moving papers. As promptly as possible after filing, the court must, except in exceptional circumstances, enter an order granting temporary custody in conformity with the agreement or understanding, or in accordance with any stipulation of the parties [Fam. Code § 3061]. The effect of the temporary custody order on the permanent custody determination is discussed in § 223.12[5][b].

[3] Ex Parte Custody Orders

Absent an agreement, understanding, or stipulation of the parties concerning custody, the court may, if jurisdiction is appropriate (see § 223.11[1]), enter an ex parte temporary custody order, set a hearing date within 20 days, and issue an order to show cause on the responding party. If the responding party does not appear or respond within the time set, the temporary custody order may be extended as necessary, pending the termination of the proceedings [Fam. Code § 3062(a)].

The court may not make an ex parte custody order unless there has been a showing of immediate harm to the child or immediate risk that the child will be removed from the State of California [Fam. Code § 3064(a)]. "Immediate harm to the child" includes having a parent who has committed acts of domestic violence, if the court determines that the acts of domestic violence are of recent origin or are a part of a demonstrated and continuing pattern of acts of domestic violence [Fam. Code § 3064(b)(1); see Fam. Code § 6323(a)]. It also includes, but is not limited to, sexual abuse of the child, when the court determines that the acts of sexual abuse are of recent origin or are a part of a demonstrated and continuing pattern of acts of sexual abuse [Fam. Code § 3064(b)(2)]. In one case, for example, an ex parte change of custody order was issued after a mother left her four-year-old son alone at home while she went out to purchase medication. The appellate court stated that a parent's failure to provide adequate supervision of a child should qualify as "immediate harm" for purposes of issuing a Fam. Code § 3064 ex parte custody order. Besides the fact of leaving the child alone, the trial court also relied on a mediator's testimony expressing concern about the mother's judgment and emotional stability, that were not in the best interest of the minor [In re Marriage of Biggums-Slayton (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 653, 658, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 545] .

If, despite good faith efforts, service of the ex parte order and order to show cause has not been made and there is reason to believe, based on proof made under penalty of perjury by the petitioner, that the respondent has possession of the children and seeks to avoid the jurisdiction of the court or is concealing their whereabouts, the hearing date may be reset and the ex parte order extended up to an additional 90 days. After service has been made, either party may request ex parte that the hearing date be advanced or the ex parte order be dissolved or modified [Fam. Code § 3062(b)].

The Domestic Violence Prevention Act [Fam. Code § 6200 et seq.] also provides for emergency protective custody orders [see Fam. Code 6252(b)] and ex parte temporary custody orders [see Fam. Code § 6323(a)]. Since all custody orders under this act are subject to the otherwise applicable provisions of the Family Code [see Fam. Code § 3020 et seq.] governing the custody of children [Fam. Code § 6223; see Fam. Code § 3021(e)], these provisions would seem to be simply a reiteration of the right to an ex parte temporary custody order under Family Code Section 3062 subject to a showing of immediate harm as defined in Family Code Section 3064. Note, however, that custody rights may not be obtained by use of the DVPA by a party who has not established a parent and child relationship under Fam. Code § 6323(a)(2) [Fam. Code § 3021(e)].

[4] Ex Parte Visitation Orders

The provisions of the Family Code governing temporary custody orders generally [see Fam. Code § 3060 et seq.] do not specifically authorize the courtto make an ex parte visitation order [see Fam. Code § 3062]. However, there is a provision in the Domestic Violence Prevention Act that authorizes the court to make an ex parte visitation order in certain enumerated proceedings. A party who has not established a parent and child relationship under Fam. Code § 6323(a)(2) may not obtain visitation rights by use of the DVPA, however [Fam. Code § 3021(e)].

Under Fam. Code § 6323(a)(2) the court may issue an ex parte order determining the right of a party to visit a minor child, on conditions as the court determines, in a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, legal separation, and in certain other proceedings. Such orders require a showing of immediate harm to the child or immediate risk that the child will be removed from the State of California, as discussed in § 223.20[3] [Fam. Code §§ 3064, 6323(a)(2)].

For forms for use in obtaining ex parte visitation orders under the Domestic Violence Prevention Act, see Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence .

[5] Orders Restraining Removal of Child From State

The summons in a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, or legal separation [see Fam. Code § 2000] must contain a temporary restraining orer restraining all parties from removing the minor children of the parties from the state without prior written consent of the other party or a court order [Fam. Code §§ 2040(a)(1), 7700; see Fam. Code § 231 et seq.]. The order continues in effect until the final judgment is entered or the petition is dismissed, or until further order of the court [Fam. Code § 233(a)].

The order is enforceable anywhere in California by any law enforcement agency that has received the order or mailed notice of it or by any law enforcement officer who has been shown the order [Fam. Code § 233(b)]. Any willful or knowing violation of the order is a criminal offense [Fam. Code § 233(c); see Penal Code § 278.5].

In conjunction with any ex parte order seeking or modifying a custody order (§ 223.20[3]), the court must enter an order restraining the person receiving custody from removing the child from the state pending notice and a hearing on the order seeking or modifying custody [Fam. Code § 3063].

[6] Submission of Birth Certificate to Determine Whether Child Is Missing Person

If the custody proceeding arises in the context of a marital dissolution or the adjudication of paternity rights or duties and (1) one or both parents of the child have not appeared, either personally or by counsel, and (2) there is no proof of personal service of the petition on the absent parent, the court must require the parent, petitioner, or other party appearing in the case to submit a certified copy of the child's birth certificate to the court. The court or its designee must forward the certified copy of the birth certificate to the local police or sheriff's department, which must check with the National Crime Information Center Missing Person System to ascertain whether the child has been reported missing or is the victim of an abduction and must report the results of the check to the court [Fam. Code § 3140(a), (b)]. For good cause shown, the court may waive this requirement [Fam. Code § 3140(c)].

[7] Appointment of Counsel

[a] For Child

If the court determines that it would be in the best interests of the child, the court may appoint private counsel to represent the child's interests in a custody or visitation proceeding [Fam. Code § 3150(a); see § 223.79 (Order Appointing Counsel for a Child)].

In determining whether to appoint counsel, the court should take into account the following factors, including whether [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.240(a)]:

- The issues of child custody and visitation are highly contested or protracted;

- The child is subjected to stress as a result of the dispute that might be alleviated by the intervention of counsel representing the child;

- Counsel for the child would be likely to provide the court with relevant information not otherwise readily available or likely to be presented;

- The dispute involves allegations of physical, emotional, or sexual abuse or neglect of the child;

- It appears that one or both parents are incapable of providing a stable, safe, and secure environment;
- Counsel is available for appointment who is knowledgeable about the issues regarding the child;
- The child's best interest appears to require independent representation; and
- When there are two or more children, any child would require separate counsel to avoid a conflict of interest.

The court may appoint counsel for the child on the court's own motion or if requested to do so by a party, the attorney for a party, the child or any relative of the child, a mediator under Fam. Code § 3184, a court-appointed guardian ad litem or special advocate, a county counsel (or district attorney, city attorney, or city prosecutor) authorized to prosecute child abuse and neglect or child abduction cases under state law, or a professional person making a custody recommendation under Fam. Code §§ 3111 and 3118, Evid. Code § 730, or Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.010 et seq. Counsel may also be appointed on the request of any other person the court deems appropriate [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.240(b)].

Counsel must receive reasonable compensation and expenses, the amount of which is to be determined by the court. This amount must be paid by the parties, including parties joined to the proceeding, in proportions as the court deems just [Fam. Code § 3153(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.241(a), (b); In re Marriage of Perry (1998) 61 Cal.App.4th 295, 311, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d.499 (order against grandparent joined as party to dissolution proceeding)]. If the court determines that both parties together are financially unable to pay all or a portion of the cost of counsel, the portion that the parties are unable to pay must be paid by the court [Fam. Code § 3153(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.241(d)]. In determining the parties' financial ability to pay all or aportion of counsel's compensation, the court should consider such factors as their income and assets reasonably available at the time of the determination and their eligibility for or the existence of a fee waiver under Gov. Code §§ 68630-68641. The parties must also have on file a current Income and Expense Declaration [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-150] or a Financial Statement (Simplified) [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-155] [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.241(b)(1), referring to former Gov. Code § 68511.3, now Gov. Code §§ 68630-68641]. The court should determine the parties' ability to pay at the time counsel is appointed, within 30 days after the appointment, or at the next subsequent hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.241(b)(2)].

The suggestion that independent counsel be appointed for a child may present an ethical problem for counsel of either parent unless the client agrees to it. The California State Bar has issued a formal ethics opinion [Formal Opinion No. 1976-37], which states that an attorney who perceives a conflict of interest between the interests of his or her client, a parent, and the interests of the child, cannot ethically notify he court of the conflict or even suggest separate counsel for the child without permission from the client because he or she would be disclosing the confidences of his or her client. The opinion states that the attorney should do everything in his or her power to persuade the client to allow the attorney to suggest to the court that independent counsel be appointed for the child, but if that cannot be done, counsel cannot suggest representation to the court. If the situation becomes untenable, counsel can withdraw as attorney.

Counsel for the child must represent the child's best interests. Counsel's role is to gather facts bearing on the child's best interests, and to present those facts to the court, including the child's wishes, when counsel deems it appropriate for consideration by the court [Fam. Code § 3151(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.242(j)].

At the court's request, counsel must prepare a written statement of issues and contentions setting forth the facts that bear on the child's best interests. The statement must contain a summary of information received by counsel, a list of the sources of this information, the results of counsel's investigation, and any other matters as the court may direct. The statement may not contain any communication that is subject to the attorney-client privilege afforded by Evid. Code § 954. Counsel must file the statement with the court and submit it to the parties (or their attorneys of record) at least 10 days before the hearing unless the court orders otherwise. The Judicial Council may specify standards for the preparation of the statement, and may promulgate a model statement that includes instructions on how to subpoena a witness and a blank subpoena form [Fam. Code § 3151(b)].

Counsel has the following rights: (1) reasonable access to the child; (2) standing to seek affirmative relief on the child's behalf; (3) notice of any proceeding, and all phases of that proceeding, including a request for examination affecting the child; (4) the right to take any action available to a party to the proceeding, including, but not limited to, filing pleadings, making evidentiary objections, presenting evidence and being heard in the proceeding, presenting motions and orders to show cause, and participating in settlement conferences, trials, writ proceedings, appeals, and arbitrations; (5) access to the child's medical, dental, mental health, and other health care records, school and educational records, and the right to interview school personnel, caretakers, health care providers, mental health professionals, and others who have assessed the child or provided care to the child [Fam. Code § 3151(c)(5) (release of this information to counsel does not waive confidentiality of reports, files, or disclosed communications; counsel may interview mediators subject to provisions of Fam. Code §§ 3177, 3182)]; (6) the right to reasonable advance notice of and the right to refuse any physical or psychological examination or evaluation, for purposes of the proceeding, which has not been ordered by the court; (7) the right to assert or waive any privilege on the child's behalf; and (8) the right to seek an independent psychological or physical examination or evaluation of the child for purposes of the pending proceeding on approval by the court [Fam. Code § 3151(c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.242(i)].

At the court's request, counsel may orally state the child's wishes for consideration by the court if that information is not a privileged communication under Evid. Code § 954. Counsel may introduce and examine his or her own witnesses, present arguments to the court concerning the child's welfare, and participate further in the proceeding to the degree necessary to adequately represent the child [Fam. Code § 3151(b)].

When a child is represented by court-appointed counsel, at every hearing in which the court makes a judicial determination concerning custody or visitation, the court must consider any statement of issues and contentions filed by the child's counsel. Any party may subpoena as a witness any person listed in the statement as having provided information to counsel, but counsel may not be called as a witness [Fam. Code § 3151.5].

Once an attorney has entered an appearance on behalf of a child, as provided above, the attorney must continue to represent the child until (1) the conclusion of the proceeding for which the attorney was appointed, (2) the attorney is relieved by the court, (3) the attorney is substituted by the court with other counsel, (4) the attorney is removed on the court's own motion or on the request of the attorney or the parties for good cause shown, or (5) the child reaches the age of majority or is emancipated [Fam. Code § 3150(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.240(f)]. No later than 30 days after the attorney is relieved as attorney of record, the court may make a redetermination of the attorney's compensation on the court's own motion, at the request of a party or party's counsel, or at the request of the attorney for the child [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.241(a)(2)].

[b] For Parent

A family law court has no jurisdiction to furnish appointed counsel to a party to a child custody proceeding, even if the party is indigent [see In re Marriage of Laursen & Fogarty (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1082, 1087, 243 Cal. Rptr. 398 (family law court has no authority to order party's attorney to repay earned fees into trust account to enable that party to substitute another attorney)].

[8] Court-Ordered Parental Counseling

The court may require the parents of the child or any other party involved in acustody or visitation dispute, and the child, to participate in outpatient counseling.Court-ordered counseling requires a finding that the dispute between the parent, between a parent and the child, or between the parents and another party seeking custody or visitation rights with the child, poses a substantial danger to the best interests of the child and that the counseling is in the best interests of the child [Fam. Code § 3190(a)]. In determining whether the dispute poses a substantial danger to the child's best interests, the court must consider any history of domestic violence within the past five years between the parents, the parents and the child, or between a parent and another party seeking custody or visitation rights with the child [Fam. Code § 3190(b)].

The counseling may be with a licensed mental health professional or through other community programs and srvices that provide appropriate counseling, including, but not limited to, mental health or substance abuse services. The duration of the period of court-ordered counseling may not exceed one year, provided that the program selected has counseling available for the designated period of time [Fam. Code § 3190(a)]. The court, in its finding, must set forth reasons why it has found both of the following: (1) that the dispute poses a substantial danger to the best interests of the child and the counseling is in the best interests of the child; and (2) the financial burden created by the order does not otherwise jeopardize a party's other financial obligations [Fam. Code § 3190(c)]. The counseling must be specifically designed to facilitate communication between the parties regarding the child's best interests, to reduce conflict regarding custody or visitation, and to improve the quality of the parenting skills of each parent [Fam. Code § 3191].

The statutory provisions for court-ordered counseling are designed to address due process concerns with open-ended and unlimited orders requiring a parent to participate in psychotherapy [see, e.g., Camacho v. Camacho (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 214, 220-221, 218 Cal. Rptr. 810 ; In re Marriage of Matthews (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 811, 817-818, 161 Cal. Rptr. 879 ; cf. In re Chantal S. (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 196, 212 n.2, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866, 913 P.2d 1075 (expressing no opinion regarding correctness of Matthews and Camacho)]. Any order for counseling must conform to all the statutory requirements, including the one-year limitation [see In re Katherine M. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 91, 98-100, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 298 ; but see In re Chantal S. (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 196, 212, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866, 913 P.2d 1075 (Fam. Code § 3190 does not apply to juvenile court exit orders, disapproving Kathryn M. on this point; for discussion of exit orders, see Ch. 394, Parent and Child)].

The statutes do not expressly provide for when the order for counseling may be made, but it is clear that such an order may be made as part of the court's permanent custody and visitation order [see Fam. Code § 3190(d), discussed below]. Nothing in the statutes appears to prohibit the order from being made at an earlier point in the proceedings.

In any proceeding in which counseling is ordered and there has been a history of abuse by either parent against the child or by one parent against the other, or if a protective order [see Fam. Code § 6218] is in effect, the court may order the parties to participate in counseling separately and at separate times [Fam. Code § 3192].

If the court finds that the financial burden created by the order for counseling does not otherwise jeopardize a party's other financial obligations, the court must fix the cost and order the entire cost to be borne by the parties in the proportions that the court deems reasonable [Fam. Code § 3190(b)]. In a case involving domestic violence in which separate counseling has been ordered, each party must bear the cost of his or her own counseling separately unless good cause is shown for a different apportionment. The costs associated with the child's participation in counseling must be apportioned between the parents [Fam. Code § 3192; see Fam. Code §§ 4061(a), 4062, discussed in Ch. 224, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Support, § 224.112[2]].

If counseling is ordered at the end of the matter with the permanent custody and visitation order, the court may not order the parties to return to court on completion of counseling. However, either party may file a new order to show cause or motion after counseling has been completed, and the court may then again order counseling [Fam. Code § 3190(d)].

[9] Appointment of Interpreter

The Judicial Council is required to establish a one-year pilot project, beginning July 1, 1999, in at least two counties (including Los Angeles County), to provide that in any child custody proceeding, including mediation and other proceedings, the court must appoint an interpreter to interpret the proceedings at court expense if one or both of the parties is unable to participate fully in the proceeding because of a lack of proficiency in the English language, and the court determines that the parties are financially unable to pay the cost of an interpreter [Fam. Code § 3032(a)(1), (2)]. When the interpreter is not present the court may still issue an order if the necessity for the order outweighs the necessity for an interpreter, extend the duration of a previously issued temporary order if an interpreter is not readily available, and issue a permanent order when a party who requires an interpreter fails to make appropriate arrangements for an interpreter after receiving proper notice of the hearing [Fam. Code § 3032(a)(3)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.21

§ 223.21 Mandatory Mediation

[1] Requirement

In a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, or legal separation [see Fam. Code § 3021] in which child custody or visitation is a contested issue, mediation of that issue is mandatory [Fam. Code § 3170; see Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341 referral to mandatory mediation is included in Judicial Council form used to set forth temporary custody orders); see also Fam. Code §§ 1815, 1816, 3164 (qualifications of mediators)]. Mandatory mediation applies to disputes involving temporary as well as permanent custody [Fam. Code § 3170(a); see Fam. Code § 3170(b) (requiring special, separate written protocol for handling domestic violence cases).] It also applies to disputes concerning modification of custody or visitation orders [Fam. Code § 3170], and to situations in which a stepparent or grandparent has petitioned or applied for visitation rights [Fam. Code § 3171(a); see § 223.19[2] and [4]].

According to the Family Code, the purposes of mandatory mediation are (1) to reduce acrimony that may exist between the parties [Fam. Code § 3161(a); (2) to assist the parties to develop an agreement assuring that the child or children will haveclose and continuing contact with both parents, to the extent consistent with the children's best interests [Fam. Code § 3161(b)]; and (3) to effect a settlement of the issue of visitation rights of all parties that is in the best interest of the child [Fam. Code § 3161(c)].

In some counties, a party may file a petition for mediation of a dispute relating to an existing order for custody or visitation, or both. The board of supervisors of the county must have adopted a resolution authorizing the procedure [Fam. Code § 3173(a)].

Mediation may not be denied to the parties on the basis that paternity is at issue in the proceeding [Fam. Code § 3172]. However, the court may deny a request made at trial for additional custody and visitation mediation once mandatory mediation has been provided [In re Marriage of Green (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 14, 24-25, 261 Cal. Rptr. 294] .

Many courts have organized departments called "family court services" to provide the mandatory mediation services [see generally Statewide Office of Family Court Services, Judicial Council of California, Managing the Family Court

Services Organization (1989)].

[2] Governing Statutes and Rules

Court mediators must operate in compliance with the Family Code statutes, the uniform standards of the California Rules of Court, and the policies and procedures set by each county. California Rules of Court, Rule 5.210 sets forth standards of practice and administration for court-connected child custody mediation services [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.210(b)]. The courts are also required to develop local rules to respond to requests for a change of mediator or other general mediation problems [Fam. Code § 3163; cf. Hogoboom v. Superior Court (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 653, 661-671, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 254 (Fam. Code § 3163 does not authorize local courts to impose fees exceeding those charged for use of mediation process, given that imposition of fees for family law and domestic violence mediation has been preempted by state statute)].

[3] Role of Mediator

A mediator has the duty to assess the needs and interests of the child involved in the controversy, and must use his or her best efforts to effect a settlement that is in the best interests of the child [Fam. Code § 3180; see Fam. Code § 3011]. At all times, the mediator's overriding concern should be the best interests of the child [see In re Marriage of Rosson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1094, 1104 n.8, 224 Cal. Rptr. 250 (mediator acts as "advocate" for child, though not in sense of legal representative)]. Mediators must attempt to integrate the child's best interests within the family context [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.210(d)(2)].

Mediators have no authority to make custody or visitation decisions, which are within the nondelegable authority of the court [see In re Marriage of Matthews (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 811, 816-817, 161 Cal. Rptr. 879 (trial court improperly delegated authority to modify visitation schedule)]. Nevertheless, in some counties, when local rules permit, mediators may make recommendations to the courts concerning custody and visitation if mediation is unsuccessful in bringing the parents to an agreement [see Fam. Code § 3183(a)].

[4] Procedural Issues

Mediation must be set before or concurrent with the setting of the custody dispute for hearing [Fam. Code § 3175]. If a petition is filed for mediation of a dispute relating to an existing custody or visitation order, the matter must be set for mediation within 60 days of the filing of the petition [Fam. Code § 3173(b)].

Notice of mediation, and of any hearing to be held, must be given to each party and to each party's counsel of record [Fam. Code § 3176(a)(1)]. If a stepparent or grandparent seeks visitation rights, notice must be given to the stepparent or grandparent, to both parents of the child, and to each parent's counsel of record [Fam. Code § 3176(a)(2)]. Notice must be given by certified mail, return receipt requested, postage prepaid, to the last known address of the person to be notified [Fam. Code § 3176(b)].

[5] Confidentiality of Mediation

Mediation proceedings must be held in private and are confidential. All communications, oral and written, from the parties to the mediator made in a mandatory mediation proceeding are deemed to be official information under Evid. Code 1040 [Fam. Code § 3177; see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.210(d)(1)(F) (courts must ensure that mediation services protect party confidentiality in storage and disposal of records and personal information); see also Fam. Code § 6303(c) ("support persons" accompanying parties to mediation are bound by confidentiality)]. Evid. Code § 1119 (admissibility provisions applicable to generally to private mediation) does not apply to mandatory custody and visitation mediation [Evid. Code § 1117(b)(1)].

The confidentiality provided by Fam. Code § 3177 does not mean that a parent may say or do anything in the course of mediation without fear that it might affect the court's future custody determination. By statute, the mediator may, consistent with local court rules (if they so permit), submit a recommendation to the court as to the custody of or visitation with the child [Fam. Code § 3183(a); see § 223.21[13]]. The official-information privilege of Evid. Code § 1040 belongs to the court personnel, not to the parties. It prohibits the public disclosure of official information, but it may not be invoked by a parent to prohibit the mediator from making a recommendation and testifying at the hearing [In re Marriage of Rosson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1094, 1105, 224 Cal. Rptr. 250] . Therefore, counsel must ensure that the client understands that if mediation is unsuccessful in bringing the parties to an agreement, the mediator may become an adversary.

[6] Attendance of Counsel

The mediator has the discretion to exclude counsel from participation in the mediation proceedings if the mediator deems it to be appropriate or necessary [Fam. Code § 3182(a)]. On the other hand, the attorneys may be required to attend mediation sessions in some cases [see, e.g., San Francisco City and County Uniform Local Rules of Court, Rule 11.28(B) (attorneys must attend initial mediation session and may nothave other matters on any court calendar at time of mediation)].

[7] Cases Involving History or Allegations of Domestic Violence

If a domestic violence protective order [see Fam. Code § 6218] is in effect, the mediator must meet with the parties separately and at separate times if the party protected by the order requests [Fam. Code § 3181(a)]. If there has been a history of domestic violence but no protective order is in effect, separate sessions are required on the request of a party alleging domestic violence in a written declaration under penalty of perjury [Fam. Code § 3181(a)].

If a court has issued a domestic violence protective order, a support person may accompany the party protected by the order during mediation sessions [Fam. Code § 6303(c)]. The support person's function is to provide moral and emotional support for a victim of domestic violence, and to assist the victim in feeling more confident that he or she will not be injured or threatened during the proceedings. The support person cannot be a legal advisor or give legal advice [Fam. Code § 6303(a); see Fam. Code § 6303(c) (support person's presence does not waive confidentiality of mediation, and support person is bound by confidentiality of sessions)]. The mediator may exclude a support person from a mediation session if the support person participates in the session or acts as an advocate, or if the support person's presence is disruptive or disrupts the mediation process [Fam. Code §§ 3182(b), 6303(c)]. If allegations of child abuse or neglect are made, mediation must be suspended until a designated agency performs an investigation and reports a case determination to the mediator [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.210(e)(6)].

[8] Meeting With Children

Normally, the children who are the subject of the mediation do not attend mediation sessions. Nevertheless, the mediator may interview a child as the mediator deems necessary [Fam. Code § 3180(a); see Paquin, The Child's Input in the Mediation Process: Promoting the Best Interests of the Child, Mediation Q., No. 22, pp. 69, 73-76 (Winter 1988) (survey of court mediators found that, depending on the age of the children, 15 to 30 percent of the mediators reported that they always obtained input from children; the other mediators reported that they obtained input from children only under certain conditions, such as when there were allegations of abuse or neglect, the parents could not agree on the child's feelings or needs, or the mediation was at an impasse)].

[9] Participation of Nonparty Natural or Adoptive Parent

A biological or adoptive parent who is not a party to a proceeding involving the custody of his or her child is not required to participate in mediation. However, the failure to participate constitutes a waiver of that parent's right to object to any settlement reached by the other parties in mediation and right to require a hearing on the matter [Fam. Code § 3171(b); but see Fam. Code § 3185(b) (right to appear and be heard at hearing regarding stepparent or grandparent visitation not waived)].

[10] Agreement Reached Through Mediation

If agreement is reached by the parties, mediation concludes with preparation of a written parenting plan [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.210(e)(8)(A); see Fam. Code § 3188 (limitations on subject of agreement)]. A "parenting plan" is defined as a plan describing how parents or other parties will share and divide their decision making and caretaking responsibilities to protect the health, safety, welfare, and best interest of each child who is a subject of the proceedings [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.210(c)(2)]. The mediator must report the parents' agreement to counsel and to the court [Fam. Code § 3186(a)].

The agreement may not be confirmed or otherwise incorporated into a court order unless each party, in person or by counsel of record, has affirmed and assented to the agreement in open court or by written stipulation [Fam. Code § 3186(b); for Judicial Council form of Stipulation and Order for Custody and/or Visitation of Children (Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-355), see § 223.77]. If, however, a party fails to appear at a noticed hearing on the issue involved in the agreement, the agreement may nonetheless be confirmed or incorporated in an order [Fam. Code § 3186(c)]. A judge may refuse to approve and incorporate an agreement that he or she feels is contrary to the best interests of a child, as part of the court's discretionary authority in custody matters.

[11] Modification of Agreement

A custody or visitation agreement reached in mediation may be modified at any time in the court's discretion, subject to the applicable law regarding modification of custody orders [Fam. Code § 3179; see § 223.27[1] et seq.].

[12] No Agreement

If an agreement is not reached, the court must set the matter for hearing on the unresolved issues [Fam. Code § 3185(a)].

[13] Mediator's Recommendation to Court

Mediators have no formal authority to make custody or visitation determinations [see In re Marriage of Matthews (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 811, 816-817, 161 Cal. Rptr. 879 (trial court improperly delegated authority to modify visitation schedule)]. Nevertheless, in some counties, they may have significant influence on the determination ultimately made by the court. The mediator may, consistent with local court rules (if they so permit), submit a recommendation to the court as to the custody of or visitation with the child [Fam. Code § 3183(a); see In re Marriage of Rosson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1094, 1104, 224 Cal. Rptr. 250 (recommendations must be in writing)]. One appellate court upheld a trial court's order, even though the court had remarked that it was inclined to follow the mediator's recommendation in the absence of other evidence. It held that there was a full evidentiary hearing, and there was no indication of any unwillingness by the trial court to exercise its independent judgment [In re Marriage of Biggums-Slayton (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 653, 659, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 545] .

The mediator may also recommend to the court that counsel be appointed to represent the child [Fam. Code § 3184; see Fam. Code § 3150 et seq.]. In addition, attorneys and parties should be aware that there may be significant informalcommunication between mediators, judges , and other court personnel [see Newman, The Balancing Act in Family Court, 7 Cal. Law. 44, 46-47 (Jan. 1987)].

If a mediator makes a recommendation to the court, all parties have a due process right to examine the mediator about the recommendation at a hearing on the contested issues [McLaughlin v. Superior Court (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 473, 480-484, 189 Cal. Rptr. 479] . Thus, the mediator must appear and testify if called as a witness by either party, subject to cross examination by the other party [see In re Marriage of Rosson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1094, 1105, 224 Cal.

Rptr. 250] . However, the right of examination may be waived [McLaughlin v. Superior Court (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 473, 484, 189 Cal. Rptr. 479] .

[14] Procedure for Complaints Against Mediator

A party who contends that a court-program mediator may have violated a provision of the rules of conduct for court-program mediators may submit a written complaint to the court's complaint coordinator [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.865-3.872]. The complaint coordinator must send the party a written acknowledgment that the court has received the complaint and must conduct a preliminary review to determine whether the complaint can be resolved informally or closed, or whether the complaint warrants investigation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.869(b), (c)]. If the complaint is not resolved or closed after a preliminary review, the mediator must be given notice of the complaint and an opportunity to respond [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.869(d)(1)]. A final decision on the complaint must be made by the presiding judge or his or her designee [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.869(d)(3)]. The complaint proceedings must be kept confidential [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.871(c)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.22

§ 223.22 Custody Investigation and Report

[1] Appointment of Investigator

In any contested proceeding involving child custody or visitation rights, the court may appoint a child custody evaluator to conduct a child custody evaluation if the court determines that it is in the child's best interests [Fam. Code § 3111(a); see Fam. Code § 3110; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.220(c)(1); see also § 223.80 (Order Appointing Child Custody Evaluator)]. No person may be a court-connected or private child custody evaluator unless he or she has completed the domestic violence training program described in Fam. Code § 1816, and has complied with Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.220 and 5.230 [Fam. Code § 3110.5(a)].

Because each party may also obtain a professional expert evaluator, often three such experts will be involved in a custody dispute, one on behalf of each parent and one appointed by the court. However, it has been common judicial policy to avoid multiple examinations of the child by different examiners whenever possible. In fact, courts will frequently order that only a court-appointed evaluator may interview the child. If the parties can agree, the court will normally appoint an evaluator on whom they have agreed [cf. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.220(h)(10) (evaluator's ethical duty to not accept appointment except by court order or parties' stipulation)]. All child custody evaluators, however, whether appointed by stipulation or without, must meet the qualifications, training and continuing education requirements specified by statute and court rule [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.220(g); see Fam. Code §§ 1815, 1816, 3111; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.230]. Each court must adopt rules on whether a peremptory challenge to an evaluator will be allowed, and if so, when the challenge must be exercised [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.220(d)(1)(A)].

[2] Cost of Investigation

The court must inquire into the financial condition of the parent, guardian, or other person charged with the support and maintenance of the minor. If the court finds the person able to pay all or part of the expense of an investigation by a court-appointed investigator, the court may make an order requiring him or her to repay to the county that part, or all, of the expense of investigation, report, and recommendation as, in the court's opinion, is proper [Fam. Code § 3112(a); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.220(d)(1)(D) (if evaluation is ordered, and if any fees or costs will be charged for it, court must allocate payment of evaluator's fees and costs between parties)]. The repayment must be made to the court, which must keep suitable accounts of these expenses and repayments and deposit the collections as directed by the Judicial Council [Fam. Code § 3112(b)].

[3] Conduct of Investigation

The investigator conducts the investigation by interviewing the parents and the children. Other persons with knowledge of the situation, such as relatives, neighbors, teachers, doctors, or psychiatrists, may also be interviewed. In some counties, the parties are asked to furnish the names of witnesses. One or more home visits will probably be made, and proposed arrangements of care for the children are investigated. The process may take two months or longer.

Each superior court must adopt local rules to implement the comprehensive standards for practice for court-ordered evaluations set forth in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.220, which include, among other things, standards for contact between the evaluator and the child. Under that state court rule, for example, child custody evaluators must include in their initial meeting with a child an age-appropriate explanation of the evaluation process, including limitations on the confidentiality of that process. An evaluator's data collection and analysis that are consistent with the requirements of Family Code Section 3118 may include conducting age-appropriate interviews with, and observations of, the child, both parents, any stepparents, step and half-siblings--whether together, separately, or both, unless contraindicated to the protect the best interest of the child. The state court rule also imposes on the evaluator the general duty to consider the health, safety, welfare, and best interest of the child in all phases of the process [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.220(d)(2), (e)(2), (h)]. In addition, each court must adopt local rules to address ex parte communications [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.220(d)(1)(A)(v)].

If there has been a history of domestic violence between the parties, or if aprotective order [see Fam. Code § 6218] is in effect, at the request of a party alleging domestic violence in a written declaration under penalty of perjury or at the request of a party who is protected by the order, the parties must meet with the investigator separately and at separate times [Fam. Code § 3113; see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.220(e)(2)(C)].

Although the court cannot delegate its judicial responsibilities to the investigator and may disregard the report and recommendation [Fewel v. Fewel (1943) 23 Cal. 2d 431, 436, 144 P.2d 592] , it is usually very influential. Therefore, counsel should advise the client to cooperate with the investigator and try to furnish him or her with as much favorable information as possible.

[4] Confidentiality of Report

The investigator's report is confidential [Fam. Code § 3111(a)] and may not be made available except to the court and to the parties or their attorneys, and any other counsel appointed for the child pursuant to Fam. Code § 3150 [Fam. Code § 3111(b)].

[5] Use of Report at Trial

The investigation report may be considered by the court [Fam. Code § 3111(a)], and is competent evidence as to matters contained in it. The report may be received in evidence on the stipulation of all interested parties [Fam. Code § 3111(c)]. The report should be presented in affidavit form or otherwise under oath [Fewel v. Fewel (1943) 23 Cal. 2d 431, 436, 144 P.2d 592] .

Due process of law requires that each party receive a copy of the report [Wheeler v. Wheeler (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 239, 242, 109 Cal. Rptr. 782 ; see Fam. Code § 3111(a) (report to be filed and served on parties or their attorneys and any counsel appointed for the child at least 10 days before any hearing)]. It also requires that each party be given an opportunity to cross examine the investigator and to subpoena and examine persons whose hearsay statements are contained in the report, and to be permitted to introduce rebuttal evidence [Wheeler v. Wheeler (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d

239, 242, 109 Cal. Rptr. 782] . In support of these due process requirements, Fam. Code § 3115 provides that "no statement, whether written or oral, or conduct shall be held to constitute a waiver by a party of the right to cross examine the court-appointed investigator, unless the statement is made, or the conduct occurs, after the report has been received by a party or his or her attorney." The testimony is subject to proper direct and cross examination, and is competent evidence [see In re Marriage of Russo (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 72, 77-78, 98 Cal. Rptr. 501 (court can consider report if parties stipulate that it be deemed admitted, though it was not introduced); Swain v. Swain (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 1, 8, 58 Cal. Rptr. 83 (dealing with similar, but identical, statute)].

A party may waive the right to object to the contents of a report and the right to examine the investigator or to present rebuttal evidence, either by stipulation that the report may be received and considered by the court as evidence without further hearing, or by the failure to make timely objection [Long v. Long (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 732, 736-737, 59 Cal. Rptr. 790] . Each local court must develop procedures for the expeditious and cost-effective cross examination of court appointed investigators. These may include, but are not limited to, consideration of videoconferences, telephone conferences, audio or video examination, and scheduling of appearances [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.220(i)]. The underlying statutory authorization for such procedures provides that they must in no way "limit the requirement that the court-appointed investigator be available for the purposes of cross examination" [Fam. Code § 3117(b)].

Beginning on January 1, 2010, if the court determines that an unwarranted disclosure has been made of a written confidential report, it may impose a monetary sanction against the disclosing party [Fam. Code § 3111(d)]. A disclosure is unwarranted if it is made either recklessly or maliciously and is not in the child's best interests [Fam. Code § 3111(f)]. The sanction must be in an amount that is sufficient to deter repetition of the conduct and may include reasonable attorney's fees and costs incurred, unless the court finds that the disclosing party acted with substantial justification or other circumstances making the imposition of sanctions unjust [Fam. Code § 3111(d)]. It may not, however, impose an unreasonable financial burden on the sanctioned party [Fam. Code § 3111(d)].

[6] Special Rules for Investigation of Child Sexual Abuse

In any contested proceeding involving child custody or visitation rights, in which the court has either appointed a child custody evaluator or referred a case for court-connected evaluation, investigation, or assessment, and in which the court determines that there is a serious allegation of child sexual abuse, the court must require an evaluation, investigation, or assessment meeting special standards [Fam. Code § 3118(a)]. Any subsequent evaluation, investigation, or assessment may not be considered by the court unless it meets those standards [Fam. Code § 3118(a)]. In an emergency, the court may consider a partial investigation conducted for the purpose of assisting the court in determining what immediate temporary orders may be necessary to protect a child, but this exception does not apply after the emergency is resolved and the court is considering permanent child custody or visitation orders [Fam. Code § 3118(a)(1)]. Generally, the court is not prohibited from considering evidence relevant to the safety and protection needs of the child [Fam. Code § 3118(a)(2)].

A "serious allegation of child sexual abuse" means an allegation of child sexual abuse, as defined in Penal Code § 11165.1, that is based in whole or in part on statements made by the child to law enforcement, a child welfare services agency investigator, any person required by statute to report suspected child abuse, or any other court appointed personnel, or that is supported by substantial independent corroboration [Fam. Code § 3118(a); see Fam. Code § 3011(b)]. When an allegation of child sexual abuse arises in a custody or visitation proceeding in circumstances where the court has not appointed an evaluator or referred the case, the court may still require an evaluation, investigation, or assessment [Fam. Code § 3118(a)], or it may request the local child welfare services agency to investigate and report to the court [Fam. Code § 3027(b)]. An order appointing an evaluator or investigator must provide that the evaluator or investigator will have access to all juvenile court records pertaining to the child, and that any such records or information gained from themshall remain confidential and shall only be released as provided in Fam. Code § 3111 [Fam. Code § 3118(a)].

The evaluator or investigator must file a confidential written report with the court that includes recommendations regarding the child's therapeutic needs and how to ensure the child's safety [Fam. Code § 3118(b)(6)(D)]. This report must be served on the parties at least 10 days before the hearing [Fam. Code § 3118(b)(6)].

If the court orders evaluation, investigation, or assessment of allegations of child sexual abuse, the court must consider whether the best interest of the child requires that a temporary order be issued that limits visitation with the parent against whom the allegations have been made to situations in which a third person specified by the court is present [Fam. Code § 3118(f)]. The court must also consider whether visitation should be suspended or denied under Fam. Code § 3011 [Fam. Code § 3118(f)].

Any evaluation of allegations of child sexual abuse must be suspended if a petition is filed to declare the child a dependent child of the juvenile court under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 [Fam. Code § 3118(g)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.23

§ 223.23 Use of Psychiatrist or Other Expert

The court has the authority to appoint a psychiatrist or other mental health expert to examine the parents and the children in a custody proceeding, instead of, or in addition to, the investigation discussed in § 223.22[1] [Evid. Code § 730; see In re Marriage of Kim (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 364, 372, 256 Cal. Rptr. 217] . The court will apportion the cost between the parties [Evid. Code § 731(c)].

Counsel may also have his or her client and the child, if the client has custody of the child, consult a psychiatrist, medical doctor, or child psychologist, and use the testimony of the expert if it will be helpful. If the attorney suspects that the mental or physical condition of the other party is such that he or she should not have custody, or that the mental or physical condition of the child establishes the unfitness of the custodial parent, the attorney may move to have the other party or the child in his or her custody examined by a psychiatrist or doctor under Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.010 et seq. The attorney may also seek discovery of the other parent's relevant medical records that are not privileged [see Manela v. Superior Court (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1143, 1146-1147, 1150-1152, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 736 (father waived physician-patient privilege with respect to doctor who examined father for neurological condition, when mother was present during exam)].

An attorney's recommendation to the parties concerning the hiring of an independent psychologist to evaluate both parents and the children to determine appropriate custody and visitation has been held to be a privileged communication under Civ. Code § 47(b) [see Silberg v. Anderson (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 205, 219-220, 266 Cal. Rptr. 638, 786 P.2d 365 (rejecting tort and breach of contract action brought by husband against wife's attorney under several theories); Laborde v. Aronson (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 459, 463-464, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 119 (litigation privilege protected child custody evaluator after parents unequivocally agreed to submit to independent evaluation rather than to retain own experts); see also Gootee v. Lightner (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 587, 593-596, 274 Cal. Rptr. 697 (privilege extends to evaluator for alleged negligent and intentional torts arising from preparation and testimony in custody matter)]. In addition, an expert's communication that is connected or logically related to custody litigation is protected by the privilege, even if it concerns a nonparty [Obos v. Scripps Psychological Associates, Inc. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 103, 108-109, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30 (court-appointed psychologist)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.24

§ 223.24 Calendar Preference

A case in which child custody is the sole contested issue must be given calendar preference over other civil cases, except matters to which special precedence may be given by law, for assigning a trial date and must be given an early hearing [Fam. Code § 3023(a)]. If child custody is one of multiple contested issues, the court must order a separate trial as to the custody matter. This separate trial then has the same calendar preference over other civil cases [Fam. Code § 3023(b)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.25

§ 223.25 Conduct of Hearing

The court, in its discretion, may exclude the public from a custody hearing [Fam. Code § 214; see Fam. Code § 3041 (public may be excluded from hearing on whether parental custody would be detrimental to child)]. Witnesses may also be excluded from the courtroom except during their own examination [Evid. Code § 777].

The court has the power to protect a child under the age of 14 from undue harassment or embarrassment and to restrict questioning [Evid. Code § 765(b)]. The judge may even conduct the examination entirely, prohibiting the attorneys from examining the child [see In re Marriage of Okum (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 176, 183, 240 Cal. Rptr. 458] . The court will often exclude the children at issue from the courtroom to avoid harm to them from the testimony of their parents and other witnesses.

If the child's preference is to be considered (§ 223.12[2]), the court may talk to the child in chambers in lieu of testimony in court if the parties do not object [Tarling v. Tarling (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 8, 10-11, 8 Cal. Rptr. 621] .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.26

§ 223.26 Appellate Review

The standard of appellate review of custody and visitation orders is the deferential "abuse of discretion" test. Under this test, the appellate court must uphold the trial court ruling if it is correct on any basis, regardless of whether that basis was actually invoked [Montenegro v. Diaz (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 249, 255, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 575, 27 P.3d 289 (trial court did not abuse discretion by refusing to apply changed circumstance rule); In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 32, 913 P.2d 473 ; see In re Marriage of Williams (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 808, 812, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 923 (standard of appellate review of custody and visitation orders is deferential abuse of discretion test; precise measure is whether family law court could have reasonably concluded that order in question advanced best interest of child)].

However, because of the nature of custody, appeal is seldom an adequate remedy to correct trial court error. By the time that review is completed, the circumstances have often changed, so that determination of what was in the child's best interests based on the record of the trial may no longer be appropriate [see Zenide v. Superior Court (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1287, 1293, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 703 ; Stack v. Stack (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 357, 359, 11 Cal. Rptr. 177] . Further, because of the child's need for continuity and stability of the custodial arrangement, the appellate court generally will not order a change of custody on appeal, even if it finds that the trial court erred in reaching its initial custody determination [see Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 541, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P2d 486 ; In re Marriage of Carney (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 725, 741, 157 Cal. Rptr. 383, 598 P.2d 36] . Even if a stay is granted, the facts remain that the existing custodial arrangement is continuing and circumstances may be changing, so that the appellate court will be reluctant to reach a resolution that may not be in the child's best interests as of the time when the appeal is decided, even if it would have been in the child's best interests as of the time of trial [see Stack v. Stack (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 357, 359, 11 Cal. Rptr. 177] . For this reason, review of child custody determinations by extraordinary writ is favored [see Zenide v. Superior Court (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1287, 1293, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 703] . At least one appellate court has chosen to treat a motion for a stay as a petition for writ of mandate, so as to be able to resolve the matter immediately [see Speelman v. Superior Court (1983) 152 Cal. App. 3d 124, 128, 199 Cal. Rptr. 784] .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.27

§ 223.27 Modification of Custody and Visitation Orders

[1] Jurisdiction to Modify Orders

A court may, during the pendency of a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, or legal separation, and in certain other proceedings, or at any time thereafter, make such orders for the custody of a child during minority as may be necessary or proper [Fam. Code § 3022; see Fam. Code § 3021 (referring also to proceedings under Fam. Code §§ 3120 (exclusive custody), 6323, 6340(a) (DVPA), 7637 (UPA); Prob. Code § 1514(b) (guardianship))]. Thus, the court that makes a custody order has continuing jurisdiction over the matter, and may modify the order in the future as circumstances require [see Gudelj v. Gudelj (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 202, 209, 259 P.2d 656] .

The jurisdiction of a California court to modify its own custody order if the child has moved out of the state is controlled by the federal Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act (PKPA) [28 U.S.C. § 1738A] and the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act (UCCJEA) [Fam. Code § 3400 et seq.]. Similarly, the jurisdiction of a California court to modify a custody order of another jurisdiction concerning a child who is physically present in California is controlled by the PKPA and the UCCJEA. These laws are considered in detail in Ch. 394, Parent and Child .

For discussion and forms relating to obtaining modification of orders, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.180et seq. and § 221.430 et seq.

[2] Change-of-Circumstances Requirement

[a] In General

Once a court has entered a final or permanent custody order reflecting that a particular custodial arrangement is in the child's best interest, the paramount need for continuity and stability in custody arrangements, and the harm that may result from disruption of established patterns of care and emotional bonds with the primary caretaker, weigh heavily in favor of maintaining that custody arrangement [In re Marriage of Brown & Yana (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 947, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 610, 127 P.3d 28] . Therefore, to justify a change in custody, there must generally be a showing of changed circumstances affecting the child. The change-of-circumstances rule requires the existence of a prior permanent custody decision based on the then-existing circumstances that rendered that decision in the best interests of the child [see Montenegro v. Diaz (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 249, 256, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 575, 27 P.3d 289 (party can obtain modification of permanent custody order only by demonstrating significant change of circumstances justifying modification); In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 37, 913 P.2d 473 ; see Keith R. v. Superior Court (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1047, 1054-1055, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 298 (because custody order made in proceeding to obtain domestic violence order is interim order, custodial parent's subsequent request for move-away order is subject to best interest test, not change of circumstances test)].

The change of circumstances must be substantial; a child will not be removed from the custody of one parent and placed in the custody of the other unless the material facts and circumstances occurring subsequent to the original order are of a kind to render it essential or expedient for the welfare of the child that there be a change. It is undesirable for courts to change the child's established mode of living except for imperative reasons [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 37-38, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 ; In re Marriage of Carney (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 725, 729-731, 157 Cal. Rptr. 383, 598 P.2d 36] . Requiring a significant change of circumstances indicating that a different custody arrangement would be in the child's best interest not only serves to protect the weighty interest in stable custody arrangements, but it also fosters judicial economy [In re Marriage of Brown & Yana (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 947, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 610, 127 P.3d 28] .

The burden of showing a sufficient change in circumstances is on the party seeking the change in custody [In re Marriage of Carney (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 725, 731, 157 Cal. Rptr. 383, 598 P.2d 36 ; Speelman v. Superior Court (1983) 152 Cal. App. 3d 124, 128, 199 Cal. Rptr. 784] .

A party's absence, relocation, or failure to comply with a custody order is not,by itself, sufficient to justify a modification of the order if the reason for the absence, relocation, or failure to comply is the party's activation to military service and deployment out of state [Fam. Code § 3047].

[b] Between Parents

As between parents, there is some uncertainty as to just exactly what showing must be made once a change of circumstances is established. The California Supreme Court has, at various times, including in the same case, used language suggesting that once a change of circumstances is established, the test is simply the best interests of the child, and also language suggesting that a showing that the child will suffer detriment unless there is a change of custody is required. On the one hand, the Court has said that once it has been established under a judicial custody decision that a particular custody arrangement is in the best interests of the child, the trial court should preserve the established mode of custody unless some significant change in circumstances indicates that a different arrangement would be in the child's best interests [Burchard v. Garay, (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486] . However, in Marriage of Burgess, a move-away case (see § 223.28), the Court both quoted the above language regarding child's best interests and also stated that custody should only be changed if the child will suffer detriment rendering it essential or expedient for the welfare of the child that there be a change [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 37-38, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473] .

The Court's addressing of the change-of-circumstances requirement in Burgess was dicta in that the case involved the establishment of custody in the first instance, rather than a modification [see In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 37 n.8, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473] .

In 2004, the Court addressed the change-of-circumstances requirement in a move-away case that did involve modification of an existing custody order, and clarified what it meant by the above statement in Burgess. In In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 , the Court held that a noncustodial parent does have an initial burden of showing that the proposed move would cause detriment to the child, requiring reevaluation of the child's custody, but the noncustodial parent does not have a burden of establishing that a change of custody is essential to prevent detriment to the child [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1078, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] . If the noncustodial parent makes an initial showing of detriment, the court must perform the "delicate and difficult task" of determining whether a change in custody is in the child's best interests [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1078, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] .

[c] Between Parent and Nonparent

As between a parent and a nonparent, any attempt to remove the child from parental custody based on a change of circumstances probably requires the initiation of proceedings to declare the child a dependent of the juvenile court under Welfare and Institutions Code Section 300 et seq. [see In re James T. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 58, 65-67, 235 Cal. Rptr. 127] .

If a parent is attempting to obtain custody from a nonparent based on a change of circumstances, the court may not deny the motion unless it finds that changing custody to the parent would be detrimental to the child, and that continuing custody with the nonparent is required to serve the best interests of the child [see Fam. Code § 3041; but see Fam. Code § 3041(c) (removal from stable placement as detriment)]. For further discussion of the parental preference doctrine, see § 223.17.

[d] Situations in Which Showing of Change in Circumstances Not Required

If there has been a prior permanent custody order, a change of circumstances must be shown to modify the order whether the parties agreed to the arrangement or contested custody in an adversarial proceeding [Montenegro v. Diaz (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 249, 256, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 575, 27 P.3d 289 (changed circumstances rule applies "whenever [final] custody has been established by judicial decree," regardless of whether initial custody determination resulted from parents' agreement, default judgment, or litigation); Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 535 n.2, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486 ; see In re Marriage of Edlund & Hales (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1454, 1466-1470, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 (applying changed circumstance rule to request for modification of stipulated permanent custody order); In re Marriage of Biallas (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 755, 760-761 (rejecting argument that changed circumstance rule did not apply because trial court entered permanent custody order pursuant to stipulation between the parties)]. A stipulated custody order can be a final judicial custody determination for purposes of the changed circumstance rule even absent a judicial inquiry about whether the agreement results in an actual custody arrangement that fosters the child's best interest. However, a stipulated custody order is a final judicial custody determination for these purposes only if there is a clear, affirmative indication that the parties intended that result [Montenegro v. Diaz (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 249, 257-258, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 575, 27 P.3d 289 (orders including detailed visitation schedules and not providing for further hearings did not constitute final judicial custody determinations, when they did not clearly state they were final judgments on custody and parties' conduct following entry of orders strongly suggested they did not intend orders to be final custody judgments); see In re Marriage of Rose & Richardson (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 941, 951-952, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 45 (initial custody orders were nonfinal when stipulated dissolution judgment included language regarding selection of therapist to resolve parents' future custody and visitation issues)].

The changed-circumstance requirement does not apply to a temporary custody arrangement that has been implemented under a pendente lite stipulation, order to show cause, or pretrial order. At trial, the court may award custody to the other parent, if it determines that it is in the child's best interests regardless of whether there has been a change in circumstances since the temporary order or agreement [In re Marriage of Lewin (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1482, 1485-1489, 231 Cal. Rptr. 433 ; see also Montenegro v. Diaz (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 249, 258, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 575, 27 P.3d 289 ("temporary custody orders serve an important role in child custody proceedings," and parties should not be discouraged from entering into these stipulations)].

The change-of-circumstances rule also does not apply in the case of a custody arrangement that was established without a court order that specifically addressed the physical custody of the child. In this situation, the inquiry is focused solely on the best interests of the child, and it is not necessary to show that there has been a change of circumstances since the arrangement began. The court may consider all facts that bear on the child's best interests even if they do not constitute changed circumstances [Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 534-539, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486 (but see opinion of Mosk, J., joined by Lucas, J., concurring, strongly disagreeing on this point and arguing that changed circumstances must always be required to support change in custody, regardless of how the custody arrangement initially came about); see also Catherine D. v. Dennis B. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 922, 927-930, 269 Cal. Rptr. 547 (rejecting several prior orders regarding paternity, support, visitation, legal custody, mediation, and child's surname as sufficient to invoke changed-circumstances requirement)].

On the other hand, established modes of custody are entitled to judicial protection. Therefore, even though it is not necessary to show a change of circumstances absent a prior custody order, the parent who does not have the actual physical custody of the child bears the burden of showing that a change of custody is required in the child's best interests [Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 538, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486] .

The changed-circumstances requirement does not apply to a court-ordered rearrangement of the children's residential timetable under a joint physical custody order. Modification of the coparenting residential arrangement, without modifying the order for joint physical custody, is not considered a change of custody [In re Marriage of Birnbaum (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1508, 1513, 260 Cal. Rptr. 210] . Similarly, the standard of proof a parent sharing joint custody must meet to effect a change in parenting time is the best interest of the child, not changed circumstances [Enrique M. v. Angelina V. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1378-1382, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 306 (father with joint physical and legal custody requesting modification of parenting time and child's schooling required to show modification was in child's best interests, not changed circumstances)].

[e] What Constitutes Change of Circumstances

The custodial parent's frustration of the noncustodial parent's visitation rights is a changed circumstance that may justify a change in custody [Catherine D. v. Dennis B. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 922, 931-933, 269 Cal. Rptr. 547 ; In re Marriage of Wood (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 671, 682, 190 Cal. Rptr. 469] . This rule is supported by the statutory preference that custody be awarded to the parent who is more likely to allow the child frequent and continuing contact with the noncustodial parent [Fam. Code § 3040(a)(1)].

The remarriage of either or both parties may cause a change of circumstances that justifies a change of custody. However, the focus must be on the changes in the life of the child, not simply on the fact of remarriage [see Stack v. Stack (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 357, 370-372, 11 Cal. Rptr. 177] . The United States Supreme Court has held that the mere fact that the custodial parent has married a person of a different race than either of the parents cannot justify an order changing custody of a child. The reality of private biases and the possible injury that the child might suffer because of them are not permissible considerations for the removal of an infant child from its custodial parent [Palmore v. Sidoti (1984) 466 U.S. 429, 104 S. Ct. 1879, 80 L. Ed. 2d 421, 426] .

The California Supreme Court has held that a custodial parent's becoming physically disabled so as to affect his or her ability to participate with the children in purely physical activities is not a change of circumstances of sufficient relevance to justify a change of custody [In re Marriage of Carney (979) 24 Cal. 3d 725, 740, 157 Cal. Rptr. 383, 598 P.2d 36 ; see Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 535, 537, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486] .

A proposed change of the child's residence as a change of circumstances justifying modification of custody is discussed in § 223.28.

On the motion of one or both parents or of the legal guardian or custodian, or on the court's own motion, an order granting physical or legal custody of, or unsupervised visitation with, a child may be modified or terminated if either of the following circumstances has occurred since the order was entered, unless the court finds that there is no significant risk to the child and states its reasons in writing or on the record [Fam. Code § 3030.5(a)]:

- The person who has been granted physical or legal custody of, or unsupervised visitation with, the child is required, as a result of a felony conviction in which the victim was a minor, to register as a sex offender under Penal Code § 290.

- The person who has been granted physical or legal custody of, or unsupervised visitation with, the child resides with another person who is required, as a result of such a felony conviction, to register as a sex offender.

The fact that the child is permitted unsupervised contact with such a person is prima facie evidence that the child is at significant risk. This prima facie evidence constitutes a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence; but the presumption does not apply if there are factors mitigating against its application, including whether the party seeking custody or visitation is also required, as the result of a felony conviction in which the victim was a minor, to register as a sex offender [Fam. Code § 3030.5(b)]. A court may not modify an existing custody or visitation order on a party's ex parte petition without providing notice to the other party and an opportunity to be heard. This notice provision only applies when the motion for a change in custody or visitation is based solely on the fact that the child is allowed unsupervised contact with a person required to register as a sex offender and does not affect the court's ability to remove a child on an ex parte motion when there is a showing of immediate harm to the child [Fam. Code § 3030.5(c)].

[3] Death of Custodial Parent

If the custodial parent dies, the right of custody automatically reverts to the other parent [Fam. Code § 3010(b); In re Marriage of Jenkins (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 767, 771, 172 Cal. Rptr. 331] . Section 3010(b) appears to grant a father rights equal to those of the mother only if he can meet one of the presumptions of paternity of Fam. Code § 7611 [see Ch. 412, Paternity]. The constitutionality of such a distinction is questionable [see Stanley v. Illinois (1972) 405 U.S. 645, 651, 92 S. Ct. 1208, 31 L. Ed. 2d 551 , discussed in Ch. 394, Parent and Child]. The right to custody is immediate, so that the surviving parent may exercise the incidents of the right without first obtaining a custody order [see Guardianship of Donaldson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 477, 485-486, 223 Cal. Rptr. 707] .

If the court had jurisdiction over the custody of the children through a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, a parent's death abates the cause of action [Guardianship of Donaldson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 477, 485-486, 223 Cal. Rptr. 707] , and there is no longer any jurisdiction to consider modification of any custody order granted in the proceeding. Therefore, a nonparent who alleges that the surviving parent is unfit to have custody of the children must initiate some other proceeding, such as a guardianship or juvenile court dependency, in order to contest the parent's right to custody [see In re Marriage of Jenkins (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 767, 773, 172 Cal. Rptr. 331] . Any rights of nonparents for visitation with the child must arise through Fam. Code § 3102, discussed in § 223.19[3] [see In re Marriage of Jenkins (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 767, 774, 172 Cal. Rptr. 331] .

[4] Modification of Legal Custody

A parent who requests a change in the legal custody of a child must establish that the modification is in the best interests of the child based on a change in circumstances [In re Marriage of McLoren (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 108, 110, 247 Cal. Rptr. 897] . A prior order granting one parent sole legal custody may be modified to an order for joint legal custody [see Fam. Code § 3088]; however, the record must reflect that there has been a substantial change in the parents' willingness and ability to cooperate with each other since the prior order [In re Marriage of McLoren (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 108, 114-116, 247 Cal. Rptr. 897] .

[5] Modification of Visitation Orders

Like custody orders (§ 223.27[2]), visitation orders may be modified on a showing of a change of circumstances affecting the child's welfare, and that the requested modification will be in the child's best interests [see In re Marriage of Murga (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 493, 502, 163 Cal. Rptr. 79] . For instance, the noncustodial parent's decision to establish a residence in a place that is far enough away to preclude the exercise of existing visitation rights obviously constitutes a changed circumstance sufficient to support a modification of a visitation order [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 39-40, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 ; In re Marriage of Murga (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 498, 503, 163 Cal. Rptr. 79] .

A party's absence, relocation, or failure to comply with a visitation order is not, by itself, sufficient to justify a modification of the order if the reason for the absence, relocation, or failure to comply is the party's activation to military service and deployment out of state [Fam. Code § 3047].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.28

§ 223.28 Change of Child's Residence

[1] Temporary Removal of Child From State

In a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage or the legal separation of the parties [see Fam. Code § 2000 et seq.], the summons must contain a temporary restraining order restraining all parties from removing the parties' minor children from the state without the other party's prior written consent or a court order [Fam. Code §§ 2040(a), 7700; see Fam. Code § 231 et seq.]. The order continues in effect against the parties until the final judgment is entered or the petition is dismissed, or until further order of the court [Fam. Code § 233(a)].

After a permanent custody order is granted, the court may restrain either or both parents from removing the child from the state, even temporarily [see Ward v. Ward (1957) 150 Cal. App. 2d 438, 440-444, 309 P.2d 965 (restraints on joint custodial parents); cf. Fam. Code § 7501 (custodial parent's right to permanently change child's residence)]. If such an order has been made, the court, under its continuing jurisdiction, may modify the order to allow a parent to temporarily remove the child from the state if it determines that it is in the child's best interests. The court may set conditions that it deems appropriate to ensure the return of the child to the state [see Gantner v. Gantner (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 272,279-282 , (cash bond required)].

[2] Permanent Change of Residence

[a] Notice of Intent to Change Child's Residence

In making an order for custody, if it deems it appropriate, the court may require one parent to give notice to the other if he or she plans to change the residence of the child for more than 30 days, unless there is prior written agreement to the removal [Fam. Code § 3024 (applicable only to orders made on or after January 1, 1989)]. For a form of notice, see § 223.66.

It has been said that a custody decision that allows a parent to remove a child to a new and distant residence is one of the most serious decisions that a family lawcourt is required to make. It should not be made in haste; the best interests of the child require that the competing claims be considered only after the parties have had an opportunity to be meaningfully heard [Keith R. v. Superior Court (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1047, 1056, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 298 ; In re Marriage of McGinnis (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 473, 477, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182 , overturned on other grounds in]. Mediation is mandatory, and the parents should be afforded the time and opportunity to marshal appropriate evidence, including professional evaluation [In re Marriage of McGinnis (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 473, 478-479, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182 , overturned on other grounds in In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 (criticizing trial court for failing to make interim ruling maintaining status quo, even though appellate court itself denied supersedeas relief); see also In re Marriage of Roe (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 1483, 1489, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 295] .

Nevertheless, a notice requirement is not mandatory, and it does not limit, expressly or by implication, the right of a custodial parent to relocate [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 37-38 n.9, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473] .

[b] Kinds of Move-Away Cases

Cases involving a permanent change in a child's residence have come to be known as "move-away" cases [see In re Marriage of Paillier (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 461, 464, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 459 ; In re Marriage of McGinnis (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 473, 475, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182 , overruled on other grounds in 1In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473]. These cases have come before the courts in essentially three different procedural stances. The least common situation is when the parent are contesting custody in the initial instance, and the parent who has temporary custody pending dissolution proceedings intends to move before a permanent custody order has been made in the matter [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 31, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473] . This situation is discussed in § 223.28[2][c]. Other cases involve the stay-behind parent's attempt to restrain the other parent from moving without affirmatively seeking custody himself or herself [see, e.g., Selzer v. Selzer (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 637, 639, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 824 ; In re Marriage of Carlson (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1330, 1334, 280 Cal. Rptr. 840 ; see also Fam. Code § 7501, which gives the court the power to restrain a move without changing custody]. This situation is discussed in § 223.28[2][d]. The increasingly common situation is when the move causes the stay-behind parent to seek a change in the custody order so that the child stays rather than moves with the moving parent [see, e.g., In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1078-1079, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 ; In re Marriage of Rosson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1094, 1099, 224 Cal. Rptr. 250 , overturned on other grounds in Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 244, 913 P.2d 473 ; Brody v. Kroll (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 1737, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280] . These cases, in turn, involve different considerations depending on whether the existing custody arrangement is traditional or involves joint custody or some significant amount of shared physical custody. These situations are discussed in § 223.28[2][e].

[c] Effect of Move on Initial Custody Determination

In an initial custody determination, the court has wide discretion to choose a parenting plan that is in the best interests of the child [Fam. Code § 3040(b); see § 223.12]. Thus, if there is no existing final custody order, the best interests analysis applies regardless of how the court characterizes a preexisting custody arrangement [Ragghanti v. Reyes (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 989, 997-998, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 522] .

A parent seeking to relocate with the child bears no burden of establishing that the move is "necessary" [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 36-37, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 (rule requiring parent who wishes to change child's residence to prove that move is "necessary" would lead to costly litigation and require courts to "micromanage" family decision-making by second-guessing reasons for everyday decisions about career and family); see In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072,1088, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 (Court reiterated decision in Burgess that custodial parent does not have burden of showing that planned move is "necessary" whether case involves initial determination of custody or proposed move by parent with sole physical custody)]. However, the trial court must consider, among other factors, the effects of relocation on the best interests of the child, including the health, safety, and welfare of the child and the nature and amount of contact with both parents [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 34, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 ; see Fam. Code § 3011]. While Fam. Code § 3020 states the public policy of maintaining a child's continuing contact with both parents after divorce, it does not impose a burden of proof on a parent seeking to relocate with the child to establish necessity for the move. A trial court may consider the extent to which the minor child's contact with the noncustodial parent will be impaired by relocating, but it is not restricted to any particular formula for contact or visitation. Nor is it required to make a custody determination that preserves the predissolution status quo [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 36, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473] . There is no statutory basis for imposing a specific additional burden of persuasion on either parent to justify a choice of residence as acondition of custody [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 34, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 (emphasis the Court's)].

In an initial custody decision, although the trial court must take into account a planned move and any resulting prejudice to the child, those considerations do not preclude the court from also considering all the other circumstances bearing upon the child's best interest. Under the best interests analysis, even if the detriment resulting from a planned move is insufficient by itself to warrant changing a temporary custody order, other circumstances can support the finding that a change in custody is in the child's best interest [Ragghanti v. Reyes (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 989, 998, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 522] . In view of the child's interest in stable custodial and emotional ties, custody lawfully acquired and maintained for a significant period will have the effect of compelling the noncustodial parent to assume the burden of persuading the trier of fact that a change is in the child's best interest. But if there was no existing final determination of what custody arrangement was in the child's best interest, the noncustodial parent does not have a burden to show that an existing arrangement is detrimental [Ragghanti v. Reyes (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 989, 998, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 522 (father had burden of proving that even considering six years that child had lived with mother from birth, child's interest would be best served by awarding custody to him on mother's move; he was not required to show mother's care was seriously deficient)].

For discussion of the other factors that a court must consider in making an initial custody determination, see § 223.12[5].

[d] Restraint on Move Without Change of Custody

An 1872 statute provides that the parent entitled to custody of the child has the right to change the residence of the child, subject to the power of the court to restrain a removal that would prejudice the rights or welfare of the child [Fam. Code § 7501; cf. Rosin v. Superior Court (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 486, 497-498, 5 Cal. Rptr. 421 (statute inapplicable if decree of divorce provides otherwise)]. This statute creates a presumptive right of a custodial parent to change the residence of a child as long as the removal would not be prejudicial to the child's rights or welfare [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 32, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 ; see In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072,1094-1095, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 (reaffirming that right)]. An order restraining such a move is considered appropriate only in cases of bad faith, in which the move is shown to be a vindictive act by the custodial parent calculated to deprive the noncustodial parent of visitation privileges [In re Marriage of Ciganovich (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 289, 293, 132 Cal. Rptr. 261 ; see In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 35-36 ns. 4, 5, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 (moving parent's motivation in moving not relevant as long as it is in good faith, i.e., not intended to frustrate other parent's contact with children); see Cassady v. Signorelli (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 55, 60-61, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 545 (proposed move was "apparent pretext to defeat visitation")]. Even in a case of bad faith, the preferred remedy is more likely to be a change of custody rather than a restraining order [see In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 36 n.6, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 (bad faith as ground for change of custody, discussed in § 223.28[2][e][iii])].

A 1991 case attempted to broaden the grounds on which a move could be restrained beyond instances of bad faith, finding that under current statutes, impairment of the noncustodial parent's visitation rights could be sufficient grounds to restrain the move in the absence of a countervailing compelling reason to permit the move [see In re Marriage of Carlson (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1330, 1334-1338, 280 Cal. Rptr. 840 (based on policy expressed in Fam. Code § 3020 of maintaining a child's continuing contact with both parents after divorce)].

However, in Marriage of Burgess, the California Supreme Court clearly rejected this standard. The Court said that a trial court may consider the extent to which the minor children's contact with their noncustodial parent will be impaired by relocating, but it is not restricted to any particular formula for contact or visitation; nor is it required to make a custody determination that preserves the predissolution status quo. It found that a trial court adequately satisfied the statutory policy in favor of "frequent and continuing contact" by ordering "liberal visitation" with the noncustodial father if the custodial mother relocated. The Court also observed that it has long been established that, under Fam. Code § 7501, the "general rule [is that] a parent having child custody is entitled to change residence unless the move is detrimental to the child." Thus, apart from any bad faith motivations on the part of a custodial parent to frustrate visitation rights that might, arguably, still be a basis for restraining the move (as discussed above), the noncustodial parent otherwise has the burden of proving that a move is detrimental to the child--in order to restrain a move by the custodial parent without seeking a change in custody [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 35, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 (citing In re Marriage of Ciganovich (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 289, 293, 132 Cal. Rptr. 261); see In re Marriage of Lasich (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 702, 720, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 356 (father failed to prove that relocation to Spain would be detrimental to children); Cassady v. Signorelli (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 55, 59-61 (trial court properly concluded that it was in child's best interest to continue existing custody arrangement in California, with mother as primary caretaker, instead of allowing her to move with child to Florida, when mother had no serious job prospects in Florida and proposed move seemed intended merely to frustrate father's relationship with child). The Legislature has expressed its intent to affirm In re Marriage of Burgess and to declare it to be the public policy and law of California [Fam. Code § 7501(b)].

Most recently, in In re Marriage of Brown & Yana, the California Supreme Court noted that Fam. Code § 7501 contains no qualifying language purporting to limit its application to parents with only certain custodial rights. Although Fam. Code §§ 3006 and 3007 recognize the general right of a parent with sole custody to supervise and make decisions regarding a child's residence and education [see § 223.16], Fam. Code § 7501 contemplates that even a parent with sole legal and sole physical custody may be restrained from changing the child's residence if the court determines the change would be detrimental to the child's rights or welfare [In re Marriage of Brown & Yana (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 947, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 610, 127 P.3d 28] . The Court also noted that decisions subsequent to Burgess uniformly acknowledge that, even when a permanent custody order is in place, the custodial parent's right to relocate with a child remains subject to the changed circumstance rule [In re Marriage of Brown & Yana (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 947, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 610, 127 P.3d 28] .

The award of sole custody to one parent does not terminate the other parent's right to seek relief under Fam. Code § 7501 [In re Marriage of Brown & Yana (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 947, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 610, 127 P.3d 28] .

Family Code § 7501 does not specify whether an evidentiary hearing is required when a noncustodial parent seeks to restrain a removal that allegedly prejudices the rights or welfare of the child. The Supreme Court held in In re Marriage of Brown & Yana that an evidentiary hearing in a move-away situation should be held only if necessary [In re Marriage of Brown & Yana (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 947, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 610, 127 P.3d 28] . A court may deny the noncustodial parent's request to modify custody based on the relocation without holding an evidentiary hearing to take oral evidence if this parent's allegation or showing of detriment to the child is insubstantial in light of all of the circumstances presented in the case or is otherwise legally insufficient to warrant relief [In re Marriage of Brown & Yana (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 947, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 610, 127 P.3d 28 (noncustodial parent's general assertions concerning standard of living and education in proposed new location did not show that move would prejudice child's rights or welfare)]. An evidentiary hearing serves no legitimate purpose or function if the noncustodial parent is unable to make a prima facie showing of detriment or has failed to identify a material, contested factual issue that should be resolved by taking oral testimony. Application of this procedure in move-away cases fosters the goal of judicial economy and reduces litigation costs and unnecessary distress for the parents and children involved. It also protects the policy considerations underlying the changed circumstances rule, particularly in cases in which the court has already determined that the moving parent shall have the right and responsibility to make decisions relating to the child's health, education, and welfare under Fam. Code § 3006 [In re Marriage of Brown & Yana (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 947, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 610, 127 P.3d 28] .

However, a court must give the noncustodial parent a meaningful opportunity to be heard before granting the custodial parent's move-away request [In re Marriage of Seagondollar (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1116, 1120, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 575] . Because a custody decision allowing one parent to move the children out of California necessarily interferes with the other parent's ability to have frequent and continuing contact with them, such a decision should not be made "in haste," and the best interests of the children require that the parents' competing claims be considered in a calm, dispassionate manner and only after the parties have had an opportunity to be meaningfully heard [In re Marriage of Seagondollar (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1116, 1120, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 575 (numerous procedural errors required reversal of modification order)].

For a form for a declaration supporting a motion for an order restraining a change of residence, see § 223.68.

[e] Move as Ground for Change of Custody

[i] Proposed Move as Changed Circumstance

The sole fact that a custodial parent proposes to change the residence of the child does not automatically constitute "changed circumstances" requiring a reevaluation of an existing custody order [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1096, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81]. However, the Supreme Court has stated that, when considered in the light of all relevant factors, (1) the likely consequences of a proposed change in a child's residence may constitute a change in circumstances that warrants a change in custody, and (2) therefore the detriment to the child's relationship with the noncustodial parent that will be caused by the proposed move may warrant denying a request to change the child's residence or changing custody [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1097, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] . As with any allegation that changed circumstances warrant modification of an existing custody order, the noncustodial parent has a substantial burden of showing that a significant change in circumstances indicates that a different custody arrangement would be in the child's best interest [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 38, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 ; see In re Marriage of Melville (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 601, 610-612, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 685 (father presented ample evidence that mother's move to Oregon constituted material change in circumstances warranting modification of existing custody order for child with Down's syndrome and heart condition)]; but see Osgood v. Landon (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 425, 436, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 379 (father failed to establish any detriment to child from mother's proposed move to Tennessee; move was contemplated in good faith and to secure substantial increase in income and superior job stability which would benefit child, and without any intent to frustrate father's visitation with child).

The court need not defer its decision until after the parent and child haveactually moved if it is undisputed that the parent is moving [In re Marriage of Rosson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1094, 1101-1102, 224 Cal. Rptr. 250] . In one case, a move-away provision in a stipulated custody judgment precluded either party from moving the children out of the county "without the written consent of both parties or until further order of the court." It was held that the move-away provision shifted the burden to the custodial parent to seek and obtain a judicial review of the proposed move before actually moving [In re Marriage of Abrams (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 979, 995, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16 (noncustodial parent was not relieved of burden under Burgess of showing that move would be so detrimental to children that it warranted change in custody)]. A recent decision has noted that it is neither practical nor in the child's best interests to require a parent to move first and then seek permission and modification after the fact. The law allows a court to conduct a hearing based on the intention to move and make a custody order conditioned on the occurrence of the move. Such a conditional modification order is not considered to be "an advisory opinion" [Niko v. Foreman (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 344, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 398]

[ii] Importance of Custodial Designation

As discussed hereafter, in In re Marriage of Burgess, the Court's stringent standard for a change of custody was expressly limited to cases in which one parent has sole physical custody under an existing custody order. In a footnote, the Court said that a "different analysis may be required when parents share joint physical custody of the minor children under an existing order and in fact, and one parent seeks to relocate with the minor children" [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 32, 40 n.12, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 ; see § 223.28[2][e][iv]]. In its 2004 decision in In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 , the Court referred to this distinction it made in Burgess without comment, but stated that the extent to which the parents currently are sharing custody is one of the factors the court should consider when deciding whether to modify a custody order in light of a custodial parent's proposed move [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1089 n.3, 1101, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] . As a result, the terminology associated with custodial arrangements has become increasingly important, as has the necessity for examining the nature of the arrangement "in fact" [see In re Marriage of Biallas (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 755, 759-760, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 717 (examples of joint custody and sole custody situations)].

Until Burgess was decided, a deviation from use of the statutory language "joint" or "sole" custody seemed harmless. But in one post-Burgess decision, for example, the court of appeal noted "primary" was not necessarily equivalent to "sole" physical custody [Ruisi v. Thieriot (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1197, 1205, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 766] . In a later decision by a different division in the same district, the court applied the "sole custody" rules when the mother had the majority of time with the child and the label "shared" had been applied in the most recent court order [In re Marriage of Edlund & Hales (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1454, 1466, n.5, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671] . Thus, the incentive has become stronger for attorneys who represent clients regarding whom a move-away seems possible to obtain a "sole physical" custody designation.

[iii] Sole or Primary Physical Custody Cases

A parent who has sole or "primary" physical custody under an existing judicial custody order and who seeks to relocate does not have a burden of establishing that the planned move is necessary [In re Marriage of Brown & Yana (2006) 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 610, 127 P.3d 28 ; In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1078, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 ; see In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 28-29, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473] . Conversely, a noncustodial parent who opposes the move need not establish that a custody change is essential to prevent detriment to the children from the planned move [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1078, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 (appellate court misapplied Burgess holding in stating that custodial parent with good faith reason to move cannot be prevented, directly or indirectly, from exercising right to change child's residence, unless noncustodial parent makes substantial showing that change of custody is essential to prevent detriment to child)]. Instead, the noncustodial parent has an initial burden of showing that the proposed move would cause detriment to the children, requiring a reevaluation of the children's custody. The likely impact of the proposed move on the noncustodial parent's relationship with the children is a relevant factor in determining whether the move would cause detriment to the children. When considered in light of all relevant factors, it may be sufficient to justify a change in custody [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1078, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] .

If a noncustodial parent who opposes a proposed move makes an initial showing of detriment, the court must perform the "delicate and difficult task" of determining whether a change in custody is in the children's best interests [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1078, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 ; In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 37, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473] . Showing that a proposed move will cause detriment to the relationship between the children and the noncustodial parent does not mandate a change in custody; but it is within the court's broad discretion to order a change in custody based on this detriment if such a change is in the children's best interests in light of all the relevant factors [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1095, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] .

In deciding whether to modify a custody order in light of a custodial parent's proposed move, the court should consider the following factors [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1101, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] :

- The children's interest in the stability and continuity of the custodial arrangement [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1093, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 (court should state on record that it has considered this interest in stability, but lack of statement is not error)].

- The distance of the move [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 39, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 (in assessing "prejudice" to child's welfare as result of relocating even distance of 40 or 50 miles, court may consider nature of child's contact with both parents, as well as child's age, community ties, health and educational needs, and preference)].

- The children's ages.

- The children's relationship with both parents [see In re Marriage of Bryant (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 789, 792-794, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 791 ; In re Marriage of Edlund & Hales (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1454, 1473-1474, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671] .

- The relationship between the parents, including, but not limited to, their ability to communicate and cooperate effectively, and their willingness to put the children's interests above their own interests. The court may consider the past conduct of the parents in determining what future arrangement will be best for the children [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1094, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] . For example, in LaMusga, the court considered the history of animosity between the parents, and the failure of the mother, who was the custodial parent, to foster and encourage a healthy relationship between the children and their father, as an indication that it was unlikely she would follow through on her promises to encourage the children's relationship with their father following their move out of state [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1093-1095, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] . The parents' history of animosity and the mother's consistent attempts to limit contact between the children and the father indicated that the proposed move would be detrimental to the children [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1095, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 ; see In re Marriage of Abargil (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 1294, 1299, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 429 (in permitting mother's move with child to Israel, court considered evidence that she respected father's relationship with child and was likely to foster continuing contact between them, as well as evidence of her past efforts to nurture their relationship, in contrast to father's disparagement of her parenting skills)].

- The children's wishes if they are mature enough for such an inquiry to be appropriate [see In re Marriage of Campos (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 839, 842-844, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 300 (court should have considered children's opposition to move because it would separate them from their extended family, friends, and classmates); In re Marriage of Abrams (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 979, 986-987, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16 (children's preference to stay in California was outweighed by close bond with mother and it was in their best interest to remain in her care out-of-state); see also Niko v. Foreman (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 344, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 398 (under Fam. Code § 3042, court need not call child as witness when child's best interests so dictate, and may instead provide alternative means of obtaining information regarding child's preferences, e.g., by appointing counsel to represent and interview child or by appointing expert under Evid. Code § 730 to determine child's best interests as it relates to parent's requested move)].

- The reasons for the proposed move [see In re Marriage of Condon (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 533, 539, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33 (mother permitted to move with children to Australia based on ability to financially support herself there rather than entirely depend on father for support, mother's extensive family in Australia, children's lack of firm long-time base in California, children's primary emotional attachment to mother, and impact of parties' stressful relationship on children)].

- The extent to which the parents currently are sharing custody.

In In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 , the California Supreme Court reaffirmed its statement in Burgess that "the paramount need for continuity and stability in custody arrangements--and the harm that may result from disruption of established patterns of care and emotional bonds with the primary caretaker--weigh heavily in favor of maintaining ongoing custody arrangements" [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1093, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 ; In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 32-33, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473] . It also reaffirmed its statement in Burgess that the parent with primary physical custody of the children has a presumptive right to change the children's residence unless the proposed move would result in prejudice to the children's rights or welfare [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1094-1095, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 ; In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 29, 38, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473] . However, the court has the discretion to determine the weight that should be given to (1) the children's interest in stable custodial and emotional ties with the custodial parent, and (2) the detriment to the children's relationship with the noncustodial parent that would be caused by the proposed move [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1093, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] .

"Bright line" rules in move-away cases are inappropriate; each case must beevaluated on its own unique facts [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1089, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 ; In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 39, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473] . The Supreme Court has noted that this area of the law is not amenable to inflexible rules. Instead, judges have discretion, guided by statute and the principles stated in Burgess and LaMusga, to fashion custody orders that best serve the interests of the children in the cases before them [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1101, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] .

A decision to change the children's residence ordinarily does not have a bearing on the custodial parent's suitability to retain primary physical custody of them [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 36 n. 5, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 (once court determines that custodial parent is not relocating to frustrate noncustodial parent's contact with children, but for sound, good faith reasons, court not required to inquire further into wisdom of custodial parent's inherently subjective decision making); see In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1100, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 (this does not mean that reasons for proposed move are irrelevant if custodial parent is acting in good faith)]. However, an obvious exception to this general rule is when a custodial parent's decision to relocate is simply to frustrate the noncustodial parent's contact with the children. Even if the custodial parent is otherwise a "fit" parent, the court may consider this bad faith conduct in determining what permanent custody arrangement is in the children's best interests [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 36 n. 6, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473] .

In a move-away case, a change of custody is not justified merely because the custodial parent has chosen, for any sound good faith reason, to reside in a different location, but only if, as a result of the move, the children will suffer detriment making it "essential or expedient" for the children's welfare that there be a change [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 38, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 ; see In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1098, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 (change in custody is "essential or expedient" within meaning of Burgess if it is in child's best interest)].

The Supreme Court has noted that absolute concepts of good faith and bad faith are often difficult to apply because human beings may act for a complex variety of sometimes conflicting motives [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1100, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] . Even if the custodial parent has legitimate reasons for the proposed move and is not acting simply to frustrate the noncustodial parent's contact with the children, a court may still consider whether one reason for the move is to lessen the children's contact with the noncustodial parent and whether that indicates, in light of all the relevant factors, that a change in custody would be in the children's best interests [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1100, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] .

The noncustodial parent has a right to present evidence on the issue of the custodial parent's bad faith and on the issue of the detriment to the child that will result from the proposed move [In re Marriage of Campos (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 839, 844, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 300] . The court may not preclude the noncustodial parent from presenting evidence on the issue of detriment merely because the court has concluded that the proposed move is in good faith [In re Marriage of Campos (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 839, 842-844, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 300] .

A court may not issue a conditional order transferring primary physical custody to the noncustodial parent as a device to restrain the custodial parent from relocating [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1098, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] . A court should not issue such an order expecting that the order will not take effect because the custodial parent will decide not to relocate rather than lose primary physical custody of the children [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1098, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] .

For a form of declaration in support of a motion to modify custody based on a change of residence, see § 223.67. For forms for use to permit the custodial parent to change the child's residence, see § 223.69 (supporting declaration) and § 223.70 (order).

[iv] Joint or Shared Custody Cases

The standard for change of custody in move-away cases stated by the California Supreme Court in Marriage of Burgess was expressly limited to cases in which one parent has sole physical custody under an existing judicial custody order [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 37, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 ; see In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] . However, a number of move-away cases both before and after Burgess have involved parents who had joint custody or some degree of shared physical custody under the existing order [see In re Marriage of Battenburg (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1342, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871 ; In re Marriage of McGinnis (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 473, 475, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182 (in both cases, mother had physical custody 4 days, and father 3 days, every week); see also In re Marriage of Melville (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 601, 610-612, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 685 (shared legal custody; parent with whom child resided at time had primary physical custody); Cassady v. Signorelli (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 55, 58, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 545 ("joint custody" with mother having "primary physical custody")].

Increasing attention has been paid to the actual arrangement for time-sharing between parents in move-away situations, particularly in view of the footnoted commentary by the Burgess Court that a "different analysis may be required when parents share joint physical custody of the minor children under an existing order and in fact, and one parent seeks to relocate with the minor children[;] [i]n such cases, the custody order may be modified or terminated upon the petition of one or both parents or on the court's own motion if it is shown that the best interest of the child requires modification or termination of the order (Fam. Code, § 3087)[;] [t]he trial court must determine de novo what arrangement for primary custody is in the best interest of the minor children" [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 32, 40 n.12, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 ; see, e.g, In re Marriage of Williams (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 808, 812, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 923 (trial court abused discretion in joint custody "move-away" case by requiring two siblings to move to Utah with their mother and two siblings to remain in Cal. with their father, in absence of record evidence pertaining to impact of separation on children); In re Marriage of Biallas (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 755, 759 (weekly overnight visitation plus every other "long" weekend was not joint physical custody; court found that "primary physical custody" had no legal meaning and case should be treated as "sole physical custody")].

In LaMusga, although the Court did not pronounce a rule on "joint physical custody," it articulated standards applicable to the situation in which one parent has "primary physical custody," as discussed above [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] . Because many "joint physical custody" arrangements involve one parent with "primary physical custody," the circumstances are less clear under which a nonmoving parent would need to show only that a custody change is in a child's best interests (as opposed to the showing otherwise required for "primary physical custody"). In LaMusga, the Court articulated eight factors to be considered in deciding whether to modify custody, given a custodial parent's proposed move, one of which is "the extent to which the parents are currently sharing custody" [In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81] . Given the language of LaMusga, and particularly its reference to assessing the extent of physical custody sharing, and the frequency of joint physical custody situations in which one parent has "primary physical custody," it appears that standards articulated for ""primary physical custody" in LaMusga may also apply when parents are deemed to have "joint physical custody."

In Burgess, the Court rejected a "necessity" test [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 34, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473 ; see In re Marriage of LaMusga (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1072, 1078, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 356, 88 P.3d 81 (reaffirming that "necessity" for move need not be shown); see also § 223.28[2][c]], and undoubtedly, the moving parent does not have to prove the necessity of the move in a joint custody case.

Post-Burgess cases have held that when there is a genuine (or "de facto") joint physical custody arrangement, the usual presumption against reexamining the basic custody arrangement does not apply, and the trial court must determine de novo what arrangement for primary physical custody is in the best interests of the child. In making this determination, the court must look to all relevant circumstances that bear on best interests [In re Marriage of Williams (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 808, 812-813, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 923 (when parties had working joint custody arrangement that would be disrupted by mother's move to Utah, and mother supplied good faith, rational reasons to move with children, court required to determine de novo custody arrangement in children's best interests); In re Marriage of Whealon (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 132, 142, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 559 (affirming order permitting mother to move with young child to New York to accept new job); see Brody v. Kroll (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 1737, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280 ; see also Ruisi v. Thieriot (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1197, 1204, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 766] .

At least one appellate court has held that a trial court may not enter a custody order that has the effect of separating siblings unless compelling circumstances dictate that the separation is in the children's best interest [In re Marriage of Williams (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 808, 809, 813-814, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 923 (reversing order permitting one parent to relocate with two of four children, when neither parent testified on relationships among children; record contained no psychological evaluations, school or medical records or input from children; and there was no evidence on extent to which siblings bonded to one another or to which their separation would hinder or serve their best interests)].

When children are being relocated to a foreign country this best interest analysis should particularly take into consideration the following concerns: (1) the issue of culture, (2) the issue of distance, and (3) the issue of jurisdiction. Of these, jurisdiction may be the most difficult to resolve, and it may be necessary to require the custodial parent to post a bond or other security that would be forfeited if he or she fails to comply with the custody or visitation orders. Thus, with foreign move-aways, the court should include provisions designed to guarantee that the order will be enforceable throughout the children's minority [In re Marriage of Abargil (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 1294, 1299-1301, 1303-1304, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 429 (relocation to Israel); In re Marriage of Condon (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 533, 551-555, 562, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33 (relocation to Australia); see In re Marriage of Lasich (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 702, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 356 (detailed description of trial court's proper findings and orders in foreign move-away case)].

In the course of implementing the above (Condon) considerations in a foreign relocation situation, at least one court has imposed the following conditions: (1) requiring the relocating parent to post a substantial bond to ensure compliance with the trial court's custody orders, (2) prohibiting the relocating parent from attempting to modify the judgment except on application to a California state court, and (3) requiring the relocating parent to register the trial court's judgment with the proper foreign authorities before taking the child to the foreign jurisdiction [In re Marriage of Abargil (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 1294, 1298, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 429 (upholding trial court's findings that it was in child's best interest to remain with his mother, who was primary caregiver and more likely to facilitate visitation with father than if parental roles were reversed)].

[f] Effect of Right to Travel

The effect of the constitutional right to travel [see Shapiro v. Thompson (1969) 394 U.S. 618, 629, 89 S. Ct. 1322, 22 L. Ed. 2d 600] on move-away custody cases has been the subject of some judicial attention without a clear resolution. One California appellate court has broadly stated that the right encompasses the custodial parent's right to resettle, find new employment, and start a new life without losing custody of the children [In re Marriage of Fingert (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 1575, 1581-1582, 271 Cal. Rptr. 389] . However, this court seems to have retreated from this position. In a joint custody case, the court noted that the stay-behind parent also has a constitutional right not to travel in order to retain a relationship with the children. Thus, the right to travel did not require a particular resolution of the move-away issue [see In re Marriage of McGinnis (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 473, 480, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182 ; see also Selzer v. Selzer (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 637, 642-643, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 824] . Another court refused to reach the issue, but strongly suggested that any impairment of the right to travel in restraining the custodial parent from removing the children from the state is only indirect, and justified by the compelling state interest in the welfare of children from dissolved families [see In re Marriage of Carlson (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1330, 1339-1340, 280 Cal. Rptr. 240] .

In Marriage of Burgess, the California Supreme Court made no mention whatsoever of the right to travel, suggesting that the right is not implicated inmove-away cases, and that the rights of the moving parent can receive adequate protection under traditional family law rules [see In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473] .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 223.29-223.39

[Reserved]

§§ 223.29[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.40

§ 223.40 California Family Law

For discussion and forms relating to child custody, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, Chs. 32, 33, 35 (Matthew Bender 2d ed.)

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.41

§ 223.41 Federal Statutes

Custody proceedings under Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978. 25 U.S.C. § 1901 et seq.

Judicial and administrative remedies under International Child Abduction Remedies Act. 42 U.S.C. § 11601 et seq.

Enforcement of custody determinations of other states under Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act. 28 U.S.C. § 1738A(a)

Use of Parent Locator Service by state to locate absent parent or child. 42 U.S.C. §§ 654(17), 663

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.42

§ 223.42 State Statutes

[1] Definitions and General Principles

Jurisdiction of superior court in dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, and legal separation proceedings to inquire into and render judgments and make orders concerning child custody. Fam. Code §§ 200, 2010(b)

"Joint custody," "joint legal custody," "joint physical custody," "sole legal custody," and "sole physical custody" defined. Fam. Code §§ 3000-3007

Mother and father of unemancipated minor as equally entitled to custoy of minor. Fam. Code § 3010

Legislative findings and declarations concerning child custody. Fam. Code § 3020

Authority of court to make custody orders. Fam. Code § 3021

Trial preference for custody issues. Fam. Code § 3023

Location of missing party or child. Fam. Code § 3130 et seq.

Check to determine if child is reported as missing person. Fam. Code § 3140

Appointment of counsel to represent child in custody and visitation proceedings. Fam. Code § 3150 et seq.

[2] Determining Custody

Factors considered in determining best interest of child. Fam. Code § 3022

Matters to be considered in awarding custody. Fam. Code § 3040 et seq.

Temporary custody orders. Fam. Code § 3060 et seq.

Joint custody. Fam. Code § 3080 et seq.

Custody investigation and report. Fam. Code § 3110 et seq.

Mediation of custody and visitation issues. Fam. Code § 3160 et seq.

Court-ordered counseling in custody proceedings. Fam. Code § 3190 et seq.

Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act. Fam. Code § 3400 et seq.

[3] Paternity

Presumption concerning child born to married woman. Fam. Code § 7500

Uniform Act on Blood Tests to Determine Paternity. Fam. Code § 7550 et seq.

Uniform Parentage Act. Fam. Code § 7600 et seq.

[4] Restraining Orders

Restraining orders in summons restraining parties from removing minor children from state. Fam. Code § 2040

Ex parte restraining orders and custody orders. Fam. Code § 2045

[5] Visitation

Visitation rights of parents and others. Fam. Code § 3100 et seq.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.43

§ 223.43 California Rules of Court

Joinder of parties regarding custody issues. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.154

Role of court-ordered investigators in custody disputes. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.220

Appointment of counsel to represent child in custody or visitation proceeding. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.240-5.242

Court-connected child custody mediation. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.10

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.44

§ 223.44 Decisions

Stipulated custody order is final judicial determination for purposes of changed circumstances rule only if there is clear, affirmative indication that the parties intended this result; changed circumstances rule applies whenever final custody has been established by judicial decree, regardless of whether initial custody determination resulted from parents' agreement, default judgment, or litigation. Montenegro v. Diaz (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 249, 258, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 575, 27 P.3d 289

Showing of changed circumstances is not required to support change of custody arrangements from those established by temporary order or extrajudicial agreement, although court must consider length of time existing arrangement was in effect and importance of continuity and stability in child's life. Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 535-539, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486

Comparative income or economic advantage is impermissible basis for custody determination. Burchard v. Garay (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 531, 539, 229 Cal. Rptr. 800, 724 P.2d 486

Parents' reconciliation after interlocutory dissolution judgment nullifies provisions of child custody order and, therefore, Penal Code § 278.5 is inapplicable to one parent's unauthorized taking of child. People v. Howard (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 852, 859, 206 Cal. Rptr. 124, 686 P.2d 644

Trial court's order allowing mother to move with child to Israel based on child's best interest was proper when mother would maintain father-child contact, California order would be enforceable in Israel, and benefits to child of growing up there under his mother's care outweighed risks. In re Marriage of Abargil (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 1294, 1299-1301, 1303-1304, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 429

Trial court erred in refusing to permit noncustodial father to present evidence that mother's move with children to city two hours away would be detrimental to children's welfare, because trial court's reasoning that under Burgess husband's order to show cause had to be denied without evidentiary hearing because there was no allegation of wife's bad faith adopted too narrow reading of Burgess, and because non-custodial parent opposing move away order has right to present evidence on both relevant issues: bad faith and detriment to child and court erroneously denied husband opportunity to present evidence on whether move would cause detriment to children. In re Marriage of Campos (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 839, 842-844, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 300

Change in custody is not mandated simply because move will require more travel or change in child's visitation schedule with noncustodial parent. In re Marriage of Lasich (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 702, 717-718, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 356

Parent is having statutory right to change children's residence, unless parent's reason for moving is to frustrate other parent's relationship with the children. In re Marriage of Bryant (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 789, 793-794, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 791

Court is prohibited from entering custody order that separates siblings unless compelling circumstances dictate that separation is in children's best interest. In re Marriage of Williams (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 808, 809, 813-814, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 923 .

Nonparent who seeks custody of child lacks standing to initiate custody proceeding under Family Code; guardianship petition under Probate Code is only judicial means for nonparent to obtain custody when parents have not initiated custody proceeding. Scott v. Superior Court (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 540, 546, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 843

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.45

§ 223.45 Law Reviews

Scott, Pluralism, Parental Preference, and Child Custody, 80 Calif. L. Rev. 615 (1992)

Comment, Homosexual Parenting: Child Custody and Adoption, 22 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 1009 (1989)

Comment, Recognizing Constitutional Rights of Custodial Parents: The Primacy of the Post-Divorce Family in Child Custody Modification Proceedings, 35 UCLA L. Rev. 677 (1988)

Pastis, Residence Restrictions on Custodial Parents: Sex-Based Discrimination? 16 Golden Gate U.L. Rev. 419 (1986)

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 223.46-223.59

[Reserved]

§§ 223.46[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.60

§ 223.60 Declaration in Support of Petition for Temporary Custody and Visitation Order [Fam. Code § 3060]

[1] FORM Declaration in Support of Petition for Temporary Custody and Visitation Order [Fam. Code § 3060]

I, _____ [name], am the petitioner in this matter, and _____ [e.g., mother] of _____ [name of child], born _____ [date], [add if proceeding is for dissolution of marriage] who is a child of the marriage that is the subject of these dissolution of marriage proceedings]. Respondent _____ [name] is the _____ [e.g., father] of the child.

_____ [Set forth facts supporting need for temporary custody order, including facts supporting need for interim ex parte order pending hearing, if any, e.g., On _____ (date), Respondent moved out of our marital home by mutual agreement. The child and I continue to reside in the home. Respondent indicated that he would be moving into a hotel temporarily, and would make arrangements to see the children when he could. We did not further discuss the issue of the temporary custody of the children. I have not heard from him since, and it is imperative that immediate orders be issued regarding the custody of the child in case respondent attempts to remove the child from my home].

At this time, I request orders _____ [specify, requested orders regarding physical custody, visitation, and legal custody, e.g., granting me the temporary physical custody of the child, granting respondent visitation every Saturday from 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m, and granting the parties temporary joint legal custody of the children].

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

CAUTION:

Every party in a custody proceeding in his or her first pleading or in an attached affidavit or declaration [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5] must give the information required under Fam. Code § 3429 relating to the residence and custody of the child. For the required form of declaration, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.312.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a declaration in support of an application for a court order for temporary child custody and visitation. It is intended for use as an attachment to the Judicial Council forms required to apply for the order when there is insufficient space on the forms to describe the factual basis for the application. In cases in which there is no need for a temporary restraining order on personal conduct that includes a companion custody order, the form would be attached to the Judicial Council form of Application for Order and Supporting Declaration Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-310; see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.327].

However, if a personal conduct restraining order is sought in addition to a custody order, this form of declaration would be attached to the Judicial Council form of Request for Order (Domestic Violence Prevention--DV-100), which is illustrated in Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence, § 293.150. In that case, a companion Child Custody, Visitation, and Support Attachment (Form DV-100A) must also be attached.

In either case, a standard Judicial Council form of Declaration Under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act (UCCJEA--form MC-150) must be attached to the application [see Fam. Code § 3429 (UCCJEA declaration required in party's first pleading or in affidavit attached to it); see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.312].

For discussion of the criteria and standards for temporary custody and visitation awards, see § 223.20.

For discussion of motion practice in a family law matter, including examples of the Judicial Council forms for Order to Show Cause [Cal. Judicial Council FL-300], Notice of Motion [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-301], Application for Order and Supporting Declaration [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-310], and Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340], see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure .

[3] State Statutes

Petition for temporary custody order. Fam. Code § 3060

Supporting declaration. Fam. Code § 3429

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.61

§ 223.61 Child Custody and Visitation Order--Attachment to Findings and Order After Hearing and Supervised Visitation Order [Cal. Judicial Council Forms FL-341, FL-341(A)]

[1] FORM Child Custody and Visitation Order--Attachment to Findings and Order After Hearing and Supervised Visitation Order [Cal. Judicial Council Forms FL-341, FL-341(A)]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

These forms are the mandatory Judicial Council forms of Child Custody and Visitation Order Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341] and Supervised Visitation Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(A)], for use with the Findings and Order After Hearing form [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340] or Stipulation and Order for Custody and/or Visitation of Children [Cal. Judicial Council form FL-355]. The "As attached" box in Paragraph 3 of the Findings and Order After Hearing form or Paragraph 4(b) of the Stipulation and Order for Custody and/or Visitation of Children form should be checked to indicate that these forms are attached.

The Child Custody and Visitation Order Attachment and Supervised Visitation Order forms also are required to be used with the Judicial Council form of Judgment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-180]. These forms are available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

Paragraph 1 of the Child Custody and Visitation Order Attachment form contains space within which to set forth the name and birth date of a child, along with the arrangement for legal and physical custody of that child. Because of limited space on the form, it may be necessary to continue this description in a separate attachment, particularly when there are several children involved. The box should be checked if temporary custody is ordered. In addition, if the parties wish to attach an agreement on custody and visitation, Paragraph 2b must be marked. Paragraph 2 otherwise sets forth an array of common visitation arrangements, and these should be reviewed and utilized to the extent consistent with the visitation order made. If supervised visitation is ordered, Paragraph 3 must be completed; and when the arrangement for this type of visitation is not sufficiently described in Paragraph 2, the Supervised Visitation Order form, which is discussed further below, must be attached [see Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(A)]. The Child Custody and Visitation Order Attachment also contains preprinted orders to specify, in an appropriate case, each of the following:

- Transportation arrangements for visitation (Paragraph 4).

- Who must have written permission from whom to take the children outside of the state, specified counties and/or specified other places (Paragraph 5).

- A holiday schedule (Paragraph 7) [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(C)].

- Additional custody provisions (Paragraph 8) [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(D)].

- Joint legal custody order (Paragraph 9) [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(E)].

If child abduction prevention orders are made, it is necessary to attach the ChildAbduction Prevention Orders Attachment (see paragraph 6) [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(B)].

The Child Custody and Visitation Order Attachment has provisions stating the following:

- The court has jurisdiction to make child custody orders in the case under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act [Fam. Code § 3400 et seq.].

- The responding party was given notice and an opportunity to be heard as provided by California law.

- The children's country of habitual residence is the United States or another specified place, presumably for purposes of the Hague Convention.

- A notification to the parties that if they violate the order, they may be subject to civil or criminal penalties, or both.

The Supervised Visitation Order form contains preprinted findings (Paragraphs 1, 2) and orders (Paragraphs 3-10). Paragraph 1 must be completed to show the nature of the evidence presented in support of supervised visitation. Also, if the supervised party disputes the allegations underlying the request for supervision, the separate box in Paragraph 1 must be marked to reflect that a dispute exists and that the court reserves findings on those issues pending further investigation and hearing or trial. Paragraph 2 must be marked to identify the party being supervised. Paragraph 3 provides space to identify the child or children who are the subject of the order. Paragraph 4 must be completed to indicate the nature of the supervision order made: (1) supervised visitation, (2) supervised exchange of the child only, or (3) "therapeutic visitation." Paragraph 5 must be marked to show whether supervision will be performed by a professional or nonprofessional person, and Paragraph 6 must name this person (the "Authorized Provider"). This paragraph also permits the parties to indicate that supervision may be performed by "any other mutually agreed-upon third party as arranged." Paragraph 7, concerning duration and frequency of visits, refers back to the Child Custody and Visitation Order Attachment. Paragraph 8 requires setting forth the responsibility of each party for payment of the supervision, if any, in percentages. Paragraph 9 is designed to permit the court to specify a date by which the party being supervised must contact a professional provider or supervised visitation center. Paragraph 10 is undesignated, and is intended to be used to insert "other" orders.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.62

§ 223.62 Declaration Supporting Petition for Mediation of Dispute Relating to Existing Custody Order [Fam. Code § 3173(a)]

[1] FORM Declaration Supporting Petition for Mediation of Dispute Relating to Existing Custody Order [Fam. Code § 3173(a)]

I, _____ [name of petitioner], am the petitioner in this matter and the _____ [father or mother] of the minor children of the marriage, _____ [name of first child], born _____ [date of birth] and _____[name of second child], born _____ [date of birth]. Under the court's current custody order, _____ [briefly describe existing order, e.g., _____ (name of person having custody), the children's _____ (mother or father or specify relationship of primary custodian to children) has primary physical custody, subject to my right to exercise reasonable visitation at times to be agreed to by the parties, without further specification)].

_____ [Briefly set forth nature of current dispute; e.g., The visitation order is no longer working. _____ (name of person having custody) has rejected nearly all of my requests for visitation during the last 60 days. She/He has taken the position that I can only exercise visitation if the children are not involved in other activities, and there has always been some conflicting activity when I have requested visitation. During this period, I have seen my children only twice, despite having requested visitation time every week. Unless Respondent can be convinced to cooperate, it will be necessary for me to initiate modification proceedings for different custody and visitation orders in order to preserve my parent-child relationship. I believe that it is always in the best interests of the children to resolve custody and visitation matters without adversary proceedings if at all possible. Therefore, I am petitioning this court to refer this dispute to mandatory mediation under Family Code Section 3173 with the hope that an agreement may be reached that will either make the existing order workable or that will result in a stipulated modified order.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

[2] Use of Form

This form is a declaration in support of a petition for medition of a dispute relating to an existing custody order. In some counties, a party may file a petition for mediation of a dispute relating to an existing order for custody or visitation, or both. The county board of supervisors must have adopted a resolution authorizing the procedure [Fam. Code § 3173(a)]. The mediation must be set notlater than 60 days after the filing of the petition [Fam. Code § 3173(b)].

The petition for mediation may be made on the Judicial Council form of Application for Order and Supporting Declaration. Paragraph 9 allows a party to request "other relief" not specifically included elsewhere on the form. For all declarations supporting family law motions, it is recommended that the Judicial Council form for Attached Declaration (MC-031) be used and attached to the Judicial Council form. For discussion of motion practice in a family law matter, including examples of the Judicial Council forms for Order to Show Cause FL-300, Noticed Motion FL-301, Application for Order and Supporting Declaration FL-310, and Findings and Order After Hearing FL-340, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.310 et seq. These forms are available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] State Statutes

Mediation of custody and visitation disputes. Fam. Code § 3160 et seq.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.63

§ 223.63 Parenting Plan Provision for Joint Legal Custody

[1] FORM Parenting Plan Provision for Joint Legal Custody

The parties shall have the joint legal custody of their children _____ [names and birth dates of children]. The children shall be reared in the _____ [name or denomination of religion] faith and tradition, and neither parent may change the children's religious faith and training without the other's consent. The children shall attend _____ [name of school] in the city of _____, California, and neither parent shall enroll the children in another school without the other's consent. Both parents must consent to nonemergency medical treatment of the children. In all other respects, either parent may exercise legal control over the child without the other's express consent.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a provision for joint legal custody that may included in a parenting plan, which may be judicially approved as the court's custody determination and order. This provision is only an example, and is designed to suggest the scope of issues that must be considered in developing a parenting plan and an order for legal custody. Each parenting plan must be tailored to the specific needs of the parties and their children.

A parenting plan should address both legal and physical custody. In providing for joint legal custody [see Fam. Code § 3085 (court may grant joint legal custody without granting joint physical custody)], the plan should specify the circumstances under whic the consent of both parents must be obtained in order to exercise legal control of the child. A court order for joint legal custody must specify the circumstances under which the consent of both parents is required to exercise legal control of the child, and the consequences of the failure to obtain mutual consent in these situations. In all other circumstances, either parent acting alone may exercise legal control of the child [Fam. Code § 3083].

For further discussion of issues relating to legal custody, see § 223.16[1] and § 223.16[2][b].

[3] State Statutes

"Joint legal custody" defined. Fam. Code § 3003

"Sole legal custody" defined. Fam. Code § 3006

Presumption for joint custody where parents agree to joint custody. Fam. Code § 3080

Content and effect of joint legal custody order. Fam. Code § 3083

Awarding joint legal custody without joint physical custody. Fam. Code § 3085

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.64

§ 223.64 Parenting Plan Provision for Sole Physical Custody With Visitation Rights

[1] FORM Parenting Plan Provision for Sole Physical Custody With Visitation Rights

Sole physical custody of the children, _____ [names and birth dates of children], is granted to _____ [petitioner or respondent] _____ [name]. _____ [Respondent or Petitioner] _____ [name] shall have the right to exercise reasonable visitation with the children at such times and places as may be agreed to by the parties. Should it prove that the parties are unable to agree as to Respondent's exercise of visitation rights, visitation shall be as follows:

[SET OUT visitation schedule, e.g.:]

(1) Every Saturday from 10:00 a.m. until 8:00 p.m.;

(2) Every Thursday from 5:30 p.m. until 8:00 p.m.;

(3) From the first Monday of July through the second Sunday of July each year;

(4) On Christmas day and on each child's birthday from 1:00 p.m. through 8:00 p.m. each year;

(5) _____ [Fathers' or Mothers'] Day each year;

(6) The Friday after Thanksgiving Day from 10:00 a.m. until 8:00 p.m. each year;

(7) For every legal holiday each year that is added to a weekend to make a three-day holiday period, on the third day of that period from 10:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m.

[CONTINUE]

The above schedule may be invoked by either party's giving written notice to that effect to the other. This visitation schedule shall be enforceable by any law enforcement agency on presentation of a copy of a court order containing the schedule with the notice and proof of service by regular mail attached.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing form is a provision for sole physical custody in one parent and reasonable visitation to the other parent. The provision is designed to be included in a parenting plan, which may then be judicially approved as the court's custody determination and order. The provision is only an example, and is designed to suggest the scope of issues that must be considered in developing a "traditional" custody and visitation plan in which the children reside with one parent and visit the other on a regular basis.

Visitation rights in a sole physical custody situation are among the most troublesome of custody issues. Visitation generally works best when the parents are flexible, can communicate with each other, and can adjust to the changing needs and schedules of the children. For this reason, an order for "reasonable" visitation without need for further specification is the ideal. Unfortunately, many separating parents are unable to communicate and cooperate to the degree necessary to make a nonspecific visitation schedule work. In this situation, an order for "reasonable visitation" that does not spell out the noncustodial parent's rights in detail does not provide him or her with readily enforceable righs. Therefore, it is recommended that any order for reasonable visitation include a structured visitation schedule that will be implemented by one parent giving the other notice to that effect, as illustrated in the foregoing form.

For further discussion of parental visitation rights, see § 223.18[1] et seq.

[3] State Statutes

"Sole physical custody" defined. Fam. Code § 3007

Parental visitation rights. Fam. Code § 3100

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.65

§ 223.65 Parenting Plan Provision for Joint Physical Custody [Fam. Code § 3004

[1] FORM Parenting Plan Provision for Joint Physical Custody [Fam. Code § 3004

The parties shall share the physical custody of their minor children, _____ [names and birth dates of children], according to the following schedule. _____ [Specify schedule, including transportation arrangements and places where children will be picked up and dropped off, e.g., Petitioner _____ (name) shall pick up the children at the end of the school day each Tuesday and have the actual physical custody of the children from that time through 12:00 noon each Saturday. Respondent _____ (name) shall pick up the children at Petitioner's home each Saturday at noon and have physical custody through the end of the school day each Tuesday. Each parent may exercise reasonable visitation with the children during the custodial time of the other parent at times to be mutually agreed to by the parents. Each parent is entitled to a two-week uninterrupted custodial period between June 15 and August 31 each year for the purpose of taking a vacation with the children. Each parent is entitled to at least 8 hours of time with the children on Thanksgiving, Christmas Day, and the children's birthdays regardless of within whose custodial time the event actually falls.]

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing form is a provision for joint physical custody. It is designed to be inclued in a parenting plan, which may then be judicially approved as the court's custody determination and order. The provision is only an example, and is designed to suggest the scope of issues that must be considered in developing a joint or shared custody plan in which the children spend significant (but not necessarily equal) amounts of time with, and maintain a home with, each parent.

In providing for joint physical custody, the plan should specify the rights of each parent to physical control of the child in sufficient detail to enable a parent deprived of that control to implement laws for relief of child snatching and kidnapping [see Fam. Code § 3084].

For discussion of issues concerning joint custody, see § 223.16[2][c] et seq.

[3] State Statutes

"Joint physical custody" defined. Fam. Code § 3004

Content of joint physical custody order. Fam. Code § 3084

Order may specify one parent as primary caretaker. Fam. Code § 3086

[4] Cross References

For a related form, see § 223.63.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.66

§ 223.66 Notice of Intended Change of Custodial Parent's Residence [Fam. Code § 3024]

[1] FORM Notice of Intended Change of Custodial Parent's Residence [Fam. Code § 3024]

_____ [date]

[_____ (I have been transferred by my employer to _____ (city and state), effective _____ (date) or set forth other reason for move, if applicable).] Sometime between _____ [date] and _____ [date], I will be moving from _____ [city where custodial parent and children currently reside], California to _____ [new city and state] and taking the children with me. This is a permanent relocation in the sense that I have no particular plans to return to California at any time. I am willing to discuss a rearrangement of your visitation schedule, either with or without the assistance of a mediator.

_____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

[2] Use of Form

This form is a notice to be used by a parent with physical custody of the children to give notice to the noncustodial parent of an intended change of residence. The court may require that such a notice be given in its custody order [see Fam. Code § 3024].

The notice must be given by mail, return receipt requested, postage prepaid, to the last known address of the parent to be notified. A copy must be sent to that parent's attorney of record. The notice must be given before the contemplated move is made. To the extent feasible, it must be given within a minimum of 45 days prior to the proposed change of residence so as to allow time for mediation of a new agreement concerning custody [Fam. Code § 3024].

The recommended approach, exemplified in this form, is for the custodial parent to write a simple letter to the noncustodial parent that has been reviewed by counsel to ensure that it contains sufficient information to meet the statutory requirements. A copy of the letter should be attached to a proof of service and filed in the matter.

[3] State Statutes

Notice to noncustodial parent of change of residence of child. Fam. Code § 3024

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.67

§ 223.67 Declaration Supporting Motion to Modify Custody--Change of Primary Custodian's Residence

[1] FORM Declaration Supporting Motion to Modify Custody--Change of Primary Custodian's Residence

I, _____ [name], am the _____ petitioner in this matter and the _____ [father or mother] of _____ [names of children], born _____ [birth dates of children] [, respectively], who are chilren of the marriage that is the subject of these proceedings. Respondent _____ [name] is the _____ [mother or father] of the children. Under the current custody order of _____ [date of current order], we have joint legal custody of the children. _____ [Briefly describe custody arrangement under current order, e.g., _____ (name of other parent) has the primary physical custody, and I have the right of visitation every Wednesday evening from 5:00 to 9:00 and every weekend from 12:00 noon on Saturday through 9:00 p.m. on Sunday.] Since this order was entered, I have exercised my rights under it regularly.

On _____ [date], I received a notice from Respondent stating that on or before _____ [date], she/he intended to move from _____ [city where both parties and children currently reside] California to _____ [proposed new city and state] and to take the children with her/him. Obviously, if the children move to _____ [proposed new city and state], I will be unable to exercise my rights under the current order and a new custody and visitation order will be required. I believe that it is in the best interests of the children that they remain with me in _____ [city where both parties and children currently reside] California and that I be granted their primary physical custody.

I am currently living in a _____ [describe living arrangements, e.g., three-bedroom home owned by me in the city of _____], in the neighborhood where the children are currently attending school. I am able to provide appropriate care for the children in that [specify, e.g., I have rearranged my work schedule so that I can be home by 4:00 p.m. on most days].

The children are established in my neighborhood and their school. They are doing well in their school work and are involved in on-going school and community activities [, including _____ [specify children's after-school, sports, or other community-based activities]. They are stable and well-adjusted in their current home, neighborhood, and school environment. [Both sets of grandparents continue to live in this area and are actively involved with the children.]

For all of these reasons, I do not believe that it is in the best interests of the children to leave this community and to relocate to a distant environment, where they will lose contact with a parent and also their [extended family,] friends and activities. Therefore, I respectfully request that this court modify its order of _____ [date of current order], and grant me the primary physical custody of the children, subject to Respondent's right to exercise visitation during those periods of the year when school is not in session, including summer vacation, Christmas vacation, Spring vacation, and any such other times as may be arranged by the parties.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

[2] Use of Form

The form above is a sample declaration for use in obtaining a modification of custody after the custodial parent has given notice that he or she intends to change the child's residence. Modification of child custody based on the custodial parent's intent to change the child's residence is discussed in § 223.28[2][e].

For discussion of motion practice in a family law matter, including examples of the Judicial Council forms for Order to Show Cause [Cal. Judicial Council FL-300], Notice of Motion [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-301], Application for Order and Supporting Declaration [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-310], and Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340], see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.310 et seq. Declarations supporting family law motions, it is recommended that the Judicial Council form for Attached Declaration (MC-031) be used and attached to the Application for Order and Supporting Declaration form. If the motion is granted, the court's order changing custody must be made on the Judicial Council form of Child Custody and Visitation Order Attachment to Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341A], which is reproduced in § 223.61. These forms are available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] State Statutes

Jurisdiction of court to modify custody orders. Fam. Code § 3021

Modification or termination of joint custody order. Fam. Code § 3087

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.68

§ 223.68 Declaration Supporting Motion for Order Restraining Change of Residence

[1] FORM Declaration Supporting Motion for Order Restraining Change of Residence

I, _____ [name], am the Respondent in this matter and the _____ [father or mother] of _____ [names of children], born [birth dates of children] [, respectively], who are children of the marriage that is the subject of these proceedings. Petitioner _____ [name of petitioner] is the _____ [mother or father] of the children. Under the current custody order of _____ [date of current order], we have joint legal custody of the children. Petitioner has the primary physical custody, and I have _____ [describe visitation rights under current order, e.g., the right of visitation every Wednesday evening from 5:00 to 9:00 and every weekend from 12:00 noon on Saturday through 9:00 p.m. on Sunday]. Since this order was entered, I have exercised these rights regularly.

On _____ [date], I receivd a notice from Petitioner stating that on or before _____ [date of proposed move], she/he intended to move from _____ [city where petitioner and children currently reside], California to _____ [proposed new city and state] and to take the children with her/him. Obviously, if the children move to _____ [proposed new city and state], I will be unable to exercise my rights under the current order and a new custody and visitation order will be required.

[SET FORTH in as many paragraphs as necessary any facts supporting Respondent's position, e.g.:]

Petitioner on a number of occasions has threatened to make this move whenever we have had a disagreement about the children. Whenever she/he has been upset with me concerning some aspect of my exercise of visitation, she/he has stated that she/he wants me out of their life and is going to move away to some place where I won't be able to bother them. Therefore, I believe that her/his motive in making this move is primarily to frustrate my rights and to interfere with my relationship with my children.

[CONTINUE]

For these reasons, I respectfully request that the court issue an order under Family Code Section 7501 restraining Petitioner from removing the children from the State of California without my written consent.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

[2] Use of Form

The form above is a sample declaration for use in obtaining an order restraining the custodial parent from changing the child's residence to a place where the noncustodial parent's opportunity to exercise visitation would be significantly diminished. In the absence of such an order, the custodial parent has a right to change the residence of the child [Fam Code § 7501]. For further discussion, see § 223.28[2][d]

For discussion of motion practice in a family law matter, including examples of the Judicial Council forms for Order to Show Cause [Cal. Judicial Council FL-300], Notice of Motion [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-301], Application for Order and Supporting Declaration [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-310], and Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340], see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.310 et seq. For all declarations supporting family law motions, it is recommended that the Judicial Council form for Attached Declaration (MC-031) be used and attached to the Application for Order and Supporting Declaration form. If the motion is granted, the mandatory Judicial Council form of Child Custody and Visitation Order Attachment to Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341A], which is reproduced in § 223.61, contains a section to prohibit removal of the child from the state or county (Paragraph 2.d.). These forms are available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.69

§ 223.69 Declaration Supporting Motion for Order Authorizing Change of Residence

[1] FORM Declaration Supporting Motion for Order Authorizing Change of Residence

I, _____ [name], am the petitioner in this matter and the _____ [mother or father] of _____ [name of first child], born _____ [birth date of first child] and _____ [name of second child], born _____ [birth date of second child], who are children of the marriage that is the subject of these proceedings. Respondent _____ [name] is the _____ [father or mother] of the children. Under the current custody order of _____ [dte of current order], we have joint legal custody of the children. I have the primary physical custody, and respondent has the right _____ [specify respondent's visitation rights, e.g., to exercise reasonable visitation at times to be agreed to by the parties]. Further, both parties are prohibited from removing the minor children from the State of California without the written consent of the other party or order of the court.

[SET FORTH in as many paragraphs as necessary facts supporting petitioner's position, e.g.:]

Since the current custody order was made, Respondent has exercised his/her visitation rights only sporadically. He/She has not requested visitation according to any regular or predictable schedule. His/Her customary manner of requesting visitation is to call up immediately before some activity is about to take place and ask to pick up the children and take them to the activity. He/She makes requests of this nature on the average of only about two times per month, and has seen the children even fewer times, because it has not always been possible to accommodate his/her last-minute requests.

On _____ [date], I received notice from my employer, _____ [name of employer], that I would be transferred to _____ [proposed new city and state], effective _____ [date]. This is not a voluntary transfer; I am required as a condition of my employment to accept the position and move to the _____ [proposed new city] area. If I am not permitted to remove the children from _____ [city where petitioner and children currently reside] California and change their residence to _____ [proposed new city and state], I will be forced to choose between my career and the custody of my children. Given respondent's extremely peripheral involvement in the lives of the children, it would not be in their best interests for him/her to assume the primary custodial role. Futher, through a specific visitation schedule revolving around periods of school vacation, respondent would actually be spending more time with the children than he/she is currently under the unstructured, reasonable visitation order.

[CONTINUE]

For these reasons, I respectfully request that this court issue its order permitting me to remove the children from the State of California and permanently change their residence to the State of _____ [proposed new state].

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

[2] Use of Form

The form above is a sample declaration in support of a custodial parent's motion for permission to move outside of California with the children. In general, the custodial parent has a right to change the child's residence [Fam. Code § 7501], and no court order authorizing the move is required. However, the existing custody order may prohibit either or both parents from removing the child from the state or county without the consent of the other or order of the court [see, e.g., Ward v. Ward (1957) 150 Cal. App. 2d 438, 440-444, 309 P.2d 965] . In such a case, the custodial parent must bring this motion. For further discussion, see § 223.28[2][e][iii].

For discussion of motion practice in a family law matter, including examples of the Judicial Council forms for Order to Show Cause [Cal. Judicial Council FL-300], Notice of Motion [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-301], Application for Order and Supporting Declaration [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-310], and Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340], see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.310 et seq. For all declarations supporting family law motions, it is recommended that the Judicial Council form for Attached Declaration (MC-031) be used and attached to the Application for Order and Supporting Declaration form. The order must be made on the mandatory Judicial Council form of Child Custody and Visitation Order Attachment to Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341A], which is reproduced in see § 223.61. The boxes in Paragraphs 2.c. (visitation as set forth in attached schedule) and 5 (other orders) should be checked. The Judicial Council form for Additional Page (MC-020) should then be used to set forth the court's removal and visitation orders. These forms are available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] State Statutes

Right of custodial parent to change child's residence. Fam. Code § 7501

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.70

§ 223.70 Order Permitting Removal of Children From California

[1] FORM Order Permitting Removal of Children From California

1. The primary physical custody of the minor children _____ [names of children], born _____ [birth dates of children] [, respectively], shall remain with their _____ [mother or father], petitioner _____ [name of petitioner]. Petitioner may remove the children from the State of California and change their residence to the State of _____ [proposed new state].

2. Respondent _____ [name] shall be entitled to the physical custody of the children _____ [specify visitation schedule, e.g., for a period of three weeks during the months of July or August each year on dates to be subsequently agreed to by the parties. In absence of such agreement, Respondent shall have physical custody from July 1 through July 21 each year. Respondent shall also have the physical custody of the children each year from December 26 though January 1 of the following year, and during one week in the spring of each year that corresponds to the children's spring vacation from school]. Respondent shall bear the cost of transporting the children from their residence to his/her place of residence; Petitioner shall bear the cost of returning the children to her/his place of residence. Respondent may exercise reasonable visitation with the children at all other times as may subsequently be agreed to by the parties.

3. This court retains its jurisdiction to modify this order under the Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1738A, and the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act, Fam. Code § 3400 et seq., as long as Respondent continues to maintain his/her domicile in this jurisdiction.

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

The form above is a sample order permitting the custodial parent to move from California and take the children with her or him. For further discussion, see § 223.28[2][e][iii].

The order contains a provision expressly retaining jurisdiction under the Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act (PKPA) [28 U.S.C. § 1738A] and the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act (UCCJEA) [Fam. Code § 3400 et seq.]. This serves to emphasize to the courts of the children's new domicile that California has not declined to exercise its continuing jurisdiction in the matter [see 28 U.S.C. § 1738A(f)(2); Fam. Code § 3414(a)]. For furtherdiscussion of modification jurisdiction under the PKPA and the UCCJEA, see Ch. 394, Parent and Child .

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.71

§ 223.71 Nonparent's Declaration in Support of Motion for Joinder and Custody or Visitation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.154]

[1] FORM Nonparent's Declaration in Support of Motion for Joinder and Custody or Visitation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.154]

I, _____ [name of person seeking joinder], am the _____ specify relation to child, e.g., maternal grandmother] [and current custodian] of _____ [name of child], a child who is the subject of this proceeding for _____ [specify, e.g., dissolution of marriage]. As shown by the Petition and Response in this matter, _____ [specify facts showing actual physical custody or claim to custody or visitation, e.g., the child is now six years old. He has been in my custody since the age two, when his parents, the parties herein, gave me exclusive physical custody because they were not then able to properly care for the child. I am listed on both parties Declaration Under Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act as a person, not a party to this proceeding, who has the physical custody of the child].

By this motion, I request joinder as a party to this proceeding under California Rules of Court, Rule 5.154(b) as a person who _____ [specify, e.g., has custody or physical control of the minor child of the marriage or claims visitation rights with the minor child of the marriage]. [Add if custody is sought: I further request that the primary physical custody of the child be granted to me under Family Code Section 3041]. This motion is made on the ground that _____ [specify, e.g., a change of custody and disruption of the child's current stable custodial arrangement would be detrimental to the child and that granting custody to me is required to serve the best interest of the child or I am entitled to visitation rights under Family Code Section 3100(a) as a person having an interest in the welfare of the child, and it would be in the best interests of the child to have continued, regular visitation with me]. [Add if custody is sought: Alternatively, I request reasonable visitation rights with the child under Family Code Section 3100(a) as a person having an interest in the welfare of the child].

I declare under penalty of perjuy under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

[2] Use of Form

The form above is a sample declaration in support of a motion for joinder in a dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, or legal separation proceeding. It may be used by a grandparent or other relative of a minor child of the marriage, or by a nonrelative who has an interest in the welfare of the child, to join theproceedings in order to obtain custody or visitation rights [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.154(b)].

A person who has or claims custody or physical control of a child who is subject to the action, or visitation rights, may apply to the court for an order of joinder as a party to the proceeding [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.154(b)]. Once properly joined, a nonparent claimant may file an application in the proceeding for custody or visitation [see § 223.60].

For discussion of motion practice in a family law matter, including examples of the Judicial Council forms for Order to Show Cause [Cal. Judicial Council FL-300], Notice of Motion [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-301], Application for Order and Supporting Declaration [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-310], and Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340], see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure . For all declarations supporting family law motions, it is recommended that the Judicial Council form for Attached Declaration (MC-031) be used and attached to the Application for Order and Supporting Declaration form. These forms are available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] State Statutes

Custody awards to nonparents. Fam. Code § 3041

Discretion of court to grant reasonable visitation to nonparents having an interest in the welfare of the child in dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, and legal separation proceedings. Fam. Code § 3100(a)

Visitation rights of stepparents. Fam. Code § 3101

Visitation rights of relatives of deceased parent. Fam. Code § 3102

Visitation rights of grandparents. Fam. Code §§ 3013, 3104

[4] State Regulations

Judicial Council form for Responsive Declaration to Motion for Joinder and Consent Order of Joinder (Family Law). Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-373

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.72

§ 223.72 Order of Joinder of Nonparent

[1] FORM Order of Joinder of Nonparent

1. _____ [name], _____ [status, e.g., maternal grandmother and current physical custodian] of _____ [name of child], a child whose custody is at issue in these proceedings, is joined as party to these proceedings. Her/His participation in these proceedings shall be limited to the issues of child custody, visitation, and child support.

2. The court-appointed investigator in this matter shall investigate and determine _____ [specify scope of investigation with regard to custody, if requested, and visitation, e.g., if a grant of physical custody to a parent would be detrimental to the child and whether a grant of primary physical custody to _____ (name) is required to serve the best interests of the child]. The investigator shall also investigate and consider whether visitation rights granted to _____ [name] would be in the best interests of the child.

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

The form above is a sample order joining a nonparent to a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, or legal separation, for the purpose of determining that person's right to custody of or visitation with a minor child who is subject to the action [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.154(b)].

The Judicial Council form for Additional Page (MC-020) may be used to attach orders to the Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340] that do not appear on the face of that form, such as the form of order above. If such an attachment is used, Paragraph 8 should be checked on the Findings and Order After Hearing form. These forms are available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.73

§ 223.73 Child Custody and Visitation Application Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-311]

[1] FORM Child Custody and Visitation Application Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-311]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form is the optional Judicial Council form of Child Custody and Visitation Application Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-311]. The boxes in this form may be checked to provide more details on an applicant's request for child custody orders, visitation schedule and supervised visitation schedule, includinghow the costs of supervision are to be paid, transportation for visitation and place of exchange, a requirement that the father, mother or another person have written permission from the other parent or a court order to take the children outside of the State of California, specified counties, and/or other specified places, a request for a holiday and visitation schedule [see Cal. Judicial Council form FL-341(C); see § 223.76], a request for additional orders regarding custody [see Cal. Judicial Council form FL-341(D); see § 223.76], and a request for joint legal custody and additional orders [see Cal. Judicial Council form FL-341(E); see § 223.76]. When requesting child abduction prevention orders, the Request for Child Abduction Orders must be attached [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-312; see § 223.74].

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.74

§ 223.74 Request for Child Abduction Prevention Orders [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-312]

[1] FORM Request for Child Abduction Prevention Orders [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-312]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a Request for Child Abduction Prevention Orders [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-312]. It is a mandatory attachment to a petition, response, application for order and supporting declaration, responsive declaration, or other child custody or visitation form. This form is intended for use in obtaining orders to prevent the abduction of a child by one parent [see Fam. Code § 3048(b)]. Section 1 of Form FL-312 asks for the name of the requesting parent. Section 2 requests information on where the requesting parent believes the other parent may take the child. In Section 3, the requesting parent must state reasons for why he or she believes the other parent may take the child without permission. Sections 4 to 13 should be checked according to the orders being sought.

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.75

§ 223.75 Child Abduction Prevention Orders Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(B)]

[1] FORM Child Abduction Prevention Orders Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(B)]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form is the Judicial Council form of Child Abduction Prevention Orders Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(B)]. It is a mandatory attachment to the Child Custody and Visitation Order Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341]. Section 1 contains the court's finding that there is a risk that the namedparent might take the children without permission, and the check boxes indicate the reason(s) for the decision. Section 2 through 10 should be checked according to the orders being made. Section 11, when checked, authorizes any law enforcement officer to enforce this order.

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.76

§ 223.76 Children's Holiday Schedule Attachment; Additional Provisions--Physical Custody Attachment; and Joint Legal Custody Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Forms FL-341(C), FL-341(D), FL-341(E)]

[1] FORM Children's Holiday Schedule Attachment; Additional Provisions--Physical Custody Attachment; and Joint Legal Custody Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Forms FL-341(C), FL-341(D), FL-341(E)]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

These forms are the approved Judicial Council forms of a Children's Holiday Schedule [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(C)], Additional Provisions--Custody Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(D)], and Joint Legal Custody Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(E)]. They are approved for optional use to be attached to any of the following:

- Petition [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-100] or Application for Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-310].
- Findings and Order After Hearing or Judgment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340].
- Stipulation and Order for Custody and/or Visitation of Children [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-355].

These forms are available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

The holiday schedule attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(C)] lists specific holiday and vacation parenting schedules and provides a box to check if the children may be taken outside of California for vacation.

The attachment for additional provisions regarding physical custody [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(D)] contains provisions for each of the following:

1. Requiring each parent to keep the other current as to the parent's address and telephone numbers, but not use that information to harass, annoy or disturb the other's peace or invade the other's privacy.

2. Requiring each parent to notify the other of a proposed change in the child's residence.

3. Child care.

4. Canceling parenting time.

5. Phone contact between parents and children.

6. Prohibiting the parents from making negative comments about the other parent or the other parent's past or present relationships, family or friends within the children's hearing distance.

7. Prohibiting the parents from using the children as messengers.

8. Prohibiting one parent, both parents, or a third party from consuming alcoholic beverages, narcotics, or restricted dangerous drugs (except by prescription) within a specified number of hours prior to or during periods of time with the children.

9. Prohibiting the exposure of the children to secondhand cigarette smoke while in the home or car of the other parent.

10. Prohibiting each parent from scheduling activities during the other parent's scheduled parenting time without the other parent's prior agreement.

11. Restricting or prohibiting specified third party contact with the children.

12. Providing for the children's clothing and belongings.

13. Requiring the parents to maintain a log book with information related to the health, education, and welfare issues that arise during the time the children are with them.

14. Allowing changes to the order as the needs of the children and parents change.

The joint legal custody attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(E)] specifies areas in which the parents must confer in decision making, the consequences of making such decisions alone, health care and school notification provisions, and a provision regarding changing the children's last name.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.77

§ 223.77 Stipulation and Order for Custody and/or Visitation of Children [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-355]

[1] FORM Stipulation and Order for Custody and/or Visitation of Children [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-355]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form is the approved Judicial Council form for Stipulation and Order for Custody and/or Visitation of Children [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-355]. It is approved for optional use. It can be used as either an original stipulation and order or for modification of an existing custody and/or visitation order. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

The form provides two options for attachments constituting the custody and/or visitation agreement: An attached document or any of the following Judicial Council forms:

- The Child Custody and Visitation Order Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341; see § 223.61].
- The Supervised Visitation Order Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(A); see § 223.61].
- The Child Abduction Prevention Orders Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(B); see § 223.75].
- The Children's Holiday Schedule Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(C); see § 223.76].
- The Additional Provisions--Physical Custody Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(D); see § 223.76].

- The Joint Legal Custody Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-341(E); see § 223.76].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.78

§ 223.78 Declaration of Counsel for a Child Regarding Qualifications [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-322]

[1] FORM

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis[(R)] Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

This form may be completed and filed with the court by an attorney who has been appointed to represent the best interest of the child in a custody or visitation proceeding under Fam. Code § 3150, to set forth the attorney's education and experience, which establish his or her qualifications to serve in this position [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.242(h)(1)]. It must be filed within 10 days after the attorney's appointment and before the attorney begins work on the case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.242(h)(1)].

By checking item 6(a) on the form, the attorney must indicate his or her compliance with the experience requirements for appointment, i.e., that the attorney has represented a party or a child in at least six proceedings involving child custody within the preceding five years. At least two of the six proceedings must have involved contested child custody and visitation issues in family law, and child custody proceedings in dependency or guardianship cases can count for no more than three of the six proceedings [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.242(f)(1)]. By checking item 6(b) on the form, the attorney may indicate that he or she has complied with any additional experience requirements imposed by local court rules [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.242(f)(2)].

An attorney who does not meet these experience requirements must indicate, by checking the appropriate box in item 7, his or her compliance with one of the permissible alternative experience requirements, i.e., the attorney [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.242(g)]:

1. Is employed by a legal services organization, a governmental agency, or a private law firm that has been approved by the presiding or supervising judge of the local family court as qualified to represent a child in family law proceedings and is directly supervised by an attorney in an organization, an agency, or a private law firm who meets the initial experience requirements specified in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.242(f);

2. Is an attorney working in consultation with an attorney approved by the presiding or supervising judge of the local family court as qualified to represent a child in family law proceedings; or

3. Demonstrates substantial equivalent experience as determined by local court rule or procedure.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.79

§ 223.79 Order Appointing Counsel for a Child [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-323]

[1] FORM 223.79.1 Order Appointing Counsel for a Child [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-323]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis[(R)] Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

This form may be used as an order appointing private counsel to represent the interests of the child in a custody or visitation proceeding [see Fam. Code § 3150(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.240(c)(3)].

The order must specify: (1) the appointed counsel's name, address, and telephone number (item 1); (2) the name of the child for whom counsel is appointed (item 2); and (3) the child's date of birth [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.240(c)(1)].

It may also include: (1) the child's address, if appropriate (item 2); (2) the issues to be addressed in the case (item 3); (3) the tasks related to the case that would benefit from the services of counsel for the child (item 3); (4) responsibilities and rights of the child's counsel (items 4 and 5); (5) counsel's rate or amount of compensation (item 6(a)); (6) allocation of fees payable by each party or the court (item 6(b), (c)); (7) the source of funds and manner of reimbursement for costs and attorney's fees (item 6(d)); (8) allocation of payment of attorney's fees to one party subject to reimbursement by the other party; (9) the terms and amount of any progress or installment payments; and (10) the ability of the court to reserve jurisdiction to modify retroactively the order on fees and payment (item 6(b)(2)) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.240(c)(2)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 223 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD CUSTODY
PART IV. FORMS

19-223 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 223.80

§ 223.80 Order Appointing Child Custody Evaluator [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-327]

[1] FORM Order Appointing Child Custody Evaluator [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-327]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form is an order appointing a child custody evaluator [Cal. Judicial Council form FL-327, approved for mandatory use]. In any contested proceeding involving child custody or visitation rights, the court may appoint a child custody evaluator to conduct a child custody evaluation after determining that this is in the child's best interests [Fam. Code § 3111(a)]. The order should specify whether the evaluator is appointed to conduct a full or a partial custody evaluation, and should indicate the statutory authority under which the evaluator is appointed (item 1). The scope of the evaluation should also be specified (item 3). Payment of the fees and costs of the evaluation should be specified in item 4.

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis[(R)] Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 224.syn

§ 224.syn Synopsis to Chapter 224: DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT

§ 224.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 224.02 Cross References

§§ 224.03-224.09 [Reserved]

§ 224.10 Governing Law

§§ 224.11-224.29 [Reserved]

§ 224.30 General Obligation

§ 224.31 Mutual Responsibility of Both Parents

§ 224.32 Effect of Agreement Between Parents

§ 224.33 Effect of Child's Independent Resources

§ 224.34 Effect of Interference With Visitation

§ 224.35 Effect of Bankruptcy

§ 224.36 Parents' Obligation to Persons Supplying Necessaries

[1] In General

[2] Necessaries Supplied by Other Parent or Relatives

§ 224.37 Property Liable for Child Support

[1] General Rule

[2] Property of Subsequent Marriage

[3] Estate of Deceased Parent

[a] In General

[b] Family Allowance

§§ 224.38-224.49 [Reserved]

§ 224.50 Support to Age of Majority

§ 224.51 Extension of Duty Beyond Age of Majority

[1] Through High School or to Age 19

[2] Extension by Agreement

[3] Adult Indigent Children

§ 224.52 Effect of Emancipation

§ 224.53 Automatic Termination on Occurrence of Event

§ 224.54 Treatment of Unallocated Amount for More Than One Child

§ 224.55 Effect of Reconciliation or Remarriage of Parents to Each Other

§ 224.56 Effect of Order Terminating Parental Rights

§ 224.57 Effect of Death of Payee Parent

§§ 224.58-224.69 [Reserved]

§ 224.70 Subject Matter Jurisdiction In Superior Court

[1] Support Proceedings in General

[2] Support Proceedings Involving Native Americans as Parties

§ 224.71 Proceedings in Which Child Support May Be Ordered

§ 224.72 Children for Whom Support May Be Ordered

§ 224.73 Personal Jurisdiction

§ 224.74 Continuing Jurisdiction

§ 224.75 Notice to Obligor

§ 224.76 County as Indispensable Party

§ 224.77 Temporary Support

§ 224.78 Expedited Support Orders

§ 224.79 Deferred Sale of Family Home

§ 224.80 Retroactivity of Order

§ 224.81 Supplemental Complaint for After-Born Child

§§ 224.82-224.99 [Reserved]

§ 224.100 Operative Date and Applicability

§ 224.101 Federal Compulsion for Guideline

§ 224.102 Legislative Intent and Principles Behind Guideline

§ 224.103 Applicability of Prior Case Law

§ 224.104 Child Support Formula

§ 224.105 Computation of Income

[1] Gross Income; Inclusions and Exclusions

[2] Net Income; Allowable Deductions

[3] Hardship Deduction

[4] Annual Averaging and Seasonal Adjustments

[5] Earning Capacity

[6] Income of Subsequent Spouse or Nonmarital Partner

§ 224.106 Factor to Reflect Custodial Time

[1] Operation of H Factor

[2] When H Must Be Zero or 100

§ 224.107 Income Level Adjustment Factor K

§ 224.108 Determining Who Is Obligor

§ 224.109 Adjustment Factor for More Than One Child

§ 224.110 Low-Income Adjustment

§ 224.111 Factors Rebutting Presumption of Correctness

[1] In General

[2] Agreement of Parties

[3] Rental Value of Family Residence Subject to Deferred Sale

[4] Extraordinarily High Income of Obligor Parent

[a] Statutory Standard for Rebuttal

[b] "Extraordinarily High Income" Not Defined

[c] Consideration of Obligor's Income

[i] Right to Discover Obligor's Income

[ii] Effect of Obligor's Stipulation to Pay Support

[iii] Findings on Obligor's Income

[d] Obligor's Burden of Proof in Rebutting Guideline Amount

[e] Deferred Income Plans Not Authorized by Statute

[5] Contribution Not Commensurate With Custodial Time

[6] Special Circumstances

§ 224.112 Additional Support Amounts

[1] Mandatory and Discretionary Add-Ons

[2] Manner of Allocating Costs

[3] Additional Considerations Regarding Health Care Costs

§ 224.113 Required Findings

[1] In General

[2] Family Support

§ 224.114 Software Used to Determine Support

§§ 224.115-224.129 [Reserved]

§ 224.130 Mandatory Element of Support if Available

§ 224.131 Assignment of Right to Reimbursement

§ 224.132 Health Insurance Coverage Assignment Order

§ 224.133 Qualified Medical Child Support Orders Under ERISA

§§ 224.134-224.149 [Reserved]

§ 224.150 Discovery Issues

§ 224.151 Form and Time of Payment

[1] In General

[2] Electronic Funds Transfer

[3] Payments to Providers

[4] Transfers of Property

[5] Life Insurance Order

[6] Credit for Federal Disability and Retirement Benefits

§ 224.152 Enforcement Provisions Issued With Order

[1] Mandatory Earnings Assignment

[2] Security for Payment

[3] State Employee Earnings Deduction

[4] Receipt of Public Assistance and Order to Pay County Officer

[5] Information Regarding Current Employer

[6] Information Regarding Obligor and Obligee

§ 224.153 Statewide Registry for Child Support Orders

§§ 224.154-224.169 [Reserved]

§ 224.170 Jurisdiction to Modify or Terminate Support Order

§ 224.171 No Retroactive Modification

§ 224.172 Termination of Child Support Orders

§ 224.173 Standing of Party Adjudged in Contempt

§ 224.174 Effect of Denial of Visitation

§ 224.175 Procedure for Simplified Discovery

§ 224.176 Change of Circumstances Requirement

[1] In General

[2] Not Required for Prior Stipulated Orders for Less Than Guideline Amount

[3] Parents' Ability to Pay as Changed Circumstance

[4] Subsequent Marriage or Nonmarital Partner as Changed Circumstance

[5] Needs of Child as Changed Circumstance

§ 224.177 Two-Step Phase-In

§ 224.178 Notice of Activation of Military Service and Request to Modify Support Order

§§ 224.179-224.189 [Reserved]

§ 224.190 Federal Statutes

§ 224.191 State Statutes

[1] Court-Ordered Support

[2] Criminal Sanctions

[3] Duty to Support

[4] Enforcement

§ 224.192 Decisions

[1] Adult Child

[2] AFDC Reimbursement

[3] Child's Right to Support From Both Parents

[4] Enforcement by Contempt

[5] Reimbursement for Support Provided by Another

[6] Workfare Program

§ 224.193 Law Reviews

§§ 224.194-224.209 [Reserved]

§ 224.210 Stipulation to Establish or Modify Child Support and Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-350]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Enforcement Provisions

[4] State Statutes

§ 224.211 Child Support Case Registry Form [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-191]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 224.212 Application and Order for Health Insurance Coverage [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-470]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Notice of Intent to Seek Order

[4] When Order May be Issued

[5] Issuance and Service

[6] State Statutes

§ 224.213 Employer's Health Insurance Return [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-475; Fam. Code § 3772]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Contents of Form

§ 224.214 Application for Expedited Child Support Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-380]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] State Statutes

§ 224.215 Response to Application for Expedited Child Support Order and Notice of Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-381; Fam. Code § 3625]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 224.216 Expedited Child Support Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-382; Fam. Code § 3621]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 224.217 Child Support Information and Order Attachments to Findings and Order After Hearing or Judgment [Cal. Judicial Council Forms FL-192, FL-342, FL-342(A)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Forms

[3] Earnings Assignment

[4] State Statutes

[5] Cross References

§ 224.218 Supplemental Petition for Support for After-Born Child [Fam. Code § 2330.1]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] State Statutes

§ 224.219 Qualified Medical Child Support Order (QMCSO) [29 U.S.C. § 1169]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Contents of QMCSO

[4] Effect of QMCSO

[5] Service and Determination

§ 224.220 Notice of Activation of Military Service and Deployment and Request to Modify a Support Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-398; Fam. Code § 3651]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART I. SCOPE

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.01

§ 224.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses the substantive law of the duty of child support. It sets forth the general duty of support owed by parents toward their children [see § 224.30 et seq.], and the duration of that duty [see § 224.50 et seq.]. It discusses jurisdiction to order child support under California law [see § 224.70 et seq.], including the various proceedings in which child support may be ordered. Detailed consideration is given to the computation of the amount of child support under California's statewide uniform child support guideline [see § 224.100 et seq.]. Health care coverage requirements, discovery, and trial considerations and orders are discussed [see §§ 224.130 et seq., 224.150 et seq.]. This chapter also sets forth the substantive law regarding modification of child support [see § 224.170 et seq.].

This chapter includes the following forms:

- Stipulation to support [see § 224.210].
- Provisions for support to be included in a judgment of dissolution [see § 224.211].
- Application and order for health insurance coverage [see § 224.212].
- Application, response, and order for expedited child support [see §§ 224.214 -224.216].
- Child support information and order attachments to findings and order after hearing [see § 224.217].

Although the law of child support does not differ substantially depending on the parent's marital status, there are different proceedings that may be brought by unmarried parents. Forms for use in these proceedings are presented in Ch. 394, Parent and Child .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportJurisdictionGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART I. SCOPE

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.02

§ 224.02 Cross References

For discussion and forms relating to modification of orders generally, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure

For forms and discussion relating to child custody, see Ch. 223, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody

For discussion and forms relating to proceedings for the emancipation of minors, see Ch. 245, Emancipation of Minors

For forms and discussion relating to enforcement of support orders, see Ch. 258, Family Law Enforcement: General Enforcement Principles and Remedies , and Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement

For discussion and forms relating to obtaining funds for support of a ward from guardian of the estate, see Ch. 290, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Maintenance of Ward or Conservatee

For forms and discussion relating to juvenile court dependency proceedings, see Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings

For forms and discussion relating to child support issues not arising within the context of the termination of a marriage, see Ch. 394, Parent and Child

For discussion and forms concerning the establishing of the parent--child relationship and the obtaining of child support under the Uniform Parentage Act without regard to the marital status of the parents, see Ch. 412, Paternity

For discussion and forms relating to the support of children after the death of their parents, see Ch. 448, Probate: Family Allowance , Ch. 454, Probate: Claims Against the Estate

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Estate, Gift & Trust LawProbatePersonal RepresentativesClaims By & AgainstFamily LawChild CustodyGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsModificationEmancipation of ChildFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsFamily LawGuardiansGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART I. SCOPE

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 224.03-224.09

[Reserved]

§§ 224.03[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Generally

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.10

§ 224.10 Governing Law

The existence and duration of the parental duty of support, the type and amount of child support owed, and the conduct of support proceedings are primarily state law issues. The Family Code contains most of the relevant statutes. Additional statutes concerning child support may be found in the Penal Code [see Penal Code § 270 (criminal penalties for willful failure to support minor child)], and the Probate Code [see Prob. Code § 6540 (family allowance)].

The statewide uniform child support guideline set forth in Fam. Code § 4050 et seq. was enacted to comply with federal statutes and regulations governing state receipt of federally subsidized public assistance funds [see 42 U.S.C. § 651 et seq. (federal child support requirements for state plans); 45 C.F.R. § 302.56].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementCriminal PenaltiesFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTypesGeneral Overview

6 of 89 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Generally

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 224.11-224.29

[Reserved]

§§ 224.11[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Parental Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.30

§ 224.30 General Obligation

A child's parents are equally responsible for supporting their child in the manner suitable to the child's circumstances [Fam. Code § 3900; see United States v. Ballek (9th Cir. 1999) 170 F.3d. 871, 874 n.3]. A child support obligor who is present or resident in the state has the duty regardless of the presence or residence of the obligee [Fam. Code § 3550(b)]. In addition, a person who is found to be a parent by estoppel, even though not the child's biological parent, is responsible for supporting the child [see In re Marriage of Pedregon (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 1284, 1287-1291, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 861 ; for discussion of paternity by estoppel and presumptions of paternity generally, see Ch. 412, Paternity].

The duty to support cannot, by any act, conduct, or arrangement be shifted from a parent's shoulders [Smith v. Smith (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 154, 164, 270 P.2d 613 ; see El Dorado County Dept. of Child Support Services v. Nutt (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 990, 994, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 523 (court properly refused to find father "exempt" from all current and future child support obligations due to fact that he was serving sentence of 50 years to life and had no income; father has obligation to provide support even if that obligation cannot currently be satisfied)]. Because the support obligation is a continuing one, there is no statute of limitations that will prevent the obligation from being enforced as long as the child is entitled to care and support [Fernandez v. Aburrea (1919) 42 Cal. App. 131, 132, 183 P. 366] .

The parent of a child is not relieved of the duty to support that child on the ground of his or her own minority. Thus, a minor who is a parent has a duty to support his or her own child [McLain v. Meadows (1919) 44 Cal. App. 402, 404, 186 P. 411 ; see County of San Luis Obispo v. Nathaniel J. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 842, 844-846, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843 (15-year-old father who was willing victim of crime of unlawful intercourse with 34-year-old woman was not exempt from obligation to pay support for child conceived as result of this intercourse)]. That duty does not shift to the minor's parents--that is, to the grandparents of the child--because a grandparent does not have a duty to support his or her own grandchild [Fam. Code § 3930; see County of Fresno v. Walker (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 814, 825, 171 Cal. Rptr. 572] .

However, when a child lives apart from his or her own parents, has children, and receives public assistance benefits for both the children and himself or herself, the public entity providing the benefits may have limited grounds for seeking ongoing support and reimbursement for the benefits from a grandparent--on the premise that reimbursement is being sought as part of that individual's support obligation to his or her own child, and not for a grandchild. When reimbursement is proper in such a case, one court has held that it should not exceed the amount of the parent's own support obligation for the child (living away from home) under the statewide uniform support guideline [County of San Bernardino v. Martinez (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 600, 605-606, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142] .

The underlying right of reimbursement, however, appears to depend on whether the grandparent would be considered, pursuant to applicable statute [Fam. Code § 17402], a "noncustodial" or "absent" parent of the child who is living apart, and that the reason for the parent and child living apart is a "separation of the parents." Accordingly, in the view of another court, the parent of a child who has simply run away from home, had children, and received public assistance benefits is not a "noncustodial parent" within the meaning of the reimbursement statute, and therefore need not reimburse a county that provided public benefits to the run-away child and her children [County of San Diego v. Lamb (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 845, 851, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 912] .

The parental obligation to provide support need not be fulfilled by providing items in kind. Financial support is all that is required by law. No possessory right to a parental residence or to other specific items of personal property is implied by the duty of support [In re Andrew I. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 572, 579, 281 Cal. Rptr. 570 ; In re Richard M. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 7, 13-15, 252 Cal. Rptr. 36] . A court may also determine that a parent has satisfied his or her support obligation in a manner other than direct financial payments, as when the parent assumes increased physical custody of the child [In re Marriage of Tavares (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 620, 628, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 39 ; see § 224.31].

A parent who willfully omits, without lawful excuse, to furnish necessary clothing, food, shelter, medical attendance, or other remedial care for his or her minor child is guilty of a crime [Penal Code § 270].

An unmarried man who expends funds to support a child in reliance on the mother's representation that he is the child's father, may not sue the mother on an unjust enrichment theory for the return of the funds after discovering that the child is not his biological offspring [McBride v. Boughton (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 379, 384-394, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 115] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementCriminal PenaltiesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of ChildrenFamily LawPaternity & SurrogacyGeneral OverviewGovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Parental Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.31

§ 224.31 Mutual Responsibility of Both Parents

The mother and father of a minor child have an equal responsibility to support of the child [Fam. Code § 3900]. Equal responsibility exists regardless of which parent has custody of the child [see Levy v. Levy (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 341, 358, 53 Cal. Rptr. 790] . However, it is presumed that a parent having primary physical responsibility for the children contributes a significant portion of available resources for the support of the children [see Fam. Code § 4053(i)]. The statewide uniform child support guideline [see Fam. Code § 4050 et seq., discussed in § 224.100] takes into account each parent's actual income and level of custodial responsibility for the children in setting child support amounts [Fam. Code § 4053(c)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Parental Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.32

§ 224.32 Effect of Agreement Between Parents

Parents may make agreements between themselves relating to their relative child support responsibilities. However, neither the court nor the children are bound by such agreements [In re Marriage of Alter (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 718, 722, 727, 729-730, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 849 (court always has power to modify child support order up or down, notwithstanding parties' contrary agreement, and is not bound by agreement setting absolute minimum for child support); Hoover-Reynolds v. Superior Court (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1273, 1279, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 173 (agreement between parents purporting to modify child's right to support is not binding on court or on child); In re Marriage of O'Connell (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 849, 856, 146 Cal. Rptr. 26 ; see Armstrong v. Armstrong (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 942, 947, 126 Cal. Rptr. 805, 544 P.2d 941 ; In re Marriage of Ayo (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 442, 449, 235 Cal. Rptr. 458] . Parents may not agree to waive or limit the right of a child to support [Elkind v. Byck (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 453, 457-458, 67 Cal. Rptr. 404, 439 P.2d 316] , including the rights of an adult indigent child under Fam. Code § 3910 [In re Marriage of Lambe & Meehan (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 388, 393-394, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 641 ; see § 224.51[3]]. Nor may they agree to abrogate their own statutory duty to support a child [Plumer v. Superior Court (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 631, 637, 328 P.2d 193] , or attempt to divest the court of jurisdiction over child support [In re Marriage of Lambe & Meehan (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 388, 393-394, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 641 ; In re Marriage of Goodarzirad (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1020, 1026, 230 Cal. Rptr. 203] .

Parents may stipulate to a child support obligation and submit their agreement to the court for approval [see Fam. Code §§ 4057(b)(1), 4065; see also In re Marriage of Armato (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 1030, 1045-1047, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 395 (parties' postjudgment letter agreement modifying child support was enforced under Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6); for further discussion and see § 224.210].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsModificationGeneral OverviewFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Parental Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.33

§ 224.33 Effect of Child's Independent Resources

A parent's duty of child support is not affected by the fact that a child may have income or other resources from which he or she can be self-supporting [Crowe v. Crowe (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 109, 114, 81 Cal. Rptr. 570 ; see Armstrong v. Armstrong (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 942, 947, 126 Cal. Rptr. 805, 544 P.2d 941 (case decided before adoption of statewide guideline, holding that court could consider child's independent resources for child's basic needs if parents were financially unable to fulfill obligation themselves)]. Under the statewide uniform child support guideline [Fam. Code § 4050 et seq.; see § 224.104 et seq.], independent resources should have no effect on the amount of the parents' obligation, which is based on entitlement to a statutory percentage of parental income rather than need [see generally Fam. Code § 4055 et seq.]. However, the court may direct that an allowance be made to the parent of a child out of the child's property for the child's past or future support, on conditions that are proper, if the direction is for the child's benefit [Fam. Code § 3902]. Thus, the appropriate amount of support under the guideline may be supplemented with the child's own resources, but the parental duty of support may not be supplanted by them.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Parental Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.34

§ 224.34 Effect of Interference With Visitation

A custodial parent's interference with the visitation rights of a noncustodial parent does not affect the latter's duty to pay child support [Fam. Code §§ 3556, 4845(b); see Moffat v. Moffat (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 645, 651-653, 165 Cal. Rptr. 877, 612 P.2d 967 ; Solberg v. Wenker (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 475, 479, 209 Cal. Rptr. 545 ; see also Cooper v. O'Rourke (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 243, 246-247, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444 ; Camacho v. Camacho (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 214, 219-220, 218 Cal. Rptr. 810 (stating converse of rule, that visitation rights are not conditional on timely payment of child support); see Cooper v. O'Rourke (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 243, 246-247, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444] . Child support and visitation are independent rights, both accruing to the benefit of the child, which should not be defeated by the conduct of a parent [Camacho v. Camacho (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 214, 219, 218 Cal. Rptr. 810 ; see Solberg v. Wenker (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 475, 479-480, 209 Cal. Rptr. 545] .

Notwithstanding Fam. Code § 3556 and policies on which it rests, the California Supreme Court has held that active concealment of the child, as opposed to mere interference with visitation rights, may give rise to an estoppel defense to enforcement of child support when the parent who has concealed the child attempts to recoup arrearages after the child has attained majority [In re Marriage of Damico (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 673, 685, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787, 872 P.2d 126 ; County of Orange v. Carl D. (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 429, 439-441, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 440]. Past concealment is not a defense, however, to payment of arrears for a child who is still a minor because the overdue support will still benefit the child [In re Marriage of Comer (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 504, 515-517, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 155, 927 P.2d 265 ; In re Marriage of Tavares (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 620, 625, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 39]. For further discussion of child concealment as a defense to support enforcement, see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement, § 259.14.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild CustodyVisitationGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Parental Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.35

§ 224.35 Effect of Bankruptcy

The discharge in bankruptcy of an obligated parent's debts does not release or affect liabilities for past due or future child support. Furthermore, a debtor may not discharge in bankruptcy any debt to his or her child for support in connection with a separation agreement, divorce decree, court order, or property settlement agreement including attorney's fees ordered in a support or custody hearing [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(5); see Fam. Code § 4013 (to extent federal law does provide for discharge in bankruptcy of child support obligations, court may make all proper orders for support, maintenance, and education of child)]. Postpetition interest, as an integral part of the nondischargeable child support obligation, is also nondischargeable and may be collected personally against the debtor after the underlying debt is discharged [Foster v. Bradbury (9th Cir. 2003) 319 F.3d 495, 497-498] .

An obligation for attorney's fees ordered payable as child support is also not discharged in bankruptcy; but a prospective order to pay attorney's fees that is not designated to be payable as child support is discharged [Cal-Western Reconveyance Corp. v. Reed (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1308, 1320, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 244].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Bankruptcy LawDischarge & DischargeabilityNondischarge of Individual DebtsAlimony, Divorce Settlements & SupportFamily LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Parental Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.36

§ 224.36 Parents' Obligation to Persons Supplying Necessaries

[1] In General

If a parent neglects to provide articles necessary for his or her child who is under the charge of the parent, according to his or her circumstances, a third person may in good faith supply the necessaries and recover the reasonable value of them from the parent [Fam. Code § 3950]. Necessaries include food, clothing, habitation, and medical treatment [see Nielsen v. Richards (1925) 75 Cal. App. 680, 686, 243 P. 697] .

Because the statute refers to the parent having the child under his or her "charge," it has been held that no liability attaches by its terms to a noncustodial parent who is paying child support under a support order [Lewis v. Lewis (1917) 174 Cal. 336, 339-340, 163 P. 42 ; see Blair v. Williams (1927) 86 Cal. App. 676, 688, 261 P. 539] . However, if there is no outstanding child support order, a noncustodial parent may be liable to third parties supplying necessaries [see In re Marriage of O'Connell (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 849, 856, 146 Cal. Rptr 26] . If a child is in the custody of a third person, and a parent stands willing to take custody of the child and provide support, the third person may not recover from the parent expenses incurred in supplying necessaries to the child without the parent's knowledge [In re Guardianship of Ross (1907) 6 Cal. App. 597, 600-601, 92 P. 671] .

A parent is not liable to a third party for necessaries if the child has "abandoned" the parent without just cause [Fam. Code § 3951(b)]. However, abandonment does not relieve a parent of the obligation to support a child during any period in which a governmental entity furnishes support for the child [Fam. Code § 3951(c)]. Thus, for example, there are circumstances under which a parent is liable for reimbursement for public assistance benefits paid on behalf of a child who has left the home, but the scope of this liability is somewhat unclear. Case authority, interpreting reimbursement rights under the Welfare and Institutions Code, appears to impose liability on the "noncustodial parent" of the child, and to limit reimbursement situations to those in which a "separation of the parents" was an underlying cause of the child living away from home (see § 224.30) [County of San Bernardino v. Martinez (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 600, 605-606, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142 (ordering reimbursement); but see County of San Diego v. Lamb (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 845, 851, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 912 (reversing grant of reimbursement)]. Abandonment is shown by proof of the child's permanent relinquishment of submission to parental control. The question of abandonment is a factual issue that can be proven by circumstantial evidence. Abandonment is not necessarily negated by the child's assertion that he or she entertained no intent to abandon or by an ambiguous statement that he or she did not know whether or not he or she intended to stay away forever. Furthermore, under some circumstances, a relinquishment for a finite period may be permanent and irrevocable in nature, giving rise to an inference of abandonment [County of Fresno v. Walker (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 814, 824, 171 Cal. Rptr. 572 (construing former Civ. Code § 208, which is continued without substantive change in Fam. Code § 3951)].

For discussion of emancipation of minors, which is conceptually similar to abandonment of a parent in that it frees the child from parental control and relieves the parent of the duty to support the child, see Ch. 245, Emancipation of Minors .

[2] Necessaries Supplied by Other Parent or Relatives

A parent is not bound to compensate the other parent or a relative for the "voluntary" support of his or her child, absent an agreement for compensation [Fam. Code § 3951(a); see In re Bruegger (1928) 94 Cal. App. 589, 592, 271 P. 523 ; Crane v. Livingston (1950) 98 Cal. App. 2d 699, 701-702, 220 P.2d 744 (construing former Civ. Code § 208)]. With regard to the other parent, of course, there is no such thing as "voluntary" support. One parent's obligation to "compensate" the other is subsumed within the law of child support, which in no way depends on an agreement for compensation. However, Family Code Section 3951(a) has been cited to support denial of a parent's claim for retroactive child support for periods during which no support order was in effect [see In re Marriage of Koppelman (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 627, 633, 205 Cal. Rptr. 629 , disapproved, other grounds, in In re Marriage of Fabian (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 440, 451 n.13, 224 Cal. Rptr. 333, 715 P.2d 253 , 224 Cal. Rptr. 333, 715 P.2d 253 (decided under former Civ. Code § 208)]. It also supports denial of a parent's claim for reimbursement, beyond the basic child support obligation, for particular child-related expenses already incurred [see Dougal v. Dougal (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 272, 276, 299 P.2d 404] .

Presumably, Fam. Code § 3951(a) would not bar a relative who has the actual physical custody of a child from obtaining a support order from the child's parents, under a guardianship or otherwise [see Fam. Code § 4000 (civil suit to enforce duty of support on behalf of child)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Parental Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.37

§ 224.37 Property Liable for Child Support

[1] General Rule

By statute, the parents' community, quasi-community, and separate property may be subjected, in such proportions as the court deems just, to the support of their children [Fam. Code § 4008].

[2] Property of Subsequent Marriage

For purposes of determining what property is liable for support, a child support obligation of a married person that does not arise from the current marriage is treated as a premarital debt, regardless of whether a court order for support is made or modified before or during marriage and regardless of whether any installment payment on the obligation accrues before or during marriage [Fam. Code § 915(a)]. The separate property of the obligor parent is liable for such a debt [Fam. Code § 913(a)], but the separate property of the obligor's subsequent spouse is not [Fam. Code § 913(b)(1)].

The community property of the subsequent marriage is generally liable for either spouse's premarital support debts, subject to a right of reimbursement [see Fam. Code § 915(b)]. However, the subsequent spouse's earnings during marriage are not liable for the obligor spouse's premarital support debts as long as the earnings are held in a deposit account in which the obligated spouse has no right of withdrawal and are not commingled with other community property, except property insignificant in amount [Fam. Code § 911(a); see Wightman v. Franchise Tax Board (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 966, 970 n.4, 249 Cal. Rptr. 207] .

Whether or not the earnings of a subsequent spouse are available for child support debts, the court generally cannot consider such earnings as part of the obligated parent's overall financial circumstances in determining or modifying the amount of child support under the statewide uniform child support guideline [Fam. Code § 4057.5; § 224.105[6]].

[3] Estate of Deceased Parent

[a] In General

A parent's child support obligation that is fixed by a court decree or a property settlement agreement does not cease on the parent's death, but survives as a charge against his or her estate [Taylor v. George (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 552, 556, 212 P.2d 505 ; In re Marriage of O'Connell (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 565, 572, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334 ; see In re Marriage of Perry (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1106, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445 ; In re Marriage of Bertrand (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 437, 439-441, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151 (no credit for Social Security benefit paid to child on behalf of deceased parent); see Fam. Code § 4504 (credit for Social Security and certain other federal benefits paid to child on account of parent's retirement or disability)]. For purposes of ascertaining which property is subject to this surviving support obligation, there is no difference, in substance, between property that would comprise what is conventionally thought of as the deceased parent's "estate," and property held by a living trust that was established by the decedent. Just as a will cannot insulate a support obligor's property from child support claims, neither can the device of a living trust [In re Marriage of Perry (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1106, 1109, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445] .

A parent's obligation of support may be discharged in a manner specified in his or her will, such as by a specific bequest, or through the proceeds of life insurance policies [Taylor v. George (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 552, 558, 212 P.2d 505 ; Estate of Schumacher (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 146, 150-153, 95 Cal. Rptr. 572 ; see In re Marriage of O'Connell (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 565, 571-572, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334] . The court must find that the provision in the will is sufficient to discharge the support obligation before it can deny recovery for the support against the estate [Stein v. Hubbard (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 603, 605, 102 Cal. Rptr. 303 (will's residual clause did not discharge support obligation because estate was not sufficient)].

The probate court does not have jurisdiction to reduce the amount of support provided in a decree or support agreement [Stebbins v. Imerman (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 942, 945-946, 98 Cal. Rptr. 865] . Such a modification may be sought in the proceeding in which the decree or agreement was obtained, based on changed circumstances (as discussed in § 224.176 et seq.), by substituting the personal representative for the deceased parent in that proceeding [Kress v. Kress (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 173, 174-175, 33 Cal. Rptr. 77 ; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 377.31, 377.41; In re Marriage of Drake (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1151-1153, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466 ; see also In re Marriage of Perry (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1111, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445 ; In re Marriage of Bertrand (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 437, 440-441, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151] . Because the duty of support does not terminate on death, the rule that death normally abates a proceeding for dissolution of marriage does not apply [Kress v. Kress (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 173, 175, 33 Cal. Rptr. 77 ; see In re Marriage of Drake (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1151, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466] .

The proper procedure to obtain support payments from the parent's estate is to make a creditor's claim for the payments. If a timely claim is not made, the decree or agreement cannot be enforced against the estate [Thomas v. Hobart (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 139, 141-142, 78 Cal. Rptr. 844] . As noted hereafter, there is also authority for bringing a deceased parent's estate representative or successor in interest, including the trustee of a decedent's living trust, into a pending family law proceeding in order to adjudicate the ongoing support issue [see In re Marriage of Perry (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1106, 1109, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445 ; In re Marriage of Drake (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1151-1153, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466] .

Even without an existing support order, if a parent chargeable with the support of a child dies, leaving the child's support chargeable to the county or leaving the child confined in a state institution to be cared for in whole or in part at the expense of the state, and the parent leaves an estate sufficient for its support, the supervisors of the county, or the director of the state department having jurisdiction over the institution involved, may claim provision for the child's support from the parent's estate by civil action. For this purpose, the supervisor or director has the same remedies as any creditors against the estate and against the heirs, devisees, and next of kin of the parent [Fam. Code § 3952].

The effect of the death of the designated payee (usually, the custodial parent) on an existing child support order is discussed in § 224.57.

It has been held that social security death benefits that are paid to a child on account of the death of the payor parent do not discharge to parent's estate's continuing support obligation, nor are they to be credited against the support obligation under Fam. Code § 4504 (credit for social security or railroad retirement benefits paid to child on account of retirement or disability of parent) [In re Marriage of Bertrand (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 437, 439-441, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151] . However, the court stated that the child's receipt of such benefits may be considered in ruling on a personal representative's motion to modify the estate's support obligation based on changed circumstances [In re Marriage of Bertrand (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 437, 440-441, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151] .

[b] Family Allowance

A minor is entitled to a family allowance from the estate of a deceased parent [see Prob. Code § 6540(a); Estate of Goulart (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 260, 263-266, 32 Cal. Rptr. 229 ; see also Estate of Barkdull (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 729, 730-731, 80 Cal. Rptr. 317 (although dependent who has reasonable maintenance derived from other sources is not necessarily entitled to family allowance if there are other entitled persons (construing former Prob. Code § 682; now see Prob. Code § 6540(c)), minor child may obtain family allowance if his or her capital would have to be invaded to provide support)].

If the decedent provided for continuing support for the minor child by agreeing with the other parent to maintain the minor as a life insurance beneficiary, the parents' agreement is enforceable, and the court will not award a further family allowance from the decedent's estate. The actual fund, however, must be sufficient to meet the child support obligation [Estate of Schumacher (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 146, 150-153, 95 Cal. Rptr. 572] .

For further discussion of family allowances, see California Probate Practice, Ch. 8 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Estate, Gift & Trust LawProbatePersonal RepresentativesClaims By & AgainstFamily LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsProperty RightsCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsProperty RightsCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

15 of 89 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Parental Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 224.38-224.49

[Reserved]

§§ 224.38[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Duration of Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.50

§ 224.50 Support to Age of Majority

A parent has an obligation to support his or her children during their minority [Fam. Code § 3900]. A child is a minor until his or her 18th birthday [see Fam. Code § 6502(a)(2); In re Marriage of Pilcher (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 142, 145-150, 123 Cal. Rptr. 868] . Thus, except as discussed in § 224.51, a parent's duty of support terminates when the child reaches 18 years of age.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTerminationAttainment of MajorityFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Duration of Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.51

§ 224.51 Extension of Duty Beyond Age of Majority

[1] Through High School or to Age 19

A parent continues to owe support to any unmarried child who has attained the age of 18, is a full-time high school student, and who is not self-supporting, until the child either completes the twelfth grade or turns 19, whichever occurs first [Fam. Code § 3901(a)]. This duty of support is self-operative to extend an existing support obligation without the need of a hearing [Politzer v. Himmelsbach (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 295, 299, 260 Cal. Rptr. 450] . It may also be enforced in a civil suit, if necessary [Fam. Code § 4000, 4500; see Politzer v. Himmelsbach (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 295, 298-299, 260 Cal. Rptr. 450 ; In re Marriage of Gonzales (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1198, 1202, 255 Cal. Rptr. 336 ; see also Fam. Code § 4001].

[2] Extension by Agreement

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a court may approve a stipulated agreement by the parents to pay child support for the support of an adult child or for the continuation of child support after a child attains the age of 18. The court may make a support order to effectuate the agreement [Fam. Code § 3587; cf. In re Marriage of Lurie (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 658, 670-672, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 835 (refusing to construe New York agreement that father pay support until child turns 21 as agreement to pay child support beyond age of majority because age of majority in New York is 21)]. If the parents agree that child support will continue past the age of 18 and the agreement is incorporated in a judgment, the court may not modify the judgment to terminate child support at age 18 [see In re Marriage of Beilock (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 713, 730, 146 Cal. Rptr. 675 ; In re Marriage of Whitney (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 179, 182, 139 Cal. Rptr. 324] .

The Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline [see § 224.100 et seq.] does not apply in determining the appropriate amount of support for an adult child when neither parent has physical responsibility for the adult child for any percentage of time [Edwards v. Edwards (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 136, 141-144, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 458].

[3] Adult Indigent Children

Both parents of a child have an equal responsibility to maintain, to the extent of their ability, a child of whatever age who is incapacitated from earning a living and without sufficient means [Fam. Code § 3910(a); see In re Marriage of Drake (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1154-1155, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466 (parent's establishment of trust to support disabled adult child does not discharge other parent's statutory duty of support); Chun v. Chun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 589, 597, 235 Cal. Rptr. 553 (predecessor statute imposed duty of support that is closely akin to joint and several obligation)]. Children for whom support is authorized under Fam. Code § 3910 are generally referred to as "adult indigent" children. Parents may not, by agreement, abrogate their statutory duty to support an adult indigent child or attempt to divest the court of jurisdiction to order support for an adult indigent child [In re Marriage of Lambe & Meeham (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 388, 392-394, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 641 ; see § 224.32]. It is doubtful that the statewide uniform child support guideline (Fam. Code § 4050 et seq., discussed in § 224.100 et seq.) applies to the support of adult indigent children [see Fam. Code § 4053(a) (parent's first and principal obligation is to support his or her minor children)].

This continuing duty of support, which runs contrary to the general rule that a parent's support obligation terminates when the child attains majority or is otherwise emancipated [Levy v. Levy (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 341, 363, 53 Cal. Rptr. 790 ; Bryant v. Swoap (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 431, 437, 121 Cal. Rptr. 867 ; see § 224.50], is primarily intended to protect the public from the financial burden of supporting an individual whose parents are able to provide the requisite support [Jones v. Jones (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1014, 225 Cal. Rptr. 95 (citing Matthew Bender, Cal. Family Law Practice and Procedure)]. It does not establish a right of action by a provider of services against the parents of an adult child [Rehabilitation Inst. of Chicago v. Einhorn (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 1036, 1039-1040, 190 Cal. Rptr. 702 (decided under former Civ. Code § 206)]. Nor does it provide for any liability to a public agency for reimbursement of benefits provided to the indigent child [County of San Bernardino v. Simmons (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 394, 398, 296 P.2d 329 ; Freitas v. County of Contra Costa (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 163, 172 n.8, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 406] .

A child's indigence alone does not give rise to a parent's obligation of support under Fam. Code § 3910. The language "incapacitated from earning a living and without sufficient means" has been held to require that the child demonstrate an inability to be self supporting because of a mental or physical disability or proof of inability to find work because of factors beyond the child's control [In re Jesse V. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1619, 1623-1624, 263 Cal. Rptr. 369 ; see Freitas v. County of Contra Costa (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 163, 172, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 406] . Adult indigent children may include the developmentally disabled [see In re Marriage of Drake (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1154-1155, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466 ; In re Marriage of Cooper (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 883, 886-887, 216 Cal. Rptr. 611] , the emotionally disabled [see Chun v. Chun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 589, 592-597, 235 Cal. Rptr. 553] , and the mentally ill [see Scott v. Superior Court (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 577, 584-586, 202 Cal. Rptr. 920] . They do not include incarcerated adult children [In re Jesse V. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1619, 1623-1624, 263 Cal. Rptr. 369] or adult children whose resources are otherwise insufficient to allow them to attend college [Jones v. Jones (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1014-1016, 225 Cal. Rptr. 95 ; see In re Marriage of Chandler (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 124, 130 (trial court has no authority, even in "very high income parent" case, to order parent to pay for child's college education or otherwise order parent to support an [able-bodied] adult child)].

The duty to support adult indigent children may be enforced in an action under Fam. Code § 4000. For a form of petition to obtain support for an adult indigent child, see Ch. 394, Parent and Child .

In determining the amount of support a parent is required to pay for an adult child under Fam. Code § 3910, a judge must use the statewide uniform child support guideline set forth in Fam. Code § 4050 et seq. To the extent that the guideline embodies assumptions that are true of minor children, but not of adult disabled children, the guideline permits a trial court to adapt or depart from the basic child support formula in accordance with the "special circumstances" of the adult disabled child or the child's parents [In re Marriage of Drake (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1155-1158, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTerminationAttainment of MajorityFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTypesDependent Adult SupportFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Duration of Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.52

§ 224.52 Effect of Emancipation

A minor who becomes emancipated by contracting a valid marriage [Fam. Code § 7002(a)], entering active duty with the United States armed forces [Fam. Code § 7002(b)], or receiving a judicial declaration of emancipation [Fam. Code § 7002(c); see Fam. Code § 7120 et seq. (procedure for declaration of emancipation)] is considered as being over the age of majority for the purpose of the minor's right to support by his or her parents [Fam. Code § 7050(a); see Codorniz v. Codorniz (1950) 34 Cal. 2d 811, 817, 215 P.2d 32] . However, a declaration of emancipation of a minor who is indigent and has no means of support is subject to rescission [Fam. Code § 7130(b)].

Emancipation of a minor by other conduct or by agreement with the parent, while recognized for some purposes, does not automatically terminate the right of the minor to parental support [County of Alameda v. Kaiser (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 815, 817, 48 Cal. Rptr. 343 ; see In re Marriage of O'Connell (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 849, 856, 146 Cal. Rptr. 26] . However, courts have prospectively terminated a parent's support obligation, without a decree of emancipation, if the minor has moved out of the custodial home and become self-supporting, while denying retroactive effect of the de facto emancipation [see Lehrer v. Lehrer (1976) 63 Cal. App. 3d 276, 279-280, 133 Cal. Rptr. 709 ; In re Marriage of Hancock (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 264, 266-267, 107 Cal. Rptr. 897] .

For discussion of emancipation of minors, see Ch. 245, Emancipation of Minors .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of ChildrenFamily LawParental Duties & RightsEmancipation of Minors

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Duration of Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.53

§ 224.53 Automatic Termination on Occurrence of Event

If the court orders a parent to make specified payments for child support during the child's minority, or until the child is married or otherwise emancipated (see § 224.52), the parent's liability terminates on the happening of the contingency [Fam. Code § 4007(a)]. Similarly, if the court orders a parent to make child support payments for an adult indigent child [see Fam. Code § 3910(a), discussed in § 224.51[3]] until the occurrence of a specified event (such as the child's death), the parent's liability terminates on the happening of the contingency [Fam. Code § 4007(a)].

In the original order, the court may require the obligee parent to notify the obligor (or his or her attorney of record) of the happening of the event [Fam. Code § 4007(a)]. The obligor parent is entitled to a refund of any overpayments made because he or she was not informed of the occurrence of the contingency, subject to the obligee's right to apply the overpayments to existing arrearages [Fam. Code § 4007(b)].

Under Fam. Code § 4007, termination of the particular child support obligation established in a court order is automatic with regard to marriage and probably other determinable events that establish emancipation, such as entry into the armed forces and a judicial decree of emancipation [see Fam. Code § 7002], as long as the language of the order tracks the statute [see Lehrer v. Lehrer (1976) 63 Cal. App. 3d 276, 280, 133 Cal. Rptr. 709] . Emancipation that is based on other conduct or agreement (see § 224.52) does not automatically terminate such an obligation, but must be addressed by motion for modification [Lehrer v. Lehrer (1976) 63 Cal. App. 3d 276, 279-280, 133 Cal. Rptr. 709 ; In re Marriage of Hancock (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 264, 266-267, 107 Cal. Rptr. 897] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Duration of Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.54

§ 224.54 Treatment of Unallocated Amount for More Than One Child

Under Fam. Code § 4050 et seq., the statewide uniform guideline (see § 224.100 et seq.), the amount of child support to be ordered for more than one child is less than the product of the amount for one child times the number of children [see Fam. Code § 4055(b)(4)]. Unless the court orders otherwise or unless there are different time-sharing arrangements for different children, the order must allocate the support amount so that the amount of support for the youngest child is the amount of support for one child, and the amount for the next youngest child is the difference between that amount and the amount for two children, with similar allocations for additional children [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(8)]. This provision does not apply to cases in which there are different time sharing arrangements for different children or in which the court determines that the allocation would be inappropriate in the particular case [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(8)].

Thus, as support terminates for the oldest child, support is to be reduced only by the incremental increase, computed by subtracting the support for the number of remaining minor children from the amount of support previously ordered [see Comstock v. Comstock (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 481, 489, 172 Cal. Rptr. 148 ; Spivey v. Furtado (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 259, 262-263, 51 Cal. Rptr. 362] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Duration of Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.55

§ 224.55 Effect of Reconciliation or Remarriage of Parents to Each Other

A pendente lite order for child support in a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, or legal separation is not enforceable during any period in which the parties have reconciled and are living together, unless the order specifies otherwise [Fam. Code § 3602]. An order requiring one parent to make payments to the other parent for child support is terminated if the parties remarry each other, although both parents continue to have a duty to support their children [Davis v. Davis (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 290, 292, 66 Cal. Rptr. 14, 437 P.2d 502] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsModificationChanged CircumstancesFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTypesTemporary SupportFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Duration of Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.56

§ 224.56 Effect of Order Terminating Parental Rights

A declaration freeing a minor from parental custody and control under Family Code Section 7800 et seq. terminates all parental responsibilities with regard to the child, including the duty of support [Fam. Code § 7803; see In re Robert J. (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 894, 904, 181 Cal. Rptr. 188] . A decree of adoption has the same effect [see Fam. Code § 8617]. Likewise, an order terminating parental rights under Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 completely severs the parent-child relationship, and terminates the parental duty of support [County of Ventura (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 1123-1124, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 461] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of ChildrenFamily LawParental Duties & RightsTermination of RightsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Duration of Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.57

§ 224.57 Effect of Death of Payee Parent

Courts in two district-attorney-enforcement cases have held that a child support obligation does not terminate by operation of law on the death of the payee-custodial parent and that the payor must seek a judicial modification or termination of support [see In re Marriage of McCann (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 102, 106, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 639 ; In re Marriage of Gregory (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 112, 115-117, 281 Cal. Rptr. 188] . In one case, the county was the designated payee because of an extension of public assistance benefits on behalf of the child, both before and after the death [In re Marriage of Gregory (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 112, 281 Cal. Rptr. 188 ; see Fam. Code § 4200 (county must be made recipient of child support if parent is receiving benefits on behalf of child)]. In the other, the county was made the designated payee after the custodial parent's death, even though no public assistence benefits had been provided [In re Marriage of McCann (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 102, 105, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 639 ; see Fam. Code § 4201 (county may be made designated payee of any child support order)].

In the second case, the court held that the order remained enforceable even though the obligor assumed custody of the children [In re Marriage of McCann (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 102, 107, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 639] . In the view of this court, because the duty of support runs to the child and not to the custodial parent, the county may appear on behalf of the child (see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement; Special Remedies for Support Enforcement) to enforce the order. The death of the custodial parent affects neither the children's right to enforce the order nor the support agency authority to appear on their behalf [In re Marriage of McCann (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 102, 108-109, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 639] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsTerminationDeath

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Duration of Duty of Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 224.58-224.69

[Reserved]

§§ 224.58[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Jurisdiction To Order Child Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.70

§ 224.70 Subject Matter Jurisdiction In Superior Court

[1] Support Proceedings in General

Before a court may order a party to pay child support, it must have subject matter jurisdiction over the proceeding [see Titus v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 792, 799, 100 Cal. Rptr. 477] . Superior courts have exclusive jurisdiction over child support matters under the Family Code [Fam. Code §§ 200, 2010(c); see In re Marriage of Richardson (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1240, 1243, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 391 (California court has jurisdiction to order child support in dissolution proceeding pending in California even if child is not in California when there is no out-of-state proceeding addressing issue of support); see also Fam. Code § 17400(n) (venue in child support proceedings brought by local child support agency)].

[2] Support Proceedings Involving Native Americans as Parties

The subject matter jurisdiction of the superior court extends to support matters involving a party who is a Native American and whose child is domiciled in California. A California trial court may make an order for child support and attorney's fees and costs against a Native American over whom it has properly obtained personal jurisdiction regardless of the nature of the sources of his or her income. Federal law, nevertheless, may preclude enforcement actions against certain property interests of Native Americans [Purnel v. Purnel (In re Purnel) (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 527, 540-542, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 667] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGovernmentsNative AmericansAuthority & Jurisdiction

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Jurisdiction To Order Child Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.71

§ 224.71 Proceedings in Which Child Support May Be Ordered

In a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, or for legal separation of the parties, the court has jurisdiction to inquire into and render any judgment and make appropriate orders concerning the support of children for whom support may be ordered, including children born after the filing of the initial petition or the final decree of dissolution [Fam. Code § 2010(c)].

Child support orders may also be issued in various statutorily-defined situations not involving termination of the parents' marriage [see Fam. Code §§ 4000 (action by other parent or guardian ad litem for parent's willful failure to support child), 4002 (action by district attorney for child support orders), 4900 et seq. (interstate establishment and enforcement of child support orders under UIFSA), 7637 (action for determination of parentage and child support orders under UPA); Fam. Code § 17400 et seq. (action by support agency for paternity determination and child support orders)]. For discussion of these types of actions, see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement , Ch. 394, Parent and Child , and Ch. 412, Paternity .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementInterstate EnforcementUniform Interstate Family Support ActFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportLegal SeparationFamily LawPaternity & SurrogacyEstablishing PaternityUniform Parentage Act

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Jurisdiction To Order Child Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.72

§ 224.72 Children for Whom Support May Be Ordered

According to statute, all of the following are children for whom support may be ordered in a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, or legal separation of the parties [Fam. Code § 58; see §§ 224.50, 224.51]:

(1) Minor children (under the age of 18) [see Fam. Code § 6500];

(2) Adult children who are the subject of an agreement for continuing support [see Fam. Code § 3587];

(3) Adult children who are under the age of 19 and still in high school [see Fam. Code § 3901];

(4) Adult indigent children [see Fam. Code § 3910].

Under prior law, the superior court's jurisdiction to order child support in a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, or legal separation extended only to "children of the marriage" [see former Civ. Code § 4351]. In transferring this provision to the Family Code, the Law Revision Commission omitted the limiting words "of the marriage" in providing for jurisdiction concerning child support [see Fam. Code § 2010(c); cf. Fam. Code § 2010(b)]. Nevertheless, a Family Code provision, insofar as it is substantially the same as a previously existing provision relating to the same subject matter, is to be considered as a restatement and continuation of prior law and not as a new enactment [Fam. Code § 2]. Therefore, prior judicial determinations of a court's jurisdiction to award child support with regard to children "of the marriage" are probably still operative.

Under cases construing former Civ. Code § 4351, "children of the marriage" include those who are the biological children of both spouses and children who have been adopted by both spouses [see Adoption of Bonner (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 17, 20-21, 66 Cal. Rptr. 812 ; Fam. Code § 8616]. If a spouse disputes that he or she is the biological parent of a child, courts in dissolution matters have made determinations of parentage according to the Uniform Parentage Act [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Groner (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 115, 116-117, 99 Cal. Rptr. 765 ; Fam. Code § 7600 et seq. (UPA)], and now there is express statutory authority for such a determination [see Fam. Code §

2010 (authority of court in dissolution proceeding); Fam. Code § 2330.1 (in any proceeding for dissolution of marriage, legal separation, or child support, petition or complaint may list children born before marriage to parties); see also § 224.81]. Similarly, courts have applied the presumption of Fam. Code § 7540, that the issue of a wife cohabiting with her husband who is not impotent or sterile is a child of the marriage, to support jurisdiction to make a child support order for the benefit of such a child [see, e.g., In re Marriage of B. (1981) 124 Cal. App. 3d 524, 526-527, 177 Cal. Rptr. 429] . Presumably, the husband may move to rebut the presumption by blood test evidence under Fam. Code § 7541(b) if the matter may be heard within two years of the child's birth, as required by that section.

The phrase "children of the marriage" does not include a parent's stepchildren, and the court generally has no jurisdiction to order a stepparent to support a stepchild [In re Marriage of Lewis and Goetz (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 514, 518-519, 250 Cal. Rptr 30] . However, a spouse may be estopped by conduct to deny that a child is a child of the marriage, even though the child, in reality, is neither his or her natural or adopted child [see In re Marriage of Johnson (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 848, 849-850, 152 Cal. Rptr. 121 (husband, who was not natural father, was estopped from denying paternity to avoid support obligation because he assumed role and represented himself as child's father); In re Marriage of Valle (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 837, 840, 126 Cal. Rptr. 38 (husband estopped from denying paternity to avoid support obligation because he and wife brought brother's children from Mexico on forged birth certificates and reared children as their own); see also In re Marriage of Hinman (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 711, 716-717, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 245 (waiver)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsTerminationAttainment of MajorityFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTypesGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTypesDependent Adult Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Jurisdiction To Order Child Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.73

§ 224.73 Personal Jurisdiction

A child's physical presence in this state gives California courts subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate a child support claim, but the child's presence does not automatically confer personal jurisdiction over a parent [Titus v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 792, 799, 100 Cal. Rptr. 477] . A state must obtain personal jurisdiction over an obligor in order to impose a personal liability in favor of an obligee [Titus v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 792, 799, 100 Cal. Rptr. 477] .

Personal jurisdiction exists if the parent is domiciled in California [Titus v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 792, 799, 100 Cal. Rptr. 477 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10]. In addition, the United States Supreme Court has held that service of process on a nonresident while physically present in California is a sufficient basis for personal jurisdiction in a child support proceeding, even if he or she was not present in California for reasons relating to the children [Burnham v. Superior Court of Cal. (1990) 495 U.S. 604, 607-608, 619, 110 S.Ct. 2105, 109 L. Ed. 2d 631] . However, if a nonresident is served with summons and complaint outside the state and comes into the state to litigate custody, subsequent service in California of an order to show cause for child support does not confer jurisdiction on that issue [In re Marriage of Fitzgerald & King (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1419, 1429-1430, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 558] .

If the respondent does not live in California and cannot be served while physically present in the state, personal jurisdiction must be established on the basis of his or her "minimum contacts" with California [see Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10; Kulko v. California Superior Court (1978) 436 U.S. 84, 97, 98 S. Ct. 1690, 56 L. Ed. 2d 132 ; Kumar v. Superior Court (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 689, 694, 186 Cal. Rptr. 772, 652 P.2d 1003] . Minimum contacts sufficient to satisfy constitutional due process requirements may be established by an act committed in California, or an act or omission causing an effect in California [see Judicial Council Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10; Sibley v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 442, 445-446, 128 Cal. Rptr. 34, 546 P.2d 322 , cert. denied, 429 U.S. 826 (1977) ; see also Restatement (Second), Conflict of Laws, § 37; Calder v. Jones (1984) 465 U.S. 783, 789, 104 S. Ct. 1482, 79 L. Ed. 2d 804 (relying on Restatement; jurisdiction proper in California based on effects in California of petitioners' Florida conduct)]. If the act done in California is not a tortious one, the existence of personal jurisdiction is determined according to a reasonableness standard [see Judicial Council Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10; Restatement

(Second), Conflict of Laws § 36; see also Titus v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 792, 803, 100 Cal. Rptr. 477 (relying on Restatement)]. Extensions of personal jurisdiction based on nontortious acts have been limited [see, e.g., McArthur v. Superior Court (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1287, 1293-1295, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 296 (nonresident parent's exercise of visitation rights in California insufficient to confer personal jurisdiction; also finding irrelevant fact that nonresident parent used resident parent's credit card while in California for purposes of exercising visitation); Modlin v. Superior Court (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1176, 1181, 222 Cal. Rptr. 662 (visits with child in conjunction with attendance at medical conferences insufficient to establish personal jurisdiction)].

The determination that an act or omission done outside California had an effect in the state, and the decision to exercise personal jurisdiction based on such an act or omission, also depends on a reasonableness test [see Judicial Council Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10; Sibley v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 442, 446 , 128 Cal. Rptr. 34, 546 P.2d 322 , cert. denied, 429 U.S. 826 (1977) (relying on Judicial Council Comment); Judd v. Superior Court (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 38, 45, 131 Cal. Rptr. 246 (relying on Judicial Council Comment and Restatement)].

The United States Supreme Court has held that a California court may not exercise jurisdiction over an absent parent merely because the parent has allowed his or her child to live in California with a former spouse [Kulko v. California Superior Court (1978) 436 U.S. 84, 97, 98 S. Ct. 1690, 56 L. Ed. 2d 132 ; see Bartlett v. Superior Court (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 72, 75-78, 150 Cal. Rptr. 25 ; Hoerler v. Superior Court (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 533, 535, 149 Cal. Rptr. 569 ; see also In re Marriage of Nosbisch (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 629, 633, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 817 (finding Texas statute that gave state personal jurisdiction over parent of child who resides in state with parent's approval unconstitutional)]. Conversely, it has been held that a parent causes an effect in California by abandoning the family in another state with knowledge that the family will have to return to California and take advantage of California law. Under these circumstances, subjecting the parent to personal jurisdiction in California is reasonable [In re Marriage of Lontos (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 61, 71-72, 152 Cal. Rptr. 271] .

A California court may not base personal jurisdiction for child support purposes on an absent parent's consent to the children's visitation with the other parent who is a California resident [Titus v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 792, 801-802, 100 Cal. Rptr. 477] . It may also not base personal jurisdiction on an absent parent's communicating with a child in California [Judd v. Superior Court (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 38, 45, 131 Cal. Rptr. 246] , attempting to enforce visitation rights in California [Kumar v. Superior Court (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 689, 703-704, 186 Cal. Rptr. 772, 652 P.2d 1003] , or mailing child support payments [Judd v. Superior Court (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 38, 45, 131 Cal. Rptr. 246] or a proposed visitation agreement to California [Titus v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 792, 803, 100 Cal. Rptr. 477] .

One court has held that what is now Fam. Code § 7620(a), which gives California jurisdiction under the Uniform Parentage Act over an action to declare paternity and fix a support obligation with regard to a child conceived in the state, meets the constitutional minimum-contacts requirement [County of Humboldt v. Harris (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 857, 861-864, 254 Cal. Rptr. 49] . However, it is doubtful whether the conception or birth of a child in California alone would give California personal jurisdiction over a nonresident parent if the marital domicile was in another state and the marriage was dissolved there, the custodial parent then established domicile in California, but the noncustodial parent had few or no other contacts with California [see Modlin v. Superior Court (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1176, 1178-1181, 222 Cal. Rptr. 662 (court did not even consider birth of child in California as potential basis for personal jurisdiction under these facts, but decided case on basis of provision in settlement agreement providing for continuing jurisdiction in New York); see also Kulko v. California Superior Court (1978) 436 U.S. 84, 97, 98 S. Ct. 1690, 56 L. Ed. 2d 132 (indicating that state of marital domicile has strong claim to personal jurisdiction if one party has remained there); Hoerler v. Superior Court (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 533, 534-535, 149 Cal. Rptr. 569 (reading Kulko as barring personal jurisdiction over parent remaining in state where marriage was dissolved, even though California was marital domicile when children were born)].

For discussion of personal jurisdiction issues in civil actions generally, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsConstitutional LimitsCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsMinimum ContactsFamily LawChild SupportJurisdictionPersonal JurisdictionFamily LawChild SupportJurisdictionSubject Matter Jurisdiction

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Jurisdiction To Order Child Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.74

§ 224.74 Continuing Jurisdiction

Once the court properly acquires jurisdiction over the parties in an action in which child support is an issue, its jurisdiction continues and it may make additional child support orders or modify existing orders [see Code Civ. Proc. § 410.50(b); Fam. Code § 3651; Moore v. Superior Court (1928) 203 Cal. 238, 241-243, 263 P. 1009 ; In re Marriage of Lusby (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 459, 473, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263 ; Schoch v. Superior Court (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 1200, 1204-1205, 90 Cal. Rptr. 365] . The original court has primary jurisdiction over child support issues, and another action for child support cannot be brought in a different superior court even if the original court did not make a child support award in the original dissolution proceedings [Kresteller v. Superior Court (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 545, 549, 56 Cal. Rptr. 771] , unless the support issue involves a child for which the court had no jurisdiction to award support in the original proceeding [see Fam. Code § 58]. However, if the parties' residences have changed and a hearing in another court would be more convenient, a party may move for change of venue [Kresteller v. Superior Court (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 545, 550, 56 Cal. Rptr. 771] .

A stipulation between the parties to engage in binding arbitration on child support issues is void as against public policy to the extent it purports to deprive the court of jurisdiction to modify child support [In re Marriage of Bereznak and Heminger (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1062, 1067-1070, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 351] .

The court's continuing jurisdiction over child support matters does not confer authority on an individual judge to retain jurisdiction for himself or herself personally [In re Marriage of Matthews (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 811, 815-816, 161 Cal. Rptr. 879 ; but see In re Marriage of Regnery (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1367, 1377-1378, 263 Cal. Rptr. 243 (resulting judgment valid despite erroneous retention of personal jurisdiction by judge)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportJurisdictionContinuing Jurisdiction

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Jurisdiction To Order Child Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.75

§ 224.75 Notice to Obligor

Child support awarded without notice to the obligor is beyond the court's jurisdiction as a violation of due process, and the award may be collaterally attacked at any time [In re Marriage of Lippel (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1160, 1166-1167, 276 Cal. Rptr. 290, 801 P.2d 1041] . The former Judicial Council forms of petition and response for use in a dissolution of marriage or legal separation matter specified that if there are minor children of the marriage, the court will make child support orders without further notice to either party. Therefore, it was not possible for the petitioner to effectively waive the child's entitlement to child support by failing or refusing to request child support in the petition [see In re Marriage of Lippel (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1160, 1169-1173, 276 Cal. Rptr. 290, 801 P.2d 1041 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 580 (relief granted on default may not exceed that prayed for)]. However, the current Judicial Council forms of petition and response for use in a dissolution or nullity of marriage or legal separation matter state that if there are minor children born to or adopted by the parties before or during the marriage, the court will make orders for the support of the children upon request and submission of financial forms by the requesting party, but that an earnings assignment may be issued without further notice [see Cal. Judicial Council Forms FL-100, FL-120].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportProceduresFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Jurisdiction To Order Child Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.76

§ 224.76 County as Indispensable Party

A county that has provided public benefits to a custodial parent is an indispensable party to any proceeding in which the level of child support is at issue [In re Marriage of Mena (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 12, 19, 260 Cal. Rptr. 314 ; In re Marriage of Lugo (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 427, 432-434, 217 Cal. Rptr. 74 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2)(i)]. The county is entitled to notice of any proceeding or motion to establish or modify a child support obligation, regardless of whether the motion is brought by the custodial or noncustodial parent. The county is also entitled to notice of a trial under any law, including the Family Code or the Uniform Parentage Act, at which support is one of the issues to be determined [see In re Marriage of Mena (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 12, 19, 260 Cal. Rptr. 314] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderIndispensable PartiesFamily LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportProceduresFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of ChildrenFamily LawPaternity & SurrogacyEstablishing PaternityUniform Parentage Act

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Jurisdiction To Order Child Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.77

§ 224.77 Temporary Support

During the pendency of any proceeding in which the support of a child is at issue, the court may order either or both parents to pay any amount necessary for the support of the child [Fam. Code § 3600]. For discussion of the procedure to obtain temporary orders generally, see § 221.10 et seq. The factors for determining the amount of temporary support under the statewide uniform child support guideline are the same as the factors for determining permanent support, as discussed in § 224.100 et seq.

An award of temporary support is effective from the moment of the court's pronouncement and not from the date a formal order is entered [In re Marriage of Pearce (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 221, 223, 148 Cal. Rptr. 509] . A temporary order does not prejudice the rights of the parties or the children with respect to any subsequent order [Fam. Code § 3604]. The order may be modified or revoked at any time, except as to any amount accruing prior to the date of filing of the notice of motion or order to show cause to modify or terminate [Fam. Code § 3603]. Jurisdiction to award temporary child support continues during the pendency of any appeal [In re Marriage of Baltins (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 66, 94-95, 260 Cal. Rptr. 403 (involving temporary order pending appeal of order setting aside obligee's default)].

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, orders for pendente lite child support remain in full force and effect until revoked by the court or until the order terminates by operation of law under Fam. Code § 3900, 3901, 4007, or 4013, even if the proceeding has not been brought to trial within the time limits specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110 et seq. [Fam. Code § 3601]. However, the order is not enforceable during any period in which the parties have reconciled and are living together, unless the order specifies otherwise [Fam. Code § 3602].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsModificationGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTypesTemporary Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Jurisdiction To Order Child Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.78

§ 224.78 Expedited Support Orders

During the pendency of an action for child support that has been filed and served, the court may, without a hearing, make an order requiring a parent or parents to pay for the support of their minor child the amount required under the statewide uniform child support guideline formula [Fam. Code §§ 3621, 3622; see Fam. Code §§ 3624 (service requirements), 4055 (guideline formula); Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 11452, 11452.018 (needs standard, to be used as minimum support amount if income of parent from whom support sought is unknown); see also 224.100 et seq.]. Such an order is known as an expedited child support order [Fam. Code § 3620].

An application for expedited child support must set forth the minimum amount that the obligated parent or parents are required to pay under the formula. The applicant must also complete and file the Judicial Council form of Income and Expense Declaration for both parents [Fam. Code § 3622(a), (b); see Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-150], and a worksheet setting forth the basis of the required amount and a proposed expedited support order [Fam. Code § 3622(c), (d)]. Unless the respondent requests a hearing, the amount set forth in the application is the amount that the obligor will be required to pay [Fam. Code § 3624(c); see Fam. Code §§ 3625-3628].

The obligated parent may file and serve his or her response to the application and income and expense declaration at any time before the effective date of the expedited support order. No fee is required in connection with the filing of the response. The simultaneous filing of the response and the obligated parent's income and expense declaration will stay the effective date of the expedited support order [Fam. Code § 3625(c)], and the matter will be set for hearing [Fam. Code §§ 3626, 3629; see Fam. Code § 3623 (neither party is prevented from raising separately noticed relevant and proper issues other than support at hearing)]. The hearing will be set for not less than 20 days nor more than 30 days from the filing of the response [Fam. Code § 3626].

At the hearing, both parents must produce copies of their most recently filed federal and state income tax returns. These returns may be reviewed by the other parent, and a parent may also be examined by the other as to the contents of the return. A parent who fails to submit the required documents is normally barred from the relief that he or she has requested. However, the court may grant the requested relief if the parent submits a declaration under penalty of perjury that (1) no such documents exist; or (2) in the case of a tax return, it cannot be produced but a copy has been requested from the Internal Revenue Service or Franchise Tax Board [Fam. Code § 3629].

Unless the obligated parent responds to the application, the expedited order become effective without further court action 30 days after service on the required papers on the obligated parent [Fam. Code § 3624(a), (c)]. If there is a hearing, the order after hearing becomes effective no more than 30 days after the filing of the response to the application for the expedited support order. It may be given retroactive effect to the date of the filing of the application [Fam. Code § 3632].

Any order for expedited child support may be modified at any time on the same basis as any other order for child support [Fam. Code § 3633; see § 224.170].

The Judicial Council forms of Application for Expedited Child Support Order, Response to Application and Notice of Hearing, and Child Support Order are set forth in see §§ 224.214 -224.216.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsModificationGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportProceduresFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Jurisdiction To Order Child Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.79

§ 224.79 Deferred Sale of Family Home

In a family law proceeding, a party may request a "deferred sale of home order" [see Fam. Code § 3800 et seq.]. Such an order temporarily delays the sale of the family home and awards the temporary exclusive use and possession of the home to a custodial parent of minor children or to a parent with whom an adult child under age 19 who has not yet completed high school [see Fam. Code § 3901; see also § 224.51[1]] or an adult indigent child [see Fam. Code § 3910; § 224.51[3]] resides [see Fam. Code § 3800(b); cf. In re Marriage of Cooper (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 883, 886-887, 216 Cal. Rptr. 611 (decided when statute was limited to minor children)]. Such an order may have the effect of lowering the child support obligation of the parent not remaining in the family home [see Fam. Code § 4057(b)(2)]. The fact that a custodial parent cohabits in the subject house with a person of the opposite sex is not necessarily a bar to a deferred sale order [In re Marriage of Braud (1995) 45 Cal. App. 4th 797, 814, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179] . The court may specify the parties' respective responsibilities for the payment of maintenance and improvements during the period of deferment [Fam. Code § 3806]. A deferred sale of home order is subject to modification and termination at any time at the court's discretion, unless the parties have agreed otherwise [Fam. Code § 3807].

In a case decided prior to the effective date of the current deferred sale statute, the court held that a deferred sale award is contingent on the supported child's remaining in the physical custody of the parent who lives in the home. The need for the award ends if primary custody of the child is awarded to the nonresident parent, despite the resident parent's desire to maintain a home for the child during periods of secondary physical custody [see In re Marriage of Katz (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1029, 1037-1038, 247 Cal. Rptr. 562] . The current version of the statute provides for the award to a "custodial parent," defined as a party awarded physical custody of a child [Fam. Code § 3800(a)], whether or not the custodial parent has sole or joint custody [Fam. Code § 3800(b)]. Thus, as under the case, the statute prohibits continuation of the award after a change of physical custody to the nonresident parent unless the parents' custodial arrangement may be characterized as joint custody.

For further discussion of deferred home sales, see Ch. 222, Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportProceduresFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Jurisdiction To Order Child Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.80

§ 224.80 Retroactivity of Order

An order for child support may be made retroactive to the date of filing the petition, complaint, or other initial pleading (except as provided in Fam. Code § 17402) [Fam. Code § 4009; cf. In re Marriage of Goosmann (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 838, 844-845, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 613] . However, if the parent ordered to pay support was not served with the petition, complaint, or other initial pleading within 90 days after filing, and the court finds that the parent was not evading service intentionally, the child support order is not effective earlier than the date of service [Fam. Code § 4009].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTypesRetroactive SupportFamily LawChild SupportProceduresFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Jurisdiction To Order Child Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.81

§ 224.81 Supplemental Complaint for After-Born Child

Under Fam. Code § 2330.1, in any proceeding for dissolution of marriage or legal separation of the parties, or for the support of children, the petition or complaint may list children born before the marriage to the parties. Under the terms of the Uniform Parentage Act, a determination of paternity may be made in the action. In addition, the statute provides that a supplemental complaint may be filed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 464] in any of those proceedings seeking a judgment or order of paternity or support for a child of the parents of another child whose paternity and support are already at issue before the court. The complaint may be filed without leave of the court either before or after final judgment in the underlying proceeding. Service of the supplemental summons and complaint must be made in the manner provided for the initial service of a summons under the Family Code [Fam. Code § 2330.1]. For a form for a supplemental complaint, see § 224.218.

On the filing of a supplemental complaint, a child support order in the original proceeding may be modified in conformity with the statewide uniform child support guidelines to include an order for the support of all of the children who were not named in the initial and supplemental pleadings, to consolidate arrearages and wage assignments for children of the parties, and to consolidate orders for support [Fam. Code § 3651(b)]. Modification of child support is the subject of § 224.170 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsFamily LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportProceduresFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Jurisdiction To Order Child Support

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 224.82-224.99

[Reserved]

§§ 224.82[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.100

§ 224.100 Operative Date and Applicability

On and after July 1, 1992 [see Fam. Code § 4051], the amount of all child support orders in California must be determined under the statewide uniform child support guideline set forth in Fam. Code § 4050 et seq. [M.S. v. O.S. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 548, 554, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 812] . The legislation does not contain a clear statement of the scope of procedures to which the guideline applies. However, the federal regulations under which the guideline was enacted require the establishment of a single set of guidelines for setting and modifying child support orders within the state [45 C.F.R. § 302.56(a); see 42 U.S.C. § 667(a); Fam. Code § 4050], and that those guidelines be followed in any judicial or administrative proceeding for the award of child support [45 C.F.R. § 302.56(f); see 42 U.S.C. § 667(b)(2)]. The guidelines apply not only with respect to the support of minor children, but also with respect to the support of adult disabled children [In re Marriage of Drake (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1163, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466] . In short, the guidelines apply in any type of proceeding in which child support is at issue [see, e.g., M.S. v. O.S. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 548, 554-559, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 812 (applying guidelines in paternity action)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.101

§ 224.101 Federal Compulsion for Guideline

To receive federal funds for the federally authorized public assistance program for persons with dependent children, states must have in effect a plan for enforcement of child support obligations that complies with extensive federal requirements [42 U.S.C. § 602(a)(2); see 42 U.S.C. § 651 et seq. (federal child support requirements for state plans)]. The federal requirements include, among other things, a requirement that states promulgate guidelines for support order amounts [42 U.S.C. § 667(a); see 45 C.F.R. § 302.56(b)]. These guidelines are binding on the courts in that they must include a rebuttable presumption, in any judicial or administrative proceeding for the award of child support, that the amount of the order that would result from the application of the guidelines is the correct amount of child support to be ordered [42 U.S.C. § 667(b)(2); see Fam. Code § 4057; In re Marriage of Williams (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1221, 1233, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 877 (guideline amount of support, which is calculated by applying mathematical formula to parents' incomes, is presumptively correct); see also § 224.111[1]].

Implementing regulations go even further, requiring that the guidelines be based on specific descriptive and numeric criteria and result in a computation of the support obligation [45 C.F.R. § 302.56(c)(2)]. Prior California law, the Agnos Child Support Standards Act of 1984 [see former Civ. Code §§ 4720-4732] provided specific numeric criteria and computed amounts for a mandatory minimum order [see former Civ. Code § 4722], but there were no such criteria for orders above the mandatory minimum. The amount was essentially left to the court's discretion, subject to certain legislative declarations of policy [see former Civ. Code § 4724]. Therefore, the legislature enacted the statewide uniform child support guideline to provide for numeric computation of all child support orders in California, not just mandatory minimum amounts [see Fam. Code § 4055; cf. In re Marriage of Fini (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1033, 1040-1044, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749 (severe judicial criticism of guideline because of excessive limitations on judicial discretion, needless complexity of formula, and legislative micromanaging of child support hearings)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGeneral

OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of ChildrenPublic Health & Welfare LawSocial SecurityAssistance to FamiliesChild & Spousal Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.102

§ 224.102 Legislative Intent and Principles Behind Guideline

The legislative intent and underlying principles with regard to the child support guideline are set forth in Fam. Code §§ 4050, 4052, and 4053. In addition to complying with federal regulations [see Fam. Code § 4050; § 224.101], the Legislature also intends that the courts adhere to the guideline and depart from it only in the special circumstances set forth in the guideline [Fam. Code § 4052; M.S. v. O.S. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 548, 554, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 812 (courts must calculate child support under statutory guidelines because of California's strong public policy in favor of adequate child support); Brothers v. Kern (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 126, 130, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 239 (adherence to statutory guideline in determining amount of child support is mandatory and court has discretion to depart from it only as permitted by statute)]. The guideline amount, which is calculated by applying a mathematical formula to the parents' incomes [see § 224.104], is presumptively correct [Fam. Code § 4057(a); M.S. v. O.S. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 548, 554, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 812] . Before the court can make an order differing from the guideline formula, it must calculate and state the amount of support that would have been ordered under the guideline formula [Fam. Code § 4056(a)(1)].

In implementing the guideline, the courts must adhere to the following principles [Fam. Code § 4053]:

(1) A parent's first and principal obligation is to support his or her minor children according to the parent's circumstances and station in life.

(2) Both parents are mutually responsible for the support of their children.

(3) The guideline takes into account each parent's actual income and level of responsibility for the children.

(4) Each parent should pay for the support of the children according to his or her ability.

(5) This guideline seeks to place the interests of children as the state's top priority.

(6) Children should share in the standard of living of both parents. Child support may therefore appropriately improve the standard of living of the custodial household to improve the lives of the children.

(7) Child support orders in cases in which both parents have high levels of responsibility for the children should reflect the increased costs of raising the children in two homes and should minimize significant disparities in the children's living standards in the two homes.

(8) The financial needs of the children should be met through private financial resources as much as possible.

(9) It is presumed that a parent having primary physical responsibility for the children contributes a significant portion of available resources for the support of the children.

(10) The guideline seeks to encourage fair and efficient settlements of conflicts between parents and seeks to minimize the need for litigation.

(11) The guideline is intended to be presumptively correct in all cases, and only under special circumstances should child support orders fall below the child support mandated by the guideline formula.

(12) Child support orders must ensure that children actually receive fair, timely, and sufficient support reflecting the state's high standard of living and high costs of raising children compared to other states.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.103

§ 224.103 Applicability of Prior Case Law

Under California case law before 1984, in computing the amount of child support to be awarded, the amount of child support was within the trial court's discretion and would be disturbed only for abuse of discretion [In re Marriage of Flaherty (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 637, 644-645, 183 Cal. Rptr. 508, 646 P.2d 179] . The primary considerations in setting the support amount were the child's needs and the parents' ability to pay [In re Marriage of Neal (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 834, 847, 155 Cal. Rptr. 157] .

The Agnos Child Support Standards Act of 1984 [former Civ. Code §§ 4720-4732] removed the court's discretion with regard to a mandatory minimum amount [see former Civ. Code § 4722] and provided specific guidance for exercising discretion with regard to supplemental awards [see former Civ. Code § 4724]. The statewide uniform guideline now restricts discretion with regard to all child support orders [see Fam. Code § 4050 et seq.].

Thus, any prior case holding must be weighed against the standards of Fam. Code § 4050 et seq. to determine whether it is in harmony or in conflict with those standards, or whether it has been preempted by a specific provision regarding the subject of the holding. Cases setting child support on the basis of a child's needs are particularly questionable, since the guideline is based not on need but on the child's entitlement to share in the parents' standard of living [see Fam. Code § 4053(f); White v. Marciano (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1032-1033, 235 Cal. Rptr. 779 (rejecting relevance of evidence of obligor's net worth and opulent life style); see Johnson v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 68, 72, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 624] . The child's needs come into higher focus in cases in which a parent's income is deemed "extraordinarily high," as discussed in § 224.111[4].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.104

§ 224.104 Child Support Formula

The central feature of the statewide uniform child support guideline [Fam. Code § 4050 et seq.] is the child support formula set forth in Fam. Code § 4055(a). This formula is as follows [Fam. Code § 4055(a)]:

CS = K [HN - (H%)(TN)]

In the formula CS represents the amount of child support [see Fam. Code § 4055(b)(1)(A)]. HN is the high earner's net monthly disposable income and TN is the total net monthly disposable income of both parties [see Fam. Code § 4055(b)(1)(C), (E)]. Factor K is the percentage of parental income that is to be allocated to the support of children. Factor K varies according to the parents' actual total income level [see Fam. Code § 4055(b)(1)(B)]. Factor H represents the approximate percentage of time the high earner has or will have primary physical responsibility for the children [see Fam. Code § 4055(b)(1)(D)].

Under the formula, child support is computed by the following mathematical steps:

(1) Figure the total net monthly income of each parent under the standards set forth in Family Code Sections 4058 and 4059 (see § 224.105), and add them together;

(2) Multiply that figure by the percentage of time that the higher earner has primary physical responsibility for the children (see § 224.106[1]);

(3) Subtract the result from the higher earner's net monthly disposable income. That yields the part of the higher earner's monthly income on which child support is computed;

(4) Find the appropriate value of K as set forth in Fam. Code § 4055(b)(3) (see § 224.107), and take K percent of the result of step 3.

If the result is a positive number, the higher earner pays that amount to the lower earner. If the result is a negative number, the lower earner pays the absolute value (the number without the minus sign) of that amount to the higher earner [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(5)].

Although not included as a formula variable, a final component is the multi-child multiplier. After CS is computed under the formula, it is then multiplied by the appropriate factor set forth in Fam. Code § 4055(b)(4) depending on the number of children who are to be supported under the order [see § 240.109].

There is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof that the amount of child support established by the formula is the correct amount of child support to be ordered [Fam. Code § 4057(a)]. The presumption may be rebutted in favor of an amount that is lower than the amount computed under the formula, or higher than that amount [see, e.g., Fam. Code § 4057(b)(5)(C) (special medical or other needs justifying higher support amount)]. For further discussion, see § 224.111.

To ensure that the formula and any applicable statutory adjustments have been properly applied in a given case, the court must, at the request of any party, state in writing or include in the record certain information used in determining the amount of support under the formula and guideline [see Fam. Code § 4056]. For a form for a child-support order that contains all of the required findings, see § 224.211.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceInferences & PresumptionsPresumptionsFamily LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.105

§ 224.105 Computation of Income

[1] Gross Income; Inclusions and Exclusions

For purposes of calculating child support under the guideline, the annual gross income of each parent generally means income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) salaries, commissions, royalties, wages, bonuses, rents, dividends, pensions, interest, trust income, annuities, workers' compensation benefits, unemployment insurance benefits, disability insurance benefits, social security benefits, and spousal support actually received from a person who is not a party to the child support order [Fam. Code § 4058(a); Brothers v. Kern (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 126, 131, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 239 (gross income may include imputed interest income that reasonably could have been earned but was not actually earned); In re Marriage of Williams (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1221, 1234, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 877 (statutory list of possible income sources is not exhaustive, but is by way of illustration only, and income from other sources should properly be factored into annual gross income computation); County of Placer v. Andrade (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1393, 1396-1397, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 739 (error to exclude bonus and overtime pay from "annual gross income" absent evidence that net disposable income figure did not accurately reflect payor's prospective earnings); but see In re Marriage of Mosley (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1375, 1379, 1385, 1387, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 497 (court should not base support obligation on predicted receipt of large bonus that might never materialize, but must include in its order a method for requiring payor spouse to pay support based on any bonus income he or she may in fact receive); In re Marriage of Rothrock (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 223, 230-235, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 881 (court properly excluded as income annuity purchased from undifferentiated and unallocated personal injury settlement); In re Marriage of Pearlstein (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 1361, 1363, 1372-1376, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 910 (market value of unsold shares of stock business owner receives in connection with sale of business generally is not income for child support purposes; however, court may treat realized gain that is not reinvested as income, and reasonable rate of investment return may be imputed to value of stock available for sale and this amount added to owner's gross income); In re Marriage of Scheppers (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 646, 649-652, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 529 (life insurance benefits are not included in "annual gross income"); In re Marriage of Corman (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1492, 1499 (spousal support received from party to proceeding is not part of gross income)].

Gross income also includes income from the proprietorship of a business, such as gross receipts from the business reduced by expenditures required for the operation of the business and, in the discretion of the court, employee benefits [Stewart v. Gomez (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 1748, 1755, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531 (proper to include value of rent-free housing supplied by employer and meal allowance paid by vocational training program)] or self-employment benefits, taking into consideration the benefit to the employee, any corresponding reduction in living expenses, and other relevant facts [Fam. Code § 4058(a); Stewart v. Gomez (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 1748, 1753, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531 (describing section as an "expansive definition of gross income"); but see In re Marriage of Loh (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 325, 334-335, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893 (declining to follow Stewart's "anything that reduces living expenses" approach to determining gross income)]. Depreciation of a parent's rental properties is not properly deductible from the parent's gross income [Asfaw v. Woldberhan (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1412-1426, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 323 (depreciating asset does not involve reduction of cash available for child support nor is depreciation required for operation of business)].

An increase in the equity value of a parent's residence generally does not constitute income or earning capacity for purposes of calculating child support [In re Marriage of Williams (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1221, 1236, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 877]. Home equity can only be considered if special circumstances under Fam. Code § 4057(b) are shown, which make guideline support unjust or inappropriate [In re Marriage of Williams (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1221, 1236, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 877 ; see § 224.111]. Thus, a court generally cannot attribute an assumed rate of return on the supporting parent's home equity in determining the parent's income for the purpose of calculating guideline child support, even if a certain amount of home equity is sheltered [In re Marriage of Williams (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1221, 1236, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 877].

Annual gross income also does not include any income derived from child support payments actually received, or any income derived from public assistance programs for which eligibility is based on a determination of need. Child support received by a party for children from another relationship is not included as part of that party's gross or net income [Fam. Code § 4058(c)].

In construing these provisions, at least one reported decision has held that proceeds of an educational loan that included amounts for living expenses over and above the cost of books and tuition was not "income" [In re Marriage of Rocha (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 514, 518, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376] . Another case held that benefits from a life insurance policy were capital and not income [In re Marriage of Scheppers (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 646, 651, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 529] .

The statutory guideline scheme does not address whether inheritances may be treated as income, and the reported cases have made a distinction between welfare cases and nonwelfare cases in determining this question. In County of Kern v. Castle [County of Kern v. Castle (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1442, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874] , a paternity action, an appellate court held that a trial court's failure to consider a father's inheritance in setting the amount of child support was an abuse of discretion. The appellate court found that an inheritance itself is not income, but that interest, rents and dividends actually earned from an inheritance are income, and that a court has discretion to impute income based on the inheritance corpus or on interest the inheritance corpus could have earned if invested [County of Kern v. Castle (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1442, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874 ; cf. In re Marriage of Destein (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1385, 1393-1396, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 487 (income imputed to parent based on hypothetical rate of return on non-income-producing real estate investments held for long-term growth)]. Additionally, the appellate court held that an inheritance may be treated as income to the extent that it is used to reduce the recipient parent's living expenses, with an associated increase in funds available for child support [County of Kern v. Castle (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1442, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874 (citing Fam. Code § 4058(a)(3), which permits court to consider employee benefits in setting child support, to extent benefits reduce employee's living expenses); but see In re Marriage of Loh (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 325, 334-335, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893 (declining to follow Castle's "anything that reduces living expenses" approach to determining gross income)].

In making its ruling, the Castle court indicated that the result would be different if this were a welfare situation, in which a child was being supported by (the now former) Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) benefits and the father's actual income was insufficient to provide the minimum basic standard [County of Kern v. Castle (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1442, 1445] . The court made this statement to distinguish an older case, County of Contra Costa v. Lemon (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 683, 252 Cal. Rptr. 455 , in which the noncustodial father's lottery winnings were considered as income for purposes of calculating child support, the mother was receiving AFDC benefits, and the father worked odd jobs. The Castle court stated that if this had been a welfare case, Lemon would be controlling and the inheritance would be considered income in determining child support [County of Kern v. Castle (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1442, 1452] .

Courts have also considered the effect of nontaxable benefits on gross income. According to one court, a blanket "anything that reduces living expenses" approach to determining gross income under Fam. Code § 4058 is inappropriate [In re Marriage of Loh (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 325, 334, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893] . Rather, significant nontaxable benefits, such as free housing [see, e.g., Stewart v. Gomez (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 1748, 1754-1755, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531 (free housing on Indian reservation was income)], should be dealt with under Fam. Code § 4057, which sets forth factors rebutting the correctness of the guideline formula amount of child support [In re Marriage of Loh (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 325, 333-336, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893] . Under the latter approach, the proper course would be to first calculate the guideline formula amount in light of the parents' incomes as revealed by their tax returns, pay stubs, and income and expense declarations, and then, if application of the guidelines amount would be inappropriate or unjust, to adjust the amount upward in light of the significant nontaxable benefit of free housing [In re Marriage of Loh (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 325, 335, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893] .

In considering tax return information, a parent's gross income as stated under penalty of perjury on recent tax returns is considered presumptively correct [M.S. v. O.S. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 548, 559, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 812 ; In re Marriage of Loh (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 325, 332, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893 ; see In re Marriage of Scheppers (2000) 86 Cal. App. 4th 646, 650, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 529 (in interpreting Fam. Code § 4058, federal law is persuasive)]. However, a court may consider monies a parent receives that are not required to be included as income under federal tax law. For example, a court may consider gifts to a parent to be income for purposes of child support, as long as they bear a reasonable relationship to the traditional meaning of "income" as a recurrent monetary benefit [In re Marriage of Alter (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 718, 735-737, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 849] .

[2] Net Income; Allowable Deductions

The annual net disposable income of each parent is computed by deducting from his or her annual gross income the actual amounts attributable to the following items [Fam. Code § 4059]:

(1) The state and federal income tax liability resulting from the parties' taxable income [see Fam. Code §§ 3552(a) (in proceedings involving child support, no party may refuse to submit copies of his or her state and federal income tax returns to court), 4059(a) (amount deducted must bear accurate relationship to tax status of parties and amount actually payable); In re Marriage of McQuoid (1991) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1357-1358, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 737 (amounts not deductible unless actually paid); see County of Tulare v. Campbell (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 847, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 902 (despite provisions of Fam. Code § 4057.5, when parent has remarried and is filing joint tax returns, trial court may properly consider couple's combined gross income for limited purpose of determining parent's actual tax liability); see also In re Marriage of Drake (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1163, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466 ; In re Marriage of Carlsen (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 212, 218-219, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630)];

(2) Deductions attributed to the employee's contribution or the self-employed worker's contribution under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA), or an amount not to exceed that allowed under FICA for persons not subject to FICA, as long as the deducted amount is used to secure retirement or disability benefits for the parent;

(3) Deductions for mandatory union dues and retirement benefits, if they are required as a condition of employment;

(4) Deductions for health insurance or health plan premiums for the parent and for any children that the parent has an obligation to support and deductions for state disability insurance premiums;

(5) Any child or spousal support actually being paid by the parent under a court order, to or for the benefit of any person who is not a subject of the child support order to be established by the court (i.e., for children of previous relationships and former spouses); In the absence of a court order, any child support actually being paid, not to exceed the amount established by the guideline, for natural or adopted children of the parent who are not residing in that parent's home, who are not the subject of the order to be established by the court, and of whom the parent has a duty of support;

(6) Job-related expenses, if allowed by the court after consideration of whether the expenses are necessary, the benefit to the employee, and any other relevant facts [see Stewart v. Gomez (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 1748, 1755, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531 (meal allowance paid by vocational training program should not be treated as deduction)];

(7) A deduction for hardship, as defined by Fam. Code § 4070 et seq. and applicable published appellate court decisions (§ 224.105[3]).

[3] Hardship Deduction

If a parent is experiencing extreme financial hardship due to justifiable expenses resulting from certain statutorily enumerated circumstances [see Fam. Code § 4071], the court may allow certain income deductions to accommodate those circumstances [Fam. Code §§ 4059(g), 4070]. A hardship deduction is not a deduction from child support, but from gross income as used in the formula to compute child support [Fam. Code § 4059(g)].

Circumstances evidencing hardship include extraordinary health expenses for which a parent is financially responsible, and uninsured catastrophic losses [Fam. Code § 4071(a)(1)]. Also included are the minimum basic living expenses of either parent's natural or adopted children from other marriages or relationships for whom the parent has the obligation to support and who reside with the parent [Fam. Code § 4071(a)(2)]. The court, on its own motion or on a party's request, may allow these income deductions as necessary to accomodate the living expenses after making the health and catastrophe deductions provided for under Fam. Code § 4071(a)(1) [Fam. Code § 4071(a)(2)].

The hardship deduction is available only with regard to the factors specifically listed in Fam. Code § 4071 [Fam. Code §§ 4059(g), 4070; see County of San Diego v. Sierra (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 126, 132, 265 Cal. Rptr. 749 (construing substantially equivalent prior law)]. It has been held that a parent's business losses do not constitute financial hardship within the meaning of the statute [In re Marriage of Norvall (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 1055-1057, 237 Cal. Rptr 770 (construing substantially equivalent prior law)]. Also, the statute does not permit a hardship deduction for expected back tax liability [In re Marriage of McQuoid (1991) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1359-1360, 12 Cal. Rptr 2d 737 (construing substantially equivalent prior law)], or for a parent's voluntary support of his or her own parents and siblings [In re Marriage of Butler & Gill (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 462, 466, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 781 (involving voluntary support of elderly parent); County of San Diego v. Sierra (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 126, 132, 265 Cal. Rptr. 749 (construing substantially equivalent prior law)], or stepchildren [Haggard v. Haggard (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1570-1571, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 638] . However, certain of these otherwise unrecognized factors may possibly constitute special circumstances rebutting the presumption that the formula amount of support is the correct amount under Fam. Code § 4057(b)(5) [see County of Lake v. Antoni (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 1102, 1105, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804 ; cf. Haggard v. Haggard (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1570-1571, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 638 ; but see In re Marriage of Butler & Gill (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 462, 466-469, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 781 (father's support of his elderly mother was not "special circumstance")].

If deductions for hardship expenses are allowed, the court must state in writing or on the record the reasons supporting the deductions, documenting the underlying facts and circumstances and setting forth the amount of deductions allowed. Whenever possible, the court must specify the duration that any deduction will be in effect [Fam. Code § 4072; In re Marriage of Paulin (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1378, 1382, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 314] . In considering whether to allow a hardship deduction, and in determining the amount of any such deduction, the court must be guided by the goals set forth in the expression of legislative intent in with regard to the guideline [Fam. Code § 4073; see § 224.102].

PRACTICE TIP:

Counsel and trial courts sometimes are careless about making a specific finding of "extreme financial hardship" before calculating and subtracting a hardship deduction. As the court points out in Paulin, "... a hardship deduction is not a foregone conclusion on the birth of new children; ..." [In re Marriage of Paulin (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1378, 1382, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 314] . Sometimes, as in Paulin, the court of appeal may find facts in the record to support such a finding, but this cannot be counted on [In re Marriage of Carlsen (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 212, 218, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630] . Counsel requesting a hardship deduction should be careful to obtain an oral finding by the court on the record as required by the statute.

In applying a hardship deduction for children of other relationships who reside with the parent [see Fam. Code § 4071(a)(2)], the court must seek equity between competing child support orders [Fam. Code § 4059(g)]. The maximum hardship deduction for each such child may be equal to, but may not exceed, the support awarded to each child subject to the order [Fam. Code § 4071(b)]. For purposes of calculating this deduction, the amount of support per child established under the guideline is the total amount ordered divided by the number of children, and not the scaled amount under the multi-child multiplier factor in Fam. Code § 4055(b)(8) [Fam. Code § 4071(b)].

The Judicial Council may develop tables to reflect the maximum hardship deduction [Fam. Code § 4071(c)]. The Judicial Council also must develop a formula for calculating the maximum hardship deduction and submit it to the legislature for consideration on or before July 1, 1995 [Fam. Code § 4059(g)].

Note that under former Fam. Code § 4071.5, no hardship was deemed to exist and no deduction from income could be granted if aid payments were being made under certain public assistance provisions on behalf of a child or children of the parent seeking the deduction, even if the payments were being received by the other parent. The constitutionality of this statute had become the subject of a split of authority within California appellate courts [see, e.g., City and County of San Francisco v. Freeman (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 869, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132 ; City and County of San Francisco v. Garnett (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 845, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 924 ; Moreno v. Draper (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 886, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 82 ; County of Orange v. Ivansco (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 328, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 886] . However, the statute was repealed, operative January 1, 2000.

[4] Annual Averaging and Seasonal Adjustments

A parent's annual net disposable income must be divided by 12 to reflect the monthly net disposable income. If the monthly net-income figure does not accurately reflect the actual or prospective earnings of the parties at the time the determination of support is made, the court may adjust the amount appropriately [Fam. Code § 4060]. The court may also adjust the child support order as appropriate to accommodate seasonal or fluctuating income of either parent [Fam. Code § 4064]. For example, under these provisions a court may consider bonuses that a parent receives [see Fam. Code § 4058(a)(1) (bonuses are part of parent's gross income)] when it appears likely the bonuses will continue [M.S. v. O.S. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 548, 554-557, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 812 (employee parent can petition for modification of child support order if bonuses do not continue)].

The guideline formula does not permit one parent's income to be a fluctuating variable while the other parent's income is assumed to be static [In re Marriage of Hall (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 313, 317, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 772] . The formula is predicated on knowing what both parents' income is in nominal status dollars at the time the order is made [In re Marriage of Hall (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 313, 317-318]. This is not to say that the court cannot make an order that accounts for the seasonal or fluctuating income of either parent; it can under Fam. Code § 4064. Such an order cannot be called the "guideline" amount, however, under Fam. Code § 4055 [In re Marriage of Hall (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 313, 318 fn. 3, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 772] .

[5] Earning Capacity

Earning capacity refers to what a parent could earn, rather than what he or she actually is earning. The California Supreme Court has defined earning capacity as the income that a spouse is reasonably capable of earning based on his or her age, health, education, marketable skills, employment history, and the availability of employment opportunities [In re Marriage of Simpson (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 225, 234, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 411, 841 P.2d 931] . In addition, earning capacity may be based on income that could be derived from income-producing assets, such as rental property [Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 657, 671, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 74 P.3d 166 (court may take into account earnings from invested assets in computing child support); In re Marriage of Williams (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1221, 1235, 58 Cal. Rptr. 877 (under earning capacity doctrine court has discretion to impute reasonable rate of return on supporting parent's underutilized or non-income-producing investment assets in order to calculate guideline child support in best interests of child); In re Marriage of Dacumos (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 150, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159 (court properly imputed rental income to husband, based on both fair market rental value of husband's properties and his equity in those properties)].

Under the statewide uniform guideline, the court may, in its discretion, consider the earning capacity of a parent in lieu of that parent's income, if consistent with the best interests of the child [Fam. Code § 4058(b); Stewart v. Gomez (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 1748, 1753, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531 ("in lieu of" language in statute does not preclude considering capacity to earn a wage while party is receiving disability benefits in appropriate case); see Fam. Code § 4057.5(b) (earning capacity with regard to consideration of income of subsequent spouse or partner), discussed in § 224.105[6]]. Earning capacity may even be based on non-income producing assets, such as real estate investment property acquired for long-term capital growth, by imputing a hypothetical rate of return to the assets [In re Marriage of Destein (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1385, 1391-1394, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 487 ; see In re Marriage of Williams (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1221, 1236, 58 Cal. Rptr. 877 (court attributed assumed 3 percent rate of return on obligor's investment assets in calculating child support); In re Marriage of De Guigne (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1362-1364, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 430 (enhanced child support based on value of inherited ancestral estate); In re Marriage of Cheriton (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 269, 288-289, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 755 (enhanced child support based on receipt of stock options)]. Under Fam. Code § 4058(b), a court may also impute interest income that reasonably could have been earned but that was not actually earned [Brothers v. Kern (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 126, 131, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 239 (statute does not exclude capacity to earn interest from "earning capacity," for example, by limiting that term to capacity to earn wages)].

By this provision, the guideline restores the discretionary earning-capacity standard that predated the Agnos Child Support Standards Act of 1984, which was construed as making consideration of earning capacity mandatory [County of Yolo v. Garcia (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1771, 1782, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 681 ; see former Civ. Code § 4721(a) (providing that court shall consider earning capacity of both parents to extent consistent with best interests of children); In re Marriage of Regnery (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1367, 1371, 263 Cal. Rptr. 243 (and cases cited therein); see also In re Marriage of Nolte (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 966, 973, 236 Cal. Rptr. 706 (construing Agnos Act as changing prior rule)]. However, the guideline does not provide for when earning capacity should be considered, other than through the general charge that it must be in the best interests of the child [In re Marriage of Simpson (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 225, 231 n.3, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 411, 841 P.2d 931] .

Prior case law has not been consistent in applying an earning-capacity standard. One line of cases has followed the so-called Philbin rule [see Philbin v. Philbin (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 115, 96 Cal. Rptr. 408 ; see In re Marriage of Padilla (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1212, 1216-1217, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 555 (revisiting Philbin and determining that it never required rule bearing its name)], in which it was held that reliance on earning capacity is warranted only if it appears that there has been a deliberate attempt to avoid financial family responsibilities by refusing to seek or accept gainful employment [Philbin v. Philbin (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 115, 121, 96 Cal. Rptr. 408 ; see County of Yolo v. Garcia (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1771, 1781, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 681 (refusing to impute earning capacity at minimum wage to AFDC recipient parent because there was no evidence that she was shirking work); In re Marriage of Meegan (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 156, 163, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 799 (spousal support only)]. Under this rule, willful avoidance has been considered a condition precedent to applying earning capacity in all cases. Quitting a high paying job is insufficient, alone, to impose the standard absent evidence that the parent's intent was to avoid financial responsibility [In re Marriage of Williams (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 57, 62-63, 202 Cal. Rptr. 10] .

Relying on the changes to the child support statute discussed above, appellate decisions began in 1993 to affirm decisions imputing income to parents without regard to their subjective motivation for reducing available income, looking instead to the payor's objective ability and opportunity to earn [In re Marriage of Hinman (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 988, 998-999, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 383 ; see In re Marriage of LaBass & Munsee (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1331, 1338, 1338 n.2, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 393] . In a case dealing with enforcement of a child support order through contempt, the California Supreme Court approved this line of cases and specifically found that trial courts have discretion to consider earning capacity in all cases in which it is in the child's best interest to do so [Moss v. Superior Court (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 396, 424, 950 P.2d 59 ; cf. United States v. Ballek (9th Cir. 1999) 170 F.3d 871, 875 (citing Moss on involuntary servitude issue)]. Under the more recent approach taken by the courts, imputed income is not limited to cases of bad faith failure to earn, because such a limitation would conflict with the law's policy of making the child's best interests the leading consideration in child support cases [Brothers v. Kern (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 126, 132, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 239].

In considering earning capacity cases in the future, courts should be expected to continue to look to a three-prong test that was first advanced in In re Marriage of Regnery (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1367, 1372, 263 Cal. Rptr. 243 , although it was not discussed or cited in Moss [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Berger (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1070, 1079-1080, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 766 ; In re Marriage of LaBass & Munsee (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1331, 1337-1338, 1338 n.2, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 393 ; In re Marriage of Hinman (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 988, 995, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 383 ; In re Marriage of Paulin (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1378, 1383, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 314 ; In re Marriage of Padilla (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1212, 1217-1219, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 555 ; In re Marriage of Ilas (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1630, 1634-1639, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 345] . Under this test, earning capacity is composed of (1) the ability to work, including factors such as age, occupation, skills, education, health, background, work experience and qualifications; (2) the willingness to work, shown by good-faith efforts, due diligence, and meaningful attempts to secure employment; and (3) the opportunity to work, shown by an employer willing to hire [In re Marriage of Regnery (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1367, 1372, 263 Cal. Rptr. 243 (construing Agnos Act)]. When the first and third factors (ability and opportunity to work) are present, but the payor is unwilling to work, the court held it was appropriate to apply the earning capacity standard to "deter the shirking of one's family obligations" [In re Marriage of Regnery (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1367, 1373, 263 Cal. Rptr. 243 (construing Agnos Act)].

In exercising its discretion to consider earning capacity under the Regnery standard, the court may consider all relevant circumstances, and take into account arguments concerning the payor's motivations or the reasonableness of the payor's actions in light of all of the relevant circumstances [In re Marriage of Hinman (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 988, 999, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 383] . Thus, for example, if an obligor does not have an opportunity to work because he or she is incarcerated, the earning capacity test is not satisfied and cannot be used to determine child support payments [El Dorado County Dept. of Child Support Services v. Nutt (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 990, 993, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 523 ; In re Marriage of Smith (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 74, 77, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537 ; State of Oregon v. Vargas (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1123, 1127, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229] . Furthermore, if a supporting parent wants to change careers, he or she may only do so if there are other means to pay support at the level commensurate with past income [In re Marriage of Ilas (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1630, 1639, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 345] . As stated by one court, once persons become parents, their desires for self-realization, self-fulfillment, personal job satisfaction, and other commendable goals must be considered in the context of their responsibilities to provide for their children's reasonable needs. If they wish to lead a simpler life, change professions, or start a business, they may do so, but only if they satisfy their primary responsibility to provide for their children [In re Marriage of Padilla (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1212, 1220, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 555] .

Conversely, a parent might be acting entirely in bad faith, but earning capacity would not necessarily be shown. If either ability to work or opportunity to work is lacking, earning capacity is absent, and the application of the standard is inappropriate [In re Marriage of Regnery (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1367, 1373, 263 Cal. Rptr. 243 (construing Agnos Act); see State of Oregon v. Vargas (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1123, 1127, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229] . However, the opportunity to work is not limited to the parent's chosen or preferred occupation, but extends to any job opportunity that will allow the parent to pay child support [In re Marriage of Regnery (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1367, 1376, 263 Cal. Rptr. 243 (construing Agnos Act)].

Earning capacity generally may not be based on an extraordinary work regimen. Instead, it must be based on an objectively reasonable work schedule as it would exist at the time when the determination is made. A reasonable regimen is dependent on all relevant circumstances, including the choice of jobs available within a particular occupation, working hours, and working conditions. Established employment norms such as the 40-hour work week are not controlling, but are pertinent to the determination [In re Marriage of Simpson (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 225, 236, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 411, 841 P.2d 931 ; cf. County of Placer v. Andrade (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1393, 1396-1397, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 739 (discussing propriety of considering bonus and overtime pay)].

The amounts asserted for earning capacity must have some tangible evidentiary foundation [see In re Marriage of Graham (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1321, 1327-1328, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 685 (evidence did not support hourly rate court used to impute income)].

Earning capacity may not be considered as a way of circumventing the exclusion of certain public assistance benefits from income for child support purposes under Fam. Code § 4058(c). Furthermore, at least one case has held that a parent-recipient of such benefits who chooses not to work in order to remain in the home with young children cannot be ordered to pay child support with regard to other children based on what he or she could have earned had he or she chosen to work [County of Yolo v. Garcia (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1771, 1776-1780, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 681 (involving county action for reimbursement of foster care costs related to one child of mother who remained in home with other children)]. Such an order is in violation of the policy expressed in the eligibility requirements of that particular benefit program (the former AFDC program), that single parents of very young children are exempt from work registration requirements [County of Yolo v. Garcia (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1771, 1777-1778 ; see Welf. & Inst. Code § 11320.3(b)(6)]. Whether that holding can be applied to parents receiving benefits under the successor program to AFDC is presently unclear.

Another earning-capacity issue is whether a trial court may impute additional income to a self-employed parent whose past earnings substantially exceeded current earnings. Some appellate courts have imputed additional income in that situation, even if the supporting parent did not act in bad faith in engaging in a lesser-paying occupation. For example, in one case, the Philbin rule was dismissed as incorrect and inapplicable dicta (because bad faith was not even addressed there) and income was imputed to the parent in setting child support, despite the fact that the trial judge found that there was no bad faith in his leaving a higher paying position to open his own lower-paying business. The appellate court in that case also noted, in dictum, that a former income level should not always be imputed to a parent who leaves a high-paying job for one paying less, if the child's reasonable needs are satisfied, but that dictum has in turn been criticized as reviving a pre-Guideline, and now-abandoned, construct. The Philbin rule or dictum, nonetheless, appears to have been laid to rest in such cases [see In re Marriage of Padilla (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1212, 1217-1219, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 555 ; In re Marriage of Ilas (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1630, 1634-1639, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 345 ; see also 1995 Cal. Fam. Law Monthly 320-321, December 1995 (Matthew Bender), commentary of Grace Ganz Blumberg and Hon.

Roderic Duncan].

Two somewhat older decisions that are still sometimes cited in support of the Philbin rule are In re Marriage of Williams and In re Marriage of Everett [see In re Marriage of Williams (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 57, 202 Cal. Rptr. 10 ; In re Marriage of Everett (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 846, 269 Cal. Rptr. 917] . Williams is distinguished as having been decided before the enactment of the predecessor of Fam. Code § 4058(b) [see In re Marriage of Ilas (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1630, 1638, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 345] . Everett is distinguished by the fact that it had been 12 years since the father had held the prior job and in the interim he had recovered from drinking problems. The trial court held it was not in the children's best interests to impute a higher income [see In re Marriage of Everett (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 846, 862, 269 Cal. Rptr. 917] .

[6] Income of Subsequent Spouse or Nonmarital Partner

Under Fam. Code § 4057.5, the income of a parent's subsequent spouse or nonmarital partner may not be considered in determining or modifying child support, except in an extraordinary case in which excluding that income would lead to extreme and severe hardship to any child subject to the child support order. If the court finds extreme and severe hardship, it must also consider whether including the income would lead to extreme and severe hardship to any other child supported by the parent or by the parent's subsequent spouse or nonmarital partner [Fam. Code § 4057.5(a)]. An extraordinary case may include a parent who voluntarily or intentionally quits work or reduces income, or who intentionally remains unemployed or underemployed and relies on a subsequent spouse's income [Fam. Code § 4057.5(b); § 224.105[5]]. An uncodified section of this legislation expressed the Legislature's intent to prohibit the use of any formula or local court guideline in considering new-mate income [see Stats. 1994, ch. 1140, § 3].

A court can consider the subsequent spouse's income only if the child would suffer extreme and severe hardship. It must look to the needs of the child, not the needs or conduct of the parents [In re Marriage of Knowles (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 35, 41, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 199] .

Although under Fam. Code § 4008 the obligor parent's community interest in the subsequent spouse's income may be looked to in discharge of his or her child support obligation, a court may not consider the subsequent spouse's community income in calculating the child support obligation [In re Marriage of Knowles (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 35, 41, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 199] . Fam. Code § 4057.5 prohibits use of the community income attributable to the subsequent spouse, whether the income is earned or is a return on investment, in calculating the child support obligation [In re Marriage of Knowles (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 35, 41-42, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 199] .

The statute treats both the obligor parent and obligee parent the same [see Fam. Code § 4057.5(a)(1),(2)], which may be constitutionally required [see In re Marriage of Dade (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 621, 630-633, 281 Cal. Rptr. 609 (finding prior law on subsequent spouse or partner income constitutional by construing it as permitting consideration with regard to either parent)].

Although a court may not generally consider the income of a parent's new spouse or nonmarital partner in determining the amount of child support, a court may do so for the limited purpose of determining a parent's actual tax liability under Fam. Code § 4059. This tax liability may then be taken into account in determining the parent's real net disposable income [In re Marriage of Drake (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1163, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466 ; County of Tulare v. Campbell (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 847, 856, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 902 ; In re Marriage of Carlsen (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 212, 218-219, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630] . As explained in County of Tulare v. Campbell, which involved the inclusion of the income of a supporting (obligor) parent's new spouse--who filed a joint tax return with the parent--the parent's deduction for tax liability is calculated as follows: (1) the incomes of the parent and new spouse are combined to obtain an adjusted gross income, (2) the couple's tax liability on the adjusted gross income is calculated, and (3) the tax liability is apportioned between the parent and the new spouse "in direct proportion to their respective gross incomes." Thus, the actual tax liability of the parent, not the couple's total tax bill, is deducted from the parent's gross income [

County of Tulare v. Campbell (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 847, 856, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 902] .

If any portion of the income of either parent's subsequent spouse or nonmarital partner is allowed to be considered, discovery for the purposes of determining income must be based on W-2 and 1099 income tax forms, unless the court determines that application would be unjust or inappropriate [Fam. Code § 4057.5(c)]. Also, the court must allow a hardship deduction based on the minimum living expenses for one or more stepchildren of the party subject to the order [Fam. Code § 4057.5(d); see § 224.105[3]]. Fam. Code § 4057.5 was enacted by 1993 legislation, operative January 1, 1994 [see Stats. 1993, ch. 935, § 2]. Its enactment constitutes cause to bring a motion for modification of a child support order entered before that date [Fam. Code § 4057.5(e); see § 224.170 et seq.].

Previously, the guideline treated subsequent spouse or partner income as a rebuttal factor, focused not on the amount of the income, but on its effect on the financial condition of the parent. The court could raise or lower the amount of support if either parent's subsequent spouse or nonmarital partner had income that helped meet that parent's basic living expenses, thereby increasing the parent's disposable income available to spend on the children [see former Fam. Code § 4057(b)(3); In re Marriage of Tapia (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 628, 630-632, 259 Cal. Rptr. 459 ; see also Harris v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 661, 667-668, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564] .

Also under case law predating the guideline, a custodial parent's remarriage, alone, was not a change of circumstance justifying a modification of child support [Burns v. Burns (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 714, 715-716, 12 Cal. Rptr. 68] , but the remarried parent's acquisition of a community property interest in the earnings and property of the subsequent spouse was a change of circumstances [see In re Marriage of Havens (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1014-1015, 178 Cal. Rptr. 477 (court may not impose sole burden of support on noncustodial parent after custodial parent acquires community property interest in income of subsequent spouse)]. Conceptually, it might still be argued that a parent's community property interest in the earnings of a subsequent spouse is the income of the parent and not the income of the spouse that is excluded from consideration under Fam. Code § 4057.5. However, in the absence of marriage, there is no new community, so any such approach would not apply equally to subsequent spouses and nonmarital partners [see In re Marriage of Tapia (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 628, 630-632, 259 Cal. Rptr. 459] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationImputed IncomeGeneral OverviewFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.106

§ 224.106 Factor to Reflect Custodial Time

[1] Operation of H Factor

The child support formula set forth in Fam. Code § 4055(a) (see § 224.104) does not distinguish between custodial and noncustodial parents, but rather between higher-earning and lower-earning parents [see Fam. Code § 4055(a),(b)(1)]. The effect of the parents' custodial plan is controlled by formula factor H, which represents the approximate percentage of time that the higher earner has or will have primary physical responsibility for the children compared to the other parent [see Fam. Code § 4055(b)(1)(D); In re Marriage of Katzberg (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 974, 981-983, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 157 (child's time at boarding school imputed to parent with primary physical responsibility for child)]. The H factor adjusts child support according to the respective amounts of time that each parent has physical custody of the children. In cases in which parents have different time-sharing arrangements for different children, H must be the average of the approximate percentages of time that the higher earner spends with each child [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(1)(D)].

The H factor comes into play in two places in the formula. First, the high earner's income is reduced by the amount of total parental income that corresponds to H percent [see Fam. Code § 4055(a)]. Here, the H factor reduces child support because it is presumed that parents' spend their own funds on children proportionate to their custodial time (the time-share reduction) [see Fam. Code § 4057(b)(4) (rebuttal factor if parent is not contributing to needs of children at level commensurate with custodial time)]. The H factor is also a component in determining formula component K, the percentage of both parents' income that is allocated to child support. After the base figure for K percent is computed, it is multiplied by 1 plus H percent (if H is less than or equal to 50 percent) or 2 minus H percent (if H is greater than 50 percent) [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(3)]. Here, the H factor increases child support.

[2] When H Must Be Zero or 100

In any default proceeding in which proof is by affidavit [see Fam. Code § 2336], or in any proceeding for child support in which a party fails to appear after being duly noticed, H percent must be set at zero in the formula if the higher earner is the noncustodial parent or at 100 if the higher earner is the custodial parent ["Noncustodial" and "custodial" are undefined in the guideline, but presumably for this purpose, a noncustodial parent is one with less than 50 percent primary physical responsibility for the child and a custodial parent is one with more than 50 percent] if there is no evidence presented demonstrating the percentage of time that the noncustodial parent has physical custody of the children [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(6)].

H is not set in this manner, however, if the moving party in a default proceeding is the noncustodial parent or if the party who fails to appear after being duly noticed is the custodial parent. A statement by the party not in default as to the percentage of time the noncustodial parent has primary physical responsibility for the children is deemed sufficient evidence [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(6)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild CustodyAwardsPhysical CustodyGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.107

§ 224.107 Income Level Adjustment Factor K

Formula factor K represents the percentage of parental income that is to be allocated to child support [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(1)(B)]. K is multiplied by the higher earner's income (after making the time-share reduction, as discussed in § 224.106[1]) to find the amount of child support that is to be paid by one parent to the other. The guideline is based further on the assumption that the obligee parent will also spend K percent of his or her income for the benefit of the children [see Fam. Code § 4053(i)]. Thus, the K factor determines what percentage of total parental income is to be allocated to the children.

The base K brackets are as follows [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(3)]:

Total Net Disposable Monthly Income	K
$0-800	0.20 + TN/16,000
$801-6,666	0.25
$6,667-10,000	0.10 + 1000/TN
Over $10,000	0.12 + 800/TN

The base K bracket amount is multiplied by either 1 + H, if H is less than or equal to 50 percent (that is, if the higher earner has less actual physical custodial time than the lower earner) or by 2 - H, if H is greater than 50 percent (that is, if the higher earner has more actual physical custodial time than the lower earner) [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(3)].

For example, if H equals 20 percent and the total monthly net disposable income of the parents is $1,000, K = (1 + 0.20) x 0.25; K = 0.30. If H equals 80 percent and the total monthly net disposable income of the parents is $1,000, K = (2 - 0.80) x 0.25; K = 0.30 [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(3)]. The H-increase multiplier may go as high as 1.5 if both parents have primary physical responsibility for the child approximately 50 percent of the time (H = 50 percent).

Although the statute sets forth four income brackets for base K [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(3)], K is actually a sliding scale for total parental income up to $800 and as total parental income increases over $6,666. Only in the bracket for income in the range between $801 and $6,667 (at which base K is 0.25) does K remain constant no matter what the income level is within the bracket. In the low bracket, the total parental income (TN) is a component of the numerator of the fraction that determines K percent. Thus, as TN increases within this bracket, K increases correspondingly, and child support goes up. In all other brackets, TN is a component of the denominator of the fraction that determines K percent. In these brackets, K decreases as TN increases. That does not mean that the dollar amount of child support decreases; only that the percentage of TN allocated to children decreases. The incremental increases in child support are more gradual as total parental income rises over $6,666.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.108

§ 224.108 Determining Who Is Obligor

The guideline formula [Fam. Code § 4055(a); § 224.104] operates from the logical starting point that if both parents had exactly equal income and a 50/50 time share, neither would pay any child support to the other. One parent becomes the obligor and the other parent the obligee under the formula according to the operation of disparities in their income and custodial time-sharing.

If the amount calculated under the formula results in a positive number, the higher earner pays that amount to the lower earner. If the amount calculated under the formula results in a negative number, the lower earner pays the absolute value of that amount to the higher earner [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(5)]. Absolute value means the dollar amount, disregarding the minus sign [see Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary 46 (Merriam-Webster 1988)].

A negative number will result if the higher earner's percentage of total parental income is less than his or her H factor (custodial time). For example, suppose a mother has $3,000 net monthly income (HN = 3000) and 80 percent physical custody (H = 0.8). Father has $2,000 net monthly income (TN = 5000) and 20 percent custody. Because the mother is the higher earner, the formula works off of her income and H factor, even though she is the "custodial" parent. The mother's HN ($3,000) is actually 0.6(TN). Thus:

CS = K [0.6(TN) - 0.8(TN)]

Because 0.8 times TN must be greater than 0.6 times TN, the formula will generate a negative number, and the father will pay the child support to the mother.

As seen from this example, a negative number can occur only if the higher earner is the primary custodial parent. As long as H is less than 0.5, there can never be a negative number because HN will always be greater than 0.5 of TN.

The formula does not always keep the child support obligation on the "noncustodial" parent, that is, the parent whose physical custodial time is less than half (H < 0.5). If the higher earner is a custodial parent but has income that is a higher percentage of the parents' total income than the H factor, a positive number will result and the "custodial" higher earner will pay child support to the lower earner.

For example, say father has $4,000 net monthly income (HN = 4000) and 60 percent physical custody (H = 0.6). Mother has $1,000 net monthly income (TN = 5,000) and 40 percent physical custody. Dad's 4000 HN is also 0.8(TN). This time:

CS = K [0.8(TN) - 0.6(TN)]

Because 0.8 of TN must be greater than 0.6 of TN, the formula will generate a positive number and the father will pay the child support to the mother, even though he has more custodial time.

The above examples demonstrate the following principle of the formula: if HN/TN >> H, then the higher earner is the obligor; if HN/TN < H, then the lower earner is the obligor. In other words, if the higher earner's percentage share of the parents' total net monthly income is greater than his or her custodial time-share percentage, then he or she will pay the child support [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Carter (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1024, 1028, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (mother with 50 percent of custodial time and approximately 60 percent of total income owed support to father)]. If the higher earner's time share is greater than his or her percent of total net monthly income, then he or she will receive the child support.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.109

§ 224.109 Adjustment Factor for More Than One Child

If more than one child is to be supported, the amount of child support under the guideline is not determined merely by multiplying the number of children times the amount of support for one child. Instead, the amount of support for one child under the guideline is multiplied by the following applicable factor [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(4)]:

2 children	1.6
3 children	2
4 children	2.3
5 children	2.5
6 children	2.625
7 children	2.75
8 children	2.813
9 children	2.844
10 children	2.86

Unless the court orders otherwise or unless there are different time-sharing arrangements for different children, the order must allocate the support amount so that the amount of support for the youngest child is the amount of support for one child, and the amount for the next youngest child is the difference between that amount and the amount for two children, with similar allocations for additional children [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(8)]. This provision does not apply to cases in which there are different time sharing arrangements for different children or in which the court determines that the allocation would be inappropriate in a particular case [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(8)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.110

§ 224.110 Low-Income Adjustment

When the obligor's net disposable income per month is less than $1,000, there is a rebuttable presumption that the obligor is entitled to a low-income adjustment. The presumption may be rebutted by evidence showing that the application of the low-income adjustment would be unjust and inappropriate in the particular case. In determining whether the presumption is rebutted, the court must consider the principles underlying the guideline [see Fam. Code § 4053, discussed in § 224.102], and the impact of the contemplated adjustment on the respective net incomes of the obligor and the obligee [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(7)].

If the presumption applies, the maximum amount of the adjustment is determined by a mathematical computation. The child support amount otherwise determined under the guideline is reduced by an amount that is no greater than the amount calculated by multiplying the guideline amount by a fraction, the numerator of which is 1,000 minus the obligor's net monthly disposable income, and the denominator of which is 1,000 [Fam. Code § 4055(b)(7)]. Note, however, that in one reported decision, a trial court reduced a parent's obligation to zero when he clearly had virtually no disposable income left after applying the formula. Thus, it would appear that a court may, in such an extreme case, reduce a parent's support obligation below the low income adjustment calculated under the above formula [City and County of San Francisco v. Miller (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 866, 869, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 887] .

If the court uses a computer to calculate the child support order (see § 224.114), the computer program may not automatically default affirmatively or negatively on whether a low-income adjustment is to be applied. If the low-income adjustment is applied, the computer program may not provide the amount of the adjustment. Instead, it must ask the user whether or not to apply the adjustment, and if answered affirmatively, the program must provide the range of the adjustment [Fam. Code § 4055(c)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceInferences & PresumptionsPresumptionsEvidenceInferences & PresumptionsRebuttal of PresumptionsFamily

LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.111

§ 224.111 Factors Rebutting Presumption of Correctness

[1] In General

The presumption that the amount of child support under the guideline formula [see Fam. Code § 4055(a)] is the correct amount is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof. It may be rebutted by admissible evidence showing that application of the guidelines would be unjust or inappropriate in a particular case because one or more of the rebuttal factors set forth in the guideline is found to be applicable by a preponderance of the evidence. The court must find, in writing or on the record, that application of the formula would be unjust or inappropriate in the particular case and that the revised amount is in the best interests of the children [Fam. Code § 4057(b)]. A finding that the presumption has been rebutted must be consistent with the principles set forth in Fam. Code § 4053 and the court must make, in writing or on the record the findings required by Fam. Code § 4056(a) for deviating from the guideline [Fam. Code § 4057(b); see § 224.102]. Unless the court finds that a rebuttal factor applies, it must order the formula amount [In re Marriage of Carter (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1024, 1028-1029, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1] . The court's determination should not be made in an unreported conference in the judge's chambers because such a procedure deprives the parents of their right under Fam. Code § 4057(b) to have the court consider whether the guideline result should be varied under the circumstances of their case [In re Marriage of Hall (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 313, 319-320, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 772] .

[2] Agreement of Parties

Unless prohibited by federal law, the parents may stipulate to a child support amount, subject to the court's approval [Fam. Code § 4065(a)]. The Judicial Council form for use as a stipulation to establish child support is set forth in see § 224.210.

The presumption that the amount of child support computed under Fam. Code § 4055(a) is the correct amount may be rebutted by such a stipulation [Fam. Code § 4057(b)(1)].

The court may not approve a stipulated child support agreement below the guideline formula amount unless the parties declare all of the following [Fam. Code § 4065(a); In re Marriage of Laudeman (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 1009, 1014,

112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378 (Fam. Code § 4065(a) declarations required only when stipulated amount is below guideline amount)]:

(1) They are fully informed of their rights concerning child support.

(2) The order is being agreed to without coercion or duress.

(3) The agreement is in the best interests of the children involved.

(4) The needs of the children will be adequately met by the stipulated amount.

(5) The right to support has not been assigned to the county and no public assistance application is pending.

Further, a stipulated agreement of child support is not valid unless the local child support agency has joined in the stipulation by signing it in any case in which the agency is providing services pursuant to Fam. Code § 17400. The local child support agency must not stipulate to a child support order below the guideline amount if the children are receiving assistance under the CalWORKs program, if an application for public assistance is pending, or if the parent receiving support has not consented to the order [Fam. Code § 4065(c)].

In addition, by stipulation, the parties may require the support obligor to designate an account for the purpose of paying the child support obligation by electronic funds transfer under Fam. Code § 4508 [Fam. Code § 4065(b)].

However, a stipulation between the parties to engage in binding arbitration on future child support issues will be void as against public policy to the extent it purports to deprive the court of jurisdiction to modify child support [In re Marriage of Bereznak and Heminger (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1062, 1067-1070, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 351] .

[3] Rental Value of Family Residence Subject to Deferred Sale

The presumption that the amount of child support computed under the guideline formula [Fam. Code § 4055(a)] is the correct amount may be rebutted if (1) the family residence in which the children will continue to reside is subject to a deferred-sale order under Fam. Code § 3800 et seq., and (2) the rental value of the residence exceeds the mortgage payments, homeowner's insurance, and property taxes. The amount of any such adjustment may not be greater than the excess amount [Fam. Code § 4057(b)(2)]. The decision to grant an offset for net fair rental value is a matter within the equitable discretion of the trial court, to be decided on a case-by-case basis [In re Marriage of Braud (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 797, 819, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179] .

[4] Extraordinarily High Income of Obligor Parent

[a] Statutory Standard for Rebuttal

The presumption that child support computed under the statewide uniform guideline formula [Fam. Code § 4055(a)] is correct may be rebutted by admissible evidence showing that application of the formula would be unjust or inappropriate in the particular case [Fam. Code § 4057(b)] because (1) the obligor parent under the formula has an "extraordinarily high income," and (2) the amount determined under the formula would exceed the needs of the children [Fam. Code § 4057(b)(3); see In re Marriage of Hubner (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 175, 180-188, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646] .

[b] "Extraordinarily High Income" Not Defined

The term "extraordinarily high income" in Fam. Code § 4057(b)(3) is not statutorily defined, and the reported cases have frequently dealt with situations in which the obligor parent stipulated that he or she was an extraordinarily high earner (see § 224.111[4][c][ii]). In practice, trial courts appear to at least take into account the wealth of the obligor parent in relation to the community at large, although there arguably are persons whose incomes are so high as to be considered "extraordinarily high" by any reasonable objective standard.

[c] Consideration of Obligor's Income

[i] Right to Discover Obligor's Income

Current case law provides that, absent a stipulation between the parties on the appropriate amount of support, the party requesting support and the court are entitled to know the obligor parent's actual income, regardless of his or her admission of an ability to pay "any reasonable child support order." Assumptions on which a support order are founded must have a legitimate factual basis regarding the amount of the high earner's actual annual income, rather than on a fictional annual income invented for the purposes of the guideline calculation. Before a court may exercise its discretion to determine that a deviation from the guideline is warranted under the circumstances, it must first calculate the amount of support required by strict adherence to the guideline. Only after the guideline formula is computed on a legitimate evidentiary basis concerning the obligor parent's income may a court conclude that the guideline amount exceeds the child's reasonable needs [In re Marriage of Hubner (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 175, 184, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646] .

[ii] Effect of Obligor's Stipulation to Pay Support

Cases initially interpreting the "extraordinarily high income" factor held that the support guideline does not prohibit a practice by which a high income obligor would stipulate to the ability to pay any "reasonable" amount of child support, and then refuse to provide further financial information--the court then determining what amount is reasonable "under the circumstances" [Estevez v. Superior Court (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 423, 428-431, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 470 ; see White v. Marciano (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1029-1032, 235 Cal. Rptr. 779 (rejecting relevance of evidence of obligor's net worth and opulent life-style)].

However, that practice now appears to be limited to cases in which both parties agree on the appropriate amount of child support [In re Marriage of Hubner (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 175, 186, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646] . When the parties dispute the amount of the high earner's income and cannot agree on the child support amount, the court must make the least beneficial income assumptions against the obligor parent [In re Marriage of Hubner (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 175, 186, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646 ; Johnson v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 68, 74-75, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 624 ; see § 224.111[4][c][iii]]. In one case, for example, a professional basketball player stipulated that his annual income "exceeds $1 million" and that he could pay any reasonable amount. The appellate court in that case found that the appropriate amount of support will differ "depending on whether [the payor] earns $12 million a year instead of the $1 million income that he has conceded." It ruled that limited discovery to determine the payor's income would be necessary if reliable information on that subject was not available from other sources. If the payor resisted discovery on determining his net disposable income as required by the child support formula, the appellate court held that the trial court should make the "least favorable assumptions on the liability side of the net income equation" and then go forward on determining a reasonable amount of support [Johnson v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 68, 75, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 624] .

[iii] Findings on Obligor's Income

In ordering child support under the statewide guideline, a court may not set a completely arbitrary figure that bears no relationship to the child's needs or the obligor's income [McGinley v. Herman (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 936, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 921 ; see In re Marriage of Chandler (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 124, 129, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109] . The court must at least make findings of the approximate amount of the payor's net disposable income, of the point at which support under the formula exceeds the child's needs--and correspondingly, the point at which the payor's net disposable income becomes extraordinarily high--as well as the reasons why the support awarded is consistent with the child's interests [Johnson v. Superior Court (1998)) 66 Cal. App. 4th 68, 74-75, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 624 ; McGinley v. Herman (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 936, 945, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 921 ; see In re Marriage of Kerr (1999) 77 Cal. App. 4th 87, 97, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 374 (involving award of income from future exercise of stock options) In re Marriage of Chandler (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 124, 129, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109 ; see also Fam. Code § 4056(a)(3)].

[d] Obligor's Burden of Proof in Rebutting Guideline Amount

Case law holds that an obligor parent who seeks to rebut the statutory formula and gain protection from disclosure of detailed financial information as an "extraordinary high earner" must show (1) he or she has an extraordinarily high income, and (2) the guideline support amount exceeds the child's needs. When an extraordinarily high-earning obligor seeks a downward departure from a presumptively correct guideline amount, it is that parent's burden to establish that (1) application of the formula would be unjust or inappropriate, and (2) the lower award would be consistent with the child's best interests [In re Marriage of Hubner (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 175, 183, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646 (citing County of Stanislaus v. Gibbs (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1417, 1424 ; Fam. Code §§ 4053(k), 4056(a)(3), 4057(b)(3))].

[e] Deferred Income Plans Not Authorized by Statute

There is no provision in California law for ordering child support in the form of a deferred income plan, such as a trust for college, in the case of extremely high income obligors. At least one reported decision has rejected the court's use of such a device [In re Marriage of Chandler (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 124, 129, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109] . However, the parties may agree to such a plan [see Family Code § 3587 see also In re Marriage of Chandler (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 124, 129, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109] .

[5] Contribution Not Commensurate With Custodial Time

The presumption that the amount of child support computed under the guideline formula [Fam. Code § 4055(a)] is the correct amount may be rebutted if a parent is not contributing to the needs of the children at a level commensurate with that parent's custodial time [Fam. Code § 4057(b)(4)]. The assumption behind the time-share reduction of the H factor [see Fam. Code § 4055(a),(b)(1)(D); § 224.106] is that a parent incurs child-related costs in exercising periods of physical custody (including brief visitation periods), and that the amount of these expenses increases as custodial time increases. This rebuttal factor allows the court to adjust support if the assumption proves not to be true in the particular case.

[6] Special Circumstances

The presumption that the amount of child support computed under the guideline formula [Fam. Code § 4055(a);§ 224.104] is the correct amount may be rebutted if application of the formula would be unjust or inappropriate due to special circumstances in the particular case. These special circumstances include, but are not limited to, (1) cases in which the parents have different time-sharing arrangements for different children; (2) cases in which both parents have substantially equal time-sharing of the children and one parent has a much lower or higher percentage of income used for housing than the other parent; and (3) cases in which the children have special medical or other needs that could require child support above the formula amount [Fam. Code § 4057(b)(5)].

This rebuttal factor vests trial courts with considerable discretion to approach unique cases on an ad hoc basis. For example, a very low net disposable income after payment of guideline child support [City and County of San Francisco v. Miller (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 866, 869, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 887] or high consumer debt may be such special circumstances on appropriate facts [see County of Lake v. Antoni (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 1102, 1105-1106, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804 (no abuse of discretion in treating consumer debt incurred in supporting second family over 9 years as special circumstance lowering support); see also City and County of San Francisco v. Miller (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 866, 869, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 887 (zero support award affirmed when payor would be left with just $14 a month to live on after paying guideline child support and his $450 monthly rent); cf. In re Marriage of Gigliotti (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 518, 527, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 367 (increased costs in connection with visitation due to child's moving to Massachusetts are not special circumstance); but cf. County of Stanislaus v. Gibbs (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1417, 1426-1427, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 819 (limiting high consumer debt factor in Antoni, to situations in which it is established that debts incurred were for "living needs such as clothing and household items" and requiring consideration of household income in addition to that of payor in determining severity of "financial bind")]. However, the fact that a child support award will effectively curtail an obligor parent's discretionary spending ability is not an "injustice" within the meaning of this rebuttal factor, given the strong presumption in the law that parental income levels, coupled with custodial time, and not parental discretionary spending patterns, will deterermine the support level, absent some special and unusual circumstance resulting in injustice [In re Marriage of Denise & Kevin C. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 1100, 1102, 1106-1107, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 508] . Furthermore, at least one court has held that this factor is not so broad as to allow the court to consider noneconomic factors, such as the family background or the child's development and character. The court may not seek to address equitable issues outside of the economic sphere within which the child support guideline is structured [see County of San Diego v. Guy (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1325, 1334-1336, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222 (trial court incorrectly lowered child support in public benefits reimbursement proceeding due to developmental difficulties with adopted child that had caused parents considerable personal hardship)].

There may be some divergent appellate views as to whether an obligor's voluntary support of stepchildren may be a special circumstance justifying lower support. In County of Lake v. Antoni, lower support was affirmed under what is now Fam. Code § 4057(b). The fact that the obligor was supporting a stepchild was one factor that the court noted in support of the order [County of Lake v. Antoni (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 1102, 1105-1106, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804 ; see City and County of San Francisco v. Miller (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 866, 869, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 887] . In another case, the court specifically denied lower support on account of voluntary support of stepchildren, but noted that in a special case, the provisions construed in Antoni appear to allow a variance from the formula in recognition of a spouse's support of children of a new marriage who would otherwise be without support. Nevertheless, the court went on to state that in the absence of an adoption, the obligor's principal obligation must be to the children whom he or she has a duty to support [Haggard v. Haggard (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1572, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 638] .

A parent's support of his or her own elderly mother or father is not a "special circumstance" under Fam. Code § 4057(b)(5). The fact that an aging parent looks to an adult child for support is not a circumstance that is so unusual or extraordinary as to diminish that adult's obligation to his or her own children [In re Marriage of Butler & Gill (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 462, 468-469, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 781 (no showing that father would have any acute difficulty in providing full guideline level of support to his children and support for his elderly mother; exceptional circumstances for deviation from guidelines not shown)]. Moreover, a "special circumstance" finding may not be used to circumvent other provisions of the child support law that expressly or impliedly provide to the contrary [In re Marriage of Corman (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1492, 1499, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 880 (considering payment of nonmodifiable spousal support as impliedly excluded from payee's gross income); County of Stanislaus v. Gibbs (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1417, 1426, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 819 (considering expenses of subsequent children contrary to intent of Fam. Code § 4071.5); In re Marriage of Wood (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 1059, 1066-1070, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 236 (consideration of new mate income despite provisions of Fam. Code § 4057.5)].

According to one court, the special circumstances rebuttal factor also permits trial courts to adjust guideline formula child support amounts upward to take into account significant nontaxable benefits, such as free housing, that reduce a parent's living expenses without being included in the parent's gross income under Fam. Code § 4058. In such cases, the guideline formula amount is arguably too low, making application of the guidelines formula amount unjust or inappropriate [In re Marriage of Loh (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 325, 333-336, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893] .

Trial courts have broad discretion to determine when special circumstances apply, because Fam. Code § 4057(b) uses the words "including, but not limited to" instead of cataloguing all of the special circumstances in which the guideline formula amount would be inappropriate. Thus, based on special circumstances, a child support award may exceed guideline amounts, as long as the award is consistent with the principles of Fam. Code § 4053, which designates interests of the children as a top priority and provides that parents should support their children at a level commensurate with their ability [Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 657, 671, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 74 P.3d 166 (court may deem parent's assets to be "special circumstance"); In re Marriage of De Guigne (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1361, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 430 (drastic reduction in children's lifestyle constituted special circumstance that justified support award in excess of obligor's total income); see Brothers v. Kern (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 126, 133, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 239 (special circumstances found when child's standard of living could not be sustained if guideline figure were used, and father would no longer be contributing support via visitation and his own standard of living would not be impacted because of his incarceration); see also M.S. v. O.S. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 548, 558-561, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 812 (third party's payment of parent's attorney's fees directly to attorney, are not part of parent's income or cash flow available for child support, but may be considered as circumstance potentially warranting upward departure from guideline amount); In re Marriage of Berger (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1070, 1083-1085, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 766 (father's decision to defer his salary was "special circumstance" warranting departure from guideline amount of support)]. In such cases, the trial court is not required to tie the elevated child support level to specific unmet needs of the children [In re Marriage of De Guigne (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1364-1365, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 430] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceInferences & PresumptionsPresumptionsEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.112

§ 224.112 Additional Support Amounts

[1] Mandatory and Discretionary Add-Ons

The court must order as additional child support any child-care costs related to employment or to reasonably necessary education or training for employment skills [Fam. Code § 4062(a)(1); see In re Marriage of Gigliotti (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 518, 525 n.2, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 367 (noting unresolved issue as to whether court may consider reasonable costs of child care as opposed to actual costs); see also In re Marriage of Tavares (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 620, 629, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 39 (equity favors preserving option of childcare payments made to other parent rather than directly to provider and that, when so ordered, convenience and certainty of fixed amount outweigh any benefit of accounting or itemized statement when child is not in daycare or costs fluctuate)]. The court must also order as additional child support the reasonable uninsured health care costs for the children [Fam. Code § 4062(a)(2)]. There is a rebuttable presumption that the costs actually paid for the uninsured health care needs of the children are reasonable [Fam. Code § 4063(d)]. For further discussion of payment of medical expenses, § 224.112[3].

The court may order as additional child support costs related to the educational or other special needs of the children and travel expenses for visitation [Fam. Code § 4062(b)]. One court has suggested in a footnote that the provision for travel expenses is confusing because these expenses are usually incurred by the noncustodial parent who is paying support. The court stated that calling the provision an add-on is a misnomer because such expenses might justify a reduction, rather than an increase, in support. It proposed the possibility that the provision was actually a negative add-on [see In re Marriage of Fini (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1033, 1039 n.5, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749] . There is language in one case that might be read for the proposition that only additions to (and not deductions from) the guideline amount for travel are authorized [In re Marriage of Gigliotti (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 518, 527-529, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 367] . However, another court rejected this language as dicta, and held that in light of the public policy to assure minor children frequent and continuing contact with both parents after the parents have separated [see Fam. Code § 3020], there may be times when visitation expenses can be a sufficient reason to vary the guideline amount in move-away cases, either upward or downward, according to the circumstances [Wilson v. Shea (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 887, 898, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 880] . Another possible application is an add-on for the situation in which the higher earner is the primary custodial parent, and the lower earner does not have sufficient funds to travel to exercise visitation [see § 224.108].

In a "move-away situation," the Supreme Court has stated the trial court has broad discretion to allocate transportation expenses to the custodial parent or to require that parent to provide the transportation of the children to the noncustodial parent's home [In re Marriage of Burgess (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 25, 40, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444, 913 P.2d 473] .

However, a court does not have the discretion to fashion other "add-ons" in the absence of statutory authority. Thus, for example, a court's order purporting to convert a common attorney's fee award into additional child support under Fam. Code § 4062 contravenes both the letter and spirit of the Family Code, and is erroneous as a matter of law [Boutte v. Nears (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 162, 166, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 655 ; see also In re Marriage of De Guigne (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1367, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 430 (rental deposit/furniture payment not authorized as additional child support)].

[2] Manner of Allocating Costs

Add-on amounts under Fam. Code § 4062 are considered additional child support [Fam. Code § 4061]. If any of these costs are ordered, they will be divided one-half to each parent unless either parent requests a different apportionment and presents evidence that a different apportionment would be more appropriate [Fam. Code § 4061(a); see Fam. Code § 4061(b), (d) (mandatory formulas for apportioning add-ons); In re Marriage of De Guigne (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1367-1368, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 430 ; In re Marriage of Lusby (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 459, 473, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263] . Whether to make a different apportionment is within the discretion of the court based on the evidence, at least if the incomes of the parents are not greatly divergent [In re Marriage of Fini (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1033, 1039-1040, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749] . Alternate formulas for apportioning these costs are programmed into the major child support software programs.

[3] Additional Considerations Regarding Health Care Costs

Fam. Code § 4062(a)(2) provides for mandatory child support add-ons [see In re Marriage of Fini (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1033, 1039, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749] with regard to uninsured medical expenses [see § 224.112[1]]. Fam. Code § 4063 provides additional requirements with regard to such an order. In making an order regarding uninsured medical expenses, the court must (1) advise each parent, in writing or on the record, of his or her rights and liabilities, including financial responsibilities, and (2) include in its order the time period for a parent to reimburse the other parent for the reimbursing parent's share of the expenses [Fam. Code § 4063(a), expressly referring to Fam. Code § 4062(a)(2)]. However, this statute also addresses the role of health insurance coverage in the payment of the child's medical expenses [Fam. Code § 4063(e)-(g)]. Therefore, the statute actually presents a set of rules regarding how a child's medical expenses are to be paid, regardless of whether or not third-party-payor coverage is available.

Unless there has been an assignment of rights under Welf. & Inst. Code § 11477, if either parent accrues or pays costs covered by an order regarding for uninsured medical expenses, that parent must provide the other parent with an itemized statement of the costs within a reasonable time, but not more than 30 days after accruing the costs [Fam. Code § 4063(b)]. If a parent has already paid all of these costs, that parent must provide proof of payment and a request for reimbursement of his or her court-ordered share to the other parent [Fam. Code § 4063(b)(1)]. If a parent has paid his or her court-ordered share of the costs only, that parent must provide proof of payment to the other parent, request the other parent to pay the remainder of the costs directly to the provider, and provide the reimbursing parent with any necessary information about how to make the payment to the provider [Fam. Code § 4063(b)(2)]. The other parent must make the reimbursement or pay the remaining costs within the time period specified by the court, or, if no period is specified, within a reasonable time not to exceed 30 days from notification of the amount due, or according to any payment schedule set by the health care provider for either parent, unless the parties agree in writing to another payment schedule or the court finds good cause for setting another payment schedule [Fam. Code § 4063(b)(3)]. If the reimbursing parent disputes a request for payment, that parent must pay the requested amount and thereafter may seek judicial relief. If the reimbursing parent fails to pay the other parent, the other parent may seek judicial relief [Fam. Code § 4063(b)(4)].

Either parent may file a noticed motion to enforce an order regarding payment of uninsured medical expenses. The court may issue any enforcement orders authorized by the Family Code [see Fam. Code § 290], and may also award filing costs and reasonable attorney's fees if it finds that either party acted without reasonable cause regarding his or her obligations [Fam. Code § 4063(c); In re Marriage of Rothrock (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 223, 236-237, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 881 (Section 4063 does not prohibit party from seeking reimbursement in case of failure to timely present itemization of costs)].

In determining any right to reimbursement, there is a rebuttable presumption that the costs actually paid for the uninsured health care needs of the children are reasonable [Fam. Code § 4063(d)]. However, under most circumstances, a parent is not free to incur uninsured medical expenses for a child and obtain reimbursement from the other parent if health care insurance coverage was actually available for the cost.

The health care insurance coverage, including, but not limited to, coverage for emergency treatment, provided by a parent as required by a court order (see § 224.130), is to be used at all times, consistent with the requirements of that coverage, unless the other parent can show that the health care insurance coverage is inadequate to meet the child's needs [Fam. Code § 4063(e)(1)]. Further, if that coverage designates a preferred health care provider, that preferred provider must be used at all times, consistent with the terms and requirements of that coverage [Fam. Code § 4063(f)(1)].

And, if either parent obtains health care insurance coverage in addition to that provided as required by court order, that parent bears sole financial responsibility for the costs of that additional coverage and the costs of any care or treatment obtained under it in excess of the costs that would have been incurred under the health care insurance coverage provided for in the court order [Fam. Code § 4063(e)(2)]. Further, if either parent uses a health care provider other than the preferred provider inconsistent with the terms and requirements of the court-ordered health care insurance coverage, the parent obtaining that care bears the sole responsibility for any nonreimbursable health care costs in excess of the costs that would have been incurred under the court-ordered health care insurance coverage had the preferred provider been used [Fam. Code § 4063(f)(2)].

In order to ensure that the health care needs of the child are met, the above limitations on incurring medical expenses that might otherwise be covered by insurance are subject to some exceptions [see Fam. Code § 4063(e), (f), which are expressly made subject to Fam. Code § 4063(g)]. In ruling on a motion for reimbursement or payment of uninsured health care costs, the court must consider all relevant facts, including, but not limited to, the following [Fam. Code § 4063(g)]:

> (1) The geographic access and reasonable availability of necessary health care for the child that complies with the terms of the health care insurance coverage paid for by either parent as required by a court order;
>
> (2) The necessity of emergency medical treatment that may have precluded the use of the health care insurance, or the preferred health care provider required under the insurance, provided by either parent as required by a court order;
>
> (3) The special medical needs of the child; and
>
> (4) The reasonable inability of a parent to pay the full amount of reimbursement within a 30-day period and the resulting necessity for a court-ordered payment schedule.

The Judicial Council has promulgated an informational form entitled Notice of Rights and Responsibilities--Health Care Costs and Reimbursement Procedures [see Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-192]. It is set forth in § 224.217.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTypesMedical SupportFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.113

§ 224.113 Required Findings

[1] In General

At the request of either party, the court must make appropriate findings with respect to the circumstances on which a child support order is based [Fam. Code § 4005; but see In re Marriage of Katzberg (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 974, 984, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 157 (court that applies guideline formula not required to state any reasons for making award)]. When the court evaluates support using the statewide guideline, deviations from the guideline cannot be justified by the court simply by making an estimate. If the court intends to use its discretion to vary from the guideline amount, it must make an accurate computation of that amount, then actually use its discretion and state reasons for the variance on the record [Wilson v. Shea (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 887, 898-899, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 880 ; In re Marriage of Whealon (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 132, 144-145, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 559] .

To comply with federal law, the court must state, in writing or on the record, the following information whenever the court is ordering an amount for child support that differs from the statewide uniform guideline's formula [Fam. Code § 4056(a); see Wilson v. Shea (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 887, 899, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 880 (reversal required because trial judge was obligated to recalculate child support using guidelines, to reflect custodial parent's relocation and put in her nominal income); In re Marriage of Hall (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 313, 318-319, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 772 (reversal required because court increased child support without making required statement of justification for deviating from formula guideline); In re Marriage of Gigliotti (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 518, 526-527, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 367 (reversal required because court lowered child support based on "special circumstances" without making required findings); but see In re Marriage of Laudeman (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 1009, 1014, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378 (statements required by Fam. Code § 4056(a) are irrelevant when stipulated child support order is for more than amount established by guideline formula)]:

(1) The amount of support that would have been ordered under the formula;

(2) The reasons the amount of support ordered differs from the formula amount; and

(3) The reasons the amount of support ordered is consistent with the best interests of the children.

At the request of any party, the court must state in writing or on the record the following information used in determining the guideline amount of child support [Fam. Code § 4056(b)]:

(1) The net monthly disposable income of each parent;

(2) The actual federal income tax filing status of each parent (for example, single, married, married filing separately, or head of household and number of exemptions);

(3) Deductions from gross income for each parent; and

(4) The approximate percentage of time that each parent has primary physical responsibility for the children compared to the other parent.

For a form for a child-support order that contains all of these required findings, see § 224.217.

Although no specific procedure under the Family Code exists for a dissatisfied party to follow when a trial court takes a child support matter under submission and then enters a written child support judgment without supplying the information required by Fam. Code § 4056, one appellate court has suggested that the party has at least two possible alternatives. One is to appeal and seek a reversal, and if this course of action is chosen, the standard appellate procedures and time frames apply. Another alternative, in that court's opinion, is to bring the matter to the trial court's attention and ask the court to supply the missing information. If this is done, because there is no specific time frame set forth in the Family Code, the general rules of civil practice and procedure apply, under which--if the missing information constitutes both a finding and the trial court's reasons--the time limit for a motion to vacate an erroneous decision or for a motion for a new trial would be appropriate [see Rojas v. Mitchell (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1445, 1452, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 ; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 659, 663a]. However, it also appears that the procedures and times for requesting a statement of decision may be followed. While these were not mentioned by the appellate court, they are available in child support litigation and would appear to be a viable alternative [see Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1590; 1997 Cal. Fam. Law Monthly 19 (January 1997; commentary of Bernard Wolf, Esq.)].

[2] Family Support

Orders and stipulations otherwise in compliance with the guideline may designate as "family support" an unallocated total sum for support of the spouse and any children, without specifically labeling all or any portion as "child support," as long as the amount is adjusted to reflect the effect of additional income tax deductibility. The amount of the order must be adjusted to maximize the tax benefits for both parents [Fam. Code § 4066; see In re Marriage of Schulze (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 519, 522-528, n.12 532, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 488] . Family support is discussed further in Ch. 227, Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawChild SupportProceduresFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of ChildrenPublic Health & Welfare LawSocial SecurityAssistance to FamiliesChild & Spousal Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.114

§ 224.114 Software Used to Determine Support

Because of the formidable mathematics of computing child support under the statewide uniform guideline, there are several computer software products that are now routinely used by California judges and attorneys for the purpose of computing the amount of child support under the guideline's formula [see In re Marriage of Williams (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1221, 1225 n.5, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 877 (use of DissoMaster to calculate guideline child support). On and after January 1, 1994, no court may use any computer software to assist in determining the appropriate amount of support unless the software conforms to rules of court adopted by the Judicial Council prescribing standards for the software. These standards must ensure that the product performs in a manner consistent with the applicable statutes and rules of court for the determination of the amount of support [Fam. Code § 3830(a)]. All courts must permit the parties or their counsel to use any software that the Judicial Council has certified under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.275 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.275(j)(2)].

The numbers that are entered into the software program for income and other variables must be supported by a proper evidentiary foundation [see County of Alameda v. Moore (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1422, 1426, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of ChildrenPublic Health & Welfare LawSocial SecurityAssistance to FamiliesChild & Spousal Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 224.115-224.129

[Reserved]

§§ 224.115[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
F. Health Care Coverage

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.130

§ 224.130 Mandatory Element of Support if Available

In any case in which a current child support order is issued, the court must require that health insurance coverage for the supported children be maintained by either or both parents if the insurance is available at no cost or at reasonable cost to the parent [Fam. Code § 3751(a)(2); see Fam. Code § 4006]. The cost of health insurance is in addition to the amount of child support otherwise ordered under the uniform statewide child support guideline [Fam. Code § 3753].

"Health insurance coverage" is broadly defined, and specifically includes vision care and dental care coverage. Health insurance coverage also includes arrangments under which health care services are provided by a fee-for-service health maintenance organization (HMO), or any other type of health care delivery system, to the dependent children of an "absent parent" [Fam. Code § 3750]. The meaning of the term "absent parent" in this context is unclear. The term is not defined, and does not appear to be the equivalent of "noncustodial" parent in its plain-meaning sense. Even if the term is being used to refer to a noncustodial parent, such a limitation is contrary to the statutory scheme. The statute otherwise allows the court to require either parent or both parents to maintain health insurance coverage, regardless of their custodial plan [see Fam. Code § 3751(a)(2)]. The court may order the most comprehensive and appropriate coverage, regardless of to which parent the coverage is available. This parent is then allowed a deduction from income for the cost of the coverage in computing the child support obligation under the statewide uniform guideline [see Fam. Code § 4059(d); see also Fam. Code § 3753]. The court may even order both parents to provide coverage if the available plans provide different benefits [see Fam. Code § 3751(a)(2)]. Thus, there is no logic in extending the definition of health insurance more broadly with regard to the "absent" parent, but not with regard to the other parent.

The cost of health insurance coverage is rebuttably presumed to be reasonable if it is employment-related group health insurance or other group health insurance, regardless of the service-delivery mechanism. The actual cost of the health insurance to the obligor must be considered in determining whether the cost of insurance is reasonable. If the court determines that the cost of health insurance coverage is not reasonable, the court must state its reasons on the record [Fam. Code § 3751(a)(2)]. If the court determines that health insurance coverage is not available at no cost or at a reasonable cost, its order for support must require health insurance coverage to be obtained when it becomes available at no cost or at a reasonable cost. The parent must apply for coverage at that time [Fam. Code § 3751(b)]. The court's order for support must also require the parent who, at the time of the order or subsequently, provides health insurance coverage for a supported child to seek continuation of coverage for the child on attaining the limiting age for a dependent child under the health insurance coverage if the child meets the criteria specified in Health & Saf. Code § 1373 or Ins. Code §§ 10277 or 10278, and coverage is available at no cost or at a reasonable cost [Fam. Code § 3751(b)].

Child support orders must require both the support obligee and obligor to inform the other of the availability of insurance through his or her employer and to provide policy information [see Fam. Code § 3752.5].

Special notice and information-sharing requirements concerning health insurance coverage apply if the local child support agency has been designated as the assigned payee for child support [see Fam. Code §§ 3752, 4200]. When a local child support agency is providing support enforcement services under Fam. Code § 17400, and the court has ordered a parent to provide health insurance coverage, the agency must serve the employer with a national medical support notice [Fam. Code § 3773(a), (b); see Fam. Code § 3760(d) ("national medical support notice" defined)]. The national medical support notice may be combined with the order/notice to withhold income for child support [Fam. Code § 3773(b)]. It has the same force and effect as a health insurance coverage assignment order [Fam. Code § 3773(c)]. The obligor has the same right to move to quash or terminate a national medical support notice as the obligor has to quash or terminate a health insurance coverage assignment order [Fam. Code § 3773(d)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTypesMedical SupportFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
F. Health Care Coverage

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.131

§ 224.131 Assignment of Right to Reimbursement

Under prior law, in any proceeding in which there was an order requiring either party to provide coverage under a health plan to a dependent, the court had to order the covered party to assign to the other party the rights that he or she had to reimbursement, excepting any rights to reimbursement for payments actually made by the covered party [former Fam. Code § 3781]. Operative January 1, 1998, however, the California statutes requiring such an assignment of reimbursement rights were repealed as part of legislation intended to maintain California's compliance with related federal law [Stats. 1997, ch. 599, §§ 10-12]. Prior law may have continuing relevance, however, with respect to any assignments of reimbursement rights that were made before the repeal of the authorizing statutes.

For a related discussion of provisions (operative January 1, 1998) that impose duties on insurers with respect to permitting noncovered parents (or custodial parents or providers) to make claims for covered services without a covered parent's approval and requiring insurers to make payment directly to those noncovered parents, see § 224.133 [see Fam. Code § 3751.5(c)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTypesMedical SupportFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
F. Health Care Coverage

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.132

§ 224.132 Health Insurance Coverage Assignment Order

On the application of a party or district attorney in any proceeding in which the court has ordered either or both parents to maintain health insurance coverage under Fam. Code § 3750 et seq. [see § 224.130], the court must order the employer of the obligor parent or any other person providing health insurance to the obligor, including vision and dental care coverage [see Fam. Code § 3760(b)] to enroll the supported children in the health insurance plan available to the obligor and to deduct the appropriate premium or costs from the wages or earnings of the obligor. This order is called a "health insurance coverage assignment order" [Fam. Code §§ 3760(b), (c), 3761(a), (b)(1)]. It is for use if the obligor is in "default" in the sense that he or she has been ordered to provide health insurance coverage through employment, but has failed to enroll in the plan [see Fam. Code § 3761(b)(1)]. The total amount that may be withheld from earnings for all obligations, including health insurance assignments, is limited by Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(a) or 15 U.S.C. § 1673, whichever is less [Fam. Code § 3761(c)]. These statutes involve restrictions on earnings withholding under wage garnishment.

For the Judicial Council form of application, see § 224.212.

The court may decline to make a health insurance coverage assignment order on a finding of good cause, as specified by statute, not to make the order [Fam. Code § 3761(a)]. The obligor parent may also move to quash an order for a health insurance coverage assignment [Fam. Code § 3765(a); see Fam. Code §§ 3764(b) (service of order), 3765(b) (notice requirements)]. On a finding of error on any of the grounds specified by statute [see Fam. Code § 3765(a)], the court must quash the assignment [Fam. Code § 3765(c)].

On notice of motion by the obligor, the court must terminate a health insurance coverage assignment order if any of the following conditions exist: (1) a new order has been issued for the maintenance of health care coverage that is inconsistent with the existing assignment; (2) the employer or other provider has discontinued health coverage to the obligor; (3) the court determines that there is good cause to terminate the assignment [see Fam. Code § 3765]; or (4) a child for whom the health insurance coverage has been obtained has died or become emancipated [Fam. Code § 3770].

No employer may use a health insurance coverage assignment order as grounds for refusing to hire a person or for discharging or taking disciplinary action against an employee. An employer in violation of this prohibition may be assessed a civil penalty [Fam. Code § 3769; see generally Wilcox, California Employment Law, ch. 60 (Matthew Bender)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTypesMedical SupportFamily LawChild SupportProceduresFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
F. Health Care Coverage

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.133

§ 224.133 Qualified Medical Child Support Orders Under ERISA

A provision of ERISA, the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, requires all group health plans to provide benefits in accordance with the applicable requirements of any "qualified medical child support order" (QMCSO) [29 U.S.C. § 1169(a)(1)]. A qualified medical child support order creates or recognizes the existence of a child's right to, or assigns to a child the right to, receive benefits for which a parent is eligible as a participant or beneficiary under a group health plan [29 U.S.C. § 1169(a)(2)(A); see 29 U.S.C. § 1169(a)(2)(C)]. It must be set forth in a judgment, decree, or order, including approval of a settlement agreement, that provides for child support with respect to a child of a participant under a group health plan, or provides for health benefit coverage to such a child. It must be made under state domestic relations law (including community property law) and relate to benefits under the plan [29 U.S.C. § 1169(a)(2)(B)]. Certain information must be specified in the order [see 29 U.S.C. § 1169(a)(3)], and there are certain restrictions on what may be ordered [see 29 U.S.C. § 1169(a)(4)]. If all conditions are met, the child must be considered to be a beneficiary under the plan [29 U.S.C. § 1169(a)(7)].

A qualified medical child support order is deemed to apply to each group health plan that has received the order, from which the plan participant or beneficiary is eligible to receive benefits and with respect to which the other requirements of the applicable federal statute are met [29 U.S.C. § 1169(a)].

Implementing California legislation places more specific limitations on employers and insurers. An employer or insurer may not deny enrollment of a child under the health coverage of a child's parent on any of the following grounds: (1) the child was born out of wedlock; (2) the child is not claimed as a dependent on the parent's federal income tax returns; (3) the child does not reside with the parent or in the insurer's service area [Fam. Code § 3751.5(a)].

When a parent is required by a court or administrative order to provide health insurance coverage for a child and the parent is eligible for family health coverage through his or her employer doing business in California or an insurer, the employer or insurer must: (1) permit the parent to enroll under health insurance coverage any child otherwise eligible to enroll for that coverage without regard to any enrollment period restrictions; (2) if the parent is enrolled in health insurance coverage but fails to apply to obtain coverage for the child, enroll the child under such health coverage on presentation of a court order or request by the district attorney, the other parent or person having custody, or the Medi-Cal program; (3) not disenroll or eliminate coverage for the child unless the employer has eliminated family health insurance coverage for all of its employees, or the employer or insurer is provided with satisfactory written evidence that the order is no longer in effect or is terminated under Fam. Code § 3770 or that the child is or will be enrolled in other comparable health insurance coverage [Fam. Code § 3751.5(b)].

In addition, under current law, in any case in which health insurance coverage is provided for a child pursuant to a court or administrative order, the insurer must: (1) provide any information, including, but not limited to, the health insurance membership or identification card regarding the child, the evidence of coverage and disclosure form, and any other information provided to the covered parent about the child's health care coverage, to the noncovered parent having custody of the child or any other person having custody of the child and to the local child support agency when requested by the agency; (2) permit the noncovered parent or person having custody, or a provider with the approval of the noncovered parent or person having custody, to submit claims for covered services without the covered parent's approval; and (3) make payment on claims submitted in accordance with (2) directly to the noncovered parent or person having custody, the provider, or to the Medi-Cal program. Payment on claims for services to the child must be made to the covered parent for claims submitted or paid by the covered parent [Fam. Code § 3751.5(c)]. For a form of a qualified medical child support order under ERISA, see § 224.219.

The insurer must notify the covered parent and noncovered parent having custody of the child or any other person having custody of the child, in writing, at any time that health insurance for the child is terminated [Fam. Code § 3751.5(g)]. This requirement does not apply unless the court, employer, or person having custody of the child provides the insurer with a qualified medical child support order, a health insurance coverage assignment or assignment order, or a national medical support notice [Fam. Code § 3751.5(h)].

The noncovered parent or person having custody of the child may contact the insurer by telephone or in writing and request information about the child's health insurance coverage. On receiving such a request, the insurer must provide the requested information that is specific to the child's health insurance coverage [Fam. Code § 3751.5(i)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTypesMedical SupportFamily LawChild SupportProceduresFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of ChildrenPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)Participation & VestingQualified Domestic Relations Orders

58 of 89 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
F. Health Care Coverage

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 224.134-224.149

[Reserved]

§§ 224.134[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
G. Discovery, Trial, And Orders

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.150

§ 224.150 Discovery Issues

A fair and proper determination of child support amounts under the statewide guideline will often depend on the ability of the parties and the court to obtain reliable financial information about each parent. Certain discovery statutes and privacy protections are particularly relevant to this task.

Fam. Code § 3552 provides that no party to a proceeding under the Family Code involving child support may refuse to submit copies of his or her state and federal income tax returns to the court, whether individual or joint [Fam. Code § 3552(a)]. The tax returns may be examined by the other party and are discoverable by the other party. A party also may be examined by the other party as to the contents of a tax return so submitted [Fam. Code § 3552(b)]. If the court finds that it is relevant to the case to retain the tax return, the tax return must be sealed and maintained as a confidential court record. If the court finds that the tax return is not relevant to disposition of the case, all copies of the tax return must be returned to the party who submitted it [Fam. Code § 3552(c)].

As discussed in § 224.105[6], the income of a parent's subsequent spouse or nonmarital partner may be considered in determining child support only in an extraordinary case in which excluding the income would lead to extreme and severe hardship to the child [Fam. Code § 4057.5(a)]. If any portion of the income of either parent's subsequent spouse or nonmarital partner is allowed to be considered, discovery for the purposes of determining income must be based on W2 and 1099 income tax forms, unless the court determines that application would be unjust or inappropriate [Fam. Code § 4057.5(c)].

There are privacy limitations on discovery of financial records of the subsequent spouse or partner [see Harris v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 661, 667-668, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564 (person does not waive right of privacy by living with child support obligor); see also Babcock v. Superior Court (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 721, 726, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 462] . Under prior law, which provided a substantially different standard for consideration of the income of subsequent spouse or partner [see former Civ. Code § 4721(e)(3) (rebuttal factor if parent's sub sequent spouse or nonmarital partner had income that helped meet parent's basic living expenses, thus increasing parent's disposable income available for children)], the right of privacy prohibited broad inquiry into the financial affairs of the subsequent spouse or partner [Harris v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 661, 668, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564] . The extent to which the right of privacy limits discovery under Fam. Code § 4057.5 is as yet undetermined.

When a parent fails to comply with a court order compelling the parent to provide discovery of his or her financial records, the court has discretion to impose sanctions against that parent, including an "issue sanction" declaring that, for purposes of calculating child support, the court will impute a specified amount as the parent's income and preclude the parent from offering any evidence to the contrary [In re Marriage of Chakko (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 104, 108-110, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 699 (court imputed income of $40,000 per month to father)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportProceduresFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
G. Discovery, Trial, And Orders

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.151

§ 224.151 Form and Time of Payment

[1] In General

In most situations, child support is provided by cash payments from the noncustodial parent to the custodial parent on a weekly or monthly basis. The obligated parent must make a child support payment before payment of any debts owing to creditors [Fam. Code § 4011].

[2] Electronic Funds Transfer

If the obligor is not subject to an earnings assignment order [Fam. Code § 4508(a); see Fam. Code § 5230, discussed in § 224.152[1]], the court may require him or her to designate an account for the purpose of paying child support by electronic funds transfer [Fam. Code § 4508(b); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 6479.5]. The order may require the obligor to deposit funds in an interest-bearing account with a financial institution, and, if such an account is ordered, to maintain funds in the account sufficient to pay the monthly child support obligation [Fam. Code § 4508(b)].

The court may order that each payment be electronically transferred to either the obligee's account or to the district attorney's account [Fam. Code § 4508(b); see Fam. Code § 4200 (payment to public officer, discussed in § 224.152[4])]. The obligor must be required to notify the obligee if the depository institution or the account number is changed. No interest accrues on any amount subject to electronic funds transfer as long as funds are maintained in the account that are sufficient to pay the monthly child support obligation [Fam. Code § 4508(b)].

[3] Payments to Providers

At least with regard to additional child support amounts for uninsured medical expenses under the statewide uniform child support guideline [see Fam. Code § 4063(a)(2), discussed in § 224.112[1]], the court would seem to have the authority to order payment directly to the provider [see Fam. Code § 4063(b), discussed in § 224.112[3]]. The court in a dissolution proceeding also has general authority to order either parent to pay an obligation, or any portion thereof, directly to a creditor if the court determines that the payment would benefit a minor child of the parties [Fam. Code §

2023; see Fam. Code § 2000 (provision limited to proceedings for dissolution of marriage, legal separation, and nullity of marriage)]. The creditor has no right to enforce the order, nor are the creditor's rights affected by this determination [Fam. Code § 2023; see also Pinson v. Cole (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 494, 496, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 113] . 1994 legislation repealed a provision that expressly allowed direct payment to providers of all child-support add-ons under Fam. Code § 4062 [see Stats. 1994, ch. 466, § 2, repealing former Fam. Code § 4063 and replacing it with new version limited to medical expenses; see also Owens v. Owens (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 705, 708, 26 Cal. Rptr. 847 ; Dougal v. Dougal (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 272, 275-276, 299 P.2d 404] . Whether this repealer was intended to prohibit the payment of child support in the form of direct payments to providers is not clear. The general provision would allow direct-payment orders under the court's jurisdiction to divide community debts, but would not necessarily provide for a child support credit for payments made to providers, such as for child care, on an ongoing basis.

[4] Transfers of Property

Under prior law, courts permitted the discharge of child support in forms other than by periodic cash payments. One court approved the parents' agreement that provided for the transfer of real property from the noncustodial parent to the custodial parent, who would hold the property in trust and use the trust income to support the children. Title to the property would revert to the noncustodial parent when the children reached majority [Nicholas v. Nicholas (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 349, 352-353, 242 P.2d 679] .

Under the statewide uniform child support guideline [Fam. Code § 4050 et seq.], such a trust arrangement might still be valid, depending on the circumstances. Stipulations regarding child support are still authorized [see Fam. Code § 4057(b)(1), 4065; see also § 224.111[2]]; however, to assure court approval, the parties should first determine the child support obligation under the guideline, considering the income from the trust property as part of the transferor's annual gross income [see Fam. Code § 4058(a)(1)]. If the amount of income that is produced by the trust is reasonably close to the guideline amount, there would seem to be no reason why the child support obligation could not be met by the transfer.

[5] Life Insurance Order

The court may order a parent to obtain or maintain life insurance for the benefit of the children as a form of child support [In re Marriage of O'Connell (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 565, 571-573, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334 (court may require insured spouse to designate children as cobeneficiaries of existing policy, without notice to current beneficiary); cf. Fam. Code § 4360(a) (express statutory authority for court order requiring life insurance, annuity, or trust as substitute for spousal support after death of supporting spouse)].

[6] Credit for Federal Disability and Retirement Benefits

If a court has ordered a noncustodial parent to pay child support, payments made by the federal government for the child's support, under the Social Security or Railroad Retirement Acts, or by the Department of Veterans Affairs, because of the obligor parent's retirement or disability that are received by the custodial parent or other child support obligee each month must be credited by the court to the amount of child support ordered to be paid by the obligor parent for that month [Fam. Code § 4504(b); see Code Civ. Proc. § 695.221 (prescribing order for crediting payments)]. If the amount of the payment exceeds the amount of child support due for the month, the excess cannot be credited against arrearages or interest accrued on arrearages [In re Marriage of Robinson (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 93, 96, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 134] . The payments do not have to be credited, however, if the court considered them in determining the amount of child support to be paid by the obligor parent. If a lump-sum payment representing payments for more than one month is received by the custodial parent or other child support obligee, credit must be given for each month covered by the lump-sum payment [see In re Marriage of Denny (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 543, 553-554, 171 Cal. Rptr. 440] .

If the noncustodial parent gives notice that he or she is receiving disability or retirement payments from the federal government under the Social Security or Railroad Retirement Acts, or from the Department of Veterans Affairs, then the custodial parent or other child support obligee has the responsibility to contact the appropriate federal agency within 30 days to verify eligibility for the child to receive payments. If the child is potentially eligible for those payments, the custodial parent or other child support obligee must apply for the benefits. Both parents have a duty to cooperate in obtaining the benefits [Fam. Code § 4504(a)].

If the custodial parent or other child support obligee refuses to apply for benefits for which the child is eligible, or fails to cooperate with the federal agency in completing the application, the noncustodial parent is credited with the amount that the child would have received. The noncustodial parent must provide evidence to the local child support agency of the amount the child would have received. The credit continues as long as the child support order is in effect and the children are eligible for the benefits [Fam. Code § 4504(c)].

Under the statewide uniform child support guideline, it does not appear that payments such as those covered by Fam. Code § 4504 would be considered as the income of the parent, because only the child and not the parent has the right to receive the benefit [see Fam. Code § 4058]. However, at least one court has held that a court has the discretion to charge monthly Social Security disability benefits paid to the child to the custodial parent's side of the guideline formula, indirectly reducing the noncustodial parent's support obligation, rather than directly crediting these benefits as part of the noncustodial parent's support payments [In re Marriage of Drake (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1162-1163, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466] . It has been held that the scope of Fam. Code § 4504 is limited to disability and retirement benefits, and that it does not provide a credit for Social Security survivor benefits paid to a child on account of the death of either the payor parent [In re Marriage of Bertrand (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 437, 439-441, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151] or the payee parent [County of Napa v. Combs (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1077, 1080-1081, 272 Cal. Rptr. 282] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportProceduresFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
G. Discovery, Trial, And Orders

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.152

§ 224.152 Enforcement Provisions Issued With Order

[1] Mandatory Earnings Assignment

For child support orders issued or modified on or after July 1, 1990, an earnings assignment order will be issued at the time of the support order [Fam. Code § 5230; see also Fam. Code § 5250 (obtaining assignment order re support orders issued or modified prior to July 1, 1990)]. However, service of the assignment order on an employer may be stayed on a showing of good cause [see Fam. Code § 5260]. For discussion of earnings assignment orders, see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement, § 259.50 et seq.

[2] Security for Payment

On a showing of good cause, the court may order a parent who is required to make child support payments to furnish reasonable security to ensure that payments will be made [Fam. Code § 4012; Brothers v. Kern (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 126, 134, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 239 (good cause shown by evidence that father planned and attempted to direct all his resources to his attorney, leaving none for child support)]. Security may be in the form of a child support security deposit account, which may be ordered without any showing of good cause [see Fam. Code § 4560 et seq.].

Other security devises, which may be ordered only on a showing of good cause, may be a child support bond [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.010 et seq.], a life insurance policy with the supported child as beneficiary [see Franklin Life Ins. Co. v. Kitchens (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 623, 631-632, 57 Cal. Rptr. 652] , or a lien on the property of the obligor parent [see Gaston v. Gaston (1896) 114 Cal. 542, 546-547, 46 P. 609 ; In re Marriage of Drake (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1163-1166, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466 (court properly issued order requiring father to pledge securities for child's benefit and placing lien on certain real property to provide for continuing support of adult disabled child); Baylis v. Baylis (1941) 48 Cal. App. 2d 674, 680, 120 P.2d 89 ; but see In re Marriage of Johnson (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 148, 160-162, 184 Cal. Rptr. 444 (lien was abuse of discretion because it lacked certainty regarding time or circumstances that would permit husband to receive portion of his share)].

For further discussion of child support security accounts and other devises for security, see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement, § 259.80 et seq.

[3] State Employee Earnings Deduction

If the court orders a state employee to pay child support, the court may order the employee to make payment through a mandatory deduction from salary or wages [Fam. Code § 4507; see Gov. Code § 1151.5]. A service charge may be assessed for this deduction [Gov. Code § 1151.5(a)]. Public agencies are authorize to establish programs for payroll deductions for purposes that include payment of child and spousal support and payment of legal judgments [Gov. Code § 1151.5(b)].

[4] Receipt of Public Assistance and Order to Pay County Officer

An order awarding custody to a parent who is receiving, or in the opinion of the court is likely to receive, public assistance [Welf. & Inst. Code § 11200 et seq.] for the maintenance of a child [see Fam. Code § 4004 (parties in child support proceedings required to reveal whether they are currently receiving or intend to apply for certain public assistance for child's maintenance)] must include a child support order under the statewide uniform child support guideline [Fam. Code § 3029]. When the court orders child support to be paid to a parent who is receiving such public assistance benefits for the maintenance of children for whom support may be ordered, the court must further direct that the support payments be made to the county officer designated by the court for that purpose, and must direct the local child support agency to appear on behalf of the welfare recipient in any proceeding to enforce the order [Fam. Code § 4200]. If the custodial parent is not receiving public assistance, the court has discretion to order payment of child support directly to the county and/or to direct the local child support agency to appear on behalf of the minor children in any proceeding to enforce the order [Fam. Code § 4201].

Once the State Disbursement Unit described in Fam. Code § 17309 is implemented, all payments (that otherwise would go to the county officer) must be directed to the Unit instead of the county officer designated by the court [Fam. Code §§ 4200(a), 4201(a)].

In any proceeding in which the court has made an order requiring the payment of child support to a person having custody of a child and the child support is subsequently assigned to the county, or the person having custody has requested the support agency to provide child support enforcement services, agency may issue a notice directing that the payments be made to the district attorney, another county office, or the State Disbursement Unit pursuant to Fam. Code § 17309. The notice must be served on both the support obligor and obligee in compliance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1013. The agency must file the notice in the action in which the support order was issued [Fam. Code § 4204].

[5] Information Regarding Current Employer

Any order for child support must include a provision requiring each parent to notify the other of the name and address of his or her current employer. If the order requires payment through an agency designated under Title IV-D of the Social Security Act [see 42 U.S.C. § 651 et seq.], the agency must also be notified [Fam. Code § 4014(a)].

In addition, in a proceeding involving child or family support, a court may require either parent to attend job training, job placement and vocational rehabilitation, and work programs, as designated by the court, at regular intervals and times and for durations specified by the court. If such an order is made, the court may also require a parent to provide documentation of participation in the programs, in a format that is acceptable to the court, in order to enable the court to make a finding that good faith attempts at job training and placement have been undertaken by the parent [Fam. Code § 3558].

[6] Information Regarding Obligor and Obligee

In cases in which the local child support agency is not providing child support services pursuant to Fam. Code § 17400, and to the extent required by federal law, and subject to applicable confidentiality provisions of state or federal law, any order for child support must include a provision requiring the child support obligor and obligee to file with the court the following information: (1) residential and mailing address; (2) Social Security number; (3) telephone number; (4) driver's license number; (5) name, address, and telephone number of the employer; and (6) any other information prescribed by the Judicial Council. The order must specify that each parent is responsible for providing his or her own information, that the information must be filed with the court within 10 days of the order, and that new or different information must be filed with the court within 10 days after any event that causes a change in the previously provided information [Fam. Code § 4014(b)]. The Judicial Council is required to develop forms for providing this information, which are be developed so as not to delay the implementation of the Statewide Child Support Registry (see § 224.153) and must be available no later than 30 days prior to the implementation of the Registry [Fam. Code § 4014(d)].

In cases in which the local child support agency is not providing child support services pursuant to Fam. Code § 17400, once a child support registry is operational (see § 224.153), any order for child support must include a provision requiring the obligor and obligee to file and keep updated this information with the child support registry [Fam. Code § 4014(c)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementIncome WithholdingFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
G. Discovery, Trial, And Orders

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.153

§ 224.153 Statewide Registry for Child Support Orders

The Statewide Automated Child Support System (SACSS)--which has been delayed in implementation--or its replacement, may be used to provide a single statewide registry of all child support orders in California [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16575(b)]. The Judicial Council is required to develop the necessary forms to implement the statewide child support registry. These forms may be in electronic form or in hard copy, as appropriate. The forms must be developed so as not to delay implementation of the registry, and must be available no later than 30 days before its implementation [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16577(a)]. The clerk of each court must provide this information to the department or the registry from each new or modified child support order, including child support arrearage orders, within 20 days [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16576(b)]. The department must enter this information into the registry within 10 days of receipt [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16576(c)]. This information must be provided to county district attorneys, the Franchise Tax Board, the courts, and others as provided by law [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16576(e)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementGeneral OverviewGovernmentsCourtsClerks of Court

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
G. Discovery, Trial, And Orders

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 224.154-224.169

[Reserved]

§§ 224.154[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
H. Modification

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.170

§ 224.170 Jurisdiction to Modify or Terminate Support Order

The court may modify or terminate any order for child support as it may deem necessary [Fam. Code § 3651(a)], except as to any amount accruing prior to the date of the filing of the notice of motion or order to show cause to modify or terminate [Fam. Code § 3651(c); see In re Marriage of Gong & Kwong (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 510, 518, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 540 ; County of Santa Clara v. Wilson (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 1324, 1326-1327, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 653 (trial court lacked equitable power to eliminate four months of child support arrearages accruing before father filed modification motion); but see 42 U.S.C. § 666(a)(9)(C) (limiting retroactivity of modification orders, as discussed in § 224.171)]. On the filing of a supplemental complaint under Fam. Code § 2330.1 (see § 224.81), a child support order in the original proceeding may be modified in conformity with the statewide uniform child support guidelines to provide for the support of all of the children of the same parents who were named in the initial and supplemental pleadings, to consolidate arrearages and wage assignments for children of the parties, and to consolidate orders for support [Fam. Code § 3651(b)].

No section in the Family Code allows a recommendation of a family court settlement officer to terminate or modify a duly entered support order of the family court. Thus, for example, a filed copy of the settlement officer's recommendation is not a court order modifying a previously entered support order. If either of the parties wants the recommendation to have the force and effect of an order, that party must comply with the procedure described on the form to obtain an order [In re Marriage of Brinkman (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 1281, 1287-1289, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 722] .

The court's jurisdiction to modify includes the power to require payment of child support even though the original dissolution judgment did not impose any child support liability [Krog v. Krog (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 812, 816-817, 198 P.2d 510] .

The court may modify or terminate an order for child support at any time, even if the parties have entered into an agreement on the subject of child support [Fam. Code § 3651(a); see In re Marriage of Lackey (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 698, 705, 191 Cal. Rptr. 309] . The court may also enforce postjudgment agreements between the parties that modify child support [see In re Marriage of Armato (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 1030, 1045-1047, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 395 (parties' signed letter agreement modifying child support was enforced under Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6)]. However, a stipulation between the parties to engage in binding arbitration on future child support issues is void as against public policy to the extent it purports to deprive the court of jurisdiction to modify child support [In re Marriage of Bereznak and Heminger (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1062, 1067-1070, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 351] .

A court's jurisdiction to modify a prior child support order continues even if a custodial parent who has moved to modify dies during the pendency of the motion. In that situation, the court may substitute in place of the deceased parent an appropriate representative of his or her estate [In re Marriage of Drake (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1151-1153, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionFamily LawChild SupportObligationsModificationGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
H. Modification

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.171

§ 224.171 No Retroactive Modification

An order modifying or terminating a child support order may not apply to any amount that accrued before the date of filing the notice of motion or order to show cause to modify or terminate, except as provided in Fam. Code § 3651(b) (concerning supplemental complaints, as discussed in § 224.170) [Fam. Code § 3651(c); Armstrong v. Armstrong (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 942, 947, 126 Cal. Rptr. 805, 544 P.2d 941 ; In re Marriage of Tavares (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 620, 623, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 39 (parent who has skipped opportunity to modify support order may not undermine accrued arrears by later contesting expenses); County of Santa Clara v. Wilson (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 1324, 1326-1327, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 653 (trial court lacked equitable power to eliminate four months of child support arrearages accruing before father filed modification motion); In re Marriage of Perez (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 77, 80, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377] . The legislature has established a bright-line rule that accrued child support is vested and cannot be adjusted up or down [In re Marriage of Tavares (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 620, 627, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 39 ; see Fam. Code §§ 3651(c)(1), 3653(a), 3692]. When a parent believes the amount ordered is too high, or too low, he or she must seek prospective modification [Fam. Code § 3653; In re Marriage of Tavares (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 620, 627, 630, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 39 (noting that neither obligor nor obligee is entitled to modification of support amounts that predate notice to other party of filing of motion to modify support)]. A court has no discretion to absolve an obligor of support arrearages or of interest on this amount [In re Marriage of Tavares (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 620, 627, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 39].

The resulting order, however, may be made retroactive to the date of filing the notice of motion or order to show cause, or to any subsequent date, except as may otherwise be prescribed by federal law [see Fam. Code § 3653 (referring to 42 U.S.C. § 666(a)(9)]. Under 42 U.S.C. § 666(a)(9), modification is permitted with respect to any period during which there is pending a petition for modification, but only from the date that notice of the petition has been given, either directly or through the appropriate agent, to the obligee, or, if the obligee is the petitioner, to the obligor [see In re Marriage of Goosmann (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 838, 843, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 613] .

The trial court, in exercising its discretion to make a child support modification order retroactive, must focus on the children's previously current needs, as measured by the parents' ability to provide support, rather than on the parents' expenses or overall situation [In re Marriage of Cheriton (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 269, 300, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 755] .

If an order modifying or terminating a support order is entered because of the unemployment of either spouse, the order must be made retroactive to the date of service on the opposing party of the notice of motion or order to show cause to modify or terminate or the date of unemployment, whichever is later, subject to the notice requirements under federal law [42 U.S.C. § 666(a)(9)], unless the court finds good cause not to make the order retroactive and states its reasons on the record [Fam. Code § 3653(b)].

If an order decreasing or terminating a support order is entered retroactively, the support obligor may be entitled to, and the support obligee may be ordered to repay, any amounts previously paid by the support obligor under the prior order that are in excess of the amounts due under the retroactive order [Fam. Code § 3653(c)]. The court may order that repayment by the support obligee be made over any time period and in any manner, including, but not limited to, by an offset against future support payments or wage assignment, as the court deems just and reasonable. In determining whether to order a repayment, and in establishing the terms of the repayment, the court must consider the amount to be repaid, the duration of the support order before modification or termination, the financial impact on the support obligee of any particular method of repayment, such as an offset against future support payments or wage assignment, and any other facts or circumstances the court deems relevant [Fam. Code § 3653(c)]. The clerk of each court must transmit the following information to the registry: (1) any information required under federal law; and (2) any other information the Department of Social Services and the Judicial Council find appropriate [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16577(b)].

In 1998, the Legislature mistakenly amended Fam. Code § 3653(c) to provide that a support obligee would have no obligation to repay any amounts previously paid by a support obligor that were in excess of the support amounts due under an order entered retroactively that decreased or terminated support [see Stats. 1998, ch. 854]. But in 1999, the Legislature again amended the statute to correct the mistake and clarify that trial courts have discretion to order repayment of overpaid support amounts [see Stats. 1999, ch. 653, § 4; Sen. Com. on Judiciary Analysis of Assem. Bill No. 614 (1999-2000 Reg. Sess.) as amended August 16, 1999, p. 9]. The statute, as amended in 1999, applies retroactively, so that trial courts may order support obliges to repay support amounts overpaid during 1999, when the mistaken statute was in effect [In re Marriage of Dandona & Araluce (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 1125-1126, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 390 ; see Fam. Code § 3653(c)].

The prohibition on retroactive modification also applies to accrued interest on arrearages. Interest accrues on each installment as it becomes due, and a court has no equitable power thereafter to forgive payment of accrued interest [In re Marriage of Perez (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 77, 80, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377] .

One court of appeal has held that the trial court may order the noncustodial parent to pay a child's unpaid emergency medical and hospital expenses for care rendered before the custodial parent's filing of a motion for modification. The court reasoned that an order directing payment of unanticipated medical bills is not a retroactive increase but a modification based on changed circumstances [In re Marriage of Ford (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 62, 65-68, 100 Cal. Rptr. 817 ; but see Fam. Code § 3951(a) (parent not bound to compensate other parent for voluntary support of child absent agreement for compensation; meaning that noncustodial parent could not be ordered to reimburse custodial parent in situation set forth in Ford if custodial parent had paid medical bills)].

In addition, when a judgment was entered providing for child support retroactive to a stipulated date--but in which no mandatory "add-on" child care arrearages had been requested or provided--an appellate court found that adding a provision for retroactive add-ons pursuant to a motion filed two weeks after trial was not an impermissible "retroactive modification," because add-ons had not been addressed at trial [In re Marriage of Lusby (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 459, 473, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263] .

An order to pay off child support arrearages at a small monthly amount over a long period of time is not a retroactive support modification, but a proper exercise of a court's equitable discretion to enforce its orders. Such an installment order does not forgive or compromise the outstanding debt, nor preclude future modification or enforcement efforts [In re Marriage of Everett (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 846, 855, 269 Cal. Rptr. 917] .

Although child support may not be modified retroactively, a court has discretionary or equitable powers it may exercise to reduce or eliminate arrearages in response to an obligor's defense to a support action. Arrearages may be reduced by amounts accruing during a period in which there was a de facto change in custody and the obligor had the actual physical custody of the child [In re Marriage of Okum (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 176, 182, 240 Cal. Rptr. 458] . Further, the court has discretion to credit overpayments [see In re Marriage of Peet (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 974, 977-980, 149 Cal. Rptr. 108] or payments made directly to the children [see In re Marriage of Utigard (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 133, 145-146, 178 Cal. Rptr. 546] against arrearages under some limited circumstances.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsModificationGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsModificationChanged CircumstancesFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTypesRetroactive Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
H. Modification

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.172

§ 224.172 Termination of Child Support Orders

An order for child support remains in effect until the order is either terminated by the court or terminates by operation of law [Fam. Code § 3601(a); see Fam. Code § 3651(a) (court may terminate support order at any time it determines to be necessary)]. A child support order terminates by operation of law when the legal duty of a parent to support his or her child terminates under Fam. Code § 3900 (when child turns 18) or 3901 (extension to age 19 for child who is still full-time high school student). A support order may also terminate by operation of law under Fam. Code § 4007, on the happening of a contingent event such as the statutory emancipation or death of the child [Fam. Code § 3601(a); but see Lehrer v. Lehrer (1976) 63 Cal. App. 3d 276, 279-280, 133 Cal. Rptr. 709 (emancipation based on totality of circumstances does not terminate support by operation of law, but requires motion to terminate); but cf. In re Marriage of Dunmore (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1, 4-6, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 885 (father's child support obligation is not terminated by finding in adoption action that adoption could proceed without his consent based on his failure to communicate and pay support)]. It does not, however, terminate by operation of law on the death of either the payor parent or the payee parent [In re Marriage of McCann (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 102, 106, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 639 (payee parent); In re Marriage of O'Connell (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 565, 572, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334 (payor parent)]. For further discussion, see § 224.37[3] (death of payor) and § 224.57.

Fam. Code § 3601 also refers to a possible termination of support by operation of law under Fam. Code § 4013, which refers to discharge of an obligation for support of a child in bankruptcy. However, the operable bankruptcy rule is that child support is not dischargeable [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(5)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsTerminationAttainment of MajorityFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTerminationDeathFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTerminationEmancipation of Child

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
H. Modification

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.173

§ 224.173 Standing of Party Adjudged in Contempt

A parent adjudged to be in contempt of a child support order lacks standing to seek a modification of the order. However, if the court has exonerated a parent from a charge of contempt because the parent lacks the financial ability to comply with the order, the parent has standing to petition for modification of the order [In re Marriage of Milch (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 666, 669-670, 120 Cal. Rptr. 901 ; see Ramirez v. Superior Court (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 351, 354-355, 140 Cal. Rptr. 108 (because contempt involves ability to comply with court order, court should not refuse to hear motion for modification because parent has not made prior child support payments without first ascertaining whether parent is presently able to pay)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJusticiabilityStandingGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementContemptFamily LawChild SupportObligationsModificationGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
H. Modification

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.174

§ 224.174 Effect of Denial of Visitation

Although a custodial parent's interference with the noncustodial parent's visitation rights does not affect the latter's duty to pay child support [Fam. Code §§ 3556, 4845(b); see § 224.34], interference with visitation may provide grounds for modification of a child support order. Several courts have stated, in dicta, that a court has authority to modify child support orders based on interference with visitation rights [see Moffat v. Moffat (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 645, 652, 165 Cal. Rptr. 877, 612 P.2d 967 ; Solberg v. Wenker (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 475, 480, 209 Cal. Rptr. 545 ; see also In re Marriage of Damico (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 673, 680, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787, 872 P.2d 126 (citing Solberg on this point)].

Additionally, or perhaps alternatively, the court may order the custodial parent to pay certain financial compensation to the noncustodial parent for periods during which the noncustodial parent has been thwarted in attempting to exercise visitation rights [see Fam. Code § 3028].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild CustodyVisitationEnforcementSanctionsFamily LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsModificationGeneral OverviewFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
H. Modification

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.175

§ 224.175 Procedure for Simplified Discovery

At any time after a judgment that provides for child support is entered, either parent (or the supported parent's assignee) without leave of the court, may serve a request for the production of a completed current income and expense declaration on the other parent, in a form adopted by the Judicial Council [Fam. Code § 3664(a)]. The purpose of this procedure is to permit inexpensive discovery of facts before the commencement of a proceeding for modification or termination of support [Fam. Code § 3660]. The procedure may be used once every 12 months [Fam. Code § 3663]. A copy of the prior year's federal and state personal income tax returns must be attached to the income and expense declarations of each party [Fam. Code § 3665(a)]. If there is no sufficient response within 35 days, the parent may then serve on the other parent's employer a request for information limited to the income and benefits provided to the parent [Fam. Code § 3664(b)]. For further discussion of this procedure, including the rights of the employer and parent-employee, and for illustrative Judicial Council forms [see Fam. Code §§ 3664(b), (f), 3668], see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementGeneral OverviewFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
H. Modification

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.176

§ 224.176 Change of Circumstances Requirement

[1] In General

The court will not modify a child support order unless there has been a material change of circumstances since the last prior child support order [In re Marriage of Popenhager (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 514, 521, 160 Cal. Rptr. 379 ; see Edwards v. Edwards (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 12, 15, 124 Cal. Rptr. 742 ; In re Marriage of Kuppinger (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 628, 633, 120 Cal. Rptr. 654] . If the original order has been modified, the change must have occurred after the last prior order in order to justify further modification [Miller v. Miller (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 197, 199, 89 Cal. Rptr. 643 ; Evans v. Evans (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 566, 570-571, 8 Cal. Rptr. 412] .

Showing a material change in circumstances necessitates comparing financial information on which the original support order was based with the most recent financial information relevant to a new order, for example, the parties' current income and expense declarations [In re Marriage of Tydlaska (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 572, 575-576, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 594 (when husband failed to present "evidentiary yardstick" with which court could determine appropriateness of modification order, request to modify support was properly denied)].

The statewide uniform child support guideline [Fam. Code § 4055 et seq.; see § 224.100 et seq.] constitutes a change of circumstances for the purpose of modification of any child support order entered before July 1, 1992 [Fam. Code § 4069; see Fam. Code § 4051 (operative date); see, e.g., In re Marriage of Hubner (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 175, 179, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646 (manner and presumptions regarding calculation of child support under statewide uniform guidelines had changed since previous support order)].

[2] Not Required for Prior Stipulated Orders for Less Than Guideline Amount

Under the statewide uniform child support guideline, if the parents stipulate to a child support order in an amount that is below the amount established under the guideline [see Fam. Code § 4065], no change of circumstances need be demonstrated to obtain a modification of the child support order to the applicable level or above [Fam. Code § 4065(d); In re Marriage of Williams (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1221, 1232, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 877] . The "or above" language in

Fam. Code § 4065(d), read literally, would in effect allow a modification above the formula amount without a showing of changed circumstances. Given that the formula amount is the presumed correct amount based on the circumstances of the parties at the time of the order [Fam. Code § 4057(a)], there appears to be no reason why modification to a higher amount should be allowed without a showing of some change in the factors that are relevant under the formula, that is, the parents' net monthly disposable income and time-share [see Fam. Code § 4055(a), (b)(1)(C)-(E)].

When the stipulated child support order is at the guideline amount, a showing of changed circumstances is a necessary predicate to an upward modification of the order [In re Marriage of Williams (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1221, 1232, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 877].

If parties stipulate by agreement to a child support order that is above the amount established under the guideline [Fam. Code § 4055], the child support order cannot be modified downward without a showing of materially changed financial circumstances [In re Marriage of Laudeman (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 1009, 1011, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378] . Although Fam. Code § 4065(d) allows either party to withdraw from a stipulation that is below the guideline amount, as previously discussed, the guideline statute [Fam. Code § 4050 et seq.] otherwise adheres to preguideline law and requires proof of changed circumstances to reduce a higher award [In re Marriage of Laudeman (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 1009, 1015, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378] .

[3] Parents' Ability to Pay as Changed Circumstance

Because parental income is a principal factor in determining a child support obligation under the guideline [see Fam. Code § 4055(b)(1)(C),(E)], any increase in either parent's income should be a sufficient change of circumstance to support a modification [see In re Marriage of Catalano (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 543, 551, 251 Cal. Rptr. 370 (supporting parent's increased earnings and improved standard of living as sufficient change of circumstances regardless of standard of living enjoyed by family during parents' marriage)].

A court may also modify, or refuse to modify, a child support order based on a parent's "capacity" to earn, as opposed to actual earnings, at least if the supporting parent's conduct indicates deliberate behavior to avoid financial responsibilities to the child [see In re Marriage of Williams (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 57, 62, 202 Cal. Rptr. 10] . The parent that seeks to modify an existing order so as to have income imputed to the other parent bears the burden of showing that the other parent has the ability and opportunity to earn that imputed income [In re Marriage of Bardzik (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1291, 1294-1295, 1302-1308, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 72 (father did not meet burden by merely showing that mother had retired before age 65 and what she made before her retirement was not enough to show her present ability and opportunity to earn); In re Marriage of Rothrock (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 223, 236, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 881 (no competent evidence was presented for court to have imputed income to father)].

When a parent fails to comply with a court order compelling the parent to provide discovery of his or her financial records, the court has the discretion to impose sanctions against that parent, including an "issue sanction" declaring that, for purposes of calculating child support, the court will impute a specified amount as the parent's income and preclude the parent from offering any evidence to the contrary. In one case, for example, a court imputed income of $40,000 per month to a father, which was the amount of monthly income he stated in a loan application, after he failed to comply with the court's order requiring parties to exchange income and expense declarations, their most recent tax returns, and other financial documents, and failed to comply with court's order compelling him to answer interrogatories about corporations he controlled [In re Marriage of Chakko (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 104, 108-110, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 699] . For additional discussion, see § 224.105[5].

[4] Subsequent Marriage or Nonmarital Partner as Changed Circumstance

Under Fam. Code § 4057.5, the income of a parent's subsequent spouse or nonmarital partner may not be considered in modifying child support, except in an extraordinary case in which excluding the income would lead to extreme and severe hardship to the child. If the court finds extreme and severe hardship, it must also consider whether including the income would lead to extreme and severe hardship to any other child supported by the parent or by the parent's subsequent spouse or nonmarital partner [Fam. Code § 4057.5(a)]. In addition, courts have determined that consideration of such "new mate income" is proper for the purpose of determining a parent's actual tax liability in order to calculate that parent's net disposable income [County of Tulare v. Campbell (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 847, 856, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 902 ; In re Marriage of Carlsen (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 212, 218-219, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630 ; see In re Marriage of Drake (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1163, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466] . For further discussion of this statute, see § 224.105[6].

Fam. Code § 4057.5 was enacted by 1993 legislation, operative January 1,1994 [see Stats. 1993, ch. 935, § 2]. Its enactment constitutes cause to bring a motion for modification of a child support order entered before that date [Fam. Code § 4057.5(e)].

Under prior law, a custodial parent's remarriage, alone, was not a change of circumstance justifying a modification of child support [Burns v. Burns (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 714, 715-716, 12 Cal. Rptr. 68] . However, because both parents have a legal obligation to support their children, a parent's acquisition of a community property interest in the earnings and property of a subsequent spouse was a change of circumstances. A court could not impose the sole burden of support on the noncustodial parent after the custodial parent acquired a community property interest in the income of a subsequent spouse [see In re Marriage of Havens (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1014-1015, 178 Cal. Rptr. 477] . Conceptually, it might still be argued that a parent's community property interest in the income of a subsequent spouse is the income of the parent and not the income of the spouse excluded under Fam. Code § 4057.5. For discussion of the liability of the property of a subsequent marriage for a child support obligation, see § 224.37[2].

[5] Needs of Child as Changed Circumstance

Under the statewide uniform child support guideline, need is not a quantified factor in the guideline's formula [see Fam. Code § 4055(a), (b); § 224.100 et seq.]. Also, only special circumstances are relevant factors in considering whether the presumption that the formula amount is the correct amount has been rebutted [see Fam. Code § 4057(b)(5)(C)], or whether additional child support amounts should be ordered [Fam. Code § 4062(b)(1)]. Thus, increases in the cost of the ordinary day-to-day needs of the children, whether due to inflation or other causes, should not constitute a change of circumstances absent a corresponding increase in the obligor-parent's income.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawChild SupportObligationsModificationChanged CircumstancesFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
H. Modification

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.177

§ 224.177 Two-Step Phase-In

Whenever the court modifies a child support order that was issued before July 1, 1992 for the purpose of conforming to the statewide child support guideline, and the amount of child support to be ordered is the amount provided under the guideline's formula [see Fam. Code § 4055(a)], the court may, in its discretion, order a two-step phase-in of the formula amount of support to provide the obligor with time for transition to the full formula amount [Fam. Code § 4076(a)]. To order the two-step phase-in, the court must find all of the following to be true [Fam. Code § 4076(a)]:

(1) The period of the phase-in is carefully limited to the time necessary for the obligor to rearrange his or her financial obligations in order to meet the full formula amount of support;

(2) The obligor is immediately being ordered to pay not less than 30 percent of the amount of the child support increase, in addition to the amount of child support required under the prior order;

(3) The obligor has not unreasonably increased his or her financial obligations following notice of the motion for modification of support, has no arrearages owing, and has a history of good faith compliance with prior support orders.

Whenever the court grants a request for a phase-in, it must state the following in writing [Fam. Code § 4076(b)]:

(1) The specific reasons why the immediate imposition of the full formula amount of support would place an extraordinary hardship on the obligor, and that this extraordinary hardship on the obligor would outweigh the hardship caused the supported children by the temporary phase-in of the full formula amount of support;

(2) The full guideline amount of support, the date and amount of each phase-in, and the date that the obligor must begin paying the full formula amount of support, which may be no later than one year after the filing of the motion for modification of support.

If the court orders a phase-in, and the court thereafter determines that the obligor has violated the phase-in schedule or has intentionally lowered the income available for the payment of child support during the phase-in period, the court may order the immediate payment of the full formula amount of child support and the difference in the amount of support that would have been due without the phase-in and the amount of support due with the phase-in, in addition to any other penalties provided for by law [Fam. Code § 4076(c)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawChild SupportObligationsModificationGeneral OverviewFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
H. Modification

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.178

§ 224.178 Notice of Activation of Military Service and Request to Modify Support Order

A party to a support order who is activated to United States military duty or National Guard service and deployed out of state may file and serve a notice of activation of military service and request to modify a support order, in place of a notice of motion or order to show cause, by informing the court and the other party of the request to modify the support order based on a change in circumstances [Fam. Code § 3651(c)(2); see § 224.220 (Judicial Council form of Notice and Request)]. The service member must indicate the date of deployment; and, if possible, the court must schedule the hearing before that date. If the court cannot hear the matter before the deployment date and the service member complies with the conditions of the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (50 U.S.C.A. § 522), the court must grant a stay of proceedings consistent with the timelines for stays set forth in the Act. If the court fails to grant a discretionary stay after the expiration of the mandatory stay required by the Act, it must appoint counsel to represent the interests of the deployed service member, unless he or she is represented by other counsel. If the court stays the proceedings until after the service member returns, the service member must request the court to set the matter for hearing within 90 days of return from deployment or the matter must be taken off calendar and the existing order may not be made retroactive under Fam. Code § 3653(c) [Fam. Code § 3651(c)(2)].

A service member who does not request modification of a support order before deployment out of state is not subject to the penalties authorized by Fam. Code §§ 4720-4733 on the amount of child support that would not have accrued if the order had been modified, unless the court finds good cause [Fam. Code § 3651(c)(3)]. No interest accrues on that amount of a child support obligation that would not have become due and owing if the activated service member modified the support order on activation to reflect the change in income due to the activation. If the court finds that good cause did not exist for the service member's failure to seek or delay in seeking the modification, then interest will accrue as otherwise allowed by law [Fam. Code § 3651(c)(4)].

If an order modifying or terminating a support order is entered due to a change in income resulting from activation to the United States military service or National Guard duty and deployment out of state for either the support obligor or the support oblige, the order must be made retroactive to the later of the date of service on the opposing party of the notice of activation, notice of motion, or order to show cause to modify or terminate, or the date of activation, unless the court finds good cause not to make the order retroactive [Fam. Code § 3653(c)]. Good cause includes, but is not limited to, a finding by the court that the delay in seeking modification was not reasonable under the circumstances the service member faced [Fam. Code § 3653(c)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsComputationGuidelinesFamily LawChild SupportObligationsModificationGeneral OverviewFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of ChildrenMilitary & Veterans LawServicemembersFamilies

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
H. Modification

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 224.179-224.189

[Reserved]

§§ 224.179[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.190

§ 224.190 Federal Statutes

Limitation on percentage of earnings subject to garnishment to enforce child support order. 15 U.S.C. § 1673(b)(2)(A)

Disclosure of tax return information by Secretary of Treasury or Commissioner of Social Security to federal, state, or local child support enforcement agency. I.R.C. § 6103(l)(6),(8)

Authority of Secretary of Treasury to collect child support obligations. I.R.C. § 6305(a)

Portions of income necessary to comply with judgment for child support as exempt from levy for failure to pay tax if judgment entered prior to date of levy. I.R.C. § 6334(a)(8)

Federal Child Support Enforcement Act. 42 U.S.C. § 651 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementGarnishmentsFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementIncome WithholdingPublic Health & Welfare LawSocial SecurityAssistance to FamiliesChild & Spousal SupportTax LawFederal Tax Administration & ProcedureAudits & InvestigationsDisclosure of Information (IRC secs. 6103-6104, 6108-6110, 6713, 7213, 7216, 7431, 7435)Disclosure of Returns & Return InformationTax LawFederal Tax Administration & ProcedureTax Credits & LiabilitiesLevy & Distraint (IRC secs. 6330-6344, 7429)Property Exempt From Levy

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.191

§ 224.191 State Statutes

[1] Court-Ordered Support

Noncustodial parent's duty to support minor child as not affected by interference with custody or visitation rights. Fam. Code § 3556

Use of software to determine support. Fam. Code § 3830

Civil suit to enforce parents' obligation to support and educate minor child. Fam. Code § 3900, 4000

Court-ordered child support. Fam. Code § 4000 et seq.

Statewide uniform child support guideline. Fam. Code § 4050 et seq.

Court as authorized to order convict to work for support of child. Penal Code § 273h

Joint and several liability of parents for certain services rendered to or for minor child by order of juvenile court. Welf. & Inst. Code § 903 et seq.

Liability of parents or children for support of patient in state hospital for mentally disordered. Welf. & Inst. Code § 7275 et seq.

[2] Criminal Sanctions

Criminal liability of parent for willful failure to support minor child. Penal Code § 270 et seq.

Criminal liability for abandonment of or failure to maintain child under age of 14. Penal Code § 271, 271a

Venue of criminal action for nonsupport of child. Penal Code § 777a

[3] Duty to Support

Equal responsibility of parents to support and educate minor child in manner suitable to child's circumstances. Fam. Code § 3900

Continuing parental duty to support unmarried child who resides with parent and attends high school full time until graduation or 19th birthday. Fam. Code § 3901(a)

Court-ordered allowance out of child's property for child's past or future support. Fam. Code § 3902

Equal responsibility of mother and father to support child of any age who is incapacitated from earning a living and without sufficient means. Fam. Code § 3910(a)

Person as not liable for support of grandchild Fam. Code § 3930

Right of third parties supplying necessaries to child to be reimbursed by parent. Fam. Code §§ 3950, 3951

Support of public charge out of parent's estate. Fam. Code § 3952

Emancipation of minors. Fam. Code § 7000 et seq.

Written promise to support child growing out of presumed or alleged father-child relationship as not requiring consideration and as enforceable according to its terms. Fam. Code § 7614(a)

Liability of parents of developmentally disabled minor for costs of services to child. Welf. & Inst. Code § 4782 et seq.

[4] Enforcement

County where child resides as proper county for trial of action to enforce child support obligation. Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)

Recorded, certified copy of superior court judgment for child support as lien on judgment debtor's nonexempt real property. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 697.320(a)(1), 697.350(c)

Noncompliance with child support order as contempt of court. Code Civ. Proc. § 1209.5

Payment of child support to county officer and enforcement of child support orders by district attorney. Fam. Code § 4200 et seq.

Security deposit for child support payments. Fam. Code § 4550 et seq.

Deposit of assets to secure future child support payments. Fam. Code § 4600 et seq.

Child support delinquency reporting. Fam. Code §§ 4700, 4701

Civil penalties for child support delinquency. Fam. Code § 4720 et seq.

Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act. Fam. Code § 4800 et seq.

Enforcement of child support orders by writ of execution. Fam. Code § 5100 et seq.

Earnings assignment order for child support. Fam. Code § 5200 et seq.

Action by district attorney to recover for aid to families with dependent children resulting from separation or desertion of parent from child. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 11350, 11350.1

Action by district attorney to establish, modify, or enforce child support obligation. Welf. & Inst. Code § 11475.1

Settlement of action to enforce child support obligation by district attorney against noncustodial parent. Welf. & Inst. Code § 11476.1

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsEnforcement & ExecutionWrits of ExecutionFamily LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementContemptFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementCriminal PenaltiesFamily LawChild SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.192

§ 224.192 Decisions

[1] Adult Child

Parents of adult child in need and unable to support himself or herself by work as having "joint and several" obligation under former Civ. Code § 206 (now see Fam. Code § 3910) to support child to extent of ability to pay. Chun v. Chun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 589, 595-597, 235 Cal. Rptr. 553

Duty of support for adult developmentally disabled child under former Civ. Code § 206 (now see Fam. Code § 3910) may be enforced by one parent against other, even if adult child has conservator. Johnson v. Superior Court (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 573, 584-585, 205 Cal. Rptr. 605

Treatment by prayer as shielding parents from liability for fiscal nonsupport under Penal Code Section 270 but not from prosecution under manslaughter and felony child-endangerment statutes. Walker v. Superior Court (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 112, 126, 138, 253 Cal. Rptr. 1, 763 P.2d 852 , cert. denied, 491 U.S. 905

[2] AFDC Reimbursement

California courts as having subject matter jurisdiction over district attorney actions for reimbursement from reservation-domiciled Indian parent to recoup AFDC payments made on behalf of Indian child. County of Inyo v. Jeff (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 487, 490-494, 277 Cal. Rptr. 841

Although prior dissolution judgment in another county ordered father to pay support, county as permitted to seek AFDC reimbursement and ongoing support from child's mother, when child did not live with mother when AFDC benefits were received. County of El Dorado v. Spence (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 698, 703-708, 227 Cal. Rptr. 365

[3] Child's Right to Support From Both Parents

Postdissolution agreement between adoptive and natural parents, which purported to release adoptive parent from child support claims by natural parent in return for lump sum payment and declaration of abandonment of interest in child, as void for violation of public policy favoring child's statutory right to support from both parents. In re Marriage of Ayo (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 442, 449, 450-451, 235 Cal. Rptr. 458

[4] Enforcement by Contempt

Application of Code Civ. Proc. § 1209.5 (prima facie showing of contempt for nonpayment of child support) to shift to alleged contemnor burden of disproving element of offense as constitutional only if contempt proceeding is civil, rather than criminal. Hicks v. Feiock (1988) 485 U.S. 624, 629-630, 638, 108 S. Ct. 1423, 99 L. Ed. 2d 721

[5] Reimbursement for Support Provided by Another

Requiring parent to reimburse county, pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 903 (prior to 1983 amendment), for costs of maintaining minor child committed to juvenile facilities pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 602 as denial of equal protection under state or federal law. In re Jerald C. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 1, 7, 201 Cal. Rptr. 342, 678 P.2d 917

[6] Workfare Program

Parent's duty to support child as insufficient to justify family court order requiring custodial parent receiving welfare to seek employment or to participate in state workfare program without notice and opportunity to be heard. Anderson v. Superior Court (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1321, 1331, 262 Cal. Rptr. 405

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementContemptFamily LawChild SupportObligationsTypesDependent Adult Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.193

§ 224.193 Law Reviews

Parnas and Cermak, Rethinking Child Support, 22 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 759 (1989)

Fisher, Stepparent Responsibility for Child Support in California's Community Property System, 22 Loy. L.A.L. Rev. 73 (1988)

Note, Criminal Nonsupport and a Proposal for an Effective Felony-Misdemeanor Distinction, 37 Hastings L.J. 1075 (1986)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementCriminal PenaltiesFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsProperty RightsCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 224.194-224.209

[Reserved]

§§ 224.194[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.210

§ 224.210 Stipulation to Establish or Modify Child Support and Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-350]

[1] FORM Stipulation to Establish or Modify Child Support and Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-350]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form is the mandatory Judicial Council form of Stipulation to Establish or Modify Child Support and Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-350]. Unless prohibited by applicable federal law, the parents may stipulate to a child support amount, subject to court approval [Fam. Code § 4065(a)].

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

For discussion of the use of a stipulation under Fam. Code § 4057(b)(1) to rebut the presumption that the amount of support under the statewide uniform child support guideline is the correct amount, see § 224.111[2]. For discussion of the steps for determining support amounts under the guideline, which must be done in order to properly complete the stipulation form, see § 224.104 et seq.

The court may not approve a stipulated child support agreement unless the agreement includes declarations required by statute [Fam. Code § 4065(a)]. The Judicial Council form includes language satisfying these declaration requirements (Paragraphs 6, 14, 15). The boxes at the beginning of Paragraph 6 and in Paragraph 6.a. should always be checked so as to include the required language of that paragraph.

If the right to child support has been assigned to the county under Welf. & Inst. Code § 11477, or if a public assistance application concerning the child is pending, the local child support agency must join in the stipulation by signing it [Fam. Code § 4065(b)] (see Paragraph 16).

For a Child Support Case Registry form that is required to be delivered to the court along with any court order for support, including, presumably, a stipulated order, see § 224.211 [see Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-191].

[3] Enforcement Provisions

An earnings assignment order must be issued for all child support orders [Fam. Code § 5230(a)]. Service of the assignment on the obligor's employer may be stayed if the parties agree in writing for an alternative arrangement to ensure that support will be paid [Fam. Code § 5260(a), (b)(2)] (see Paragraph 9). In the case of a new child support order, counsel should verify ahead of time whether the court will accept the parties' assurance that the obligor will pay without the need of an earnings assignment as a sufficient alternative arrangement. Earnings assignments are discussed in § 224.152.

[4] State Statutes

Stipulations for child support. Fam. Code § 4065(a)

Requirement that district attorney general join in stipulation if right to child support has been assigned to county or if application for public assistance is pending. Fam. Code § 4065(b)

Statewide uniform child support guideline. Fam. Code § 4050 et seq.

Stipulated agreement as rebutting presumption that amount of support established under statewide guideline is correct amount. Fam. Code 4057(b)(1)

Earnings assignment orders for collection of child support. Fam. Code § 5200 et seq.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.211

§ 224.211 Child Support Case Registry Form [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-191]

[1] FORM Child Support Case Registry Form [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-191]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form is the Child Support Case Registry Form adopted by the Judicial Council for mandatory use in connection with a court order for child support [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-191]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

In cases that do not involve the local child support agency, this form must be completed and delivered to the court along with any child or family support order, regardless of whether it is an initial order or a modification of such an order [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.330(c); but see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.330(b) (rule inapplicable to cases in which local child support agency provides enforcement services)]. If a party did not prepare and file the support order, but instead received a copy of a filed order, this form must be completed and delivered to the court within 10 days of the date of receipt of a copy of the support order. Any later change to the information on this form must be delivered to the court on a new form within 10 days of that change, and the court must be kept informed of any changes of address or telephone number of the party who completes the form [Fam. Code § 4014]. No filing fees are to be charged for filing the form [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.330(c)].

If the form is submitted with a judgment or order for court approval, the court clerk must complete Item 1(a) of the form ("Date order filed") once the judgment or order has been signed by the judicial officer and filed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.330(c)].

After the court clerk receives the completed form, it is not to be stored in the court file, but instead, is to be date-stamped when received and stored in an area to which the public does not have access, pending transmission to the State Department of Social Services. However, if the information is kept confidential, the court may keep a copy of the form or may store the information on the form in an electronic format [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.330(g)].

If the local child support agency is involved in the case, the form (and any updates) must be delivered to the local child support agency instead of to the court.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.212

§ 224.212 Application and Order for Health Insurance Coverage [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-470]

[1] FORM Application and Order for Health Insurance Coverage [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-470]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a reproduction of the mandatory Judicial Council form for an application and order for a health insurance coverage assignment [see Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-470; Fam. Code § 3772]. The application section on page 1 should be filled out by the applicant's attorney and signed by the applicant. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Notice of Intent to Seek Order

The application must be preceded by a written notice of intent to seek the assignment order if the parent who is required to furnish health care coverage fails to do so. It must be personally served, or transmitted by first-class mail, postage prepaid, at least 15 days before the date of the filing of this form [Fam. Code § 3761(b)(1)].

The substantive law governing health insurance coverage assignments is discussed in § 224.132.

[4] When Order May be Issued

A health insurance coverage assignment order may be made at the time of trial or entry of a judgment or other order for health insurance coverage [Fam. Code § 3763(a)]. However, it appears that the assignment order should only be issued if the obligor is in "default," that is, the obligor has failed to institute the coverage required by the court's order [see Fam. Code § 3761(b)(1)]. Therefore, the application would normally be presented a reasonable time after the court has made an order requiring a parent to provide health care coverage and the parent has failed or refused to put the coverage in place.

[5] Issuance and Service

While no statute provides for issuance of the order ex parte, neither is service of the application required before the order may be issued. Fam. Code § 3764 indicates that the procedure is for the order to be issued without hearing [but see Fam. Code §§ 3761(a), 3762 (good cause for not making assignment order)]. The order does not become effective until 20 days after service by first-class mail of the order on the employer [Fam. Code § 3764(a), (c)]. The party or local child support agency seeking the order must file a certificate of service showing the method and date of service [Fam. Code § 3761(b)(2)]. The employer must give a copy of the order to the obligor within ten days of service [Fam. Code § 3764(b)], and the obligor then may institute proceedings to quash the order [see Fam. Code § 3765]. If no health care coverage is available to the obligor, the Declaration of No Health Insurance Coverage must be filled out by the employer or other provider and returned by mail to the attorney of the person seeking enrollment [Fam. Code § 3766(c)].

[6] State Statutes

"Health insurance coverage" defined. Fam. Code § 3750

Requirement that health insurance coverage be maintained for supported child if available at no cost or reasonable cost to parents. Fam. Code § 3751

Health insurance coverage assignments. Fam. Code § 3760 et seq.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.213

§ 224.213 Employer's Health Insurance Return [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-475; Fam. Code § 3772]

[1] FORM Employer's Health Insurance Return [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-475; Fam. Code § 3772]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

The form, above, is the mandatory Judicial Council form of employer's health insurance return [see Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-475; see also Fam. Code § 3772]. This form is to be filled out by a parent's employer, on the request of a local child support agency, and returned to the agency within 30 days [Fam. Code § 3771]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

The Judicial Council has designed this form as an attachment sheet. Apparently it is for use as an attachment to the Judicial Council form for Application and Order for Health Insurance Coverage (see § 224.212).

[3] Contents of Form

The required contents of the form are set forth in Fam. Code §§ 3771 and 3772. Fam. Code § 3771 requires information about the "absent" parent, a term that is not defined anywhere in the statute, but appears in line 2 of the form. Other statutory references regarding health insurance coverage are to the "obligor" parent, who is a parent who has been ordered to maintain health insurance coverage under Fam. Code § 3750 et seq. [see Fam. Code § 3761]. Either or both parents may be health care coverage obligors, regardless of custodial status and regardless of whether the parent is "present" or "absent" in any sense of the word [see Fam. Code § 3751(a)(2)].

It should be noted that Fam. Code § 3771 requires (and the form asks for) only information about the coverage that the employee currently has and not what coverage is available. Thus, after receiving the form, the district attorney still may not know whether family coverage is available to the employee at no or reasonable cost [see Fam. Code § 3751(a)(2)], which appears to be the crucial information that is needed in order for the district attorney to determine whether to seek a health insurance coverage order.

Additionally, although the form refers only to insurance policies, "health insurance coverage" within the meaning of the statute is broadly defined and includes services provided by health maintenance organizations (HMOs) [see Fam. Code § 3750(b)]. This form has been modified and filled in to show disclosure of HMO membership.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.214

§ 224.214 Application for Expedited Child Support Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-380]

[1] FORM Application for Expedited Child Support Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-380]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

The form, above, is the mandatory Judicial Council form for application for an expedited child support order under Fam. Code § 3622(a) [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-380; see Fam. Code § 3634]. This form includes the notice of consequences of failure to file a response [see § 224.215], which the moving party is required to serve on the responding party [see Fam. Code § 3624(a)(2)], and a proof of service on the reverse side. Service on the obligated party may be made by personal service or by any method available under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 415.10-415.40 [Fam. Code § 3624(b)]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

The procedure for obtaining expedited child support orders is discussed in § 224.78.

[3] State Statutes

Expedited child support orders. Fam. Code §§ 3620-3634

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.215

§ 224.215 Response to Application for Expedited Child Support Order and Notice of Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-381; Fam. Code § 3625]

[1] FORM Response to Application for Expedited Child Support Order and Notice of Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-381; Fam. Code § 3625]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

The form, above, is the Judicial Council form of response to an application for expedited child support and notice of hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-381; see Fam. Code § 3634]. It should be used to respond to an application for an order for expedited child support filed pursuant to Fam. Code § 3621 [see § 224.214]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

The response contains standard objections to the application, which the opposing party may check as appropriate. It is recommended that Paragraph 1(f) be checked in all cases, as it is unlikely that the respondent will know with certainty that all of the data on which the computation is based is correct. If an objection is not listed on the printed form, the opposing party should state it clearly at Paragraph 1(g).

To complete the response, the opposing party must request a hearing date, time, and place from the court clerk (see Paragraph 3) [see Fam. Code § 3626]. This information may be completed by the court clerk at the time of filing. A proof of service is included on the reverse side.

The respondent must file a completed income and expense declaration with the response [see Fam. Code § 3625(a)]. If the response and the respondent's income and expense declaration are not filed within 30 days after the application for expedited child support order is served on the respondent, the expedited order will automatically become effective without further action by the court [Fam. Code §§ 3624(a), (c), 3625(c)].

[3] Cross References

For a related form, see § 224.214.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.216

§ 224.216 Expedited Child Support Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-382; Fam. Code § 3621]

[1] FORM Expedited Child Support Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-382; Fam. Code § 3621]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

The form, above, is the Judicial Council form for an expedited child support order under Family Code § 3621 [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-382; see Fam. Code § 3634]. It should be used in conjunction with the application for an order for expedited child support [see § 224.214]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

The proposed order must be filed with the court along with the application [Fam. Code § 3622(d)]. A copy of the proposed order, along with the application and certain other documents, must be served on the parent from whom support is sought [Fam. Code § 3624(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 415.10-415.40; Fam. Code § 3624(b) (methods of service)].

The current version of this form does not include all of the findings that may be required under the statewide uniform child support guideline. At the request of any party, the court must state in writing or on the record the information that was used in determining the amount of child support under the guideline [see Fam. Code § 4056].

The figures in Paragraph 2 of the order relating to the amount of child support payable monthly for each child should be obtained from the worksheet calculating the proper amount of child support payable under the statewide guideline [see Fam. Code § 4055 et seq.; see also § 222.104 et seq.].

Paragraphs 3 and 4 of the order relate to the hardship deduction, discussed in § 224.105[3].

[3] Cross References

For a related form, see § 224.214.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.217

§ 224.217 Child Support Information and Order Attachments to Findings and Order After Hearing or Judgment [Cal. Judicial Council Forms FL-192, FL-342, FL-342(A)]

[1] FORM Child Support Information and Order Attachments to Findings and Order After Hearing or Judgment [Cal. Judicial Council Forms FL-192, FL-342, FL-342(A)]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Forms

Illustrated above are a series of Judicial Council attachments to orders and judgments for child support, which are intended for use in all family law proceedings, including those involving domestic violence, parentage, and governmental agencies. They include the mandatory forms of Child Support Information and Order Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-342] and Non-Guideline Child Support Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-342(A)]. Also illustrated is the informational form that has Notice of Rights and Responsibilities--Health Care Costs and Reimbursement Procedures on side one and Information Sheet on Changing a Child Support Order on side two [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-192].

These attachments must be used in conjunction with the Judicial Council form of Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340] as well as with the Judicial Council forms of Judgment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-180] and Restraining Order After Hearing (CLETS) [Cal. Judicial Council Form DV-130]. These forms are available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

Counsel for the prevailing party will usually complete the forms in accordance with the court's order and present them to the court for signature.

The attachments reflect the requirements of Fam. Code § 4050 et seq., the statewide uniform child support guideline, which is discussed in § 222.104 et seq. The Child Support Information and Order Attachment will be used after any hearing at which child support is awarded. The form provides for the court to require attachment of a printout of a computerized calculation of support and findings (Paragraph 1). Also, a notice/order to withhold income for child support should be prepared for possible use [Judicial Council form FL-195/FL-196; see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement ; see also § 222.217[3]]. A Health Insurance Coverage Assignment Order also may be required. Paragraph 12 of the Child Support Information and Order Attachment requires the attachment of the Judicial Council form of Notice of Rights and Responsibilities--Health Care Costs and Reimbursement Procedures and Information Sheet on Changing a Child Support Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-192], which is illustrated above. Line 13 requires that both parties complete and file a Child Support Case Registry form [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-140] within 10 days from the issuance of the underlying child support order.

The Non-Guideline Child Support Findings Attachment sets forth the basis for a support order that deviates from the statewide guideline, including an order based on the parties' stipulation [see Fam. Code §§ 4056, 4057, 4065]. If a "nonguideline" order is made, the box in Paragraph 9 of the Child Support Information and Order Attachment must be marked, and the Non-Guideline form attached.

[3] Earnings Assignment

Paragraph 8 of the Child Support Information and Order Attachment states that a Wage and Earnings Assignment Order for child support must issue, which is a requirement for all child support orders [see Fam. Code § 5230(a)]. However, service of the assignment on the obligor's employer may be stayed on a finding of good cause [Fam. Code § 5260]. These forms contain no language dealing with such a stay. The appropriate findings and order may be added to Paragraph 8, or, alternatively, may be set forth in the blank space at the bottom of the Child Support Extended Order Attachment. Earnings assignments are discussed in § 222.152[1].

[4] State Statutes

Requirement under statewide uniform child support guideline that court state on record net monthly disposable income of each parent. Fam. Code § 4056

Requirement that all child support orders include earnings assignment order. Fam. Code § 5230

[5] Cross References

For a related form, see § 224.212.

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.218

§ 224.218 Supplemental Petition for Support for After-Born Child [Fam. Code § 2330.1]

[1] FORM Supplemental Petition for Support for After-Born Child [Fam. Code § 2330.1]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____
[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name],	)
Petitioner,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	SUPPLEMENTAL PETITION FOR SUPPORT OF Respondent.	)	AFTER-BORN CHILD
	)
	)

_____

1. The initial petition in this matter for dissolution of marriage was filed on _____ [date].

2. _____ [Name], who brings this supplemental complaint, is the petitioner in this matter and _____ [e.g., mother] of the child whose support was originally at issue.

3. _____ [name] is the respondent in this matter and _____ [e.g., father] of that child.

[4. A _____ (judgment of dissolution of marriage or temporary support order) was entered in this matter with regard to the child named in the original petition on _____ (date).]

5. On _____ [date], another child, _____, [name], was born to the parties; _____ [e.g., petitioner] is the mother and _____ [e.g., respondent] is the father of this child.

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays for orders of court as follows:

1. Requiring _____ [name] to pay support for the benefit of the child as provided by the California uniform child support guideline, Family Code Section 4055 et seq.;

2. For costs of suit herein incurred, including reasonable attorney's fees;

3. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

_____ [date]

_____ [firm name, if any]

By:_____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the petitioner in the above-entitled proceeding. I have read the foregoing petition and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters which are therein stated on information and belief, and, as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Petitioner

[2] Use of Form

The form, above, is a supplemental complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 464] for use under Fam. Code § 2330.1 to obtain support for a child who was born to the parties to a proceeding for dissolution of marriage after the proceeding was initiated. Service must be made in the manner provided for the initial service of summons under the Family Code [Fam. Code § 2330.1]. For further discussion, see § 222.81.

Fam. Code § 2330.1 provides for a supplemental "complaint." However, a proceeding under the Family Code is commenced by the filing of a petition (rather than complaint) and defended by filing an appropriate response (rather than answer) within 30 days after service on the respondent of the summons and a copy of the petition [Cal. Rules of Ct. Rule 5.22; see also Fam. Code §§ 110 ("proceeding" under Family Code includes action), 127 ("respondent" includes defendant)]. Therefore, this pleading should be denominated a supplemental "petition" to conform to current family law practice.

[3] State Statutes

Superior Court Jurisdiction. Fam. Code § 200

Verification required. Fam. Code § 212

Attorney signature required. Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.219

§ 224.219 Qualified Medical Child Support Order (QMCSO) [29 U.S.C. § 1169]

[1] FORM Qualified Medical Child Support Order (QMCSO) [29 U.S.C. § 1169]

THE COURT FINDS AS FOLLOWS:

1. There are _____ [e.g., two] children of the parties, whose names are _____, and whose addresses are _____, for whom child support has been ordered in this matter.

2. The _____ [parent covered by health plan, e.g., mother], whose address is _____, is a participant, through employment, in the following group health benefit plans: _____ [specify each such plan, including dental and vision care plans].

THEREFORE, THE COURT ORDERS AS FOLLOWS:

[EITHER]

1. Each group health plan specified above shall provide benefits to each child named above, as required by Title 29 United States Code, Section 1169, as follows: _____ [specify reasonable description of type of coverage to be provided by each plan, paying particular attention to any optional or alternative coverages that may be provided for under plan].

[OR]

1. Each group health plan specified above shall provide benefits to each child named above, as required by Title 29

United States Code, Section 1169. The benefits to be provided are all benefits that are otherwise available to plan participants as set forth in _____ [specify governing instrument controlling plan], including all amendments to and modifications of the plan as may from time to time be made.

2. These benefits must be provided for as long as _____ [participant parent] remains a member of the plan, including any period of continuation coverage provided under 29 United States Code Section 1161; and with regard to each child named above, for as long as that child is entitled to child support under any order made in this matter.

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

The form, above, is designed to meet the requirements of a "qualified medical child support order" (QMCSO) under ERISA (the Employee Retirement Income Security Act) [see 29 U.S.C. § 1169]. The order is intended to be typed on an additional page and submitted as an attachment either with the mandatory Judicial Council form of Judgment [see Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-180] or with the Child Support Information and Order Attachment [see Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-342] to the Judicial Council's mandatory form of Findings and Order After Hearing [see Cal. Judicial Council Form 340]. The optional Judicial Council form of Additional Page (MC-020) may be used.

Examples of these Judicial Council forms are set forth in Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure . These forms are available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Contents of QMCSO

The order must clearly specify (1) the name and last known mailing address (if any) of the participant and the name and mailing address of each child covered by the order; (2) a reasonable description of the type of coverage to be provided by the plan to each child, or the manner in which the type of coverage is to be determined; (3) the period to which the order applies; and (4) each plan to which the order applies [29 U.S.C. § 1169(a)(3)]. The order may not require a plan to provide any type or form of benefit, or any option, that is not otherwise provided under the plan [29 U.S.C. § 1169(a)(4)].

[4] Effect of QMCSO

A qualified medical child support order is directed at a group health plan. The significance of the order is that if all requirements for qualification are met, the plan must provide benefits to any child of a parent who is a plan participant [see 29 U.S.C. § 1169(a)(1), (7); see also 29 U.S.C. § 1169(a)(2)(C) ("alternate recipient" means child of participant who is recognized under medical support order as having right of enrollment under group health plan); Welf. & Inst. Code § 14124.93].

It would seem that even if no qualified medical child support order under ERISA is issued, a child would not be excluded from coverage under any plan that, by its terms, enrolls children of plan participants regardless of matters such as the participant's marital status and the parents' custodial arrangement. However, if the plan would otherwise exclude children from coverage under some circumstances, enrollment can be compelled by meeting the ERISA requirements [

Fam. Code § 3751.5 (implementing state statute prohibiting denial of enrollment of children in parent's plan)]. The plan must permit the parent to enroll his or her child without regard to any enrollment period restrictions [see Fam. Code § 3751.5(b).

[5] Service and Determination

The order should immediately be served on each plan administrator to which it applies. The administrator is then to make a determination as to whether it qualifies as a QMCSO, and must notify the plan participant and each child of the determination [see 29 U.S.C. § 1169(a)(5)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 224 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: CHILD SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS

19-224 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 224.220

§ 224.220 Notice of Activation of Military Service and Deployment and Request to Modify a Support Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-398; Fam. Code § 3651]

[1] FORM Child Support Information and Order Attachments to Findings and Order After Hearing or Judgment [Cal. Judicial Council Forms FL-192, FL-342, FL-342(A)]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

The form, above, is the mandatory Judicial Council form for notice of activation of military service and request to modify a child support order under Fam. Code § 3651(c)(2) [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-398; see § 224.178]. It may be used by a party to a support order who is activated to United States military duty or National Guard service and deployed out of state, in place of a notice of motion or order to show cause, to inform the court and the other party of a request to modify the support order based on a change in circumstances [Fam. Code § 3651(c)(2)]. The service member must indicate the date of deployment; and, if possible, the court must schedule the hearing before that date [Fam. Code § 3651(c)(2)]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Cross References

Notice of activation of military service and request to modify support order. Fam. Code § 3651(c)(2)-(4)

Retroactivity of order modifying or terminating support. Fam. Code § 3653(c)

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 225.syn

§ 225.syn Synopsis to Chapter 225: DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT

§ 225.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 225.02 Cross References

§§ 225.03-225.09 [Reserved]

§ 225.10 Governing Statutes

§ 225.11 "Support" Defined

§ 225.12 Mutual Obligations of Support Between Spouses

§ 225.13 Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[1] Proceedings in Which Spousal Support May Be Ordered

[2] Proper Court

§ 225.14 Personal Jurisdiction

§ 225.15 Relation Between Spousal Support and Community Property Rights

§ 225.16 Family Support

§§ 225.17-225.29 [Reserved]

§ 225.30 Governing Statutes

§ 225.31 Marriage Requirement

[1] Nonmarital Cohabitants

[2] Void or Voidable Marriage

§ 225.32 Scope of Support Obligation

[1] Effect of "Liability of Property" Statutes

[2] Necessaries

§ 225.33 Waiver of Spousal Support Duty

§ 225.34 Duty of Spouses Living Together

§ 225.35 Duty of Spouses Living Apart

§ 225.36 Effect of Incompetence

§ 225.37 Effect of Dissolution or Legal Separation

[1] Duty of Support Continues

[2] On Ground of Incurable Insanity

§ 225.38 Effect of Death

[1] Right to Family Allowance

[2] Other Family Protection

§ 225.39 Enforcement of Support Obligation During Marriage

§§ 225.40-225.59 [Reserved]

§ 225.60 Governing Statutes

§§ 225.61-225.79 [Reserved]

§ 225.80 When Temporary Support Is Authorized

§ 225.81 Purpose of Award

§ 225.82 Standard for Making Award

§ 225.83 Court Schedules and Computer Software

§ 225.84 Manner of Making Application

§ 225.85 Showing Required

[1] Need

[2] Ability to Pay

§ 225.86 Effect of Separate Estate

§ 225.87 Effect of Raising Certain Defenses

[1] Denial That Marriage Exists

[2] Waiver by Agreement

[3] Change of Venue

§ 225.88 Effect of Dismissal

§ 225.89 Effect of Reconciliation

§ 225.90 Renewal of Motion, Reconsideration, and Relief From Order

§ 225.91 Appealability of Order

[1] Order Granting Support

[2] Order Denying Support

§ 225.92 Temporary Support Pending Appeal

§ 225.93 Security for Payment of Temporary Support

§ 225.94 Modification and Revocation of Order

§§ 225.95-225.109 [Reserved]

§ 225.110 Discretion of Court to Award Support

§ 225.111 Statutory Factors: Fam. Code § 4320

§ 225.112 Standard of Living Established During Marriage

§ 225.113 Ability to Pay and Earning Capacity of Supporting Spouse

[1] Computation of Income

[2] Earning Capacity

[3] Income of Subsequent Spouse or Partner

§ 225.114 Need and Earning Capacity of Supported Spouse

§ 225.115 Contributions to Education and Career

§ 225.116 Assets and Obligations; Separate Estate

§ 225.117 Duration of Marriage

§ 225.118 Age and Health of Parties

§ 225.119 Domestic Violence

§ 225.120 Tax Consequences of Support

§ 225.121 Other Just and Equitable Factors

§ 225.122 Support and Education of Adult Children

§ 225.123 Annuities, Life Insurance, and Trust Funds

§ 225.124 Payment to Creditors

§ 225.125 Effect of Agreement Between Parties

§ 225.126 Examination by Vocational Training Counselor

§ 225.127 Discovery of Tax Returns

§ 225.128 Award of Support in Default Judgment if Support Is Not Requested

§§ 225.129-225.139 [Reserved]

§ 225.140 Need to Address Retention of Jurisdiction in Order or Judgment

§ 225.141 Manner of Retaining Jurisdiction in Marriage of Long Duration

[1] In General

[2] What Constitutes Marriage of Long Duration

§ 225.142 Retaining Jurisdiction if Fam. Code § 4336 Does Not Apply

§ 225.143 Jurisdiction to Extend Award Beyond Period of Express Limitation

[1] When Express Language Is Required Under Family Code

[2] What Constitutes Language Sufficient to Retain Jurisdiction

[3] What Constitutes Language Sufficient to Terminate Jurisdiction

§ 225.144 When Court Should Retain Jurisdiction

[1] Factors to Be Considered

[2] Long-Term Marriage

[3] Short-Term Marriage

[4] Medium-Term Marriage

§§ 225.145-225.159 [Reserved]

§ 225.160 Agreement That Support Is Nonmodifiable

[1] General Rule of Validity for Agreement Executed on or After January 1, 1970

[2] Language Required

[3] Interrelationship With Reservation of Jurisdiction

[4] Agreement Executed Before January 1, 1970

§ 225.161 Agreements Avoiding Termination by Operation of Law: Death, Remarriage, Cohabitation

§§ 225.162-225.179 [Reserved]

§ 225.180 Earnings Assignment Order

§ 225.181 Security for Payment

§ 225.182 Payment to County Officer

§§ 225.183-225.199 [Reserved]

§ 225.200 Governing Statutes

§§ 225.201-225.219 [Reserved]

225.220 Jurisdiction of Court to Modify or Terminate Spousal Support

§ 225.221 Court Cannot Delegate Authority Without Parties' Stipulation

§ 225.222 Judicial Discretion

§ 225.223 Effective Date of Modification Order

§ 225.224 Effect of Motion for Modification on Paying Spouse's Contempt Under Current Order

§ 225.225 Temporary Modification of Order

§ 225.226 Prefiling Discovery

§ 225.227 Findings; Statement of Decision

§ 225.228 Review by Appellate Court

§ 225.229 Notice of Activation of Military Service and Request to Modify Support Order

§§ 225.230-225.239 [Reserved]

§ 225.240 Showing of Change of Circumstances Required

§ 225.241 Conclusiveness of Order on Then-Existing Circumstances

§ 225.242 Need and Ability to Pay

§ 225.243 Disposition of Community Property

§ 225.244 Failure of Expectation on Which Order Is Based

§ 225.245 Remarriage of Supporting Spouse

§ 225.246 Supported Spouse's Cohabitation With Person of Opposite Sex

[1] Rebuttable Presumption of Decreased Need

[2] "Cohabiting" Defined

[3] Effect of Agreement

§ 225.247 Passage of Time

§ 225.248 Change of Law

§ 225.249 Bankruptcy

§ 225.250 Retirement

§§ 225.251-225.269 [Reserved]

§ 225.270 Effect of Order Terminating Support Payments

§ 225.271 Payment Ordered for Fixed Period

§ 225.272 Payment Ordered for Contingent Period

§ 225.273 When Court Should Terminate Both Support Payments and Jurisdiction

§ 225.274 Termination by Operation of Law on Death or Remarriage

§§ 225.275-225.289 [Reserved]

§ 225.290 State Statutes

[1] Duty of Support

[a] Effect of Death

[b] Effect of Dissolution

[c] Effect of Incompetence

[d] General Provisions

[e] Marital Requirement

[f] When Spouses Living Apart

[2] Enforcement of Right of Support

[3] Liability of Marital Property for Support

§§ 225.291-225.309 [Reserved]

§ 225.310 State Statutes

[1] Agreements for Spousal Support

[2] Factors Considered in Setting Spousal Support

[3] Permanent Spousal Support

[4] Temporary Spousal Support

§§ 225.311-225.329 [Reserved]

§ 225.330 State Statutes

[1] Jurisdiction to Modify Spousal Support

[2] Modification or Termination of Spousal Support

§§ 225.331-225.349 [Reserved]

§ 225.350 Complaint to Enforce Spousal Duty of Support [Fam. Code § 4303]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Difference From Action for Legal Separation

[4] State Statutes

§ 225.351 Agreement to Separate [Fam. Code § 4302]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Liability to Creditors

[4] State Statutes

§§ 225.352-225.369 [Reserved]

§ 225.370 Income and Expense Declaration [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.128; Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-150]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] State Statutes

[4] California Rules of Court

§ 225.371 Examination by Vocational Training Counselor [Fam. Code § 4331]--Declaration in Support of Motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.118]

[1] FORM

§ 225.372 Examination by Vocational Training Counselor [Fam. Code § 4331]--Order Requiring Examination by Vocational Training Counselor

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Forms

[3] Judicial Council Forms

[4] State Statutes

§ 225.373 Findings of Fact Regarding Spousal Support Orders [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4332]--Sample Provisions

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Failure to Request Findings

[4] Statement of Decision

[5] State Statutes

§ 225.374 Open-Ended Order; Support for Indefinite Period [Fam. Code §§ 4330, 4336, 4337]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] State Statutes

§ 225.375 Support for Limited Period; Jurisdiction Retained Indefinitely [Fam. Code §§ 4330, 4335, 4336]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] State Statutes

[4] Cross References

§ 225.376 Richmond Order; Support for Limited Period With Limited Reservation of Jurisdiction [Fam. Code §§

4330, 4334, 4335]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 225.377 Fixed Amount for Limited Period; No Reservation of Jurisdiction to Extend Duration of Support [Fam. Code §§ 4330, 4334, 4335]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 225.378 Nonmodifiable Support for Limited Period; Jurisdiction Terminated [Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(d), 4330, 4334, 4335]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 225.379 Support for Contingent Period of Time [Fam. Code §§ 4330, 4334]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 225.380 Change in Amount of Support [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4330]--Substantive Step-Down

[1] FORM

§ 225.381 Change in Amount of Support [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4330]--Substantive Step-Up

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Forms

[3] Termination of Jurisdiction

[4] Basis for Change in Support

§ 225.382 Payment of Debts [Fam. Code § 2023(a)]--Sample Provision

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Payments to Creditors as Spousal Support

[4] Payments to Creditors as Community Obligation

[5] State Statutes

[6] Federal Statutes

§ 225.383 Provisions for Support After Death of Supporting Party [Fam. Code § 4360]--Purchase of Annuity

[1] FORM

§ 225.384 Provisions for Support After Death of Supporting Party [Fam. Code § 4360]--Maintenance of Life Insurance

[1] FORM

§ 225.385 Provisions for Support After Death of Supporting Party [Fam. Code § 4360]--Establishment of Trust

[1] FORM

§ 225.386 Supporting Party Required to Cooperate in Purchase of Life Insurance by Other Party [Fam. Code § 2010]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Forms

[3] Nature of Order

[4] Cobeneficiaries on Insurance Policy

[5] State Statutes

§ 225.387 Percentage of Potential Future Income [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4330]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 225.388 Reservation of Jurisdiction Only [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4336]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Token Award

[4] Duration of Marriage

§ 225.389 No Support; Jurisdiction Terminated [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4336]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] State Statutes

§ 225.390 Spousal, Partner, or Family Support Order Attachment to Findings and Order After Hearing, or Judgment [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4332]-- Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-343]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Contents of Form

[4] State Statutes

§ 225.391 Nonmodifiable Clause [Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(c), 4323]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Factors to Consider in Nonmodifiable Support Agreements

[4] State Statutes

[5] Cross References

§ 225.392 Nontermination on Remarriage [Fam. Code § 4337]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 225.393 Nontermination on Death [Fam. Code § 4337]--Death of Supporting Spouse

[1] FORM

§ 225.394 Nontermination on Death [Fam. Code § 4337]--Life Insurance Requirements Enforceable Against Estate

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Forms

[3] State Statutes

§ 225.395 Subsequent Cohabitation [Fam. Code § 4323]--Cohabitation to Have No Effect

[1] FORM

§ 225.396 Subsequent Cohabitation [Fam. Code § 4323]--Termination on Cohabitation

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Forms

§ 225.397 Conditional Nonmodifiability [Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 225.398 Event Does Not Constitute Change of Circumstances [Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§§ 225.399-225.409 [Reserved]

§ 225.410 Modification of Spousal Support [Fam. Code § 3651]--Declaration in Support of Motion to Modify Support [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.118]

[1] FORM

§ 225.411 Modification of Spousal Support [Fam. Code § 3651]--Findings and Order Modifying Spousal Support [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Fam. Code § 3654]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Forms

[3] Judicial Council Forms

[4] State Statutes

§ 225.412 Temporary Modification Orders [Fam. Code § 3651]--Modification for Limited Time [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Fam. Code § 3654]

[1] FORM

§ 225.413 Temporary Modification Orders [Fam. Code § 3651]--Modification for Contingent Time [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Fam. Code § 3654]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Forms

[3] Judicial Council Forms

§ 225.414 Order Terminating Support Payments and Retaining Jurisdiction [Fam. Code §§ 3591, 4336]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Judicial Council Forms

§ 225.415 Termination of Jurisdiction Over Spousal Support in Long-Term Marriage [Fam. Code §§ 4335, 4336]--Declaration in Support of Motion to Terminate Jurisdiction [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.118]

[1] FORM

§ 225.416 Termination of Jurisdiction Over Spousal Support in Long-Term Marriage [Fam. Code §§ 4335, 4336]--Findings and Order Terminating Jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Fam. Code § 3654]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Forms

[3] Judicial Council Forms

§ 225.417 Notice of Activation of Military Service and Deployment and Request to Modify a Support Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-398; Fam. Code § 3651]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART I. SCOPE

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.01

§ 225.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses spousal support, including general support obligations between husband and wife, spousal support orders in proceedings for dissolution of marriage or legal separation, and modification and termination of spousal support orders.

This chapter starts with an overview of the general duty of spousal support and jurisdiction of the court over spousal support awards [see § 225.10 et seq.].

This chapter then provides a discussion of the general duty of spouses to support each other, and forms for use in actions to enforce the general duty of support [see § 225.30 et seq.].

This chapter then discusses the standards that govern awards of both temporary and permanent support [see § 225.60 et seq.]. It also discusses additional issues that must be addressed in an order for permanent support, including reservation of jurisdiction, future modifiability of the order, and certain enforcement remedies. It contains forms for numerous types of spousal support orders.

This chapter then discusses modification and termination of existing spousal support orders, including the threshold change of circumstances requirement for modification, basic jurisdictional and procedural matters, termination of payments, and termination of jurisdiction [see § 225.200 et seq.]. It also contains forms for use in modifying or terminating spousal support.

Modification of family law orders and judgments in general is discussed in Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure . Attorney's fees and costs in family law proceedings are discussed in Ch. 226, Dissolution of Marriage: Attorney's Fees . Tax consequences of dissolution proceedings are discussed in Ch. 227, Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution .

For a general discussion of the liability of marital property for support, see Ch. 122, Community Property . The enforcement of spousal support orders is discussed in Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement . For a discussion of the family allowance and other probate devices for protection of the surviving spouse, see Ch. 440, Probate: Is Probate Necessary ? et seq. For a general discussion of marital agreements, including agreements for spousal support, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, Chs. 200- 216 (Matthew Bender 2d ed.).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDuty of SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART I. SCOPE

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.02

§ 225.02 Cross References

For discussion regarding liability of marital property for support, see Ch. 122, Community Property

For discussion of the family allowance and other probate devices for protection of the surviving spouse, see Ch. 440, Probate: Is Probate Necessary ? et seq.

For discussion regarding enforcement of spousal support orders, including earnings assignment orders and payments to a county officer, see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportEnforcementGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART I. SCOPE

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.03-225.09

[Reserved]

§§ 225.03[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.10

§ 225.10 Governing Statutes

The Family Code governs the general duty of spousal support and support orders in proceedings for dissolution and legal separation. Legal relations between husband and wife are generally governed by Fam. Code § 700 et seq., and spousal support in general is governed by Fam. Code § 4300 et seq. Liability of property for spousal support is governed by Fam. Code §§ 910-916 and 4301.

Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 7275 and 7282 address the duty to support a spouse institutionalized because of insanity or illness. Provisions for spousal support after the death of the supporting party are set forth in Fam. Code § 4360, and certain other measures that may be taken for the support of one spouse after the death of the other are included in Prob. Code §§ 6500, 6510, 6520-6528, and 6540-6545.

Temporary spousal support awards in proceedings for dissolution or legal separation are governed by Fam. Code §§ 3600-3604. Permanent support orders are governed by Fam. Code §§ 4330-4339. Factors to be considered in granting permanent support are set forth in Fam. Code §§ 4320-4323. Agreements between the parties for support are governed by Fam. Code §§ 3580 and 3590-3593. Discovery of tax returns of the parties in spousal support proceedings is governed by Fam. Code § 3552. Security measures that may be included in spousal support orders are governed by Fam. Code §§ 4339, 4350-4352, and 5200-5295.

Modification or termination of spousal support generally is governed by Fam. Code §§ 3650-3654. Discovery before the commencement of a modification or termination proceeding is governed by Fam. Code §§ 3660-3668.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDuty of SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportEnforcementGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal

SupportObligationsPeriodic SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.11

§ 225.11 "Support" Defined

"Support" is broadly defined as a source or means of living; subsistence, sustenance, or living. In a broad sense, the term includes all such means of living as would enable one to live in the degree of comfort suitable and becoming to his or her station in life. It is said to include anything requisite to housing, feeding, clothing, health, proper recreation, vacation, travel expenses, or other proper purposes. It includes proper care, nursing, and medical attendance in sickness, and suitable burial at death. Thus, "support" is a general term used to describe a wide variety of types of assistance designed to cover everyday living expenses, including medical care [In re Marriage of Benjamins (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 423, 429, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 313 (agreement to pay medical insurance premiums is one for spousal support)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDuty of Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.12

§ 225.12 Mutual Obligations of Support Between Spouses

The marital relationship imposes a mutual duty of support on the spouses [see Fam. Code §§ 720, 4300]. The obligation of support is an implicit term of the marriage relationship and has been said to be as binding on the spouses as if an express avowal of the obligation had been made [Boyd v. Boyd (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 374, 379] . The legal duty is entirely gender-neutral [see Orr v. Orr (1979) 440 U.S. 268, 278-283, 99 S. Ct. 1102, 59 L. Ed. 2d 306 (Alabama statute that allowed wife, but not husband, to be awarded alimony held unconstitutional)]; distinctions in prior law between the duties of husband and wife were eliminated in 1976 [see Stats. 1976, Ch. 130 (amending former Civ. Code § 242 and repealing former Civ. Code § 243 to eliminate gender-based distinctions)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDuty of Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.13

§ 225.13 Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[1] Proceedings in Which Spousal Support May Be Ordered

In a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, or legal separation, the court has jurisdiction to inquire into and render any judgment and make such orders as are appropriate concerning the support of either party [Fam. Code § 2010(d); see Fam. Code §§ 3600 (temporary support, discussed in § 225.80 et seq.), 4330 (permanent support, discussed in § 225.110 et seq.); In re Marriage of Stimel (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 991, 996, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18 ; see also Fam. Code § 2254 (permitting order to support putative spouse during proceeding for nullity or on judgment of nullity)]. The duty of support may also be enforced in an action that does not address the status of the marital relationship [see Fam. Code § 4303(a)]. Enforcing the right to spousal support without filing for dissolution of marriage, and the right to support in an action for nullity of marriage, are discussed in § 225.30 et seq.

A California domiciliary whose marriage was dissolved ex parte in another jurisdiction that did not have personal jurisdiction [see § 225.14] over him or her may seek spousal support from a California court [Hudson v. Hudson (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 735, 744-745, 344 P.2d 295 ; see In re Marriage of Newman (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 846, 851, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 691 (Cal. court that otherwise has jurisdiction over issues and parties is not deprived of jurisdiction to award spousal support by pendency of proceeding in another state that does not address that issue)].

[2] Proper Court

The superior court has jurisdiction in all proceedings under the Family Code [Fam. Code § 200]. Federal courts do not have subject matter jurisdiction to award spousal support [Ankenbrandt v. Richards (1992) 504 U.S. 689, 703-704, 112 S. Ct. 2206, 119 L. Ed. 2d 468] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal

SupportAnnulmentGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportAnnulmentJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportLegal SeparationFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.14

§ 225.14 Personal Jurisdiction

Because a spousal support award imposes a personal obligation on the spouse ordered to pay the support, a court ordinarily must have in personam jurisdiction over that party in order to award support [see Baldwin v. Baldwin (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 406, 415-416, 170 P.2d 670 ; Comfort v. Comfort (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 736, 741, 751, 112 P.2d 259 ; Judd v. Superior Court (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 38, 45-46, 131 Cal. Rptr. 246] . However, if there is community or quasi-community property over which the court has quasi in rem jurisdiction [see Fam. Code § 2011 (authority to assert quasi in rem jurisdiction over community and quasi-community property)], a court may perhaps fashion a spousal support order to be paid from designated property [see Shaffer v. Heitner (1977) 433 U.S. 186, 199 n.17, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed. 2d 683 ; Hanson v. Denckla (1958) 357 U.S. 235, 246 n.12, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283] . For further discussion relating to personal jurisdiction in dissolution proceedings, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure . For a comprehensive discussion of "in personam," "in rem," and "quasi in rem" jurisdiction generally, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportAnnulmentJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdiction

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.15

§ 225.15 Relation Between Spousal Support and Community Property Rights

Spousal support may not be ordered in lieu of an equal division of community property. Spousal support is discretionary, while property rights are absolute, and a party should not have to appeal to the discretion of the court in order to receive what is rightfully his or hers [In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 848, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 ; see In re Marriage of White (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1022, 1026, 237 Cal. Rptr. 764] .

Thus, a court may not increase spousal support as a method to achieve payment of amounts required to be paid to the supported spouse to equally divide the parties' community property [In re Marriage of Maunder (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 570, 573, 127 Cal. Rptr. 707 ; see In re Marriage of Cobb (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 855, 861, 137 Cal. Rptr. 670] . However, a court may order the debtor spouse to make periodic payments to the creditor spouse on a property division obligation, in addition to amounts awarded for spousal support [Verner v. Verner (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 718, 727, 143 Cal. Rptr. 826 ; cf. In re Marriage of Schofield (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 131, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1] .

Although spousal support may not be ordered in lieu of a proper property division, the propriety and amount of support may well depend on the division of community property. If a party receives income-producing community property or quasi-community property sufficient to give that party proper support, the court may deny support to be paid from the separate property of the other party [Fam. Code § 4321(a); see In re Marriage of Mastropaolo (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 953, 957-958, 213 Cal. Rptr. 26 (propriety of spousal support award depended on whether husband's military retirement pay was divisible community property); cf. In re Marriage of Terry (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 921, 932, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 760 (dictates of Fam. Code § 4322 compelled termination of spousal support when former wife had sufficient income to meet support needs)]. For further discussion of the effect of property received in the division of community property on spousal support obligations, see § 225.60 et seq.

Although it may not be imposed on the parties by the court, one party may agree to a nonmodifiable support obligation in exchange for a more or less favorable division of property [see Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(d); In re Marriage of Carletti (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 989, 995, 126 Cal. Rptr. 1] . For further discussion, see §§ 225.60 et seq., 225.200 et seq.

One court permitted a short-term deferred disposition of the community residence, characterizing the out-of-residence husband's forbearance of immediate receipt of his monetary interest in the residence and the denial of interest on that sum as spousal support [In re Marriage of Hurtienne (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 374, 380, 178 Cal. Rptr. 748 (husband was unemployed, and otherwise unable to pay support)]. Another court refused to adopt this approach in a case in which the husband was able to pay and was currently paying spousal support, presumably at an appropriate level [In re Marriage of Horowitz (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 368, 371-372, 205 Cal. Rptr. 874] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionEquitable DistributionGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.16

§ 225.16 Family Support

Family support is an agreement between the parties, or an order or judgment, that combines child support and spousal support without designating the amount allocated to each [Fam. Code § 92; see Fam. Code § 4066]. The primary purpose behind a family support designation is to effect income tax savings. For discussion, see Ch. 227, Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution .

If the family support designation is used, the court is not obligated to make a separate order for child support [Fam. Code § 3586 (referring to parents' agreement for combined child and spousal support)]. However, in the absence of a family support designation, it is error to award unreasonably high spousal support and unreasonably low child support so as to permit the obligor to achieve favorable tax treatment [In re Marriage of Ames (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 234, 239-240, 130 Cal. Rptr. 435] .

Note that child support software programs provide a means for computing the tax savings that are available by using family support rather than the customary designations of child and spousal support [see In re Marriage of Schulze (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 519, 525, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 488 (providing an example of results of such computation)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportTaxationFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportTaxation

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.17-225.29

[Reserved]

§§ 225.17[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.30

§ 225.30 Governing Statutes

The marital duty of support between spouses is set forth in Fam. Code §§ 720 and 4300. Legal relations between husband and wife are more generally governed by Fam. Code § 700 et seq., and the duty of spousal support is more generally governed by Fam. Code §§ 4300-4303. Judicial determination of the validity of a void or voidable marriage is governed by Fam. Code § 2200 et seq.

Liability of property for spousal support is governed by Fam. Code §§ 910-916 and 4301. The duty to support a spouse institutionalized because of insanity or illness is governed by Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 7275 and 7282. The right to spousal support during the pendency of a proceeding for dissolution or legal separation is governed by Fam. Code §§ 3600-3604, and the right to spousal support on a judgment of dissolution or legal separation is governed by Fam. Code §§ 4330-4339. Various legal devices for the support of a spouse on the death of the other spouse are set forth in Prob. Code §§ 6500 (temporary right to remain in possession of family home), 6510 (petition to set aside exempt property), 6520-6528 (probate homestead), and 6540-6545 (family allowance).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDuty of SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary SupportFamily LawMarriageValidityVoid & Voidable MarriagesVoid Marriages

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.31

§ 225.31 Marriage Requirement

[1] Nonmarital Cohabitants

Except as discussed in § 225.31[2], there must be a valid marriage in order for there to be any obligation of support [see Hudson v. Hudson (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 735, 738, 344 P.2d 295] . No common-law marriage can be created under California law [see Marvin v. Marvin (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 660, 684 n.24, 134 Cal. Rptr. 815, 557 P.2d 106 ; but see Fam. Code § 308 (marriage contracted outside California is valid in California if valid under laws where contracted); Colbert v. Colbert (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 276, 280, 169 P.2d 633 (support can be awarded to partner in common-law marriage valid under Texas law)], and there is no right to support between unmarried cohabitants that arises merely from cohabitation or from the relationship [see Friedman v. Friedman (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 876, 883-890, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892] . However, obligations in the nature of support between unmarried partners may be enforced under general principles of contract law [see Marvin v. Marvin (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 660, 667-685, 134 Cal. Rptr. 815, 557 P.2d 106] . Effective January 1, 2005, registered domestic partners and former and surviving registered domestic partners have the same rights, protections, and benefits, and are subject to the same responsibilities, obligations, and duties under law, as spouses [Fam. Code § 297.5]. For further discussion, see Ch. 387, Nonmarital Cohabitation .

[2] Void or Voidable Marriage

During the pendency of a proceeding for nullity of marriage, or on judgment of nullity of marriage, the court may order a party to pay for the support of the other party in the same manner as if the marriage had not been void or voidable [see Fam. Code §§ 2200, 2201 (void marriages), 2210 (voidable marriage)], if the party for whose benefit the order is made is found to be a putative spouse [Fam. Code § 2254; see Fam. Code § 2010(d)]. A putative spouse is a party to a void or voidable marriage who believed in good faith that the marriage was valid [see Fam. Code § 2251(a)(1)]. For further discussion of nullity of marriage, see Ch. 25, Annulment (Nullity) of Marriage and Related Spousal Rights .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDuty of SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportAnnulmentGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportAnnulmentEffectsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarriageValidityCommon Law MarriagesFamily LawMarriageValidityVoid & Voidable MarriagesGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.32

§ 225.32 Scope of Support Obligation

[1] Effect of "Liability of Property" Statutes

Statutory rules regarding the respective liabilities of community property, quasi-community property, and separate property, for debts incurred by a married person, are set forth in Fam. Code § 900 et seq. These rules are primarily designed to define creditors' rights against married persons and their property. However, these rules, in effect, also serve to qualify the extent of the duty of support, both while the spouses are living together and while they are living apart [see Fam. Code § 914 (liability for necessaries); see also Fam. Code § 4301 (duty to support spouse out of separate property subject to Fam. Code § 914)]. These matters are discussed in §§ 225.34, 225.35. Spousal liability and the liability of property for marital debts is discussed further in Ch. 122, Community Property, and Ch. 359, Marriage.

[2] Necessaries

The duty of support encompasses the obligation to pay the debts of the spouse, provided that the debts are for "necessaries" of life [see Fam. Code § 914]. What is necessary is determined according to the parties' station in life [In re Marriage of Higgason (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 476, 488, 110 Cal. Rptr. 897, 516 P.2d 289] .

Necessaries of life have been found, in various cases, to include the following:

1. Food, habitation, medical treatment [Department of Mental Hygiene v. Kolts (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 154, 157, 55 Cal. Rptr. 437] ;

2. Nursing services [Davis v. Fyfe (1930) 107 Cal. App. 281, 284, 290 P. 468] ;

3. Medical expenses of final illness and funeral expenses [Odone v. Marzocchi (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 431, 439, 211 P.2d 297] ;

4. Legal services [Stone v. Conkle (1939) 31 Cal. App. 2d 348, 351, 88 P.2d 197] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDebt LiabilityFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsDuty of SupportFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsProperty RightsCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsProperty RightsCharacterizationMarital PropertyFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsProperty RightsCharacterizationSeparate Property

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.33

§ 225.33 Waiver of Spousal Support Duty

Except as otherwise provided by law, spouses cannot, by contract with each other, alter their legal relationships [Fam. Code § 1620]. Thus, historically, courts have considered any attempt by the parties to diminish or waive their duty of support in a premarital agreement to be against public policy and unenforceable. In one leading case, an appellate court held that this limitation extended both to attempted waivers of a duty to support during the marriage, and to attempted waivers of spousal support should the marriage terminate in the future [In re Marriage of Higgason (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 476, 486-487, 110 Cal. Rptr. 897, 516 P.2d 289] . Provisions that purport to waive the support duty during marriage appear to remain prohibited.

However, the California Supreme Court held in 2000 that a premarital agreement containing a spousal support waiver on marital dissolution does not violate public policy and is not per se unenforceable, when the waiver is executed by intelligent, well-educated persons, each of whom has the advice of counsel regarding his or her rights and obligations as marital partners at the time they execute the waiver [In re Marriage of Pendleton & Fireman (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 39, 53-54, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 278, 5 P.3d 839] . The Court left open the question of whether circumstances existing at the time of a marital dissolution might make enforcement of a premarital agreement containing a spousal support waiver unjust [In re Marriage of Pendleton & Fireman (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 39, 53-54, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 278, 5 P.3d 839] . In response, the Legislature amended California's Uniform Premarital Agreement Act, operative January 1, 2002 [Fam. Code § 1600 et seq.], to provide that a provision in a premarital agreement relating to spousal support is unenforceable if (1) the party against whom enforcement is sought was not represented by independent counsel at the time the agreement was signed, or (2) if the spousal support provision is unconscionable at the time of enforcement [Fam. Code § 1612(c); see also Fam. Code § 1615(c) (premarital agreement was not executed voluntarily unless party against whom enforcement is sought was either represented by independent legal counsel or executed express written waiver of representation by independent legal counsel)]. Thus, premarital agreements with spousal support waivers are not automatically enforceable, simply because the agreements were fair and just when executed; rather, their enforceability will be determined by trial courts on a case-by-case basis [see Fam. Code § 1615(c); In re Marriage of Pendleton & Fireman (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 39, 53-54, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 278, 5 P.3d 839] .

For further discussion and forms of premarital and marital agreements, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed., Chs. 201, 211- 216 (Matthew Bender); and California Legal Forms, Chs. 108, 109, 120 (Matthew Bender).

Inheritance rights, including those in the nature of support such as a family allowance, may be waived [see Estate of Wamack (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 112, 113-116, 289 P.2d 871] . Also, spouses may agree to a waiver or limitation of support in a separation, property settlement, or marital termination agreement [see Fam. Code § 3580; Patton v. Patton (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 520, 523, 196 P.2d 909] . For further discussion, see § 225.60 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDuty of SupportFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsProperty RightsPremarital AgreementsRequirementsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsProperty RightsPremarital AgreementsRequirementsFull & Frank DisclosureFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsProperty RightsPremarital AgreementsRequirementsIndependent Legal CounselFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.34

§ 225.34 Duty of Spouses Living Together

Spouses must support each other while they are living together [Fam. Code § 4300; cf. Fam. Code § 4302 (no duty to support spouse living separately by agreement unless agreement provides for support)]. Their community property, which with certain exceptions is under the management and control of either spouse [see Fam. Code §§ 1100, 1102; for further discussion, see Ch. 122, Community Property], is primarily liable for this support [see Fam. Code § 910(a)]. But if there is no community or quasi-community property, a spouse must support the other from his or her separate property [Fam. Code § 4301]. However, liability of one spouse's separate property for the debts of the other is limited to debts for which the spouse is personally liable [Fam. Code § 914(b); see Fam. Code § 913(b)(1)]. The personal liability of a married person for the debts of the spouse while living together is limited to debts incurred for necessaries of life [Fam. Code § 914(a)(1); see § 225.32[2]].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDebt LiabilityFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsDuty of SupportFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsProperty RightsCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsProperty RightsCharacterizationSeparate Property

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.35

§ 225.35 Duty of Spouses Living Apart

One spouse is not liable for the support of the other if they are living separately by agreement unless support is stipulated in the agreement [Fam. Code § 4302; see Fam. Code § 3580]. If there is no agreement for support during separation, the duty is suspended, not terminated. Either party may subsequently seek support in a legal proceeding to resolve the status of the marriage [see London Guarantee & Acci. Co. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1919) 181 Cal. 460, 466-467, 184 P. 864] . Reconciliation of the parties and resumption of cohabitation restores any duty of support that was suspended under the agreement [Lloyd Corp. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1943) 61 Cal. App. 2d 275, 142 P.2d 754] .

There is no guidance in the statute and little in the cases as to what constitutes a sufficient agreement under Fam. Code § 4302. It is not clear whether an oral agreement is sufficient if its terms can be proved, or if the agreement must be in writing [compare In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 85-86 n.4, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 (noting that existence of agreement was unresolved, but leaving open possibility that agreement could be proved by conduct of parties), with Fam. Code § 3580 (amenable to construction that separation agreement must be written)]. Nor does it appear to be of any significance whether the intent of the spouses is that the separation will be permanent or temporary.

It appears to be possible to permanently waive the right to support by an express provision in the agreement [see Estate of Kalal (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 841, 850-851, 175 Cal. Rptr. 582 (noting that there may be instances in which court can clearly find that parties intended by agreement to separate and permanently waive spousal support); see also Patton v. Patton (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 520, 523, 196 P.2d 909] . For further discussion of the binding effect of agreements waiving support on the court in a dissolution of marriage matter, see § 225.60 et seq.

Under Fam. Code § 4302, if no separation agreement is proved, the duty of support continues for spouses living apart [see In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 85-86 n.4, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165] . Further, in the absence of an agreement to separate, a spouse (and his or her separate property) remains liable for debts incurred by the other for common necessaries of life while they are living separately [Fam. Code § 914(a)(2), (b); see § 225.32[2]].

Therefore, a unilateral abandonment has no effect on the mutual duty of support [Estate of Hafner (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1399, 229 Cal. Rptr. 676 ; but see In re Estate of Fulton (1936) 15 Cal. App. 2d 202, 204-211, 59 P.2d 508 (holding, and surveying older line of cases holding, that spouse who abandons the other without cause forfeits right to support from abandoned spouse)].

The community estate is not liable for debts incurred by either spouse after separation and before a judgment of dissolution of marriage or legal separation [Fam. Code § 910(b)].

For an illustrative form of an agreement to separate, which includes provisions regarding support, see § 225.351.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDebt LiabilityFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsDuty of SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportLegal Separation

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.36

§ 225.36 Effect of Incompetence

The duty to support one's spouse does not end if the spouse has been adjudged insane or a conservator has been appointed [Guardianship of Thrasher (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 768, 776, 234 P.2d 230] , even if the spouse has been institutionalized because of insanity or illness [Welf. & Inst. Code § 7275; Department of Mental Hygiene v. Kolts (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 154, 156-158, 55 Cal. Rptr. 437] . This is true even if the incompetent spouse has an estate of his or her own [Department of Mental Hygiene v. Kolts (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 154, 157-158, 55 Cal. Rptr. 437 ; Guardianship of Thrasher (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 768, 776-778, 234 P.2d 230] . Nor can the duty be terminated by dissolution of marriage [see Fam. Code § 2313; see also § 225.37].

The State Department of Health may, in its own name, bring an action under Welf. & Inst. Code § 7282 against the supporting spouse to recover the costs and charges of transporting the patient to the state hospital and the amount due for the care, support, and maintenance of the patient in the institution. Any payments made to the department would apply towards the discharge of the paying spouse's obligation to support the insane spouse [see Young v. Young (1970) 14 Cal. App. 3d 1, 3-5, 92 Cal. Rptr. 148 (holding, however, that State Department of Health was not authorized to compromise incurably insane wife's support rights against husband by consenting to modification of divorce decree to reduce amount of spousal support)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDuty of SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceFault-Based GroundsInsanityFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProceduresPublic Health & Welfare LawHealthcareMental Health ServicesCommitmentGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.37

§ 225.37 Effect of Dissolution or Legal Separation

[1] Duty of Support Continues

Except perhaps in the case of a permanent waiver in a separation agreement [see Fam. Code § 4302; see also § 225.35; see § 225.351], the mutual duty of support is not terminated by legal proceedings for dissolution of marriage or legal separation. In such a matter, the court may order either party to pay spousal support to the other, during the pendency of the proceeding [see Fam. Code § 3600], and in the judgment [Fam. Code § 4330]. Spousal support in dissolution proceedings is discussed in § 225.60 et seq.

[2] On Ground of Incurable Insanity

If a marriage is dissolved on the ground of incurable insanity [see Fam. Code § 2310(b)], the judgment does not relieve a spouse from any obligation imposed by law as a result of the marriage for the support of the spouse who is incurably insane. The court may make any order for support, or require a bond therefor, as the circumstances require [Fam. Code § 2313].

If the insane spouse is committed to a state mental hospital or developmental center and has no conservator of the estate, the executive director of the hospital or center may collect any money due or owing to the spouse, such as spousal support, not exceeding a specified amount to be adjusted annually, and deposit it in the patient's personal deposit fund [Welf. & Inst. Code § 7289; see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 7281, 7289.1].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDuty of SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceFault-Based GroundsInsanityFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProceduresPublic Health & Welfare LawHealthcareMental Health ServicesCommitmentGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.38

§ 225.38 Effect of Death

[1] Right to Family Allowance

On the death of a married person, the surviving spouse may petition the court for a family allowance [Prob. Code § 6540(a)(1)]. If the allowance is granted, it is paid out of the decedent's estate [Prob. Code §§ 6540(a), 6544]. The allowance may be denied if the surviving spouse has reasonable maintenance from other sources and there are other persons entitled to the allowance [Prob. Code § 6540(c) ; see Estate of Wallace (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 196, 202, 141 Cal. Rptr. 426 (allowance may not be denied if spouse has other sources of support unless other persons are also entitled to allowance)]. The family allowance is an extension of the decedent's obligation of support [Estate of Schumacher (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 146, 152, 95 Cal. Rptr. 572 ; see Fam. Code § 4337 (absent agreement to contrary, spousal support order terminates on death of either party)].

The survivor's right to the allowance requires that the marital relationship exist at the time of death [Estate of Hafner (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1396-1397, 229 Cal. Rptr. 676 (putative spouse may not claim allowance)]. Therefore, dissolution of marriage before death terminates the survivor's right to the allowance, even if the decedent is under an order to pay spousal support [Estate of Casimir (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 773, 782-783, 97 Cal. Rptr. 623] . Agreements continuing spousal support on the death of the supporting party [see Fam. Code § 4337], are discussed, and forms are provided, in §§ 225.60 et seq., 225.370 et seq.

The surviving spouse can recover the allowance only if he or she was entitled to support from the decedent at the time of death [see Estate of Kalal (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 841, 847, 175 Cal. Rptr. 582] . The right is not automatically lost merely because the spouses were living apart at the time of death [Estate of Fallon (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 402, 404, 317 P.2d 963 ; see § 225.35]. Nor does the fact that the surviving spouse was not actually receiving support preclude an allowance [Estate of Hafner (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1398-1399, 229 Cal. Rptr. 676] .

The family allowance is strictly a creation of probate law, designed to provide support for the surviving spouse during the pendency of probate proceedings. When there is no estate to be administered, such as when all assets have been placed in a revocable trust before the decedent's death, it is improper to award a family allowance [Parson v. Parson (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 537, 542, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 686 (disinherited surviving wife was not entitled to family allowance)].

Similarly, standards that might apply in other types of proceedings are not determinative of whether the allowance is proper. Factors for the award of spousal support in a dissolution matter [see Fam. Code § 4320; see also § 225.60 et seq.], including duration of the marriage, are irrelevant [Estate of Wallace (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 196, 202-203, 141 Cal. Rptr. 426] .

The right to a family allowance may be waived by agreement to that effect [Estate of Wiedemann (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 362, 367, 39 Cal. Rptr. 496] . And unlike other waivers of a right to support (see § 225.33), the right to a family allowance may be waived in an antenuptial agreement [Estate of Wamack (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 112, 115-116 . 289 P.2d 871] . It is not waived, however, simply by delay in petitioning for it [Estate of Secord (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 783, 785, 192 P.2d 81] .

It has also been said that a surviving spouse may lose the right to a family allowance by conduct [see Estate of Brooks (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 748, 750, 171 P.2d 724] . However, cases standing for that proposition, all of which are from the era when marital fault was a factor in awarding support, appear to actually involve the surviving spouse's abandonment of the decedent under circumstances that terminated the decedent's duty to support [see, e.g., Estate of Fulton (1936) 15 Cal. App. 2d 202, 204, 59 P.2d 508] . The better rule is that the court has no discretionary right to withhold a family allowance to one who is statutorily entitled to it, although the amount and duration of the allowance are within the discretion of the court [Estate of Secord (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 783, 785-786, 192 P.2d 81] .

For further discussion of the family allowance, see Ch. 448, Probate: Family Allowance .

[2] Other Family Protection

If a married person dies, the surviving spouse may remain in possession of the family home until the filing of the probate inventory and for 60 days thereafter, or for such other period as may be ordered by the court [Prob. Code § 6500]. The surviving spouse may also petition to set aside property that is exempt from execution by creditors [see Prob. Code § 6510], and petition to set aside property for a probate homestead [see Prob. Code § 6520 et seq.].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDuty of SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.39

§ 225.39 Enforcement of Support Obligation During Marriage

One spouse may bring an action against the other to enforce the duty of support [Fam. Code § 4303(a); see Galland v. Galland (1869) 38 Cal. 265, 268-272 (general equity power of court to order support)]. In such an action, pendente lite support may be ordered, despite the lack of an express statutory provision authorizing it, under the court's general equity power [Kilroy v. Kilroy (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 1141, 1144-1148, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 812] . For an illustrative complaint in such an action, see § 225.350. If a county has furnished support to a married person, the county has the same right to secure reimbursement and obtain continuing support [Fam. Code § 4303(b)]. A married person may also file for a judgment of legal separation, in which spousal support may be ordered [Fam. Code § 4330].

In addition, there are criminal penalties for nonsupport. It is a misdemeanor for a married person to fail to provide the necessary food, clothing, shelter, and medical attention for his or her spouse if he or she has the ability to provide for support [Penal Code § 270a]. If the defendant is convicted and a fine imposed, the fine may be ordered paid to the spouse of the defendant [Penal Code § 270d].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureCriminal OffensesCrimes Against PersonsDomestic OffensesGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsDuty of SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.40-225.59

[Reserved]

§§ 225.40[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
1. In General

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.60

§ 225.60 Governing Statutes

The definition of spousal support is set forth in Fam. Code § 150. Temporary spousal support awards in proceedings for dissolution or legal separation are governed by Fam. Code §§ 3600-3604. Permanent support orders are governed by Fam. Code §§ 4330-4339. Factors to be considered in granting permanent support are set forth in Fam. Code §§ 4320-4323. Support agreements are governed by Fam. Code §§ 3580 and 3590-3593. Discovery of tax returns of the parties in a proceeding involving spousal support is governed by Fam. Code § 3552. Provisions for spousal support after the death of the supporting party are set forth in Fam. Code § 4360. Security measures which may be included in spousal support orders are governed by Fam. Code § 4339 (court-ordered security for support), Fam. Code §§ 5200-5295 (earnings assignment orders), and Fam. Code §§ 4350-4352 (payment of support to court-designated officer).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportEnforcementGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
1. In General

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.61-225.79

[Reserved]

§§ 225.61[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.80

§ 225.80 When Temporary Support Is Authorized

During the pendency of any proceeding for dissolution of marriage or for legal separation, the court may order the husband or wife to pay any amount that is necessary for the support of the other consistent with the requirements relating to domestic violence in Family Code Sections 4320(i), (m) and 4325 [see Fam. Code § 2010(d)]. A proceeding for dissolution is commenced by filing a petition [Fam. Code § 2330(a)], and remains pending until its final determination on appeal or until the time for appeal has passed [Code Civil Proc. § 1049; see In re Marriage of Askmo (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1038-1040, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 662 (temporary support and attorney's fees were awarded to wife, while prior appeal was pending and default judgment against her had not been set aside)]. For further discussion of temporary support pending appeal, see § 225.92.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProceduresFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.81

§ 225.81 Purpose of Award

The purpose of a temporary support order is to maintain the status quo of the parties until trial, in order to pay creditors and to enable a spouse to live in substantially the same manner to which he or she has been accustomed pending disposition of the case [In re Marriage of Campbell (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 502, 509, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 908 ; In re Marriage of Winter (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 1926, 1932, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 225 ; see In re Marriage of Smith (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 469, 494 n.16, 274 Cal. Rptr. 911 ; Estate of Fawcett (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 770, 784, 43 Cal. Rptr. 160 ; Whelan v. Whelan (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 690, 692, 197 P.2d 361] . It is also to provide the less financially able spouse with whatever is needed by him or her to litigate properly that spouse's side of the controversy [Estate of Fawcett (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 770, 784 ; Heller v. Heller (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 603, 606, 199 P.2d 44] . The same is true of an award of temporary support pending appeal [Bain v. Superior Court (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 804, 810, 111 Cal. Rptr. 848] . However, if the parties' resources are limited, it should be explained to the client that neither will be able to maintain the same standard of living while living separately as they did while living together, because it costs more to support two households than it does to support one [see In re Marriage of Morrison (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 437, 455, 143 Cal. Rptr. 139, 573 P.2d 41] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.82

§ 225.82 Standard for Making Award

The standards for temporary and permanent spousal support have historically been significantly different. Because the purpose of temporary support has traditionally been to maintain the living conditions and standards of the parties in as close to the status quo position as possible pending trial and the division of property and liabilities, a temporary support order based solely on income has been deemed appropriate [In re Marriage of Winter (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 1926, 1933, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 225] . In contrast, an order for permanent spousal support requires consideration of numerous factors, set forth in Fam. Code § 4320, in addition to the income of the parties. Historically, no factual findings under Family Code Section 4320 have been required for temporary spousal support orders [In re Marriage of Czapar (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1308, 1316, 285 Cal. Rptr. 479] .

Effective January 1, 2003, temporary support orders must be "consistent with the requirements of" Family Code Section 4320(i), (m) (history of domestic violence must be considered in making spousal support award) and Family Code Section 4325 (presumption against awarding support to abuser convicted of domestic violence) [Fam. Code § 3600]. From January 1, 2002, to January 1, 2003, the statute required consistency with "the requirements" of Section 4320 without limitation, but the legislature quickly retreated from this position.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureCriminal OffensesCrimes Against PersonsDomestic OffensesDomestic AssaultGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.83

§ 225.83 Court Schedules and Computer Software

Many courts have promulgated temporary spousal support schedules or formulas based solely on income in an attempt to obtain uniformity of decisions and encourage stipulations [see, e.g., Sonoma Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 9.2(E), Appendix 9-c]. Use of these calculation methods has been entirely appropriate to determine temporary support [In re Marriage of Winter (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 1926, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 225 ; see § 225.82]. Consideration of income alone may now be inappropriate because of the statutory requirement that temporary support orders be "consistent" with Family Code Sections 4320 and 4325. In any event, it is inappropriate to use income tables or like calculation methods in setting permanent spousal support, because the many factors under Fam. Code § 4320 must also be considered [see In re Marriage of Burlini (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 65, 69, 191 Cal. Rptr. 541 ; see also In re Marriage of Schulze (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 519, 528, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 488 ; In re Marriage of Zywiciel (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1078, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 242] .

There are several computer software products that have been used by California judges and attorneys for the purpose of computing temporary spousal support [see In re Marriage of Schulze (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 519, 522-528, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 488] . The use of this software has been considered appropriate as long as it conforms to the standards set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.275 [see Fam. Code § 3830; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.275(j) (all courts must permit parties or their counsel to use any software that Judicial Council has certified under Rule 5.275)]. If unusual circumstances exist in a given case, the temporary spousal support amount generated by the computer program must be adjusted in consideration of those circumstances. As with temporary support schedules, use of computer software alone to determine the amount of permanent spousal support is inappropriate [In re Marriage of Olson (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1, 5-6 n.3, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.84

§ 225.84 Manner of Making Application

Application for a temporary spousal support order is ordinarily made by an application for order [see Cal. Judicial Council Form 310] and order to show cause [see Cal. Judicial Council Form 300]. If the party from whom support is sought has appeared in the proceeding [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.120 (acts constituting an appearance)], the order may be sought by noticed motion [see Cal. Judicial Council Form 301]. Note that a pendente lite order awarding support or attorney's fees can technically be made on a court's own motion [In re Marriage of Askmo (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1038, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 662] .

The general procedure for obtaining or opposing temporary orders is discussed in Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure , and illustrative forms of applications for orders, noticed motions, and orders to show cause are also set out in Ch. 221.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.85

§ 225.85 Showing Required

[1] Need

Fam. Code § 3600 authorizes the court during the pendency of the proceeding to order either spouse to pay any amount that is necessary for the support of the other spouse, subject to the condition that it be consistent with the requirements relating to domestic violence in Family Code Sections 4320(i), (m) and 4325. The amount of support lies within the trial court's discretion, based on the needs of the parties [In re Marriage of Campbell (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 502, 509, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 908 ; In re Marriage of Czapar (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1308, 1316, 285 Cal. Rptr. 479] . The burden of showing the need is on the party seeking the support [see Evid. Code § 500].

There is no need for the spouse seeking support to set out penny by penny his or her requirements; there need only be a showing on which the court can determine approximately what his or her needs are [Zinke v. Zinke (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 379, 385, 28 Cal. Rptr. 7] . This showing is made primarily on the Income and Expense Declaration [see Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-150 which must be filed with the court before any hearing on temporary support [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.128]. For an illustrative example of an Income and Expense Declaration, see § 225.370.

Documentation in support of the declared expenses should be produced, particularly if an expense is unusual in nature, or unusually high. The Income and Expense Declaration should be filled out keeping in mind that the purpose of temporary support is to preserve the status quo pending final settlement (see § 225.81). In most cases, the available resources will be insufficient to support both spouses at the marital standard of living.

The parties may, of course, stipulate to the amount of spousal support to be allowed pendente lite, and obviate the need for proof of the supported spouse's need and of the paying spouse's ability to pay. The stipulation may be entered into orally in open court [see In re Marriage of Borson (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 632, 635, 112 Cal. Rptr. 432] .

The authority of the court to direct a spouse to pay temporary support is not divested by the fact that the spouse is paying all the bills contracted by the other spouse, or by the declaration that he or she is willing to pay those bills during the pendency of the proceeding. The other spouse is not required to depend on the will or caprice of the spouse for support, but is entitled to receive a definite amount of money with which to supply his or her needs, and to have the power of disbursing it [Anderson v. Anderson (1902) 137 Cal. 225, 226-227, 69 P. 1061] .

[2] Ability to Pay

A principal factor to be considered on an application for temporary support is the ability to pay of the spouse from whom support is sought. A trial court's rejection of evidence offered to show a lack of ability to pay has been held to constitute prejudicial error requiring reversal of the support order [Arnold v. Arnold (1932) 215 Cal. 613, 614-615, 12 P.2d 435 ; see also In re Marriage of Murray (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 581, 594, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 342 (court cannot provisionally reduce temporary support obligation subject to reinstatement if facts on which reduction was based are later determined to be inaccurate)].

The court may, however, base the award on the supporting party's earning capacity, rather than actual earnings, under some circumstances [see Meagher v. Meagher (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 62, 63-65, 11 Cal. Rptr. 650 (husband quit job after separation and took work paying substantially less)]. These issues are discussed in the context of permanent support orders in § 225.113.

Although federal law directs state courts to give full force and effect to American Indian tribal law and custom in civil matters, the court will not deny temporary spousal support on the basis of a tribal custom and tradition that is inconsistent with California law and public policy regarding temporary spousal support [see In re Marriage of Jacobsen (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1187, 1191-1193, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 162 (Chumash tribal custom and tradition providing that funds distributed by tribe to its members should not be used to pay spousal support to nonmembers not applied as contrary to California support law)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCriminal Law & ProcedureCriminal OffensesCrimes Against PersonsDomestic OffensesDomestic AssaultGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.86

§ 225.86 Effect of Separate Estate

If there are no children and a party has or acquires a separate estate, including income from employment, sufficient for his or her proper support, no support order may be made or continued against the other party [Fam. Code § 4322; In re Marriage of Terry (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 921, 932, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 760 (dictates of Fam. Code § 4322 compelled termination of spousal support when former wife had sufficient income to meet support needs); see § 225.116]. However, a spouse is not required to impair the capital of her or his separate estate before seeking an award of temporary support [Whelan v. Whelan (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 690, 692, 197 P.2d 361 ; Loeb v. Loeb (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 141, 145, 190 P.2d 246] .

One court has held that for the purpose of setting temporary spousal support, a "separate estate" does not include community property preliminarily distributed to the supported spouse. The court stated that these funds must continue to be characterized as community property until the final property division [In re Marriage of Winter (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 1926, 1934, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 225] . Fam. Code § 4321, which allows the court to deny support to a party out of the separate property of the other party if the party has separate property, or is earning a livelihood, or if there is community or quasi-community property sufficient to provide for her or his support, applies only to permanent support [see Fam. Code § 4321(a) (court may deny support in judgment of dissolution or legal separation), discussed in § 225.116].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.87

§ 225.87 Effect of Raising Certain Defenses

[1] Denial That Marriage Exists

The existence of a marriage is a jurisdictional prerequisite for the right of the court to order support [Colbert v. Colbert (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 276, 279, 169 P.2d 633] , although the court may award support in a proceeding for nullity of marriage to a putative spouse, that is, one who had a good-faith belief in the validity of the marriage [Fam. Code §§ 2251(a)(1), 2254; see § 225.30 et seq.]. However, if the respondent in a dissolution action asserts the nonexistence of the marriage, the evidence necessary to prove a marriage (or, presumably, putative spouse status) need not be as complete on an application for temporary support as that required at the time of trial to prove the marriage [Colbert v. Colbert (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 276, 280, 169 P.2d 633 ; In re Marriage of Stich (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 64, 71-72, 214 Cal. Rptr. 919 , cert. denied, 479 U.S. 946] . Ordinarily, if a ceremonial marriage is shown and if the ceremony is followed by the assumption of marital relations, no further proof of the fact of marriage need be made in preliminary proceedings in order to sustain an award of temporary support. An extended inquiry into the validity of the marriage will not be allowed in preliminary proceedings [Dietrich v. Dietrich (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 497, 502, 261 P.2d 269 , cert. denied, 346 U.S. 938] . Although an order for temporary support implies a finding of the existence of the relationship, the order does not finally determine those issues or affect the final judgment [Dietrich v. Dietrich (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 497, 502-503, 261 P.2d 269 , cert. denied, 346 U.S. 938 (1954) ; see Gromeeko v. Gromeeko (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 117, 123-127, 242 P.2d 41] .

[2] Waiver by Agreement

If the respondent asserts that the right to support has been previously waived by agreement, temporary support may be awarded until the court makes its determination on the validity of the agreement [Patton v. Patton (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 520, 523, 196 P.2d 909] . For further discussion of agreements waiving spousal support, see § 225.30 et seq. and § 225.125.

[3] Change of Venue

The court in a proceeding for dissolution of marriage or legal separation may, before the determination of a motion to transfer venue, consider and determine motions for allowance of temporary support and make all necessary and proper orders in connection therewith [Code Civ. Proc. § 396b(c)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueIndividual DefendantsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary SupportFamily LawMarriageValidityVoid & Voidable MarriagesVoid MarriagesFamily LawMarriageValidityVoid & Voidable MarriagesVoidable Marriages

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.88

§ 225.88 Effect of Dismissal

If a proceeding in which support is at issue is subsequently terminated by dismissal or abatement, a temporary support order remains enforceable as to amounts accruing before the termination [Sarracino v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 1, 118 Cal. Rptr. 21, 529 P.2d 53] . However, after dismissal, further payments under the order no longer accrue [Moore v. Superior Court (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 804, 810, 87 Cal. Rptr. 620] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.89

§ 225.89 Effect of Reconciliation

Unless the order specifies otherwise, a temporary support order is not enforceable during any period in which the parties have reconciled and are living together [Fam. Code § 3602]. Reconciliation is essentially a question of fact. It must be shown that the parties intended to reunite as husband and wife; occasional cohabitation does not alone establish a reconciliation [Walsh v. Walsh (1952) 108 Cal. App. 2d 575, 580, 239 P.2d 472] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceFault-Based DefensesReconciliationFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.90

§ 225.90 Renewal of Motion, Reconsideration, and Relief From Order

A temporary support order does not prejudice the rights of the parties with respect to any subsequent order that may be made [Fam. Code § 3604]. Therefore, if temporary support is denied, the party seeking support may renew the motion at a later time during the pendency of the proceeding if different facts are present. If temporary support is awarded, it may be modified or terminated at any time, except as to any amount that accrued before the date of filing of the notice of motion or order to show cause to modify or terminate [Fam. Code § 3603; see § 225.94; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b)].

Either party may also move for reconsideration within 10 days after service on the party of notice of entry of the order, based on new or different facts, circumstances, or law [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.21 (provisions of law applicable to civil actions generally also apply to family law proceedings absent specific provision or conflict with family law rules)]. Reconsideration, if granted, would keep arrearages from accruing, in contrast to a motion to revoke under Fam. Code § 3603, which does not affect amounts that accrued before the notice of motion or order to show cause was filed.

In limited circumstances, a party against whom a temporary support order is made may also seek relief from the order based on mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect [see Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.21]. A court also has inherent equitable power to set aside an order obtained through extrinsic fraud or mistake [see Olivera v. Grace (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 570, 575-576, 122 P.2d 564] . As with reconsideration, relief from the order would eliminate any arrearages under the order. For further discussion of relief from family law judgments and orders, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil

ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentIndependent ActionsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & AmendFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.91

§ 225.91 Appealability of Order

[1] Order Granting Support

An order granting temporary support compels the performance of an act, is considered a final judgment in a collateral matter, and is appealable [In re Marriage of Skelley (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 365, 368, 134 Cal. Rptr. 197, 556 P.2d 297 ; Sarracino v. Superior Court (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 1, 8, 118 Cal. Rptr. 21, 529 P.2d 53 ; In re Marriage of Campbell (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 502, 508, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 908 (order denying obligor's motion to terminate temporary spousal support is appealable order)]. Appeal does not stay enforcement of the order unless a bond is given [see Code Civ. Proc. § 917.1(a)(1)]. For further discussion of appeal of family law judgments and orders, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure . For discussion of enforcement matters, see Ch. 258, Family Law Enforcement: General Enforcement Principles and Remedies , and Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement .

[2] Order Denying Support

It would appear that an order denying temporary spousal support is also appealable. In Greene v. Superior Court (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 403, 405, 10 Cal. Rptr. 817, 359 P.2d 249 , Lincoln v. Superior Court (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 304, 310, 139 P.2d 13 , and White v. White (1890) 86 Cal. 212, 213, 24 P. 1030 , the California Supreme Court stated that such an order is appealable. Greene was a proceeding in prohibition to prohibit the trial court's giving effect to an order vacating an order modifying a spousal support award. The Supreme Court issued a peremptory writ of prohibition. Lincoln was a mandate proceeding to compel the superior court to grant a hearing on an order to show cause on the wife's application for temporary alimony, costs, and attorney's fees in which the trial court had granted the husband's motion to dismiss the order to show cause. After reviewing the facts, the Supreme Court held that the order of dismissal was, in effect, an order denying the application for pendente relief, that the order was appealable, and that mandate therefore did not lie. White involved an appeal from an order denying without prejudice temporary alimony in a divorce case. Relying on Sharon v. Sharon (1885) 67 Cal. 185, 7 P. 456 , the Supreme Court in White held that the order was appealable. The Court stated that, for the purposes of determining a right of appeal, there seemed to be no distinction on principle between an order denying and an order granting alimony pendente lite [White v. White (1890) 86 Cal. 212, 213, 24 P. 1030] .

However, in In re Marriage of Harbach (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 405, 407, 122 Cal. Rptr. 518 , a court of appeal held that an order denying temporary support is nonappealable. The court reviewed a number of early cases but concluded they presented no rationale or authority supporting a conclusion that the order should be appealable. In its citation of cases, the court did not distinguish between those involving an order granting temporary support and those involving an order denying it, and it failed to cite White, discussed above, in which the California Supreme Court expressly held that an order denying temporary spousal support is appealable. Harbach was subsequently disapproved by the California Supreme Court in In re Marriage of Skelley (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 365, 370, 134 Cal. Rptr. 197, 556 P.2d 297 , "insofar as it is inconsistent with the views expressed herein." Skelley involved an order granting temporary support, but it cited White as one of the cases the court in Harbach failed to consider. The implication is that the Supreme Court was disapproving Harbach's holding that an order denying spousal support is nonappealable, as well as language in that case that might imply that an order granting spousal support is equally nonappealable.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionCollateral Order DoctrineFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.92

§ 225.92 Temporary Support Pending Appeal

The power of the trial court to make an award of temporary support continues during the pendency of any appeal from the judgment. The power is not affected by which party takes the appeal, nor by what issues are appealed [Bain v. Superior Court (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 804, 807-809, 111 Cal. Rptr. 848 ; see In re Marriage of Askmo (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1038-1040, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 662 (temporary support and attorney's fees were awarded to wife, while prior appeal was pending and default judgment against her had not been set aside); In re Marriage of Baltins (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 66, 260 Cal. Rptr. 403 (involving temporary support order pending appeal of order setting aside obligee's default)]. However, a temporary support order is terminated by judgment [Wilson v. Superior Court (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 458, 462-463, 189 P.2d 266] , so that a new motion for temporary support is required for temporary support during the pendency of postjudgment proceedings.

Further, temporary support may be awarded pending appeal even if the duration of the temporary order thereby extends beyond the period for which the court has retained jurisdiction in the judgment to order permanent support [Bain v. Superior Court (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 804, 807-810, 111 Cal. Rptr. 848] . However, the amount of temporary support allowed pending appeal from a judgment should not exceed the permanent support awarded in the absence of a showing of changed conditions requiring the increase or error in the amount originally awarded [Farrar v. Farrar (1920) 45 Cal. App. 584, 587, 188 P. 289] .

It is the trial court's duty to prevent a possible double recovery of support if the judgment is affirmed, that is, to ensure that a party does not recover both the temporary award pending appeal and the permanent award in the judgment for the same period [Farrar v. Farrar (1920) 45 Cal. App. 584, 587-588, 188 P. 289] . Double recovery can be prevented by providing in the order for temporary support that the amounts paid thereunder are to be credited against the permanent support awarded in the judgment for that period if the judgment is affirmed on appeal. If the order directing payment of permanent support is not stayed during the appeal [see Code Civ. Proc. § 917.1], the order for temporary support should provide that payment under the temporary order is in lieu of any payment required under the permanent order. It might not be advisable in this situation simply to deny temporary spousal support and allow the permanent support to be paid, because if the judgment is reversed on appeal, the supported party may be liable to reimburse any support received under the judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 908].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionCollateral Order DoctrineFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.93

§ 225.93 Security for Payment of Temporary Support

The court may order the supporting party to give reasonable security for payment of spousal support [Fam. Code § 4339]. This statutory right does not distinguish between temporary and permanent support [cf. former Civ. Code § 4801(a) (limited to support orders in judgment); see also Fam. Code § 290 (broad judicial discretion to shape enforcement remedies)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.94

§ 225.94 Modification and Revocation of Order

The court may modify or terminate a temporary support order at any time, except as to any amount that may have accrued before the date on which the notice of motion or order to show cause to modify or revoke was filed [Fam. Code § 3603]. The court may not provisionally reduce or "suspend" the supporting party's temporary support obligation, subject to retroactive reinstatement of the full amount if the court later determines that the facts on which the reduction or suspension was based were inaccurate or incomplete [In re Marriage of Murray (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 581, 593-594, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 342] .

A temporary spousal support order is not terminated under Fam. Code § 4337 when the supported spouse attempts to remarry before entry of judgment dissolving his or her existing marriage [In re Marriage of Campbell (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 502, 508, 511-513, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 908]. A temporary spousal support order could, however, be terminated under Fam. Code § 4337 if the supported spouse enters into a valid marriage after entry of a status-only judgment dissolving the first marriage [In re Marriage of Campbell (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 502, 511, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 908] .

A temporary spousal support order terminates by operation of law on the death of either party before dissolution of the marital status [In re Marriage of Campbell (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 502, 511 n.4, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 908] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsTemporary SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
2. Temporary Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.95-225.109

[Reserved]

§§ 225.95[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.110

§ 225.110 Discretion of Court to Award Support

In a judgment of dissolution of marriage or legal separation of the parties, the court may order a party to pay for the support of the other party any amount, and for any period of time, as the court may deem just and reasonable, based on the standard of living established during the marriage, taking into consideration the circumstances as provided in Fam. Code § 4320 et seq. [Fam. Code § 4330]. Although awards of spousal support on dissolution or legal separation are not, strictly speaking, "permanent," they are referred to as such in order to distinguish them from temporary spousal support orders made under Fam. Code § 3600 [In re Marriage of Campbell (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 502, 511, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 908] .

The grant or denial of permanent spousal support and its amount and duration are matters that rest within the sound discretion of the trial court, and fall within the court's equitable jurisdiction. Although not unlimited, the trial court's discretion in determining support is broad [see In re Marriage of Morrison (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 437, 454, 143 Cal. Rptr. 139, 573 P.2d 41 ; In re Marriage of Plescia (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 252, 258, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 120 (party seeking equitable grant of spousal support must be willing to grant equitable defense of laches in same controversy); see also In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 89-90, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413 , 592 P.2d 1165 ; In re Marriage of Bukaty (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 143, 149, 225 Cal. Rptr. 492] .

However, the court's discretion must be exercised with reference to the showing made and not arbitrarily [In re Marriage of Kelley (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 82, 93, 134 Cal. Rptr. 259 ; see In re Marriage of Teegarden (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 401, 409-410, 226 Cal. Rptr. 417] . Further, the criteria set forth in Fam. Code § 4320 must all be recognized and applied correctly [In re Marriage of Ackerman (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 191, 204, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 744 ; In re Marriage of Watt (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 340, 347, 262 Cal. Rptr. 783 ; In re Marriage of Fransen (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 419, 425, 190 Cal. Rptr. 885 ; see § 225.111]. A grossly inadequate spousal support award is subject to reversal as an abuse of discretion [In re Marriage of Ramer (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 263, 273, 231 Cal. Rptr. 647] .

If temporary support was awarded, the determination of permanent spousal support at trial must be de novo, based on the circumstances existing at the time of the trial. An award of permanent support different from the amount ordered as temporary support need not be based on a showing of changed circumstances [In re Marriage of McNaughton (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 845, 850, 194 Cal. Rptr. 176] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.111

§ 225.111 Statutory Factors: Fam. Code § 4320

In ordering spousal support, the court must consider all of the following circumstances of the parties:

(1) The extent to which the earning capacity of each spouse is sufficient to maintain the standard of living established during the marriage taking into account all of the following [Fam. Code § 4320(a); see § 225.112]:

a. The marketable skills of the supported party; the job market for those skills; the time and expenses required for the supported party to acquire the appropriate education or training to develop those skills; and the possible need for retraining or education to acquire other, more marketable skills or employment.

b. The extent to which the supported party's present or future earning capacity is impaired by periods of unemployment that were incurred during the marriage to permit the supported party to devote time to domestic duties.

(2) The extent to which the supported spouse contributed to the attainment of an education, training, a career position, or a license by the other spouse [Fam. Code § 4320(b); see § 225.115];

(3) The supporting spouse's ability to pay Spousal Support, taking into account the supporting spouse's earning capacity, earned and unearned income, assets, and standard of living [Fam. Code § 4320(c) see § 225.113];

(4) The needs of each party, based on the standard of living established during the marriage [Fam. Code § 4320(d); see §§ 225.112, 225.114];

(5) The obligations and assets, including the separate property, of each party [Fam. Code § 4320(e); see § 225.116];

(6) The duration of the marriage [Fam. Code § 4320(f); see § 225.117];

(7) The ability of the supported spouse to engage in gainful employment without interfering with the interests of dependent children in the custody of the spouse [Fam. Code § 4320(g); see § 225.114];

(8) The age and health of the parties [Fam. Code § 4320(h); see § 225.118];

(9) Documented evidence of any history of domestic violence between the parties [Fam. Code § 4320(i); see § 225.119];

(10) The immediate and specific tax consequences to each party [Fam. Code § 4320(j); for further discussion, see Ch. 227, Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution];

(11) The balance of the hardships to each party [Fam. Code § 4320(k)];

(12) The goal that the supported party must be self-supporting within a reasonable period of time, with a "reasonable period of time" generally being one-half the length of the marriage (except with respect to a marriage of long duration, as described in Fam. Code § 4336), although the court retains discretion to order support for a greater or lesser length of time, based on any of the other factors listed in Family Code Section 4320 and the parties' circumstances [Fam. Code § 4320(l)]; In re Marriage of Rising (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 472, 479 ; 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380 (no abuse of discretion to conclude that "marital standard of living" is of less weight many years after divorce than at time of separation);

(13) The criminal conviction of an abusive spouse [Fam. Code § 4320(m); see § 225.119]; and

(14) Any other factors the court deems just and equitable [Fam. Code § 4320(n); for further discussion, see § 225.121].

When making an order for spousal support, the court may advise the support recipient that he or she should make reasonable efforts to assist in providing for his or her support needs, taking into account the particular circumstances the court considered under Fam. Code § 4320, unless, in the case of a marriage of long duration as provided for in Fam. Code § 4336 (see § 225.141[1]) the court decides this warning is inadvisable [Fam. Code § 4330(b)].

Courts sometimes use schedules or tables based solely on income to determine temporary support [see § 225.83]. It is almost certainly inappropriate to use these schedules as anything more than a starting point in setting permanent spousal support, given the many other factors under Fam. Code § 4320 that must also be considered [see In re Marriage of Burlini (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 65, 69, 191 Cal. Rptr. 541 ; see also In re Marriage of McTiernan & Dubrow (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1107-1108, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 287 (court must consider and apply all relevant factors under Fam. Code § 4320; failure to consider "key factor" of obligor spouse's ability to pay is abuse of discretion)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.112

§ 225.112 Standard of Living Established During Marriage

In awarding spousal support, the court must consider the standard of living established by the parties during marriage in determining the parties' earning capacity and needs [Fam. Code § 4320(a), (d); see §§ 225.113, 225.114]. The marital standard of living is relevant as a reference point against which the other statutory factors are to be weighed; it is not in and of itself sufficient to justify an award of permanent support [In re Marriage of Ackerman (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 191, 204-205, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 744]. A high standard of living enjoyed by the parties during marriage, and a low ability on the part of the supported spouse to maintain that standard, combine to establish a greater need for support [see In re Marriage of Andreen (1978) 76 Cal. App. 3d 667, 671-672, 143 Cal. Rptr. 94 ; In re Marriage of Wright (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 253, 256, 131 Cal. Rptr. 870] . The court must make specific factual findings with respect to this standard of living [Fam. Code § 4332; see § 225.373].

"Marital standard of living" is a general description of the station in life that the parties had achieved by the date of separation. It is satisfied by the everyday understanding of the term in its ordinary sense, that is upper, middle, or lower income In re Marriage of Ackerman (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 191, 204, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 744 ; [In re Marriage of Smith (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 469, 491, 274 Cal. Rptr. 911] . In determining the parties' marital standard of living, the court may consider their income, expenses, and lifestyle during their marriage [In re Marriage of Ackerman (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 191, 204, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 744]. The court may also base the parties' marital standard of living on the family's average income, rather than expenses [In re Marriage of Ackerman (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 191, 206, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 744 (this is particularly appropriate when evidence shows parties lived beyond their means)].

The marital standard of living is not an absolute measure of reasonable need, but merely the reference point for determining need and support. All of the other applicable circumstances enumerated in Fam. Code § 4320 must also be considered [In re Marriage of Cheriton (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 269, 303, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 755 ; In re Marriage of Smith (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 469, 484-485, 274 Cal. Rptr. 911 ; In re Marriage of Smith & Ostler (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 33, 48, 272 Cal. Rptr. 560 (contributions to supporting spouse's education justified spousal support in excess of that needed to sustain standard of living attained during marriage)].

If the marital standard of living was deliberately depressed because only one spouse was working while the other was absent from the workforce pursuing studies, spousal support may not be denied to the working spouse solely because his or her standard of living did not decline after separation. To limit the working spouse to the marital standard of living would be to make irrelevant the contributions of the working spouse to the student spouse's education and career [In re Marriage of Watt (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 340, 351-352, 262 Cal. Rptr. 783 (standard during time husband was in medical school improperly used to deny support to wife); see Fam. Code § 4320(b); see also In re Marriage of Sullivan (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 762, 767-768, 209 Cal. Rptr. 354, 691 P.2d 1020 ; for further discussion, see § 225.115]. Conversely, the parties may have been living beyond their means during marriage. In such a case, spousal support should be based on the reasonable, rather than the actual, marital standard of living, given the resources available to the parties during marriage [see In re Marriage of Smith (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 469, 485-486, 274 Cal. Rptr. 911 ; see also In re Marriage of Weinstein (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 555, 565-566, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 558 (court acted properly in determining marital standard of living based on income rather than on expenses because it could determine that parties' actual expenditures were not reasonable); but see In re Marriage of De Guigne (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1362, 1367, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 430 (when opulent marital standard of living was achieved in part through liquidation of obligor's inherited assets, court properly based support awards on obligor's total assets)]. Consideration of available income rather than expenditures is also proper if the parties lived frugally and allocated significant income to savings and investment. A spouse should not be deprived of the accustomed lifestyle just because it involved the purchase of stocks and bonds rather than personal luxuries [In re Marriage of Winter (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 1926, 1932-1933, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 225 ; see In re Marriage of Drapeau (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1086, 1098, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 6 (when supporting spouse's ability to pay reasonable level of support is not limiting factor, court should consider parties' practice of saving substantial portion of earnings as element in their marital standard of living)].

The marital standard of living is of less significance in a short-term marriage in which the joint efforts of the parties had little or nothing to do with achieving the standard. The right of a nonworking spouse to be maintained at the marital standard of living applies with greatest force when the standard of living derived from the joint efforts of the spouses to achieve a certain standard over a significant period of time, in which case, the earner spouse should not benefit at the expense of the other. On the other hand, if the marriage is of short duration and the standard of living derived from one spouse's separate property, other factors may justify a smaller award of support [see In re Marriage of Huntington (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1513, 1520-1521, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (wife in short-term marriage is not entitled to be maintained at affluent marital standard of living when standard derived from husband's inherited wealth)].

The supported spouse is not guaranteed enough support to live at the marital standard of living if the supporting spouse's ability to pay is insufficient to maintain both parties at that level [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 89-90, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165] . Often, economic realities compel a reduction in the standard of living for both parties [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Morrison (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 437, 455, 143 Cal. Rptr. 139, 573 P.2d 41] . Therefore, the court should make specific findings as to whether the amount of support ordered is or is not sufficient to meet the supported spouse's reasonable needs, considering the marital standard of living and the other factors contained in Fam. Code § 4320; a modification in support based on increased earnings of the supporting spouse may depend on whether the original order was sufficient to maintain the supported spouse at the marital standard of living [In re Marriage of Smith (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 469, 491, 274 Cal. Rptr. 911 ; for a form of findings of fact in a spousal support proceeding, see § 225.373; see also § 225.200 et seq.].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.113

§ 225.113 Ability to Pay and Earning Capacity of Supporting Spouse

[1] Computation of Income

In awarding spousal support, the court must consider the supporting spouse's ability to pay, taking into account his or her earning capacity, earned and unearned income, assets, and standard of living [Fam. Code § 4320(c); see also Fam. Code § 4320(a); In re Marriage of McTiernan & Dubrow (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1107-1108, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 287 (failure to consider "key factor" of obligor spouse's ability to pay is abuse of discretion)]. There are no statutes that specify the computation of income for the purpose of determining spousal support, although the income of the supporting spouse's subsequent spouse or nonmarital partner is not to be considered when determining or modifying spousal support [Fam. Code § 4323(b); see § 225.113[3]]. However, the statewide uniform child support guideline specifies what is to be included in gross income and what deductions are allowed to determine net income for the purpose of computing child support [see Fam. Code §§ 4058, 4059]. For discussion of the uniform child support guideline, see Ch. 224, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Support .

Courts may consider investment income in determining a supporting spouse's ability to pay, along with income from property that was originally part of the community estate [In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 91 n.14, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 ; In re Marriage of Olson (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10-13, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480] . Other forms of income from employment, such as income from the future exercise of stock options, also may be considered in awarding spousal support. However, a trial court may not base the support award on a fixed percentage of future stock option income if doing so results in an award that substantially exceeds the parties' marital standard of living. This might occur, for example, if the underlying value of the stock is rapidly increasing. Instead, the trial court must make an award that is "just and equitable," using the marital standard of living as a reference point against which other statutory factors must be weighed. Once having done this, the court may make a percentage award of future exercised option income so long as it sets a maximum amount proportionate to its findings concerning the marital standard of living [In re Marriage of Kerr (1999) 77 Cal. App. 4th 87, 95, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 374] .

Apart from imputing income from assets that traditionally are considered "income producing," there is authority--from a case that considered child support--that a court may also consider imputing income to a historically non-income producing asset, such as real estate. However, the decision to impute "rests on an analysis that is particularly fact intensive[, and] [f]actors which do not eliminate discretion may significantly affect whether it should be exercised" [In re Marriage of Destein (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1385, 1396, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 487] .

Courts have broad discretion to exclude, include, or partially include contributions to individual retirement plans, and earnings or accruals of such plans not actually withdrawn, as income available for determining spousal support. Thus, for example, one reported decision has held that a trial court has discretion to determine whether to consider as income available for spousal support nonmandatory contributions made to an individual retirement plan, accruals, or accrued earnings of that plan that are not withdrawn and--once no penalty is incurred--even reasonable withdrawals from the principal of a retirement plan [In re Marriage of Olson (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1, 13, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480 ; see In re Marriage of Terry (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 921, 931-932, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 760 (Fam. Code § 4322 compelled termination of spousal support when former wife had sufficient income to meet support needs, including availability of funds from retirement account, from which withdrawal could be made without penalty)]. However, it has been held that only under "extreme circumstances" would it be appropriate to base a spousal support order on funds in a retirement plan that, if withdrawn, would be subject to a mandatory penalty [In re Marriage of Olson (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1, 11-13, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480] . Another court has observed that it would be improper to require a party to invade or exhaust the principal of his or her retirement assets to pay spousal support, given that "only investment income, not investment principal, should be available to pay spousal support" [In re Marriage of Reynolds (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1380, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 636 ; but cf. In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 91 n.14, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 (even if future award of spousal support must come from supporting party's half of community property [retirement benefits] there is no requirement excluding such property as source of support; but supporting party's financial position may be reexamined if necessary at time of retirement in light of both parties' circumstances)].

Gambling winnings of the supporting spouse are not considered as income for the purposes of setting support. Attribution of substantial future income to gambling activity encourages or compels the supporting spouse to engage in that activity, with the danger of dissipating other income from which support is to be paid [In re Marriage of Rosan (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 885, 891-892, 101 Cal. Rptr. 295] .

[2] Earning Capacity

Fam. Code § 4320(a) and (c) require the court to consider the parties' earning capacity in setting spousal support. The California Supreme Court has defined earning capacity as the income that a spouse is reasonably capable of earning based on his or her age, health, education, marketable skills, employment history, and the availability of employment opportunities [In re Marriage of Simpson (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 225, 234, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 411, 841 P.2d 931] . Historically, support has been based on earning capacity instead of actual income only in cases of bad faith; that is, cases in which the paying spouse deliberately attempted to avoid his or her obligation of support by quitting or refusing to seek or accept gainful employment, deliberately not applying himself or herself to business, or intentionally depressing income to an artificial level [Philbin v. Philbin (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 115, 121, 96 Cal. Rptr. 408 ; see In re Marriage of Meegan (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 156, 163, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 799 ; In re Marriage of Regnery (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1367, 1371, 263 Cal. Rptr. 243 (and cases cited therein); In re Marriage of Sinks (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 586, 594, 251 Cal. Rptr. 379 (earning capacity used in case of early retirement taken for purpose of avoiding support obligation); In re Marriage of Johnson (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 148, 156-157, 184 Cal. Rptr. 444 (court based support on earning capacity rather than actual earnings, without any consideration of the supporting spouse's motive, because his unemployment was due to alcoholism)].

One case has held that a finding that the supporting spouse was acting in good faith, and not attempting to avoid his or her support obligation, justified a modification reducing the amount of support to be paid by a spouse whose income was reduced by a voluntary change of jobs; the court also rejected the argument that a modification reducing the amount of support is proper only if the change of circumstances is beyond the control of the supporting spouse [In re Marriage of Meegan (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 156, 162-163, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 799 (husband stopped working to join religious order)]. However, another court rejected that court's reliance on the good faith of the supporting spouse, and held that earning capacity can be used even without a finding of bad faith if the supporting spouse has the ability and opportunity to work, but is unwilling to do so [In re Marriage of Ilas (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1630, 1638-1639, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 345 (husband stopped working to enter medical school)]. However, in recent cases, courts have rejected this bad-faith rule. Under this view, Fam. Code § 4320 provides for consideration of earning capacity without the necessity of showing deliberate avoidance of financial responsibility as a prerequisite [see In re Marriage of Stephenson (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 71, 76, 82, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 8 (involving early retirement compelled by economic circumstances)]. In one case dealing with both child and spousal support, the California Supreme Court has expressly reserved the question of whether a finding of bad faith is required in order to apply the earning-capacity standard [see In re Marriage of Simpson (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 225, 233-234, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 411, 841 P.2d 931] . However in a subsequent case dealing only with child support, the Supreme Court specifically ruled that a finding of bad faith was no longer necessary to use the standard [Moss v. Superior Court (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 396, 424, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215, 950 P.2d 59] . Thus, although the Supreme Court has not spoken on the death of the Philbin rule as it applies to spousal support and cases such as Meegan are still viable authority, the trend of the law is clearly to the contrary.

Even in cases of deliberate avoidance, earning capacity generally may not be based on an extraordinary work regimen. Instead, it must be based on an objectively reasonable work schedule as it would exist at the time when the determination is made. A reasonable regimen depends on all relevant circumstances, including the choice of job available within a particular occupation, working hours, and working conditions. Established employment norms such as the 40-hour work week are not controlling, but are pertinent to the determination [In re Marriage of Simpson (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 225, 234-236, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 411, 841 P.2d 931 ; In re Marriage of Serna, (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 482, 487, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 188] . There must be evidence of an actual ability to work, legitimate earning opportunities, and specifics concerning the amount that might be earned [Reynolds v. Reynolds (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1378, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 636].

If a spouse has recently become unemployed through no fault of his or her own, the court should not immediately make a spousal support order. Rather, the matter should be continued for a reasonable period of time to allow the party to seek employment. At the end of the period, the court should determine the party's good-faith efforts in seeking employment [In re Marriage of Hurtienne (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 374, 379-380, 178 Cal. Rptr. 748 ; see In re Marriage of Rome (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 961, 167 Cal. Rptr. 351] .

Earning capacity is discussed further in the context of child support in Ch. 224, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Support.

[3] Income of Subsequent Spouse or Partner

By statute, the income of a supporting spouse's subsequent spouse or nonmarital partner is not to be considered when determining or modifying spousal support [Fam. Code § 4323(b); In re Marriage of Romero (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1436, 1442-1443, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220 (Fam. Code § 4323(b) precludes both direct and indirect consideration of new mate income); In re Serna (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 482, 487, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 188 ; Reynolds v. Reynolds (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1378, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 636]. Added by 1993 legislation, Fam. Code § 4323(b) overturned prior case law [see In re Marriage of Ramer (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 263, 272-273, 231 Cal. Rptr. 647 (community earnings of supporting spouse's new spouse could be considered as available to defray expenses of new community, and thus increase amount available from supporting spouse for support)].

To comply with the Family Code Section 4323(b) prohibition against considering new mate income, the court must eliminate from consideration all new mate income and all additional expenses resulting from remarriage [In re Marriage of Romero (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1436, 1445, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220] . The court can accomplish this feat by first determining the net monthly income of the supporting spouse, and then exercising its discretion in determining the reasonable expenses of the supporting spouse based only on that income [In re Marriage of Romero (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1436, 1445-1446, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220] .

Subsequent spouse or partner income as it relates to child support is discussed further in Ch. 224, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Support .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.114

§ 225.114 Need and Earning Capacity of Supported Spouse

Spousal support must be based, in part, on the reasonable needs of the supported spouse [Fam. Code § 4320(d)]. The court must also take into consideration the supported spouse's earning capacity and the effect of possible employment on the interests of any dependent children in her or his custody [Fam. Code § 4320(a), (g); see In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 658, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587] . Need and earning capacity are to be determined with reference to (but not absolutely limited by) the standard of living established during the marriage [Fam. Code § 4320(a)(1), (d); see In re Marriage of Cheriton (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 269, 307-308, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 755 ; In re Marriage of Smith & Ostler (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 33, 48, 272 Cal. Rptr. 560 ; see also In re Marriage of McTiernan & Dubrow (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1107, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 287 (court's conclusion that neither party can presently enjoy lifestyle they enjoyed during marriage does not excuse court from considering supported party's current needs); § 225.112]. A disparity in income, standing alone, does not justify an award of spousal support [In re Marriage of Ackerman (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 191, 204, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 744]. Equality of post-separation income is not an element of Fam. Code § 4320 in setting spousal support [In re Marriage of Ackerman (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 191, 207 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 744].

In determining the supported spouse's earning capacity, the court must take into account (1) the marketable skills of the supported spouse, the job market for those skills, the time and expenses required for the supported spouse to acquire the appropriate education or training to develop those skills, and the possible need for retraining or education to acquire other more marketable skills or employment [Fam. Code § 4320(a)(1)]; and (2) the extent to which the supported spouse's present or future earning capacity is impaired by periods of unemployment that were incurred during the marriage to permit the supported spouse to devote time to domestic duties [Fam. Code § 4320(a)(2)].

The supported spouse is to be encouraged to seek gainful employment rather than to rely on spousal support, and it is the expressed policy of the Legislature to encourage supported spouses to become self-supporting within a reasonable period of time. This policy is reflected in the circumstances a court may consider in ordering spousal support, and in the admonition a court may give in ordering support or in reserving jurisdiction over support [Fam. Code §§ 4320(l), 4330(b) (discussed in § 225.110); In re Marriage of Mason (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 215, 221, 155 Cal. Rptr. 350 (affirming denial of spousal support to wife whose earning capacity exceeded her disabled husband's, despite husband's greater assets)]. Indeed, if there is evidence that the supported spouse has unreasonably delayed or refused to seek employment consistent with his or her ability, that factor may be taken into account in fixing the amount of spousal support in the first instance, or in modifying or terminating support [Fam. Code § 4330(b); In re Marriage of Rosan (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 885, 896, 101 Cal. Rptr. 295 ; see In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 657, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587] . However, if there is no evidence of any unreasonable delay or willful refusal to seek employment consistent with a spouse's health and parental responsibilities, and if the other spouse has the ability to pay the needed support, it is inappropriate to make a spousal support order in an amount substantially less than that needed in order to provide an incentive for the supported spouse to seek employment [In re Marriage of Rosan (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 885, 896-897, 101 Cal. Rptr. 295] .

There is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof that a former spouse who is cohabiting with a person of the opposite sex has a decreased need for support [Fam. Code § 4323(a); see In re Marriage of Bower (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 893, 901 ; In re Marriage of Regnery (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1367, 1378, 263 Cal. Rptr. 243] . Remarriage terminates the right to spousal support unless the parties have agreed to the contrary [Fam. Code § 4337; In re Marriage of Thornton (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 251, 254, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.115

§ 225.115 Contributions to Education and Career

In awarding spousal support, the court must consider the extent to which the supported spouse contributed to the attainment of an education, training, career, or license by the other spouse [Fam. Code § 4320(b)]. This language is interpreted broadly to require consideration of all of a working spouse's efforts to assist a student spouse in acquiring an education and enhanced earning capacity [In re Marriage of Watt (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 340, 350, 262 Cal. Rptr. 783] . Contributions are not limited to direct educational expenses, but include the payment by a working spouse of the ordinary living expenses of the marriage during the period when the other spouse is pursuing studies [In re Marriage of Watt (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 340, 350-351, 262 Cal. Rptr. 783] . These contributions may justify a spousal support award in excess of that needed to sustain the standard of living attained during marriage [In re Marriage of Smith & Ostler (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 33, 48-49, 272 Cal. Rptr. 560 ; In re Marriage of Watt (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 340, 351-352, 262 Cal. Rptr. 783] .

In addition to spousal support, a court may award one spouse reimbursement for community contributions to the education or training of the other spouse [see Fam. Code § 2641]. For further discussion, see Ch. 222, Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.116

§ 225.116 Assets and Obligations; Separate Estate

In awarding spousal support, the court must consider the obligations and assets of each party, including the separate property of each [Fam. Code § 4320(e)]. Fam. Code §§ 4321 and 4322 provide additional directions to the court if a party seeking support has separate property. The court may deny support to a party out of the separate property of the other in either of the following circumstances:

> (1) If the party seeking support has separate property, or is earning her or his own livelihood, or if there is community or quasi-community property sufficient to give the party proper support [Fam. Code § 4321(a)]; or
>
> (2) If the custody of the children has been awarded to the party from whom support is sought and he or she is supporting them [Fam. Code § 4321(b)].

The court must deny support if there are no children and a party has or acquires a separate estate, including income from employment, sufficient for the party's proper support [Fam. Code § 4322; In re Marriage of Terry (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 921, 928, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 760] .

Fam. Code §§ 4321 and 4322 are derived from former Civ. Code § 142, which predated both the former Family Law Act and the Family Code [see Stats. 1969, ch. 1608]. As such, the phrase "sufficient for the party's proper support" should be viewed in light of the standards set forth in Fam. Code § 4320 [see In re Marriage of McNaughton (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 845, 850-851, 194 Cal. Rptr. 176 ; see also In re Marriage of Terry (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 921, 928, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 760 (in modification proceeding, court considers Fam. Code § 4320 factors, but under Fam. Code § 4322, denial of continued support is mandatory if sufficiency standard met irrespective of circumstances court would otherwise need to consider under § 4320)]. Spousal support should not be awarded to a party who is currently capable of providing for his or her own support through employment or other separate property [Fam. Code § 4322; In re Marriage of Terry (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 921, 928, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 760 ; In re Marriage of Cosgrove (1972) 27 Cal.

App. 3d 424, 428, 434, 103 Cal. Rptr. 733 ; see In re Marriage of Rives (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 138, 164, 181 Cal. Rptr. 572] .

The rule that a spouse is not required to exhaust his or her separate estate before seeking spousal support pendente lite does not apply to permanent support. However, the court will take into consideration the time in which the separate estate will be exhausted in determining whether the estate is sufficient for that spouse's "proper" support [Dallman v. Dallman (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 729, 735, 339 P.2d 636 (distinguishing De Leshe v. De Leshe (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 513, 515, 181 P.2d 929)].

Community property that is awarded to a spouse in the dissolution becomes that spouse's separate property, and the manner in which the property is utilized may be considered in determining whether he or she should also receive spousal support [In re Marriage of Kennedy (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1633, 1640-1641, 239 Cal. Rptr. 151 ; see In re Marriage of Cheriton (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 269, 307-308, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 755 ; In re Marriage of McElwee (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 902, 908, 243 Cal. Rptr. 179 ; Dallman v. Dallman (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 729, 733-734, 339 P.2d 636] . Income from income-producing assets received in the division of community property must be taken into account [see In re Marriage of Winick (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 525, 528-529, 152 Cal. Rptr. 635 ; see also In re Marriage of Martin (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1196, 1201, 280 Cal. Rptr. 565] . Support has been limited based on the supported spouse's improvident management of assets that should have been sufficient to provide self-sufficiency at the marital standard of living [In re Marriage of McElwee (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 902, 909-910, 243 Cal. Rptr. 179] . One court, in dicta, has expressed doubt that a spouse may be ordered to invest his or her share of community assets in income-producing property in order to obviate the need for spousal support [see In re Marriage of Kennedy (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1633, 1640 n.3, 239 Cal. Rptr. 151 ; see also In re Marriage of Martin (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1196, 1201, 280 Cal. Rptr. 565 (payment of cash to equalize community property division did not preclude award of support); but see In re Marriage of McNaughton (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 845, 852-853, 194 Cal. Rptr. 176 (dicta that wife's diligence in finding and making permanent investments of estate of over $3 million distributed to her will be relevant as to future duration and amount of support)]. Under Fam. Code § 4322, it is not up to the trial court to direct a supported party to make any particular investment, but to ascertain whether that party's estate could reasonably generate sufficient income for proper support [In re Marriage of Terry (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 921, 932, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 760] .

Income from property that was originally part of the community estate may also properly be considered in determining the supporting spouse's ability to pay [In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 91 n.14, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165] . Thus, a pension that was community property but is awarded entirely to the earner spouse in an equal division of assets may be considered as property from which spousal support may be paid [In re Marriage of White (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1022, 1026-1029, 237 Cal. Rptr. 764] . In considering the parties' retirement plans in setting spousal support, the courts have weighed the public policy favoring provision for one's retirement against all other circumstances in the case, and have concluded that a court has broad discretion to determine whether to consider as income available for spousal support purposes contributions made by a participant to his or her retirement plan [In re Marriage of Schmir (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 43, 52-53, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 716 (supported spouse may be required to withdraw funds from his or her individual retirement account to pay for portion of his or her monthly expenses)].

Although a supporting spouse's obligations generally must be considered in determining his or her ability to pay, an amount to be paid to the supported spouse to effect an equal division of community property is not to be considered. To allow the obligor spouse to pay less support in order to accumulate funds to pay an obligation arising from the property division contravenes the statutory mandate that the community property be divided equally [In re Marriage of Rosan (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 885, 895 n.5, 101 Cal. Rptr. 295] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.117

§ 225.117 Duration of Marriage

The duration of the marriage is a factor in setting spousal support [Fam. Code § 4320(f)]. Duration of marriage is generally considered a factor that is more relevant to the duration of a spousal support obligation than to the amount of support to be awarded [see In re Marriage of Hebbring (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1266, 255 Cal. Rptr. 488] . Thus, the duration of the marriage is of primary concern in determining whether jurisdiction should be retained indefinitely over spousal support, or whether spousal support should be ordered for a limited term, after which jurisdiction is terminated [see In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 659-667, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawChild SupportObligationsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.118

§ 225.118 Age and Health of Parties

In determining a spousal support award, the court must consider the age and health of the parties [Fam. Code § 4320(h)]. The younger and healthier a person is, the less likely it is that the person will need spousal support [see In re Marriage of Mason (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 215, 221, 155 Cal. Rptr. 350] . Nevertheless, the total disability of one spouse, alone, does not require that spousal support be awarded in perpetuity, if other statutory factors indicate that support is no longer appropriate. At some point, it may be appropriate to shift the burden of supporting a totally disabled person from a former spouse to society. In other words, marriage alone does not make one spouse a guarantor that the other will never become a public charge [see In re Marriage of Wilson (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 913, 916-920, 247 Cal. Rptr. 522 (involving short-term marriage of middle-aged persons with adult children, during which wife became totally disabled)]. Similarly, a disability does not alone justify an order of spousal support to the disabled spouse if the disability does not have a major effect on earning capacity, and the spouse would otherwise be expected to be employed rather than receive spousal support [see In re Marriage of Harrison (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1216, 1230, 225 Cal. Rptr. 234 (involving 33-year-old epileptic wife who had been employed before 65-month marriage)].

Advanced age and poor health also may affect a supporting spouse's ability to pay, but these factors alone do not justify a termination of a support obligation if the supporting spouse has sufficient assets from which support may be paid [compare In re Marriage of Crobarger (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 56, 60, 223 Cal. Rptr. 480 (retired husband with retirement income required to continue to support elderly wife with less employment income) with In re Marriage of Mason (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 215, 221, 155 Cal. Rptr. 350 (totally disabled husband with income from property not required to support younger wife with adequate earning capacity)]. Nevertheless, at least one reported decision has held that no one may be compelled to work "after the usual age retirement age of 65 in order to pay the same level of spousal support as when he was employed." The court reasoned that in the instance of a bona fide retirement, a supporting spouse should not be forced to continue working. Under those circumstances, the trial court may determine that there has been a material change in circumstances to justify a modification of support. Just as a married couple may expect a reduction in income due to retirement, a divorced spouse cannot expect to receive the same high level of support after the supporting spouse retires [Reynolds v. Reynolds (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1378, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 636].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.119

§ 225.119 Domestic Violence

Documented evidence of any history of domestic violence between the parties is among the circumstances that must be considered in ordering spousal support [Fam. Code § 4320(i)]. The court must consider both emotional distress resulting from domestic violence perpetrated against the supported party by the supporting party, and any history of violence against the supporting party by the supported party, as well as other matters [Fam. Code § 4320(i)].

There is a rebuttable presumption against the award of either temporary or permanent spousal support to a spouse who is criminally convicted of an act of domestic violence against the other spouse within five years before the filing of a dissolution proceeding, or at any time thereafter [Fam. Code § 4325(a)]. This presumption may be rebutted by a preponderance of the evidence [Fam. Code § 4325(c)]. The court may consider documented evidence of a convicted spouse's history as a victim of domestic violence perpetrated by the other spouse, or any other factors the court deems just and equitable, as conditions for rebutting the presumption [Fam. Code § 4325(b)]. The criminal conviction of an abusive spouse must be considered in making a reduction or elimination of a spousal support award in accordance with this presumption [Fam. Code § 4320(m)]. The court is not required to consider the factors outlined in Fam. Code § 4320 in making its determination under Fam. Code § 4325 [In re Marriage of Cauley (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1100, 1109, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 902] .

The presumption of Fam. Code § 4325 applies even when the parties' settlement agreement provides that spousal support is not subject to modification or termination [In re Marriage of Cauley (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1100, 1106-1109, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 902] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureCriminal OffensesCrimes Against PersonsDomestic OffensesDomestic AssaultGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination &

Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.120

§ 225.120 Tax Consequences of Support

For a detailed discussion of the tax consequences of spousal support awards in proceedings for dissolution or legal separation, see Ch. 227, Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportTaxation

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.121

§ 225.121 Other Just and Equitable Factors

In addition to the factors discussed above, the court must consider any other factors that it deems just and equitable in making a spousal support award [Fam. Code § 4320(n)]. Under this "catch-all" category, the court may consider practically anything that has a legitimate bearing on the present and prospective matters relating to the lives of both parties [In re Marriage of Chapman (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1308, 1313, 237 Cal. Rptr. 84] . However, culpability or fault in having caused the breakup of the marital relationship is no longer a factor to be considered in awarding spousal support [In re Marriage of Rosan (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 885, 892, 101 Cal. Rptr. 295 ; see also Fam. Code § 2335 (evidence of misconduct generally irrelevant and inadmissible in dissolution proceedings)].

Factors that may be considered might include, for example, the responsibility of either spouse for the support of persons other than the minor children of the marriage [see In re Marriage of Paul (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 913, 919-921, 219 Cal. Rptr. 318 (educational expenses of adult child); Ganschow v. Ganschow (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 150, 159 n.10, 120 Cal. Rptr. 865, 534 P.2d 705 ; for further discussion, see § 225.122]. They might also include the length of a prior marriage between the same parties and court orders arising from the dissolution of the parties' prior marriage to each other [see In re Marriage of Chapman (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1308, 1312-1316, 237 Cal. Rptr. 84] . Under this provision, a court may also consider monetary gifts made to the supported spouse [In re Marriage of Shaughnessy (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1225, 1240-1241, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 642] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic SupportFamily LawMarriageGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.122

§ 225.122 Support and Education of Adult Children

A series of cases have held that voluntary payments made by a parent for the support or education of an adult child not otherwise entitled to support may be taken into account in determining spousal support. Payments made by the supporting spouse may be considered as reducing his or her ability to pay [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 90, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 ; see also In re Marriage of Paul (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 913, 919, 219 Cal. Rptr. 318 ; In re Marriage of Kelley (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 82, 95, 134 Cal. Rptr. 259] . Payments made by the supported spouse may be considered as increasing his or her need [In re Marriage of Paul (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 913, 918-921, 219 Cal. Rptr. 318 ; In re Marriage of Siegel (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 88, 90, 102 Cal. Rptr. 613] .

However, at least one reported appellate decision, In re Marriage of Serna [In re Marriage of Serna, (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 482, 486-491, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 188] , refused to follow In re Marriage of Siegel (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 88 and In re Marriage of Paul (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 913, 918-921 --cases cited for the proposition that spousal support may be increased to account for support of adult children. Serna held that Siegel and Paul were wrongly decided, because "they allow for the naked circumvention of a decision that has already been made by the Legislature--namely, that child support ends at 19 at the latest, absent incapacity to earn a living." Neither case directly confronted the idea that it was allowing something to be done indirectly that could not be done directly. That is, because a parent cannot be ordered to make direct support payments for an adult child, absent incapacity of the adult child to earn a living [Fam. Code §§ 3901(a), 3910(a); In re Marriage of Chandler (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 124, 130] , he or she cannot be ordered to make "indirect" adult child support payments under the guise of spousal support [In re Marriage of Serna, (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 482, 491, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 188 citing In re Marriage of McElwee (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 902, 910-911, 243 Cal. Rptr. 179 ; see In re Marriage of Lynn (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 120, 133, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611 (court may not award support of adult children under guise of spousal support)].

There is also dicta in Serna, criticizing the position that supporting spouses who voluntarily support adult children could receive a decrease in spousal support. It was reasoned that case law has established that supporting spouses "cannot deliberately shirk support obligations by refusing to work" [In re Marriage of Serna, (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 482, 492 citing Reynolds v. Reynolds (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1379, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 636]. Similarly, if a supporting spouse were to voluntarily help an adult child through a very expensive private college, which left very little left to pay spousal support, the supported spouse would be subsidizing the supporting spouse's child support to the degree that the expense was factored into the support decision.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.123

§ 225.123 Annuities, Life Insurance, and Trust Funds

If it is just and reasonable in view of the parties' circumstances, the court, in determining the needs of a supported spouse, may include an amount sufficient to purchase an annuity for the supported spouse, or to maintain insurance for the benefit of that spouse on the life of the spouse required to make support payments. Alternatively, the supporting spouse may be required to establish a trust fund for the benefit of the supported spouse should the order for support be terminated by the death of the supporting spouse. Except as otherwise agreed by the parties in writing, such an order may be modified or terminated at the court's discretion at any time before the death of supporting spouse [see Fam. Code § 4360; In re Marriage of Ziegler (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 788, 793, 255 Cal. Rptr. 100] .

The court may also order the supporting spouse to cooperate in the supported spouse's purchase of insurance on the supporting spouse's life, by requiring the supporting spouse to apply for life insurance naming the supported spouse as beneficiary--that the supported spouse will pay for. This is not, however, treated as an order under Fam. Code § 4360, but an order under the court's general power to make orders on specific family law matters, including support and injunctive relief [In re Marriage of Stimel (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 991, 994-996, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18 (wife's motion for order directing her former husband to apply for life insurance naming her as beneficiary and stipulating she would pay all insurance premiums was not motion to modify spousal support); see Fam. Code § 2010].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.124

§ 225.124 Payment to Creditors

On a determination that payment of an obligation of a party would benefit either party or a child for whom support may be ordered, the court may order one of the parties to pay the obligation, or any portion of it, directly to the creditor. The creditor does not have a right to enforce such an order; however, the creditor's other remedies are not affected by the order [Fam. Code § 2023; see In re Marriage of Higgason (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 476, 488, 110 Cal. Rptr. 897, 516 P.2d 289] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.125

§ 225.125 Effect of Agreement Between Parties

The factors set forth in Fam. Code § 4320 are considered by the court in setting spousal support if there has been no agreement of the parties [see In re Marriage of Carletti (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 989, 995, 126 Cal. Rptr. 1 ; In re Marriage of Hawkins (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 208, 212, 121 Cal. Rptr. 681] . Under current California law, an agreement of the parties regarding spousal support is subject to judicial review to determine that it is fair and not tainted by fraud, compulsion, collusion, or undue influence. But if there is no reason for questioning the validity or fairness of the agreement, the court may not withhold its approval [Garrett v. Garrett (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 407, 416-417] . Under prior law, the enforceability of a spousal support agreement depended on whether the agreement was deemed to be "integrated" with the disposition of the community property. The concept of integrated and nonintegrated agreements has now disappeared from the family law landscape [see Fam. Code § 3590; In re Marriage of Glasser (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 149, 152, 226 Cal. Rptr. 229 ; Tilghman v. Superior Court (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 599, 611-612, 115 Cal. Rptr. 195] .

One or both parties may waive the right to spousal support in a separation or marital termination agreement [see Estate of Kalal (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 841, 851, 175 Cal. Rptr. 582 ; Cochrum v. Cochrum (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 825, 831-832, 328 P.2d 1000 ; see also In re Marriage of Paboojian (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1437-1439, 235 Cal. Rptr. 65 (postjudgment oral waiver of support)]. However, such a waiver is subject to particular scrutiny because waiver of a right favored in law is not lightly found [see In re Marriage of Moore (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 22, 27, 169 Cal. Rptr. 619] . Language constituting a waiver must clearly and explicitly manifest that intention [In re Marriage of Moore (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 22, 28, 169 Cal. Rptr. 619] . Waiver must be a voluntary act, knowingly done with sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences. Contract formation defenses such as fraud, compulsion, or breach of fiduciary duty, may render the agreement invalid [see In re Marriage of Moore (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 22, 27, 169 Cal. Rptr. 619] . Finally, marital settlement agreements may be set aside if the court finds them inequitable even though not induced through fraud or compulsion [In re Marriage of Moore (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 22, 32, 169 Cal. Rptr. 619] .

The parties may also agree that spousal support may not be modified or terminated by court order [see Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(d)], and the court must abide by that agreement [In re Marriage of Carletti (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 989, 995, 126 Cal. Rptr. 1] . For further discussion, see § 225.160.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsValidityFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionProperty SettlementsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.126

§ 225.126 Examination by Vocational Training Counselor

If spousal support is at issue, the court may order either party to submit to an examination by a vocational training counselor [Fam. Code § 4331(a); see Fam. Code § 4331(e) (required qualifications of vocational training counselor)]; see also Fam. Code § 3558 (power of court to require either parent to attend job training, job placement, and vocational rehabilitation and work programs in any proceeding involving family or child support)]. A party refusing to comply with such an order is subject to the same consequences provided for failure to comply with an examination ordered under Code Civ. Proc. § 2032 (Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.010 et seq. effective July1, 2005) [Fam. Code § 4331(c)].

The examination must include an assessment of the party's ability to obtain employment, based on the party's age, health, education, marketable skills, employment history, and the current availability of employment opportunities. The focus of the examination must be on an assessment of the party's ability to obtain employment that would allow him or her to maintain herself or himself at the marital standard of living [Fam. Code § 4331(a)]. The court may order the supporting spouse to pay, in addition to spousal support, the necessary expenses and costs of the counseling, retraining, or education [Fam. Code § 4331(f)]. For forms for use in moving for an examination by a vocational training counselor, see §§ 225.371 and 225.372.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.127

§ 225.127 Discovery of Tax Returns

In a proceeding involving spousal support, no party to the proceeding may refuse to submit copies of his or her federal and state income tax returns to the court, whether individual or joint [Fam. Code § 3552(a)]. The tax returns may be examined by the other party and are discoverable by the other party. A party also may be examined by the other party as to the content of a tax return [Fam. Code § 3552(b)].

If the court finds that it is relevant to the case to retain the tax return, it must be sealed and maintained as a confidential record of the court. If the court finds that the tax return is not relevant to disposition of the case, all copies of the tax return must be returned to the party who submitted it [Fam. Code § 3552(c)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.128

§ 225.128 Award of Support in Default Judgment if Support Is Not Requested

The relief that may be granted on default in a family law matter cannot exceed that requested in the petition [In re Marriage of Lippel (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1160, 1166-1171, 276 Cal. Rptr. 290, 801 P.2d 1041] . This rule is imposed both by due process requirements and the Code of Civil Procedure [In re Marriage of Lippel (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1160, 1166-1167, 276 Cal. Rptr. 290, 801 P.2d 1041 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 580; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.21 (general applicability of Code of Civil Procedure to family law proceedings)]. Therefore, if no spousal support is requested in the petition and the respondent defaults, no spousal support may be awarded in the judgment [see In re Marriage of Lippel (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1160, 1167, 1170-1171, 276 Cal. Rptr. 290, 801 P.2d 1041 (involving child support)].

The above rule may prohibit a reservation of jurisdiction to award spousal support in the future to be paid by a defaulting respondent if it is not requested in the petition [see In re Marriage of Liss (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 1429-1430, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 397] . However, it has been held that jurisdiction may be reserved to award spousal support to a defaulting spouse even though the petition does not request spousal support for either party [In re Marriage of Wells (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1437-1440, 254 Cal. Rptr. 185 (default dissolution of 14-year marriage with default taken against supported AFDC spouse)]. If a default is taken against the supported spouse, and the supporting spouse is both present at the default hearing and represented by counsel, reservation of the spousal support issue does not violate Code Civ. Proc. § 580 by granting relief in excess of the relief requested [In re Marriage of Wells (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1439, 254 Cal. Rptr. 185 ; cf. Cushman v. Cushman (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 492, 496, 3 Cal. Rptr. 24 (supporting spouse who appeared at default trial needed no Code Civ. Proc. § 580 protection against undue advantage)]. The supporting spouse's active participation at the default hearing eliminates the need to protect him or her against open-ended liability or undue advantage, so that the reason behind Code Civ. Proc. § 580 ceases to exist [In re Marriage of Wells (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1437-1439, 254 Cal. Rptr. 185] . The same reasoning supports reservation of jurisdiction to award support to a party who did not request it in the pleadings if both parties are before the court [In re Marriage of Liss (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 1429, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 397] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultDefault JudgmentsConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
3. Permanent Support: Factors Considered

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.129-225.139

[Reserved]

§§ 225.129[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
4. Permanent Support: Retention Of Jurisdiction And Duration Of Order

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.140

§ 225.140 Need to Address Retention of Jurisdiction in Order or Judgment

In making any order addressing the subject of spousal support, whether affecting a marital settlement agreement or otherwise and whether or not spousal support is actually ordered, the parties and the court must consider the question of whether the court is to retain jurisdiction over the matter after entry of judgement. If the court neither awards spousal support nor retains jurisdiction over spousal support, jurisdiction to award support terminates, and no award may be made in the future [see Howell v. Howell (1894) 104 Cal. 45, 47, 37 P. 770 ; Bain v. Superior Court (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 804, 808-809, 111 Cal. Rptr. 848 ; but see In re Marriage of Olsen (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1702, 1706-1707, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 306 (under its equitable power, court may set aside prior order terminating jurisdiction that was obtained by fraud, mistake, or accident)].

Retention of jurisdiction is also fundamental to extending the duration of support if it is otherwise to terminate at the end of a particular period [see Fam. Code § 4335; for further discussion of extending a spousal support award, see § 225.143]. Related issues that should also be addressed by the parties are whether spousal support is to be modifiable as to amount [see Fam. Code §§ 3591, 3651; for further discussion, see § 225.160], and whether spousal support is to terminate by operation of law on the death of either party or the remarriage of the supported spouse [see Fam. Code § 4337; In re Marriage of Thornton (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 251, 254, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380 ; for further discussion, see § 225.161].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
4. Permanent Support: Retention Of Jurisdiction And Duration Of Order

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.141

§ 225.141 Manner of Retaining Jurisdiction in Marriage of Long Duration

[1] In General

Except on written agreement of the parties to the contrary or a court order terminating spousal support, the court retains jurisdiction indefinitely if the marriage is of long duration [Fam. Code § 4336(a)]. Thus, no express language retaining jurisdiction is required in a spousal support order if the marriage is of long duration. Rather, the rule is now that only specific language of termination will divest the court of its fundamental jurisdiction--by either the parties' agreement or a court order [see In re Marriage of Jones (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 505, 511-514, 271 Cal. Rptr. 761 (in long-term marriage, termination of jurisdiction must appear expressly in agreement); cf. In re Marriage of Morrison (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 437, 446-447, 143 Cal. Rptr. 139, 573 P.2d 41 (under prior law, jurisdiction terminated unless expressly reserved); In re Marriage of Ostrander (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 63, 65-66, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348 (original stipulated dissolution judgment did not mention spousal support)].

Fam. Code § 4336 applies to proceedings filed on or after January 1, 1988, and to proceedings pending on January 1, 1988 in which the court had not entered a permanent support order or in which the court order is subject to modification [Fam. Code § 4336(d)]. For discussion of the law if Section 4336 does not apply, see § 225.142.

Because of the apparent mandatory nature of Fam. Code § 4336, the court should make specific findings as to whether the marriage is one of long duration to which the statute applies (see § 225.373). For further discussion, see § 225.144[2].

Nothing in Fam. Code § 4336 limits the right of a court to terminate all spousal support in later proceedings on the ground of changed circumstances [Fam. Code § 4336(c)]. For further discussion of termination of support, see § 225.200 et seq.

[2] What Constitutes Marriage of Long Duration

No bright-line rule can determine whether or not a marriage is of long duration [see In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 663, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587] . However, there is a presumption that affects the burden of providing evidence that a marriage of 10 years or more (from date of marriage to date of separation) is of long duration. The court may consider periods of separation during the marriage in determining whether the marriage is, in fact, of long duration [Fam. Code § 4336(b)]. The presumption does not preclude a court from determining that a marriage of less than 10 years is a marriage of long duration [Fam. Code § 4336(b)]. Periods of nonmarital cohabitation are not to be considered in determining the length of a marriage [In re Marriage of Bukaty (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 143, 151, 225 Cal. Rptr. 492] .

If the parties were married, divorced, and then remarried to each other, there may be some conflict as to whether the term of the first marriage may be considered. One court refused to consider a 12-year first marriage that was followed by a period of divorce/cohabitation of over 20 years, and a brief second marriage [see In re Marriage of Bukaty (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 143, 145-151, 225 Cal. Rptr. 492] . Another refused to limit support based on a marriage of less than four months because the parties had been previously married for nineteen years, and divorced for only three [see In re Marriage of Chapman (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1308, 1312-1316, 237 Cal. Rptr. 84] . Although these cases may be distinguished based on the length of the interval between marriages, the latter court relied heavily on the continuing duty of support arising from the first marriage during the nonmarital period [see In re Marriage of Chapman (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1308, 1315-1316, 237 Cal. Rptr. 84] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceInferences & PresumptionsPresumptionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
4. Permanent Support: Retention Of Jurisdiction And Duration Of Order

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.142

§ 225.142 Retaining Jurisdiction if Fam. Code § 4336 Does Not Apply

Fam. Code § 4336 does not apply if the court determines that the marriage is not of long duration, or to nonmodifiable orders entered before January 1, 1988 [see Fam. Code § 4336(a), (b), (d); see, e.g., In re Marriage of Beck (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 341, 344-346, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 79 (improper for trial court to have reinstated support 16 years after expiration date)]. In these cases, the pre-1988 law still governs.

Under this law, a spousal support order carries within it, without the necessity of language to that effect, a reservation of jurisdiction to modify it at any time prior to the expiration of the term for which it is awarded [In re Marriage of Christie (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 849, 864, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 135 ; Dahlstet v. Dahlstet (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 174, 178, 77 Cal. Rptr. 45] . This is true even if only a token amount, such as $1.00 per year, is ordered, and that award was made only for the purpose of reserving jurisdiction [see In re Marriage of West (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 240, 253, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 858 ; In re Marriage of Beust (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 24, 26, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 201 . If no spousal support is ordered, jurisdiction is lost unless retained expressly in the order or by agreement [see Cochran v. Cochran (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 339, 344, 91 Cal. Rptr. 630] . Therefore, jurisdiction may be reserved by a simple recitation in the order without making a token award [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Liss (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 1428, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 397 ; In re Marriage of Wells (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1436, 254 Cal. Rptr. 185 ; see also § 225.388].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
4. Permanent Support: Retention Of Jurisdiction And Duration Of Order

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.143

§ 225.143 Jurisdiction to Extend Award Beyond Period of Express Limitation

[1] When Express Language Is Required Under Family Code

Most retention-of-jurisdiction issues have arisen in the context of spousal support orders that award support for a limited period of time. Before 1988, the statute provided that an order for spousal support for a fixed period of time terminated at the end of the period specified, and could not be extended unless the court retained jurisdiction in the order [see former Civ. Code § 4801(d) (prior to amendment by Stats. 1987, ch. 1086); In re Marriage of Foreman (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 129, 133-134, 228 Cal. Rptr. 4] .

In 1987, the Legislature added what is now Fam. Code § 4336 to former Civ. Code § 4801(d), providing that the court retained jurisdiction indefinitely if the marriage was of long duration. However, it was not clear whether this additional language entirely obviated the need for express language retaining jurisdiction in the case of a long-term marriage, or whether it merely clarified that if jurisdiction were expressly retained, it continued indefinitely (that is, beyond the termination date specified in the order) [see In re Marriage of Segel (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1030, 1040-1041, 223 Cal. Rptr. 430] .

In converting former Civ. Code § 4801(d) to the Family Code, the California Law Revision Commission appears to have resolved the ambiguity in favor of the former construction [see In re Marriage of Jones (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 505, 511-514, 271 Cal. Rptr. 761] . Under Fam. Code § 4335, an order for spousal support terminates at the end of the period provided in the order and may not be extended unless the court retains jurisdiction in the order or under § 4336 . Thus, it appears that if the court determines that the marriage is of long duration under Fam. Code § 4336(b), jurisdiction is retained automatically and indefinitely over a spousal support order scheduled to terminate after a fixed term [see Fam. Code § 4336(a), discussed in § 225.141[1]]; no express language retaining jurisdiction is required in the order [but see In re Marriage of Christie (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 849, 861, 862 n.5, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 135 (dicta suggesting that statute does not alter prior rule)]. Of course, there should now be an express finding that the marriage is of long duration in order to obtain the effect of Section 4336 [see § 225.373].

As so construed, Fam. Code § 4335 shifts the focus of a rather voluminous body of case law regarding retention of jurisdiction in limited-duration spousal support orders. A need for express language reserving jurisdiction is now limited to those orders to which Fam. Code § 4336 does not apply. These include orders in short-term marriages, and nonmodifiable orders entered before January 1, 1988 [see Fam. Code § 4336(a), (d); see, e.g., In re Marriage of Beck (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 341, 344-346, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 79 (improper for trial court to have reinstated support 16 years after expiration date)]. This law is discussed in § 225.143[2]. If Fam. Code § 4336 does apply, then there must be an express termination of jurisdiction in the order [In re Marriage of Brown (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 785, 790, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 506 ; see In re Marriage of Ousterman (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1094, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 403] . This law is discussed in § 225.143[3].

As long as the court has retained jurisdiction over spousal support ordered for a limited period, it has fundamental jurisdiction to take new action concerning the support. It may both modify the amount of support (unless it is made nonmodifiable by agreement [see Fam. Code § 3591; see also § 225.160]), and extend the duration of support beyond the termination date [In re Marriage of Vomacka (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 459, 474, 204 Cal. Rptr. 568, 683 P.2d 248 ; In re Marriage of Brown (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 785, 790-791, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 506 ; see In re Marriage of Maxfield (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 755, 762-763, 191 Cal. Rptr. 267] . However, some courts have construed language establishing a termination date as retaining jurisdiction to modify as to amount, but not to extend the duration of support past the stated date [see In re Marriage of Zlatnik (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1284, 1290, 243 Cal. Rptr. 454 (provision setting termination date also construed as terminating jurisdiction on that date; motion to extend date brought before date denied); In re Marriage of Foreman (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 129, 133-134, 228 Cal. Rptr. 4 ; see also § 225.144; § 225.143[3]].

[2] What Constitutes Language Sufficient to Retain Jurisdiction

Many cases decided under the pre-1988 version of former Civ. Code § 4801(d) have addressed the question of what language is sufficient to constitute an express retention of jurisdiction over spousal support awarded for a limited duration. These cases must be read in context of the state of the law that required such language in all cases, regardless of the length of the marriage. In that context, the loss of spousal support, a fundamental right incident to marriage, was subject to strict interpretation. If the order was vague or ambiguous with regard to the period of time for which a court could extend support, it was to be construed in favor of a retention of jurisdiction. In fact, retention of jurisdiction need not have been expressly stated at all, but could be implied [see In re Marriage of Vomacka (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 459, 466-467, 204 Cal. Rptr. 568, 683 P.2d 248] .

Fam. Code §§ 4335 and 4336 reverse the need for express jurisdictional language with regard to long-term marriages. In orders regarding these marriages, the parties must expressly agree that jurisdiction is to terminate on a given date; otherwise it is retained indefinitely [Fam. Code §§ 4335, 4336(a); see § 225.143[3]]. Express language retaining jurisdiction is still required with regard to short-term marriages, but in these marriages, the protective policy concerns are of less significance. Therefore, it may be anticipated that courts will be less likely to construe language in a manner that favors retention of jurisdiction. The prior cases on this point should not necessarily be viewed as definitive.

In these cases, it has been held that no particular language in the order is required to avoid loss of jurisdiction [In re Marriage of Keeva (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 512, 519, 136 Cal. Rptr. 82] . Any language in a spousal support order that suggests that modification of its terms will be permitted is to be interpreted as a retention of the court's fundamental jurisdiction to both modify and, on a proper factual showing, to extend the award [In re Marriage of Vomacka (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 459, 466-467, 204 Cal. Rptr. 568, 683 P.2d 248 ; In re Marriage of Ousterman (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1098, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 403 ; In re Marriage of Benson (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 907, 912, 217 Cal. Rptr. 589] . However, one court has held that the power to modify must derive from some express language in the order and not solely from the court's inherent power to modify the award, absent agreement to the contrary [In re Marriage of Foreman (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 129, 134, 228 Cal. Rptr. 4 (also refusing to infer jurisdiction to extend duration of support from express right to modify amount); accord In re Marriage of Beck (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 341, 345-346, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 79] .

Retention of jurisdiction has been found in a provision giving only one party the right to seek modification and expressly denying it to the other [see In re Marriage of Harbach (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 629, 634, 240 Cal. Rptr. 698 ; but see In re Marriage of Zlatnik (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1284, 1290, 243 Cal. Rptr. 454 (discussed in § 225.143[3])].

Another court rejected an asserted retention of jurisdiction to modify spousal support based on a family home award (allowing the wife and children in her custody to remain in the home and requiring husband to make mortgage payments). The court refused to characterize the award as a form of spousal support because it was contingent on the minor children living there [In re Marriage of Katz (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1029, 1035-1036, 247 Cal. Rptr. 562] .

If the court fails to reserve jurisdiction expressly in a judgment, but its intent to reserve is indicated in a transcript, the judgment may later be modified by way of a correction of a clerical error to reserve jurisdiction [In re Marriage of Sheridan (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 742, 746, 189 Cal. Rptr. 622 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 473].

One court has held that in absence of an express reservation, the parties may confer jurisdiction to modify or extend a spousal support award by agreement. Thus, if the parties submit to the court's jurisdiction for the purpose of altering a support award by stipulation, they lose the right to complain about the court's failure to reserve jurisdiction in the original order [In re Marriage of Segel (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1030, 1042, 223 Cal. Rptr. 430] .

[3] What Constitutes Language Sufficient to Terminate Jurisdiction

As noted in § 225.143[1], [2], Fam. Code § 4336 now places the burden on the parties to expressly terminate (rather than retain) jurisdiction in their agreement in a marriage of long duration. Therefore, the focus of construction of an agreement has shifted from whether the language is sufficient to retain jurisdiction to whether it is sufficient to terminate it. As such, the rule that language is to be liberally construed in favor of retaining jurisdiction [§ 225.143[2]] is now recast as a rule that language should be strictly construed against terminating jurisdiction. In both cases, ambiguity must be decided in favor of the right to spousal support [In re Marriage of Brown (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 785, 790, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 506] . In one case, for example, parties agreed to spousal support until death, remarriage, or a certain date (January 31, 1995), whichever occurred first. They further agreed that the wife could not modify the payments on any ground before that date. The appellate court held that because the agreement provided it was nonmodifiable until a certain date, it appeared to permit modification if the wife requested support after that date [In re Marriage of Ousterman (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1094, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 403] .

Similarly, in In re Marriage of Brown, the language of the agreement stated that after payment of the 60th installment of spousal support, husband's obligation shall terminate forever, and no court shall have any jurisdiction to extend spousal support as to amount or duration after that date [In re Marriage of Brown (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 785, 787, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 506] . The appellate court held that this language did not expressly divest the court of jurisdiction before expiration of the term and that therefore, the court implicitly retained jurisdiction before the termination date to extend the duration of support [In re Marriage of Brown (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 785, 788-791, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 506] . Nevertheless, the court reaffirmed that it is possible to draft a provision terminating jurisdiction to extend the duration of support beyond a limited term [In re Marriage of Brown (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 785, 790, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 506] .

One case in which sufficient language was found is In re Marriage of Zlatnik [In re Marriage of Zlatnik (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1284, 1286, 243 Cal. Rptr. 454] , in which the agreement stated that spousal support was to be for 7 years, and modifiable as to amount only during that time. The agreement continued that "in no event, shall husband be obligated to pay spousal support to wife after [date]." The court found that this language unequivocably expressed the parties' intent to terminate jurisdiction to extend the term, even though jurisdiction to modify until the termination date had been retained [In re Marriage of Zlatnik (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1284, 1286, 1290, 243 Cal. Rptr. 454 ; see also In re Marriage of Foreman (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 129, 134, 228 Cal. Rptr. 4] .

An unequivocal expression of intention to terminate spousal support was also found when the court's retention of jurisdiction was limited to "sett[ling] any disputes arising from or to interpret this Judgment and to make any further orders necessary to enforce the provisions of this judgment [; but] nothing contained in this paragraph shall be deemed to modify the provisions re spousal support contained herein," and the order contained a date certain for express, irrevocable termination, before which termination could also occur on the happening of several specific events--one of which did occur [In re Marriage of Iberti (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1437, 1441, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 766] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
4. Permanent Support: Retention Of Jurisdiction And Duration Of Order

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.144

§ 225.144 When Court Should Retain Jurisdiction

[1] Factors to Be Considered

Except perhaps in the case of a marriage of long duration pursuant to Fam. Code § 4336, if the retention of jurisdiction has not been resolved by agreement of the parties, the court must determine whether the spousal support order should be formulated to terminate jurisdiction at some point in time. In determining whether to retain jurisdiction indefinitely or terminate jurisdiction after a specified period, the court must consider all of the factors in Fam. Code § 4320 affecting the appropriateness of spousal support in the first instance [In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 663, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587 ; In re Marriage of Kelley (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 82, 93-94, 134 Cal. Rptr. 259 ; see discussion in § 225.111].

Of these factors, the duration of the marriage [see Fam. Code § 4320(f); see also § 225.117], must always be considered [In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 663-664, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587] . As a general principle, the longer the marriage, the more likely it is that it will be an abuse of discretion if the court fixes a date for termination of jurisdiction over the issue of future spousal support without a clear showing that it is reasonably probable that the supported spouse will be self-sufficient by the termination date [In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 663, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587] . However, duration is not, alone, determinative; all other factors must be considered and weighed [In re Marriage of Kelley (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 82, 93-95, 134 Cal. Rptr. 259] . For example, termination of jurisdiction in a 10-year marriage might be appropriate for parties in their 30s, but not if they were in their 60's [see In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 664, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587] .

In making its decision concerning retention of jurisdiction, the trial court must rely on the evidence in the record and the reasonable inferences to be drawn from it, and must not engage in speculation [In re Marriage of Morrison (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 437, 453, 143 Cal. Rptr. 139, 573 P.2d 41 ; In re Marriage of McTiernan & Dubrow (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1108-1109, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 287 (court should not "burn its bridges" by terminating jurisdiction to extend duration of spousal support when court's expectations about supported spouse's capacity to become adequately employed and self-supporting were tentative and untested)]. The trial court is not required to base its decision on the mere numerical weight of the factors for and against retention of jurisdiction, but, rather, on the relative weight of the factors in combination [In re Marriage of Kelley (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 82, 95, 134 Cal. Rptr. 259] .

[2] Long-Term Marriage

In the case of a long-term marriage, Fam. Code §§ 4335 and 4336 clearly express the legislative policy that jurisdiction should be retained indefinitely, and no express judicial action appears to be required to retain jurisdiction [In re Marriage of Ostrander (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 63, 65-66, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348] . This policy conforms to prior case law that generally considered it to be an abuse of discretion to fail to retain jurisdiction over spousal support in a long-term marriage, at least absent clear evidence that the supported spouse would achieve economic self-sufficiency by the termination date [In re Marriage of Christie (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 849, 864-865, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 135 ; see In re Marriage of Morrison (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 437, 453, 143 Cal. Rptr. 139, 573 P.2d 41 ; see also In re Marriage of Brantner (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 416, 420, 136 Cal. Rptr. 635 (in long-term marriage in which one spouse has stayed at home and acquired no marketable employment skills, other spouse's support obligation is likely to be of extended duration, even for life)].

However, the statutes appear to go even farther than this prior case law in that jurisdiction over support in long-term marriages will be deemed automatically reserved in the absence of specific language of termination [In re Marriage of Ostrander (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 63, 65-66, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348] . One possible further interpretation of the statutes is that courts must now retain jurisdiction in long-term marriage cases and actually have no discretion to terminate it, regardless of the parties' circumstances, in the absence of the parties' agreement to terminate it [see In re Marriage of Jones (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 505, 514 n.3, 271 Cal. Rptr. 761 (legislative history indicates section was intended to require courts to retain permanent jurisdiction in long-term marriage cases)]. That view would be a substantial departure from prior case law, which did not require the court to retain jurisdiction in every case involving a lengthy marriage. If both spouses were employed, or if there were sufficient assets available to enable each to provide for his or her needs, no support, or support for only a limited time without a retention of jurisdiction, was appropriate [In re Marriage of Morrison (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 437, 453, 143 Cal. Rptr. 139, 573 P.2d 41 ; see In re Marriage of McElwee (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 902, 908, 243 Cal. Rptr. 179] . And, in fact, such an expansive reading of Fam. Code § 4336(a) may not be justified, because it provides for termination of support jurisdiction both by the parties' agreement and by "a court order terminating spousal support." Although the quoted words do not specify whether they refer to an order made at the time a court terminates the parties' marriage or whether, viewed from the context of a later modification proceeding, they refer to some other order, it appears that the former is correct. In one case, for example, the court rejected a former husband's argument that the retained jurisdiction feature of Fam. Code § 4336(a) arises only for modification of a prior support award. Instead, the court found, this section clearly provides two mechanisms for divesting the court of jurisdiction in long-term marriage cases: the parties may agree to such termination or the court may order it. In either case, only specific language of termination will divest the court of its fundamental jurisdiction, and in the absence of such language jurisdiction will be deemed retained. While this court faced a situation in which the original dissolutionjudgment was silent concerning spousal support and it did not rule directly on the propriety of an original order terminating support, the case appears to support the view that a trial court still has discretion to make an order terminating support in long-term marriage cases [In re Marriage of Ostrander (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 63, 65-66, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348] .

In addition, in In re Marriage of Baker (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 491, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 553 , a marriage of just less than 10 years was treated as one of long duration by the trial court, which then determined that an open-ended order with no termination of jurisdiction was appropriate. In affirming, the appellate court made no mention whatsoever of the language of former Civ. Code § 4801(d) (now see Fam. Code § 4336), which would seem to compel the result reached by the trial court. Instead, the appellate court emphasized the broad discretion of the trial court in determining whether or not to divest itself of jurisdiction over spousal support on a certain date [In re Marriage of Baker (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 491, 498-500, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 553] . In fact, the court expressly stated that a trial court must not be reluctant, and indeed has a duty, to fix a termination date for spousal support if justified after considering the applicable circumstances of the case and the reasonable inferences to be drawn from the evidence [In re Marriage of Baker (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 491, 500, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 553] . Thus, it seems that this court would not view Fam. Code § 4336 as eliminating the court's discretion to terminate jurisdiction over spousal support in a long-term marriage on appropriate facts.

[3] Short-Term Marriage

In a marriage of short duration, one court has held that it is reversible error for a trial court to retain jurisdiction over spousal support, if the spouse seeking retention of jurisdiction is in good health and permanently employed at a self-supporting income level [In re Marriage of Hebbring (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1266-1267, 255 Cal. Rptr. 488] . The legislative policy behind the former Family Law Act (now see Family Code) aims at ending support obligations so that former spouses may proceed to develop their future lives [In re Marriage of Hebbring (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1267, 255 Cal. Rptr. 488] .

If the court determines that some period of support is appropriate in a short-term marriage, the duration of the marriage, considered alone, will usually militate against any but a short-term spousal support award with a fixed termination date [In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 663, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587] . Long-term spousal support may be denied in a short-term marriage even if the supported spouse has no capacity at all for economic self-sufficiency [In re Marriage of Wilson (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 913, 917-920, 247 Cal. Rptr. 522 (affirming trial court's determination that obligation to support disabled person must shift, at some point, from short-term spouse to society); see also In re Marriage of Bukaty (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 143, 147-150, 225 Cal. Rptr. 492] . Further, the court is not required to award sufficient support to maintain the supported spouse at the marital standard of living in a short-term marriage, at least if the standard of living was not created by the joint efforts of the spouses [In re Marriage of Huntington (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1513, 1520-1522, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (involving nonworking spouses who lived affluently on husband's inherited wealth)].

[4] Medium-Term Marriage

There is no statutory guidance or other bright line as to what might constitute a "medium-term" marriage [see Fam. Code § 4336; In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 663, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587 ; see also § 225.141[2]], but jurisdictional issues seem to be particularly difficult in marriages of slightly less than 10 years in which the factors to be considered under Fam. Code § 4320 indicate that spousal support is appropriate [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Baker (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 491, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 553 ; In re Marriage of Heistermann (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 286 Cal. Rptr. 127] . In these marriages, the duration of the marriage, by itself, does not preclude the exercise of the court's discretion to terminate jurisdiction over future spousal support after a specified term [In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 663, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587] . On the other hand, it is generally not an abuse of discretion to make an open-ended spousal support order with no termination of jurisdiction in such a case [In re Marriage of Baker (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 491, 496-501, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 553] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
4. Permanent Support: Retention Of Jurisdiction And Duration Of Order

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.145-225.159

[Reserved]

§§ 225.145[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
5. Nonmodification And Nontermination Agreements

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.160

§ 225.160 Agreement That Support Is Nonmodifiable

[1] General Rule of Validity for Agreement Executed on or After January 1, 1970

Under current law, the general rule is that spousal support orders may be modified or terminated at any time, whether the order was agreed to by the parties [see In re Marriage of Maytag (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1711, 1713-1716, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334 (not necessary that agreement be approved by court and merged into judgment or order)] or was imposed by the court [Fam. Code §§ 3591(a), 3651(a), (e); see Esserman v. Esserman (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 572, 578, 186 Cal. Rptr. 329 (court may also modify agreement made after final judgment of dissolution); see also Fam. Code §§ 3591(b), 3651(c) (support may not be modified or terminated as to amounts that accrued before moving papers were filed)]. However, spousal support may not be modified or terminated to the extent that a written agreement (or oral agreement entered into in open court) between the parties specifically provides that the spousal support is not subject to modification or termination [Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(d)]. Current law applies to property settlement agreements entered into on or after January 1, 1970 [Fam. Code §§ 3593, 3651(f)].

The parties' agreement that support may not be modified must be enforced by the court regardless of any change of circumstances that might occur [In re Marriage of Carletti (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 989, 995, 126 Cal. Rptr. 1 (oral agreement in open court); Tilghman v. Superior Court (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 599, 613, 115 Cal. Rptr. 195 (written agreement)]. The parties are entitled to relinquish the possibility of a potentially more beneficial support order in exchange for certainty in their rights and obligations. Because of that certainty, both can better plan their affairs and adjust their lives to the new circumstances created by the termination of marriage [In re Marriage of Hawkins (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 208, 213, 121 Cal. Rptr. 681 (finding no public policy bar to enforcement of nonmodifiable support agreement)].

If support is made nonmodifiable by agreement, it also cannot be "terminated," in the sense of being modified down to zero dollars, based on changed circumstances [In re Marriage of Bennett (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 1022, 1024-1026, 193 Cal. Rptr. 113 ; In re Marriage of Harris (1976) 65 Cal. App. 3d 143, 152, 134 Cal. Rptr. 891 ; cf. In re

Marriage of Benjamins (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 423, 433, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 313 (modification in this sense should not be confused with true termination, in which the obligation to pay support ends permanently)]. A nonmodifiable provision does not avoid termination by operation of law on the remarriage of the supported spouse [see Fam. Code § 4337], but may do so if there is language or other evidence that such was the intent of the parties [see In re Marriage of Ousterman (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1098, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 403 ; In re Marriage of Sherman (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1135-1139, 208 Cal. Rptr. 832 ; but see In re Marriage of Glasser (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 149, 152-153, 226 Cal. Rptr. 229] . For further discussion, see § 225.161.

In entering into an agreement concerning spousal support, the parties are presumed to be aware that, absent an express prohibition against modification, the trial court has the power to modify or terminate support in accordance with changed circumstances [see Levitt v. Levitt (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 477, 482, 42 Cal. Rptr. 577, 399 P.2d 33] . If the agreement does not contain a clause prohibiting modification, parol evidence is inadmissible to prove that the parties intended that the support provisions be nonmodifiable. However, extrinsic evidence may be admitted to prove the meaning of language reasonably susceptible to an interpretation precluding modification [In re Marriage of Wright (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 1115, 1121 n.10, 126 Cal. Rptr. 894 ; see In re Marriage of Trearse (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1189, 1193, 241 Cal. Rptr. 257] .

[2] Language Required

If the parties intend that the spousal support provisions be nonmodifiable, they should clearly express that intent in their written agreement or oral stipulation [see Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(d)]. A nonmodifiable clause is set forth in see § 225.391.

Some earlier cases indicated a judicial willingness to find a nonmodifiable clause in general boiler plate language in the agreement. In In re Marriage of Smiley (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 228, 125 Cal. Rptr. 717 , a general provision in the agreement stated that the agreement was not subject to modification and could not be amended except by an instrument in writing signed by both parties. The court concluded that this language was sufficient to preclude modification of spousal support [In re Marriage of Smiley (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 228, 232-233, 125 Cal. Rptr. 717] . Similarly, a support agreement that characterized its terms as "absolute, unconditional, and irrevocable" was held to be nonmodifiable [In re Marriage of Kilkenny (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 617, 619-620, 158 Cal. Rptr. 158] . A provision in an agreement, stating that the agreement "shall not depend for its effectiveness on [court] approval nor be affected thereby," has also been held to be a specific provision precluding judicial modification [In re Marriage of Nielsen (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 874, 878, 161 Cal. Rptr. 272] .

However, more recently, courts have generally reached the opposite result. These cases hold that, though no "magic words" are required, there must be some specific unequivocal language directly on the question of modification of spousal support [Fukuzaki v. Superior Court (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 454, 458, 174 Cal. Rptr. 536 (provision that agreement is intended to be "final and complete" settlement, including release of all obligations, did not preclude modification)]. Because a specific provision making spousal support nonmodifiable may be easily drafted and inserted, the basic policy of modifiability should not be eroded by inferring specific intent from boilerplate provisions [In re Marriage of Hufford (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 825, 834-835, 199 Cal. Rptr. 726 (provision that agreement may not be altered, amended, or modified except by instrument in writing executed by both parties is insufficient)]. Even if general boilerplate language is otherwise sufficient to establish nonmodifiability, the language may be overcome by other language in the specific provision related to spousal support that indicates an intent that support be subject to modification [In re Marriage of Forcum (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 599, 604-605, 193 Cal. Rptr. 596] .

It has also been held that a "step-down" support provision in a marital termination agreement, that is, one that provides for payment of support but periodically reduces the amount until no more support is due (see § 225.380), does not by itself qualify as a specific provision making spousal support nonmodifiable [In re Marriage of Jones (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 505, 509-511, 271 Cal. Rptr. 761] .

[3] Interrelationship With Reservation of Jurisdiction

An express provision in an agreement that a spousal support award may not be modified may also be construed as a stipulation that jurisdiction is not to be retained to extend the award if it otherwise expires at the end of a specific period [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Segel (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1030, 223 Cal. Rptr. 430 ; see Fam. Code § 4336(a)]. However, such an equation is not automatic, and language that otherwise would be sufficient to make the agreement nonmodifiable may be insufficient to terminate jurisdiction if there is other specific language that is construed to retain jurisdiction [In re Marriage of Ousterman (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1098, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 403 ; In re Marriage of Forcum (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 599, 604-605, 193 Cal. Rptr. 596] . Conversely, the fact that spousal support remains modifiable as to amount does not necessarily mean that jurisdiction is retained to extend the duration of support [In re Marriage of Zlatnik (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1284, 1286, 1290, 243 Cal. Rptr. 454 ; In re Marriage of Foreman (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 129, 131, 134, 228 Cal. Rptr. 4] .

One court even construed a clause precluding modification as a reservation of jurisdiction to extend the award. In In re Marriage of Harbach (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 629, 240 Cal. Rptr. 698 , the parties agreed to a spousal support order that would expire on a specific date. They further stipulated that the award could not be modified by the obligee-spouse, but could be modified by the obligor-spouse on the happening of certain specified conditions. On the obligee's motion, the court modified the award by extending the term, despite the stipulation. It reasoned that the right of the obligor to move to modify the award constituted a reservation of jurisdiction over the matter, allowing the court to consider as well the obligee's motion [In re Marriage of Harbach (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 629, 634, 240 Cal. Rptr. 698] . The dissenting judge did not dispute the court's analysis of the jurisdictional question, but criticized its failure to enforce the provision precluding modification. The dissent noted that whether or not the court retained jurisdiction, there was no basis not to give effect to the agreement that had been entered into freely between the parties [In re Marriage of Harbach (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 629, 634-636, 240 Cal. Rptr. 698 (Wiener, J., dissenting)].

[4] Agreement Executed Before January 1, 1970

Current law applies to agreements entered into on or after January 1, 1970. As to agreements entered into before that date, Chapter 1308 of the laws of 1967 applies [Fam. Code §§ 3593, 3651(f)]. Chapter 1308 amended former Civ. Code § 139, which governed support before the enactment of the Family Law Act. Section 139, as amended by Chapter 1308, provided that amendments made to it in 1959, 1963, and 1967 were to apply only with respect to agreements entered into after the effective date of the amendments. Thus, the law under Fam. Code §§ 3593 and 3651(e) and Chapter 1308 of Stats. 1967 is essentially that spousal support agreements are to be governed by the law in effect when the agreement was entered into.

Before 1959, the pertinent paragraphs of former Civ. Code § 139 provided:

> That portion of the decree or judgment [for divorce or separate maintenance] making any such allowance or allowances [for spousal or child support], and the order or orders of the court to enforce the same may be modified or revoked at any time at the discretion of the court except as to any amount that may have accrued prior to the order of modification or revocation.
>
> Except as otherwise agreed by the parties in writing, the obligation of any party in any decree, judgment or order for the support and maintenance of the other party shall terminate upon the death of the obligor or upon the remarriage of the other party.

Unlike current law [see Fam. Code §§ 3591(a), 3651(e)], the statute made no specific reference to support under an agreement of the parties, and case law came to consider modifiability of the support provisions in an agreement as a question of contract law outside of the statute [see, e.g., Adams v. Adams (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 621, 627, 177 P.2d 265] . Thus, the right to support on divorce could be addressed from two different perspectives; the obligation could be created and governed by the agreement or contract of the parties; or it could be "law-imposed" under the authority of Section 139, in which case it was called "alimony" [see Messenger v. Messenger (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 619, 624-625, 297 P.2d 988 ; Hecht v. Hecht (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6, 67 Cal. Rptr. 293] .

Alimony was subject to modification and revocation, and terminated on death or remarriage as set forth in Section 139. However, if the support was contractual, it was nonmodifiable if the agreement was deemed to be "integrated" [Messenger v. Messenger (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 619, 628, 297 P.2d 988 ; Dexter v. Dexter (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 36, 40, 265 P.2d 873] .

An agreement was integrated if it provided that the provisions relating to division of property and the provisions relating to support were reciprocal consideration. That is, the support provisions and the community property division provisions were integrally intertwined, so that the support provisions were nonseverable [see Plumer v. Plumer (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 820, 824, 313 P.2d 549 ; Sprenger v. Superior Court (1969) 268 Cal. App. 2d 857, 860 n.1, 74 Cal. Rptr. 638] . If the agreement was determined not to be integrated, the support provisions were deemed to be in the nature of alimony and subject to future modification on a showing of changed circumstances [see Puckett v. Puckett (1943) 21 Cal. 2d 833, 840, 136 P.2d 1 ; Matthews v. Matthews (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 683, 687, 141 Cal. Rptr. 634].

Often, the judicial determination of whether an agreement was in fact integrated seemed to turn on whether specific "magic" words were used, rather than on the substance of the agreement. For example, an agreement between husband and wife providing that the purpose of the parties is to reach a final settlement of their rights and duties with respect to both property and support, that they intend each provision to be in consideration for each of the other provisions, and that they waive all rights arising out of the marital relationship except those expressly set out in the agreement was deemed conclusive evidence that an integrated agreement was intended [Di Marco v. Di Marco (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 387, 391, 33 Cal. Rptr. 610, 385 P.2d 2 ; Matthews v. Matthews (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 683, 690, 141 Cal. Rptr. 634]. In some cases, integrated agreements involved a trade-off, in which the wife accepted a less favorable division of property in exchange for permanent (nonmodifiable) support. However, such a situation was not an absolute condition precedent to a finding of integration [see Dexter v. Dexter (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 36, 43-44, 265 P.2d 873] .

Discontent with the law of integrated support agreements caused the Legislature to enact a series of amendments to former Civ. Code § 139 between 1959 and 1967 [see Heller v. Heller (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 679, 684-685, 41 Cal. Rptr. 177 (chronicle of amendment history); see also Tremayne v. Striepeke (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 107, 117-118, 68 Cal. Rptr. 470 ; Hecht v. Hecht (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 1, 3-7, 67 Cal. Rptr. 293] . In 1959, child support provisions in an integrated agreement incorporated into a judgment were made modifiable, but there was no change in the treatment of spousal support [see Stats. 1959, ch. 1399, effective September 18, 1959; Heller v. Heller (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 679, 684-685, 41 Cal. Rptr. 177] .

In 1961, spousal support established in an integrated agreement was made modifiable. However, the Legislature further provided that the statute "shall not be construed to render an integrated property settlement agreement modifiable when there are no minor children of the parties to the agreement" [see Stats. 1961, ch. 2098]. As no effective date was prescribed, it was presumed that this amendment applied only to agreements executed after it became the law on September 15, 1961 [see Heller v. Heller (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 679, 685, 41 Cal. Rptr. 177] .

In 1963 the Legislature repealed the 1961 language and returned the statute to its 1959 form. Once again, only child support provisions in an integrated agreement were modifiable, but the repeal was prospective only [see Stats. 1963, ch. 861, effective September 20, 1963; Heller v. Heller (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 679, 685, 41 Cal. Rptr. 177] .

Therefore, with the exception of the period from September 15, 1961 to September 20, 1963, the law was that spousal support provided for in an integrated agreement was nonmodifiable. In the interim period, it was modifiable only if there were minor children of the marriage.

In 1967, former Civ. Code § 139 was again amended, and spousal support was finally made modifiable, regardless of whether or not the provision was contained in an agreement, unless the agreement provided to the contrary. The pertinent provisions of Section 139, as it read after the amendments made by Chapter 1308 of Stats. 1967, effective November 8, 1967, were the following:

> The provisions of any agreement for the support of either party shall be deemed to be separate and severable from the provisions of the agreement relating to property. All orders for the support of either party based on such agreement shall be deemed law imposed and shall be deemed made under the power of the court to make such orders. The provisions of any agreement or order for the support of either party shall be subject to subsequent modification or revocation by court order except as to any amount that may have accrued prior to the order of modification or revocation, and except to the extent that any written agreement, or if there is no written agreement, any oral agreement entered into in open court between the parties, specifically provides to the contrary. All such orders of the court for the support of the other party, even if there has been an agreement of the parties, may be enforced by the court by execution, contempt, or by such other order or orders as the court in its discretion may from time to time deem necessary.
>
> The amendments to the second paragraph of this section enacted at the 1959 Regular Session of the Legislature are effective only with respect to property settlement agreements entered into after the effective date of such amendments.
>
> The 1963 amendments to this section apply only with respect to agreements entered into after the effective date of such amendments.
>
> The 1967 amendments to this section apply only with respect to agreements entered into after the effective date of such amendments.

The effect of that amendment was to make all spousal support provisions of a property settlement agreement, whether or not merged in the interlocutory decree, whether or not merely approved, and whether or not "integrated" under the previous cases, modifiable unless the parties agreed to the contrary [In re Marriage of Smiley (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 228, 232, 125 Cal. Rptr. 717 ; see In re Marriage of Harris (1976) 65 Cal. App. 3d 143, 150, 134 Cal. Rptr. 891 ; see also Sprenger v. Superior Court (1969) 268 Cal. App. 2d 857, 867-868, 74 Cal. Rptr. 638 ; Garrett v. Garrett (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 407, 416, 65 Cal. Rptr. 580] .

The 1967 version of former Civ. Code § 139 was carried into the former Family Law Act. The first three sentences of the amended section were contained in former Civ. Code § 4811(b), with only one minor change; the words "except as to any amount that may have accrued prior to the order of modification or revocation" was replaced by the words "except as to any amounts that may have accrued prior to the date of filing of the notice of motion or order to show cause to modify or revoke." The fourth sentence regarding enforcement was covered by the broad language of former Civ. Code § 4380.

The Family Law Act statutes were carried forward into the Family Code without substantive change [see California Law Revision Commission Comments to Fam. Code §§ 3590, 3591]. The first two sentences of former Civ. Code § 4811(b) are now Fam. Code § 3590. The provisions in former Civ. Code § 4811(b) related to modification of support by agreement are found in Fam. Code § 3591. They are reiterated in Fam. Code § 3651. Former Civ. Code § 4380, on enforcement, is Fam. Code § 290. Thus, with the exception of the minor change related to retroactivity, the current law on modification of support agreements is the same as the law under former Civ. Code § 139 on and after November 8, 1967, the effective date of Chapter 1308 of Stats. 1967.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSettlementsSettlement AgreementsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
5. Nonmodification And Nontermination Agreements

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.161

§ 225.161 Agreements Avoiding Termination by Operation of Law: Death, Remarriage, Cohabitation

The death of either party or the remarriage of the supported spouse terminates the support obligation of the supporting spouse by operation of law [Fam. Code § 4337; see In re Marriage of Glasser (1984) 181 Cal. App. 3d 149, 153, 226 Cal. Rptr. 229] . Also, there is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof that the supported spouse has a decreased need for spousal support if he or she is cohabiting with a person of the opposite sex [Fam. Code § 4323(a)(1); In re Marriage of Bower (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 893, 900] . However, these legal effects of death, remarriage, and cohabitation may be avoided by a written agreement of the parties [Fam. Code §§ 4323(a)(1), 4337; In re Marriage of Thornton (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 251, 254-255, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380] . For forms of these provisions, see §§ 225.392 and 225.393. Even if an agreement does not expressly extend support beyond remarriage or death, an extension may be implied if that was the clear intent of the parties [see, e.g., Lucas v. Elliott (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 888, 893-894, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 746 (finding provision in agreement requiring payor to maintain life insurance in amount of present value of support obligation as such an agreement, despite lack of express language continuing support obligation after death); In re Marriage of McGhee (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 408, 414-415, 182 Cal. Rptr. 456 (language of interlocutory agreement and nature of agreement implied extension beyond remarriage)].

Nevertheless, a written agreement to waive the provisions of Fam. Code § 4337 must be specific and express. Thus, for example, an agreement providing for nonmodifiability of a certain sum of spousal support, and specifying that the support continue "until further Order of the Court, death of either party, or for a period until March 1, 2003, whichever first occurs," was held not to waive termination by operation of law [see Fam. Code § 4337] on remarriage. The court stated that although no particular words are required for the waiver, "[o]n the other hand, silence will not do" [In re Marriage of Thornton (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 251, 254, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380 (noting that husband attempted to rectify claimed inadvertent omission of remarriage proviso in judgment, but failed to pursue motion)].

There is perhaps some division of authority over whether a general nonmodifiability clause avoids termination by operation of law on remarriage under Fam. Code § 4337. One court has held that remarriage does not terminate spousal support if the parties' agreement states that support is not modifiable on any ground, and does not provide an express exception for remarriage [In re Marriage of Sherman (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1135-1139, 208 Cal. Rptr. 832 see also In re Marriage of Cesnalis (2003)106 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 1275-1276, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436 (husband waived right under Fam. Code § 4337 to terminate spousal support on wife's remarriage when nonmodifiability provision in stipulated judgment was expressly limited to three-year "duration of spousal support" that "will not be modifiable under any circumstances" and that will end only if three years are up or one of parties dies)]. However, other courts have held that agreements providing that spousal support (1) simply was "nonmodifiable" or (2) "nonmodifiable for any reason whatsoever," did not preclude automatic termination by operation of law on the remarriage of the supported spouse [see In re Marriage of Thornton (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 251, 254-255, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380 ; In re Marriage of Glasser (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 149, 151-153, 226 Cal. Rptr. 229] . The cases may be distinguished on the ground that in Sherman there was evidence, both in the agreement and extrinsic to it, that nontermination on remarriage was the intent of the parties. In a subsequent case, the court noted that termination and modification are distinct concepts describing different ways to alter support obligations. It rejected the view that a termination of support was simply a modification down to zero dollars, and refused to apply a nonmodifiable clause to extend the payor's obligation to make medical insurance premium payments after the death of the supported spouse [In re Marriage of Benjamins (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 423, 432-433, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 313] .

For further discussion of termination of support by death or remarriage, and of the effect of cohabitation, see § 225.200 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationCohabitationFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationDeathFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationRemarriageFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
5. Nonmodification And Nontermination Agreements

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.162-225.179

[Reserved]

§§ 225.162[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
6. Enforcement Provisions Issued With Order

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.180

§ 225.180 Earnings Assignment Order

When the court orders a party to pay spousal support, it must include in its order an earnings assignment order directed at the obligor's employer. The earnings assignment order directs the employer to withhold the amount of support (and any amount ordered by the court to be paid toward the liquidation of any arrearage) from the obligor's earnings and to pay it directly to the obligee [Fam. Code § 5230; see Fam. Code § 150 ("support" as used in Family Code includes spousal support)]. However, service of the order on the employer may be stayed if the court makes a finding of good cause to stay service of the order, or if an alternative arrangement for payment exists pursuant to Fam. Code § 5260(b)(2) [Fam. Code § 5260(a)]. Earnings assignment orders are discussed in detail, and forms are provided, in Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement, § 259.50 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportEnforcementGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
6. Enforcement Provisions Issued With Order

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.181

§ 225.181 Security for Payment

The court may order the supporting party to give reasonable security for payment of spousal support [Fam. Code § 4339]. This provision has been construed as authorizing the court, for example, to impress a lien on the paying spouse's separate property, including the community property awarded to him or her, to secure payment of spousal support [see Sanguinetti v. Sanguinetti (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 95, 102, 69 P.2d 845 ; Miller v. Miller (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 322, 328, 38 Cal. Rptr. 571 ; Rosenthal v. Rosenthal (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 289, 298, 17 Cal. Rptr. 186] .

The court may not impose such a lien on its own motion without notice, however [Blankenship v. Blankenship (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 736, 745, 28 Cal. Rptr. 176] . Rather, notice of the application for an order impressing a lien on the separate property of the paying spouse, and an opportunity to be heard, are essential [Clopton v. Clopton (1911) 161 Cal. 481, 483, 119 P. 651] . That is, before the court may make such an order, it must first give the paying spouse an opportunity to show why security should not be ordered [Blankenship v. Blankenship (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 736, 745-746, 28 Cal. Rptr. 176] . The power of the court to impose such a lien is a delicate one and must be exercised with caution. The remedy is an extraordinary one that could directly affect the marketability of the spouse's title to the property and could have harsh results. Hence, it should be resorted to only in cases in which less onerous remedies are not available [see Blankenship v. Blankenship (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 736, 746, 28 Cal. Rptr. 176 ; Loomis v. Loomis (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 345, 346, 5 Cal. Rptr. 550] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawSecured TransactionsPerfection & PriorityPriorityLiensFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationSeparate PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportEnforcementGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
6. Enforcement Provisions Issued With Order

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.182

§ 225.182 Payment to County Officer

In any proceeding in which the court makes a spousal support order, the court may direct that payment be made to the county officer designated by the court for that purpose [Fam. Code § 4350; see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 276(a), 279]. The local child support agency will then enforce the order [Fam. Code § 4351(a)]. Although it is not expressly so limited, the purpose of this procedure is to allow a county to receive support payments directly in cases in which the supported spouse has assigned her or his rights to the county as a condition to receiving public benefits [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 11477(a)]. Whether, and on what conditions, a court might order payments made to a designated county officer in a non-public benefits case has not been addressed. Enforcement of support by local child support agencies is discussed in detail in Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement, § 259.150 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDeposits in CourtFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportEnforcementGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Awards Of Spousal Support
6. Enforcement Provisions Issued With Order

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.183-225.199

[Reserved]

§§ 225.183[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
1. In General

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.200

§ 225.200 Governing Statutes

Modification or termination of spousal support generally is governed by Fam. Code §§ 3650-3654. Discovery before the commencement of a modification or termination proceeding is governed by Fam. Code §§ 3660-3668.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
1. In General

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.201-225.219

[Reserved]

§§ 225.201[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
2. Jurisdiction And Procedure

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 225.220

225.220 Jurisdiction of Court to Modify or Terminate Spousal Support

Generally, a spousal support order may be modified or terminated at any time as the court determines to be necessary [Fam. Code § 3651(a); see Fam. Code §§ 3650 ("support order" includes spousal or family support), 3651(e) (statute applies whether or not support is based on agreement of parties); see also In re Marriage of Maytag (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1711, 1713-1716, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334 (not necessary that agreement have been approved by court or merged into judgment or order)]. However, a trial court loses its jurisdiction to terminate spousal support during the pendency of an appeal of a judgment awarding spousal support [In re Marriage of Varner (1999) 68 Cal. App. 4th 932, 937, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 628] . In addition, there are exceptions to the general rules concerning modifiability with respect to retroactive modification [see Fam. Code § 3651(c); see also § 225.223], and support made nonmodifiable by agreement [see Fam. Code § 3651(d); see also § 225.60 et seq.]. For a discussion of modification procedures generally, see Ch. 261, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure .

In order for the court to modify a spousal support order, it must have retained jurisdiction over the question of spousal support, and that retained jurisdiction must be in effect as of the date of the modification proceeding. If jurisdiction was either not retained initially [see Bain v. Superior Court (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 804, 809, 111 Cal. Rptr. 848 ; Cochran v. Cochran (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 339, 344, 91 Cal. Rptr. 630] , or terminated before the date of the modification proceeding [see In re Marriage of Segel (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1030, 1040-1041, 223 Cal. Rptr. 430] , the court has no power to act further with regard to spousal support [but see In re Marriage of Olsen (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1702, 1706-1707, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 306 (under its equitable power, court may set aside prior order terminating jurisdiction that was obtained by fraud, mistake, or accident)]. For a discussion of retention of jurisdiction, see § 225.60 et seq.

Modification jurisdiction involves two distinct components. First, there is the power to modify the amount of support ordered, by increasing or decreasing it. Second, there is the power to extend the duration of support beyond a limited term that is established in the existing order [see Fam. Code § 4335; In re Marriage of Beust (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 24, 29, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 201] . It is possible to construct a spousal support order that gives the court continuing jurisdiction over one aspect but not the other. For example, the court may have jurisdiction to modify the amount of support during the term for which it is provided, but no jurisdiction to extend the duration of support beyond the termination date set in the order [In re Marriage of Zlatnik (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1284, 1286, 1290, 243 Cal. Rptr. 454 ; In re Marriage of Foreman (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 129, 131, 134, 228 Cal. Rptr. 4] . For further discussion of modification agreements, see § 225.60 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentFraudCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentIndependent ActionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
2. Jurisdiction And Procedure

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.221

§ 225.221 Court Cannot Delegate Authority Without Parties' Stipulation

Although the court has the power to appoint a special master to gather data to be used in determining the proper level of support, the special master cannot be empowered to make binding factual findings or judicial determinations absent a stipulation by the parties [In re Marriage of Olson (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1, 8, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480] . Thus, if the reference to a special master is made on the court's own motion, the court itself must make the determinations concerning levels of support, after considering the special master's report, which the court may either adopt as its own or modify [In re Marriage of Olson (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1, 8, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480 (delegation to special master of power to determine husband's allowable business deductions, and tax consequences of husband's changed income sources, held to be improper delegation of judicial authority)].

However, if the reference is by agreement of the parties, the parties can stipulate to the special master making determinations that otherwise would be an unlawful delegation of judicial authority [In re Marriage of Olson (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1, 8, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersMastersGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersReferencesFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
2. Jurisdiction And Procedure

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.222

§ 225.222 Judicial Discretion

In deciding whether to modify or terminate a spousal support order, the trial court has a broad discretion [In re Marriage of Kuppinger (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 628, 633, 120 Cal. Rptr. 654 ; see In re Marriage of Crobarger (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 56, 60, 223 Cal. Rptr. 480] . "Discretion" means an exercise of discriminating judgment within the bounds of reason that, as contemplated by law, is not capricious or arbitrary, but impartial, guided and controlled in its exercise by fixed legal principles [Webb v. Webb (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 259, 262, 90 Cal. Rptr. 565] .

Whether a modification is warranted depends on the facts and circumstances of each case, and its propriety rests in the sound discretion of the trial court, the exercise of which will not be disturbed on appeal unless as a matter of law an abuse of discretion is shown. In determining whether there has been an abuse of discretion, the appellate court will resolve any conflict in the evidence or reasonable inferences to be drawn from the facts in support of the trial court's determination [Philbin v. Philbin (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 115, 119, 96 Cal. Rptr. 408 ; see § 225.228].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewAbuse of DiscretionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
2. Jurisdiction And Procedure

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.223

§ 225.223 Effective Date of Modification Order

An order modifying or terminating a spousal support order may be made retroactive to the date on which the moving papers were filed, or to any subsequent date [Fam. Code § 3653(a); In re Marriage of Cheriton (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 269, 312-313, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 755 (court must exercise discretion in modifying spousal support retroactively)]. A support order may not be modified or terminated as to an amount that accrued before the date on which the moving papers were filed [Fam. Code § 3651(c); see In re Marriage of Acosta (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 899, 902, 137 Cal. Rptr. 33] . Thus, an order that a spouse must repay temporary support from his or her share of the community property received later in the division of property is improper as a retroactive modification of a support order [In re Marriage of Van Sickle (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 728, 739-740, 137 Cal. Rptr. 568] . If monthly payments accrue on the first day of the month, and the notice of motion or order to show cause is filed on the second day of the month or later, the court has no power to reduce the payment due for that particular month [see Hangen v. Hangen (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 11, 13-14, 50 Cal. Rptr. 203] .

If an order modifying or terminating a support order is entered because of the unemployment of either spouse, the order must be made retroactive to the date of service on the opposing party of the notice of motion or order to show cause to modify or terminate or the date of unemployment, whichever is later, subject to the notice requirements under federal law [42 U.S.C. § 666(a)(9)], unless the court finds good cause not to make the order retroactive and states its reasons on the record [Fam. Code § 8653(b)].

If an order decreasing or terminating a support order is entered retroactively, the support obligor may be entitled to, and the support obligee may be ordered to repay, any amounts previously paid by the support obligor under the prior order that are in excess of the amounts due under the retroactive order [Fam. Code § 3653(c)]. The court may order that repayment by the support obligee be made over any time period and in any manner, including, but not limited to, by an offset against future support payments or wage assignment, as the court deems just and reasonable. In determining whether to order a repayment, and in establishing the terms of the repayment, the court must consider the amount to be repaid, the duration of the support order before modification or termination, the financial impact on the support obligee of any particular method of repayment, such as an offset against future support payments or wage assignment, and any other facts or circumstances the court deems relevant [Fam. Code § 3653(c)].

In 1998, the Legislature mistakenly amended Family Code Section 3653(c) to provide that a support obligee would have no obligation to repay any amounts previously paid by a support obligor that were in excess of the support amounts due under an order entered retroactively that decreased or terminated support [see Stats. 1998, ch. 854]. But in 1999, the Legislature again amended the statute to correct the mistake and to clarify that trial courts have discretion to order repayment of overpaid support amounts [see Stats. 1999, ch. 653, § 4; Sen. Com. on Judiciary, Analysis of Assem. Bill No. 614 (1999-2000 Reg. Sess.) as amended August 16, 1999, p. 9]. The statute as amended in 1999 applies retroactively, so that trial courts may order support obliges to repay support amounts overpaid during 1999, when the mistaken statute was in effect [In re Marriage of Dandona & Araluce (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 1125-1126, 111 Cal.Rptr. 2d 390 ; see Fam. Code § 3653(c)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
2. Jurisdiction And Procedure

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.224

§ 225.224 Effect of Motion for Modification on Paying Spouse's Contempt Under Current Order

A supporting party who has willfully refused to comply with a spousal support order despite a present ability to pay is in contempt of court, and no order of modification on his or her application may be granted. However, a party who does not have the present ability to comply with the order is not in contempt of court, and modification will not be refused simply on the ground that payments are in arrears. To refuse modification in a proper case would be inequitable and, in many cases, useless [Triest v. Triest (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 320, 322-324, 154 P.2d 2 ; see In re Marriage of Crobarger (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 56, 57, 223 Cal. Rptr. 480 (in which court both ordered payment of arrearages and reduced support)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportEnforcementContemptFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
2. Jurisdiction And Procedure

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.225

§ 225.225 Temporary Modification of Order

The trial court may, in a proper case, order that support payments be reduced for a specified period of time and that on expiration of that period the payments revert to their previous level [see, e.g., Miller v. Miller (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 197, 199-200, 89 Cal. Rptr. 643] . However, there must be evidence in the record supporting a reasonable expectation that at the time for reinstatement of the original amount, the former circumstances will be restored [Philbin v. Philbin (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 115, 121-123, 96 Cal. Rptr. 408 (no evidence that ex-husband's income level would revert to prior level by time support was to revert to prior level)].

An order may also be modified temporarily, until the happening of a contingent event. For example, if the supporting party becomes unemployed, the court may make an order reducing or terminating support, but reinstating the original amount if the supporting party becomes reemployed [see In re Marriage of Acosta (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 899, 902-903, 137 Cal. Rptr. 33] . Such an order should be without prejudice to either party seeking support at a higher or reduced amount if the facts of the contingency justify such a change. The use of this procedure eliminates the need for subsequent hearings in many instances, and relieves the supported spouse of the burden of going forward and proving that the supporting spouse's ability to pay has been restored [see In re Marriage of Laube (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1226-1227, 251 Cal. Rptr. 745] .

For temporary and conditional modification orders, see §§ 225.412 and 225.413.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
2. Jurisdiction And Procedure

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.226

§ 225.226 Prefiling Discovery

At any time after a judgment for spousal support is entered, either the party (or the supported party's assignee) may, without leave of court, serve a request for the production of a completed current income and expense declaration in the form adopted by the Judicial Council [Fam. Code § 3664(a)]. The purpose is to permit inexpensive discovery of facts before the commencement of a proceeding for modification or termination of support [Fam. Code § 3660]. The procedure may be used once every 12 months [Fam. Code § 3663]. A copy of the prior year's federal and state personal income tax returns must be attached to the income and expense declarations of each party [Fam. Code § 3665(a)]. If there is no sufficient response within 35 days, the party may then serve on the other party's employer a request for information limited to the income and benefits provided to the party [see Fam. Code § 3664(b)].

For further discussion of this procedure, including the rights of the employer and employee-party, and for illustrative Judicial Council forms [see Fam. Code §§ 3664(b), (f), 3668], see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
2. Jurisdiction And Procedure

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.227

§ 225.227 Findings; Statement of Decision

At the request of either party, an order modifying, terminating, or setting aside a spousal support order must include a statement of decision [Fam. Code § 3654; see Code Civ. Proc. § 632 (statement of decision defined)]. If one party requests a statement of decision, the other party is entitled to the statement even if the requesting party later waives it [In re Marriage of Sellers (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1007, 1010, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 293] . The court should make appropriate factual determinations with respect to the changed circumstances that were relied on in modifying the amount of the award [see In re Marriage of Rising (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 472, 478, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380 (step-down order reversed for lack of adequate supporting reasons); In re Marriage of Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 71, 76-77, 190 Cal. Rptr. 104] . For illustrative findings for use in modification proceedings, see § 225.411.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
2. Jurisdiction And Procedure

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.228

§ 225.228 Review by Appellate Court

An appellate court will interfere with a trial court's order modifying or terminating a spousal support order only if, in viewing all the evidence most favorably in support of the trial court's action, it appears from the total circumstances of the case that the trial court has abused its discretion [In re Marriage of Kuppinger (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 628, 633-634, 120 Cal. Rptr. 654 (abuse shown); see Miller v. Miller (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 197, 199, 89 Cal. Rptr. 643 ; see also § 225.220]. An order modifying a spousal support award constitutes an abuse of discretion only if, under all of the evidence viewed most favorable in support of it, it must be concluded that no judge reasonably could have made the order [In re Marriage of Olson (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1, 7, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480 ; In re Marriage of Richmond (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 352, 357, 164 Cal. Rptr. 381] . If there is any substantial evidence supporting the trial judge's decision, the modification order will be affirmed [In re Marriage of Richmond (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 352, 357, 164 Cal. Rptr. 381 ; In re Marriage of Siegel (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 88, 90, 102 Cal. Rptr. 613] . And, as in the case of appellate review of other trial court orders and judgments, any conflict in the evidence or reasonable inferences to be drawn from the facts will be resolved in support of the trial court's determination [Philbin v. Philbin (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 115, 119, 96 Cal. Rptr. 408] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewAbuse of DiscretionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
2. Jurisdiction And Procedure

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.229

§ 225.229 Notice of Activation of Military Service and Request to Modify Support Order

A party to a support order who is activated to United States military duty or National Guard service and deployed out of state may file and serve a notice of activation of military service and request to modify a support order, in place of a notice of motion or order to show cause, by informing the court and the other party of the request to modify the support order based on a change in circumstances [Fam. Code § 3651(c)(2); see § 225.417 (Judicial Council form of Notice and Request)]. The service member must indicate the date of deployment; and, if possible, the court must schedule the hearing before that date. If the court cannot hear the matter before the deployment date and the service member complies with the conditions of the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (50 U.S.C.A. § 522), the court must grant a stay of proceedings consistent with the timelines for stays set forth in the Act. If the court fails to grant a discretionary stay after the expiration of the mandatory stay required by the Act, it must appoint counsel to represent the interests of the deployed service member, unless he or she is represented by other counsel. If the court stays the proceedings until after the service member returns, the service member must request the court to set the matter for hearing within 90 days of return from deployment or the matter must be taken off calendar and the existing order may not be made retroactive under Fam. Code § 3653(c) [Fam. Code § 3651(c)(2)].

A service member who does not request modification of a support order before deployment out of state is not subject to the penalties authorized by Fam. Code §§ 4720-4733 on the amount of spousal support that would not have accrued if the order had been modified, unless the court finds good cause [Fam. Code § 3651(c)(3)]. No interest accrues on that amount of a spousal support obligation that would not have become due and owing if the activated service member modified the support order on activation to reflect the change in income due to the activation. If the court finds that good cause did not exist for the service member's failure to seek or delay in seeking the modification, then interest will accrue as otherwise allowed by law [Fam. Code § 3651(c)(4)].

If an order modifying or terminating a support order is entered due to a change in income resulting from activation to the United States military service or National Guard duty and deployment out of state for either the support obligor or the support obligee, the order must be made retroactive to the later of the date of service on the opposing party of the notice of activation, notice of motion, or order to show cause to modify or terminate, or the date of activation, unless the court finds good cause not to make the order retroactive [Fam. Code § 3653(c)]. Good cause includes, but is not limited to, a finding by the court that the delay in seeking modification was not reasonable under the circumstances the service member faced [Fam. Code § 3653(c)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewMilitary & Veterans LawServicemembersSoldiers & Sailors Civil Relief Act

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
2. Jurisdiction And Procedure

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.230-225.239

[Reserved]

§§ 225.230[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
3. The Change-Of-Circumstances Requirement

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.240

§ 225.240 Showing of Change of Circumstances Required

To obtain a modification of a previous spousal support order, it has long been the rule that the moving party must show a material change of circumstances since the time of the prior order [In re Marriage of West (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 240, 246, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 858 ; In re Marriage of Schmir (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 43, 47, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 716 ; In re Marriage of Tydlaska (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 572, 575, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 594] . A change of circumstances means a reduction or increase in the supporting spouse's ability to pay and/or an increase or decrease in the supported spouse's needs. It includes all factors that affect need and the ability to pay [In re Marriage of West (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 240, 246, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 858]. A change of circumstances must be shown whether the support order resulted from litigated issues between the parties or was based on a stipulated agreement between them [In re Marriage of McCann (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 978, 984, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 864 (increase in statutory child support was change justifying decrease in spousal support); In re Marriage of Hentz (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 899, 901-902, 129 Cal. Rptr. 678 ; but see Fam. Code § 3591(c) (permitting agreement that support is nonmodifiable), discussed in § 225.60 et seq.; see also In re Marriage of West (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 240, 246, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 858 (parties may have power to decide whether particular event will or will not be deemed material change of circumstances for purposes of modifying support order and may arguably agree to judicial reevaluation of support even in absence of material change in circumstances)]. If the circumstances in question existed at the time of the previous support order, those circumstances presumably were considered when that order was made; bringing them to the court's attention years later does not constitute a change n the circumstances. Nor is there change in circumstances merely because a different judge disagrees with the previous order [In re Marriage of Schmir (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 43, 47, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 716] .

However, the rule that spousal support modifications require a material change of circumstances cannot be "mechanistically applied" when a party's conduct is relevant over a period that extends beyond the time since the last order to show cause hearing. Thus, for example, when 10 modification hearings held over 15 years resulted in extensions of spousal support for a one to three years at a time, an appellate court held that the "material change of circumstances rule" should not prevent a trial court from looking at "overall patterns" established "over the course of many years and many proceedings." It affirmed a trial court's decision to discontinue current spousal support (but not to terminate jurisdiction over support), finding that the supported party had "made reasonable, though unsuccessful, efforts to find a job" in a field in which she was not suited to work. Under this decision, the change of circumstances rule continues to be valid, but it permits a court to take a broader view of the history of a case in determining how to apply that rule [In re Marriage of Schaffer (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 801, 812, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 797] .

In determining whether a change of circumstances has occurred, the court may not be arbitrary. It must exercise its discretion along legal lines, considering the applicable standards as set forth in Fam. Code § 4320, especially changes in the parties' reasonable needs and financial abilities [In re Marriage of West (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 240, 246, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 858] . If the current order was made according to a stipulated agreement, the court must give effect to the intent and reasonable expectations of the parties as expressed in the agreement [In re Marriage of Aninger (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 230, 238, 269 Cal. Rptr. 388] .

Showing a material change in circumstances necessitates comparing financial information on which the original support order was based with the most recent financial information relevant to a new order, for example, the parties' current income and expense declarations [In re Marriage of Tydlaska (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 572, 575-576, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 594 (when husband failed to present "evidentiary yardstick" with which court could determine appropriateness of modification order, request to modify support was properly denied)].

It is not error for the court to make no findings of changed circumstances if the parties have stipulated to a modification and their attorneys have drafted and submitted to the court the order ultimately entered. Doctrines of waiver and invited error will generally bar attacks on an order entered by stipulation [In re Marriage of Maxfield (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 755, 759, 191 Cal. Rptr. 267] .

The mere fact that circumstances may change in the future will not support a present modification of a support award [In re Marriage of Kuppinger (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 628, 638-639, 120 Cal. Rptr. 654 ; see Philbin v. Philbin (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 115, 122, 96 Cal. Rptr. 408 ; Miller v. Miller (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 197, 200-201, 89 Cal. Rptr. 643] .

Whether a modification is actually being sought, however, must be carefully determined from the moving party's papers. The fact that the moving party seeks an order pertaining to support does not necessarily mean that a modification has been sought. If, in fact, no modification is sought, the change of circumstances requirement does not apply. Instead, it may be appropriate to determine whether the moving party is seeking to invoke the court's general power to make orders on specific family law matters, including support and injunctive relief [In re Marriage of Stimel (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 991, 994-996, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18 (wife's motion for order directing her former husband to apply for life insurance naming her as beneficiary and stipulating she would pay all insurance premiums was not motion to modify spousal support)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationChanged Circumstances

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
3. The Change-Of-Circumstances Requirement

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.241

§ 225.241 Conclusiveness of Order on Then-Existing Circumstances

A judgment awarding spousal support is conclusive as to the circumstances existing when it was entered [In re Marriage of Schaffer (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 930, 934, 205 Cal. Rptr. 88 ; Hester v. Hester (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 1091, 1097, 82 Cal. Rptr. 811] . All matters that were at issue in the original proceedings and that were disposed of by the judgment are res judicata. The original award may be subject to direct attack, for example, by motion for new trial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 657; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.21], or by appeal [see Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1(a)(1), (10); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.21], but it is not subject to collateral attack by application for modification [In re Marriage of Mulhern (1973) 29 Cal. App. 3d 988, 992, 106 Cal. Rptr. 78] .

If determinations have been made on a motion to modify after the original award, the most recent order is conclusive as to the circumstances existing when it was made. On a new motion to modify, the determinations generally are to be made with respect to facts arising during the period commencing with the date of the most recent order, not with respect to the time since the original decree was entered [Hester v. Hester (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 1091, 1095, 82 Cal. Rptr. 811 ; but cf. In re Marriage of Schaffer (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 801, 812, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 797 ("material change of circumstances" rule cannot be "mechanistically applied" when party's conduct is relevant over period that extends beyond time since last order to show cause hearing)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionCollateral Order DoctrineFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationChanged Circumstances

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
3. The Change-Of-Circumstances Requirement

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.242

§ 225.242 Need and Ability to Pay

The basic consideration of the trial court on an application for modification is change in the need of the supported spouse and in the ability of the supporting spouse to pay [Philbin v. Philbin (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 115, 119, 96 Cal. Rptr. 408] .

As a general rule, subsequently acquired wealth of the supporting spouse does not alone justify an increase in spousal support [In re Marriage of Hopwood (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1604, 1607-1608, 263 Cal. Rptr. 401 ; see Modglin v. Modglin (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 411, 417, 54 Cal. Rptr. 582 (Fleming, J., concurring)]. However, in In re Marriage of Hoffmeister (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 1163, 208 Cal. Rptr. 345 , the court of appeal held that if the supporting spouse's ability to pay has increased and the needs of the supported spouse have not changed, an increase in support is appropriate if the supported spouse's reasonable present needs are not being satisfied by the existing award [In re Marriage of Hoffmeister (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 1163, 1172-1175, 208 Cal. Rptr. 345] . In a subsequent opinion issued in the same case, the court qualified this rule, holding that the supported spouse's reasonable present needs must bear some relationship to the standard of living of the parties during their marriage rather than the standard of living of the supporting spouse at the time that modification is sought [In re Marriage of Hoffmeister (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 351, 363, 236 Cal. Rptr. 543] .

For example, the supported spouse originally may not have received sufficient support to maintain the style of living of the marriage because the supporting spouse lacked the ability to pay at the time that spousal support was originally awarded [see, e.g., In re Marriage of White (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1022, 1029, 237 Cal. Rptr. 764 ; In re Marriage of Sammut (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 557, 563-564, 163 Cal. Rptr. 193]. For this reason, a spousal support order should include findings as to whether the amount awarded is deemed sufficient to meet the supported spouse's reasonable needs, considering the marital standard of living of the parties and the other factors that must be considered under Fam. Code § 4320 [In re Marriage of Smith (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 469, 491, 274 Cal. Rptr. 911] . For further discussion of the standard of living attained during marriage, see § 225.60 et seq.

Both Hoffmeister cases state that spousal support may be increased if the supported spouse's current need (as measured by the standard of living attained during marriage) is not currently being satisfied by the last previous award [In re Marriage of Hoffmeister (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 351, 363-364, 236 Cal. Rptr. 543 ; In re Marriage of Hoffmeister (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 1163, 1173-1174, 208 Cal. Rptr. 345 ; see In re Marriage of Sammut (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 557, 163 Cal. Rptr. 193]. Thus, it would seem that as the supporting spouse's income increases, spousal support should also increase to account for inflation and to maintain the supported spouse at the appropriate standard of living [see In re Marriage of Smith (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 469, 475, 274 Cal. Rptr. 911 (supported spouse must prove that prior order, when made, was insufficient to meet his or her reasonable needs, or that reasonable cost of satisfying those needs has increased)]. However, one court has denied an increase on what appears to be essentially these facts. In In re Marriage of Hopwood (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1604, 263 Cal. Rptr. 401 , the court held that because the award of $200 per month was adequate to meet the supported spouse's needs at the time of separation (1969), it could not be increased 18 years later, even though the trial court had found that the award was clearly no longer adequate to meet the supported spouse's needs, as measured by the standard of living enjoyed at the time of separation [In re Marriage of Hopwood (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1604, 1607-1608, 263 Cal. Rptr. 401] . The court held that spousal support cannot be increased based on the supporting spouse's ability to pay unless the needs of the supported spouse at the time of the separation were never met [In re Marriage of Hopwood (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1604, 1608, 263 Cal. Rptr. 401] . In addition, if statutory child support increases and thus total support exceeds the marital standard of living, it is appropriate to decrease spousal support despite the fact that the supporting spouse's income has increased [In re Marriage of McCann (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 978, 984, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 864] .

If the supporting spouse becomes unemployed or otherwise incurs a decrease in earnings, modification of support downward may be denied if it is shown that the party's actual earnings do not equal his or her earning capacity, but specific evidence on what that capacity is must be presented [see Reynolds v. Reynolds (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1378, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 636 ; In re Marriage of Stephenson (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 71, 76, 80, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 8 (and cases cited therein)]. For further discussion of earning capacity, see § 225.60 et seq. For discussion of the effect of retirement see § 225.250.

By contrast, if a supported spouse has a decreased need for support as of the time of a modification proceeding, a trial court may make an appropriate order that reduces the amount of support [see In re Marriage of Schmir (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 43, 48-51, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 716 (change in supported spouse's circumstances was shown based on her present ability to earn income, a reduction in her monthly medical expenses, and her ability to make withdrawals from her individual retirement account without penalty)]. In making an order to reduce support, the court also has the discretion to provide for "step-downs" in the support amount over a period of time--without there necessarily being evidence of the supported spouse's needs at each step-down date. Instead, such a step-down is proper if at the time of making the (modification) order, the court had discretion to decrease support to the ultimate step-down level, and it states that it is implementing the step-down to ease the impact of the decrease on the supported spouse [In re Marriage of Rising (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 472, 478, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380 (step-down order reversed for lack of adequate supporting reasons)]. The step-down order modifying support must be based on reasonable inferences to be drawn from the evidence, not mere hopes or speculative expectations. It need not be shown, however, that the supported spouse certainly will be earning the presumed income at the time support is to be reduced [In re Marriage of West (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 240, 250, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 858 (sufficient evidence shown by supported spouse's current earnings and expert opinion as to supported spouse's reasonable future earnings)]. The effect of such a step-down order is to shift the burden of showing changed circumstances from the supporting spouse to the supported spouse. Just as the supporting spouse is entitled to seek a modification because of the unrealized expectation that the supported spouse will become self-supporting, the supported spouse is entitled to seek a modification of the step-down order because of an unrealized expectation of his or her future earnings [In re Marriage of West (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 240, 250-251, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 858].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationAbility to Pay

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
3. The Change-Of-Circumstances Requirement

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.243

§ 225.243 Disposition of Community Property

The disposition of the parties' community property may be considered in determining need in setting support in the first instance [In re Marriage of Kennedy (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1633, 1640-1641, 239 Cal. Rptr. 151 ; see § 225.60 et seq.]. However, once the division of property has been determined and support is established, one spouse's subsequent receipt of income or property pursuant to the division is not a change of circumstance justifying modification of support [In re Marriage of Rabkin (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1071, 1081, 225 Cal. Rptr. 219 (it makes no more sense to reduce wife's spousal support because she received her rightful share of community property than it would to increase wife's spousal support because husband received his rightful share of community property); see In re Marriage of West (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 240, 251, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 858 (it also makes no more sense to reduce wife's support because she failed to invest her share of community property than it would to increase husband's support payments because he invested his share)]. A supported spouse cannot dispose of income-earning property and expect the supporting spouse to make up the difference. It may be appropriate to impute income to a spouse of sums that could be earned by an income-producing investment strategy [In re Marriage of West (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 240, 251, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 858]. However, it is unfair to penalize a supported spouse for failing to invest community property proceeds without first warning the spouse that he or she would be expected to invest these proceeds [In re Marriage of West (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 240, 251, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 858].

The failure to carry out property settlement obligations, alone, is not a change of circumstances justifying modification of spousal support. It is error to restructure an unpaid debt between the parties as support under the guise of a change of circumstances [In re Marriage of Farrell (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 695, 700-703, 217 Cal. Rptr. 397 ; see In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 848, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 (support cannot be ordered in place of equal division of community property)]. Nor can spousal support be increased to compensate for the supported spouse's inability to execute on his or her community property interest in the supporting spouse's pension [In re Marriage of Maunder (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 570, 572-573, 127 Cal. Rptr. 707 ; cf. In re Marriage of McGhee (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 408, 412-414, 182 Cal. Rptr. 456 (court enforced stipulated order providing for spousal support as security should wife be unable to collect her share of husband's military pension)]. However, it has been held that the maturation of a community property pension awarded entirely to the supporting spouse constituted changed circumstances supporting an increase in support based on an increased ability to pay [In re Marriage of White (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1022, 1026-1028, 237 Cal. Rptr. 764] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationChanged Circumstances

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
3. The Change-Of-Circumstances Requirement

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.244

§ 225.244 Failure of Expectation on Which Order Is Based

If a support order is based on a particular expectation that does not occur, the failure of the expectation may be considered a change of circumstances supporting modification [In re Marriage of West (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 240, 247, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 858 ; In re Marriage of Shaughnessy (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1225, 1233, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 642 ; This is the rule whether or not the prior order was entered on the stipulation of the parties [see In re Marriage of West (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 240, 246-247, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 858].

Commonly, the expectation is that the supported spouse will become self-supporting by a particular time, at which time support is scheduled to terminate or be reduced in amount [see In re Marriage of Schaffer (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 930, 933, 205 Cal. Rptr. 88 (expectation that wife would recover from emotional disorders, complete schooling, and become self-supporting)]. For example, if a court's initial award of spousal support contemplates that a supported spouse will take some action to decrease the need for support following the issuance of the order and the supported spouse fails to take that action, the court may modify the award on the ground of changed circumstances [In re Marriage of West (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 240, 248, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 858 (when original support order was entered on expectation that wife would pursue teaching career, her decision to abandon that career and to take a different career path was material change in circumstances)]. If the expectation fails to materialize on schedule, despite the reasonable efforts of the supported spouse, support may be continued without a further showing of changed circumstances [In re Marriage of Aninger (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 230, 240, 269 Cal. Rptr. 388 ; see In re Marriage of Beust (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 24, 29, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 201] . Under the traditional analysis, the supported spouse's lack of diligence in pursuing self-sufficiency justified allowing support to terminate as scheduled, whether the conduct was bad faith or poor judgment [In re Marriage of Sheridan (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 742, 748-749, 189 Cal. Rptr. 622 (decided before amendments to Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4330, operative January 1, 1997)].

However, in ordering spousal support, courts are now required to balance the hardships to each party and consider the goal that the supported party must be self-supporting within a reasonable time period--defined for general purposes as one-half the length of the marriage, but leaving discretion to the court to order support for a greater or lesser period.

Courts must also admonish the parties concerning this goal of becoming self-supporting, and of each party's obligation to make reasonable, good faith efforts in this regard. The failure to make such efforts may be a factor in modifying or terminating support [Fam. Code §§ 4320(j), (k), 4330(b); In re Marriage of Shaughnessy (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1225, 1233-1236, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 642 (if court's initial spousal support award contemplates that supported spouse will take some action to decrease need for spousal support following issuance of order and supported spouse fails to take that action, court may modify award on ground of changed circumstances); cf. In re Marriage of Schaffer (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 801, 810, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 797 (noting that statutory guideline to become self-supporting--generally one-half length of marriage--"flies in the face of a reading of the material change of circumstances rule that would prevent a trial judge from looking at long-term patterns of job training and employability")].

If the current support order was according to the agreement of the parties, any expectation as to future events must appear from the agreement itself. The court may not reevaluate the spousal support order at a later time in light of the then-applicable facts if there is no evidence that the agreement was structured according to particular expectations that did not materialize [In re Marriage of Aninger (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 230, 238, 242-243, 269 Cal. Rptr. 388] .

Because of this failed-expectations rule, it is important that the expectations on which spousal support is based be set forth expressly, either by the court in its findings or by the parties in their agreement, and that there be a proper record of the court's required admonitions [see Fam. Code §§ 4320(k), 4330(b); In re Marriage of Schmir (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 43, 53-58, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 716 (court may not terminate spousal support by imputing employment income to supported spouse when judgment does not contain termination date for support or notice that supported spouse is expected to become self-supporting; court must afford supported spouse reasonable advance notice and opportunity to secure employment before terminating support); cf. In re Marriage of Biderman (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 409, 413-414, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 791 (payee failed to establish that prior order was to terminate based on assumption that he would recuperate from mental problems so that his failure to do so was failed expectation)]. For appropriate forms, see § 225.60 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationChanged Circumstances

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
3. The Change-Of-Circumstances Requirement

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.245

§ 225.245 Remarriage of Supporting Spouse

By statute, the income of a supporting spouse's subsequent spouse or nonmarital partner is not to be considered when determining or modifying spousal support [Fam. Code § 4323(b)]. The income of a new mate may not be considered either directly [Fam. Code § 4323(b)], or indirectly as it relates to the supporting spouse's ability to pay and standard of living [In re Marriage of Romero (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1436, 1438, 1442-1444, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220] . Therefore, in calculating a spousal support modification, the court must first determine the supporting spouse's net monthly income, and then determine the supporting spouse's "reasonable" monthly expenses based only on that income, thereby excluding both the new mate's income and any new mate expenses [In re Marriage of Romero (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1436, 1445-1447, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220] .

Under prior law, the remarriage of the supporting spouse did not, alone, constitute a change of circumstances warranting a modification of spousal support. However, it was a factor that the court could, under most circumstances, consider [In re Marriage of Kuppinger (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 628, 638, 120 Cal. Rptr. 654] . Under case law decided prior to enactment of Fam. Code § 4323(b), the community property earnings of a supporting spouse's new mate could be considered as being available to defray expenses of the new community, and thus increase the funds available from the supporting spouse for support. Courts commonly determined the funds available by treating the combined income of the supporting spouse and the new mate as income of the new community and then deducting the combined reasonably necessary living expenses of the new community from that income [see In re Marriage of Tapia (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 628, 630-632, 259 Cal. Rptr. 459 (new nonmarital cohabitant); In re Marriage of Ramer (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 263, 272-273, 231 Cal. Rptr. 647 (new spouse)].

Subsequent spouse or partner income as it relates to child support is discussed further in Ch. 224, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Support .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
3. The Change-Of-Circumstances Requirement

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.246

§ 225.246 Supported Spouse's Cohabitation With Person of Opposite Sex

[1] Rebuttable Presumption of Decreased Need

Except as otherwise agreed to by the parties in writing, there is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof of decreased need for support if the supported party is cohabiting with a person of the opposite sex. On a determination that circumstances have changed, the court may modify or terminate spousal support [Fam. Code § 4323(a); see, e.g., In re Marriage of Bower (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 893, 899-901, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 520 (cohabitation warranted reduction of support from $1,700 to $500 for one year, then termination)].

Nothing in Fam. Code § 4323 precludes later modification of support on proof of change of circumstances [Fam. Code § 4323(c)]. Therefore, even if support is decreased or terminated on account of cohabitation, the supported spouse may seek a subsequent increase or reinstatement of support if cohabitation ends.

The use of a rebuttable presumption indicates the legislative determination that cohabiting is not, in and of itself, sufficient to terminate or reduce spousal support [In re Marriage of Leib (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 629, 635, 145 Cal. Rptr. 763] . It is also clear that the Legislature anticipated the presentation of evidence on the issue of decreased need for support. Once the supporting party establishes cohabitation, the burden shifts to the supported party to present evidence to overcome the presumption that the need for support has decreased [In re Marriage of Denney (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 543, 556, 171 Cal. Rptr. 440] .

In determining if the presumption is rebutted, the court must examine the totality of the cohabitation relationship and not just the supported party's personal income and expense disparity [see In re Marriage of Leib (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 629, 643, 145 Cal. Rptr. 763] . Cohabitants may superficially structure their relationship in any number of ways to make it appear that the supported party's need for support has not decreased. For example, it may appear that the cohabitant is making no significant financial contribution to the supported party's living expenses [see In re Marriage of Schroeder (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1158, 238 Cal. Rptr. 12] , or it may appear that the supported party is expected to make the same payments to the cohabitant for living expenses that he or she would make for those expenses were they not cohabiting [see In re Marriage of Leib (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 629, 638-640, 145 Cal. Rptr. 763] .

Therefore, any arrangement between the supported party and a cohabitant must be fair to the supporting party. It may not allocate expenses in a manner that creates an appearance of continuing need in order to maintain the flow of income from the supporting party [In re Marriage of Schroeder (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1164, 238 Cal. Rptr. 12] . A supported spouse may neither give nor receive things of economic value, including personal services, in lieu of monetary reimbursement for joint household expenses, and thereby create a situation of apparent continuing need [In re Marriage of Schroeder (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1163, 238 Cal. Rptr. 12 (supported ex-wife's receipt of reimbursement from cohabitant by way of gifts evaded strictures of statute); In re Marriage of Leib (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 629, 640-644, 145 Cal. Rptr. 763 (value of supported ex-wife's donated domestic services to cohabitant justified reduction of support to $10 per month)].

[2] "Cohabiting" Defined

Holding oneself out to be the husband or wife of the person with whom one is cohabiting is not necessary to constitute cohabitation [Fam. Code § 4323(a)(2)]. Beyond this provision, Fam. Code § 4323 does not further define the term "cohabiting."

It has been held that it is not enough to show that the supported party and a person of the opposite sex are merely sharing living accommodations. If there is no evidence of a sexual relationship, a romantic involvement, or even a homemaker-companion relationship, there is no cohabitation within the meaning of the statute [In re Marriage of Thweatt (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 530, 535, 157 Cal. Rptr. 826] . Of course, any cohabitation, regardless of the genders of the persons and the nature of their relationship, may involve shared expenses and decreased need. In such a case, support may be reduced or terminated because of changed circumstances, even if the presumption does not apply [see In re Marriage of Thweatt (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 530, 535-537, 157 Cal. Rptr. 826] .

[3] Effect of Agreement

Fam. Code § 4323(a) applies except as otherwise agreed to by the parties in writing [Fam. Code § 4323(a)(1)]. Therefore, if spousal support is made nonmodifiable on any ground by agreement, it is not modifiable because of subsequent cohabitation [In re Marriage of Sasson (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 140, 147, 180 Cal. Rptr. 815 ; In re Marriage of Harris (1976) 65 Cal. App. 3d 143, 151-152, 134 Cal. Rptr. 891] . As with all such agreements, however, the terms must be precisely stated so that there be no ambiguity. For further discussion and applicable forms, see § 225.60 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceInferences & PresumptionsPresumptionsEvidenceInferences & PresumptionsRebuttal of PresumptionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationCohabitation

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
3. The Change-Of-Circumstances Requirement

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.247

§ 225.247 Passage of Time

Generally, the mere passage of time does not constitute a change of circumstances warranting modification of a spousal support order [Edwards v. Edwards (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 12, 15, 124 Cal. Rptr. 742 ; In re Marriage of Wilson (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 116, 119, 123 Cal. Rptr. 887 ; see also In re Marriage of Hopwood (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1604, 1608, 263 Cal. Rptr. 401] . However, two cases suggest that this rule may not apply to marriages of slightly less than 10 years that are treated as long-term marriages [see Fam. Code § 4336(b) (presumption that marriage of 10 years or more is long-term marriage for purposes of retaining jurisdiction); see also § 225.60 et seq.].

In In re Marriage of Baker (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 491, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 553 , although the marriage lasted less than 10 years, the appellate court upheld the trial court's refusal to set a termination date or step-down schedule in the original order, thus treating the marriage as long-term rather than short-term [In re Marriage of Baker (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 491, 496-501, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 553 ; cf. In re Marriage of Wilson (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 913, 919, 247 Cal. Rptr. 522 (short-term support appropriate in short-term marriage, regardless of evidence of self-sufficiency); see § 225.60 et seq.]. However, in the court's view, support might be terminable in the future based on the fact that the duration of support has become unjust in light of the duration of the marriage, even if there were no other changes of circumstances [In re Marriage of Baker (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 491, 502, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 553] .

But in In re Marriage of Heistermann (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 286 Cal. Rptr. 127 , involving a marriage of almost nine years, a two-justice majority of the panel rejected this proposition. In a modification proceeding, the trial court had set a termination date for support on the ground that after eight years of support, the burden of supporting the wife should shift from the husband to society. In reversing, the majority noted the lack of any limitation on the duration of support in the original order and reiterated that passage of time alone does not constitute a change of circumstances [In re Marriage of Heistermann (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 1201-1204, 286 Cal. Rptr. 127] . The third justice concurred only in the result and stated that at some point, it is conceivable that the lengthy duration of support will be clearly unjust in light of the short duration of the marriage and will alone qualify as a change of circumstance under now Fam. Code § 4320(j) [In re Marriage of Heistermann (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 1205, 286 Cal. Rptr. 127

(opinion of Benke, J., concurring in result)]. Thus, of the six justices who addressed the issue in the two cases, four were of the opinion that it was conceivable that passage of time alone could justify terminating support under the circumstances of a "medium term" marriage.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationChanged Circumstances

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
3. The Change-Of-Circumstances Requirement

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.248

§ 225.248 Change of Law

The change of circumstances that authorizes a court to modify spousal support means a change in the circumstances of the respective parties. A change or clarification of the law does not qualify as a change of circumstances warranting modification [In re Marriage of Cobb (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 855, 860-861, 137 Cal. Rptr. 670 (spousal support increase in response to change in property law regarding pensions improper)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationChanged Circumstances

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
3. The Change-Of-Circumstances Requirement

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.249

§ 225.249 Bankruptcy

Spousal support is not dischargeable in bankruptcy [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(5); see Cal-Western Reconveyance Corp. v. Reed (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1308, 1319, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 244 ; In re Kritt (9th Cir. 1995) 190 Bankr. 382] . Under prior law, payments provided for in a marital or property settlement that were intended as a division of community property were dischargeable [see In re Marriage of Williams (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 1215, 1220-1221, 203 Cal. Rptr. 909 ; Sloan v. Mitchell (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 47, 50-52, 104 Cal. Rptr. 418 ; Myhers v. Myhers (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 855, 858-859, 86 Cal. Rptr. 356 ; Carlton v. Superior Court (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 586, 588, 49 Cal. Rptr. 759] . However, 1994 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code now make many debts incurred in the course of dissolution of marriage nondischargeable, including payments required under the parties' division of their community property [see 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(15); discussed in Ch. 258, Family Law Enforcement: General Enforcement Principles and Remedies, § 258.16]. Therefore, the need to distinguish whether payments are for support or part of a division of property is no longer so great with regard to bankruptcy.

If an obligation under a property settlement agreement is discharged in bankruptcy, the court may make all proper orders for the support of the spouse as the court may deem just, having regard for the circumstances of the respective parties and the amount of any obligations under the property settlement agreement that are discharged [Fam. Code § 3592; see In re Marriage of Lynn (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 120, 130, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611 (Fam. Code § 3592 applies to only to discharge of former spouse's obligation under property settlement agreement)]. Therefore, the discharge in bankruptcy of a debt created by or allocated under a property settlement agreement may be taken into account in determining whether the parties' circumstances have changed sufficiently to justify a modification of spousal support [In re Marriage of Clements (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 737, 746, 184 Cal. Rptr. 756 ; see In re Siragusa (9th Cir. 1994) 27 F.3d 406, 408 (affirming jurisdiction of state court to increase spousal support after property settlement is discharged in bankruptcy)].

If a property settlement obligation ordered in a dissolution proceeding (for example, an equalizing payment or an assigned debt) is discharged in bankruptcy, the court may consider the discharge as a factor in determining whether to modify spousal support [In re Marriage of Lynn (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 120, 130-132, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611 ; see Fam. Code § 4320]. However, the court must consider all of the Family Code 4320 factors before ordering a spousal support modification [In re Marriage of Lynn (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 120, 132-134, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Bankruptcy LawDischarge & DischargeabilityNondischarge of Individual DebtsAlimony, Divorce Settlements & SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationChanged Circumstances

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
3. The Change-Of-Circumstances Requirement

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.250

§ 225.250 Retirement

As a general principle, the supporting spouse's retirement should constitute a change of circumstances justifying a reduction or termination of spousal support because it normally is accompanied by reduced income and a reduced ability to pay [see § 225.242]. Thus, for example, one appellate court has held that no one may be compelled to work "after the usual age retirement age of 65 in order to pay the same level of spousal support as when he was employed" [Reynolds v. Reynolds (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1378, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 636 (court also held support payee had burden of showing specifics regarding any postretirement earning capacity)]. However, Fam. Code § 4320(a) and (c) provide for a consideration of earning capacity, not actual income, in determining spousal support. It may be that a party's actual income after retirement does not reflect his or her earning capacity, meaning that he or she is still capable of earning income on which support should be determined.

There is some disagreement among appellate courts as to whether earning capacity may be considered in the absence of evidence of the supporting spouse's bad faith in taking retirement [see In re Marriage of Stephenson (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 71, 76-80, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 8 (and cases cited therein)].

It has been held that earning capacity may be considered if the evidence shows that the supporting spouse took early retirement in bad faith so as to avoid his support responsibilities [In re Marriage of Sinks (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 586, 592-593, 251 Cal. Rptr. 379] . However, another court has held that the supporting spouse's motive is irrelevant and that no showing of deliberate avoidance of support is required. The court held that, at least in the case of early retirement, the supporting spouse bears the burden of showing changed circumstances by proving that earning capacity does not exceed actual income after retirement [see In re Marriage of Stephenson (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 71, 81-83, n.7, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 8 (59-year-old accepted generous early retirement severance package when faced with likely layoff; court held record supported finding that retirement was in good faith, approved order continuing support at current level during period of time for which severance pay equaled prior earnings, but rejected order automatically reducing support at end of period, and remanded for further hearing at which supporting spouse would be required to disprove continuing earning capacity)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationAbility to PayFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationChanged Circumstances

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
3. The Change-Of-Circumstances Requirement

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.251-225.269

[Reserved]

§§ 225.251[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
4. Termination Of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.270

§ 225.270 Effect of Order Terminating Support Payments

Inherent in the requirement that the court must consider the changed circumstances of the parties on a motion to modify spousal support is the power and duty of the trial court to terminate the support order on appropriate facts [Peterson v. Peterson (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 477, 482, 106 Cal. Rptr. 482] . "Termination" in this sense, has been characterized as simply a modification of the amount of support down to $0, and as such, just one form of modification having the same legal significance [see In re Marriage of Bennett (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 1022, 1025-1026, 193 Cal. Rptr. 113 (nonmodifiable agreement precludes termination); In re Marriage of Harris (1976) 65 Cal. App. 3d 143, 151-152, 134 Cal. Rptr. 891] . However, one court has noted that the use of "termination" in this sense is unnecessarily ambiguous and confusing because modification and termination of support are separate matters [see In re Marriage of Benjamins (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 423, 433, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 313] . Even if support is to be modified down to $0, the court (or the parties by agreement) must also address the issue of whether jurisdiction over spousal support should be retained so that support might be reinstated (modified upward from $0) in the future on a showing of further change of circumstances.

Historically, the rule has been that a decree awarding spousal support carries within it, without the necessity of language to that effect, a reservation of jurisdiction so that the court may readdress the order in the future [see Bain v. Superior Court (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 804, 808-809, 111 Cal. Rptr. 848 ; see also Howell v. Howell (1894) 104 Cal. 45, 47, 37 P. 770] . The converse of this rule is that if there is no award, then there is no further jurisdiction [see Cochran v. Cochran (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 339, 344, 91 Cal. Rptr. 630] . Thus, any order terminating support by reducing it to $0 would also terminate jurisdiction and permanently relieve the supporting spouse of the obligation [McClure v. McClure (1935) 4 Cal. 2d 356, 360-361, 49 P.2d 584] . For this reason, courts would often reduce support to a token amount, such as $1 per year, as a way of retaining jurisdiction to reinstate it in the future [see In re Marriage of Beust (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 24, 26, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 201 ; In re Marriage of Forcum (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 599, 605, 193 Cal. Rptr. 596] . In recent cases, it has been recognized that jurisdiction may be retained by a simple statement to that effect in the order, and it is not necessary to order a token amount [see In re Marriage of Liss (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 1428, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 397 ; In re Marriage of Wells (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1436, 254 Cal. Rptr. 185] .

Under the Family Code, it appears that the law has not changed: an order terminating support payments in the sense of awarding $0 dollars also terminates the court's jurisdiction over spousal support. Fam. Code § 4336(a) provides for indefinite retention of jurisdiction in a long-term marriage "except on written agreement of the parties to the contrary or a court order terminating spousal support." Further, nothing in the statute limits the court's discretion to terminate spousal support in later proceedings on a showing of changed circumstances [Fam. Code § 4336(c)]. Read together, these two provisions make it reasonably clear that the "termination" order referred to in the statute terminates both support payments and jurisdiction over support. Therefore, if the court on a motion to modify determines that circumstances have changed and no support is currently appropriate, but that they might change again so that support should be reinstated, the order should include express language retaining jurisdiction. For an illustrative order terminating support payments and retaining jurisdiction, see § 225.414.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationChanged CircumstancesFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportProcedures

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
4. Termination Of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.271

§ 225.271 Payment Ordered for Fixed Period

In a short-term marriage, an order for spousal support terminates at the end of the period provided for in the order and may not be extended unless the court retained jurisdiction in the order [Fam. Code § 4335; cf. Fam. Code § 4336(b) (defining marriage of long duration)]. "Terminates" as used in this statute clearly means termination of both support payments and of jurisdiction to reinstate support in the future. As to what constitutes a short-term marriage and what suffices as sufficient language to retain jurisdiction in an order for spousal support, see § 225.60 et seq.

In a long-term marriage, the court retains jurisdiction indefinitely, subject to two exceptions, even if support is only ordered for a limited period [Fam. Code § 4336(a); see Fam. Code § 4335]. Therefore, unless one of the exceptions applies, support that terminates at the end of a limited term provided for in the order may be reinstated thereafter on a showing of changed circumstances.

One exception is that the rule of Fam. Code § 4336 may be altered by a written agreement of the parties to the contrary [Fam. Code § 4336(a)]. Therefore, the parties may agree to terminate both support payments and jurisdiction at a particular future time [see In re Marriage of Zlatnik (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1284, 1290, 243 Cal. Rptr. 454] . Agreements involving termination of jurisdiction are discussed, and forms are provided, in § 225.60 et seq.

The other exception is that a court order terminating support also terminates the court's jurisdiction over support [Fam. Code § 4336(a), (c); see § 225.270]. This means that if, in a long-term marriage, the court orders support for a limited period, and the period ends without the supported party obtaining an extension, a supporting party who wants the support obligation to be terminated permanently must notice a motion for a court order terminating jurisdiction over support. For illustrative forms for use in bringing such a motion, see §§ 225.415 and 225.416. Note that law is to the contrary for agreements entered into before January 1, 1988, because of the operative date of Fam. Code § 4336, which applies to proceedings that were pending on, or filed on or after, January 1, 1988 [In re Marriage of Ousterman (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1094, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 403] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
4. Termination Of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.272

§ 225.272 Payment Ordered for Contingent Period

If the court orders spousal support for a contingent period of time, the obligation of the supporting party terminates on the happening of the contingency [Fam. Code § 4334(a)]. This "termination" of the obligation apparently refers to both the support payments and the court's jurisdiction to order support. However, the statute is unclear in this respect and there is possibly room to argue that jurisdiction over support payments could continue in a given case, despite termination of a current payment obligation. This remains subject to further construction by case law or legislative clarification.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
4. Termination Of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.273

§ 225.273 When Court Should Terminate Both Support Payments and Jurisdiction

A change of circumstances that may warrant termination of spousal support, and also of jurisdiction over support, includes all factors affecting need and ability to pay [In re Marriage of Heistermann (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 1202, 286 Cal. Rptr. 127] . A change of circumstances that eliminates the supported spouse's need for support justifies both a termination of support payments and of jurisdiction over support [see In re Marriage of Webb (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 335, 346, 156 Cal. Rptr. 334 ; Peterson v. Peterson (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 477, 482, 106 Cal. Rptr. 482 (court has both power and duty to terminate support if need for support no longer exists); see also Fam. Code § 4322 (in modification proceeding, if there are no children and party acquires separate estate, including income from employment, sufficient for party's proper support, no support shall be continued against other party); In re Marriage of Terry (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 921, 931-932, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 760 (court should have terminated spousal support based on supporting spouse's loss of employment and increase in value of supported spouse's separate estate, which was sufficient for her proper support)].

A change in the supporting spouse's ability to pay is a different matter. If the court determines that a supporting spouse no longer has the ability to pay any support, it should nevertheless retain jurisdiction to reinstate support in the future should the ability be restored [see In re Marriage of Acosta (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 899, 901, 903, 137 Cal. Rptr. 33 ; see also In re Marriage of Laube (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1224 251 Cal. Rptr. 745 ; see § 225.225].

In determining whether support should be terminated, the court must also consider all of the factors relevant to the appropriateness of a spousal support award in the first instance [In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 663-664, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587 ; see Fam. Code § 4320 (setting forth factors for consideration)]. The factors that the court must consider in determining whether to retain or terminate jurisdiction in its original order may also be relevant on a later motion to terminate. For discussion of these factors, see § 225.30 et seq.

The conduct of the supported spouse during the period since the prior support order may also be considered. The supported spouse's lack of diligence in seeking employment consistent with that party's ability may justify a termination of spousal support [see In re Marriage of Sheridan (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 742, 748-749, 189 Cal. Rptr. 622 (court may consider unreasonable delay in seeking employment consistent with party's ability, regardless of whether delay caused by poor judgment or bad faith; decided before amendments to Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4330, operative January 1, 1997)]. Support may only be terminated for lack of diligence in obtaining employment if the supported spouse was clearly expected to become self-sufficient under the terms of the prior order. Otherwise, there is no change of circumstances that justifies termination of support [In re Marriage of Gavron (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 705, 710-712, 250 Cal. Rptr. 148 (57-year-old supported spouse with minimal employment experience during 25-year marriage)].

By statute, courts may formally give a "Gavron warning" when making a support order, unless, in the case of a long term marriage, the court feels this is inadvisable by admonishing the parties concerning the goal of becoming self-supporting, and of each party's obligation to make reasonable, good faith efforts in this regard [Fam. Code §§ 4320(j), (k), 4330(b)]. If the court finds that there was a failure to exercise reasonable diligence, but that even if reasonable diligence had been exercised the supported spouse would still not have become fully self-supporting, it has the discretion to extend the duration of the order and to fix the support in the amount that the supported spouse would have required had reasonable diligence been exercised. The trial court also has the discretion to determine whether or not the supporting spouse should be required to assist the supported spouse with financial needs that are unmet because of the failure of the supported spouse to exercise reasonable diligence [In re Marriage of Berland (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1257, 1260-1261, 264 Cal. Rptr. 210] .

Improvident management of assets that otherwise would be sufficient to provide the supported spouse with self sufficiency in the accustomed lifestyle also justifies termination of support, even though the result may be a lowering of the supported spouse's lifestyle. To hold otherwise would encourage profligacy and discourage sound investment and prudent management of financial resources [In re Marriage of McElwee (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 902, 909-910, 243 Cal. Rptr. 179] .

On a motion to terminate support, the court might determine that support should be continued, but that support payments and jurisdiction should both terminate at some point in the future. The various options, such as a substantive step-down order [see In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 658-659, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587] or a so-called Richmond order [see In re Marriage of Richmond (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 352, 164 Cal. Rptr. 381] , are discussed, and forms are provided, in § 225.60 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationAbility to PayFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationChanged CircumstancesFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationChanged Circumstances

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
4. Termination Of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.274

§ 225.274 Termination by Operation of Law on Death or Remarriage

Except as otherwise agreed by the parties in writing, the obligation to make spousal support payments under any court order or judgment terminates on the death of either party or the remarriage of the supported party [Fam. Code § 4337]. Unless the parties agree in writing that support payments are to continue despite the event, the payments cease by operation of law [In re Marriage of Thornton (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 251, 254-255, 257, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380 (support agreement providing for nonmodifiability of certain sum and terminating obligation on death of party or on certain date in 2003, did not waive provisions of Fam. Code § 4337); In re Marriage of Glasser (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 149, 151, 226 Cal. Rptr. 229 ; see Hilton v. McNitt (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 79, 82-83, 315 P.2d 1 ; but see In re Marriage of Cesnalis (2003)106 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 1275-1276, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436 (husband waived right under Fam. Code § 4337 to terminate spousal support on wife's remarriage when nonmodifiability provision in stipulated judgment was expressly limited to three-year "duration of spousal support" that "will not be modifiable under any circumstances" and that will end only if three years are up or one of parties dies)]. Agreements avoiding termination by operation of law on death or remarriage are discussed, and forms are provided, in § 225.60 et seq.

Under most circumstances, the subsequent annulment of a void or voidable remarriage does not reinstate a prior spouse's duty of paying spousal support [Sefton v. Sefton (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 872, 875-877, 291 P.2d 439 ; Berkely v. Berkely (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 872, 874-875, 75 Cal. Rptr. 294] . However, if the remarriage was effected wholly by the involuntary conduct of the supported spouse, the court may weigh the equities and reinstate the previous spouse's support obligation if the court finds it necessary to achieve substantial justice between the parties. "Involuntary" does not encompass consent induced by fraud or misrepresentation, but rather physical coercion [see In re Marriage of Weintraub (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 420, 426-427, 213 Cal. Rptr. 159] .

In weighing the equities to determine if support should be reinstated, excessive delay in seeking annulment may imply that the supported spouse has ratified the remarriage by voluntary cohabitation or that he or she is attempting to reserve an election between two marriages for a duty of support [In re Marriage of Weintraub (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 420, 427, 213 Cal. Rptr. 159 ; see Fam. Code §§ 2251(a)(1), 2254 (support may be awarded in proceeding for nullity of marriage to party who believed in good faith that marriage was valid); see also § 225.30 et seq.]. Another important factor is whether the supporting spouse has reasonably relied to his or her detriment on the apparent remarriage [In re Marriage of Weintraub (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 420, 427, 213 Cal. Rptr. 159] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders
4. Termination Of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.275-225.289

[Reserved]

§§ 225.275[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.290

§ 225.290 State Statutes

[1] Duty of Support

[a] Effect of Death

Spousal support obligation as terminating on death of either party. Fam. Code § 4337

Family allowance from probate estate. Prob. Code § 6540

Temporary right to remain in possession of family home. Prob. Code § 6500

Petition to set aside exempt property. Prob. Code § 6510

Right of spouse to probate homestead. Prob. Code § 6521

[b] Effect of Dissolution

Spousal support orders during pendency of dissolution proceeding. Fam. Code § 3600

Spousal support orders in judgment of dissolution or legal separation. Fam. Code § 4330

[c] Effect of Incompetence

Duty of support as not affected by dissolution on ground of insanity. Fam. Code § 2313

Duty to support spouse as continuing when spouse institutionalized because of insanity or illness. Welf. & Inst. Code §

7275

Action by State Department of Health to recover costs from supporting spouse. Welf. & Inst. Code § 7282

[d] General Provisions

General spousal duty of support. Fam. Code § 4300

Husband and wife as prohibited from altering their legal relations. Fam. Code § 1620

[e] Marital Requirement

Marriage outside state as valid in California if valid in jurisdiction where contracted. Fam. Code § 308

Incestuous marriage as void. Fam. Code § 2200

Bigamous and polygamous marriages as void. Fam. Code § 2201

Grounds for nullity of marriage. Fam. Code § 2210

Putative marriage; support of putative spouse. Fam. Code §§ 2251, 2254

[f] When Spouses Living Apart

Provisions for spousal support in separation agreement. Fam. Code § 3580

Spouse as not liable for support of other when spouses living separate by agreement unless support stipulated in agreement. Fam. Code § 4302

[2] Enforcement of Right of Support

Civil action to enforce spouse's right of support. Fam. Code § 4303

Married person's failure to provide necessaries for spouse as misdemeanor. Penal Code § 270a

Order for fine to be paid to spouse of defendant upon conviction for failure to provide necessaries to spouse. Penal Code § 270d

[3] Liability of Marital Property for Support

Community estate as liable for debt of either spouse. Fam. Code § 910

Separate property of spouse as liable for his or her debt during marriage, not liable for debt of other during marriage. Fam. Code § 913

Liability for necessaries. Fam. Code § 914

Liability for support obligations. Fam. Code § 915

Spouse's separate property as liable for support of other while spouses live together, if no community estate exists. Fam. Code § 4301

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsDebt LiabilityFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsDuty of SupportFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportEnforcementGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarriageValidityVoid & Voidable MarriagesVoid Marriages

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.291-225.309

[Reserved]

§§ 225.291[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Awards Of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.310

§ 225.310 State Statutes

[1] Agreements for Spousal Support

Provisions for support in separation agreements. Fam. Code § 3580

Support agreements as severable and enforceable by court. Fam. Code § 3590

Court as having power to modify or terminate support agreement. Fam. Code § 3591

[2] Factors Considered in Setting Spousal Support

List of factors considered. Fam. Code § 4320

Court as permitted to deny support out of separate property of other party if supported party has separate property or is earning livelihood, or if other party has custody or children and is supporting them. Fam. Code § 4321

No support as permitted to be ordered against other party when there are no children and supported party acquires separate estate. Fam. Code § 4322

Rebuttable presumption of decreased need when supported party cohabiting. Fam. Code § 4323(a)

Income of supporting spouse's subsequent spouse or nonmarital partner as not to be considered when determining spousal support. Fam. Code § 4323(b)

[3] Permanent Spousal Support

Order for permanent support in proceeding for dissolution or legal separation. Fam. Code § 4330

Examination by vocational training counselor. Fam. Code § 4331

Court as required to make specific findings of fact with respect to standard of living. Fam. Code § 4332

Spousal support order as retroactive to date of filing of notice of motion. Fam. Code § 4333

Support orders for contingent period of time. Fam. Code § 4334

Support orders for fixed period of time. Fam. Code § 4335

Court as retaining jurisdiction over spousal support indefinitely when marriage is of long duration; definition of long duration. Fam. Code § 4336

Absent agreement of parties, support obligation as terminating on death of either party or remarriage of supported party. Fam. Code § 4337

Order of resort to property for payment of spousal support. Fam. Code § 4338

Court as having power to order security for payment of spousal support. Fam. Code § 4339

Court as having power to order purchase of annuity, maintenance of life insurance, or establishment of trust to provide spousal support after death of supporting party. Fam. Code § 4360

[4] Temporary Spousal Support

Order for temporary support during pendency of proceeding for dissolution or legal separation. Fam. Code § 3600

Temporary support orders as not enforceable if parties reconcile. Fam. Code § 3602

Modification or termination of temporary support order. Fam. Code § 3603

Temporary support order as not prejudicial to rights of parties regarding any subsequent order. Fam. Code § 3604

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsEvidenceInferences & PresumptionsPresumptionsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationCohabitationFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportObligationsPeriodic Support

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Awards Of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.311-225.329

[Reserved]

§§ 225.311[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
C. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.330

§ 225.330 State Statutes

[1] Jurisdiction to Modify Spousal Support

When support order is for contingent period of time, support as terminating at time of contingency provided for. Fam. Code § 4334

When support order is for fixed period of time, support as terminating at end of period provided for, with no extension permitted unless court has retained jurisdiction. Fam. Code § 4335

Court as retaining jurisdiction over spousal support indefinitely when marriage is of long duration; definition of long duration. Fam. Code § 4336

[2] Modification or Termination of Spousal Support

Court as having power to modify or terminate agreement for support. Fam. Code § 3591

Definition of "support order" with respect to statutes governing modification or termination. Fam. Code § 3650

Court as having authority to modify or terminate support as it deems necessary. Fam. Code § 3651

Order for modification or termination of support as retroactive to date of filing of notice of motion. Fam. Code § 3653

Order modifying or terminating support as required to include statement of decision, at request of either party. Fam. Code § 3654

Discovery before commencement of modification or termination proceeding. Fam. Code §§ 3660-3668

Simplified modification procedure. Fam. Code § 3680

Cohabitation of supported spouse as raising rebuttable presumption of decreased need; support as subject to modification or termination on proof of changed circumstances with regard to cohabitation. Fam. Code § 4323

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsBench TrialsFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportJurisdictionFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportSpousal SupportModification & TerminationCohabitation

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
C. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.331-225.349

[Reserved]

§§ 225.331[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
A. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.350

§ 225.350 Complaint to Enforce Spousal Duty of Support [Fam. Code § 4303]

[1] FORM Complaint to Enforce Spousal Duty of Support [Fam. Code § 4303]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

In re the Marriage of	)
_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Petitioner,	)	COMPLAINT FOR SUPPORT
and	)
_____[name],	)
Respondent.	)
	)

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Plaintiff _____ [name] is a resident of the State of California, County of _____[county].

2. Defendant _____ [name] is a resident of the State of California, County of _____[county].

3. This action is brought under the authority of Family Code Section 4303.

4. Plaintiff and Defendant were married on _____ [date of marriage], and since that time have remained husband and wife. No judgment of nullity of marriage, legal separation, or dissolution of marriage has been entered, and no such proceedings are currently pending in any court of competent jurisdiction.

[SET FORTH allegations of defendant's failure or refusal to provide support, e.g.:]

5. On _____ [date], defendant abandoned plaintiff and ceased cohabitation. Since that date, defendant has not provided plaintiff with any support in any form from any source.

6. Plaintiff is disabled, unemployed, and unable to support himself. Plaintiff has, at all times during marriage, relied on defendant's community property earnings for his support.

7. No application for public assistance is currently pending.

[CONTINUE]

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff prays for judgment as follows:

1. For an order requiring defendant to pay support to plaintiff in such amounts and at such times as the court deems proper under the standards of Family Code Section 4320;

2. For costs of suit incurred;

3. For attorney's fees; and

4. For such other relief as the court deems proper.
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]
By:_____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____[name]

[Add verification as follows, if desired]

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name] am the petitioner in this action. I have read the foregoing complaint and know its contents. They are true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters that are alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters, I believe them to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date]

_____[signature]

[2] Use of Form

This form is a brief complaint that illustrates an action under Fam. Code § 4303 seeking support from a spouse. There are no statutory requirements regarding the contents of such a complaint. By reference to dissolution of marriage matters, in which spousal support may be requested merely by checking a box [see Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-100 (Judicial Council form of Petition for Dissolution of Marriage)], it is probably sufficient to allege the existence and validity of the marriage and the defendant's failure or refusal to provide support. Subject matter jurisdiction for all Family Code proceedings is in the superior court [Fam. Code § 200]. Pendente lite support may be ordered under the court's general equity powers [Kilroy v. Kilroy (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 1141, 1144-1148, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 812] , and should be prayed for.

Fam. Code § 4303 is derived from former Civ. Code § 248, a provision of the former Uniform Civil Liability for Support Act. Its primary purpose is to allow a public entity that has provided public assistance to a married adult to seek reimbursement from the person's spouse [see Fam. Code § 4303(b)]. The person entitled to support may also bring the action, whether or not the parties have separated [Fam. Code § 4303(a)].

[3] Difference From Action for Legal Separation

With regard to spousal support, there is little, if any, functional difference between an obligee's action under Fam. Code § 4303 and a proceeding for legal separation. A married person may obtain an order for spousal support by either proceeding [see Fam. Code § 4330]. Of course, in a legal separation, a party may obtain all other relief available in a dissolution of marriage, such as child custody [see Fam. Code § 3021(c)], child support orders [see Fam. Code § 4001], and division of property [see Fam. Code § 2550].

For this reason, there is little need for the 4303 action, and it is seldom used today by private parties. However, a judgment of legal separation, although of little or no legal significance apart from the orders contained in it, might connote a certain finality of the relationship that the person does not feel. Also, legal separation cannot be adjudged over the opposition of the respondent [Fam. Code § 2345]. The 4303 action allows the court to issue a spousal support order without resolving issues related to the status of the marriage, which the parties might not be ready to address.

[4] State Statutes

Subject matter jurisdiction in superior court for proceedings under Family Code. Fam. Code § 200

Spouse's liability for necessaries of other spouse. Fam. Code § 914

General spousal duty of support. Fam. Code § 4300

Civil action to enforce spouse's right to support. Fam. Code § 4303

Factors considered in ordering support. Fam. Code § 4320

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
A. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.351

§ 225.351 Agreement to Separate [Fam. Code § 4302]

[1] FORM Agreement to Separate [Fam. Code § 4302]

AGREEMENT TO SEPARATE
[Set forth allegations of marriage and separation, e.g.,]

1. This agreement is entered into on the date set forth below between _____ [name of husband] (Husband) and _____ [name of wife] (Wife) under the authority of Family Code Section 4302. The parties were married on _____ [date]. The parties acknowledge that they ceased cohabitation and separated as of _____ [date of separation]. This separation is mutually agreed to, and they are living separately by agreement.

[EITHER, if support is to be paid during the parties' separation]

2. During the period of separation, [Husband or Wife] shall pay to [Wife or Husband] the sum of $_____ monthly for his/her support, on or before the _____ [day of month payments will be due, e.g., 5th] day of the month, beginning _____[date payments to begin]. This obligation shall continue until further agreement of the parties or order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. The payments provided in Paragraph 2, above, shall be considered as complete satisfaction of [Husband or Wife]'s duty to support [Wife or Husband]. Each party agrees to indemnify and hold the other harmless from any liability to third persons for debts and obligations incurred solely by the party during the period of separation.

4. The payments provided in Paragraph 2, above, shall be without prejudice to either party to seek any appropriate order or judgment regarding spousal support, including an order or judgment denying spousal support and permanently terminating jurisdiction to award spousal support, in any subsequent legal proceeding related to the marriage of the parties.

[OR, if no support will be paid during the separation]

2. During the period of separation, the parties' mutual duty to support each other shall be suspended, and neither shall have any right to receive support from the other. The duties of support shall remain suspended until further agreement of the parties or order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Each party agrees to indemnify and hold the other harmless from any liability to third persons for debts and obligations incurred solely by the party during the period of separation.

4. This mutual suspension of the duty of support shall be without prejudice to either party to seek any appropriate order or judgment regarding spousal support, including an order or judgment denying spousal support and permanently terminating jurisdiction to award spousal support, in any subsequent legal proceeding related to the marriage of the parties.

[CONTINUE]

Dated: _____.

_____[signature]
Husband

Dated: _____.

_____[signature]
Wife

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing form illustrates an agreement to separate pursuant to Fam. Code § 4302, which provides that a person is not liable for support of the person's spouse when the person is living separate from the spouse by agreement unless support is stipulated in the agreement (see § 225.35). Paragraph 1 of the form is an opening paragraph setting forth the facts of marriage and separation. The first Alternative Paragraphs 2-4 provide for one spouse to support the other during the separation, and protect the supported spouse from any claim that the other's duty of support was suspended by operation of the statute. In exchange for periodic payments of support, the supported spouse agrees to hold the supporting spouse harmless for his or her debts incurred during the period of separation. The second Alternative Paragraphs 2-4 provide for no support, but clarify that by so agreeing, the parties do not intend to permanently waive their right to support from each other. The operation of the statute will achieve the same result in the absence of the clarifying language [see London Guarantee & Acci. Co. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1919) 181 Cal. 460, 466-467, 184 P. 864] , but it is always preferable to express the intent of the parties explicitly.

[3] Liability to Creditors

Short separation agreements such as this form, which address the duty of support, should probably be used in most cases in order to protect the client from unforeseen liability to creditors. Often a client will seek counsel immediately after separation, but not be ready to file for dissolution. The danger for a separated spouse is that the creditors of the other will seek recourse from him or her for debts incurred during the separation if the duty of support is not suspended [see Fam. Code § 914(a)(2); see also § 225.35]. If the separation is mutually agreed to, a written agreement will assure that the statute will suspend the duty of support, if that is the parties' desire. However, the danger is equally present if the separation is unilateral, that is, if one spouse has left the other. Of course, if the spouse left behind is in need, counsel should seek to enforce, not suspend, the duty of support. But if the spouse who is left behind is not in need, he or she should be counseled to agree to the separation in writing, and thereby obtain the protection of the statute from the potential creditors of the other spouse.

[4] State Statutes

Liability for spouse's necessaries of life while spouses living apart. Fam. Code § 914

Provisions for spousal support in separation agreement. Fam. Code § 3580

Spouse as not liable for support of other when spouses living separate by agreement unless support stipulated in agreement. Fam. Code § 4302

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
A. Duty To Support Spouse

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.352-225.369

[Reserved]

§§ 225.352[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.370

§ 225.370 Income and Expense Declaration [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.128; Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-150]

[1] FORM Income and Expense Declaration [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.128; Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-150]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a reproduction of the mandatory Judicial Council form of Income and Expense Declaration, including the pages for Income (page 2) and Expenses (page 3) [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-150]. A page for Child Support (page 4) is to be completed if child support is in issue. This form is often referred to as "the I&E." These forms are available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge. Blank copies may also be obtained from the court clerk.

[3] State Statutes

Party has burden of proof regarding existence or nonexistence of fact essential to party's claim for relief. Evid. Code § 500

During pendency of family law proceeding, court has authority to order any amount necessary for support of other spouse. Fam. Code § 3600

Factors considered in ordering permanent spousal support. Fam. Code § 4320

[4] California Rules of Court

When financial information must be served and filed. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.128

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.371

§ 225.371 Examination by Vocational Training Counselor [Fam. Code § 4331]--Declaration in Support of Motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.118]

[1] FORM Examination by Vocational Training Counselor [Fam. Code § 4331]--Declaration in Support of Motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.118]

DECLARATION IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR EXAMINATION BY VOCATIONAL TRAINING COUNSELOR

I, _____ [name], am the _____ [petitioner or respondent] in this matter in which _____ [respondent or petitioner], _____ [name], has requested spousal support.

_____ [Set forth details supporting request for examination of opposing party, e.g., Petitioner is 45 years old and in good health. She has a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of California, although she has not worked during marriage in order to devote time to domestic duties. The children of the marriage, however, are now ages 14 and 17 and are both in high school].

I believe that Petitioner is now employable, or, at a minimum, could become employable within a reasonable time with appropriate training or education. To that end, I request that she be examined by a vocational training counselor, as authorized by Family Code Section 4331.

_____ [Name of vocational training counselor] is a vocational training counselor who is qualified as required by Family Code Section 4331(d) and (e) to conduct the examination. He/She has his/her office at _____ [office address of vocational training counselor].

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.372

§ 225.372 Examination by Vocational Training Counselor [Fam. Code § 4331]--Order Requiring Examination by Vocational Training Counselor

[1] FORM Examination by Vocational Training Counselor [Fam. Code § 4331]--Order Requiring Examination by Vocational Training Counselor

THE COURT ORDERS:

1. _____ [Respondent or Petitioner] shall be examined by _____ [name of vocational training counselor], a vocational training counselor who is qualified under Family Code Section 4331, on _____ [date of examination] at _____ [time of examination] at _____ [office address of vocational training counselor].

2. The scope of the examination shall be limited to determining whether _____ [respondent or petitioner] is currently employable at a wage that would allow him/her to maintain himself/herself at the marital standard of living, or if not, the approximate time and expense that would be required to provide him/her with sufficient training or education to become so employable. Intelligence testing shall not be administered.

3. The cost of the examination shall be paid by _____ [petitioner or respondent], _____ [name].
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Forms

The foregoing two forms are for use in obtaining an order that a party be examined by a vocational training counselor. see § 225.371 is a declaration in support of a motion that a party be examined by a vocational training counselor [see

Fam. Code § 4331]. § 225.372[1] is a sample order to submit to the examination.

The order may be made only on motion, for good cause, and on notice to the party to be examined and to all parties. The order must specify the time, place, manner, conditions, scope of the examination, and the person or persons by whom it is to be made [Fam. Code § 4331(b)]. For further discussion, see § 225.126.

[3] Judicial Council Forms

For discussion of how to present a pretrial motion in a family law matter, including examples of the Judicial Council forms for Order to Show Cause [Cal. Judicial Council FL-300], Notice of Motion [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-301], Application for Order and Supporting Declaration [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-310], and Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340], see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure .

For all declarations supporting family law motions, it is recommended that the Judicial Council form for Attached Declaration (MC-031) be used and attached to the Application for Order and Supporting Declaration form. The Judicial Council form for Additional Page (MC-020) may be used to attach orders to the Findings and Order after hearing form that do not appear on the face of that form, such as the order in § 225.372.

[4] State Statutes

Factors to consider in ordering spousal support. Fam. Code § 4320

Motion and order for examination by vocational training counselor. Fam. Code § 4331

In ordering support, at request of either party, court as required to make specific findings of fact as to any circumstances in addition to standard of living during marriage. Fam. Code § 4332

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.373

§ 225.373 Findings of Fact Regarding Spousal Support Orders [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4332]--Sample Provisions

[1] FORM Findings of Fact Regarding Spousal Support Orders [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4332]--Sample Provisions

With regard to the issue of spousal support, the court finds as follows:

[Set forth specific findings of court with regard to marital standard of living and any other findings requested by parties, e.g.,]

1. The parties were married on February 22, 1980 and separated on July 28, 1994. Therefore, this is a marriage of long duration within the meaning of Family Code Section 4336, and that statute applies to this matter.

2. Petitioner is 42 years old and respondent is 49 years old. Both are in good health. The children of the marriage are in high school, and both parties may engage in gainful employment without unduly interfering with the interests of the children.

3. The marital standard of living was middle class; comfortable, but not lavish. Total marital net monthly income at the time of separation was approximately $5,000.

4. Respondent was employed at all times throughout the marriage, and is currently employed as sales manager of Giantco, Inc. Respondent's net monthly income of approximately $4,000 is a reasonable reflection of his earning capacity and support should be based on his actual earnings. Respondent has the ability to pay spousal support. However, respondent's current income is insufficient to maintain both parties separately at the marital standard of living.

5. Petitioner has a bachelor of arts degree from the University of California, but was unemployed during the marriage until 1991 to devote time to domestic duties. Since 1991, petitioner has worked part time as a graphic designer, but her current average monthly net income of approximately $1,000 is insufficient to support herself at the marital standard of living.

6. Petitioner's reasonable needs to maintain herself at the marital standard of living, considering the cost of living as of the date of judgment, require approximately $3500 per month of total net disposable income. The support to be ordered in this matter, together with petitioner's reasonably anticipated income, is insufficient to meet petitioner's reasonable needs.

7. Support for a limited term is appropriate based on petitioner's stated intention to attend community college to obtain additional training as a computer programmer, which she anticipates will allow her to become self-supporting in approximately two years. However, jurisdiction should be retained indefinitely to extend the duration of support should petitioner, though acting in good faith, be unable to achieve her objectives.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a series of sample findings of fact with regard to a court's spousal support order. Although this form may be used for an order for temporary spousal support, the findings are more appropriately applied to an order for permanent spousal support. The trial court should make specific findings for the purpose of guiding reviewing courts and courts that may be called on to consider future motions to modify or terminate the support [see In re Marriage of Laube (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1226, 251 Cal. Rptr. 745] .

By statute, the court is required to make specific factual findings with respect to the standard of living during marriage. And, at the request of either party, the court must make appropriate factual determinations with respect to other circumstances [Fam. Code § 4332]. Findings regarding the factors under Fam. Code § 4320 that the court deems critical in determining spousal support should be requested and made in all cases to assist a reviewing court [see In re Marriage of Fenton (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 451, 457-458, 184 Cal. Rptr. 597 (remanding for reconsideration and appropriate findings)]. However, a court is not required to make separate findings regarding each circumstance listed in Fam. Code § 4320 [In re Marriage of Lucero (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 836, 845, 173 Cal. Rptr. 680] .

If the order is structured based on a particular expectation, as, for example, that the supported spouse will become self-sufficient by a particular time, the expectation should be set forth in the order. This will assist a future court in determining whether to modify or terminate support based on either the fulfillment or failure of the expectation [see In re Marriage of Biderman (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 409, 413-414, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 791] .

In light of the apparent mandatory nature of Fam. Code § 4336 [see § 225.144[2]], it is extremely important for the court to make a finding as to whether the marriage is one of long duration within the meaning of that statute. If the court determines that, under the facts of the case, an open-ended spousal support order is not appropriate and that jurisdiction should be terminated as of some specific time, it should not find that the marriage is of long duration. The statute would appear to require the court to retain jurisdiction over support in a marriage of long duration.

[3] Failure to Request Findings

An appellant's failure to request findings or a statement of decision can be fatal to success on appeal, because it means that the support order appealed from will be presumed correct, and all presumptions will be indulged to support it on matters on which the record is silent. Error must be affirmatively shown [In re Marriage of Laube (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1226, 251 Cal. Rptr. 745] . However, no such presumption or inference is permissible if the appellant brings an inadequate or ambiguous statement of decision to the attention of the court before the entry of judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 634; see In re Marriage of Hoffmeister (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 351, 359-365, 236 Cal. Rptr. 543 (remanding spousal support matter for lack of proper findings)].

[4] Statement of Decision

Findings may be made through a statement of decision under Code Civ. Proc. § 632 [Fam. Code § 2338]. That statute requires that the statement must be requested before submission if the matter is concluded within one calendar day or in less than eight hours over more than one day. Further, the request must specify the controverted issues as to which the party is requesting the statement. These requirements have been found to be somewhat unrealistic with regard to contested spousal support hearings because often the controverted issues are not fully developed until after the evidence has been presented at the hearing [see In re Marriage of Ramer (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 263, 271, 231 Cal. Rptr. 647] . However, Fam. Code § 4332 provides an independent basis, apart from Code Civ. Proc. § 632, on which a party may obtain appropriate factual determinations regarding spousal support after the hearing in light of the evidence presented and the issues developed [see In re Marriage of Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 71, 76, 190 Cal. Rptr. 104] . Certain issues have been noted by reviewing courts as particularly important to clarify in the original order. If the amount of support awarded is insufficient to meet the supported spouse's needs at the marital standard of living, the order should so specify [In re Marriage of Smith (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 469, 491-493, 274 Cal. Rptr. 911] . Such a finding is crucial to the power of the court to increase support in the future based solely on the supporting spouse's increased income [In re Marriage of Hoffmeister (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 351, 363-364, 236 Cal. Rptr. 543] . For further discussion, see § 225.200 et seq.

[5] State Statutes

Statement of decision in lieu of written findings of fact. Code Civ. Proc. § 632

Factors to consider in ordering spousal support. Fam. Code § 4320

In ordering support, court as required to make specific findings of fact concerning standard of living during marriage, and also concerning any other circumstances for which findings are requested by parties. Fam. Code § 4332

Court as required to retain jurisdiction over spousal support in marriage of long duration. Fam. Code § 4336

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.374

§ 225.374 Open-Ended Order; Support for Indefinite Period [Fam. Code §§ 4330, 4336, 4337]

[1] FORM Open-Ended Order; Support for Indefinite Period [Fam. Code §§ 4330, 4336, 4337]

THE COURT ORDERS:

_____ [Supporting party, e.g., Respondent] is order to pay _____ [supported party, e.g., petitioner] spousal support in the sum of $_____ [amount] per month[, set forth additional payment terms, if any, e.g., payable one-half on the first day of each month and one-half on the fifteenth day of each month,] commencing on _____ [date support payments to begin], and continuing thereafter until death of either party, remarriage of _____ [supported party, e.g., petitioner], or further order of the court.

[2] Use of Form

This form is an open-ended spousal support order; that is, one for a stated amount for an indefinite period. The order will terminate only on death or remarriage under Fam. Code § 4337. For further discussion of the termination of support orders, see § 225.200 et seq.

An order awarding support without a termination date contains within it a reservation of jurisdiction regardless of the length of the marriage [see In re Marriage of Christie (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 849, 864, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 135 ; Dahlstet v. Dahlstet (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 174, 178, 77 Cal. Rptr. 45 ; see also Fam. Code § 4336 (court retains jurisdiction indefinitely if marriage is of long duration); § 225.141]. Because no specific language of nonmodifiability is included, this order is subject to future modification or termination on changed circumstances, except as to any amount that may have accrued prior to the date of the filing of the notice of motion or order to show cause to modify or terminate [Fam. Code §§ 3591(a), (b), 3651(a), (c)].

[3] State Statutes

Court as having authority to modify or terminate spousal support as it deems necessary. Fam. Code § 3651

General duty of spousal support. Fam. Code § 4300

Factors considered in spousal support awards. Fam. Code § 4320

Court as having authority to order spousal support in proceeding for dissolution or legal separation. Fam. Code § 4330

Court as retaining jurisdiction over spousal support indefinitely in marriage of long duration. Fam. Code § 4336

Except by agreement of parties, spousal support obligation as terminating upon death of either party or remarriage of supported party. Fam. Code § 4337

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.375

§ 225.375 Support for Limited Period; Jurisdiction Retained Indefinitely [Fam. Code §§ 4330, 4335, 4336]

[1] FORM Support for Limited Period; Jurisdiction Retained Indefinitely [Fam. Code §§ 4330, 4335, 4336]

THE COURT ORDERS:

_____ [Petitioner or Respondent] is ordered to pay _____ [respondent or petitioner] spousal support in the sum of $_____ [amount] per month for a period of _____ [period of support, e.g., five years], commencing on _____ [date support payments to begin], and payable through _____ [date support payments to end], as follows: [set forth payment terms, e.g., $250 on the first day of each month and $250 on the fifteenth day of each month]. The court reserves jurisdiction indefinitely to modify, extend the duration of, reinstate, or terminate support payments and jurisdiction over support on a proper showing made to the court.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a spousal support order for a limited period that includes specific language retaining jurisdiction indefinitely. The express language retaining jurisdiction is required to accomplish this result in a short-term marriage [see Fam. Code § 4335]. The language is probably not necessary to retain jurisdiction in a marriage of long duration under Fam. Code § 4336. However, because of some uncertainty over the meaning and construction of that statute, this language should be included in all cases in which an open-ended reservation of jurisdiction is appropriate [see § 225.141]. For similar orders that retain jurisdiction only for a limited time, see §§ 225.376 -225.379.

[3] State Statutes

When support order is for fixed period of time, support as terminating at end of period provided for, with no extension permitted unless court has retained jurisdiction. Fam. Code § 4335

[4] Cross References

For a related form, see § 225.374.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.376

§ 225.376 Richmond Order; Support for Limited Period With Limited Reservation of Jurisdiction [Fam. Code §§ 4330, 4334, 4335]

[1] FORM Richmond Order; Support for Limited Period With Limited Reservation of Jurisdiction [Fam. Code §§ 4330, 4334, 4335]

THE COURT ORDERS:

_____ [Petitioner or Respondent] is ordered to pay _____ [respondent or petitioner] spousal support in the sum of $_____ [amount] per month for a period of _____ [period of support, e.g., five years], commencing on _____ [date support payments to begin], and payable through _____ [date support payments to end], as follows: [set forth payment terms, e.g., $250 on the first day of each month and $250 on the fifteenth day of each month]. The court reserves jurisdiction to modify the amount of, extend the duration of, or extend jurisdiction over spousal support on a proper showing made to the court in proceedings initiated on or before _____ [date support payments to end]. If support or jurisdiction over support is not extended beyond _____ [date support payments to end] pursuant to a motion or order to show cause brought on or before that date, the court's jurisdiction over spousal support shall terminate on that date, and thereafter, the court shall no longer have jurisdiction to award any additional spousal support to _____ [supported spouse, e.g., petitioner], regardless of any subsequent change in circumstances. Spousal support [shall or shall not] terminate on the death of either party or the remarriage of _____ [e.g., petitioner] before _____ [restate above ending date].

[2] Use of Form

This form is a so-called "Richmond order" [see In re Marriage of Richmond (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 352, 164 Cal. Rptr. 381] . A Richmond order is one that sets spousal support for a fixed period based on evidence that the supported spouse will be self-supporting by the end of the period, but retains jurisdiction to modify the amount, and/or to extend the term, as long as the supported spouse acts before the date of termination [In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 665-666, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587] . The effect of the order is to shift the burden to the supported spouse to show cause to extend the order [In re Marriage of Stallworth (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 742, 755, 237 Cal. Rptr. 829 ; In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 665-666, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587] . The failure to achieve self-sufficiency by the expected date can constitute the change of circumstances necessary to support extension of the spousal support obligation [In re Marriage of Pekar (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 367, 369-372, 218 Cal. Rptr. 823] .

Under a Richmond order, jurisdiction is reserved only until the termination date. If that date passes without the supported spouse having moved to extend the term, jurisdiction is terminated and the court has no further power to extend or award spousal support [see In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 665, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587 ; In re Marriage of Segel (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1030, 1040-1041, 223 Cal. Rptr. 430] .

Accordingly, it is important to specify that jurisdiction may be extended as long as the proceedings are initiated before the termination date. Otherwise, the court's order extending jurisdiction must actually be entered before the termination date or jurisdiction is lost [see In re Marriage of Carter (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1024, 1030, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1] .

Addition statutory provisions must be taken into account in determining whether it is appropriate for a court to make a Richmond order. These provisions require a court, when making an order for spousal support, to advise the support recipient that he or she should make reasonable efforts to assist in providing for his or her support needs, taking into account the particular circumstances the court considered under Fam. Code § 4320, unless, in the case of a marriage of long duration as provided for in Fam. Code § 4336 the court decides this warning is inadvisable [Fam. Code § 4330(b)]. A related provision states the goal that a supported party must become self-supporting within a reasonable period of time, with this period generally to be one-half the length of the marriage (except in marriages of long duration)--keeping in mind that the court retains discretion to order support for a greater or lesser time period based on any of the other factors in Family Code Section 4320 and the circumstances of the parties [Fam. Code § 4320(l)]. For a related discussion concerning long term marriages, see § 225.144. For sample language parties may use in stipulating to the circumstances under which a support order is made, see Kirkland, Lurvey, & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure (Matthew Bender), Ch. 214, § 214.123. 2nd ed.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.377

§ 225.377 Fixed Amount for Limited Period; No Reservation of Jurisdiction to Extend Duration of Support [Fam. Code §§ 4330, 4334, 4335]

[1] FORM Fixed Amount for Limited Period; No Reservation of Jurisdiction to Extend Duration of Support [Fam. Code §§ 4330, 4334, 4335]

THE COURT ORDERS:

_____ [Petitioner or Respondent] is ordered to pay _____ [respondent or petitioner] spousal support in the sum of $_____ [amount] per month for a period of _____ [period of support, e.g., five years], commencing on _____ [date support payments to begin], and payable through _____ [date support payments to end], as follows: [set forth payment terms, e.g., $250 on the first day of each month and $250 on the fifteenth day of each month]. Spousal support shall be modifiable as to amount only by further order of this court on a showing of changed circumstances. However, jurisdiction over spousal support shall terminate on _____ [date support payments to end], and this court does not retain jurisdiction to extend the duration of support past that date, regardless of whether proceedings are commenced before or after that date.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a spousal support order for a limited term in which the court does not retain jurisdiction to extend support beyond the stated termination date. This form of order may be appropriate in a short-term marriage [see In re Marriage of Wilson (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 913, 918-919, 247 Cal. Rptr. 522 ; see also § 225.144[3]]. It is doubtful that the court may impose this order on the parties absent their agreement if the marriage was of long duration. Fam. Code § 4336 would seem to require the court to retain jurisdiction indefinitely in a marriage of long duration. Even before the statute was enacted, it was generally an abuse of discretion to terminate jurisdiction over spousal support in a long-term marriage [see In re Marriage of Morrison (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 437, 453, 143 Cal. Rptr. 139, 573 P.2d 41] . For discussion, see § 225.144[2].

Unless the parties agree that the amount of support is to be nonmodifiable [see § 225.160], the court will have jurisdiction to modify the amount of support until the termination date. However, under this order, the court will have no jurisdiction to extend the duration beyond that date, even if the supported spouse moves before that date to extend the duration [see In re Marriage of Zlatnik (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1284, 1286, 1291, 243 Cal. Rptr. 454 ; In re Marriage of Foreman (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 129, 133-134, 228 Cal. Rptr. 4] .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.378

§ 225.378 Nonmodifiable Support for Limited Period; Jurisdiction Terminated [Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(d), 4330, 4334, 4335]

[1] FORM Nonmodifiable Support for Limited Period; Jurisdiction Terminated [Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(d), 4330, 4334, 4335]

THE COURT ORDERS:

_____ [Petitioner or Respondent] is ordered to pay _____ [respondent or petitioner] spousal support in the sum of $_____ [amount] per month for a period of _____ [period of support, e.g., ten years], commencing on _____ [date support payments to begin], and payable through _____ [date support payments to end], as follows: [set forth payment terms, e.g., $250 on the first day of each month and $250 on the fifteenth day of each month]. This order is nonmodifiable, and the court does not retain jurisdiction over spousal support, either for the purpose of modifying the amount of support payments or for the purpose of extending the duration of support beyond the stated period.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a spousal support order for a fixed amount for a limited period. Under this order, the court does not retain jurisdiction with regard to either modification of the amount of support or extension of the duration of support.

The aspect of this order that terminates jurisdiction probably cannot be imposed in a long term marriage absent the agreement of the parties [see Fam. Code § 4336(a); In re Marriage of Christie (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 849, 861-865, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 135 , discussed in § 225.144[2]]. Further, the amount of spousal support is always modifiable on a subsequent showing of changed circumstances unless the parties have agreed to the contrary [Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(d)]. Therefore, this order may only be made if the parties have agreed to it.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.379

§ 225.379 Support for Contingent Period of Time [Fam. Code §§ 4330, 4334]

[1] FORM Support for Contingent Period of Time [Fam. Code §§ 4330, 4334]

THE COURT ORDERS:

_____ [Petitioner or Respondent] is ordered to pay _____ [respondent or petitioner] spousal support in the sum of $_____ [amount] per month, payable [set forth terms of payment, e.g., $250 on the first day of each month and $250 on the fifteenth day of each month], commencing on _____ [date payments to begin], and continuing thereafter until [set forth contingent event when jurisdiction over support to terminate, e.g., such time as petitioner begins receiving her $1,000 monthly payments under her annuity contract, at which time this court's jurisdiction over spousal support shall terminate]. _____ [Respondent or Petitioner] is hereby expressly ordered to notify _____ [petitioner or respondent] on the happening of the contingency specified. This court retains jurisdiction to modify the amount of spousal support payments until the happening of the contingent event, but does not retain jurisdiction to modify this order so as to in any way change the effect of the happening of the contingent event.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a spousal support order for a contingent period of time until the happening of some event. The event should be one other than the death of either party or the remarriage of the supported spouse, which terminate support by operation of law absent agreement to the contrary [see Fam. Code § 4337].

If the court orders spousal support for a contingent period of time, the obligation terminates on the happening of the contingency. The court may in its order, require the supported party to notify the supporting party, or the supporting party's attorney of record, of the happening of the contingency [Fam. Code § 4334(a)]. If the supported party fails to give proper notice of the happening of the contingency and continues to accept spousal support payments, the supported party must refund payments received that accrued after the happening of the contingency. However, overpayments must be applied to any arrearages [Fam. Code § 4334(b)].

The amount of support under this order may be modified at any time before the happening of the contingency [see Fam. Code § 3651; for discussion of modification of support, see § 225.200 et seq.]. However, this form is drafted so that jurisdiction is not retained to eliminate the effect of the contingent event on the support ordered. The form may be modified to achieve the opposite results with regard to modification [see Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(d)] and jurisdiction.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.380

§ 225.380 Change in Amount of Support [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4330]--Substantive Step-Down

[1] FORM Change in Amount of Support [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4330]--Substantive Step-Down

THE COURT ORDERS:

_____ [Petitioner or Respondent] is ordered to pay _____ [respondent or petitioner] spousal support in the sum of $_____ [amount of initial payments] per month for _____ [term of initial payments, e.g., five years], commencing on _____ [date initial payments to begin], and ending on _____ [date initial payments to end]; thereafter, the sum of $_____ [amount of stepped-down payments] per month for [term of stepped-down payments, e.g., three years], commencing on _____ [date stepped- down payments to begin] and ending _____ [date stepped-down payments to end]. The amount of spousal support payments for these periods shall not be subject to future modification or termination. However, jurisdiction over spousal support shall terminate on _____ [date stepped-down payments to end], and this court does not retain jurisdiction to extend the duration of support past that date, regardless of whether proceedings are commenced before or after that date.

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.381

§ 225.381 Change in Amount of Support [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4330]--Substantive Step-Up

[1] FORM Change in Amount of Support [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4330]--Substantive Step-Up

THE COURT ORDERS:

_____ [Petitioner or Respondent] is ordered to pay _____ [respondent or petitioner] spousal support in the sum of $_____ [amount of initial payments] per month for _____ [term of initial payments, e.g., nine months], commencing on _____ [date initial payments to begin], and ending on _____ [date initial payments to end]; thereafter, the sum of $_____ [amount of stepped-up payments] per month for [term of stepped-up payments, e.g., three years], commencing on _____ [date stepped- up payments to begin], and continuing until _____ [petitioner or respondent]'s death or the death or remarriage of _____ [respondent or petitioner], or until further order of this court, whichever first occurs.

[2] Use of Forms

These forms exemplify possible step-down (see § 225.380) and step-up (see § 225.381) orders; that is, orders that require payment of a specified amount for a fixed period and specified lesser or greater amounts thereafter for an additional period or periods.

[3] Termination of Jurisdiction

A step-up or step-down order must address the question of jurisdiction at the end of the last term specified in the order. Jurisdiction may either be terminated without further recourse on that date (see § 225.377), retained indefinitely after the date passes (see § 225.375), or terminated on that date unless the supported spouse moves to extend duration before that date (see § 225.376). Whether the amounts of the various levels of payments are subject to future modification should also be addressed [see In re Marriage of Jones (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 505, 509-511, 271 Cal. Rptr. 761 (step-down order is not per se nonmodifiable)]. Nonmodifiability must be by agreement and expressed in the order [

Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(d)]. Otherwise, the order is subject to future modification and termination [Fam. Code §§ 3591(a), 3651(a)]. see §§ 225.380 and 225.381 demonstrate two possible resolutions of jurisdiction and modifiability.

[4] Basis for Change in Support

As a general rule, any change of support ordered to take place in the future must be based on reasonable inferences drawn from the evidence, not mere hopes or speculative expectations [In re Marriage of Harrison (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1216, 1230, 225 Cal. Rptr. 234 ; In re Marriage of Martinez (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 20, 34 n.6, 202 Cal. Rptr. 646 (to support step-down there must be proof that supported spouse's earnings will improve or that his or her needs will decrease or that the supporting spouse's ability to pay will decrease); see In re Marriage of Cheriton (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 269, 308-310, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 755 ; In re Marriage of Prietsch & Calhoun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 645, 658-659, 235 Cal. Rptr. 587 (no evidence to support step-down)]. Step-down orders have been approved in cases in which there was evidence that the supported spouse's needs would decrease because of potential employment [In re Marriage of Kelley (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 82, 94-95, 134 Cal. Rptr. 259 ; In re Marriage of Dennis (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 279, 282-284, 110 Cal. Rptr. 619 ; see In re Marriage of Andreen (1978) 76 Cal. App. 3d 667, 672, 143 Cal. Rptr. 94 ; see also In re Marriage of Rising (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 472, 479 n.9, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380 (in modification action, when court finds change of circumstances justifying support decrease, court may allow decrease to be phased in over time, provided at time order issued, court had discretion to reduce support to final step-down amount)].

A step-down order was disapproved insofar as it reduced support each year for three years even though there was no showing that needs would be less, but approved insofar as it reduced the award to $1 after four years because there was evidence that the supported spouse would have completed her education in that time [In re Marriage of Smith (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 725, 739-741, 145 Cal. Rptr. 205] . A step-up in spousal support payments was approved based on the evidence that the supporting spouse would resume full-time employment at the time when support would be increased [In re Marriage of Acosta (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 899, 902, 137 Cal. Rptr. 33] .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.382

§ 225.382 Payment of Debts [Fam. Code § 2023(a)]--Sample Provision

[1] FORM Payment of Debts [Fam. Code § 2023(a)]--Sample Provision

THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS:

As additional spousal support, Respondent shall pay directly to _____ [specify creditor of supported spouse, e.g., the University of California] on behalf of Petitioner the _____ [specify nature of debt, e.g., actual cost of Petitioner's tuition], _____ [specify duration of payments, e.g., beginning with the 1994 Fall semester, and continuing for eight consecutive semesters or until further order of this court. Payments shall be made on or before the due date for payment of tuition each semester as established by the University of California].

[2] Use of Form

This form is an illustration of a spousal support order for support in the form of payment to a creditor of the supported spouse. If payment of an obligation would benefit a party to a family law proceeding, or a child for whom support may be ordered, the court may order the other party to pay the obligation, or a portion of it, directly to the creditor [Fam. Code § 2023(a)]. The creditor has no right to enforce the order directly against the spouse ordered to make the payment; but the creditor's rights are in no way affected by the order [Fam. Code § 2023(b)]. Ordering direct payment protects the supporting spouse by assuring that the debt is paid [see In re Marriage of Higgason (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 476, 488, 110 Cal. Rptr. 897, 516 P.2d 289 (disapproved on another point in In re Marriage of Dawley (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 342, 352, 131 Cal. Rptr. 3, 551 P.2d 323)].

[3] Payments to Creditors as Spousal Support

Direct payments to creditors for the benefit of the supported spouse are part of the supporting spouse's spousal support obligation [In re Marriage of Smith (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 725, 748, 145 Cal. Rptr. 205] . They may be ordered for either overdue or future obligations [In re Marriage of Chala (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 996, 1000, 155 Cal. Rptr. 605] . With regard to periodic obligations to fall due in the future, a direct payment order is appropriate if there is a need for spousal support and the total support ordered (payments to creditors plus payments directly to spouse) is reasonable [In re Marriage of Chala (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 996, 1002, 155 Cal. Rptr. 605 ; see In re Marriage of De Guigne (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1367, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 430 (payments for future living expenses do not include refundable rent or security deposits); In re Marriage of Garcia (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 885, 892, 274 Cal. Rptr. 194 (payment of continuing debt to third party is form of spousal support if related to living expenses); In re Marriage of Smith (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 725, 748, 145 Cal. Rptr. 205] .

If the direct payment order is properly characterized as spousal support, alimony tax treatment is proper [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(b), Q-6, Q-7; see I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(A)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 227, Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution .

[4] Payments to Creditors as Community Obligation

Court-ordered direct payments of past obligations incurred during marriage (community obligations) are to be distinguished from payments that constitute spousal support. If such a direct-payment order results in an unequal division of community property, it is questionable whether the order is appropriate as a form of spousal support because it confuses the discretionary right to spousal support with a spouse's absolute right to an equal division of the community assets [see In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 848, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 (discussed in § 225.15); see also In re Marriage of Fonstein (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 738, 748, 131 Cal. Rptr. 873, 552 P.2d 1169 (parties entitled to equal division of net community estate, subtracting community obligations from community assets)].

In one case, the court of appeal rejected a direct-payment order that resulted in an unequal division of community property and ordered the community obligations to be paid from community cash on hand. The court stated that the trial court should have considered the appropriateness of spousal support separately, according to the appropriate statutory standards [In re Marriage of Chala (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 996, 1003, 155 Cal. Rptr. 605] . However, the court's reasoning suggested that under some circumstances, such an order would be appropriate if the amount ordered to be paid directly to creditors was, in fact, reflective of a reasonable spousal support award [In re Marriage of Chala (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 996, 1001-1003, 155 Cal. Rptr. 605 (analyzing In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 82-86, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165 , in which Supreme Court held that spouse who after separation voluntarily discharges community debts with separate property is entitled to reimbursement from community unless payment is made to discharge duty of support)]. Shortly thereafter, the same court confronted a similar case and held that an unequal distribution of community obligations could not stand as spousal support because the spouse ordered to make the payments was already ordered to pay a reasonable amount of spousal support [In re Marriage of Marx (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 552, 557-558, 159 Cal. Rptr. 215] . Again, the court suggested that the direct-payment order might be valid if it were in lieu of, rather than in addition to, reasonable support [In re Marriage of Marx (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 552, 558, 159 Cal. Rptr. 215] . However, the court also noted another problem with casting an unequal division of community obligations as spousal support. In the absence of an agreement, a spousal support obligation terminates on the death of either party or on remarriage of the supported spouse [Fam. Code § 4337; see § 225.200 et seq.]. An order to directly pay community obligations would not reasonably be expected to terminate on the happening of these events [In re Marriage of Marx (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 552, 558-559, 159 Cal. Rptr. 215] . This difficulty demonstrates the problem of attempting to resolve community estate issues through spousal support awards and suggests that such an award is not appropriate.

If direct payment of community debts cannot be characterized as spousal support, the payor spouse is entitled to Epstein credits to equalize the division of the community estate [In re Marriage of Garcia (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 885, 895, 274 Cal. Rptr. 194 ; see In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413, 592 P.2d 1165] . Whether a given payment is, in reality, in discharge of an obligation of support or simply the discharge of a community obligation is determined on the basis of the nonpaying spouse's need for support, and whether the payment was in lieu of support, or in addition to reasonable support already being provided [In re Marriage of Garcia (1990) 224 Cal.

App. 3d 885, 893, 274 Cal. Rptr. 194] . For full discussion of property and debt division issues, including Epstein credits, see Ch. 222, Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation .

[5] State Statutes

Court as having power to order payment directly to creditor, on determination that payment would benefit either party. Fam. Code § 2023(a)

Creditor as having no right to enforcement against spouse ordered to make payment. Fam. Code § 2023(b)

[6] Federal Statutes

Alimony tax treatment as proper when direct payment to creditor is in lieu of spousal support. Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(b), Q-6, Q-7

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.383

§ 225.383 Provisions for Support After Death of Supporting Party [Fam. Code § 4360]--Purchase of Annuity

[1] FORM Provisions for Support After Death of Supporting Party [Fam. Code § 4360]--Purchase of Annuity

THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS:

As additional spousal support, _____ [petitioner or respondent] shall purchase at his/her sole cost, within _____ days of the date of this judgment, an annuity contract for the benefit of _____ [respondent or petitioner]. The annuity shall provide for payments to _____ [respondent or petitioner] in a minimum amount of $_____ per month, beginning _____ [date]. [Specify any condition terminating obligation, e.g., This obligation shall be terminated should _____ [respondent or petitioner] die or remarry during _____ [petitioner or respondent]'s lifetime.]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.384

§ 225.384 Provisions for Support After Death of Supporting Party [Fam. Code § 4360]--Maintenance of Life Insurance

[1] FORM Provisions for Support After Death of Supporting Party [Fam. Code § 4360]--Maintenance of Life Insurance

THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS:

As additional spousal support, _____ [petitioner or respondent] shall purchase at his/her sole cost, within _____ days of the date of this judgment, a term life insurance policy on his/her life, naming _____ [respondent or petitioner] as sole primary beneficiary, and providing for a death benefit of not less than $_____. _____ [Petitioner or Respondent] shall maintain this insurance in effect for a minimum term of _____ [minimum term, e.g., 15 years] from the date of purchase. [Specify any condition terminating obligation, e.g., This obligation shall be terminated should _____ [respondent or petitioner] die or remarry during _____ [petitioner or respondent]'s lifetime.]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.385

§ 225.385 Provisions for Support After Death of Supporting Party [Fam. Code § 4360]--Establishment of Trust

[1] FORM Provisions for Support After Death of Supporting Party [Fam. Code § 4360]--Establishment of Trust

THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS:

As additional spousal support, _____ [petitioner or respondent] shall establish an inter vivos trust within _____ days of the date of this judgment, naming _____ [respondent or petitioner] as sole primary beneficiary and _____ [(name) or an institutional fiduciary] as trustee. This trust shall be initially funded with property worth not less than $_____. The trust instrument shall provide for distributions of principal and interest to _____ [respondent or petitioner] for his/her support to commence on the death of _____ [petitioner or respondent], or earlier. [Specify any condition terminating obligation, e.g., This obligation shall be terminated should _____ [respondent or petitioner] die or remarry during _____ [petitioner's or respondent's] lifetime.]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.386

§ 225.386 Supporting Party Required to Cooperate in Purchase of Life Insurance by Other Party [Fam. Code § 2010]

[1] FORM Supporting Party Required to Cooperate in Purchase of Life Insurance by Other Party [Fam. Code § 2010]

_____ [Supported party, e.g., Petitioner] may purchase and maintain a life insurance policy on _____ [supporting party's, e.g., respondent's] life, at _____ [supported party's, e.g., petitioner's] own expense, [with a face value of $_____]. _____ [Supporting party, e.g., Respondent] shall cooperate with _____ [supported party's, e.g., petitioner's] acquisition of life insurance on his/her life by taking all reasonable steps to facilitate such acquisition, including, but not limited to, promptly completing an insurance application and submitting to a medical examination.

[2] Use of Forms

§§ 225.383-225.386, are examples of spousal support orders intended to continue support after the death of the supporting spouse [see Fam. Code § 4360; In re Marriage of O'Connell (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 565, 572, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334 ; cf. Fam. Code § 4337 (support generally terminates on death of supporting spouse)]. In structuring spousal support, the court may order the supporting spouse to purchase an annuity (see § 225.383), maintain life insurance (see § 225.384), or establish a trust (see § 225.385) for the benefit of the supported spouse so that the supported spouse will not be left without means for support if spousal support is otherwise terminated by the death of the supporting spouse [Fam. Code § 4360(a)]. Except as otherwise agreed to by the parties in writing, the order may be modified or terminated at the discretion of the court at any time before the death of the supporting spouse [Fam. Code § 4360(b)].

The court may also order the supporting spouse to cooperate in the supported spouse's purchase of insurance on the supporting spouse's life, by requiring the supporting spouse to apply for life insurance naming the supported spouse as beneficiary--that the supported spouse will pay for (see § 225.386). This is not, however, treated as an order under Fam. Code § 4360, but an order under the court's general power to make orders on specific family law matters, including support and injunctive relief [In re Marriage of Stimel (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 991, 994-996, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18

(wife's motion for order directing her former husband to apply for life insurance naming her as beneficiary and stipulating she would pay all insurance premiums was not motion to modify spousal support); see Fam. Code § 2010].

[3] Nature of Order

An order requiring the supporting spouse to purchase an annuity, maintain life insurance, or establish a trust does not effect a property division, but rather is merely a form of awarding spousal support [In re Marriage of Ziegler (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 788, 791, 255 Cal. Rptr. 100] . Nor does an order for security for support to be paid during the obligor's lifetime effect a division of property [In re Marriage of O'Connell (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 565, 572, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334] .

However, with regard to the extent of the supporting party's obligation, there is some disparity of viewpoint as to the nature of an order under Fam. Code § 4360. It has been said that such a provision does not extend the obligor's support obligation beyond his or her death. Death still ends the obligor's support obligation, but creates a new obligation in the insurer, annuity provider, or trust to the supported spouse [see In re Marriage of O'Connell (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 565, 572, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334] . On the other hand, an unexecuted provision has been found to be an agreement of the parties to extend support beyond the death of the payor, so that the provision was enforceable against the estate of the supporting spouse [see Lucas v. Elliott (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 888, 893-894, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 746] .

The propriety of such an order is placed before the court if support is properly placed at issue by the pleadings. It is not necessary to specifically request an order under Fam. Code § 4360 [see In re Marriage of O'Connell (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 565, 573-576, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334 (court could consider propriety of life insurance order on obligor's motion to decrease support due to disability)].

[4] Cobeneficiaries on Insurance Policy

With regard to life insurance, one court has stated that the court may require an insured spouse to designate his or her support obligees as cobeneficiaries of an existing policy, without notice to the current beneficiary, even if the current beneficiary is a subsequent spouse and the premiums are being paid with community property from the second marriage [In re Marriage of O'Connell (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 565, 576-581, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334 (language is dicta to extent that it addresses community property interests, because appellate court noted that absence of factual finding regarding source of payment of premiums)]. In the view of this court, a change in life insurance beneficiaries to fulfill an existing support obligation is not a gift of community property that may be set aside by the second spouse, because the community property of the subsequent marriage is liable for an obligor's support obligations from a prior relationship [In re Marriage of O'Connell (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 565, 580, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334 ; see § 225.113[3]]. Apparently, the court was of the view that the redesignation would not defeat the subsequent spouse's community property interest in the proceeds of insurance, although that point was not at issue in the case and the court's treatment of it is unclear [see In re Marriage of O'Connell (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 565, 577-578, 581 n.13, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334] .

[5] State Statutes

Absent agreement of parties, support as terminating on death of either party or remarriage of supported party. Fam. Code § 4337

Purchase of annuity, maintenance of life insurance, or establishment of trust for spousal support. Fam. Code § 4360(a)

Court as having power to modify or terminate order for annuity, life insurance, or trust for support, except as otherwise agreed by parties. Fam. Code § 4360(b)

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.387

§ 225.387 Percentage of Potential Future Income [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4330]

[1] FORM Percentage of Potential Future Income [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4330]

THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS:

As additional spousal support, _____ [petitioner or respondent] shall pay to _____ [respondent or petitioner] _____ [percentage of income to be paid, e.g., 20] percent of the amount of all supplemental income received on account of his/her employment with _____ [name of supporting party's employer]. No later than _____ [date when supporting spouse must provide annual accounting, e.g., February 15] of each year, beginning in _____ [year], _____ [petitioner or respondent] shall provide _____ [respondent or petitioner] with a written accounting of all supplemental income received during the previous calendar year and shall attach a copy of his/her prior year W-2 form received from _____ [name of supporting party's employer]. Payment of _____ [percentage of income to be paid, e.g., 20] percent of total supplemental income shall accompany the accounting; however, _____ [petitioner or respondent], at his/her option, may pay _____ [percentage of income to be paid, e.g., 20] percent of supplemental income to _____ [respondent or petitioner] when received. For purposes of this order, supplemental income means all monetary compensation received by _____ [petitioner or respondent] from _____ [name of supporting party's employer], regardless of how designated, except for his/her base annual salary. This order shall remain in effect as long as _____ [petitioner or respondent] is employed by _____ [name of supporting party's employer], or until further order of this court.

[2] Use of Form

This form provides for additional spousal support, computed as a percentage of contingent income. A spousal support order may be fashioned to provide for payment of a percentage of future income, the receipt of which or the amount of which is uncertain at the time when the order is made. For example, if a supporting spouse customarily receives periodic and substantial employment bonuses, a percentage of the bonuses, if and when received, may be awarded as spousal support [In re Marriage of Smith & Ostler (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 33, 41-42, 46-50, 272 Cal. Rptr. 560] .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.388

§ 225.388 Reservation of Jurisdiction Only [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4336]

[1] FORM Reservation of Jurisdiction Only [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4336]

THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS:

This court retains jurisdiction over the issue of spousal support for each party until the party's death, remarriage, or further order of this court.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a provision that retains jurisdiction to award spousal support in the future even though no award is currently being made. The lack of any support award indicates that the court has determined, or the parties have agreed, that neither is currently entitled to support under the standards of Fam. Code § 4320.

The rule has been that if no spousal support is ordered, jurisdiction is lost unless retained expressly in the order or by agreement [see Cochran v. Cochran (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 339, 344, 91 Cal. Rptr. 630] . However, it appears that in a marriage of long duration under Fam. Code § 4336, jurisdiction is retained indefinitely without the need for any express language in the judgment. But because of some uncertainty over the construction of this statute, it is recommended that express language reserving jurisdiction be included regardless of the length of the marriage, if the determination of the court or the agreement of the parties is that jurisdiction should be reserved. For further discussion, see § 225.141.

[3] Token Award

Traditionally, a token award, such as $1.00 per year, was awarded for the purpose of reserving jurisdiction if the court felt that one party might be in need of support at a later date [see In re Marriage of Forcum (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 599, 605, 193 Cal. Rptr. 596 ; In re Marriage of Boseman (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 372, 378, 107 Cal. Rptr. 232] . However, jurisdiction may be retained by a simple recitation in the order without making a token award [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Liss (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 1428, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 397 ; In re Marriage of Wells (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1436, 254 Cal. Rptr. 185] . Such a recitation has the advantage of clarifying that jurisdiction is being retained to award support to either party in the future, not just to the party to whom the dollar is awarded.

[4] Duration of Marriage

It has been held to be an abuse of discretion to retain jurisdiction to award spousal support to a spouse in a short-term marriage who is in good health and permanently employed at a self-supporting income level [see In re Marriage of Hebbring (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1266-1267, 255 Cal. Rptr. 488] . If both spouses meet this definition, it is unresolved whether it would also be an abuse of discretion for the court to retain jurisdiction to award support in the future to either party, should unforeseen circumstances, such as disability or unemployment, create a need for support. In light of Fam. Code § 4336, it is undoubtedly not an abuse of discretion to retain jurisdiction indefinitely in a long-term marriage, even if neither party is currently in need of support. In fact, retention of jurisdiction appears to be required by the statute unless the parties agree that it should not be retained [see § 225.144[2]].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.389

§ 225.389 No Support; Jurisdiction Terminated [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4336]

[1] FORM No Support; Jurisdiction Terminated [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4336]

THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS:

Each party waives and releases all rights to receive spousal support from the other for all time. This court does not retain jurisdiction to order spousal support in the future to either party, regardless of any circumstances that may arise.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a provision designed to dispense with spousal support permanently. It neither awards support nor retains jurisdiction to consider the matter in the future. In a marriage of long duration, this provision probably may only be ordered on the agreement of the parties. Fam. Code § 4336 appears to require indefinite retention of jurisdiction in a long-term marriage except on written agreement of the parties to the contrary [see Fam. Code § 4336(a)]. For further discussion, see § 225.144[2].

[3] State Statutes

Factors considered in ordering spousal support. Fam. Code § 4320

Court as having power to order spousal support in proceeding for dissolution or legal separation. Fam. Code § 4330

Court as required to retain jurisdiction over spousal support indefinitely in marriage of long duration. Fam. Code § 4336

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.390

§ 225.390 Spousal, Partner, or Family Support Order Attachment to Findings and Order After Hearing, or Judgment [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4332]-- Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-343]

[1] FORM Spousal, Partner, or Family Support Order Attachment to Findings and Order After Hearing, or Judgment [Fam. Code §§ 4320, 4332]-- Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-343]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form is the Judicial Council form of Spousal, Partner, or Family Support Order Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-343], for use as an attachment to either the Judicial Council form of Judgment or the form of Findings and Order After Hearing [see Cal. Judicial Council Forms FL-180, FL-340]. The legend in the lower left corner of the form indicates "approved for optional use," but in the official forms list, an asterisk next to the form indicates it has been adopted for mandatory use. For an example of the latter forms, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure . This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Contents of Form

When this form is used, particular care and attention to detail are required. Paragraph 1 requires that a "printout of a computer calculation of the parties' financial circumstances [be] attached for all required items not filled out ..." in the form. However, it appears that the printout referred to at the beginning of the form is only appropriate if the order is for family support. It is not appropriate if the order is for spousal support only.

In addition, because income is only one of several factors that must be considered in making a spousal support order, it will be necessary to set forth additional findings [see Fam. Code § 4320; In re Marriage of Fenton (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 451, 457-458, 184 Cal. Rptr. 597] . At a minimum, Fam. Code § 4332, requires a finding on the standard of living during marriage.

It appears that Paragraph 3, "Other factors regarding permanent spousal or partner support," is intended for use in setting forth other findings of this nature. Checkoff boxes are provided to indicate the length of marriage or the duration of the registered domestic partnership, to recite that Fam. Code § 4320 factors were considered (and contemplates an attachment listing them), and to describe the marital standard of living. An additional box for "other" factors is also provided. Because of the space limitations of the form, one or more attachments may be needed to fully describe this information. An attachment, such as the Judicial Council Additional Page Form, may be used for that purpose. If the parties have reached an agreement on support, it may also be appropriate to make reference to that agreement by marking the "other" box, indicating there is an attachment, and then appending the provisions of the support agreement in the attachment. If a statement of decision has been requested that sets forth the desired findings, it appears that this may also be attached by marking the "other" box and making reference to the statement as being attached [see Fam. Code § 2338(a)]. Findings are discussed in detail, and sample findings are set forth, in § 225.373.

The Orders part of the form (Paragraphs 4-10) also requires careful attorney attention. Paragraph 4 contains checkoff boxes by which counsel can indicate to whom support will be paid, whether it is characterized as spousal, partner, or family support, and the actual payment amount and times of payment. The duration of support should also be specified, which, depending on the circumstances, could be indefinite, or until a specific date or, if appropriate, until an event, such as the supported party becoming employed full time. Paragraph 4 also contains the preprinted statement that the support payor's obligation to pay support terminates on the death, remarriage, or registration of a new domestic partnership of the support payee. Paragraph 4 further provides for issuance of a wage assignment for support, but also for the option that service of the wage assignment be stayed if the support payor is not a specified amount of time late in payment of support ordered. Note that if the preprinted payment provisions of Paragraph 4 are not appropriate to the circumstances, the form provides for an "Other" box in Paragraph 10. §§ 225.375-225.389 demonstrate the common variations of modification, duration, and jurisdiction, from which counsel should select the appropriate language to include in Paragraph 10. Optional Paragraphs 5 and 6, respectively, should be marked if the court orders that the parties must notify each other of changes in employment; and if the court requires that notice be given of the statutory goal that each party make good faith efforts to become self-supporting.

If the order is one for family support, the box in Paragraph 7 is to be marked, and both parties must complete and file with the court a Child Support Case Registry Form [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-191] within 10 days after issuance of the order. Parents must notify the court of any change of information in that form within 10 days of the change by filing an updated form. In addition, when a family support order is made, the informational form of Notice of Rights and Responsibilities--Health Care Costs and Reimbursement Procedures and Information Sheet on Changing a Child Support Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-192] must be attached.

Paragraph 8 allows the court to reserve the issue of spousal or partner support for a later determination. Paragraph 9 allows the court to terminate jurisdiction over the issue of spousal or partner support.

[4] State Statutes

Statement of decision in lieu of written findings of fact. Code Civ. Proc. § 632

Provisions of agreement for spousal support as subject to modification or termination by court. Fam. Code § 3591

Court as having authority to modify or terminate spousal support as it deems necessary. Fam. Code § 3651

General duty of spousal support. Fam. Code § 4300

Factors considered in awarding spousal support. Fam. Code § 4320

Court as having authority to order spousal support in proceeding for dissolution or legal separation. Fam. Code § 4330

In ordering support, court as required to make specific findings of fact concerning standard of living during marriage, and also concerning any other circumstances for which findings are requested by parties. Fam. Code § 4332

When support ordered for fixed time period, support as terminating at end of period provided in order, not to be extended unless court retains jurisdiction. Fam. Code § 4335

Court as retaining jurisdiction over spousal support indefinitely in marriage of long duration. Fam. Code § 4336

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.391

§ 225.391 Nonmodifiable Clause [Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(c), 4323]

[1] FORM Nonmodifiable Clause [Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(c), 4323]

THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS:

The amount of spousal support provided in this judgment may not be modified either upward or downward or terminated by any court in the future, regardless of any change of circumstances that might occur. However, _____ [petitioner or respondent]'s obligation to pay spousal support shall terminate on the death of either party or on the remarriage of _____ [respondent or petitioner]. [Further, the effect of _____ (respondent or petitioner)'s cohabitation with a person of the opposite sex may be considered by the court under Family Code Section 4323(a)(1).]

[2] Use of Form

This form is a provision to make the amount of spousal support nonmodifiable. In general, a support order may be modified or terminated at any time as the court determines to be necessary, except as to amounts that accrued before the date of the filing of the moving papers to modify or terminate [Fam. Code §§ 3591(a), (b), 3651(a), (b)]. However, an order for spousal support may not be modified or terminated if a written agreement, or an oral agreement entered into in open court, between the parties specifically provides that the spousal support is not subject to modification or termination [Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(d)]. For further discussion, see § 225.160.

[3] Factors to Consider in Nonmodifiable Support Agreements

Modification of amount should be considered in conjunction with retention of jurisdiction to extend the duration of support if it is ordered for a limited period (see §§ 225.375 -225.378). Commonly, one party will agree to pay a nonmodifiable amount of support in exchange for a definite termination of support after a given period of time (see § 225.378). However, the parties might agree that support should be both for an open-ended period (see § 225.375) and also nonmodifiable, or for a limited period that can be extended (see §§ 225.376, 225.377), but nonmodifiable as to amount during the period stated.

Modification should also be considered in conjunction with whether support should terminate by operation of law or be continued by agreement on the death of either party or on the remarriage of the supported spouse [see Fam. Code § 4337]. One court construed nonmodification provisions in the parties' agreement as overriding the statute and continuing support beyond the remarriage of the supported spouse; there was ample evidence in the case that this was, in fact, the intent of the parties [see In re Marriage of Sherman (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1134-1139, 208 Cal. Rptr. 832 ; but see In re Marriage of Glasser (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 149, 152-153, 226 Cal. Rptr. 229 (opposite result; offer of extrinsic evidence to prove intent not allowed)]. For this reason, it is recommended that a nonmodifiable clause be followed by language reaffirming that support is to terminate by operation of law under Fam. Code § 4337, if that is the intent of the parties. For further discussion, see § 225.161.

The effect of cohabitation and Fam. Code § 4323 should also be considered. It has been held that support may not be reduced on account of the supported spouse's subsequent cohabitation if the agreement provides that it is not modifiable on any ground [see In re Marriage of Sasson (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 140, 147, 180 Cal. Rptr. 815] . If it is the intent of the parties that subsequent cohabitation by the supported spouse should be considered as a potential basis for modification, counsel should include the optional language permitting that consideration.

If support is made nonmodifiable by agreement, it also cannot be terminated in the sense of being modified down to $0 [In re Marriage of Bennett (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 1022, 1025-1026, 193 Cal. Rptr. 113] . Termination in this sense is a different matter from termination of jurisdiction and termination by operation of law, and the drafter must consider the intent of the parties as to all three issues. For further discussion of termination of support, see § 225.200 et seq.

[4] State Statutes

Provisions of agreement for spousal support as subject to modification or termination by court. Fam. Code § 3591

Court as having authority to modify or terminate spousal support as it deems necessary. Fam. Code § 3651

Rebuttable presumption of decreased need for support when supported party cohabiting with person of opposite sex. Fam. Code § 4323(a)

When support ordered for fixed time period, support as terminating at end of period provided in order, not to be extended unless court retains jurisdiction. Fam. Code § 4335

Court as retaining jurisdiction over spousal support indefinitely in marriage of long duration. Fam. Code § 4336

Absent agreement of the parties, spousal support obligation as terminating upon death of either party or remarriage of supported party. Fam. Code § 4337

[5] Cross References

For a related form, see § 225.375.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.392

§ 225.392 Nontermination on Remarriage [Fam. Code § 4337]

[1] FORM Nontermination on Remarriage [Fam. Code § 4337]

THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS:

The spousal support payments provided for in this agreement shall not terminate should _____ [respondent or petitioner] remarry, but instead will continue until the death of either party or further order of the court.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing form is a provision in a support agreement that provides that support will continue even if the supported spouse remarries. Use of this provision will avoid termination that will otherwise occur by operation of law on the remarriage of the supported spouse [see Fam. Code § 4337 (absent agreement, remarriage of supported spouse terminates support)]. It has been held that such express language is required to negate the operation of the statute [see In re Marriage of Glasser (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 149, 152-153, 226 Cal. Rptr. 229] , and although there is authority to the effect that a general nonmodifiable clause (see § 225.391) is sufficient [see In re Marriage of Sherman (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1134-1139, 208 Cal. Rptr. 832] , use of this form will resolve any ambiguity. For further discussion, see § 225.161.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.393

§ 225.393 Nontermination on Death [Fam. Code § 4337]--Death of Supporting Spouse

[1] FORM Nontermination on Death [Fam. Code § 4337]--Death of Supporting Spouse

THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS:

The spousal support payments provided for in this agreement shall not terminate on the death of _____ [respondent or petitioner] (the supporting party), but instead shall constitute a claim against _____ [petitioner or respondent]'s estate until the death or remarriage of _____ [respondent or petitioner] or further order of this court.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.394

§ 225.394 Nontermination on Death [Fam. Code § 4337]--Life Insurance Requirements Enforceable Against Estate

[1] FORM Nontermination on Death [Fam. Code § 4337]--Life Insurance Requirements Enforceable Against Estate

THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS:

The spousal support payments provided for in this agreement shall terminate on _____ [respondent or petitioner]'s remarriage, or on the death or either party, or on further order of this court. However, the requirement that _____ [petitioner or respondent] procure life insurance as set forth in paragraph _____ [paragraph number] of this agreement shall be an enforceable obligation and claim against _____ [petitioner or respondent]'s estate, should he/she predecease _____ [respondent or petitioner].

[2] Use of Forms

The foregoing forms are possible provisions to continue support after the death of the supporting spouse. In the absence of such a provision, support terminates by operation of law on the death of either the payor or the payee [Fam. Code § 4337; see Hilton v. McNitt (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 79, 82-83, 315 P.2d 1] . For further discussion, see § 225.161.

§ 225.393 provides that support will continue after the death of the supporting spouse and is payable from his or her estate. The more common approach to continuing support after the death of the payor is to include an annuity, life insurance, or trust provision under Fam. Code § 4360 (see §§ 225.383 -225.385). § 225.394 is for use in conjunction with such a provision. It clarifies that the obligation of support terminates on the payor's death, but that the annuity, life insurance, or trust provision is enforceable against the payor's estate if the payor does not put the provision into effect during his or her lifetime [see In re Marriage of O'Connell (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 565, 572, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334 ; Lucas v. Elliott (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 888, 893-894, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 746] .

[3] State Statutes

Absent agreement of the parties, spousal support obligation as terminating upon death of either party or remarriage of supported party. Fam. Code § 4337

Provision for support after death of supporting party by annuity, life insurance, or trust. Fam. Code § 4360

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.395

§ 225.395 Subsequent Cohabitation [Fam. Code § 4323]--Cohabitation to Have No Effect

[1] FORM Subsequent Cohabitation [Fam. Code § 4323]--Cohabitation to Have No Effect

THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS:

The spousal support payments provided for in this agreement shall not be subject to modification or termination should _____ [respondent or petitioner] begin cohabiting with a person of the opposite sex. This paragraph constitutes a writing within the meaning of Family Code Section 4323, which section shall not apply to the support obligation created by this agreement.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.396

§ 225.396 Subsequent Cohabitation [Fam. Code § 4323]--Termination on Cohabitation

[1] FORM Subsequent Cohabitation [Fam. Code § 4323]--Termination on Cohabitation

THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS:

The spousal support payments provided for in this agreement and the court's jurisdiction to award spousal support shall terminate forever should _____ [respondent or petitioner] begin cohabiting with a person of the opposite sex. For purposes of this paragraph, cohabitation will occur when _____ [respondent or petitioner] has been living for a period of six months with a man/woman with whom she/he is engaging in sexual relations.

[2] Use of Forms

The foregoing two forms address the effect of the supported spouse's subsequent cohabitation on the support obligation. § 225.395 provides that the support obligation set forth in the agreement will not be affected should the supported spouse begin cohabiting with a person of the opposite sex. Use of this provision will avoid the operation of Fam. Code § 4323(a), which provides for a rebuttable presumption of decreased need for support if the supported party is cohabiting. One court has held that the presumption of Fam. Code § 4323(a) is overcome by a clause in the agreement that support is not modifiable on any ground [see In re Marriage of Sasson (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 140, 147, 180 Cal. Rptr. 815] . However, the safer practice is include a specific provision directed at the statute.

§ 225.396 provides that spousal support will terminate should the supported spouse cohabit with a person of the opposite sex. Such a provision has been judicially recommended [see In re Marriage of Sasson (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 140, 150, 180 Cal. Rptr. 815 (concurring opinion of Hanson, J.)], but requires careful drafting to identify the exact conduct that will lead to termination of support. Otherwise, for example, a supported former wife might lose her support payments by sharing a house with her brother. For further discussion, see § 225.161, and § 225.200 et seq.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.397

§ 225.397 Conditional Nonmodifiability [Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(c)]

[1] FORM Conditional Nonmodifiability [Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(c)]

THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS:

The spousal support payments provided for in this agreement shall not be subject to modification or termination unless _____ [petitioner or respondent] is involuntarily terminated from his/her current employment as _____ [specify supporting party's employment, e.g., Vice President in charge of sales and marketing for Giantco, Inc.]. Should _____ [petitioner or respondent] be involuntarily terminated from his/her employment, the court may consider whether the changed circumstance justifies modification of support, both as to amount and duration, as the court deems proper.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing form is a provision that makes spousal support nonmodifiable unless a particular condition occurs. If a settlement agreement provides that it may only be modified under certain circumstances, the agreement will not be modifiable by the court under any other circumstances [see In re Marriage of Sasson (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 140, 144, 147, 180 Cal. Rptr. 815] .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.398

§ 225.398 Event Does Not Constitute Change of Circumstances [Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(c)]

[1] FORM Event Does Not Constitute Change of Circumstances [Fam. Code §§ 3591(c), 3651(c)]

THE COURT FURTHER ORDERS:

The spousal support payments provided for in this agreement shall be subject to future modification or termination due to changed circumstances. However, the amount of support agreed to by the parties has been established taking into consideration _____ [specify nature of event that is not to be considered a change of circumstances, e.g., respondent's expected receipt of an inheritance of approximately $50,000 from her Great Aunt Margaret. Receipt of this inheritance shall not constitute a change of circumstances justifying future modification or termination of support. However, nonreceipt of this inheritance shall constitute such a change of circumstance.]

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing form is a variation on a nonmodifiable clause. It is a provision that specifies that the occurrence of a particular event will not constitute a changed circumstance allowing for a modification. Such a provision is enforceable and may be used to tie the division-of-property and support provisions of an agreement together [In re Marriage of Rabkin (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1071, 1078-1082, 225 Cal. Rptr. 219 (agreement provided that sale of marital residence could not constitute substantial change of circumstances on which to base motion for change in spousal support)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
B. Awards of Spousal Support

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 225.399-225.409

[Reserved]

§§ 225.399[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
C. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.410

§ 225.410 Modification of Spousal Support [Fam. Code § 3651]--Declaration in Support of Motion to Modify Support [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.118]

[1] FORM Modification of Spousal Support [Fam. Code § 3651]--Declaration in Support of Motion to Modify Support [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.118]

DECLARATION IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO MODIFY SPOUSAL SUPPORT

I, _____ [name], am the _____ [petitioner or respondent] and supporting party in this matter in which _____ [respondent or petitioner], _____ [name] receives spousal support. The current spousal support order was entered [as part of the judgment of dissolution of marriage] on _____ [date of entry of current support order]. Under this order, I am paying petitioner the amount of $_____ [amount] per month in spousal support. I have made all of the payments as required under the order and am not in arrears.

[Set forth facts showing change of circumstances, e.g.,]

At the time when the current order was entered, petitioner was awarded primary physical custody of our children. She was allowed to remain in the family home under a deferred sale-of-home order, and required to make the mortgage, taxes, and insurance payments, until January 13, 1994, when our youngest child Clark was to turn 18 years old. Spousal support was set at an amount sufficient to allow her to maintain the family home under the order.

On July 10, 1994, the family home was sold, and petitioner received from the proceeds of sale the net sum of $76,432. Further, I am informed and believe, and on that basis allege, that petitioner is currently cohabiting with one John Rich in his home, for which she pays little or nothing in housing costs. Further, Clark is currently attending college at the University of California at Pacifica, and I am assisting him with tuition, room, and board. Petitioner is not contributing to his educational expenses.

[CONTINUE]

Due to these changes of circumstances since the current spousal support order was entered[, including petitioner's reduced needs because of cohabitation under Family Code Section 4323], I request that spousal support payments be reduced to $_____ [amount] per month beginning _____ [date reduced payments to begin].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
C. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.411

§ 225.411 Modification of Spousal Support [Fam. Code § 3651]--Findings and Order Modifying Spousal Support [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Fam. Code § 3654]

[1] FORM Modification of Spousal Support [Fam. Code § 3651]--Findings and Order Modifying Spousal Support [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Fam. Code § 3654]

THE COURT FINDS:

1. The current order for spousal support was entered on _____ [date of entry of current support order], and requires _____ [petitioner or respondent] to pay support to _____ [respondent or petitioner] in the amount of $_____ [amount] per month.

[Set forth specific findings regarding change of circumstances, e.g.,]

2. The amount of support ordered in the current order was based, in part, on petitioner's needs under a deferred sale-of-home order.

3. The circumstances of the parties since the current order was entered have changed in the following regards:

a. Petitioner's reasonable need for support has been reduced because the period of deferred sale has expired, the family home has been sold, and petitioner received the sum of $76,432 from the proceeds of sale.

b. Petitioner is cohabiting with a person of the opposite sex, and has not produced evidence to rebut the presumption of Family Code Section 4323 that she has decreased need for support.

c. Respondent's ability to pay is reduced because he is voluntarily assisting his son Clark with the expenses of higher education.

[CONTINUE]

THE COURT ORDERS:

_____ [Petitioner or Respondent] shall pay to _____ [respondent or petitioner] the sum of $_____ [amount] per month as spousal support, beginning _____ [date modified support payments to begin], payable on or before the _____ [day of month when modified support payments to be due, e.g., 5th] day of each month.
Dated:_____.

_____ [signature]
Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Forms

The foregoing two forms are for use in bringing proceedings to modify the amount of spousal support based on changed circumstances. § 225.410 is a sample declaration in support of a motion to modify that sets forth the facts constituting the change of circumstances. § 225.411 includes illustrative findings and the court's order modifying support. The forms assume that the supporting party is seeking a reduction in the amount of support, but they may be modified as appropriate if the moving party is seeking an increase in support based on change of circumstances.

[3] Judicial Council Forms

For discussion of how to present a motion for modification in a family law matter, including examples of the Judicial Council forms for Order to Show Cause [Cal. Judicial Council FL-300], Notice of Motion [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-301], Application for Order and Supporting Declaration [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-310], and Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340], see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure .

For all declarations supporting family law motions, it is recommended that the Judicial Council form for Attached Declaration (MC-031) be used and attached to the Application for Order and Supporting Declaration form. The findings and order must be set forth on the Judicial Council form for Spousal Support Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-343], to the form of Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340]. An example of the Spousal Support Attachment form is included in § 225.390. The findings should be set forth on line 1c or on the Judicial Council form for Additional Page (MC-020) if the provided space is insufficient. The order should be set forth on line 2.

[4] State Statutes

Court as having power to modify parties' agreement for support. Fam. Code § 3591

Definition of "support order" with respect to statutes governing modification. Fam. Code § 3650

Court as having authority to modify support as it deems necessary. Fam. Code § 3651

Order for modification or termination of support as retroactive to date of filing of notice of motion. Fam. Code § 3653

Order modifying or terminating support as required to include statement of decision, at request of either party. Fam. Code § 3654

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
C. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.412

§ 225.412 Temporary Modification Orders [Fam. Code § 3651]--Modification for Limited Time [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Fam. Code § 3654]

[1] FORM Temporary Modification Orders [Fam. Code § 3651]--Modification for Limited Time [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Fam. Code § 3654]

THE COURT FINDS:

[Set forth findings of court and order for temporary modification, e.g.,]

On July 15, 1994, respondent was injured and is unable to work. He is on temporary disability leave from his employment and is no longer receiving his prior earnings of $1750 per month. He is currently receiving state disability benefits in the amount of $1225 per month. The medical evidence shows that respondent will be able to resume his full time employment on November 1, 1994.

THE COURT ORDERS:

Spousal support payments are reduced from $500 per month to $350 per month for the Months of August, September, and October 1994. Support shall then be reinstated at $500 per month beginning on November 1, 1994 until further order of this court. This order is without prejudice to either party to move for further modification of spousal support because of further changed circumstances, either before or after November 1, 1994.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
C. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.413

§ 225.413 Temporary Modification Orders [Fam. Code § 3651]--Modification for Contingent Time [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Fam. Code § 3654]

[1] FORM Temporary Modification Orders [Fam. Code § 3651]--Modification for Contingent Time [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Fam. Code § 3654]

THE COURT FINDS:

[Set forth findings of court and order for contingent modification, e.g.,]

On July 15, 1994, respondent was laid off from his employment as a digital developer at Giantco, Inc. and is no longer receiving his prior earnings of $2600 per month. Respondent is currently collecting unemployment insurance benefits in the amount of $1800 per month. Respondent is eligible for rehire for his former position at Giantco, but there is currently no evidence that Giantco plans to rehire respondent.

THE COURT ORDERS:

Spousal support payments are reduced from $500 per month to $350 per month beginning August 1, 1994. Support shall be reinstated at $500, without further order of this court, if respondent is reemployed by Giantco, Inc. as a digital developer at a monthly net income of at least $2600. Support shall be restored to $500 per month as of the first month after the month in which respondent is so reemployed. This order is without prejudice to either party to move for further modification of spousal support because of further changed circumstances.

[2] Use of Forms

The foregoing two forms are illustrations of findings and orders modifying support temporarily or conditionally. § 225.412 modifies the amount of support for a limited period of time, after which the amount reverts to the prior level. Such an order may only be made if there is evidence in the record that the supporting party's ability to pay will be restored as of the given time [cf. Philbin v. Philbin (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 115, 121-123, 96 Cal. Rptr. 408 (no evidence that ex-husband's income level would revert to prior level by time when support was to revert to prior level)]. Therefore, such a finding should always be made.

§ 225.413 is an order modifying support until the happening of a given contingent event. Commonly, the event is the reemployment of the supporting spouse. For further discussion of temporary modification of support, see § 225.225.

[3] Judicial Council Forms

These findings and order must be set forth on the Judicial Council form for Spousal Support Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-343], to the form of Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340]. An example of the Spousal Support Attachment form is included in § 225.390. The findings should be set forth on line 1c or on the Judicial Council form for Additional Page (MC-020) if the provided space is insufficient. The order should be set forth on line 4.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
C. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.414

§ 225.414 Order Terminating Support Payments and Retaining Jurisdiction [Fam. Code §§ 3591, 4336]

[1] FORM Order Terminating Support Payments and Retaining Jurisdiction [Fam. Code §§ 3591, 4336]

THE COURT FINDS:

1. The current order for spousal support in this matter requires _____ [petitioner or respondent] to pay to _____ [respondent or petitioner] the sum of $_____ [amount] per month until further order of the court.

[Set forth findings of court supporting termination of payments e.g.,]

2. On June 10, 1994, Petitioner completed a teacher preparation course at the University of California at Pacifica and was issued a standard California elementary teaching credential.

3. On August 31, 1994, Petitioner obtained employment with the Farallones Unified School District as a probationary elementary school teacher, beginning September 1, 1994. Petitioner will earn a beginning annual salary of $30,000 in this position.

4. Petitioner's earnings from this employment will be sufficient to meet her reasonable needs as measured by the marital standard of living.

5. As a probationary teacher, Petitioner will be subject to nonrenewal of her teaching contract, with or without cause, for a period of three years, ending with the 1996-1997 school year.

6. In light of the duration of this marriage of 15 years and the reasonable possibility that Petitioner will not obtain tenure through her employment, continued retention of jurisdiction over spousal support is appropriate so that support may be reinstated if there is a further change of circumstances.

[CONTINUE]

THE COURT ORDERS:

The support payments previously ordered in this matter are terminated after payment of the monthly payment due on _____ [date]. However, jurisdiction over spousal support is retained until _____ [date], and may be extended beyond that date for good cause shown in a proceeding initiated before that date. Should no such proceeding be initiated and good cause be shown, this court's jurisdiction over spousal support shall terminate absolutely and forever on that date.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing form contains illustrative findings and an order for use if the court determines that circumstances have changed such that support is no longer currently warranted, but that jurisdiction should be retained to reinstate it in the future, if necessary. For further discussion, see the § 225.270.

[3] Judicial Council Forms

These findings and order must be set forth on the Judicial Council form for Spousal Support Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-343], to the form of Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340]. An example of the Spousal Support Attachment form is included in § 225.390. The findings should be set forth on line 1c or on the Judicial Council form for Additional Page (MC-020) if the provided space is insufficient. The order should be set forth on line 4.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
C. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.415

§ 225.415 Termination of Jurisdiction Over Spousal Support in Long-Term Marriage [Fam. Code §§ 4335, 4336]--Declaration in Support of Motion to Terminate Jurisdiction [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.118]

[1] FORM Termination of Jurisdiction Over Spousal Support in Long-Term Marriage [Fam. Code §§ 4335, 4336]--Declaration in Support of Motion to Terminate Jurisdiction [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.118]

I, _____ [name], am the _____ [petitioner or respondent] and supporting party in this matter in which _____ [respondent or petitioner], _____ [name], received spousal support. The current spousal support order was entered [as a part of the court's judgment of dissolution of marriage] on _____ [date]. Under this order, I was to pay _____ [respondent or petitioner] the amount of $_____ [amount] per month in spousal support for a period of _____ [period of support, e.g., four years] beginning _____ [date], up to and including _____ [date].

[Specify terms of original order under which support payments were to terminate and allegations that terms have been met, e.g.,]

Under the terms of the support order, payments were to terminate on _____ [date] based on the projection that petitioner would complete her course of study at Pacifica College of Law and obtain employment as an attorney as of that date. I made all of the payments as required under the order and am not in arrears.

Petitioner did, in fact, obtain her Juris Doctor degree in June of 1993. She was hired as an associate attorney in the law firm of Remington and Steele in August of 1993. In November of 1993, she was notified that she passed the California Bar Examination and was admitted as an active member of the California bar.

[CONTINUE]

Our marriage was of long duration within the meaning of Family Code Section 4336 because _____ [it lasted more than 10 years or specify other reasons that marriage of less than 10 years should be considered of long duration]. Under the provisions of Family Code Sections 4335 and 4336, the court retained jurisdiction indefinitely over spousal support, despite the fact that support was ordered only for a limited term.

The term of support has now expired, and petitioner has not sought a continuation of support. She now has earnings from employment sufficient to meet her reasonable needs as measured by the marital standard of living. Therefore, I request that the court's jurisdiction over spousal support be terminated forever at this time.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
C. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.416

§ 225.416 Termination of Jurisdiction Over Spousal Support in Long-Term Marriage [Fam. Code §§ 4335, 4336]--Findings and Order Terminating Jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Fam. Code § 3654]

[1] FORM Termination of Jurisdiction Over Spousal Support in Long-Term Marriage [Fam. Code §§ 4335, 4336]--Findings and Order Terminating Jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; Fam. Code § 3654]

THE COURT FINDS:

1. The current order for spousal support was entered on _____ [date], and requires _____ [petitioner or respondent] to pay support to _____ [respondent or petitioner] in the amount of $_____ [amount] per month for a limited period of _____ [period of support, e.g., four years].

2. The duration of support ordered in the current order was based on the expectation that _____ [specify basis for duration of support, e.g., petitioner would complete her legal education and obtain employment as an attorney within the four-year period].

[CONTINUE]

3. The period of support has now ended and the expectations of the current order have all been fulfilled. Petitioner now has both sufficient earnings from employment and sufficient earning capacity to allow her to support herself at the marital standard of living without further spousal support from respondent.

THE COURT ORDERS:

This court's jurisdiction over spousal support in this matter is terminated absolutely and forever as of the date set forth below.

Dated:_____.

_____ [signature]
Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Forms

The foregoing two forms are for use in bringing proceedings to terminate the court's jurisdiction over spousal support after a limited period of support has ended. Such a motion is required to terminate jurisdiction over support in a long-term marriage after support payments have terminated at the end of a limited period [see Fam. Code §§ 4335, 4336]. For further discussion, see § 225.271.

§ 225.415 is a sample declaration in support of a motion to terminate jurisdiction. § 225.416 includes illustrative findings and the court's order terminating jurisdiction.

[3] Judicial Council Forms

For discussion of how to present a motion for modification or termination of support in a family law matter, including examples of the Judicial Council forms for Order to Show Cause [Cal. Judicial Council FL-300], Notice of Motion [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-301], Application for Order and Supporting Declaration [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-310], and Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340], see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure .

For all declarations supporting family law motions, it is recommended that the Judicial Council form for Attached Declaration (MC-031) be used and attached to the Application for Order and Supporting Declaration form.

The findings and order must be set forth on the Judicial Council form for Spousal Support Attachment [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-343], to the form of Findings and Order After Hearing [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-340]. An example of the Spousal Support Attachment form is included in § 225.390. The findings should be set forth on line 1c or on the Judicial Council form for Additional Page (MC-020) if the provided space is insufficient. The order should be set forth on line 2.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 225 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: SPOUSAL SUPPORT
PART IV. FORMS
C. Modification Or Termination Of Spousal Support Orders

19-225 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 225.417

§ 225.417 Notice of Activation of Military Service and Deployment and Request to Modify a Support Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-398; Fam. Code § 3651]

[1] FORM Notice of Activation of Military Service and Deployment and Request to Modify a Support Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-398; Fam. Code § 3651]

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

The form, above, is the mandatory Judicial Council form for notice of activation of military service and request to modify a spousal support order under Fam. Code § 3651(c)(2) [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-398; see § 225.229]. It may be used by a party to a support order who is activated to United States military duty or National Guard service and deployed out of state, in place of a notice of motion or order to show cause, to inform the court and the other party of a request to modify the support order based on a change in circumstances [Fam. Code § 3651(c)(2)]. The service member must indicate the date of deployment; and, if possible, the court must schedule the hearing before that date [Fam. Code § 3651(c)(2)]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Cross References

Notice of activation of military service and request to modify support order. Fam. Code § 3651(c)(2)-(4)

Retroactivity of order modifying or terminating support. Fam. Code § 3653(c)

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 226.syn

§ 226.syn Synopsis to Chapter 226: DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES

§ 226.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 226.02 Cross References

§§ 226.03-226.09 [Reserved]

§ 226.10 Jurisdiction of Court to Award Fees

[1] Preliminary Determinations

[2] Award to Prevailing or Nonprevailing Party

[3] Child Custody and Visitation Proceedings

[4] Award Against Parties Other Than Spouses

[5] Award Against Pension or Retirement Plan

[6] Pendente Lite Awards

[7] Award in Writ Proceedings

[8] Award in Judgment

[9] Award on Appeal

[10] Award in Proceedings Subsequent to Judgment

[a] In General

[b] Modification or Termination of Child Support

[c] Enforcement of Support

[11] Fees Incurred in Other Proceedings

§ 226.11 Application for Award

[1] Who May Apply

[2] Waiver by Agreement

[3] Manner of Applying

[a] Before Judgment

[b] On Appeal

[c] Modification Proceeding

[d] Contempt Proceeding

§ 226.12 Standards for Award of Attorney's Fees and Costs

[1] Respective Income and Needs of Parties

[2] Need in Case of Legal Aid or Pro Bono Representation

[3] Ability to Pay

[4] Noncooperation in Promoting Settlement

[5] Frivolous Actions or Delaying Tactics

[a] In General

[b] Frivolous Appeal

[c] False Accusations of Child Abuse or Neglect

§ 226.13 Amount of Award

[1] Discretion of Court

[2] Factors Considered

[3] Showing Required

[a] Value of Services

[b] Necessity

[c] Disclosure of Fee Agreement

[4] Costs Allowed

§ 226.14 Order for Payment Directly to Attorney

§ 226.15 Effect of Award on Community Property Division

§ 226.16 Appealability of Order

§ 226.17 Stay of Proceeding on Failure to Pay

§ 226.18 Case Management Plan for Complex Cases

§§ 226.19-226.29 [Reserved]

§ 226.30 California Family Law Practice and Procedure

§ 226.31 California Family Law Trial Guide

§ 226.32 California Legal Forms

§ 226.33 California Points and Authorities

§ 226.34 State Statutes

[1] Attorney's Fees and Costs

[2] Sanctions

§ 226.35 California Rules of Court

§ 226.36 Decisions

[1] Award as Improper

[2] Award as Proper

[3] Bankruptcy

[4] Discretion of Court

[5] Factors to Be Considered

[6] Jurisdiction

[7] Sanctions

§ 226.37 Law Reviews

§§ 226.38-226.49 [Reserved]

§ 226.50 Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5] in Support of Motion to Establish Case Management Plan [Fam. Code § 2032(d)]

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Completing Declaration and Accompanying Papers

[4] Cross References

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART I. SCOPE

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.01

§ 226.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses court-ordered awards of attorney's fees in family law proceedings. It covers the court's jurisdiction to award fees, the types of proceedings in which fees may be awarded, the standards applied in awarding fees, the amount of the award, the method of payment, the effect of the award on the division of community property, and case management plans to allocate fees in complex cases. The chapter also contains a form of declaration in support of a motion to establish a case management plan [see § 226.50].

For general discussion of fee agreements and arbitration of fee disputes, see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics . For discussion and forms relating to the recovery of fees from other parties and security for costs and fees, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees . For discussion of awards of attorney's fees and costs in proceedings to nullify marriages, see Ch. 25, Annulments (Nullity) of Marriage and Related Spousal Rights . For discussion and forms relating to the imposition of monetary and nonmonetary sanctions in trial courts, see Ch. 510, Sanctions .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART I. SCOPE

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.02

§ 226.02 Cross References

See generally Ch. 25, Annulment (Nullity) of Marriage ; Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview , through Ch. 54, Appeal: California Supreme Court Review ; Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics ; Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees ; Ch. 372, Motions and Orders ; Ch. 510, Sanctions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART I. SCOPE

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 226.03-226.09

[Reserved]

§§ 226.03[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.10

§ 226.10 Jurisdiction of Court to Award Fees

[1] Preliminary Determinations

In a proceeding for dissolution or nullity of marriage or legal separation, and in any proceeding subsequent to entry of a related judgment, the court must ensure that each party has access to legal representation to preserve each party's rights by ordering, if necessary based on the income and needs assessments, one party, except a governmental entity, to pay to the other party, or to the other party's attorney, whatever amount is reasonably necessary for attorney's fees and for the cost of maintaining or defending the proceeding during the pendency of the proceeding [Fam. Code § 2030(a)(1); see also Fam. Code § 270]. Whether the court will order one party to pay attorney's fees and costs for another party, and what amount to pay, is determined based on the respective incomes and needs of the parties, and any factors affecting the parties' respective abilities to pay [Fam. Code § 2030(a)(2)]. A party who lacks the financial ability to hire an attorney may request, as an in pro per litigant, that the court order the other party, if that other party has the financial ability, to pay a reasonable amount to allow the unrepresented party to retain an attorney in a timely manner before proceedings in the matter go forward [Fam. Code § 2030(a)(2)].

The purpose of an award of attorney's fees is to ensure that a party has adequate resources to properly litigate the family law controversy, and to further the public policy favoring parity between spouses in their ability to obtain legal representation [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Sullivan (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 762, 768, 209 Cal. Rptr. 354, 691 P.2d 1020] .

Because an award of attorney's fees and costs is a personal judgment against a party, personal jurisdiction over the party appears to be necessary to make such an award, just as personal jurisdiction is necessary tomake an award of support [see Baldwin v. Baldwin (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 406, 415-416, 170 P.2d 670] . No personal obligation to pay, however, is required for the court to make an attorney's fee award [In re Marriage of Ward (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 618, 627, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 365] .

It has also been held that litigants in family law cases are not precluded from an award of attorney's fees made under the private attorney general doctrine of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. However, it must be shown that the family law litigation (1) served to vindicate an important public right; (2) resulted in significant benefit to the general public or large class of persons; and (3) imposed a financial burden on the plaintiff that was out of proportion to his or her individual stake in the matter [see Punsly v. Ho (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 102, n.4, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89 (citing County of San Diego v. Lamb (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 845, 852-853)] .

In addition, a party who applies for an award of attorney's fees for work done by an attorney who only assisted in preparing legal documents and did not make an appearance in the case must disclose to the court information required for a proper determination of attorney fees, including the name of the attorney who assisted in the document preparation, the time involved or other basis for billing, the tasks performed, and the amount billed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.170(b)].

[2] Award to Prevailing or Nonprevailing Party

Attorney's fees need not be awarded only to a "prevailing" party. In fact, they may be awarded against a prevailing party if the applicable standard is established [see In re Marriage of Hublou (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 956, 966, 282 Cal. Rptr. 695 ; see also § 226.10[4]].

[3] Child Custody and Visitation Proceedings

In addition to its general authority to award attorney's fees and costs in family law proceedings [see Fam. Code § 2030 et seq.], including proceedings that involve child custody and visitation, other specific statutes allow attorney's fees when child custody is involved. For example, the court may award fees to private counsel appointed to represent the interests of a minor child in a proceeding involving custody or visitation if the court finds it would be in the best interests of the child to do so [Fam. Code §§ 3150(a), 3153(a)]. If the court determines that both parties together are financially unable to pay all or a portion of the cost of counsel, the portion that the parties are unable to pay must be paid by the county [Fam. Code § 3153(b)].

Under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act (Fam. Code § 3400 et seq.), a person who violates a custody decree of another state and makes it necessary to enforce the decree in this state may be required to pay necessary travel and other expenses, including attorney's fees, incurred by the party entitled to custody or his or her witnesses [see Fam. Code §§ 3450(b), 3452].

[4] Award Against Parties Other Than Spouses

Under the Family Code, any party, including a third party who has been joined to the proceeding and is not a governmental entity, may be ordered to pay attorney's fees in a proceeding for dissolution, legal separation, or nullity [see Fam. Code § 2030(a); for special rules concerning pension plans, see also § 226.10[5]]. An award against a nonspouse third party, however, is limited to an amount reasonably necessary to maintain or defend the action on the issues related to that third party [Fam. Code § 2030(d)]. Nevertheless, a judge is not required to apportion attorney's fees among spouse and nonspouse parties when an issue relates to both. The court has discretion to order a nonspouse third party to pay all attorney's fees and costs relating to issues that affect both the third party and the spousal parties. The court must consider the respective incomes and needs of all parties, including evidence of their incomes and assets, in exercising its discretion to award attorney's fees [Jovel v. Jovel (In re Jovel) ((1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 575, 586-587, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 740] .

A particular application of this principle is that a nonspouse party may be ordered to pay attorney's fees pendente lite [see Fam. Code § 2030(a)]. It is not necessary that the person to whom the fees are to be paid have "prevailed" on the matters at issue. However, there may be a constitutional limitation requiring that an award of fees and costs against a nonparty be based on some consideration of the merits of the dispute and not simply because the party has money and the spouse does not [In re Marriage of Siller (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 36, 51-52, 231 Cal. Rptr. 757] .

It is not necessary that the party against whom the order is entered have resisted joinder or the jurisdiction of the court. Furthermore, fees awarded under the Family Code from a nonspouse party may be based on services rendered or costs incurred prior to the joinder of the party if required by the acts of that party [In re Marriage of Siller (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 36, 45-46, 53, 231 Cal. Rptr. 757] .

A nonspouse third party also may be ordered to pay all or a portion of the attorney's fees and costs on appeal of an issue related to that party [Jovel v. Jovel (In re Jovel) (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 575, 586-587, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 740] .

[5] Award Against Pension or Retirement Plan

The Family Code's grant of authority to award attorney's fees against third parties who are not governmental entities [§ 226.10[10][a]] has been construed to include a private pension or retirement plan that has been properly joined to the proceeding [In re Marriage of Olivarez (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 336, 342-344, 232 Cal. Rptr. 794 ; see Fam. Code § 2030(a),(d)]. However, the probability of preemption of California law on this issue by ERISA (29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.)--with respect to plans subject to ERISA--has cast doubt on the continuing validity of the California authority in making awards against such plans. As discussed hereafter, it now appears that litigants who join ERISA plans must resort to the fee provisions set forth in ERISA, rather than attempting to rely on California law [see AT & T Management Pension Plan v. Tucker (C.D. Cal. 1995) 902 F. Supp. 1168, 1175-1178 ; 29 U.S.C. § 1144]. Non-ERISA plans that are not governmental entities are still apparently subject to the Family Code's attorney's fee provisions, however [see generally Fam. Code § 2030].

ERISA itself also provides for an award of attorney's fees and costs in actions under it by a participant, beneficiary, or fiduciary [see 29 U.S.C. § 1132(g)(1); see also Hummell v. S.E. Rykoff & Co. (9th Cir. 1980) 634 F.2d 446, 453 (suggested guidelines for use in determining whether to award attorney's fees under ERISA)]. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has suggested several guidelines for use in determining whether to award attorney's fees under ERISA: (1) the degree of the opposing parties' culpability or bad faith; (2) the ability of the opposing parties to satisfy an award of fees; (3) whether an award of fees against the opposing parties would deter others from acting under similar circumstances; (4) whether the parties requesting fees sought to benefit all participants and beneficiaries of an ERISA plan or to resolve a significant legal question regarding ERISA; and (5) the relative merits of the parties' positions [Hummell v. S.E. Rykoff & Co. (9th Cir. 1980) 634 F.2d 446, 453] .

Note, however, that attorney's fees under the provisions of ERISA [see 29 U.S.C. § 1132(g)] will not be awarded for work performed prior to preparation and filing of an action [Cann v. Carpenters' Pension Trust Fund (9th Cir. 1993) 989 F.2d 313, 316-317] . Therefore, early joinder of the plan may be advisable.

Despite the existence of authority for attorney's fees awards under ERISA, California courts have held that the preemption provision of ERISA does not prohibit an award of attorney's fees under California law [In re Marriage of Olivarez (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 336, 342-344, 232 Cal. Rptr. 794 ; see In re Marriage of Baker (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 206, 220, 251 Cal. Rptr. 126] . According to these cases, a court in a California family law proceeding may award attorney's fees against a properly joined pension plan pursuant to the otherwise applicable standards of federal law and need not conform to the federal guidelines [In re Marriage of Olivarez (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 336, 342-344, 232 Cal. Rptr. 794] .

However, a 1995 federal district court ruling has now cast doubt on the continued validity of the earlier California cases with respect to ERISA-governed plans. In AT & T Management Pension Plan v. Tucker, the federal district court granted summary judgment to plaintiff pension plan, holding that ERISA, as amended by the 1984 Retirement Equity Act, preempts a state court's order for attorney's fees (made pursuant to state statute) against an ERISA-governed pension plan. It also found that the California court order granting fees did not constitute a QDRO, on the ground that it would sanction a prohibited "assignment or alienation" of moneys held by the plan, and that the fee order impermissibly required the plan administrator to violate fiduciary duties imposed by ERISA. It granted injunctive relief to prevent the defendant former wife from seeking to enforce her California fee order [see AT & T Management Pension Plan v. Tucker (C.D. Cal. 1995) 902 F. Supp. 1168, 1175-1178 (California trial court had granted fees under Fam. Code §§ 271, 2030, and not under federal statute)]. In view of this case, and pending any further judicial or legislative clarification of the preemption issue, it is suggested that counsel seek fees under ERISA instead of, or in addition to, the California statutes.

[6] Pendente Lite Awards

The court may make an award of attorney's fees and costs at any time during the pendency of a family law proceeding [Fam. Code § 2030(a); see, e.g., In re Marriage of Higgason (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 476, 488, 110 Cal. Rptr. 897, 516 P.2d 289 ; In re Marriage of Dick (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 144, 159, 166-168, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 743] . From time to time before entry of judgment, the court may augment or modify the original award as necessary for the prosecution or defense of the proceeding or any proceeding relating to it, including after any appeal has been concluded [Fam. Code § 2030(c); In re Marriage of Hatch (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 1213, 1218-1219, 215 Cal. Rptr. 789] . Attorney's fees and costs may be awarded for legal services rendered and costs incurred before or after the commencement of the proceeding [Fam. Code § 2030(b)].

A renewed request for attorney's fees under Fam. Code § 2030 need not comply with the requirements of Code Civ Proc. § 1008 as a motion for reconsideration of an order denying fees [In re Marriage of Hobdy (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 360, 364-372, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 104 (application of statutory construction rules favoring specific legislation over the more general, disfavoring implied repeal, harmonizing statutes on similar subjects, and making paramount legislative intent, compelled conclusion that trial court properly utilized Fam. Code § 2030, not Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 in making attorney's fees award)].

For further discussion of procedures regarding applications for pendente lite attorney's fee awards, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.10 et seq..

[7] Award in Writ Proceedings

Counsel fees and costs may also be awarded in writ proceedings arising out of the family law proceeding [see, e.g., Lerner v. Superior Court (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 676, 686, 242 P.2d 321 ; see also Neal v. Superior Court (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 22, 26-27, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 262 (mandate proceeding arising from civil action was duplicative of family law proceeding)]. A habeas corpus proceeding involving the custody of minor children is a proceeding involving the custody of minors for purposes of the family law statutes and, hence, counsel fees and costs may be awarded under those statutes. Although the appellate court, in an original writ proceeding before it, has jurisdiction to make the award of attorney's fees, it may nevertheless direct the trial court, which is in a better position to consider questions of fact, to do so [Perry v. Superior Court (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 236, 242, 244, 86 Cal. Rptr. 607] .

[8] Award in Judgment

The court has jurisdiction to make an award of attorney's fees and costs in the judgment [see Fam. Code § 2030(a)]. In fact, the court has a duty at the end of the case to make an appropriate attorney's fees award [In re Marriage of Green (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 584, 593, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 872] . The judgment may include an order that the party against whom pendente lite attorney's fees and costs were awarded pay any balance due under that order, as well as additional attorney's fees and costs if an additional award is justified [see Chernow v. Chernow (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 816, 817-819, 276 P.2d 622] . The judgment is res judicata on the need for attorney's fees and costs for services rendered prior to the judgment [In re Marriage of Mulhern (1973) 29 Cal. App. 3d 988, 993, 106 Cal. Rptr. 78] . For an illustrative form of judgment, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.90 et seq.

[9] Award on Appeal

Either party may be awarded attorney's fees and costs on appeal [see Fam. Code § 2030(c); see In re Marriage of Shaban (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 398, 407-411, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 863 (reasons why fee awards for appellate work are necessary)]. The filing of a notice of appeal does not stay the trial court's jurisdiction to grant fees [In re Marriage of Stachon (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 506, 508-509, 143 Cal. Rptr. 599] , and no order or direction from the appellate court is required [In re Marriage of Colvin (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1570, 1582, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 323] . To warrant an award of fees on appeal, the requesting spouse must show a need for the award, the paying spouse must be able to pay, the appeal must be taken in good faith and, although the requesting spouse need not prevail on the appeal, reasonable grounds must exist for it [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Martin (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1196, 1201, 280 Cal. Rptr. 565] .

In case of need, the trial court should award attorney's fees required to pursue or defend an appeal before the appeal is concluded. The public policy favoring parity between spouses in obtaining legal representation is equally applicable to representation on appeal [In re Marriage of Green (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 14, 27, 261 Cal. Rptr. 294] .

[10] Award in Proceedings Subsequent to Judgment

[a] In General

The court may augment or modify the original award for attorney's fees and costs as may be reasonably necessary for the prosecution or defense of the proceeding, or any proceeding related thereto, including after any appeal has been concluded [Fam. Code § 2030(c)]. Attorney's fees and costs may be awarded for legal services rendered or costs incurred before or after the commencement of the proceeding [see Fam. Code § 2030(b); In re Marriage of Mulhern (1973) 29 Cal. App. 3d 988, 994, 106 Cal. Rptr.78] . The order, if not appealed, is res judicata on the issue of attorney's fees and costs [see Allen v. Allen (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 706, 711, 292 P.2d 581] .

There is no limitation on the kind of subsequent family law proceeding in which the award may be made [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Crobarger (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 56, 59-60, 223 Cal. Rptr. 480 (enforcement of judgment)]. An award also is proper in other non-family-law postjudgment contexts [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Kerry (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 456, 465, 204 Cal. Rptr. 660 (motion to set aside judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 473)]. Attorney's fees and costs also may be awarded in a postjudgment proceeding on issues bifurcated at trial for later determination [In re Marriage of Wolfe (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 889, 891, 219 Cal. Rptr. 337] .

[b] Modification or Termination of Child Support

An order modifying, terminating, or setting aside a child support order may include an award of attorney's fees and court costs to the prevailing party [Fam. Code § 3652], although such an award is not available to party who prevails against a governmental agency [see also Fam. Code § 273 (prohibiting attorney's fees award against governmental agency involved in family law matter or child support proceeding except when sanctions are warranted)].

Fam. Code § 2030, which provides general authority for attorney's fees awards in family law proceedings, requires that the award be based on ability to pay and need, rather than on which party is successful on the merits. Although both standards may apply to a child support modification proceeding, the general provisions for attorney's fees control to ensure that persons otherwise financially unable to litigate the child support matter have their day in court. Only if the court first finds that both parties to the proceeding could otherwise afford to pay their own attorney's fees may the court award attorney's fees to the prevailing party [In re Marriage of Popenhager (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 514, 524-525, 160 Cal. Rptr. 379] .

[c] Enforcement of Support

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in any action to enforce an existing order for child or spousal support, or a penalty incurred under Fam. Code § 4720 et seq. (delinquent payments of child support), the court must award reasonable attorney's fees to the custodial parent or supported spouse, absent good cause to the contrary [Fam. Code §

3557]. The court must determine that the obligor has the ability to pay, and must consider the respective incomes and needs of the parties [Fam. Code § 3557; see Fam. Code § 270; In re Marriage of Schenck (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1474, 1485, 279 Cal. Rptr. 651 (fact no support is due constitutes good cause for denial of award)]. However, Fam. Code § 3557 does not require or allow an award of attorney's fees to or against a governmental entity [see Fam. Code § 3557(b); see also Fam. Code § 273 (prohibiting attorney's fees award against governmental agency involved in family law matter or child support proceeding except when sanctions are warranted)].

[11] Fees Incurred in Other Proceedings

Fam. Code § 2030(c) authorizes the court in family law proceedings to award attorney's fees reasonably necessary for the prosecution or defense of the proceeding "or any proceeding related thereto." Courts have construed Fam. Code § 2030(c) and identical language in predecessor statutes as allowing the court to award fees incurred in proceedings other than the family law proceeding in which the motion for fees is brought [Askew v. Askew (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 942, 964-965, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 284 (attorney's fees award to wife proper for defense of civil action for fraud brought by husband after wife filed for dissolution); In re Marriage of Seaman & Menjou (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 1489, 1494, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 690 (construing predecessor statute to Fam. Code § 2030); see also Crook v. Crook (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 745, 750, 7 Cal. Rptr. 892 ; In re Marriage of Green (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 14, 28 n.8, 261 Cal. Rptr. 294] .

Another proceeding that is consolidated with a family law matter is a related proceeding within the scope of the attorney's fees provisions [Guardianship of Paduano (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 346, 350-352, 263 Cal. Rptr. 589 (allowing award of fees against non-parent in consolidated guardianship and dissolution proceedings involving child custody)].

Apart from and in addition to its authority to award fees for "related proceedings," a court may award attorney's fees and costs against a party as a sanction for improper litigation conduct and strategy under Fam. Code § 271. The scope of this provision extends to fees incurred in collateral litigation [see Neal v. Superior Court (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 22, 26-27, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 262 (attorney's fees and costs awarded in civil action that was "family law OSC with civil headings" and that "put [wife] to a wholly unnecessary legal expense"); In re Marriage of Green (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 584, 592, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 872 (decided under former Civ. Code § 4370.6; now see Fam. Code § 271)]. For discussion of when attorney's fees may be awarded as sanctions, see § 226.12.

The question of whether another proceeding is related to the family law proceeding depends on whether an award of fees in the other proceeding would serve the purpose of Fam. Code § 2030, the general statute authorizing awards of fees in family law proceedings. This allows the family law court to prevent a spouse with greater financial resources from harassing or coercing the less-advantaged spouse into submission in the family law matter by forcing him or her to defend other lawsuits [In re Marriage of Seaman & Menjou (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 1489, 1494, 1496-1497, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 690 (identically worded predecessor statute)]. Normally, whether another action is related to the family law matter is a factual question for determination by the trial court [In re Marriage of Green (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 584, 591, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 872] .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.11

§ 226.11 Application for Award

[1] Who May Apply

Only a party to the family law proceeding may apply for an award of attorney's fees and costs from another party to the proceeding [Barnes v. McKendry (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 671, 678, 67 Cal. Rptr. 336] . The application for the award must be in the client's--not the attorney's--name [Sorell v. Superior Court of San Francisco (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 157, 160, 56 Cal. Rptr. 222] , and it is the party's need for the award--as opposed to the attorney's need--that must be shown [In re Marriage of Gonzales (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 340, 344, 124 Cal. Rptr. 278] .

However, the court may, in its discretion, order that all or part of the fee award be paid directly to the attorney [see Fam. Code § 272(a)]. Furthermore, even if the attorney has been discharged by the client, he or she may still have implied authority to apply on the client's behalf for an attorney's fee award from the other party while still the attorney of record, and a motion to collect attorney's fees in this manner from the opposing party is commonly referred to as a "Borson motion" [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Borson (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 632, 639, 112 Cal. Rptr. 432 ; cf. In re Marriage of Tushinsky (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 136, 142, 249 Cal. Rptr. 611 (discharged attorney lacks standing to appeal denial of attorneys' fees; attorney has no right in family law proceeding, either before or after discharge, to seek award of attorney's fees and costs against own client)]. Fees cannot be awarded to discharged attorneys pursuant to a "Borson motion" if the client instructs the attorneys to take no further action on the client's behalf and withdraws the fee motion before the court signs the order awarding fees [see In re Marriage of Read (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 476, 480-481, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497] .

A judicial officer who has been disqualified from ruling on a "Borson motion" because of bias against a party's attorney may not decide the motion indirectly by ruling against the party [In re Marriage of Kelso (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 374, 383, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 39 (commissioner should not have heard subsequent motions for sanctions against party and for award of attorney's fees to party's new counsel to be paid by party's spouse)]. This is because a "Borson motion" is made on behalf of the party, not the attorney, given that the right to the award is the party's, not the attorney's. As a result, the issues are too intertwined to permit such a splitting of the judicial officer's disqualification [In re Marriage of Kelso (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 374, 383, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 39] .

[2] Waiver by Agreement

Attorney's fees and costs may not be awarded to a party who has waived all rights to them in a valid property settlement agreement [see, e.g., Garrett v. Garrett (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 407, 411, 419-420, 65 Cal. Rptr. 580] . Fees may be awarded pendente lite despite an agreement to the contrary, however, if the party seeking the attorney's fees attacks the agreement as having been fraudulently obtained [see, e.g., Spreckels v. Spreckels (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 529, 532, 244 P.2d 917] .

Because a child's right to support cannot be waived or controlled by the agreement of the parents, no agreement between the parents can defeat the power of the court to award attorney's fees in a proceeding to obtain child support [Krog v. Krog (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 812, 816-817, 198 P.2d 510] . The same rule applies to attorney's fees incurred in a postjudgment child custody matter [In re Marriage of Joseph (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1277, 1282-1286, 266 Cal. Rptr. 548] .

[3] Manner of Applying

[a] Before Judgment

A request for attorney's fees and costs in a family law proceeding is made initially in the petition or response and, unless an award of the full amount of the fees and costs incurred is made pendente lite, any award, or an award in addition to the pendente lite award, will be included in the judgment of dissolution or legal separation. An application for an order pendente lite making, augmenting, or modifying an award of attorney's fees or costs during the pendency of the family law proceeding is generally made in the trial court by noticed motion or order to show cause [Fam. Code § 2031(a)(1)]. The court must rule on an application within 15 days of the hearing on the motion or order to show cause [Fam. Code § 2031(a)(2)]. The application also may be made by oral motion in open court without notice at the time of the hearing of the cause on the merits or at any time prior to entry of judgment against a party whose default has been entered [Fam. Code § 2031(b)]. If the oral motion is made prior to entry of judgment against a party whose default has been entered, the court must rule on the motion within 15 days and prior to the entry of any judgment [Fam. Code § 2031(b)(2)].

For discussion and forms relating to the request of fees in the petition or response, and to the procedure and forms for use in securing a pendente lite award of attorney's fees and costs, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.10 et seq.

[b] On Appeal

An application for attorney's fees and costs on appeal is made in the trial court rather than in the court of appeal [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Leff (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 630, 648, 102 Cal. Rptr. 195] , and can be made at the beginning of the appeal process. The procedure is the same as applying for a temporary order pending hearing or trial [§ 226.11[3]]. In fixing the amount of an attorney's fee for services on appeal, or in determining whether such an award is required at all, the trial judge may take into account the orders for fees that have previously been made in the litigation [Howard v. Howard (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 755, 759, 307 P.2d 412] .

[c] Modification Proceeding

In a proceeding subsequent to judgment for modification of a support or custody award, the application for attorney's fees and costs is made in the request for order and declaration in support of the order to show cause or notice of motion [see Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-310 (application for order and supporting declaration)]. For discussion and forms for use in modification proceedings, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.180 et seq.

[d] Contempt Proceeding

An application for attorney's fees in a show cause proceeding re contempt to enforce any money award in a pendente lite order or in the judgment is made in the order to show cause and declaration re contempt form. For discussion and forms for use in contempt proceedings, see Ch. 258, Family Law Enforcement: General Enforcement Principles and Remedies, § 258.80 et seq.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.12

§ 226.12 Standards for Award of Attorney's Fees and Costs

[1] Respective Income and Needs of Parties

To make an award of attorney's fees, the court first must consider the respective incomes and needs of the parties, then the potential payor's ability to pay [Fam. Code §§ 270, 2030(a); see, e.g., In re Marriage of Cheriton (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 269, 317-318, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 755 (abuse of discretion for court to decline to reopen trial to take evidence regarding request for need-based attorney's fees); In re Marriage of Hublou (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 956, 966, 282 Cal. Rptr. 695] . Once it has made these determinations, the court may order an award of attorney's fees and costs if just and reasonable under the relative circumstances of the respective parties [Fam. Code § 2032(a)]. In determining what is just and reasonable under the relative circumstances, the court must take into consideration the need for the award to enable each party, to the extent practical, to have sufficient financial resources to adequately present his or her case [Fam. Code § 2032(b); see, e.g., In re Marriage of Falcone & Fyke (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 814, 824, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588 (party requesting fees has burden of presenting evidence showing need and of parties' relative financial positions); In re Marriage of Shaban (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 398, 407-408, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 863 (in division of $3 million estate, wife lacked liquidity to finance appeal); In re Marriage of Keech (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 860, 867-871, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525 (in ordering husband to pay wife's legal fees and accountant's fees, court failed to consider husband's need to pay his own outstanding legal fees)].

The fact that the party requesting an award of attorneys' fees and costs has the resources from which he or she could pay his or her own attorney's fees and costs is not itself a bar to an order that the other party pay part, or all, of the fees and costs requested. Financial resources are only one factor for the court to consider in determining how to apportion the overall cost of litigation equitably between the parties under the relative circumstances [Fam. Code § 2032(b); In re Marriage of O'Connor (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 877, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480 ; see In re Marriage of McTiernan & Dubrow (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1109-1111, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 287 (court could properly consider value of estate awarded to wife, including nonliquid assets, as proper basis for disallowing her recovery of some fees)].

A party who lacks the financial ability to hire an attorney may request, as an in pro per litigant, that the court order the other party, if that other party has the financial ability, to pay a reasonable amount to allow the unrepresented party to retain an attorney in a timely manner before proceedings in the matter go forward [Fam. Code § 2030(a)(2)].

[2] Need in Case of Legal Aid or Pro Bono Representation

When necessary to satisfy the legislative intent of providing one of the parties with an amount of money adequate to properly litigate thecontroversy, a legal services organization providing pro bono representation to an indigent party is entitled to receive an award of attorney's fees and costs valued at the reasonable market rate of the services [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Ward (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 618, 623, 626, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 365] .

[3] Ability to Pay

The court must determine that the party who is to pay the attorney's fees has or is reasonably likely to have the ability to pay the award [Fam. Code § 270; see Fam. Code § 2030(a)]. All of a party's assets and income must be considered in determining his or her ability to pay attorney's fees [see In re Marriage of Rosen (2002) 105 Cal. App. 4th 808, 811, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (trial court's findings on husband's ability to pay were erroneous; therefore it abused its discretion in ordering husband to pay $10,000 in attorney fees to wife's attorney)], and the mere fact that the party from whom attorney's fees and costs are sought has a past or present cash deficit does not control the question of ability to pay [Rosenthal v. Rosenthal (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 289, 297-298, 17 Cal. Rptr. 186] . It is also proper to order one party to pay the other's attorney's fees and costs based on evidence of earning ability that indicates income will substantially increase in a short period of time, although present expenses exceed present monthly income [In re Marriage of Sullivan (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 762, 769, 209 Cal. Rptr. 354, 691 P.2d 1020] . One appellate court, however, has held that a trial court's order requiring an ex-husband to pay his former wife's attorney's fees was an abuse of discretion, because both parties were on welfare, both were impecunious, and there was no showing of a reasonable expectation of relief from that condition [In re Marriage of Pollard (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 535, 539-540, 158 Cal. Rptr. 849] . In addition, it has been held that a court should not base an attorney's fee order on the assumption that the payor spouse's parents will provide gifts that will enable that spouse to fund the order [In re Marriage of Schulze (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 519, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 488] .

In addition to considering a party's ability to pay when determining the total amount of an award of attorney's fees and costs, the court must consider a party's ability to pay in fashioning a payment schedule. For example, one appellate court held that even if the trial court acted within its discretion in ordering a husband to pay his wife's accountant fees of $3,500, it erred in ordering payment in monthly installments of $1,000, leaving the husband with $93 a month after paying his rent and court-ordered obligations [In re Marriage of Keech (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 860, 868, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525] .

Furthermore, the court may order payment of an attorney's fee and cost award from any type of property, whether community or separate, principal or income [Fam. Code § 2032(c); see In re Marriage of Jafeman (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 244, 262-267, 105 Cal. Rptr. 483] .

[4] Noncooperation in Promoting Settlement

Notwithstanding any other provision of the Family Code, the court may base an award of attorney's fees and costs on the extent to which the conduct of each party or attorney furthers or frustrates the policy of the law to promote settlement of litigation, and if possible, to reduce the cost of litigation by encouraging cooperation between the parties and attorneys [Fam. Code § 271(a); see In re Marriage of Falcone & Fyke (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 814, 827-828, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588 (policy of law is to promote settlement and to encourage cooperation which will reduce litigation costs); In re Marriage of Burgard (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 74, 82, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 739 (no abuse of discretion in assessing additional sanctions); In re Marriage of Freeman (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1, 6, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 237 (sanctions under Fam. Code § 271 have been upheld for obstreperous conduct that frustrated policy in favor of settlement and caused litigation costs to greatly increase, and for making one-sided, overreaching demand); In re

Marriage of Abrams (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 979, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16 (father's settlement offer was overreaching and violated policy to promote settlement; case remanded to trial court to determine if it would warrant award of sanctions)]. This provision applies to all proceedings under the Family Code [In re Marriage of Freeman (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1, 6, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 237] . However, a court may not award attorney's fees or court costs against a governmental agency [Fam. Code § 3652; see also Fam. Code § 273 (prohibiting attorney's fees award against governmental agency involved in family law matter or child support proceeding except when sanctions are warranted)].

An award under Fam. Code § 271 is in the nature of a sanction [Fam. Code § 271(a); see In re Marriage of Green (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 14, 27-29, 261 Cal. Rptr. 294 ; see also In re Marriage of Freeman (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1, 6, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 237 (statute contemplates that sanctions will be assessed at end of proceeding when extent and severity of party's bad conduct can be judged); In re Marriage of Hargrave (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1313, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 474 (approving attorney's fees order as sanctions, but making payment contingent on failure to perform other duties under order)]. The court must take into consideration all evidence concerning the parties' income, assets, and liabilities, but may not impose a fee sanction that imposes an unreasonable financial burden on the party against whom the sanction is ordered [Fam. Code § 271(a); In re Marriage of Falcone & Fyke (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 814, 828, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588 (sanction must be scaled to payor's ability to pay and must be made in light of both parties' financial circumstances)]. The court may not impose an attorney's fee sanction that imposes an unreasonable financial burden on the party against whom the sanction is ordered [see In re Marriage of Battenburg (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1346, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871] . However, the party to receive the award is not required to demonstrate any financial need for the award [Fam. Code § 271(a)].

The award of attorney's fees and costs may be imposed only after notice to the party against whom the sanction is proposed to be imposed and an opportunity for that party to be heard [Fam. Code § 271(b)]. It is payable only from the property or income of the party against whom it is imposed, except that the award may be against the sanctioned party's share of the community property [Fam. Code § 271(c); In re Marriage of Falcone & Fyke (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 814, 828, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588 (in determining payor's ability to pay, court may consider property awarded to payor which, if sold, will provide payor with sufficient resources to satisfy sanction order)]. Sanctions may be imposed against a self-represented litigant; self-represented parties are not entitled to greater consideration than other litigants and attorneys [In re Marriage of Falcone & Fyke (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 814, 830, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588].

[5] Frivolous Actions or Delaying Tactics

[a] In General

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7, sanctions are tied to a requirement that every pleading, petition, written notice of motion, or other similar paper must be signed by at least one attorney of record in that attorney's individual name, or, if a party is unrepresented, by the party. By presenting, or later advocating, any of these papers to the court, an attorney or an unrepresented party certifies that specified conditions are met and may be subject to sanctions if a court later determines that they are not [Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)-(c); see In re Marriage of Falcone & Fyke (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 814, 825, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588 (court did not err in considering husband's sanctions motions because they were not verified by husband but by his attorneys, when wife failed to show prejudice from this alleged irregularity or that attorneys' allegations lacked good faith)]. The provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7 are patterned after Fed. Rule Civ. Proc. 11. These provisions do not apply to disclosures and discovery requests, responses, objections, and motions [Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(g)]. Sanctions relating to discovery are contained in the statutes governing specific discovery proceedings [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.010 et seq. (oral deposition), Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.010 et seq. (interrogatories), Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010 et seq. (production, inspection, and entry)].

A party must seek sanctions by a noticed motion made separately from other motions or requests and describing the specific conduct alleged to violate Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(b). The papers to be served on the opposing party as notice of intent to file a Section 128.7 sanctions motion must be the same papers that are ultimately filed with the court no less than 21 days later [In re Marriage of Falcone & Fyke (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 814, 827, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588]. In determining what sanction, if any, to impose, the court must consider whether the party seeking sanctions has exercised due diligence [Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(c)(1); see also Eichenbaum v. Alon (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 967, 968, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 296 (trial court has authority to impose sanctions on plaintiff who voluntarily dismisses his action after defendant's motion for sanctions has been filed)]. Furthermore, a court may, on its own motion, enter an order describing specific conduct that appears to violate Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(b) and direct an attorney, law firm, or party to show cause why it has not violated the specified provision unless that party timely corrects or withdraws the challenged paper, claim, defense, contention, allegation, or denial [Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(c)(1), (2)].

Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 128.7, a court may award sanctions in an amount that is sufficient to deter repetition of the conduct or comparable conduct by others similarly situated, impose nonmonetary directives, or order the payment of penalties to the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(d)]. In specified circumstances, the court may award punitive damages in addition to available sanctions [Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(f)].

Sanctions may be imposed against a self-represented litigant; self-represented parties are not entitled to greater consideration than other litigants and attorneys [In re Marriage of Falcone & Fyke (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 814, 830, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588]. An attorney who responds in pro se to a filing abuse may not recover sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7 in the form of an award of attorney fees [Musaelian v. Adams (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 512, 520, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 475, 198 P.3d 560].

Sanctions for frivolous actions or delaying tactics under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7 are discussed in Ch. 510, Sanctions . For discussion of Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 11 and cases applying it, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 11 (3d ed. Matthew Bender).

[b] Frivolous Appeal

Costs and attorney's fees also may be awarded in the form of sanctions against a party or attorney for a frivolous appeal or an appeal taken solely for delay [see Code Civ. Proc. § 907; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.276(e); In re Marriage of Gong & Kwong (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 510, 518-521, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 540 (factors relevant to determining amount of sanctions to be awarded party responding to frivolous appeal include amount of respondent's attorney's fees on appeal, amount of the judgment against appellant, degree of objective frivolousness and delay, and need for discouragement of like conduct in future; concluding that sanctions of $6,000 were appropriate)]. The appellate court may order that the sanctions for a frivolous appeal should be paid directly to the appellate court [see In re Marriage of Gong & Kwong (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 510, 520, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 540 ; In re Marriage of Schnabel (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 747, 753, 756, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 682] . For further discussion and authorities, see Ch. 49, Appeal: Sanctions .

[c] False Accusations of Child Abuse or Neglect

In addition to any other remedy provided by law, if a court determines that an accusation of child abuse or neglect made during a child custody proceeding was false and that the person making the accusation knew it to be false at the time the accusation was made, the court may impose reasonable monetary sanctions, not exceeding the costs incurred by the accused party in defending the accusation, and reasonable attorney's fees incurred in recovering the sanctions against the person making the accusation. A "person" for this purpose includes a witness, a party, or a party's attorney [Fam. Code § 3027.1(a); see also Fam. Code § 3022.5 (motion for reconsideration must be granted if based on conviction of other parent for false allegations of child abuse)].

On motion by any person requesting the sanctions, the court must issue an order to show cause why the requested sanctions should not be imposed. The order to show cause must be served on the person against whom the sanctions are sought, and a hearing must be scheduled by the court, to be conducted at least 15 days after the order is served [Fam. Code § 3027.1(b)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.13

§ 226.13 Amount of Award

[1] Discretion of Court

The amount awarded as attorney's fees and costs lies within the sound discretion of the trial court and, absent a clear showing of abuse, the trial court's determination will not be disturbed on appeal [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Dick (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 144, 165, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 743] . The trial court's order will be overturned only if, considering all of the evidence viewed most favorably in support of its order, no judge could reasonably have made it [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Huntington (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1513, 1523, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1] . The trial record, however, must reflect that the court actually exercised its discretion and considered the statutory factors required in doing so [In re Marriage of Keech (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 860, 869-871, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525 (trial court abused its discretion in ordering husband to pay wife's attorney's fees without inquiring into reasonableness of fees); In re Marriage of Braud (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 797, 827, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179 (trial court abused its discretion in awarding party only $500, in face of claim for over $6,000 in fees and costs, when there was no apparent reason to award fees so grossly disproportionate to those actually charged)].

The burden is on the party attacking the award to establish an abuse of discretion [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Huntington (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1513, 1523-1524, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 , 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1] . Thus, if a party does not request a statement of decision regarding how attorney's fees were computed, he or she waives any failure to provide such a computation [In re Marriage of McQuoid (1991) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1361, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 737 ; see also Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.90 et seq. (regarding statements of decision)].

[2] Factors Considered

The amount of an attorney's fee award must be just and reasonable under the circumstances [Fam. Code § 2032(a)]. In fixing the amount to be awarded, the court must consider the nature of the litigation, its complexity or difficulty, the nature and extent of the contest, the amount involved, the financial circumstances of the parties, the skill required, and the standing, experience, professional competence, and special expertise of the attorney, together with the results obtained for the client [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Ward (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 618, 628, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 365 ; cf. In re Marriage of Shaban (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 398, 407-411, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 863 (justifications for high appellate fee awards)]. Compensable professional legal skill is not limited to trial time or courtroom techniques alone, and conscientious and successful efforts by counsel to resolve as many areas of disagreement as possible without judicial intervention will be given serious consideration by the court in awarding attorney's fees [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Behrens (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 562, 576, 187 Cal. Rptr. 200] . An award that is insufficient to cover the attorney's fees that may be justified under these factors may constitute an abuse of discretion [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Munguia (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 853, 195 Cal. Rptr. 199] .

Occasionally, the trial court may award fees on some basis other than the actual amount of work involved. If it does so and the award is reasonable, the order will be affirmed on appeal [see Marriage of Millet (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 729, 731-732, 116 Cal. Rptr. 390 (fee to collect support based on prevalent fee charged in geographical area of court for collection of an uncontested debt, i.e., 30 percent of amount recovered through collection process)].

In the case of a pendente lite award, the court cannot know, of course, at the commencement of the case the amount of labor that will be required or the value of the services to be performed in maintaining or defending the proceeding on behalf of the spouse. Therefore, instead of fixing the entire amount of counsel fees to be awarded at the beginning of the case, the court may make an initial award of fees and then augment the award from time to time as needed [see Fam. Code § 2030(a)(c); Rosenthal v. Rosenthal (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 289, 295, 17 Cal. Rptr. 186] .

[3] Showing Required

[a] Value of Services

Direct evidence of the reasonable value of an attorney's services need not be presented because the evidence is necessarily before the court that hears the case [In re Marriage of McQuoid (1991) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1361, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 737] . If the trial court is informed of the extent and nature of the services rendered, it may rely on its own experience and knowledge in determining their reasonable value [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Cueva (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 290, 300, 149 Cal. Rptr. 918] . Hence, if the case is simple and the amount requested as fees and costs is clearly reasonable, counsel may choose to present no evidence as to the work done or its value, preferring to allow the trial court pursuant to the above rule to fix the value.

In other cases when, for example, the proceeding is contested or involves complex issues, evidence of the legal work performed and the expenses and costs incurred may be required. Therefore, counsel always should be prepared at the hearing to support the request for fees and costs with such evidence. Frequently, it may be sufficient if counsel merely testifies as to the number of hours spent with or without stating his or her hourly rate [see Frank v. Frank (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 135, 137, 28 Cal. Rptr. 687 ; see also In re Marriage of Kozen (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1258, 1264, 230 Cal. Rptr. 304 (mixed award of attorney and accountant fees upheld); cf. In re Marriage of Cueva (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 290, 149 Cal. Rptr. 918 (award of attorney's fees reversed when nothing in record supported fee claimed)].

If the attorney is seeking a large fee based on a large number of hours or on other factors such as the skill required, the special expertise of the attorney, and the results obtained, an expert witness may be used to establish the reasonableness of the fee. The witness may be any attorney who has experience in practicing family law in the community involved, and who thus has special knowledge and experience to qualify him or her as an expert on the subject of family law fees [see Evid. Code § 720; see, e.g., In re Marriage of Borson (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 632, 640, 112 Cal. Rptr. 432] .

For additional discussion regarding the trial of attorney's fees issues, see Denner, Rothschild & Johnson, California Family Law Trial Guide, Unit 34 (Matthew Bender).

[b] Necessity

The court may order a party to pay on behalf of the other party only an amount that may be "reasonably necessary" for attorney's fees and for the cost of maintaining or defending the proceeding [Fam. Code § 2030(a)]. For example, an appellate court reversed an award of attorney's fees, holding that the trial court erred in ordering the husband to pay fees incurred by the wife's new attorney without evaluating the necessity of work performed on the wife's behalf, despite the husband's objection that much of the attorney's time was spent seeking and reviewing files from the wife's previous attorney and requesting continuances [In re Marriage of Keech (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 860, 869, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525] .

Counsel seeking an award of fees and costs on behalf of a party must be prepared to show that the legal services performed, or to be performed, and the costs incurred, or to be incured, were or are reasonably necessary. Absent such a showing by counsel, cost items may be disallowed and the amount awarded for attorney's fees may be substantially less than that sought [see, e.g., Marriage of Rosan (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 885, 898-899, 101 Cal. Rptr. 295] .

[c] Disclosure of Fee Agreement

The fee agreement and the amount of the fee already paid by the client to the attorney must appear in the income and expense declaration served on the other party and filed with the court. An attorney's intentional concealment from the court of material facts has been held to involve moral turpitude and to constitute a ground for professional discipline [see Davidson v. State Bar (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 570, 574, 131 Cal. Rptr. 379, 551 P.2d 1211] . Hence, any concealment from the court of sums paid on fees or costs is a ground for professional discipline. Moreover, false statements in the income and expense declaration might subject both the client who signed it to prosecution for perjury [see Penal Code § 118] and the attorney who counseled it to prosecution for subornation or perjury [see Penal Code § 127] and to disciplinary proceedings under the State Bar Act [see Medoff v. State Bar (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 535, 540-541, 78 Cal. Rptr. 696, 455 P.2d 800] . For an illustrative income and expense declaration, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.10 et seq.

[4] Costs Allowed

The cost provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021 et seq. are applicable to contested family law proceedings in the same manner as in civil actions generally [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.21]. See generally Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.50 et seq. for discussion of this topic.

However, the authorization for cost awards in Fam. Code § 2030(a) does not specifically limit the award of costs to the kinds of costs normally awarded in a civil action. Rather, that section authorizes the court to award whatever amount as may be reasonably necessary for the costs of maintaining or defending the proceeding. Consequently, the cost award in a family law proceeding, when need and ability to pay are shown, may include accountants', auditors', and appraisers' fees [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Rosan (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 885, 898, 101 Cal. Rptr. 295] . Nevertheless, as a precautionary measure to assure that any fees paid to experts for services rendered in connection with the proceeding will be recoverable, counsel may wish to seek a court order authorizing the employment of the expert prior to the actual employment. Such an order may be sought at the same time that pendente lite relief is sought.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.14

§ 226.14 Order for Payment Directly to Attorney

The court in its discretion, when it orders one of the parties to pay costs and attorney's fees for the benefit of the other party, may make the fees and costs payable, in whole or in part, to the attorney entitled to them [Fam. Code § 272(a)]. If the court orders direct payment to the attorney, the order may be enforced directly by the attorney in his or her own name or by the party on whose behalf the order was made [Fam. Code § 272(b)]. Entry of a judgment ordering a party to pay attorney's fees to the other party's attorney gives that attorney an independent statutory right to enforce the judgment even if the party the attorney represented opposes payment of the fees [In re Marriage of Green (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1312, 1320-1321, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 908].

If at the time enforcement is sought, however, the attorney has ceased to be the attorney for the party on whose behalf the fees were awarded, the attorney may enforce the order only if it appears of record that the attorney has given the former client or successor counsel 10 days' written notice of the application for enforcement of the order. During the 10-day period, the client may file in the proceeding a motion directed to the former attorney for partial or total reallocation of fees and costs to cover the services and cost of successor counsel. Once the motion is filed, the proceeding must be stayed until the court has resolved the motion [Fam. Code § 272(c); see, e.g., In re Marriage of Wagoner (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 936, 940-941, 222 Cal. Rptr. 479] . The pivotal factor governing a court's jurisdiction to award a direct fee payment is whether the former client authorized the former attorney to make the fee request on the former client's behalf [In re Marriage of Simpson (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 707, 710, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 253 (court had jurisdiction when firm's request for direct fee payment was made while it was still attorney of record and with client's express authorization)]. Because the right to have fees paid belongs to the client, not to counsel, the client must expressly or impliedly authorize a discharged attorney to pursue a motion requesting fee payment on the client's behalf for the court to have jurisdiction over the motion; a client's failure to convey this authorization is fatal to the court's power to rule [In re Marriage of Simpson (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 707, 713, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 253] .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.15

§ 226.15 Effect of Award on Community Property Division

In making an award of costs or attorney's fees under Fam. Code § 2030 or 2031, the court may order payment of the award from any type of property [Fam. Code § 2032(c)]. An award of attorney's fees is independent of the division of the community property, and therefore, notwithstanding the equal division requirement [see Fam. Code § 2550], a trial court may properly order that one spouse pay the other spouse's attorney's fees out of the paying spouse's share of the community property [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Jafeman (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 244, 266, 105 Cal. Rptr. 483 (decided under substantially similar predecessor statute)].

A spouse's liability for the other spouse's attorney's fees under court order should be distinguished from a spouse's liability for his or her own attorney's fees. Generally, the community property is not liable for debts incurred by a spouse during marriage, but after separation [see Fam. Code § 910]. In the division of community property, however, a court has jurisdiction to order reimbursement in cases it deems appropriate for debts paid after separation but before trial [Fam. Code § 2626]. Thus, a party's liability for or payment of attorney's fees to his or her own attorney may be considered in relation to the division of community property in appropriate circumstances [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Jafeman (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 244, 266-267, 105 Cal. Rptr. 483] .

For discussion of the characterization and division of debts in dissolution proceedings, see Ch. 222, Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.16

§ 226.16 Appealability of Order

An order for the payment of attorney's fees and costs pendente lite is appealable as a final judgment in a collateral matter, unless the trial court reserves jurisdiction to consider the matter further. In the latter case, the ruling is in the nature of an interlocutory order directing that further proceedings be taken before a determination is made, and it is not appealable [Marriage of Jafeman (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 244, 268, 105 Cal. Rptr. 483] . An order for attorney's fees and costs contained in a judgment is appealable under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1(a)(1), (10). An order made in a proceeding subsequent to the entry of judgment is appealable under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1(a)(2).

An appeal may also be taken from an order or an interlocutory judgment directing payment of monetary sanctions by a party or an attorney for a party if the amount exceeds $5,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1(a)(11), (12)]. Sanction orders or judgments of $5,000 or less against a party or an attorney for a party may be reviewed on an appeal by that party after entry of final judgment in the main action, or, at the discretion of the court of appeal, may be reviewed upon petition for an extraordinary writ [Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1(b)].

For discussion of appeal procedures and further discussion of the appealability of orders and judgments, see Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview , through Ch. 54, Appeal: California Supreme Court Review .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.17

§ 226.17 Stay of Proceeding on Failure to Pay

In view of the envisioned purpose of an award of attorney's fees and costs to enable the party in whose favor the award is made to have sufficient resources to present his or her case adequately [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Gonzales (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 340, 344, 124 Cal. Rptr. 278] , the trial court may order the proceeding stayed until the costs and attorney's fees are paid in any proceeding in which the party ordered to pay is the party prosecuting the proceeding and he or she fails to pay [see, e.g., Allen v. Superior Court (1901) 133 Cal. 504, 505, 65 P. 977] . The same rule applies if the losing party in the trial court is seeking to have the judgment reversed on appeal and is ordered by the trial court to pay respondent's costs and attorney's fees on appeal. The appellant's failure to pay as ordered may result in a stay of the appeal on motion of the respondent [Kopasz v. Kopasz (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 423, 425, 210 P.2d 846] .

A contrary rule applies, however, if the party ordered to pay is unable to do so and the moving party fails to allege that he or she is unable to pay his or her own costs and attorney's fees to resist the appeal. In such a situation, the motion to stay the appeal may be denied [Pugliese v. Pugliese (1927) 200 Cal. 652, 653, 254 P. 266 ; see Kopasz v. Kopasz (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 423, 425, 210 P.2d 846 ; cf. Dimon v. Dimon (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 190, 192-193, 225 P.2d 282 (motion to stay may be denied when to do so would be manifest disservice to respondent and parties would benefit by letting case proceed to final determination)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.18

§ 226.18 Case Management Plan for Complex Cases

At any time before hearing on the merits, either party may move the court to direct the implementation of a case management plan to allocate attorney's fees, court costs, expert fees, and consultant fees equitably between the parties. In exercising its discretion to order a plan, the court must find that the case involves complex or substantial issues of fact or law related to property rights, visitation, custody, or support [Fam. Code § 2032(d)].

The case management plan must focus on specific, designated issues. Thus, it may provide for the allocation of separate or community assets, for security against these assets, and for payments from income or anticipated income of either party for the payment of fees and costs for the benefit of one or both parties. Payments must be authorized only on agreement of the parties, or in the absence of agreement, by court order. The court may order that a referee be appointed to oversee the case management plan [Fam. Code § 2032(d); see Code Civ. Proc. § 639 (appointment of referee); see also King, Save the Court Save the Family, 12(1) Cal. Law. 42 (1992) (detailed discussion of law, its ambiguities, and potential scope)].

For a form of declaration supporting a motion to establish a case management plan, see § 226.50.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 226.19-226.29

[Reserved]

§§ 226.19[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.30

§ 226.30 California Family Law Practice and Procedure

For discussion and forms relating to attorney fee agreements, award of fees, and fee provisions in marital settlement agreements, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, Chs. 61, 62, 216 (Matthew Bender 2d ed.)

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.31

§ 226.31 California Family Law Trial Guide

For discussion and forms relating to the trial of attorney's fees and costs, see Denner, Rothschild & Johnson, California Family Law Trial Guide, Unit 34 (Matthew Bender)

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.32

§ 226.32 California Legal Forms

For forms of agreement for professional services of attorneys, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 86, Agreements for Professional Services (Matthew Bender)

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.33

§ 226.33 California Points and Authorities

For forms of points and authorities relating to the recovery of fees from the client and from the opposing parties, see California Points and Authorities, Attorney's Fees; Costs, Pts. II, III (Matthew Bender)

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.34

§ 226.34 State Statutes

[1] Attorney's Fees and Costs

Ability to pay attorney's fees or costs. Fam. Code § 270

Prohibition against award of attorney's fees or costs against governmental agency except when sanctions are warranted. Fam. Code § 273

Awards during pendency of proceeding. Fam. Code §§ 2030-2034

Case management plans. Fam. Code § 2032(d)

Compensation of counsel appointed to represent child in custody or visitation proceeding. Fam. Code § 3153

Factors considered by court in awarding fees in support proceedings, and persons to whom fees may be awarded. Fam. Code § 3557

Award to prevailing party in child support proceeding. Fam. Code § 3652

[2] Sanctions

Frivolous actions or delaying tactics; violation of certification requirements; awards of attorney's fees, expenses, nonmonetary sanctions, and punitive damages. Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7

Appeal of interlocutory judgment or order imposing sanctions in excess of $5,000. Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1(a)(11), (12)

Review of sanction order judgment of $5,000 or less. Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1(b)

Award based on conduct of party or attorney. Fam. Code § 271

Award based on false accusation of child abuse or neglect. Fam. Code § 3027

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.35

§ 226.35 California Rules of Court

Sanctions for frivolous appeals. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.276(e)

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.36

§ 226.36 Decisions

[1] Award as Improper

Ten-percent fee award to wife in marital dissolution was abuse of discretion because trial court found that fee amount was due to discovery burdens and husband had received virtually all income producing community property, had substantially greater income and large pension fund. In re Marriage of Hargrave (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 346, 356-357, 209 Cal. Rptr. 764

Conditioning grant of motion to set aside stipulated judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 on payment of nonprevailing party's attorney's fees was abuse of discretion, despite inconvenience in defending motion, when prevailing party was needy, had moved for fees, and entered into stipulation by mistake. In re Marriage of Kerry (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 456, 465, 204 Cal. Rptr. 660

Trial court abused discretion in making small award despite showing of need, reasonableness of fees charged, and greater resources of other spouse. In re Marriage of Munguia (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 853, 863, 195 Cal. Rptr. 199

Costs of expert witnesses on topics of child custody and valuation of community assets was properly included in award; trial court's refusal to consider award of costs as erroneous. In re Marriage of Munguia (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 853, 864-865, 195 Cal. Rptr. 199

Award of $1,500 in fees was improper when case spanned over nine years with same attorney of record, case was complex and required additional legal effort due to obstructive activities of defendant, and attorney had not charged client during entire period due to client's inability to pay. In re Marriage of Fransen (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 419, 426-427, 190 Cal. Rptr. 885

[2] Award as Proper

Award attorney's fees to wife for defense of civil action for fraud brought by husband after she filed for dissolution as proper; trial court erred in refusing to award these fees. Askew v. Askew (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 942, 964-965, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 284

Trial court's award of future attorney's fees in amount greater than wife requested was proper. In re Marriage of Dick (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 144, 159, 166-168, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 743

Fee waiver clause in marital settlement agreement was no bar to award of attorney's fees in postjudgment custody dispute. In re Marriage of Joseph (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1277, 1284-1285, 266 Cal. Rptr. 548

Award of attorney's fees to wife in separation proceeding was warranted when husband was better able to pay attorney's fees and costs, failed to take advantage of offered stipulation, and then tenaciously pursued unnecessary litigation to correct his own negligence. In re Marriage of Melone (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 757, 765-766, 238 Cal. Rptr. 510

Attorney's fees award was proper in postdissolution proceeding to obtain child support, despite bifurcation of support amount from issue of validity of agreement relating to support obligation. In re Marriage of Ayo (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 442, 452, 235 Cal. Rptr. 458

Trial court's award of $80,000 in attorney's fees was proper given extensive case preparation required, withdrawal of opponent from settlement, and conflicting evidence that opponent had "stonewalled" and had been uncooperative during discovery. In re Marriage of Kozen (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1258, 1264, 230 Cal. Rptr. 304

Trial court properly awarded attorney's fees and costs incurred after dissolution judgment but connected with trial of bifurcated issue if court gives due consideration to income and needs of parties, despite original judgment that had become final and provided that each party will bear own attorney's fees and costs to date. In re Marriage of Wolfe (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 889, 891, 219 Cal. Rptr. 337

Award of attorney's fees was proper when party can establish need for attorney's fees and costs, other party's ability to pay, and reasonableness of fees regardless if petitioner has remarried and waived spousal support in prior hearing. In re Marriage of Newport (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 915, 918, 201 Cal. Rptr. 647

[3] Bankruptcy

Trial court's award of attorney's fees and costs was dischargeable in bankruptcy when award is not based on need, but is equitable division of debt, so that court's action in making award is more consistent with division of community property and debt than with support award. In re Gibson (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1989) 103 Bankr. 218

[4] Discretion of Court

Family law court has no jurisdiction to order a party's attorney to repay earned fees into a trust account to enable party to substitute another attorney. In re Marriage of Laursen & Fogarty (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1082, 1089, 243 Cal. Rptr. 398

Court has mandatory duty, absent good cause to contrary, to award reasonable attorney's fees to supported spouse in action to enforce order for spousal support on determining other party's ability to pay. In re Marriage of Kennedy (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1633, 1643, 239 Cal. Rptr. 151

Denial of attorney's fees without hearing was error when record did not indicate that court considered respective incomes and needs of parties. In re Marriage of Popenhager (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 514, 525-526, 160 Cal. Rptr. 379

Court was not required to deduct attorney's fees as community obligations before dividing property, but can require one party to pay other's attorney's fees out of separate property after division. In re Marriage of Barnert (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 413, 428-429, 149 Cal. Rptr. 616

Award and amount of attorney's fees and costs on appeal were matters addressed to sound judicial discretion of trial court and, absent clear showing of abuse, trial court's determination as not disturbable by appellate court. In re Marriage of Stachon (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 506, 510, 143 Cal. Rptr. 599

[5] Factors to Be Considered

Court must determine how to apportion overall cost of litigation equitably between parties under their relative circumstances. In re Marriage of Dietz (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 387, 406, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 616

Court must consider statutory factors in making award. Alan S. v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 238, 242-243, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 241

Court must consider parties' relative financial needs. In re Marriage of Falcone & Fyke (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 814, 824, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588

In awarding attorney's fees in dissolution action, court properly considered counsel's efforts to expedite proceedings and to resolve disagreements without judicial intervention. In re Marriage of Behrens (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 562, 576, 187 Cal. Rptr. 200

[6] Jurisdiction

Court had jurisdiction to order attorney's fees to be paid by nonparent whose petition for guardianship of minor child of marriage has been consolidated with family law proceeding concerning custody of child. Guardianship of Paduano (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 346, 350-352, 263 Cal. Rptr. 589

Discharged attorney lacked standing to appeal judgment for fees awarded on client's behalf in dissolution action; right to fees belongs to client and attorney was not "aggrieved party." In re Marriage of Tushinsky (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 136, 142, 249 Cal. Rptr. 611

Trial court had subject matter jurisdiction to award fees against third parties when complaint in joinder alleges that those parties hold and claim property in which husband or wife has community property interest; jurisdiction as not defeated even if it is ultimately shown that third parties do not possess community property. In re Marriage of Siller (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 36, 47, 231 Cal. Rptr. 757

[7] Sanctions

Sanctions award need not be limited to cost to other party resulting from bad conduct; correlation between sanctioned conduct and specific attorney's fees is not required. In re Marriage of Corona (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1205, 1226, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 17

Court must scale sanction to payor's ability to pay. In re Marriage of Falcone & Fyke (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 814, 827-828, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588

Party requesting fees is not required to demonstrate financial need for award. In re Marriage of Lucio (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1081-1082, 74 Cal. rptr. 3d 03

Court properly imposed sanctions for party's obstreperous conduct that caused litigation costs to greatly increase. In re Marriage of Freemen (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1, 6, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 237

Monetary sanctions imposed under Fam. Code § 271 are not required to compensate for all fees and costs expended. In re Marriage of Battenburg (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1346, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871

Attorney's fees and expenses under Fam. Code § 271 or Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5 are only remedy for repeated unsuccessful OSCs to modify child custody order. Bidna v. Rosen (1993) 19 Cal.App. 4th 27, 36, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 251 (dismissing action for malicious prosecution)

Accounting delays, violations of restraining orders, and obstruction of proceedings because husband did not "believe" in community property justified $100,000 fee award. In re Marriage of Quay (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 961, 969-971, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537

Due process requires that any order imposing sanctions state with particularity basis for finding violation. Caldwell v. Samuels Jewelers (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 970, 977-978, 272 Cal. Rptr. 126

Trial transcript, nonconforming brief, and delays in payment indicates attempts to frustrate policy of law and justifying award of attorney's fees on appeal. In re Marriage of Green (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 14, 27-29, 261 Cal. Rptr. 294

Frivolous motion for new trial merits sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5. In re Marriage of Green (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 14, 25-26, 261 Cal. Rptr. 294

Imposition of monetary sanctions against attorney who exceeds hearing time limit after motion to disqualify trial judge is denied was improper when court failed to give attorney notice and opportunity to be heard on sanctions issue, even though attorney's conduct might otherwise be deserving of substantial sanctions. In re Marriage of Quinlan (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1417, 1422-1423, 257 Cal. Rptr. 850

Request for attorney's fees or sanctions within dissolution proceeding was proper relief for bad faith conduct relating to orders to show cause re contempt. Green v. Uccelli (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1112, 1121, 255 Cal. Rptr. 315

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.37

§ 226.37 Law Reviews

King, Save the Court Save the Family, 12(1) Cal. Law. 42 (1992).

Gozansky, Renjilian & Zuckman, Divorce Law (Part 3), 27(2) Prac. Law. 67 (1981)

Gozansky, Renjilian & Zuckman, Divorce Law Practice (Part 2), 27(1) Prac. Law. 27 (1981)

Gozansky, Renjilian & Zuckman, Divorce Law Practice (Part 1), 26(8) Prac. Law. 11 (1980)

175 of 199 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 226.38-226.49

[Reserved]

§§ 226.38[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 226 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: ATTORNEY'S FEES
PART IV. FORMS

19-226 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 226.50

§ 226.50 Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5] in Support of Motion to Establish Case Management Plan [Fam. Code § 2032(d)]

[1] FORM Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5] in Support of Motion to Establish Case Management Plan [Fam. Code § 2032(d)]

[Attachment to Paragraphs 13 and 14 of Judicial Council form of Application for Order and Supporting Declaration (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1285.20); print on pleading paper or on Judicial Council form of Additional Page (MC-020)]

I, _____ [name], request that the court direct implementation of a Case Management Plan. In support of the request, I declare:

1. I am the _____ [petitioner or respondent] in this proceeding for dissolution of marriage.

2. This case involves the following complex issues of law and fact relating to _____ [property rights and/or child custody and/or visitation and/or support]: _____ [specify, e.g., respondent and I have been unable to reach agreement on the division of our community property, child support, and spousal support. Respondent is self-employed as an orthopedic surgeon and reported net earnings on our joint 1994 federal and state income tax returns of over $250,000. I claim a community property interest in his practice, for which expert evaluators will have to be retained. Further, I contend that respondent's net income for determining both spousal and child support is considerably more than that reported on his tax returns. I intend to produce expert testimony that will show that many of his alleged business expenses, whether or not they are proper deductions for tax purposes, are actually for personal expenses and should not be allowed as deductions from gross income for the purpose of determining net income for support. These issues will all involve complex and lengthy analyses of respondent's business records].

[3. The following assets could be set aside under a case management plan to pay the costs and attorney's fees associated with discovery, testimony, and other expenses that arise in this manner: _____ (specify, e.g., Respondent manages a community investment portfolio that produces over $ _____ annually in income. The income from this portfolio could be set aside and allocated equitably to cover the attorney's fees and costs of litigation).]

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

[2] Use of Form

This form is a declaration in support of a motion to establish a case management plan [see Fam. Code § 2032(d)].

[3] Completing Declaration and Accompanying Papers

The declaration may be typed on the Judicial Council form of Additional Page (Form MC-020). This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge. The declaration may also be typed on standard pleading paper.

This form should be attached to the mandatory Judicial Council form of Order to Show Cause [FL-300] or the Judicial Council form of Notice of Motion [FL-301], either of which should be accompanied by the Judicial Council form of Application for Order and Supporting Declaration [FL-310]. These forms are available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.. An illustrative filled-in copy of the notice of motion and the order to show cause forms seeking relief on other grounds are set forth in Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.10 et seq.

In either the Order to Show Cause or Notice of Motion form, the box in the caption for "Other (specify)" should be checked and "Establishment of Case Management Plan" should be inserted in the space provided. In the Application for Order form, the Paragraph 13 box ("OTHER RELIEF (specify)") should be checked, and the following should be inserted in the space provided:

I request that the court direct implementation of a case management plan under Family Code Section 2032(d).

The boxes in Paragraph 14 also should be checked to indicate that the supporting facts are contained in the attached declaration.

[4] Cross References

For discussion of the general form and content requirements for declarations, see Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
SPECIAL ALERT TO CHAPTER 227 Status of the Federal Estate Tax, GST Tax, and Gift Tax in 2010

19-227SA California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated Scope

Scope

Background:

The Economic Growth and Tax Relief Reconciliation Act (EGTRRA), enacted in 2001, provided for gradual increases in estate and gift tax exemption amounts and decreases in maximum tax rates. That law mandated repeal, only for the year 2010, of the estate tax and generation-skipping transfer tax, but not the gift tax. It was long assumed that this repeal would never be permitted--that Congress would act to either extend the law as it existed in 2009, or possibly enact a new law on a similar basis but with different exclusion and tax rates.

As late as December 2009, Congress expressed its intent to pass legislation to prevent repeal. However, Congress failed to act and, as of this writing, there is no estate tax or generation-skipping transfer (GST) tax.

EGTRRA also provided that, in 2011, the estate tax and GST tax would be reinstated, but with only a $1 million applicable exclusion amount for each.

The estate tax applicable exclusion amount was $3.5 million per person in 2009, and the GST tax exemption was also $3.5 million. In 2010, both taxes were repealed, allowing unlimited bequests free of these taxes.

Unlike the estate and GSTs taxes, the gift tax was not repealed for 2010. The amount of lifetime gifts that may be made free from gift tax using the gift tax applicable exclusion amount (after any annual gift tax exclusion amounts) remains at $1 million in 2010, and any excess is subject to tax at the highest individual income tax rate, currently 35 percent. The maximum rate for federal estate tax and GST tax in 2009 was 45 percent. Because of the repeal, there is no estate or GST tax in 2010. In 2011, if new legislation is not enacted, the estate tax and GST tax each will carry a maximum rate of 55 percent, and the maximum rate for gift tax will climb to 55 percent.

The annual gift tax exclusion amount permits individuals to make gifts up to that amount, per donee, without incurring gift tax or using any of their lifetime applicable exclusion amount against estate and gift tax. This exclusion remains at $13,000 per donee in 2010. Because a husband and wife may agree to combine their gifts, together they will be able to gift $26,000 to each done in 2010. The annual gift tax exclusion with respect to gifts made to non-citizen spouses is $134,000 in 2010.

Another effect of EGTRRA in 2010 was to significantly limit the step-up in basis of appreciated assets that had long been granted to the beneficiary of a decedent. In 2010, the beneficiary will receive a step-up only for the first $1.3 million of unrealized gain or appreciation. A surviving spouse will receive a step-up in the basis of acquired assets for an additional $3 million of unrealized gain or appreciation. Assets exceeding this amount take a carryover basis, thus making it much more likely for at least part of the distribution to be subject to capital gains tax. The gift tax laws have always conveyed a carryover basis; the step-up in basis for property acquired from a decedent had long been a benefit to a decedent's beneficiaries. Allocation of the stepped-up basis will be made by the executor or trustee. It is anticipated that administrative difficulties will arise, in terms of determining and reporting the basis of assets when acquired as well as their fair market value at the time of decedent's death.

Planning Ideas and Cautions:

Certain estate planning techniques require caution, in light of the unknown future of the estate and GST taxes.

One major caution concerns wills that use a formula to divide an estate between marital and by-pass trusts. If the by-pass trust is not capped, i.e., if the formula does not set a maximum funding for the by-pass trust, the portion intended for the surviving spouse may be largely or entirely depleted.

Similarly, a will that defines a charitable bequest in terms of the charitable deduction allowed under the now-repealed estate tax laws may produce unintended results.

Other techniques are still viable, whether there is an estate tax or not.

For example, a discounted and leveraged gift of a residence or second home may still be effected through a qualified personal residence trust (QPRT). The donor may reside in the home until the end of the QPRT, and may even be able to lease back the property at fair market value from the new owners.

The donor of a gift to a charitable remainder trust may retain a life payment of up to 90 percent of the value of the gifted property. The donor would receive an income tax deduction equal to the value of the gifted property not retained. There is no gain or loss recognized by the charitable remainder trust on sale of the property. Payments to the donor from the trust will be taxed partly as income, partly as capital gain; it is possible that a portion of the payments will be considered a distribution from principal and thus not taxable.

If new legislation is not enacted, the GST tax exemption will drop to $1 million in 2011. Therefore, it might be expedient to make lifetime gifts now. Of course, if Congress acts before the end of 2010, this strategy may lose its effectiveness.

For continuing coverage of developments on Capitol Hill affecting the estate and GST taxes, please visit our FREE website, the LexisNexis Estate Practice & Elder Law Center, at http://law.lexisnexis.com/practiceareas/Estate-Practice-Elder-Law.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 227 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: TAX EFFECTS OF DISSOLUTION

19-227 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 227.syn

AUTHOR: Original text by Frederick W. Campbell-Craven, J.D.

§ 227.syn Synopsis to Chapter 227: DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: TAX EFFECTS OF DISSOLUTION

§ 227.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 227.02 Cross References

§§ 227.03-227.09 [Reserved]

§ 227.10 Income Taxation of Spousal Support

[1] Background and Purpose of Current Law

[a] In General

[b] Effective Dates

[c] California Conformity to Federal Law

[2] Requirements for Alimony Tax Treatment

[a] Qualified Payments

[b] Payment in Cash

[c] Received Under Divorce or Separation Instrument

[d] By or on Behalf of Spouse

[e] Legally Separated Spouses Not Members of Same Household

[f] No Payment Liability After Payee-Spouse's Death

[g] Nondeductibility of Property Settlement Payments

[3] Payments Fixed for Child Support

[a] Inapplicability of Alimony Tax Treatment

[b] Use of Family Support Under Prior Law to Treat Child Support as Spousal Support

[c] Restrictions on Use of Family Support Under Current Law

[i] Reduction on Happening of Contingency Relating to Child

[ii] Effect of Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

[4] Rules to Prevent Front-Loading of Payments

[a] Purpose

[b] Postseparation Years Defined

[c] Excess Alimony Payments

[d] Recapture Rule

[e] Exceptions to Recapture

[f] Unplanned Events Triggering Recapture

[5] Election to Forgo Alimony Tax Treatment

[6] Payor's Inclusion of Payee's Taxpayer I.D. Number

[7] Alimony Trusts

[a] Nature and Purpose

[b] Recognition of Gain or Loss on Transfers Into Trust

[c] Amount Fixed as Payable for Child Support

[d] Use to Avoid Requirements for Alimony Tax Treatment

[e] Relevance of Prior Law

§ 227.11 Estate and Gift Tax Consequences of Spousal Support

[1] Gift Tax

[2] Estate Tax

§ 227.12 Income Tax Consequences Related to Children

[1] Treatment of Child Support

[2] Dependency Exemption

[a] When Permitted

[b] Qualifying Child

[c] Qualifying Relative

[d] Support Requirement

[e] Children of Divorced or Separated Parents

[i] Applicability of Special Rule for Divorced Parents

[ii] Custodial Parent's Release of Exemption

[iii] When Rules Do Not Apply

[f] Multiple Support Agreements

[3] Related Tax Credits

[4] Deduction for Medical Expenses

[5] Dependent Care Credit

§ 227.13 Estate and Gift Taxation of Child Support

[1] Gift Tax

[2] Estate Tax

§ 227.14 Income Taxation of Property Division

[1] No Recognition of Gain or Loss on Transfers Between Spouses

[a] Current Law

[b] Pre-1984 Law Contrasted

[2] Nonrecognition Applicable to Appreciated Gain but Not Income

[3] Unequal Division of Property to Adjust for Tax Consequences

[4] Transfers Deemed Incident to Divorce

[5] Transfers to Third Parties on Behalf of Spouse

[a] Qualification for Nonrecognition

[b] Split of Authority Between Ninth Circuit and Tax Court

[6] Transfers in Trust

[7] Transfers to Nonresident Alien Spouse

[8] Basis of Transferred Property

[9] All Transfers Covered; Step Transaction Doctrine

[10] Obligation of Transferor to Supply Records

§ 227.15 Estate and Gift Taxation of Property Divisions

[1] Gift Tax

[2] Estate Tax

[a] Death Before Property Settlement or Divorce

[b] Spouses Divorced at Time of Death

[c] Similarities to Gift Tax

§ 227.16 Income Tax Consequences of Sale or Exchange of Personal Residence

[1] Determining Amount of Gain or Loss

[2] Recognition of Loss on Residences Held for Profit or Investment

[a] Profit Motive Essential

[b] Conversion of Personal Residence to Income-Producing Property

[3] Treatment of Gain on Sale of Principal Residence

[a] Exclusion of Gain Under Current Law

[i] Overview

[ii] Principal Residence

[iii] Effective Dates and Election to Be Bound by Former Law

[b] Former "Rollover" Rule and "Once-in-a-Lifetime" Exclusion

[i] Rollover of Gain

[ii] "Once-in-a-Lifetime" Exclusion of Gain by Older Taxpayer

§ 227.17 General Tax Considerations in Dividing or Distributing Retirement Benefits

[1] Distribution Under Pension Plan Pursuant to QDRO

[2] IRA's and Other Plans to Which Tax-Free Rollover May Be Made

[a] Distributions to Spouse on Employee Spouse's Death

[b] Distributions Under QDRO During Employee Spouse's Lifetime

[3] Transfers From Individual Retirement Plans ("IRAs")

§ 227.18 Deductibility of Attorney's Fees

[1] General Rules

[2] Attorney's Fees Incurred for Production of Income

[a] Production of Spousal Support

[b] Production of Income Other Than Spousal Support

[c] Payment by Other Spouse

[d] Resisting Other Spouse's Claims for Income

[e] Relating to Child Support

[f] Allocation of Attorney's Fees

[3] Attorney's Fees Incurred for Tax Advice

[a] Deductibility

[b] Payment by Other Spouse

[c] Allocation of Attorney's Fees

[4] Attorney's Fees Incurred for Division of Property--Nondeductible Expenses Added to Basis of Property

§ 227.19 Right to File Joint Returns

[1] General Rules--Marriage Requirement

[2] Determination of Marital Status

[a] Federal Law

[b] California Law

[c] Effect of Parties' Intent to Make Joint Return

[i] In General

[ii] Final Decree of Divorce

[iii] Legal Separation

[iv] Judgment of Nullity

[d] Joint and Several Liability for Tax

[i] Assessments Against One or Both Spouses

[ii] Standing to Sue for Refund

[iii] Offsetting Interests

[e] Failure to File

[f] Notifying IRS of Separation

[g] Innocent Spouse Relief

[i] Current Law

[ii] Former Law Contrasted

[iii] Relief for All Joint Filers

[iv] Separate Liability Election for Divorced or Separated Taxpayers--Generally

[v] Separate Liability Election for Divorced or Separated Taxpayers--Allocation of Deficiency

[vi] General Equitable Relief

[vii] Tax Court Review

[viii] California Law

[h] Family Court Enforcement of Tax Liabilities Despite Federal "Innocent Spouse" Treatment

[3] Married Taxpayers Filing Separately

[a] General Rules

[b] Treatment and Recharacterization of Income of Spouses Living Apart

[c] Recharacterization of Income by IRS for Failure to Notify Spouse of Community Income

[d] Recharacterization of Income by Ignorant Spouse

[i] Distinguished From Recharacterization by IRS

[ii] Requirements for Recharacterization

[iii] Proving Ignorance

[iv] Items Subject to Recharacterization

[4] Status as Head of Household

[a] Qualifying Persons

[b] Cohabitation Requirements

[c] Costs of Maintaining Household

[d] Rights of Certain Married Persons to Head of Household Filing Status

§§ 227.20-227.39 [Reserved]

§ 227.40 Federal Statutes

§ 227.41 Federal Regulations

§ 227.42 State Statutes

§ 227.43 Decisions

[1] Alimony Tax Treatment

[2] Child Support

[3] Deductibility of Attorney's Fees

[4] Family Support

[5] Income Tax Returns

[6] Property Division

[7] Retirement Benefits

[8] Sale or Exchange of Personal Residence

[9] Spousal Support

§ 227.44 Law Reviews

§ 227.45 Tax Pamphlets

§ 227.46 Text References

Original text by Frederick W. Campbell-Craven, J.D. n*

FOOTNOTES:
(n43)Footnote *. Periodic updates include contributions from additional authors and the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 227 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: TAX EFFECTS OF DISSOLUTION
PART I. SCOPE

19-227 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 227.01

AUTHOR: Original text by Frederick W. Campbell-Craven, J.D.

§ 227.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses the tax effects of a dissolution of marriage. It concentrates on federal income tax consequences, but discusses California law and includes relevant discussion of federal estate and gift taxation. It discusses the tax effects of both spousal and child support, including the dependency exemption. It also covers the tax effects of equal and unequal divisions of property, as well as the tax consequences of a sale or exchange of a principal residence. This chapter also discusses the deductibility of attorney's fees and the filing of income tax returns. All discussion covers both current law and, when still applicable, prior law.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 227 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: TAX EFFECTS OF DISSOLUTION
PART I. SCOPE

19-227 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 227.02

AUTHOR: Original text by Frederick W. Campbell-Craven, J.D.

§ 227.02 Cross References

For discussion of community property and issues relating to its management and control, see Ch. 122, Community Property

For further discussion of gifts, estates, and trusts, together with associated taxation issues, see Ch. 278, Gifts , Ch. 440, Probate: Necessity through Ch. 458E, Probate: Discharge , and Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Charitable, and Totten Trusts

For discussion of California personal income tax, see Ch. 540, Taxes and Assessments

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 227 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: TAX EFFECTS OF DISSOLUTION
PART I. SCOPE

19-227 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 227.03-227.09

AUTHOR: Original text by Frederick W. Campbell-Craven, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 227.03[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 227 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: TAX EFFECTS OF DISSOLUTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-227 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 227.10

AUTHOR: Original text by Frederick W. Campbell-Craven, J.D.

§ 227.10 Income Taxation of Spousal Support

[1] Background and Purpose of Current Law

[a] In General

Payments that qualify as alimony or separate maintenance payments are deductible by the payor-spouse under I.R.C. § 215 and includable in the income of the payee-spouse under I.R.C. § 71. Thus, the payor-spouse is treated as a conduit of income to the payee-spouse, unless the payments are made pursuant to an agreement that expressly designates that they are not to be deductible or includible as alimony [see Richardson v. Commissioner (1995), T.C. Memo 1995-554 ; see also Keegan (Kirk A., Jr.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1997-359 ; Daugharty (John F.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1997-349] .

This tax treatment of qualifying payments has remained unchanged for many years, but Congress fundamentally revised the requirements for qualification in 1984 and amended them in 1986 [see Tax Reform Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-369, § 422(a), as amended by Tax Reform Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-514, §§ 1843(b), 1881 (elimination of rule that instrument must expressly provide for termination of obligation on death and retroactivity to operative date of Tax Reform Act of 1984); see also Walters (Arlene) T.C. Memo. 1994-639 (1986 amendments also eliminated minimum term requirement that alimony must be paid for six years)]. Current and prior law seek to distinguish spousal support payments from both child support and payments made in satisfaction of a division of property, and to allow alimony tax treatment only to true spousal support. However, due to the considerable amount of litigation under prior law as to whether particular payments qualified for alimony tax treatment, Congress believed that a more objective test was required. Current law attempts to define alimony in a way that conforms to general notions of what types of payments constitute alimony [House Committee Report on § 422, Tax Reform Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-369, written prior to enactment of Tax Reform Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-514, §§ 1843(b), 1881, eliminating retroactively to operative date of Tax Reform Act of 1984 rule that instrument must expressly provide for termination of obligation on death]. Payments not meeting the objective test of current law will not qualify for alimony tax treatment regardless of whether they were intended by both parties to constitute spousal support.

PRACTICE TIP:

Many of the cases involving disputes over alimony tax treatment arise when the I.R.S. matches the payor's and payee's returns, and finds one deducting the payment while the other omits it from income.

[b] Effective Dates

Current federal law applies to payments made under dissolution or separation instruments signed, filed, and entered after 1984. If a decree of dissolution or legal separation entered after 1984 incorporates or adopts without change the terms of the alimony or separate maintenance payments under a dissolution or separation instrument entered before 1985, the decree is treated as entered before 1985. A change in the amount of alimony or separate maintenance payments, the time period over which the payments are to continue, or the addition or deletion of any contingencies or conditions relating to such payments, is a change of terms [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(e), Q-26; but cf. Marten (Virginia M.) v. Commissioner (1999) T.C. Memo. 1999-340 , reconsid. den., in Marten (Virginia M.) v. Commissioner (1999) T.C. Memo 2000-185 (under divorce decree entered in 1984 and modified in 1987, pre-1985 law applied to determine alimony tax treatment when modified decree did not expressly provide that post-1984 law would apply)].

Current federal law also applies to instruments executed or entered into (or treated as executed or entered into) before January 1, 1985, that are modified after that date, if the modification expressly provides that I.R.C. § 71, as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1984, applies to the instrument as modified [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(e), Q-26; see I.R.S. Letter Rul. 8634040 (Aug. 22, 1986)]. One court has held that an "express reference" is not limited to a "formulaic recitation of buzzwords" (for example, the law's formal statutory title). Any clear indication that the "new law" would apply is sufficient [Christoph v. United States (S.D. Ga. 1995) 919 F. Supp. 1576 (nunc pro tunc "clarification" to invoke new law was upheld, but retroactive "modification" would not likely be upheld if it affected rights of federal government)].

One private letter ruling indicates that the Internal Revenue Service (hereinafter the IRS) may take a relatively narrow view of the circumstances under which a modification after 1984 of a pre-1985 divorce decree will subject the decree to post-1984 tax law. In that ruling, the IRS stated that such a modification would not subject a pre-1985 decree to post-1984 tax law unless the modification expressly states that post-1984 law applies [I.R.S. Letter Rul. 8634040 (Aug. 22, 1986); *see*Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(e), Q-26; see also Libman v. Commissioner (1990) T.C. Memo 1990-629 (pre-1984 award of unallocated family support retained alimony treatment because 1988 modification for "child support" lacked express statement that post-1984 law applied)]. The IRS reasoned that, for purposes of applying the term "divorce or separation instrument" [see I.R.C. § 71(b)(2)] in ascertaining which tax laws apply, the underlying decree (or instrument) that establishes the obligation of paying support, rather than a modification decree, is determinative [I.R.S. Letter Rul. 8634040 (Aug. 22, 1986)].

[c] California Conformity to Federal Law

California's income tax treatment of spousal support is the same as that provided by federal income tax law for treatment of alimony [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17081, 17201; see § 227.10[1][a]]. Before 1987, California law contained the same requirements as federal income tax law before 1984 [see Stats. 1987, ch. 1138, §§ 53, 54, 66 (repealing Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17090, 17091, 17205), 189; see former Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17090, 17091, 17205].

[2] Requirements for Alimony Tax Treatment

[a] Qualified Payments

The Internal Revenue Code uses the term "alimony or separate maintenance payment" to characterize a payment that qualifies for alimony tax treatment; i.e., one that is deductible by the payor and includable in the payee's gross income [I.R.C. §§ 71(a), 215(a)]. A payment qualifies as an alimony or separate maintenance payment if it (1) is a cash payment [I.R.C. § 71(b)(1); see § 227.10[2][b]], (2) received under a divorce or separation instrument [I.R.C. §

71(b)(1)(A); see § 227.10[2][c]], (3) by or on behalf of a spouse [I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(A); see § 227.10[2][d]]. In addition, no liability to make any payments, whether in cash or property, may exist after the death of the payee-spouse [I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(D); see § 227.10[2][f]], the spouses must not have filed a joint return for the taxable year in which the payments are made [see I.R.C. § 71(e)], and legally separated spouses must not be members of the same household when the payment is made [I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(C); see § 227.10[e]].

In general, state court adjudications that retroactively designate divorce-related payments as alimony or child support are ignored for federal income tax purposes [see, e.g., Engelhardt v. Commissioner (1972) 58 T.C. 641, 649 , acq., 1978-1 C.B. 1]. An exception to this rule may be made, however, if the retroactive order is entered to correct a decree that mistakenly failed to reflect the true intention of the court when the decree was entered. In these cases, a nunc pro tunc order may be honored for federal income tax purposes if it is held to have clarified the true intent of the original decree [Johnson v. Commissioner, (1989) T.C. Memo 1989-415 ; see Christoph v. United States (S.D. Ga. 1995) 919 F. Supp. 1576] .

Some types of expenditures are ineligible for alimony tax treatment. For example, expenses incurred by a father to discover the whereabouts of his child and former spouse were held not to be deductible alimony [Radu Marian (1985, T.C. Memo 1985-554]. Although the case was decided under prior law, the result should not change under current law because current law retains the requirement that alimony payments must be made pursuant to a divorce decree or written separation instrument [I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(A); see § 227.10[2][c]].

[b] Payment in Cash

To qualify as an alimony or separate maintenance payment, a payment must be made in cash [I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)], which includes checks and money orderspayable on demand. Transfers of services or property (including debt instruments of a third party or an annuity contract), execution of a debt instrument by the payor, or the use of the payor's property do not qualify as alimony or separate maintenance payments [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(b), Q-5; see also David M. Daley (1991), T.C. Memo 1991-555 (in case involving indirect alimony under pre-1985 law, rent-free use of house by taxpayer's ex-spouse was not deductible as alimony because evidence indicated use either was intended as child support or was in lieu of interest payments owing to ex-spouse)]. Note that amounts garnished from wages to pay alimony are includable in a support obligor's taxable income, but are eligible for alimony tax treatment, and are deductible [Chambers v. Commissioner (2000), T.C. Memo 2000-218 ; see I.R.C. § 215].

[c] Received Under Divorce or Separation Instrument

To qualify as an alimony or separate maintenance payment, the payment must be received [see I.R.C. § 71(a); see also Feldman v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1991-153 (payments received but ordered refunded to payor-spouse); Caroline M. Coleman (1988) T.C. Memo 1988-442 (year of receipt)] under a "divorce or separation instrument" [I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(A)] that does not expressly designate the payment as one that is not includible in the payee's gross income and not allowable as a deduction from the payor's gross income [see I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(B); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(a), Q-2; see also I.R.C. § 71(b)(2)(A) (qualified divorce and separation instruments); Ewell v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1996-253 ; Richardson v. Commissioner (1995), T.C. Memo 1995-554 ; Harris v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1991-375 . The term "divorce or separation instrument" means a decree of divorce or separate maintenance, a written instrument incident to such a decree, a written separation agreement, or a decree requiring a spouse to make payments for the support and maintenance of the other spouse (for example, a decree awarding temporary spousal support) [I.R.C. § 71(b)(2); Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(a); see Estate of Felt v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1987-465, 1987 Tax Ct. Memo LEXIS 461 (effect of foreign divorce); cf. Landreth (Barbara A.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1997-169 (judge's handwritten docket sheet entry constituted "decree" for purposes of alimony tax treatment)]. Generally, there are no strict formalities governing written instruments for federal income tax purposes. A clear statement in written form memorializing the terms of support between the parties, along with evidence of mutual agreement or a meeting of the minds, are all that is required [see Dato-Nodurft (Antoinette J.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 2004-119 (payments made under written separation agreement may be taxable alimony even though agreement is not enforceable under state law); Leventhal v. Commissioner (2000) T.C. Memo 2000-92 (attorney's letters constituted written separation agreement with respect to postseparation mortgage and rental payments, but not postseparation support payments, so that husband's voluntary support payments did not qualify for alimony tax treatment); Benham v. Commissioner (2000) T.C. Memo 2000-165 (written agreement entered "in contemplation of separation status"); see also Jacklin v. Commissioner (1982) 79 T.C. 340, 350] . The IRS has privately ruled that a written transcription of an oral stipulation made in court qualifies as a written instrument [I.R.S. Letter Rul. 8821069 (Mar. 1, 1986)]. Similarly, the Tax Court has ruled that a letter from one party's attorney containing a proposed spousal and child support offer, signed and returned by the other spouse, constitutes a written separation agreement for purposes of federal income tax law [see Azenaro v. Commissioner (1989) T.C. Memo 1989-224 (interpreting former I.R.C. § 71(a)(2)); see also I.R.C. § 71(b)(2)(B)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Support Payments Must Be in Divorce or Separation Instrument. The parties to a California dissolution action may be disqualified from including voluntary payments made during separation and prior to final judgment in the payee spouse's income (and deducting those payments from the payor's income), if the parties fail to make the payments an obligation in the requisite divorce or separation instrument. At a minimum, the parties should include this obligation in a written separation agreement. The better practice, however, is for the parties to enter into a decree requiring support payments, if the payor is willing to be bound by the payment obligation. This decree can be a temporary support order in the form of a written pendente lite (or pretrial) stipulation first signed by the parties, submitted to the family law judge for signature, and then filed with the court. In addition to unequivocally setting a specific commencement date for the prejudgment, separation period spousal support, the IRS will treat such a stipulated order as presumptively valid; therefore, the order will avoid any questions which might be raised by a marital settlement agreement purporting to set prejudgment spousal support, particularly if such a document has been inartfully drafted by the parties. Further, the stipulated order removes any incentive the parties might otherwise have to prepare a marital settlement agreement immediately prior to the tax filing deadline, or to involve counsel or a tax preparer in the preparation or submission of an agreement that backdates the commencement of support payments.

The label that the parties attach to payments required under their marital termination agreement is not controlling. Therefore, merely stating in the agreement that a particular payment is to be treated as alimony will be ignored by the IRS if the payment does not meet the requirements for alimony tax treatment [Heffron (Ruthann M.), T.C. Memo. 1995-253 (payment of debts did not qualify as alimony, despite parties' label, because obligation did not cease on death or remarriage of supported spouse)]. Nor is the particular meaning of the term "alimony" under state law relevant if it is different from its meaning under federal tax law [Hoover (Linda), T.C. Memo. 1995-183] .

If a state court rewords the provisions of a separation agreement in its divorce decree, the separation agreement may be superseded by the decree for purposes ofdetermining whether payments are child support or alimony. For example, a divorce court reworded provisions of a separation agreement providing for combined child and spousal support to specify particular amounts for each type of support. The Tax Court held that the divorce decree superseded the agreement because the parties intended that the agreement be merged into the decree, thereby making the child support amount nondeductible. The court noted, however, that even if no merger had occurred, the decree still would supersede the agreement because alimony tax treatment is precluded for amounts fixed as child support in a divorce or separation instrument, and fixing the amounts for child support in the decree "overrides the lack of specificity in the separation agreement" [Platt v. Commissioner (1985), T.C. Memo 1985-592 ; see I.R.C. § 71(c)(1)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Consistent Treatment of Support Tax Consequences in Both Marital Settlement Agreements and Final Decree. The risk of the final decree overriding the tax benefits contemplated in a pretrial agreement between the parties generally is not a problem. If the parties have provided for specific tax consequences of support in a marital settlement agreement or pretrial stipulated order, they will usually agree to a final decree containing consistent terms. The danger, if any, will more often lie with attorney oversights in consistency of draftsmanship. Should the dissolution action proceed to trial as a contested matter, however, counsel should be prepared to emphasize to the court the adverse tax consequences that will result from the rendering of a decree that departs from previous specific support agreements between the parties.

Payments made to a supported spouse in anticipation that a court will retroactively order them do not qualify for alimony tax treatment. An amendment to a state court decree cannot be given retroactive effect for tax purposes unless the amendment merely corrects mathematical or clerical errors in the original order or is a "nunc pro tunc" order that merely clarifies the intent of the court in the original order [I.R.S. Letter Rul. 8645072 (Aug. 14, 1986); Christoph v. United States (S.D. Ga. 1995) 919 F. Supp. 1576 ; Johnson v. Commissioner (1989), T.C. Memo 1989-415 ; see Zurn v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1996-386 (Tax Court honored state court order that retroactively ("nunc pro tunc") changed alimony award from $1.00, to $1,000, per month)]. In contrast, payments made under the terms of a temporary support order that has been stayed may be subject to alimony tax treatment, depending on the legal effect of a stay on the support order in the jurisdiction involved [see Myrna LaBow (1987), T.C. Memo 1987-191 (stay did not render judgment ineffective under Connecticut law); see also Richardson v. Commissioner (1995), T.C. Memo 1995-554 (agreement that is unenforceable or invalidated does not change deductibility or inclusion of prior payments that otherwise qualify as alimony)].

Voluntary payments made under an oral agreement that is never incorporated into a divorce decree or reduced to writing do not qualify for alimony tax treatment, and neither income tax returns nor checks written to the supported spouse constitute the necessary written agreement [see O'Donnell v. Commissioner (1991) T.C. Memo 1991-74 ; see also Anderson (Curtis L.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1999-53 (voluntary support payments made by taxpayer to mentally ill ex-wife did not qualify for alimony tax treatment when there was no written obligation to make payments)]. Further, a unilateral written statement that a person is willing to pay a certain sum as spousal support does not constitute a "divorce or separation instrument." An agreement between the parties must be reduced to writing and signed by both parties [Mercurio v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1995-312 (taxpayer was also assessed an accuracy-related penalty for negligence because he understood the need for a written agreement)]. Overpayments of amounts required by the written instrument are not deductible [see Ritchie v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1989-426] , and voluntary increases that maintain support at a fixed percentage of the payor's income are not deductible if the written instrument requires a lower dollar amount [see Ellis v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1990-456] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Alimony Tax Treatment Foreclosed for All Periods Without Written Instrument. Providing for alimony tax treatment of spousal support payments is important at all stages of the proceedings, because alimony tax treatment of spousal support payments will normally be foreclosed for all periods of time, both prior to and after the final decree, during which there is no written instrument specifically providing for this desired tax treatment. During the period preceding the final decree, counsel should at least provide for alimony tax treatment in a marital settlement agreement. The more cautious practice is to obtain a temporary support order, in open court if necessary, but more conveniently, if possible, in the parties' written, signed stipulation on which the family law judge also signs off. Counsel should follow through and ensure that consistent provisions are included in the final decree.

If a taxpayer makes a lump-sum payment in settlement of both past and future support obligations, an allocation must be made between both types for federal income tax purposes. In the absence of an unequivocal allocation between these components, the lump sum is treated as paid in settlement of arrearages to the extent they exist, with the balance allocated to the satisfaction of future obligations. The amount allocated to arrearages retains the tax character that would have applied to timely payments made under the divorce or separation instrument. The tax character of the amount allocated to future obligations, however, must be determined separately [Bernard v. Commissioner (1986) 87 T.C.

1029, 1035-1037] .

[d] By or on Behalf of Spouse

To qualify as an alimony or separate maintenance payment, a payment must be received by or on behalf of a spouse or former spouse [I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(A),(d)]. Payments to third parties qualify as alimony payments made on behalf of the payee-spouse if they are made either under the terms of the divorce or separation instrument, or if they are made under a written request, consent, or ratification by the payee-spouse. The request, consent, or ratification must state that the parties intend the payment to be treated as an alimony or separate maintenance payment subject to I.R.C. § 71 [but see Heffron v. Commissioner,T.C. Memo 1995-253 (statement alone is insufficient if payment does not otherwise meet requirements of federal tax law)], and must be received by the payor-spouse before the filing date of the payor's first tax return for the taxable year in which payment is made. To qualify, payment actually must be "on behalf" of the payee-spouse. For example, cash payments of the payee-spouse's rent, mortgage, tax, or tuition liabilities qualify. Premiums paid by the payor-spouse for term or life insurance on the payor's life under the terms of a divorce or separation instrument also qualify as payments on behalf of the payee-spouse to the extent that the payee-spouse is the owner of the policy. However, payments to maintain property owned by the payor-spouse and used by the payee-spouse (including mortgage payments, real estate taxes, and insurance premiums) are not payments on behalf of a spouse [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(b), Q-6, Q-7; see Baxter (Linda J.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1999-190 (mortgage payments made on residence as form of support qualified for alimony tax treatment); I.R.S. Letter Rul. 8710089 (Dec. 11, 1986) (payments under temporary support order qualify for alimony tax treatment only to extent not used to maintain payor-spouse's property)]. However, the payor can deduct mortgage interest and taxes paid on jointly held property if paid with separate property even if he or she has a right to reimbursement [Ewell v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1996-253 ; 71 T.C.M. 3134] . Further, it should be made clear that the obligation to make the payments terminates on the death or remarriage of the spouse on whose behalf they are to be made [see Heffron v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1995-253]; see also Ewell v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1996-253 ; 71 T.C.M. 3134 ; Israel v. Commissioner (1995) T.C. Memo 1995-500 (see § 227.10[3][f]).

Other examples of qualifying payments include payments for education expenses [Hopkinson (Helen C.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1999-154] , medical insurance premiums, and car expenses made directly to the vendors on behalf of the payee spouse [Medlin (Alexandra M.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1998-378] .

[e] Legally Separated Spouses Not Members of Same Household

In the case of an individual legally separated from his or her spouse under a decree of divorce or of separate maintenance, a payment qualifies for alimony tax treatment only if the payor and payee are not members of the same household when the payment is made [I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(C)]. For purposes of this requirement, a dwelling unit formerly shared by both spouses is not considered two separate households even if the separated spouses physically separate themselves within the dwelling unit. However, separated spouses are not treated as members of the same household if one spouse is preparing to depart from the household of the other spouse on the date the payment is made and does depart no more than one month after that date [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(b), Q-9].

For individuals who are not legally separated under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance, a payment of temporary spousal support under a written separation agreement or temporary support order may qualify for alimony tax treatment whether or not the spouses occupy the same household [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(b), Q-9; see Benham v. Commissioner (2000) T.C. Memo 2000-165 (support payments qualified for alimony tax treatment despite fact that couple shared marital residence, when payments were made under written separation agreement and couple was not legally separated); *cf.*Bertram W. Coltman, Jr. (1991) 61 T.C.M. 2207 (CCH) , aff'd, 980 F.2d 1134 (7th Cir. 1992) (separate residences required to qualify for alimony tax treatment under pre-1985 law)].

[f] No Payment Liability After Payee-Spouse's Death

To qualify for alimony tax treatment, no liability to make any payments, whether in cash or property, may exist after the death of the payee-spouse [I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(D); see Kean v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo 2003-163 (temporary family support payments qualified for alimony tax treatment); Berry v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo 2000-373 (payment of wife's attorney's fees was for attorney's benefit and nondeductible as alimony); Gonzales (Marie A.) v. Commissioner (1999) T.C. Memo 1999-332 (temporary family support payments did not qualify for alimony tax treatment); Sroufe (Carl and Dolores) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1995-256 (alimony tax treatment denied because payments were required to be guaranteed and secured by payor, meaning that he would have been required to continue payments to payee's estate after death); Stokes v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1994-456] . If the payor-spouse is required to make payments after the death of the payee-spouse, none of the payments (whether made before or after the death of the payee) qualifies as an alimony or separate maintenance payment [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(b), Q-10]. Under California law, unless the parties agree otherwise in writing, the obligation of a party under an order for the support of the other party terminates on the death of either party or the remarriage of the supported party [Fam. Code § 4337]. For example, a court of appeal recently held that payment of the supported spouse's medical insurance premiums is in the nature of spousal support; therefore, the obligation to pay premiums ends on the supported spouse's death, if the parties' agreement provided for no continuing spousal support payments on either party'sdeath [In re Marriage of Benjamins (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 423, 432, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 313] .

Under provisions of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 [Pub. L. No. 98-369] that have now been eliminated [see I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(D), as amended by Tax Reform Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-514, § 1843(b)], the divorce or separation instrument was required to state expressly that the liability to pay support would terminate on the death of the recipient or the payments made under that instrument would not qualify as deductible alimony [former I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(D), as amended by Tax Reform Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-369, § 422; see I.R.S. Letter Rul. 8551012 (Sept. 19, 1985)]. This requirement has been eliminated, retroactive to the operative date of the 1984 Act [see Pub. L. No. 99-514, § 1881; *see also*I.R.S. Notice 87-9 (Jan. 14, 1987)], and the failure to include such a provision in an instrument does not affect the deductibility of support payments [I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(D); Mukherjee v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo 2004-98 (award of "lump sum alimony" by Georgia jury did not qualify for alimony tax treatment, because under Georgia law payments of "lump sum alimony" are in nature of property settlement and do not terminate at payee's death by operation of state law); Pettid (Fred J.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1999-126 (support payments made pursuant to annulment settlement qualified for alimony tax treatment)]. Nevertheless, the provision may be added merely to clarify that all support obligations will terminate on the recipient's death and that the payments, therefore, are deductible [see I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(D), as amended by Tax Reform Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-514, § 1843(b)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Inclusion of Provision Terminating Support on Payee's Death. Although not required under current law, inclusion in a written agreement or decree of a provision expressly stating that the liability to pay support terminates on the payee's death safeguards the payor's right to deduction of support payments if the law changes in the future and issues of retroactivity arise.

The requirement that liability for payment terminate at the supported spouse's death establishes an objective test to distinguish spousal support from child support or property settlement payments, which are not contingent on the survival of the payee-spouse. To prevent violation of this rule, no liability to make payments must survive after the death of the payee-spouse as a substitute for predeath payments that otherwise would qualify as alimony or separate maintenance payments. If liability to make substitute payments exists, none of the otherwise qualifying payments will qualify as alimony or separate maintenance payments [see I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(D); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(b), Q-13; Okerson v. Comm'r (2004) 123 T.C. 258 (payments that were to continue, in order to finance children's education, if payee died before specified amount was paid in full did not qualify for alimony tax treatment); Gilbert v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo 2003-92 (unallocated spousal and child support payments did not qualify for alimony tax treatment when wage attachment provision might permit court to attach obligor's wages after obligee's death); Miller (Cheryl J.) v. Commissioner, 273, T.C. Memo. 1999-273 (unallocated payments for spousal and child support did not qualify for alimony tax treatment when payments were made under temporary court orders that would not automatically terminate on payee's death); Preston (Forest R.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1999-49 ; Megibow (Alex Jeffrey) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1998-455] . The divorce or separation instrument need not state, however, that no liability to make substitute payments exists [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(b), Q-13]. Whether postdeath payments constitute substitute payments and the amount of the predeath payments for which they are a substitute depend on all of the facts and circumstances in each case [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(b), Q-14]. Legislative history indicates that amounts payable under a life insurance contract on the life of the payee-spouse are not a liability that would affect the status of other payments made by the payor-spouse [House Committee Report on § 422, Tax Reform Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-369].

[g] Nondeductibility of Property Settlement Payments

The Tax Court has held that for purposes of I.R.C. §§ 71 and 215, payments made by one spouse to another in settlement of property rights, unlike alimony payments, are not tax deductible [I.R.C. §§ 71, 215]. The characterization of payments as either alimony or property settlement is a question for federal, not state, law. However, state law regarding property and support, and a state court's intent in ordering the payment, are relevant in making the determination [Prater v. C.I.R. (10th Cir. 1995) 55 F.3d 527, 529-530 ; see Maloney v. Commissioner (2000) T.C. Memo 200-214 (payment transferring share of ex-husband's military separation pay to ex-wife did not qualify for alimony tax treatment when divorce decree explicitly denied spousal support and provided that transfer of share would not be considered taxable event)]. In deciding whether payments are alimony or property settlement payments, the Tax Court in Shirley Jean Beard delineated the following factors: (1) whether the parties intended the payments to divide assets; (2) whether the payee spouse relinquished property rights to receive the payments; (3) whether the payment amount is fixed and not contingent on events including the payee's death or remarriage; and (4) whether the payments together with other property awarded to the payee spouse equalled more or less one half of the property acquired by the parties during the marriage [see Beard v. Commissioner (1981) 77 T.C. 1275, 1284-1285] . Although the case was decided under the versions of I.R.C. §§ 71 and 215 before the Tax Reform Act of 1984, later Tax Court decisions have continued to consider at least some, if not most of, these factors in determining whether payments are alimony or nondeductible as property settlement payments [see, e.g., Walstatter v. Commissioner T.C. Memo. 1992-152 (payment terms were more akin to property settlement than support despite judgment's characterization of payments as alimony); cf. Spector v. Commisioner, T.C. Memo 1996-298 (payments to ex-wife labelled as "alimony" were allocated between alimony and property settlement on basis of all facts and circumstances); Prater v. C.I.R. (10th Cir. 1995) 55 F.3d 527, 529 (similar, but not identical list of factors in 10th Circuit)].

In addition, if the spouses' divorce or separation instrument clearly designates that a payment is not deductible by the payor under I.R.C. § 215 and not includable in the recipient's income under I.R.C. § 71, then the payment cannot qualify later for alimony tax treatment, even if the spouses change their minds [see I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(B); see Maloney v. Commissioner (2000) T.C. Memo 2000-214 (payment transferring share of ex-husband's military separation pay to ex-wife did not qualify for alimony tax treatment when divorce decree explicitly denied spousal support and provided that transfer of share would not be considered taxable event); cf. Baker v. Commissioner (2000) T.C. Memo 2000-164 (military retirement payments labeled "property settlement" in divorce decree were alimony for federal income tax purposes when decree lacked express direction that payments would not be taxable under I.R.C. § 71 nor deductible under I.R.C. § 215)].

[3] Payments Fixed for Child Support

[a] Inapplicability of Alimony Tax Treatment

Alimony tax treatment does not apply to any part of any payment that the divorce or separation instrument fixes, in terms of an amount of money or a part of the payment, as a sum payable for the support of the children of the payor-spouse [I.R.C. § 71(c)(1); Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1(e); Bay (John B.) T.C. Memo. 1994-389] . Child support is therefore not deductible by the payor or includable in income by the payee. If any payment is less than the amount specified for child and spousal support in the divorce or separation instrument, only the amount of the payment in excess of the amount payable for child support may receive alimony tax treatment. For example, if the divorce decree specifies that $500 per month is to be paid for child support and $1,000 per month is to be paid for spousal support, and only $1,200 is paid in a given month, $500 is treated as child support and $700 may qualify for alimony tax treatment. If only $400 is paid, the entire amount is child support and none of the payment is deductible by the payor [see I.R.C. § 71(c)(3); see also Blair (Gary Dee) T.C. Memo. 1988-581 (reduced monthly payments to former spouse treated as child support despite contrary oral agreement)].

[b] Use of Family Support Under Prior Law to Treat Child Support as Spousal Support

"Family support" is an agreement between the parents (or an order or judgment) for the payment of combined child and spousal support without designating the amount to be paid for each [Fam. Code §§ 92, 3586]. The primary purpose behind a family support agreement is to obtain alimony tax treatment for payments that are, in fact, child support. Under the law as it existed before the Tax Reform Act of 1984, the United States Supreme Court held that a payment was not to be treated as child support unless explicitly so designated in the divorce or separation instrument [Commissioner v. Lester (1961) 366 U.S. 299, 306, 81 S. Ct. 1343, 6 L. Ed. 2d 306] . The same rule governs even now if a divorce decree, entered prior to 1985, is modified after 1984 without expressly providing that the Tax Reform Act of 1984 applies [see, e.g., Walstatter (Bennett S.) T.C. Memo. 1992-152 ; Libman (Nancy W.) T.C. Memo. 1990-629 (payee spouse required to treat pre-1984 award of "unallocated family support" as alimony despite 1988 modification referring to "child support"; Thornton v. Commissioner,T.C. Memo 1992-286 (Tax Court would not recharacterize as child support payments denominated as alimony in decree entered prior to 1985)]. Under this rule, taxpayers were able to disguise child support payments as spousal support to obtain alimony tax treatment by providing for a cutback in spousal support on the death or emancipation of a child. This treatment was attractive if the payor-spouse, as was usually the case, was subject to higher tax rates than the payee-spouse.

[c] Restrictions on Use of Family Support Under Current Law

[i] Reduction on Happening of Contingency Relating to Child

Current law greatly restricts, but does not completely eliminate, the potentially advantageous tax treatment of family support [see I.R.C. § 71(c)(2); see also § 227.10[3][b]] by providing that if an amount specified in the divorce or separation instrument will be reduced on the happening of a contingency relating to a child, such as attaining a specified age, marrying, dying, leaving school, or a similar event, an amount equal to the amount of the reduction must be treated as fixed for child support [I.R.C. § 71(c)(2)(A); cf. Murphy (Ronald J.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1996-258 (payments of "family support" did not qualify for alimony tax treatment when payments might have continued after death of former wife)]. Although the statute is not specific, it is clear that only contingencies relating to a child of the payor-spouse, rather than a child of the payee alone, are intended [see Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(c), Q-16; cf. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1(e)]. A contingency relates to a child of the payor-spouse if it depends on any event relating to that child, whether or not the event is certain or likely to occur. Such events include the child's attaining a specified age or income level, dying, marrying, leaving school, leaving the spouse's household, or gaining employment [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(c), Q-17].

In a private ruling, the IRS has indicated that reductions for each week that achild has uninterrupted visitation with the noncustodial parent constitute reductions on the happening of a contingency relating to a child. As a result, the reduction in payments reduced the amount treated as alimony. Although the agreement did not allocate a portion of the fixed payments as child support, a provision that payments not be reduced by a specific amount for each week that the children visited with the noncustodial parent led the I.R.S. to conclude that the total amount of the weekly reduction constituted child support, not deductible by the noncustodial parent nor taxable to the custodial parent [I.R.S. Letter Rul. 8746085 (Aug. 21, 1987)].

A reduction in payments is treated as fixed for child support if the reduction will occur at a time that clearly can be associated with a contingency relating to a child [I.R.C. § 71(c)(2)(B)]. A reduction is presumed clearly associated with the happening of a contingency relating to a child of the payor under either of the following circumstances [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(c), Q-18]:

(1) The payments are to be reduced no more than six months before or after the date the child is to attain the age of 18, 21, or the local age of majority.

(2) The payments are to be reduced on two or more occasions that occur no more than one year before or after a different child of the payor-spouse attains a certain age between the ages of 18 and 24, inclusive. The certain age must be the same for each child, but need not be a whole number of years.

In all other situations, reductions will not be treated as clearly associated with the happening of a contingency relating to a child of the payor [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(c), Q-18; see Heller (Madeline Davis) T.C. Memo. 1994-423 (provision in divorce instrument allowing spousal support to be decreased by court-ordered increases in child support did not constitute contingency related to child under I.R.C. § 71(c)(2)); *see*Letter Rul. 9625050 (termination on "expected retirement date"); Letter Rul. 8820052 (Feb. 19, 1988) (alimony treatment allowed if presumptions are avoided)]. Either the IRS or the taxpayer may rebut the presumption by showing that the time at which the payments are to be reduced was determined independently of any contingencies relating to the children of the payor. Thus, for example, the presumption may be rebutted by showing that spousal support payments are to be made for a period customarily provided in the local jurisdiction, such as a period equal to one half of the duration of the marriage [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(c), Q-18; see Hill v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1996-179 (payments were alimony as I.R.S. proved that termination date was determined independently); see also Shepherd v. Commissioner (2000) T.C. Memo 2000-174 (payments treated as alimony when it was mere coincidence that 10-year term of alimony payments ended within six months of child's 18th birthday)].

EXAMPLE:

H and W are divorced on July 1, 1992, when their children C (born July 15, 1977) and D (born September 23, 1979) are 14 and 12, respectively. Under the divorce decree, H is to make alimony payments of $2,000 per month to W. The payments are to be reduced to $1,500 per month on January 1, 1998, and to $1,000 per month on January 1, 2002. On January 1, 1998, C will be 20 years, 5 months and 17 days old. On January 1, 2002, D will be 22 years, 3 months and 9 days old. Each of the reductions is to occur no more than one year before or after a different child of H attains the age of 21 years and 4 months. (Actually, the reductions are to occur no more than one year before or after C and D attain any of the ages 21 years, 3 months and 9 days through 21 years 5 months and 17 days.) Therefore, the reductions are presumed to be clearly associated with a contingency relating to C and D. Unless the presumption is rebutted, $1,000 per month must be treated as fixed for child support and will not receive alimony tax treatment [see Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(c), Q-18].

In contrast, in cases in which an original child support order was lacking, an amount fixed for spousal support under a marital termination agreement remains fully deductible even though the agreement requires that the amount to be paid must be reduced if the supported spouse obtains a later order for a "contingency relating to a child" within the meaning of I.R.C. § 71(c). If a child support order were obtained under those circumstances, however, only the reduced spousal support, rather than the child support, would remain deductible [I.R.S. Letter Rul. 8633040 (May 21, 1986)].

[ii] Effect of Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline

Under the statewide uniform child support guideline [see Fam. Code § 4055 et seq.], orders and stipulations otherwise in compliance with the guideline may designate as "family support" an unallocated total sum for support of the spouse and any children without specifically labeling all or any portion as "child support," as long as the amount is adjusted to reflect the effect of additional deductibility. The amount of the order must be adjusted to maximize the tax benefits for both parents [Fam. Code § 4066; see Fam. Code § 4074]. However, another statute in the guideline requires the court to state in writing or on the record the amount of support that would have been ordered under the guideline's formula whenever the court is ordering an amount for support that differs from the formula amount [Fam. Code § 4056(a)(1)]. This provision is required by federal law [45 C.F.R. § 302.56(g)].

Compliance with this provision may risk losing alimony tax treatment for family support. The IRS considers any part of family support that has been identified by the court or agreed to by the parties as actually for the support of children, such as the amount found by the court to be due as child support under the guideline's formula, as nondeductible child support. However, there is no apparent risk of losing alimony tax treatment if the allocation is only suggested and not ordered by the court or agreed to by the parties--such as when a court, in the context of ruling on a stipulated support order, has merely posed a possible segregation of amounts between child and spousal support without formally setting these forth in the order [Ambrose (Evelyn R.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1996-128 (alimony tax treatment upheld)].

To minimize the risk, no findings as to the amount of formula support should be included in an agreement for family support. Counsel may also wish to argue that such a finding is not required under Fam. Code § 4056 with regard to family support. Fam. Code §§ 4066 and 4074 make it clear that family support is available under the guideline. It may be contended that Section 4056 findings are required only if the total amount of support is less than the formula amount; with regard to family support, the total ordered would exceed the formula amount.

[4] Rules to Prevent Front-Loading of Payments

[a] Purpose

The so-called anti-front-loading rules are designed to prevent support payments from being structured in such a way that large payments are received in the first few years and greatly decreased thereafter. In the past, property settlement payments were sometimes combined with support payments in this manner. The larger payments were designed to compensate the payee-spouse for a division of property and, by treating the property settlement payments as alimony, to produce an overall tax advantage for both spouses.

Because there are other reasons besides tax reduction for front-loading payments to a payee spouse, the anti-front-loading rules provide a safe harbor test for the decrease in alimony/support payments that may be made over the first three years. If payments decrease more than the safe harbor amount, the payor spouse must take the excess into income in the third postseparation year, and the payee spouse is allowed a deduction for the same amount [I.R.C. § 71(f)]. It is highly important to follow the safe harbor rules, because payor spouses who deduct alimony payments can be liable for substantial penalties for understatement of tax if their payments are later found to be ineligible for alimony tax treatment [see Magnus (Alexander B.) T.C. Memo. 1990-596 (25-percent penalty under former I.R.C. § 6661 for lump-sum payment not qualified under pre-1984 rules)].

[b] Postseparation Years Defined

The "first postseparation year" is defined as the first calendar year in which the payor spouse paid to the payee spouse alimony or separate maintenance payments to which I.R.C. § 71 applies. The second and third postseparation years are defined as the first and second succeeding calendar years, respectively [I.R.C. § 71(f)(6)].

[c] Excess Alimony Payments

Under the anti-front-loading rules, excess alimony payments in the first and second post-separation years will trigger recapture of alimony deductions in the third post-separation year [I.R.C. § 71(f)(1)]. For the first post-separation year, the excess payments are the amount, if any, by which the first-year payments exceed $15,000 plus the average of the following [I.R.C. § 71(f)(3)]: (1) the total payments made in the second post-separation year reduced by any excess payments for that year [I.R.C. § 71(f)(3)(B)(i)(I)]; and (2) the total payments made in the third post-separation year. Excess payments for the second post-separation year are the amount, if any, by which the total of second-year payments exceeds the sum of (1) $15,000 plus (2) the total third-year payments [I.R.C. § 71(f)(4)].

[d] Recapture Rule

Excess alimony payments must be recaptured and included in the payor spouse's gross income for the payor spouse's taxable year that begins in the third postseparation year [I.R.C. § 71(f)(1)(A),(2)]. The payee spouse is allowed a deduction for the amount of the excess payments in computing his or her adjusted gross income for his or her taxable year that begins in the third post-separation year [I.R.C. § 71(f)(1)(B)].

EXAMPLE:

X pays $50,000 in alimony in the first postseparation year, $20,000 in the second, and nothing in the third. These payments generate both first and second postseparation year excesses. In the second postseparation year, the amount of excess is $5,000 (($20,000 - 0) - $15,000). To determine the first postseparation year excess, the $5,000 must be subtracted from X's $20,000 second postseparation year payment, yielding $15,000. Thus, the average of the adjusted second postseparation year and the third postseparation year payments equals $7,500 (($15,000 + 0) / 2). The first postseparation year excess is $27,500 (($50,000 - $7,500) - $15,000). In the third postseparation year, the payor spouse must include $32,500 in gross income (the $5,000 second postseparation year excess amount plus the $27,500 first postseparation year excess amount). The payee spouse may take corresponding deductions for the same years [see Tax Reform Act of 1986, Conference Committee Report, Title XVIII, p. II-849; see also I.R.C. § 71(f)].

[e] Exceptions to Recapture

There are three exceptions to the rule requiring recapture of excess alimony payments. First, the recapture rule does not apply to payments made under a decree awarding temporary spousal support [I.R.C. § 71(b)(2)(C),(f)(5)(B)]. Second, recapture is not required if payments cease due to the death of either the payor or payee, or due to the remarriage of the payee-spouse before the close ofthe third postseparation computation year [I.R.C. § 71(f)(5)(A); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(d), Q-25].

The third exception to the recapture rule applies to payments made pursuant to a continuing liability over a period of not less than three years to pay a fixed portion of the income from a business or property, or from compensation for unemployment or self-employment. Recapture does not apply to these payments because they are fluctuating payments not within the control of the payor-spouse [I.R.C. § 71(f)(5)(C)].

[f] Unplanned Events Triggering Recapture

The exceptions to the recapture rule discussed in § 227.10[5][e] are the only recognized exceptions to the recapture rule. Treasury Regulations issued under prior law suggested that recapture could be triggered by a decline in payments due to any other reason, including the payor's failure to make timely payments, a modification of the divorce or separation instrument, a reduction in the support needs of the payee, or a reduction in the ability of the payor to provide support [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(d), Q-25]. However, because of changes brought about by enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, [Pub. L. No. 99-514], which eliminated the "minimum-term" rule and made other changes to the recapture rule, it is unclear whether all of the events suggested in the Treasury Regulations would still trigger recapture. Nevertheless, practitioners would do well to advise their clients that recapture is a continuing possibility, even if recapture could not occur under the arrangement originally worked out in the divorce or separation instrument.

PRACTICE TIP:

Impact of Recapture. Any decision by counsel to recommend seeking modification of a support obligation should first consider the impact of recapture. Counsel for the payor spouse should also caution the client that failure to make timely payments may trigger recapture.

[5] Election to Forgo Alimony Tax Treatment

The parties may designate in the divorce or separation instrument that payments that otherwise would qualify for alimony tax treatment are nondeductible by the payor and excludable from the gross income of the payee [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(b), Q-8; see I.R.C. § 71(b)(1)(B)]. If the spouses have executed a written separation agreement, any writing signed by both spouses that expressly designates otherwise qualifying alimony or separate maintenance payments as nondeductible and excludable, and that refers to the written separation agreement, is sufficient to elect out of alimony tax treatment. If the spouses are subject to temporary spousal support orders, the designation must be made in the original or a subsequent temporary order. A copy of the instrument containing the designation of payments as nondeductible and excludable must be attached to the first tax return filed by the payee for each year in which the designation applies [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1T(b), Q-8; see Richardson v. Commissioner (1995) T.C. Memo 1995-554 ; see also Dato-Nodurft (Antoinette J.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 2004-119 (payments made under written separation agreement that failed to state that payments were not deductible by husband or includable in wife's income were taxable alimony payments)].

[6] Payor's Inclusion of Payee's Taxpayer I.D. Number

The payor-spouse must include the payee's social security number on his or her tax return for the taxable year in which payment is made. Failure to comply with this requirement does not cause loss of the deduction, but does subject the payor to a $50 penalty. The penalty is waived, however, if the failure to comply was due to reasonable cause rather than willful neglect. A similar penalty is imposed on any spouse who fails to provide his or her tax identification number to the payor for reporting purposes [I.R.C. § 215(c); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.215-1T, Q-1; see I.R.C. §§ 6723, 6724(a)].

PRACTICE TIP:

IRS Correlation of Income and Deductions. Counsel for the payee spouse in particular should tactfully remind the client that the payor's reporting of the payee's social security number will enable the IRS to easily identify amounts deducted by the payor but not reported as income by the payee.

[7] Alimony Trusts

[a] Nature and Purpose

A trust can be used to assure that spousal support payments are made on time. In the absence of special rules applicable to alimony trusts, the supporting spouse is required, under the grantor trust rules, to include in his or her income the trust income paid to the supported spouse because that income is used to satisfy the support obligation of the supporting spouse [I.R.C. §§ 677, 678; Treas. Reg. § 1.682(a)-1(a)(3)]. However, if the parties are divorced or separated under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance or a written separation agreement, trust income that the supported spouse is entitled to receive is includable in his or her income, and not in the income of the supporting spouse, regardless of the grantor trust rules [I.R.C. § 682(a); cf. I.R.C. § 672(e)(2), as amended by Pub. L. No. 100-647, § 1014(a)(1) (person legally separated from spouse under decree of divorce or separate maintenance not considered married for purpose of applying "spousal attribution" provisions of grantor trust rules)]. The supported spouse is treated as a beneficiary of the trust, subject to the rules generally applicable to trust beneficiaries [I.R.C. § 682(b)]. Thus, the supported spouse is taxable only on distributions from the trust made out of the trust's distributable net income and notout of trust corpus [I.R.C. §§ 652(a), 662(a)]. The trust income distributed retains its tax character (for example, capital gain, tax-exempt, etc.) in the hands of the supported spouse [I.R.C. §§ 652(b), 662(b)]. The supporting spouse may not deduct trust distributions included in the income of the supported spouse because these amounts are not included in the supporting spouse's income in the first place, and therefore do not need to be deducted [I.R.C. §§ 215(d), 682; see Treas. Reg. §

1.682(a)-1(a)(3)].

[b] Recognition of Gain or Loss on Transfers Into Trust

A transfer of property to create the trust, in contrast to income derived from the trust, should be examined to determine whether taxable gain or loss must be recognized on the transfer. In general, transfers of property into an alimony trust [see I.R.C. § 682] may be made without recognition of taxable gain or loss [see I.R.C. § 1041(a)] (except to the extent that the sum of the liabilities assumed and the liabilities to which the property is subject exceeds the total adjusted basis in the property [see I.R.C. § 1041(e)]), if the transfer in trust is not of an installment obligation [I.R.C. §§ 453B(g), 1041(a)].

[c] Amount Fixed as Payable for Child Support

The tax treatment afforded alimony trusts is not available to the extent that the decree, written separation agreement, or trust instrument fixes an amount of the trust income as payable for child support. If trust income is less than the amount necessary to pay both spousal and child support, all income is allocated first to child support [I.R.C. § 682(a)]. Thus, trust income fixed for child support is taxable to the supporting parent under the grantor trust rules, achieving the same result as under the regular alimony rules.

However, under the regular alimony rules, as amended in 1984, the amount deemed to be fixed for child support includes any amount otherwise qualifying as alimony that will be reduced on the happening of a contingency related to a child [I.R.C. § 71(c)(2); see § 227.10[3][c]]. Before enactment of this amendment, it was possible to achieve alimony tax treatment for child support by combining it with spousal support as a single obligation, and by causing the payments to be reduced on the death or emancipation of the child. The 1984 amendment to the alimony rules was not added to the alimony trust rules. As a result, it is unclear whether prior law still governs in this area. If it does, it appears that amounts received from a trust for child support that are not specifically designated as child support are taxable to the supported spouse rather than the supporting spouse, even if these amounts will be eliminated on the death or emancipation of the child. No reported decision has adopted this interpretation, however.

[d] Use to Avoid Requirements for Alimony Tax Treatment

The establishment of an alimony trust appears to permit the parties to avoid the rules and requirements governing spousal support paid outside of a trust [see discussion of these rules and requirements in § 227.10[2]]. For example, there is no requirement that payments terminate on the death of the payee-spouse or that payments be made in cash [I.R.C. §§ 71(b), 682(a)]. In addition, no front-loading rules apply to alimony trusts [see I.R.C. §§ 71(f), 682(a)]. The sole requirement for alimony trust treatment is that the parties be divorced or separated under a decree or written separation agreement [I.R.C. § 682(a)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Advantages of Alimony Trust. At least until antiabuse legislation is enacted, an alimony trust is presently an obvious, effective, and legitimate means to avoid the strict limitations otherwise governing spousal support.

[e] Relevance of Prior Law

Current law applies to divorce or separation instruments executed after 1984 and to instruments executed before 1985 that have been modified after 1984 to provide expressly for the applicability of current law. Prior law continues to govern arrangements under earlier instruments. Only two types of alimony trusts were recognized under prior law: Section 71 trusts and Section 682 trusts. The boundary line between these two trusts was unclear, but the regulations state that I.R.C. § 71 applied to a trust if the payments from the trust qualified for alimony tax treatment under then-current law [Treas. Reg. § 1.682(a)-1(a)(2)]. Section 682 trusts were those whose payments did not qualify for alimony tax treatment under I.R.C. § 71 [Treas. Reg. § 1.682(a)-1(a)(2)]. The regulations also indicate that I.R.C. § 682 governed preexisting trusts, created for another purpose, that were used to fund support obligations at the time of divorce or separation. Section 71 trusts, on the other hand, were those created to fund spousal support [see Treas. Reg. § 1.682(a)-1(a)(2)].

The proper tax treatment of these two types of trusts was equally unsettled. The IRS takes the position that all payments received from a Section 71 trust are taxable ordinary income to the recipient spouse, regardless of whether made out of trust income or out of corpus [Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1(c)(3)]. Under I.R.C. § 682(b), however, which formerly specifically stated its application to both Section 71 trusts and Section 682 trusts, the recipient spouse is treated as a beneficiary of the trust and thus is taxable only to the extent that trust distributions are made out of distributable net income [see I.R.C. §§ 652(a), 662(a)]. Furthermore, because the recipient is a trust beneficiary, the tax character of trust income is passed through to the recipient. Thus, for example, tax-exempt income remains tax-exempt in the hands of the recipient spouse [Ellis v. United States (6th Cir. 1969) 416 F.2d 894, 896-897 ; see I.R.C. §§ 652(b), 662(b)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 227 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: TAX EFFECTS OF DISSOLUTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-227 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 227.11

AUTHOR: Original text by Frederick W. Campbell-Craven, J.D.

§ 227.11 Estate and Gift Tax Consequences of Spousal Support

[1] Gift Tax

Payments made in satisfaction of support rights, whether in the form of periodic payments or as a lump sum, are not taxable gifts. A taxable gift results, however, to the extent that the payments exceed the value of the support rights [see Jones v. Commissioner, (1943) 1 T.C. 1207 ; Rev. Rul. 68-379, 1968-2 C.B. 414]. If the spouses are still married at the time of the payment, the entire amount is exempt from gift tax if made in a form qualifying for the unlimited marital deduction, regardless of whether the amount of the payment exceeds the value of the support rights relinquished [see I.R.C. § 2523(a)]. This exemption is subject to special rules concerning disallowance of the deduction if the donor's spouse is not a United States citizen [see I.R.C. § 2523(i), as added by Pub. L. No. 100-647, § 5033(b), effective for gifts on or after July 14, 1988)].

The interests of all the transferees must be valued for gift tax purposes if one spouse gives up his or her support rights in exchange for a transfer benefiting that spouse and other adults. The value of the support rights offsets the value of what the spouse receives, but any value in excess of the support rights is deemed a gift. The taxation of any transfer to an adult other than the spouse is not ordinarily affected by the released support rights [Rev. Rul. 77-314, 1977-2 C.B. 349].

EXAMPLE:

H and W execute a separation agreement and divorce three years later. W releases support rights worth $50,000 in exchange for H placing $100,000 in trust once the divorce becomes final. W has a life income interest worth $60,000 and the remainder, worth $40,000, belongs to an adult child. H is deemed to have made a gift to W of $10,000 ($60,000 - $50,000) and a gift to the child of $40,000 [see Rev. Rul. 77-314, 1977-2 C.B. 349].

If the value of the spouse's support rights exceeds the value of what the spouse receives, the excess may serve as consideration for the transfer to those other than the spouse. The donor spouse must show that the other spouse specifically released the support rights in return for having the donor make the transfer to a third party. If the spouse releasing support rights actively bargained for the transfer, the value of the transferor's gift to the third party is reduced by the amount of the support rights that were released. The spouse releasing support rights, however, is deemed to have made a gift to the third party to the extent support rights are released for that party's benefit [Rev. Rul. 79-363, 1979-2 C.B. 345 ; Rev. Rul. 77-314, 1977-2 C.B. 349]. If the spouse releasing marital rights did not intend to benefit a third party, the release of support rights is not deemed consideration for a transfer to the third party. If one spouse accepts less than the value of his or her support rights from the other spouse, a gift to the donor spouse results [Rev. Rul. 77-314, 1977-2 C.B. 349]. An exchange of support rights in violation of public policy results in the transfer of property being deemed a gift [Ellis v. Commissioner, (1968) 51 T.C. 182 , aff'd, 437 F.2d 442 (9th Cir. 1971) (antenuptial agreement violative of public policy)].

[2] Estate Tax

The same rule of nontaxability that applies to gift tax [see § 227.11[1]] also applies to estate tax. Claims for support of the surviving spouse or ex-spouse are deductible from the decedent's gross estate [see I.R.C. § 2053(a)(3)]. However, because the obligation of support can only exist during the payor's life, the deduction is allowed only to the extent that payments made during the payor's life were less than what the payee-spouse was entitled to receive under state law [Rev. Rul. 71-67, 1971-1 C.B. 271 ; see Estate of Fenton (1978) 70 T.C. 263 ; Rev. Rul. 68-379, 1968-2 C.B. 414]. Similarly, if a payment is made out of an estate to a former spouse for support rights, consideration for the payment exists only to the extent that the former spouse had foregone support payments during the payor's life. Thus, a deduction from the gross estate is allowed only to the extent of those foregone support payments [Estate of Scholl (1987) 88 T.C. 1265, 1271-1276 (payment to decedent's former wife); cf. Robert A. Nesselrodt Est. (1986) T.C. Memo 1986-286 (if divorce decree provided for payment of decedent's obligation in installments, only present value of installments on decedent's date of death allowed as deduction despite estate's payment of full amount of all future payments)].

If payments required to be made under the terms of a divorce decree are to last until the death or remarriage of the former spouse, the amount of the deduction is calculated by using actuarial tables based on the probabilities of death or remarriage [Maresi v. Commissioner (1946) 6 T.C. 582, 586 , aff'd, 156 F.2d 929 (2d Cir. 1946)] . If support payments required under a separation agreement are to be paid in part by a trust set up by the decedent, the amount of the deduction is the commuted value of the remaining payments actuarially computed less the value of the trust assets [Sherman v. United States (5th Cir. 1974) 492 F.2d 1045, 1046-1047] .

As with the gift tax, all amounts passing to the surviving spouse in a form qualifying for the unlimited marital deduction are deductible from the decedent's gross estate if the spouses are still married at the time of death [see I.R.C. §§ 2056(d), 2056A, as added by Pub. L. No. 100-647, § 5033(a)(2), applicable to estates of decedents dying after November 10, 1988)]. Special rules applicable to surviving spouses who are not United States citizens disallow the marital deduction unless a prescribed trust is used. The gift tax marital deduction for transfers of benefits under a joint and survivor annuity has been extended to include such gifts to noncitizen spouses [I.R.C. § 2056(d), as amended by Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1990, Pub. L. No. 101-508, §§ 11701, 11702, effective as if included in the provision of the Revenue Reconciliation Act of1989, Pub. L. No. 101-239, to which it relates].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 227 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: TAX EFFECTS OF DISSOLUTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-227 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 227.12

AUTHOR: Original text by Frederick W. Campbell-Craven, J.D.

§ 227.12 Income Tax Consequences Related to Children

[1] Treatment of Child Support

Unlike spousal support, child support is neither income of the payee parent nor deductible by the payor parent. If the payor makes support payments directly to the child, or to a third party (instead of to the other parent) on behalf of the child, the payments are not deductible because they are personal or family expenses for which the Internal Revenue Code does not otherwise allow a deduction [see I.R.C. §§ 71(c)(1), 262(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.71-1(e); Bay v. Commissioner T.C. Memo. 1994-389 . California income tax treatment of child support is the same as that provide by federal income tax law [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17801, 17201]. Payments that are in fact for the benefit of children may receive alimony tax treatment if they can properly be characterized as "family support" (§ 227.10[4][c]).

[2] Dependency Exemption

[a] When Permitted

Under I.R.C. § 151(c), applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 2004, a taxpayer is entitled to an exemption for each individual who is a dependent, as defined in I.R.C. § 152, for the taxable year [see Pub. Law 108-311, § 208]. Prior tax years are governed by provisions with somewhat different structure and language [see generally former I.R.C. §§ 151(c), 152; *see also*Pub. Law 108-311, §§ 206, 208 (amending former I.R.C. §§ 151(c), 152)].

"Dependent" is defined as either a "qualifying child" or a "qualifying relative" [I.R.C. § 152(a)].

A "qualifying child" must be under the age of 19 at the close of the taxable year, or be a student who is under the age of 24 at the close of that year; and must be a child, sibling, or stepsibling of the taxpayer, or a descendant of a child, sibling, or stepsibling of the taxpayer [I.R.C. § 152(c)(2), (3)]. A qualifying child must have the same principal place of abode as the taxpayer for more than one-half of the taxable year, and must not provide over one-half of his or her own support in the taxable year [I.R.C. § 152(c)(1)(B), (D)]. In general, a "child" is a son, daughter, stepson, stepdaughter, adopted child, or eligible foster child of the taxpayer, and a "student" is an individual who, during each of five months in the taxable year, is a full-time student or is pursuing a full-time course of on-farm training [I.R.C. § 152(f)(1), (2)].

A "qualifying relative" can be a child of the taxpayer who is not a qualifying child of any taxpayer because of age or some other reason, but may also be one of several other specified categories of relative of any age (i.e., grandparents, parents, siblings, aunts or uncles, nieces or nephews, in-laws, step-relatives, household members) [I.R.C. § 152(d)(1)(A),(D), (2)]. For most types of qualifying relatives (i.e., blood and legal relatives), there is no requirement of common abode, but there is a requirement that the qualifying relative must not have gross income for the taxable year greater than the exemption amount, and a requirement that the taxpayer must provide over one-half of the qualifying relative's support for the taxable year [I.R.C. § 152(d)(1)(B), (C); see § 227.12[2][d]].

For tax years ending on or before December 31, 2004, the rule for all dependents (both children and relatives) was that the taxpayer was required to provide over half the person's support for the taxable year [see former I.R.C. § 152(a)].

An individual who is claimed as a taxpayer's dependent for a taxable year is treated as having no dependents for that taxable year [I.R.C. § 152(b)(1)]. A taxpayer may not claim an exemption for a married child who files a joint return with his or her spouse [I.R.C. § 152(b)(2)]. A taxpayer may not claim an exemption for an individual who is not a citizen or national of the United States, unless (1) the individual is a resident of the United States or a country contiguous to the United States, or (2) the taxpayer is a citizen or national of the United States and the individual is an adopted child who has the same principal place of abode as the taxpayer and is a member of the taxpayer's household [I.R.C. § 152(b)(3)].

Special rules apply to parents who are divorced or legally separated, or are separated under a written separation agreement, or live apart at all times during the last six months of the year [see I.R.C. § 152(e)]. For discussion, see § 227.12[2][e].

[b] Qualifying Child

A "qualifying child" with respect to a taxpayer is an individual who meets certain relationship and age requirements, who does not provide over half of his or her own support, and who has the same principal place of abode as the taxpayer for more than one-half of the taxable year [I.R.C. § 152(c)(1)]. Under the law as amended in 2004, there is no requirement that the taxpayer provide any specific portion of the child's support [see Pub. Law 108-311, §§ 206, 208 (amending former I.R.C. §§ 151(c), 152)].

The class of permitted relationships for a qualifying child is relatively small. The child may be (1) the taxpayer's own child or a descendant of the taxpayer's child, or (2) a brother, sister, stepbrother, or stepsister of the taxpayer or a descendant of any of these [I.R.C. § 152(c)(2)]. In general, the term "child" includes a taxpayer's stepchild, adopted child, or eligible foster child, and the terms "brother" and "sister" include a taxpayer's brother or sister by the half blood [I.R.C. § 152(f)(1), (f)(4)].

The basic age requirement for a qualifying child is that the child must be under the age of 19 at the close of the taxable year or a student who is under the age of 24 at the close of the taxable year [I.R.C. § 152(c)(3)(A)]. A student is an individual who during each of five calendar months during the taxable year of the taxpayer is a full-time student or pursuing a full-time course of on-farm training [I.R.C. § 152(f)(2)]. There is no age restriction applicable to an individual who is permanently and totally disabled at any time during the taxable year [I.R.C. § 152(c)(3)(B)].

If a parent and another taxpayer are both entitled to claim a child as a qualifying child, the parent prevails [I.R.C. § 152(c)(4)(A)]. If both parents claim a child as a qualifying child, then the child is treated as the qualifying child of (i) the parent with whom the child resided for the longest period of time during the taxable year, or (ii) if the child resides with both parents for the same amount of time during the taxable year, the parent with the highest adjusted gross income

[I.R.C. § 152(c)(4)(B)].

[c] Qualifying Relative

A "qualifying relative" with respect to a taxpayer is an individual [I.R.C. § 152(d)(1)]:

1. Who meets a specified relationship requirement;

2. Whose gross income for the taxable year does not exceed the exemption amount;

3. Over half of whose support during the taxable year was provided by the taxpayer; and

4. Who is not a qualifying child of any taxpayer in the taxable year.

There is no age restriction, and in most cases there is no requirement to be part of the taxpayer's household [see I.R.C. § 152(d)(1)].

A large class of relationships is permitted. A qualifying relative may be, with respect to the taxpayer, (1) a child or a descendant of a child; (2) a brother, sister, stepbrother, or stepsister; (3) a father or mother or an ancestor of either; (4) a stepfather or stepmother; (5) a son or daughter of a brother or sister of the taxpayer; (6) a brother or sister of the father or mother of the taxpayer; (7) a son-in-law, daughter-in-law, father-in-law, mother-in-law, brother-in-law, or sister-in-law; or (8) an individual who has the same principal place of abode as the taxpayer and is a member of the taxpayer's household throughout the taxable year [I.R.C. § 152(d)(2)].

An individual unrelated to the taxpayer by blood or adoption can be a qualifying relative, but that individual must be a member of the taxpayer's household [I.R.C. § 152(d)(2)(H); see Rasco v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1999-169 (unmarried man could take dependency exemptions for his girlfriend and her two children when all three lived in his home and received more than half their support from him)]. An individual will not be treated as a member of the taxpayer's household if the relationship between that individual and the taxpayer is in violation of local law [I.R.C. § 152(f)(3)].

[d] Support Requirement

For tax years beginning after December 31, 2004, the only support requirement for a qualifying child is that the child must not provide over half of his or her own support in the taxable year [I.R.C. § 152(c)(1)(D); *see*Pub. Law 108-311, §§ 206, 208 (amending former I.R.C. §§ 151(c), 152)]. In contrast, the taxpayer must furnish more than half of a qualifying relative's support [I.R.C. § 152(d)(1)(C)]. For prior tax years, the rule for all dependents was that the taxpayer must furnish more than half of the dependent's support for the year in question [former I.R.C. § 152(a); see Molina v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo 2003-254 (taxpayer's uncontroverted oral testimony concerning household facts met burden of proof to claim dependency exemption)].

In determining whether the taxpayer provided over half of the support of an individual for a given year, the entire amount of support that the individual received from all sources must be considered, including support that the individual supplied for himself or herself and income that ordinarily is excludible from gross income [Treas. Reg. § 1.152-1(a)(2)]. Support includes food, clothing, medical and dental care, education, the fair market value of shelter or lodging, and like items. Thus, in computing the amount expended for support, taxpayers are not limited to the actual expenses of maintaining a house [see Treas. Reg. § 1.152-1(a)(2)(i)], such as electricity, heat, taxes, repairs, and interest payments on a mortgage. Rather, the measure is what the dependent receives, which is the fair rental value of the lodging [see, e.g., Carter v. Commissioner (1974) 62 T.C. 20 ; Blarek v. Commissioner (1955) 23 T.C. 1037, 1038-1039 ; Flachner v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1978-417 ; Rev. Rul. 58-302, 1958-1 C.B. 62]. IRS rulings have indicated that transportation, holiday gifts, church contributions, and expenses for entertainment and recreation are included in support. Although health insurance premium payments are treated as payments for medical expenses, any benefits provided under the policy are not considered support [see, e.g., McGuire v. Commissioner (1981) 77 T.C. 765, 774 ; Rev. Rul. 64-223, 1964-2 C.B. 50].

Certain items of a nonrecurring nature, such as the cost of a car, furniture, or appliances, may or may not qualify as support, depending on the particular circumstances of each case [see Rev. Rul. 77-282, 1977-2 C.B. 52]. None of the following, however, can be treated as items of support:

1. The cost of life insurance premiums paid by the taxpayer on a policy heor she owns that lists the dependent as a beneficiary [see, e.g., Vance v. Commissioner (1961) 36 T.C. 547, 550 ; Rempert v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1970-226] ;

2. Costs associated with the dependent's use of an automobile owned by the taxpayer, except to the extent that the owner's payment of automobile operating expenses benefits the dependent [Rev. Rul 77-282, 1977-2 C.B. 52];

3. Loans made by the taxpayer to the dependent [Gatling v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1959-224], ;

4. The value of services rendered by the taxpayer to the dependent [see, e.g., Markarian v. Commissioner (7th Cir. 1965) 352 F.2d 870 , cert. denied, 384 U.S. 988 ; Beck v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1970-153] ;

5. Liability insurance proceeds paid to a third party for an accident caused by the dependent [Kincheloe v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1971-35] ;

6. The cost of tools to make a dependent's assigned chores easier [Rev. Rul. 77-282, 1977-2 C.B. 52] or, because the benefit is deemed too remote to be counted as support, the cost of items purchased to benefit children as they grow older [Gajda v. Commissioner (1965) 44 T.C. 783 , acq., 1966-2 C.B. 4];

7. The dependent's funeral expenses [Rev. Rul. 65-307, 1965-2 C.B. 40];

8. The dependent's payment of his or her own income taxes [Rev. Rul. 58-67, 1958-1 C.B. 62];

9. Expenses incurred for an induced abortion, even if the child is born alive [Rev. Rul. 85-118, 1985-2 C.B. 59]; or

10. The costs associated with exercising visitation with the dependent [Hopkins v. Commissioner (1970) 55 T.C. 538, 541-542 ; Vance v. Commissioner (1961) 36 T.C. 547] .

Payments made by an institution to assist in furthering a child's education may or may not constitute support payments. For example, amounts received as scholarships for study at an educational institution are not considered in determining whether the taxpayer furnishes more than half of the support for the child [Treas. Reg. § 1.152-1(c)]. These scholarships may include payments for tuition, books, travel, meals, and lodging [Commissioner v. Ide (3d Cir. 1964) 335 F.2d 852, 854-855 ; Rev. Rul. 58-338, 1958-2 C.B. 54]. Similarly, room, board, and tuition payments made by the state for developmentally challenged persons qualify as scholarship payments and are not counted toward support if the children qualify as students and the institution qualifies as an educational institution [Rev. Rul. 71-347, 1971-2 C.B. 114 ; Rev. Rul. 64-221, 1964-2 C.B. 46 ; Rev. Rul. 61-186, 1961-2 C.B. 30 ; Rev. Rul. 60-190, 1960-1 C.B. 51]. Student loans, however, generally constitute support even though they are scholarship-related [McCauley v. Commissioner (1971) 56 T.C. 48, 50] .

[e] Children of Divorced or Separated Parents

[i] Applicability of Special Rule for Divorced Parents

A special rule for divorced parents allows transfer of the dependency exemption by agreement or court order to the noncustodial parent [I.R.C. § 152(e) (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 2004)]. A child to whom this rule applies will be treated as the qualifying child or qualifying relative of the noncustodial parent if a decree of divorce or a written separation agreement provides either [I.R.C. § 152(e)(1), (2)]:

1. That the noncustodial parent shall be entitled to any deduction allowable for the child, or

2. That the custodial parent will sign a written declaration (in the form required by the IRS) that he or she will not claim the child as a dependent for the taxable year.

If the agreement was executed before January 1, 1985, the noncustodial parent must provide at least $600 for the support of the child during the calendar year [I.R.C. § 152(e)(2)(B); see § 227.12[2][e][iii]].

The special rule for divorced parents applies when all of the following conditions are satisfied [I.R.C. § 152(e)(1)]:

1. A child receives over half of his or her support during the taxable year from his or her parents together;

2. The child is in the custody of one or both the parents for more than half the year; and

3. The parents are divorced or legally separated under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance, or are separated under a written separation agreement, or live apart at all times during the last six months of the calendar year.

"Custodial parent" is defined under current law to mean the parent with whom a child shared the same principal place of abode for the greater portion of the calendar year. The "noncustodial parent" is the parent who is not the custodial parent [I.R.C. § 152(e)(3)].

Former I.R.C. § 152(e) set forth the general rule that the custodial parent was considered as providing more than one-half of the support for a child during the calendar year. Now I.R.C. § 152(e)(1) does not state this rule explicitly, but provides instead that a child will be considered a qualifying child or qualifying relative of the *non*custodial parent in certain defined circumstances, as previously discussed. In normal cases a child who lives with the custodial parent over one-half the time will be a qualifying child without regard to what portion of support the custodial parent provides [see I.R.C. § 152(c)(1)(B)]. The prior law allowed the custodial parent to release his or her claim to the exemption by a written declaration, as discussed in § 227.12[2][e][ii], and it defined the custodial parent as the parent who had custody for the greater portion of the calendar year [former I.R.C. § 152(e)(1); see Duby v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo 2003-33, 2003 Tax Ct. Memo LEXIS 33 (denial of dependency exemptions to parent who obtained temporary custody in July after custodial parent abducted children); but see Rios v. Pulido (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 359, 360, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 (family law court may order parents to take dependency exemption in alternate years, even though one parent may have custody of child for less than half time during calendar year)].

Former I.R.C. § 152(e) was held to apply to any parents, regardless of marital status, as long as they had lived apart at all times during the last six months of the calendar year [King v. Comm'r (2003) 121 T.C. 245, 250 (child's parents never married each other)]. In determining whether the parents together had provided more than half of the support of the child, support received from a parent's new spouse was treated as received from the parent [see former I.R.C. § 152(e)(5); Schneier v. Commissioner (9th Cir. 1984) 735 F.2d 375, 377] .

There was authority that legal custody alone might be considered in determining whether the child was in the custody of one or both parents for more than half of the year [see Stanford v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1995-78 (dependency exemption allowed to parent who had legal custody only, but who furnished more than half of child's support to unrelated third persons who had actual physical custody)]. A divorced parent did not qualify for a dependency exemption for a child who is in both the legal and physical custody of grandparents [Penny v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1985-590 (Tax Court refused to consider grandparents as parents for purposes of dependency exemption); cf. Stanford v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1995-78] .

The special rule for divorced parents is not applicable to any case in which over one-half of the support of the child is treated as having been received from a taxpayer under the "qualifying relative" special rule relating to multiple support agreements [I.R.C. § 152(e)(4); see I.R.C. § 152(d)(3) (special multiple support agreements rule); see also § 227.12[2][f]]. Prior law also made an exception for multiple support agreements [see former I.R.C. § 152(e)(3)].

[ii] Custodial Parent's Release of Exemption

Under the special rule for divorced parents applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 2004, a child is treated as the qualifying child or qualifying relative of the noncustodial parent if a decree of divorce or a written separation agreement provides either [I.R.C. § 152(e)(1), (2)]:

1. That the noncustodial parent shall be entitled to any deduction allowable for the child, or

2. That the custodial parent will sign a written declaration (in the form required by the IRS) that he or she will not claim the child as a dependent for the taxable year.

As discussed below, prior law contained an express requirement that the noncustodial parent actually obtain a suitable declaration and attach it to his or her return [see former I.R.C. § 152(e)(2)].

In tax years beginning on or before December 31, 2004, the custodial parent released his or her claim to the exemption to the other spouse by completing a written declaration, in the form required by the IRS, that he or she would not claim the child as a dependent [see former I.R.C. § 152(e)(2)(A); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.152-4T, Q&A 3; see King v. Comm'r (2003) 121 T.C. 245 (IRS waiver form executed by unmarried parents was enforceable); Boltinghouse (Michael K.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 2003-134 (signed separation agreement not incorporated into divorce decree conformed to substance of IRS waiver form); Loffer v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo 2002-298 (signed divorce decree did not conform to substance of IRS waiver form); Horn v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo 2002-290 (formal requirements for valid waiver of dependency exemption); Neal v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1999-97 (upholding denial of dependency exemptions to noncustodial, divorced father when custodial mother had not signed waiver of her right to exemptions)].

It is likely that the IRS will continue to require the noncustodial parent to attach the form to his or her income tax return to claim the exemption [see former I.R.C. § 152(e)(2)(B); Peck v. Commissioner (1996) T.C. Memo 1996-33 ; see Brissett v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo 2003-310 (noncustodial parent denied dependency exemption, despite terms of divorce settlement, when custodial parent refused to sign IRS waiver form); Horn v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo 2002-290 (unsigned, undated IRS waiver form accompanied by inconclusive handwritten waiver was insufficient to support noncustodial parent's dependency exemption); White (William C.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1996-438 (exemption waiver signed by ex-wife pursuant to divorce decree was not effective when it did not meet tax regulations requirements); see also I.R.C. § 152(e)(2)(A)]. The exemption may be released to the noncustodial spouse for a single year, for a number of specified years (for example, alternate years), or for all future years, but is effective only as specified in the form. If the exemption is released for more thanone year, the noncustodial parent must attach the original form to his or her tax return for the first year for which he or she claims the exemption, and a copy to his or her return for each succeeding year for which the exemption is claimed [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.152-4T, Q&A 4].

PRACTICE TIP:

If the custodial parent has agreed to release the exemption to the noncustodial parent, counsel should ensure that the form or written declaration releasing the claim clearly indicates the specific years to which the release applies.

EXAMPLE:

On January 5, 1990, a custodial parent fills out only Part II of IRS Form 8332, which is labelled "Release of Claim to Exemption for Future Years," stating that she agrees not to claim an exemption for her three children for "all future years." The noncustodial parent attaches this form to his 1989 income tax return. However, he was not entitled to the exemption for 1989 because Part I of the form, which is labelled "Release of Claim to Exemption for Current Year," was uncompleted and left completely blank, and because the form did not specify that it was applicable to the 1989 tax year [Nancy L. Cafarelli, T.C.M. 1994-265].

The California Supreme Court has held that the court may order the custodial parent to execute the form to release the right to the dependency exemption to the noncustodial parent over the custodial parent's objection. Allocation of the exemption in order to obtain maximum tax savings to the parents makes more money available for the children. Child support should be increased to offset the cash value of the exemption [Monterey County v. Cornejo (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1271, 1275-1281, 283 Cal. Rptr. 405, 812 P.2d 586 ; see Rios v. Pulido (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 359, 362, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 (alternate-year exemptions)]. The case in which the issue was decided was brought by a district attorney under child support enforcement provisions that formerly were in the Welfare and Institutions Code [see former Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 11350, 11350.1, 11475.1, (now see Fam. Code § 17400 et seq., discussed in Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement, § 259.150 et seq.)], in which the jurisdiction of the court is limited to determining paternity and child support [Welf. & Inst. Code § 11350.1(a) (now see Fam. Code § 17404(a))]. However, the court's holding was that allocation of the dependency exemption is a determination that is pertinent to child support, meaning that it may be addressed in any proceeding in which child support is at issue, such as one for dissolution of marriage [Monterey County v. Cornejo (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1271, 1282-1284, 283 Cal. Rptr. 405, 812 P.2d 586 (Court specifically noted parent's right to independent determination of issue under former Family Law Act, now Family Code); see Rios v. Pulido (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 359, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 (allocation of exemption by family law court)].

PRACTICE TIP:

The judicial shifting of dependency exemptions to a payor spouse, along with increased child support, is common. Counsel for the custodial-payee parent should consider offering to sign the exemption over to the payor parent whenever she or he stands to gain more from increased support than will be lost by surrendering the exemption (typically the case with a low-income payee). Conversely, counsel for the payor parent should avoid raising the issue if his or her exposure to increased support will outweigh the benefit of claiming the exemption. Computer software programs that calculate support, including the effect on support of exemption-shifting, are now in wide-spread use by both family law courts and counsel. If the custodial parent has agreed to release the exemption to the noncustodial parent, counsel should ensure that the form or written declaration releasing the claim clearly indicates the specific years to which the release applies.

There is an issue of whether the requirement that the parent claiming the exemption contribute more than half of the child's support [see I.R.C. § 151(a)] can be ignored in transferring the exemption to the noncustodial parent. The custodial parent's voluntary release of the exemption under I.R.C. § 152(e)(2) requires only that she or he agree not to claim the exemption; no affirmation that the other parent has, in fact, provided more than half of the child's support is required [see Valarian v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1996-511 ; see also Roberts v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1996-467 . However, if the court compels the parent to transfer the exemption involuntarily, it would seem that the court must first find that the noncustodial parent has contributed, or at least will contribute, more than half of the support of the child. An involuntary transfer of the exemption solely to maximize tax savings, without the support requirement having been met, would seem to not be permitted by the Internal Revenue Code.

[iii] When Rules Do Not Apply

The rules regarding the dependency exemption for divorced or separated parents do not apply if the right to the dependency exemption is governed by a multiple support agreement with respect to the child [I.R.C. § 152(e)(4); see former I.R.C. § 152(e)(3); see also § 227.12[2][f]].

In addition, there is special provision for agreements executed prior to January 1, 1985, requiring that the noncustodial parent provide at least $600 of support during the calendar year [I.R.C. § 152(e)(2)(B)]. This carries forward a rule of the law applicable to tax years starting on or before December 31, 2004, under which if a qualified pre-1985 instrument provided that the noncustodial parent was entitled to the exemption, and that parent provided $600 for the support of the child during the year, then the noncustodial parent was entitled to the exemption [see former I.R.C. § 152(e)(4)(A)]. For purposes of the $600-support test, amounts expended for the support of the child are treated as received from the noncustodial parent to the extent that he or she provided amounts for support [I.R.C. § 152(e)(2)(B); see former I.R.C. § 152(e)(4)(a); see Broughton v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1998-409 ; Zion v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1991-119 (custodial parent provided more than half of children's support, but noncustodial parent paid more than $600 per child and was entitled to dependency exemptions granted under pre-1985 settlement agreement)].

There is authority for the proposition that the rules for divorced or separated parents do not apply if the parents are not yet divorced but are living in separate parts of the same household, so that there is no custodial or noncustodial parent. In such circumstances, the right to the exemption may have to be decided according to the ordinary rules relating to dependents [see Dawkins v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1991-225 ; contra Sydnes v. Commissioner (8th Cir. 1978) 577 F.2d 60 ; see also I.R.C. § 152(c)(4)(B)(ii) (child residing with both parents for same amount of time may be claimed by parent with highest adjusted gross income)].

[f] Multiple Support Agreements

If no single person contributes more than half of the support of an individual, but over half of the individual's support is received from persons each of whom would have been permitted to claim the individual as a dependent had the person contributed more than half of the support, all such persons may agree to give the dependency exemption to any one of them who contributes at least 10 percent of the dependent's support [I.R.C. § 152(d)(3); see former I.R.C. § 152(c)]. To designate the taxpayer entitled to the exemptions, all other persons who contribute over 10 percent of the dependent's support must file a declaration in the manner required by the IRS [I.R.C. § 152(d)(3)(D); see former I.R.C. § 152(c)(4)]. For tax years beginning before 2002, all must make declarations in their own tax returns [Treas. Reg. § 1-152-3(c)(1)]. For tax years beginning in 2002 or later, the taxpayer claiming the exemption must obtain written waivers from the others, and must provide with the return both a statement identifying each of the other persons who contributed more than 10 percent of the support and a statement indicating that the taxpayer obtained a written declaration from each of the others waiving the right to claim an exemption for the dependent [Treas. Reg. § 1-152-3(c)(2)].

As there is no requirement, in tax years beginning after December 31, 2004, that a person claiming a "qualifying child" provide over half the child's support, it appears that the rule permitting multiple support agreements is applicable only when the individual claimed as a dependent does not meet the requirements for a "qualifying child" but does meet the requirements for a "qualifying relative" [see I.R.C. § 152(c), (d); see also § 227.12[2]]. When it is applicable, either in a "qualifying relative" case or in a tax year beginning on or before December 31, 2004, the rule applies only when no single person provided more than half the support of the dependent [I.R.C. § 152(d)(3)(A)]. Thus, if a child lives full-time with an unrelated third party who provides more than half the child's support, a multiple support agreement cannot be used to shift the exemption to a parent. The child is probably a "qualifying relative" of the third party as a member of the third party's household [see I.R.C. § 152(d)(2)(H)]. Consequently the third party can claim the child, but cannot transfer the exemption. If one parent provides more than half the support of the child living with the third party, then the child is a "qualifying relative," but not a "qualifying child" of that parent, who can take the exemption but cannot transfer it. However, if the two parents and the third party each provide one third of the child's support, then they can use a multiple support agreement to designate which of the three will take the exemption.

[3] Related Tax Credits

A child tax credit is available for each qualifying child of a taxpayer [I.R.C. § 24]. The credit cannot exceed the individual's regular income tax and alternative minimum tax [I.R.C. § 24(b)(3), effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 2001]. To be eligible for the credit, the qualifying child must be a qualifying child under the definition for determination of dependents, and must in addition be under 17 years old [I.R.C. § 24(c) (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 2004); see I.R.C. § 152(c) (definition); former I.R.C. § 24(c) (requiring that taxpayer be allowed a personal exemption deduction and that child meet the relationship test of I.R.C. § 32(c)(3)(B))].

The amount of the credit is $1,000 per qualifying child, subject to phaseout at higher income levels [I.R.C. § 24(a) (basic amount per child); I.R.C. § 24(b) (phaseout)]. In some circumstances, it is refundable to a limited extent [I.R.C. § 24(d)].

This credit is distinct from and in addition to the dependent care credit [see I.R.C. § 21; see also § 227.12[5]]. There are also credits for post-secondary education [I.R.C. § 25A], Education Individual Retirement Accounts [I.R.C. § 530], and qualified tuition programs under which tuition credits may be purchased for a designated beneficiary [I.R.C. § 529]. These measures are beyond the scope of this chapter, but may figure into the overall planning needed by divorcing couples with respect to the education of their children.

[4] Deduction for Medical Expenses

A taxpayer may deduct his or her medical expenses, including those of a dependent child, to the extent that they exceed 7.5 percent of adjusted gross income [I.R.C. § 213(a); see I.R.C. § 152 (definition of dependent). Note that certain elements introduced into the I.R.C. § 152 definition of "dependent" for tax years beginning after December 31, 2004, are not considered for purposes of I.R.C. § 213(a). For example, an individual can be treated as a dependent for the medical expense deduction even if he or she is married and files a joint return with his or her spouse.]. In the case of separated or divorced parents, if the specialdependency exemption rule for divorced parents applies to the child, the child is deemed to be a dependent of both parents for the purposes of the medical expense deduction [I.R.C. § 213(d)(5); see I.R.C. § 152(e); see also § 227.12[2][e]]. Therefore, despite the fact that only one parent is entitled to a dependency exemption for a child, each parent may include the child's medical expenses that he or she has paid in determining whether the 7.5 percent threshold has been met. The same rule applies to the income exclusion for medical expenses paid by an employer for a dependent child [see I.R.C. § 105(b)]. If the special rule is not applicable, only the parent who shares a residence with the child for over half the year may consider the child as a dependent and be entitled to a medical expense deduction for amounts expended on medical care for the child [I.R.C. §§ 152(c), 213(a)].

[5] Dependent Care Credit

A taxpayer who has at least one qualifying individual may claim a nonrefundable credit against income tax liability for up to 30 percent (35 percent, for taxable years beginning after 2002) of a limited amount of employment-related expenses. Through 2002, eligible employment-related expenses were limited to $2,400 if there was one qualifying individual or $4,800 if there were two or more qualifying individuals. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 2002, these amounts have been raised to $3,000 and $6,000 [I.R.C. § 21(c)]. Thus, the maximum credit is $720 if there is one qualifying individual and $1,440 if there are two or more qualifying individuals. The applicable dollar limit of otherwise eligible employment-related expenses is reduced by any amount excluded from income under an employer-provided dependent care assistance program [I.R.C. § 21(c); see I.R.C. § 129]. The credit rate is reduced, but not below 20 percent, by 1 percentage point for each $2,000 (or fraction of that amount) of adjusted gross income above $10,000. The phase-down trigger for the credit has been increased to $15,000, effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 2002. This reduces the credit percentage to 20 percent for taxpayers with adjusted gross income over $43,000 [I.R.C. § 21(a)(2)].

A qualifying individual is one of the following [I.R.C. § 21(b)(1) (applicable to tax years starting after December 31, 2004; *see*Pub. Law 108-311, § 203)]:

1. A dependent of the taxpayer who is under the age of 13;

2. A dependent of the taxpayer who is physically or mentally incapable of caring for himself or herself and who has the same principal place of abode as the taxpayer for more than one-half of the taxable year; or

3. The spouse of the taxpayer, if the spouse is physically or mentally incapable of caring for himself or herself and has the same principal place of abode as the taxpayer for more than one-half of the taxable year.

Regulations state that incapability of caring for oneself requires a physical or mental defect [Treas. Reg. § 1.44A-1(b)(4)]. Therefore, the credit does not appear to extend to a child of age of 13 or older whom the parent believes is not yet able to stay home without child care.

Unlike the dependency exemption, the dependent care credit is not transferrable to the noncustodial parent, even if he or she is the one who is paying all or most of the child care expenses [I.R.C. § 21(e)(5); see I.R.C. § 152(e)(3) (defining custodial parent as the parent with whom a child shared the same principal place of abode for the greater portion of the calendar year)]. In fact, the right to claim a dependent care credit for a child remains with the custodial parent even if the dependency exemption is released to the noncustodial parent [I.R.C. § 21(e)(5)].

An individual will not be treated as having the same principal place of abode as a taxpayer if the relationship between the individual and the taxpayer is in violation of local law [I.R.C. § 21(e)(1)]. Under the law applicable to tax years beginning on or before December 31, 2004, a taxpayer was entitled to the dependent care credit only if he or she maintained a household that included as a member one or more qualifying individuals [see former I.R.C. § 21(a), (e)(1)], but the household was required to be the principal place of abode of both the taxpayer and the qualifying individual [McDonald (Lillie B.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1991-242 (taxpayer who bore expense of disabled adult child's separate residence was not entitled to credit)]. Under prior law, an individual has not been considered to have terminated a household as his or her principal place of abode because of a temporary absence due to illness, education, business, vacation, military service, or a custody agreement [Treas. Reg. § 1.44A-1(d)(1)].

Married taxpayers may only claim the dependent care credit on a joint return [I.R.C. § 21(e)(2)]. However, an individual who is legally separated from his or her spouse under a decree of divorce or legal separation is not considered as married [I.R.C. § 21(e)(3)]. In addition, a person is treated as unmarried if he or she (1) files a separate return for the year; (2) maintains a household that is the child's principal place of abode for more than one half of the taxable year; and (3) furnishes over half the cost of maintaining the household during the taxable year. The rule applies only if the individual's spouse is not a member of the household at any time during the last six months of the year [Treas. Reg. § 1.44A-3].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 227 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: TAX EFFECTS OF DISSOLUTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-227 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 227.13

AUTHOR: Original text by Frederick W. Campbell-Craven, J.D.

§ 227.13 Estate and Gift Taxation of Child Support

[1] Gift Tax

Payments made to satisfy a child support obligation are not taxable gifts [see Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Converse (2d Cir. 1947) 163 F.2d 131, 133 ; Hooker (1948) 10 T.C. 388 , aff'd, 174 F.2d 863 (5th Cir. 1949) ; see also Rev. Rul. 68-379, 1968-2 C.B. 414]. However, payments made in excess of reasonable support obligations, or payments to adult children to whom the payorowes no obligation of support, are taxable gifts [see Rosenthal v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue (2d Cir. 1953) 205 F.2d 505, 508-510 ; Spruance v. Commissioner (1973) 60 T.C. 141, 150-153 , aff'd without op., 505 F.2d 731 (3d Cir. 1974)] .

Payments that provide reasonable allowance for support for the transferor's issue during their minority are not taxable gifts if the transfers are made under a written marital settlement agreement entered into between the parents within two years before and one year after the final decree of divorce. The agreement need not be approved by the divorce decree [I.R.C. § 2516]. This rule applies only to the children of the marriage being dissolved, but includes legally adopted children [Treas. Reg. § 25.2516-2]. In addition, an unlimited exclusion from gift tax applies to all direct payments made for an individual's medical or tuition expenses, without regard to whether the individual for whose benefit the payment is made is related to the donor [I.R.C. § 2503(e)].

[2] Estate Tax

Payments made to support a child are not subject to federal estate tax. Claims for the support of children are deductible from the decedent's gross estate to the extent of the decedent's support obligation [see I.R.C. § 2053]. The deduction from the gross estate should not exceed the amount that the decedent was obligated to pay, but failed to pay, during his or her life [see Estate of Edward Satz (1982) 78 T.C. 1172, 1180 ; see also Rev. Rul. 71-67, 1971-1 C.B. 271 ; cf. Kitch v. Commissioner (10th Cir. 1996) 103 F.3d 104 (payment by decedent's estate of all net assets to estate of decedent's former wife to settle alimony arrearages was taxable alimony to wife's estate and thus taxable to beneficiaries who received distributions of it)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 227 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: TAX EFFECTS OF DISSOLUTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-227 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 227.14

AUTHOR: Original text by Frederick W. Campbell-Craven, J.D.

§ 227.14 Income Taxation of Property Division

[1] No Recognition of Gain or Loss on Transfers Between Spouses

[a] Current Law

Under I.R.C. § 1041, generally no gain or loss is recognized on a transfer of property from an individual to (or in trust for the benefit of) a spouse. Transfers to (or for the benefit of) a former spouse also generally qualify for nonrecognition if the transfers are made incident to divorce [I.R.C. § 1041(a)(2); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.1041-1T(a) Q&A 2; but see § 227.14[4] and [5], for discussion of exceptions to general rule for transfers in trust and transfers to nonresident alien spouses; see § 227.17, for special rules for nontaxability of distributions made under employee benefit plan; but cf. Tahamtan v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1995-226 (when spouse transferred community business assets to other spouse under duress, court ignored § 1041 and allowed the business a loss deduction for theft by conversion)]. The transfer is treated as a gift, and the transferor's basis in the property is carried over to the transferee [I.R.C. § 1041(b)]. The carryover of basis assures that the transferee retains any unrecognized gain or loss in the property. Thus, for example, a taxpayer who received appreciated real property from her former husband in settlement of a liability that originated from their marital property division was taxable on the appreciation when she later sold the property. The court found that the transfer from her former spouse was subject to nonrecognition treatment under I.R.C. § 1041, so any appreciation on the property was not taxable until its later sale to a third party [Young (John B.) v. Commissioner (1999) 113 T.C. 152, 156 ; see Walker v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo 2003-335 (former wife responsible for taxable gain on sale of former husband's 25 percent property interest that was transferred to her within one year of divorce in return for credit against equalizing money judgment)]. Note that while the spouses are still married qualify regardless of whether any divorce is anticipated or ever occurs [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.1041-1T(a), Q-2]. Property transferred to a former spouse need not have been owned by the transferor during marriage to qualify [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.1041-1T(a), Q-5].

Gain is not recognized under I.R.C. § 1041 even if the transferred property is subject to liabilities in excess of basis, unless the transfer is in trust [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.1041-1T(d), Q-12; see I.R.C. § 1041(e) (excepting certain transfers in trust from nonrecognition treatment); I.R.S. Letter Rul. 9615026]. The transfer of an installment obligation does not trigger gain [see I.R.C. § 453B] if I.R.C. § 1041 applies to the transfer, unless the transfer is in trust [House Committee Report on § 421, Tax Reform Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-369]. The transferor of investment credit property recaptures no investment credit on the transfer, if the credit was taken before 1986 or pursuant to a transitional rule effective for a subsequent year. If the transferred property is disposed of by the transferee, or otherwise ceases to be investment credit property with respect to the transferee, however, the transferee is subject to recapture of the investment credit taken by the transferor [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.1041-1T(d), Q-13; see I.R.C. § 47; see also I.R.C. § 49]. Furthermore, because of the carryover basis rule, the proceeds of a life insurance policy transferred between spouses cannot be subject to income tax [I.R.C. § 101(a)(2)(A)].

Transfers of nonstatutory stock options and nonqualified deferred compensation between spouses incident to divorce are not taxable events for the transferor. Instead, the transferee spouse recognizes income when the options are exercised and the deferred compensation is received. The stock options and deferred compensation are treated as property within the meaning of I.R.C. § 1041, rather than an assignment of income, even though the transfers amount to a right to receive accrued income at a later date [see Rev. Rul. 2002-22 (inapplicable to transfers of nonstatutory stock options, unfunded deferred compensation rights, or other future income rights to extent such options or rights are unvested or subject to substantial contingencies at time of transfer)].

The Tax Court has also distinguished between payments made between spouses in order to settle their rights to a community asset, and payments received by the spouses directly from a third party entity--such as a pension plan--as a result of the division of their community property. Thus, in a 1992 decision, the Tax Court held that three payments made by a military retiree to his former spouse in settlement of her community interest in the retiree's military retirement benefits were not taxable to her, but did not rule on the taxability of the retirement income if it had been paid to her directly by the government [Balding v. Commissioner (1992) 98 T.C. 368 ; see I.R.C. § 1041]. However, in a 1996 decision, the Tax Court held that a former spouse was taxable on retirement benefits she received directly from the federal government that were her community property share of her former husband's benefits [Graham (Angela M.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1996-512] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Counsel should deal with the issue of who pays the taxes when the buy-out negotiations occur. The spouses should provide in their marital settlement agreement or judgment for allocation of tax liability. One of the things to consider is that the assignment of income doctrine generally will not apply. The general rule is that no tax recognition arises to either spouse on a division in kind incident to divorce of the community's economic interest in a commonly held business or asset [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.1041-1T(d), Q&A 10, 11]. Under existing case authority, it appears equally clear that after a court makes its division in kind of the community's economic interest in a partnership or similar business, each spouse will thereafter be taxed on his or her proportional share of the income stream arising from that division in kind. It will not matter that the interest may continue to be held in the name of one spouse and administered by him or her solely [Kenfield v. United States (10th Cir. 1986) 783 F.2d 966 ; Schulze v. Commissioner (1983) T.C. Memo. 1983-263 ; see Friscone v. Commissioner (1996) 71 T.C.M. 2837] .

[b] Pre-1984 Law Contrasted

Before the 1984 enactment of the rule governing transfers of property between spouses or incident to divorce contained in I.R.C. § 1041 [see [a], above], although equal divisions of the community estate were not subject to tax, unequal divisions were taxable events [Carrieres v. Commissioner (1975) 64 T.C. 959 , aff'd per curium, (9th Cir. 1977) 552 F.2d 1350] . An unequal division of community property or co-owned property was treated as a nontaxable equal division followed by a taxable transfer of a portion of the property between the spouses. Each spouse carried over the community basis in the property except that the spouse receiving the taxable portion took a cost basis in that portion [Rev. Rul. 74-347, 1974-2 C.B. 26 ; see Rev. Rul. 81-292, 1981-2 C.B. 158 ; Siewert v. Commissioner (1979) 72 T.C. 326, 332 ; Davis v. Commissioner (1987) 88 T.C. 1460 (applying both Carrieres and Siewert to hold that former wife's award of money judgment on divorce, representing portion of debt reimbursable to community by her former husband, was nontaxable--that is, equal--community property division); United States v. Davis (1962) 370 U.S. 65, 82 S. Ct. 1190, 8 L. Ed. 2d 335 (transfer of inchoate rights for property taxable transaction)].

The pre-1984 rules remain important for transfers pursuant to marital settlement agreements executed before 1984 if no transition elections were made, and also for transfers to nonresident alien spouses, and transfers between unmarried cohabitants.

[2] Nonrecognition Applicable to Appreciated Gain but Not Income

The IRS has taken the position that nonrecognition of gain applies only to market appreciation and not to ordinary income items. In a published ruling, a spouse transferred United States savings bonds with accrued interest to the other spouse incident to divorce. The IRS ruled that the transferor spouse must report the accrued interest as taxable income, because this was not "gain" within the meaning of I.R.C. § 1041. The transferee spouse was allowed a basis reflecting the accrued interest taxed to the transferor [Rev. Rul. 87-112, 1987-2 C.B. 207]. In a subsequent private ruling, a husband purchased his wife's interest in the husband's military pension. The IRS ruled that the spouse receiving the cash payment realized taxable income because the value of her right to receive a portion of the pension could not be considered "gain" [I.R.S. Letter Rul. 8813023 (Dec. 29, 1987)].

[3] Unequal Division of Property to Adjust for Tax Consequences

Property settlements may be adjusted to account for tax factors without risking loss of nonrecognition treatment for the settlement [see I.R.C. § 1041]. Although such an adjustment may result in an unequal division in terms of fair market value, the settlement is still nontaxable and the division may be equal after tax consequences are considered. Unequal community property divisions also may be equalized by a transfer of separate property to adjust for the shifting of tax liabilities and benefits, again without the recognition of gain or loss.

In addition, apart from the nonrecognition provisions, it appears that if a property settlement is considered an unequal division because it involves a transfer of property in return for a promissory note bearing interest at below the market rate, the transaction will not be subject to the imputed interest rules or the below-market interest loan rules [see I.R.S. Letter Rul. 8645082 (Aug. 14, 1986); see also I.R.C. §§ 483 (unstated interest), 1271-1274 (classification as original issue discount), 7872 (loans with below-market interest rates)]. However, the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 amended the provisions of I.R.C. § 1271 that exempted debt obligations issued by natural persons from the rule that treats gain or loss realized on retirement of the debt as gain or loss realized on an exchange.Accordingly, with respect to obligations issued by a natural person on or after June 9, 1997, gain or loss on the retirement of this type of debt is capital gain or loss if the debt is a capital asset [see I.R.C. § 1271(b)(1)(A)]. Until guidance is given by regulations or case law, it appears that while no gain is recognized on a transfer of property to a spouse incident to divorce, gain may nonetheless be recognized on retirement of debt obligations related to such a transfer [compare I.R.C. § 1041 with I.R.C. § 1271(b)(1)(A) (amended by Pub. L. No. 105-34, § 1003(c)(2)].

[4] Transfers Deemed Incident to Divorce

A transfer is deemed to be incident to divorce for purposes of nonrecognition under I.R.C. § 1041 if it occurs within one year after the date the marriage ceases or if it is related to the cessation of marriage [I.R.C. § 1041(c)]. Thus, if a transfer occurs more than one year after divorce, it must be related to the cessation of marriage to qualify for nonrecognition treatment. A transfer is treated as related to the cessation of marriage if the transfer is pursuant to a divorce or separation instrument and the transfer occurs no more than six years after the date of divorce [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.1041-1T(b), Q-7]. Decrees of divorce or separate maintenance, written agreements incident to decrees of divorce or separate maintenance, and written separation agreements all qualify as divorce or separation instruments, as do modifications and amendments to them [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.1041-1T(b), Q-7; see I.R.C. § 71(b)(2); Harris v. Commissioner (1991) T.C. Memo 1991-375 . Transfers may be closely scrutinized to ascertain whether they bear a sufficient connection to the marital settlement to be deemed "incident to divorce" [see, e.g., Praegitzer (Dennis A.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1997-79 (cash distribution by closely held corporation as part of overall marital settlement was taxable because it was not made "incident to divorce" because distribution was not necessary part of settlement)].

Any transfer occurring more than six years after divorce is presumed not to be related to the cessation of marriage [see I.R.S. Letter Rul. 9306015 (Nov. 13, 1992) (party's transfer of interest in former marital residence unrelated to termination of marriage occurring more than eight years after final decree and not addressed in divorce judgment)]. This presumption can be rebutted only by showing that the transfer was made to effect a division of property owned by the former spouses at the time of divorce. For example, the presumption may be rebutted by showing that (1) the transfer was not made within six years of divorce because of factors that hampered an earlier transfer, such as legal or business impediments to transfer or disputes about value, and (2) the transfer was effected promptly after the impediments were removed [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.1041-1T(b), Q-7; see I.R.S. Letter Rul. 9123053 (March 1, 1991)]. Annulments and cessations of marriage that are void ab initio due to violations of state law are treated as divorces [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.1041-1T(b), Q-8].

[5] Transfers to Third Parties on Behalf of Spouse

[a] Qualification for Nonrecognition

Transfers of property to third parties on behalf of a spouse or former spouse may qualify for nonrecognition under I.R.C. § 1041 [see Ingham v. United States (9th Cir. 1999) 167 F.3d 1240, 1244] . In general, a transfer to a third party on behalf of a spouse or former spouse qualifies if the transfer to a third party is required by the divorce or separation agreement, or is made pursuant to the written request of the spouse or former spouse. A transfer to a third party also qualifies, generally, if the transferor receives a written consent or ratification from the other spouse or former spouse. The consent or ratification must state that the parties intend the transfer to be treated as a transfer to the spouse or former spouse subject to I.R.C. § 1041, and it must be received by the transferor prior to the date of filing the transferor's first tax return for the taxable year in which the transfer is made. In these circumstances, the transfer to the third party will be treated as made directly to the spouse or former spouse, who is then deemed to have transferred the property to the third party. Only the first of these two deemed transfers (that is, to the transferee spouse or former spouse) is subject to nonrecognition [I.R.C. § 1041(a); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.1041-1T(c), Q-9; see Walker v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo 2003-335 (former wife's sale of former husband's 25 percent property interest that was transferred to her in return for credit against equalizing money judgment did not constitute sale to third party on behalf of former spouse); Ingham v. United States (9th Cir. 1999) 167 F.3d 1240, 1244 (former wife's postdivision sale of property to third party did not qualify as transfer "to former spouse incident to divorce" when it did not relieve former husband of any obligation or liability that he owed to former wife or third party--but merely allowed her to satisfy debt she owed to him)].

[b] Split of Authority Between Ninth Circuit and Tax Court

In one case involving a transfer to a third party, the husband and wife held all the shares of a corporation in their joint names. The corporation was formed to operate a franchise that required 100-percent ownership of equity and profits by the owner/operator. When the couple agreed to divorce, joint ownership of the franchise was no longer possible, and their decree of dissolution therefore included an agreement to have the corporation redeem the wife's 50-percent interest in the outstanding stock. This transfer qualified for nonrecognition treatment under I.R.C. § 1041 as a transfer on behalf of the husband because it relieved him of his obligation to purchase his wife's stock. The transfer was a constructive transfer from the wife to the husband, who then transferred the stock to the corporation [Arnes v. U.S. (9th Cir. 1992) 981 F.2d 456, 459-460] .

However, the Tax Court has recently declined to follow the Ninth Circuit's decision in Arnes v. U.S. In a case involving similar facts, the Tax Court held thatredemption of the wife's shares, although incident to the divorce judgment, was not a transfer "on behalf of" the husband pursuant to Temp. Reg. § 1.1041-1T(b), Q & A-9 [Blatt v. Commissioner,(1994) 102 T.C. 77, 80-83] .

[6] Transfers in Trust

The nonrecognition provisions of I.R.C. § 1041 do not apply to the transfer of property in trust to the extent that the sum of the amount of the liabilities assumed, plus the amount of the liabilities to which the property is subject, exceeds the total of the adjusted basis of the property transferred. Thus, gain must be recognized on these types of transfers by the transferor spouse. Proper adjustment must be made under I.R.C. § 1041(b) to the transferee's basis in the property to take into account the gain recognized [I.R.C. § 1041(e)].

EXAMPLE:

W purchases an apartment building in 1970 for $50,000. In 1986, W obtains an $80,000 loan using the building as security. One year later, when the building has appreciated to $200,000, H and W dissolve their marriage. As part of their marital termination agreement, W agrees to place the building in trust for H, with rent payments to be used to pay the mortgage and any remainder to be paid to H. Because the building's liabilities ($80,000) exceed W's basis (the $50,000 purchase price) the excess liabilities ($30,000) are taxable to W [see I.R.C. § 1041(e)].

Similarly, the nonrecognition provisions for transfer of an installment obligation do not apply if the obligation is transferred in trust [I.R.C. § 453B(g)].

If the spouses choose to create an "alimony trust" by the transfer of property, the transaction may require consideration of both of these exceptions to the general rule of nonrecognition, as well as the provisions concerning taxation of income from the trust [see § 227.10[7][a]].

[7] Transfers to Nonresident Alien Spouse

Transfers to a spouse or former spouse who is a nonresident alien do not qualify for nonrecognition under I.R.C. § 1041 [I.R.C. § 1041(d)]. Transfers that do not qualify for nonrecognition treatment may result in the recognition of gain or loss, except to the extent precluded by the disallowance of losses on transactions between "related parties" [see generally I.R.C. § 267].

[8] Basis of Transferred Property

A transferor's basis in transferred property is carried over to the transferee [I.R.C. § 1041(b)(2)]. Because the transfer is treated as a gift, the transferee realizes no income from the receipt of the property [see I.R.C. § 102(a)]. The carryover of basis assures that the transferee retains any unrecognized gain or loss in the property.

Although transfers under I.R.C. § 1041 are treated as gifts, the carryover basis rule of I.R.C. § 1041 differs from the carryover basis rule generally applying to gifts. Under the rule generally applicable to gifts, the donee's basis is the lesser of the donor's basis or the fair market value of the property at the date of the gift [I.R.C. § 1015(a)]. Thus, an unrecognized loss cannot be transferred to the donee by gift. If the property qualifies for nonrecognition of gain or loss under I.R.C. § 1041, however, the basis of property in the hands of the transferee remains the same as the transferor's basis. As a result, an unrecognized loss can be transferred to the transferee. In addition, the transferee assumes the transferor's holding period for the transferred property [I.R.C. § 1223(2)].

[9] All Transfers Covered; Step Transaction Doctrine

Although I.R.C. § 1041 was enacted to eliminate the taxability of marital property settlements, its effect is much broader. All transfers of property between spouses generally are subject to I.R.C. § 1041, without regard to divorce. Thus, if a husband sells property to his wife, the transaction is treated as a gift of the property to the wife and a gift of the purchase price to the husband. The husband does not recognize gain or loss on the transfer of the property, and neither spouse realizes gain on the receipt of either the property or the purchase price. Furthermore, by application of the step transaction doctrine, a transfer from a corporation owned by a spouse to the other spouse may be treated, in appropriate circumstances, as a transfer made directly by the owner spouse [see Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.1041-1T(a), Q-2].

[10] Obligation of Transferor to Supply Records

The transferor must supply, at the time of the transfer, records sufficient to determine the adjusted basis and holding period of the property as of the date of the transfer to the transferee. If the property is subject to potential investment tax credit recapture, the transferor also must supply the transferee with records sufficient to determine the amount and period of potential liability [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.1041-1T(e), Q-14].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 227 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: TAX EFFECTS OF DISSOLUTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-227 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 227.15

AUTHOR: Original text by Frederick W. Campbell-Craven, J.D.

§ 227.15 Estate and Gift Taxation of Property Divisions

[1] Gift Tax

Equal divisions of the community estate do not result in taxable gifts, either because, theoretically, no transfer occurs between the spouses, or because the transfer is for full consideration [Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Mills (9th Cir. 1950) 183 F.2d 32, 34 ; see I.R.C. §§ 2501, 2511, 2512(b) (transfers and valuation of gifts)]. Unequal divisions of the community estate that are equalized by a payment out of separate property are also deemed nontaxable because the exchange of excess community property for separate property is for fullconsideration from the point of view of both parties [see I.R.C. § 2512(b) (property transferred for less than adequate and full consideration)].

Apart from one statutory exception discussed below, divisions of the community property in which there is no (or insufficient) consideration in the form of separate property or relinquishment of spousal support rights appear to result in taxable gifts to the extent of the inequality [see I.R.C. §§ 2511, 2512(b)]. Even more clearly, uncompensated transfers of separate property at the time of divorce are taxable gifts. If the division or transfer is accomplished while the parties are still married, the gift is exempted from tax by the unlimited marital deduction, [see I.R.C. § 2523(a)]. However, if the donor's spouse is not a United States citizen, this deduction is no longer allowed and other special gift tax rules apply [see I.R.C. § 2523(i)].

If the division or transfer takes place after divorce, it is arguable that the transfer may be exempt under a statutory provision [see I.R.C. § 2516] or judicial rule [Harris v. Commissioner (1950) 340 U.S. 106, 108-113, 71 S. Ct. 181, 95 L. Ed. 111] . The statutory provision, I.R.C. § 2516, exempts from gift tax any transfers either in settlement of marital or property rights or to provide a reasonable allowance for support of minor children of the marriage, if the transfers are made pursuant to a written agreement of the spouses and divorce occurs within the three-year period beginning on the date one year before the agreement is entered. This rule applies whether or not the agreement is approved by the divorce decree [I.R.C. § 2516]. Because each spouse has a right to only one half of the community estate, it is unclear whether the transfer of excess property actually is a transfer in settlement of property rights within the meaning of the statute. The statute originally was drafted to exempt transfers in settlement of inchoate marital property rights in common law jurisdictions, in effect allowing equal divisions of the marital property in common-law states to receive the same freedom from gift tax as equal divisions of community property [see I.R.C. § 2516].

A possible alternative exemption theory may be found in the judicial rule that transfers are exempt if "founded" on the divorce decree rather than on an agreement of the parties [Harris v. Commissioner (1950) 340 U.S. 106, 108-113, 71 S. Ct. 181, 95 L. Ed. 111] . The scope of this exemption is somewhat unclear, but it applies only if the settlement is incorporated into the divorce decree. This rule, too, was fashioned in a case involving transfers in settlement of inchoate marital rights that were otherwise taxable under the law existing at that time, and the decision was motivated by the desire to exempt such transfers from gift tax. Strictly speaking, it should not apply to transfers that are not made in satisfaction of property rights. The Court's confusing opinion in Harris v. Commissioner, however, arguably can be read broadly to exempt all transfers that are incorporated in the divorce decree [see Harris v. Commissioner (1950) 340 U.S. 106, 71 S. Ct. 181, 95 L. Ed. 111] .

In addition, some practitioners take the (arguably) aggressive view that when a settlement agreement is incorporated into a dissolution decree, no gift occurs on transfers pursuant to the settlement agreement, even if there is not a final divorce decree within the three-year period beginning one year before or two years after the agreement is entered, as normally required for exemption from gift taxes under I.R.C. § 2516. This view, if correct, will certainly provide relief in instances when the statutory time limits cannot be met due to protracted litigation. However, rather than relying completely on such an alternative exemption theory, the more conservative (and prudent) approach is to assure the exemption of gift tax by avoiding whenever possible any undue delay to getting a final decree, after execution of the marital settlement agreement, so that it is obtained within the time limits required under the Internal Revenue Code.

[2] Estate Tax

[a] Death Before Property Settlement or Divorce

If a spouse dies before a property settlement is effected or completed, estate taxes are avoided to the extent that the property to be transferred in the settlement is deductible from the decedent's gross estate [see I.R.C. §§ 2001, 2053(a)(3)]. On the other hand, with limited exception, the decedent's right to receive property from the other spouse is includable in the gross estate [I.R.C. § 2031; see I.R.C. § 2031(c) (providing special rules for "qualified conservation easements")]. If the spouses are still married at the time of death, and the community estate still exists, all of the decedent's separate property and one half of the community property is includable in the gross estate [I.R.C. § 2033]. If the property settlement then to be effected between the surviving spouse and the decedent spouse's estate involves an equal division of the community estate or an unequal division with an equalizing payment out of separate property, the size of the decedent's estate is not affected. This results from the deduction for the claims of the surviving spouse being offset by the inclusion of an equal amount of property to be received by the estate from the surviving spouse. If the property settlement would effect an unequal division of community property (without equalization out of separate property) in which the surviving spouse is to receive a greater share, or would effect an uncompensated transfer of separate property to the surviving spouse, the decedent's estate will be depleted below what it would have been had it included one-half of the community property and all of the decedent's separate property. This depletion is not deductible from the gross estate as a claim against the estate because it is not made for adequate consideration [see I.R.C. § 2053(c)(1)(A)]. It is deductible, however, if made in a form qualifying for the unlimited marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056(a)], subject to special rules regarding transfers tosurviving spouses who are not United States citizens [see I.R.C. §§ 2056(d), 2056A]. Thus, if the spouses are still married at the time of death, the taxable estate of the decedent will contain only the property that passes from the estate to persons other than the surviving spouse [see I.R.C. § 2056(a)].

[b] Spouses Divorced at Time of Death

If the spouses are already divorced or legally separated when one of them dies but transfers pursuant to the property settlement remain to be effected, the property to be transferred by the decedent's estate to the other spouse to complete an equal division of the community estate or an unequal division with equalizing payment out of separate property is deductible from the gross estate. The deduction is permitted because the claims of the surviving ex-spouse are supported by adequate consideration in the form of the property received by the decedent, or to be received by the estate [I.R.C. § 2053(a)(3),(c)(1)(A)]. Claims to complete an unequal division of community property (without separate property consideration) in which the surviving spouse receives the greater portion are not deductible to the extent of the inequality because of the absence of full consideration in money or money's worth [I.R.C. § 2053(a)(3),(c)(1)(A); see Estate of Scholl (1987) 88 T.C. 1265 (claims against estate in satisfaction of unpaid spousal support)]. The same rule applies to the surviving ex-spouse's claims for uncompensated transfers out of the decedent's separate property. Because the spouses are no longer married, the marital deduction is not available [see I.R.C. § 2056]. Thus, the decedent's taxable estate includes these amounts despite the obligation of the estate to make the transfers to the surviving ex-spouse.

A deduction is allowed to the decedent's taxable estate for all transfers made after death to a former spouse that satisfy the requirements for transfers exempt from gift tax [I.R.C. § 2043(b); see I.R.C. § 2516 (property settlements); cf. Estate of Herrmann (Herbert R.) T.C. Memo. 1995-90 (for purposes of deducting claim against estate of decedent married at time of death, waiver of marital rights in premarital agreement is not adequate consideration "in money or money's worth")].

[c] Similarities to Gift Tax

Several areas of uncertainty applicable to gift tax also apply to estate tax. First, it is unclear whether the claims of surviving ex-spouses for property can be deducted if they are not supported by consideration. A deduction from the gross estate is allowed for claims made pursuant to a written agreement relative to marital property rights, if the claim is in settlement of marital or property rights and if divorce occurred within the three-year period beginning one year before the agreement was entered [I.R.C. §§ 2043(b), 2516]. As discussed with respect to the gift tax [see § 227.15[1]], this provision was enacted to eliminate the estate taxation of amounts to be transferred to surviving spouses in satisfaction of inchoate marital property rights in common-law jurisdictions. Given this purpose, it appears that claims to more than one-half of the community property or to the decedent's separate property (if uncompensated) should not be treated as in settlement of property rights, and therefore would not be deductible.

In addition, the Harris rule can be invoked for estate tax as well as gift tax purposes to permit a deduction if the claims are made pursuant to a settlement incorporated in the divorce decree. However, the applicability of the Harris rule in the community property context is uncertain [see Harris v. Commissioner (1950) 340 U.S. 106, 71 S. Ct. 181, 95 L. Ed. 111 ; see also § 227.15[1]].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 227 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: TAX EFFECTS OF DISSOLUTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-227 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 227.16

AUTHOR: Original text by Frederick W. Campbell-Craven, J.D.

§ 227.16 Income Tax Consequences of Sale or Exchange of Personal Residence

[1] Determining Amount of Gain or Loss

Gain on the sale or exchange of a personal residence is the amount a taxpayer realizes from the sale or exchange less the taxpayer's adjusted basis in the residence. Loss is the excess of the adjusted basis over the amount realized [I.R.C. § 1001(a)]. The amount realized from a sale or exchange of a personal residence is the sum of money received plus the fair market value of any other property received. The amount realized does not include any amount received by the seller as reimbursement for real property taxes that are treated for income tax purchases as imposed on the purchaser. The amount realized does include amounts representing real property taxes that are treated for income tax purposes as imposed on the seller but paid by the purchaser [I.R.C. § 1001(b); see also I.R.C. § 164(d)].

A taxpayer's basis in a personal residence generally is its cost [I.R.C. § 1012]. A separate basis must be calculated, however, if the taxpayer inherited the residence or received it as a gift. [see I.R.C. §§ 1014, 1015, 1022]. Adjustments to basis, in general, are additions for capital improvements made to the residence and subtractions for depreciation of any part of the residence [I.R.C. § 1016].

PRACTICE TIP:

Advantages of Alimony Trust. Keeping records of capital improvements in order to increase basis is important to increase basis in the event that gain on the sale of the principal residence will exceed the exclusion amounts. It is therefore important to keep documentation of purchase price and capital improvements to a residence [see I.R.C. § 121]. Also, if the taxpayer's acquisition of a new residence resulted in nonrecognition of gain from a sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion of a former residence under (now former) I.R.C. § 1034, as in effect on the day before enactment of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, the taxpayer's basis in the new personal residence is reduced to the extent of the gain not recognized on sale of that former residence [see I.R.C. § 1016(a)(7)]. Forfurther discussion, see § 227.16[3].

As a general rule, all gain or loss on the sale or exchange of property must be recognized [I.R.C. § 1001(c)]. But, for all practical purposes, the recognition of gain or loss on the sale or exchange of a personal residence is rare. Loss, although realized, normally is not recognized because there is no profit motive in an investment sense when a personal residence is acquired and therefore the loss is not deductible [Treas. Reg. § 1.165-9(a); Pulliam v. Commissioner (1963) 39 T.C. 883, 885 ; but see §§ 227.16[2][a] and [b]]. All or a portion of the gain on the sale of a personal residence is not recognized if the residence is the taxpayer's "principal residence" and the seller can satisfy the other requirements of the statutory exclusion [I.R.C. § 121].

Gain realized on the sale or exchange of a "principal residence" of up to $250,000, for individuals, and up to $500,000, for married couples who file joint returns, generally may be excluded from taxable income, with respect to sales or exchanges after May 6, 1997 [see I.R.C. § 121(b)(1),(2)].

The sale or exchange of a personal residence is treated as a capital transaction. Therefore, any gain that is recognized is treated as capital gain [see I.R.C. § 1221] and capital gains are taxed more favorably than ordinary income for sales of long-term capital assets held for the statutory period [I.R.C. §§ 1(a)-(d), (h), (i); see I.R.C. § 1222(3) (one-year holding period required for long-term capital gain)].

[2] Recognition of Loss on Residences Held for Profit or Investment

[a] Profit Motive Essential

A taxpayer cannot recognize loss on the sale of a personal residence unless the taxpayer can establish that the property was held for profit or investment [Treas. Reg. § 1.165-9(b); Gordon v. Commissioner (1928) 12 B.T.A. 1191, 1194] . The intent to hold property for profit or investment is clearly shown if the property is held for production of rental, trade, or business income [Treas. Reg. § 1.165-9(b)(1)]. Insignificant acts, such as leasing the property at low rent for a short period, are not evidence of a profit motive [Charles A. Foehl (1961) 20 T.C.M. 418 (CCH)] . Once the taxpayer establishes a profit motive, vacancy of the property does not defeat the profit motive [McBride v. Commissioner (A) (1968) 50 T.C. 1, 10] .

Taxpayers may recognize loss realized on the sale of rental homes that they own and in which they temporarily resided, if they can show that they always intended to occupy a different dwelling as their personal residence [Willcox v. Commissioner (1953) 20 T.C. 305, 307] . Thus, the taxpayer's intentions generally will determine the availability of loss on the sale of a home [see Tillotson v. Commissioner (1953) 12 T.C.M. 171 (CCH)] . However, a taxpayer's intent not to use a residence permanently is insufficient to show that the property was purchased with the requisite profit motive [Warrick v. Commissioner (1941) 44 B.T.A. 1068, 1071-1073] . Similarly, loss will be disallowed if a taxpayer's primary intent for purchasing a home is to reside there temporarily while constructing a permanent residence [Meyer v. Commissioner (1960) 34 T.C. 528, 531-532] . A profit motive is evidenced, however, if a taxpayer changes the construction of a custom residence to a commercial residence [see Treas. Reg. § 1.165-9(b); Heiner v. Tindle (1928) 276 U.S. 582, 48 S. Ct. 326, 72 L. Ed. 714] . If a taxpayer cannot show a profit motive on multiple sales of personal residences, the taxpayer's actual losses cannot be used to offset realized gains. Furthermore, two or more transactions may not be aggregated to produce a net result, because these multiple sales must be considered as separate transactions; as a result, only the gain may be recognized [Koehn v. Commissioner (1951) 16. T.C. 1378, 1380-1381]. Similarly, only gain is recognized from the sale of a single unit of personal residential property even if the sale is made in separate transactions to different buyers [Rev. Rul. 54-95, 1954-1 C.B. 98].

[b] Conversion of Personal Residence to Income-Producing Property

The conversion of a personal residence to income-producing property allows the taxpayer to recognize loss. The taxpayer's measure for determining loss is based on the lesser of either the property's adjusted basis or the property's fair market value at the time of conversion, adjusted for depreciation for the period between the conversion and the sale [

Treas. Reg. § 1.165-9(b)(2); Heiner v. Tindle (1928) 276 U.S. 582, 584-587, 48 S. Ct. 326, 72 L. Ed. 714 ; see Estate of De Lucchi v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1957-234, 1957 Tax Ct. Memo LEXIS 15 . Thus, loss is limited to the difference between the lesser of these two amounts and the amount realized on the sale [Treas. Reg. § 1.165-9(b); Heiner v. Tindle (1928) 276 U.S. 582, 586-587, 48 S. Ct. 326, 72 L. Ed. 714 ; see Parsons v. United States (3d Cir. 1955) 227 F.2d 437, 438-439 (value of property at time of conversion to rental property is taxpayer's basis for figuring depreciation if property declined in value between purchase and conversion)]. Gain, however, is based on the taxpayer's original purchase price and is determined by subtracting the adjusted basis from the amount realized on the sale [I.R.C. § 1001; see I.R.C. § 1011 (adjusted basis); Parsons v. United States (3d Cir. 1955) 227 F.2d 437, 438-439 (taxpayer's basis for depreciation purposes is limited by property's value at time of conversion)]. Neither gain nor loss results if the amount realized is greater than the basis for loss, but less than the basis for gain; this outcome may occur if the fair market value on the conversion date is less than the adjusted basis on that date.

[3] Treatment of Gain on Sale of Principal Residence

[a] Exclusion of Gain Under Current Law

[i] Overview

Individuals are permitted to exclude from taxable income up to $250,000 of gain on the sale or exchange of a "principal residence," and this amount is $500,000 for married couples who file a joint return [see I.R.C. § 121 (b)(1),(2)]. The exclusion is allowed each time a taxpayer selling or exchanging a principal residence meets the eligibility requirements discussed hereafter, but generally no more often than once every two years [see I.R.C. § 121(b)(3)].

To qualify, a taxpayer must have both owned and used the property as his or her principal residence for at least two years during the five year period ending on the date of the sale or exchange [see I.R.C. § 121(a)]. However, married couples who file a joint return may claim the $500,000 exclusion if (1) either spouse meets the ownership requirement; (2) both spouses meet the use requirement; and (3) neither spouse is ineligible for exclusion by way of a sale or exchange of a residence within the last two years [I.R.C. § 121(b)(2)(A)-(D)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Effect of Marriage When One Spouse Used Exclusion Within Two Years Before Marriage. If a single taxpayer who is otherwise eligible for an exclusion marries someone who has used the exclusion within the two years prior to the marriage, the newly married taxpayer is allowed a maximum exclusion of $250,000; that is, the fact that an individual's spouse used the exclusion within the past two years does not preclude the individual from claiming the exclusion. Once both spouses satisfy the eligibility rules and two years have elapsed since the last exclusion was allowed to either of them, the taxpayers may exclude $500,000 of gain on their joint return [see House Ways and Means Comm. Report (H.R. 2014), rel. June 18, 1997 (construing the bill preceding final enactment of § 312(a) of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, amending I.R.C. § 121].

If spouses who file a joint return do not meet the requirements for the $500,000 exclusion, the amount of the exclusion will be the "sum of the limitations under paragraph (1) [of I.R.C. § 121(b)] to which each spouse would be entitled if such spouses had not been married ... [and for this purpose,] each spouse shall be treated as owning the property during the period that either spouse owned the property" [I.R.C. § 121(b)(3)].

In addition, the law allows an exception under which a taxpayer is entitled to a prorated amount of the exclusion on failing to meet either of the two year requirements (i.e., ownership and use) because of a change in the place of employment, health, or other unforeseen circumstances [see I.R.C. § 121(c)(2)(A), (B)]. In this event, the taxpayer's exclusion is a percentage of the amount that would have been allowed if the two-year requirements had been met. Accordingly, the percentage exclusion equals the amount that "... bears the same ratio to the [statutory exclusion amount (if the requirements were met)] ... as the shorter of [a][1] the aggregate periods, during the 5-year period ending on the date of [the] sale or exchange, [the] property has been owned and used by the taxpayer as the taxpayer's principal residence; or [2] the period after the date of the most recent prior sale or exchange by the taxpayer to which [I.R.C. § 121(a)] applied and before the date of [the] sale or exchange, bears to [2] two years" [see I.R.C. § 121(c)(1)]. For discussion of a special, additional provision concerning the ability of a spouse or former spouse to claim an exclusion from gain despite having lived away from the residence pursuant to a divorce or separation instrument, see § 227.16[3][b][i] [see I.R.C. § 121(d)(3)].

The exclusion of gain does not apply to any gain attributable to depreciation deductions taken in connection with the rental or business use of the property for periods after May 6, 1997 [I.R.C. § 121(d)(6)].

A special rule applies when a principal residence for which gain was excluded under I.R.C. § 121 is later reacquired by the taxpayer. In that case, no gain is recognized upon either the reacquisition or resale of the residence if within one year after reacquisition the taxpayer resells the property [see I.R.C. § 1038(e)].

For estates of decedents dying after 2009, the exclusion for sales of a principal residence is extended to estates and heirs [I.R.C. § 121(d)(9)]. If the decedent's estate or an heir sells the decedent's principal residence, $250,000 of gain can be excluded on the sale of the residence, provided the decedent used the property as a principal residence for two or more years during the five-year period prior to the sale. The exclusion also applies to property sold by a trust that was a qualified revocable trust under I.R.C. § 645 immediately prior to the decedent's death. The decedent's period of occupancy of the property as a principal residence can be added to an heir's subsequent ownership and occupancy in determining whether the property was owned and occupied for two years as a principal residence, regardless of whether the residence was owned by the trust during the decedent's occupancy [I.R.C. § 121(d)(9)(C)].

[ii] Principal Residence

To qualify for the exclusion of gain on the sale or exchange of a residence, the taxpayer must have owned or used the property as a "principal residence" during the applicable time period [see I.R.C. § 121(a); see also § 227.16[3][a][i]]. In construing this term, resort to decisions under the former "rollover" rules [see former I.R.C. § 1034, before repeal by Pub. Law 105-34] may be instructive, because it would seem that such decisions would have analogous application, except to the extent inconsistent with the statutory exclusion available for sales of principal residences [see I.R.C. § 121]. Thus, whether a residence constitutes thetaxpayer's principal residence has been required to be determined from all the facts and circumstances of each case. Although a taxpayer may have more than one residence, only one of those residences is the taxpayer's principal residence [see, e.g., Grace v. Commissioner (1969) 51 T.C. 685, 686-690 , aff'd, (5th Cir. 1969) 421 F.2d 165 ; Smith v. Commissioner (9th Cir. 1964) 332 F.2d 671, 673] . It has been held that a principal residence can be stock held by a tenant-shareholder in a cooperative housing corporation [Treas. Reg. § 1.1034-1(c)(3)(i)], a house-trailer [Disney v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1961-177] , a houseboat [Treas. Reg. § 1.1034-1(c)(3)], a condominium [Rev. Rul. 64-31, 1964-1 C.B. (Part 1) 300; see Rev. Rul. 85-132, 1985-2 C.B. 182], a mobile home [Treas. Reg. § 1.1034-1(c)(3)], or a cooperative apartment [Barnum v. Commissioner (1952) 19 T.C. 401, 408-409 ; see Treas. Reg. § 1.1034-1(c)(3)(i)]. The primary factor has been whether the taxpayer uses the property as a residence [Stanley v. Commissioner (1959) 33 T.C. 614, 616 ; see Skorniak v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1996-178] . Although land and a house may together constitute a personal residence, it has been held that land in itself does not [O'Barr v. Commissioner (1965) 44 T.C. 501, 503] .

Under a special statutory provision, an individual is treated as using property as a principal residence during any period of ownership in which the individual's spouse or former spouse is granted use of the property under a divorce or separation instrument, as defined in I.R.C. § 71(b)(2) [see I.R.C. § 121(d)(3)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Deferred Sales. This provision affords significant relief to "out spouses" who live away from the family residence pursuant to a court order, such as an order for deferred sale of the residence [see Fam. Code §

3800 et seq.] or other "divorce or separation instrument." The key for the "out spouse" would appear to be to ensure that a "divorce or separation instrument" is in place to establish the other spouse's right to use the residence [see I.R.C. § 121(d)(3)].

[iii] Effective Dates and Election to Be Bound by Former Law

The current rules for exclusion of gain (§ 227.16[3][a][i]) are generally effective for sales or exchanges after May 6, 1997--which, of necessity, would be those taking place on or after May 7, 1997. Sales before May 7, 1997, are subject to the former "rollover" and "once-in-a-lifetime exclusion" provisions [I.R.C. § 121(b)(3)(B) (excluding "pre-May 7, 1997" sales or exchanges)].

A taxpayer may nonetheless elect to be subject to the former provisions if: (1) the sale or exchange occurred prior to August 5, 1997, the enactment date of the new law; (2) the sale or exchange occurs after August 5, 1997, but is pursuant to a binding contract in effect on that date; or (3) no gain on the sale would be recognized, under the prior rollover rules, due to a replacement residence that was acquired on or before August 5, 1997, or pursuant to a binding contract effective on that date [Pub. L. No. 105-34, § 312(d), (e)(2)-(4)].

In addition, a taxpayer can elect not to have the revised I.R.C. § 121 exclusion apply to any sale or exchange [see I.R.C. § 121(f)].

[b] Former "Rollover" Rule and "Once-in-a-Lifetime" Exclusion

[i] Rollover of Gain

Under former law, if property used by the taxpayer as his or her principal residence was sold or exchanged, and the taxpayer acquired a new principal residence within a period beginning two years before and ending two years after the sale or exchange, the taxpayer recognized any gain for both federal and California income tax purposes only to the extent that the adjusted sales price of the old residence exceeded the cost of the new residence [former I.R.C. § 1034; Treas. Reg. § 1.1034-1(a); Rev. & Tax. Code § 18031; see Kirst (Randall L.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1997-353 ; Snowa (Jeanne G.) v. Commissioner (4th Cir. 1997), 123 F.3d 190 , reversing T.C. Memo. 1995-336 ; Ryan v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1995-579 ; Pagliarulo v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1994-506 (parties failed to meet two-year requirement for purchase of new residence)].

In determining whether a particular property remained a taxpayer's principal residence for rollover purposes, the Tax Court generally demonstrated a remarkable tolerance for periods of absence from the property. Thus, for example, the court found that a house remained the taxpayers' principal residence for rollover purposes despite a three year absence, when the taxpayers could not sell the house because of depressed market conditions [Clapham v. Commissioner (1975) 63 T.C. 505] . In another case, a taxpayer's principal residence was found to have remained her principal residence for rollover purposes even though she had not lived in the house on a permanent basis for six years at the time she sold it, because she was prevented from selling the house by her co-owner [Green v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1992-439] .

By contrast, a court held that divorce is not a "force beyond [the taxpayer's] control," so a voluntary release of exclusive possession without a mandate for immediate sale of a residence prevented the "out-spouse" from treating it as his or her "principal residence" [Perry (Curtis B.) v. Commissioner (9th Cir. 1996) 91 F.3d 82] . Thus, an order allowing one party to have "exclusive use," such as a "deferred sale of home order" (also known as a "Duke" order), without an order for immediate sale of the home, apparently precluded its use as a "residence" by the nonpossessory party and thereby precluded that party from taking a rollover [see Perry (Curtis B.) v. Commissioner (9th Cir. 1996) 91 F.3d 82] .

PRACTICE TIP:

This adverse treatment of "out spouses" has been eliminatedunder current law regarding the exclusion of gain, under which an individual is treated as using property as a "principal residence" during any period of ownership in which the individual's spouse or former spouse is granted use of the property under a "divorce or separation instrument," as defined in I.R.C. § 71(b)(2) [see I.R.C. § 121(d)(3)]. Thus, the considerations discussed above, pertaining to the "out spouse" being precluded from treating a property occupied by a former spouse as a "principal residence' for rollover of gain purposes (as well as, in general, all rollover discussion in this discussion) are relevant now only to the extent that the rollover provisions still have limited application under the 1997 tax law (§ 227.16[3][b][ii]).

The rollover provisions did not eliminate gain on the sale of a principal residence, but only deferred the gain by adjusting the basis of the new principal residence. The amount of gain that was not recognized under the rollover provisions was subtracted from the basis of the replacement principal residence. Thus, the gain was preserved and was recognized on the sale of the replacement property [former I.R.C. § 1034(e)].

[ii] "Once-in-a-Lifetime" Exclusion of Gain by Older Taxpayer

Under former law, which applied generally for sales and exchanges before May 7, 1997, a taxpayer at least 55 years of age could elect to exclude from gross income up to $125,000 of gain on the sale or exchange of property owned and used as his or her principal residence [prior version of I.R.C. § 121]. The residence had to be the taxpayer's principal residence for an aggregate period of three or more years during the five-year period ending on the date of the sale or exchange [prior version of I.R.C. § 121(a)(2)]. A married taxpayer who filed a separate return could exclude up to $62,500 [prior version of I.R.C. § 121(b)(1)]. If a property was used partly as a taxpayer's principal residence and partly for other purposes, only that part used for the residence qualified for the election [prior version of I.R.C. § 121(d)(5)]. The same exclusion applied for California personal income tax purposes [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17131, 17152]. Subject to limited exception, the federal exclusion could normally be elected only once in a lifetime by the taxpayer aged 55 or older [prior version of I.R.C. § 121]. "Principal residence," for purposes of the exclusion-of-gain rule, has been defined in the same manner as for the rollover-of-gain provisions [see § 227.16[3][a][ii]]. The exclusion was available for jointly owned residences. If each unmarried joint owner fully met the age, ownership, and use tests, each was entitled to a full exclusion [Rev. Rul. 67-235, 1967-2 C.B. 79 ; Rev. Rul. 67-234, 1967-2 C.B. 78 ; I.R.S. Letter Rul. 8942008 (July 17, 1989)]. The exclusion was unavailable if one spouse met two of the three tests and the other spouse met the third requirement [I.R.S. Letter Rul. 8909020 (Dec. 2, 1988)].

If a taxpayer at least 55 years old replaced his or her principal residence within the former rollover-of-gain period [see former I.R.C. § 1034] and also elected to exclude gain from the sale, the taxpayer was entitled to reduce the amount required for reinvestment under the former rollover provisions by the amount of gain excluded [prior version of I.R.C. § 121(d)(7); see former I.R.C. §§ 1033, 1034]. Under these circumstances, the taxpayer presumably could increase his or her basis in the replacement property by the excluded amount [see former Treas. Reg. § 1.121-5(g)(2) (examples) (removed December 24, 2002, 67 Fed. Reg. 78367)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 227 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: TAX EFFECTS OF DISSOLUTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-227 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 227.17

AUTHOR: Original text by Frederick W. Campbell-Craven, J.D.

§ 227.17 General Tax Considerations in Dividing or Distributing Retirement Benefits

[1] Distribution Under Pension Plan Pursuant to QDRO

Distributions from a retirement or pension plan are normally taxable to the plan participant, as the distributee [see I.R.C. § 402(a)]. However, special rules apply for the tax treatment of distributions governed by ERISA under a qualified domestic relations order (QDRO) to an alternate payee who is the spouse or former spouse of the plan participant, from certain employee benefit plans that are prescribed by federal law. Under these rules, an "alternate payee" who is the spouse or former spouse of the plan participant must be treated as the distributee, for tax purposes, of any distribution or payment made to the alternate payee under a QDRO [see I.R.C. §§ 402(e)(1)(A), 414(p)(8); 29 U.S.C. § 1056(d)(3)(K) (defining alternate payee); if alternate payee is another dependent, such as a child, plan participant may be required to include distribution in his or her gross income)].

The rule of distributee tax liability applies even if the parties include language in their QDRO that requires the employee party to pay all of the tax on the distribution. The nonemployee in that instance must still include his or her share of the benefits distribution on that party's income tax return and is responsible for paying the tax thereon--subject to his or her right under state law to seek reimbursement from the other party pursuant to the court order or agreement [see Clawson (Kay A) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1996-446] .

In general, distributee tax liability will apply with respect to distributions or payments from employee benefit plans that are considered "qualified" [see Brotman v. Commissioner (1995) 105 T.C. 141 (noting that, whether order meets QDRO requirements and plan is entitled to tax-exempt treatment by being "qualified" are separate issues; distinction between orders providing for assignment of benefits under qualified plan versus assignment under nonqualified plan is accomplished "by providing for special tax treatment of a QDRO only in respect of distributions from a qualified plan"); see also I.R.C. §§ 403(b), 414(p)(9); Treas. Reg. § 1.403(b)-2]. Nevertheless, certain other plans may also be subject to ERISA. For example, although an unfunded "excess benefit" plan is not subject to ERISA [29 U.S.C. § 1003(b)], at least one reported decision heldthat a distribution from an unfunded, nonqualified plan that was considered a "top hat plan" was subject to division by means of a QDRO [Bass v. Mid-America Co., Inc. (N.Dist. Illinois, Eastern Division, 1995) 1995 U. S. Dist. LEXIS 15719] . In addition, while governmental plans [see I.R.C. § 414(d)], "non-ERISA coverage-electing" church plans, and eligible deferred compensation plans (within the meaning of I.R.C. § 457(b)), are not subject to ERISA, a distribution from a such a plan will be treated as made pursuant to a QDRO if made pursuant to a domestic relations order meeting the requirements of I.R.C. § 414(p)(1)(A)(i) [I.R.C. § 414(p)(11); the provision with respect to eligible deferred compensation plans applies to distributions made after December 31, 2001; cf. I.R.C. § 410(d) (permitting church plan to "elect into" ERISA coverage)].

The failure of a court order that purports to divide employee benefits to meet the strict requirements for a QDRO may subject an employee spouse to taxation on both spouses' shares of a retirement plan distribution [see Hawkins v. C.I.R. (10th Cir. 1996) 86 F.3d 982, 987-988, 993-994 (divorce decree with minimally acceptable language qualified as QDRO despite failure to reference applicable federal statute or use statutory language)]. Similarly, if the distribution from an employee benefit plan is made before a QDRO issues, and therefore is not made pursuant to a QDRO, it will be fully taxable to an employee who initially receives the entire distribution [see Rodoni v. Commissioner (1995) 105 T.C. 29 ; see also Bougas v. Comm'r (2003) T.C. Memo 2003-194 (withdrawal of pension funds pursuant to court's suggestion but without court order is not treated as pursuant to QDRO, and subject to 10 percent penalty tax)]. Thus, use of a QDRO is desirable and essential, both because it provides a means of direct payment from an ERISA employee benefit plan to a former spouse of his or her share of the benefits divided, and because it makes the alternate payee the taxable distributee of that share [see I.R.C. §§ 402(e)(1)(A), 414(p)].

Arguably, in a community property state, a QDRO may not be theoretically necessary to shift the taxability of the distribution to an alternate payee. In one case arising out of a California pension distribution prior to the operative date of the QDRO provisions, the Tax Court held that a nonemployee spouse was the taxable distributee of her community property share of the pension, which her former husband paid over to her after receiving a lump sum distribution from the plan. The court based its ruling on the community property nature of the pension, which created a right of ownership in both spouses, so that there was no improper "alienation" of the benefits in its division [Powell v. Commissioner (1993) 101 T.C. 489 distinguishing Darby v. Commissioner (1991) 97 T.C. 51] . The extent, if any, to which the rationale for that decision might conceivably be applied to a current division of community property benefits that fails to qualify as a QDRO, or to a distribution from a nonqualified plan that is not subject to ERISA coverage, is presently unclear, particularly in view of some countervailing authority. Therefore, pending further decisional or statutory clarification, the most prudent course of action appears to be to ensure that the instrument dividing the benefits meets the requirements for a QDRO to avert the potential for taxation of the employee spouse on the entire distribution [see Hawkins v. C.I.R. (10th Cir. 1996) 86 F.3d 982, 987-988, 993-994 ; Karem (Robert L.) 100 T.C. 521 ; see also I.R.C. § 414(p)(11)].

PRACTICE TIP:

It is advisable for counsel to insert in a marital settlement agreement a provision under which the nonemployee spouse must indemnify the employee spouse against any tax liability arising from distributions made to the nonemployee spouse either directly by the plan or by the employee spouse. However, the clients should be advised that such an agreement is strictly between the spouses and does not bind the IRS, which is not a party to the agreement [see Alioto v. Commissioner (1994) T.C. Memo 1994-51 .

[2] IRA's and Other Plans to Which Tax-Free Rollover May Be Made

[a] Distributions to Spouse on Employee Spouse's Death

If, on the death of an employee spouse, a retirement distribution is paid to an employee's immediate surviving spouse--that is, the person to whom the employee was married at the time of death, as opposed to a former spouse-alternate payee who is treated as a surviving spouse--that surviving spouse is entitled to transfer (or "roll over") the distribution to an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) [see I.R.C. § 408(a)] or an individual retirement annuity (other than an endowment contract) [see I.R.C. § 408(b)] to the extent that the distribution would be eligible for rollover if made to the employee spouse. Effective for distributions after 2001, surviving spouses may also roll over distributions to a qualified plan, an annuity plan [see I.R.C. § 403(a)], an eligible governmental section 457 plan, or an annuity contract [I.R.C. § 402(c)(9); see I.R.C. § 403(b) (annuity contract)]. For distributions before 2002, the surviving spouse could not roll over the distributions to a qualified plan, an annuity plan, a governmental section 457 plan, or an annuity contract [I.R.C. § 402(c)(9), before amendment by Pub. Law 107-16]. In general, an "eligible rollover distribution" is all or any portion of the balance credited to the employee in a qualified trust [see I.R.C. § 402(c)(2), (4); Treas. Reg. § 1.402 (c)-2 (c) Q&A 3]. An eligible rollover distribution does not include certain substantially equal periodic payments measured by the lives of the employee and/or the employee's beneficiary, distributions made over a specified period of at least 10 years, required minimum distributions, and certain distributions made on the hardship of the employee [I.R.C. § 402(c)(4); Treas. Reg. § 1.402(c)(2), Q&A 3(b), 4; see I.R.C. § 401(a)(9) (required minimum distributions)].

By rolling over the distribution within the time period prescribed by law, thesurviving spouse payee need not include it in his or her current income, in contrast to the inclusion that would be required in the absence of the rollover [see I.R.C. §§ 402(c)(3), (9), 408(d)(3)]. The surviving spouse may also avoid the otherwise mandatory 20 percent withholding with respect to the distribution [see I.R.C. § 3405(c)(1)(B); Treas. Reg. § 1.401(a)(31)-1, Q&A 1] by making a timely and direct rollover of the distribution to an eligible retirement plan [Treas. Reg. § 1.402(c)-2, Q&A 1; see I.R.C. §§ 401(a)(31)(A), 402(c), 408(d)(3)(C)(ii)(II), 3405(c)(2)].

[b] Distributions Under QDRO During Employee Spouse's Lifetime

A spouse or former spouse of a participant in a plan who receives a distribution under a QDRO as an alternate payee is treated as the distributee [I.R.C. § 402(e)(1)(A)]. Accordingly, unless a timely rollover of the distribution is made, the spouse or former spouse will be taxable on the distribution [I.R.C. §§ 72, 402(a)]. Any amount that is distributed to the spouse or former spouse of the participant as an alternate payee by reason of any QDRO, however, may be rolled over in the same manner as if the distribution were made to the participant directly [I.R.C. § 402(e)(1)(B)]. Accordingly, effective for distributions after 2001, spouses and former spouses may roll over distributions received under a QDRO as an alternate payee to an IRA [see I.R.C. § 408(a)], an individual retirement annuity (other than an endowment contract) [see I.R.C. § 408(b)], a qualified plan, an annuity plan [see I.R.C. § 403(a)], an eligible governmental section 457 plan, or an annuity contract [I.R.C. § 402(c)(9); see I.R.C. § 403(b) (annuity contract)]. For distributions before 2002, rollovers could be made only to an individual retirement account or individual retirement annuity [I.R.C. § 402(c)(9), before amendment by Pub. Law 107-16].

The rollover generally must be made within 60 days of receipt [I.R.C. § 402(c)(3)(A)], but for distributions made after 2001, the IRS may waive the 60-day requirement if the failure to do so would be against equity or good conscience, including cases of casualty, disaster, or other events beyond the reasonable control of the individual subject to the requirement [I.R.C. § 402(c)(3)(B)]. Besides preventing immediate taxation of the distribution [I.R.C. §§ 72, 402(a)], a timely rollover will avoid the mandatory 20-percent tax withholding on the distribution [Treas. Reg. § 1.402(c)-2, Q&A 1; see I.R.C. §§ 401(a)(31)(A), 402(c), 408(d)(3)(C)(ii)(II), 3405(c)(1)(B), (2); Treas. Reg. § 1.401(a)(31)-1, Q&A 1].

The foregoing explanation is a brief overview of rollovers, and should not be viewed as a comprehensive treatment of this subject. It is suggested that ERISA tax counsel be consulted whenever a rollover is contemplated.

PRACTICE TIP:

Counsel for both spouses should note carefully the requirements for nontaxability of retirement distributions. Tax consequences to both parties will turn on strict compliance with all statutory requirements [see, e.g., Rodoni v. Commissioner (1995) 105 T.C. 29 (distribution and rollover to IRA took place before QDRO issued; court noted that rules relating to QDROs are strictly construed and "substantial compliance" is not sufficient); Rudzin v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1995-13 (wife had to incur tax on stock distribution via QDRO, which she failed to roll over to IRA, despite fact that delay was caused by her uncertainty over how much stock should have been distributed to her)]. In addition, counsel should exercise caution in providing any advice to the plan fiduciary. Violation of highly technical plan disclosure and notice requirements required to be made to an alternate payee relating to a rollover can be cause for disqualification of the plan [see I.R.C. § 401(a)(31); Treas. Reg. § 1.401(a)(31)-1]. In such cases, referral to ERISA-knowledgeable counsel is advisable.

[3] Transfers From Individual Retirement Plans ("IRAs")

"IRA" is an acronym for two species of "individual retirement plans": the Individual Retirement Account [I.R.C. § 408(a)] and the Individual Retirement Annuity [I.R.C. § 408(b)]. The Individual Retirement Annuity must be an annuity contract or an endowment contract issued by an insurance company that meets certain other requirements [see I.R.C. § 403(b)]. Simplified Employee Pensions (SEP-IRAs) are a species of IRA [see I.R.C. § 408(k)], as are SIMPLE retirement accounts [see I.R.C. § 408(p)].

An IRA or an interest therein (including specific assets) may be transferred without taxable event from one spouse to the IRA of the other in the context of a dissolution of marriage or separation by appropriate court order or agreement [I.R.C. §§ 408(d)(6), 1041].

An order providing that the nontitled spouse receive a distribution from an IRA will result in a 10 percent penalty tax in addition to the ordinary income tax that must always be paid on such distributions [I.R.C. § 72(t)(3)(a); but cf. I.R.C. § 408A(d)(3) (special rules for conversion of regular IRA account into "Roth IRA Account" during 1998 without payment of 10 percent penalty)]. In order to insure that an IRA transfer is tax-free, counsel should use an order or judgment meeting both the requirements of I.R.C. § 408(d)(6) and I.R.C. § 71(b)(2)(A), so that the transfer document be a "divorce or separation instrument." In one instance, for example, I.R.C. § 1041 "nonrecognition of income treatment" was denied to separated individuals who had not filed a divorce or separation action and who contemplated none, and who proposed to transfer an IRA from the husband to the wife by written agreement. Because the spouses were not separating, the agreement did not meet the "divorce or separation instrument" test [I.R.S. Letter Rul. 9344027; see, Bunney (Michael G.) v. Commissioner (2000) 114 T.C. 259 (husband's IRA distributions did not qualify as nonrecognition event--a transfer incident to divorce--when he cashed out IRAs and paid some proceeds to former wife, instead of transferring an "interest" in IRAs to her)].

On the other hand, the direct transfer of an employee spouse's interest in an IRA to the IRA of his or her spouse or former spouse pursuant to a divorce or separation instrument is a nontaxable transfer to both spouses. Thereafter, the account or annuity or portion thereof is treated as belonging to the distributee spouse or former spouse [see I.R.C. §§ 71(b)(2)(A), 408(d)(6); see also I.R.C. § 408(d)(3) (describing qualifying rollovers)]. Thus, the distributee spouse or former spouse is subject to ordinary income tax on withdrawals and to an additional 10 percent penalty tax on early withdrawals [Cohen v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo 2004-227 (court order for equal division of IRA); see I.R.C. § 408(d)(6)].

An incarcerated spouse's withdrawal of funds from an IRA account to pay support arrearages or to satisfy a marital property judgment and thereby obtain release from jail will result in a 10 percent penalty tax in addition to the ordinary income tax on IRA distributions [see I.R.C. 72(t); see also Baas v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo. 2002-130 ; Czepiel (Richard D.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1999-289 (withdrawal compelled by family court orders, but taxpayer actively participated in withdrawal)]. Similarly, a spouse's withdrawal of IRA funds in order to pay divorce obligations, pursuant to a court's suggestion but without a formal court order, will result in a 10 percent penalty tax [Bougas v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo 2003-194 (I.R.C. § 72(t)(2)(C) exception to penalty tax was inapplicable when divorce judgment failed to meet QDRO requirements)].

Note that special rules apply to transfers involving "Roth IRA Accounts," a variety of IRA that was created as part of the Tax Reform Act of 1997, and is effective for tax years after 1997. Contributions to a Roth IRA are made with "after tax" income, meaning that they are not deductible like a "regular" IRA [I.R.C. § 408A(c)(1)], but the ultimate distributions, including the accumulations and value increases, are tax-free [I.R.C. § 408A(d)(1)]. Roth IRAs are subject to contribution limits per year [see I.R.C. § 408A(c)(2), (3)], as well as to special rules for rolling over amounts into a Roth IRA from either another Roth IRA or from a "regular" IRA [see I.R.C. § 408A(c)(3)(B), (6), (d)(2), (3), (e)].

190 of 199 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 19: Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody thru Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution-Chs.223-239
Chapter 227 DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE: TAX EFFECTS OF DISSOLUTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

19-227 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 227.18

AUTHOR: Original text by Frederick W. Campbell-Craven, J.D.

§ 227.18 Deductibility of Attorney's Fees

[1] General Rules

As a general rule, attorney's fees or other costs paid in connection with a dissolution, judgment of nullity, separation, or decree for support are not deductible by either spouse [Treas. Reg. § 1.262-1(b)(7); Wolfson v. Commissioner (1966) 47 T.C. 290, 294] , because personal expenses are not deductible [United States v. Gilmore (1963) 372 U.S. 39, 44-46, 83 S. Ct. 623, 9 L. Ed. 2d 570 ; United States v. Patrick (1963) 372 U.S. 53, 56, 83 S. Ct. 618, 9 L. Ed. 2d 580] . The characterization of expenses as personal or business depends on whether the expense arose in connection with the taxpayer's profit-seeking activities and not on the potential consequences that might result to the taxpayer's income-producing property [United States v. Gilmore (1963) 372 U.S. 39, 44-45, 83 S. Ct. 623, 9 L. Ed. 2d 570] . Because legal expenses relating to dissolution or separation arise from the marital relationship, they are personal expenses [United States v. Patrick (1963) 372 U.S. 53, 56, 83 S. Ct. 618, 9 L. Ed. 2d 580] .

However, a deduction is permitted for expenses, including legal expenses, incurred (1) for the production or collection of income; (2) for the management, conservation, or maintenance of income-producing property; or (3) in connection with the determination, collection, or refund of any tax (tax advice expenses) [I.R.C. § 212]. This deduction, which is limited in application to a taxpayer's profit-seeking or business activities [United States v. Gilmore (1963) 372 U.S. 39, 44-46, 83 S. Ct. 623, 9 L. Ed. 2d 570 ; United States v. Patrick (1963) 372 U.S. 53, 56-57, 83 S. Ct. 618, 9 L. Ed. 2d 580] , may be applicable to legal fees involving dissolutions, judgments of nullity, separations, or decrees for support [see I.R.C. § 212(1),(2); see Jasko v. Commissioner (1996), 107 T.C. 30 (legal fees incurred to recover fire insurance proceeds on family home were not deductible, as property was not held for income-producing purposes); see §§ 227.18[2] and [3]]. The taxpayer has the burden of establishing that these legal expenses qualify for the deduction [Rose v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue (6th Cir. 1972) 459 F.2d 28, 29 , cert. denied, 409 U.S. 879 ; see Jasko v. Commissioner (1996), 107 T.C. 30] .

Even if the taxpayer's legal expenses qualify for this deduction, the amount of qualifying attorney's fees that is deductible is limited. As one of the "miscellaneous itemized deductions," the deduction for attorney's fees is allowed only to the extent that the aggregate of all miscellaneous itemized deductions claimed exceeds 2 percent of adjusted gross income [see I.R.C. § 67(a),(b)].

[2] Attorney's Fees Incurred for Production of Income

[a] Production of Spousal Support

Attorney's fees paid in connection with a dissolution, judgment of nullity, legal separation, or decree for support are deductible as an expense for the production of income, if they are properly attributable to the production or collection of spousal support payments includable in the gross income of the recipient spouse under I.R.C. § 71 [Treas. Reg. § 1.262-1(b)(7); Wild v. Commissioner (1964) 42 T.C. 706, 709-711 , acq., 1967-2 C.B. 4 ; see § 227.10,]. Even those legal expenses that are incurred in obtaining temporary support or support arrearages are deductible, as long as the support will be included in the recipient's gross income under I.R.C. § 71 when it is obtained [Wolfson v. Commissioner (1966) 47 T.C. 290, 294-296 ; Dalton v. Commissioner (1960) 34 T.C. 879, 885-886] .

Only those expenses attributable to the production of spousal support included in the recipient's gross income qualify for deduction. If the entire amount incurred cannot be attributed to spousal support, the taxpayer has the burden of allocating the portion of attorney's fees spent on the production of spousal support [see Mirsky v. Commissioner (1971) 56 T.C. 664, 677] . The evidence necessary to satisfy the taxpayer's burden varies from case to case [see Munn v. United States (Ct. Cl. 1972) 455 F.2d 1028, 1035 ; see also Merians v. Commissioner (1973) 60 T.C. 187, 188 , acq., 1973-2 C.B. 2 (any bill for legal or accounting services should be itemized to reflect portion for deductible or tax-related services)]. If there are sufficient facts in the record as a whole, however, it is possible that an allocation may be inferred despite the taxpayer's failure to provide a breakdown of legal fees incurred [see Hazel Porter (1966) 25 T.C.M. 448 (CCH) , aff'd per curium, 388 F.2d 670 (6th. Cir. 1968)] .

[b] Production of Income Other Than Spousal Support

Attorney's fees incurred during dissolution or separation that are attributable to the production of income other than spousal support also may be deductible. A deduction for attorney's fees incurred for the production of income in connection with a profit-seeking activity is not precluded merely because the fees arose as part of a dissolution or separation proceeding [see Genevieve M. Hahn (1976) 35 T.C.M. 509 (CCH) ; Beth Van Sickle (1986) 52 T.C.M. 982 (CCH)] . For example, a spouse was permitted to deduct legal expenses incurred in a dissolution proceeding to establish the right to possession of, or participation in, the income of property jointly owned with the other spouse. However, these expenses related to a profit-seeking activity were carefully distinguished from expenses incurred to establish ownership of property [Genevieve M. Hahn (1976) 35 T.C.M. 509 (CCH)] .

[c] Payment by Other Spouse

