The Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act provides four distinct grounds for finding a transfer to be fraudulent as to creditors [see Civ. Code §§ 3439.04, 3439.05; see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 4200 -4203 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instructions)]. Three of these grounds involve transfers which are constructively fraudulent as to creditors, that is, those transfers in which the intent to defraud is presumed in law [see Civ. Code §§ 3439.04-3439.06, 3439.08; Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 374, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804 ; Pope v. National Aero Fin. Co. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 722, 728, 46 Cal. Rptr. 233 ; see also Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 4202, 4203, 4207 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)]. The other ground involves transfers or conveyances made with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors [see Civ. Code § 3439.04(a); Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 375, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act

23-270 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 270.40

§ 270.40 Transfers Made With Actual Fraudulent Intent

[1] In General

A transfer made or an obligation incurred by a debtor is fraudulent as to a creditor, whether the creditor's claim arose before or after the transfer was made or the obligation incurred, if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor of the debtor [Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(1); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4200 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)]. When there is actual intent to defraud, neither the solvency of the transferor nor the amount of consideration received in exchange for the transfer or obligation is material [Fross v. Wotton (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 384, 388-389, 44 P.2d 350 ; McKnight v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 291, 299, 215 Cal. Rptr. 909] . Thus, a finding of insolvency is not necessary in order to set aside a transfer when there is actual intent to defraud, and a finding of solvency does not preclude a finding of actual intent to defraud. Evidence regarding solvency may be relevant to the issue of ac-tual intent to defraud [Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 378, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804 ; Fross v. Wotton (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 384, 388-389, 44 P.2d 350] .

[2] Knowledge of Fraud by Transferee

A transfer or an obligation is not voidable under Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(1) [see § 270.40[1]] against a person who took in good faith and for a reasonably equivalent value or against any subsequent transferee or obligee [Civ. Code § 3439.08(a); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4207 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)]. Therefore, a showing of good faith and reasonably equivalent value is all that is required to defeat a creditor's action based on Civ. Code § 3439.04(a) [Annod Corp. v. Hamilton & Samuels (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1286, 1294, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 924] .

Proof that good faith was absent would require evidence of deliberate wrongful conduct [Lewis v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1850, 1858-1859, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 63] . "Good faith," as the term is used in Civ. Code § 3439.08(a), means that the transferee acted without actual fraudulent intent and that he or she did not collude with the debtor or otherwise actively participate in a fraudulent scheme of the debtor. The transferee's knowledge that the transferor had fraudulent intent may be relevant, in combination with other facts, on the issue of the transferee's good faith [Annod Corp. v. Hamilton & Samuels (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1286, 1299, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 924 (citing legislative committee comment)]. Thus, for example, a partner's acceptance of distributions from the partnership, with knowledge that lease payments were overdue, was not tantamount to participation in a fraudulent scheme. The partner was not prohibited from receiving a partnership draw authorized by the relevant partnership documents merely because the partnership could not make its rental payments [Annod Corp. v. Hamilton & Samuels (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1286, 1299-1300, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 924] .

[3] Future Creditors

A transfer or obligation is fraudulent as to both future and present creditors when it is made or incurred with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditors [Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)]. For example, even if creditors at the time of the signing of an agreement to convey as asset could have been satisfied, the agreement may still be considered fraudulent as impairing the rights of future creditors if the transferor and transferee believed at the time of the signing of the agreement that an additional indebtedness could accumulate rendering the transferor unable to pay the full amount of his or her indebtedness, including the claims of both present and future creditors [see Severance v. Knight-Counihan Co. (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 561, 567, 177 P.2d 4 ; see also Heffernan v. Bennett & Armour (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 564, 578-581, 584, 243 P.2d 846] .

[4] Character of Intent

An actual intent to defraud, hinder, or delay does not require a finding that the transferor acted maliciously with the desire of causing harm to one or more creditors. Although the transferor may sincerely regret his or her action, if it can be objectively determined that there was an actual intent to do just what was done, that is, to remove assets and make impossible either the satisfaction of the creditor's claim or the collection of the creditor's judgment, the requisite intent for a fraudulent transfer is established [Economy Refining & Serv. Co. v. Royal Nat'l Bank of N.Y. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 434, 441-442, 97 Cal. Rptr. 706] .

[5] Preferences Distinguished

Although a creditor may intend by a transfer of his or her assets to remove assets and make impossible the collection of a particular creditor's judgment, if the transfer operates only as a preference of one creditor of the transferor over another, the transfer is not subject to attack except by a trustee in bankruptcy [see Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 591, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425 ; Economy Refining & Serv. Co. v. Royal Nat'l Bank of N.Y. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 434, 97 Cal. Rptr. 706] . This principle is embodied in Civ. Code § 3432 which provides that a debtor may pay one creditor in preference to another, or may give one creditor security for his or her demand in preference to another. Even though a preference may hinder or delay other creditors in the collection of their claims, it is not, thereby, rendered void. It is also immaterial that the preferred creditor had knowledge that such a consequence would follow the preference [United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Postel (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 567, 571-572, 149 P.2d 183] , or that the preferred creditor is a near relative of the transferor and the unpreferred creditor's action to enforce the transferor's indebtedness was pending at the time of the transfer [see Arnold v. Hadgis (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 88, 92, 226 P.2d 641] .

However, a preference must extinguish, or at least diminish, depending on the amount of the payment and the agreement of the parties, the debt of the preferred creditor [Economy Refining & Serv. Co. v. Royal Nat'l Bank of N.Y. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 434, 442, 97 Cal. Rptr. 706 ; see Kemp v. Lynch (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 457, 461, 65 P.2d 1316 (simulated transfer made with intent not to pay unpreferred creditor with debtor retaining full beneficial interest in property transferred is void as to creditor)].

The general immunity of a preference from attack by unpreferred creditors also does not apply when a person who dominates and controls an insolvent corporation attempts to secure for himself or herself an advantage over other creditors of the corporation. In such a case, the corporate dominator is treated in the same manner as is a director of an insolvent corporation and thus occupies a fiduciary relationship to his or her creditors [Title Ins. & Trust Co. v. California Dev. Co. (1915) 171 Cal. 173, 205-207, 152 P. 542 ; Commons v. Schine (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 141, 144, 110 Cal. Rptr. 606] .

[6] Establishing Requisite Fraudulent Intent

Whether a transfer is made with actual intent to defraud, hinder, or delay any creditor of the transferor is not a question of law, but one of fact to be determined by the trial court [TWM Homes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 844, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887] . Therefore, the party claiming that the transfer was fraudulent has the burden of showing the vendor's fraudulent intent and the knowledge thereof by the vendee [Vaughn v. Coccimiglio (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 676, 679, 50 Cal. Rptr. 876] . This burden of proof may be met with circumstantial evidence [Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 588, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425] because in most cases proof of actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud cannot be made by direct proof, but must be made by inferences from circumstances surrounding the conveyance, as well as the relationship and interests of the parties [Neumeyer v. Crown Funding Corp. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 178, 183, 128 Cal. Rptr. 366 ; Slater v. Bielsky (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 523, 526, 6 Cal. Rptr. 683] . However, the fact of such fraud need only be proved by the ordinary standard of a preponderance of the evidence [Liodas V Sahadi (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 278, 291-292, 137 Cal. Rptr. 635, 562 P.2d 316 , overruling Aggregates Associated. Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 588, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425 ; see Asadoorian V Kludjian (1930) 210 Cal. 564, 565, 292 P. 644 (fraud must be proved by preponderance of evidence)].

[7] Circumstances Indicating Fraud

Although the question of whether a transfer was made with intent to defraud one's creditors is not a question of law, the circumstances surrounding the transfer and the relationship of the parties to the transfer may raise an inference of or may indicate actual fraudulent intent [see Wood v. Kaplan (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 227, 231, 2 Cal. Rptr. 917] . For example, whenever a confidential relationship between the parties to the transaction is shown to exist, the parties are held to a fuller and stricter proof of the consideration, and of the fairness of the transaction [Wood v. Kaplan (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 227, 230, 231, 2 Cal. Rptr. 917 (parent-child relationship raises inference of fraud)].

Similarly, although proof of the transferor's solvency does not preclude a finding of an actual intent to defraud a creditor, evidence of solvency is relevant to the issue of the actual intent of the transferor [see Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 378, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804] . Thus, the fact that a transfer rendered the transferor insolvent or was made at a time when the transferor was insolvent [see Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 378, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804 ; Wood v. Kaplan (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 227, 230, 2 Cal. Rptr. 917] , or that the transfer was of almost all of the transferor's nonexempt property [see Burrows v. Jorgensen (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 644, 648, 323 P.2d 150] is considered as an indication or evidence that the conveyance was made with actual fraudulent intent.

However, when the circumstances surrounding the allegedly fraudulent transfer, such as the insolvency of the transferor, comport equally with a theory of honest and fair dealing, a finding of a fraudulent transfer may not be made [Hedden v. Waldeck (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 631, 636, 72 P.2d 114 ; see Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 588, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425 (speed of transfer did not permit inference of fraud when speed was required to protect interests of allegedly fraudulent transferor)].

§ 270.41 Transfer Made With Intent or Belief That Debts Incurred Will Not Be Paid

A transfer made or obligation incurred without the transferor's or obligor's receiving reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation is fraudulent as to a creditor, whether that creditor's claim arose before or after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred, if the transferor or obligor intended to incur, or believed, or reasonably should have believed, that he or she would incur debts beyond his or her ability to pay as they became due [Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(2)(B); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4202 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)]. This requires finding not only that the transfer was made without reasonably equivalent value but also that the transferor or obligor intended or believed that he or she would incur debts beyond his or her ability to pay as they became due. Presumably it does not require finding that the transferor in fact could not pay his or her debts as they became due or that such debts were incurred [see Pope v. National Aero Fin. Co. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 722, 728-730, 46 Cal. Rptr. 233 (reasonably equivalent value found)]. If the defendant has a complete defense to an action based on Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(1) [see § 270.40[2]], then the defendant necessarily also has a complete defense to an action based on Civ. Code § 3439.04(b)(2) [Annod Corp. v. Hamilton & Samuels (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1286, 1294, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 924] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act

23-270 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 270.42

§ 270.42 Transfer Made by Insolvent Without Reasonably Equivalent Consideration

[1] In General

A transfer made or obligation incurred by a debtor is fraudulent as to a creditor whose claim arose before the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation, and the debtor was insolvent at the time or became insolvent as a result of the transfer or obligation [Civ. Code § 3439.05; see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4203 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)]. A transfer under Civ. Code § 3439.05 is considered constructively fraudulent as to creditors of the transferor [Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 374, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804] . That is, proof of insolvency and of lack of reasonably equivalent value are presumptively conclusive of the fraudulent intent of the transferor, and the actual intent to defraud on the part of the transferor is immaterial and need not be established [Stearns v. Los Angeles City School Dist. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 696, 727, 53 Cal. Rptr. 482 ; Menick v. Goldy (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 542, 547, 280 P.2d 844] . Nevertheless, to set aside a transfer under Civ. Code § 3439.05, the creditor must prove both that reasonably equivalent value was not received and insolvency. Lack of evidence to support one element renders the other element unimportant [Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 589, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425 ; Annod Corp. v. Hamilton & Samuels (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1286, 1294-1295, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 924] .

[2] Present Creditors Only Protected

Civ. Code § 3439.05 protects only existing creditors of the transferor at the time of a constructively fraudulent transfer or obligation. A person invoking this section must establish this status [TWM Homes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 843, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887 ; see Pope v. National Aero Fin. Co. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 722, 728, 46 Cal. Rptr. 233] .

[3] Insolvency Defined

[a] In General

Under Civ. Code § 3439.05 a creditor must show that a transfer or an obligation was made or incurred by a person who was insolvent or was thereby rendered insolvent [see Civ. Code § 3439.05; Pope v. National Aero Fin. Co. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 722, 728, 46 Cal. Rptr. 233 ; Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4203 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)]. A debtor is insolvent if, at fair valuations, the sum of the debtor's debts is greater than all of the debtor's assets [Civ. Code § 3439.02(a); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 4205, 4206 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instructions)]. It appears that this fair value provision will abrogate prior case law that allowed admission of evidence as to unmatured or contingent claims without any attempt to determine the likelihood of their being collectible or the present value of the probable ultimate liability [see, e.g., Estate of Anderson (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 1010, 1015, 137 Cal. Rptr. 727 ; Babcock v. Omansky (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 625, 632, 107 Cal. Rptr. 512] .

[b] Insolvency of Partnership

A debtor which is a partnership is insolvent if, at fair valuations, the sum of the partnership's debts is greater than the aggregate of (1) all of the partnership's assets and (2) the sum of the excess value of each general partner's nonpartnership assets over the partner's nonpartnership debts [Civ. Code § 3439.02(b); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 4205, 4206 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instructions)]. Under this provision, assets of the general partners which could be reached to satisfy partnership obligations are included in determining the solvency of the partnership.

[c] Debts Excluded from Calculation

Under this definition, the term "debts" does not include an obligation to the extent it is secured by a valid lien on property of the debtor not included as an asset [Civ. Code § 3439.02(e); Fross v. Wotton (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 384, 388, 44 P.2d 350 ; see Ahmanson Bank & Trust Co. v. Tepper (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 333, 339, 74 Cal. Rptr. 774 ; Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 4205, 4206 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instructions)]. Since Civ. Code § 3439.01(a)(1), discussed in § 270.34[5], excludes property encumbered by a valid lien from the definition of assets, this provision, by excluding the related debts, amounts to an equalizing adjustment [see Civ. Code § 3439.01(a)(1)].

The California Supreme Court has held that future child support payments should not be viewed as a debt under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act. It noted that unearned income is not an asset under the Act unless it is subject to levy by a creditor, and future earnings would not appear on the balance sheet to offset a child support obligation. The court stated that to treat future support payments as a debt while not viewing the earning capacity from which they will be paid as an asset would yield an absurd result. Such treatment would label many persons with support obligations as insolvent under the Act, even though they were current on their obligations and would be able to pay future obligations as they became due [Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 657, 670-672, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 74 P.3d 166 (finding transferor not insolvent at time of transfer nor rendered insolvent by transfer, when future child support payments were not viewed as debt; thus, no triable issue of fact found as to constructive fraud under Civ. Code § 3439.05)].

Exempt property of the debtor is excluded from this calcution, to the extent that it is exempt under nonbankruptcy law [see Civ. Code § 3439.01(a)(2) (defining assets, discussed in § 270.34[3]); Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 375, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804] . Also excluded from assets for purpose of this calculation is property that has been transferred, concealed, or removed with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, or that has been transferred in a manner making the transfer voidable under Civ. Code §§ 3439-3439.12 [Civ. Code § 3439.02(d); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 4205, 4206 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instructions)]. Similarly, assets beyond the court's jurisdiction have also been excluded [Wight v. Rohlffs (1941) 48 Cal. App. 2d 696, 702-708, 121 P.2d 76 ; see Stearns v. Los Angeles City School Dist. (1966) 244 Cal. App.

2d 696, 737, 53 Cal. Rptr. 482] .

[e] Nonpayment of Debts as Giving Rise to Presumption of Insolvency

A debtor is presumed to be insolvent if he or she is generally not paying his or her debts as they become due [Civ. Code § 3439.02(c); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 4205, 4206 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instructions)]. This provision was added by the 1986 amendments; it abrogates holdings to the contrary decided under the 1939 version of the UFCA and reinstates the rule of former Civ. Code § 3450 and cases decided thereunder [see, e.g., Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 589, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425 (failure to meet obligations as they come due as insufficient; proof that debts exceed assets as required); Wight v. Rohlffs (1941) 48 Cal. App. 2d 696, 699, 121 P.2d 76 (decided under former Civ. Code § 3450, repealed Stats. 1939 ch. 329, § 1; failure to met obligations as they mature as sufficient proof of insolvency)]. This presumption requires evidence that the debtor was not paying his or her debts as they came due and is not to be confused with the presumption of solvency applicable at the outset, which is discussed in § 270.42[4].

[f] Determined as of Time of Transfer

The crucial date in determining the fair salable value of the transferor's assets and the transferor's probable liability on his or her existing debts is the date of the transfer [Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 376, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804] . The subsequent insolvency of the transferor is not, of itself, sufficient foundation for an inference of insolvency at the time of the transfer or obligation [Stearns v. Los Angeles City School Dist. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 696, 738, 53 Cal. Rptr. 482 ; see Tokar v. Redman (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 350, 355, 291 P.2d 987 (allegation that after year of gambling with transferee, transferor became insolvent as insufficient, since allegation does not state that transferor's gambling resulted in his insolvency)].

[4] Presumption of Solvency; Burdens of Proof

At the outset, the debtor's solvency is presumed and the burden of proving insolvency is on the creditor seeking to set aside the transfer or obligation or attach the asset transferred [Neumeyer v. Crown Funding Corp. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 178, 186, 128 Cal. Rptr. 366 ; Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 375, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804] . In order to overcome this initial burden there must be some evidentiary basis invoking the presumption established by Civ. Code § 3439.02(c) (generally not paying debts as they come due), discussed in § 270.42[3][e], or for determining that the fair value of the debtor's obligations exceeded the fair value of his or her nonexempt assets at the time of the transfer or obligation [Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 589, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425 ; Neumeyer v. Crown Funding Corp. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 178, 186, 128 Cal. Rptr. 366] . However, once the creditor has made a prima facie showing of insolvency, as by showing that the debtor made a voluntary transfer without receiving reasonably equivalent value in exchange when there are existing indebtednesses, the burden of proof on the issue of insolvency shifts to the transferor or transferee, whoever is defending the action, to prove that the transferor was solvent or had sufficient assets to pay debts existing at the time of the transfer or obligation [Neumeyer v. Crown Funding Corp. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 178, 186-190, 128 Cal. Rptr. 366 ; Wight v. Rohlffs (1941) 48 Cal. App. 2d 696, 699, 121 P.2d 76] . Similarly, if insolvency at the time of the transfer or obligation is admitted or stipulated to, or once it is proved, the burden of proving that reasonably equivalent value was received in exchange is on the debtor or the tranferee or obligee, not on the creditor [Kirkland v. Risso (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 971, 978, 159 Cal. Rptr. 798] .

[5] Reasonably Equivalent Value of Consideration

[a] Generally

In addition to proving the insolvency of the transferor, a creditor seeking to establish that a transfer or obligation was fraudulent under Civ. Code § 3439.05 must also prove that the transferor or obligor did not receive consideration of reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation [Civ. Code § 3439.05; Pope v. National Aero

Fin. Co. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 722, 728, 46 Cal. Rptr. 233 ; see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4203 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)].

Value is given for a transfer or obligation if, in exchange for the transfer or obligation, property is transferred or an antecedent debt is secured or satisfied; however, value does not include an unperformed promise made otherwise than in the ordinary course of the promisor's business to furnish support to the debtor (for example, an annuity) or another person [Civ. Code § 3439.03].

Generally, the issue of whether or not reasonably equivalent value was received as consideration is to be determined from the standpoint of the creditor and is a question of fact [Hansen v. Cramer (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 321, 323, 245 P.2d 1059 ; Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 759, 767, 48 Cal. Rptr. 215] . A transfer or obligation is deemed to have been made or incurred without receipt of reasonably equivalent value in exchange if the debtor is thereby rendered execution proof. In this respect the existence of any intent of fraud on the part of either the grantor or the grantee is an immaterial factor [Hansen v. Cramer (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 321, 324-325, 245 P.2d 1059 ; see Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 759, 767, 48 Cal. Rptr. 215] .

[b] Illegal Consideration

If consideration given for property or an obligation is illegal, the debtor may be considered not to have received a reasonably equivalent value [see Tokar v. Redman (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 350, 354, 291 P.2d 987] . For example, because playing certain gambling games for money is illegal, the consideration for the payment of a gambling loss incurred in playing them, that is, the opportunity to win more than the amount wagered, is likewise illegal, and does not constitute a fair consideration for the monies paid [Tokar v. Redman (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 350, 354, 291 P.2d 987] .

[c] Antecedent Debts

Reasonably equivalent value is received by the transferor or obligor if he or she gives security for or satisfies a preexisting debt which is not disproportionately small as compared with the property transferred or the new obligation entered into [see Civ. Code § 3439.03; Annod Corporation v. Hamilton & Samuels (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1286, 1296-1297, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 924 (in action by landlord against partners who took partnership draws rather than paying rent, receipt of delayed draws did not show fraudulent intent; money transferred in satisfaction of antecedent debts of partnership were transfers for value under Civ. Code § 3439.03); Economy Refining & Serv. Co. v. Royal Nat'l Bank of N.Y. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 434, 441, 97 Cal. Rptr. 706 ; Pope v. National Aero Fin. Co. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 722, 729, 46 Cal. Rptr. 233] . In determining the reasonableness of the consideration, the debtor's good faith belief in the enforceability of the debt rather than its actual enforceability is determinative. For instance, a transfer made in good faith by an insolvent in settlement or compromise will not be deemed fraudulent for lack of proof of the enforceability of the underlying claim [see Mayors v. C I R (1986) 785 F.2d 757, 761 (IRS attempt to set aside transfer)] .

The antecedent debt alleged in support of a transfer or obligation must be a legally enforceable obligation of the transferor or obligor. Thus, the discharge of the debt of another does not constitute a reasonable consideration for a transfer by one who is not responsible therefor [Hansen v. Cramer (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 321, 324, 245 P.2d 1059] . This rule is subject to the exception that if a debtor pays the obligation of another in the good faith belief that he or she is legally responsible for that obligation, there is deemed to be good consideration [see Bank of California v. Virtue & Scheck, Inc. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1040, 190 Cal. Rptr. 54 (transfer by debtor in exchange for account receivable as reasonably equivalent consideration despite fact that transferor had only orally guaranteed payment of the receivable)]. Similarly, this rule does not apply to an obligation barred by the statute of limitations. The discharge of such an obligation, if a reasonable equivalent is otherwise given in good faith, does not lack reasonable consideration [United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Postel (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 567, 571, 149 P.2d 183] .

Satisfaction of a "moral obligation" normally is not consideration. A moral obligation may provide consideration for a new promise to pay a time-barred debt that would be enforceable but for the statute of limitations. The satisfaction of a time-barred debt may also be considered "reasonably equivalent value" [In re Prejean (9th Cir. 1993) 994 F.2d 706, 708] .

§ 270.43 Transfers Made Without Reasonably Equivalent Consideration Leaving Insufficient Capital in Hands of Grantor

A transfer made or an obligation incurred by a debtor who did not receive reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation is fraudulent as to a creditor whose claim arose either before or after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred, if the debtor was engaged, or was about to engage, in a business or transaction for which his or her remaining assets were unreasonably small in relation to the business or transaction [Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(2)(A); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4202 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)]. This provision, unlike Civ. Code § 3439.05 (transfer made by insolvent debtor), permits one who was not a creditor of a transferor engaged in business at the time of a transfer or obligation to attack the transfer or obligation if he or she subsequently becomes a creditor of the business [see Holcomb v. Nunes (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 776, 777-778, 283 P.2d 301] . If the defendant has a complete defense to an action based on Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(1) [see § 270.40[2]], then the defendant necessarily also has a complete defense to an action based on Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(2)(A) [Annod Corp. v. Hamilton & Samuels (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1286, 1294, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 924] .

Whether the transferor left himself or herself with unreasonably small capital after a transfer or obligation is a question of fact which the creditors have the burden of establishing [see Pope v. National Aero Fin. Co. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 722, 728, 46 Cal. Rptr. 233 ; Holcomb v. Nunes (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 776, 781, 283 P.2d 301] . The test for determining whether the transfer or obligation was made without reasonably equivalent consideration is the same as that used under Civ. Code § 3439.05 (transfer or obligation by insolvent without reasonably equivalent consideration) [Holcomb v. Nunes (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 776, 780, 283 P.2d 301 ; see discussion in § 270.42[5]].

§ 270.44 Creditor's Remedies

[1] Avoidance of Transfer or Obligation

Whether or not his or her claim has matured, a creditor with respect to whom a transfer or obligation is fraudulent may bring an action under Civ. Code § 3439 et seq. to avoid the transfer or obligation to the extent necessary to satisfy his or her underlying claim [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(1); see Civ. Code § 3439.01(b), (c) (claim and creditor defined); for a complaint to set aside a fraudulent transfer or obligation, and allegations for use in particular situations, see §§ 270.190 -270.197; see also Sanwa Bank California v. Chang (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1314, 1317-1318, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330 (creditor brought action against wife for fraudulent conveyance after husband transferred family residence to her and then failed to include it in his bankruptcy estate)]. Although the fraudulent transfer or obligation is considered void as against the creditor, the creditor does not have the right to possession of the property transferred without resort to legal process [Wagner v. Trout (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 248, 254, 268 P.2d 537] .

To the extent a transfer is voidable in an action by a creditor under Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(1), the creditor may recover judgment for whichever is less, (1) the value of the asset transferred at the time of the transfer, with whatever adjustment the equities may require, or (2) the amount necessary to satisfy the creditor's claim [Civ. Code § 3439.08(b), (c); see discussion under § 270.47]. Judgment may be entered against the first transferee of the asset, the person for whose benefit the transfer was made, and any subsequent transferee other than a good faith transferee who took for value or from any subsequent transferee [Civ. Code § 3439.08(b)(1), (2); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4207 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)]. Under prior law, an action to avoid or set aside a fraudulent transfer was considered an equitable remedy, and the creditor was entitled to assert rights only against the property transferred. The only instance in which a creditor could have a money judgment against the transferee in an action to set aside a fraudulent transfer was when (1) the transferee had knowingly participated in the fraudulent transfer with the intention of defrauding creditors and (2) the asset tranferred was no longer available, as when the transferee no longer retained any interest in the asset transferred [Flowers & Sons Development Corp. v. Municipal Court (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 818, 825, 150 Cal. Rptr. 555] . It is not clear whether Civ. Code § 3439.08(b) will be interpreted to expand the creditor's choice of possible types of judgments or whether Civ. Code § 3439.08(b) is only intended as guidance for determining the amount of a money judgment against a transferee when such a judgment would be proper under criteria established by prior case law.

[2] Attachment

Under the 1986 amendments, whether or not his or her claim has matured, a creditor with respect to whom a transfer or obligation is fraudulent may bring an action under Civ. Code §§ 3439-3439.12 for attachment or other provisional remedy against the asset transferred or its proceeds in accordance with the procedures described in The Attachment Law, Code Civ. Proc. § 481.010-493.060 [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(2); see Civ. Code § 3439.01(b), (c) (claim and creditor defined)]. This form of attachment is in addition to attachment sought in an action on the underlying claim [see Civ. Code § 3439.07(b)]. One advantage gained by a creditor attaching the asset transferred prior to the maturity of his or her underlying claim is the benefit of the attachment lien provided by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 488.500-488.510 and the possible priority of that lien over certain competing creditors of the tranferor or transferee [see Code Civ. Proc. § 488.500]. The attachment lien remains in effect for three years, but may be extended by order of the court for no more than eight years [Code Civ. Proc. § 488.510(a)-(d)]. For discussion and forms relating to attachment, see Ch. 62, Attachment . For a complaint to avoid a fraudulent transfer, and allegations for use to adapt that complaint to particular situations, which can be used as a basis for attachment, see §§ 270.190 -270.197.

[3] Injunction

Whether or not his or her claim has matured and subject to applicable principles of equity, a creditor with respect to whom a transfer or obligation is fraudulent may bring an action under Civ. Code §§ 3439-3439.12 for an injunction against further dispostion by the debtor or a transferee, or both, of the asset transferred or its proceeds. This relief is to be given in accordance with the applicable rules of civil procedure, which are discussed in Ch. 303, Injunctions [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(3)(A); see Civ. Code §§ 3420-3423 (permanent injunctions); see Civ. Code § 3439.01(b), (c) (claim and creditor defined); Code Civ. Proc. § 525 et seq. (provisional remedies)]. For a form of complaint to avoid a fraudulent transfer, and allegations for use to adapt that complaint to particular situations, which can be used as a basis for injunctive relief, see §§ 270.190 -270.197.

[4] Appointment of Receiver

Whether or not his or her claim has matured and subject to applicable principles of equity, a creditor with respect to whom a transfer or obligation is fraudulent may bring an action under Civ. Code §§ 3439-3439.12 for appointment of a receiver to take charge of the asset transferred or its proceeds. This relief is to be given in accordance with the applicable rules of civil procedure, which are discussed in Ch. 486, Receivers [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(3)(B); see Civ. Code § 3439.01(b), (c) (claim and creditor defined); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 564-571 (receivers); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 525-535 (provisional remedies)]. For a complaint to avoid a fraudulent transfer, and allegations for use to adapt that complaint to particular situations, which can be used as a basis for appointment of a receiver, see §§ 270.190 -270.197.

[5] Other Relief; Accounting

Whether or not his or her claim has matured, and subject to applicable principles of equity and in accordance with applicable rules of civil procedure, a creditor with respect to whom a transfer or obligation is fraudulent may bring an action under Civ. Code §§ 3439-3439.11 for any other relief the circumstances may require [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(3)(C); see Civ. Code § 3439.01(b), (c) (claim and creditor defined)]. A common form of incidental relief is accounting [see Heffernan v. Bennett & Armour (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 178, 185, 146 P.2d 482] .

[6] In Action on Underlying Claim

If a creditor has commenced an action on the underlying claim against the debtor (transferor/obligor), the creditor may attach the asset transferred or its proceeds if the remedy of attachment is available in the action under applicable law and the property is subject to attachment in the hands of the transferee under applicable law [Civ. Code § 3439.07(b); for discussion and forms relating to attachment, see Ch. 62, Attachment]. Similarly, once the creditor has obtained a judgment on the underlying claim against the debtor (transferor/obligor), the creditor may levy execution on the asset transferred or its proceeds in the hands of the transferee [Civ. Code § 3439.07(c); for discussion and forms relating to execution and related remedies, such as creditor's suits under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.210-708.290, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments].

§ 270.45 Remedies Compared

In an action to set aside a fraudulent transfer, the issue of whether the transfer or obligation was fraudulent as to a creditor of the transferor is fully litigated. Thus, a judgment setting aside a fraudulent transfer or obligation amounts to a lien on the fraudulently tranferred property [Liuzza v. Bell (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d 417, 429, 104 P.2d 1095] . The judgment may order the property sold to satisfy the lien of the creditor, so long as the lien for the protection of a good faith transferee is satisfied from the sale [see Civ. Code § 3439.08(d) (lien for protection of good faith transferee), discussed in § 270.47[3]; see Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 759, 771, 48 Cal. Rptr. 215] .

Although the following cases decided prior to the 1982 amendments to creditors' remedies provisions may no longer apply if the particular creditor's remedy invoked in aid of execution provides that the court may determine competing claims to the property levied on [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 708.180(a)], the general rule has been that when a creditor chooses to disregard the fraudulent transfer and attach or levy execution on the property in the hands of the transferee, the attachment or execution proceeding does not confer jurisdiction on the court to determine adverse claims between the transferee and the creditor. The creditor or other purchaser at the execution sale acquires whatever interest the debtor had in the property. After the sale, the creditor or other purchaser can bring a quiet title action against the transferee or await action by the transferee or anyone claiming through the tranferee [see Wells Fargo Bank v. PAL Investments, Inc. (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 431, 434-438, 157 Cal. Rptr. 818 (no jurisdiction to determine whether note and second deed of trust were fraudulent as to levying creditor); Blue v. Superior Court (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 278, 283-284, 305 P.2d 209 (no jurisdiction to determine whether judgment debtor had interest in property; purchaser may quiet title or await action by others)].

In an action by a creditor to set aside a transfer or annul an obligation on the ground that the transfer or obligation is fraudulent as to the creditor, the transferee may give an undertaking as provided in Civ. Code §§ 3445-3449 [Civ. Code § 3446(a)]. If an undertaking is given, the transferee may sell, encumber, transfer, convey, mortgage, pledge, or otherwise dispose of the property or obligation, or a part thereof, and the purchaser, encumbrancer, transferee, mortgagee, grantee, or pledgee of the property or obligation takes, owns, holds, and possesses the property or obligation unaffected by the action and any judgment that is rendered in the action [Civ. Code § 3446(b)]. The undertaking is required to be in the lesser of the following amounts [Civ. Code § 3448]:

- Double the value of the property or obligation; or
- Double the amount of the creditor's claim in the action.

The undertaking must be conditioned that, if it is determined in the action that the transfer or obligation was fraudulent as to the creditor, the transferee will pay to the creditor the lesser of (1) the value of the property or obligation as estimated in the undertaking, or (2) the amount determined in the action to be due and owing to the creditor by the person who transferred the property or incurred the obligation [Civ. Code § 3447]. The undertaking becomes effective 10 days after it is served on the creditor [Civ. Code § 3449]. For discussion and forms relating to the procedure for executing, objecting to, and enforcing the liability on an undertaking, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings .

§ 270.47 Rights of Transferee in Property Transferred

[1] In General

A judgment in favor of a creditor in a fraudulent transfer action sets aside the transfer or obligation insofar as it affects the creditor of the transferor; however, the transfer or obligation may still be enforced against the transferor or obligor, and all persons claiming through him or her, by all other persons, including the transferee or obligee, unless the transferee or obligee was a knowing participant in the fraud [McGee v. Allen (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 468, 476, 60 P.2d 1026 ; see Ahmanson Bank & Trust Co. v. Tepper (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 333, 344, 74 Cal. Rptr. 774 (transfer void as to knowing transferee and also as to subsequent transferee who took after lis pendens had been filed in action to set aside initial fraudulent transfer)].

A transferor or obligor cannot revoke a transfer or obligation made to an innocent transferee or obligee to defraud his or her creditors. The transferor is barred by the doctrine of unclean hands from attacking the transfer as against the innocent transferee or anyone claiming through that transferee [Moore v. Schneider (1925) 196 Cal. 380, 385, 238 P. 81 ; Samuelson v. Ingraham (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 804, 806-808, 77 Cal. Rptr. 750] .

In a situation involving a conspiring or knowing transferee or obligee, neither the tranferor nor the participating transferee or obligee can enforce the transfer or obligation. It is considered void and unenforceable as against public policy, its purpose having been unlawful [see Severance v. Knight-Counihan Co. (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 561, 568-569, 177 P.2d 4 (denying enforcement of contract to conspiring obligee on ground that contract was void)].

[2] Good Faith Transferee Who Paid Reasonably Equivalent Value

A transfer made or an obligation incurred by a transferor with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud one or more of his or her creditors is not voidable against a person who took in good faith and for reasonably equivalent value or against any subsequent transferee or obligee [Civ. Code §§ 3439.04(a)(1), 3439.08(a); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 4200, 4207 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instructions)]. Thus, a creditor attacking a transfer as intentionally fraudulent must not only allege and prove fraudulent intent on the part of the transferor, but must also allege and prove lack of good faith on the part of the transferee and/or lack of reasonably equivalent consideration received by the transferor in order to have the transfer or obligation set aside [Civ. Code § 3439.08(a); see Annod Corporation v. Hamilton & Samuels (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1286, 1294-1295, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 924 (affirming summary judgment for defendants in fraudulent conveyance action brought by landlord against partners who took partnership draws rather than paying rent; transfers were shown to be made in good faith and for reasonably equivalent value); Kuhlman v. Pacific States S. & L. Co. (1940) 17 Cal. 2d 820, 821-822, 112 P.2d 620 ; Boness v. Richardson Mineral Springs (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 251, 261, 296 P.2d 581] .

[3] Good Faith Transferee Who Did Not Pay Reasonably Equivalent Value

A good faith transferee or obligee is entitled, to the extent of the value given to the debtor for the obligation or transfer, to the following [Civ. Code § 3439.08(d)]:

- A lien on or a right to retain any interest in the asset transferred;
- Enforcement of any obligation incurred; and
- Reduction in the amount of the liability on the judgment.

This is an expansion of former Civ. Code § 3439.09(c) which only provided for retention of the asset as security for repayment; however, Civ. Code § 3439.08(d) is in accord with cases decided under the former section which have established the priority of the transferee's lien and the various items for which the good faith transferee is entitled to repayment or reimbursement. If a judgment for the creditor authorizes the asset to be sold, the proceeds must first be applied to the transferee's lien, and then to the payment of the creditor's underlying claim. Any excess proceeds are to be returned to the transferee [Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 759, 772-773, 48 Cal. Rptr. 215] .

"Good faith" means that the transferee acted without actual fraudulent intent and did not collude with the debtor or otherwise actively participate in the fraudulent scheme of the debtor. The transferee's knowledge of the transferor's fraudulent intent, in combination with other facts, may be relevant on the issue of the transferee's good faith [Annod Corp. v. Hamilton & Samuels (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1286, 1299, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 924 ; see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4207 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)].

The amount of the lien to secure repayment of the defendant transferee's investment should include his or her original investment in the purchase price, together with interest thereon from the date of the investment to the date of the judgment, as well as the amount expended by defendant in the preservation and maintenance of the subject property, less the reasonable rental value of that property between the date of the transfer or obligation and the date of judgment if defendant remains in possession of the property. If the reasonable rental value exceeds the expenses of preservation and maintenance, the excess should be deducted from the amount of the transferee's original investment [Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 759, 771-773, 48 Cal. Rptr. 215] . A transferee is entitled to be reimbursed only for those expenditures which actually preserved the property or added to its value. A transferee who procures management or legal services in connection with the rental of the property is not entitled to reimbursement, for instance, since such services do not preserve or add to the value of the property [Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 759, 772, 48 Cal. Rptr. 215] .

In addition, a good faith transferee has been held to be entitled, under former Civ. Code § 3439.09(c), to credit for sums expended in paying other debts of the transferor [Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 591, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425] . This rule is supported by the rule permitting a debtor to pay one creditor in preference to another in the absence of fraud and entitles the transferee, to credit for payments made to other creditors of the transferor which the transferee assumed on taking the fraudulently transferred property [Civ. Code § 3432; see Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 591, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425 (good faith transferee/assignee of demolition contract paid assignor's creditors who did work on the contract)].

[4] Participant in Actual Fraud

Ordinarily, a transferee who has participated in intentional fraud is not entitled to reimbursement of any purchase price he or she paid. Such payment has been referred to as money paid to insure the fraud against detection [Burke v. Koch (1888) 75 Cal. 356, 359, 17 P. 228 ; see Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 585, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425 (distinguished on basis that evidence did not support finding that transferee had knowledge of transferor's insolvency or fraudulent intent)]. Nevertheless, if a fraudulent transferee increases the equity in the asset transferred, as by paying a mortgage on fraudulently conveyed real property, he or she is entitled to credit in the form of being subrogated to the rights of the original mortgagee. Thus, the creditor cannot reach any greater interest in the asset than that which he or she could have reached on the date of the transfer [Ackerman v. Merle (1902) 137 Cal. 169, 171, 69 P. 983 ; but see Puccetti v. Girola (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 240, 249-250, 146 P.2d 714 (fraudulent grantee who took more income from property as not entitled to credit for principal, interest, taxes, insurance, and upkeep)]. For a cross complaint that may be modified for use by a fraudulent transferee seeking reimbursement, see § 270.198.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act

23-270 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 270.48

§ 270.48 Liability of Transferee

[1] Innocent Transferee

A transferee who has no intent to defraud creditors of the transferor and who returns to the transferor or to creditors of the transferor everything of value he or she received from the transferor, or enough to satisfy the creditor's claim, whichever is less, has no personal liability to the creditors of the transferor [Cohen v. Heavey (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 766, 770-772, 68 Cal. Rptr. 180 ; see Civ. Code § 3439.08(b), (c) (creditor may avoid transfer only to extent of lesser of value of asset transferred on date of transfer or amount necessary to satisfy creditor's underlying claim); see also Civ. Code § 3439.08(d) (good faith transferee is entitled to lien or credit to extent of value given), discussed in § 270.44].

A corollary to the innocent transferee rule can be applied to an innocent investor in a "Ponzi scheme." A Ponzi scheme is a financial fraud that induces investment by promising extremely high, risk-free returns, usually in a short time period, from an allegedly legitimate business venture. The fraud consists of funneling money received from later investors to early investors in the guise of profits from the alleged business venture, thereby cultivating an illusion that a legitimate profit-making business opportunity exists and inducing further investment [In re United Energy Corp. (9th Cir. 1991) 944 F.2d 589, 590 n.1]. When the scheme inevitably collapses, the perpetrator often winds up in bankruptcy or in receivership, and the trustee or receiver might then undertake to recover money that was paid out to early investors so that the recovered money can be ratably restored to the duped later investors. The perpetrator is a debtor in this situation, and the investors are creditors having restitution claims. Assuming that an early investor was innocent of complicity in the Ponzi scheme, the trustee or receiver can recover money that the perpetrator paid to that investor, subject to two limitations. First, the maximum recovery is limited to the total amount paid to such an investor, less the aggregate amount that the investor had put into the Ponzi scheme. (In other words, if the investor's restitution claim was actually paid, the investor is entitled to keep the restored money. If the investor received less than that amount, the investor has no liability.) Second, the maximum recoverable amount is further limited the portion of it that the investor put into the Ponzi scheme within the applicable limitation period under the UFTA (normally four years; see § 270.49 for discussion of limitation periods). The trustee or receiver also may recover interest on the recoverable amount [Donell v. Kowell (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 762, 770-772 (applying UFTA to allow recovery from investors in Ponzi scheme, describing theories of liability on which receiver may proceed, and describing two-step process for determining existence of liability and amount of recovery)].

[2] Conspiring Transferee

A transferee who participates or conspires with the transferor to intentionally defraud creditors of the latter is liable for return of the asset transferred or its value, at least to the extent necessary to satisfy the creditor's claim [Civ. Code § 3439.08(b), (c)]. Because such activity on the part of a transferee or obligee constitutes the tort of conspiracy, a personal money judgment may be entered against him or her [Taylor v. S & M Lamp Co. (1961) 12 Cal. Rptr. 323] . If the transferee has sold the property or converted it to his or her own use, judgment against him or her may be taken for the value or the asset [Holmes v. Hatch (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 376, 386, 80 P.2d 70 ; Wright v. Salzberger (1932) 121 Cal. App. 639, 644-645, 9 P.2d 860 (judgment for amount received on sale of asset as proper, though less than value of asset)]. Any income or rentals earned from the fraudulently transferred property also may be reached to satisfy the creditor's claim, and a decree requiring the tranferee to account for them is proper in the action to set aside the fraudulent transfer [Michal v. Adair (1944) 66 Cal. App. 2d 382, 388, 152 P.2d 490 ; Wright v. Salzberger (1932) 121 Cal. App. 639, 645, 9 P.2d 860] . Similarly, when the asset transferred has been invested by the transferee to improve other property, a lien may be imposed on the improved property for the benefit of the creditor [Hickson v. Thielman (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 11, 15, 304 P.2d 122] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act

23-270 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 270.49

§ 270.49 Statute of Limitations

[1] Transfers Made With Actual Intent to Defraud

If a transfer made or an obligation incurred was fraudulent because it was made or incurred with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor of the debtor [see Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(1); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4200 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)], then an action to set aside the transfer or obligation [see Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)] must be brought, or an attachment or levy must be made [see Civ. Code § 3439.07(b),(c)], within four years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred, or, if later, within one year after the transfer or obligation was or could reasonably have been discovered by the claimant [Civ. Code § 3439.09(a); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4208 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)].

The Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act does not provide the exclusive remedy for fraudulent transfers, however. Such transfers also may be attacked by a common law action. The applicable statute of limitations would be the one for relief on the ground of fraud or mistake [see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d) (three years)], and the cause of action would accrue, not when the fraudulent transfer occurs, but when the judgment against the debtor is obtained (or later, in the event of belated discovery) [Macedo v. Bosio (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1050-1052, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 ; see § 270.49[2]].

[2] Transfers Made During Lawsuit Establishing Debtor-Creditor Relationship

When an allegedly fraudulent transfer is made during a pending lawsuit that will establish whether, and the extent to which, a debtor-creditor relationship exists, the limitation period does not commence to run until the judgment in the underlying action becomes final. The four-year limitation period, that is, the language, "four years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred," accommodates a tolling until the underlying liability becomes fixed by a final judgment [Cortez v. Vogt (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 917, 937, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 841] .

[3] Transfers for Less Than Reasonably Equivalent Value

If a transfer made or an obligation incurred was fraudulent because it was made or incurred without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange, either in specified circumstances [see Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(2); Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4202 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)] or if the debtor was insolvent at the time or became insolvent as a result of the transfer or obligation [see Civ. Code § 3439.05; Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4203 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)], then an action to set aside the transfer or obligation under Civ. Code § 3439.07(a) must be brought or attachment or levy pursuant to Civ. Code § 3439.07(b) or (c) must be made within four years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred [Civ. Code § 3439.09(b); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4208 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)].

[4] Outside Limit

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, an action to set aside a fraudulent transfer must be brought or levy must be made within seven years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred [Civ. Code § 3439.09(c); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4208 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)].

[5] Quiet Title Action by Execution Sale Purchaser

The Official Comment to the UFTA takes the position that bringing an action includes both a creditor's levy on the property in the hands of the transferee and the creditor's filing of a quiet title action against the transferee. However, California cases have held that the limitation period applicable to fraudulent transfers does not apply to a quiet title action brought by a creditor who purchased at an execution sale after the fraudulently transferred property was levied on in the hands of the transferee. The limitation period for the creditor-purchaser's quiet title action has been said to commence on the date the purchaser receives the sheriff's deed [Hager v. Shindler (1865) 29 Cal. 47, 60] and on the date of the sale [Puccetti v. Girola (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 240, 248, 146 P.2d 714] .

Transfers of personal property that are void as against the transferor's creditors because they were accomplished without immediate delivery and actual change or possession are governed by Civ. Code § 3440 et seq. The reasonable retention of goods held by a merchant-seller under the Uniform Commercial Code is governed by Com. Code § 2402. Retention of possession of personal property by a lessor in the current course of trade is governed by Com. Code § 10308.

Although the term "fraudulent" was deleted from Civ. Code § 3440 et seq. effective January 1, 1986, the term has been retained in some instances in this Part for convenience.

23-270 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 270.71

§ 270.71 Transfers Made Without Accompanying Change of Possession

Except as otherwise provided in Civ. Code § 3440 et seq. [see discussion in § 270.78], every transfer of personal property made by a person having at the time the possession of the property, and not accompanied by an immediate delivery followed by an actual and continued change of possession of the things transferred, is void as against the transferor's creditors (unsecured or secured) at the time of the transfer, and those who become creditors while the transferor remains in possession, and the successors in interest of those creditors, and as against buyers from the transferor for value in good faith subsequent to the transfer [Civ. Code § 3440(a); see Fletcher v. Commercial Discount Co. (1930) 103 Cal. App. 656, 659, 284 P. 990 (subsequent purchaser)].

As used in Civ. Code § 3440 et seq., "creditor" means a person who has a claim, as defined in Civ. Code § 3439.01 (Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act), and includes an assignee of a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, as defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 493.010, of a debtor. "Creditor" also includes any person to whom the transferor's estate devolves in trust for the benefit of persons other than the transferor. Any such assignee or trustee may exercise any and all the rights and remedies specified in Civ. Code § 3440 et seq., if they are available to any one or more creditors of the assignor or transferor who are beneficiaries of the assignment or trust, and in that event, (1) only to the extent the rights or remedies are so available, and (2) only for the benefit of those creditors whose rights are asserted by the assignee or trustee [Civ. Code § 3440(b); see Civ. Code § 3439.01 (creditor is person having any claim, whether matured or unmatured, liquidiated or unliquidated, absolute, fixed, or contingent)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Transfers Without Delivery And Change Of Possession

23-270 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 270.72

§ 270.72 Requirement of Delivery and Change of Possession

The primary purpose of Civ. Code § 3440 et seq. is to protect against fraud and deception arising out of secret transfers and ostensible ownership inferable from the fact of possession by the transferor [see Dersch v. Thomas (1934) 138 Cal. App. Supp. 785, 789, 30 P.2d 630] . When a transfer is found to be void as to creditors and purchasers in good faith of the transferor, such creditors or purchasers are, in essence, found to be entitled to rely on the apparent custody of the property by the transferor without further inquiry into the actual ownership [see Southern Cal. Collection Co. v. Napkie (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 565, 570, 235 P.2d 434 ; Dersch v. Thomas (1934) 138 Cal. App. Supp. 785, 788-789, 30 P.2d 630] .

In order for a transfer which is otherwise subject to the provisions of Civ. Code § 3440 to be immune from attack under Civ. Code § 3440, the transferee's conduct in relation to the property transferred must be such as to give notice to the public that a change in the ownership and possession has taken place [see McKee Stair Bldg. Co. v. Martin (1899) 126 Cal. 557, 559, 58 P. 1044] . Delivery must be made of the property, and the vendee must take actual possession, which must be open and unequivocal, carrying with it the usual marks and indications of ownership by the transferee. While the possession must be continuous, it need not be continued indefinitely so long as it is bona fide and openly taken and is kept for such a length of time as to give general advertisement of the status of the property and claim of it by the vendee [Bunting v. Saltz (1890) 84 Cal. 168, 172, 24 P. 167] . Thus, Civ. Code § 3440 requires that the transferee take and continuously hold the possession of the property purchased, in such manner and accompanied with such plain and unmistakable acts of possession, control, and ownership, as a prudent, bona fide purchaser would in the exercise of his or her rights over the property, so that all persons might have notice that he or she owned and had possession of the property [Southern Cal. Collection Co. v. Napkie (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 565, 571, 235 P.2d 434] .

In this regard, no writings pertaining to a transfer or personal property, regardless of their number of character, can create an actual and continued change of possession as to creditors of the transferor. Only acts can effect a valid transfer, which acts must consist of a visible, actual, continued change of possession [George v. Pierce (1898) 123 Cal. 172, 175, 55 P. 775, 56 P. 53 ; O'Connor v. O'Connor, Rice & Barnes (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 1, 4, 111 P.2d 656 (creditors could levy on debtor's property that had been falsely labeled to indicate ownership by another but was in debtor's possession)].

§ 270.73 Good Faith and Adequate Consideration

Since the object of Civ. Code § 3440 et seq. is to protect creditors against sales that are surreptitious due to the transferor's continuing possession of the property [see Nicholson v. McDonald (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 675, 679, 14 Cal. Rptr. 505 ; Dersch v. Thomas (1934) 138 Cal. App. Supp. 785, 789, 30 P.2d 630] , the question of good faith and adequate consideration for a transfer is wholly immaterial and is no defense to a finding that the transfer was void under Civ. Code § 3440 as to such creditors [Dot Records, Inc. v. Freeman (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 204, 206, 55 Cal. Rptr. 455] .

In addition, the fact of the insolvency or solvency of the transferor or the fact that the transfer constituted no more than a preference of one creditor over another also is an immaterial consideraton if the transfer is otherwise void as to creditors of the transferor under Civ. Code § 3440 [see Pfahler v. Worcester (1922) 56 Cal. App. 384, 385-386, 205 P. 491] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Transfers Without Delivery And Change Of Possession

23-270 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 270.74

§ 270.74 Required Possession of Property by Transferor

A person must have had possession of the personal property at the time of a transfer of the property in order for the transaction come within the terms of Civ. Code § 3440 [see Cosby v. Cline (1921) 186 Cal. 698, 701, 200 P. 801 (automobile in possession of sheriff pursuant to attachment order at time transfer made)]. If the transferor did not have possession of the personal property, it is not necessary that the transferee receive or that he or she retain possession of it in order to be protected against the claims of the creditors of the transferor [Behlen v. Mackie (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 132, 133-134, 247 P.2d 847] . Thus, Civ. Code § 3440 is not designed to create interests in a transferor greater than those of which he or she was in possession at the time of the transfer; and it is only the transfer of such interests which can be considered to be conclusively void as to the transferor's creditors under Civ. Code § 3440 [see Behlen v. Mackie (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 132, 133-134, 247 P.2d 847] .

Similarly, when title to materials being removed from the ground, such as growing crops, or from certain structures, such as bricks from a building being demolished, is transferred, the failure of the transferee to take immediate delivery followed by an actual and continued change of possession of the materials does not render the transferee's title subject to the claims of the creditors of the trasferor. In such cases, because the crops or bricks are not susceptible of manual delivery until harvested or removed, and are not in the possession of the transferor, no transfer has been made within the terms of Civ. Code § 3440. However, once the crop is harvested or the bricks are removed, it is the duty of the transferee to take immediate possession of the materials and to retain possession [see Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 590, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425 (removal of bricks); O'Brien v. Ballou (1897) 116 Cal. 318, 321, 48 P. 130 (harvesting of crops)].

§ 270.75 Relationship of Transferor and Transferee

The fact that the transferor and transferee were husband and wife, parent and child, employer and employee, or otherwise parties to a relationship which under ordinary circumstances would not be expected to be required to attend to the formalities of the transfer of property required by Civ. Code § 3440, and that retention of possession of the property transferred by the transferor ordinarily might be expected, furnishes no reason why the provisions of Civ. Code § 3440 should receive a construction different from and more liberal than they would receive in the case of a transfer between strangers [see Southern Cal. Collection Co. v. Napkie (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 565, 570, 235 P.2d 434 ; Blaney v. Cline (1921) 53 Cal. App. 686, 687-688, 200 P. 751] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Transfers Without Delivery And Change Of Possession

§ 270.76 Impracticality of Actual Delivery

The requirement of an actual change of possession may be dispensed with when it would be unreasonably burdensome to require it and when it would lead to absurd results [Raddatz v. Hedgpeth (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 633, 637, 35 Cal. Rptr. 855] . In such a case, when the character and situation of the property delivered are such that actual physical delivery cannot be made, symbolic delivery is considered sufficient to free the property so delivered from the claims of the creditors of the transferor [see Southern Cal. Collection Co. v. Napkie (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 565, 571, 235 P.2d 434] . Thus, when a movable is bulky and not readily transferable by manual delivery, the rule of Civ. Code § 3440 is relaxed by reason of the impracticality of actual delivery by ordinary means and methods [Shepherd v. Gamble (1950) 95 Cal. App2d 890, 892, 214 P.2d 403] . Similarly, if removal of the thing which is being transferred would cause damage to the property from which the thing is being removed, no actual delivery is required in order for the transfer to be valid as against the creditors of the transferor [see Raddatz v. Hedgpeth (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 633, 35 Cal. Rptr. 855] . In this situation, however, the transfer is nonetheless subject to attack by the transferor's creditors if the transferee could have effectively excluded the transferor from possession of the property and thereby assumed full control over the property, but did not do so [see Raddatz v. Hedgpeth (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 633, 637-638, 35 Cal. Rptr. 855] .

§ 270.77 Accessions to Personal Property as Not Transfers

Alterations in or additions to articles of personal property belonging to another which are accessions to that property do not constitute transfers of title which could be considered conclusively fraudulent as to creditors of the transferor under Civ. Code § 3440 [Raddatz v. Hedgpeth (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 633, 638, 35 Cal. Rptr. 855 ; Dersch v. Thomas (1934) 138 Cal. App. Supp. 785, 789, 30 P.2d 630] . When things belonging to different owners have been united so as to form a single thing, and cannot be separated without injury, the whole is considered to belong to the owner of the thing which forms the principal part [see Civ. Code § 1025]. Thus, if the addition is of such a nature that the thing added cannot be removed without injury, title passes by accession and not by transfer [Dersch v. Thomas (1934) 138 Cal. App. Supp. 785, 789, 30 P.2d 630] . Moreover, even though the thing added is removable without injury, if it becomes a component part of that to which it is added, and if, by virtue of contract, title passes, the transaction has all the characteristics of title acquired by accession [Dersch v. Thomas (1934) 138 Cal. App. Supp. 785, 789, 30 P.2d 630 (replacement of old body with new body on truck purchased under conditional sales contract with alleged fraudulent transferee constituted accession, with title of body and truck in fact remaining in conditional vendor, although new body could be removed without injury to truck)].

However, it is essential in order for this rule to apply that it appear that the accessory be so closely united with the principal article that it constitute an integral and permanent part of it [Raddatz v. Hedgpeth (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 633, 638, 35 Cal. Rptr. 855 (title to electric motors on mill site passed by transfer and not accession where motors were removable without damage and had not become permanant and integral part of mill)].

§ 270.78 Statutory Exceptions

[1] In General

Civ. Code § 3440 et seq. does not apply to transfers of any of the following [Civ. Code § 3440.1]:

- Things in action.

- Ships or cargoes if either are at sea or in a foreign port.

- The sale of accounts or chattel paper governed by the Uniform Commercial Code, security interests, and contracts of bottomry or respondentia.

- Wines or brandies in the wineries, distilleries, or wine cellars of the makers or owners of the wines or brandies, or other persons having possession, care, and control of the wines or brandies, and the pipes, casks, and tanks in which the wines or brandies are contained, if the transfers are made in writing and executed and acknowledged, and if the transfers are recorded in the book of the official records in the office of the county recorder of the county in which the wines, brandies, pipes, casks, and tanks are situated.

- A transfer or assignment made for the benefit of creditors generally or by any assignee acting under an assignment for the benefit of creditors generally, or to any security agreement made for the benefit of creditors generally. This exception applies to a form of statutory assignment for the benefit of creditors, enabling an insolvent debtor, through his or her assignee, to provide for the immediate conversion of the assigned property or the disposal thereof, and the distribution of the proceeds ratably among the creditors; it also applies to a form of assignment in which a transfer is, in effect, only a conveyance in trust by way of paying or securing certain obligations of the debtor. In the case of either form of assignment, so long as the assignment is made for the benefit of creditors generally, it is protected in its operation as to delivery, and the continued change of possession of the property assigned [Brainard v.

- Property exempt from enforcement of a money judgment. Since creditors can make no claims to property exempt from execution, the transfer of such property cannot be deemed fraudulent as to such creditors [Bufkin v. Cline (1919) 180 Cal. 381, 383, 181 P. 390 ; for property exempt from execution, see Code Civ. Proc. § 704.010 et seq. and Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments].

- Standing timber.

- Subject to the limitations of Civ. Code § 3440.3 (discussed in § 270.78[3]), a transfer of personal property if: (1) a financing statement satisfying the requirements of Civ. Code § 3440.1(h)(1) is filed in the office of the Secretary of State prior to the date of the intended transfer; and (2) publication of a notice of intended transfer is completed in accordance with the requirements of Civ. Code § 3440.1(h)(2) 10 days before the transfer occurs [§ 270.78[5]].

- Personal property not located within this state at the time of the transfer or attachment of the lien if this provision is not used for the purpose of evading Civ. Code § 3440 et seq.

- A transfer of property which (1) is subject to a statute or treaty of the United States or a statute of California that provides for the registration of transfers of title or issuance of certificates of title, and (2) is so far perfected under that statute or treaty that a bona fide purchaser cannot acquire an interest in the property transferred that is superior to the interest of the transferee.

- A transfer of personal property in connection with a transaction in which the property is immediately thereafter leased by the transferor from the transferee, provided the transferee purchased the property for value and in good faith within the meaning of Com. Code § 10308(c).

- Transition property, as defined in Pub. Util. Code § 840, or recovery property, as defined in Pub. Util. Code § 848.

- A transfer of property by any governmental entity.

[2] Claim Arising After Filing of Financing Statement and Publication of Notice

Subject to Civ. Code § 3440.3, discussed in § 270.78[3], a transfer of personal property is not void under Civ. Code § 3440 as against a creditor of the transferor or as against a buyer from the transferor if the creditor's or buyer's claim or right against the transferor arises after the date by which all of the requirements of Civ. Code § 3440.1(h), discussed in § 270.40[1], have been met, other than the requirement that filing of the financing statement and publication of the notice referred to therein be completed prior to the transfer [Civ. Code § 3440.2].

[3] Buyer in Ordinary Course of Business Overrides Exceptions

A transfer of personal property as to which the conditions set forth in any of the following sections are satisfied, is nevertheless void under Civ. Code § 3440 as against a person who has purchased the personal property from the transferor and who is a "buyer in the ordinary course of business," as defined in Com. Code § 1201(b)(9) [Civ. Code § 3440.3]:

- Civ. Code § 3440.1(h) [filing of financing statement and publication of notice of intended transfer, discussed in § 270.40[1]];

- Civ. Code § 3440.2 [discussed in § 270.78[2]]; or

- Civ. Code § 3440.5(b) [filing of financing statement and publication of notice of security interest granted by transferee, discussed in § 270.78[4]].

[4] Purchase or Security Interest From Transferee

Civ. Code § 3440 et seq. do not affect the rights of a buyer for value in good faith who purchases the transferred property from the transferee or from a successor in interest of the transferee, provided the transferor is no longer in possession of the personal property at the time of the purchase by that buyer [Civ. Code § 3440.4]. Similarly, Civ. Code § 3440 et seq. do not affect the rights of a secured party who, for value and in good faith, acquires a security interest in the transferred personal property from the transferee, or from the transferee's successor in interest, if the transferor is no longer in possession of the personal property at the time the security interest attaches [Civ. Code § 3440.5(a)]. Additionally, except as provided in Civ. Code § 3440.3, discussed in § 270.78[3], Civ. Code § 3440 et seq. do not affect the rights of a secured party who acquires a security interest from the transferee, or from the transferee's successor in interest, in the personal property if (1) a financing statement satisfying the requirements of Civ. Code § 3440.5(b)(1) is filed in the office of the Secretary of State on or before the date the security agreement is executed, and (2) publication of a notice of intended transfer is completed in accordance with the requirements of Civ. Code § 3440.5(b)(2) 10 days before the date of execution of the security agreement by the intended debtor [Civ. Code § 3440.5(b); § 270.78[5][b]].

[5] Notice and Publication Requirements

[a] Transfer of Personal Property

To insulate a transfer of personal property from attack under Civ. Code § 3440 et seq., the following conditions must be satisfied [Civ. Code § 3440.1(h)]:

- Financing Statement. Prior to the date of the intended transfer, the transferor or the transferee must file a financing statement, with respect to the property transferred, signed by the transferor. The financing statement must be filed in the office of the Secretary of State in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 5 of Division 9 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 9501 et seq.], but may use "transferor" and "transferee" in lieu of "debtor" and "secured party." The provisions of Chapter 5 apply as appropriate to the financing statement. A standard form approved by the Secretary of State as Form UCC-1 is available at www.sos.ca.gov/business/ucc/ucc.htm, and many office supply stores. For an illustration of the form, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 42, Secured Transactions, § 42.211 (Matthew Bender).

- Notice Requirements. The transferor or the transferee must publish a notice of intended transfer one time in a newspaper of general circulation published in the judicial district in which the personal property is located, if there is one, and if there is none in the judicial district, then in a newspaper of general circulation in the county embracing the judicial district. The publication must be completed not less than 10 days before the date the transfer occurs. The notice must contain (1) the name and address of the transferor and transferee, (2) a general statement of the character of the personal property intended to be transferred; (3) an indication of the place where the personal property is located; and (4) a date on or after which the transfer is to be made. For a form for this notice, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 53, Leases of Equipment and Other Personal Property (Matthew Bender).

[b] Security Interest Acquired From Transferee

To insulate a security interest given by a transferee from attack under Civ. Code § 3440 et seq., the following conditions must be satisfied [Civ. Code § 3440.5(b)]:

- Financing Statement. On or before the date the security agreement is executed, the intended debtor or secured party must file a financing statement with respect to the property transferred, signed by the intended debtor. The financing statement must be filed in the office of the Secretary of State in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 5 of Division 9 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 9501 et seq.], but must use "transferor" and "transferee" instead of "debtor" and "secured party" (and use "secured party" instead of "assignee of secured party"). The provisions of Chapter 5 apply as appropriate to the financing statement. For the purpose of indexing, and in any certification of search, the Secretary of State may refer to any financing statement filed pursuant to this paragraph as a financing statement under the Commercial Code and may describe the transferor as a debtor and the transferee as a secured party. (This filing does not perfect the security interest of the secured party. Perfection of the security interest is governed by Division 9 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 9101 et seq.].) A standard form approved by the Secretary of State as Form UCC-1 is available at www.sos.ca.gov/business/ucc/ucc.htm and many office supply stores. For an illustration of the form, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 42, Secured Transactions § 42.211 (Matthew Bender).

- Notice Requirement. The intended debtor or secured party must publish a notice of transfer one time in the same type of paper described in § 270.78[5][a]. The publication must be completed not less than 10 days before the execution by the intended debtor of the intended security agreement. The notice must contain (1) the names and addresses of the transferor, the transferee, the intended debtor, and the secured party, (2) a general statement of the character of the personal property transferred and intended to be subject to the security interest; (3) the location of the personal property; and (4) a date on or after which the security agreement is to be executed by the intended debtor.

§ 270.79 Retention of Possession by Merchant-Seller

In transactions governed by the Uniform Commercial Code, the rights of unsecured creditors of the seller with respect to goods which have been identified to a contract for sale are subject to the buyer's right to recover the goods under Com. Code §§ 2502, 2716, unless a creditor of the seller may treat a sale or an identification of goods to a contract for sale as void if as against him a retention of possession by the seller is fraudulent or void under any rule of law of the state where the goods are situated [Com. Code § 2402(1), (2); see Gardner v. Sullivan & Crowe Equip. Co. (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 592, 596, 94 Cal. Rptr. 893 (applying Civ. Code § 3440)]. However, the retention of possession in good faith and current course of trade by a merchant-seller for a commercially reasonable time after a sale or identification does not create a conclusive presumption of fraud or voidness as to creditors of the seller [see Com. Code § 2402(2); Gardner v. Sullivan & Crowe Equip. Co. (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 592, 596, 94 Cal. Rptr. 893 ; see also Civ. Code § 3440 et seq. (Com. Code § 2402(2) is not restricted by provisions of Civ. Code § 3440 et seq.)], unless the identification to the contract or delivery is made not in the current course of trade but in satisfaction of or as security for a preexisting claim for money, security, or the like [Com. Code § 2402(3)(b)]. When delivery or identification by way of satisfying or securing an antecedent obligation is made, the law of fraudulent conveyances may apply and render fraudulent the delivery or identification as to creditors of the seller [see Com. Code § 2402(3)(b)].

§ 270.80 Retention of Goods by Lessor

A creditor of a lessor in possession of goods subject to a lease contract may treat the lease contract as void if, as against the creditor, retention of possession by the lessor is fraudulent or void under any statute or rule of law. However, retention of possession in good faith and current course of trade after the lease contract becomes enforceable is not fraudulent or void [Com. Code § 10308(a); see Com. Code § 10600 (transition provision); see also Civ. Code § 3340.1(k) (exceptions), discussed in § 270.78[1]].

Nothing in Division 10 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 10100 et seq.] impairs the rights of creditor of a lessor if the lease contract is made under circumstances which, under any statute or rule of law apart from Division 10, would constitute the transaction a fraudulent transfer or voidable preference [Com. Code § 10308(b)].

A creditor of a seller may treat a sale or an identification of goods to a contract as void if, as against the creditor, retention of possession by the seller is fraudulent under any statute or rule of law. However, retention of possession of goods pursuant to a lease contract entered into by the seller as lessee and the buyer as lessor in connection with the sale or identification of the goods in good faith is not fraudulent if the buyer bought for value and in good faith [Com. Code § 10308(b)].

§ 270.81 Creditors Entitled to Attack Transfer

To be entitled to attack a transfer of personal property which was not accompanied by an immediate delivery followed by an actual and continued change of possession of the property, a creditor must have been a creditor of the transferor at the time of the transfer sought to be avoided or must have become a creditor of the transferor while the transferor remained in possession. Successors in interest of those creditors and buyers from the transferor for value in good faith subsequent to the transfer are also entitled to attack the transfer [Civ. Code § 3440(a); see Brown v. O'Neal (1892) 95 Cal. 262, 267, 30 P. 538 (entity which became creditor while transferor retained possession)]. A creditor or buyer must, however, assert his or her rights within the limitation period discussed in § 270.84 [Civ. Code § 3440.6].

In addition, Civ. Code § 3440(a) makes no distinction between totally unsecured creditors and those creditors who have realized on their security and are seeking to recover any deficiency which may exist [In re Trinity Tractor Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 439-440, 83 Cal. Rptr. 783] . At least in the case of a secured creditor who, based on the original contract between the creditor and the transferor, never did intend to rely solely upon his or her security for payment of his or her claim, the secured creditor may be considered a general creditor as to any deficiency which may exist, and is permitted to attack any transfer which is otherwise void as to such creditor under Civ. Code § 3440 [In re Trinity Tractor Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 440, 83 Cal. Rptr. 783] .

§ 270.82 Creditors Protected by Other Statutory Schemes

If a creditor is as fully protected against surreptitious sales or encumbrances as the Legislature deems necessary, the requirements of Civ. Code §§ 3440-3440.9 may have no application. For example, a sale conducted in compliance with the Bulk Sales Law [Com. Code §§ 6101-6111; see § 270.100 et seq.] by means of which a creditor receives knowledge of the pendency of such a sale and is able to take appropriate means to protect himself or herself need not comply with the requirements of Civ. Code §§ 3440-3440.9 [Nicholson v. McDonald (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 675, 679, 14 Cal. Rptr. 505] .

However, it should be noted that the purpose of the statute and its terms are distinct considerations. Although the main reason for requiring an immediate delivery and continuous change of possession may be to give notice to creditors, the fact that one who is a creditor at the time of the attempted transfer may otherwise have notice of such transfer does not make it valid as to him when there is no such delivery and change of possession [Joseph Herspring Co. v. Jones (1921) 55 Cal. App. 620, 624, 203 P. 1038 ; see Schuch v. Northrup-Jones, Inc. (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 279, 285, 328 P.2d 279] . In the case of one becoming a creditor after such notice, the consideration might have some bearing on the question of estoppel or of good faith [Joseph Herspring Co. v. Jones (1921) 55 Cal. App. 620, 624, 203 P. 1038] .

§ 270.83 Remedies for Creditors and Good-Faith Purchasers

A creditor of the transferor and a purchaser for value in good faith of the transferor subsequent to the transfer may bring an action to have set aside a transfer of personal property which was void as to such creditor or purchaser under Civ. Code § 3440 [Pfahler v. Worcester (1922) 56 Cal. App. 384, 384-386, 205 P. 491] .

In the alternative, the creditor of the transferor may have a writ of attachment or execution issued on the personal property in question, in which case the transferee as third-party claimant must bring proceedings on his or her third-party claim to show that the requirements of Civ. Code § 3440 for a valid transfer of the property as to the attaching or executing creditor were met [see Dot Records, Inc. v. Freeman (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 204, 207-208, 55 Cal. Rptr. 455 (writ of attachment); Southern Cal. Collection Co. v. Napkie (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 565, 568, 235 P.2d 434 (writ of execution)]. That is, one who relies on obtaining title as against the creditor of the transferor must prove that delivery was immediate and the new possession continued [Dot Records, Inc. v. Freeman (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 204, 208, 55 Cal. Rptr. 455] . Moreover, the sole question in such proceedings is whether the transferor has any interest subject to sale under execution. The court is without jurisdiction to determine the exact nature of the title to or interest in the property of either the transferee or creditor [Southern Cal. Collection Co. v. Napkie (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 565, 572, 235 P.2d 434] . For discussion and forms relating to attachment proceedings, see Ch. 62 Attachment . An action brought or levy made under Civ. Code §§ 3440-3440.9 must be brought or made within one year after the earliest of the following dates [Civ. Code § 3440.6]:

- The date the person bringing the action or making the levy should have discovered the transfer in the exercise of reasonable diligence;

- The date the person bringing the action or making the levy obtained actual knowledge of the transfer;

- The date the delivery of, and actual and continued change of possession of, the property transferred occurred; or

- If a financing statement filed pursuant to Civ. Code § 3440.1(h) has not lapsed, the date the filing and publication requirements of Civ. Code § 3440.1(h) were met, other than the requirement that the filing of the financing statement and publication of the required notice be completed prior to the transfer.

§ 270.85 Effect of Transfer on Transferee

As is true with conveyances of property found to be fraudulent under the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act [see discussion in § 270.47], a conveyance which is void under Civ. Code § 3440 vests title to the property transferred in the transferee, except as against the creditors of the transferor. Thus, while the transfer is void as to the creditors of the transferor, it is binding on the parties and those in privity with them [Ramirez v. Hartford Acci. & Indem. Co. (1938) 29 Cal. App. 2d 193, 196-197, 84 P.2d 172] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Bulk Sales

§ 270.101 Objective of Bulk Sales Law

The bulk sales law is designed to prevent merchants from making surreptitious sales or encumbrances of their stock-in-trade that are not in the ordinary course of business and that in effect defraud or defeat claims of their creditors [see Com. Code § 6102(a)(3) (defining "bulk sale"); Nicholson v. McDonald (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 675, 679, 14 Cal. Rptr. 505 (decided under former Civ. Code § 3440.1); see also Danning v. Daylin, Inc. (9th Cir. 1973) 488 F.2d 185, 187] . The law is designed to afford the seller's creditors an opportunity to satisfy their claims before the sellers can dispose of their assets and vanish with the proceeds of those sales [see Reed v. Anglo Scandinavian Corp. (E.D. Cal. 1969) 298 F. Supp. 310, 313] . It is the buyer, however, who must give notice of the proposed sale and who is liable to the seller's creditors if notice is not given [see Com. Code §§ 6104, 6107].

Compliance with the Bulk Sales Act does not preclude recovery on a claim made under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act [see Com. Code § 3439 et seq.; see also § 270.30 et seq.]. The two acts are not mutually exclusive, and the Bulk Sales Act was never intended to substitute for after-the-fact remedies that are otherwise available to injured creditors [see Monastra v. Konica Business Machines, U.S.A., Inc. (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 1628, 1641-1643, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528] .

In 1988, the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws recommended that Division 6 of the Commercial Code be repealed. The recommendation was based on several factors leading to the conclusion that creditors have become able to protect themselves in other ways and that the relatively expensive and onerous mechanisms of the Bulk Transfer Law are no longer necessary. The factors included (1) the increase in credit reporting services, which has given creditors the ability to make better-informed decisions about whether to extend credit; (2) the development of the minimum contacts doctrine, which has allowed creditors to obtain in personam jurisdiction over sellers who leave a state after selling their business; and (3) the availability of Division 9, which provides a relatively simple and inexpensive way for the creditor to take a security interest in inventory [Harris, Practicing Under Existing Bulk Sales Law--And a Look at the Future of Article 6, 22 U.C.C. L.J. 195, 197 (1990)]. The Conference also approved a new Division 6 for enactment by states that might prefer not to repeal the Bulk Transfer Law. California's new Bulk Sales Law, as enacted by Stats. 1990, ch. 1191, differs in several respects from the new uniform Bulk Sales Law, but reflects a similar intent.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Bulk Sales

23-270 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 270.102

§ 270.102 Effect of Failure to Give Required Notice

[1] In General

A buyer's failure to comply with the requirements of Com. Code § 6104 does not do any of the following [Com. Code § 6107(h)]:

- Impair the buyer's rights in or title to the assets;
- Render the sale ineffective, void, or voidable [see § 270.102[5]];
- Entitle a creditor to more than a single satisfaction of its claim [see Com. Code § 6107(i)]; or
- Create liability other than as provided in the Bulk Sales Law (Com. Code § 6101 et seq.).

Payment of the buyer's liability under Com. Code § 6107(a) (discussed in § 270.102[2]) discharges pro tanto the seller's debt to the creditor [Com. Code § 6107(i)].

Unless otherwise agreed, a buyer has an immediate right of reimbursement from the seller for any amount paid to a creditor in partial or total satisfaction of the buyer's liability under Com. Code § 6107 ((a) [Com. Code § 6107(j); see Jeffery v. Volberg (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 815, 818, 324 P.2d 964 (decided under prior law; transferor may maintain action for purchase price of assets despite violation of bulk transfer laws)].

[2] Buyer's Liability to Single Claimant

Except in the case of a buyer who made a good faith and commercially reasonable effort to comply with the notice requirements or to exclude the sale from the application of the notice requirements by bringing it within one of the exceptions set forth in Com. Code § 6103(c), and subject to the limitations on cumulative liability, a buyer who fails to comply with the requirements of Com. Code § 6104 with respect to a claimant is liable to that claimant for damages in the amount of the claim, reduced by any amount that the claimant would not have realized if the buyer had complied [

Com. Code § 6107(a); Gifford v. J & A Holdings (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 996, 999, 1005, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 253 (notice recorded less than 12 business days before date of anticipated sale specified in notice was defective notice because of noncompliance with Com. Code § 6105); see Com. Code § 6107(c) (discussed in § 270.102[3], good faith attempt to comply or exclude sale under Com. Code § 6103(c))]. The claimant has the burden of establishing the validity and amount of the claim. The buyer has the burden of establishing the amount that the claimant would not have realized if the buyer had complied [Com. Code § 6107(b); see Com. Code § 6102(a)(5) (defining "claimant," discussed in § 270.242[3][a])].

The buyer's liability under Com. Code § 6107(a) is limited to holders of liquidated claims because no action may be brought under Com. Code § 6107(a) by or on behalf of a claimant whose claim is unliquidated or contingent [Com. Code § 6107(g)].

[3] Good Faith Exceptions

A buyer who made a good faith and commercially reasonable effort to comply with the requirements of Com. Code § 6104 or to exclude the sale from the application of the Bulk Sales Law by bringing it within one of the exceptions in Com. Code § 6103(c) is not liable to creditors for failure to comply with the requirements of Com. Code § 6104. The buyer has the burden of establishing the good faith and commercial reasonableness of its effort [Com. Code § 6107(c); Gifford v. J & A Holdings (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 996, 999, 1005-1007, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 253 (attempt to cure defective notice, which was recorded less than 12 business days before date of anticipated sale, by merely postponing closing of sale escrow, without notice, was not commercially reasonable means of satisfying purpose of Com. Code § 6105 notice requirement)].

[4] Limit on Buyer's Cumulative Liability

In a single bulk sale in which the assets consist only of inventory and equipment, the buyer's cumulative liability for failure to comply with the requirements of Com. Code § 6104 may not exceed an amount equal to twice the net contract price, less the amount of any part of the net contract price paid to or applied for the benefit of the seller or a creditor except to the extent that the payment or application is applied to a debt that is secured by the assets and that has been taken into consideration in determining the net contract price [Com. Code § 6107(d)(1); see Com. Code § 6102(a)(11) (defining "net contract price," discussed in § 270.245[3][b])].

A payment made by the buyer to a person to whom the buyer is, or believes it is, liable under Com. Code § 6107(a) reduces pro tanto the buyer's cumulative liability under Com. Code § 6107(d) [Com. Code § 6107(f)].

In a single bulk sale in which the assets include property other than inventory and equipment, the buyer's cumulative liability for failure to comply with the requirements of Com. Code § 6104 may not exceed an amount equal to twice the net value of the inventory and equipment less the amount of the portion of any part of the net contract price paid to or applied for the benefit of the seller or a creditor that is allocable to the inventory and equipment except to the extent that the payment or application is applied to a debt that is secured by the assets and that has been taken into consideration in determining the net contract price [Com. Code § 6107(d)(2); see Com. Code §§ 6102(a)(11), 6107(e) (defining "net contract price" and "net value," respectively, discussed in § 270.245[3][b], [d])].

[5] Effect Under Prior Law

Under the law applicable to sales conducted on or before December 31, 1990, if the buyer failed to give the required notice of bulk sale, the sale was fraudulent and void against any creditor of the seller [former Com. Code § 6105(1); see also former Com. Code § 6108 (exception for auction sales)]. This was true regardless of the seller's good faith and the adequacy of the consideration [Danning v. Daylin, Inc. (9th Cir. 1973) 488 F.2d 185, 188] .

§ 270.103 Transactions Subject to Bulk Sales Law

[1] Basic Definitions and Applicability

A "bulk sale" means either of the following [Com. Code § 6102(a)(3); see Com. Code § 6102(b)(4) (definition of "sale" in Com. Code § 2106(1) applies)]:

- In the case of a sale by auction or a sale or series of sales conducted by a liquidator on the seller's behalf, a sale or series of sales not in the ordinary course of the seller's business of more than half of the seller's inventory and equipment, as measured by a value on the date of the bulk-sale agreement [see Com. Code § 6102(a)(10) (liquidator as one regularly engaged in business of disposing of assets for businesses contemplating liquidation or dissolution)]; or

- In all other cases, a sale not in the ordinary course of the seller's business of more than half the seller's inventory and equipment, as measured by value on the date of the bulk-sale agreement.

A "sale" consists in the passing of title from the seller to the buyer for a price [Com. Code § 2106(1); see Com. Code § 6102(b)(4) (applying that definition in Com. Code § 6101 et seq.)]. "Value" means fair market value [Com. Code § 6102(a)(15)].

Unless the transaction qualifies for one of the exceptions set forth in Com. Code § 6103(c) (discussed in § 270.108), the Bulk Sales Law applies to a bulk sale if (1) the seller's principal business is the sale of inventory from stock, including those who manufacture what they sell, or that of a restaurant owner; and (2) on the date of the bulk-sale agreement, the seller is located in California, or, if the seller is located in a jurisdiction that is not a part of the United States, the seller's major executive office in the United States is in California [Com. Code § 6103(a)]. A seller is deemed to be located at its place of business. If a seller has more than one place of business, the seller is deemed located at its chief executive office [Com. Code § 6103(b)].

[2] "Inventory" Defined

Goods are "inventory" if they are held by a person who holds them for sale or lease or to be furnished under contracts of service, or if he or she has so leased or furnished them, or if they are raw materials, work in process, or materials used or consumed in a business. Inventory of a person is not to be classified as his or her equipment [see Com. Code §§ 6102(b)(3), 9102(a)(48)].

[3] "Equipment" Defined

Goods are "equipment" if they are used or bought for use primarily in business (including farming or a profession) or by a debtor who is a nonprofit organization or a governmental subdivision or agency or if the goods are not included in the definition of inventory, farm products, or consumer goods [see Com. Code §§ 6102(b)(2), 9102(a)(33)].

[4] "Sale in Ordinary Course of Seller's Business" Defined

A sale is "in the ordinary course of the seller's business" if the sale comports with usual or customary practices in the kind of business in which the seller is engaged or with the seller's own usual or customary practices [Com. Code § 6102(a)(13)].

[5] "Date of Bulk-Sale Agreement" Defined

In the case of a sale by auction or conducted by a liquidator, "date of the bulk-sale agreement" means the date on which the seller engages the auctioneer or liquidator [Com. Code § 6102(a)(8)(i)]. In all other cases, "date of the bulk-sale agreement" means the date on which a bulk-sale agreement becomes enforceable between the buyer and the seller [Com. Code § 6102(a)(8)(ii)].

- Obtain from the seller a list of all business names and addresses used by the seller within three years before the date the list is sent or delivered to the buyer;

- Give notice of the bulk sale in accordance with Com. Code § 6105; and

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Bulk Sales

23-270 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 270.105

§ 270.105 Bulk Sale for Cash or Obligation to Pay Cash

[1] In General

Com. Code § 6106.2 governs a bulk sale if the consideration is $2 million or less and is substantially all cash or an obligation of the buyer to pay cash in the future to the seller or a combination thereof [Com. Code § 6106.2(a)]. If a bulk sale is subject to Com. Code § 6106.2, additional announcements are required in the notice of sale [Com. Code § 6106.2(f); see § 270.240].

[2] Duty to Apply Consideration to Creditors' Claims

On every bulk sale subject to Com. Code § 6106.2, except one made by sale at auction or a sale or series of sales conducted by a liquidator on the seller's behalf, it is the duty of the buyer or, if the transaction is handled through an escrow, the escrow agent, to apply the cash consideration in accordance with Com. Code § 6106.2 so far as necessary to pay those debts of the seller for which claims are due and payable on or before the date of the bulk sale and are received in writing on or prior to the date specified as the last date to file claims with the person designated in the notice to receive claims. This duty of the buyer or escrow agent runs to each claimant timely filing the claim [Com. Code § 6106.2(b)].

"Date of the bulk sale" as used in this context means the later of the date on which either of the following occurs [Com. Code § 6102(a)(7)(i)(B)]:

- More than 10 percent of the net contract price is paid to or for the benefit of the seller; or
- More than 10 percent of the assets, as measured by value, are transferred to the buyer.

[3] Dispute as to Claims Due: Claimant's Right to Attachment

If the seller disputes whether a claim is due and payable on the date of the bulk sale or the amount of any claim, the buyer or escrow agent must do both of the following [Com. Code § 6106.2(c)]:

- Withhold from distribution an amount equal to (1) 125 percent of the first $7,500 of the claim, and (2) an amount equal to that portion of the claim in excess of the first $7,500, or the pro rata amount under Com. Code § 6106.4(b), if applicable; and

- Send a written notice to the claimant filing the claim on or before two business days after the distribution, stating that the amount will be paid to the seller, or to the other claimants in accordance with Com. Code § 6106.4(b), as the case may be, unless attached within 25 days from the mailing of the notice.

Any portion of the amount withheld that is not attached by the claimant within that time is paid by the buyer or escrow agent to the seller, or to the other claimants in accordance with Com. Code § 6106.4(b) if they have not been paid in full. An attachment of any amount so withheld is limited in its effect to the amount withheld for the attaching claimant, and gives the attaching claimant no greater priority or rights with respect to its claim than the claimant would have had if the claim had not been disputed [Com. Code § 6106.2(c)]. For purposes of Com. Code § 6106.2(c), a claimant may obtain the issuance of an attachment for a claim that is less than $500 and that otherwise meets the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010 or for a claim that is a secured claim or lien of the type described in Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010 [Com. Code § 6106.2(c)]. For further discussion and forms relating to the provisional remedy of attachment as governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 481.010 et seq., see Ch. 62, Attachment .

This remedy is in addition to any other remedies the claimant may have, including any right to attach the property intended to be transferred or any other property [Com. Code § 6106.2(c)].

[4] Cash Insufficient to Pay All Claims in Full

If the cash consideration payable is not sufficient to pay all of the claims received in full, and no escrow has been established pursuant to Com. Code § 6106.4 (discussed in § 270.106), the buyer must follow the procedures specified in Com. Code § 6106.4(a)-(c), and the immunity established by Com. Code § 6106.4(a)(3) applies to the buyer [Com. Code § 6106.2(d)].

[5] Payment of Claims; Interpleader Action as Alternative

Within 45 days after the buyer takes legal title to any of the goods, the buyer or escrow agent must either pay to the extent of the cash consideration the claims filed and not disputed, or the applicable portion thereof to the extent of the cash consideration under Com. Code § 6106.4(b), or institute an action in interpleader pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 386(b) and deposit the consideration with the clerk of the court pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 386(c) [Com. Code § 6106.2(e)]. The action must be brought in the appropriate court in the county in which the seller had its principal place of business in California. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 386.1 and 386.6apply in the action [Com. Code § 6106.2(e); see discussion and forms in Ch. 314, Interpleader].

[6] Effect on Lien or Security Interest

Com. Code § 6106.2 is not to be construed to release any security interest or other lien on the property that is the subject of the bulk sale unless the secured party or lienholder gives a voluntary release [Com. Code § 6106.2(g)].

D. Bulk Sales

23-270 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 270.106

§ 270.106 Escrow Procedures

[1] Buyer's Deposit

Specified escrow procedures are applicable if the notice of a bulk sale subject to Com. Code § 6106.2 (discussed in § 270.105) states that claims may be filed with an escrow agent. In those situations, the intended buyer has to deposit with the escrow agent the full amount of the purchase price or consideration [Com. Code § 6106.4(a); see § 270.240 (form of notice)].

[2] When Deposit Does Not Cover Claims

[a] Notice and Postponement

If, at the time the bulk sale subject to Com. Code § 6106.2 is otherwise ready to be consummated, the amount of cash deposited or agreed to be deposited at or prior to consummation in the escrow is insufficient to pay in full all of the claims filed with the escrow agent, the escrow agent must do the following [Com. Code § 6106.4(a)]:

(1) Delay the distribution of the consideration and the passing of legal title for a period of not less than 25 days nor more than 30 days from the date the notice required in paragraph (2) is mailed.

(2) Within five business days after the time the bulk sale would otherwise have been consummated, send a written notice to each claimant who has filed a claim stating (a) the total consideration deposited or agreed to be deposited in the escrow, (b) the name of each claimant who filed a claim against the escrow and the amount of each claim, (c) the amount proposed to be paid to each claimant, (d) the new date scheduled for the passing of legal title pursuant to paragraph (1), and (e) the date on or before which distribution will be made to claimants, which must not be more than five days after the new date specified for the passing of legal title. To the extent that an obligation of the buyer to pay cash in the future is a part of the consideration and the cash consideration is not sufficient to pay all claims filed in full, the notice must also state the amount, terms, and due dates of the obligation and the portion of the claims expected to be paid by that obligation [Com. Code § 6106.4(c)].

(3) If no written objection to the distribution described in the notice required by paragraph (2) is received by the escrow agent prior to the new date specified in the notice for the passing of legal title, the escrow agent must not be liable to any person to whom the notice required by paragraph (2) was sent for any good faith error that may have been committed in allocating and distributing the consideration as stated in the notice.

[b] Priorities for Distribution

If the amount of cash deposited or agreed to be deposited in escrow at or prior to consummation of a bulk sale subject to Com. Code § 6106.2 is insufficient to pay in full all of the claims filed with the escrow agent, the escrow agent must distribute the consideration in the following order of priorities [Com. Code § 6106.4(b)]:

- All obligations owing to the United States, to the extent given priority by federal law.

- Secured claims, including statutory and judicial liens, to the extent of the consideration fairly attributable to the value of the properties securing the claims and in accordance with the priorities provided by law. A secured creditor must participate in the distribution pursuant to Com. Code § 6106.4(b) only if a release of lien is deposited by the secured creditor conditioned only on receiving an amount equal to the distribution.

- Escrow and professional charges and brokers' fees attributable directly to the sale.

- Wage claims given priority by Code Civ. Proc. § 1205.

- All other tax claims.

- All other unsecured claims pro rata, including any deficiency claims of partially secured creditors.

To the extent that an obligation of the buyer to pay cash in the future is a part of the consideration and the cash consideration is not sufficient to pay all claims filed in full, the escrow agent must apply all principal and interest received on the obligation to the payment of claims in accordance with Com. Code § 6106.4(b) until they are paid in full before making any payment to the seller [Com. Code § 6106.4(c)].

No funds may be drawn from the escrow, prior to the actual closing and completion of the escrow, for the payment, in whole or in part, of any commission, fee, or other consideration as compensation for a service that is contingent on the performance of any act, condition, or instruction set forth in the escrow [Com. Code § 6106.4(c)].

D. Bulk Sales

23-270 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 270.107

§ 270.107 Bulk Sales by Auction

[1] Auctioneer or Liqudiator as "Buyer"

Bulk sales by auction and bulk sales conducted by a liquidator on the seller's behalf are governed by Com. Code §§ 6104, 6105, and 6107, with some modifications [Com. Code § 6108(a); for discussion of Com. Code §§ 6104, 6105, and 6107, see §§ 270.102, 270.104, and 270.240]. "Buyer" in the context of a bulk sale by auction or a bulk sale conducted by a liquidator refers to the auctioneer or liquidator, as the case may be [Com. Code § 6108(a)(1)]. Thus, it is the auctioneer or liquidator who must comply with the requirements of Com. Code §§ 6104 and 6105 [see Com. Code §§ 6105(a), 6108(a)(3) (notice requirements for sale by auction or liquidation); see § 270.241]. A person who buys at a bulk sale conducted by auction or by a liquidator need not comply with the requirements of Com. Code §§ 6104 and 6105, and is not liable for the failure of the auctioneer or liquidator to comply with the requirements imposed on it [Com. Code § 6108(c)].

[2] "Auctioneer" and "Liquidator" Defined

The term "auctioneer" means a person whom the seller engages to direct, conduct, control, or be responsible for a sale by auction [Com. Code § 6102(a)(2)].

The term "liquidator" means a person who is regularly engaged in the business of disposing of assets for businesses contemplating liquidation or dissolution [Com. Code § 6102(a)(10)].

[3] Cumulative Liability of Auctioneer or Liquidator

In determining the cumulative liability of an auctioneer or liquidator, "net contract price" refers to net proceeds of the auction or net proceeds of the sale, as the case may be [Com. Code § 6108(a)(2)]. In a single bulk sale, the cumulative liability of the auctioneer or liquidator for failure to comply with the requirements of Com. Code §§ 6104, 6105, and 6108may not exceed the amount of the net proceeds of the sale allocable to inventory and equipment sold less the amount of the portion of any part of the net proceeds paid to or applied for the benefit of a creditor that is allocable to the inventory and equipment [Com. Code § 6108(a)(4)].

A payment made by the auctioneer or liquidator to a person to whom the auctioneer or liquidator is, or believes it is, liable under Com. Code § 6108 reduces pro tanto the auctioneer's or liquidator's cumulative liability under Com. Code § 6108(a)(4) [Com. Code § 6108(b)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Bulk Sales

23-270 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 270.108

§ 270.108 Transactions Excepted From Bulk Sales Law

[1] Transfers to Satisfy Obligations

The Bulk Sales Law does not apply to a transfer made to secure payment or performance of an obligation [Com. Code § 6103(c)(1)]. Specific transfers in payment or performance of an obligation that are excepted from the Bulk Sales Law include the following:

- A transfer of collateral to a secured party pursuant to Com. Code § 9609 [Com. Code § 6103(c)(2)].
- A sale of collateral pursuant to Com. Code § 9610 [Com. Code § 6103(c)(3)].
- Retention of collateral pursuant to Com. Code § 9620 [Com. Code § 6103(c)(4)].
- A sale of an asset encumbered by a security interest or lien if (a) all the proceeds of the sale are applied in partial or total satisfaction of the debt secured by the security interest or lien, or (b) the security interest or lien is enforceable against the asset after it has been sold to the buyer and the net contract price is zero [Com. Code § 6103(c)(5)].
- A general assignment for the benefit of creditors or to a subsequent transfer by the assignee [Com. Code § 6103(c)(6)].

[2] Sales in Course of Judicial or Administrative Proceeding

The Bulk Sales Law does not apply to a sale by an executor, administrator, receiver, trustee in bankruptcy, debtor in possession, or any public officer under judicial process [Com. Code § 6103(c)(7)], nor does it apply to a sale made in the course of judicial or administrative proceedings for the dissolution or reorganization of an organization [Com. Code § 6103(c)(8)].

[3] Sale Required by Law

A sale required by, and made pursuant to statute is not subject to the Bulk Sales Law [Com. Code § 6103(c)(13)].

[4] Buyer Assumes Known Claims

A sale to a buyer whose principal place of business is in the United States is not subject to the Bulk Sales Law if the buyer satisfies each of the following requirements [Com. Code § 6103(c)(9)]:

- Not earlier than 21 days before the date of the bulk sale (1) obtains from the seller a verified and dated list of claimants of whom the seller has notice three days before the seller sends or delivers the list to the buyer, or (2) conducts a reasonable inquiry to discover the claimants;

- Assumes in full the debts owed to claimants of whom the buyer has knowledge on the date the buyer receives the list of claimants from the seller or on the date the buyer completes the reasonable inquiry, as the case may be;

- Is not insolvent after the assumption; and

- Records and publishes notice of the assumption not later than 30 days after the date of the bulk sale in the manner provided in Com. Code § 6105 (for discussion of recording and publication requirements, see § 270.240[3]).

The notice of assumption must state each of the following [Com. Code § 6103(d)]:

- That a sale that may constitute a bulk sale has been or will be made;

- The date or prospective date of the bulk sale;

- The individual, partnership, or corporate names and the addresses of the seller and buyer;

- The address to which inquiries about the sale may be made, if different from the seller's address; and

- That the buyer has assumed or will assume in full the debts owed to claimants of whom the buyer has knowledge on the date the buyer receives the list of claimants from the seller or completes a reasonable inquiry to discover the claimants.

[5] Buyer Assumes All Seller's Debts

A sale to a buyer whose principal place of business is in the United States is not subject to the Bulk Sales Law if the buyer satisfies each of the following requirements [Com. Code § 6103(c)(10)]:

- Assumes in full the debts that were incurred in the seller's business before the date of the bulk sale;

- Is not insolvent after the assumption; and

- Records and publishes notice of the assumption not later than 30 days after the date of the bulk sale in the manner provided by Com. Code § 6105 (for discussion of recording and publication requirements, see § 270.240[3]).

The notice of assumption must state each of the following [Com. Code § 6103(e)]:

- That a sale that may constitute a bulk sale has been or will be made;
- The date or prospective date of the bulk sale;
- The individual, partnership, or corporate names and the addresses of the seller and buyer;
- The address to which inquiries about the sale may be made, if different from the seller's address; and
- That the buyer has assumed or will assume the debts that were incurred in the seller's business before the date of the bulk sale.

[6] Newly Organized Entity Assumes All Seller's Debt

A sale to a new organization that is organized to take over and continue the business of the seller and that has its principal place of business in the United States is not subject to the Bulk Sales Law if each of the following conditions are satisfied [Com. Code § 6103(c)(11)]:

- The buyer assumes in full the debts that were incurred in the seller's business before the date of the bulk sale;
- The seller receives nothing from the sale except an interest in the new organization that is subordinate to the claims against the organization arising from the assumption; and
- The buyer records and publishes notice of the assumption not later than 30 days after the date of the bulk sale in the manner provided in Com. Code § 6105 (for discussion of recording and publication requirements, see § 270.240[3]).

The required contents of the notice are the same as those required in a sale pursuant to Com. Code § 6103(c)(10), discussed in § 270.108[5] [Com. Code § 6103(e)].

[7] Sales for Less Than $10,000 or More Than $5 Million

A sale of assets is not subject to the Bulk Sales Law if the value of those assets, net of liens and security interests, is less than $10,000 [Com. Code § 6103(c)(12)(i)]. If a debt is secured by assets and other property of the seller, the net value of the assets is determined by subtracting from their value an amount equal to the product of the debt multiplied by a fraction, the numerator of which is the value of the assets on the date of the bulk sale and the denominator of which is the value of all property securing the debt on the date of the bulk sale [Com. Code § 6103(c)(12)(i)].

A sale of assets also is not subject to the Bulk Sales Law if the value of those assets on the date of the bulk-sale agreement is more than $5 million [Com. Code § 6103(c)(12)(ii)].

For purposes of this exception, the value of assets is presumed to be equal to the price the buyer agrees to pay for the assets. In a sale by auction or a sale conducted by a liquidator on the seller's behalf, however, the value of assets is presumed to be the amount the auctioneer or liquidator reasonably estimates the assets will bring at auction or on liquidation [Com. Code § 6103(f)].

[8] Sale and Lease Back

A transfer of personal property is not subject to the Bulk Sales Law if the personal property is leased back to the transferor immediately following the transfer and either (1) a financing statement was filed and notice of intended transfer was published in compliance with Civ. Code § 3440.1(h), or (2) the transferee purchased the property for value and in good faith so as to render the transfer exempt under Civ. Code § 3440.1(k) [Com. Code § 6103(c)(14)].

[9] Transfer of Liquor License

A transfer of a liquor license that is subject to and complies with Bus. & Prof. Code § 24070 et seq. is not subject to the Bulk Sales Law if the transferee records and publishes notice of the transfer at least 12 business days before the transfer is to be consummated in the manner provided in Com. Code § 6105 and the notice contains the information set forth in Com. Code § 6105(a)(1)-(4), inclusive [Com. Code § 6103(c)(15)]. For discussion of the recording and publication requirements, and the contents of the notice, see § 270.240[3], [4].

[10] Transfer of Goods in Warehouse

A transfer of goods in a warehouse is not subject to the Bulk Sales Law if a warehouse receipt has been issued by, and a copy of the receipt is kept at, the warehouse in which the goods are stored [Com. Code § 6103(c)(16)]. For further discussion of warehouses and warehouse receipts, see Ch. 213, Documents of Title .

§ 270.131 Decisions

[1] Action to Quiet Title

Trustee in bankruptcy seeking declaration that conveyance by debtor was void and to quiet title in debtor was not subject to statute of limitations; limitation was not applicable against grantor remaining in possession and therefore not applicable against trustee. In re Allustiarte (9th Cir. 1986) 786 F.2d 910, 913

In transferee's action to quiet title, defendant creditor who relies on defense of fraudulent conveyance is required to allege whether conveyance was intentionally fraudulent or made by insolvent without consideration. Winberry v. Lopez (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 672, 677, 3 Cal. Rptr. 245

[2] Action to Set Aside Fraudulent Transfer

[a] In General

Summary adjudication for plaintiff on causes of action seeking to set aside fraudulent transfers pursuant to Civ. Code § 3439.04(a), (b) was properly granted, despite defendant's assertion that privilege against self-incrimination precluded summary adjudication because he faced potential criminal prosecution arising from same facts and that court should have denied or continued motion instead. Fisher v. Gibson (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 275, 286-287, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 145

Cause of action on underlying debtor's indebtedness to creditor was permitted to be adjudicated in same action as one for setting aside fraudulent transfer. Ahmanson Bank & Trust Co. v. Tepper (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 333, 343, 74 Cal. Rptr. 774 ; Michal v. Adair (1944) 66 Cal. App. 2d 382, 389, 152 P.2d 490

If case is tried on theory of actual fraud, creditor is unable to subsequently claim constructive fraud predicated on insolvency and lack of receipt by debtor of reasonably equivalent value in exchange. Stearns v. Los Angeles City

School Dist. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 696, 729-730, 53 Cal. Rptr. 482

When there is transfer or agreement to transfer which may be in fraud of creditors, proof and establishment of fact of transfer is not binding on third-party creditor. Stearns v. Los Angeles City School Dist. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 696, 729, 53 Cal. Rptr. 482

Tenacity of purpose and diversity of effort on part of creditor in seeking to have fraudulent transfers set aside is likened to those employed in search for buried treasure, which it is. Rose v. Knapp (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 379, 380-381, 314 P.2d 812

Fraudulent transfer is void, not voidable, as to creditors. Strangman v. Duke (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 185, 191, 295 P.2d 12

Creditor by reason of fraudulent transfer obtains no right to possession of property transferred. Wagner v. Trout (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 248, 254, 268 P.2d 537

[b] Assignment

Assignment of right to set aside fraudulent transfer is permissible. Michal v. Adair (1944) 66 Cal. App. 2d 382, 388, 152 P.2d 490

[c] Award of Interest

In action to recover value of property transferred by bankrupt while insolvent, without consideration and, with actual intent to defraud creditors, awarding interest from date of transfer is proper under Civ. Code § 3288, since transfer is deemed void as well as fraudulent, and transferee is treated as constructive trustee and required to account for what he has received. Bass v. Youngblood (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 278, 289, 34 Cal. Rptr. 326

[d] Equitable Defenses

Unclean hands is defense in actions to set aside fraudulent conveyance. Freeman v. LaMorte (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 670, 674, 307 P.2d 734

[e] Jury Trial

Because (1) common-law right to trial by jury existed for fraudulent transfer claims when California Constitution was adopted in 1850, (2) the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act is cumulative to (and does not supersede) the common-law action for fraudulent transfer, and (3) the Legislature cannot in any event dispose of a common-law right to jury trial that existed when the California Constitution was adopted, the California Constitution continues to guaranty the right to jury trial in an action for fraudulent conveyance. Wisden v. Superior Court (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 750, 755-758, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 523

[f] Parties to Action

Spouse of transferee is not indispensable party to action to set aside fraudulent transfer when marriage did not occur until after transfer sought to be set aside or when transfer or conveyance specifies title taken by transferee as separate property. In re Allustiarte (9th Cir. 1986) 786 F.2d 910, 915-916

Transferor, though proper party defendant, is not necessary one. TWM Homes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 848, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887

Transferees are necessary parties defendant in action to set aside fraudulent conveyance or to have it declared void. T W M Homes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 848, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887 ; Heffernan v. Bennett & Armour (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 564, 586, 243 P.2d 846

[g] Procedural Prerequisites

Creditor is not required to reduce his or her claim to judgment before seeking benefit of remedy of right to have transfer set aside. Weisenburg v. Cragholm (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 892, 896, 97 Cal. Rptr. 862, 489 P.2d 1126

If there is actual fraud, creditor is able to maintain action to set aside transfer without showing that defendant has no other assets to satisfy judgment. Freeman v. LaMorte (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 670, 675, 307 P.2d 734

Creditor is unable without legal process to appropriate property fraudulently transferred by debtor for payment of debtor's obligations. Wagner v. Trout (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 248, 254, 268 P.2d 537

[h] Splitting Cause of Action

Plaintiff is not permitted to split his or her cause of action and to attack separately conveyance of real estate and secondly transfer of personal property. Heffernan v. Bennett & Armour (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 178, 184, 146 P.2d 482

[i] Statute of Limitations

If common law cause of action is brought, applicable statute of limitations is Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d) (providing three-year statute of limitations for actions for relief on ground of fraud or mistake); cause of action accrues when judgment against debtor is secured, or later if there was belated discovery. Macedo v. Bosio (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1050-1052, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1

[3] Burden of Proof

Defendant transferee moving for summary judgment is required to negate necessary element of plaintiff's case or to establish complete defense; therefore, summary judgment for defendant transferee was not proper when evidence was insufficient to negate either transferor's insolvency or lack of fair consideration. McKnight v. Faber (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 639, 645-647, 230 Cal. Rptr. 57

Defendant transferee was not entitled to summary judgment when no facts were presented from which court could determine whether note given by transferee was fair equivalent of interest conveyed. McKnight v. Faber (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 639, 646-647, 230 Cal. Rptr. 57

Defendant transferee was not entitled to summary judgment when no facts were presented from which court could determine present fair salable value of transferor's assets. McKnight v. Faber (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 639, 646-647, 230 Cal. Rptr. 57

[4] Conspiracy

Privilege of former Civ. Code § 47(2) (now Civ. Code § 47(b)) claimed by transferor's attorney with respect to misrepresentations made at time of allegedly spurious motion for new trial in action on underlying debt was not established without showing that statements were made in furtherance of litigation and to promote justice; fact that statements were made while litigation was pending was insufficient. McKnight v. Faber (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 639, 649-650, 230 Cal. Rptr. 57

[5] Creditors Permitted to Attack Transfer

[a] Interest Which May Be Reached

Creditor is entitled to have interest of his or her debtor in property at time of transfer subjected to creditor's claim. Ackerman v. Merle (1902) 137 Cal. 169, 171, 69 P. 983 ; Ahmanson Bank & Trust Co. v. Tepper (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 333, 344, 74 Cal. Rptr. 774

If debtor only holds property as trustee for beneficiary under resulting trust, transfer of that property by debtor to beneficiary is not subject to attack as fraudulent transfer. Owings v. Laugharn (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 789, 791, 128 P.2d 114

[b] Interest Which May Not Be Reached

General rule is that principles of fraudulent transfer do not apply to declarations of homestead, and fact that debtor filed such declaration to hinder and delay his or her creditors does not affect its validity. Lucci v. United Credit & Collection Co. (1934) 220 Cal. 492, 496, 31 P.2d 369 ; Putnam Sand & Gravel Co. v. Albers (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 722, 92 Cal. Rptr. 636

Transfer by judgment debtor of equity of redemption in property sold to creditor at execution sale is not fraudulent transfer; execution sale to creditor terminates creditor's lien (created by recording abstract of judgment). Fry v. Bihr, (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 248, 251-252, 85 Cal. Rptr. 742 ; Moore v. Hall (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 25, 29-30, 58 Cal. Rptr. 70 ; Siegel v. Farrar (1932) 120 Cal. App. 193, 196-197, 7 P.2d 319

Transfer of debtor's exempt property is not subject to attack by creditor. Burrows v. Jorgensen (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 644, 649, 323 P.2d 150

[c] Persons With Contingent Claims

Under Civ. Code § 3439.01 person with contingent claim is creditor, but once claim has been satisfied, that creditor has no standing to seek to have transfer set aside. Allard v. De Lorean (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 464, 466

[d] Required Injury

Creditor whose underlying claim is reduced to judgment which is subsequently unqualifiedly reversed is not entitled to have allegedly fraudulent transfer set aside. Weisenburg v. Cragholm (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 892, 895-897, 97 Cal. Rptr. 862, 489 P.2d 1126

Relationship of debtor and creditor arises in tort case at moment cause of action accrues. Hansen v. Cramer (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 321, 323, 245 P.2d 1059

To show injury from transfer, here by assignment of rents and profits from property which secured its debt, secured creditor is required to show that indebtedness owed to it is not fully secured. Hibernia Sav. & Loan Soc. v. Belcher (1935) 4 Cal. 2d 268, 274, 48 P.2d 681

Transfer in fraud of creditors is permitted to be attacked only by one who is injured by transfer; creditor does not sustain injury unless transfer puts beyond his or her reach property which he or she would otherwise be able to subject to payment of his or her debt. Haskins v. Certified Escrow & Mortgage Co. (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 688, 691, 216 P.2d 90

[6] Insolvency

Future child support payments should not be viewed as debt under Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act. Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 657, 670-672, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 74 P.3d 166

Fair value of alleged insolvent's assets is to be determined as of date of transfer. Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 376, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804

Solvency and not insolvency is presumed; for this reason, burden of proof as to insolvency is on party claiming it to be fact. Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 375, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804

Subsequent insolvency is not of itself sufficient foundation for inference of insolvency at time of or as result of transfer. Stearns v. Los Angeles City School Dist. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 696, 738, 53 Cal. Rptr. 482

Trust instrument which provides that trustee pay net income from trust estate to trustor for life and then pay accrued accumulated income to beneficiary and which renders decedent trustor's estate insolvent has effect of fraudulent transfer. Estate of Camm (1946) 76 Cal. App. 2d 104, 110, 172 P.2d 547

Transfers is not made in contemplation of insolvency if underlying debt is secured and alleged defrauded creditor has made no showing that indebtedness was not fully secured. Kirkpatrick v. Towers (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 251, 259, 140 P.2d 681

Amply secured debts are not to be taken into consideration for purpose of determining financial condition of grantor. Kirkpatrick v. Towers (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 251, 259, 140 P.2d 681

[7] Levying Execution on Property

Creditor is permitted to levy execution on property as if there had been no transfer. Strong v. Strong (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 540, 547, 140 P.2d 386 ; Kuzmicki v. Nelson (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 278, 280, 225 P.2d 233

[8] Liability of Transferee

[a] In General

Constructive trust for benefit of creditor or trustee in bankruptcy is properly imposed on property in hands of transferee when transfer was part of scheme to defraud creditors. In re Allustiarte (9th Cir. 1986) 786 F.2d 910, 913

Fraudulently conveyed asset which has been sold at trustee's sale is subject to being followed into whatever form it has been converted either on theory of following res into hands of constructive trustee or by applying kind of equitable conversion. Ahmanson Bank & Trust Co. v. Tepper (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 333, 344-345, 74 Cal. Rptr. 774

[b] Good Faith Transferee

Innocent grantee is required to account for everything he or she received under fraudulent transfer; such a grantee who returns to grantor or assignor all property is not personally liable to creditors for value of property returned. Cohen v. Heavey (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 766, 770-771, 68 Cal. Rptr. 180

In creditors' action against transferees, creditors are relegated to their rights against property and are unable to recover money damages from those who hold property unless transferors and transferees participated in scheme of misrepresentation against defrauded creditor. Stearns v. Los Angeles City School Dist. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 696, 719, 53 Cal. Rptr. 482

[c] Conspiring Transferee

Debtor and those who conspire with him or her to conceal assets for purpose of defrauding creditors are committing tort of conspiracy. Taylor v. S & M Lamp Co. (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 700, 706, 12 Cal. Rptr. 323

Fraudulent transferee who returned property to debtor is not relieved of responsibility for transfer if he or she is liable for conspiracy. Hickson v. Thielman (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 11, 15, 304 P.2d 122

[9] Lis Pendens

Entry of summary judgment in favor of defendant transferee did not automatically entitle defendant to expungement of lis pendens; after judgment, lis pendens remains until statutory ground for expungement is established. McKnight v. Faber (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 639, 651, 230 Cal. Rptr. 57

[10] Preferences

Transfer that appears to be lawful preference but is made with actual fraudulent intent pursuant to secret agreement under which grantor retains full beneficial interest is void. Kemp v. Lynch (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 457, 461, 65 P.2d 1316

Transfer of security interests in land by client to attorney for services was not fraudulent as to another creditor, even though transfer was preference that resulted in debtor being unable to satisfy debts of other creditors. Wyzard v. Goller (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 1185

In absence of fraud, preferential transfer of assets by debtor to creditors is valid unless subject to attack under federal bankruptcy law; rule is applicable to creditors of partnership. Commons v. Schine (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 141, 144, 110 Cal. Rptr. 606

Creditor who dominates and controls insolvent corporation is not permitted to use that power to secure advantage over other creditors of corporation; controller-dominator is liable to creditors of insolvent corporation for any preference he or she has taken for his or her benefit and to their disadvantage. Commons v. Schine (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 141, 144, 110 Cal. Rptr. 606

Rule permitting one creditor to be preferred over another has no application to situation in which debt of preferred creditor is not extinguished or diminished. Economy Refining & Serv. Co. v. Royal Nat'l Bank of N.Y. (1971) 20 Cal.

App. 3d 434, 442, 97 Cal. Rptr. 706

Pendency of creditor's action to enforce underlying indebtedness is not indicative of fraudulent intent if debtor is in position in which he or she must allow one creditor or another to obtain preference and there is no other evidence to indicate fraud. Arnold v. Hadgis (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 88, 92, 226 P.2d 641

Fact that preference of particular creditor hinders or delays other creditors in collection of their claims does not render void that preferential payment. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Postel (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 567, 572, 149 P.2d 183

[11] Reasonably Equivalent Value

[a] In General

Transfer of money to person who "invested" in Ponzi scheme after debtor formed fraudulent intent to operate Ponzi scheme was transfer for reasonably equivalent value, up to aggregate amount that transferee had paid to debtor, because transferee gave up claim for restitution that transferee had acquired on handing over money to debtor in belief that money was being invested; but any money that transferee received in addition to amount that transferee had paid to debtor would be fraudulent transfer as matter of law. AFI Holding, Inc. v. Mackenzie (9th Cir. 2008) 525 F.3d 700, 708-709 (restitution claim provides reasonably equivalent value); Santa Barbara Capital Mgmt. v. Neilson (In re Slatkin), 525 F.3d 805, 814-815 (payment of additional money is fraudulent transfer)

Civ. Code §§ 1614-1615 create presumption that execution of note is supported by consideration and placing burden of showing lack of consideration on other party; evidence that alleged lender's assets never totalled amount of loan was sufficient to establish lack of consideration. In re Allustiarte (9th Cir. 1986) 786 F.2d 910, 916

Whether or not reasonably equivalent value was received by debtor in exchange is to be determined from standpoint of creditor. Hansen v. Cramer (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 321, 323, 245 P.2d 1059

One test for lack of receipt of reasonably equivalent value is whether debtor is rendered execution proof by transfer; existence of intent of fraud on part of grantor or grantee is immaterial factor. Hansen v. Cramer (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 321, 325, 245 P.2d 1059

Exchange of $42,000 for $144,000 equity in $200,000 ranch is not reasonably equivalent value. Stearns v. Los Angeles City School Dist. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 696, 735, 53 Cal. Rptr. 482

Whether or not reasonably equivalent value was received by debtor in exchange is question of fact. Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 759, 767, 48 Cal. Rptr. 215

If property conveyed is valued in excess of mortgage, agreement on part of grantee to pay mortgage is not valuable consideration as against grantor's creditors. Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 759, 767, 48 Cal. Rptr. 215

What constitutes reasonably equivalent value is question of fact. Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 759, 767, 48 Cal. Rptr. 215

Because playing gambling games for money is illegal, consideration for payment of gambling loss is likewise illegal and is not receipt of reasonably equivalent value in exchange for monies paid. Tokar v. Redman (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 350, 354, 291 P.2d 987

[b] Antecedent Debts

Transfer made in good faith by insolvent in settlement or compromise of claim is not fraudulent for lack of proof of enforceability of underlying claim. Mayors v. C I R (1986) 785 F.2d 757, 761 (IRS attempt to set aside transfer)

Antecedent debt in support of transfer is required to be legally enforceable obligation of grantor; discharge of debt of another is not receipt of reasonably equivalent value by one who is not responsible therefor. Hansen v. Cramer (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 321, 324, 245 P.2d 1059

In fraudulent conveyance action brought by landlord against partners who took partnership draws rather than paying rent, timing of partnership draws (receipt of delayed draws) did not show fraudulent intent; money transferred in satisfaction of antecedent debts of partnership, i.e., overdue partnership draws, were transfers for value under Civ. Code § 3439.03. Annod Corporation v. Hamilton & Samuels (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1286, 1296-1297, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 924

Antecedent debt of $21,000 was reasonable value for 1982 transfer of one-quarter interest in real property even though same interest sold for $30,000 in 1985; comparable value established by 1979 sale of another quarter interest for $20,000. Barisich v. Lewis (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 12, 20, 275 Cal. Rptr. 331

Payment by debtor of obligation of another in good faith belief that he or she is legally responsible for that obligation is good consideration. Bank of California v. Virtue & Scheck, Inc. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1040, 190 Cal. Rptr. 54

Antecedent debt of corporation is not satisfied if corporation is dissolved and new corporation formed in its place is liable for that debt. Economy Refining & Service Co. v. Royal Nat'l Bank (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 434, 441, 97 Cal. Rptr. 706

Antecedent indebtedness which is disproportionately small compared with property transferred or new obligation entered into is not receipt of reasonably equivalent value. Pope v. National Aero Fin. Co. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 722, 728, 46 Cal. Rptr. 233

Payment which discharges obligation barred by statute of limitations is receipt of reasonably equivalent value if payment is made in good faith; that payment is not fraudulent transfer. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Postel (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 567, 572, 149 P.2d 183

[12] Specific Transfers

Transfer is void when debtor did not have requisite intent to convey and continued to exercise dominion and control over property allegedly conveyed. In re Allustiarte (9th Cir. 1986) 786 F.2d 910, 914-915

Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act applies to property transfers under marital settlement agreements. Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 657, 669, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 74 P.3d 166

Debtor is unable by any disposition of his or her own property to put same or income thereof beyond reach of his or her creditors, so long as right to receive and use it is retained. McColgan v. Magee, Inc. (1916) 172 Cal. 182, 186, 155 P. 995 ; Katz v. Driscoll (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 313, 321, 194 P.2d 822

Conveyance by insolvent debtor without receipt of reasonably equivalent value to himself and wife as joint tenants is fraudulent conveyance because on death debtor has effectively placed one-half of property beyond reach of creditors. Rupp v. Kahn (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 188, 195, 55 Cal. Rptr. 108

Payment of money in satisfaction of gambling debt is transfer. Tokar v. Redman (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 350, 354, 291 P.2d 987

Conveyance by mere record title holder to true owner is not fraudulent conveyance. Perske v. Perske (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 795, 800, 271 P.2d 528

[13] Statute of Limitations

Trustee in bankruptcy seeking declaration that conveyance by debtor was void and to quiet title in debtor is not subject to statute of limitations; under California law, limitation is not applicable against grantor remaining in possession and therefore not applicable against trustee. In re Allustiarte (9th Cir. 1986) 786 F.2d 910, 913

If common law cause of action is brought, applicable statute of limitations is Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d) (providing three-year statute of limitations for actions for relief on ground of fraud or mistake); cause of action accrues when judgment against debtor is secured, or later, if there was belated discovery. Macedo v. Bosio (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1050-1052, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1

Cause of action for fraudulent conveyance alleged to have been made in April 1984, and first pleaded in third amended complaint filed in August 1987, was not protected by doctrine of relation back, and was barred by three-year limitation period applicable under former law. Filmservice Laboratories, Inc. v. Harvey Bernhard Enterprises, Inc. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1297, 1309, 256 Cal. Rptr. 735

[14] Transfer Binding on Transferor

[a] In General

Transferor of property transferred to defraud creditors is unable to revoke transfer. Severance v. Knight-Counihan Co. (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 561, 568, 177 P.2d 4

Wrongful conduct of transferor in transferring properties under oral trust for sole purpose of defeating claims of his or her creditors bars that transferor from maintaining suit against subsequent transferee. Samuelson v. Ingraham (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 804, 806, 808, 77 Cal. Rptr. 750

Transfer in fraud of creditors binds on transferor. Slater v. Bielsky (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 523, 526, 6 Cal. Rptr. 683 ; Heffernan v. Bennett & Armour (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 564, 585, 243 P.2d 846

Title to property fraudulently transferred is vested in purported transferor insofar as rights of latter's creditors are concerned. Kuzmicki v. Nelson (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 278, 280, 225 P.2d 233

[b] Exceptions

Transferor who conveyed property to daughter with intent to defraud creditors (particularly one claimant of damages for tort) is entitled nevertheless to recover property from her heirs following daughter's death, when creditors were not actually defrauded (and tort claim eventually proved unmeritorious). Estate of Blanco (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 826, 830-838, 150 Cal. Rptr. 645

[15] Transferee's Rights

[a] Good Faith Transferee

When transfer is only constructively fraudulent, transferee is entitled to credit for sum expended in paying other debts. Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 591, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425

Judgment setting aside fraudulent transfer affects rights of creditor and not rights of transferee as against his or her transferor unless transferee was also active participant in fraud. Ahmanson Bank & Trust Co. v. Tepper (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 333, 344, 74 Cal. Rptr. 774

Former Civ. Code § 3439.09(b) (now Civ. Code § 3439.08(d)) protecting innocent purchaser or encumbrancer who without actual fraudulent intent has given less than reasonably equivalent value confers on purchaser lien on property to secure repayment of his or her investment. Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 759, 771, 48 Cal. Rptr. 215

[b] Fraudulent Transferee

Fraudulent transferee is not entitled to reimbursement for outlays made in connection with acquisition of property in fraud of creditors. Butler v. San Francisco Gas & Elec. Co. (1914) 168 Cal. 32, 39, 141 P. 818

Conveyance of family residence by quitclaim deed from husband to wife was fraudulent; the community property asset was not listed in husband's bankruptcy estate, but was prebankruptcy community property and could be looked to by creditor for payment; although husband was discharged from personal liability on debt to creditor, wife remained personally liable. Sanwa Bank California v. Chang (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1314, 1317-1319, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330

If transferee had notice of and was knowing party to fraud, transfer is void as between transferor and transferee. Ahmanson Bank & Trust Co. v. Tepper (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 333, 344, 74 Cal. Rptr. 774

[16] Transfers Made Leaving Unreasonably Small Remaining Assets

Although argument can be made that leveraged buyout (LBO) that leaves surviving entity with insufficient resources to pay creditors may be fraudulent under Civ. Code § 3439.05, Legislature, in enacting predecessor to Civ. Code § 3439.05, did not intend it to cover LBO; fraudulent conveyance law was designed to protect creditors from secret transactions, and LBO was sufficiently publicized to allow creditors opportunity to obtain financial information before extending credit. Kupetz v. Wolf (9th Cir. 1988) 845 F.2d 842, 849-850

Burden on plaintiff to show that defendant debtor was left with unreasonably small capital under former Civ. Code § 3439.05 (now see Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(2)(A) (debtor's remaining assets compared to business or transaction)) after executing conveyance to transferee. Holcomb v. Nunes (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 776, 781, 283 P.2d 301

[17] Transfers Made With Actual Fraudulent Intent

[a] In General

If parties to leveraged buyout (LBO) fully intend to hinder general creditors and benefit selling shareholders, conveyance is fraudulent under Civ. Code § 3439.07; but when selling shareholders had no intent to defraud and did not know how buyer planned to finance purchase, no creditors existed on date of purchase, and only creditors complaining became creditors after transfer, LBO was not fraudulent conveyance. Kupetz v. Wolf (9th Cir. 1988) 845 F.2d 842, 846-850

Actual intent to defraud does not require finding that transferor acted maliciously with desire to cause harm to creditor; intent to prefer certain creditors over others as fraudulent rather than as valid preference because, although assets remained available to preferred creditors, debt to preferred creditors was not diminished or satisfied. Economy Refining & Serv. Co. v. Royal Nat'l Bank of N.Y. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 434, 441-442, 97 Cal. Rptr. 706

Solvency of transferor is immaterial in establishing actual intent to defraud creditors under former Civ. Code § 3439.07 (now see Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)). Stearns v. Los Angeles City School Dist. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 696, 727, 53 Cal. Rptr. 482

[b] Burden of Proof

Burden of proof to establish fraudulent intent of tranferor is by preponderance of evidence. Liodas v. Sahadi (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 278, 286-293, 137 Cal. Rptr. 635, 562 P.2d 316 (overruling contrary holding of Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 588, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425 and cases decided thereunder on standard of proof)

Proof of fraud is permitted to be made by circumstantial evidence. Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 588, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425

Party who claims transfer to be fraudulent has burden of showing transferor's fraudulent intent and knowledge thereof by transferee. Vaughn v. Coccimiglio (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 676, 679, 50 Cal. Rptr. 876

Whether transfer is made with actual intent to defraud creditors is question of fact. TWM Homes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 844, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887

Because of difficulty of direct proof, in most cases proof of actual intent to defraud creditors consists of inferences from circumstances surrounding transaction and relationship and interests of parties. Slater v. Bielsky (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 523, 526, 6 Cal. Rptr. 683

[c] Evidence of Fraudulent Intent

[i] Particular Circumstances and Inferences

Findings of fraud are not supported by evidence of circumstances surrounding alleged fraudulent transfer which comport equally with theory of honesty and fair dealing; speed of transfer does not permit inference of fraud when speed was required to protect interests of grantor. Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 588, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425

Finding that purported transfer of partnership interest was fraudulent was supported by evidence that formalities were not observed in transfering interest, and transferror partner remained as signatory on partnership's bank account after purported withdrawl. Eddy v. Temkin (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 1115, 1118-1121,

Evidence of secret trust or reservation of interest in grantor is persuasive evidence, but not conclusive presumption, of fraud. Bank of California v. Virtue & Scheck, Inc. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1034-1039, 190 Cal. Rptr. 54

Fraud is provable by inferences from circumstances surrounding transaction, relationship and interest of parties. Neumeyer v. Crown Funding Corp. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 178, 183, 128 Cal. Rptr. 366 ; Burns v. Radoicich (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 697, 700-701, 176 P.2d 77

Proof of solvency does not preclude finding of actual intent to defraud, but as relevant to issue of intent. Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 378, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804

When confidential relation is shown to exist, parties are held to fuller and stricter proof of consideration, and of fairness of transaction. Wood v. Kaplan (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 227, 231, 2 Cal. Rptr. 917

Fact that transfer left transferor insolvent raises presumption that conveyance was actually fraudulent. Wood v. Kaplan (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 227, 230, 2 Cal. Rptr. 917

Transfers of almost all of transferor's nonexempt property indicate of intent to defraud creditors. Burrows v. Jorgensen (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 644, 648, 323 P.2d 150

Indicia of fraud, though insufficient when considered separately, may provide sufficient evidence of fraudulent intent when considered together. Burns v. Radoicich (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 697, 700-701, 176 P.2d 77

[ii] Transfers to Relations

Transfers between close relatives are not presumed to be fraudulent per se, but when confidential relationship exists, fuller and stricter proof of consideration and fairness of transaction are required. Kirkland v. Risso (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 971, 978-979, 159 Cal. Rptr. 798 ; Wood v. Kaplan (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 227, 231, 2 Cal. Rptr. 917

Relationship of parent and child, when coupled with other suspicious circumstances, such as fact that transfer rendered transferor insolvent, is sufficient to raise inference of fraud in transfer. Wood v. Kaplan (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 227, 230-231, 2 Cal. Rptr. 917

Transfer from debtor to relative without consideration and which renders debtor insolvent is presumptively fraudulent. Hickson v. Thielman (1968) 147 Cal. App. 2d 11, 15, 304 P.2d 122

Voluntary transfer made by debtor to member of his or her family while insolvent or in contemplation of insolvency, is conclusively presumed to be fraudulent as to existing creditors. Menick v. Goldy (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 542, 547, 280 P.2d 844

Relationship between transferor and transferee does not justify inference of fraud in transfer, but is fact which allows greater weight than would otherwise attach to be given to other circumstances, if any appear. Burns v. Radoicich (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 697, 700-701, 176 P.2d 77

[d] Transferee's Knowledge

Knowledge of transferee who took transferor's interest in demolition contract when transferor was having trouble completing job and paying bills related to contract was insufficient basis for finding fraudulent intent on part of transferee when transferee agreed to pay and did pay all claims of creditors of transferor arising from that job. Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 587-588, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425

No inference of fraudulent intent on part of transferee can be drawn from speed of transfer in view of fact that transferor had received notice from other party that it would cancel contract and complete it from proceeds of performance bond unless contractor/transferor made other arrangements to complete job. Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 588, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425

Transfer made for reasonably equivalent value was not permitted to be attacked by transferor's creditor, even though transaction was entered into by debtor with intent to delay or defraud creditor, unless transferee also intended or participated in or had knowledge of fraudulent intent. Kuhlman v. Pacific States S. & L. Co. (1940) 17 Cal. 2d 820, 821-822, 112 P.2d 620 ; Enos v. Picacho Gold Mining Co. (1943) 56 Cal. App. 2d 765, 774, 133 P.2d 663

When there is evidence of common design between transferor and transferee to defraud creditors, declarations of transferor subsequent to transfer are admissable. McGee v. Allen (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 468, 476, 60 P.2d 1026

Transferee's knowledge of transferor's fraudulent intent is insufficient if transferee has no notice of facts and circumstances that would induce prudent person to inquire into fraudulent purpose. Boness v. Richardson Mineral Springs (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 251, 261, 296 P.2d 581

Deed, even though supported by consideration, is permitted to be set aside as fraudulent if transferee had knowledge of transferor's fraudulent intent and intended to assist in fraudulent purpose, such as by agreeing to hold land in secret trust. Knapp v. Elliott (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 667, 673, 184 P.2d 934

B. Transfers Without Delivery And Change Of Possession

23-270 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 270.151

§ 270.151 Decisions

[1] Delivery If Transferor Is Cotenant

Cotenant in sole possession of property who sells his or her interest in such property is required to transfer actual possession of property in order to protect transferee from creditors of cotenant. Brown v. O'Neal (1892) 95 Cal. 262, 266, 30 P. 538 ; Haster v. Blair (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 896, 899, 107 P.2d 933

If other cotenants are in possession of property in which one contenant sells his or her interest, such contenant is permitted to make valid sale without placing his or her transferee in custody of property. Brown v. O'Neal (1892) 95 Cal. 262, 266, 30 P. 538

[2] Impracticality of Actual Delivery

Because physical delivery of cattle is practicable, tagging and segregation was not sufficient constructive delivery. In re Black & White Cattle Co. (9th Cir. 1986) 783 F.2d 1454, 1458-1459

[3] Purpose of Requiring Delivery and Actual Change of Possession

When evidence shows no apparent change in possession of automobile, fact that title has changed and transferee in partial possession of it does not render transfer free from attack by creditor. Dot Records, Inc. v. Freeman (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 204, 207-208, 55 Cal. Rptr. 455

13. Defendants _____ [name] and _____ [name] did the acts and things herein alleged pursuant to, and in furtherance of, the conspiracy and agreement alleged above.

14. As a proximate result of the wrongful acts herein alleged, plaintiff has been generally damaged in the sum of $_____.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use by a creditor in an action to set aside a transfer or conveyance or annul an obligation which was made by a defendant transferor with actual intent to delay, hinder, or defraud plaintiff in the collection of his or her claim against the transferor [see Civ. Code §§ 3439.04, 3439.07(a)(1)]. The form may be used by a creditor with either a matured or an unmatured claim or by a creditor who has reduced his or her claim against the transferor to judgment [see Civ. Code § 3439.07(a) (remedies available); see also Civ. Code § 3439.01(b), (c) (claim and creditor defined); Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 369, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804 (claim reduced to judgment)].

The form also contains a second cause of action for conspiracy for use against a transferee or obligee who knowingly conspired or participated with the transferor to defraud plaintiff [see Holmes v. Hatch (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 376, 386, 80 P.2d 70 ; Taylor v. S & M Lamp Co. (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 700, 706, 712-713, 12 Cal. Rptr. 323] . The second cause of action should be used if plaintiff's damages for conspiracy would exceed those available under Civ. Code §§ 3439-3439.12.

If the plaintiff is the holder of a matured claim against the defendant transferor which has not been reduced to judgment, this complaint may be combined with a cause of action on the underlying claim [see Ahmanson Bank & Trust Co. v. Tepper (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 333, 343, 74 Cal. Rptr. 774] .

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges in part that the plaintiff is a creditor of the defendant transferor (Paragraph 3) [see Civ. Code § 3439.07; Hansen v. Cramer (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 321, 323, 245 P.2d 1059] , and that the plaintiff's claim is unmatured, has matured, or has been reduced to judgment [Civ. Code §§ 3439.01(b), 3439.04, 3439.07(a); Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 369, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804] . Although there is no requirement that the creditor reduce his or her claim to judgment before bringing an action to set aside a fraudulent transfer or annul a fraudulent obligation [see Rupp v. Kahn (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 188, 191, 197, 55 Cal. Rptr. 108] , alternative allegations are included to distinguish the status of the particular plaintiff's underlying claim (alternative Paragraphs 4). If a transfer is involved rather than an obligation, or if an obligation was incurred to transfer specific property, optional Paragraph 5 should be used to allege the previous ownership of that property by defendant transferor or obligor [see Civ. Code § 3439.01(i) (definition of transfer as including payment of money); Tokar v. Redman (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 350, 354, 291 P.2d 987 (payment of gambling debt as transfer); see also Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No.

4204 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)].

The complaint further alleges the transfer or obligation (alternative Paragraphs 6), the specific intent of the tranferor or obligor to defraud, hinder, or delay plaintiff (Paragraph 7) [see Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)], and the facts establishing that the transfer or obligation was made or incurred without receipt by the debtor of consideration of reasonably equivalent value (Paragraph 8) [see Civ. Code § 3439.03 (definition of value)]. If no allegation is made that reasonably equivalent consideration was not received in exchange for the property or obligation, plaintiff creditor must allege that the transferor's intent to defraud plaintiff was known to the transferee at the time of the transfer or incurring of the obligation (optional Paragraph 9) [Kuhlman v. Pacific States S. & L. Co. (1940) 17 Cal. 2d 820, 821-822, 112 P.2d 620 ; McKnight v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 291, 299, 215 Cal. Rptr. 909 (if transferee participates in fraudulent transfer with knowledge or intent to assist transferor to defraud or hinder creditor, transfer as fraudulent even if full value is given in consideration)].

If the debtor is a partnership, counsel should insert capacity allegations stating the individual names of the partners, the partnership name, that they did business under the partnership name, and that they are being sued individually and by the partnership name pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 369.5 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 369.5; see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used , and Ch. 402, Partnerships: Actions Between General Partners or Partnerships and Third Parties , § 402.12; Ch. 405, Partnerships: Actions Between Limited Partners or Partnerships and Third Parties, § 405.12; see also § 270.192]. Additionally, Paragraph 3 should be modified to set forth the name of the partner who incurred the claim and to allege that in so doing he or she was acting for and on behalf of the partnership and as its agent within the scope of his or her authority [see Corp. Code § 16301].Similarly, Paragraph 6 should be modified to set forth the name of the partner who made the fraudulent transfer or incurred the fraudulent obligation and to allege that in so doing he or she was acting for and on behalf of the partnership and as its agent within the scope of his or her authority [see Corp. Code § 16305(a)].

This complaint contains a Second Cause of Action for conspiracy for use against a transferee or obligee who knowingly participated in the plan and agreed to aid the debtor, often for the transferee's benefit too. This cause of action alleges the formation and operation of the conspiracy (Paragraph 11) [see Orloff v. Metropolitan Trust Co. (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 484, 488, 110 P.2d 396] , the wrongful act of defrauding plaintiff as a creditor (Paragraphs 12 and 13) [see Taylor v. S & M Lamp Co. (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 700, 706, 12 Cal. Rptr. 323] , the defendants transferor's and transferee's knowledge of the conspiracy and its unlawful purpose (Paragraphs 8, 11, and 13) [see Cohen v. Heavey (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 766, 771, 68 Cal. Rptr. 180 ; Taylor v. S & M Lamp Co. (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 700, 706, 12 Cal. Rptr. 323] , damage resulting from the wrongful act (Paragraphs 14 and 15) [see Taylor v. S & M Lamp Co. (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 700, 705, 706, 12 Cal. Rptr. 323] , and the basis for punitive damages (optional Paragraph 16) [see Civ. Code § 3294].

[4] Jurisdiction

An action to set aside a fraudulent transfer has traditionally been considered an equitable action [see Stearns v. Los Angeles City School Dist. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 696, 719, 53 Cal. Rptr. 482 ; Wagner v. Trout (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 248, 254, 268 P.2d 537 ; but see Civ. Code § 3439.08(b), (c) and discussion in § 270.44[1]]. An exception to the equitable action theory, even under prior law, allowed a money judgment to be entered against a conspiring transferee who subsequently sold the property making it unavailable for satisfaction of the creditor's underlying debt [Flowers & Sons Development Corp. v. Municipal Court (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 818, 825, 150 Cal. Rptr. 555 ; see § 270.196]. If an action to set aside a fraudulent transfer is considered an equitable remedy, it could be handled as a limited civil case only if the property fraudulently transferred is valued at not more than $25,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(b)(1); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(7)(A), 580(b)(4), 1060 (declaratory relief in action that is otherwise limited civil case)]. Otherwise, the action must be brought in the superior court as a case of unlimited jurisdiction [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10].

[5] Venue

An action to set aside a fraudulent conveyance of real property has been considered local in nature since the court is in effect determining a right or interest in real property and the effect of a judgment for the plaintiff would be to reinvest the title to the property in the debtor to the extent of the debtor's obligation to the plaintiff [Rice v. Schubert (1951) 101 Cal. App. 2d 638, 640-642, 226 P.2d 50] . The applicable venue provision for such an action is thus contained in Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(1), which provides that subject to the power of the court to transfer actions and proceedings as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 397, the county in which the real property, which is the subject of the action, or some part thereof, is situated, is the proper county for the trial for such an action [see Rice v. Schubert (1951) 101 Cal. App. 2d 638, 640-642, 226 P.2d 50] .

However, when the plaintiff's underlying claim has already been reduced to judgment, the action has been considered one in the nature of a creditor's bill in aid of execution. The primary purpose of such an action is to redress the frustration of the plaintiff creditor's execution and, therefore, the judgment would not act directly on the land. Such an action, being transitory in nature, as is an action to set aside a fraudulent transfer of personal property, may be properly tried in the county in which the defendants or some of them reside at the commencement of the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395; Los Angeles City School Dist. v. Redwood Empire Title Co. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 398, 402-403, 23 Cal. Rptr. 662 ; for discussion and forms relating to creditor's suits, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments].

Finally, it should be noted that if the action to set aside the fraudulent conveyance involves a corporate defendant, Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5, providing that a corporation or association may be sued in the county where the corporation's principal place of business is situated, may apply, regardless of whether the action is considered local or transitory in nature. The predecessor constitutional section to Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5, Cal. Const., art. XII, § 16, has been held controlling [Los Angeles City School Dist. v. Redwood Empire Title Co. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 398, 403, 23 Cal. Rptr. 662] .

An action to set aside a fraudulent transfer on the ground that it was made with actual intent to defraud, hinder, or delay a creditor must be brought within four years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred, or, if later, within one year after the transfer or obligation was or could reasonably have been discovered by the claimant [Civ. Code § 3439.09(a); Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4208 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)]. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, an action to set aside a fraudulent transfer must be brought within seven years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred [Civ. Code § 3439.09(c); Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4208 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)].

The Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act is not the exclusive remedy by which fraudulent conveyances and transfers may be attacked; they may also be attacked by a common law action. If such an action is brought, the applicable statute of limitations is Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d) (providing three-year statute of limitations for actions for relief on ground of fraud or mistake) and the cause of action accrues not when the fraudulent transfer occurs, but when the judgment against the debtor is secured (or later, if there was belated discovery) [Macedo v. Bosio (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1050-1052, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (following principles set forth in Cortez v. Vogt (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 917, 937, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 841); see § 270.49].

If an action to set aside a fraudulent transfer is considered an equitable action, rather than an action for money as is arguably authorized by Civ. Code § 3439.08(b), (c) (discussed in § 270.44[1]), the creditor must also be aware of the possiblity of being barred by laches [see Heffernan v. Bennett & Armour (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 564, 583, 243 P.2d 846 ; Pedro v. Soares (1937) 18 Cal. App. 2d 600, 610, 64 P.2d 776] . Laches is applied only when the delay in commencing the action was unnecessary and caused some injury to the defendant [see Pedro v. Soares (1937) 18 Cal. App. 2d 600, 610-611, 64 P.2d 776] .

[7] Necessary Party Defendants

The transferee of a fraudulent transfer is a necessary party defendant in an action to set aside the fraudulent transfer [TWM Homes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 848, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887] since the residue of the property fraudulently transferred is returned to the defendant transferee after the claim of the plaintiff creditor is satisfied [see Civ. Code § 3439.08(b)-(d); Heffernan v. Bennett & Armour (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 564, 586, 243 P.2d 846 ; Liuzza v. Bell (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d 417, 430, 104 P.2d 1095] . The transferor, although a proper party defendant, is not a necessary one, since he or she has reserved no interest, legal or equitable, in the property conveyed [see TWM Homes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 848, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887 ; Liuzza v. Bell (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d 417, 424, 104 P.2d 1095] .

[8] Other Remedies

The primary relief granted to a creditor in his or her action to have set aside a fraudulent transfer is a primary lien imposed on the property conveyed to secure payment of the creditor's claim [see Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 759, 771, 48 Cal. Rptr. 215] . The transferee may be declared a constructive trustee of the asset and may be required to account for anything he or she received [see McKnight v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 291, 295-300, 215 Cal. Rptr. 909 ; Bass v. Youngblood (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 278, 289, 34 Cal. Rptr. 326] .

The creditor, whether or not his or her claim has matured, may seek attachment and other provisional remedies set forth at Code Civ. Proc. §§ 481.010-493.060 in connection with an action to set aside the fraudulent transfer or obligation [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(2)]. If this complaint is combined with a cause of action on the underlying claim, attachment may be had if it would otherwise be available in an action on the underlying claim [Civ. Code § 3439.07(b)].

In addition, the creditor, whether the holder of a mature claim or a claim which has not matured may also move for the appointment of a receiver to take over the management and control of the property or its proceeds [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(3)(B); Burrows v. Jorgensen (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 644, 648, 323 P.2d 150] . A receiver may be appointed by the court in which an action or proceeding is pending, or by a judge of the court, in any of the following cases (among others):

- In an action by creditor to subject any property or fund to the creditor's claim, when it is shown that the property or fund is in danger of being lost, removed, or materially injured [Code Civ. Proc. § 564(b)(1)];

- After judgment, to dispose of the property according to the judgment, or to preserve it during the pendency of an appeal [Code Civ. Proc. § 564(b)(4)];

- In all other cases when necessary to preserve the property or rights of any party [Code Civ. Proc. § 564(b)(9)].

For further discussion and forms for allegations, prayers, and orders for the appointment of receivers, see Ch. 486, Receivers .

In addition, the creditor, whether or not his or her claim has matured, and subject to applicable principles of equity and rules of civil procedure, may seek an injunction against the debtor or a transferee, or both, or restraining further disposition of the asset or its proceeds [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(3)(A); see San Francisco v. Market S. R. Co. (1950) 95 Cal. App. 2d 648, 655-658, 213 P.2d 780 (request for preliminary injunction based on threat to distribute liquidating dividend by defendant corporation to its stockholders without provision for payment of outstanding tort claims denied when complaint was unverified and failed adequately to show imminent violation)]. The court may make any order which the circumstances of the case may require [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(3)(C)].

[9] Recordation of Lis Pendens

At the time the creditor files an action to set aside a fraudulent conveyance, a notice of lis pendens should be recorded and served on the necessary parties [see Code Civ. Proc. § 409 et seq.; McKnight v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 291, 295-300, 215 Cal. Rptr. 909 (lis pendens suppported by verified complaint to set aside fraudulent conveyance and impose constructive trust)]. A successful fraudulent conveyance claim requesting relief pursuant to Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(1) can result in the voiding of a transfer of title of specific real property. By definition, the voiding of a transfer of real property will affect the title to or possession of real property. Clearly such a fraudulent conveyance action "affects title to, or the right to possession of" real property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 405.4] and is therefore a real property claim for purposes of the lis pendens statutes. The complaint must adequately plead the fraudulent conveyance claim by alleging that the defendant transferred specified real property with the intent to defraud; for instance, "and defendant made this transfer with the actual intent to hinder, delay, and/or defraud all of defendant's creditors in the collection of their claims." The complaint also should ask the court to void the transfer of the specified property to the extent necessary to satisfy the claim in the complaint [Kirkeby v. Superior Court (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 642, 649-650 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 805, 93 P.3d 395] .

Once the lis pendens has been recorded, it imparts constructive notice to anyone who could otherwise acquire an interest in the property superior to the plaintiff's by purchasing from the grantee for value and without notice of plaintiff's claim [see Ahmanson Bank & Trust Co. v. Tepper (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 333, 341-342, 74 Cal. Rptr. 774] . For a discussion of the requirements for recording a notice of lis pendens and forms for such notices, see Ch. 348, Lis Pendens .

[10] Undertaking to Release Property

On the filing of an action seeking relief from a fraudulent transfer, the transferee may file an undertaking permitting him or her to transfer, convey, encumber, or otherwise dispose of the property unaffected by the action or the judgment rendered [Civ. Code § 3446]. The undertaking must be for the lesser of double the value of the property or double the amount of the creditor's claim in the action [Civ. Code § 3448]. It requires that if the transfer or obligation is determined to be fraudulent, the transferee pay the creditor the lesser of the value of the property as estimated in the undertaking or the amount determined in the action to be due and owing to the creditor by the transferor or obligor [Civ. Code § 3447]. The procedures for objecting to the undertaking or the sureties on the undertaking are contained in the Bond and Undertaking Law [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 995.010-996.560; see also Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings].

[11] State Statutes

Transfer made or obligation incurred with actual intent to defraud either present or future creditors is fraudulent as to both present and future creditors. Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)

Creditor is permitted to maintain action to have fraudulent transfer or obligation set aside or annulled to extent necessary to satisfy claim except against purchaser or encumbrancer who gave reasonably equivalent value without knowledge of fraud at time of purchase. Civ. Code §§ 3439.04(a), 3439.07(a)(1), 3439.08

Undertaking to free property subject to fraudulent transfer action. Civ. Code § 3445 et seq.

[12] Decisions

[a] Elements of Conspiracy Action

Civil liability for conspiracy exists when conspiracy has been formed and operated to accomplish by concerted action unlawful action or purpose or lawful purpose by unlawful means. Taylor v. S & M Lamp Co. (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 700, 706, 12 Cal. Rptr. 323

Contrary to public policy for debtor to transfer or conceal property for purpose of defrauding creditors. Taylor v. S & M Lamp Co. (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 700, 706, 12 Cal. Rptr. 323

[b] Elements of Fraudulent Transfer Action

Failure of complaint to allege that consideration was inadequate or that transferee intended or participated in or had knowledge of transferor's fraudulent intent was not stating cause of action to set aside actually fraudulent transfer. Kuhlman v. Pacific States S. & L. Co. (1940) 17 Cal. 2d 820, 821-822, 112 P.2d 620 (decided under law as it existed prior to 1939 amendments)

Creditor is not required to reduce claim to judgment before maintaining action to set aside fraudulent transfer. Rupp v. Kahn (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 188, 197, 55 Cal. Rptr. 108

[c] Nature of Action

Action is neither on underlying contract nor on judgment but is equitable relief against obstruction caused by transfers which hinder creditor in satisfaction of his or her claim by ordinary process of law. Fleischmann v. Lotito (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 365, 366, 57 P.2d 922

[d] Parties to Action

Transferee is necessary party in action to set aside fraudulent transfer. TWM Homes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 848, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887 ; Heffernan v. Bennett & Armour (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 564, 586, 243 P.2d 846

Transferor, even though proper party defendant, is not necessary one. T W M Homes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 848, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887

[e] Privilege Against Self-Incrimination

Summary adjudication for plaintiff on causes of action seeking to set aside fraudulent transfers pursuant to Civ. Code § 3439.04(a), (b) was properly granted, despite defendant's assertion that privilege against self-incrimination precluded summary adjudication because he faced potential criminal prosecution arising from same facts, and court should have denied or continued motion instead. Fisher v. Gibson (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 275, 286-287, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 145

[f] Receivership

Code Civ. Proc. § 564(b)(1), (4), and (9) authorize appointment of receiver in actions to set aside fraudulent transfers. Burrows v. Jorgensen (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 644, 648, 323 P.2d 150

[g] Recovery of Interest

Amount of plaintiff's lien imposed on property fraudulently transferred to secure repayment of his or her claim includes interest on money judgment from date of entry. Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 759, 771, 48 Cal. Rptr. 215

In action to recover value of property fraudulently transferred by bankrupt, award of interest from date of transfer is proper exercise of court's discretion under Civ. Code § 3288 (awarding of interest in actions based on fraud) since transfer is deemed void as well as fraudulent, and transferee is treated as constructive trustee who is required to account for what he has received. Bass v. Youngblood (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 278, 289, 34 Cal. Rptr. 326

[h] Splitting Cause of Action

Plaintiff is not permitted to split his or her cause of action and to attack separately conveyance of real estate as well as transfer of personal property. Heffernan v. Bennett & Armour (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 178, 184, 146 P.2d 482

[i] Venue

Action to set aside fraudulent conveyance of real property is considered local in nature, and applicable venue provision, therefore, as contained in Code Civ. Proc. § 392, which provides that county in which real property or some part thereof is situated is proper county for trial of action. Rice v. Schubert (1951) 101 Cal. App. 2d 638, 640-642, 226 P.2d 50

When fraudulent conveyance action is not considered action to enforce lien on real property, but bill in aid of execution, action is considered transitory in nature and normal venue provisions are applicable. Los Angeles City School Dist. v. Redwood Empire Title Co. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 398, 402-403, 23 Cal. Rptr. 662

§ 270.191 Allegation--In Complaint to Set Aside Fraudulent Transfer or Obligation [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)]--Transfer Made or Obligation Incurred by Insolvent Other Than Partnership [Civ. Code §§ 3439.02(a), (c)-(e), 3439.05]

[1] FORM Allegation--In Complaint to Set Aside Fraudulent Transfer or Obligation [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)]--Transfer Made or Obligation Incurred by Insolvent Other Than Partnership [Civ. Code §§ 3439.02(a), (c)-(e), 3439.05]

1. On or about _____ [date], the date on which the _____ [aforementioned transfer was made or above-described obligation was incurred], defendant _____ [name of transferor] had incurred an extensive indebtedness [in addition to the above-described obligation]. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that] [t]he obligations of defendant _____ [name of transferor], other than the above-described claim of plaintiff, included both matured and unmatured claims.

2. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that] [d]efendant _____ [name of transferor] had paid neither the whole nor any part of his/her indebtedness owed to creditors holding any such matured claims [except the sum of $_____] and that the total fair value of such matured claims was at least $_____. In addition, defendant _____ [name of transferor] was potentially indebted to other creditors holding outstanding claims against him/her which had not yet matured with a total fair value of at least $_____. Together, the fair value of defendant _____'s [name of transferor] potential liability for all his/her existing debts was at least $_____.

[EITHER]

3. [Plaintiff is (further) informed and believes and thereon alleges that] _____ [as a result of the _____ (making of the aforementioned transfer or incurring of the above-described obligation), defendant _____ (name of transferor) thereby rendered himself/herself insolvent or defendant _____ (name of transferor) at the time of the _____ (making of the aforementioned transfer or incurring of the above-described obligation) was insolvent] in that _____ [at fair valuations, the sum of defendant _____'s (name of transferor) debts was greater than all of his/her/its assets and/or defendant _____ (name of transferor) was generally not paying his/her debts as they became due].

[OR]

3. Plaintiff is [further] informed and believes and thereon alleges that defendant _____ [name of transferor] was insolvent at the time of the _____ [making of the aforementioned transfer or incurring of the above-described obligation] since plaintiff has instituted an extensive search for but has found neither defendant _____ [name of transferor] nor any assets which defendant _____ [name of transferor] may have had at the time of the _____ [making of the aforementioned transfer or incurring of the above-described obligation] against which plaintiff could have satisfied his/her claim.

[2] Use of Form

These allegations may be used in place of Paragraph 7 of the First Cause of Action of § 270.190[1], in a creditor's action to set aside a transfer or annul an obligation made or incurred by the creditor's debtor for less than reasonably equivalent value and who was insolvent at the time of the transfer or obligation or was rendered insolvent thereby [see Civ. Code § 3439.05; Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4203 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)]. In addition, they may be included as a separate cause of action in the creditor's complaint to set aside a transfer or annul an obligation made with actual fraudulent intent as set forth in see § 270.190 [see Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 374-379, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804] .

Although a plaintiff may be a creditor holding a matured claim or a claim which has not matured against the transferor, these allegations may be used only by a plaintiff whose claim arose before the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred who was a creditor at the time of the making of the conveyance or incurring of the obligation; and this fact must be alleged in plaintiff's complaint [Civ. Code § 3439.05; see Pope v. National Aero Fin. Co. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 722, 728, 46 Cal. Rptr. 233 ; TWM Homes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 843, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887 ; Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4203 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)].

[3] Alleging Debtor's Insolvency

A complaint to set aside a transfer conveyance or annul an obligation which was made or incurred by a debtor who was insolvent or was rendered insolvent thereby must allege either that the debtor was insolvent at the time of the making of the transfer conveyance or the incurring of the obligation, or that the making of the transfer or the incurring of the obligation resulted in the debtor's insolvency. A complaint that merely alleges that after making a transfer for which the debtor received less than reasonably equivalent value in exchange, the debtor was in fact insolvent does not state a cause of action for setting aside the transfer [see Tokar v. Redman (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 350, 355, 291 P.2d 987] .

Although pleading generally that the transferor was insolvent at the time of making the fraudulent transfer or was rendered insolvent thereby may be sufficient to allege insolvency [see TWM Homes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 847, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887] , this form specifically alleges the debtor's insolvency by alleging that the fair value of the debtor's obligations exceeded the then fair value of his or her assets and/or that the debtor was generally not paying its debts as they became due [see Civ. Code § 3439.01(a)(1), (2) (assets exclude exempt property and property to extent encumbered by valid lien), 3439.02(a) (defining insolvency), (b) (defining insolvency of partnership), (c) (presumption of insolvency arising from nonpayment of debts), (e) (debts for purpose of determining insolvency exclude those secured by valid lien); TWMHomes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963)

214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 847, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887 ; see also Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 4205, 4206 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instructions)]. In the alternative, this form alleges that plaintiff creditor was unable to locate the debtor or any of his or her assets (second alternative Paragraph 3) [see Civ. Code § 3439.02(d) (assets for purpose of determining insolvency exclude those transferred to hinder or defraud creditors); Neumeyer v. Crown Funding Corp. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 178, 186, 128 Cal. Rptr. 366 ; see also Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 4205, 4206 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instructions)]. The latter allegation is sufficient to shift the burden of pleading and proving that the debtor-transferor was in fact solvent to the defendant transferee [see Neumeyer v. Crown Funding Corp. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 178, 186-190, 128 Cal. Rptr. 366] .

Code § 3439.05*

[5] Decisions

Conveyance by insolvent partnership of partnership asset without receipt of reasonably equivalent value is transfer in fraud of creditors, without regard to debtor's actual intent. Headen v. Miller (l983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 169, 172, 190 Cal. Rptr. 198

Change in beneficiary of insurance policy from one partner to other partner's wife is fraudulent transfer if creditors establish that insurance proceeds were asset of partnership and thus subject to claims to extent proceeds exceed amount exempt from enforcement of judgment. Actual fraudulent intent of debtor is immaterial if transfer constructively fraudulent under Civ. Code § 3439.05. Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 374, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804

Burden of proof as to insolvency under Civ. Code § 3439.05 is on party claiming it as fact. Hansford v. Lassar (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 364, 375, 125 Cal. Rptr. 804

When plaintiff creditor has established prima facie case of insolvency by demonstrating extensive liabilities on part of debtor and evidence shows that all efforts by creditors to locate either debtor or his or her assets have proven fruitless, burden of producing further evidence on insolvency issue is shifted to transferee. *Neumeyer v. [2] Use of Form

These allegations are for use to set aside a fraudulent transfer or obligation made or incurred by a partnership which is insolvent or which is rendered insolvent by the transfer or obligation [see Civ. Code §§ 3439.02(b), 3439.05; Code Civ. Proc. § 369.5; Corp. Code §§ 16301, 16305(a); Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 4203, 4205, 4206 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instructions)]. The allegations may be used in place of Paragraphs 1, 3, 6, and 7 of the First Cause of Action in § 270.190[1]. Unless plaintiff can and wishes to rely solely on the presumption of insolvency arising because the partnership is generally not paying its debts as they become due [Civ. Code § 3439.02(c)], the excess, if any, of each general partner's nonpartnership assets over nonpartnership debts will have to be taken into account in order to establish the partnership's insolvency (first alternative Paragraph 8) [Civ. Code § 3439.02(b)].

[3] Allegations

This form contains:

- Capacity allegations which may be used in place Paragraph 1 in § 270.190[1] when the transferor/debtor is a partnership (Paragraphs 1-3) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 388];

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use by a creditor to set aside a transfer made or an obligation incurred by a debtor without receipt by the debtor of reasonably equivalent value in exchange therefor, when the debtor was engaged in or was about to engage in a business or transaction for which the debtor's remaining assets were unreasonably small in relation to the business or transaction. Relief on this ground is available to the creditor whether or not the creditor's underlying claim against the debtor arose before or after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred [Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(2)(A); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4202 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)]. This form may also be included as a separate count in a creditor's action to set aside a conveyance made with actual fraudulent intent or made by an insolvent for less than fair consideration [see Pope v. National Aero Fin. Co. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 722, 728, 46 Cal. Rptr. 233 ; see §§ 270.190 and 270.191].

[3] State Statutes

Transfer made or obligation incurred by debtor without receipt of reasonably equivalent value in exchange when debtor was engaged in or was about to engage in business or transaction for which debtor's remaining assets were unreasonably small in relation to business or transaction is fraudulent as to creditor whose claim arose before or after transfer was made or obligation was incurred. Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(2)(A)

[4] Decisions

Whether transferor left himself or herself unreasonably small remaining assets under *Civ. Finding that transfer left debtor with unreasonably small assets for transaction was unsupported by evidence when transfer occurred while plaintiff and debtor were still negotiating and be fore they actually agreed to engage in transaction together and since asset transferred was not comtemplated to be devoted by debtor to transaction. *Holcomb v. § 270.195 Allegation--In Complaint to Set Aside Fraudulent Transfer [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(1)]--Transferee's Conversion of Property Conveyed to Own Use

[1] FORM Allegation--In Complaint to Set Aside Fraudulent Transfer [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(1)]--Transferee's Conversion of Property Conveyed to Own Use

Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that on or about _____ [date], defendant _____[name of transferee] transferred the above-described property to _____ [name] who for such transfer gave _____[the sum of $_____ and _____(or describe other consideration)]. Defendant _____[name of transferee] has converted the _____ [sum or other consideration as described above] to his/her own use [and has used such _____ (sum or describe other consideration) to _____ (describe form into which consideration has been converted by defendant transferee, e.g., make the following improvements on other property of which he/she is now the owner, to wit: _____ [describe; if real property, give legal description])].

[2] Use of Form

This allegation is for use by a creditor in his or her action to set aside a fraudulent transfer after the defendant transferee has sold the property and converted the proceeds of the sale to his or her own use [see Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 591, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425 ; Cohen v. Heavey (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 766, 770-771, 68 Cal. Rptr. 180] . When this form is included in the creditor's complaint, a personal judgment may be rendered against the transferee in the amount of the proceeds which the transferee converted to his or her own use [Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 591, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425] . In addition, in equity, the property may be followed into whatever form it has been converted after the fraudulent transfer, subject to any party's superior rights, either on the theory of following the res into the hands of a constructive trustee, or by applying a kind of equitable conversion. Under either theory, the creditor is entitled to subject the property or funds to a lien as security for repayment of his or her claim, subject to any right of reimbursement the transferee may have [see Civ. Code § 3439.08(b), (c) (judgment against original or successor transferee in lesser of amount necessary to satisfy creditor's claim or value, at time of transfer, of asset transferred); see also Ahmanson Bank & Trust Co. v. Tepper

(1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 333, 344-345, 74 Cal. Rptr. 774 ; Ohio Elec. Car Co. v. Duffet (1920) 48 Cal. App. 674, 678, 192 P. 298] .

In the case of an innocent transferee, while the transferee must account for everything received under the fraudulent transfer, no personal judgment may be rendered against the transferee if he or she was not benefitted by the transfer [Cohen v. Heavey (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 766, 771, 68 Cal. Rptr. 180 (innocent transferee as not liable when he returned property to transferor)].

[3] State Statutes

Good faith transferee, notwithstanding voidability of transfer, is entitled, to extent of value given to debtor for obligation or transfer, to lien on or right to retain any interest in asset transferred, enforcement of any obligation incurred, and reduction in amount of liability on judgment. Civ. Code § 3439.08(d)

[4] Decisions

Fraudulent transferee who has sold property fraudulently transferred is personally liable to creditors of his or her transferor for amount of proceeds of sale which he or she converted to his or her own use. *Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. [1] FORM Allegation--In Complaint to Set Aside Fraudulent Transfer [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(1)--Concealment of Fraudulent Transfer by Transferor and Transferee [Civ. Code § 3439.09(a), (c)]

Defendant _____ [name of transferor] [and defendant _____ (name of transferee)] willfully and surreptitiously concealed the aforementioned _____ [transfer or obligation] from _____ [plaintiff and/or all of defendant _____'s (name of transferor) creditors]. Plaintiff did not discover, and could not reasonably have discovered, the existence of the fraud and fraudulent _____ [transfer or obligation] until _____ (date), at which time _____[specify how plaintiff learned of transfer or obligation, e.g., defendant _____'s (name of transferor) former spouse informed plaintiff of the transfer].

[If appropriate, add: The fraudulent transfer was made during the pendency of a lawsuit that established the debtor-creditor relationship between plaintiff and defendant. The judgment in that lawsuit became final on _____ (date).]

[2] Use of Form

This allegation is for use in a creditor's action to set aside a fraudulent transfer when it appears on the face of the complaint that the action is being brought more than four years from the date that the fraudulent transfer was made or the fraudulent obligation was incurred or, if later, within one year after the transfer or obligation was or could reasonably have been discovered by the creditor [Civ. Code § 3439.09(a); Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4208 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)]. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a cause of action with respect to a fraudulent transfer or obligation is extinguished if no action is brought within seven years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred [Civ. Code § 3439.09(c); Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4208 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)].

The optional language at the end of the form may be used when an allegedly fraudulent transfer was made during a pending lawsuit that would establish whether, and the extent to which, a debtor-creditor relationship exists. In this situation, the limitation period does not commence to run until the judgment in the underlying action becomes final. The four-year limitation period, i.e., the language, "four years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred," accommodates a tolling until the underlying liability becomes fixed by a final judgment [Cortez v. Vogt (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 917, 937, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 841] .

[1] FORM Allegations--In Complaint to Set Aside Fraudulent Transfer [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(1)]--For Accounting of Profits or Proceeds Received by Transferee

1. Between _____ [date], which was the date of the aforementioned fraudulent _____ [transfer or obligation], and the date of the filing of the above-entitled action, defendant _____ [name of transferee] collected and received _____ [specify what was received and from whom, e.g., from the tenants in possession of the real property all the rents and profits from the real property], amounting to at least the sum of $_____ [estimated amount received].

2. Plaintiff has heretofore demanded of defendant _____ [name of transferee] that he/she account to plaintiff for any and all sums so received by him/her, and that he/she include such sums as part of the property which plaintiff may subject to his/her claim against defendant _____ [name of transferor], but defendant _____ [name of transferee] has failed and refused to so do, and still fails and refuses to make such accounting.

[2] Use of Form

This allegation should be included in a creditor's complaint to have set aside a fraudulent transfer or obligation when the defendant transferee has received profits, income, or other proceeds from the property, and the creditor's claim will not be fully satisfied by the property fraudulently transferred [see Michal v. Adair (1944) 66 Cal. App. 2d 382, 388, 152 P.2d 490] . In such a case, when the transfer is set aside, the creditor may have a decree against the transferee for an accounting of the income or proceeds while the property was in the transferee's possession to the extent necessary to satisfy his or her claim against the transferor. Such a decreee is a proper incident to an action to set aside a fraudulent transfer or obligation [Wright v. Salzberger (1932) 121 Cal. App. 639, 645, 9 P.2d 860 ; see Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 759, 770-774, 48 Cal. Rptr. 215] .

Cross complainant alleges:

1. Cross defendants _____ [name of creditor/plaintiff] and _____ [name of transferor or obligor] are, and at all times herein mentioned were, residents of _____ County, California [or allege other capacity and residence].

2. On or about _____ [date], cross defendant _____ [name of creditor/plaintiff] commenced an action against cross complainant to have set aside a _____ [_____ (transfer or conveyance) of certain property or certain obligation], which _____ [transfer or conveyance or obligation] was alleged to be in fraud of cross defendant's rights as a creditor of [cross defendant] _____ [name of transferor or obligor], who is the person alleged to have made the _____ [transfer or conveyance or obligation].

3. In cross defendant's complaint to set aside this _____ [transfer or obligation], cross defendant alleges: _____ [set forth the pertinent allegations of cross defendant's complaint in this paragraph and additional paragraphs, including cross defendant's status as creditor, ownership by the transferor at the time of transfer or obligation, making of transfer or incurring of obligation by transferor with actual fraudulent intent, cross complainant's participation is such fraud, and/or lack of reasonably equivalent value given by cross complainant for transfer. See § 270.190[1], First Cause of Action, Paragraphs 3-9]. [A copy of this complaint is attached as Exhibit _____ and incorporated by reference.]

4. Cross complainant had no knowledge of _____[cross defendant's _____ (name of creditor/plaintiff) claim against _____ (name of tranferor or obligor) or of _____'s (name of transferor or obligor) actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud cross defendant _____ (name of creditor/plaintiff) in the collection of his/her/its claim or of _____'s (name of tranferor or obligor) _____(insolvency or financial embarassment)] nor did cross complaintant have knowledge of any facts which would put him/her/it on notice of that _____ [sepcify, e.g., claim or insolvency].

5. As consideration for the allegedly fraudulent _____ [transfer or obligation], cross complainant _____ [paid $_____ and _____ (or describe other consideration, e.g., assumed the payments due on a certain promisory note dated _____ [date], in favor of Megabucks, Inc. with a then remaining principal balance of $_____ with interest at the rate of _____ percent per annum secured by a certain deed of trust on the property conveyed, which deed of trust was recorded on _____ (date), at _____ (Book or Reel) _____ (Page or Image) in the Official Records of the county recorder of _____ County, _____ (state). This consideration constituted reasonably equivalent value in that it was _____ [a fair equivalent or not in an amount disproportionately small as compared] to the value of the _____ [property transferred or obligation undertaken] and was made in good faith, as more fully described in Paragraph 4.

6. In addition, from _____ [date], which was the date of the allegedly fraudulent _____ [transfer or obligation], to the date of the filing of cross defendant's action to set aside the _____ [transfer or obligation], cross complainant expended the sum of $_____, _____ [specify expenditure that benefitted property, payments made on any obligation assumed or undertaken in connection with the transfer, and/or counterperformance of obligee, if any, e.g., consisting of principal and interest payments made on the deed of trust encumbering the property].

7. Therefore, an actual controversy has arisen and now exists between cross complainant and cross defendant(s) concerning their respective rights in the property conveyed in that cross complainant contends that in the event cross defendant _____ [name of plaintiff/creditor] is adjudged entitled to have the _____ [specify, e.g., conveyance] set aside for being in fraud of his/her rights against _____ [name of transferor], cross complainant is entitled _____ [to retain _____ (an interest in or a lien on) the property to the extent of the payments made in acquisition and maintanence of, and otherwise to benefit (or improve) the property or cross defendant's interest, if any, therein or to enforce the _____ (specify, e.g., contract) against _____ (obligor) to the extent of the value given to him/her/it by cross complainant], whereas cross defendant disputes this contention and contends that such _____ [property or _____ (specify e.g., contract)] is not subject to any such interest as claimed by cross complainant.

8. Cross complainant desires a judicial determination of his/her rights, and in particular, a declaration as to whether in the event that cross defendant _____ [name of plaintiff/creditor] is entitled to have the alleged fraudulent _____ [specify, e.g., conveyance] set aside, cross complainant is entitled to retain _____ [specify, e.g., a lien on the property as security for repayment of the consideration given for the property and sums expended in preserving and maintaining the property].

10. Such a declaration is necessary and appropriate at this time in order that cross complainant may ascertain his/her rights in the _____ [property or _____ (specify e.g., contract)].

WHEREFORE, cross complainant prays judgment against cross defendant as follows:

[EITHER, when tranfer is at issue]

[1. For a declaration, in the event cross defendant _____ (name of creditor/plaintiff) be adjudged entitled to set aside the aforementioned transfer, that cross complainant is entitled to retain _____ (an interest in or a lien on) the property to the extent of (the aggregate of) the consideration given therefor, together with interest thereon at the legal rate from the date said consideration was paid (add as applicable: and all sums expended in maintenance, improvement, and preservation of the property and in payment of liens and encumbrances against the property).]

[2] Use of Form

This cross complaint for declaratory relief should be used whenever a defendant transferee or obligee in an action by a creditor to set aside the transfer or obligation as fraudulent, claims either (1) that the transfer or obligation, which was allegedly made or incurred by the plaintiff's debtor with actual intent to defraud, hinder, or delay a creditor, was taken by the cross complainant (defendant) in good faith and for reasonably equivalent value and therefore may not be set aside [Civ. Code § 3439.08(a); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4207 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction); § 270.47[2]] or (2) that he or she is a good faith transferee or obligee and is therefore entitled to retain an interest in or lien on the property, or to enforce the obligation, or to a reduction in the amount of liability on any judgment in favor of the creditor [Civ. Code § 3439.08(d); see § 270.47[3]]. Although the first of these contentions must also be raised as an affirmative defense, it is recommended that a cross complaint seeking affirmative relief also be filed because the consequences of a finding that the transfer or obligation was not made for reasonably equivalent value may be quite onerous if the rationale discussed in § 270.198[3] is correct.

Civ. Code § 3439.08(d)(2), allowing enforcement of the obligation, was added by the 1986 amendments. It is not clear whether the debtor/obligor is a necessary parrty to any action seeking a declaration regarding the extent to which the obligation remains enforceable; therefore, this complaint includes the debtor/obligor as a cross defendant. It does not appear that the debtor/transferor is a necessary party to a cross complaint seeking other relief under Civ. Code § 3439.08(d)(1) or (3).

In addition to the statutory authority granting the transferee or obligee the right to retain an interest or lien, to enforce the obligation, or to reduction of liability on any judgment against him or her to the extent of value given, case law has established the transferee's or obligee's right to interest on his or her initial investment and has clarified specific elements of value such as amounts expended by the transferee in the preservation and maintenance of the subject property, less the reasonable rental value of the property while the transferee remains in possesson [see Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 759, 771-772, 48 Cal. Rptr. 215] or sums expended to pay encumbrances on the property at the time of the transfer. Similarly, if a good faith obligee or assignee of a contract has assumed obligations to suppliers or other parties under the contract, he or she is entitled to reimbursement or credit for sums so paid [see Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 584-586, 589-591, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425] .

[3] Affirmative Relief

A judgment in favor of a creditor in a fraudulent transfer action sets aside the transfer or obligation insofar as it affects the creditor, even though, as between the transferor or obligor and the transferee or obligee, the transfer or obligation remains in full effect [McGee v. Allen (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 468, 476, 60 P.2d 1026 ; Ahmanson Bank & Trust Co. v. Tepper (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 333, 344, 74 Cal. Rptr. 774] . Because, as between the transferee and the creditor, the transfer or obligation is considered void, it could be reasoned that a transferee or obligee asserting the right to reimbursement or a lien or reduction of liability under a judgment is seeking affirmative relief against the creditor. Such affirmative relief must be sought by way of a cross complaint, rather than by way of an affirmative defense in the answer, because affirmative relief may not be claimed in the answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(c); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10(b) (permissive cross complaint may appropriately assert claim, right, or interest in property which is subject of complaint)]. Still, if the transferee or obligee is seeking reduction of liability under a money judgment, it could be argued that the relief sought is in the nature of a set off, which can be asserted by way of affirmative defense [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.70 (cross demand for money is properly asserted in answer)]. It should also be noted that in cases decided prior to the addition of Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(c), the courts did not appear to require the transferee to assert his or her right to such reimbursement by way of a cross complaint [see Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 583-586, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425 ; Patterson v. Missler (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 759, 763, 770-774, 48 Cal. Rptr. 215] .

[4] State Statutes

Transfer made or obligation incurred by transferor with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud one or more of his or her creditors is not voidable against person who took in good faith and for reasonably equivalent value or against any subsequent transferee or obligee. Civ. Code § 3439.08(a)

Good faith transferee or obligee is entitled, to extent of value given to debtor for obligation or transfer, to lien on or right to retain any interest in asset transferred. Civ. Code § 3439.08(d)(1)

§ 270.199 Affirmative Defense--To Action to Set Aside Fraudulent Transfer [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(1)]--Transfer as Preference of Defendant Transferee Over Plaintiff [Civ. Code § 3432]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--To Action to Set Aside Fraudulent Transfer [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(1)]--Transfer as Preference of Defendant Transferee Over Plaintiff [Civ. Code § 3432]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], DEFENDANT ALLEGES:

1. The _____ [transfer made to or obligation incurred in favor of] this defendant by [defendant] _____ [name of tranferor or obligor], which _____ [transfer or obligation] was alleged to be in fraud of plaintiff's rights as creditor of [defendant] _____ [name of transferor], was in fact a mere preference of this defendant's claim against [defendant] _____ [name of transferor].

2. This defendant's claim arose on or about _____[date], on which date [defendant] _____ [name of transferor or obligee] became indebted to this defendant in the sum of $_____ for [specify, e. g. work, labor, and services rendered by this defendant to (defendant) _____ (name of transferor or obligee) at his/her special request].

3. The _____ [transfer or obligation] sought to be set aside in fact operated to _____ [discharge this defendant's claim or reduce this defendant's claim to the sum of $_____] [and was made for reasonably equivalent value in that it was _____ (a fair equivalent or not in an amount disproportionately small as compared) to the value of the _____ (property transferred or obligation undertaken) and was made in good faith].

[2] Use of Form

This form is an affirmative defense for use by a defendant transferee or obligee who was a creditor of the transferor in an action by another creditor to set aside an allegedly fraudulent transfer by the transferor. The defense raised is that the transfer or obligation was merely operated as a preference of the transferee over the plaintiff creditor [see Civ. Code § 3432]. Even though a transfer giving a preference to one creditor was intended to make impossible the plaintiff creditor's claim and the preferred creditor knew that such a consequence would follow, the preference is not subject to attack except in supplementary proceedings in bankruptcy [see Aggregates Associated, Inc. v. Packwood (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 580, 591, 25 Cal. Rptr. 545, 375 P.2d 425 ; United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Postel (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 567, 571-572, 149 P.2d 183] .

[3] Allegations

In order for a preference to be valid, it must have reduced or extinguished the obligation owing to the preferred creditor (Paragraph 3) [see Economy Ref. & Serv. Co. v. Royal Nat'l Bank of N.Y. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 434, 441-442, 97 Cal. Rptr. 706] . In most instances the transferor's or obligor's receipt of value reasonably equivalent to the amount of the debt extinguished or reduced will be an issue. In those instances, the preferred creditor will have to use the optional allegation that the preferential transfer was made for reasonably equivalent value (Paragraph 3) [see, e.g., Civ. Code §§ 3439.04(a)(2), 3439.05 (lack of receipt of reasonably equivalent value as element of fraudulent transfer); Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 4202, 4203 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instructions)].

[4] State Statutes

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--To Action to Set Aside Fraudulent Transfer [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(1)]--Plaintiff Creditor Not Harmed by Fraudulent Transfer

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], DEFENDANT ALLEGES:

1. Plaintiff was not harmed or injured in any manner by the allegedly fraudulent transfer since this transfer did not put beyond the plaintiff's reach any property which he/she would have been able to subject to the payment of his/her claim against [defendant] _____ [name of transferor].

2. The property transferred was in fact not available or subject to the plaintiff's claim against [defendant] _____ [name of transferor] because _____ [allege facts showing that transfer did not injure plaintiff, e.g., the property conveyed was exempt from attachment and execution under Code of Civil Procedure Sections 704.710-704.850 in that (defendant) _____ (name of transferor) actually resided in the dwelling on that property and same constituted his/her principal residence and his/her equity in the property did not exceed $_____, the amount of the exemption to which he/she (as _____ (specify category of exemption, e.g., head of a household)) was entitled pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 704.730(a) _____ ((1) or (2) or (3))].

[2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense is for use by a defendant transferee in a creditor's action to set aside a fraudulent transfer when the property transferred in fact did not place any assets beyond the creditor's reach which the creditor would have been able to subject to his or her claim. Types of situations in which this defense is appropriate include the following:

- The property transferred or the debtor's interest in that property is exempt from execution by the creditor [see Civ. Code § 3439.01(a)(2) (assets do not include property to extent it is exempt under nonbankrutpcy law); Wells Fargo Bank v. PAL Investments, Inc. (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 431, 434-438, 157 Cal. Rptr. 818 ; Putnam Sand & Gravel Co. v. Albers (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 722, 725, 92 Cal. Rptr. 636 ; see § 270.34[3], [4]].

- The debtor in fact had no beneficial interest in the property transferred, such as when he or she held title to the property as trustee for another person [see, e.g., Owings v. Laugharn (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 789, 791, 128 P.2d 114 and § 270.34[2]], or when the property was fully encumbered by valid liens [see Civ. Code § 3439.01(a)(1) discussed in § 270.34[5]].

- The property transferred had previously been subjected to execution by the creditor on that claim, as when only the transfer of the debtor's equity of redemption is under attack [see, e.g., Costa v. Neves (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 121, 125, 82 P.2d 600] .

- The value of the property could not support any net recovery for the creditor in the event the conveyance was set aside [see, e.g., Mehrtash v. Mehrtash (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 75, 80-81, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 802] (plaintiff failed to show she was injured by transfer of heavily mortgaged property when she produced no evidence that value of property could support any net recovery for her in event conveyance were set aside); accord, Fidelity Nat'l Title Ins. Co. v. Schroeder (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 834, 842-845, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 854 (trial court correctly followed Mehrtash decision in concluding that judgment creditor failed to prove cause of action to set aside transfer of debtor's interest in his residence because, assuming transfer were set aside and court-ordered sale of property ensued forthwith, no proceeds would have been available to satisfy any portion of creditor's claim; therefore no injury was shown)].

- The creditor is otherwise uninjured by the transfer, as when he or she is already adequately secured or when the transfer discharged a preexisting debt [Hibernia Sav. & Loan Soc'y. v. Belcher (1935) 4 Cal. 2d 268, 273-274, 48 P.2d 681] .

[4] Decisions

[a] Exempt Property; Homesteads

Principles of fraudulent transfer are not applicable to homestead; fact that declaration of homestead was filed to hinder or delay creditor did not affect validity of homestead or constitute grounds for it to be set aside. Lucci v. United Credit and Collection Co. (1934) 220 Cal. 492, 496, 31 P.2d 369 ; Wells Fargo Bank v. PAL Investments, Inc. (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 431, 434-438, 157 Cal. Rptr. 818 ; Putnam Sand & Gravel Co. v. Albers (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 722, 725, 92 Cal. Rptr. 636

Transfer of homestead protected property cannot be subject of fraudulent conveyance action by creditors who do not have lien on that property. Tassone v. Tovar (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 765, 768-769, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 786

Defendant transferee was not entitled to summary judgment when no facts were presented from which court could determine whether there was excess value of property conveyed over homestead exemption. McKnight v. Faber (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 639, 647, 230 Cal. Rptr. 57

[b] No Injury Sustained by Creditor

To show injury from transfer, secured creditor is required to show that indebtedness owed to it is not fully secured. Hibernia Sav. & Loan Soc'y. v. Belcher (1935) 4 Cal. 2d 268, 274, 48 P.2d 681

Plaintiff failed to show she was injured by transfer of heavily mortgaged property when she produced no evidence that value of property could support any net recovery for her in event conveyance were set aside. Mehrtash v. Mehrtash (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 75, 80-81, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 802

[c] Property Previously Subjected to Execution

When creditor levied execution on real property encumbered by intentionally fraudulent mortgage, but did not seek to have mortgage set aside, transfer of debtor's equity of redemption and redemption by transferee could not be set aside as fraudulent transfer, since property had once been subjected to creditor's judgment. Costa v. Neves (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 121, 125, 82 P.2d 600

Transfer without consideration by judgment debtor of equity of redemption in property intentionally fraudulently conveyed and thereafter sold to creditor at execution sale is not fraudulent transfer; execution sale to creditor terminated creditor's lien (created by recording abstract of judgment); redemption by transferee frees property from claim of creditor's deficiency. Fry v. Bihr (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 248, 251-252, 85 Cal. Rptr. 742 (price bid/paid at execution sale and for redemption amounted to value of debtor's interest); Moore v. Hall (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 25, 29-30, 58 Cal. Rptr. 70 ; Siegel v. Farrar (1932) 120 Cal. App. 193, 196-197, 7 P.2d 319 (price bid/paid at execution sale and for redemption was much less than value of debtor's interest)

[2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense is for use by a defendant lessor who has terminated a lease in a creditor's action to set aside that termination as a fraudulent transfer because it was made without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange [see Civ. Code §§ 3439.04(a)(2), 3439.05,3439.08(e)(1); Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 4202, 4203, 4207 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instructions); *see also Civ. This defense is not applicable to any transfer voidable on the grounds of actual intent to defraud, hinder, or delay. In order to establish this defense, the debtor's interest in the lease must have been terminated for default of the debtor/transferor pursuant to a provision in the lease and applicable law [Civ. Code § 3439.08(e)(1); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4207 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)].

1. [2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense is for use by a defendant who enforced a lien, or purchased property sold pursuant to the en forcement of a lien, in an action by a creditor of the debtor to set aside the transfer as fraudulent because it was made without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange [see Civ. Code §§ 3439.04(a)(2), 3439.05, 3439.08(e)(2); Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI Nos. 4202, 4203, 4207 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instructions); see also Civ. Code § 3439.01(i) (transfer includes involuntary transfers and disposition of or parting with any interest); Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4204 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)]. This defense is not applicable to any transfer voidable on the ground of actual intent to defraud, hinder, or delay. Nor is it available if the collateral was retained by the secured party pursuant to Com. Code §§ 9620 and 9621 or if the debtor voluntarily tranferred the collateral to the lienor, as by a deed in lieu of foreclosure. In order to establish this defense, the debtor's interest in the collateral must have been terminated in a noncollusive manner pursuant to applicable law, including Division 9 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 9101 et seq.] other than as mentioned above, and the transfer must have resulted in satisfaction of all or part of the secured obligation [Civ. Code § 3439.08(e)(2); see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 4207 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender) (related California Judicial Council jury instruction)].

Civ. Code § 3439.08(e)(2) was added by the UFTA and overrules Durrett v. Washington Nat'l Ins. Co. (5th Cir. 1980) 621 F.2d 201, 203-204 and cases decided thereunder, to adopt the position of California and the Ninth Circuit that reasonably equivalent value is presumed to be received by the debtor at a noncollusive and regularly conducted foreclosure sale open to all bidders [see In re Madrid (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1982) 21 B.R. 424 , 6 C.B.C. 2d 1133, 1135-1136 , aff'd on other grounds In re Madrid (9th Cir. 1984) 725 F.2d 1197, 1199 ; Engelbertson v. Loan & Bldg. Asso. (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 477, 479, 58 P.2d 647] .

[3] State Statutes

Recitals in trustee's deed of compliance with all requirements of law regarding serving, mailing, and posting of notices constitute prima facie evidence of compliance, which is conclusive in favor of bona fide purchaser or encumbrancer for value and without notice. Civ. Code § 2924(c)

Transfer is not voidable under Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(2) or Civ. Code § 3439.05 if it results from enforcement of lien in noncollusive manner in compliance with applicable law (other than retention of collateral under Com. Code §§ 9620 and 9621 or vouluntray transfer of collateral by debtor to lienor) in satisfaction of all or part of secured obligation. Civ.

Code § 3439.08(e)(2)

[4] Decisions

Inadequacy of price is insufficient ground to set aside foreclosure sale unless inadequacy is caused by some irregularity, fraud, unfairness, or oppression. Engelbertson v. Loan & Bldg. Asso. (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 477, 479, 58 P.2d 647 ; Oller v. Sonoma County Land Title Co. (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 633, 635-636, 290 P.2d 880

Recitals in trustee's deed of default, compliance with Civ. Code §§ 2924, 2924b, posting and publishing of notice of sale after not less than three months from date of recording of notice of default, and sale at public auction to highest bidder constituted conclusive proof of essential facts. Abrahamer v. Parks (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 82, 84, 296 P.2d 341

Beneficiary who purchases at foreclosure sale is not bona fide purchaser for purposes of presumption of Civ. Code § 2924(c); as to such a purchaser, recitals in trustee's deed are only prima facie evidence of compliance and controvertable by trustor's evidence. Beck v. Reinholtz (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 719, 723, 292 P.2d 906

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use by a creditor in an action to have declared void a transfer of personal property made by a defendant transferor having at the time possession of the property and not accompanied by an immediate delivery followed by an actual and continued change of possession of the property [see Civ. Code § 3440(a); Gray v. Little (1929) 97 Cal. App. 442, 444-446, 275 P. 870] . Both transferor and transferee are named as defendants. The transferee is a necessary party [TWM Homes, Inc. v. Atherwood Realty & Inv. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 826, 848, 29 Cal. Rptr. 887 ; see § 270.190[7]].

The complaint would also appear to state a cause of action for declaratory relief (declaration of rights and duties as between parties) under Code Civ. Proc. § 1060. A plaintiff who wishes to take advantage of the calendar priority accorded actions for declaratory relief may modify the allegations of Paragraphs 6 and 7 of § 270.221[1] by replacing references to plaintiff as a purchaser with references to plaintiff as a creditor and incorporate the allegations as modified in the form [Code Civ. Proc. § 1062.3]. With appropriate modifications, the form may also be used as a separate count to be included in a creditor's action against a defendant transferee under the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act [see §§ 270.190 -270.194].

Civ. Code § 86(b)(1) provides that cases in equity to try title to personal property are limited civil cases when the amount involved does not exceed $25,000.

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges that plaintiff was a creditor of the defendant transferor while the defendant remained in possession of the property (Paragraph 3) [see Civ. Code § 3440(a); Brown v. O'Neal (1892) 95 Cal. 262, 267, 30 P. 538] . By analogy to actions under the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act, this allegation may show that plaintiff is the holder of a tort claim, and Paragraph 4 is included to show the status of plaintiff's claim [see § 270.190] since Civ. Code § 3440 makes no distinction among creditors holding secured or unsecured claims, tort or contract claims, or among creditors holding claims which have not matured or have matured or claims reduced to judgment. In addition, this complaint alleges that defendant transferor was in possession of the property at the time of the transfer of the property (Paragraphs 5, 7) [see Civ. Code § 3440(a); Cosby v. Cline (1921) 186 Cal. 698, 701, 200 P. 801] , that defendants transferor and transferee entered into an agreement for the transfer of the property (Paragraph 6), that the transfer was not accompanied by an immediate delivery followed by an actual and continued change of possession of property transferred (Paragraph 7) [see Civ. Code § 3440(a); Bunting v. Saltz (1890) 84 Cal. 168, 172, 24 P. 167 ; Southern Cal. Collection Co. v. Napkie (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 565, 571, 235 P.2d 434] , and that defendant transferor thereafter remained in possession of the property (Paragraph 7) [see Civ. Code § 3440(a)].

[4] Remedies

When a transfer is void as to a creditor of the transferor under Civ. Code § 3440 [see Civ. Code § 3440], that creditor is entitled to have the transfer set aside [see Gray v. Little (1929) 97 Cal. App. 442, 444-446, 275 P. 870] . In addition, by analogy to the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act, this complaint prays for injunctive relief restraining the defendants from disposing of the property, and to have a lien declared on the property [see § 270.190]. For other forms of supplemental remedies available in fraudulent conveyance actions, and for procedural requirements for such actions, see § 270.190[8].

A creditor as to whom a transfer is void under Civ. Code § 3440 may also disregard the transfer and levy on the property in the hands of either the transferor or transferee [Dot Records, Inc. v. Freeman (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 204, 207-208, 55 Cal. Rptr. 455 (writ of attachment); Southern Cal. Collection Co. v. Napkie (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 565, 568, 235 P.2d 434 (writ of execution)]. For discussion and forms relating to attachment proceedings, see Ch. 62, Attachment . For discussion and forms relating to levy by writ of execution, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments . For discussion and forms relating to required responses to the transferee's third party claim after service of the writ of execution, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments .

[5] State Statutes

Unless otherwise provided in Civ. Code § 3440 et seq., transfers of personal property by persons having at time possession of property are void as to creditors of transferor while transferor in possession and purchasers for value in good faith subsequent to transfer when transfer not accompanied by immediate delivery followed by actual and continued change of possession. Civ. Code § 3440

Transfers to which Civ. Code § 3440 et seq. do not apply. Civ. Code §§ 3440.1-3440.5, 3440.9

One-year statute of limitations for action brought or levy made under Civ. Code § 3440 et seq.. Civ. Code § 3440.6

[6] Decisions

Only creditor of transferor while transferor remains in possession of property is permitted to attack transfer otherwise conclusively fraudulent under Civ. Code § 3440. Brown v. O'Neal (1892) 95 Cal. 262, 267, 30 P. 538

Person is required to have had possession of personal property at time of transfer of such property in order that transaction come within terms of Civ. Code § 3440. Cosby v. Cline (1921) 186 Cal. 698, 701, 200 P. 801

Writings pertaining to transfer of personal property cannot create actual and continued change of possession as to creditors of transferor. George v. Pierce (1898) 123 Cal. 172, 175, 55 P. 775, 56 P. 53

Civ. Code § 3440makes no distinction between totally unsecured creditors and those creditors who have realized upon their security and are seeking to recover deficiency. In re Trinity Tractor Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 439-440, 83 Cal. Rptr. 783

[2] Use of Form

This complaint for declaratory relief is for use by a good faith purchaser for value who purchased personal property from a transferor who had previously transferred the property to a third party, but who retained possession of the property after the earlier transfer. This complaint seeks a determination that the earlier transfer is void. Under Civ. Code § 3440(a), except as otherwise provided, a transfer of personal property made by a person in possession of the property at the time of the transfer, and not accompanied by an immediate delivery followed by an actual and continued change of possession of the property, is void as against:

- The transferor's creditors (secured or unsecured) at the time of the transfer;
- Those who become creditors while the transferor remains in possession;
- The successors in interest of those creditors; and
- Buyers from the transferor for value in good faith subsequent to the transfer.

[3] Alternative Remedies

A purchaser for value in good faith subsequent to a transfer which was void as to him or her under Civ. Code § 3440(a) may also, as alternative relief, bring an action to recover possession of the property or its value and for damages for wrongful detention where the property remains in the possession of the transferor or transferee [see Code Civ. Proc. § 667]. For a complaint for use in such an action, see Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery . The purchaser may also bring an action for cancellation of a written instrument when the void transfer was based on a written instrument. For a complaint for cancellation of a written instrument, see Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments . In addition, the purchaser having possession of the property may bring an action to have the void transfer set aside [see § 270.220].

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a creditor holding a claim, other than an unliquidated or contingent one, against a seller of a bulk sale that was subject to the notice requirements of Com. Code §§ 6104 and 6105 to recover the amount of the claim from a buyer who failed to publish, record, or deliver the notice or to otherwise comply with the provisions of Com. Code § 6104, 6105, or 6106.2(f) [see Com. Code § 6107(a), (g)]. The buyer is liable to the claimant for damages in the amount of the claim, reduced by any amount that the claimant would not have realized if the buyer had complied [Com. Code § 6107(a)]. The claimant has the burden of establishing the validity and amount of the claim. The buyer has the burden of establishing the amount that the claimant would not have realized if the buyer had complied [Com. Code § 6107(b); see § 270.102].

This complaint is based on the requirements that went into effect on January 1, 1991, and is applicable if the sale occurred on or after January 1, 1991, pursuant to a bulk sale agreement dated on or after January 1, 1991. If the sale occurred on or after January 1, 1991, pursuant to a bulk sale agreement dated before January 1, 1991, compliance with the former notice provisions (those set forth in former Com. Code §§ 6106 and 6107) is required, and the form will have to be modified accordingly [see Com. Code § 6111 (discussed in § 270.109)].

[3] Who May Be Plaintiff

[a] "Claimant" Defined

"Claimant" means a person holding a claim incurred in the seller's business other than any of the following claims [Com. Code § 6102(a)(5)]:

- An unsecured and unmatured claim for employment compensation and benefits, including commissions and vacation, severance, and sick-leave pay;

- A claim for injury to an individual or to property, or for breach of warranty, unless (A) a right of action for the claim has accrued, (B) the claim has been asserted against the seller, and (C) the seller knows the identity of the person asserting the claim and the basis on which the person has asserted it; or

- A claim for taxes owing to a governmental unit, if (A) a statute governing the enforcement of the claim permits or requires notice of the bulk sale to be given to the governmental unit in a manner other than by compliance with the requirements of Com. Code § 6101 et seq., and (B) notice is given in accordance with that statute.

[b] "Claim" Defined

"Claim" means a right to payment from the seller, whether or not the right is reduced to judgment, liquidated, fixed, matured, disputed, secured, legal, or equitable. The term includes costs of collection and attorney's fees only to the extent that the California law permits the holder of the claim to recover them in an action against the obligor [Com. Code § 6102(a)(4)].

[c] Holders of Contingent and Unliquidated Claims Excepted

Note that no action may be brought under Com. Code § 6107(a) by or on behalf of a claimant whose claim is unliquidated or contingent [Com. Code § 6107(g)].

[4] Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- Plaintiff's status as a claimant (Paragraph 3) [see Com. Code § 6102(a)(5) (discussed in [a] above)].

- The status of plaintiff's underlying claim against the seller (alternative Paragraphs 4) [see Com. Code § 6102(a)(4) (discussed above); but see Com. Code § 6107(g) (no action may be brought on unliquidated or contingent claim)].

- The type and location of the seller's business (Paragraph 5).

- The fact, date, consideration, and relevant characteristics of the sale, namely that it was of all or a substantial part of the seller's business (Paragraph 6) and that it was not in the ordinary course of that business (Paragraph 7) [see Com. Code § 6102(a)(3)(ii) (defining "bulk sale" other than by auction or through liquidator); see also Com. Code § 6102(a)(13) (defining "in the ordinary course of the seller's business")].

- Defendant's failure to comply with the notice requirements of Com. Code §§ 6104 and 6105, including, if applicable, Com. Code § 6106.2(f) (alternative Paragraphs 8).

- The resulting damage to plaintiff (Paragraph 9) [see Com. Code § 6107(b)].

More than one alternative Paragraph 8 may be used or any of the alternative Paragraphs 8 may be combined to reflect the actual noncompliance involved.

[5] Statute of Limitations

[a] One Year Period

Unless the buyer, auctioneer, or liquidator conceals the fact that the bulk sale occurred, an action under Com. Code § 6101 et seq. against a buyer, auctioneer, or liquidator must be commenced within one year after the date of the bulk sale [Com. Code § 6110(a)].

If the buyer, auctioneer, or liquidator conceals the fact that the sale has occurred, the limitation is tolled and an action under Com. Code § 6101 et seq. may be commenced within whichever of the following periods is earlier [Com. Code § 6110(b)]:

- One year after the person bringing the action discovers that the sale has occurred; or

- One year after the person bringing the action should have discovered that the sale has occurred, but no later than two years after the date of the bulk sale.

Complete noncompliance with the requirements of Com. Code § 6101 et seq. does not of itself constitute concealment [Com. Code § 6110(b); accord, In re Borba (9th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 1317, 1320 (decided under former Com. Code § 6111)].

[b] "Date of Sale" Defined

Unless the sale is an auction or is conducted by a liquidator on the seller's behalf, the phrase "date of the bulk sale" means the later of the date on which either of the following occurs: (1) more than 10 percent of the net contract price is paid to or for the benefit of the seller; or (2) more than 10 percent of the assets, as measured by value, are transferred to the buyer [Com. Code § 6102(a)(7)(i)(B); see Com. Code § 6102(a)(11) (defining "net contract price," discussed in § 270.245[3][b]); see also Com. Code § 6102(a)(15) (defining "value" as fair market value)].

For purposes of determining the date of sale, delivery of a negotiable instrument [see Com. Code § 3104(a)] to or for the benefit of the seller in exchange for assets constitutes payment of the contract price to the extent of the amount of the note [Com. Code § 6102(a)(7)(ii)(A)]. To the extent that the contract price is deposited in an escrow, the contract price is paid to or for the benefit of the seller when the seller acquires the unconditional right to receive the deposit or when the deposit is delivered to the seller or for the benefit of the seller, whichever occurs first [Com. Code § 6102(a)(7)(ii)(B)].

An asset is transferred when a person holding an unsecured claim can no longer obtain through judicial proceedings rights to the asset that are superior to those of the buyer arising as a result of the bulk sale [Com. Code § 6102(a)(7)(ii)(C)]. A person holding an unsecured claim can obtain those superior rights to a tangible asset at least until the buyer has an unconditional right under the bulk-sale agreement to possess the asset, and a person holding an unsecured claim can obtain those superior rights to an intangible asset at least until the buyer has an unconditional right under the bulk-sale agreement to use the asset [Com. Code § 6102(a)(7)(ii)(C)].

These allegations may be used in place of Paragraphs 6-8 of § 270.242[1] by a creditor holding a claim, other than an unliquidated or contingent one, against a seller of a bulk sale that was conducted by auction or through a liquidator when the auctioneer or liquidator failed to publish, record, or deliver the notice, or otherwise to comply with the provisions of Com. Code §§ 6104-6108 relating to the notice of intended bulk sale [see Com. Code §§ 6104-6108, and discussion in § 270.107].

[3] Relevant Definitions

[a] Bulk Sale

In the case of a sale by auction or a sale or series of sales conducted by a liquidator on the seller's behalf, a "bulk sale" means a sale or series of sales not in the ordinary course of the seller's business of more than half of the seller's inventory and equipment, as measured by value on the date of the bulk-sale agreement [Com. Code § 6102(a)(3)(i); see also § 270.103].

§ 270.244 Affirmative Defense--To Action for Recovery of Claim by Claimant Against Buyer of Bulk Sale [Com. Code § 6107]--Sale Excluded by Stature [Com. Code § 6103(c)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--To Action for Recovery of Claim by Claimant Against Buyer of Bulk Sale [Com. Code § 6107]--Sale Statutorily Excluded [Com. Code § 6103(c)]

AS A SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE, defendant alleges that the bulk sale of property on or about _____ [date] from _____ [name of seller] to defendant herein was not in violation of Section(s) _____ [6104 or 6105 or 6106.2 and if defendant is auctioneer or liquidator, add and 6108] of the Commercial Code for any failure of defendant to comply with the provisions of that statute relating to the requirements for recording, publishing, or mailing or delivering a notice of bulk sale because the sale was specifically excluded from the requirements of that notice by Section 6103(c) of the Commercial Code. Specifically, this sale was excluded by Section 6103(c)(_____) [specify subparagraph] of the Commercial Code in that _____ [state generally character of sale and property excluded as provided in Com. Code § 6103(c)(1)-(16), e.g., the property sold was immediately leased back to the transferor immediately following the transfer, a financing statement was filed, and notice of intended transfer was published in compliance with Section 3440.1(h) of the Civil Code].

This affirmative defense is for use in an answer to a complaint brought by a creditor of a seller of a bulk sale against the buyer for failure of the buyer to comply with the bulk sale notice provisions of Com. Code § 6101 et seq. The defense asserted is that the sale was not subject to those provisions because it was specifically excepted by Com. Code § 6103(c)(1)-(16) [see § 270.108].

The foregoing form may also be modified for use when the sale was not subject to the bulk sale notice requirements because it did not fall within the definition of bulk sale, such as when the inventory and equipment sold were less than half, as valued on the date of the bulk sale agreement, of the seller's inventory and equipment, or when the sale was one that comported with the usual or customary practices in the kind of business in which the seller is engaged [*Com. [1] FORM Affirmative Defense--To Action for Recovery of Claim by Claimant Against Buyer of Bulk Sale [Com. Code § 6107]--Statutory Limit on Cumulative Liability for Single Sale Exceeded [Com. Code § 6107(d)-(f)]

AS A SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE, defendant alleges:

1. The assets sold as the bulk sale described in the complaint consisted _____ [indicate whether assets consisted only of inventory and equipment, e.g., entirely of inventory and equipment].

2. The net contract price was $_____.

[3. The net value of the inventory and equipment was $_____.]

4. _____ [Specify amount or portion, e.g., All] of the [portion of the] net contract price [that was allocable to inventory and equipment] was paid to or applied for the benefit of the seller or creditors of the seller. _____ [Specify amount or portion, e.g., None] of [that portion of] the net contract price was paid or applied towards debts that were secured by assets that were part of the bulk sale and that were taken into consideration in determining the net contract price.

5. Defendant has made payments to claimants other than plaintiff herein [and other than the payments on debts described in Paragraph 4][, and to persons it believed held bona fide claims,] in satisfaction of claims owed[, or believed to be owed,] by _____ [name of seller], totalling $_____.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing affirmative defense is for use in an answer to a complaint brought by a creditor of a seller of a bulk sale against the buyer for failure of the buyer to comply with the bulk sale notice provisions of Com. Code § 6101 et seq. The defense asserted is that the buyer has already paid claims in excess of the amount of its cumulative liability for a single bulk sale [see Com. Code § 6107(d)-(f)]. The buyer's cumulative liability is generally limited to two times the net contract price, or if the sale included property other than inventory and equipment, two times the value of the inventory and equipment, less the portion of the net contract price paid to or applied for the benefit of the seller or its creditors (or, again, in the case of a sale that included property other than inventory and equipment, sums so paid or applied that were allocable to inventory and equipment,) excepting from that deduction debts secured by the assets sold and taken into account in determining the net contract price [Com. Code § 6107(d); see § 270.245[3]].

The foregoing form may also be modified for use when the limit on cumulative liability would be exceeded if defendant had to pay plaintiff's claim and other claims made against it arising from the same bulk sale. In that situation, the buyer may wish to consider answering, filing a cross complaint in interpleader, depositing with the court an amount equal to its remaining exposure under the cumulative limit, and asking the court to apportion that amount among the remaining claimants. For discussion and forms relating to interpleader, see Ch. 314, Interpleader .

Paragraph 3 and the bracketed portions of Paragraph 4 are only applicable if the bulk sale involves assets other than inventory and equipment [see Com. Code § 6107(d)(2)].

A payment made by the buyer to a person to whom the buyer is, or believes it is, liable under Com. Code § 6107(a) reduces pro tanto the buyer's cumulative liability under Com. Code § 6107(d) (Paragraph 5) [Com. Code § 6107(f)].

[3] Limit on Buyer's Cumulative Liability

[a] Sale Consists Only of Inventory and Equipment

In a single bulk sale in which the assets consist only of inventory and equipment, the buyer's cumulative liability for failure to comply with the requirements of Com. Code § 6104 may not exceed an amount equal to twice the net contract price, less the amount of any part of the net contract price paid to or applied for the benefit of the seller or a creditor except to the extent that the payment or application is applied to a debt that is secured by the assets and that has been taken into consideration in determining the net contract price [Com. Code § 6107(d)(1)].

[b] Net Contract Price Defined

The phrase "net contract price" means the new consideration the buyer is obligated to pay for the assets less each of the following [Com. Code § 6102(a)(11)]:

- The amount of any proceeds of the sale of an asset, to the extent that the proceeds are applied in partial or total satisfaction of a debt secured by the asset; and

- The amount of any debt to the extent that it is secured by a security interest or lien that is enforceable against the asset before and after it has been sold to a buyer. If a debt is secured by an asset and by other property of the seller, the amount of the debt secured by a security interest or lien that is enforceable against the asset is determined by multiplying the debt by a fraction, the numerator of which is the value of the new consideration for the asset on the date of the bulk sale and the denominator of which is the value of all property securing the debt on the date of the bulk sale.

[c] Assets Sold Include Property Other Than Inventory and Equipment

In a single bulk sale in which the assets include property other than inventory and equipment, the buyer's cumulative liability for failure to comply with the requirements of Com. Code § 6104 may not exceed an amount equal to twice the net value of the inventory and equipment less the amount of the portion of any part of the net contract price paid to or applied for the benefit of the seller or a creditor that is allocable to the inventory and equipment, except to the extent that the payment or application is applied to a debt that is secured by the assets and that has been taken into consideration in determining the net contract price [Com. Code § 6107(d)(2)].

[d] Net Value Calculation

The phrase "net value" of an asset within the meaning of Com. Code § 6107(d)(2) (sale that includes property other than inventory and equipment) is the value of the asset less each of the following [Com. Code § 6107(e)]:

- The amount of any proceeds of the sale of an asset, to the extent that the proceeds are applied in partial or total satisfaction of a debt secured by the asset; and

- The amount of any debt to the extent that it is secured by a security interest or lien that is enforceable against the asset before and after it has been sold to a buyer. If a debt is secured by an asset and other property of the seller, the amount of the debt secured by a security interest or lien that is enforceable against the asset is determined by multiplying the debt by a fraction, the numerator of which is the value of the asset on the date of the bulk sale and the denominator of which is the value of all property securing the debt on the date of the bulk sale. The portion of a part of the net contract price paid to or applied for the benefit of the seller or a creditor that is "allocable to the inventory and equipment" is the portion that bears the same ratio to that part of the net contract price as the net value of the inventory and equipment bears to the net value of all of the assets.

AS A SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE, defendant alleges:

1. On or about _____ [date], and prior to the time of the transaction described in the complaint as a bulk sale, defendant made a good faith and commercially reasonable attempt to _____ [comply with the requirements of Section(s) _____ (6104 and/or 6105) of the Commercial Code or bring the transaction within the exclusion of Section(s) 6103(c)_____ (specify subparagraph) of the Commercial Code].

[Describe, in as many paragraphs as necessary, all elements necessary to establish a good faith and commercially reasonable attempt at compliance or exclusion. The following, by way of example, are allegations relating to the exclusion of Com. Code§ 6103(c)(9).]

2. Defendant's principal place of business is _____.

3. On _____ [date not earlier than 21 days before the date of the bulk sale], defendant demanded of _____ [name of seller] and received from _____[name of seller] a verified and dated list of claimants of whom the seller had notice three days' before the seller delivered the list to the buyer. A true and correct copy of that list is attached hereto marked Exhibit "A" and made a part hereof.

4. Defendant assumed in full all debts on that list, and sent notice of its assumption to all creditors on that list, in the form of the letter, a true copy and correct copy of which is attached hereto marked Exhibit "B" and made a part hereof.

5. Defendant is, and has at all times relevant hereto, been solvent and able to meet its current obligations as they mature.

6. On _____ [date not later than 30 days after sale], defendant caused a notice of assumption to be recorded in the Office of the County Recorder of _____ County, California, [if assets were located in more than one county add and in the Office of the County Recorder of _____ County, California,] in which county/counties the tangible assets sold were located. 7. Defendant caused a notice of assumption to be published in the _____ [name of newspaper], a newspaper of general circulation published in [the _____ (name) Judicial District of] _____ County, California, in which _____ [District or County] the tangible assets sold[, or the greater portion of them,] were located. The notice was published on _____ [date not later than 30 days after sale]. [If seller was located in different judicial district than assets, add: Defendant also caused the same form of notice of assumption to be published on _____ (date not later than 30 days after sale), in the _____ (name of newspaper), a newspaper of general circulation published in (the _____ (name of district) Judicial District of) _____ County, California, in which _____ (District or County) _____'s (name of seller) _____ (chief executive office or major executive office in the United States) was located.] A true copy and correct copy of that notice is attached hereto marked Exhibit "D" and made a part hereof.

[2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense is for use in an answer to a complaint brought by a creditor of a seller of a bulk sale against the buyer for failure of the buyer to comply with the bulk sale notice provisions of Com. Code § 6101 et seq. The defense asserted is that the buyer made a good faith and commercially reasonable attempt to comply with the requirements of Com. Code § 6104or to exclude the sale from the application of the Bulk Sales Law under Com. Code § 6103(c) (discussed in § 270.170[8]) [Com. Code § 6107(c)]. The buyer has the burden of establishing the good faith and commercial reasonableness of the effort [Com. Code § 6107(c)]. Good faith was not a defense under prior versions of the Bulk Transfer Law [see Danning v. Daylin, Inc. (9th Cir. 1973) 488 F.2d 185, 190] .

All allegations except those in Paragraph 1 will vary depending on the particular exclusion attempted or insufficiency in compliance with the requirements of Com. Code §§ 6104, 6105. In the foregoing form, Paragraphs 2-7 are based on an attempt to bring the transaction within the exclusion set forth in Com. Code § 6103(c)(9) (discussed in § 270.108[4]). The individualized assumption agreements alleged in Paragraph 4 are not required by the statute, but the allegations may be included if desired whenever such agreements are utilized.

§ 272.11 Definitions

A wagering or gambling contract takes the form of a bet or wager involving gain and loss, between known participants, of money or property staked on the happening in the future of an event at the time uncertain [see Brown v. Board of Police Comm'rs (1943) 58 Cal. App. 2d 473, 477, 136 P.2d 617] .

A premium or reward is distinguished from a bet or wager in that a premium is a reward for some act done while a bet or wager is a stake upon an uncertain event [Brown v. Board of Police Comm'rs (1943) 58 Cal. App. 2d 473, 477, 136 P.2d 617] .

Webster's Seventh New Collegiate Dictionary defines a stakeholder as a person entrusted with the stakes of two or more bettors.

23-272 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 272.12

§ 272.12 Illegality of Gambling Contracts

[1] Basis of Illegality

An agreement for a bet or wager is one in which the promisor agrees to perform on the happening of a condition, and for which performance he or she receives no agreed exchange [see Kyne v. Kyne (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 436, 438, 106 P.2d 620 ; Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 66, 140 P. 306 ; Schenck v. Hirshfeld (1913) 22 Cal. App. 709, 710, 136 P. 725] . At common law, wagers made in respect to matters not affecting the feelings, interest, or character of third persons, or the public peace or good morals, or public policy, were legal contracts that could be enforced [Johnston v. Russell (1869) 37 Cal. 670, 672] . However, Civ. Code § 1667, enacted in 1872, specifies that a contract is not lawful which is (1) contrary to an express provision of law; (2) contrary to the policy of express law, though not expressly prohibited; or (3) otherwise contrary to good morals [Civ. Code § 1667].

[2] Contrary to Express Provision of Law

A contract that is contrary to an express provision of law is not lawful [Civ. Code § 1667(1)]. Such a contract is void from its inception [see Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 67, 140 P. 306] . For example, a wagering agreement concerning the outcome of an election in violation of Penal Code §§ 337a, 659, and former Elec. Code § 11504 [see Kyne v. Kyne (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 436, 438-439, 106 P.2d 620] and a wagering agreement concerning the outcome of a wrestling match in violation of former Penal Code § 337a (now Penal Code § 337a(6)) [Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 67, 140 P. 306] are illegal contracts [see Civ. Code § 1667(1)]. The general rule is that the court will not recognize such illegal contracts and will not aid the parties, but will leave them where it finds them [Kyne v. Kyne (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 436, 438, 106 P.2d 620 ; Szadolci v. Hollywood Park Operating Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 16, 19, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 356 (whether party is seeking to recover winnings or stake)]. The defense of illegality is open to the parties to the contract and to those claiming under them [Kyne v. Kyne (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 436, 439, 106 P.2d 620] .

For a form of affirmative defense based on this ground, see § 272.40.

[3] Contrary to Public Policy or Good Morals

A contract that is contrary to the policy of express law, though not expressly prohibited or otherwise contrary to good morals, is not lawful [Civ. Code § 1667(2),(3)]. Because a gambling game is contrary to the policy of express law, or contrary to good morals though not expressly prohibited by statute, it is unlawful [see Civ. Code § 1667(2),(3); Union Collection Co. v. Buckman (1907) 150 Cal. 159, 161, 88 P. 708 (gambling game); Braverman v. Horn (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 379, 381, 198 P.2d 948 (dice game in Nevada gambling establishment); Lavick v. Nitzberg (1948) 83 Cal. App. 2d 381, 382, 188 P.2d 758 (draw poker)]. A contract founded on a gambling consideration is unlawful and unenforceable [Union Collection Co. v. Buckman (1907) 150 Cal. 159, 161, 88 P. 708 (promissory note given for money lost in gambling game); see Lavick v. Nitzberg (1948) 83 Cal. App. 2d 381, 382, 188 P.2d 758 (promissory note given in gambling game in gambling house)].

[4] Raising Issue of Illegality

If the illegality of a contract does not appear from the face of the complaint, it becomes a matter for an affirmative defense to be specially pleaded in the answer, with the burden of proof of illegality placed on the defendant [Hamilton v. Abadjian (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 49, 53, 179 P.2d 804 (action by assignee of gambling house to recover on check honored for purpose of providing prospective customer with funds with which to gamble); see Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 63-64, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817 (action by assignor to collect on checks cashed in gaming establishment and returned for lack of sufficient funds); Eaton v. Brock (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 10, 13, 268 P.2d 58 (action to have validity of contract between milk distributor and cooperative corporation judicially decreed)]. For forms of affirmative defense, see §§ 272.40 and 272.41.

The failure to plead illegality as a defense, however, is not a waiver. Whenever the evidence shows that the plaintiff in substance seeks to enforce an illegal contract, the court has both the power and duty to ascertain the truth so that it does not unwittingly lend its assistance to the encouragement of what public policy forbids [see Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 147-148, 308 P.2d 713 (action for damages for equipment rental)]. The illegality may be raised at any time, in the trial court or on appeal, by the parties or on the court's own motion [see Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 148, 308 P.2d 713 ; Griffis v. Squire (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 461, 465-466, 73 Cal. Rptr. 154 (action to quiet title to real property and for damages for rent owed); but see Prudential Ins. Co. v. Fromberg (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 185, 190, 49 Cal. Rptr. 475 (decision holding that defense of illegality could not be raised for first time on appeal where plaintiff had no opportunity to present to trial court elements and concepts which would negate defendant's claim of illegality)]. For further discussion of pleading affirmative defenses and pleading illegality of contract, see Ch. 26, Answers , and Ch. 140, Contracts , respectively.

Chapter 272 GAMBLING
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

23-272 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 272.13

§ 272.13 Doctrine of in Pari Delicto

[1] Parties' Enforcement of Gambling Contract Precluded

The general rule is that the courts will not recognize an illegal betting contract if the gambling activity is classified as an unlawful and forbidden enterprise [Bradley v. Doherty (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 991, 994, 106 Cal. Rptr. 725 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878 (betting on outcome of various games, including pinball games, in violation of Penal Code § 337a(6))]. A court applies the doctrine of in pari delicto to the parties to such a contract and will not aid them; rather it will leave them where it finds them [Bradley v. Doherty (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 991, 994, 106 Cal. Rptr. 725 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878] . Thus, a party who is in pari delicto is denied recovery of that party's stakes or winnings under a wagering contract that violates the law [Kyne v. Kyne (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 436, 438, 106 P.2d 620 (wagering agreement on outcome of election in violation of Penal Code §§ 337a, 659, and former Elec. Code § 11504); Bradley v. Doherty (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 991, 994, 106 Cal. Rptr. 725 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878 (betting on outcome of various games, including pinball games, in violation of Penal Code § 337a(6))]. California cases are uniform in holding that when money or property is lost in a transaction between parties which is prohibited by law, neither party has standing in a court of law or equity to recover the losses [Lee On v. Long (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 499, 502-503, 234 P.2d 9 , cert. denied, 342 U.S. 947 (plaintiff barred from recovering money seized by peace officers in gambling raid); Wallace v. Opinham (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 25, 28, 165 P.2d 709 (losses incurred in card game "twenty-one" which is prohibited by Penal Code § 330)].

[2] Applied to Stakeholder

The general rule that a court will not recognize an illegal wagering contract and will not aid the parties, but will leave them where it finds them, is applied to deny relief whether the party against whom the relief is sought is a party to the wager or is a stakeholder for the parties to the wager [Kyne v. Kyne (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 436, 438, 106 P.2d 620] . Because the plaintiff-bettor and the defendant-stakeholder stand in pari delicto in execution of the criminal and illegal agreement [Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 68, 140 P. 306 (money wagered upon outcome of wrestling contest was deposited with a stakeholder)], no recovery is granted.

[3] Demurrer Available

A complaint to recover property by one who has committed a public offense is subject to demurrer [Schenck v. Hirshfeld (1913) 22 Cal. App. 709, 711, 136 P. 725 (money wagered on outcome of election)] on the grounds that the plaintiff is unable to state a cause of action because he or she is in pari delicto with the defendant [Bradley v. Doherty (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 991, 998, 106 Cal. Rptr. 725 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878 (demurrer was properly sustained without leave to amend when plaintiff sought to recover money lost in betting with defendant on outcome of pinball games which defendant had rigged)].

[4] Effect of Fraud or Deceit

The general rule which denying recovery to a party seeking to recover stakes or winnings under a wagering contract that violates the law is applied even if the winner wins the gambling game by fraud or deceit [Bradley v. Doherty (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 991, 994, 106 Cal. Rptr. 725 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878] . Similarly, a party is not allowed to recover gambling losses sustained as a result of voluntary participation in a gambling game prohibited by statute, even if the other party may have resorted to fraud to win [Wallace v. Opinham (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 25, 25-26, 29-30, 165 P.2d 709 (in game of "twenty-one" which was prohibited by statute, winner may have resorted to fraud by furnishing marked deck of cards)], because to prove the alleged fraud by means of which the losses were incurred, evidence of the loser's own participation in the unlawful gambling game is required, thereby placing the loser in pari delicto with the winner [see Wallace v. Opinham (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 25, 26, 165 P.2d 709] . Public policy reasons preclude the courts from distinguishing between degrees of turpitude of parties engaged in unlawful transactions [Bradley v. Doherty (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 991, 995, 106 Cal. Rptr. 725 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878, 94 S. Ct. 70, 38 L. Ed. 2d 123] .

[5] Effect of Withdrawal From Gambling Contract

A gambling contract that is opposed to good morals and public policy is not recognized by the courts [Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 66, 140 P. 306] . However, a party to the contract may disaffirm the contract prior to the execution of the transaction to which the contract relates [Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 66, 140 P. 306] and then later be restored judicially to the status quo by having his or her money returned [Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 66, 140 P. 306] . Relief is granted by a court on the ground that one who repents of an act frowned upon by law will be furnished aid in withdrawing consideration ventured [Schenck v. Hirshfeld (1913) 22 Cal. App. 709, 710, 136 P. 725] . Withdrawal of the money wagered may be made and enforced only up to the time of the happening of the event on which the wager is conditioned and only when the wagering agreement is not in violation of a criminal statute [Schenck v. Hirshfeld (1913) 22 Cal. App. 709, 711, 136 P. 725] . When a wager is a crime by statute, the transaction is void from the inception and not subject to disaffirmance or withdrawal [Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 70, 140 P. 306 (wager on outcome of wrestling contest in violation of former Penal Code § 337a, now Penal Code § 337a(6); see Schenck v. Hirshfeld (1913) 22 Cal. App. 709, 711, 136 P. 725 (wager on outcome of election in violation of former Penal Code § 60)].

[6] Where Right to Recover Is Not Dependent on Gambling Contract

Although there may be some illegal features connected with a transaction involved in a suit, a party nevertheless is able to recover if a cause of action is otherwise legitimate and if a case can be made out without reliance on the illegality [Cal-Neva Lodge, Inc. v. Marx (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 186, 189, 2 Cal. Rptr. 889] . The test is whether or not the plaintiff can establish a case otherwise than through the medium of the illegal transaction to which the plaintiff is a party [Cal-Neva Lodge, Inc. v. Marx (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 186, 189, 2 Cal. Rptr. 889] . For example, when an agent's duty to pay a gambling casino arose not from an illegal gambling agreement or transaction but from a separate agreement of the agent to collect for and pay to the casino moneys owed it by other parties, the casino was able to recover from the agent [Cal-Neva Lodge, Inc. v. Marx (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 186, 189, 2 Cal. Rptr. 889 (agent collected moneys owed casino by parties suffering gambling losses and agent failed to pay casino)].

Chapter 272 GAMBLING
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

23-272 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 272.14

§ 272.14 No Enforcement of Gambling Debt

[1] By Licensed Gambling Establishment

[a] Money Used for Gambling

When a defendant gambler produces uncontradicted testimony that the money was obtained and used for gambling, plaintiff gambling house's mere proof that no restrictions were placed on the gambler's use of the money by the gambling house at the time the check was cashed is insufficient to support a finding of a nongambling purpose and use [see Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 68, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817] . Although the phrase "without restriction on its use" is often used by a gambling house seeking to justify recovery on a check cashed for a customer, the real issue is whether the check was cashed for the purpose of providing funds to gamble with the donor [Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 68, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817 ; Braverman v. Horn (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 379, 381, 198 P.2d 948] . If a check is cashed for the purpose of providing funds with which to gamble, the gambling house operator has in fact participated in the illegal transaction [see Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817] and is precluded from recovery.

A party claiming that a person is guilty of a crime or wrongdoing has the burden of proof on that issue [Evid. Code § 520]; except as otherwise provided by law, a party has the burden of proof as to each fact the existence or nonexistence of which is essential to the claim for relief or defense that he or she is asserting [Evid. Code § 500]. Thus, when the issue of illegality of a gambling transaction is raised as an affirmative defense by way of the defendant-gambler's answer, the defendant has the burden of proving the illegality of the gambling transaction [Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 67, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817 ; see also Hamilton v. Abadjian (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 49, 53, 179 P.2d 804] .

The principle that the courts will not aid parties to an illegal contract has been extended to cases involving licensed gambling establishments and their customers for whom checks are cashed for the purpose of gambling [see Hamilton v. Abadjian (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 49, 52, 179 P.2d 804] . Therefore, the owner of a gambling house who honors a check for the purpose of providing a prospective customer with funds with which to gamble, and who then participates in the transaction thus promoted by the cashing of the check, is unable to recover on that check when it is subsequently dishonored by the gambler [see Hamilton v. Abadjian (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 49, 52-53, 179 P.2d 804 (upholding Nevada gambling house recovery on checks determined to have been cashed and used by gambler for nongambling purposes; upholding disallowance of recovery on checks determined to have been cashed and used by gambler for gambling purposes); Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 63, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817 (Nevada gambling house disallowed recovery on checks because of finding by appellate court that there was insufficient evidence to sustain trial court's finding that defendant gambler did not obtain and use money for gambling purposes); see Lavick v. Nitzberg (1948) 83 Cal. App. 2d 381, 383, 188 P.2d 758 (checks given for chips in gambling house, to be used in poker game; checks held unenforceable, as contrary to good morals, under Civ. Code § 1667, regardless of whether particular form of gambling prohibited by statute or not); Braverman v. Horn (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 379, 381, 198 P.2d 948 (checks given for chips or cash for use in house dice game)]. Whether a check is honored by a payment of cash or of chips, if the purpose is to enable the drawer gambler to use the proceeds in a gambling game conducted by the payor gambling house, the latter has no cause of action of the check [Braverman v. Horn (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 379, 381, 198 P.2d 948] . The underlying principle supporting nonrecovery by the gambling house is tat the check in the suit is a contract in payment of a gambling debt and as such is unenforceable under Civ. Code § 1667 [Braverman v. Horn (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 379, 381, 198 P.2d 948] .

[c] Defense of Illegality

When a gambling house seeks to recover on a check cashed for its customer for the purpose of providing gambling funds, a gambler may defend against the action by raising the illegality of the gambling transaction [see Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 63-64, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817] . This affirmative defense is raised in the answer by alleging that [see Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 63-64, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817] :

- The check was cashed for the customer by the gambling house for the known purpose of gambling and

- The gambling house participated with the customer in the gambling transaction promoted by the check cashing.

[d] Presumptions

The Evidence Code abrogated the judicial doctrine that a presumption is evidence [Evid. Code § 600(a); see also Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 66, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817] . The Code also abolished the statutory presumption of legality [see former Code Civ. Proc. § 1963(1); see also Hamilton v. Abadjian (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 49, 52, 179 P.2d 804] and supplanted it by a statutory rule placing on the party claiming illegality the burden of proof on that issue [Evid. Code § 520; see also Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 66, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817] . Therefore it is no longer possible, as it was in a pre-1967 case, for a jury to weigh a presumption of regularity or legality of a check-cashing transaction, as asserted by a gambling house, against evidence offered by the defendant-gambler of the illegality of the transaction and to find in favor of the gambling house and against the gambler on the basis of the presumption only [see Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 66, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817 ; but see Hamilton v. Abadjian (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 49, 53, 179 P.2d 804 (pre-1967 case in which gambling house recovered on certain checks because presumption of legality of transaction was weighed as evidence by jury)].

[e] Sufficiency of Evidence to Rebut Defense of Illegality

A plaintiff gambling house embarks on a trial without benefit of presumptions as evidence [Evid. Code § 600(a)] and without benefit of a presumption of legality of the transaction [Evid. Code § 520]. Mere evidence that a gambling house had placed no restriction on a customer's use of money and that nongambling objectives were available if the customer chose to spend money on them is insufficient to rebut the defense of illegality [see Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968)

266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 68, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817] . The only inferences available from the uncontradicted evidence are of the customer's gambling purpose in cashing the checks and the mutual participation of the payees and maker in gambling with the proceeds [Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 68, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817] .

[2] By Party to Contract With Notice

The fact that money is borrowed for gambling purposes does not prevent recovery of the money by the lender if he or she was without knowledge of the purpose of the loan [see Leite v. Dietz (1949) 95 Cal. App. 2d 41, 42, 212 P.2d 265] . Thus, when the payee of a promissory note delivers money to the maker without knowledge of the purpose for which the maker intends to spend the proceeds, the payee's recovery on the note cannot be defeated by proof that the maker thereafter used the proceeds for an unlawful purpose [Leite v. Dietz (1949) 95 Cal. App. 2d 41, 43 P.2d265]. This rule applies only in a case in which the lender is without knowledge of the illegal purpose of the loan and may not therefore be treated as a party to the gambling transaction [Leite v. Dietz (1949) 95 Cal. App. 2d 41, 43, 212 P.2d 265] . On the other hand, if a lender advances money to a borrower with the understanding that it is to be used in gambling, he or she cannot recover the money thus advanced [see Leite v. Dietz (1949) 95 Cal. App. 2d 41, 43, 212 P.2d 265 (payee unable to recover on promissory note when inference was that she knew money was borrowed for the purpose of paying gambling debt)]. When money is loaned by one player to another while both are participating in a gambling game for the sole and known purpose of enabling the other player to continue the game, the lender is unable to recover on the subsequently unpaid check [see Rose v. Nelson (1947) 79 Cal. App. 2d 751, 751-752, 180 P.2d 749 (check which was issued to cover I.O.U.'s given during poker game was returned from bank unpaid); but see Corbin v. Wachhorst (1887) 73 Cal. 411, 413, 15 P. 22 (payee of promissory note able to recover on note although payee participated in dice game and knew purpose for which money intended to be used when it did not appear payee won any of the money or that maker of note lost any of it in the dice throwing)].

[3] By Third Party With Notice

A third party is a person who was not an original party to the gambling transaction. Such a person may or may not have the rights of a holder in due course. For example, even if the consideration for a promissory note is won at gambling, the note is valid in the hands of an innocent indorsee unless it is declared void by statute [see Haight v. Joyce (1852) 2 Cal. 64, 66-67 (original debt not incurred in gambling house; innocent indorsee, by definition, as without notice of gambling transaction)]. And the presumption of consideration attending negotiable instruments (see former Civ. Code § 3105 and former Code Civ. Proc. § 1963(21)) has been replaced by a rule declaring that the defendant's admitted signature entitles the holder to recover unless the defendant establishes a defense [Com. Code § 3308(b); Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 67, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817] . If the defendant proves a defense or claim in recoupment, the plaintiff's right to payment is subject to the defense or claim, except to the extent that the plaintiff proves that the plaintiff has rights of a holder in due course that are not subject to the defense or claim [Com. Code § 3308(b)].

However, if the third party had notice at the time he or she received checks that they were given in payment of a gambling debt, then he or she was not a holder in due course because the consideration for the instruments was illegal and the title of the person negotiating them was defective [former Civ. Code § 3136, now Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(B) (illegality of transaction); see Union Collection Co. v. Buckman (1907) 150 Cal. 159, 161-162, 88 P. 708 ; Sasner v. Ornsten (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 467, 471, 209 P.2d 44 ; see also Com. Code § 3302(a)(2)(F) (to be holder in due course one must take without notice of defense or claim described in Com. Code § 3305(a))].

Notice of a defense or claim in recoupment as to a negotiable instrument such as to deprive a third party transferee of the status of holder in due course and preclude his or her recovery requires either actual knowledge of the defect or knowledge of facts, circumstances or suspicions so cogent and obvious that the party's action in passively taking the instrument amounts to bad faith [former Civ. Code § 3137, now Com. Code §§ 1202(a), 3302(a)(2)(F); Sasner v. Ornsten (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 467, 471, 209 P.2d 44 (denial of recovery on three checks brought by third party holder against maker on ground that holder at time checks were delivered to him by payee had knowledge of fact that they were given in payment of gambling debts); but see Com. Code § 1202(a), which defines "notice" as actual knowledge or notice of the existence of facts and circumstances known at the time that gives reason to know that the fact exists].

For a further discussion of negotiable instruments or commercial paper and for forms for use in actions on promissory notes and checks, see Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments .

[4] Exception for Enforcement of Properly Rendered Foreign Judgment

A gambling debt that is incurred in another jurisdiction in which gambling is legal may be enforceable in California if the plaintiff obtains a judgment on the debt in the foreign jurisdiction and files a complaint in California for enforcement of that judgment. In recent years, California has expanded its acceptance of gambling, as manifested by the introduction of the California lottery and other innovations. Thus, enforcement of a foreign judgment for a gambling debt incurred in a jurisdiction in which gambling is legal is not so antagonistic to California public policy interests as to preclude the extension of comity [Crockford's Club, Ltd. v. Si-Ahmed (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1402, 1406, 250 Cal. Rptr. 728] .

§ 272.15 Spouse's Statutory Right to Recover Community Property Transferred in Discharge of Gambling Debt

Fam. Code § 1100(b) provides that a spouse may not make a gift of community personal property or dispose of community personal property for less than fair and reasonable value, without the written consent of the other spouse. Because an obligation arising from a gambling debt is unenforceable as a result of the unlawfulness of the transaction out of which the debt arose, a transfer of funds in discharge of such a debt is without consideration [Novo v. Hotel Del Rio (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 304, 307, 295 P.2d 576] .

Thus, one spouse's transfer of community funds to the winner of a gambling game is a transfer of those funds without the other spouse's consent and without receipt by the transferor spouse of valuable consideration [see Novo v. Hotel Del Rio (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 304, 307, 295 P.2d 576 (decided under former Civ. Code § 172)]. Such a transfer may be set aside in its entirety by the nontransferring spouse during the transferor spouse's lifetime, and may be set aside with regard to one half the amount transferred after the transferor spouse's death [Novo v. Hotel Del Rio (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 304, 308, 295 P.2d 576] . For a form for a complaint to seek recovery of community funds, see § 272.50.

Further, a nontransferring spouse's action to recover these community funds may not be barred on the theory that the transferor spouse benefited indirectly by the other spouse's recovery and was, therefore, unjustly enriched [Novo v. Hotel Del Rio (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 304, 307-308, 295 P.2d 576] . In fact, such an action would only return to the community that which was unlawfully taken from it and would merely place the parties in the positions they occupied prior to the transaction [Novo v. Hotel Del Rio (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 304, 307-308, 295 P.2d 576] .

Fam. Code § 1101 provides one spouse with a statutory claim against the other spouse for any breach of fiduciary duty that results in substantial impairment to the claimant spouse's present undivided one-half interest in the community estate [Fam. Code § 1101(a)]. The breach is actionable merely on impairment of the claimant's interest; a substantial impairment is not required [Fam. Code § 1101(a)]. It appears that a claim against a spouse could be made under this provision for a transfer of community funds for gambling purposes in violation of Fam. Code § 1100(b) [see Fam. Code § 1101(a)]. For detailed discussion of remedies under this section, see Ch. 122, Community Property .

Pen. Code § 326.5(b) does not prohibit nonprofit organization from using bingo proceeds to pay attorney fees associated with the bingo operation. Arden Carmichael, Inc. v. County of Sacramento (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1070, 1078, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673

[2] Definitions

Mere use of electronic vending machines to dispense lottery tickets does not transform lawful sale of tickets into unlawful use of slot machines, when machines inject no additional element of chance into determination or distribution of winning lottery ticket. Trinkle v. California State Lottery (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1401, 1405, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 904

Telephone card vending machines that also had "sweepstakes" feature was slot machine under Penal Code § 330b; by inserting money and purely by chance (without any skill whatsoever), user could receive or become entitled to receive money. Lockyer v. Pacific Gaming Technologies (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 699, 703, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 400

Finding that "Match 5" jukeboxes constitute illegal slot machines and "flipperless" pinball machines constitute illegal gambling devices upheld; argument that definitions of prohibited slot machines under Penal Code §§ 330b and 330.1 are unconstitutionally vague rejected; exemption for "antiques" under Penal Code § 330.7 held inapplicable. Trinkle v. Stroh (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 771, 779, 784, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 661

California State Lottery Keno does not meet statutory definition of "lottery game" under Gov. Code § 8880.12 or

"lottery" under Pen. Code § 319; it is house-banked game in which participants bet individually against game's operator, the California State Lottery. Western Telcon, Inc. v. California (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 475, 479, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 812, 917 P. 2d 651

Term "percentage game" in Penal Code § 330 is not unconstitutionally vague, but encompasses any game of chance from which house collects money calculated as portion of wagers made or sums won in play, exclusive of charges or fees for use of space and facilities; "rental fee" based on percentage of wagers renders game illegal percentage game. Huntington Park Club Corp. v. Meehan (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1290, 1302, 240 Cal. Rptr. 171

Judicial definition of "percentage game" used in Penal Code § 330 is any game in which house collects money calculated as portion of wagers made or sums won in play. Walker v. Meehan (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1290, 1296-1297, 240 Cal. Rptr. 171

"Wagering" for purpose of prohibition against pari-mutuel employee wagering on results of race while on duty [see *4 Cal. [3] Doctrine of In Pari Delicto

[a] Applied to Gambling

Gambling activity classified as an unlawful and forbidden enterprise to which doctrine of in pari delicto applies. Bradley v. Doherty (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 991, 997, 106 Cal. Rptr. 725 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878 (betting on outcome of pinball games)

General rule that court will not recognize an illegal betting contract and will not aid parties thereto, but will leave them where it finds them as denying relief to parties seeking to recover either their stakes or their winnings under wagering contract that violates the law. Bradley v. Doherty (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 991, 994, 106 Cal. Rptr. 725 , cert. denied

Constitutionality of applying doctrine of in pari delicto to bar action to recover money lost in fixed gambling by compulsive gambler. Bradley v. Doherty (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 991, 993-998, 106 Cal. Rptr. 725

Courts deny relief to parties seeking to recover either stakes or winnings under wagering contract that is in violation of law. Kyne v. Kyne (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 436, 438, 106 P.2d 620

California cases are uniform in holding that when money or property is lost in transaction between parties that is prohibited by law, neither party has standing in court of law or equity to recover losses. Wallace v. Opinham (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 25, 28, 165 P.2d 709

Plaintiff is barred from recovering money seized by peace officers in gambling raid because claim based on illegal transaction and court would not aid persons who had committed crime to recover property used in perpetration of unlawful act. Lee On v. Long (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 499, 502-503, 234 P.2d 9 , cert. denied, 342 U.S. 947

Doctrine of in pari delicto is constitutionally applied to prohibit recovery of money lost by compulsive gambler. Bradley v. Doherty (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 991, 997-998, 106 Cal. Rptr. 725 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878

[b] Applied to Stakeholder

Plaintiff-bettor and defendant-stakeholder stand in pari delicto in execution of criminal and illegal agreement. Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 68, 140 P. 306

Recovery denied whether party against whom relief sought was party to wager or stakeholder for parties to wager. Kyne v. Kyne (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 436, 438, 106 P.2d 620

[c] Demurrer Available

Complaint to recover property by one who committed a public offense is subject to demurrer. Schenck v. Hirshfeld (1913) 22 Cal. App. 709, 711, 136 P. 725 (money wagered on outcome of election)

Demurrer without leave to amend is correctly sustained by court when, because of necessary application of doctrine of in pari delicto, appellant cannot state a cause of action. Bradley v. Doherty (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 991, 998, 106 Cal. Rptr. 725 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878 (betting on outcome of various games, including pinball games)

[d] Fraud or Deceit

Rule denying recovery to parties seeking to recover stakes or winnings under wagering contract which violates law is applied even though winner wins gambling by fraud or deceit. Bradley v. Doherty (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 991, 994, 106 Cal. Rptr. 725 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878

Plaintiff is disallowed to recover gambling losses sustained as result of voluntary participation in card game prohibited by statute, even though defendant may have resorted to fraud by furnishing marked deck of cards. Wallace v. Opinham (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 25, 25-26, 29-30, 165 P.2d 709

Plaintiff is unable to recover gambling losses when unable to prove alleged fraud by means of which losses were incurred without evidence of plaintiff's own participation in unlawful card game; parties as in pari delicto. Wallace v. Opinham (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 25, 26, 165 P.2d 709

Courts are not arbiters of incidental acts of participant in gambling games prohibited by law; public policy precludes courts from distinguishing between degrees of turpitude of parties engaged in outlawed transactions. Bradley v. Doherty (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 991, 995, 106 Cal. Rptr. 725 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 878

[e] Right to Recover Not Dependent on Gambling Contract

Although suit may involve transaction with some illegal features, plaintiff is able to recover if cause of action is otherwise legitimate and if case can be made out without aid of illegality. Cal-Neva Lodge, Inc. v. Marx (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 186, 189, 2 Cal. Rptr. 889

Test of application is whether plaintiff can establish case otherwise than through medium of illegal transaction to which plaintiff is a party. Cal-Neva Lodge, Inc. v. Marx (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 186, 189, 2 Cal. Rptr. 889

Defendant-agent's duty to pay corporate plaintiff arises not from illegal agreement or transaction, but from separate agreement of agent to collect for and pay to principal the money owed. Cal-Neva Lodge, Inc. v. Marx (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 186, 189, 2 Cal. Rptr. 889 (agent collected moneys owed by parties suffering gambling losses and agent failed to pay casino)

[f] Withdrawal From Gambling Contract

Gambling contracts opposed to good morals and public policy are not recognized by courts; however, person is able to disaffirm such a contract and be restored to status quo prior to execution of transaction to which contract relates. Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 66, 140 P. 306

Party who disaffirms or withdraws from contract involving wager before event occurs ordinarily is entitled to return of money. Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 66, 140 P. 306

Relief granted on ground that one who repents of act frowned upon by law will be furnished aid in withdrawing consideration ventured. Schenck v. Hirshfeld (1913) 22 Cal. App. 709, 710, 136 P. 725

Court will not lend aid to enable persons who have committed a public offense to recover property used in its perpetration. Schenck v. Hirshfeld (1913) 22 Cal. App. 709, 711, 136 P. 725

Transaction void from inception when wager is a crime by statute; not subject to disaffirmance or withdrawal. Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 70, 140 P. 306 (wager on outcome of wrestling contest in violation of former Penal Code § 337a, now Penal Code § 337a(6))

When wager agreement is not in violation of criminal statute, withdrawal of money may be made and enforced only up to time of happening of event upon which wager conditioned. Schenck v. Hirshfeld (1913) 22 Cal. App. 709, 711, 136 P. 725 (wager on outcome of election in violation of former Penal Code § 60)

When wager agreement is not in violation of criminal statute, party to wager is able to withdraw money from contest before occurrence of event upon which wager was conditioned; but if wager is a penal offense, money is not recoverable at any time from stakeholder. Schenck v. Hirshfeld (1913) 22 Cal. App. 709-711, 22 Cal. App. 709, 711, 136 P. 725

If wager is a crime by statute, party thereto is unable to recover money from stakeholder although transaction was not completed and although party repudiated transaction and demanded return of money. Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 67-68, 140 P. 306

[4] Gambling Contracts Are Illegal

[a] Illegality of Contract Is a Defense

Agreement for bet or wager is one in which promisor agrees to perform on happening of a condition, and for which performance he or she receives no agreed exchange. Kyne v. Kyne (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 436, 438, 106 P.2d 620 ; Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 66, 140 P. 306 ; Schenck v. Hirshfeld (1913) 22 Cal. App. 709, 710, 136 P. 725

Wagering agreements in violation of express provision of law are illegal contracts. Kyne v. Kyne (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 436, 438-439, 106 P.2d 620 ; Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 67, 140 P. 306

Defense of illegality as open to parties to illegal contract and those claiming under them. Kyne v. Kyne (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 436, 439, 106 P.2d 620

Court does not recognize illegal contracts and will not aid parties thereto, but will leave them where it finds them. Kyne v. Kyne (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 436, 438, 106 P.2d 620

Full opportunity to present defense that game is not gambling is essential element of due process. Bank of America v. Long Beach (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 882, 886, 124 Cal. Rptr. 256

[b] Contrary to Express Provision of Law

Contract contrary to express provision of law is void from inception. Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 67, 140 P. 306

Wagering contract concerning outcome of wrestling match in violation of Penal Code § 337a, now Penal Code § 337a(6), is illegal. Matthews v. Lopus (1914) 24 Cal. App. 63, 66, 140 P. 306

Wagering agreement concerning outcome of election is illegal contract under Penal Code §§ 337a, 659, and former Elec. Code § 11504. Kyne v. Kyne (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 436, 438-439, 106 P.2d 620

Courts will not recognize illegal contracts or aid parties thereto, but leaves them where it finds them. Kyne v. Kyne (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 436, 438, 106 P.2d 620

[c] Contrary to Public Policy or Good Morals

Gambling is contrary to public policy or good morals and hence unlawful under provisions of Civ. Code § 1667. Union Collection Co. v. Buckman (1907) 150 Cal. 159, 161, 88 P. 708 ; Braverman v. Horn (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 379, 381, 198 P.2d 948 ; Lavick v. Nitzberg (1948) 83 Cal. App. 2d 381, 382, 188 P.2d 758

Civ. Code § 1667 establishes law that contract founded upon a gambling consideration is unenforceable. Lavick v. Nitzberg (1948) 83 Cal. App. 2d 381, 382, 188 P.2d 758

Contracts of wager, or betting, are generally void in contravention of policy of law. Schenck v. Hirshfeld (1913) 22 Cal. App. 709, 710, 136 P. 725

Check or promissory note given in gambling house to owner of house for purpose of enabling maker to participate in game of chance with owner or employees are unenforceable under provisions of Civ. Code § 1667. Lavick v. Nitzberg (1948) 83 Cal. App. 2d 381, 383, 188 P.2d 758 (owner unable to recover when defendant purchased chips for poker game with checks, lost chips, and stopped payment on checks)

Check in payment of gambling debt is contract that is contra bonos mores and unenforceable under Civ. Code § 1667. Braverman v. Horn (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 379, 381, 198 P.2d 948

[d] Raising Issue of Illegality

Pleading illegality of contract as defense. Cain v. Burns (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 439, 442, 280 P.2d 888

Illegality of contract not appearing from face of complaint is matter of affirmative defense to be specially pleaded; burden of proof of illegality is on defendant. Hamilton v. Abadjian (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 49, 53, 179 P.2d 804 ; Eaton v. Brock (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 10, 13, 268 P.2d 58

Court as required to consider issue of illegality of contract if facts of case present issue, whether pleaded or not. Clejan v. Reisman (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 224, 238, 84 Cal. Rptr. 897

When evidence shows that plaintiff seeks to enforce illegal contract, court has both power and duty to ascertain true facts in order to avoid unwittingly lending assistance to encouragement of what public policy forbids. Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 147-148, 308 P.2d 713

Parties not raising issue of illegality at trial is immaterial. Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 148, 308 P.2d 713 ; Griffis v. Squire (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 461, 465-466, 73 Cal. Rptr. 154

Question of illegality of agreement is considered for first time on appeal. Griffis v. Squire (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 461, 465-466, 73 Cal. Rptr. 154

Circumstances under which defendant disallowed to raise defense of illegality of contract for first time on appeal. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Fromberg (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 185, 190, 49 Cal. Rptr. 475

[5] Gambling Debt Owed to Licensed Gambling Establishment

[a] Burden of Proof

When issue of illegality of gambling transaction is raised by defendant-maker's answer in assignee's action for collection of gambling-tinged checks, defendant has burden of proof of illegality. Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 67, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817 ; Hamilton v. Abadjian (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 49, 53, 179 P.2d 804

[b] Defense of Illegality

Owner of gambling house who honors check for purpose of providing prospective customer with funds with which to gamble and who then participates in transaction thus promoted by his or her act is unable to recover on check. Hamilton v. Abadjian (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 49, 52, 179 P.2d 804 ; Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 63, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817 ; Braverman v. Horn (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 379, 381, 198 P.2d 948 ; Lavick v. Nitzberg (1948) 83 Cal. App. 2d 381, 383, 188 P.2d 758

Defense of illegality underlying gambling transaction is raised by answer alleging checks cashed for known purpose of gambling and that gambling casino participated with customer in gambling transaction promoted by check cashing. Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 63-64, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817

Gambling house's mere proof that no restriction placed on gambler's use of money at time check cashed is insufficient to support finding of nongambling purpose and use. Lane & Pyron, Inc. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 68, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817

In action by gambling house to recover on check cashed for customer, issue is whether check was cashed for purpose of providing funds to gamble with donor. Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 68, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817 ; Braverman v. Horn (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 379, 381, 198 P.2d 948

When check is cashed for purpose of providing funds to gamble, gambling house operator has participated in illegal transaction. Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 68, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817

Gambling house has no cause of action on checks cashed for customer, whether cashed for cash or chips, when purpose is to enable gambler to use proceeds in gambling game conducted by payor gambling house. Braverman v. Horn (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 379, 381, 198 P.2d 948

Principle supporting nonrecovery by gambling house is that check in suit is contract in payment of gambling debt and as such contra bonos mores and unenforceable under Civ. Code § 1667. Braverman v. Horn (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 379, 381, 198 P.2d 948

[c] Presumptions

Civ. Code § 1614 creates presumption affecting burden of producing evidence and not burden of proof; once evidence is admitted sufficient to call existence of consideration into question, proponent of written instrument retains burden of proving consideration. Rancho Santa Fe Pharmacy, Inc. v. Seyfert (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 875, 884, 883, 268 Cal. Rptr. 505

Plaintiff is entitled to rely on presumption that there was sufficient consideration for checks, that transaction was legal, and that it was not contrary to public policy. Hamilton v. Abadjian (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 49, 52, 179 P.2d 804 (hotel's assignee recovered in part on action brought to enforce payment on checks cashed for guest by hotel, in whose casino gambling occurred; case decided prior to enactment of Evid. Code §§ 520, 600(a))

If transaction is fair and regular on face, burden of proof of unlawful purpose is person asserting illegality. Hamilton v. Abadjian (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 49, 53, 179 P.2d 804

Weighing of presumption of legality against evidence of illegal purpose is no longer possible as Evidence Code adopted in 1967 abolished statutory presumption of legality (former Code Civ. Proc. § 1963(1)) and abrogated judicial doctrine that a presumption is evidence (Evid. Code § 600(a)). Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 66, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817

Presumption of legality (former Code Civ. Proc. § 1963(1)) has been supplanted by statutory rule placing upon party claiming illegality the burden or proof on that issue (Evid. Code § 520). Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 66, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817

Presumption of fairness and regularity (former Code Civ. Proc. § 1963(19)) has been replaced by statutory maxim cautioning that private transactions are (usually) fair and regular (Civ. Code § 3545). Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 66, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817

Presumption of consideration attending negotiable instruments (former Code Civ. Proc. § 1963(21); Civ. Code § 3105) has been replaced by rule declaring defendant's admitted signature entitles holder to recover unless defendant establishes defense (Com. Code § 3308(b)). Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 66-67, 71 Cal.

Rptr. 817

[d] Rebutting Defense of Illegality

Whether defendant met burden of proof of illegality is question for trier of fact; question is whether substantial evidence exists to support its conclusion. Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 67, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817

Plaintiff's evidence that two gambling houses placed no restriction on customer's use of money and that nongambling objectives were available if customer chose to spend money on them is insufficient to rebut the defense of illegality. Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 68, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817

Only inferences available from uncontradicted evidence is customer's gambling purpose in cashing checks and mutual participation of payees and maker in gambling with proceeds. Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 68, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817

Although phrase "without restriction on its use" is often used, real issue is whether check was cashed "for purpose of providing funds" to gamble with donor. Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 68, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817

[5A] Gambling Control Act

City's gaming control regulatory ordinance, which mirrored Gaming Control Act (GCA) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 19800 et seq.] in requiring key employees to provide personal information in order to be licensed, was not preempted by GCA; ordinance was not unconstitutional for violating employees' privacy, but city was required to notify employees before disclosing their personal information. Gilbert v. City of San Jose (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 606, 616-617, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 692

[6] Gambling Debt Owed to Private Party With Knowledge

When payee of promissory note delivers money to maker without knowledge of purpose for which maker intends to spend proceeds, payee's recovery on note is not defeated by proof that maker thereafter used proceeds for unlawful purpose; but rule applies only when lender is without knowledge of illegal purpose of loan and therefore is not to be treated as party to gambling transaction. Leite v. Dietz (1949) 95 Cal. App. 2d 41, 43, 212 P.2d 265

Promissory note is given without consideration when it is executed to pay gambling debt to bookmaker; inference that bookmaker's wife, payee of note who advanced in cash amount represented by note, was aware of husband's scheme to clear gambling debt by loan from her. Leite v. Dietz (1949) 95 Cal. App. 2d 41, 42-43, 212 P.2d 265

Money loaned by one player to another while both are participating in poker game for sole purpose of enabling other player to continue game is gambling debt that precludes recovery by lender. Rose v. Nelson (1947) 79 Cal. App. 2d 751, 751-752, 180 P.2d 749

Summary judgment for defendant is appropriate in action to recover on unpaid check when loans made by plaintiff to defendant were for sole purpose of enabling defendant to use proceeds in poker game in which both parties were participating. Rose v. Nelson (1947) 79 Cal. App. 2d 751, 752, 180 P.2d 749

Payee of promissory note, given for money loaned by him in good faith to be used in throwing dice, is able to maintain an action on note against maker, although payee knew purpose for which money was intended to be used, when it does not appear that payee won any of the money, or that maker of note lost any of it, in the dice throwing. Corbin v. Wachhorst (1887) 73 Cal. 411, 413, 15 P. 22

[7] Gambling Debt Owed to Third Party With Notice

If consideration for promissory note is won at gambling, note is valid in hands of innocent endorsee unless declared void by statute. Haight v. Joyce (1852) 2 Cal. 64, 66-67

Presumption of consideration attending negotiable instruments (former Code Civ. Proc. § 1963(21) Civ. Code § 3105) has been replaced by rule declaring defendant's admitted signature entitles holder to recover unless defendant establishes defense (Com. Code § 3308(b)). Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 67, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817

Person taking check with notice that it was given in payment of gambling debt is not holder in due course, inasmuch as consideration for instrument is illegal and title of person negotiating it is defective (former Civ. Code § 3136, now Com. Code §§ 3302(a)(2)(F), 3305(a)(1)(B). Sasner v. Ornsten (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 467, 471, 209 P.2d 44

Notice of defect in title in negotiable instrument such as to deprive third party transferee of status of holder in due course and preclude recovery requires either actual knowledge of defect or knowledge of facts, circumstances or suspicions so cogent and obvious that party's action in passively taking instrument amounts to bad faith (former Civ. Code § 3137, now Com. Code §§ 1202(a), 3302(a)(2)(F), 3305(a)(1)(B). Sasner v. Ornsten (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 467, 471, 209 P.2d 44

When party gave checks to defendant in payment of gambling losses incurred in presence of third-party plaintiff, and defendant endorsed and negotiated checks to plaintiff to apply to preexisting indebtedness rather than depositing them to defendant's own account, plaintiff was unable to recover on checks as holder in due course. Sasner v. Ornsten (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 467, 472, 209 P.2d 44

Promissory notes given to evidence alleged gambling indebtedness are based upon immoral and illegal consideration and are unenforceable. Union Collection Co. v. Buckman (1907) 150 Cal. 159, 161, 88 P. 708

Assignee of holder of promissory notes given to evidence alleged gambling indebtedness as occupying no better position in suit than holder of note; when note was nonnegotiable, defenses available against holder of note were available against assignee. Union Collection Co. v. Buckman (1907) 150 Cal. 159, 161-162, 88 P. 708

Contract made in consideration of prior illegal one or in compromise of dispute arising from it is also illegal and unenforceable. Union Collection Co. v. Buckman (1907) 150 Cal. 159, 166, 88 P. 708 (compromise of claim based on illegal gambling contract is unenforceable)

[8] Horse Racing

Gambler's expungement from bookmaking conviction did not automatically make him "rehabilitated" within meaning of Horse Racing Board rules permitting board to make exception authorizing convicted bookmakers to participate in parimutuel gambling in future; board has discretion to make such an exception, but is not required to do so. Opdyk v. California Horse Racing Board (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1826, 1830, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263

Purchasers of share in cancelled parimutuel (horse race) ticket have no cause of action against track, or against person who sold them shares in it, because any form of wagering or betting on result of horse race other than system permitted by statute is illegal under Bus. & Prof. Code § 19595. Szadolci v. Hollywood Park Operating Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 16, 20-21, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 356 (causes of action pleaded were negligence, conspiracy, and negligent hiring)

Administrative Procedure Act is inapplicable to exclusion hearings under Bus. & Prof. Code § 19573. Morrison v. California Horse Racing Bd. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 211, 220, 252 Cal. Rptr. 293

Because Horse Racing Board rules allow board to exclude licensed owners from entry to racetrack, owner's reliance on license as assurance of admittance to racetracks was unreasonable and insufficient to invoke equitable estoppel. Morrison v. California Horse Racing Bd. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 211, 217-218, 252 Cal. Rptr. 293

Exclusion from racetrack of racehorse owner who had felony conviction for bank robbery and against whom there was evidence of off-premises conduct involving threats, intimidation, and illegal loan activities, was proper. Morrison v. California Horse Racing Bd. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 211, 220-221, 252 Cal. Rptr. 293

Use of messenger service to purchase pari-mutuel tickets on bettor's behalf violates prohibition on off-track betting; prohibition on forwarding of money to be wagered on horse racing is within legitimate police power of state and not violative of Equal Protection Clause. Advanced Delivery Service, Inc. v. Gates (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 967, 976-977, 228 Cal. Rptr. 557

Pari-mutuel employees properly disciplined for "wagering" on results of race while on duty [see 4 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1950, 1969] when employees placed bets for others, even though employees never wagered with their own money. Overturf v. California Horse Racing Bd. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 979, 983-986, 150 Cal. Rptr. 657

Plaintiff, in order to be entitled to hearing before California Horse Racing Board, is required to assert in hearing request that he or she had been excluded from racetrack under a Board rule but that he or she was not a person covered by that rule. Greenberg v. Hollywood Turf Club (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 968, 980, 86 Cal. Rptr. 885 (licensed stable agent employee not permitted to enter stable area)

Bus. & Prof. Code § 19572 authorizes state horse racing board to promulgate regulations excluding undesirable persons from racetracks; rules promulgated by board in exercise of that authority does not constitute an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power. Epstein v. California Horse Racing Bd. (1963) 222 Cal. App. 2d 831, 834-835, 35 Cal. Rptr. 642

In absence of statute, no constitutional common-law right to admittance to racetrack or other places of amusement exists comparable to common-law right of access to inn. Epstein v. California Horse Racing Bd. (1963) 222 Cal. App. 2d 831, 840, 35 Cal. Rptr. 642

Legislature and the people have reversed policy that bets on horse racing are unenforceable with respect to gambling done on licensed premises of racing association and through pari-mutuel machines. Nevcal Enterprises, Inc. v. Cal-Neva Lodge, Inc. (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 177, 180-181, 14 Cal. Rptr. 805

[9] Lottery

Purchase of winning ticket by person who did not rely on outdated sign, posted where ticket was purchased, stating that payout would be over 10 years created contract with 18-year payout in accordance with Lottery rule actually in effect; equitable estoppel was not applicable to change 18-year term. Hair v. State of California (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 321, 328-329, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871

When issue was whether fourth of four winning tickets had ever been issued or was subject of retailer's "request for adjustment" to reflect issuing terminal's printing or cutting error, denial of request for continuance for further discovery and granting motion for summary judgment was error in view of fact that someone at Lottery had written number of missing winning ticket on adjustment request, creating possibility but not inference that request related to that ticket number. Aguimatang v. California State Lottery (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 769, 803-804, 286 Cal. Rptr. 57

Holders of three winning tickets were not entitled to share fourth part represented by "unclaimed" ticket; unclaimed winnings reverted to Education Fund. Aguimatang v. California State Lottery (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 769, 786, 789, 286 Cal. Rptr. 57 (applying former Gov. Code § 8880.32(c), (e))

Lottery advertisements are not offers to potential purchasers to enter into unilateral contracts by buying lottery tickets; thus, potential purchaser who could not purchase ticket with chosen numbers because ticket machine malfunctioned has no cause of action (against state or retailer) for breach of contract. Brown v. California State Lottery Com. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1335, 1339-1340, 284 Cal. Rptr. 108

Retailer whose contract with Lottery Commission allowed her to play scratcher tickets unsold at end of game was not entitled to play ticket that was stolen, scratched, and found to be $100,000 winner and returned to retailer, because that would violate requirement that all play be by fair chance. Horan v. State of California (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1503, 1508-1510, 270 Cal. Rptr. 194

[10] Pai Gow

Pai gow, played with rotating dealer who did not act as bank, was not banking game; county and sheriff bound by prior adjudication. City of Bell Gardens v. County of Los Angeles (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1563, 1569, 283 Cal. Rptr. 91

[14] Video Games

Video poker games that entitled winner to free game are illegal slot machines within meaning of Penal Code § 330b(b) because free game is something of value and outcome is dependent on hazard or chance. *Score Family Fun Center, Inc. v. PART IV. FORMS

§ 272.40 Affirmative Defense--Illegal Contract [Civ. Code § 1667(1)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Illegal Contract [Civ. Code § 1667(1)]

AS A [(if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:

1. The contract set forth in the complaint as the subject of this action was and is unenforceable for the reason that it is contrary to an express provision of the law.

2. _____ [Specify illegality, e.g., On _____ [date], a _____ (specify, e.g., primary or general) election was held in the State of California. On or prior to that date, _____ (name of plaintiff) entered into a wagering agreement with _____ (name of defendant) in the amount of $_____ concerning the number of votes each party believed would be cast for _____ (name), a candidate for _____ (specify, e.g., the Senate or Governor). It is this agreement which the plaintiff, who won the wager, now seeks to enforce against the defendant.]

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, alleges that the contract in question is contrary to an express provision of the law. It is for use by the defendant in an action brought by another party to a wagering agreement to recover his or her winnings. A contract which is contrary to an express provision of law is unlawful [Civ. Code § 1667(1)]. Since a wagering agreement is in violation of an express provision of law, it is an illegal contract [Kyne v. Kyne (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 436, 438-439, 106 P.2d 620 (relying on Penal Code §§ 337a, 659 and former Elec. Code § 11504)].

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Contract Contrary to Public Policy [Civ. Code § 1667(2),(3)]--Gambling Establishment Seeking Recovery on Check Cashed for Customer for Gambling Purposes

AS A [(if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:

1. The contract set forth by _____ [name of plaintiff gambling establishment] in the complaint as the subject of this action was and is unenforceable for the reason that it is contrary to the policy of express law and to good morals.

2. During the evening of _____ [date], and the morning of _____ [date], _____ [name of defendant] cashed a series of _____ [number] checks at _____ [name of gambling establishment], which is located _____ [specify, e.g., on the Nevada side of Lake Tahoe].

3. The check-cashing transaction took place at _____ [specify, e.g., the gambling tables or the cashier's cages, located _____ (number) feet from the nearest game]. The checks in the amount of $_____ were cashed by _____ [name of defendant for _____ [specify, e.g., chips or money] and were cashed for the known purpose of gambling.

4. During the evening of _____ [date], and the morning of _____ [date], _____ [name of defendant] played _____ [specify name of game, e.g., craps or twenty-one or roulette] and lost at the gaming tables of _____ [name of gambling establishment] the proceeds of the checks that he/she had cashed there.

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, on the grounds that a gambling contract is contrary to public policy or good morals is for use to include in an answer by a party against whom a gambling establishment seeks to collect for checks that were cashed for the party but which were returned to the gambling establishment unpaid for lack of sufficient funds. It alleges that a gambling house that honors a check for the purpose of providing a prospective customer with funds with which to gamble and who then participates in the transaction thus promoted by his or her act is unable to recover on the check [Hamilton v. Abadjian (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 49, 52, 179 P.2d 804 ; Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 63, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817 ; Braverman v. Horn (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 379, 381, 198 P.2d 948 ; Lavick v. Nitzberg (1948) 83 Cal. App. 2d 381, 188 P.2d 758] . The principle supporting nonrecovery by the gambling house is that the check in the suit is a contract in payment of a gambling debt and is unenforceable under Civ. Code § 1667 [Braverman v. Horn (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 379, 381, 198 P.2d 948] . Indeed, when a check is cashed for the purpose of providing funds to gamble, the gambling house operator has participated in an illegal transaction [Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 68, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817] .

The form is adapted from the answer filed in Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 63-64, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817 . In Lane, plaintiff sued to collect on checks cashed in a gambling establishment and returned for lack of sufficient funds.

[3] Illegality of Contract

A contract is not lawful if it is [Civ. Code § 1667]:

- Contrary to an express provision of law (see Form 1);
- Contrary to the policy of express law, though not expressly prohibited; or
- Otherwise contrary to good morals.

A party to a contract may rescind the contract if the contract is unlawful for causes which do not appear in its terms or conditions, and the parties are not equally at fault or if the public interest will be prejudiced by permitting the contract to stand [Civ. Code § 1689(b)(5),(6)].

[4] Allegations

The form of affirmative defense alleges that [see Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 63-64, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817] :

- Defendant had cashed the checks for the known purpose of gambling (Paragraph 2).
- Defendant lost the money to the gambling house where the check was cashed (Paragraph 3).

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use to seek recovery of possession of community personal property transferred by plaintiff's spouse in satisfaction of a gambling debt without consideration and without plaintiff's written consent. When a spouse disposes of community personal property, it is necessary to obtain written consent from the other spouse, and to obtain a fair and reasonable value for the property [Fam. Code § 1100(b)]. Additionally, with respect to the management and control of community personal property, each spouse is required to act as a fiduciary toward the other spouse [Fam. Code § 1100(e)]. Thus, one spouse has the right to recover possession of community personal property transferred by the other without consideration and without consent [Lynn v. Herman (1946) 72 Cal. App. 2d 614, 617-618, 165 P.2d 54 (decided under interpretation of former Civ. Code § 172)]. The allegation of the character of property as community property is a question of fact [Estate of Hill (1914) 167 Cal. 59, 62-63, 138 P. 690] .

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges that:

- Plaintiff is the spouse of the donor (Paragraph 2).

- The property is community property (Paragraph 3) [see Fam. Code § 760 (defining community property); see also Estate of Hill (1914) 167 Cal. 59, 62-63, 138 P. 690 (stating that an allegation that property owned by a married person is separate or community property is an allegation of ultimate fact and the evidence from which this is determined is not to be set forth in a pleading)].

- The property was given to another person for less than fair and reasonable value and without plaintiff's written consent (Paragraph 5) [Fam. Code § 1100(b); Novo v. Hotel Del Rio (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 304, 307, 295 P.2d 576] .

- Defendant is in possession of the property (Paragraph 5) [see Riciotto v. Clement (1892) 94 Cal. 105, 107, 29 P. 414 (holding that a complaint to recover possession of personal property must allege that defendant has possession of the property)].

It should also be alleged that the property has a certain value (Paragraph 4) so that an alternative judgment may be rendered for that value in the event possession cannot be obtained [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 627, 667; see also Claudius v. Aguirre (1891) 89 Cal. 501, 504-506, 26 P. 1077 (discussing application of Code Civ. Proc. § 667 in action to obtain possession of personal property)]; see generally Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery].

[4] Unauthorized Gifts of Community Personal Property

Either spouse has the management and control of the community personal property, with the same absolute power of disposition, other than testamentary, as the spouse has of the separate estate of the spouse [Fam. Code § 1100(a)]. An exception, however, is that one spouse may not make a gift of community personal property or dispose of community personal property for less than fair and reasonable value, without the other spouse's written consent [Fam. Code § 1100(b)].

In cases decided under former Civ. Code § 172, now Fam. Code § 1100(b), when a husband transferred community personal property in violation of former Civ. Code § 172, now Fam. Code § 1100(b), the transfer was voidable in its entirety by the wife during the husband's lifetime [Novo v. Hotel Del Rio (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 304, 308, 295 P.2d 576 (husband transferred community personal property in satisfaction of gambling debt)] and possession was recovered by her [Lynn v. Herman (1946) 72 Cal. App. 2d 614, 617, 618, 165 P.2d 54] . The same principles should apply with equal force when a wife makes a transfer of community personal property for less than fair and reasonable value and without the written consent of her husband, because of provisions granting equal management and control of such property to both spouses [see Fam. Code § 1100(a)].

Fam. Code § 1101 provides one spouse with a statutory claim against the other spouse for any breach of fiduciary duty that results in substantial impairment to the claimant spouse's present undivided one-half interest in the community estate [Fam. Code § 1101(a)]. The breach is actionable merely on impairment of the claimant's interest, rather than on a substantial impairment. Furthermore, if the spouse breaches the fiduciary duty to the claimant spouse, including the duty under Fam. Code § 1100, above, and under Fam. Code § 721, related to property transactions generally, the claimant spouse may recover attorney's fees [Fam. Code § 1101(a),(g)]. It appears that a claim against a spouse could be made under this provision for a transfer of community funds for gambling purposes in violation of Fam. Code § 1100(b) [see Fam. Code § 1101(a)]. For a detailed discussion of remedies under this section, see Ch. 122, Community Property .

[5] Status of Property at Issue

If, in a particular action, there is an issue as to whether the property is community property or one spouse's separate property, the plaintiff spouse may join the transferor spouse as a defendant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 379(a)(2) (joinder of parties defendant), 427.10(a) (joinder of causes)] and seek a declaratory judgment against him or her regarding the status of the property [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1060, 1062; see generally Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief].

If the transferor spouse is joined, the plaintiff may also wish to assert a claim against that spouse for breach of fiduciary duty, and seek the remedies provided by statute for that breach, such as an accounting [see Fam. Code § 1101]. For a discussion of making such a claim and the remedies provided by statute [see Fam. Code § 1101], see Ch. 122, Community Property .

[6] Jurisdiction

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)].

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the paper must state whether or not the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

[7] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified also, if the action is in the superior court and is not a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude a general denial except in a limited civil case, and will preclude a general denial even in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion see Ch. 26, Answers .

§ 273.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses the liability of owners and operators of athletic parks and stadiums, of promoters of athletic teams and events, and of participants in athletic contests or events for injuries received by spectators. It contains a general form of complaint [see § 273.90], and forms of allegation for alleging that the defendant is liable because of a failure to protect plaintiff from foreseeable criminal conduct of third parties [see § 273.91], and that defendant's negligence can be presumed under the res ipsa loquitur doctrine [see § 273.92]. It also includes forms of affirmative defense alleging that plaintiff's primary assumption of risk precludes, as a matter of law, a finding that defendant owed a duty of care to prevent the plaintiff's injury [see § 273.93], and that any damages that plaintiff is entitled to recover should be reduced due to plaintiff's comparative fault [see § 273.94].

This chapter also discusses and contains forms for use by persons injured while participating in sports or games, including a general form of complaint [see § 273.110], allegations that plaintiff was injured due to a breach of duty by a co-participant [see §§ 273.111, 273.112], that plaintiff was injured due to a breach of duty by a coach or instructor [see § 273.113], and that plaintiff was injured due to a breach of duty by the proprietor of the facility [see §§ 273.114 -273.116]. This part also includes forms of affirmative defense asserting that plaintiff's action is precluded by the primary assumption of risk doctrine [see §§ 273.117, 273.118], and that comparative fault principles require a reduction of any recovery granted to plaintiff based on the proportion of fault attributable to plaintiff [see §§ 273.119, 273.120].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Injuries to Spectators

23-273 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 273.10

§ 273.10 Duty of Care Owed to Spectators

[1] By Participants

Generally, a player's mistake that results in an injury to a spectator or or other nonparticipant is of a sort that occurs naturally in the game or sport taking place, and as such does not make the player liable for the injury [see Mann v. Nutrilite, Inc. (1955) 136 Cal. App. 2d 729, 735, 289 P.2d 282] . For example, batting a ball foul into the grandstands at a baseball game is not itself negligence [see Quinn v. Recreation Park Ass'n (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 725, 728, 46 P.2d 144] . Nor is a player whose errant throw strikes a person standing on the field liable absent any showing of reckless disregard of others' safety [see Mann v. Nutrilite, Inc. (1955) 136 Cal. App. 2d 729, 734-735, 289 P.2d 282] .

A participant in a spectator sport is liable, however, for the willful and intentional assault of a patron of the game or exhibition [see Wiersma v. City of Long Beach (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 8, 11, 106 P.2d 45 (court assumed that participant, who defaulted in action, was liable for assault on spectator; issue before court was whether promoter was vicariously liable)], or for a reckless act that causes injury to a nonparticipant [see Bonetti v. Double Play Tavern (1954) 274 P.2d 751 (employer liable under respondeat superior for act of player, who threw baseball out of park after game was over and struck passerby)].

[2] By Owners and Promoters: Generally Applicable Duties

In general, everyone is responsible, not only for the result of his or her willful acts, but also for an injury occasioned to another by his or her want of ordinary care or skill in the management of his or her property or person, except so far as the latter has, willfully or by want of ordinary care, brought the injury on himself or herself [Civ. Code § 1714(a); see Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 119, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 (liability of possessor of land, based on negligence in operation and control of that land, is determined by Civ. Code § 1714(a))]. For complete discussion of the generally applicable duties of owners and possessors of land, see Ch. 421, Premises Liability .

Beyond this general formulation, the precise nature of the duty owed by owners and promoters to spectators is not clear. Courts have consistently held that the promoter of a sporting event, or the proprietor of the stadium in which that event is taking place, is not an insurer of the patron's safety [see, e.g., Quinn v. Recreation Park Ass'n (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 725, 729, 46 P.2d 144 ; Neinstein v. Los Angeles Dodgers, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 176, 181, 229 Cal. Rptr. 612 ; Brown v. San Francisco Ball Club (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 484, 486-487, 222 P.2d 19] . In addition, although courts have stated that promoters and owners must exercise ordinary care to protect patrons from injury [see, e.g., Quinn v. Recreation Park Ass'n (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 725, 729, 46 P.2d 144 ; Neinstein v. Los Angeles Dodgers, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 176, 181, 229 Cal. Rptr. 612] , courts have also criticized applications of this rule that would impose liability on owners of teams, at least for hazards that are generated by the way the particular game is played [see Neinstein v. Los Angeles Dodgers, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 176, 181, 229 Cal. Rptr. 612 (stating that "it is not the role of the courts to effect a wholesale remodeling of a revered American institution through application of the tort law")].

The California Supreme Court has noted that, in the sports context, conditions or conduct that otherwise might be viewed as dangerous often are an integral part of the sport itself [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (Court gave example of moguls posing risk of harm to skiers, but also creating challenge that is part of sport, so ski resorts have no duty to eliminate moguls)] . Defendants generally have no legal duty to eliminate (or protect a plaintiff against) risks inherent in the sport itself, but do have a duty to use due care not to increase the risks to a participant over and above those inherent in the sport [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315-316, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

[3] Specific Duties Owed by Owners

[a] Protection From Hazards of Game

In a 1935 case, the California Supreme Court defined the duty of care applicable to owners of stadiums as requiring only that screened seats be provided for as many as may be reasonably expected to call for them on any ordinary occasion. Under this rule, if a spectator chooses to occupy an unscreened seat, or is unable to secure a screened seat and consequently occupies a seat that is not screened, the spectator assumes the risk of being struck by thrown or batted ball, and cannot recover for injuries resulting from being struck [Quinn v. Recreation Park Ass'n (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 725, 729, 46 P.2d 144] . At least one judgment for a plaintiff in a case involving an injury to a spectator has been affirmed under this standard [Ratcliff v. San Diego Baseball Club (1938) 27 Cal. App. 2d 733, 738, 81 P.2d 625 (judgment for plaintiff, injured when bat slipped from batter's hands and struck plaintiff while she was walking to screened seat, affirmed; jury could reasonably have concluded that screen behind plate should have extended further)], and another case held that the owner had not established as a matter of law that it had provided enough protected seats [Rudnick v. Golden W. Broadcasters (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 793, 796, 202 Cal. Rptr. 900 (evidence that 2,300 seats were protected was insufficient to establish that this was all that may reasonably be expected to seek them, given that 10 to 20 times that number of spectators regularly attend games)]. Nevertheless, the continued validity of Quinn has been questioned.

One court of appeal stated that the duty set forth in Quinn was of little practical value, because only a spectator in an unprotected seat would be injured, and such a spectator would be precluded from recovery regardless of the reason he or she sat there [Neinstein v. Los Angeles Dodgers, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 176, 182, 229 Cal. Rptr. 612 (also stating that duty to provide screened seats is unnecessary, as spectators fearing injury can sit sufficient distance away from field to avoid likelihood of injury)]. The court also opined that the duty to supply an adequate number of protected seats, which was the basis of the reversal of a summary judgment for the defendant in Rudnick, appears to lack any causal nexus with an injury to a plaintiff [Neinstein v. Los Angeles Dodgers, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 176, 183, 229 Cal. Rptr. 612] .

The California Supreme Court has stated (in the context of injuries to participants) that a defendant generally has no duty to eliminate, or protect a plaintiff from, risks inherent to the sport itself, but has only a duty not to increase those risks [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315-316, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; § 273.54[1][a]]. It remains to be seen whether this statement of the duties of owners of sports facilities would permit any liability for injuries such as those incurred when a foul ball strikes a spectator at a baseball game, regardless of the protection (if any) provided by screens or backstops. One court of appeal, in a case decided well before Knight, speculated that a person seated behind a screen and relying on it for protection, who is injured by a ball penetrating the screen, might be permitted to recover [see Neinstein v. Los Angeles Dodgers, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 176, 182 n.3, 229 Cal. Rptr. 612] . This result could be seen as an application of the rule that a defendant does have a duty not to increase risks inherent to the sport, as a spectator seated behind a screen should be able to rely on the screen to protect him or her. It could also be argued that the level of protection that owners have historically provided--screens behind home plate at baseball parks, plastic or wire mesh above baseboards in ice hockey rinks--has become sufficiently customary to be evidence of an accepted standard of care.

For a form of complaint alleging that an owner is liable for damages resulting from a breach of the owner's duty of care to a spectator, see § 273.90.

The precise nature of the duty owed to spectators is also closely tied to the assumption of the risk doctrine. In Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 , the Supreme Court held that "primary assumption of risk" precludes a plaintiff from recovering damages, based on a finding that, under the circumstances of the case, the defendant owed no duty to the plaintiff to prevent the injuries suffered [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 310, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . The assumption of risk issues are discussed in § 273.10[4][a].

[b] Protection From Third Parties' Conduct

The owner of a stadium or auditorium staging a sporting event must use reasonable care to protect his or her patrons against injury through the negligent or wrongful acts of other patrons on the premises, if he or she has reasonable cause to anticipate such acts and the probability of injury from them [Sample v. Eaton (1956) 145 Cal. App. 2d 312, 316, 302 P.2d 431 (spectator at wrestling exhibition injured by bottle thrown by another spectator); see Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 119, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 (status of plaintiff as trespasser, licensee, or invitee is not determinative of liability)]. The owner is under a duty to protect his or her patrons by taking appropriate measures to restrain conduct by third persons, which he or she should be aware of and should realize is dangerous [Sample v. Eaton (1956) 145 Cal. App. 2d 312, 316, 302 P.2d 431] . For the purposes of determining the foreseeability of criminal conduct by third persons, it is not necessary that similar events have occurred before, if under the circumstances the risk should have been foreseen [see Isaacs v. Huntington Mem'l Hosp. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 112, 126-129, 211 Cal. Rptr. 356, 695 P.2d 653] .

However, at least one case has refused to hold the owner of a sport stadium liable for injury caused by third parties' criminal conduct in the parking lot, despite evidence that the security in the lot was inadequate, because the plaintiffs failed to show that the improvements in security would have deterred the particular incident that injured plaintiffs [Noble v. Los Angeles Dodgers, Inc. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 912, 917, 214 Cal. Rptr. 395] .

For a form setting out an allegation that a stadium owner or operator is liable for injuries caused by foreseeable conduct of a third person, see § 273.91. For complete discussion of the general rules involved in determining liability based on third parties' conduct, see Ch. 421, Premises Liability .

[4] Spectator's Assumption of Risk

[a] Basic Doctrine

The doctrine of assumption of risk as it applies to the liability of owners and possessors of premises is currently in flux. In Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 , the lead opinion of the Court stated that assumption of the risk issues will be analyzed to determine whether, on the one hand, the defendant had no duty to prevent the injury suffered by the plaintiff, in which case the plaintiff cannot recover due to his or her "primary assumption of risk," or whether on the other hand defendant did breach a duty of care owed to plaintiff, in which case plaintiff's conduct in encountering the known risk caused by the defendant's breach of duty may be considered by the trier of fact for purposes of apportioning fault under comparative negligence principles [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 314-315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . In his concurring opinion, Justice Mosk stated that he concurred "generally" with the analysis used in the lead opinion, although he would prefer to go further and eliminate the doctrine of assumption of risk entirely, applying instead comparative fault principles [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 321, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (Mosk, J., concurring)].

The precise issue before the Court in Knight was the liability of a participant in a touch football game for injuries suffered by another participant. For discussion of this aspect of the assumption of risk doctrine, see § 273.30. Although the case before the Court did not involve an injury to a spectator, in its discussion of the assumption of the risk doctrine the Court stated in broad terms that assumption of the risk does not depend on the subjective knowledge of the plaintiff. Instead, the doctrine involves an analysis of the defendant's duty of care, and the nature of that duty in the sports context depends heavily on the nature of the sport itself [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 316-317, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

For a form of affirmative defense alleging that plaintiff's primary assumption of risk precludes any recovery, see § 273.93. For further discussion of assumption of the risk generally, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

[b] Application of Doctrine to Spectator Cases

Although the California Supreme Court has not expressly ruled on a case involving liability to a nonparticipant, the court of appeal has applied to spectators the rule stated in Knight that defendants generally have a duty to use due care not to increase the risks to a particpant over and above those inherent in the sport. In one opinion, the court of appeal ruled that although foul balls may represent an inherent risk--and under Knight, an assumed risk--to spectators attending baseball games, the owners of the baseball team have a duty not to increase those risks [Lowe v. California League of Prof'l Baseball (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 112, 119, 123, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 105 (triable issue of fact regarding whether teams' mascot cavorting in stands and distracting spectator's attention, while baseball game in progress, increased inherent risk of spectator's being struck by foul ball)].

In addition, in its discussion of the liability of participants, the Supreme Court has emphasized its view that the duty depends not on the consent or knowledge of the particular plaintiff, but rather on the defendant's role in, or relationship to, the sport [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 316-317, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . The Court cited with approval a court of appeal case in which the court affirmed a judgment that held a stadium owner liable for an injury (suffered when plaintiff was struck by a baseball bat that slipped from the hands of a player), but that exonerated the player [Ratcliff v. San Diego Baseball Club (1938) 27 Cal. App. 2d 733, 736, 81 P.2d 625] . The Court pointed out that an analysis focusing on the plaintiff's knowledge of the risks of a baseball game would have treated the action against both defendants similarly with regard to that risk. Instead, the Court stated that the court of appeal implicitly recognized that two separate potential duties were at issue--the ballplayer's duty to play the game without carelessly throwing the bat, and the duty of the stadium owner to provide a reasonably safe stadium with regard to the particularly dangerous hazard of a thrown bat. The separate duties involved were the reason that the verdict absolving the player but holding the owner liable was not inconsistent [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 317, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

This analysis, with its focus on the nature of the activity involved rather than on the plaintiff's subjective knowledge of the risks accompanying the activity, appears to make the plaintiff's knowledge (or lack of knowledge) of the sport involved irrelevant to his or her ability to recover for injuries suffered as a spectator [cf. Quinn v. Recreation Park Ass'n (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 725, 730-731, 46 P.2d 144 (evidence that plaintiff knew game of baseball and dangers of game supported trial court's finding that she assumed risk as matter of law); Brown v. San Francisco Ball Club (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 484, 488-489, 222 P.2d 19 (court rejected contention that plaintiff's limited experience with baseball supported recovery, holding that assumption of risk could be based on either "common knowledge" of dangers that should be imputed to plaintiff, or that plaintiff was negligent in not observing obvious risks of danger); Shurman v. Fresno Ice Rink (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 469, 476, 205 P.2d 77 (plaintiff did not have sufficient knowledge of risks of ice hockey to establish as matter of law her knowing assumption of risk)].

Instead, in determining whether an owner had a duty to prevent a specific injury, the trial court will examine the risks inherent to the sport and the steps the sponsoring business entity reasonably should be obligated to take in order to minimize the risks without altering the nature of the sport [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 317, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; see also Neinstein v. Los Angeles Dodgers, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 176, 181, 229 Cal. Rptr. 612 (basing refusal to find liability at least in part on conclusion that to do so would alter nature of game)].

In a case relying on the analysis of Knight v. Jewett, the court of appeal held that a professional hockey club, the league, and the owners and operators of the hockey arena owed no duty to a spectator to protect her from being hit in the face by a flying puck during pregame warm-ups [Nemarnik v. Los Angeles Kings Hockey Club (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 631, 643, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10] . The court noted, and the plaintiff conceded, that the risk of being hit with a flying puck was an inherent risk of attending a hockey game. The plaintiff argued, however, that her injury was caused by the failure of the arena staff to prevent an unusually large number of spectators from congregating between her and the ice, in violation of arena policies, which obstructed her view and prevented her from seeing the puck until it was too late. Despite the plaintiff's arguments, the court concluded that obstructions of view caused by the unpredictable movements of other fans are an inherent and unavoidable part of attending a sporting event [Nemarnik v. Los Angeles Kings Hockey Club (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 631, 638, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10] .

Moreover, the court noted that the plaintiff failed to allege that she would have been able to avoid the puck if the crowd had not congregated, and therefore the court considered the issue to be not whether the defendants owed a duty to provide better crowd control, but whether they owed a duty to eliminate the risk of injuries caused by flying pucks [Nemarnik v. Los Angeles Kings Hockey Club (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 631, 640, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10] . The court refused to impose a duty to eliminate the danger of flying pucks, concluding that to do so would force the defendants either to provide a floor-to-ceiling protective screen around the rink, which would reduce the quality of everyone's view, or increase the cost of tickets to cover the increased liability costs, which would make ticket prices too costly for some potential spectators [Nemarnik v. Los Angeles Kings Hockey Club (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 631, 641, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10] .

The requirements for application of the res ipsa loquitur doctrine are: (1) that it is the kind of accident which ordinarily does not occur in the absence of someone's negligence; (2) that it was caused by an agency or instrumentality in the exclusive control of the defendant; and (3) that the accident was not due to any voluntary action on the part of the plaintiff [Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 554, 559, 30 Cal. Rptr. 521, 381 P.2d 377 ; Khanoyan v. All Am. Sports Enters., Inc. (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 785, 787-788, 40 Cal. Rptr. 596] . For example, when a spectator occupying a position in the area designated for his use was injured through no voluntary action on his part from flying debris resulting from the deliberate destruction of motor vehicles within the exclusive control of those producing the event, the injuries were held not to occur ordinarily in the absence of someone's negligence and the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur was held applicable [see Khanoyan v. All Am. Sports Enters, Inc. (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 785, 793, 40 Cal. Rptr. 596] .

For a form allegation that the res ipsa loquitur doctrine applies to a specific factual situation, see § 273.92.

23-273 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 273.12

§ 273.12 Defenses

[1] In General

Defenses against an action alleging that defendant is liable for injuries to a spectator tend to focus on plaintiff's failure to state a cause of action, usually through attacks on the plaintiff's allegations of the duty owed by defendant. As such, these defenses are most likely to be raised by demurrer or by motion for summary judgment. The exception to this tendency is an allegation that the plaintiff was contributorily negligent; the defense of comparative negligence must be pleaded as an affirmative defense [see Simmons v. Wexler (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 1007, 1014, 156 Cal. Rptr. 810] .

For discussion and forms regarding the pleading of defenses in negligence actions generally, see Ch. 26, Answers , and Ch. 380, Negligence .

[2] Plaintiff's Comparative Negligence

The complete defense of contributory negligence has been invalidated in California, and replaced with a system of comparative negligence in which the fundamental purpose is to assign responsibility and liability for damage in direct proportion to the negligence of each of the parties. Thus, in all actions for negligence resulting in injury to person or property, the contributory negligence of the person injured does not bar recovery, but the damages awarded are diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the person recovering [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] .

Comparative negligence principles are also applied in so-called "secondary assumption of risk" cases, in which the defendant has breached a duty of care owed to plaintiff, creating a risk of harm to plaintiff that plaintiff then chose to encounter [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 310, 314-315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . Thus, comparative negligence principles are likely to arise after a defendant fails to establish that no duty of care existed under circumstances, thereby making the complete bar of the "primary assumption of risk" doctrine inapplicable [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 310, 314-315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . The assumption of the risk doctrine is discussed in more detail in §§ 273.10[4][a] and 273.12[3].

Any contention that the plaintiff's negligence contributed to his or her injury, whether denominated as comparative negligence or secondary assumption of risk, should be set forth in an affirmative defense allegation [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(g); see also Singer v. Superior Court (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 318, 323-324, 5 Cal. Rptr. 697, 353 P.2d 305 (negligence of plaintiff, and causative link with plaintiff's injury, may be alleged generally in answer)].

For a form setting out the affirmative defense that plaintiff's recovery should be reduced under principles of comparative fault, see § 273.94.

[3] Assumption of Risk

The defense of assumption of risk has been held to be two separate doctrines. In cases involving "primary assumption of risk"--in which, by virtue of the nature of the activity and the parties' relationship to the activity, the defendant owes no legal duty to protect the plaintiff from the particular harm that caused the injury--the doctrine continues to operate as a complete bar to the plaintiff's recovery. In cases involving "secondary assumption of risk"--in which the defendant does owe a duty of care to the plaintiff, but the plaintiff proceeds to encounter a known risk imposed by the defendant's breach of duty--the doctrine is merged into the comparative fault scheme, and the trier of fact, in apportioning the loss resulting from the injury, may consider the respective responsibility of the parties [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 314-315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; see Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824-825, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] .

The California Supreme Court has stated that, under this approach, the question of the existence and scope of a defendant's duty of care is a legal question, which depends on the nature of the sport or activity in question and on the parties' general relationship to the activity, and is an issue to be determined by the court, rather than by the jury. Thus, the question is amenable to resolution by summary judgment [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 313, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . However, court of appeal decisions disagree on whether the court, rather than the jury, decides whether the defendant increased the risks inherent in the activity, which can support imposition of liability under the primary assumption of risk doctrine. Decisions assigning this responsibility to the court point out that this issue goes to establishing the proper duty of care, which is the province of the court [compare Huff v. Wilkins (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 732, 745, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 754 (court decides issue); with Vine v. Bear Valley Ski Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 577, 592-593 & n.4 (jury decides issue)].

Conversely, courts concluding that the issue should go to the jury point out that the inquiry requires application of a general duty of care, the duty not to increase the risks inherent in the activity, to the facts of the particular case, and as such, the inquiry is one traditionally left for the trier of fact [Luna v. Vela (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 102, 112, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588 (jury to determine whether homeowner increased risks inherent in volleyball when failing to mark net tie-down lines)]. In a 2007 opinion, the Supreme Court suggested that, in the context of primary assumption of risk, the question of whether a defendant has acted recklessly should be left to the jury, supporting the conclusion that the question of whether the defendant increased the risks inherent in an activity should also be left to the jury [Shin v. Ahn (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 482, 499-500, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803, 165 P.3d 581 ; see Luna v. Vela (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 102, 113, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588].

Ordinarily, the question of assumption of risk would be raised in the answer, as a ground for objection to the complaint that does not appear on the face of the pleading [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)]. If it appears on the face of the complaint that the defendant did not owe plaintiff a duty to prevent the injury suffered, the objection may be raised by demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)], although it seems that in most cases the court would need to go beyond the pleadings to resolve the issue.

For a form of affirmative defense alleging that plaintiff's primary assumption of risk precludes any recovery, see § 273.93.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Injuries to Participants

23-273 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 273.30

§ 273.30 Participants' Duty of Care

[1] General Duty of Care

The general rule in California is that persons have a duty to use due care to avoid injury to others, and may be held liable if their careless conduct injures another person [Civ. Code § 1714(a)]. However, in the sports setting conditions or conduct that otherwise might be viewed as dangerous often are an integral part of the sport itself [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (citing as example rule that ski resorts have no duty to remove moguls, despite risk of harm posed, because risk and challenge posed by moguls are part of sport of skiing); see also O'Donoghue v. Bear Mountain Ski Resort (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 188, 193, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 467 (rough terrain, trees, and ravines as inherent risks of skiing on advanced run)]. Thus, the nature of a sport is highly relevant in defining the duty of care owed by a particular defendant. Generally, defendants have no legal duty to eliminate (or protect a plaintiff against) risks inherent in the sport itself, but do have a duty to use due care not to increase the risks to a participant over and above those inherent in the sport [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315-316, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; see, e.g., Yancey v. Superior Court (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 558, 566, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777 (participants in discus have duty to be sure field is clear of other participants before throwing)].

[2] Duty Analysis Determines Assumption of Risk Issues

An analysis of the duty of care owed in a particular case is essential to the determination whether the plaintiff assumed the risk of the injury he or she suffered. "Primary assumption of risk" involves cases in which the assumption of risk doctrine embodies a legal conclusion that there is no duty on the part of the defendant to protect a plaintiff from a particular risk; in these cases, recovery by the plaintiff is barred. "Secondary assumption of risk" involves cases in which a defendant does owe a duty of care to the plaintiff, but the plaintiff knowingly encounters a risk of injury caused by the defendant's breach of duty; in these cases, recovery is determined using principles of comparative fault to apportion recovery according to the parties' respective degrees of fault [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 308-310, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . For further discussion of the assumption of risk doctrine, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

[3] Effect of Violation of Statute or Local Ordinance

In Cheong v. Antablin [Cheong v. Antablin (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1063, 1066, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 859, 946 P.2d 817], the California Supreme Court determined that a local ordinance placing a duty on skiers to ski in a safe and reasonable manner neither altered the rule that a skier owed a duty to fellow skiers not to injure them intentionally or to act recklessly, nor abrogated the assumption of risk defense. First, the Court rejected the plaintiff's argument that the ordinance imposed a higher duty of care on the defendant than that established in Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 , although it recognized that Knight was a development of the common law of torts, and that the legislature could, within constitutional limits, choose to modify the common law by statute. Whether a local ordinance such as the instant one could modify Knight was, according to the Court, less clear. The Court did not decide this question here because it concluded that the ordinance did not modify the Knight standard even if it assumed it could. According to the Court, the ordinance evinced no clear intent to modify common law assumption of risk principles.

Next, the Court rejected the plaintiff's second argument that Evid. Code § 669(a) provided him with a cause of action. The plaintiff had argued that he was provided with a cause of action by Evid. Code § 669(a) because: (1) the defendant violated an ordinance, (2) the violation caused the plaintiff's injury, (3) the ordinance was designed to prevent the injury, and (4) the plaintiff was one of the class the ordinance was intended to protect. Relying heavily on Ford v. Gouin [Ford v. Gouin (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 339, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30, 834 P.2d 724], the plaintiff argued that if a plaintiff who is a participant in an active sport is also a member of the class of persons intended to be protected by a statute, then Evid. Code § 669 will in turn transform the statute into a legal duty of due care on the defendant, thus abrogating the assumption of risk defense. In response, the Court determined that there was no legal duty in this case because the elements of Evid. Code § 669(a) had not been met. Specifically, the plaintiff had not demonstrated that he was one of the class the ordinance was intended to protect. By stating that skiers assumed the inherent risks of skiing, including the risk of collision and the risk that others would fail to ski within their own ability, the ordinance made clear that the plaintiff, who was injured in a collision with a fellow skier, was not one of the class of persons for whose protection the ordinance was adopted [Cheong v. Antablin (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1063, 1071, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 859, 946 P.2d 817] .

NOTE:

Liability Between Coparticipants. The following issue was raised in Cheong v. Antablin [Cheong v. Antablin (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1063, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 859, 946 P.2d 817] and left undecided by the Court: whether the breach of a statutory duty under Evid. Code § 669(a) would create tort liability between coparticipants in an active sport despite the Knight doctrine of primary assumption of risk. According to the Court, Justice Arabian's opinion in Ford implicitly assumed, and the opinions of Justice George, joined by Chief Justice Lucas, and Justice Mosk expressly concluded, that if the four elements of Evid. Code § 669(a) were satisfied, that the statute created tort liability between coparticipants in an active sport, despite the Knight doctrine of primary assumption of risk. A number of the justices who signed the majority opinion in Cheong questioned whether this conclusion was correct. Three justices were of the opinion that Evid. Code § 669(a) only creates an evidentiary presumption of negligence, while the Knight doctrine, when applicable, provides that negligence alone is insufficient to impose tort liability. However, the Court did not resolve the issue because it determined that even if the conclusion was correct, the elements of Evid. Code § 669(a) had not been met in this case.

One court of appeal decision adopted the approach that a presumption of negligence under Evid. Code § 669(a) could not overcome the primary assumption of risk defense, because the primary assumption of risk defense protects against liability for conduct that is merely negligent [see Distefano v. Forester (2001) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1272-1274, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813 (violation of standard of care provided by statutes governing off-road driving did not overcome primary assumption of risk defense, because negligence was insufficient basis for tort liability between participants in sport of off-roading)]. However, the court's analysis of the issue was dicta because the court had already held that the plaintiff failed to plead the issue at trial and could not amend his pleading on appeal [Distefano v. Forester (2001) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1266, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813] . At least one subsequent court of appeal opinion has adopted the conclusion of the Distefano court, based primarily on the fact that a majority of the California Supreme Court appeared to agree with that conclusion [Moser v. Ratinoff (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1226, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 198] .

Another court of appeal opinion has subsequently held that provisions of the Harbors and Navigation Code governing the use of jet skis did not abrogate the primary assumption of risk doctrine, because the language of the statutes did not demonstrate a clear intent to do so [Whelihan v. Espinoza (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1575, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 883 ; see Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 655(a), 655.7(c)]. The plaintiff in that case was driving a jet ski that collided with another driven by her friend. Although the statutes at issue in that case criminalize reckless or negligent operation of watercraft and were enacted after the Supreme Court's decision in Knight v. Jewett, the court concluded that the statutes did not prevent application of the primary assumption of risk doctrine to the active sport of jet skiing, which by its very nature involves skill and challenges that pose a significant risk of injury [Whelihan v. Espinoza (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1573-1575, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 883] .

Because the plaintiff specifically pleaded only negligent conduct on the part of the defendant, the court rejected the plaintiff's argument that triable issues remained as to whether the defendant's conduct was so reckless as to be outside the range of the ordinary activity involved in jet skiing [Whelihan v. Espinoza (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1575-1576, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 883] ; but see Huff v. Wilkins (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 732, 740-743, 746, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 754 (although plaintiff did not plead recklessness, summary judgment was inappro priate because defendants did not establish that their violation of statutory requirements governing operation of all-terrain vehicles (ATVs) by minors did not increase risk inherent in off-road ATV activity). A subsequent court of appeal opinion has reached the same result under similar facts [Peart v. Ferro (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 60, 78-82, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 885 (personal watercraft used by parties was not technically jet ski because it was equipped with seat)].

[4] Specific Duty Based on Nature of Sport Involved

In some situations, the careless conduct of others is treated as an "inherent risk" of a sport, thus barring recovery by the plaintiff. For example, in a game of baseball, a player generally cannot recover if he or she is hit and injured by a carelessly thrown ball, and in a basketball game, recovery is not permitted for an injury caused by a carelessly extended elbow [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 316, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; see also Mann v. Nutrilite, Inc. (1955) 136 Cal. App. 2d 729, 734-735, 289 P.2d 282 (baseball); Thomas v. Barlow (1927) 5 N.J. Misc. 764, 138 A. 208 (basketball)].

The California Supreme Court has held that the determination of the duty owed in a specific situation does not depend on the particular plaintiff's subjective knowledge or appreciation of the potential risk [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 316, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . Instead, the determination turns on whether the defendant had a legal duty to avoid specific conduct or to protect the plaintiff against a particular risk of harm. The nature of the defendant's duty depends heavily on the nature of the sport itself, and frequently will also depend on the defendant's role in, or relationship to, the sport [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 316-317, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

The question of the existence and scope of the defendant's duty of care in this context is a legal question, which depends on the nature of the sport or activity in question and on the parties' general relationship to the activity, and is an issue to be decided by the court rather than by the jury [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 313, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (also noting that this characterization makes assumption of risk question more amenable to summary judgment resolution)].

The primary assumption of risk doctrine protects a party who is pursuing a sport in an appropriate venue from liability for an injury to another party who is engaged in a different activity in the same venue. A plaintiff who knowingly engages in his or her own activity assumes the risk of injury caused by a party who is vigorously engaged in a different activity in the same venue [Mastro v. Petrick (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 83, 90, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 185] . Therefore, the liability of a defendant in such a case hinges on whether the defendant's conduct was so reckless as to fall outside the range of ordinary activity involved in the defendant's sport [Mastro v. Petrick (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 83, 89-91, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 185 (primary assumption of risk protected snowboarder from liability for injury to skier)].

The extent to which a plaintiff can unilaterally change the nature of a sport in advance through agreeing to participate in a less vigorous activity is not entirely settled. The Supreme Court in Knight concluded that a defendant's liability must be based on the nature of the sport itself, rather than on the particular plaintiff's subjective knowledge and expectations [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 313, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . Although that approach may be justified in the context of a competitive sport, one court of appeal opinion concluded that a plaintiff's admonition to the defendant to go slow or "take it easy" prior to the plaintiff's riding on a water tube being towed behind a motorboat could not be used to change the inherent nature of the sport of water "tubing," which, according to the court of appeal, is inherently about trying to stay on the tube as it whips quickly through the water [Record v. Reason (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 472, 483-484, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547] . However, the dissent in that case noted that this particular result is subject to criticism on the grounds that these words should have created a factual dispute as to exactly what risk the plaintiff assumed [Record v. Reason (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 472, 490-491, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547] . Although the majority's approach would carry more weight in the context of a competitive sport, in which there are multiple participants at once, in the context of water tubing, the only participant is arguably the person riding the tube, and that person should have been able to define the nature of the activity in advance.

[5] Intentional Injury or Conduct Outside Range of Ordinary Activity of Sport

[a] Basis for Liability to Other Participants

A participant in an active sport breaches a legal duty of care to other participants--that is, engages in conduct that properly may subject him or her to financial liability--only if the participant intentionally injures another player or engages in conduct that is so reckless as to be totally outside the range of the ordinary activity involved in the sport [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 320, 321, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

[b] Determining Whether Conduct Is Outside Range of Ordinary Activity

In determining whether or not specific conduct is "totally outside the range of ordinary activity involved in the sport," the California Supreme Court has stated that, in the heat of an active sporting event, a participant's normal energetic conduct often includes accidentally careless behavior, and that vigorous participation in sporting events likely would be chilled if legal liability were to be imposed on a participant based on his or her ordinary careless conduct. Thus, even if a participant's conduct violates a rule of the game and may subject the violator to internal sanctions prescribed by the sport itself, imposition of legal liability for that conduct might well alter fundamentally the nature of the sport by deterring participants from vigorously engaging in activity that falls close to, but on the permissible side of, a prescribed rule [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 318-319, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

In one case, for example, the California Supreme Court held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine protected a community college from liability when an intercollegiate baseball player was struck by a pitch, even if the pitch was thrown at the player intentionally. The Court determined that the risk of being hit with a pitch was inherent in the game of baseball, and despite the fact that the conduct was in violation of the official rules of the game, intentionally throwing a pitch at or near a batter was a recognized strategy that was part of the game [Avila v. Citrus Cmty. Coll. Dist. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 148, 163-165, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 299, 131 P.3d 383] . In another case before it, the Court held that the collision between plaintiff and defendant, after which defendant stepped on plaintiff's hand, may have been due to defendant's negligence, but was not outside the range of ordinary activity in a game of football (even "touch" football) and therefore could not be the basis for tort liability [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 320-321, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

One subsequent case applied this analysis to hold that a defendant's consumption of alcohol while skiing was not an activity ordinarily involved in skiing, and that assumption of risk did not preclude a cause of action based on defendant's collision with plaintiff, which plaintiff alleged was caused at least in part by defendant's consumption of alcohol. Although collisions are an inherent risk of skiing and therefore defendant did not have a duty to avoid an inadvertent collision with plaintiff, defendant did have a duty to avoid increasing the risk of collision [Freeman v. Hale (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1388, 1395-1396, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418] . Furthermore, the court noted that consumption of alcohol could be prohibited during or shortly before skiing without fundamentally altering the nature of the sport; such a prohibition would instead promote vigorous participation in the sport by permitting skiers to ski to the best of their physical abilities [Freeman v. Hale (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1388, 1396, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418] .

Similarly, a snowboarder has a duty not to board at a high rate of speed into a flat area used for resting without looking ahead to see and avoid contact with other skiers or boarders who are using the area to rest between runs [Lackner v. North (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 1200-1201, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 863 (triable issue existed as to whether snowboarder acted recklessly)]. The court of appeal in another case also held that requiring a snowboarder to watch where he or she is going and not engage in a snowball fight while snowboarding at a high rate of speed would not deter vigorous participation in the sport or otherwise fundamentally alter the nature of snowboarding [Mammoth Mountain Ski Area v. Graham (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1367, 1373-1374, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422 ; see also Yancey v. Superior Court (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 558, 565-566, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777 (requiring discus throwers to ensure field was clear before throwing would not change nature of sport)].

[6] Analysis Not Limited to Competitive Sports

The general rule limiting the duty of care to intentional or reckless conduct [see § 273.30[5][a]] applies to participants engaged in noncompetitive but active sports activity [Ford v. Gouin (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 339, 345, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30, 834 P.2d 724 (analysis applied to case involving waterskier injured due to alleged negligence of boat driver); see also Freeman v. Hale (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1388, 1394-1395, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418 (skier injured in collision with another skier); Stimson v. Carlson (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1201, 1205-1206, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 (analysis applied to injury sustained while sailing)]. In Knight v. Jewett [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696], the Court noted that the limited duty of care applicable to co-participants has been applied in situations involving a wide variety of active sports, ranging from baseball to ice hockey and skating. Because the touch football game at issue in the case clearly fell within the rationale of the limited duty rule, the Court had no occasion to decide whether a comparable limited duty of care appropriately should be applied to other less active sports, such as archery or golf [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 320 n.7, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . Because of the special danger to others posed by the sport of hunting, however, past cases generally have found the ordinary duty of care applies to hunting accidents [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 320 n.7, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; see also Summers v. Tice (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 80, 83, 199 P.2d 1].

In Cheong v. Antablin [Cheong v. Antablin (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1063, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 859, 946 P.2d 817], the Court applied the principles of duty and assumption of risk enunciated in Knight v. Jewett [see § 273.30[2]] to collisions between recreational skiers. The Court restated the basic principles of Knight's lead opinion as the controlling law, and concluded that the principles of primary assumption of risk barred the action. In response to the plaintiff's argument that a local ordinance imposed a higher duty on the defendant than Knight established, the majority refused to consider whether a local ordinance can even modify the duty established by Knight, but held that in any event, the local ordinance in question did not modify that duty [Cheong v. Antablin (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1063, 1068-1070, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 859, 862-863] .

The court of appeal has defined a "sport" for primary assumption of risk purposes as an activity done for enjoyment or thrill, requiring physical exertion as well as elements of skill, and involving a challenge containing a potential risk of injury [Record v. Reason (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 472, 482, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547 (water "tubing" was sport)]. In one case, for example, passengers out for a simple boat ride around a lake were not engaged in a sport that comes under the primary assumption of risk doctrine. Even though the boat could have been used for sporting activities, the type of boating engaged in by the passengers was not competitive or physically challenging, nor did it require special skills or physical abilities. Therefore, the driver of the boat owed a duty of care to the passengers [Shannon v. Rhodes (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 792, 800-801, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217] .

By contrast, the court of appeal in another case held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine applies to the activity of riding a personal watercraft, even if the rider is merely a passenger and the watercraft is being operated at a modest rate of speed. The court noted that a personal watercraft is open to the elements, with no hull or cabin, and is designed for high performance, speed, and quick turning maneuvers. In addition, unlike the benign activity of riding in a boat, riding a personal watercraft requires some physical exertion and balance by the passenger to hold onto the operator, or grips or handles, to avoid being thrown off the vessel [Truong v. Nguyen (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 865, 887-891, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 675]. In another case, an organized, long-distance bicycle ride on a public highway was a sport covered by the primary assumption of risk doctrine, even though the ride was noncompetitive. A ride of that kind, with a large number of riders, is an athletic activity done for enjoyment and physical challenge, and the risk of injury caused by a negligent coparticipant who swerves into another rider is inherent in the sport [Moser v. Ratinoff (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1220-1222, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 198] .

Similarly, fitness training under the guidance of a personal trainer is a physical activity involving an element of risk or danger to which the primary assumption of risk doctrine may be applied [Rostai v. Neste Enters. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 326, 333, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 411] . The risks of injury inherent in fitness training may include injury to the obvious muscles such as those in the legs and arms, but also to less obvious areas such as the heart. For example, a personal trainer successfully defended on the basis of primary assumption of risk in a case in which a client suffered a heart attack due to overexertion during his first workout with the trainer. Although the client argued that the primary assumption of risk doctrine did not apply to the activity, the court disagreed and concluded that the trainer did nothing more than push the client beyond his comfort level, which was inherent in the training regimen and consistent with the goals of the activity [Rostai v. Neste Enters. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 326, 333-334, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 411] .

An injury sustained during a non-competitive practice for a competitive sport or activity can fall within the primary assumption of risk doctrine [Shelly v. Stepp (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1294, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 323 (primary assumption of risk applied to injury sustained by exercise rider of racehorse at track)]. For discussion of the effect of the primary assumption of risk doctrine on coaches, trainers, or instructors, see § 273.31[1].

[7] Nature of Duty in Specific Sports

The primary assumption of risk doctrine as first articulated in Knight v. Jewett has been applied to golf so that a golfer has no duty to protect other participants against risks inherent in golfing [Shin v. Ahn (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 482, 497, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803, 165 P.3d 581 ; Dilger v. Moyles (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1452, 1456, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 591] . Thus, a golfer who injures another golfer with an errant golf shot may defend against liability on the basis of the primary assumption of risk doctrine, so long as the defendant golfer did not intend to injure the other golfer or engage in conduct so reckless as to be totally outside the range of ordinary activity involved in the sport [Shin v. Ahn (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 482, 497, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803, 165 P.3d 581] .

The violation of a golfing rule of etiquette by the defendant does not in and of itself establish a basis for liability [Shin v. Ahn (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 482, 497, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803, 165 P.3d 581] . For example, while rules of golfing etiquette state that a player should ensure that no one is standing close by or in a position to be hit when making a shot, the risk of being hit with an errant ball is inherent in the sport and whether the defendant acted recklessly when injuring another golfer with an errant shot depends on the totality of circumstances. While a golfer cannot just ignore other players when making a shot, once having checked to see if others are reasonably likely to be struck and having concluded that it is safe to hit, a golfer who then concentrates on the ball in order to make the shot is not required to break his or her concentration in order to check the field again [Shin v. Ahn (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 482, 497-500, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803, 165 P.3d 581] . Factors that may bear on whether a golfer's conduct was reasonable, negligent, or reckless may include the golfer's skill level, whether topographical conditions obscure the golfer's view, what steps the golfer took to determine whether anyone was within range, and the distance and angle between plaintiff and defendant when the shot was made [Shin v. Ahn (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 482, 500, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803, 165 P.3d 581] . While failure to warn of an errant shot by yelling "fore" may be negligent, it does not constitute reckless or intentional conduct and does not breach a legal duty to other participants because it does not alter the inherent risk of being struck by a golf ball [Dilger v. Moyles (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1452, 1456, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 591] .

Primary assumption of risk may be applied under these circumstances regardless of whether plaintiff and defendant were golfing as part of the same group or merely happened to be on the same course [Shin v. Ahn (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 482, 494, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803, 165 P.3d 581] .

[b] Hunting

Because of the special danger to others posed by the sport of hunting, cases have generally found the ordinary duty of care to be applicable to hunting accidents [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 320 n.7, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; see Summers v. Tice (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 80, 83, 199 P.2d 1] .

[c] Sportfishing

Danger of injury from a fisher's hook or sinker flying toward another fisher is an inherent risk in sportfishing and coparticipants owe no duty to protect other participants from this harm under the doctrine of primary assumption of risk [Mosca v. Lichtenwalter (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 551, 553, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58] . Attempting to free an entangled line is a typical adjunct of fishing, even where a preferred method of line retreival is not used, and does not create and abnormal risk of injury from flying hooks and sinkers beyond that inherent in the sport [Mosca v. Lichtenwalter (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 551, 555, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58] .

[d] Horseracing

Racehorses are by nature difficult to control, and a rider traveling on a track at high speeds in close proximity to others engaged in similar activity assumes the risk of injury caused by another unruly horse, even though the injury may have been caused through the ordinary negligence of the person in charge of the other horse [Shelly v. Stepp (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1294-1295, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 323] .

[e] Marathons

The organizers of a marathon owe a duty of care to the runners to organize and conduct a reasonably safe race. Therefore, the organizers have a duty to provide adequate water and electrolyte fluids along the 26-mile course, because doing so minimizes the risks of dehydration and hyponatremia without altering the nature of the sport [Saffro v. Elite Racing, Inc. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 173, 179, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497] .

[f] Off-Roading

In a case involving a participant at an "off-roading" course whose dune buggy crested a blind hill and collided with another participant riding a motorcycle, the court of appeal held that the resulting injury was subsumed under the primary assumption of risk doctrine, because the risk of inadvertent collision and injury was inherent in the recreational activity of off-roading at a course provided for just such activities [Distefano v. Forester (2001) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1262-1264, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813] . The court concluded that driving fast in the middle of the dirt trail while ascending a blind hill was not so reckless as to be outside the range of ordinary activities involved in the sport [Distefano v. Forester (2001) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1274, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813] . In addition, the court held that the defendant owed the plaintiff no duty to use a "spotter" at the top of the hill or equip his buggy with a tall whipper to make the vehicle visible over the crest of the hill, because the plaintiff failed to provide evidence that the lack of these precautions was so reckless as to be outside the range of ordinary activities involved in the sport [Distefano v. Forester (2001) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1275, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813] .

However, another court of appeal decision held that the operation of an all-terrain vehicle by a minor without first complying with reasonable safety regulations governing that operation increased the risks of injury to other operators beyond those inherent in the activity, and that imposing liability for such conduct would not chill vigorous participation in off-road, recreational all-terrain vehicle use [Huff v. Wilkins (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 732, 740-743, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 754] .

[g] Discus

Persons involved in the sport of discus have a duty of care to persons in the expected target area because of the potentially lethal nature of the projectiles involved. This duty includes checking the target area and being sure it is clear before throwing [Yancey v. Superior Court (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 558, 566, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777] .

[h] Recreational Skiing

Downhill recreational skiers owe a duty to fellow skiers not to injure them intentionally or to act recklessly, but a skier may not sue another for simple negligence [Cheong v. Antablin (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1063, 1066, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 859, 861] . Thus, a skier will not be held liable for a collision caused by quick and aggressive skiing, as this is an inherent part of the sport, even if the skier makes a quick turn without looking [Towns v. Davidson (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 461, 471, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 568] .

An owner or operator of a ski resort owes no duty to protect skiers from risks inherent in the sport, such as the risk of encountering rough terrain, trees, rocks, or ravines [O'Donoghue v. Bear Mountain Ski Resort (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 188, 192-193, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 467] . Similarly, a ski resort operator has no duty to protect a skier from the inherent risk of colliding with a ski run tower [Connelly v. Mammoth Mountain Ski Area (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 8, 12, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 855] or a plainly-visible snowmaking hydrant located on a ski run [Souza v. Squaw Valley Ski Corp. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 262, 267, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 389] . However, a ski resort operator does have a duty not to increase the risks inherent in skiing through the dangerous placement of hard-to-see signposts in a ski run [Van Dyke v. S.K.I. Ltd. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1310, 1317, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 775] .

[i] Waterskiing

[i] Owner or Operator of Facilities

The owner or operator of a resort providing water-ski facilities to the public has a duty to his or her patrons to use reasonable care for their safety if any of the activities of the recreational area present dangers to them [Sorensen v. Hutson (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 817, 825, 346 P.2d 785] . Such a duty includes not only the maintenance of the premises in a reasonably safe condition, but also the protection of patrons by taking appropriate measures to restrain conduct by third persons that the owner should be aware of, and that he or she should realize is dangerous [Sorensen v. Hutson (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 817, 826-827, 346 P.2d 785] .

For example, when a collision between two boats resulted in injury to a beginner water-skier, the jury could reasonably have concluded that the defendant had breached his or her duty when he or she brought together persons engaged in various activities (including waterskiing and bathing) and failed to take steps to protect swimmers and beginner water-skiers from the actions of other patrons [see Sorensen v. Hutson (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 817, 827, 346 P.2d

785] . Similarly, the jury was entitled to find that the defendant water conservation district had breached its duty of reasonable care to the plaintiff water-skier when it failed to notify either the county to which it leased a reservoir or the skier that a reduction of the water level had taken place and that shallow areas of the reservoir presented a hazard to water-skiers [see Larson v. Santa Clara Valley Water Conservation Dist. (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 515, 520-524, 32 Cal. Rptr. 875] .

[ii] Boat Drivers and Operators

Waterskiing is considered an active sport, and the driver of a water ski boat is a co-participant with the waterskier. Thus, the driver may be held liable for injuries to the water-skier only if the driver intentionally injured the water-skier or engaged in conduct that was so reckless as to be totally outside the range of the ordinary activities involved in the sport [see Ford v. Gouin (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 339, 344-345, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30, 834 P.2d 724] . This conclusion is not altered by the fact that the relationship between the driver and the water-skier is cooperative, rather than competitive, in nature because the skier undertakes vigorous, athletic activity, and the ski boat driver operates the boat in a manner that is consistent with, and enhances, the excitement and challenge of the active conduct of the sport [see Ford v. Gouin (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 339, 345, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30, 834 P.2d 724 ; see also Record v. Reason (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 472, 482, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547 (water "tubing" as sport for purposes of primary assumption of risk)].

An operator of a boat or vessel does not, absent some specifically applicable rule defining proper channels, have a right that others travel in a fixed channel or corridor of water. Nevertheless, within limitations, he or she does have a right that is superior to that of others to some portion of a corridor of water. For example, navigating a vessel between a towing vessel and its tow is prima facie negligent operation [Press v. Lyford (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 986, 991, 111 Cal. Rptr. 817 ; see also 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 6697(c)]. Generally, a motorboat with a water-skier in tow that is maintaining a fixed course has a right-of-way over a motorboat planning to cross the channel within which the skier is running [Press v. Lyford (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 986, 992, 111 Cal. Rptr. 817] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Injuries to Participants

23-273 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 273.31

§ 273.31 Duty of Care of Persons in Control of Activity

[1] Coaches and Instructors

Similar to the duty owed by participants in competitive sports, coaches, trainers, and instructors owe a limited duty of care to those they instruct not to increase the risks inherent in learning the particular sport [Rodrigo v. Koryo Martial Arts (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 946, 956, 961, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 832 (tae kwon do instructor did not increase risk of sport by having students wait in line to perform kick, even if inadequate supervision allowed one student to accidentally kick another while waiting in line)]. Generally, determining liability based on the defendant's status as an instructor hinges on the facts surrounding the participants' levels of experience and/or their relationships to one another in the activity undertaken, rather than merely the labels given to the participants [Regents of Univ. of Cal. v. Superior Court (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1046, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922] . Moreover, a student's subjective expectation that he or she would not be injured during the activity is irrelevant to application of the primary assumption of risk doctrine in this context. Instead, the scope of the instructor's duty is determined by the nature of the sport and the parties' relationship to the sport and to each other [Rodrigo v. Koryo Martial Arts (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 946, 957-959, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 832] .

Thus, in one case the primary assumption of risk doctrine was successfully invoked when a student in a rock climbing class was killed in a fall when his supporting ropes came free during a rock climbing exercise. In that particular case, the court concluded that the student had not been taken beyond his level of experience or capability during the activity that lead to the fall, and that the risk of such a fall was inherent in the sport [Regents of Univ. of Cal. v. Superior Court (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1046-1047, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922] . In another case, primary assumption of risk was a bar to recovery against the employer of theinstructors of a noncontact football class when a participant was injured in an unintentional collision with another player, since the instructors did nothing to increase the dangers inherent in the game [Fortier v. Los Rios Cmty. Coll. Dist. (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 430, 436-439, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 812] .

The mere fact that a student participant may have, in hindsight, been pushed beyond his or her capabilities, or required to perform without adequate instruction, will not preclude application of the primary assumption of risk doctrine, at least absent reckless conduct that is totally outside the range of ordinary activity involved in teaching or coaching or an intent to injure by the instructor [Kahn v. East Side Union High Sch. Dist. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 990, 1011, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 103, 75 P.3d 30 ; Bushnell v. Japanese-Am. Religious & Cultural Ctr. (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 525, 531-532, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 (primary assumption of risk precluded liability to student injured during judo instruction); see also Allan v. Snow Summit, Inc. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1365, 1368-1371, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813 (although express assumption of risk precluded liability for injuries suffered by ski student who fell on slopes, defendant was also protected by primary assumption of risk when instructor encouraged plaintiff to attempt more challenging ski run)].

In one case, for example, the California Supreme Court held that a high school swimming coach and a school district were not entitled to summary judgment because there were triable issues of fact as to whether the coach was reckless in requiring the plaintiff, a 14-year-old student, to dive into a shallow racing pool without adequate instruction. The plaintiff, who hit the bottom of the pool while performing the dive, presented evidence that she had not received any instruction from her coach on how to perform the dive safely, even though the dive was considered one of the riskiest maneuvers in the sport. She also presented evidence that the coach knew that she had a deep-seated fear of performing the dive, had previously promised her she would not have to make the dive, and had waited until the beginning of a competitive meet to inform her that she had the choice of either making the dive or not competing with the team [Kahn v. East Side Union High Sch. Dist. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 990, 1011-1013, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 103, 75 P.3d 30] .

In another case, the court of appeal held that, as a matter of law, a ski instructor's assessment errors in evaluating either the skill level of his students or the difficulty of the conditions of the terrain did not rise to the level of recklessness sufficient to overcome the primary assumption of risk doctrine [Kane v. National Ski Patrol Sys., Inc. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 204, 214, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600] . The court in that case noted that the risks of falling and being injured or even killed are inherent in skiing and that instructors must make subjective judgments about a student's skill level to sufficiently challenge the student so that the student will improve those skills [Kane v. National Ski Patrol Sys., Inc. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 204, 214, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600] .

However, if imposition of a duty of care would not fundamentally alter the nature of the sporting activity, the primary assumption of risk defense does not apply. In one case, for example, a seventh-grade student in a physical education golf class was inadvertently hit in the face by a golf club swung by another student. The student sued the instructor and the school district, alleging negligent supervision, and the court of appeal held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine did not apply. The court concluded that being hit in the head by a golf club was not an inherent risk of the game of golf and that imposing a prudent person duty of care on the defendants would not fundamentally alter the game of golf, chill vigorous participation in the sport, or chill a coach's ability to challenge student athletes to push themselves [Hemady v. Long Beach Unified School Dist. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 566, 576-579, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464] .

A coach, trainer, or instructor is not an insurer, and a student must exercise due care for his or her own safety by noticing that which is obvious, and by asking appropriate questions [Tan v. Goddard (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1528, 1534-1535, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89 ; see also Ferrari v. Grand Canyon Dories (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 248, 253-257, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65 (summary judgment for defendant river rafting company upheld on basis of primary assumption of risk in suit brought by customer injured while rafting with guide)]. Thus, even when primary assumption of risk may not apply, secondary assumption of risk may apply if the student's voluntary action in encountering a danger caused by the coach's, trainer's, or instructor's breach of duty is a cause of the student's injury [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 310, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

Application of secondary assumption of risk principles to determine the liability of instructors and coaches is proper when the instructor or coach fails to provide a safe environment in which to perform the activity without unnecessary risk [see Bushnell v. Japanese-Am. Religious & Cultural Ctr. (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 525, 532-534, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671] . For example, a student at a jockey training school who was injured when the horse he was riding fell was not barred from recovering from the school and one of its trainers. The trainer knew that the horse had injured its foot and was not walking normally, but nevertheless instructed the student to ride the horse on a rocky track. Summary judgment for the school and the trainer was reversed because there was a triable issue regarding whether the trainer had breached his duty to ensure that the horses he assigned the student to ride were reasonably safe to ride under the conditions the trainer prescribed [Tan v. Goddard (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1528, 1531, 1534-1535, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89] .

Similarly, secondary assumption of risk applied in a case involving an experienced horse show competitor who was injured while practicing jumps at a riding club. An instructor at the club raised the height of the jumps without lengthening the distance between obstacles; when the plaintiff followed the instructor's directions to ride through the course in a reverse direction, her horse landed too close to an obstacle, knocked it down, and popped up into the air, causing her to lose her balance and fall. The plaintiff was entitled to have the trier of fact consider comparative fault principles, because the instructor (and the riding club that employed her) had breached their duty to plaintiff to ensure that the jumps were not beyond the capacity of horse and rider [Galardi v. Seahorse Riding Club (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 817, 820, 822-823, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 270] .

[2] Other Persons in Control

A duty of care to participants similar to that of a coach or instructor also applies to others who are not participants or proprietors [see § 273.32], but who are in control of an athletic or sporting activity. These persons have a duty to the participants not to increase the risks inherent in the activity; for example, they have a duty not to supply faulty equipment [Bjork v. Mason (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 544, 552-556, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 49 (general negligence rules apply to providing equipment and triable issue of fact existed as to whether defendant owed duty not to provide defective rope used in water tubing); see Wattenbarger v. Cincinnati Reds, Inc. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 746, 754, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 732 (dictum)], as well as a duty not to provide equipment designed in such a way as to increase the risks inherent in the sport [Sanchez v. Hillerich & Bradsby Co. (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 703, 715, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 529 (particular baseball bat design substantially increased risk that pitcher would be hit by line drive)]. Similarly, the primary assumption of risk doctrine will not insulate an equipment manufacturer from liability for supplying defective equipment [Ford v. Polaris Indus., Inc. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 755, 770-775, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 215 (jet ski manufacturer could be liable for defective design); Bunch v. Hoffinger Indus., Inc. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1278, 1300, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780 (manufacturer of swimming pool liner not shielded from liability for failing to warn of hazards of diving into shallow pool)].

Under the doctrine of primary assumption of risk, a defendant in charge of a sporting activity has a duty not to increase the risks inherent in a sport, but no duty to decrease the risks that are inherently present in that sport. For example, a Little League Baseball association has no duty to reduce the risk of injury from being struck by a baseball, a risk inherent in the sport, by providing helmets with face guards, if the face guard was not a part of the normal safety equipment used by the League [Balthazor v. Little League Baseball, Inc. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 47, 52, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337] . Similarly, the League has no duty to provide safety glasses to help reduce the risk of players getting hit by a fly ball that they have lost sight of in the glare of the sun, the risk of which is an inherent part of the game of baseball [West v. Sundown Little League of Stockton, Inc. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 351, 359, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 849] .

In one case, defendant, a major league baseball team, was not entitled to summary judgment against plaintiff, a pitcher on his high school's baseball team who was injured while participating in a tryout conducted by defendant's employees, because those employees had a duty of care toward plaintiff. While taking his turn pitching to several batters, plaintiff felt his arm "pop" after the third pitch, but he experienced no particular pain. He stepped off the pitcher's mound and told defendant's employees that his arm had popped. After receiving no response from them, he returned to the mound and threw another pitch; he immediately experienced severe pain and quit pitching. Although defendant's employees had no duty to protect plaintiff from the risks inherent in baseball, defendant did have a duty not to increase those risks by permitting plaintiff to continue to pitch after his arm popped [Wattenbarger v. Cincinnati Reds, Inc. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 746, 753-754, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 732] .

A person is in control of a sport or game, and is not a coparticipant, if he or she is merely observing and not actively engaged in the activity [Wattenbarger v. Cincinnati Reds, Inc. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 746, 754, n.6, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d

732] . In one case, for example, the defendant's employees were not coparticipants because they decided what would be done and when, determined who would play what positions and for how long, supplied the equipment, and eliminated players with injuries from participating in the tryout [Wattenbarger v. Cincinnati Reds, Inc. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 746, 754, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 732] .

§ 273.32 Proprietor's General Duty of Care to Participants

Generally, everyone is responsible, not only for the result of his or her willful acts, but also for an injury occasioned to another by his or her want of ordinary care or skill in the management of his or her property or person, except so far as the latter has, willfully or by want of ordinary care, brought the injury on himself or herself [Civ. Code § 1714(a); see Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 119, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 (liability of possessor of land, based on negligence in operation and control of that land, is determined by Civ. Code § 1714(a))]. For further discussion of the generally applicable duties of owners and possessors of land, see Ch. 421, Premises Liability .

The California Supreme Court has noted that in the sports context, conditions or conduct that otherwise might be viewed as dangerous often are an integral part of the sport itself [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . Defendants generally have no legal duty to eliminate (or protect a plaintiff against) risks inherent in the sport itself, but do have a duty to use due care not to increase the risks to a participant over and above those inherent in the sport [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315-316, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . Thus, a ski resort has no duty to eliminate moguls, as the challenge and risks posed by moguls are part of the sport of skiing even though they pose a risk of harm. However, a resort operator does have a duty to maintain towropes in a safe, working condition in order not to expose skiers to an increased risk of harm [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315-316, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

While sports facility operators have a duty not to increase the risks inherent in a sport being played at the facility, the facility operators do not owe a duty to sports participants to provide advance notice of the availability of an automatic external defibrillator at the facility for use should a medical emergency arise [Rotolo v. San Jose Sports & Entertainment, LLC (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 307, 323, 334-335, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 770] . Under the relevant statutes, building owners and operators are under no duty to acquire and install such devices, and those who do make a defibrillator available are generally provided with immunity for its use during emergencies, so long as certain statutory conditions are met [see Health & Safety Code § 1797.196(b), (f)]. The court of appeal has held that these statutory requirements, which are intended to encourage the voluntary provision of defibrillators, occupy the field of liability for use or provision of these medical devices, and the courts are not free to impose an additional duty to notify sports participants or other invitees of the existence or location of such a device [Rotolo v. San Jose Sports & Entertainment,

LLC (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 307, 321-324, 334-335, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 770] .

23-273 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 273.33

§ 273.33 Specific Proprietors' Duties

[1] Ski Resort Operator

[a] No Duty to Eliminate Inherent Risks

A ski resort operator is not the insurer of skiers' safety, and does not have a duty to eliminate obvious hazards such as trees along ski runs [Danieley v. Goldmine Ski Assocs., Inc. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 111, 121-122, 266 Cal. Rptr. 749] . This holding seems in accord with the general principles set forth in Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315-316, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 , in which the California Supreme Court held that a proprietor does not have a duty to eliminate risks inherent to a sport. It seems likely that trees, like moguls, are a risk inherent to the sport of skiing, and that a proprietor does not have a duty to eliminate such a risk. However, if the proprietor's conduct increases the risk to skiers--for example, by grooming runs in a way that increases the danger of colliding with a tree--it is possible that liability could exist [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315-316, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

In a case governed by the primary assumption of risk doctrine set forth in Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315-316, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 , the court held that an owner and operator of a ski resort had no duty to protect plaintiff, an intermediate to advanced level skier, against the risks inherent in the sport, and that those risks included encountering rough terrain, trees, rocks, and ravines. The court upheld summary judgment for defendant, ruling that defendant's general duty not to increase risks to skiers on its property over and above those inherent in the sport did not impose a duty on defendant to change the entire mountain to ensure plaintiff's safety [O'Donoghue v. Bear Mountain Ski Resort (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 188, 192-193, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 467] .

[b] Duty of Care Regarding Ski Lifts

A ski resort operator, at least insofar as the operator transports the skiers' bodies by means of a device such as a chair lift, may be held to the standard of care of a common carrier [see Civ. Code § 2100 (carrier for reward must exercise utmost care and diligence); Squaw Valley Ski Corp. v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1499, 1508-1510] . It has been held, however, that an operator of a rope tow, whereby the skier maintained constant contact with the slope and could have disembarked at any time, had no higher duty than that owed to a skier skiing down the slope on a designated trail [see McDaniel v. Dowell (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 26, 31, 26 Cal. Rptr. 140 (plaintiff struck by another skier while holding onto towrope)]. For discussion of the duties imposed on common carriers, see Ch. 109, Carriers .

[2] Owner of Golf Course

Although the owner of a golf course has a duty to provide a reasonably safe course and not increase the risk inherent in golfing, the owner may be entitled to summary judgment on the basis of primary assumption of risk in an action alleging negligent course design, if the court finds as a matter of law that the design of the course did not increase the risks inherent in the sport [see American Golf Corp. v. Superior Court (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 30, 38-39, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 683 (no triable issue of fact as to whether construction and placement of yardage markers increased risk of getting struck with errant shot)]. However, if a triable issue of fact exists as to whether the design of the course violated the duty to provide a reasonably safe golf course, the action may be governed by secondary assumption of risk principles, and summary judgment would be inappropriate [see Morgan v. FUJI Country USA, Inc. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 127, 134, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 249 (plaintiff alleged that golf course owner had breached duty of care by not reasonably protecting golfers teeing off on one hole from being hit by golf balls from adjacent hole)].

[3] Operator of Swimming Facility

[a] General Duty of Care

The owner and operator of a swimming facility is required to exercise reasonable care for the safety of his or her patrons in view of the use of the premises that might reasonably be anticipated [Flora v. Bimini Water Co. (1911) 161 Cal. 495, 500, 119 P. 661 (12-year-old boy drowned); Gates v. Gautier (1938) 29 Cal. App. 2d 524, 525, 85 P.2d 141 (diver injured on rough and jagged rocks on bottom of lake); see also Johnson v. Bimini Hot Springs (1943) 56 Cal. App. 2d 892, 900, 133 P.2d 650 (proprietor of swimming facility as required to use reasonable and ordinary care in maintenance of shower room)]. The owner or proprietor will be liable for bodily harm caused to a patron by a dangerous condition on the premises if he or she knows or should know of the danger, which he or she has no basis for believing that the patron will discover, and if the owner or proprietor fails to give an adequate warning of that danger [Alvarado v. Anderson (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 166, 173-174, 346 P.2d 73 (diver injured on defective diving apparatus); see Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 112-120, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 (rejecting former common-law distinctions among guests, invitees, and trespassers regarding duties owed by possessors of land)]. The fact that the patron is a child who may use equipment on the proprietor's premises for an unintended purpose does not relieve the owner of the duty to exercise reasonable care for the child's safety [Alvarado v. Anderson (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 166, 174, 346 P.2d 73] .

[b] Public Pool Operators' Duties Regarding Lifeguards

[i] When Lifeguards Required

Lifeguard service must be provided for any public swimming pool that is of wholly artificial construction and for the use of which a direct fee is charged [Health & Safety Code § 116045(a)]. For all other public swimming pools, lifeguard service must be provided or signs must be erected clearly indicating that such service is not provided [Health & Safety Code § 116045(a); see also Health & Safety Code §§ 116025 (public swimming pool defined), 116028 (lifeguard service defined); 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 65501 et seq.].

The proprietor of a bathing establishment is not required, as a matter of law, to have a lifeguard stationed in immediate proximity to the deep water end of the swimming pool [see Flora v. Bimini Water Co. (1911) 161 Cal. 495, 500] . However, if the regulations of the Department of Health require that one or more "qualified" lifeguards must be on duty at each pool, it is the duty of a lifeguard to use reasonable care and diligence in watching a public swimming pool and the persons using the pool so that he or she may, in case of an emergency, render reasonable assistance to one likely to

[ii] Violation of Statute, Ordinance, or Regulation

Violation of a statute, ordinance, or regulation may give rise to a presumption of negligence on the part of the defendant pool owner-operator if: (1) he or she violated the statute, ordinance, or regulation of a public entity; (2) the violation proximately caused death or injury to person or property; (3) the death or injury resulted from an occurrence the nature of which the statute, ordinance, or regulation was designed to protect; and (4) the person suffering the death or injury to his or her person or property was one of the class of persons for whose protection the statute, ordinance, or regulation was adopted [Atkins v. Bisigier (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 414, 421, 94 Cal. Rptr. 49 (citing Evid. Code § 669(a))]. Thus, when an administrative regulation that required ropes and buoys in swimming pools was designed to prevent drowning accidents but not to protect against diving accidents, a pool owner's violation of the regulation did not give rise to liability for a diving accident because the individual injured in that accident was not a member of the class that the regulation was designed to protect [see Atkins v. Bisigier (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 414, 421-422, 94 Cal. Rptr. 49 (involving former 17 Cal. Code Reg § 7786)].

Proof of statutory or regulatory safety violations can establish a pool owner's negligence as a matter of law, but does not automatically establish liability; the plaintiff still bears the burden of showing that the defendant's negligence was a proximate cause of the accident [see Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 756, 765, 91 Cal. Rptr. 745, 478 P.2d 465] . However, the breach of a statutory duty itself will often suffice to give rise to an inference from which a jury may find that a given injury was the actual and proximate cause of the violation [Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 756, 765, 91 Cal. Rptr. 745, 478 P.2d 465 ; see, e.g., Lucas v. Hesperia Golf & Country Club (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 241, 252, 63 Cal. Rptr. 189 ; Lindsey v. De Vaux (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 445, 454-455, 123 P.2d 144] .

The statutory obligation to provide a lifeguard may be satisfied by the mere posting of an adequate warning sign [see Health & Safety Code § 24101.4], but failure to post the sign is a basis for a finding of proximate cause. The sign does considerably more than indicate to potential swimmers that no lifeguard is present; it gives notice of the general hazards present in a given swimming pool and most importantly serves as a continuing warning of the potential danger to the novice swimmer. The mere absence of a lifeguard hardly provides such cautionary advice [Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 756, 768, 91 Cal. Rptr. 745, 478 P.2d 465] . Thus, the liability of a pool owner who has neither provided a lifeguard nor erected a warning sign is to be measured with respect to his or her wrongful omission to provide lifeguard services and not with respect to the failure to post the requisite sign [Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 756, 768-769, 91 Cal. Rptr. 745, 478 P.2d 465 ; see Lucas v. Hesperia Golf & Country Club (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 241, 251, 63 Cal. Rptr. 189] .

[4] Commercial Stable Facility

[a] Duty of Care to Riders

Owners and operators of commercial horse-riding facilities or stables owe a duty of care to their patrons to ensure that the horses and services they provide do not increase the risk of injury above the level inherent in the activity of horseback riding [Harrold v. Rolling J Ranch (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 578, 586, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 ; see also Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315-316, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . This duty of care to the riders who rent their horses encompasses all of the following: supplying horses that are not unduly dangerous and that are properly shod, warning riders of a particular horse's predisposition to behavior that increases the ordinary risk of horse riding, providing equipment that is not faulty, and providing trails that are not dangerous [Harrold v. Rolling J Ranch (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 578, 587-588, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671] .

[b] No Duty to Provide "Ideal" Horses

A commercial stable facility's duty towards its patrons does not extend to eliminating hazards that are inherent in the sport of horseback riding. Thus, the owner or operator of the stable has no duty to provide "ideal" horses that never buck, bite, break into a trot or gallop, or stumble, or horses that never "spook" when confronted by a frightening event or a rider's unusual movements. Sudden movements by a horse are as inherent in horseback riding as the presence of moguls on a ski slope. A rider thrown by the sudden movement of a horse is analogous to a passenger in a boat who is thrown off balance and injured by the sudden movement of a wave; neither the stable owner nor the boat owner is liable for the resulting injuries because no duty is imposed on either to protect against these occurrences [Harrold v. Rolling J Ranch (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 578, 588-589, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671] .

In a subsequent case, however, another court of appeal decision held that a company that provided riding horses to a Girl Scout camp owed a duty not to knowingly or without due care provide horses inappropriate for beginning riders at a children's camp [Giardino v. Brown (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 820, 834, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 77] . In that case, a horse provided by the defendant spooked while an 11-year-old girl at the camp was tying the horse to a post, causing the child to get her hand caught in the rope and eventually leading to the amputation of two fingers. In reversing a summary judgment for the defendant, the court of appeal held that there was a triable issue of fact as to whether the particular horse was unduly dangerous for use at the children's camp, in light of evidence that the horse was "head-shy" and subject to spooking and that the defendant must have known this about the 20-year-old horse [Giardino v. Brown (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 820, 836-837, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 77] . Although recognizing that it would impossible to prevent a horse from ever spooking, which is an inherent risk in horseback riding, the court of appeal concluded that primary assumption of risk would not bar this particular action if the evidence showed that the defendant either (1) increased the risks inherent in the activity by providing a horse that was inappropriate to the skill level of the participants at the Girl Scout camp or (2) failed to warn of the horse's unusual or unsafe disposition [Giardino v. Brown (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 820, 835, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 77] .

In addition to application in the context of commercial horseback riding facilities, the primary assumption of risk doctrine may also protect a social host who provides a horse for riding by a guest. In one case, the court of appeal held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine provided a complete defense to the owners of a cattle ranch who had invited friends to their ranch for a barbecue and one guest who asked to ride one of their horses was injured. The guest assured the owners that she had ridden before, but she lost control of the horse, which broke into a gallop and swerved suddenly, throwing her into a fence. The court noted that while the horse was trained for work on the cattle ranch, a fact that the guest should have realized under the circumstances, the owners had no reason to know that the horse would bolt without apparent reason, as he had been a gentle horse previously around guests and when being ridden. Moreover, the owners did not purport to be horseback riding instructors or coaches and had not organized a riding event. The court concluded that the owners were entitled to take the guest at her word when she assured them that she had experience as a rider, especially in light of the fact that the guest appeared confident and in control of the horse when she first mounted. Under those circumstances, the owners had no duty to provide the guest with instructions on how to ride or control the horse [Levinson v. Owens (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1534, 1549-1551, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 779]. In addition, the court also concluded that one comment made to the guest while the stirrups were being adjusted telling her not to pull back on the reins could not reasonably be interpreted to mean, even by a rider with only minimal experience, that she should never pull back on the reins to control the horse, and thus did not constitute conduct that increased the risks inherent in horseback riding [Levinson v. Owens (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1534, 1552, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 779].

§ 273.34 Establishing Liability

The res ipsa loquitur doctrine permits an inference that a defendant was negligent if the plaintiff establishes the following three elements: (1) the accident is of a kind that ordinarily does not occur in the absence of someone's negligence; (2) it is caused by an agency or instrumentality within the exclusive control of the defendant; and (3) it is not due to any voluntary action or contribution on the part of the plaintiff [see Evid. Code § 646; Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 554, 559, 30 Cal. Rptr. 521, 381 P.2d 377 ; Press v. Lyford (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 986, 994, 111 Cal. Rptr. 817] .

The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur has been applied to a case in which a swimming area was under the control and management of the owner or his or her servants and the accident was such that it would not have occurred had the owner used proper care for the safety of his or her patrons [Young v. Gautier (1938) 28 Cal. App. 2d 494, 498, 82 P.2d 959 (inference was sufficient to sustain judgment against swimming facility proprietor)]. However, the doctrine will not be applied if the balance of probabilities is not such that negligence is the most likely cause of the accident. For example, the res ipsa loquitur presumption was held inapplicable in a case in which the plaintiff skier sued for damages for injuries received as a result of a fall from the defendant's chair lift type of ski tow. The accident occurred when the plaintiff failed to successfully disembark at the designated point and was carried beyond the landing platform before falling 30 feet from the chair to the ground. Because there was some question regarding the exact cause of the accident, plaintiff requested an instruction on res ipsa loquitur, which the trial court refused to give. Although the requested instruction was improper in other particulars, the court of appeal affirmed the refusal principally because the instruction as offered assumed a balance of probabilities in favor of negligence, which the court held was not the case under the circumstances [see Houser v. Floyd (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 778, 785, 34 Cal. Rptr. 96] .

For general discussion of the res ipsa loquitur doctrine, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

[2] Presumption of Negligence Based on Violation of Law

The failure of a person to exercise due care is presumed if: (1) he or she violated a statute, ordinance, or regulation of a public entity; (2) the violation proximately caused death or injury to person or property; (3) the death or injury resulted from an occurrence of the nature that the statute, ordinance, or regulation was designed to prevent; and (4) the person suffering the death or injury to his or her person or property was one of the class of persons for whose protection the statute, ordinance, or regulation was adopted [Evid. Code § 669(a)]. The application of this presumption in the context of a swimming facility's violation of statutes regarding lifeguards is discussed in § 273.33[4][b].

[1] Assumption of Risk by Participant

Participant in active sport as liable for breach of legal duty of care to other participants in active sport only if participant intentionally injures another player or engages in conduct that is so reckless as to be totally outside range of ordinary activity involved in sport. Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 320, 321, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696

Defense of assumption of risk as not subsumed by comparative negligence when plaintiff agrees to relieve defendant of an obligation of reasonable conduct. Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824-825, 829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 (adopting system of comparative negligence in California)

Assumption of risk as not precluding cause of action based on defendant's collision on ski slopes with plaintiff, allegedly caused at least in part by defendant's consumption of alcohol, because defendant's consumption of alcohol while skiing was not activity ordinarily involved in skiing; although collisions are inherent risk of skiing and therefore defendant did not have duty to avoid an inadvertent collision with plaintiff, defendant did have duty to avoid increasing risk of collision. Freeman v. Hale (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1388, 1394, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418

Primary assumption of risk as barring recovery by skier who went through gap between trees, thinking he could cross over to another ski run, and skied over edge of ravine onto rocks below; owner and operator of ski resort as having no duty to protect plaintiff against risks inherent in sport of skiing (such as trees, rocks, rough terrain, or ravines) by, in effect, changing entire mountain to ensure plaintiff's safety. *O'Donoghue v. [a] Comparative Negligence

[ii] Sanitation

Private waterfront property as not "public swimming pool" as contemplated in Health & Safety Code § 24100. O'Keefe v. South End Rowing Club (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 729, 739-740, 51 Cal. Rptr. 534, 414 P.2d 830

[d] Proof

[i] In General

Evidence in form of inspection reports of pool in question by county health department as admissible on issue of defendant pool owner's willful and wanton misconduct. Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 756, 778-779, 91 Cal. Rptr. 745, 478 P.2d 465

Mere fact that drowning occurred as not conclusive proof of negligence. Flora v. Bimini Water Co. (1911) 161 Cal. 495, 500, 119 P. 661

[ii] Causation

Under facts of case (no witnesses at all to drownings), plaintiffs, in proving defendant pool owner's violation of statutory lifeguard requirement, as sustaining their initial burden of proof on issue of causation; burden as then shifting to defendants to show violation was not proximate cause of deaths; in absence of such proof, defendants' causation of such death as established as matter of law. Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 756, 765, 769-775, 91 Cal. Rptr. 745, 478 P.2d 465

When alleged act of negligence consisted of failure to provide qualified lifeguard protection for public pool, question of causation and of what would have happened had such precaution been taken as not capable of direct proof and as largely a matter of speculation of inference; such question as for jury and not court. Lindsey v. De Vaux (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 445, 454-455, 123 P.2d 144 ; Rovegno v. San Jose Knights of Columbus Hall Ass'n (1930) 108 Cal. App. 591, 595, 291 P. 848

[e] Res Ipsa Loquitur

When facts give rise to inference of negligence from inherent nature and character of act causing injury, that is, when facts give application to principle of res ipsa loquitur, burden of proceeding as shifted to defendant who must adduce evidence to meet plaintiff's prima facie case in order to escape adverse finding. Young v. Gautier (1938) 28 Cal. App. 2d 494, 496, 82 P.2d 959

[10] Waterskiing

Doctrine of res ipsa loquitur as applicable when defendant boat operator ran over plaintiff water-skier, operator was in sole control of boat, and plaintiff was not responsible for accident. Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 554, 559-561, 30 Cal. Rptr. 521, 381 P.2d 377

When defendant boat operator may have violated local ordinance by operating motorboat in excess of legal speed limit, instruction to jury that assumption of the risk was not valid defense as appropriate only if plaintiff contends that violation was sole proximate cause of accident. Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 554, 565, 30 Cal. Rptr. 521, 381 P.2d 377

Possible defense of plaintiff's negligence as arising when plaintiff water-skier consents to ski with boat operator who plaintiff knows or should know is inexperienced. Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 554, 568-569, 30 Cal. Rptr. 521, 381 P.2d 377 (skier injured while waiting in water for boat operator to pick him up)

Plaintiff water-skier as entitled, on request, to conditional res ipsa loquitur jury instruction when water-skier was maintaining fixed course and defendant motorboat operator was turning toward water-skier even though water-skier could have held on to tow rope and avoided accident but let go of rope. Press v. Lyford (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 986, 994-997, 111 Cal. Rptr. 817

Water-skier as having duty to keep proper lookout for own safety. Press v. Lyford (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 986, 993, 111 Cal. Rptr. 817

[2] Use of Form

This general form of complaint is for use by a spectator at a sporting event to recover damages for personal injuries and property damages based on the negligence of the owner-operator of the team in providing for the safety of the spectators.

With appropriate modifications, this form can be used to allege a wrongful death action. For forms of allegation for use in wrongful death actions, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

[3] Potential Bases of Liability

The precise bases on which a spectator may recover damages from an owner-operator, for injuries caused by the risks inherent to the game, are currently not clear. Older authority held that an owner had a duty to provide screened seats for as many spectators as may be reasonably expected to call for them on any ordinary occasion [Quinn v. Recreation Park Ass'n. (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 725, 729, 46 P.2d 144 ; see also Rudnick v. Golden W. Broadcasters (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 793, 796, 202 Cal. Rptr. 900 (reversing summary judgment in favor of owner; evidence did not show that protected seats existed sufficient to satisfy duty under Quinn)]. However, it is not clear whether this authority is still viable in light of the California Supreme Court decision in Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 . In Knight, the Court discussed the duty of owners in terms that seems to indicate that an owner has no duty to protect a plaintiff from a risk inherent to the game; in addition, the Court noted that the duty of an owner also depends on the steps the sponsoring business entity reasonably should be obligated to take in order to minimize the risks without altering the nature of the sport [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 317, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

The court of appeal has applied to spectators the rule stated in Knight, that defendants generally have a duty to use due care not to increase the risks to a participant over and above those inherent in the sport.

One court ruled that while foul balls may represent an inherent risk, and under Knight, an assumed risk to spectators attending baseball games, the owners of the team have a duty not to increase those risks [Lowe v. California League of Prof'l Baseball (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 112, 119, 123, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 105 (triable issue of fact as to whether the teams' mascot cavorting in the stands and distracting spectator's attention, while the baseball game was in progress, constituted negligence in the form of increasing the inherent risk of spectator being struck by a foul ball)]. Another court of appeal opinion applied the same standard, but concluded that a professional hockey club, the league, and the owners and operators of the hockey arena owed no duty to a spectator to protect her from the risk of being hit in the face by a flying puck during pregame warm-ups, because this risk was inherent in attending a game [Nemarnik v. Los Angeles Kings Hockey Club (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 631, 643, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10] . For further discussion, see § 273.10[3][a], [4][b].

The factual situation used as an example in this form of complaint involves a defective screen, which would presumably give rise to liability even under the more limited duty that may be applied pursuant to the language in Knight [see Neinstein v. Los Angeles Dodgers, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 176, 182 n.3, 229 Cal. Rptr. 612 (liability could be possible if injury was due to defective protection)]. For a form of allegation for use in a case in which the injury to plaintiff was caused by a third person's conduct, see § 273.91. For a form of allegation asserting that the res ipsa loquitur presumption is applicable, see § 273.92.

[4] Specification of Damages

In an action to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages for anything other than personal injury or wrongful death (for example, property damage) must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint, see Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115].

[5] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

§ 273.91 Allegation--Owner-Operator Liable for Failure to Protect Plaintiff From Foreseeable Conduct of Third Person

[1] FORM Allegation--Owner-Operator Liable for Failure to Protect Plaintiff From Foreseeable Conduct of Third Person

1. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff _____ [specify conduct that is basis of duty to plaintiff, e.g., attended a baseball game at _____ (name of park or stadium), owned and operated by defendant].

2. At that time and place, _____ [describe incident that caused injury to plaintiff, e.g., as plaintiff was leaving the park, plaintiff was assaulted by a group of youths who had been loitering in the parking lot appurtenant to _____ (name of park or stadium) (and owned and controlled by defendant)].

3. The injury to plaintiff was foreseeable to defendant in that _____ [specify factors supporting contention that defendant should have foreseen incident, e.g., defendant knew or should have known that a group of youths often congregated in the area in which plaintiff was assaulted, that the lighting in the area was inadequate to provide for the safety of patrons returning to their cars, and that prior assaults had taken place in the same general area under similar circumstances].

4. Defendant's negligence was a proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries because _____ [specify causal link between defendant's negligence and plaintiff's injury, e.g., defendant's repair of the broken lights, and periodic security patrol of the area, along with a warning to patrons of the risk of criminal activity in that area of the parking lot, would have enabled plaintiff to have taken steps to avoid the assault].

[2] Use of Form

These allegations are for use in a complaint for damages for personal injuries sustained by plaintiff due to the actions of a third person, when it is contended that the owner and possessor of property was negligent in failing to control the conduct of the third person or to warn plaintiff of the danger. The allegations may be inserted in the form in § 273.90 in place of Paragraphs 5 through 7.

[3] Decisions

23-273 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 273.92

§ 273.92 Allegation--Res Ipsa Loquitur Presumption Applies

[1] FORM Allegation--Res Ipsa Loquitur Presumption Applies

Plaintiff was, at the time of his/her injury, occupying a _____ [seat or position] in the area designed for use by spectators. The injury was not caused by any voluntary action on the part of plaintiff, but was instead caused by _____ [specify general cause of accident, e.g., flying debris resulting from the deliberate destruction of motor vehicles], which was within the exclusive control of defendant at the time the injury occurred. Because such an injury does not ordinarily occur in the absence of negligence, the res ipsa loquitur presumption should apply.

[2] Use of Form

This form of allegation is for use in a complaint for damages for personal injury, when the injury was suffered under circumstances in which the res ipsa loquitur doctrine may be used to establish that a defendant was negligent. The allegations may be inserted in the form in § 273.90 in place of Paragraphs 6 and 7.

The example used in this complaint, that plaintiff was injured by flying debris caused by defendant's destruction of motor vehicles (in a "demolition derby"), is taken from the factual situation in Khanoyan v. All Am. Sports Enters., Inc. (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 785, 40 Cal. Rptr. 596 . The res ipsa loquitur doctrine has been applied rarely in other spectator sports contexts, usually because it has generally been held that participants' conduct that can cause injury to spectators (such as fouling a baseball into the stands) is not negligent [see, e.g., Quinn v. Recreation Park Ass'n (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 725, 728, 46 P.2d 144] . However, res ipsa loquitur could well apply to an injury caused by a condition of the stadium, such as a collapse of a grandstand.

The res ipsa loquitur doctrine applies only to establish the presumption that a defendant was negligent [see Evid. Code § 646]. If the owner-operator of the premises did not owe a duty to the spectator to prevent the injury that occurred, no liability will be imposed. The determination of duty will ordinarily be made in the context of a contention that "primary assumption of risk" applies to bar any recovery by plaintiff [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 314-316, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . For a form of affirmative defense contending that primary assumption of risk bars

[3] Decisions

Spectator occupying position in area designated for his or her use, injured through no voluntary action of his or her own part from flying debris resulting from deliberate destruction of motor vehicles within exclusive control of those producing event, as suffering injuries not ordinarily occurring in absence of someone's negligence; doctrine of res ipsa loquitur as therefore applicable. Khanoyan v. All Am. Sports Enters., Inc. (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 785, 793, 40 Cal. Rptr. 596

§ 273.93 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Spectator's Assumption of Risk--Primary Assumption of Risk Bars Any Recovery by Plaintiff

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Spectator's Assumption of Risk--Primary Assumption of Risk Bars Any Recovery by Plaintiff

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:

1. Defendant _____ [name] is the _____ [owner or operator or owner-operator] of _____ [name of premises at which injury occurred]. Plaintiff's injury, as alleged in Paragraph[s] _____ of the complaint, was caused by _____ [specify cause of injury as alleged in plaintiff's complaint, e.g., being struck by a baseball that was batted into the stands].

2. It is a risk inherent to the sport of _____ [specify, e.g., baseball] that _____ [specify risk that led to injury, e.g., balls will be hit into the grandstands, with the concomitant risk of injury to spectators]. Defendant _____ [name] has no duty to eliminate, or protect a plaintiff against, risks inherent in the sport itself, and because defendant _____ [name] has done nothing to increase those risks, the primary assumption of risk doctrine supports the conclusion that defendant _____ [name] owed no duty to plaintiff to prevent the injury alleged.

[2] Use of Form

The defense of primary assumption of risk may be set forth in an answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30] to a complaint by a plaintiff for damages, which alleges that the plaintiff's injury suffered as a spectator was caused by defendant's negligence. If the facts that support the defense appear on the face of the complaint, this form may be adapted to a demurrer to the complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)].

The California Supreme Court has held that pursuant to the analysis used in Li v. Yellow Cab Co. [Li v. Yellow Cab

Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824-825, 829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] , "assumption of the risk" is actually two separate defenses. "Primary assumption of risk" involves instances in which the assumption of risk doctrine embodies a legal conclusion that there is no duty on the part of the defendants to protect the plaintiff from a particular risk, while "secondary assumption of risk" involves those instances in which the defendant does owe a duty of care to the plaintiff but the plaintiff knowingly encounters a risk of injury caused by the defendant's breach of that duty. In primary assumption of risk cases, the plaintiff is completely barred from recovery, whereas in secondary assumption of risk cases the comparative fault system adopted in Li is applied [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 308, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . Although Knight involved an injury to a participant in a sporting event, it seems likely that the Court will apply a similar analysis to cases involving injury to a spectator.

Counsel may also desire to allege that secondary assumption of risk applies in case the court finds primary assumption of risk inapplicable [see § 273.94].

§ 273.94 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Secondary Assumption of Risk, or Other Negligence by Spectator, Requires Apportionment Based on Comparative Fault

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Secondary Assumption of Risk, or Other Negligence by Spectator, Requires Apportionment Based on Comparative Fault

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:

1. At the time and place of the accident alleged, plaintiff himself/herself did not exercise ordinary care, caution, or prudence to avoid the accident, and the resulting _____ [injuries or damages], if any, sustained by plaintiff were proximately caused and contributed to by the negligence of plaintiff in that _____ [set out acts of plaintiff constituting his/her negligence, e.g., plaintiff, although participating in the athletic event as a spectator and seated in the grandstands for that purpose, failed to observe either the playing of the game or the hitting of the ball, and was struck by such ball as a proximate result of his/her own inattention and failure to take adequate precautions to avoid the flight of that ball].

[2. Plaintiff's conduct in _____ (specify conduct that supports inference that plaintiff knowingly encountered a risk of injury caused by defendant's breach of duty, e.g., remaining in his/her seat after defendant's employee informed plaintiff of danger posed by torn protective screen and offered plaintiff another, protected seat) was a proximate cause of his/her injury, and justifies an apportionment of any damages based on the parties' respective degrees of fault.]

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense is for use in alleging the defense that plaintiff's negligence while a spectator at an athletic exhibition or game was a proximate cause of his or her injury, permitting the jury to apportion damages based on the parties' respective degrees of fault. The defense of contributory negligence has been invalidated in California and replaced with a system of comparative negligence in which the fundamental purpose is to assign responsibility and liability for damage in direct proportion to the negligence of each of the parties. Thus, in all actions for negligence resulting in injury to person or property, the negligence of the person injured does not bar recovery but the damages awarded are diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the person recovering [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] .

Optional Paragraph 2 is for use when assumption of risk is an issue, and alleges that plaintiff's conduct in the face of a known risk constitutes secondary assumption of risk, which has been held to be a variant of comparative negligence [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 308, 310, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824-825, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] . If defendant is asserting as well that plaintiff's recovery should be barred under the primary assumption of risk doctrine [see § 273.93], counsel should also allege that secondary assumption of risk applies in case the court finds primary assumption of risk inapplicable.

[3] Pleading Negligence of Plaintiff

Generally, it is not necessary to set out the plaintiff's acts that constitute his or her negligence, although the defendant may do so. The defendant must plead the facts on which he or she relies to support the defense and must allege the causal connection between those facts and the injury. However, this simply means that a defendant may allege that the plaintiff was negligent in and about those matters alleged in the complaint and that such negligence proximately contributed to his or her injury [Singer v. Superior Court (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 318, 323, 5 Cal. Rptr. 697, 353 P.2d 305] .

[4] Decisions

Secondary assumption of risk doctrine, involving cases in which plaintiff knowingly encounters risk of injury created by defendant's breach of duty owed to plaintiff, as subsumed into comparative fault system. Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 308, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696

Negligence of plaintiff as affirmative defense that must be pleaded. Crabbe v. Mammoth Channel Gold Mining Co. (1914) 168 Cal. 500, 505, 143 P. 714 ; Provost v. Worrall (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 367, 373, 298 P.2d 726

[2] Use of Form

This general form of complaint is for use by a plaintiff injured while participating in an active sport, to recover damages caused by the negligence of defendant. The form may be used in an action against the owner or possessor of premises, based on a dangerous condition of the property or some other conduct that breached a duty of care owed to plaintiff and was the proximate cause of plaintiff's injury. The form may also be used in an action against another participant in the active sport, whose conduct in the course of that participation breached the duty of care defendant owed to plaintiff under the circumstances.

[3] Allegations

Allegations that can support the legal conclusion that defendant owed a duty of care to plaintiff, and breached that duty causing plaintiff's injury, are set forth in §§ 273.111 -273.116. The question of the existence and scope of defendant's duty of care is a legal question, which depends on the nature of the sport or activity in question and on the parties' general relationship to the activity; it is an issue to be decided by the court, rather than the jury [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 313, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . The allegations in §§ 273.111-273.116 either have been found sufficient to support the legal conclusion that defendant owed a duty of care to plaintiff, or have been set forth as the threshold for a finding of a duty of care. However, public policy considerations can influence the question of duty [see, e.g., Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 317, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (cases have analyzed duty of owner of ballpark with reference to steps sponsoring business reasonably should be obligated to take in order to minimize risks without altering nature of sport)]. Thus, counsel should be prepared to argue the general effects likely to result from the finding on duty that counsel seeks the court to reach. The issue of the applicable duty of care owed to participants is discussed in §§ 273.30[1] and 273.32.

[4] Defendant's Response Regarding Duty of Care

If the defense contends that defendant had no duty of care to prevent the harm to plaintiff under the circumstances, it may make this contention either by demurrer if the lack of duty appears on the face of the complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)], or by answer if the lack of duty does not appear on the face of the complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)]. In most cases, especially cases in which the defense contends that the doctrine of primary assumption of risk embodies a legal conclusion that the defendant had no duty to protect the plaintiff from a particular risk, the question will be determined on a motion for summary judgment [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 308, 313, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (determination is amenable to resolution by summary judgment)]. For a form of affirmative defense asserting that primary assumption of risk precludes plaintiff's recovery, see § 273.117.

[2] Use of Form

This allegation may, in an appropriate case, be inserted into Paragraph 7 of the complaint in § 273.110 to allege that defendant's conduct can be the basis for liability because it was so reckless that it was totally outside the range of the ordinary activity involved in the sport, and therefore breached the duty of care owed by participants in active sports to other participants [*Knight v. [2] Use of Form

2. [2] Use of Form

This form of allegation is for use in a complaint by a patron injured at a swimming pool or beach as a result of a collision between a swimmer and a diver, on the ground that the owner-operator of the swimming establishment was negligent in constructing the pool or other premises so that the swimming and diving areas were too close together. Optional Paragraph 3 alleges that defendant's lifeguard(s) negligently failed to warn plaintiff of the known danger [see Alvarado v. Anderson (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 166, 173, 174, 346 P.2d 73] . § 273.116 Allegation--Ski Lift Operator Breached Duty of Care to Skier Not to Increase Risks Inherent to Sport

[1] FORM Allegation--Ski Lift Operator Breached Duty of Care to Skier Not to Increase Risks Inherent to Sport

1. At all times herein mentioned defendant owned, controlled, maintained, managed, and operated a resort area commonly known as _____ in _____ County, California, and in connection with the operation invited members of the general public to that area to use, for a fee to be paid defendant, the outdoor and skiing facilities, including ski runs and slopes, maintained, controlled, and operated by defendant.

2. On or about _____ [date], at about _____ [time], plaintiff, as a member of the general public, paid to defendant the required consideration for entry into the resort, and was a patron of defendant at the resort area. At that time and place plaintiff was skiing across and on certain slopes maintained in the resort area, more particularly those in the proximity of _____ [specify, e.g., the beginners rope tow].

3. At that time and place defendant so negligently operated, maintained, and controlled the slope that _____ [describe dangerous condition, e.g., a deep and dangerous break, hole, and depression had formed there] making a dangerous and defective condition, and one likely to cause persons using the slope to injure themselves.

4. At that time and place defendant knew, or in the exercise of reasonable care should have known, of the dangerous and defective condition of the slope but, notwithstanding that knowledge or obligation to know, defendant negligently failed to give warning or notice of the dangerous and defective condition to persons using the slope or to take other precautions for the safety of persons using the slope.

5. As a direct and proximate result of defendant's negligence and the resulting dangerous and defective conditions of the slope, plaintiff, while using the slope, _____ [describe accident, e.g., fell and dropped into the break, hole, and depression] and was injured as alleged below.

6. As a direct and proximate result of defendant's negligence as alleged above, plaintiff suffered serious personal injuries, and among others sustained the following injuries: _____ [describe].

[7. Defendant owed to plaintiff a duty of utmost care in the operation of the _____ (specify type of lift involved in incident that caused plaintiff's injury, e.g., chair lift) due to defendant's status as a common carrier in the operation of that lift.]

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a plaintiff skier who sustained injuries to person or property as a result of the alleged negligence of the owner-operator of a ski resort, or its employees. With minor modifications, the form can be used to state a cause of action for injuries arising out of any defect in the slope or equipment of which the defendant knew or should have been aware was creating reasonable danger to his or her other patrons, beyond the risks inherent to the sport of skiing. The allegations set forth in this form may be inserted in Paragraph 7 of the form in § 273.110, as appropriate.

Optional Paragraph 7 of this form may be used if the injury was sustained as a result of the operation of a ski lift. Operation of a ski lift subjects the defendant to the duty of care imposed on common carriers by Civ. Code § 2100 [see Squaw Valley Ski Corp. v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1499, 1508-1509, 1515, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 897 ; see also § 273.33[1][a]].

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:

1. Plaintiff's injury as alleged in his/her complaint was sustained while plaintiff and defendant were participants in _____ [specify activity, and if necessary facts tending to show that activity is active sport, e.g., a game of competitive table tennis, which requires significant physical exertion and involves inherent risks to participants].

2. Plaintiff's injury as alleged in his/her complaint resulted from the risk, inherent to the activity of _____ [specify activity, e.g., table tennis], that _____ [specify risk that was cause of injury, e.g., defendant would hit the table while returning a shot, causing the table to move toward plaintiff and injure him/her].

3. Because any injury to plaintiff resulted from a risk inherent to the active sport in which he/she was a participant, and because defendant _____ [name] neither intentionally injured plaintiff nor injured plaintiff by conduct so reckless that it was outside the range of the ordinary activity involved in the sport, plaintiff should be barred from recovery on the ground that the primary assumption of risk doctrine requires a finding that defendant _____ [name] breached no duty of care owed to plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

This form is for alleging the affirmative defense that plaintiff cannot recover damages because the doctrine of primary assumption of risk compels the finding that, under the facts alleged, defendant owed no duty of care to prevent the injury allegedly suffered by plaintiff. The basis for the defense is that plaintiff's injury as alleged in the complaint was incurred during participation in an active sport, and that defendant neither intentionally injured plaintiff nor engaged in conduct so reckless as to be totally outside the range of the ordinary activity involved in the sport [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 320, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Plaintiff's Primary Assumption of Risk Defeats Cause of Action--Injury Resulted from Risk Inherent to Sport, and Defendant Proprietor Did Nothing to Increase or Conceal Risk

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:

1. Plaintiff's injury as alleged in his/her complaint was sustained while plaintiff was participating in _____ [specify activity, e.g., snow skiing].

2. Plaintiff's injury as alleged in his/her complaint resulted from the risk, inherent to the activity of _____ [specify activity, e.g., skiing], that _____ [specify risk that was cause of injury, e.g., plaintiff would encounter moguls while skiing down the slope].

3. Because any injury to plaintiff resulted from a risk inherent to the activity in which plaintiff was participating, and because defendant _____ [name] neither increased the risks posed to plaintiff beyond those inherent to the activity, nor concealed any risks of the activity, plaintiff should be barred from recovery on the ground that the primary assumption of risk doctrine requires a finding that defendant _____ [name] breached no duty of care owed to plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

This form is for alleging the affirmative defense that plaintiff cannot recover damages because the doctrine of primary assumption of risk compels the finding that, under the facts alleged, defendant owed no duty of care to prevent the injury allegedly suffered by plaintiff. The basis for the defense is that plaintiff's injury as alleged in the complaint was incurred during participation in an activity and caused by a risk inherent to that activity, and that defendant had no duty to protect plaintiff from that risk. The doctrine of primary assumption of risk permits a defendant to be held liable for injury to a participant in a sport only if the defendant has breached the duty to use due care not to increase the risks to a participant over and above those inherent to the sport [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315-316, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Comparative Fault Principles Require Reduction of Any Recovery by Plaintiff in Proportion to Plaintiff's Degree of Fault--Secondary Assumption of Risk Doctrine Applies if Defendant Breached Any Duty Owed to Plaintiff, Because Plaintiff's Knowing Encounter of Risk Was Cause of Injury

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., SECOND)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that to the extent that defendant breached any duty of care owed to plaintiff, plaintiff chose to encounter the known risk created by that breach of duty, and the injury to plaintiff alleged in the complaint was caused by the combined effect of plaintiff's and defendant's culpable conduct. Therefore, the secondary assumption of risk doctrine applies to make comparative fault principles applicable to reduce any recovery by plaintiff in proportion to his/her degree of fault.

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use in alleging the defense of secondary assumption of risk in a case in which plaintiff was injured while participating in a sport or other activity. Secondary assumption of risk, in which the assumption of risk doctrine is merged into the comparative fault scheme, applies to cases in which a defendant does owe a duty of care to the plaintiff, but the plaintiff proceeds to encounter a known risk imposed by the defendant's breach of duty. In this situation, the trier of fact apportions the loss resulting from the injury based on the relative responsibility of the parties [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

This form of affirmative defense should be asserted as an alternative defense to the assertion that primary assumption of risk precludes plaintiff's cause of action [see §§ 273.117, 273.118], if the court finds that defendant did owe a duty of care to plaintiff.

Petroleum marketing franchises may be governed by California's Franchise Investment Law (Corp. Code § 31000 et seq.) and/or by the Federal Petroleum Marketing Practices Act (15 U.S.C. § 2801 et seq., hereinafter "PMPA"), both of which are discussed in Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation . Note that actions regarding franchise termination, unlawful detainer, breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, or unfair trade practices are preempted by the PMPA to the extent that those actions cannot enjoin or prohibit a franchise termination, or the nonrenewal of a franchise, that would be proper under the PMPA [Exxon Corp. v. Miro (C.D. Cal. 1983) 555 F. Supp. 234, 237-238 ; California Arco Distributors, Inc. v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 349, 364, 204 Cal. Rptr. 743] . This position is contrary to earlier holdings in Levitt (1990) 493 U.S. 455, 458, 110 S. Ct. 792, 107 L. Code § 1714(a)* govern the tort duties and liabilities of garage or service station operators in connection with the maintenance of their premises, motor vehicle repairs and servicing, the sale of gasoline, and the bailment of motor vehicles for storage, repair, and servicing.

Motor vehicle repairs and servicing are regulated by Bus. & Prof. Code § 9880 et seq., Civ. Code § 1718, Health & Safety Code § 44000 et seq., Veh. Code §§ 12000-12003, and Veh. Code § 24000 et seq., and may be subject to the Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act [Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.].

The sale and distribution of petroleum products is regulated by Bus. & Prof. Code § 13400 et seq. and Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21200-21203. The sale and distribution of antifreeze, brake fluid, and automatic transmission fluid are regulated by Bus. & Prof. Code § 13700 et seq.

The garageman's lien is governed generally by Civ. Code § 2872 et seq. and specifically by Civ. Code §§ 3068-3075 and by Veh. Code §§ 22851, 22851.4-22851.12, 22852.5, 22856.

Unlawful detainer actions by petroleum distributors against gasoline dealers are governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1174(a).

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

23-274 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 274.10

§ 274.10 Premises Liability

[1] As Occupier of Property

The operator of a garage or service station, as an occupier of property, is under a duty of ordinary care in managing his or her property to avoid exposing persons on the premises to an unreasonable risk of harm, and he or she is liable for injuries proximately resulting from the failure to fulfill that duty. This liability is based on the general negligence principles embodied in Civ. Code § 1714(a) [see Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 119, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] .

For further discussion, see Ch. 421, Premises Liability .

[2] Dangerous Conditions Created by Operator on Abutting Sidewalk

If a business enterprise is conducted in such a manner as to create a hazard on an abutting sidewalk and the operator of the business knows or has reason to know of the hazard, he or she is under a duty to exercise reasonable care to protect persons using the sidewalk from injury as a result of the hazard [Kopfinger v. Grand Central Pub. Market (1964) 60 Cal. 2d 852, 859, 37 Cal. Rptr. 65, 389 P.2d 529] .

Thus, a garage or service station operator, utilizing a driveway across a public sidewalk as access to its premises is charged with maintaining the driveway portion of the sidewalk in a reasonably safe condition for use by pedestrians [see Lee v. Ashizawa (1964) 60 Cal. 2d 862, 865-866, 37 Cal. Rptr. 71, 389 P.2d 535 (liability of storekeeper for injuries resulting from oily driveway in front of garage)]. The operator is not responsible, however, when a third person creates a risk of harm on the sidewalk abutting his or her premises during activities unrelated to his or her enterprise [see Lee v. Ashizawa (1964) 60 Cal. 2d 862, 867, 37 Cal. Rptr. 71, 389 P.2d 535] .

[3] Duty to Conduct Operations Safely

[a] Duty of Ordinary Care With Respect to Customers

A garage or service station operator is under a duty of ordinary care to avoid injuring customers while servicing vehicles

[Morton v. Hinds (1931) 113 Cal. App. 437, 440-441] or moving vehicles [Beck v. Sirota (1941) 42 Cal. App. 2d 551, 557, 109 P.2d 419] . The operator is not required, however, to warn of dangerous actions which are, or should be, obvious to customers [Morton v. Hinds (1931) 113 Cal. App. 437, 441] . Nor is he or she negligent in directing a customer to park his or her own vehicle when the customer is licensed to drive and displays no physical impediment which would interfere with the vehicle's operation [Heath v. Keyser (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 877, 879, 169 P.2d 668] .

When supplying a customer's vehicle with gasoline, a service station operator owes a duty to exercise the care of a reasonable person dealing with a dangerous instrumentality in general and explosive or highly flammable materials in particular. Because of the great risks involved, the utmost care is required; even a slight deviation from the standard will constitute negligence and impose liability for resulting injuries to customers [Borenkraut v. Whitten (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 538, 545, 15 Cal. Rptr. 635, 364 P.2d 467] .

A customer's recovery for injuries sustained as a result of a garage or service station operator's negligent conduct of operations may be reduced under comparative negligence principles if the customer has negligently contributed to his or her injuries [see Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 829, 119 Cal. Rptr 858, 532 P.2d 1226] by stepping into a position of danger [Grasgreen v. Acme Auto Parks (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 680, 682, 332 P.2d 337] or by participating in the servicing of his or her vehicle without exercising judgment or care [Morton v. Hinds (1931) 113 Cal. App. 437, 441, 298 P. 160 ; Strand v. Everett (1927) 84 Cal. App. 358, 362, 258 P. 115] .

The customer is not guilty of failing to take precautions for his or her own safety, however, when the customer has no reasonable basis to believe that the operator will take actions that pose a danger to persons in close proximity [Borenkraut v. Whitten (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 538, 543, 15 Cal. Rptr. 635, 364 P.2d 467 ; Bischoff v. Newby's Tire Service (1958) 166 Cal. App. 2d 563, 568, 333 P.2d 44] .

[b] Duty to Control Third Persons

The operator of a garage or service station is under a duty to control or adequately warn against accidental, negligent, or intentional acts of third persons which threaten harm to others on the premises if the operator has reason to anticipate such acts and the probability of injury resulting from them [see Taylor v. Centennial Bowl, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 114, 121, 52 Cal. Rptr. 561, 416 P.2d 793 (bowling alley parking lot); see also Barker v. Wah Low (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 710, 712, 721, 97 Cal. Rptr. 85 (question of fact as to negligence of restaurant operators in failing to protect customer against negligent operation of vehicle by other customers)].

The operator is not an insurer, however, and is not liable for the unforseeable, momentary negligence of a third person [Hunter v. Mohawk Petroleum Corp. (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 439, 441, 334 P.2d 193 ; but see Taylor v. Centennial Bowl, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 114, 122-124, 52 Cal. Rptr. 561, 416 P.2d 793 (distinguishing Hunter and indicating that a warning may be insufficient protection under certain circumstances)]. For example, a parking lot operator is not negligent in directing customer to park his or her own vehicle and is not liable for another customer's injuries resulting from negligent operation of the vehicle while the customer is parking [Heath v. Keyser (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 877, 879, 169 P.2d 668] . However, the specific circumstances of the operation of the premises may give rise to a triable issue of fact as to whether operators of the premises were negligent in failing to protect customers from potentially harmful operation of vehicles by other customers [Barker v. Wah Low (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 710, 712, 721, 97 Cal. Rptr. 85 (question of fact raised whether operator of drive-in restaurant failed to provide adequate barriers between parking area and service area where customers stood and failed to adequately direct vehicular traffic upon premises)]. For example, the California Supreme Court has held that neither the owner of a commercial building nor a parking services company owed a legal duty of care to prevent a sexual assault in the building's underground parking garage [Sharon P. v. Arman, Ltd. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1181, 1185, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 35, 989 P.2d 121] , superseded by statute on other grounds as stated in Saelzler v. Advanced Group 400 (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 763, 767-768, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 23 P.3d 1143 . Under the factual circumstances of that particular case, which included a 10-year absence of criminal assaults in the garage prior to the assault on the plaintiff, the Court held as a matter of law that the occurrence of a violent third-party sexual assault was not sufficiently foreseeable to impose a duty of care. The Court also specifically rejected the argument that underground parking garages were so inherently dangerous that a duty of care to provide security measures exists even in the absence of prior similar incidents [Sharon P. v. Arman, Ltd. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1181, 1194-1195, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 35, 989 P.2d 121] , superseded by statute on other grounds as stated in Saelzler v. Advanced Group 400 (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 763, 767-768, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 23 P.3d 1143 .

Nor is the operator liable for a sudden, intentional, criminal assault of a customer by a third person which the operator has no reason to anticipate and no reasonable opportunity or means to prevent [see Rogers v. Jones (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 346, 351, 128 Cal. Rptr. 404 (stadium parking lot)].

For discussion of the general principles regarding the liability of a person in possession of real property for a third person's actions, see Ch. 421, Premises Liability .

[4] Liability of Nonpossessory Lessor

An owner of property who leases the property for use as a garage or service station, a use involving the admission of the public, is under a duty to see that it is safe for the purposes intended and to exercise reasonable care to discover and repair dangerous conditions on the premises before transferring possession to the lessee. The lessor will be liable for injuries of garage or service station customers proximately resulting from his or her failure to correct dangerous conditions existing at the time the lessee takes possession [Hayes v. Richfield Oil Corp. (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 375, 380-381, 240 P.2d 580] .

If the lessor of property used as a garage or service station exercises a large degree of control over the lessee's operations, the negligence of the lessee in maintaining the premises will be imputed to the lessor under the doctrine of respondeat superior, and the lessor will be liable for injuries to customers proximately resulting from dangerous conditions of the premises arising after the transfer of possession [Dorsic v. Kurtin (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 226, 238-239, 96 Cal. Rptr. 528] .

A lessor of service station premises who exercises a large degree of control over his or her lessee's operations may qualify as an employer of the lessee under Lab. Code § 6304 with the concomitant duty of furnishing a safe place of employment for the lessee under Lab. Code §§ 6400 and 6401; in this capacity, the lessor may be liable for workers' compensation [Lab. Code § 3201 et seq.] in an action at law for injuries to the lessee resulting from a dangerous condition of the premises [Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3601, 3706; Mezerkor v. Texaco, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 76, 89-94, 72 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

Even if he or she does not qualify as an employer, the lessor may be liable in a civil action for injuries to the lessee and his or her employees from a defective condition of the premises if the defect is latent when he or she transfers the premises to the lessee or if he or she fails to carry out a duty to repair assumed by lease agreement within a reasonable time after receiving actual or constructive notice of the defect [Mezerkor v. Texaco, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 76, 96, 72 Cal. Rptr. 1 , reh'g denied, 266 Cal. App. 2d 105, 72 Cal. Rptr. 639] .

For general discussion and forms relating to these bases of liability, see Ch. 334, Landlord and Tenant: Claims for Damages , and Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

23-274 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 274.11

§ 274.11 Motor Vehicle Repair and Service

[1] Tort Liability

A garage or service station operator undertaking to repair or service a motor vehicle owes a duty to exercise due care in doing so. This duty is owed not only to the party at whose request the operator performs the repairs but also to all persons who would be exposed to a foreseeable risk of harm during the normal use of the vehicle if the repairs are negligently done, and the operator is liable for all personal injuries and property damage resulting from his or her negligence [Spolter v. Four-Wheel Brake Serv. Co. (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 690, 222 P.2d 307 ; see Dahms v. General Elevator Co. (1932) 214 Cal. 733, 741-742, 7 P.2d 1013 (duty of care owed by repairer of chattels and liability for negligence); Jackson v. Ryder Truck Rental, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1830, 1846, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 913 (duty of care owed by vehicle maintenance company and liability for death of driver of negligently-maintained vehicle); see Sabella v. Wisler (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 21, 29, 27 Cal. Rptr. 689, 377 P.2d 889 (tort liability of building contractor for diminution in value of construction as result of negligent workmanship); and see Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution , in relation to property owners' indemnification by repairmen whose defective work results in the owners' liability for injuries of third persons].

He or she is not liable, however, for injuries sustained during subsequent use of the automobile if his or her negligence was not a proximate or contributing cause of the injuries, for example, if the injuries would have occurred despite the defective repair [Ulwelling v. Crown Coach Corp. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 96, 123, 126, 23 Cal. Rptr. 631] or if a user's knowledge of the defect intervenes between the operator's negligence and the injuries [Youtz v. Thompson Tire Co. (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 672, 677, 116 P.2d 636] .

An operator is responsible not only for his or her own work but also for the work of an independent contractor who repairs or services a vehicle at his or her request [Reeder v. Hoag (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 41, 44, 321 P.2d 793 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.9 (automotive repair dealer's liability for work done by third person)].

An operator is negligent in performing repairs if he or she carelessly creates a dangerous defect in the vehicle during his or her work, fails to reasonably inspect and test his or her work for defects, or fails to correct defects which he or she discovers during such inspection [Ulwelling v. Crown Coach Corp. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 96, 121-122, 23 Cal.

Rptr. 631 ; Dunn v. Vogel Chevrolet Co. (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 117, 120, 335 P.2d 492] . He or she is also negligent if he or she misrepresents to a customer that a vehicle on which he or she has performed repairs is safe to operate and permits the customer to take and operate the vehicle under that erroneous impression [Reeder v. Hoag (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 41, 44, 321 P.2d 793] .

The operator is not negligent, however, if he or she fails to perform repairs that the exercise of ordinary care does not require, even though other effective methods of repair are available [Ulwelling v. Crown Coach Corp. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 96, 123, 23 Cal. Rptr. 631] . Nor is the operator negligent if he or she warns a customer that repairs are incomplete and untrustworthy [Reeder v. Hoag (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 41, 44, 321 P.2d 793] . For forms of complaint for use by an automobile owner to recover damages from a negligent repairer, see Ch. 91, Automobiles: Actions Involving Defects and Repairs .

With an exception for installation during emergency roadside service of a disabled vehicle, dealers and persons holding a retail seller's permit are prohibited from selling, offering for sale, exposing for sale, or installing on a vehicle axle for use on a highway any pneumatic tire having less than a specified amount of tread depth [Veh. Code § 27465(a); see Veh. Code § 27465(b)]. While a violation of this provision may presumably support the imposition of tort liability, this provision does not apply when a tire already mounted on a vehicle is removed and remounted on that same vehicle by a dealer or retail seller [Alcala v. Vazmar Corp. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 747, 759, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 402] .

[2] Contract Rights and Liabilities

[a] Regulated Contracts

For the purposes of the Automotive Repair Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 9880-9889.48), an automotive repair dealer is a person who, for compensation, engages in the business of repairing or diagnosing malfunctions of motor vehicles [Bus. & Prof. Code § 9880.1(a)]. Motor vehicles governed by the Act are passenger vehicles required to be registered with the Department of Motor Vehicles, and all motorcycles whether or not required to be registered by the Department of Motor Vehicles [Bus. & Prof. Code § 9880.1(d)].

"Motor vehicle repair" means all maintenance of and repairs to motor vehicles performed by an automotive repair dealer, including automotive body repair work, except those made pursuant to a commercial business agreement, and also except repairing tires; changing tires; lubricating vehicles; installing light bulbs, batteries, windshield wiper blades and other minor accessories; cleaning, adjusting, and replacing spark plugs; replacing fan belts, oil, and air filters; and other minor service, which the Director of Consumer Affairs, by regulation, determines are customarily performed by gasoline service stations [Bus. & Prof. Code § 9880.1(e); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 9880.1(i) (defining commercial business agreement); 16 Cal. Code Reg § 3303(h) (excepting repair to part of recreational vehicle intended for human habitation and unrelated to operation of vehicle)]. Restoration of a classic car is repair within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 9880.1(e), at least when it involves mechanical work, as opposed to upholstery and body work [Schreiber v. Kelsey (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 45, 50 , 133 Cal. Rptr. 508] .

Automotive repair dealers must register with the Bureau of Automotive Repair, in the Department of Consumer Affairs [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 9884-9884.7]. A person who is required to have a valid registration cannot have the benefit of any lien for labor or materials and does not have the right to sue on a contract for motor vehicle repairs done by that person unless he or she has a valid registration [Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.16; for a complaint for use by a dealer to recover for repairs made, see § 274.48].

[b] Required Estimates and Invoices

An automotive repair dealer must give the customer a written estimated price for labor and parts necessary for a specific job. No work may be done and no charges can accrue before authorization to proceed is obtained from the customer [

Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.9(a)]. The customer may designate another person to authorize work or parts supplied in excess of the estimated price, if the designation is made in writing at the time the initial authorization to proceed is signed by the customer. The designee cannot be the automotive repair dealer providing repair services, an insurer involved in a claim that includes the motor vehicle being repaired, or an employee or agent or person acting on behalf of the dealer or insurer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.9(d); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 9880.1(j) (definition of customer); 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 3353(f) (form and content of designation and procedures to be followed by automotive repair dealer in recording designation)]. Thus, the owner of the vehicle can designate a spouse or partner, for instance, to give oral authorization for doing work or supplying parts beyond what was estimated.

No charge may be made for work done or parts supplied in excess of the estimated price without the oral or written consent of the customer or designee, which must be obtained at some time after it is determined that the estimated price is insufficient and before the work not estimated is done or the parts not estimated are supplied. Written consent may be provided by electronic mail or facsimile transmission from the customer or designee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.9(a) see 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 3353(c)(2), (3) (procedures to be followed by automotive repair dealer if authorization or consent for increase in original estimated price is provided by electronic mail or facsimile transmission)].

If consent is oral, the dealer must make a notation on the work order of the date, time, name of person authorizing the additional repairs, and telephone number called, if any, with a specification of the additional parts and labor and the total additional cost and must either [Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.9(a)]:

- Make a notation on the invoice of the same facts set forth in the notation on the work order; or

- On completion of the repairs, obtain the customer's signature or initials to an acknowledgment of notice and consent.

The repair dealer cannot recover for repairs furnished without the required written estimate, even when the owner orally authorized the repairs [Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.9(a); Donaldson v. Abot (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 817, 820-821, 239 Cal. Rptr. 801 ; Bennett v. Hayes (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 700, 703-704, 125 Cal. Rptr. 825] . This prohibition extends to a contract claim and to a common count or quasi-contract recovery of the value of the services [Donaldson v. Abot (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 817, 820-821, 239 Cal. Rptr. 801 ; Bennett v. Hayes (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 700, 703-704, 125 Cal. Rptr. 825] . For an affirmative defense based on the failure to provide the estimate, see § 274.49.

All work done by an automotive repair dealer must be recorded on an invoice with parts and service work listed, and their prices subtotaled separately. If entirely or partially used, rebuilt, or reconditioned parts are supplied, the invoice must clearly state that fact. One copy of the invoice must be given to the customer and one copy must be retained by the dealer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.8]. The invoice must show the dealer's registration number and the corresponding business name and address. If the dealer's telephone number is shown, it must comply with the requirements of 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 3371(b) (the same number as that listed for the dealer's firm name and address in the telephone directory). In addition, the invoice must describe all service work done, including all warranty work, and separately identify each part so that the customer can understand what was purchased, also stating whether the part was new, used, reconditioned, rebuilt, or an OEM crash part, or a non-OEM aftermarket crash part [Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.8; 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 3356(a)].

For a complaint for use by an automotive repair dealer to recover payment for repairs made, see § 274.48.

[c] Repairer's Liability for Breach of Repair Contract

When a garage or service station operator improperly or negligently repairs or services a customer's automobile, the operator may be liable to the customer for damages that are proximately caused by, or that in the ordinary course of things would be likely to result from, his or her breach of an express or implied contractural obligation to perform the repairs or services with due care and skill. Damages may include the cost of completing the work properly and the value of the customer's loss of the automobile's use [Civ. Code § 3300; Turgeon v. Barney (1924) 70 Cal. App. 432, 434, 233 P. 394 ; see Kavalaris v. Anthony Bros., Inc. (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 737, 741, 32 Cal. Rptr. 205 (contractor's duty of reasonable care and liability for negligent performance based on contract)].

For discussions of actions based on intentional or negligent misrepresentation in a contractual context, see Ch. 215, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake , and Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit .

For discussions of actions based on breach of an express or implied warranty, see Ch. 91, Automobiles: Actions Involving Defects and Repairs , and Ch. 502, Sales: Warranties .

Warranty actions are more likely to arise in the context of a sale, but can arise in contracts for labor and materials under appropriate circumstances [see Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 378, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88 ; Aced v. Hobbs-Sesack Plumbing Co. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 573, 580-583, 12 Cal. Rptr. 257, 360 P.2d 897 , superseded by statute as stated in Cardinal Health 301, Inc. v. Tyco Electronics Corp. (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 116, 132, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 5 ; Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 486, 275 P.2d 15 (no warranty for labor and service provided by test-hole driller); Swett v. Gribaldo, Jones & Associates (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 573, 575-576, 115 Cal. Rptr. 99 (refusing to impose warranty liability on provider of service, namely soils engineer)].

For discussion of actions based on unfair or deceptive practices in connection with repair services under the Consumers Legal Remedies Act [see Civ. Code § 1750 et seq.] and violations of the requirements for retail sales and repair contracts under the Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act [Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.], see Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales , and Ch. 504, Sales: Consumers Legal Remedies Act .

[3] Liability for Wrongful Retention of Repaired Vehicle

If a repairer retains or retakes possession of a repaired vehicle, usually to maintain and assert a lien claimed under Civ. Code § 3068 (discussed under Garageman's Lien, below), when he or she has no right to do so, the repairer is liable to return the vehicle, or for its value, for conversion, and for any damages caused by the wrongful retention, including the reasonable rental value of the vehicle for the period during which the customer was deprived of its use [Harris v. Dixon Cadillac Co. (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 485, 489-493, 183 Cal. Rptr. 299 ; see Zhadan v. Downtown Los Angeles Motor Distributors, Inc. (1979) 100 Cal. App. 3d 821, 831-833, 161 Cal. Rptr. 225] . In addition, in any action brought by or on behalf of the legal owner or lessor to recover a vehicle alleged to be wrongfully withheld by the person claiming a lien pursuant to Civ. Code § 3068, the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorney's fees and costs, not to exceed $1,750 [Civ. Code § 3068(d)]. The wrongful assertion of the right to possession usually arises from a situtation in which the repairer failed to give the customer a written estimate or to obtain the customer's authorization for the repairs [see e.g., Harris v. Dixon Cadillac Co. (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 485, 488-489, 183 Cal. Rptr. 299 ; Zhadan v. Downtown Los Angeles Motor Distributors, Inc. (1979) 100 Cal. App. 3d 821, 833, 161 Cal. Rptr. 225] . For a form of complaint with causes of action for claim and delivery and conversion for use by a customer whose vehicle is wrongfully retained, see Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery .

In an egregious case (for instance, when the dealer forged the customer's signature on copies of estimates and authorizations provided to the Bureau of Automotive Repairs during its investigation of the customer's complaint, or made false statements in its notice of lien sale), punitive damages may be assessed against the repairer [Harris v. Dixon Cadillac Co. (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 485, 493-494, 183 Cal. Rptr. 299 ($45,000); Zhadan v. Downtown Los Angeles Motor Distributors, Inc. (1979) 100 Cal. App. 3d 821, 834-839, 161 Cal. Rptr. 225 ($90,000)].

§ 274.12 Sale of Petroleum and Other Automotive Fluids

[1] Statutory Licensing and Regulation

Licensing, product standards, and labeling, as well as advertising and other business practices in connection with the retail sale of petroleum products for motor vehicles, are regulated by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 13400 et seq. Similar statutory regulation is provided for the sale or distribution of antifreeze, coolant, brake fluid, and automatic transmission fluid [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 13700 et seq.]. In addition, a petroleum distributor whose refining capacity or sales volume is 50,000 barrels per day or more is prohibited from engaging in unfair price discrimination and is liable for treble damages and attorney's fees to any person injured by such discrimination [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21200-21203]. For discussion and forms related to unfair competition and unfair or fraudulent business practices, see Ch. 565, Unfair Competition .

Franchise agreements between a refiner and a distributor, a refiner and a retailer, a distributor and another distributor, or a distributor and a retailer of petroleum products are regulated by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 20999-21150.1 and by the Franchise Investment Law [Corp. Code §§ 31000-35104]. For discussion and forms relating to actions under the Franchise Investment Law, see Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation .

[2] Refueling Service for Disabled Drivers

Every service station operator (except during hours when only one employee is on duty, or when two employees are on duty but one employee is assigned exclusively to the preparation of food) must provide refueling service on request to a disabled driver whose vehicle bears a disabled plate or placard. The operator may not charge a price that is higher than the price of self-service fuel [Bus. & Prof. Code § 13660(a), (b)]. Service stations that are required to provide this service must post a notice, in a single location that is conspicuous to a driver seeking refueling service, that refueling service is available, and if applicable, the hours during which it is available [Bus. & Prof. Code § 13660(c)(1), (2)]. Service stations that are exempt from the refueling service requirement must post a single notice, in a location conspicuous to drivers seeking refueling service, that the service station does not provide refueling service for disabled individuals [Bus. & Prof. Code § 13660(c)(3)].

Local law enforcement agencies are required to investigate alleged violations on the verified complaint of any person or public agency [Bus. & Prof. Code § 13660(e); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 13660(f)]. Individuals may also file a verified complaint with the city attorney, district attorney, or Attorney General [Bus. & Prof. Code § 13660(g)].

Any intended beneficiary of Bus. & Prof. Code § 13660 or any public agency that exercises oversight of the service station may enforce Section 13660. Any such actions are governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, relating to recovery of attorney's fees [Bus. & Prof. Code § 13660(h); for discussion of Code Civ. PNC.§ 1021.5, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees].

[3] Sale of Gasoline to Intoxicated Persons

It has been held that a service station operator who sells gasoline to a visibly intoxicated motorist who then injures a third person is not liable for the third person's injuries [Fuller v. Standard Stations, Inc. (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 687, 692-694, 58 Cal. Rptr. 792] . This holding predates, but is consistent with, the statement of public policy expressed in Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(c) that the holdings in Vesely v. Sager [Vesely v. Sager (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 153, 157, 95 Cal. Rptr. 623, 486 P.2d 151] , Bernhard v. Harrah's Club [Bernhard v. Harrah's Club (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 313, 319-321, 128 Cal. Rptr. 215, 546 P.2d 719], and Coulter v. Superior Court [Coulter v. Superior Court (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 144, 151, 145 Cal. Rptr. 534, 577 P.2d 669] be abrogated in favor of prior judicial interpretation finding that the consumption of alcoholic beverages is the proximate cause of injuries inflicted by an intoxicated person [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(c)].

For general discussion and forms for use in actions for injuries causes by intoxicated persons, see Ch. 19, Alcoholic Beverages: Civil Liability .

[4] Negligent Delivery by Gasoline Distributor

A distributor of gasoline owes a duty of care in handling gasoline in its custody and control so as to avoid a risk of harm to persons or their property as a result of ignition or explosion [Feeney v. Standard Oil Co. (1922) 58 Cal. App. 587, 591-593, 209 P. 85 ; but see George v. Bekins Van & Storage Co. (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 834, 842, 205 P.2d 1037 (disapproving dictum in Feeney and indicating that careless smoking by employee in course of employment may be imputed to employer); see also Borenkraut v. Whitten (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 538, 545, 15 Cal. Rptr. 635, 364 P.2d 467 (utmost care required of persons dealing with explosive or highly flammable materials)].

Thus, a distributor may be liable for personal injuries and property damage resulting from the ignition of gasoline during a delivery to a service station if the distributor has failed to equip its delivery trucks with devices designed to prevent or extinguish the ignition of gasoline or if the distributor's agent has negligently ignited the gasoline in the course of a delivery [Weaver v. Shell Company (1939) 34 Cal. App. 2d 713, 716, 718-719, 94 P.2d 364] .

In an action for injuries to a service station attendant resulting from the negligent ignition of gasoline during a delivery by an agent of a distributor, it is no defense to the distributor's liability that the attendant assumed the risk of gasoline ignition as an incident of his or her employment: an employee does not assume the risk of such extraordinary dangers as may be created by the negligent acts of others unless he or she participates in such negligent acts or knows or has reason to know that they are about to be committed [Weaver v. Shell Company (1939) 34 Cal. App. 2d 713, 722, 94 P.2d 364] .

§ 274.13 Motor Vehicle Bailments

[1] Nature of Bailment

When a person deposits possession of his or her motor vehicle with a garage or service station operator for the repair, servicing, or storage of the vehicle in return for a compensation, a contractual relationship called a bailment for hire arises: the operator receiving possession of the vehicle is the bailee or depositary, and the person depositing possession of the vehicle is the bailor or depositor [Civ. Code §§ 1814, 1851; Guidici v. Pacific Automobile Ins. Co. (1947) 79 Cal. App. 2d 128, 133, 179 P.2d 337 (bailment for repair); U Drive, etc. v. System A. Parks (1937) 28 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 782, 784 , 71 P.2d 354 (bailment for storage; disapproved by Gardner v. Downtown Porsche Audi (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 713, 715, 721, 225 Cal. Rptr. 757 to extent U Drive is interpreted to allow garages to exempt themselves from liability for negligent care of the vehicles entrusted to them)]. For a discussion of the principles generally applicable to bailments for hire, see Ch. 93, Bailments .

A bailment for hire of a motor vehicle is distinguished from the licensor-licensee relationship that arises when a person parks and locks his or her motor vehicle in a lot, carries away the keys, and retains the right to remove the vehicle at will; no bailment is created in the latter situation since the owner of the parking lot acquires no dominion over the vehicle nor any right to control its removal [Porter v. Los Angeles T. Club (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 840, 842 , 105 P.2d 956] .

[2] Duty to Preserve and Redeliver Vehicle

A garage or service station operator must exercise ordinary care to preserve a vehicle that he or she possesses as a bailee for hire from loss or damage [Civ. Code § 1852; Beetson v. Hollywood Athletic Club (1930) 109 Cal. App. 715, 718 (bailee for storage); see Downey v. Martin Aircraft Service (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 94, 97, 214 P.2d 581 (bailee of airplanes for repair)]. He or she is under the same duty with respect to the contents of bailed vehicles to the extent that he or she is informed of their presence [Homan v. Burkhart (1930) 108 Cal. App. 363, 366] . He or she is not an insurer of the safety of the vehicle and its contents, however, and is not responsible for any loss, destruction, or damage to the vehicle or its contents that is not the result of negligence on his or her part [Homan v. Burkhart (1930) 108 Cal. App. 363, 366, 291 P. 624 ; Emigh v. Wood (1927) 81 Cal. App. 347, 350] .

As bailee of a vehicle, a garage or service station operator also is under an obligation to deliver the vehicle, on demand, to the person for whose benefit it was bailed [Civ. Code §§ 1822, 1823], unless the operator has a lien on the vehicle [Civ. Code § 1822; for discussion, see § 274.14] or unless the operator has been forbidden or prevented from making delivery by the vehicle's real owner or by acts of law, and he or she has given prompt notice of such adverse proceedings to the person for whose benefit the vehicle was bailed [Civ. Code §§ 1822, 1825].

In contrast to these duties of a bailee for hire of a vehicle, a parking lot operator who merely licenses a driver to park a vehicle in his or her lot assumes no responsibility for the safekeeping of the vehicle against loss or damage [Porter v. Los Angeles T. Club (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 840, 841-842 , 105 P.2d 956] .

[3] Return of Vehicle to Intoxicated Bailor

A bailee, such as a restaurant or its related valet parking service, has no duty to withhold automobiles from intoxicated patrons [Knighten v. Sam's Parking Valet (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 69, 73, 253 Cal. Rptr. 365] . There is no special relationship between the bailee and the potential victim that would give rise to such a duty. It would be inappropriate to impose such a duty on bailees when police officers who temporarily detain drunk drivers are not liable for allowing them to continue driving [Knighten v. Sam's Parking Valet (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 69, 74,74 n.1, 253 Cal. Rptr. 365 (analogizing in dicta that under the police case, ironically, liability would only arise if the bailee did intervene to prevent the bailor from driving but negligently secured the vehicle or bailor)].

In returning a chattel to the bailor, a bailee does not entrust it. Thus, a bailee is not liable for negligent entrustment based on its return of a vehicle to an obviously inebriated bailor [Knighten v. Sam's Parking Valet (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 69, 75, 253 Cal. Rptr. 365] . This holding is not based on a bailee's obligation to return the vehicle to the customer because, under these circumstances, a bailee could lawfully refuse to return a vehicle to a bailor who was not fit to drive. Any citizen has the right to interfere with an attempt to commit a crime, and driving under the influence of alcohol is a crime [see Veh. Code § 23152(a); see also Gov. Code § 13970 (immunity to persons whose direct action prevents commission of crime against person or property of another); Knighten v. Sam's Parking Valet (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 69, 75-76, 253 Cal. Rptr. 365] . The court was unwilling to impose a duty to withhold the vehicle based on a bailee's right to do so because the imposition of civil liability in these circumstances would lead to unforeseeable consequences. Furthermore, imposition of such a duty would be inconsistent with the public policy expressed in Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(c) that the consumption of alcoholic beverages is the proximate cause of injuries inflicted by an intoxicated person [Knighten v. Sam's Parking Valet (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 69, 76, 253 Cal. Rptr. 365] .

For discussion and forms for asserting other theories on which liability might be predicated in this or similar situations, see Ch. 19, Alcoholic Beverages: Civil Liability .

[4] Liability

[a] In General

A garage or service station operator may be held liable for the loss, destruction, or damage of a vehicle and its contents under the following theories:

- In a negligence action based on his or her failure as a bailee for hire to exercise ordinary care for the preservation of the vehicle and its contents [Homan v. Burkhart (1930) 108 Cal. App. 363, 366-367 ; Hobson v. Silvea (1920) 50 Cal. App. 35, 38, 194 P. 525] ;

- In a contract action based on his or her breach of a bailment agreement to exercise ordinary care for the preservation of the vehicle [Mehesy v. Mission Garage (1922) 60 Cal. App. 275, 277, 212 P. 643] ; or

- In a contract action based on his or her breach of a bailment agreement to redeliver the vehicle on demand [Gardner v. Downtown Porsche Audi (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 713 (disapproving U Drive & Tour, Ltd. v. System Auto Parks, Ltd. (1937) 28 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 782 to extent U Drive is interpreted to allow garages to exempt themselves from liability for negligent care of the vehicles entrusted to them)].

An operator may be liable for conversion of a vehicle as well as for breach of a bailment contract if he or she delivers the vehicle to someone other than the person entitled to receive it, albeit innocently and by mistake [Fisher v. Pickwick Hotel, Inc. (1940) 42 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 823, 825-826 , 108 P.2d 1001] or if he or she sells it without authorization [Neff v. Campbell (1930) 106 Cal. App. 286, 287, 289 P. 217] .

The operator is not liable for conversion of the vehicle, however, if he or she delivers the vehicle to a person whom he or she believes, after the exercise of reasonable care and vigilance, has a claim to possession that is superior to that of the bailor or if he or she refuses to deliver a vehicle to its legal owner until the bailor, its legal possessor, has been heard with respect to his or her rights in the vehicle [see Lambert v. Valentine (1923) 61 Cal. App. 712, 714, 215 P. 692 ; see also Civ. Code §§ 1822, 1825 (excusing bailee from failure to deliver on demand when third party has asserted right to property, or the property has been attached under legal process, and the bailee has given prompt notice to the bailor); Messerall v. Fulwider (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1329-1333, 245 Cal. Rptr. 548 (bailee liable for conversion of boat and trailer after refusing to deliver them to legal owner who was not bailor)].

Nor is the operator liable for conversion of the vehicle if the vehicle has been lost or destroyed through his or her negligence. Failure to exercise care for the preservation of the bailed vehicle is not an act of dominion of the sort necessary to make the operator a converter; conversion exists only when a bailee, having the power to do so, refuses to redeliver goods to which the bailor is entitled [George v. Bekins Van & Storage Co. (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 834, 838, 205 P.2d 1037] .

For discussion of the availability of actions for the conversion or recovery of vehicles bailed to a garage or service station operator for repair, servicing, or storage when the operator has refused to deliver the vehicle on demand and tender of charges secured by a lien, see § 274.14.

[b] Limitations on Liability

The liability of a garage or service station operator for the negligent loss or damage of a motor vehicle or its contents that he or she possesses as a bailee cannot exceed the amount that the operator is informed by the bailor, or has reason to suppose, the vehicle or its contents to be worth [Civ. Code § 1840; Homan v. Burkhart (1930) 108 Cal. App. 363, 368-369, 291 P. 624 ; but see Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 854, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39 (statutory limitation inapplicable when bailee has no reason to suppose that bailed property has any special value over or under actual value and bailor has not disclosed its value)].

[c] Disclaimer of Liability Invalid

A garage or service station operator may not limit his or her liability for loss or damage to a vehicle by contractural agreement with the vehicle's bailor. Automobile repair contracts "affect the public interest" within the meaning of Tunkl v. Regents of University of California (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 92, 32 Cal. Rptr. 33, 383 P.2d 441 , and therefore clauses that exculpate repair firms for ordinary negligence in handling and securing vehicles under repair run afoul of Civ. Code § 1668 and are invlaid as contrary to public policy [Gardner v. Downtown Porsche Audi (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 713 (disapproving U Drive & Tour, Ltd. v. System Auto Parks, Ltd. (1937) 28 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 782 to extent U Drive is interpreted to allow garages to exempt themselves from liability for negligent care of the vehicles entrusted to them)]. For discussion of statutory restrictions on such contractual limitations under Civ. Code §§ 1630-1630.5, see Ch. 93,

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

23-274 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 274.14

§ 274.14 Garageman's Lien

[1] Possessory Lien

Every person has a lien dependent on possession for the compensation to which he or she is legally entitled for making repairs or performing labor on, and furnishing supplies and materials for, and for the storage, repair, or safekeeping of, and for the rental of parking space for, any vehicle of a type subject to registration under the Vehicle Code, subject to the limitations set forth in Civ. Code § 3067 et seq. (governing liens on vehicles). This lien arises at the earlier of either (1) the time a written statement of charges for completed work or services is presented to the registered owner or (2) 15 days after the work or services are completed [Civ. Code § 3068(a)].

A person seeking to enforce a lien for the storage and safekeeping of a vehicle may not impose any charge exceeding that for one day of storage if, 24 hours or less after the vehicle is placed in storage, a request is made for the release of the vehicle. If the request is made more than 24 hours after the vehicle is placed in storage, charges may be imposed on a full, calendar-day basis for each day, or part of a day, that the vehicle is in storage [Civ. Code § 3068.1(a)].

The lien is expressly made dependent on possession. In this respect, Civ. Code § 3068 conflicts with Civ. Code § 1856, which, in general terms, gives a depositary for hire a lien for storage charges and other charges, the lien not being dependent on possession. Therefore, Civ. Code § 3068 controls in any case in which it is applicable, and Civ. Code § 1856 does not apply [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1859]. The lien allowed by Civ. Code § 3068(a) may arise in favor of a garage operator who stores a vehicle at the direction of a public officer after attaching it [see Bentinck v. Menotti (1929) 97 Cal. App. 412, 413-414, 275 P. 850 ; see also Civ. Code § 3068.1; Veh. Code § 22851, discussed, respectively, in [4] and [5], below].

When retaining a vehicle under a lien, the operator of a garage is a bailee for hire of the vehicle [see Mozzetti v. Superior Court (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 699, 709, 94 Cal. Rptr. 412, 484 P.2d 84 ; see also discussion in § 274.13]. On completion of the work or services, the lienholder must not dismantle, disengage, remove, or strip from the vehicle the parts used to complete the work or services [Civ. Code § 3068(a)].

[2] Duration of Lien

A lien arising under Civ. Code § 3068(a) because work or services have been performed on a vehicle with the consent of the registered owner arises when a written statement of charges for completed work or services is presented to the registered owner or 15 days after the work or services are completed, whichever occurs first [Civ. Code § 3068(a)]. The lien is extinguished, and no lien sale may be conducted, unless the lienholder applies for authorization to conduct a lien sale within 30 days after the lien has arisen or an action in court is filed within 30 days after the lien has arisen [Civ. Code § 3068(b)(1); see Civ. Code §§ 3071-3074 (lien-sale procedures)].

In addition, a lien arising under Civ. Code § 3068(a) for work or services that were performed on a vehicle with the consent of the registered owner is extinguished and no lien sale may be conducted, if the lienholder, after written demand made by either personal service or certified mail with return receipt requested by the legal owner or the lessor, fails to comply with that demand as follows:

- After a demand to inspect the vehicle, the lienholder fails to permit that inspection by the legal owner or lessor, or his or her agent, within a period of time not sooner than 24 hours nor later than 72 hours after the receipt of that written demand, during the normal business hours of the lienholder [Civ. Code § 3068(b)(3)].

- After a demand to receive a written copy of the work order or invoice reflecting the services or repairs performed on the vehicle and the authorization from the registered owner requesting the lienholder to perform the services or repairs, the lienholder fails to provide that copy to the legal owner or lessor, or his or her agent, within 10 days after the receipt of that written demand [Civ. Code § 3068(b)(4)].

[3] Procedure After Extinguishment of Lien

A person whose lien for work or services on a vehicle has been extinguished must turn over possesssion of the vehicle at the place where the work or services were performed to the legal owner or lessor on demand of the legal owner or lessor and on tender by the legal owner or lessor, by cashier's check or in cash, of only the amount for storage, safekeeping, or parking rental for the vehicle to which the person is entitled by Civ. Code § 3068(c) [Civ. Code § 3068(b)(2); see also Civ. Code § 3068(d) (attorney's fees and costs), discussed under [6], below].

[4] Vehicles Authorized to Be Removed

Every person has a lien dependent on possession for the compensation to which the person is legally entitled for towing, storage, or labor associated with recovery of load salvage of any vehicle subject to registration that has been authorized to be removed by a public agency, a private property owner pursuant to Veh. Code § 22658, or a lessee, operator, or registered owner of the vehicle. The lien is deemed to arise on the date of possession of the vehicle, and possession is deemed to arise when the vehicle is removed and is in transit [Civ. Code § 3068.1(a)].

If the vehicle has been determined to have a value of $4,000 or less, the lien must be satisfied pursuant to Civ. Code § 3072. Lien-sale proceedings pursuant to Civ. Code § 3072 must commence within 15 days after the date the lien arises. No storage accrues beyond the 15-day period unless lien-sale proceedings have commenced. The storage lien may be for a period of up to 60 days if a completed notice of a pending lien sale form has been filed pursuant to Civ. Code § 3072 within 15 days after the lien arises. The Department of Motor Vehicles provides a form for this purpose: Form REG 668 (Notice of Pending Lien Sale for Vehicle Valued $4,000 or Less) [see California Legal Forms, Ch. 102A, Personal Property Liens, § 102A.230 (Matthew Bender)]. The storage lien may be for a period of up to 120 days if [Civ. Code § 3068.1(b)]:

- A declaration of opposition is filed pursuant to Civ. Code § 3072 (the declaration can be made using a space on Form REG 668, referenced above);

- The vehicle has an out-of-state registration;

- The vehicle identification number has been altered or removed; or

- A person with an interest in the vehicle becomes known to the lienholder after the lienholder has complied with Civ. Code § 3072(b).

If the vehicle has been determined to have a value exceeding $4,000, pursuant to Veh. Code § 22670, the lien must be satisfied pursuant to Civ. Code § 3071. The storage lien may be for a period not exceeding 120 days, if an application for an authorization to conduct a lien sale has been filed pursuant to Civ. Code § 3071 [Civ. Code § 3068.1(c)].

Any person who improperly causes a vehicle to be towed or removed in order to create or acquire an enforceable lienhold interest forfeits all claims for towing, removal, or storage and is liable to the owner or lessee of the vehicle for the cost of removal, transportation, and storage, damages resulting from the towing, removal, transportation, or storage of the vehicle, attorney's fees, and court costs [Civ. Code § 3070(d)(1)]. A person "improperly causes a vehicle to be towed or removed" when engaging in any of several enumerated acts, including but not limited to the following:

- Failure to comply with Veh. Code § 10650, 10652.5, 10655, or 22658 [Civ. Code § 3070(d)(2)(A), (C)].

- Misrepresentation of information described in Veh. Code § 10650(b) [Civ. Code § 3070(d)(2)(B)].

- Failure, when obtaining authorization for removal of a vehicle from a vehicle owner or operator where a law enforcement officer is not present at the scene of an accident, to present a form for signature that plainly identifies all applicable towing and storage fees and charges by type and amount and identifies the name and address of the storage facility unless a different storage facility is specified by the vehicle owner or operator, and to furnish a copy of the signed form to the owner or operator [Civ. Code § 3070(d)(2)(D)].

- Failure by the owner or operator of a facility used for the storage of towed vehicles to display, in plain view at all cashiers' stations, a conspicuous sign, disclosing storage fees and charges in force, including the maximum daily storage rate [Civ. Code § 3070(d)(2)(E)].

- Undertaking repairs or service on a vehicle that is being stored at a facility used for the storage of towed vehicles without first providing a written estimate to, and obtaining the express written consent of, the owner of the vehicle [Civ. Code § 3070(d)(2)(F)].

- The promise to pay, or the payment of, money or other valuable consideration by any owner or operator of a towing service to the owner or operator of the premises from which the vehicle is towed or removed, for the privilege of towing or removing the vehicle [Civ. Code § 3070(d)(2)(G)].

[5] Vehicles Removed by Peace Officers or Other City or County Employees

Under Veh. Code § 22851, a similar lien arises whenever a vehicle has been removed to a garage under Veh. Code § 22650 et seq. (governing removal of parked and abandoned vehicles) and the keeper of the garage has received certain notice as provided in those code sections. In such a case, the keeper of the garage has a lien dependent on possession for compensation for towage and for caring for such vehicle and for keeping it safe for a period not exceeding 60 days or 120 days, if an application for authorization to hold a lien sale has been filed under Civ. Code § 3068.1 within 30 days after the removal of the vehicle to the garage.

Possession is deemed to arise when the vehicle is removed and is in transit. If the owner is unknown or if the vehicle is not recovered by the owner within that period of time, the keeper of the garage may satisfy his or her lien in the manner set forth in Veh. Code § 22850 et seq. [Veh. Code § 22851(a)(1); see Stypmann v. City & Cty. of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1977) 557 F.2d 1338, 1343-1345 (holding former Veh. Code § 22851 unconstitutional in failing to provide for hearing, unless vehicle was sold to satisfy lien; provision for a hearing is now made in Veh. Code § 22851.8)].

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no cause of action for despoliation of evidence arises against a towing company that sells a vehicle at, or disposes of a vehicle after, a lien sale, unless the company knew, or should have known, that the vehicle would be needed as evidence in a legal action [Veh. Code § 22856]. For discussion and a form relating to despoliation of evidence generally, see Ch. 195, Discovery: Inspection of Tangible Evidence ,.

[6] Limitation in Absence of Notice to Owner and Obtaining Owner's Consent for Services

In order to preserve the full amount of a lien in the following cases, the person claiming the lien must give actual notice in writing, either by personal service or by registered letter addressed to the legal owner named in the registration certificate, and the written consent of that legal owner must be obtained, before any work, services, storage, safekeeping, or rental of parking space are performed [Civ. Code § 3068(c)(1); see California Legal Forms, Ch. 102A, Personal Property Liens, § 102A.200 (Matthew Bender) (form combining notice and owner's consent)]. Unless that notice is given and the legal owner's consent is obtained, the liens listed below are limited as follows:

- For work and services, the enforceable lien is limited to $1,500.

- For storage, safekeeping, or rental of parking space, the enforceable lien is limited to $1,025. However, no fee or service charge may be imposed for parking and storage of the vehicle for the period beginning with the 16th day of possession and continuing until three days after written notice by certified mail, return receipt requested, is sent to the legal owner by the lienholder, if the name and address of the legal owner are known or can be ascertained from Department of Motor Vehicles records [Veh. Code § 10652.5(a)].

- For any storage or safekeeping, rendered or performed at the request of any person other than the legal owner or lessor, if an application for an authorization to conduct a lien sale [see California Legal Forms, Ch. 102A, Personal Property Liens, § 102A.220 (Matthew Bender) (form for application to conduct lien sale of vehicle valued at over $4,000)] has been filed pursuant to Civ. Code § 3071 within 30 days after the commencement of the storage or safekeeping, the enforceable lien is limited to $1,250.

Subject to the limitation stated in Veh. Code § 10652.5, discussed above, if any portion of a lien includes charges for the care, storage, or safekeeping of, or for the rental of parking space for, a vehicle for a period in excess of 60 days, the portion of the lien that accrued after the expiration of that period is invalid unless the lienholder has complied with Veh. Code §§ 10650 and 10652 [Civ. Code § 3068(c)(2)].

The charge for the care, storage, or safekeeping of a vehicle that may be charged to the legal owner or lessor may not exceed that for one day of storage if, 24 hours or less after the vehicle is placed in storage, a request is made for the release of the vehicle. If the request is made more than 24 hours after the vehicle is placed in storage, charges may be imposed on a full, calendar-day basis for each day, or part thereof, that the vehicle is in storage [Civ. Code § 3068(c)(3)].

In any action brought by or on behalf of the legal owner or lessor to recover a vehicle alleged to be wrongfully withheld by the person claiming a lien pursuant to Civ. Code § 3068, the prevailing party is entitled to reasonable attorney's fees and costs not to exceed $1,750 [Civ. Code § 3068(d)].

[7] Loss of Lien

Whenever the possessory lien on any vehicle is lost through trick, fraud, or device, the repossession of the vehicle by the lienholder revives the possessory lien. However, any lien so revived is subordinate to any right, title, or interest of any person under any sale, transfer, encumbrance, lien, or other interest acquired or secured in good faith and for value between the time of the loss of possession and the time of repossession [Civ. Code § 3070(a)].

[8] Redemption of Lien

Every person having an interest in a vehicle subject to a lien for services and materials has a right to redeem it from the lien [Civ. Code § 2903; Covington v. Grant (1927) 82 Cal. App. 749, 751, 256 P. 213] . If such a person makes a demand for the vehicle accompanied by payment or tender of payment of the lawful amount of the lien, the lien is extinguished and the person is entitled to immediate possession of the vehicle [Civ. Code §§ 2905, 2909; Universal C.I.T. Credit Corp. v. Rater (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 493, 495, 29 Cal. Rptr. 631 ; Lindsay v. Kleiber Motor Truck Co. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 479, 482, 294 P. 454] .

A lien is not discharged by a garage or service station operator's demand for a sum in excess of the amount secured by the lien in the absence of a tender of the actual amount due [Goodman v. Anglo-California Trust Co. (1923) 62 Cal. App. 702, 706, 217 P. 1078] . The requirements of demand and tender may be excused, however, by conduct on the part of the operator indicating that demand and tender would be useless [Enfield v. Hoffman Motor Co. (1953) 117 Cal. App. 2d 800, 807, 257 P.2d 458] .

An operator who refuses to deliver a vehicle on proper demand and tender by a person entitled to redeem it may be liable for conversion [see Civ. Code § 3068(d) (attorney's fees and costs), discussed under [6], above; Zhadan v. Downtown Los Angeles Motor Distributors, Inc. (1979) 100 Cal. App. 3d 821, 825, 161 Cal. Rptr. 225 ; Covington v. Grant (1927) 82 Cal. App. 749, 751, 256 P. 213] or for wrongful detention in an action to recover possession of the vehicle [Harris v. Dixon Cadillac Co. (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 485, 489-493, 183 Cal. Rptr. 299 ; see Lindsay v. Kleiber Motor Truck Co. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 479, 483, 294 P. 454] .

The operator may also be liable for conversion or wrongful detention if he or she bases his or her refusal to deliver a vehicle on a ground inconsistent with his or her lien, thereby waiving the lien [Enfield v. Huffman Motor Co. (1953) 117 Cal. App. 2d 800, 808, 257 P.2d 458] . In contrast, a refusal designed to protect the vehicle in order that it remain subject to a lien does not extinguish the lien and, hence, does not constitute a conversion [Civ. Code § 2910; Enfield v. Hoffman Motor Co. (1953) 117 Cal. App. 2d 800, 808, 257 P.2d 458] .

[9] Enforcement of Lien

An operator may enforce a lien on a vehicle for services and materials by selling the vehicle in accord with the procedures contained in Civ. Code §§ 3071-3074 [see California Legal Forms, Ch. 102A, Personal Property Transactions; § 102A.120 et seq. (Matthew Bender), for a transaction guide and forms relating to these procedures]. However, an automotive repair dealer who is not validly registered under the Automotive Repair Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 9880 et seq.) cannot use the sale procedures to satisfy a lien for labor or materials [Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.16].

A sale of a vehicle to satisfy the claim secured by a lien extinguishes the lien [Civ. Code § 2910]. If a sale is conducted in violation of the statutory procedures it is void, a purchaser at the sale takes no title to the vehicle, and the vehicle's original owner is entitled to possession of the vehicle [Lundblade v. Pierce (1928) 95 Cal. App. 192, 194, 272 P. 329 ; Peerless Ins. Etc. Co. v. Dwyer E. Co. (1926) 78 Cal. App. 141, 143-144, 248 P. 303] . A lien sale in violation of a bailment contract for storage of a vehicle constitutes conversion of the vehicle by a garage operator [Neff v. Campbell (1930) 106 Cal. App. 286, 287, 289 P. 217] .

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the plaintiff in the above-entitled action. I have read the foregoing complaint and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters which are therein alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [typed name]

[2] Use of Form

This complaint may be used by a customer of a garage or service station against the operator and employees of the garage or service station for personal injuries resulting from a fall over a nonobvious obstruction in a walkway of the garage or service station that the operator and employees failed to remove or warn against [for discussion, see § 274.10[3][a]].

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges:

- Facts from which a duty of care owed to plaintiff by defendants under Civ. Code § 1714(a) can be inferred, namely, possession and control of the premises by defendants (Paragraph 5).

- Circumstances surrounding plaintiff's presence on the premises indicating that a reasonably prudent person in defendants' position would have acted to prevent injury to plaintiff (Paragraph 7) [see

Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 119, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] .

- Defendants' negligent maintenance of a dangerous condition on the premises with actual or constructive knowledge of the danger in breach of defendants' duty of care owed to plaintiff (Paragraph 8) [Lehman v. Richfield Oil Corp. (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 261, 264, 263 P.2d 13] .

- Injuries to plaintiff as a proximate result of defendants' negligence (Paragraph 9).

- Damages resulting from the injury (Paragraphs 10-12).

[4] Specifying Amount of Damages

In an action brought to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages for anything other than personal injury or wrongful death (for example, property damage) must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

No claim for punitive damages may state an amount sought regardless of the nature of the case or whether it is a limited civil case [Civ. Code § 3295(e)].

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint, see Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115].

[5] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified also, if the action is an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial even in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[6] Venue

In an action for injury to person or personal property from a wrongful act or negligence, either the county where the injury occurs or the county where the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action is the proper county for the trial of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395]. If venue is based on the situs of the wrongful act or negligence, then the bracketed portion of Paragraph 1 is not needed, nor are Paragraphs 2 and 3, alleging the residence of the defendants.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint may be used by a garage customer against an garage operator and his or her employees in a negligence action to recover for personal injuries and property damage resulting from conduct of the employees in connection with repair of the customer's automobile. A garage or service station operator is under a duty of ordinary care to avoid injuring customers while servicing their vehicles [Morton v. Hinds (1931) 113 Cal. App. 437, 440-441, 298 P. 160] . When handling gasoline, an explosive and highly flammable material, the operator owes a duty of utmost care [Borenkraut v. Whitten (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 538, 545, 15 Cal. Rptr. 635, 364 P.2d 467] .

A customer is not negligent in standing near a service station operator working on a vehicle when the customer has no reason to expect specific conduct by the operator and has no reason to know that that conduct involves risk of harm to persons in close proximity [Borenkraut v. Whitten (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 538, 543, 15 Cal. Rptr. 635, 364 P.2d 467 ; see Bischoff v. Newby's Tire Service (1958) 166 Cal. App. 2d 563, 568, 333 P.2d 44 (reasonable person could find that customer's conduct in standing eight or nine feet away from garage operator using hammer to repair customer's tire was safe)].

5. At the above-specified time and place, defendant so negligently operated, managed, and maintained defendant's garage as to permit and direct customers to park and unpark their own vehicles, although defendant knew, or in the exercise of reasonable care should have known, that the extreme congestion of parked vehicles, the lack of open space to safely maneuver vehicles without considerable driving ability, skill, and care, and the absence of pedestrian paths by barriers protected from moving vehicles within the garage exposed customers walking from and to their parked vehicles to an unreasonable risk of harm from the unskilled and negligent operation of vehicles by other customers.

This form of complaint may be used in a negligence action for personal injuries by a customer of a garage against the operator of the garage for personal injuries when the customer has been struck by a vehicle driven by another customer. The operator of a garage may be liable for injuries to a customer resulting from the accidental, negligent, or intentional acts of third persons on garage premises if the operator had reason to anticipate such acts and the probability of injury resulting from them [see Taylor v. Centennial Bowl, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 114, 121, 52 Cal. Rptr. 561, 416 P.2d 793 (assault and battery in bowling alley parking lot); *cf. Hunter v. Mohawk Petroleum Corp. [3] Allegations

The complaint alleges:

- Facts from which a duty of care owed to plaintiff may be inferred, namely possession, control, and management of the premises by defendant (Paragraph 3).

- Circumstances surrounding plaintiff's presence on the premises indicating that a reasonably prudent person in defendant's position would have acted to prevent injury to plaintiff (Paragraph 4) [see Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 119, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] .

This form of complaint may be used in a negligence action for personal injuries and property damage by an automobile owner against the operator and employees of a garage for defective automotive repairs which cause the automobile to malfunction during operation and result in an accident. Persons undertaking to repair and service a vehicle are liable for personal and property damages which are the foreseeable result if the repair or servicing is negligently done [see Zambrana v. Standard Oil Co. (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 209, 214, 102 Cal. Rptr. 699 ; Spolter v. Four-Wheel Brake Serv. Co. (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 690, 222 P.2d 307 ; see also Dahms v. General Elevator Co. (1932) 214 Cal. 733, 737-738, 7 P.2d 1013 (liability of person who contracts to service and repair chattels for personal injuries resulting from service and repair which make chattels dangerous); for further discussion, see § 274.11[1]]. The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur may be available to create an inference that a garage operator negligently repaired a vehicle repair [Dunn v. Vogel Chevrolet Co. (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 117, 120, 335 P.2d 492] .

Under appropriate facts, the allegations of this complaint may be combined with allegations based on a garage operator's misrepresentation of the adequacy of automotive repairs and services. For a complaint based on negligent misrepresentation, see § 274.46.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges:

- Facts from which the defendants' duty of care in making automotive repairs may be inferred (Paragraphs 5, 8, 9).
- Defendants' negligent performance of repairs in breach of their duty of care (Paragraph 10).
- Injuries and damages proximately resulting from defendants' breach (Paragraphs 11-15).

2. [Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 274.40[1], Paragraph 4.]

3. At all times herein mentioned, defendant operated a shop for the servicing and repair of automobiles at _____ [street address and city], _____County, California, and held himself/herself out to the public, including plaintiff, as possessing the knowledge, skill, and experience necessary to the business of automotive servicing and repair, in particular, the repair, conditioning, and adjustment of automobile brakes.

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff delivered a certain _____ [specify year, make, model] automobile, License No. _____ owned by plaintiff to defendant for the repair, conditioning, and adjustment of its brakes.

5. Thereafter, or on about _____ [date], defendant made representations to plaintiff, with knowledge that plaintiff would act in reliance thereon, that the brakes of plaintiff's automobile were fully repaired, conditioned, and adjusted, and were in an adequate condition for the safe operation of the automobile.

6. These representations of defendant were untrue in that the brakes of plaintiff's automobile were in a defective and dangerous condition, completely inadequate for the safe stopping of the automobile while the automobile was in operation.

7. When defendant made these representations, he/she had no sufficient or reasonable ground for believing them to be true in that he/she had negligently repaired, adjusted, and conditioned the brakes of plaintiff's automobile without testing or examining the brakes after his/her work to determine if they functioned properly in stopping plaintiff's automobile, and defendant knew or should have known that he/she could not accurately state that the brakes of plaintiff's automobile were in an adequate condition for the safe operation of plaintiff's automobile without making such testing and examination.

8. At the above-specified time and place, plaintiff, believing defendant's representations to be true and relying thereon and on the skill and judgment of defendant, took his/her automobile from defendant's repair shop and commenced to operate it; immediately thereafter, as plaintiff was operating his/her automobile along and on _____ [street], near _____ [specify intersecting street], in _____ [city], _____ County, California, and attempting to brake and stop his/her automobile, the brakes failed to hold, grab, or stop the automobile, causing plaintiff's automobile to violently collide with _____ [specify object of impact, e.g., another automobile], proximately resulting in the injuries to plaintiff's person and automobile hereinafter alleged.

9. As a proximate result of the negligence of defendant, plaintiff was hurt and injured in his/her health, strength, and activity, sustaining injury to his/her body and shock and injury to his/her nervous system and person, all of which injuries have caused, and continue to cause, plaintiff great mental, physical, and nervous pain and suffering. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that such injuries will result in some permanent disability to him/her.] As a result of such injuries, plaintiff has suffered general damages.

10-11. [Special damages. See § 274.41[1], Paragraphs 7-8.]

12. As a further proximate result of the negligence of defendant, plaintiff's automobile was _____ [describe damage, e.g., destroyed beyond repair, all to plaintiff's damage in the sum of $_____ or damaged]. [If property was not destroyed, add: Plaintiff has expended $_____ for repair of his/her automobile, which is a reasonable sum for such repair.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. For general damages according to proof;

2. For medical and related expenses according to proof;

3. For loss of earnings according to proof;

4. For _____ [damages to or repair of] plaintiff's automobile in the sum of $_____;

5. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

[2] Use of Form

This complaint may be used in an action for personal injuries and property damage by an automobile owner against a repair shop for negligent misrepresentation of the adequacy of brake repairs for safe operation of the automobile [see Civ. Code §§ 1709, 1710(2); Reeder v. Hoag (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 41, 44, 321 P.2d 793 (negligence of garage operator in misrepresenting safety of vehicle after repair and liability for damage to vehicle proximately resulting from negligence); for further discussion, see § 274.11[1]].

This complaint may be combined with allegations basing the repair shop's liability on negligence in performing repairs. For such allegations based on negligence, see § 274.45.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges that [Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 487-488, 275 P.2d 15 (elements of actionable deceit based on negligent misrepresentation)]:

- The defendant made material misrepresentations of fact with knowledge that plaintiff would act in reliance thereon (Paragraph 5).

- The representations were false (Paragraph 6).

- The defendant made the representations without reasonable grounds for believing them to be true (Paragraph 7).

- Plaintiff justifiably and actually relied on the representations and was thereby damaged in the manner and amount alleged (Paragraphs 8-12).

[4] Alternate Theory of Recovery

Warranties, analogous to those which apply to the sale of goods under Com. Code §§ 2313-2318, may arise in contracts for labor and materials under appropriate circumstances [*Pollard v. [2] Use of Form

This complaint may be used in an action by an automobile owner against a garage operator for property damages resulting from the operator's negligent performance and use of defective materials under a contract for automotive repairs or services [see Kavalaris v. Anthony Bros., Inc. (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 737, 741, 32 Cal. Rptr. 205 (contractor's duty of reasonable care and liability for negligent performance based on breach of contract); Turgeon v. Barney (1924) 70 Cal. App. 432, 434-435, 233 P.394 (liability of repairman in contract action for failure to use due care and for using defective parts in repairing automobile); for further discussion, see § 274.11[2][c]].

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges the following [see Reichert v. General Ins. Co. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 822, 830, 69 Cal. Rptr. 321, 442 P.2d 377 ; Lortz v. Connell (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 286, 290, 78 Cal. Rptr. 6 ; see also Civ. Code § 3300 et seq. (damages in action based on contract)]:

- The contract between plaintiff and defendant (Paragraph 5).
- Plaintiff's performance of the contract or excuse for nonperformance (Paragraph 6).
- Defendant's negligent performance and use of defective materials in breach of the contract (Paragraph 7).
- Plaintiff's demand that defendant remedy the work and defendant's continuing refusal to do so (Paragraph 8).
- Damages resulting from defendant's breach (Paragraphs 9-10).

If it cannot be ascertained from the complaint whether contract is written, oral, or implied by conduct, the complaint will be subject to a demurrer (Paragraph 5) [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(g)].

[4] Attorney's Fees

If the contract included an attorney's fee provision, it is not necessary to plead or to prove either the contract provision for attorney's fees or the amount of attorney's fees incurred. It is sufficient to make the contract with the attorney's fees provision part of the complaint (Paragraph 4 and/or 7) [Ganey v. Doran (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 901, 911-912, 236 Cal. Rptr. 787] . However, no election or waiver results from pleading a contractual right to attorney's fees [Lanyi v. Goldblum (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 181, 188, 223 Cal. Rptr. 32] . Attorney's fees authorized by contract are an item of costs [Civ. Code § 1717(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10),(c)(5)]. For discussion and forms regarding claims for and determination of the amount of attorney's fees under a contract provision, see Ch. 174, Costs And Attorney's Fees .

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use by an automobile repairer to recover the agreed price of completed repairs from the automobile owner who authorized those repairs [see Civ. Code § 3302; Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 9880.1(a) (automotive repair dealer defined), 9980.1(e) (motor vehicle repairs defined), 9880.1(j) (customer defined), 9884.8 (final invoice requirement), 9884.9 (written estimate and authorization requirements)].

To preserve the possessory lien granted an automobile repairer under Civ. Code § 3068, the repairer must either apply for authorization to conduct a lien sale or commence an action within 30 days after the lien has arisen [Civ. Code § 3068(b)]. The lien is deemed to arise at the earlier of either (1) the time a written statement of charges for completed work or services is presented to the registered owner or (2) 15 days after the work or services are completed [Civ. Code § 3068(a); for discussion, see § 274.48[5]].

[3] Allegations

This complaint first alleges plaintiff's status and registration (Paragraph 1) [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.16 (unregistered repairer does not acquire lien and has no right to sue); for corporate and other status allegations, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used].

Defendant's status and ownership of the vehicle on which repairs were made is alleged in Paragraph 2. The venue allegation used here is defendant's residence [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]. In an action arising from an offer or provision of goods, services, loans or extensions of credit intended primarily for personal, family or household use, other than an obligation described in Civ. Code § 1812.10 (in the Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act [Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.]; for discussion, see Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales) or Civ. Code § 2984.4 (in the Rees Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act [Civ. Code § 2981 et seq.]; for discussion, see Ch. 89, Automobiles: Sales and Financing Under the Rees Levering Act), or in an action arising from a transaction consummated as a proximate result of either an unsolicited telephone call made by a seller engaged in the business of consummating transactions of that kind or a telephone call or electronic transmission made by the buyer or lessee in response to a solicitation by the seller, the superior court in the county where the buyer or lessee in fact signed the contract, or where the buyer or lessee resided at the time the contract was entered into, or where the buyer or lessee resides at the commencement of the action, is the proper court for the trial of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b); see Fontaine v. Superior Court (CashCall, Inc.) (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 830, 838-840, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 607 (statute applies to action by or against consumer, and if any defendant in consumer's action is individual, that is irrelevant to application of statute)].

The formation and scope of the initial contract and the giving of the written estimate required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.9 and 16 Cal. Code Reg § 3353 are alleged in Paragraph 4 [for discussion, see § 274.11[2][b]; see also Universal C.I.T. Credit Corp. v. Rater (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 493, 495, 29 Cal. Rptr. 631 ; Shepherd v. Perea (1950) 98 Cal. App. 2d 518, 520, 220 P.2d 776 (nonexistence of cause of action for work, labor, and services in absence of express or implied promise on part of recipient of services to pay for them)].

Paragraph 5 is for use when additional work was authorized in excess of the original estimate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.9(a), (d); for discussion, see § 274.11[2][b]].

The form then alleges:

- Plaintiff's performance (Paragraph 6).

- Presentation to defendant of the final written invoice required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.8 and 16 Cal. Code Reg § 3356 (Paragraph 7).

- Demand for payment (Paragraph 7).

- Defendant's failure or refusal to make payment (Paragraph 7) [see Civ. Code § 3302 (interest on contract after breach by failure to pay money); Civ. Code §§ 3287, 3289 (rates of interest)].

A lienholder is not entitled to recover storage costs incurred to protect the lien [Civ. Code § 2892; Owens v. Pyeatt (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 840, 845, 57 Cal. Rptr. 100] . Thus, optional Paragraph 8 should not be used unless there was an agreement to pay storage charges, and even then it is not clear whether this prohibition could be varied by agreement [see Owens v. Pyeatt (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 840, 845, 57 Cal. Rptr. 100 (involving repair of an automobile and noting absence of any such agreement); Pemberton v. Davis (9th Cir. 1968) 403 F.2d 515, 517 (commenting that there was no express or implied agreement by the aircraft owner to pay storage fees)].

[4] Attorney's Fees

If the contract included an attorney's fee provision, it is not necessary to plead or to prove either the contract provision for attorney's fees or the amount of attorney's fees incurred. It is sufficient to make the contract with the attorney's fees provision part of the complaint (Paragraph 4 and/or 7) [Ganey v. Doran (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 901, 911-912, 236 Cal. Rptr. 787] . However, no election or waiver results from pleading a contractual right to attorney's fees [Lanyi v. Goldblum (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 181, 188, 223 Cal. Rptr. 32] . Attorney's fees authorized by contract are an item of costs [Civ. Code § 1717(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10),(c)(5)]. For discussion and forms regarding claims for and determination of the amount of attorney's fees under a contract provision, see Ch. 174, Costs And Attorney's Fees .

[5] Alternative Remedy

If the repairer has retained possession of the repaired vehicle, he or she could recover the amounts owed by selling the vehicle in accordance with the statutory procedures contained in Civ. Code §§ 3071-3074 [Civ. Code § 3071 (vehicle worth more than $4,000); Civ. Code § 3072 (vehicle worth $4,000 or less)]. To preserve the possessory lien, the repairer must apply for authorization to conduct a lien sale, or file a court action, within 30 days after the lien has arisen [Civ. Code § 3068(b); see discussion in § 274.14[2], [9]]. For transaction guide and forms relating to lien sale procedures, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 102A, Personal Property Liens (Matthew Bender).

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], DEFENDANT ALLEGES THAT:

1. In allegedly rendering the services and furnishing the materials pursuant to the agreement alleged in plaintiff's complaint, plaintiff was performing motor vehicle repairs and acting as an automotive repair dealer within the meaning of Section 9880.1 of the Business and Professions Code.

[EITHER, as total defense of no written estimate]

2. At the time of plaintiff's alleged performance under the alleged agreement, plaintiff had not _____ [furnished defendant with a written estimate nor obtained defendant's authorization to proceed] as required by Section 9884.9 of the Business and Professions Code.

[OR, as partial defense to charges in excess of initial estimate]

2. At the time of plaintiff's alleged performance under the alleged agreement, plaintiff had not [furnished defendant with an estimate for nor] obtained defendant's authorization to proceed with any work or charges in excess of that contained in the original $_____ estimate, as required by Section 9884.9 of the Business and Professions Code.

[CONTINUE]

3. Therefore, plaintiff was not authorized to perform any work [other than that which was the subject of the initial written estimate], and no charges [in excess of those shown on the inital written estimate] have accrued or are owing from defendant to plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use by an automobile owner in answer to a complaint by an automotive repair dealer to recover for repairs that were never authorized by the owner or for which no estimate was furnished [Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.9; 16 Cal. Code Reg 3353; for discussion, see § 274.11[2]]. If no written estimate is provided, the repair dealer cannot recover on the contract or under a common count or quasi-contract theory [Donaldson v. Abot (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 817, 820-821, 239 Cal. Rptr. 801 ; Bennett v. Hayes (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 700, 703-704, 125 Cal. Rptr. 825] .

2. At the time of plaintiff's alleged performance under the alleged agreement, plaintiff was not validly registered as an automotive repair dealer, as required by Section 9884.6 of the Business and Professions Code.

3. Therefore, plaintiff is barred by Section 9884.16 of the Business and Professions Code from suing on the alleged agreement for motor vehicle repairs.

[2] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, may be used in an answer to a complaint by a garage operator to recover for motor vehicle repairs that he or she has performed if the repairs fall within the definition of Bus. & Prof. Code § 9880.1(e) and if the operator is required to register as an automotive repair dealer with the Bureau of Automotive Repair in the Department of Consumer Affairs [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 9880.1, 9880.2, 9884.6], but the operator has not done so. A person required to register as an automotive repair dealer does not have the right to sue on a contract for motor vehicle repairs unless he or she has a valid registration [Bus. & Prof. Code § 9884.16; for discussion, see § 274.11[2][a]].

Chapter 276 GARNISHMENT
PART I. SCOPE

§ 276.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses and contains forms relating to garnishment, particularly to garnishment of wages owed by an employer to a judgment debtor and to garnishment of money owed by a public entity to a judgment debtor. It also discusses the procedure for garnishing deposit accounts and property in safe deposit boxes standing in the name of a third person or in the names of the judgment debtor and a third person. Withholding orders for taxes are not discussed in this Introduction, except incidentally, since they are governed by specific statutory provisions [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.070-706.084; see also § 276.137].

Included in this chapter are a form of notice of motion for use in proceedings seeking an equitable division of earnings subject to an earnings withholding order for support [see § 276.120], and a form of order determining the equitable division of earnings [see § 276.121]. Also included are forms of declarations under penalty of perjury, executed by the judgment creditor's attorney and the judgment creditor, respectively, to be filed, together with an abstract or certified copy of the money judgment, with the appropriate public official to garnish money, other than wages or salary, owed a judgment debtor by a public entity [see §§ 276.122, 276.123]. Forms for use in wage garnishments [see §§ 276.124 -276.136] include the application by a judgment creditor to initiate a wage garnishment [see § 276.124], earnings withholding orders [see §§ 276.125, 276.126], the claim of exemption and financial statement filed by the judgment debtor [see §§ 276.129, 276.130], and forms for use by a judgment creditor to oppose a claim of exemption [see §§ 276.132 -276.134]. A form for claiming an exemption of otherwise nonexempt wages from garnishment for taxes to the extent allowed by law is also included [see § 276.137] and the statutes governing that procedure are discussed in the comments to that form.

This chapter also includes a procedural checklist covering both the garnishment of earnings owed a judgment debtor by an employer and the garnishment of money other than wages or salary owed a judgment debtor by a state or local public entity.

Wage assignments to enforce child support judgments or orders are discussed in Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement .

For a discussion and forms for the prejudgment attachment of property other than wages or salary, see Ch. 62,

Attachment . For a discussion, procedural checklist, and forms for use in proceedings involving writs of execution generally, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments .

§ 276.10 Garnishment Defined

A garnishment is the levy by a third person on debts owing to a judgment debtor by the garnishee, that is, by the person owing the debt [see generally Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed. 1979); Los Angeles County Employees Union, Local 434 v. County of Los Angeles (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 269, 272, 109 Cal. Rptr. 46 (using terms "attachment" and "attachment debtor" in lieu of "levy" and "judgment debtor"); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.010, 706.021]. The term "garnishment" is, however, seldom used in the California statutes, although the procedure it denotes is incorporated in both the attachment and execution statutes [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 488.300-488.485, 491.110, 491.190, 492.040 (attachment) and Ch. 62, Attachment; and Code Civ. Proc. §§ 700.010-700.200 (execution), and Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments]. In common legal parlance, garnishment has been said to be the legal or equitable procedure by which a creditor reaches a debtor's personal property that is in the possession or control of a third party [see Brunn, Wage Garnishment in California: A Study and Recommendations, 53 Calif. L. Rev. 1214, 1215 (1965)]. Among the types of property frequently garnished are wages held by a debtor's employer, bank accounts in the possession of a bank or savings and loan association, and inheritances under the control of the executor or administrator of an estate.

§ 276.11 Exemptions

[1] In General

Certain types of property have been exempted from execution [see generally Code Civ. Proc. §§ 704.010-704.210]. For most types of exempt property, a judgment debtor desiring to make a claim of exemption must follow the procedures outlined in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 703.510-703.610. The judgment debtor bears the burden of proving his or her right to an exemption [Perfection Paint Products v. Johnson (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 739, 741, 330 P.2d 829] . For a detailed discussion and forms for making a claim of exemption, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments , Pt. I.

[2] For Other Money Proceeds

Exemptions may also be claimed for unemployment compensation and unemployment compensation disability benefits [Code Civ. Proc. § 704.120], certain types of retirement or pension benefits [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 704.110, 704.115], public assistance payments [Code Civ. Proc. § 704.170], and workers' compensation awards [Code Civ. Proc. § 704.160]. Exemptions may also be claimed for life insurance and health insurance proceeds up to a certain amount [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 704.100, 704.130]. For a detailed listing of the exemptions that may be claimed, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments, § 254.40 et seq.

§ 276.12 Vacation or Stay of Garnishment Based on Military Service

[1] Under Servicemembers Civil Relief Act

Under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (50 U.S.C. App. § 501 et seq.), when a person in military service is a defendant in an action or proceeding commenced before, during, or within 90 days after his or her period of military service, the court may, in its discretion, on its own motion vacate or stay any attachment or garnishment of property, money, or debts in the hands of another, whether before or after judgment [50 U.S.C. App. § 524]. The court must vacate or stay an attachment or garnishment on the application of the person in military service or of someone on his or her behalf, unless the court is of the opinion that the defendant's ability to comply with the judgment is not materially affected by reason of his or her military service [50 U.S.C. App. § 524; see also 50 U.S.C. App. §§ 511 (definitions), 514, 516 (additional persons protected)].

The court has discretion to deny an application to vacate an attachment or garnishment due to the alternative language of the statute, allowing the court to vacate or stay an attachment or garnishment [Halstead v. Halstead (1946) 72 Cal. App. 2d 832, 834-835, 165 P.2d 513] . A stay may be ordered for the period of military service and 90 days thereafter or any part of that period subject to such terms as may be just. When the person in military service is a codefendant with others, the plaintiff may proceed against the others by leave of court [50 U.S.C. App. § 525].

[2] Under State Law

Effective June 21, 2002, in any action or proceeding against a service member, before or during the period of service or within 60 days thereafter, the court may in its own discretion on it own motion, or must on application by the service member or someone on the service member's behalf, vacate or stay any attachment or garnishment of property, money, or debts in the hands of another, whether before or after judgment, unless in the court's opinion the defendant's ability to comply with the judgment entered or sought is not materially affected by reason of the military service [Mil. & Vet. Code § 403(c)(2)]. Any stay may be ordered for the period of military service and three months thereafter, or any part of that period, and subject to those terms as may be just, including terms with respect to payment in installments of those amounts at those times the court may fix. When the person in military service is a codefendant with others, the plaintiff may nevertheless, by leave of court, proceed against the others [Mil. & Vet. Code § 403(d)].

A "service member" is defined for these purposes as either of the following [Mil. & Vet. Code § 400(a)]:

- Officers and enlisted members of the National Guard called or ordered into active state service by the Governor pursuant to Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 143 or 146 or into active federal service by the President pursuant to Title 10 or 32 of the United States Code.

- Reservists of the United States Military Reserve who have been called to full-time active duty.

"Military service" means full-time active state or federal service as defined in Mil. & Vet. Code § 400(a)(1) or full-time active of a reservist as defined in Mil. & Vet. Code § 400(a)(2), for a period in excess of seven days in any 14-day period. Days of service for a service member called to active service or duty since September 11, 2001, to engage in homeland defense against terrorism are credited toward the seven-day period [Mil. & Vet. Code § 400(b)].

A certificate signed by an appropriately authorized officer of the military department, branch, or unit in which a service member is serving is prima facie evidence as to any of the following facts as stated in the certificate [Mil. & Vet. Code § 409.8(a)]:

- That a person named has not been, or is, or has been in the military service.

- The time when and the place where the person entered military service.

- The person's residence at that time, and the rank, branch, and unit of the service the person entered.

- The dates within which the person was in the military service.

- The monthly pay received by the person at the date of issuing the certificate.

- The time when and the place where the person died in or was discharged from the service.

The authorized officer must furnish the certificate on application. Any certificate purporting to be signed by an officer purporting on the face of the certificate to have been authorized to sign it, is prima facie evidence of its contents and of the authority of the signer to issue it [Mil. & Vet. Code § 409.8(b)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

23-276 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 276.13

§ 276.13 Government Agencies as Garnishees

[1] Limited Liability of Federal Government

[a] Three Considerations

The liability of a federal government entity as garnishee involves three considerations: (1) whether the action is barred by sovereign immunity; (2) whether the entity would be liable under state garnishment laws; and (3) if a federal statute permits a garnishment proceeding against the United States, whether the entity has met the statutory requirements [see Millard v. U.S. (Fed. Cir. 1990) 916 F.2d 1, 3 , reh'g denied, 500 U.S. 916 ; see § 276.13[b] -[d]].

To obtain garnishment against a federal public entity as garnishee, counsel should follow the procedures under California law unless a specific federal statute governs [see, e.g., 42 U.S.C. § 659; see § 276.17].

[b] Action Barred by Sovereign Immunity

In a garnishment proceeding against a federal agency as garnishee, the first consideration is whether sovereign immunity bars the action. No legal proceeding, including garnishment, may be brought against the United States, absent a waiver of sovereign immunity [Millard v. U.S. (Fed. Cir. 1990) 916 F.2d 1, 3 , reh'g denied, 500 U.S. 916 ; United States v. Sherwood (1941) 312 U.S. 584, 586, 61 S. Ct. 767] . Thus, if sovereign immunity has not been waived by a federal statute, a creditor is barred from obtaining garnishment of compensation or other funds due from the United States to a judgment debtor [see, e.g., Brockelman v. Brockelman (D.C. Kan. 1979) 478 F. Supp. 141, 142-143 (garnishment unavailable against income tax refunds); Exchange Nat. Bank v. Daniel Hale Williams University (N.D. Ill. 1979) 473 F. Supp. 656, 657 (garnishment unavailable against HEW); Bolling v. Howland (M.D. Tenn. 1975) 398 F. Supp. 1313, 1316 (garnishment unavailable for support arrearages in pre-1974 case)]. Similarly, sovereign immunity will bar the suit of a judgment debtor who had a right to funds paid to a creditor by a federal agency that honored a writ of garnishment, provided that the writ was regular on its face, was issued by a court with subject matter jurisdiction, and was properly served on the agency, which then gave notice of garnishment to the judgment debtor [see Millard v. U.S. (Fed. Cir. 1990) 916 F.2d 1, 6 , reh'g denied, 500 U.S. 916 (citing general principles of garnishment law); United States v. Morton (1984) 467 U.S. 822, 836, 104 S. Ct. 2769, 81 L. Ed. 2d 680 (citing 42 U.S.C. § 659(f) and regulations thereunder)].

Sovereign immunity of the United States has been waived for legal proceedings for the following: (1) enforcement of child support and alimony obligations against remuneration for employment payable to any individual by any agency, subdivision, or instrumentality of the United States or District of Columbia [42 U.S.C. § 659(enacted in 1974); see Millard v. U.S. (Fed. Cir. 1990) 916 F.2d 1, 3 , reh'g denied, 500 U.S. 916 ; see also discussion in § 276.17]; and (2) enforcement of any obligation against remuneration or other property held by any federal agency that has been authorized to sue or be sued [see, e.g., Franchise Tax Bd. v. United States Postal Service (1984) 467 U.S. 512, 516-525, 104 S. Ct. 2549, 81 L. Ed. 2d 446 (waiver for suit against Postal Service under 39 U.S.C. § 401(1)); Federal Housing Admin. v. Burr (1940) 309 U.S. 242, 244-249, 60 S. Ct. 488, 84 L. Ed. 724 (waiver for suit against Federal Housing Authority 12 U.S.C. § 1702)]. However, specific statutes also retain sovereign immunity for payments from certain government retirement and benefit plans [see, e.g., 5 U.S.C. § 8346 (civil service retirement benefits); 10 U.S.C. § 1440 (armed forces annuities based on retired or retainer pay); 10 U.S.C. § 1450(i) (armed forces Survivor Benefit Plan annuities); 42 U.S.C. § 407 (federal old-age, survivors, and disability insurance benefits)].

[c] Liability Under State Garnishment Laws

If sovereign immunity is waived, the second consideration governing liability of a federal agency as garnishee is whether garnishment would be available under state law. If a private employer would not be required to comply with a writ of garnishment under state law, then the federal government would not have to do so. Similarly, if a private employer would not be liable to a judgment debtor for payments made to a garnishor on a writ of garnishment, neither would a federal agency [Millard v. U.S. (Fed. Cir. 1990) 916 F.2d 1, 3 , reh'g denied, 500 U.S. 916 ; United States v. Morton (1984) 467 U.S. 822, 834, 831-833, 104 S. Ct. 2769, 81 L. Ed. 2d 680] .

[d] Fulfillment of Requirements of Statute Waiving Immunity

The final consideration on the liability of a federal agency as a garnishee is whether the requirements, if any, of the statute waiving immunity, and any regulations promulgated under it, have been met [see, e.g., Millard v. U.S. (Fed. Cir. 1990) 916 F.2d 1, 9-10 , reh'g granted, 500 U.S. 916 ; United States v. Morton (1984) 467 U.S. 822, 831-833, 104 S. Ct. 2769, 81 L. Ed. 2d 680] . For example, the statute permitting garnishment actions against the United States for alimony or child support obligations absolves the United States from liability to its employee for honoring a writ of garnishment that is regular on its face, provided that payment is made in accordance with the statute and regulations issued thereunder [United States v. Morton (1984) 467 U.S. 822, 836, 104 S. Ct. 2769, 81 L. Ed. 2d 680 ; see 42 U.S.C. § 659(f); 5 C.F.R. pt. 581]. Nevertheless, even if an agency fails to meet the statutory or regulatory requirements, it is not automatically liable for honoring or not honoring a writ of garnishment. Liability depends on a further analysis of the significance of the violation and the extent to which an employer would be liable under state law. For example, in one case, a delay in notifying an employee of garnishment until after amounts were withheld from his wages was found not to have prejudiced the employee's opportunity to contest the writ of garnishment. Moreover, the delay would not have subjected a private employer to liability under California law, which allows notification after wage withholding has already begun. Therefore, the federal agency was not liable to the employee for amounts paid to the garnishor [Millard v. U.S. (Fed. Cir. 1990) 916 F.2d 1, 10, 11 , reh'g denied, 500 U.S. 916] .

[2] Liability of State or Local Government

Under California law, sovereign immunity is waived with respect to garnishment proceedings against earnings owed to an employee [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.011(a), (c), (d), 708.720(a)] or other money owed to a judgment debtor [see Code Civ. Proc. § 708.720(a), (c)] by a public entity. A "public entity" includes the state and any political subdivision of the state [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.710(b)]. For discussion of the garnishment of earnings, see § 276.14 et seq. For discussion of the garnishment of other money, see § 276.60 et seq.

§ 276.14 Wage Garnishment

By far the most frequent form of garnishment and the property most associated with the procedure is wage garnishment. The garnishment of wages has been the subject of a number of court opinions [see § 276.15] and of a significant body of state and federal legislation [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.010 et seq. (California's Wage Garnishment Law); 15 U.S.C. §§ 1671-1677 (federal wage garnishment laws); see also Brunn, *Wage Garnishment in California: A Study and Recommendations, 53 Calif. Since the United States Supreme Court decision in Sniadach v. Family Finance Corp. (1969) 395 U.S. 337, 89 S. Ct. 1820, 23 L. Ed. 2d 349 , and Sniadach's California progeny [*see McCallop v. Following the rationale of the United States Supreme Court decision in Sniadach, the California Supreme Court determined that the California prejudgment wage garnishment procedure (former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 542, 543) violated procedural due process by depriving an alleged debtor of a substantial property interest since his or her wages could be withheld for a lengthy period of time before a hearing could be held on the merits of the creditor's claim. The Court recognized that the withholding of wages until the hearing might cause substantial hardships to an alleged debtor and his or her family [McCallop v. Carberry (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 903, 904-907, 83 Cal. Rptr. 666, 464 P.2d 122] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Garnishment of Wages or Salary

23-276 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 276.16

§ 276.16 Federal Consumer Credit Protection Act

[1] Enactment

In 1968, Congress enacted federal wage garnishment laws (15 U.S.C. §§ 1671-1677) as part of the Consumer Credit Protection Act (15 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq.) to regulate the garnishment of wages. It found that the unrestricted garnishment of wages under the laws of the different states encouraged predatory extensions of credit, frequently resulted in a loss of employment by debtors, and, because of the great disparities among the laws of the states relating to garnishment, in effect destroyed the uniformity of the bankruptcy laws in their application in many areas of the country [see 15 U.S.C. § 1671(a)].

[2] Restrictions on Amount Garnished

[a] In General

Under the federal law, an individual's maximum aggregate earnings subject to garnishment may not, except as noted below, exceed (1) 25 percent of his or her disposable earnings (earnings after deducting taxes and other normal withholdings [15 U.S.C. § 1672(b)]) for that week, or (2) the amount by which his or her disposable earnings for that week exceed 30 times the federal minimum hourly wage prescribed by 29 U.S.C. § 206(a)(1), whichever is less [15 U.S.C. § 1673(a)]. Excepted from these restrictions are (1) court support orders, (2) bankruptcy court orders, and (3) debts due for federal or state taxes [15 U.S.C. § 1673(b)].

[b] Support Orders

Federal law sets forth a different maximum amount of earnings subject to garnishment for support [15 U.S.C. § 1673(b)(2)]. Under this law, the maximum of the aggregate disposable earnings subject to garnishment to enforce a support order is determined by whether or not the employee is supporting a spouse or dependent child other than a spouse or child with respect to whose support the order is used, and by whether the support order is for current or past support. Past support is support for a period that is prior to the 12-week period that ends with the beginning of the workweek subject to the garnishment [15 U.S.C. § 1673(b)(2)].

If the employee is supporting a spouse or child, the maximum is 50 percent for current support and 55 percent for past support [15 U.S.C. § 1673(b)(2)]. If the employee is not supporting a spouse or child, the maximum is 60 percent for current support and 65 percent for past support [15 U.S.C. § 1673(b)(2)].

[3] Protection of Employees Against Discharge

Federal law prohibits an employer from discharging any employee by reason of the fact that his or her earnings have been subjected to garnishment for any one indebtedness [15 U.S.C. § 1674(a)]. It further provides that whoever willfully violates this provision shall be fined not more than $1,000, imprisoned for not more than one year, or both [15 U.S.C. § 1674(b)].

An employee discharged in violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1674(a) does not have a private right of action for civil remedies under 15 U.S.C. § 1674(a) [Le Vick v. Skaggs Cos. (9th Cir. 1983) 701 F.2d 777, 780 (repudiating contrary holding of Stewart v. Travelers Corp. (9th Cir. 1974) 503 F.2d 108, 109-114 that civil remedies must be implied for 15 U.S.C. § 1674(a) violations)].

[4] Effect on State Laws

No federal or state court and no state or officer or agency of a state may make, execute, or enforce any order or process in violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1673 [15 U.S.C. § 1673(c)]. The United States Secretary of Labor, however, is authorized to exempt, by regulation, from the provisions of 15 U.S.C. § 1673(a) and (b)(2) garnishments issued under the laws of any state if the Secretary determines that the laws of that state provide restrictions on garnishment that are substantially similar to those provided in 15 U.S.C. § 1673(a) and (b)(2) [15 U.S.C. § 1675]. Moreover, the federal wage garnishment law (15 U.S.C. §§ 1671-1677) does not annul, alter, affect, or exempt any person from complying with the laws of any state that prohibits garnishment or provides for more limited garnishments than are allowed under the federal law or that prohibits the discharge of any employee by reason of the fact that his or her earnings have been subjected to garnishments for more than one indebtedness [15 U.S.C. § 1677].

[5] California Restrictions on Amount Compared

[a] In General

Under California law, the amount of earnings exempt from an earnings withholding order is stated to be that amount that may not be withheld from the judgment debtor's earnings under 15 U.S.C. § 1673(a) [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.050; see discussion under § 276.16[2]].

[b] Withholding Order for Support

In the case of support orders, California law provides that, except as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(b), relating to an equitable division of a judgment debtor's earnings (see §§ 276.121, 276.122), one half of the judgment debtor's disposable earnings plus any amount withheld from the judgment debtor's earnings pursuant to any earnings assignment for support (defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 706.011(b)) is exempt from levy if the earnings withholding order is for support under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.030 (which, among other things, defines a "withholding order for support") [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(a)]. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(c), an order made under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(b) may not authorize the withholding of an amount in excess of the amount that may be withheld for support under 15 U.S.C. § 1673. On the priority of earnings assignments for support, see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.031 and § 276.20[10][d].

[c] State Tax Liability

Garnishment of wages to satisify a state tax liability is governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.070-706.084 (see § 276.138

). Unless a lesser amount is specified in a withholding order for taxes (defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 706.072(a)) issued by the state, the amount to be withheld by the employer each pay period is the amount required to be withheld under 15 U.S.C. § 1673(a) and is not subject to the exception provided in 15 U.S.C. § 1673(b); see § 276.16[2] [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.074(b)]. A withholding order for taxes may, however, be issued by a court requiring the taxpayer's employer to withhold an amount in excess of the amount that may be required to be withheld pursuant to an order issued under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.074 [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.076(a)]. In such case, the court after hearing will issue a withholding order for taxes requiring the employer to withhold and pay over all of the taxpayer's earnings other than the amount the taxpayer proves is exempt under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051 (portion necessary for support of employee or employee's family), but in no event less than the amount permitted by Code Civ. Proc. § 706.050, discussed under § 276.16[2] [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.076(e)].

§ 276.17 Federal Alimony and Child Support Enforcement Law

The wages of federal public employees, including members of the armed services, are subject to garnishment for alimony or child support obligations [42 U.S.C. § 659(a); see also discussion in § 276.13]. The law applies to funds for remuneration of employment [42 U.S.C. § 659(a); see 5 C.F.R. §§ 581.102(i), 581.103], which include retirement benefits if garnishment of such funds would be available under state law [see 5 C.F.R. § 581.103(c); see, e.g., In re Marriage of Sandy (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 724, 729-730, 169 Cal. Rptr. 747] . Funds that are exempted from garnishment against the United States include amounts paid pursuant to the Federal Torts Claims Act [5 C.F.R. § 581.104(a); see 28 U.S.C §§ 2671 et seq., 1346(b)]; pension or disability payments from the Veterans Administration [5 C.F.R. §§ 581.103(c)(6)(iii), (iv), 581.104(b)]; refunds or payments made for overpaid or erroneously paid income taxes [5 C.F.R. § 581.104(c)]; and certain educational benefits [5 C.F.R. § 581.104(d)-(f)], contract payments [5 C.F.R. § 581.104(g)], and reimbursements or allowances for employment-related expenses [5 C.F.R. § 581.104(h), (i)].

To obtain or contest the garnishment of wages due from, or payable by, the United States, an individual must follow the procedures and comply with the requirements of the general statute [see 42 U.S.C. § 659] and regulations promulgated thereunder [see 5 C.F.R. pt. 581]. In addition, the particular federal agency involved may have its own specific procedures [see, e.g., 20 C.F.R. pt. 350 (railroad retirement fund); 32 C.F.R. pts. 63 (uniformed services retirement pay), 734 (wages of naval personnel)].

§ 276.18 California Wage Garnishment Law

The procedures for garnishing the wages or earnings of a judgment debtor are set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 706.010 et seq., known as the Wage Garnishment Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.010].

If a judgment creditor seeks to garnish money other than earnings owed by a public entity to a judgment debtor, the procedures set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 708.710 et seq. (see § 276.60) must be followed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 708.720(a), (c)]. A judgment creditor desiring to garnish the earnings of an employee of a public entity, however, must follow the procedures set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 706.010 et seq. [see Code Civ. Proc. § 708.720(b)].

§ 276.19 Definitions

[1] Terms Defined by Statute

A number of terms used in the California Wage Garnishment Law, including those set forth below, are defined in that law or in the federal statutes, or both (see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.011; 15 U.S.C. § 1672).

[2] Earnings

The term "earnings" means compensation payable by an employer to an employee for personal services performed by the employee, whether denominated as wages, salary, commission, bonus, or otherwise [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.011(a)]. As used in the federal restrictions on garnishment (15 U.S.C. §§ 1671-1677), the term "earnings" also includes periodic payments pursuant to a pension or retirement plan [15 U.S.C. § 1672(a)].

[3] Disposable Earnings

The term "disposable earnings" means that part of the earnings of an individual remaining after the deduction from those earnings of any amounts required by law to be withheld [15 U.S.C. § 1672(b)].

[4] Employee

The term "employee" means a public officer and any individual who performs services subject to the right of the employer to control what will be done and how it will be done [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.011(c)].

[5] Employer

The term "employer" means a person for whom an individual performs services as an employee [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.011(d)].

[6] Levying Officer for Earnings Withholding Order for Support

When a local child support agency issues a withholding order for support, a reference in the Wage Garnishment Law (Code Civ. Proc. § 706.010 et seq.) to a levying officer is deemed to mean the local child support agency who issues the withholding order for support [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.030(b)(1)].

[7] Person

The term "person" includes an individual, a corporation, a partnership or other incorporated association, a limited liability company, and a public entity [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.011(g)].

B. Garnishment of Wages or Salary

23-276 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 276.20

§ 276.20 Execution Against Earnings

[1] Time for Enforcing Judgment

A party in whose favor a money judgment has been entered may enforce the judgment at any time within 10 years after the judgment was entered or renewed [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 683.010-683.030, 683.120; see also Fam. Code §§ 290, 4500, 5100 et seq. (enforcement of judgment, order, or decree for support within 10 years or other statutory period)].

[2] Writ of Execution

Enforcement of a money judgment may be secured by the levy of a writ of execution [see Code Civ. Proc. § 699.010]. The writ is issued by the court clerk on application of the judgment creditor and is directed to the levying officer in the county where the levy is to be made and to any registered process server [Code Civ. Proc. § 699.510(a)]. The writ will require the levying officer to whom it is directed to enforce the money judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 699.520].

The writ must include the following information [Code Civ. Proc. § 699.520]:

- The date the writ is issued.
- The title of the court in which the judgment is entered.
- The cause and number of the action.
- The judgment creditor's name and address.
- The judgment debtor's name and last known address.
- The date the judgment and any subsequent renewals were entered, and where entered in the court's records.

- The total amount of the judgment entered or renewed, together with costs thereafter added to the judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 685.090 and the accrued interest [see Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010] on the judgment from the date of entry or renewal to the date the writ is issued, reduced by any partial satisfactions and by any amounts no longer enforceable.

- The amount required to satisfy the judgment on the date the writ is issued.

- The amount of interest accruing daily on the principal amount of the judgment from the date the writ is issued.

- Whether any person has requested notice of sale under the judgment and, if so, the name and mailing address of the person [Code Civ. Proc. § 699.520].

- The sum of fees and costs that are added to the judgment pursuant to Gov. Code § 6103.5 and that are in addition to the amount owing to the judgment creditor on the judgment.

- Whether the writ of execution includes any additional names of the judgment debtor pursuant to an affidavit of identity, as defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 680.135.

For a form for a writ of execution on a money judgment, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments, § 254.40 et seq.

A writ of execution is a prerequisite to the issuance of an earnings withholding order for the garnishment of a judgment debtor's earnings [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.102(a), 706.108(a)]. However, the duration of a writ of execution is limited [see Code Civ. Proc. § 699.560(a)] and, therefore, it may expire and be returned to the court before the earnings withholding order has terminated [see Code Civ. Proc. § 699.560(d)]. Nevertheless, the earnings withholding order will continue in effect [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 699.560(d), 706.033]. At the time the withholding order terminates, the levying officer must make a supplemental return on the writ [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 699.560(d), 706.033].

[3] Garnishment of Earnings

A levy of execution on the earnings of an employee is made by service of an earnings withholding order on the employer based on the writ of execution and an application by the judgment creditor [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.021, 706.102, 706.108].

An earnings withholding order may not be issued against the earnings of the judgment debtor's spouse except by court order on noticed motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.109].

[4] Application for Earnings Withholding Order

A wage garnishment is initiated by the filing of an application [§ 276.124] by a judgment creditor with a levying officer or a registered process server who issues an earnings withholding order [§§ 276.125, 276.126] ordering an employer to withhold earnings and to pay them over to the levying officer or registered process server [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.102(a), 706.108(a)].

[5] Time to Apply for Earnings Withholding Order

An application for an earnings withholding order must be made prior to expiration of 180 days from the date the writ of execution was issued [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.102(a), 706.108(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 699.530(b)].

If an earnings withholding order is terminated by the court, unless the court otherwise orders or unless there is a material change of circumstances, a creditor may not apply for another order directed to the same employer with respect to the same judgment debtor for a period of 100 days following service of the earnings withholding order or 60 days after the date of termination of the order, whichever is later [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(h)]. Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(h) does not apply, however, to applications for earnings withholding orders for support or for taxes [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(k)].

[6] Issuance of Earnings Withholding Order

If 180 days from the date the writ of execution was issued have not expired and application was made to a levying officer for an earnings withholding order, the levying officer will promptly issue an earnings withholding order on the judgment creditor's application [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 699.530(b), 706.102(a), 706.125; §§ 276.125, 276.126]. If 180 days from the date the writ of execution was issued have not expired and application was made to a registered process server for an earnings withholding order, the registered process server may issue an earnings withholding order [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 699.530(b), 706.108(a); Forms 6, 7]. The reverse side of the order sets out instructions to the employer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.103(b), 706.108(c), 706.127; see also §§ 276.125, 276.126(forms)].

A local child support agency may issue a withholding order for support [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.030(b)(1) (reference to "levying officer" under the Wage Garnishment Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.010 et seq.] is deemed to include the local child support agency who issues withholding order for support)]. For further discussion and forms, see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement .

[7] Service of Earnings Withholding Order

An earnings withholding order is served by the levying officer on the employer by delivery of the order to any of the persons listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 706.101(a)(1) or (2), in a manner specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 706.101(b)-(d) [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.021, 706.101, 706.103(a)(1); see § 276.126]. An earnings withholding order may also be served on an employer by a registered process server whether or not the earnings withholding order was issued by a levying officer or by a registered process server [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.180(c)]. The local child support agency is required to serve on the employer a withholding order for support [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.030(b)(3)]. For further discussion and forms relating to withholding orders for support, see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement .

No earnings withholding order may be served on an employer, however, after expiration of the time specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 699.530(b) [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.103(c), 706.108(c)].

At the same time the earnings withholding order is served, the levying officer will also serve on the employer a copy of the employer's instructions (which appear on the reverse side of the order; see §§ 276.125, 276.126), a form for notice to the employee of earnings withholding (§ 276.127, Employee Instructions), and a form for the employer's return (§ 276.129) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.103(a), (b) 706.122, 706.126].

If the order is served by a registered process server, the registered process server must serve on the designated employer all of the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.108(c)]:

- The original and one copy of the earnings withholding order.
- The form for the employer's return.
- The notice to employee of earnings withholding order.

- A copy of the employer's instructions referred to in Code Civ. Proc. § 706.127, except as otherwise prescribed in rules adopted by the Judicial Council.

Within five court days after service, the registered process server must file' all of the following with the levying officer [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.108(d)]:

- The writ of execution, if it is not already in the hands of the levying officer.
- Proof of service on the employer of the papers listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 706.108(c).
- Instructions in writing, as required by the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 687.010.

If the registered process server has issued the earnings withholding order, he or she, before serving the earnings withholding order, must deposit with the levying officer a copy of the writ of execution, the application for issuance of an earnings withholding order, and a copy of the earnings withholding order. The registered process server must also pay the fee provided by Gov. Code § 26750 [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.108(b)].

When a local child support agency serves on the employer a withholding order for support, the local child support agency must also serve a notice informing the support obligor of the effect of the order and of his or her right to hearings and remedies provided in the Wage Garnishment Law (Code Civ. Proc. § 706.010 et seq.), and in the Family Code [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.030(b)(3)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement .

If the fee provided by Gov. Code § 26750 has been paid, the levying officer must perform all other duties required by the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.010-706.154 as if the levying officer had served the earnings withholding order. If the registered process server does not comply with Code Civ. Proc. § 706.108(b), when applicable, and Code Civ. Proc. § 706.108(d), the service of the earnings withholding order is ineffective and the levying officer is not required to perform any duties under the order. The levying officer may also terminate the order and release any withheld earnings to the judgment debtor [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.108(e)].

The fee for services of a registered process server under § 706.108 must be allowed as a recoverable cost pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5 [Code Civ. Proc. 706.108(f)].

[8] Service of Order as Creating Lien

Service of an earnings withholding order creates a lien on the earnings of the judgment debtor in the amount required to be withheld pursuant to the order. The lien continues for a period of one year from the date the earnings of the judgment debtor become payable unless the amount required to be withheld pursuant to the order is paid as required by law [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.029].

[9] Withholding Period

The withholding period commences on the 10th day after service on the employer of an earnings withholding order and continues until the earliest of the following: (1) the date the employer has withheld the full amount required to satisfy the order; (2) the date specified in a court order served on the employer; (3) the date specified in a notice of termination served on the employer by the levying officer; or (4) the date a dormant or suspended earnings withholding order terminates [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.022(a); see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.032 (dormant or suspended order)]. An earnings withholding order becomes dormant or suspended if the withholding ceases because the judgment debtor's employment is terminated or his or her earnings become subject to an order or assignment of higher priority [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.022(a)(4), 706.032(a)]. If the employment is terminated, the withholding order will terminate at the end of a continuous 180-day period, during which no amounts are withheld under the order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.032(a)(1)]. If an order or assignment of higher priority takes effect, the withholding order will terminate at the end of a continuous two-year period, during which no amounts are withheld under the order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.032(a)(2)].

A withholding order for support is governed by these time limitations except that it automatically terminates one year after the employment of the employee by the employer terminates [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.030(c)(1)].

[10] Employer's Duty to Withhold

[a] In General

Except as otherwise provided by statute, an employer must withhold the amounts required by an earnings withholding order from all earnings payable for any pay period that ends within the withholding period [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.022(b)]. Unless the earnings withholding order is ineffective [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.104(b) and discussion under § 276.20[12]], the employer will begin withholding wages in accordance with the order.

[b] Multiple Orders

Except as otherwise provided in the Wage Garnishment Law, if an employer is served with two or more earnings withholding orders with respect to earnings of the same employee, the employer is required to comply with the first order served [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.023(a)]. If, however, the employer is served with two or more orders on the same day, the employer is required to comply with the order issued pursuant to the judgment first entered. If orders served on the employer on the same day are based on judgments entered on the same day, the employer is required to comply with whichever one of the orders the employer selects [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.023(b)]. If an order is served during the period that an employer is required to comply with another order with respect to the earnings of the same employee, the subsequent order is ineffective and the employer is not permitted to withhold earnings pursuant to the subsequent order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.023(c); but see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.030, 706.031 (discussed under § 276.20[10][c], [d])].

[c] Priority of Withholding Orders for Support

A withholding order for support is an earnings withholding order issued on a writ of execution to collect delinquent amounts payable under a judgment for the support of a child, spouse, or former spouse of the judgment debtor and must be so denoted on its face [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.030(a)]. A withholding order for support has priority over any other earnings withholding order, and the employer is required to comply with it, notwithstanding the requirements of another earnings withholding order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.030(c)(2)]. The employer is, however, required to withhold earnings pursuant to both a withholding order for support and another earnings withholding order simultaneously, subject to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.030(c)(2), and 706.050-706.052 (discussed under §§ 276.16[5], 276.22) [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.030(c)(3)].

[d] Priority of Earning Assignment Orders for Support

An earnings assignment order for support is an order, made pursuant to Fam. Code § 5200 et seq. or Prob. Code § 3088, that requires an employer to withhold earnings for child or spousal support [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.011(b)]. For a discussion of these provisions and the procedure for securing an earnings assignment order, see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement . Nothing in the Wage Garnishment Law affects an earnings assignment order for support [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.031(a)].

An earnings assignment order for support has priority over any earnings withholding order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.031(b)]. Subject to this provision and to Code Civ. Proc. § 706.031(d) and (e), an employer is required to withhold earnings of an employee pursuant to both an earnings assignment order for support and an earnings withholding order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.031(c)]. With respect to an earnings withholding order, the employer is required to withhold only to the extent that the sum of the amount withheld pursuant to any earnings assignment order for support and the amount withheld pursuant to the earnings withholding order does not exceed the amount that may be withheld under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.050-706.052 (discussed under §§ 276.16[5], 276.22) [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.031(d)]. With respect to an earnings withholding order for taxes, the employer is required to withhold only to the extent that the sum of the amount withheld pursuant to any earnings assignment order for support and the amount withheld pursuant to the earnings withholding order for taxes does not exceed the amount that may be withheld under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.070-706.084, relating to earnings withholding orders for taxes [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.031(e); see § 276.136]. An earnings assignment order for support made in family law proceedings has priority over any attachment, execution, or other assignment [Fam. Code § 5243]. A wage assignment for spousal support made under Prob. Code § 3008(e) (conservatee spouse) has priority over any execution or other assignment unless otherwise ordered by the court or unless the other assignment is a child support wage assignment [Prob. Code § 3088(e) (referring to former Civ. Code § 4701 for wage assignments, which was repealed by its own terms on January 1, 1991; now see Civ. Code § 4390 et seq. (operative until January 1, 1994); Fam. Code § 5200 et seq. (operative on and after January 1, 1994))].

An employer on whom an earnings assignment order for support is served is required to notify the levying officer that a supervening wage assignment is in effect [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.031(b)].

For further discussion of earnings assignments and forms for use in obtaining them, see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement .

[11] Notice to Employee

Within 10 days from the date of service of an earnings withholding order, the employer is required to deliver to the employee a copy of the withholding order [§§ 276.125, 276.126] and the notice to employee of earnings withholding (§ 276.127, Employee Instructions), unless the employee is no longer employed by the employer and the employer does not owe the employee any earnings [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.104(a)].

The employer is not subject to civil liability for failure to comply with Code Civ. Proc. § 706.104(a), but nothing in that section limits the power of a court to hold the employer in contempt of court for failure to comply [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.104(a)].

For discussion of the particular notice and other documents that Code Civ. Proc. § 706.030(b)(3) requires an employer to deliver to a support obligor under a withholding order for support, including applicable civil penalties, see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement .

[12] Employer's Return

Within 15 days from the date of service of the earnings withholding order, the employer is required to complete the employer's return [§ 276.128] and send it by first-class, postage prepaid mail to the levying officer [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.104(b)].

If the order is ineffective, the employer is required to state in the return that it will not be complied with for this reason and return the order to the levying officer with the employer's return [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.104(b)].

If a dormant or suspended earnings withholding order terminates [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.032(a);§ 276.20[9]], the employer must return the order to the levying officer. The returned order must be accompanied by a statement of the reasons for the return [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.032(b)].

[13] Payment of Amounts Withheld to Levying Officer

The amount withheld must be paid monthly to the levying officer not later than the fifteenth day of each month. The initial monthly payment must include all the amounts required to be withheld during the preceding calendar month up to the close of the employee's pay period ending closest to the last day of that month. Each monthly payment thereafter must include amounts withheld from the employee's earnings for services rendered in the interim up to the close of the employee's pay period ending closest to the last day of the preceding calendar month [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.025(a)].

The employer may, however, elect to pay more frequently than monthly. If this is done, payment of the amount withheld for each pay period must be made not later than 10 days after the close of the pay period [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.025(b)].

[14] Employer Deduction for Each Payment

The employer may deduct $1.50 from the employee's earnings for each payment made in accordance with an earnings withholding order under the Wage Garnishment Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.034].

[15] Duty of Levying Officer to Receive and Pay Over Money

The levying officer is required to receive and account for all amounts paid by the employer pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 706.025, above , and to pay the amounts so received over to the person entitled to them at least once every 30 days [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.026(a)]. At least once every two years, the levying officer must account to the court for all amounts collected under the order, including costs and interest added to the amount due [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.026(b)].

[16] Satisfaction

The amount required to satisfy an earnings withholding order is the total amount required to satisfy the writ of execution on the date the order is issued, with the following additions and subtractions [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.024(a)]: (1) the addition of the statutory fee for service of the order and any other statutory fees for performing duties under the order; (2) the addition of costs [see Code Civ. Proc. § 685.090]; (3) the subtraction of the amount of any partial satisfactions; and (4) the addition of daily interest accruing after issuance of the order, as adjusted for partial satisfactions.

The levying officer must compute and collect the costs and interest required to satisfy the order, including any additional interest or costs not entered on the writ [Code Civ. Proc. § 685.050(b)]. If costs are added to the judgment while the earnings withholding order is outstanding [see Code Civ. Proc. § 685.090(a); see also Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees], the levying officer must add the costs to the amount to be collected pursuant to the order, provided that the officer receives either of the following before the order is returned: (1) a certified copy of the court order allowing the costs; or (2) a certificate from the court clerk that the costs have been added to the judgment after a memorandum of costs [see Code Civ. Proc. § 685.070] was filed and that no motion to tax was made within the time allowed for such a motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 685.090(c)].

The levying officer has discretion to give written notice from time to time to the employer of the amount required to satisfy the earnings withholding order. The employer must determine the withholding amount based on the notice, regardless of whether the order originally served states a different amount [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.024(b)].

After the full amount required to satisfy the order is withheld, interest ceases to accrue on that amount [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.024(c); see Code Civ. Proc. § 685.030(a)(2)]. At that time, the levying officer must return the writ or, if the writ is no longer outstanding, must make a supplemental return to the court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 699.560(a)(2), (d), 706.033].

[17] Final Earnings Withholding Order for Costs and Interest

After payment of the amount stated in the order, if any costs and interest remain unsatisfied, the judgment creditor may obtain a final earnings withholding order. A final order is issued after the earlier order has been returned satisfied, and it may authorize the collection only of unsatisfied costs and interests that were not collected under the prior order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.028(a), (b)]. On the date the final order is issued, interest ceases to accrue, and no additional costs may be added except statutory fees for serving the order and performing duties under the order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.028(d); see Code Civ. Proc. § 685.030(a)(2)]. The final earnings withholding order is enforceable in the same manner as other earnings withholding orders [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.028(c)]. Satisfaction of the amount stated as owing in the final order is equivalent to satisfaction of the money judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.028(d)].

§ 276.21 Equitable Division of Earnings for Support

If the earnings withholding order is for support, the court will, on the motion of any interested party [§ 276.120], make an equitable division of the judgment debtor's earnings, taking into account the needs of all the persons the judgment debtor is required to support, by an order determining the amount to be withheld from earnings pursuant to the withholding order for support [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(b); see § 276.121]. The order may not, however, authorize the withholding of an amount in excess of the amount that may be withheld for support under 15 U.S.C. § 1673 (discussed under § 276.16[2][b]) [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(c); see also § 276.121]. No findings are required in court proceedings under the Wage Garnishment Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.106].

§ 276.22 Exempt Earnings

In addition to the restrictions on withholding (see discussion under § 276.16[5]), the portion of earnings the judgment debtor proves is necessary for his or her support or for the support of his or her family supported in whole or in part by the judgment debtor is exempt from levy under the Wage Garnishment Law unless (1) the debt was incurred for the common necessaries of life furnished to the judgment debtor or to his or her family; (2) the debt was incurred for personal services rendered by an employee or former employee of the judgment debtor; (3) the order is a withholding order for support under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.030; or (4) the order is one governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.070-706.084, relating to withholding orders for taxes [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051(b), (c)]. As used in the foregoing provisions, "family" includes the spouse or former spouse of the judgment debtor [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051(a)].

Although the term "necessaries," as applied to the requisites of life, is a relative term not confined to what is absolutely essential to life and when used in the broad sense encompasses many of the conveniences of a refined society, Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051(c)(1) does not refer to "necessaries" in the broad sense. On the contrary, the phrase "necessaries of life" is preceded by the word "common," which connotes such things as are ordinarily required for the sustenance of all people [Ratzlaff v. Portillo (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 1013, 1015-1016, 92 Cal. Rptr. 722 (construing predecessor statute and holding that car is not a common necessary of life because of availability of public transportation, home delivery service, and neighborhood shopping centers)].

§ 276.23 Claim of Exemption

[1] When Claim Is Available and Procedure

A judgment debtor may, except as noted below, claim an exemption under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051 (discussed under § 276.22) under either of the following circumstances: (1) no prior hearing has been held with respect to the earnings withholding order; or (2) there has been a material change in circumstances since the time of the last prior hearing on the earnings withholding order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(a)]. The claim is made by filing with the levying officer the original and one copy of (1) the judgment debtor's claim of exemption [see § 276.130] and (2) the judgment debtor's financial statement [see § 276.131] [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(b)]. The levying officer will then, by first-class mail, postage prepaid, send the following to the judgment creditor: (1) a copy of the claim; (2) a copy of the financial statement; and (3) a notice of the filing of the claim of exemption [§ 276.132] [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(c)].

The foregoing procedure does not apply, however, to an earnings withholding order for support or taxes [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(k)].

[2] Contents of Claim

A judgment debtor's claim of exemption [see § 276.131] is required to be executed under oath and indicate how much the judgment debtor believes should be withheld from his or her earnings each pay period by the employer pursuant to the earnings withholding or der and state the judgment debtor's present mailing address [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.123].

[3] Disposition Without Hearing

The employee may claim that all earnings are exempt or may agree to the withholding of a portion of earnings [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.123]. The judgment creditor may oppose the claim of exemption or, by taking no action, in effect agree to the terms of the employee's claim [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(d), (f)]. If the levying officer does not receive a notice of opposition to the claim of exemption within 10 days after the date the notice of claim of exemption was mailed and a notice of hearing not later than 10 days after the notice of opposition to the claim of exemption was filed (see discussion § 276.23[4]), the levying officer is required to serve on the employer either a notice that the order has been terminated if all the employee's earnings were claimed to be exempt or, if only a portion of the earnings were claimed to be exempt, a modified earnings withholding order which reflects the amount of earnings so claimed [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(f); see § 276.136].

[4] Creditor's Opposition to Claim

A judgment creditor who desires to contest a claim of exemption must, within 10 days after the date the notice of claim of exemption [§ 276.132] was mailed, file with the levying officer a notice of opposition to the claim [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(d); see § 276.132]. Within the same 10-day period, the judgment creditor must file a notice of motion for an order determining the claim of exemption [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e); see § 276.133]. Failure to file these papers within the specified period may result in a waiver by the judgment creditor of his or her right to object to the claim of exemption [see Westervelt v. Robertson (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 1, 8-10 , 176 Cal. Rptr. 94 (involving former Code Civ. Proc. § 723.105(d), (e) (now Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(d), (e)))].

[5] Service and Filing of Papers and Hearing on Claim

If the papers are timely, the hearing on the motion is held within 30 days from the date the notice of motion was filed unless continued by the court for good cause [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e)]. At least 16 court days prior to the hearing, the judgment creditor must give written notice of the hearing to the levying officer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.105(e), 1005(b); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(a)(3)]. If service is by mail, the 16-day period is increased by the following time periods: 5 calendar days if the place of mailing and address are within California; 10 calendar days if either the place of mailing or address is outside California, but within the United States; 20 calendar days if either the place of mailing or address is outside the United States; and 2 calendar days if service is by fax, Express Mail, or other overnight delivery method [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.105(e), 1005(a)(3)]. However, the court or judge may prescribe a shorter time [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.105(e), 1005(a)(3)].

The judgment creditor must also serve a notice of hearing [see § 276.134] on the judgment debtor and, if the claim of exemption so requests, on the judgment debtor's attorney [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e)]. Service must be made at least 16 court days prior to the hearing with additional time if service is by mail, as discussed above [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.105(e), 1005(a)(3)]. Service is deemed made when the notice of hearing and a copy of the notice of opposition are deposited in the mail, postage prepaid, addressed to the judgment debtor at the address stated in the claim of exemption, and if requested, to the judgment debtor's attorney at the address stated in the claim [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e)]. The judgment creditor is required to file proof of the service with the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e)].

After receiving the notice of the hearing and before the date set for the hearing, the levying officer is required to file the claim of exemption and the notice of opposition with the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e)]. The judgment creditor may fill out the Judicial Council form of notice of hearing [Judicial Council Form WG-010 (also numbered Form EJ-175); § 276.135] to indicate that he or she will not appear at the hearing and will be submitting the issue on the papers filed. In turn, the judgment debtor may elect not to appear and the matter will be determined on the papers filed [see § 276.127].

[6] Findings and Order

No findings are required in court proceedings under the Wage Garnishment Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.106].

If, after hearing, the court orders that the earnings withholding order be modified or terminated, the clerk will promptly transmit a certified copy of the order to the levying officer who will promptly serve on the employer a copy of the modified earnings withholding order or a notice that the earnings withholding order has been terminated. The court may order that the earnings withholding order be terminated as of a date which precedes the date of hearing [Code Civ. Proc.

If the court determines that any amount withheld pursuant to the earnings withholding order is to be paid to the judgment debtor, it will make an order directing the person who holds such amount to pay it promptly to the judgment debtor [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(g)].

If the employer has withheld and paid over amounts pursuant to an order after the date of termination of the order but prior to receipt of the notice of termination, the judgment debtor may recover such amounts only from the levying officer if the levying officer still holds the amounts. If the levying officer has paid the amounts to the judgment creditor the judgment debtor may recover them from the creditor. If the employer has withheld earnings after termination of the order but has not paid them over to the levying officer, the employer is required to pay them promptly to the judgment debtor [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(i)].

[7] Appeal

An appeal lies from any court order under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105 denying a claim of exemption or modifying or terminating an earnings withholding order. The appeal is taken in the manner provided for appeals in the court in which the proceeding is had. An appeal by the judgment creditor does not stay the order modifying or terminating the earnings withholding order. Until such time as the order is set aside or modified, the order allowing the claim of exemption in whole or in part is given the same effect as if the appeal had not been taken [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(j)].

§ 276.24 Employer Violations

In addition to the criminal penalties provided for wrongful discharge under federal law [discussed under § 276.16[3]], an employer may incur civil and criminal penalties for violation of the Wage Garnishment Law (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.010-706.154).

For example, an employer who fails to withhold or pay over the amount required to be withheld and paid over pursuant to the Wage Garnishment Law may be sued in a civil action by the judgment creditor to recover the amount [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.154(a) (which provides that this remedy is not exclusive)]. However, an employer is not subject to any civil or criminal penalty for complying with any written order or written notice which purports to be given or served in accordance with the provisions of the Wage Garnishment Law unless the employer has actively participated in a fraud [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.154(b)].

As another example, employers are prohibited from deferring or accelerating any payment of earnings to an employee with the intent to defeat or diminish the judgment creditor's rights under an earnings withholding order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.153(a); see §§ 276.125, 276.126 (Employer's Instructions, pointing out that employee's pay period must not be changed to prevent order from taking effect)]. An employer who violates this provision may be sued in a civil action by the judgment creditor to recover the amount that would have been withheld and paid over if the order had been complied with [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.153(b) (which provides that this remedy is not exclusive)].

An employer who withholds earnings pursuant to the Wage Garnishment Law and, with the intent to defraud either the judgment creditor or the judgment debtor, fails to pay the withheld earnings over to the levying officer is guilty of a misdemeanor [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.152].

§ 276.25 Garnishment of Other Personal Property

[1] Prejudgment Garnishment

The procedures for the prejudgment garnishment of personal property, other than wages or salary, are governed by the attachment statutes (see generally Code Civ. Proc. §§ 481.010-492.090). For a detailed discussion of these procedures and forms for obtaining and serving a writ of attachment, see Ch. 62, Attachment .

[2] Postjudgment Garnishment

The garnishment of property, other than wages or salary, in postjudgment proceedings is part of the statutory scheme for the enforcement of judgments by means of a writ of execution (see generally Code Civ. Proc. §§ 700.010-700.200), but a copy of the writ of execution and a notice of levy are served on the third person [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 700.040 (tangible personal property), 700.060 (goods in bailee's possession), 700.140 (deposit account), 700.150 (property in safe deposit box), 700.170 (accounts receivable or general intangibles)]. Further, there are special supplementary proceedings by which a third person, after a hearing and examination, may be compelled to surrender property belonging to the judgment debtor (see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.120(a), 708.180, 708.205, 708.210). For a more detailed discussion of these procedures and forms for use on execution and in proceedings supplementary to execution, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments .

C. Deposit Account or Safe Deposit Box

23-276 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 276.40

§ 276.40 Deposit Account or Property in Safe Deposit Box Standing in Name of Third Person

[1] Special Procedures Required

If the personal property sought to be levied on is a deposit account or in a safe deposit box, levy is made, subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 700.160, on the financial institution with which the deposit account or safe deposit box is maintained. The levying officer must personally serve a copy of the writ of execution and a notice of levy on the financial institution or personally serve the writ of execution and notice of levy to a centralized location within California designated by the financial institution [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 700.140(a), 700.150(a)]. The levying officer must also serve, personally or by mail, a copy of the writ of execution and a notice of levy on any third person in whose name the deposit account or safe deposit stands at the time of levy or promptly thereafter [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 700.140(b), 700.150(b)].

If a deposit account or safe-deposit box stands in the name of a person other than the judgment debtor, either alone or together with other third persons, except as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 700.160(b), it is not subject to levy under Code Civ. Proc. § 700.140 or 700.150 unless the levy is authorized by court order. The levying officer must serve a copy of the court order on the third person at the time the copy of the writ of execution and the notice of levy are served on the third person [Code Civ. Proc. § 700.160(a)].

A court order is not required to levy on a deposit account or safe-deposit box standing in the name of any of the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 700.160(b)]:

- The judgment debtor, whether alone or together with third persons [Code Civ. Proc. § 700.160(b)(1)].

- The judgment debtor's spouse, whether alone or together with other third persons [Code Civ. Proc. § 700.160(b)(2)].

- A fictitious business name if an unexpired fictitious business name statement filed pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17900-17930 lists as the persons doing business under the fictitious business name either the judgment debtor, the judgment debtor's spouse, or the judgment debtor and the judgment debtor's spouse, but does not list any other person [Code Civ. Proc. § 700.160(b)(3)].

- The additional name of a judgment debtor listed on the writ of execution pursuant to an Affidavit of Identity [see Code Civ. Proc. 680.135], whether alone or together with third persons.

If the deposit account or safe deposit box stands in the name of the judgment debtor's spouse, an affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) showing that the person in whose name the account stands is the judgment debtor's spouse must be delivered to the financial institution at the time of levy [Code Civ. Proc. § 700.160(b)(2)].

If the deposit account or safe deposit box stands in the name of a fictitious business as described by Code Civ. Proc. § 700.160(b)(3), a copy of a fictitious business name statement, certified as provided in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17926, that satisfies the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 700.160(b)(3) must be delivered to the financial institution at the time of levy; and if a person other than the defendant is listed in the statement, an affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) showing that the other person is the judgment debtor's spouse must also be delivered to the financial institution at the time of levy [Code Civ. Proc. § 700.160(b)(3)].

[2] Responsibility of Financial Institution

In any case in which a deposit account in the name of a person other than the judgment debtor, whether alone or together with the judgment debtor, is levied on, the financial institution must not pay to the levying officer the amount levied on until notified to do so by the levying officer. The levying officer may not require the financial institution to pay the amount levied on until the expiration of 15 days after service of notice of levy on the third person [Code Civ. Proc. § 700.160(c)].

If a deposit account is levied on, during the time the execution lien is in effect the financial institution will not honor a check or other order for the payment of money drawn against the deposit account, and will not pay a withdrawal from the deposit account that would reduce the deposit account to an amount less than the amount levied on. In determining the amount of the deposit account, the financial institution will not include the amount of items deposited to the credit of the account that are in the process of being collected [Code Civ. Proc. § 700.140(c)]. If the property in a safe deposit box is levied on, during the time the execution is in effect the financial institution shall not permit the removal of any of the contents of the safe deposit box except pursuant to the levy [Code Civ. Proc. § 700.150(c)].

[3] Nonliability of Financial Institution

During the time the execution lien is in effect, the financial institution is not liable to any person for any of the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 700.140(d)]:

(1) Performance of the duties of a garnishee under the levy;

(2) Nonpayment of a check or other order for the payment of money drawn or presented against the deposit account when nonpayment is pursuant to the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 700.140(c); or

(3) Refusal to pay a withdrawal from the deposit account when refusal is pursuant to the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 700.140(c).

[4] Expenses of Forcibly Opening Safe Deposit Box

The financial institution may refuse to permit the forcible opening of the safe deposit box to permit the removal of the property levied on unless the judgment creditor pays in advance the cost of forcibly opening the box and repairing any damage caused by it [Code Civ. Proc. § 700.150(d)].

§ 276.60 Manners of Garnishing Public Entity's Obligation

The procedure for garnishing money owed to a judgment debtor by a public entity other than money owed as wages or salary is covered by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.710-708.795. A "public entity" is defined as meaning the state, a county, city, district, public authority, public agency, and any other political subdivision in the state [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.710(b)].

A public entity's obligation to pay money to a judgment debtor may be applied to the satisfaction of the judgment against the judgment debtor only in the manners provided in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.010-706.154 (wage garnishment), 708.410-708.480 (lien in pending action or proceeding), or 708.710-708.795 (money owed other than as wages or salary) [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.720(a)]. These procedures are mutually exclusive. Thus, the earnings of a public officer or employee may not be withheld for the payment of a money judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.710-708.795, but only pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.010-706.154, the Wage Garnishment Law, discussed above [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.720(b)]. Nor does the procedure set forth in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.710-708.795 apply to a public entity's obligation to pay the judgment debtor money which is the subject of a pending action or special proceeding; rather, an obligation of this nature may be applied to the satisfaction of the money judgment against the judgment debtor only in the manner provided in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.4l0-708.480 (see discussion and forms in Ch. 318, Judgments, § 318.90 et seq.) [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.720(c)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Money Owed to Judgment Debtor by Public Entity

23-276 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 276.61

§ 276.61 Money Other Than Wages or Salary

[1] Governing Statutes

The procedure for garnishing money other than wages or salary owed by a public entity to a judgment debtor is governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.710-708.795.

[2] Purpose

The purpose of providing a special garnishment procedure where public entities are involved is to shift to the court the burden of adjudicating any claims of exemption which may arise and to insulate the public entities from liability for wrongful payments to garnishing creditors [McDaniel v. City & County of San Francisco (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 356, 363, 66 Cal. Rptr. 384] .

[3] Creation of Lien

When money is owing and unpaid to a judgment debtor by a public entity, the judgment creditor may file an abstract, or a certified copy, of the money judgment, together with an affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) stating (1) that the judgment creditor desires the relief provided by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.710-708.795 and (2) the exact amount then required to satisfy the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.730(a); see §§ 276.122, 276.123]. The judgment creditor may state in the affidavit (declaration) any fact tending to establish the identity of the judgment debtor [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.730(a)]. The papers should be filed with the appropriate state agency or local officer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.740, 708.750, discussed under § 276.61[6], [7]; see Code Civ. Proc. § 708.785(a) (filing fee)].

The filing of the papers creates a lien on the money owing and unpaid to the judgment debtor by the public entity in an amount equal to that which may properly be applied to the satisfaction of the money judgment under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.710-708.795 [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.780].

[4] Notice to Judgment Debtor

Promptly after filing the abstract or certified copy of the judgment and affidavit (declaration) with the public entity, the judgment creditor must personally or by mail serve notice of the filing on the judgment debtor [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.730(b)].

[5] Nonliability of Public Officer When Judgment Debtor Not Identifiable

No public officer or employee will be liable for failure to perform a duty imposed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.710-708.795 unless sufficient information is furnished by the abstract or certified copy of the judgment together with the affidavit (declaration) to enable the officer or employee in the exercise of reasonable diligence to ascertain the identity of the judgment debtor therefrom and from the papers and records on file in the office in which the officer or employee works [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.790]. "Office" in this context does not include any branch or subordinate office located in a different city [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.790].

[6] Money Owed by State Agency

If the money is owing and unpaid to the judgment debtor by a state agency, the judgment creditor must file the abstract or certified copy of the judgment and affidavit (declaration) with the state agency owing the money before the state agency presents the judgment debtor's claim to the State Controller [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.740(a)]. "State agency" in this context means a California state office, officer, department, division, bureau, board, commission, or agency claims against which are paid by warrants drawn by the State Controller [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.710(c), (d)].

If this is done, the state agency will, when presenting the judgment debtor's claim to the Controller, (1) note the fact of the filing of the abstract or certified copy of the judgment and the affidavit (declaration); (2) state the amount required to satisfy the judgment as shown by the affidavit (declaration); and (3) state any amounts advanced to the judgment debtor by the state, or owed by the judgment debtor to the state, for expenses or for any other purpose [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.740(b)].

[7] Money Owed by Other Public Entity

If the money is owing and unpaid to the judgment debtor by a public entity other than a state agency, the judgment creditor must file the abstract or certified copy of the judgment and affidavit (declaration) with the auditor of the public entity or, if there is no auditor, with the official whose duty corresponds to that of auditor [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.750].

[8] Money Owed to Contractor on Public Work

If the judgment debtor is a contractor on a public work, the cost of which is to be paid out of public moneys voted, appropriated, or otherwise set apart for such purpose, only so much of the contract price will be deemed owing and unpaid within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 708.740 or 708.750, discussed under § 276.61[6], [7], as may remain payable under the terms of the contract, on its completion, after deducting sums due and to become due to persons described in Civ. Code § 3181 (persons entitled to serve stop notices). In ascertaining the sums due or to become due, only claims filed in accordance with the provisions of Civ. Code §§ 3179-3214 (stop notices on public works) will be considered [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.760(a)]. For a discussion of stop notices on public works, see Ch. 481, Public Works .

[9] Money Owed in Installments as Lottery Prize

Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 708.755, a judgment creditor pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 708.710 et seq.(collection when judgment debtor is creditor of public entity) may create a lien against "a lottery prize" that is to be paid in annual installments. The lien continues until the judgment lien is paid or expires, whichever occurs first [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.755(a)]. To create and continue the lien, the creditor must do all of the following:

- Starting with the second installment against which the creditor's lien is asserted, the creditor must file annually with the lottery agency an affidavit stating that the judgment has not been satisfied, including the amount of the unsatisfied judgment with interest and costs, if any. The annual affidavit must be filed with the lottery not less than 45, nor more than 90 days, from the due date of the annual installment subject to the lien [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.755(a)(1)].

- If the judgment lien is renewed, the creditor must file with the lottery a certified copy of the renewal application authorized under Code Civ. Proc. § 683.110 et seq., not less than 45, nor more than 90 days, from the due date of the annual installment subject to the lien [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.755(a)(2)].

If the judgment creditor fails to file the annual statement, renewal of judgment, or renewal of abstact, the lien expires. This does not preclude the judgment creditor from pursuing new procedures under Code Civ. Proc. § 708.710 et seq. to the extent that the judgment remains enforceable under applicable law [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.755(b)].

[10] Discharge by Public Entity of Judgment Debtor's Claim

To discharge the judgment debtor's claim against a public entity, the State Controller, in the case of a claim against a state agency, and the auditor or other official in the case of a claim against a public entity other than a state agency, will deduct an amount sufficient to reimburse the state or other public entity for any amounts advanced by it to the judgment debtor or owed to it by the judgment debtor and then (1) deposit with the court, by a warrant or check payable to the court, the amount due the judgment debtor that is required to satisfy the money judgment as shown by the affidavit (declaration) in full or to the greatest extent and (2) pay any balance to the judgment debtor [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.740(c), 708.755].

If the judgment debtor is a contractor on a public work, the State Controller, auditor, or other public disbursing officer whose duty it is to make payments under the provisions of the contract may not deposit an amount with the court until the contract is completed, but may deposit an amount with the court to satisfy the claim of the judgment debtor before the payments specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 708.760(a) (discussed under § 276.61[8]) are made so long as a sufficient amount is retained for the satisfaction of the claims of persons described in Civ. Code § 3181 (persons entitled to file stop notices) [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.760(b)].

[11] Procedure on Claim of Exemption

Promptly after the public entity makes the deposit with the court, the court clerk will cause a notice of the deposit to be served on the judgment debtor personally or by mail [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.770(a)]. Within 10 days after the service, the judgment debtor who claims an exemption must (1) file with the court a claim of exemption containing all the matters set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 703.520(b) (contents of claim of exemption) and a notice of motion for an order determining the claim and (2) serve on the judgment creditor personally or by mail a copy of the notice of motion, the claim of exemption, and a notice of hearing on the motion [Code Civ. Proc. 708.770(b)]. Failure to make a claim of exemption under Code Civ. Proc. § 708.770 constitutes a waiver of the exemption [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.770(f)].

The hearing on the motion must be held not later than 30 days from the date the notice of motion was filed with the court unless continued by the court for good cause [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.770(c)]. The claim of exemption is subject to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 703.580(a)-(d) (hearing determining claim), 703.590 (extensions of time), and 703.600 (appeal) [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.770(e)].

Within 10 days after the judgment creditor is served under Code Civ. Proc. § 708.770(b), the judgment creditor must, if he or she opposes the motion, (1) file with the court a notice of opposition to the claim of exemption containing all the matters set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 703.560 (contents of notice of opposition to claim of exemption) and executed under oath and (2) serve a copy of the notice of opposition on the judgment debtor personally or by mail [Code Civ.

Proc. § 708.770(d)].

For further discussion and forms for filing and opposing a claim of exemption, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments, § 254.40 et seq.

[12] Payment by Court of Nonexempt Portion of Money Deposited

After expiration of the period allowed for claiming an exemption under Code Civ. Proc. § 708.770 if no exemption has been claimed, or after determination of the claim of exemption if an exemption was claimed, the court will pay the nonexempt portion of the money deposited to which the judgment creditor is entitled to the judgment creditor and any balance to the judgment debtor, unless some other disposition is required by law [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.775].

[13] Tax Refund and Lottery Winnings Intercept to Enforce Support Obligation

In the case of a judgment for child, spousal, or family support and related costs, the Code of Civil Procedure contains special procedures by which the judgment creditor-obligee may intercept the judgment debtor-obligor's state tax refund and state lottery winnings [see Code Civ. Proc. § 708.730(c)-(e) (Code Civ. Proc. § 708.730(d) became inoperative as of December 31, 2000); see also Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.740(d)-(i), 708.770(g), 708.780(b)-(d)]. Code Civ. Proc. § 708.780(c) is currently operative through December 31, 2001. Tax refunds may not be intercepted for any other collection purpose except to enforce an obligation of support [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.795]. For discussion and forms relating to these procedures, see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement .

§ 276.82 Decisions

[1] Abuse of Process

Garnishing exempt wages to coerce judgment debtor into paying debt as abuse of process. Czap v. Credit Bureau of Santa Clara Valley (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 1, 5-6, 86 Cal. Rptr. 417

[2] Constitutionality of Garnishment Laws

Wisconsin prejudgment wage garnishment laws as violating procedural due process by depriving alleged debtor of substantial property interest without debtor's having prior opportunity to be heard. Sniadach v. Family Finance Corp. (1969) 395 U.S. 337, 339-342, 89 S. Ct. 1820, 23 L. Ed. 2d 349

Under rationale of Sniadach, California's prejudgment wage garnishment procedures (now repealed) as denial of procedural due process since California law deprives alleged debtor of substantial property interest without prior hearing. Cline v. Credit Bureau of Santa Clara Valley (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 908, 909, 83 Cal. Rptr. 669, 464 P.2d 125 ; McCallop v. Carberry (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 903, 904-907, 83 Cal. Rptr. 666, 464 P.2d 122

Requirement of former Code Civ. Proc. § 690.50 (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 703.030, 703.520) that debtors file claim of exemption with respect to funds that are exempt by statute as reasonable; thus levy by judgment creditor on plaintiffs' joint checking account consisting of funds that were exempt from execution under former Code Civ. Proc. § 680.18(a) subject to filing valid claim of exemption as lawful and plaintiffs as not entitled to notice and judicial hearing prior to levy. Phillips v. Bartolomie (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 346, 349-352, 354, 121 Cal. Rptr. 56

Former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 690.6 and 690.50 (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 703.510-703.601), governing postjudgment garnishment of wages, which require judgment debtor to apply for and prove right to exemption after seizure, as not violative of constitutional due process. Raigoza v. Sperl (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 560, 562-569, 110 Cal. Rptr. 296

[3] Exemptions

[a] In General

Earnings of self-employed certified public accountant as not within exemption of Code Civ. Proc. § 706.020 because not encompassed by definition of Code Civ. Proc. § 706.011 in that self-employed accountant is not subject to control of clients. Moses v. DeVersecy (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 1071, 1074, 203 Cal. Rptr. 906

Debtor as not entitled to full claim of exemption when his itemization of expenses included unexplained costs for installment contracts and incidentals and he failed to prove that all his earnings were necessary for support of his family. Perfection Paint Products v. Johnson (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 739, 742, 330 P.2d 829

Judgment debtor as bearing burden of proving his or her right to exemption. Perfection Paint Products v. Johnson (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 739, 741, 330 P.2d 829

Debtor as not entitled to count child who reaches legal age of majority as dependent unless child is poor and unable to maintain himself or herself. Diamond v. Bent (1957) 157 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 857, 859 , 320 P.2d 621

Expenses of putting child through university as necessary expense since parents have duty to support, maintain, and educate their children. Diamond v. Bent (1957) 157 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 857, 859 , 320 P.2d 621

[b] Support of Family

Basic theory of exemption from levy of debtor's earnings necessary for support of debtor and his or her family as being that they, regardless of debtor's improvidence, will retain sufficient funds to maintain basic standard of living in order that debtor may have fair chance to remain productive member of community. California State Employees' Assn. v. State of California (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 374, 377, 243 Cal. Rptr. 602 ; Perfection Paint Products v. Johnson (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 739, 741, 330 P.2d 829

Trial court as invested with wide discretion in determining what is necessary for use of debtor's family since individual situations will vary. Perfection Paint Products v. Johnson (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 739, 741, 330 P.2d 829

Automobile as not a common necessary of life within meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 690.ll (now Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051); hence, debt incurred for purchase of car as not limiting debtor's right to exempt from execution all earnings necessary for support of family. Ratzlaff v. Portillo (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 1013, 1014-1016, 92 Cal. Rptr. 722

Purpose of distinction in former Code Civ. Proc. § 690.6 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051(c)(1)) between debts incurred for common necessaries of life and those incurred for other items as being to assure to poor persons ability to acquire necessities of life by giving creditors who advance such supplies a preference over those who sell nonessentials on credit. Thayer v. Madigan (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 16, 18-20, 125 Cal. Rptr. 28

Judgment debtor as not entitled to exemption for all earnings necessary for support in relation to debt that was incurred for hospital services which are common necessaries of life within meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 723.051 (now Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051). J.J. MacIntyre Co. v. Duren (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 16, 19 , 173 Cal. Rptr. 715

[4] Federal Laws

[a] Bankruptcy

Petition in bankruptcy as operating as stay to all other proceedings so that employer making payment under writ of execution to marshal should cease payments, and marshal, on obtaining notice of bankruptcy proceedings, should cease receiving payments. In re Ducich (C.D. Cal. 1974) 385 F. Supp. 1287, 1289-1291

[b] Federal Tax Obligations

Payment to United States government pursuant to federal levy as complete defense against any action against garnishee on account of debt despite lack of conformity by federal government to California procedures for levying on wages of debtor. Hoye v. United States (S.D. Cal. 1958) 169 F. Supp. 474, 478-479

California statutes respecting garnishment procedures to be followed by judgment creditor to execute on judgment for payment of money as inapplicable to levy by United States government on comptroller of city against accrued wages of city employee who was delinquent in his federal taxes, since obligations enforced by federal government are not judgments. Hoye v. United States (S.D. Cal. 1958) 169 F. Supp. 474, 475-478

[c] Federal Wage Garnishment Laws

Violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1674(a), which forbids dismissal of employee because his or her wages have been garnished for one indebtedness, as not giving rise to any private civil remedy by employee against employer. Le Vick v. Skaggs Cos. (9th Cir. 1983) 701 F.2d 777, 779-780 (declining to follow contrary holding in Stewart v. Travelers Corp. (9th Cir. 1974) 503 F.2d 108, 109-114)

Employers who discharged employees for incurring multiple garnishments of their wages as not in violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1674(a) when they counted garnishments incurred before, as well as after, passage of Consumer Credit Protection Act, since Congress did not incorporate any garnishment amnesty when it passed act. Hodgson v. Consolidated Freightways, Inc. (9th Cir. 1974) 503 F.2d 797, 798-800

Employer's policy of discharging employee after employer had been garnished several times for judgments against employee, although neutral on its face, as deemed discriminatory when it bore no reasonable relationship to job performance and affected disproportionate number of minority group members. Johnson v. Pike Corporation of America (C.D. Cal. 1971) 332 F. Supp. 490, 492-496

Garnishment as attachment by third person of debts owing attachment debtor by garnishee. Los Angeles County Employees Union, Local 434 v. County of Los Angeles (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 269, 272, 109 Cal. Rptr. 46

[6] Levy on Public Entities

Liability of federal government entity as depending on whether sovereign immunity bars garnishment action, whether entity would be liable under state garnishment laws, and whether entity has met statutory requirements, if any. Millard v. U.S. (Fed. Cir. 1990) 916 F.2d 1, 3

Trial court in creating exception to exemption statute not found in statute itself and in failing to follow rules established by courts of superior jurisdiction and to adhere to exclusive procedure for reaching debts owed by government to third parties as set forth in former Code Civ. Proc. § 710 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 708.750) as error in excess of its jurisdiction. Miller v. Superior Court (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 14, 15-17, 69 Cal. Rptr. 583, 442 P.2d 663

Purpose of former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 710 and 710a (now Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.710-708.795) in providing special procedure for garnishing funds in hands of governmental unit owed to judgment debtors as being to shift to court burden of adjudicating any claims of exemption which may arise and to insulate governmental units from liability for wrongful payments to garnishing creditors. McDaniel v. City & County of San Francisco (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 356, 363, 66 Cal. Rptr. 384

No duty on part of public officials to notify judgment debtor of garnishment pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 710 (now Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.740, 708.750). McDaniel v. City & County of San Francisco (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 356, 363, 66 Cal. Rptr. 384

Due to early discharge from employment with city, appellant's retirement contributions as owed to him by city and therefore sub ject to garnishment by his creditor. McDaniel v. City & County of San Francisco (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 356, 361, 66 Cal. Rptr. 384

[7] Precedence of Wage Garnishment Law

Specific provisions of attachment law (Code Civ. Proc. § 481.010 et seq.) and wage garnishment law (Code Civ. Proc. § 706.010 et seq.) as taking precedence over general provisions of Gov. Code § 17051 (procedure for payment of warrant drawn against state when validity or amount is in question); hence, state's planned deduction from salaries of state medical facility employees in order to recoup prior alleged overpayments as improper where deductions did not accord with attachment and wage garnishment laws. California State Employees' Assn. v. State of California (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 374, 378, 243 Cal. Rptr. 602

[8] State Tax Refund Intercepts

State income tax refund intercept program for delinquent child support as meeting constitutional requirements of due process. Wightman v. Franchise Tax Board (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 966, 978, 249 Cal. Rptr. 207

[9] Use of Mandate to Enforce Execution Against Public Entities

Mandate to enforce execution under former Code Civ. Proc. § 710 (now Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.710-708.795) when judgment debtor purportedly assigned to bank his right to money owed to him by city as inappropriate remedy to deal with situations where, before writ may properly issue, determination must first be made whether assignment of debt was fraudulent transfer or merely created subordinate security interest. Eilken v. Morrison (1969) 3 Cal. App. 3d 25, 28-29, 83 Cal. Rptr. 336

PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

23-276 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 276.100

§ 276.100 Procedural Checklist

[1] Garnishment

NOTE:

The following is a checklist of the procedures commonly used in situations involving writs of execution. The checklist particularly covers the garnishment of wages for the payment of money judgments pursuant to the Wage Garnishment Law (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.010-706.154), other than for payment of delinquent taxes [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.070-706.084], and the levying on a deposit account or property in a safe deposit box standing in the name of a third person or in the names of both the judgment debtor and a third person [Code Civ. Proc. § 700.160(a)]. Also covered is the separate procedure for the garnishment of funds other than wages or salary owed by a public entity to a judgment debtor [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.710-708.795]. The Wage Garnishment Law applies to the garnishment of earnings of judgment debtors employed by a public entity as well as to the garnishment of the earnings of judgment debtors employed by private employers [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.720(b)]. For other procedures not covered in this checklist, see the Procedural Checklist in Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments, § 254.40 et seq.

1. Memorandum of costs.

If not previously done, counsel for judgment creditor prepares, serves, and files a memorandum of costs [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 685.070, 685.090(a)(2); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700].

NOTE:

Filing a memorandum of costs is an alternative procedure to obtaining a court order allowing costs to be added to the judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 685.090(a)]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

If a writ or earnings withholding order is issued before costs are added to the judgment, a certified copy of the court order or a certificate from the clerk court with regard to the filed memorandum should be delivered to the levying officer before the writ or withholding order is returned. The officer will then add the costs to the amount to be collected [Code Civ. Proc. § 685.090(c)]. If the order is returned satisfied before the costs are collected, counsel for the judgment creditor may still obtain collection through a final earnings withholding order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.028].

2. Writ of execution.

Counsel for judgment creditor obtains a writ of execution [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 699.510; 699.520]. For more discussion, a procedural checklist, and forms for use in obtaining writs of execution, including writs to enforce installment and other judgments, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments, § 254.40 et seq.

3. Levy on debtor's earnings.

a. Counsel for judgment creditor prepares an application for an earnings withholding order [§ 276.124] and files the application, with the writ of execution, with the levying officer in the county where the judgment debtor's employer is to be served [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.102(a), 706.121, 706.125]. At this time counsel will normally be required to pay the levying officer's fees and any other deposits that may be required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 685.100(a)(1) (deposit of money sufficient to pay costs)].

NOTE:
The application must be filed with the levying officer within 180 days from the date the writ of execution was entered [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.102(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 699.530(b)].

On the issuance and service of the order, see § 276.20[6], [7].

b. If the order is returned satisfied, but costs and interest remain unsatisfied, counsel for judgment creditor prepares an application for a final earnings withholding order [§ 276.124] and files it in the same manner as for the original order [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.028].

4. Levy on deposit account or safe deposit box [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 700.140, 700.150, 700.160].

a. If deposit account or safe deposit box stands in name of a person other than the judgment debtor, either alone or together with other third persons, obtain a court order for levy unless exempted by Code Civ. Proc. § 700.160(b) [Code Civ. Proc. § 700.160(a); see discussion in § 276.40].

b. Counsel for judgment creditor prepares instructions to the sheriff or other levying officer, directing the levying officer to levy on the financial institution holding the deposit account or having the safe deposit box. For a form of instructions to the levying officer, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments, § 254.40 et seq.

c. Counsel mails or delivers the writ of execution, undertaking, and instructions to the sheriff or other levying officer. At this time counsel will normally be required to pay the levying officer's fees and any other deposits that may be required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 685.100(a)(1) (deposit of money sufficient to pay costs)].

NOTE:
A financial institution may refuse to permit the forcible opening of a safe deposit box to permit the removal of the property levied on unless the judgment creditor pays in advance the cost of the forcible opening and of repairing any damage caused [Code Civ. Proc. § 700.150(d)].

[2] Motion for Equitable Division of Earnings Subject to Garnishment

Counsel for an interested party who wishes to move for an equitable division of the judgment debtor's earnings subject to garnishment and for a court determination of the amount to be withheld from the earnings pursuant to a withholding order for support, prepares, serves, and files a notice of motion for the order [§ 276.120], together with a supporting declaration and memorandum of points and authorities [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.052(b), 1003, 1005, 1005.5, 1010, 2009; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113; see §§ 276.21, 276.121[2], and 276.122[2]].

[3] Claiming Exemption of Earnings From Earnings Withholding Order and Opposing Claim

1. Counsel for judgment debtor prepares the judgment debtor's claim of exemption and financial declaration [see §§ 276.129, 276.130] and files the original and one copy of each completed form with the levying officer [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(b)].

NOTE:
The judgment debtor may claim an exemption under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051 if no prior hearing has been held with respect to the earnings withholding order or there has been a material change in circumstances since the time of the last prior hearing on the earnings withholding order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(a)]. On receipt of the papers, the levying officer will promptly, by first-class mail, postage prepaid, send to the judgment creditor (1) a copy of the claim of exemption, (2) a copy of the financial declaration, and (3) a notice of the claim of exemption [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(c); see §§ 276.131 -276.133].

2. If the judgment creditor contests the claim of exemption, his or her counsel must do the following:

a. Within 10 days after the date the notice of claim of exemption was mailed, file with the levying officer a notice of opposition to the claim of exemption [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(d); see § 276.132].

b. Within the same 10-day period, file with the court a notice of motion for an order determining the claim of exemption [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e); see § 276.133].

c. At least 16 court days before the hearing of the motion, give written notice of the hearing to the levying officer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.105(e), 1005(b); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(a)(3); see also § 276.134].

NOTE:
If service is by mail, the 16-day period is increased by the following time periods: 2 calendar days if service is by fax or by express mail or other overnight delivery method; 5 calendar days if the place of mailing and address are within California; 10 calendar days if either the place of mailing or address is outside California, but within the United States; and 20 calendar days if either the place of mailing or address is outside the United States [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.105(e), 1005(a)(3)]. Nevertheless, the court or judge may prescribe a shorter time [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.105(e), 1005(a)(3)].

The hearing on the motion must be held not later than 30 days from the date the notice of motion was filed unless continued by the court for good cause [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e)].

d. At least 16 court days before the hearing (additional time if service is by mail, as discussed in NOTE, above), serve on the judgment debtor and, if the claim of exemption so requested, on the judgment debtor's attorney a notice of the hearing and a copy of the notice of opposition to the claim of exemption [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.105(e), 1005(b); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(a)(3)].

NOTE:

Service is deemed made when the notice of the hearing and a copy of the notice of opposition to the claim of exemption are deposited in the mail, postage prepaid, addressed to the judgment debtor at the address stated in the claim of exemption and, if service on the judgment debtor's attorney was requested in the claim of exemption, to the attorney at the address stated in the claim [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e)].

e. File proof of service with the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e)].

NOTE:

If the levying officer does not receive a notice of opposition to the claim of exemption within the 10-day period after the date of mailing of the notice of claim of exemption and a notice of the hearing not later than 10 days after the filing of the notice of opposition to the claim of exemption, the levying officer will serve on the employer a notice terminating the earnings withholding order or a modified earnings withholding order if only a portion of the earnings are claimed to be exempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(f)].

3. Counsel for the prevailing party normally prepares, serves, and files a notice of the court's order. For a discussion of what may be included in the order, see § 276.23[6].

NOTE:

If the court, after hearing, orders that the earnings withholding order be terminated or modified [see § 276.135], the clerk will promptly transmit a certified copy of the order to the levying officer, who will promptly serve on the judgment debtor's employer either a copy of the modified earnings withholding order or a notice that the earnings withholding order has been terminated [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(g); see § 276.137]. For the requirement that notice of the court's order be given by prevailing counsel, see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 664.5 and 1019.5(a). For discussion and a form of notice of the court's order, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

4. Appeal from adverse ruling.

NOTE:

Orders under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105 may be appealed by the usual procedure for appeals from the court that made the order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(j)]. An appeal by a judgment creditor from an order modifying or terminating an earnings withholding order does not stay the order from which the appeal is taken and, notwithstanding the appeal, until such time as the order modifying or terminating the earnings withholding order is set aside or modified, the order allowing the claim of exemption in whole or in part will be given the same effect as if the appeal had not been taken [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(j)].

5. Exempt property other than judgment debtor's earnings or wages.

For the procedure for claiming an exemption from levy on money, other than wages or salary, owed a judgment debtor by a public entity, see D(6), below. Other forms and procedures for claiming an exemption of property other than the judgment debtor's earnings or wages are set forth in Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments, § 254.40 et seq.

[4] Levy on Money Other Than Wages or Salary Owed Judgment Debtor by Public Entity

NOTE:

If money, other than wages or salary (see Code Civ. Proc. § 708.720(b)), is owing and unpaid to the judgment debtor by a public entity, the judgment creditor may file with the public entity an abstract or certified copy of the money judgment, together with an affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) stating that the judgment creditor desires the relief provided by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.710-708.795 [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.730(a)].

1. Prepare Abstract or Copy of Money Judgment for Issuance or Certification by Court Clerk.

NOTE:

An abstract of a judgment requiring the payment of money will, on request, be certified by the clerk of the court where the judgment was entered and must contain the matter specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 674[Code Civ. Proc. § 674]. For a discussion and the Judicial Council mandatory form of abstract of judgment, see Ch. 318, Judgments, § 318.90 et seq. The clerk will also on request certify a copy of the money judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 674]. A fee is charged for these services [see Gov. Code §§ 26833, 26837].

2. Prepare and file a memorandum of credits, accrued interest, and costs.

NOTE:

At the same time the clerk issues an abstract of judgment or certifies a judgment, the attorney for the creditor may also file a memorandum of credits, accrued interest, and costs after judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 685.010-685.090]. For forms of memoranda of credits, accrued interest, and costs after judgment, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees . The information as to credits and accrued interest and costs may also be incorporated in the affidavit (declaration) accompanying the abstract or certified copy of the judgment (see §§ 276.123, 276.124).

3. Prepare affidavit (declaration) for filing with abstract or certified copy of judgment.

NOTE:

The affidavit (declaration) must state the exact amount then required to satisfy the judgment and may state any fact tending to establish the identity of the judgment debtor [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.730(a); see §§ 276.122, 276.123; for further discussion of the need to adequately identify the judgment debtor, see § 276.61[5]].

4. File papers with the appropriate state agency or, in the case of other public entities, with the public entity's auditor or equivalent officer, and pay filing fee [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.740(a), 708.750, 708.785(a) (fee); see discussion in §§ 276.61[6], [7]].

NOTE:

Filing the abstract or certified copy of the judgment and affidavit (declaration) with the appropriate officer creates a lien on the money owing and unpaid by the public entity in an amount equal to that which may properly be applied to the satisfaction of the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.780].

5. Serve notice of the filing on the judgment debtor personally or by mail promptly after the filing [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.730(b)].

NOTE:

The State Controller or the auditor or equivalent financial officer will, after deducting the advances made to the judgment debtor or debts owed the public entity by the judgment debtor, deposit with the court a warrant or check payable to the court in the amount required to satisfy the money judgment as shown by the affidavit (declaration) in full or to the greatest extent [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.740(c), 708.750]. Promptly after deposit with the court by the public entity, the court clerk will cause a notice of the deposit to be served personally or by mail on the judgment debtor [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.770(a)].

6. If the money levied on is exempt from execution, counsel for the judgment debtor within 10 days after service of the notice of deposit prepares and files a claim of exemption and a notice of motion for an order determining the claim of exemption and serves on the judgment creditor a copy of the claim of exemption and of the notice of motion, and a notice of hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.770(b)].

NOTE:

Failure of the judgment debtor to make a claim of exemption within 10 days constitutes a waiver of the exemption [see Code Civ. Proc. § 708.770(f)]. The hearing on the motion must be held not later than 30 days from the date the notice of motion was filed unless continued by the court for good cause [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.770(b)(2), (c)].

7. If the judgment creditor opposes the claim of exemption, his or her counsel, within 10 days from the date the claim of exemption was served, files a notice of opposition (which must be executed under oath and contain all the matters set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 703.560) and serve a copy of it personally or by mail on the judgment debtor [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.770(d)].

NOTE:

Code Civ. Proc. §§ 703.580(a)-(d)* (hearing on claim of exemption), 703.590 (extensions of time), and 703.600 (right of appeal) apply to a claim of exemption made pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 708.770 [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.770(e)]. For a discussion of these provisions and forms for use in claiming an exemption and opposing a claim of exemption, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments, *§ 254.40 et seq.

8. Payment by court of nonexempt money deposited.

NOTE:

After expiration of the period allowed for claiming an exemption if no exemption has been claimed, or after determination of the claim of exemption if an exemption is timely claimed, the court will pay the nonexempt portion of the money deposited to which the judgment creditor is entitled to the judgment creditor and any balance to the judgment debtor, unless some other disposition is required by law [Code Civ.

Proc. § 708.775*].

It appears that in most courts the court clerk will automatically disburse to the judgment creditor or to the judgment creditor's attorney the money deposited by the public entity with the court once the 10-day period for filing a claim of exemption has passed and no claim is filed. Some courts, however, may require that an application for disbursement and order be first secured. Consequently, counsel should check local court rules and practice to ascertain the procedure required.

9. File additional levies, if necessary.

NOTE:

A levy pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.710-708.795 may only garnish money already due and owing to the judgment debtor. Consequently, it may be necessary to file additional levies as additional moneys become due the judgment debtor and unpaid in order to obtain complete satisfaction of a judgment.

CAUTION:
A memorandum must be served and filed with this notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010*]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities* .

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use by any interested party to move for an order equitably dividing a judgment debtor's earnings subject to garnishment and determining the amount to be withheld from those earnings pursuant to an earnings withholding order for support [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(b)]. If the motion is made in a family law proceeding, the Judicial Council form of notice of motion must be used [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1285.10; see Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement].

[3] Equitable Division of Earnings

Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(a) provides that, except as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(b), one half of the judgment debtor's disposable earnings (as defined by 15 U.S.C. § 1672, see also § 276.19[3]), plus any amount withheld from the judgment debtor's earnings pursuant to any earnings assignment order (see Fam. Code § 5200 et seq. (court-ordered child, spousal, or family support)), is exempt from levy under the Wage Garnishment Law if the earnings withholding order is a withholding order for support under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.030.

Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(b) provides that, on motion of any interested party, the court shall make an equitable division of the judgment debtor's earnings that takes into account the needs of all the persons the judgment debtor is required to support and shall effectuate such division by an order determining the amount to be withheld from the judgment debtor's earnings pursuant to the withholding order for support. An order made under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(b), however, may not authorize the withholding of an amount in excess of the amount that may be withheld for support under 15 U.S.C. § 1673 (see also § 276.16[2][b]) [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(c)].

[4] California Law Revision Commission Comment

The California Law Revision Commission has commented on Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052 as follows [15 Cal. Law Rev. Comm. Report 2445-2446 (1980)]:

Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(a) prescribes the exemption applicable to a wage garnishment for the collection of delinquent child or spousal support payments except in cases where the court has made an equitable division pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(b). The judgment debtor's earnings that are subject to the 50 percent exemption under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(a) are "disposable earnings" as defined by 15 U.S.C. § 1672. Unlike federal law, however, Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(a) protects the same amount of earnings regardless of whether the judgment debtor is supporting a present and a former spouse or is more than 12 weeks delinquent. Federal law permits garnishment of 50 percent of the employee's earnings if the employee is supporting a spouse or dependent other than the person who caused the garnishment and 60 percent if the employee is not supporting such additional persons; these percentages are increased to 55 percent and 65 percent, respectively, if the support payments are more than 12 weeks delinquent. See 15 U.S.C. § 1673(b)(2).

Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(a) also makes clear that, in applying the 50 percent exemption, the amount withheld from the judgment debtor's earnings pursuant to any earnings assignment order for support (defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 706.011(b)) is included in computing the 50 percent of the judgment debtor's earnings that may be withheld. For example, if 30 percent of the judgment debtor's earnings are withheld pursuant to an earnings assignment order for support, an additional 20 percent may be withheld pursuant to the earnings withholding order for the collection of delinquent amounts payable for child or spousal support.

Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(b) makes the 50 percent standard provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(a) subject to the power of the court to make an order that more or less of the judgment debtor's earnings be withheld where the earnings withholding order is issued to collect delinquent child or spousal support payments. Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(c) makes clear that the court may not order the withholding of an amount in excess of that permitted by federal law. This maximum amount varies depending on whether the judgment debtor is supporting more than one person or is more than 12 weeks delinquent. The authority of the court to make an equitable division of the judgment debtor's earnings between, for example, the debtor and a former spouse, or between a former spouse and a present family, is based on decisions under a former statute (citing Rankins v. Rankins (1942) 52 Cal. App. 2d 231, 126 P.2d 125).

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use as an order determining the amount to be withheld by the employer from the judgment debtor's earnings pursuant to an earnings withholding order for support [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(b), (c)].

The order may be submitted to the judge for signature following the hearing on the motion [§ 276.120]. If this is done, the courtroom clerk would normally conform the copies, retain the original, and return the conformed copies to counsel. If, instead of ruling on the motion at the hearing, the court takes the matter under submission, the court clerk will notify the parties of the court's order when made.

For the required service by counsel of notice of the court's order, see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 664.5 and 1019.5. For procedure and a form of notice, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

I, _____ [name], declare:

I am an attorney, duly admitted to practice law in California, and am the attorney of record for the _____ [specify party, e.g., plaintiff _____ (name)] in the above-entitled action. In making this declaration, I am acting on behalf of and pursuant to the authority of the _____ [e.g., plaintiff].

As shown by the _____ [abstract or certified copy] of the judgment filed herewith, a judgment was entered in this action by the above-entitled court on _____ [date], in favor of _____ [specify party, e.g., plaintiff _____(name)] against _____ [specify party, e.g., defendant _____ (name)] (hereinafter judgment debtor) in the sum of $_____ together with costs in the sum of $_____.

The exact amount now required to satisfy this judgment is the sum of $_____, all of which is due, owing, and unpaid. [This sum consists of _____ (specify, e.g., the principal amount of the judgment, accrued interest to date, accrued costs, the fee for (issuance of) the _____ (abstract or certified copy) of the judg-ment, and the fee for filing it and this declaration, after deducting all payments made on and credits allowed against the judgment).]

There is money now due, owing, and unpaid by _____ [name of public entity] to _____ [name], the judgment debtor herein, for _____ [specify reason money is owed, showing that money is not owed for wages or salary]. [_____(Set forth any fact or facts tending to identify the judgment debtor as the person to whom the public entity owes money, such as his/her social security number).] The judgment creditor desires to avail himself/herself of the provisions of Sections 708.710-708.795 of the Code of Civil Procedure and requests that the money due, owing, and unpaid by _____ [name of public entity] to the judgment debtor, or enough of it as is required to satisfy the judgment in the above-entitled action, be paid into the above-entitled court.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

Attorney for Judgment

CAUTION:

An abstract or certified copy of the money judgment must be filed with the foregoing declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.730(a)]. These papers must be filed with the appropriate public official under Code Civ. Proc. § 708.740 or 708.750 (see § 276.61[6], [7]). For a form of abstract of judgment, see Ch. 318, Judgments, § 318.90 et seq.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing declaration is for use to request the relief provided by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.710-708.795, that is, the garnishment of money, other than salary or wages, owing and unpaid by a public entity to a judgment debtor. The declaration must state the exact amount then required to satisfy the judgment. The judgment creditor may additionally state in the declaration any fact tending to establish the identity of the judgment debtor [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.730(a)].

For forms for use for the garnishment of the earnings of a public officer or employee, see §§ 276.125 -276.129.

[3] Declaration in Lieu of Affidavit

Although Code Civ. Proc. § 708.730(a) requires the filing of an affidavit, Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5 authorizes the use of a declaration under penalty of perjury as in the above form, in lieu of an affidavit.

[4] Memorandum of Credits

A memorandum of credits, accrued interest, and costs after judgment may be filed with the abstract or certified copy of the judgment and accompanying declaration [see, generally, Code Civ. Proc. §§ 685.010-685.090, 1033.7]. The purpose of the memorandum is to document the additional costs which are incurred after judgment in the collection processes.

Since it is frequently necessary to make repeated levies on public entities to satisfy a judgment in full, it seems to be the practice to serve and file the memorandum when the abstract is issued or the copy of the judgment is certified since the repeated levies cause additional costs for filing and other related expenses. For forms for use in claiming costs, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

[5] Nonliability of Public Officer or Employee When Judgment Debtor Insufficiently Identified

The judgment creditor may state in the declaration any fact or facts tending to establish the identity of the judgment debtor [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.730(a)]. No public officer or employee will be liable for failure to perform any duty imposed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.710-708.795 unless sufficient information is furnished by the abstract or certified copy of the judgment and the affidavit (declaration) which enables the officer, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, to identify the judgment debtor from the information filed by the judgment creditor and from the papers and records on file in the office in which the officer or employee works. The term "office" does not include any branch or subordinate office located in a different city [Code Civ. Proc. § 709.790].

[6] Filing Fee

On the filing of the abstract or certified copy of the judgment and affidavit (declaration), the judgment creditor must pay a fee to the public entity with which the papers are filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 708.785].

[2] Use of Form

This form of application for an earnings withholding order is an illustrative, filled-in reproduction of Judicial Council Form WG-001, adopted by the Judicial Council for mandatory use [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.120; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.30 et seq.].

The form is for use by a judgment creditor to apply for an earnings withholding order [see §§ 276.125, 276.126], other than a withholding order for taxes. The application may be made when a writ of execution has been issued to the county in which the judgment debtor's employer is to be served and 180 days have not elapsed from the date the writ was issued [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.102(a), 706.108(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 699.530(b)]. The form has been filled in to illustrate how the form might be used (1) when the amounts withheld are to be paid to the plaintiff's attorney or to the judgment creditor proceeding without an attorney, (2) the amount to be collected is that specified in the writ of execution, and (3) no previous earnings withholding order has been obtained.

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

Proc. § 706.121(a)*]; (2) the judgment creditor's name and address [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.121(b)]; (3) the court where the judgment was entered and the date it was entered [Code Civ.

Proc. § 706.121(c)]; (4) the date the writ of execution was issued to the county where the earnings withholding order is sought [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.121(d)]; (5) the total amount required to satisfy the order on the date of issuance, which may not exceed the amount required to satisfy the writ of execution, plus the levying officer's statutory fee for service of the order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.121(e)]; (6) the name and address of the employer to whom the order will be directed [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.121(f)]; and (7) the name and address of the person to whom the withheld money is to be paid by the levying officer [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.121(g)].

This Judicial Council form complies with the foregoing requirements, except that it does not include space for filling in the date the writ of execution was issued as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 706.121(d). (No earnings withholding order may be served on an employer after 180 days from the date the writ of execution was issued [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.103(c), 706.108(c); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 699.530(b)].) Nevertheless, the form is deemed to comply with Code Civ. Proc. § 706.121 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.120]. Also, the form does not contain a direction that the judgment creditor's address be set forth as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 706.121(b). However, there appears to be enough room on the blank line in Paragraph 1 to type the address after the judgment creditor's name, and it would appear that the better practice would be to do so.

[4] Execution of Application

The application must be executed (signed) under oath [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.121]. The declaration under penalty of perjury set out in the form complies with this requirement [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

[5] Filing Application

The application is filed with a levying officer in the county to which the writ of execution has been issued [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.102(a)]. Alternatively, the application may be delivered to a registered process server [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.108(a)].

[6] Final Order for Unsatisfied Costs and Interest

After the amount stated as owing in the order is paid and the order is returned as satisfied, the judgment creditor may apply for issuance of a final earnings withholding order for collection only of unsatisfied costs and interest that were not collected under the prior order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.028(a), (b)].

[7] Satisfaction of Judgment

If the judgment is satisfied prior to the termination of the order pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 706.022 (withholding period), the judgment creditor is required to notify the levying officer who promptly terminates the order by serving a notice of termination [see § 276.136] on the employer [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.027].

[2] Use of Form

This form of earnings withholding order is an illustrative reproduction of Judicial Council Form WG-002, adopted by the Judicial Council for mandatory use [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.120; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.30 et seq.]. The second page of the form consists of instructions to the employer.

The form is for use by a levying officer or registered process server to order the withholding of earnings of a judgment debtor other than for support or taxes [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.102]. A separate form for use when the earnings withholding order is for support [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.030(a)] is set out in § 276.126.

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Issuance of Order

If a writ of execution has been issued to the county where the judgment debtor's employer is to be served and 180 days from the date the writ was issued have not expired, the levying officer in such county is required to issue promptly an earnings withholding order on the filing with him or her of an application by the judgment creditor [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.102(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 699.530(b)].

A registered process server may also issue an earnings withholding order if the judgment creditor delivers the application for issuance of an earnings withholding order to him or her within the same 180-day time frame [Code Civ.

Proc. § 706.108(a)].

[4] Contents of Order

The contents of the earnings withholding order, which are prescribed by statute [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.125], are as follows:

(1) The judgment debtor's (employee's) name, address, and, if known, social security number;

(2) The name and address of the employer to whom the order is directed;

(3) The court where the judgment was entered, the date it was entered, and the name of the judgment creditor;

(4) The date the writ of execution was issued;

(5) The total amount required to satisfy the order on the date of issuance, which may not exceed the amount required to satisfy the writ of execution, plus the levying officer's statutory fee for service of the order and an $10 processing fee for each disbursement of money collected under the writ of execution [see Gov. Code §§ 26746, 26750];

(6) A description of the withholding period and an order to withhold from the judgment debtor's earnings for each pay period the amount required to be withheld under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.050 (exempt earnings under federal law) or the amount specified in the order subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 706.024 (satisfaction of order), as the case may be, for the pay periods ending during the withholding period;

(7) An order to the employer to pay over to the levying officer at a specified address the amount required to be withheld and paid over pursuant to the order in the manner and within the times provided by law;

(8) An order that the employer fill out the "employer's return" [§ 276.128] and return it by first-class mail, postage prepaid, to the levying officer at a specified address within 15 days after service of the earnings withholding order;

(9) An order that the employer deliver to the judgment debtor (employee) a copy of the earnings withholding order and the "notice to employee of earnings withholding order" (that is, Employee Instructions; see § 276.127) within 10 days after service of the earnings withholding order, unless the judgment debtor (employee) is no longer employed by the employer and the employer does not owe the employee any earnings, in which case the employer is not required to make such delivery; and

(10) The levying officer's name and address.

The Judicial Council form set out above complies with these requirements, except that it does not include space for filling in the date the writ of execution was issued, as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 706.125(d). Nevertheless, the form is deemed to comply with Code Civ. Proc. § 706.125 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.120].

[5] Instructions to Employer

In addition to the matters contained in the order, the Judicial Council has prepared instructions to the employer [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.127(a)], which are required to be delivered to the employer when the earnings withholding order is served [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.103(b)], and appear on the reverse side of the order. The instructions set out the employer's duties [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.127(b)]. They also include information and a chart on the computation of the permissible amounts to be withheld and warnings on the effect of what amounts to a violation of the Wage Garnishment Law set out in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.010-706.154. For discussion of these duties, computations, and violations, see § 276.10 et seq.

The amount to be withheld ties into the federal minimum wage [see 15 U.S.C. § 1673(a)].

[6] Papers Served

The following papers are required to be served on the designated employer [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.103(a)]:

(1) The original and one copy of the earnings withholding order;

(2) The form for the employer's return [§ 276.128]; and

(3) The notice to employee [§ 276.127] of the earnings withholding order.

[7] Person to Be Served

An earnings withholding order is served on the employer by delivery of the order to any of the following: (1) the managing agent or person in charge, at the time of service, of the branch or office where the employee works or the office from which the employee is paid (in the case of a state employee, the office from which the employee is paid does not include the State Controller's office unless the employee works directly for that office); or (2) any person to whom a copy of the summons and complaint may be delivered to make service on the employer under Code Civ. Proc. § 416.10 et seq. (persons on whom summons may be served) [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.101(a)].

[8] Method of Service

[a] In General

Service of an earnings withholding order is made by personal delivery [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 415.10, 415.20] or by registered or certified mail, postage prepaid, with return receipt requested [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.101(b)]. Except as provided in Code Civ. Proc. 706.101(b), (c), service of any notice or document may be made by first-class mail, postage prepaid. If service is made on the employer after the employer's return has been received by the levying officer, the service must be made by first-class mail, postage prepaid, on the person designated in the employer's return to receive notices and at the address indicated in the employer's return, whether or not that address is within the county. This does not preclude service by personal delivery on the employer before the employer's return has been received by the levying officer or on the person designated in the employer's return after its receipt [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.101(d)]. The judgment creditor may request service by personal delivery [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.101(e)].

[b] Service by Registered Process Server

An earnings withholding order also may be served by any person registered as a process server pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 22350-22360[Code Civ. Proc. § 706.108(a)]. A registered process server may serve an earnings withholding order on an employer whether or not the earnings withholding order was issued by a levying officer or by a registered process server. An earnings withholding order may not be served after the expiration of 180 days from the date the writ of execution was issued [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 699.530(b), 706.180(c)].

If the registered process server has issued the earnings withholding order, before serving the earnings withholding order, he or she shall deposit with the levying officer a copy of the writ of execution, the application for issuance of an earning withholding order, and a copy of the earnings withholding order. The registered process server shall also pay the fee provided by Gov. Code § 26750 [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.108(b)].

The fee for services of a registered process server under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.108 must be allowed as a recoverable cost pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5 [Code Civ. Proc. 706.108(f)].

For a discussion of what must be served on the designated employer and filed with the levying officer, see § 276.20[7].

[2] Use of Form

This form is an illustrative reproduction of Judicial Council Form WG-003, which sets out instructions to an employee subject to an earnings withholding order [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.30 et seq.]. The statutes refer to these instructions as the "notice to employee of earnings withholding order" [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.103(a)(3), 706.104(a), 706.122].

The employee instructions are served on the employer by the levying officer with the earnings withholding order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.103(a)(3)]. The same instructions are used whether the order is an earnings withholding order [see § 276.125] or an earnings withholding order for support [see § 276.126].

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Contents of Instructions

The instructions are required to contain a statement that informs the employee in simple terms of the nature of a wage garnishment, the right to an exemption, and the procedure for claiming an exemption [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.122]. Code Civ. Proc. § 706.122 further requires that the instructions contain any other information the Judicial Council determines would be useful to the employee and appropriate for inclusion, including all of the following:

1. The fact that the named employer has been ordered to withhold from the judgment debtor's earnings the amounts required to be withheld under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.050 (amount of earnings exempt from levy of earnings withholding order), or such other amounts as are specified in the earnings withholding order, and to pay these amounts over to the levying officer for transmittal to the person specified in the order in payment of the judgment described in the order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.122(a)];

2. The manner of computing the amounts required to be withheld pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 706.050 [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.122(b)];

3. The fact that the judgment debtor may be able to keep more or all of his or her earnings if he or she proves that the additional earnings are necessary for his or her support or the support of his or her family supported in whole or in part by him or her [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.122(c)];

4. If the judgment debtor wishes a court hearing to prove that amounts should not be withheld from the judgment debtor's earnings because they are necessary for support as described in the foregoing paragraph, the judgment debtor shall file with the levying officer an original and one copy of the "judgment debtor's claim of exemption" [see § 276.129] and an original and one copy of the "judgment debtor's financial statement" [see § 276.130]. The notice is also required to advise the judgment debtor that the claim of exemption form and the financial statement form may be obtained without charge at the office of the levying officer [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.122(d)].

This Judicial Council form complies with these requirements.

[2] Use of Form

This form of employer's return is an illustrative, filled-in reproduction of Judicial Council Form WG-005, adopted by the Judicial Council for mandatory use [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.120; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.30 et seq.].

The form is served on the employer with the earnings withholding order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.103(a)(2)]. Except as noted below, it is to be completed by the employer and mailed by first-class mail, postage prepaid, to the levying officer within 15 days from the date of service [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.104(b)]. Blanks have been filled in to illustrate how the form might be used in conjunction with the application for an earnings withholding order and the earnings withholding order in §§ 276.124 and 276.125 when the employer has not received any other earnings withholding order or wage assignment for the same employee.

The form must be executed under oath or, as indicated in the foregoing Judicial Council form, by a declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.126(a), 2015.5].

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Contents of Form

The employer's return is required to state the following information [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.126(a)]:

(1) The name and address of the levying officer to whom the form is to be returned;

(2) A direction that the form be mailed to the levying officer by first-class, postage-prepaid mail no later than 15 days after the date of service of the earnings withholding order; and

(3) The name, address, and if known, social security number of the judgment debtor.

In addition, the form must require the employer to supply the following information [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.126(b)]:

(1) The date the order was served on the employer;

(2) Whether the judgment debtor is employed by the employer or whether the employer otherwise owes earnings to the employee;

(3) If the judgment debtor is employed by the employer or the employer otherwise owes earnings to the employee, the amount of the employee's earnings for the last pay period and the length of this pay period;

(4) Whether the employer was required on the date of service to comply with an earlier order, and, if so, the name of the judgment creditor who secured the earlier order, the levying officer who served the earlier order, the date it was served, the court case number, the total amount to be withheld excluding the levying officer assessment (which determines when the order will expire), and which order has priority;

(5) Whether the employer was required, on the date of service, to comply with a wage assignment for support and, if so, the court that issued the order, the date it was issued, and any other information the Judicial Council determines is needed to identify the order; and

(6) The name and address of the person to whom notices to the employer are to be sent.

This Judicial Council form complies with the foregoing requirements, except for (1) the inclusion of information in the return regarding a judgment debtor who is no longer employed but to whom the employer owes earnings, and (2) the name of the judgment creditor who received the earlier order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.126(b)(2)-(4)]. Nevertheless, the form is deemed to comply with Code Civ. Proc. § 706.126 [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 681.030(b), 706.120].

[4] Procedure if Order Is Ineffective

If the earnings withholding order is ineffective, the employer is required to state in the employer's return that the order will not be complied with for this reason and return the order to the levying officer with the employer's return [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.104(b)].

[2] Use of Form

This form of claim of exemption is an illustrative, filled-in reproduction of Judicial Council Form WG-006, adopted by the Judicial Council for mandatory use [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.120; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.30 et seq.]. The levying officer is required to have copies of the form available at his or her office for distribution without charge to a person who desires to make a claim of exemption under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051 [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.129].

The form is for use by an employee to claim that his or her otherwise nonexempt earnings [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.050] which his or her employer intends to withhold pursuant to an earnings withholding order are exempt from garnishment on the ground that they are necessary for the support of the employee or the employee's family [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.051(b), 706.105; see also §§ 276.22, 276.23]. Blanks have been filled in to illustrate how the form might be used by a judgment debtor claiming that all of his or her earnings are necessary for support.

For the procedure for securing a court order determining the amount to be withheld from a judgment debtor's earnings pursuant to a withholding order for support when a motion for equitable division of earnings pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 706.052(b) is made, see §§ 276.120, 276.121, and see discussion in § 276.21.

[3] When Claim May Be Made

The claim may be made if no prior hearing has been held with respect to the earnings withholding order or there has been a material change in circumstances since the time of the last prior hearing on the earnings withholding order [Code

Civ. Proc. § 706.105(a)].

[4] How Claim of Exemption Is Made

A claim of exemption is made by filing with the levying officer an original and one copy of (1) the claim of exemption and (2) the judgment debtor's financial statement [see § 276.130] [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(b)].

[5] Contents and Execution of Claim

The claim of exemption is required (1) to indicate how much the judgment debtor believes should be withheld from the judgment debtor's earnings each pay period by the employer pursuant to the earnings withholding order and (2) to state the judgment debtor's present mailing address [*Code Civ. [3] Content of Notice

The notice is required to state that a claim of exemption has been filed and that the earnings withholding order will be terminated, or modified to reflect the amount of earnings claimed to be exempt in the claim of exemption, unless the judgment creditor, within 10 days after the date the notice of claim of exemption is mailed, files with the levying officer a notice of opposition [see § 276.132] to the claim of exemption [*Code Civ. The form also includes instructions to the judgment creditor on the procedure to follow to oppose the claim of exemption.

[4] Hearing to Oppose Claim

If a judgment creditor opposes the claim of exemption, he or she may contact the clerk of the court to set a date, time, and place for a hearing on the objection. The date of the hearing must be not more than 30 days after the date the judgment creditor files his or her notices of opposition and hearing with the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e)]. The form is for use by the judgment creditor to give notice of his or her opposition to the judgment debtor's claim of exemption made pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051(b) [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(d)]. Blanks have been filled in to illustrate how the form may be used to oppose the claim of exemption set out in § 276.129.

[3] Contents of Form

The notice of opposition is required to include the following: (1) the judgment debtor's name, last known address, and if known, social security number; (2) the judgment creditor's name and address; (3) the date the notice of claim of exemption [§ 276.131] was mailed; (4) the amount of the judgment debtor's claim of exemption which the judgment creditor claims is not exempt; and (5) the factual and legal grounds for the judgment creditor's opposition to the claim of exemption [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.128].

The notice is required to be executed under oath or by declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.128

, 2015.5].

This Judicial Council form complies with the foregoing requirements.

[4] Time for Filing Notice

The notice of opposition to the claim of exemption is required to be filed with the levying officer within 10 days after the date the notice of claim of exemption was mailed [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(d)].

[5] Waiver of Opposition

Failure to comply with the statutory time limits may result in a waiver of the judgment creditor's right to oppose the claim of exemption [see Westervelt v. Robertson (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 1, 8-10 , 176 Cal. Rptr. 94] .

[6] Procedure if No Notice of Opposition Filed

If the levying officer does not receive a notice of opposition to the claim of exemption within the 10-day period after the date the claim of exemption was mailed and a notice of the hearing [§ 276.134] not later than 10 days after the notice of opposition to the claim of exemption was filed, the levying officer will serve on the employer either (1) a notice that the earnings withholding order has been terminated if all of the judgment debtor's earnings were claimed to be exempt or (2) a modified earnings withholding order which reflects the amount of earnings claimed to be exempt in the claim of exemption if only a portion of the judgment debtor's earnings was claimed to be exempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(f); see § 276.136].

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that, on _____ [date], at _____ [time], or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] this court, located at _____ [street address], _____ [city], _____ [specify party, e.g., plaintiff] will move the court for an order determining the claim of exemption filed by the _____ [judgment debtor, e.g., defendant] herein with the levying officer.

The motion will be made on the ground that _____ [specify, e.g., the judgment entered herein is for common necessaries of life, as that term is used in the Wage Garnishment Law, and that therefore, the exemption claimed is not available].

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, on the memorandum of points and authorities served and filed herewith, on the records and file herein, on the claim of exemption and the notice of opposition to the claim of exemption which will be filed herein by the levying officer, and on such oral and documentary evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion.
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name name]

[2] Use of Form

This form of notice of motion is for use by the judgment creditor to secure a hearing to determine the claim of exemption [see § 276.129] made pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051(b) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e)].

[3] Supporting Memorandum

A supporting memorandum must accompany notices of motion in law and motion proceedings as defined in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(a) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]. Although the definition in Rule 3.1103(a) does not extend to the motion noticed in the form, it is better practice to support the motion. For further discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

[4] Right to Hearing on Claim of Exemption

If the judgment creditor files with the levying officer a notice of opposition to the judgment debtor's claim of exemption [see § 276.132] within 10 days after the levying officer mailed the notice of filing of claim of exemption [see § 276.131] to the judgment creditor, the judgment creditor is entitled to a hearing on the claim [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e)]. The procedure for securing a hearing is set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e), see discussion in § 276.23[4].

[5] Duplication of Notice

Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e), discussed in § 276.23[4], apparently contemplates both the filing of a notice of motion and the service of a notice of the hearing [see § 276.134], with the subsequent filing of a proof of service on the judgment debtor and his or her attorney, if any. The procedure seems duplicative. The double notice may be justified, however, for the following reasons: (1) the levying officer is required to be given written notice of the hearing so that he or she can file the necessary papers with the court before the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(e)], and the notice of motion would be neither given to, nor served on, the levying officer; (2) the requirement that the notice of hearing be served on the judgment debtor as well as on his or her attorney if so requested in the claim of exemption assures that the judgment debtor will have notice of the hearing; notices of motion are normally served on parties only when they have no attorney of record [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015].

Proc. § 706.105(g)*]. Blanks have been filled in to illustrate how the form may be used when the claim of exemption is sustained. [3] Modification or Termination of Earnings Withholding Order

If, after hearing, the court orders that the earnings withholding order be modified or terminated, the clerk promptly transmits a certified copy of the order to the levying officer. The levying officer then promptly serves on the judgment debtor's employer (1) a copy of the modified earnings withholding order or (2) a notice that the earnings withholding order has been terminated [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(g); see § 276.136].

[4] Liability for Amounts Withheld

If the court determines that any amount withheld pursuant to the earnings withholding order shall be paid to the judgment debtor, the court will make an order directing the person who holds the amount to pay it promptly to the judgment debtor [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(g)].

When the date of termination of an earnings withholding order is made retroactive, the employer may have already withheld and paid over money pursuant to the earnings withholding order prior to receipt of the notice of termination. Code Civ. Proc. § 706.022(c) makes clear that the employer is not liable to the debtor for these amounts. In such event, the judgment debtor may recover the amounts only from the levying officer if he or she still has them or, if they have been paid over to the judgment creditor, from the judgment creditor [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105(i)].

The form is for use by a taxpayer to claim that wages otherwise subject to garnishment for a state tax liability (defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 706.070(b)) are exempt under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051(b) (amount necessary for support), discussed in § 276.22, and in the comments to § 276.129. The form is for use where the state has applied to a court for issuance of a withholding order for taxes to garnish the taxpayer's earnings in an amount in excess of that allowed by 15 U.S.C. § 1673(a) (discussed in § 276.16[2]) in payment of a tax liability [*see Code Civ. [3] "State Tax Liability" Defined

A withholding order for taxes is issued to collect a state tax liability, which is defined as the amount for which the state has a tax lien as defined in Gov. Code § 7162, excluding a state tax lien created pursuant to the Fish and Game Code [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.070(b)].

Gov. Code § 7162 provides that a state tax lien is one created pursuant to Fish & Game Code § 8048; Pub. Res. Code § 3423 (oil and gas production taxes and assessments) or 3772 (charges and penalties imposed on development of geothermal resources); Rev. & Tax. Ins. Code § 1703 (delinquent payments or employee and employer contributions to unemployment and disability insurance funds, taxes, and penalties).

[4] Applicability of Wage Garnishment Law

The provisions of the Wage Garnishment Law (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.010-706.154) govern the procedures and proceedings except as otherwise provided in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 706.070-706.084 (specifically dealing with withholding orders for taxes) [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.073].

[5] Conditions for Issuance of Withholding Orders for Taxes

Withholding orders for taxes may be issued only if (1) the existence of the state tax liability appears on the face of the taxpayer's return (including a case in which the tax liability is disclosed from the taxpayer's return after errors in mathematical computation in the return have been corrected), or (2) the state tax liability has been assessed or determined and the taxpayer had notice of the proposed assessment or determination and had available an opportunity to have the proposed assessment or determination reviewed by appropriate administrative procedures [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.072(b)]. A withholding order for taxes may be issued whether or not the state tax liability has been reduced to judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.072(d)].

[6] Priority of Earnings Withholding Orders and Pay Periods

Specific priorities apply to withholding orders for taxes (Code Civ. Proc. § 706.077) and special provisions regulate the pay periods from which wages may be withheld. For example, wages are not to be withheld from any pay period which ends prior to the 10th day after the service of the order [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.078].

[7] Manners in Which Withholding Orders for Taxes May Be Issued

[a] Issuance by State

There are two ways in which a withholding order for taxes may be issued. The first is issuance of the withholding order by the state itself [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.074(a)]. An order issued by the state must specify the total amount required to be withheld pursuant to the order (unpaid tax liability including any penalties, accrued interest, and costs) [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.074(a)]. Unless a lesser amount is specified in the order, the amount to be withheld by the employer is the amount required to be withheld under 15 U.S.C. § 1673(a) and is not subject to the exception provided in 15 U.S.C. § 1673(b) [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.074(b); see § 276.16[2]]. The specific state agency seeking to collect a state tax liability is in such case the levying officer [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.073].

[b] Issuance by Court

The second way is for the state, when it wishes to garnish an amount greater than that allowed under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.074(b), to apply for a court order pursuant to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 706.076. This section provides that pursuant to its provisions the court may issue a withholding order for taxes requiring the employer to withhold an amount in excess of that which may be required to be withheld pursuant to an order issued under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.074 [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.076(a)]. This form is for use in such a proceeding, when the taxpayer seeks to have a portion or all of the excess amount declared exempt from garnishment.

The application for the withholding order, which must include a statement under oath that the state has served on the taxpayer a copy of the application and a notice informing the taxpayer of the purpose of the application and the taxpayer's right to appear at the court hearing on the application, is filed in a court of record (i.e., a municipal or superior court (Cal. Const., art. I, § 6)) in the county where the taxpayer was last known to reside [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.076(b), (c)]. On the filing of the application, the court will immediately set the matter for hearing and the court clerk will at least 10 days before the day set for the hearing send a notice of the time and place of hearing by first-class mail, postage prepaid, to the state and the taxpayer [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.076(d)]. After hearing, the court will issue a withholding order for taxes which will require the taxpayer's employer to withhold and pay over all earnings of the taxpayer other than that amount which the taxpayer proves is exempt under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051(b), but in no event may the amount to be withheld be less than that permitted to be withheld under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.050 (discussed in § 276.16[5]) [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.076(e)].

If the state intends to apply for such an order and has determined that collection will be jeopardized if a temporary holding order is not issued, it may issue a temporary holding order which expires 15 days after service on the employer unless extended by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.076(f)].

Chapter 277 GAS AND ELECTRICITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Gas

23-277 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 277.10

§ 277.10 General Duty of Care

Gas is an inherently and highly dangerous commodity and therefore a high degree of care is required in handling it [Ambriz v. Petrolane Ltd. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 470, 477, 319 P.2d 1] . This rule has been applied to natural gas [Lewis v. Bjornestad (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 409, 412, 244 P.2d 497 ; see Ambriz v. Petrolane Ltd. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 470, 477, 319 P.2d 1] , butane gas [Ambriz v. Petrolane Ltd. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 470, 477, 319 P.2d 1 ; Signorelli v. Potter (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 541, 543, 275 P.2d 449] and gas heaters that, if defective, emit carbon monoxide [Dow v. Holly Mfg. Co. (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 720, 727-728, 321 P.2d 736] .

Liability for carelessly handling dangerous instrumentalities arises from failure to use due care; such failure arises when the circumstances show that the actor had reason to know that his or her act was likely to produce injury to any person in the lawful pursuit of his or her business and exercising reasonable care. When human life is at stake, the rule of due care and diligence requires that, without regard to difficulties or expense, every precaution must be taken reasonably to assure the safety and security of any person lawfully coming into the immediate proximity of the dangerous agency or device which is a peril to others. One who causes the use of a dangerous instrument in a negligent manner or under such circumstances that he or she has reason to know that it is likely to produce injury is responsible for the natural and probable consequences of his or her act to any person not at fault [Hall v. Macco Corp. (1961) 198 Cal. App. 2d 415, 422, 18 Cal. Rptr. 273] .

§ 277.11 Gas Company's Duty Regarding Customer's Pipes

As a general rule, a gas company has no duty to inspect a customer's pipes once service has been established, and is not liable for injuries caused by a gas leak from defective house pipes, absent some notice of the leak [see Sawyer v. Southern California Gas Co. (1929) 206 Cal. 366, 372, 206 Cal. 366, 372, 274 P. 544] . The company has sufficient notice of a leak for purposes of liability if it has inspected inside gas valves in previous years and either found leaks or, as an expert in the propensities of gas, should have known that the valves were inadequate to prevent leaks [see Ambriz v. Petrolane Ltd. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 470, 476, 480, 319 P.2d 1] . In addition, if a gas company is in possession of facts that would suggest to a person of ordinary care and prudence that the pipes in the building are leaking or are otherwise unsafe for transporting gas, the company is under a duty to make the same inspection or investigation as a person of ordinary care and prudence, similarly situated and handling such dangerous material, would make to ascertain the safety of the pipes, before the company furnishes or continues to furnish gas through them [Ambriz v. Petrolane Ltd. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 470, 478, 319 P.2d 1] .

A gas company has an affirmative duty to make inquiry or investigation to satisfy itself that all openings in the pipes inside the customer's building are closed before it turns on the gas [Sawyer v. Southern Cal. Gas. Co. (1929) 206 Cal. 366, 372, 274 P. 544] . Therefore, the company may be liable when it either directs its employees to turn on a gas meter or authorizes the person applying for gas to turn it on and an explosion occurs because of an escape of gas through a house pipe connected with the meter that was uncapped or severed at the time the meter was turned on [Sawyer v. Southern Cal. Gas. Co. (1929) 206 Cal. 366, 372, 274 P. 544] .

In addition, it has been held that a gas supplier has a duty to check all lines leading from a tank to the inside of the dwelling for leaks, either by visual inspection of lines and pipes inside the house or by use of a pressure gauge at the tank to determine if there are any leaks in the pipe, when the supplier first delivers gas to premises for either a new or existing hookup [Mendoza v. Easton Gas Co. (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 781, 787, 243 Cal. Rptr. 136] . When gas is delivered on a seasonal basis, delivery of gas at the beginning of new season is the "first delivery" imposing on supplier this duty to check for gas leaks inside the dwelling [Mendoza v. Easton Gas Co. (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 781, 788, 243 Cal. Rptr. 136] .

§ 277.12 Proximate Cause

A defendant cannot be held liable for a fire when it cannot be proved that the defendant's negligence with regard to a gas pipe proximately caused the fire [Union Inv. Co. v. San Francisco Gas & Elec. Co. (1914) 168 Cal. 58, 62-63, 141 P. 807] .

When the defendant was negligent in allowing a large amount of gas to leak and in not ascertaining what happened to it, the intervening negligence of the decedent's employer is not a superseding cause which relieves the liability of the gas company if one of the following circumstances exists: (1) the original actor at the time of his or her negligent conduct should have realized the a third person might act negligently; (2) a reasonable person knowing the situation existing when the act of the third person was done would not regard it as highly extraordinary that the third person so acted; or (3) the intervening act is a normal response to a situation created by the actor's conduct and the manner in which it is done is not extraordinarily negligent [Ewart v. Southern Cal. Gas Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 163, 171, 46 Cal. Rptr. 631] .

Nor will a gas company be held liable for a plaintiff's respiratory injuries caused by an alleged methane gas leak when the defendant provides competent declaratory evidence showing that methane gas could not have caused or exacerbated the ailments from which plaintiff suffered and the declaration of plaintiff's expert is insufficient to create a triable issue of fact as to probable cause [Ochoa v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 1480, 1485, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232 (plaintiff's expert's declaration stated that leak of some unspecified gas probably aggravated plaintiff's respiratory problems because expert did not know of any more medically probable cause)].

[1] General Rule

The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur has often been raised in gas cases. Its application requires the following three factual conditions [Reynolds v. Natural Gas Equip., Inc. (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 724, 731, 7 Cal. Rptr. 879] :

- The accident must be of a kind that ordinarily does not occur in the absence of someone's negligence;
- It must be caused by an agency or instrumentality within the exclusive control of the defendant; and
- It must not have been due to any voluntary action or contribution on the part of the plaintiff.

The exclusive control requirement is met if, after the defendant relinquished control of the instrumentality, it has not been changed or mishandled [Reynolds v. Natural Gas Equip., Inc. (1942) 184 Cal. App. 2d 724, 732-734, 7 Cal. Rptr. 879] .

[2] Situations Where Applicable

Res ipsa loquitur has been applied to the following situations:

- An explosion caused by gas that leaked into a manhole when the defendant's pipeline was adjacent [Chutuk v. Southern Counties Gas Co. (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 372, 375-378, 132 P.2d 193] .
- An explosion in a burner that had recently been converted to gas by the defendant [Reynolds v. Natural Gas Equip., Inc. (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 724, 731-736, 7 Cal. Rptr. 879] .
- A death by asphyxiation when the heater was maintained by the landlord defendant [Black v. Partridge (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 639, 645-647, 252 P.2d 760] .

- An explosion caused by gas that leaked from an exposed capped service pipe owned by the defendant [Chutuk v. Southern Cal. Gas Co. (1933) 218 Cal. 395, 398-400, 23 P.2d 285] .

- A death by asphyxiation when the defendant gas company had recently changed the burner in the furnace [Roy v. Smith (1933) 134 Cal. App. 240, 243-245, 25 P.2d 251] .

- An explosion in a pit containing gas pipes and maintained by the defendant gas company [Smith v. Southern Counties Gas Co. (1928) 89 Cal. App. 81, 85, 264 P. 532] .

- An explosion and fire that occurred when the defendant's employee was attempting to repair the gas pipes [Willard v. Valley Gas & Fuel Co. (1919) 180 Cal. 561, 563-565, 182 P. 32 ; Willard v. Valley Gas & Fuel Co. (1915) 171 Cal. 9, 13-14, 151 P. 286] .

[3] Situations Where Not Applicable

Res ipsa loquitur was not applicable in the following situations:

- The defendant had installed the gas equipment two years before the explosion, and since the installation, it had been in the exclusive control of another [Brooks v. Parkhill-Wade Inc. (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d 819, 821-822, 266 P.2d 128] .

- The gas that caused the explosion could have escaped from another entity's pipes as well as the defendant's pipes and the defendant's pipes were found to be gastight [Gerhart v. Southern Cal. Gas Co. (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 425, 431-436, 132 P.2d 874] .

- No proof existed that the fire was started by defendant's broken pipe since the pipe could have been broken by the fire [Union Inv. Co. v. San Francisco Gas & Elec. Co. (1914) 168 Cal. 58, 62, 141 P. 807] .

- There was no proof that the gas that caused the injury came from defendant's refinery [Brocato v. Standard Oil Co. (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 749, 756-759, 331 P.2d 111] .

§ 277.30 Standard of Care

The standard of care for one maintaining wires carrying electricity is to exercise the care that a person of ordinary prudence would exercise under the circumstances. Among the circumstances are the well-known dangerous character of electricity and the inherent risk of injury to persons or property if it escapes. Hence, the care used must be commensurate with and proportionate to that danger [Dunn v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 265, 273, 272 P.2d 745 ; *Polk v. PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Electricity

23-277 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 277.31

§ 277.31 General Duties

[1] Duty to Insulate

Wires carrying electricity must be carefully and properly insulated by those maintaining them at all places where there is a reasonable probability of injury to persons or property there from [Dunn v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 265, 273, 272 P.2d 745 ; Polk v. City of Los Angeles (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 519, 525, 159 P.2d 931] . Uninsulated wires must be located so as to be comparatively harmless [McCormick v. Great W. Power Co. (1932) 214 Cal. 658, 663, 8 P.2d 145 ; Scally v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 806, 815-816, 100 Cal. Rptr. 501] . However, even one who maintains so dangerous an instrumentality as a high power line need not anticipate its peril every possible fortuitous circumstance under which someone may make contact with the wires causing injury; care, commensurate with and proportionate to reasonably foreseeable consequences, not insurance against every possible accident, is the measure of liability [Perrine v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 442, 449, 9 Cal. Rptr. 45] .

[2] Duty to Inspect

An electric company has the duty to reasonably and promptly inspect the wires and appliances and to be diligent therein. They must keep the insulation safe by such inspection [Polk v. City of Los Angeles (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 519, 525-528, 159 P.2d 931] . The electric company also has the duty to inspect its rights of way over which the wires run to make sure they are safe and clear from dangerous conditions [Irelan-Yuba Gold Quartz Mining Co. v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 557, 565-567, 116 P.2d 611 ; Roberts v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1929) 102 Cal. App. 422, 431-432, 283 P. 353 ; see Scally v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 806, 817-818, 100 Cal. Rptr. 501 (no duty to denude land beneath wires to prevent fires)].

[3] Duty to Maintain Streetlights

An electric company owes no duty to the public to maintain its streetlights and keep them operable. Consequently, the company is not liable to persons injured in a motor vehicle collision caused partly by an inoperative streetlight if (1) the installation of the streetlight was not necessary to obviate a dangerous condition; (2) the failure to maintain an installed streetlight did not create a risk greater than the risk created by the total absence of a streetlight; and (3) the injured party did not in some manner rely on the operation of the streetlight and forgo other protective actions (for example, a pedestrian choosing a particular route home in reliance on available streetlights if the pedestrian would have chosen a different route or a different means of transportation in the absence of lighting). The burden on electric companies of imposing liability (costs and disruption of existing rate schedules) would far exceed the slight benefit to motorists; because vehicles are driven with headlights, a single inoperable streetlight is unlikely to be a substantial factor in causing a collision, and insurance is available to cover damages [White v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 442, 445, 451, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 431] .

[4] Duty With Regard to Poles

An electric company is liable for negligence in placing a power pole where it is a hazard to traffic [George v. City of Los Angeles (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 303, 311-313, 79 P.2d 723 ; Norton v. City of Pomona (1935) 5 Cal. 2d 54, 61, 53 P.2d 952] . Even if a pole did not endanger traffic when it was installed, the company has a continuing duty to prevent it from becoming a traffic hazard under changed conditions and circumstances. However, an electric company is not liable if the county places a stop sign where it is partially obscured by a power pole [Schauf v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 450, 459-461, 52 Cal. Rptr. 518] .

[5] Duty as Possessor of Property

As a possessor of real or personal property, an electric company is liable to persons injured on or by the property if in the management of its property, it has not acted as a reasonable person in view of the probability of injury to others. Although the plaintiff's status as a trespasser, licensee, or invitee may have some bearing on the question of liability, this status is not determinative. If the occupier of land or the owner of personal property such as a street lamp is aware of a concealed condition involving, in the absence of precautions, an unreasonable risk of harm to those coming in contact with it, a failure to warn or to repair the condition constitutes negligence [Mark v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 170, 177, 101 Cal. Rptr. 908, 496 P.2d 1276 ; see Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 119, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] .

§ 277.32 Res Ipsa Loquitur

[1] Three Conditions

The application of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitor requires that the following three conditions be met: (1) the accident must be of a kind that ordinarily does not occur in the absence of someone's negligence; (2) it must be caused by an agency or instrumentality within the exclusive control of the defendant; and (3) it must not have been due to any voluntary action or contribution on the part of the plaintiff [Scally v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 806, 820, 100 Cal. Rptr. 501] .

[2] Rule Applicable

Res ipsa loquitur has been applied in the following situations: (1) fire caused by defendant's independent contractor electricians for which defendant was liable due to control of the premises [Pappas v. Carson (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 261, 268-269, 123 Cal. Rptr. 343] ; (2) an automobile accident caused by a falling electric wire [Taylor v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1943) 57 Cal. App. 2d 222, 224-225, 72 P.2d 769] ; (5) an injury caused by the fall of a portion of a glass globe from an electrolier [Helms v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1937) 21 Cal. App. 2d 711, 713-714, 70 P.2d 247] ; and (6) an injury caused by the fall of power wires [Vertson v. City of Los Angeles (1931) 116 Cal. App. 114, 122-124, 2 P.2d 411] .

[3] Rule Not Applicable

Courts have refused to instruct on the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur in the following situations: (1) where an injury was caused by the fall of a power pole but there was evidence that an external force burned the pole partially through [Rodela v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 708, 712-713, 307 P.2d 436] ; and (2) where a fire occurred under a hot plate installed and turned on by plaintiff [Valentine v. Ratner (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 358, 361-362, 233 P.2d 667] .

§ 277.33 Negligence Per Se

Negligence is presumed if the condition that caused the injury was a violation of statute, public utility rule, or safety order [Evid. Code § 669; Stasulat v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 631, 636, 67 P.2d 678 ; see Williams v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 691, 700-702, 5 Cal. Rptr. 585 (safety orders)]. This rule has been applied to violations involving clearance of wires [Stasulat v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 631, 636, 67 P.2d 678] , the duty to remove an abandoned telephone pole [Langazo v. San Joaquin Light & Power Corp. (1939) 32 Cal. App. 2d 678, 682-684, 90 P.2d 825] , and the failure to raise a wire to the proper height in a reasonable time after the ground under it has been raised [Dunn v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 265, 277, 272 P.2d 745] . An employer is presumed to be liable for erecting a building too close to power lines without asking the electric company to raise them [Bickham v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1953) 120 Cal. App. 2d 815, 820-821, 263 P.2d 32] . However, compliance with the general orders of the Public Utility Commission does not establish due care by an electric company; it merely relieves it of the presumption of negligence [Nevis v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 626, 630, 275 P.2d 761 ; Perrine v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 442, 448, 9 Cal. Rptr. 45] . The duty to obey the rules of the Public Utility Commission is not delegable to an independent contractor, and therefore an electric company is liable for injury caused by its independent contractor's not setting a pole deep enough in the ground [Snyder v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 793, 799-802, 285 P.2d 912] .

A plaintiff is presumed to be negligent if his or her conduct violates a statute such as Penal Code § 385, which prohibits the operation of machinery within six feet of a high voltage line. This presumption is rebuttable and may be overcome by evidence of justification or excuse [Kingery v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 625, 638, 12 Cal. Rptr. 173 , quoting Alarid v. Vanier (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 617, 621, 327 P.2d 897] . Nonnegligent ignorance of the facts that bring such a statute into operation will support a finding that the violation is civilly excusable [Nevis v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 626, 633, 275 P.2d 761] .

A plaintiff must establish that the negligence of the defendant was the proximate cause of the injury to the plaintiff [Polk v. City of Los Angeles (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 519, 543, 159 P.2d 931] . Proximate cause is not established if the defendant's sagging wires were moved from their place by an intervening agent [Stasulat v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 631, 636-638, 67 P.2d 678] , if the defendant's wire was only touched by the plaintiff swinging a long pole out from a building being constructed [Sweatman v. Los Angeles Gas & Elec. Corp. (1929) 101 Cal. App. 318, 326-327, 281 P. 677] , or if the defendant's down wires were moved and concealed by a third party [Polloni v. Ryland (1915) 28 Cal. App. 51, 53-56, 151 P. 296] . However, the fact that the electricity that caused the injury may have arrived at the dangerous instrumentality through another's property and negligence does not necessarily mean that the negligence in maintaining the instrumentality was not the proximate cause of the injury [Satterberg v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1943) 58 Cal. App. 2d 296, 301-302, 136 P.2d 43] . Also, if the injury is caused by the concurrent negligence of two parties, both are liable [*Lacy v. Pacific Gas & Elec. § 277.35 Negligence of Plaintiff

In all actions for negligence resulting in injury to person or property, the contributory negligence of the person injured does not bar recovery, but the damages awarded are diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the person recovering [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 ; see generally Ch. 380, Negligence]. Cases prior to Li involving contributory negligence are, however, instructive insofar as they illustrate what is or is not negligent conduct on the part of the plaintiff. For example, if a person is warned to keep away from a high voltage wire and not to touch it and is fully informed of the danger of doing so, he or she is negligent if he or she voluntarily touches the wire [Rojas v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 258, 259, 233 P.2d 141] . However, whether forgetfulness of a known danger constitutes negligence is a question for the trier of fact even though there is not a sudden disturbance or peril confronting the plaintiff and causing the lapse of memory; to forget is not negligence unless it shows want of ordinary care [Austin v. Riverside Portland Cement Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 225, 237, 282 P.2d 69] .

Therefore, an electric company is not liable to a person injured as a proximate result of such activity unless negligence or some other basis of liability can be established [*see Pierce v. 23-277 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 277.37

§ 277.37 Strict Liability in Tort

A commercial supplier of electricity is subject to strict liability in tort for damages caused by delivery of electricity at dangerously high voltage due to a defective transformer [Stein v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 565, 568-571, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 907 (property damage); Pierce v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 68, 83-84, 212 Cal. Rptr. 283 (personal injuries)]. For strict liability to apply, the electricity must actually be in the "stream of commerce" and must be expected to be at a marketable voltage [Pierce v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 68, 83-84, 212 Cal. Rptr. 283] . Although the court in Pierce declined to draw a "bright line" at any particular point, it held that in most cases the electricity that causes the injury must be delivered to the customer's premises, and to the point where it is metered (although the mere fact that a meter is unplugged does not necessarily exempt the utility company from liability) [Pierce v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 68, 84, 84 n. 9, 212 Cal. Rptr. 283 ; see § 277.156.5].

Strict liability does not apply if a fire is caused by contact between power lines, because the electricity in such a case is neither in the stream of commerce nor in marketable form [United Pac. Ins. Co. v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 700, 707-708, 209 Cal. Rptr. 819] . A utility company also cannot be held strictly liable if lightning causes damage through power lines, because in such cases the utility has not marketed a product, but rather has provided a connecting medium through which a force of nature enters the plaintiff's home and causes injury [see Pierce v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 68, 84 n. 10, 212 Cal. Rptr. 283] .

§ 277.50 Governing Law

The termination of public utility service is governed primarily by provisions in the Public Utilities Code. If the public utility is a privately owned electrical, gas, heat, or water corporation furnishing residential utility service, the utility is regulated by the Public Utilities Commission and limits on termination are set forth in Pub. Util. Code §§ 777-780. The termination of residential light, heat, water, or power utility service furnished by a government owned public utility is governed as follows: municipal corporations are governed by Pub. Util. Code §§ 10009-10011, municipal utility districts are governed by Pub. Util. Code §§ 12822.5-12824, and public utility districts are governed by Pub. Util. Code §§ 16481-16483.

In addition to statutory regulation, restrictions on the termination of public utilities are found in ordinances or regulations adopted by the governing bodies of government-owned public utilities, and in tariffs adopted by the Public Utilities Commission for privately-owned public utilities. Decisions by the Public Utilities Commission are reported in the Public Utilities Reports.

C. Termination of Utility Service

§ 277.51 Utility's Right to Terminate Service

The state has no power to compel the continued operation of a public utility at a loss, when the owner of that utility is willing to and does in fact abandon to the public all its property that has been devoted to the public use. Such an order would be a taking of property without compensation, and therefore would violate U.S. Const. amend. XIV [Lyon & Hoag v. Railroad Comm'n (1920) 183 Cal. 145, 146-147, 190 P. 795] .

The customer's right to continued utility service is conditioned on payment of the charges properly due [see Memphis Light, Gas & Water Div. v. Craft (1978) 436 U.S. 1, 11, 98 S. Ct. 1554, 56 L. Ed. 2d 30] . Therefore, the nonpayment of charges properly due may justify a discontinuance of service [Schultz v. Lakeport (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 377, 383, 54 P.2d 1110, 55 P.2d 485] . The determination of which charges are "properly due," however, is to be made in light of traditional due process standards [Perez v. City of San Bruno (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 875, 890, 168 Cal. Rptr. 114, 616 P.2d 1287] .

C. Termination of Utility Service

23-277 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 277.52

§ 277.52 Due Process Considerations

[1] Government-Owned Utilities

The United States Supreme Court has held that when state law precludes the termination of utility service other than for good cause, there arises a legitimate claim of entitlement within the protection of the Due Process Clause requiring that a constitutionally adequate notice and hearing procedure be afforded prior to termination. The purpose of this protection is to afford reasonable assurance against erroneous or arbitrary withholding of essential services [Memphis Light, Gas & Water Div. v. Craft (1978) 436 U.S. 1, 11-18, 98 S. Ct. 1554, 56 L. Ed. 2d 30 ; see Perez v. City of San Bruno (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 875, 893, 168 Cal. Rptr. 114, 616 P.2d 1287] . Under California law, termination of utility service is not permitted without good cause, and thus federal due process protections apply [see Schultz v. Lakeport (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 377, 381-382, 54 P.2d 1110, 55 P.2d 485] .

The form of notice required in such cases is one which is reasonably calculated to inform customers of the availability of an opportunity to present their objections to their bills. The necessary hearing is one that provides an opportunity for the presentation to a designated employee of a customer's complaint that he or she is being overcharged or charged for services not rendered [Memphis Light, Gas & Water Div. v. Craft (1978) 436 U.S. 1, 14, 16, 98 S. Ct. 1554, 56 L. Ed. 2d 30] .

The California Supreme Court has held that unified billing of all city services accompanied by cessation of water service on failure to pay the unified billing in full may be applied in a manner consistent with due process guarantees under both the federal and state constitutions. In Perez v. City of San Bruno, the Supreme Court upheld an order sustaining the city's demurrer against a resident's complaint which alleged that cessation of water service to enforce payment of a unified, but itemized, municipal services bill was unconstitutional when the only portion of the bill that remained unpaid was that relating to municipal garbage collection [Perez v. City of San Bruno (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 875, 888-893, 168 Cal. Rptr. 114, 616 P.2d 1287] .

[2] Privately-Owned Utilities

A privately-owned public utility is not subject to the due process requirements of U.S. Const, amend. XIV. The United States Supreme Court has held that there is no state action in the case of a privately-owned corporation holding a certificate of public convenience issued by the state public utilities commission empowering it to deliver electricity to city residents, even though the utility is subject to a form of extensive regulation by the state in a way that most business enterprises are not [see Jackson v. Metropolitan Edison Co. (1974) 419 U.S. 345, 358-359, 95 S. Ct. 449, 42 L. Ed. 2d 477] .

As used in the following discussion, the term "corporation" includes a corporation, a company, an association, and a joint stock association [Pub. Util. Code § 204]. The terms "electrical corporation," "gas corporation," and "heat corporation" include every corporation or person owning, controlling, operating, or managing any electric, gas, or heating plant for compensation within California, except when the electricity, gas, or heat is produced on or distributed by the producer through private property alone solely for his or her own use or the use of his or her tenants and not for sale to others [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 218, 222, 224]. The term "water corporation" includes every corporation or person owning, controlling, operating, or managing any water system for compensation in California [Pub. Util. Code § 241].

For the purposes of this discussion, an electrical, gas, heat, or water corporation, or a municipal corporation or a municipal or public utility district furnishing light, heat, water, or power to residential occupants, will hereinafter be referred to as the "utility," unless the discussion requires that the specific nature of the entity be stated. The Public Utilities Commission will hereinafter be referred to as the "Commission."

C. Termination of Utility Service

23-277 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 277.54

§ 277.54 Termination of Residential Service

[1] Notice Before Termination

[a] In General

No utility may terminate residential service for nonpayment of a delinquent account unless the utility first gives notice of the delinquency and impending termination, as provided by statute and discussed in § 277.54[1][b] and [c]. This requirement applies to electrical, gas, heat, or water corporations; municipal corporations and utility districts furnishing light, water, power, or heat; and public utility districts furnishing its inhabitants with light, water, power, heat, or means for the disposition of garbage, sewage, or refuse matter [Pub. Util. Code §§ 779(a), 779.1(g) (electrical, gas, heat, water corporations), 10010(a), 10010.1(f) (municipal corporations), 12823(a), 12823.1(f) (municipal utility districts), 16482(a), 16482.1(f) (public utility districts)].

Any service wrongfully terminated must be restored without charge for the restoration of service, and a notation of the restoration must be mailed to the customer at his or her billing address [Pub. Util. Code §§ 779.1(g), 10010.1(f), 12823.1(f), 16482.1(f)].

Additionally, every electrical, gas, heat, or water corporation must allow every residential customer at least 19 days from the date of mailing its bill for services, postage prepaid, for payment of the charges demanded [Pub. Util. Code § 779.1(a)].

[b] Notice by Mail

The utility may not terminate residential service for nonpayment of a delinquent account unless the utility first gives notice of the delinquency and impending termination, at least 10 days prior to the proposed termination, by means of a notice mailed, postage prepaid, to the customer to whom the service is billed, not earlier than 19 days from the date of mailing the utility's bill for services. The 10-day period does not commence until five days after the mailing of the notice [Pub. Util. Code §§ 779.1(a), 10010.1(a), 12823.1(a), 16482.1(a)].

The notice of termination must include all of the following information, and all written notices must be in a clear and legible format [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 779.1(d), 10010.1(d), 12823.1(d), 16482.1(d)]:

- The name and address of the customer whose account is delinquent;
- The amount of the delinquency;
- The date by which payment or arrangements for payment is required in order to avoid termination;
- The procedure by which the customer may initiate a complaint or request an investigation concerning service or charges, except that, with regard to municipal corporations, municipal utility districts, and public utility districts, if the bill for service contains a description of that procedure, the notice is not required to contain that information;
- The procedure by which the customer may request amortization of the unpaid charges;
- The procedure for the customer to obtain information on the availability of financial assistance, including private, local, state, or federal sources, if applicable; and
- The telephone number of a representative of the corporation who can provided additional information or institute arrangements for payment.

When the notice of delinquency and impending termination is given by an electric, gas, heat, or water corporation, the notice must also contain the telephone number of the Commission to which inquiries by the customer may be directed [Pub. Util. Code § 779.1(d)(8)].

[c] Attempt to Contact Prior to Termination

Utilities are also required to make a reasonable attempt to contact an adult person residing at the premises of the customer by telephone or personal contact at least 24 hours prior to any termination of service [Pub. Util. Code §§ 779.1(b), 10010.1(b), 12823.1(b), 16482.1(b)]. Whenever telephone or personal contact cannot be accomplished, however, a utility is required to give a notice of termination of service at least 48 hours prior to termination of service [Pub. Util. Code §§ 779.1(b), 10010.1(b), 12823.1(b), 16482.1(b)].

In the case of an electric, gas, heat, or water corporation, the corporation must give the 48-hour notice of termination of service either by mail or in person [Pub. Util. Code § 779.1(b), (d)]. The notice must contain all of the items listed in § 277.54[1][b] [see Pub. Util. Code § 779.1(d)].

In the case of a municipal corporation, municipal utility district, or public utility district, the government owned utility must give the 48-hour notice of termination of service either by mail, in person, or by posting in a conspicuous location at the premises [Pub. Util. Code §§ 10010.1(b), 12823.1(b), 16482.1(b)]. The notice must contain all of the items listed in § 277.54[1][b], except those stated in the fourth and fifth paragraphs of that list relating to initiation of complaints or investigations and amortization of unpaid charges [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 10010.1(b), (d), 12823.1(b), (d), 16482.1(b), (d)].

[d] Notification of Third Party for Seniors or Dependent Adults

Every utility is required to make available to its residential customers who are 65 years of age or older, or who are dependent adults (as defined in Welf. & Inst. Code § 15610.23), a third-party notification service, whereby the utility will attempt to notify a person designated by the customer to receive notification when the customer's account is past due and subject to termination. The notification must include information on what is required to prevent termination of service. The residential customer must make a request for third-party notification on a form provided by the utility, and must include the written consent of the designated third party. The third-party notification does not obligate the third party to pay the overdue charges, nor does it prevent or delay termination of service [Pub. Util. Code §§ 779.1(c), 10010.1(c), 12823.1(c), 16482.1(c)].

[e] Notice After Noncompliance With Amortization Agreement

If a residential customer fails to comply with an amortization agreement, the utility must not terminate service without giving notice to the customer at least 48 hours prior to termination of the conditions the customer is required to meet to avoid termination. This notice, however, does not entitle the customer to further investigation by the utility [Pub. Util. Code §§ 779.1(f), 10010.1(e), 12823.1(e), 16482.1(e); see § 277.54[2] regarding when amortization agreements are permitted].

[2] Statutory Limits on Termination

No utility may terminate residential service for nonpayment in any of the following situations [Pub. Util. Code §§ 779(b), 10010(b), 12823(b), 16482(b)]:

- During the pendency of an investigation by the utility of a customer or subscriber dispute or complaint;

- When a customer has been granted an extension of the period for payment of a bill; or

- On certification of a licensed physician and surgeon that to do so will be life threatening to the customer and the customer is financially unable to pay for service within the normal payment period and is willing to enter into an amortization agreement with the corporation under Pub. Util. Code §§ 779(e), 10010(e), 12823(e), 16482(e).

Any customer meeting the medical certification requirements must be permitted to amortize, over a period not to exceed 12 months, the unpaid balance of any bill asserted to be beyond the means of the customer to pay within the normal period for payment [Pub. Util. Code §§ 779(e), 10010(e), 12823(e), 16482(e); see § 277.54[2][c] regarding notice requirements if a customer fails to perform the terms of an amortization agreement].

Additionally, no electrical, gas, heat, telephone, or water corporation may terminate residential service for nonpayment of any delinquent account or other indebtedness owed by the customer or subscriber to any other person or corporation, or when the obligation represented by the delinquent account or other indebtedness was incurred with a person or corporation other than the corporation demanding payment therefor [Pub. Util. Code § 779.2(a)]. However, this restriction does not apply to a telephone corporation operating within service areas that furnishes billing services to the subscribers of a telephone corporation operating between service areas under tariffs on file with the commission providing for the furnishing of those billing services. The commission must require that these tariffs also provide for adequate subscriber notice, review, and appeal procedures prior to any termination of service for nonpayment of a delinquent account [Pub. Util. Code § 779.2(b)]. The restriction also does not apply to any privately owned or publicly owned public utility that collects sanitation or sewerage charges for a public agency pursuant to an agreement under Gov. Code § 54346.2 or Health & Safety Code § 5472.5 [Pub. Util. Code § 779.2(c)].

No utility shall, by reason of delinquency in the payment of its charges, cause cessation of services on any Saturday, Sunday, legal holiday, or at any time during which the business offices of the utility are not open to the public [Pub. Util. Code §§ 780 (no electrical, gas, heat, or water corporation shall "terminate service"), 10011, 12824, 16483].

[3] Review by Utility

When the utility is a municipal corporation or a municipal or public utility district, any residential customer who has initiated a complaint or requested an investigation within five days of receiving the disputed bill, or who has, within 13 days of mailing of the notice of the delinquency and impending termination [see § 277.54[b]], made a request for extension of the payment period of a bill asserted to be beyond the means of the customer to pay in full within the normal period for payment, must be given an opportunity for review of the complaint, investigation, or request by a review manager of the utility [Pub. Util. Code §§ 10010(c), 12823(c), 16482(c)]. When the utility is an electrical, gas, heat, or water corporation, the residential customer must have initiated his or her complaint or requested the investigation as provided above, or must have made a request for extension of the payment period before termination of the service [Pub. Util. Code § 779(c)].

The review must include consideration of whether the customer shall be permitted to amortize the balance of the delinquent account over a reasonable period of time, not to exceed 12 months. No termination of service shall be effected for any customer complying with an amortization agreement, if the customer also keeps the account current as charges accrue in each subsequent billing period [Pub. Util. Code §§ 779(c), 10010(c), 12823(c), 16482(c); see § 277.54[2][c] regarding notice requirements if a customer fails to perform the terms of an amortization agreement].

[4] Administrative Appeal

Any customer whose complaint or request for an investigation to the utility has resulted in an adverse determination by the utility may appeal the determination to the appropriate regulatory agency. If the utility is an electrical, gas, heat or water corporation, the appeal is to be made to the Commission [Pub. Util. Code § 779(d)]. If the utility is a municipal corporation, the appeal is to be made to its governing body [Pub. Util. Code § 10010(d)]. If the utility is a district, the appeal is to be made to the board of directors [Pub. Util. Code §§ 12823(d), 16482(d)].

Any subsequent appeal of the dispute or complaint to the regulatory agency is not subject to Pub. Util. Code §§ 779, 10010, 12823, 16482 [Pub. Util. Code §§ 779(d), 10010(d), 12823(d), 16482(d)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Termination of Utility Service

23-277 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 277.55

§ 277.55 Termination of Service Through Master Meter in Multiunit Housing

[1] In General

Statutory provisions ensure that utility service to a resident of multiunit housing, who is not the utility's customer, is not terminated due to the customer's nonpayment unless the utility has made every reasonable effort to continue service to the residential occupant [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(i) (electrical, gas, heat, water corporations), 10009.1(i) (municipal corporations), 12822.1(i) (municipal utility districts), 16481.1(i) (public utility districts)].

Whenever an electrical, gas, heat or water corporation furnishes residential service, or whenever a municipal corporation, municipal utility district, or public utility district furnishes light, heat, water, or power to residential occupants, through a master meter in a multiunit residential structure, mobilehome park, or permanent residential structures in a labor camp (as defined in Health & Safety Code § 17008), when the owner, manager, operator, is listed by the utility as the customer of record, no termination of service may be effected without compliance with statutory requirements [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(a), (h), 10009.1(a), (h), 12822.1(a), (h), 16481.1(a), (h)].

The utility (or the Commission, in the case of electrical, gas, heat, or water corporations) is required to adopt rules and regulations (or orders, in the case of the Commission) necessary to implement the statutory provisions, and must liberally construe the provisions to accomplish their purpose. The rules and regulations or orders must include guidelines for assistance to actual users in enforcing the provisions [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(i), 10009.1(i), 12822.1(i), 16481.1(i)]. The Commission is also required to adopt rules and orders that include reasonable penalties for violations of Pub. Util. Code § 777.1 [Pub. Util. Code § 777.1(i)].

However, nothing in the above provisions broadens or restricts any authority of a local agency that existed prior to January 1, 1989, to adopt an ordinance protecting a residential occupant from the involuntary termination of residential public utility service [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(j), 10009.1(j), 12822.1(j), 16481.1(j)]. Counsel should review any local ordinances, or public agency resolutions, rules, regulations, and orders, or private utility tariffs, that may be applicable to the particular utility that is the subject of the dispute.

Any service wrongfully terminated must be restored without any charge to the residential occupants or customer for the restoration of service [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(h), 10009.1(h), 12822.1(h), 16481.1(h)].

In addition, certain causes of action are available by statute when there has been a wrongful termination of utility service [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(f)-(h), 10009.1(f)-(h), 12822.1(f)-(h), 16481.1(f)-(h); see also § 277.55[5]].

Several acts specified in the statutes may be performed on behalf of residential occupants by "the representative of residential occupants." The acts include: the assumption of subsequent charges to a utility account when the owner, manager, or operator of the premises is in arrears [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(b), 10009.1(b), 12822.1(b), 16481.1(b)], and commencement of a civil action against the owner, manager, or operator [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(f), 10009.1(f), 12822.1(f), 16481.1(f)], or against the utility [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(h), 10009.1(h), 12822.1(h), 16481.1(h)]. However, for the purposes of the statutes, "representative of the residential occupants" does not include a tenants' association [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(l), 10009.1(l), 12822.1(l), 16481.1(l)].

[2] Notice of Termination

The utility must make every good faith effort to inform the residential occupants, by means of a written notice posted on the door of each residential unit at least 15 days prior to termination, when the account is in arrears, that service will be terminated on a date specified in the notice [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(a), 10009.1(a), 12822.1(a), 16481.1(a)].

If it is not reasonable or practicable to post the notice on the door of each residential unit, the utility must post two copies of the notice in each accessible common area and at each point of access to the structure or structures [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(a), 10009.1(a), 12822.1(a), 16481.1(a)].

The notice must further inform the residential occupants that they have the right to become utility customers, to whom the service will then be billed, without being required to pay the amount due on the delinquent account. The notice also must specify, in plain language, what the residential occupants are required to do in order to prevent the termination or reestablish service; the estimated monthly cost of service; the title, address, and telephone number of a representative of the utility who can assist the residential occupants in continuing service; and the address and telephone number of a legal services project (as defined in Bus. & Prof. Code § 6213), which has been recommended by the local county bar association. The notice must be in English, Spanish, Chinese, Tagalog, Vietnamese, and Korean [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(a), 10009.1(a), 12822.1(a), 16481.1(a); see Civ. Code § 1632].

The utility (or the Commission, in the case of electrical, gas, heating, or water corporations) must include in its rules and regulations (or orders, in the case of the Commission) requirements for the notice, including, but not limited to, clear wording, large and boldface type, and comprehensive instructions to ensure full notice to the residents [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(i), 10009.1(i), 12822.1(i), 16481.1(i)].

[3] Assumption of Subsequent Service Charges by Residents

[a] Agreement to Terms of Service

The utility is not required to make service available to the residential occupants unless each residential occupant or a representative of the residential occupants agrees to the terms and conditions of service, and meets the requirements of law and the utility's rules (and, in the case of electrical, gas, heat, or water corporations, tariffs) [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(b), 10009.1(b), 12822.1(b), 16481.1(b)].

However, if one or more of the residential occupants or the representative of the residential occupants are willing and able to assume responsibility for subsequent charges to the account to the satisfaction of the utility, or if there is a physical means, legally available to the utility, of selectively terminating service to those residential occupants who have not met the requirements of the utility's rules (and, in the case of electrical, gas, heat, or water corporations, tariffs) or for whom the representative of the residential occupants is not responsible, the utility must make service available to those residential occupants who have met those requirements or on whose behalf those requirements have been met [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(b), 10009.1(b), 12822.1(b), 16481.1(b)].

[b] Demonstration of Credit Worthiness

When prior service for a period of time or other demonstration of credit worthiness is a condition for establishing credit with the utility, residence and proof of prompt payment of rent or other credit obligation during that period of time acceptable to the utility is a satisfactory equivalent [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(c), 10009.1(c), 12822.1(c), 16481.1(c)].

[c] Deduction of Service Charges From Rent

Any residential occupant who becomes a customer of the utility under Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1, 10009.1, 12822.1, and 16481.1 and whose periodic payments, such as rental payments, include charges for residential electrical, gas, heat or water service (when the utility is an electrical, gas, heat, or water corporation), or light, heat, water, or power (when the utility is a municipal corporation, municipal utility district, and public utility district), when those charges are not separately stated, may deduct from the periodic payment each payment period all reasonable charges paid to the corporation for those services during the preceding payment period [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(d), 10009.1(d), 12822.1(d), 16481.1(d)].

[4] Statutory Limits on Termination

The utility may not terminate service in any of the following situations [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(e), 10009.1(e), 12822.1(e), 16481.1(e)]:

- During the pendency of an investigation by the utility of a customer dispute or complaint;

- When the customer has been granted an extension of the period for payment of a bill;

- In the case of an electrical, gas, heat, or water corporation, for an indebtedness owed by the customer to any other person or corporation, or when the obligation represented by the delinquent account or other indebtedness was incurred with a person or corporation other than the electrical, gas, heat, or water corporation demanding payment therefore. In the case of a municipal corporation or municipal or public utility district, for an indebtedness owed by the customer to any other public agency or when the obligation represented by the delinquent account or other indebtedness was incurred with any public agency other than the government owned public utility;

- When a delinquent account relates to another property owned, managed, or operated by the customer; or

- When a public health or building officer certifies that termination would result in a significant threat to the health or safety of the residential occupants or the public.

[5] Civil Actions

[a] Termination While Residential Unit Occupied

[i] By Occupant

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and in addition to any other remedy provided by law, if the owner manager, or operator, by any act or omission, directs, permits, or fails to prevent termination of service while any residential unit is occupied, the residential occupant, or the representative of the residential occupants, may commence an action for the recovery of all of the following [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(f), 10009.1(f), 12822.1(f), 16481.1(f)]:

- Reasonable costs and expenses incurred by the residential occupant or the representative of the residential occupants related to restoration of service;

- Actual damages related to the termination of service; and

- Reasonable attorney's fees of the residential occupants, the representative of the residential occupants, or each of them, incurred in the enforcement of Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1, 10009.1, 12822.1, or 16481.1, including, but not limited to, enforcement of a lien.

For a form of complaint for damages against an owner, manager, or operator of multiunit housing for termination of utility service while a residential unit is occupied, see § 277.170.

An abstract of any money judgment entered in the action must be recorded under Code Civ. Proc. § 697.310 (creation and duration of judgment lien based on money judgment) [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(g), 10009.1(g), 12822.1(g), 16481.1(g)].

[ii] By Utility

Under these circumstances, the utility may also commence an action against an owner, manager, or operator of the same type of premises for the recovery of delinquent charges accruing prior to the expiration of the notice prior to termination prescribed by Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(a), 10009.1(a), 12822.1(a), or 16481.1(a) [see § 277.56[1]], reasonable costs incurred by the utility related to the restoration of service, and reasonable attorney's fees of the utility incurred in enforcement or in the collection of delinquent charges, including, but not limited to, enforcement of a lien [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(g), 10009.1(g), 12822.1(g), 16481.1(g)].

If, however, the court finds that the owner, manager, or operator has paid the amount in arrears prior to termination, the court can not allow recovery of any charges, costs, damages, expenses, or fees under Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(g), 10009.1(g), 12822.1(g), or 16481.1(g) from the owner, manager, or operator [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(g), 10009.1(g), 12822.1(g), 16481.1(g)].

Any statute or ordinance permitting punitive damages against any owner, manager, or operator on account of an involuntary termination of residential public utility service is preempted by Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1, 10009.1, 12822.1, and 16481.1. Those sections also preempt any statute or ordinance permitting the recovery of costs associated with the formation, maintenance, and termination of a tenant's association [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(k), 10009.1(k), 12822.1(k), 16481.1(k)].

An abstract of any money judgment entered in the action must be recorded under Code Civ. Proc. § 697.310 (creation and duration of judgment lien based on money judgment) [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(g), 10009.1(g), 12822.1(g), 16481.1(g)].

[b] Wrongful Termination by Utility

In cases involving residential service through a master meter to multiunit residential structure, mobilehome park, or permanent residential structures in a labor camp (as defined in Health & Safety Code § 17008), no termination of service may be effected without compliance with Pub. Util. Code § 777.1, 10009.1, 12822.1, or 16481.1. In the event of a wrongful termination by the utility, the utility will be liable to the residential occupants or customer for actual damages resulting from the termination. The utility will also be liable for the costs of enforcement, including, but not limited to reasonable attorney's fees, if the residential occupants or the representative of the residential occupants make a good-faith effort to have the service continued without interruption [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(h), 10009.1(h), 12822.1(h), 16481.1(h)].

If the utility defendant is a municipal corporation or municipal or public utility district, the plaintiff is required to comply with the claim provisions of the Tort Claims Act (Gov. Code § 810 et seq.) [see Gov. Code §§ 900.2 (definition of "board"), 900.4 (definition of "local public entity"), 905 (claims for money or damages against local public entity), 911.2 (time for presentation of claim)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Termination of Utility Service

23-277 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 277.56

§ 277.56 Termination of Service Through Individual Meter in Multiunit Residence

[1] Notice of Termination

Whenever an electrical, gas, heat or water corporation furnishes individually metered residential service to residential occupants through individual meters in a detached single-family dwelling, a multiunit residential structure, mobilehome park, or permanent residential structure in a labor camp (as defined in Health & Safety Code § 17008), when the owner, manager, or operator is listed by the corporation as the customer of record, the corporation is required to make every good faith effort to inform the residential occupants, by means of a written notice, when the account is in arrears, that service will be terminated at least 10 days prior to termination. The written notice must further inform the residential occupants that they have the right to become customers, to whom the service will then be billed, without being required to pay any amount that may be due on the delinquent account [Pub. Util. Code § 777(b)--notice to be in English, Spanish, Chinese, Tagalog, Vietnamese, and Korean; see Civ. Code § 1632]. Effective July 1, 2010, this provision applies only if there is a landlord-tenant relationship between the residential occupants and the owner, manager, or operator of the dwelling [Pub. Util. Code § 777(a), (g)].

In the case of a detached single-family dwelling, an electrical, gas, heat, or water corporation may give notice of termination at least seven days prior to the proposed termination of service, notwithstanding the 10-day notice period described above [Pub. Util. Code § 777(f)(1)]. In addition, in the case of a detached single-family dwelling, in order for the amount due on a delinquent account to be waived, the corporation may require an occupant who becomes a customer to verify that the delinquent account customer of record is or was the landlord, manager, or agent of the dwelling. Verification may include, but is not limited to, a lease or rental agreement, rent receipts, a government document indicating that the occupant is renting the property, or information disclosed pursuant to Civ. Code § 1962 [Pub. Util. Code § 777(f)(2)].

Similar notice is required whenever a municipal corporation, municipal utility district, or public utility district furnishes individually metered residential light, heat, water, or power to residential occupants in the same types of dwellings [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 10009 (municipal corporations), 12822 (municipal utility districts), 16481 (public utility districts)].

[2] Assumption of Subsequent Service Charges by Residents of Individually Metered Units

[a] Agreement to Terms of Service

The utility is not required to make service available to the residential occupants unless each residential occupant agrees to the terms and conditions of service, and meets the requirements of law and the utility's rules (and, in the case of electrical, gas, heat, or water corporations, tariffs) [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777(c), 10009(c), 12822(c), 16481(c)].

However, if one or more of the residential occupants are willing and able to assume responsibility for the entire account to the satisfaction of the utility, or if there is a physical means, legally available to the utility, of selectively terminating service to those residential occupants who have not met the requirements of the utility's rules (and, in the case of electrical, gas, heat, or water corporations, tariffs), the utility must make service available to those residential occupants who have met those requirements [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777(c), 10009(c), 12822(c), 16481(c)].

[b] Credit Worthiness

When prior service for a period of time is a condition for establishing credit with the utility, residence and proof of prompt payment of rent or other obligation acceptable to the utility for that period of time is a satisfactory equivalent [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777(d) (proof of prompt payment of other "credit obligation"), 10009(d), 12822(d), 16481(d)].

[c] Deduction From Rent

Any residential occupant who becomes a customer of the utility under the above provisions whose periodic payments, such as rental payments, include charges for residential light, heat, water, or power (or residential electrical, gas, heat, or water service, in the case of electrical, gas, heat, or water corporations), when these charges are not separately stated, may deduct from the periodic payment each payment period all reasonable charges paid to the utility for those services during the preceding payment period [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777(e), 10009(e), 12822(e), 16481(e)].

[3] Civil Liability

The statutes governing termination of utility service that is furnished through individual meters to residents of multiple unit housing do not indicate what recourse a residential occupant may have when service is wrongfully terminated [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777, 10009, 12822, 16481].

A residential occupant, may, however, be able to bring an action in tort when the utility has violated the statutes. In one case, the court of appeal considered the issue of when, if ever, a public utility company becomes tortiously liable to the actual users of utility services for violating the notice requirements specified in Pub. Util. Code § 777. The court held that there can be no tort liability for failure to give the notice required by the statute, whether the failure is in providing a defective notice or in giving no notice whatsoever, unless the breach of the utility company's statutory duty causes the damage sustained by the users whose utility service was terminated. When the public utility does not initiate the termination, even if it would have terminated service had a delinquent account gone unpaid, but acts only at the direction of its master customer, absent something to suggest a collusive agreement between the public utility company and the master customer to circumvent the statutory notice requirements, any deficiency in the notice provided by the public utility company cannot be the cause of the user's damages, and the company is not liable in tort. The user's remedy is against the individual or entity directing the termination [Tovar v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 606, 614, 247 Cal. Rptr. 281] .

It is not certain whether the plaintiffs in this case were furnished utility service through individual meters or through a master meter. The opinion used the term "master customer" to mean either the named customer/subscriber of record controlling a master meter account or individually metered accounts billed to a single central customer, and was decided prior to the 1988 amendment that deleted the reference in the statutes to service through a master meter [see Tovar v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 606, 609 n.2, 247 Cal. Rptr. 281 ; see also 1988 Stats, ch. 1533, § 1].

Master metered residential service is now governed by Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1, 10009.1, 12822.1, and 16481.1. Apparently, however, the case may continue to provide some basis for an action in tort under Pub. Util. Code § 777, 10009, 12822, or 16481 when utility service furnished to residential occupants of individually metered multiple unit housing is terminated in violation of these sections.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

23-277 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 277.57

§ 277.57 Nonstatutory Actions

Injunction is the proper remedy to restrain the shutting off of water when there is a just dispute. The availability of this relief is based on the ground that an action at law for damages is inadequate [Schultz v. Lakeport (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 377, 383, 54 P.2d 1110, 55 P.2d 485 ; Fellows v. Los Angeles (1907) 151 Cal. 52, 90 P. 137] .

The availability of injunctive relief does not imply, however, that a plaintiff may not resort to the theoretically less adequate remedy and recover damages if his or her conduct otherwise has not foreclosed that right [Schultz v. Lakeport (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 377, 383, 54 P.2d 1110, 55 P.2d 485] . In addition, when a utility undertakes to supply electricity to a customer, the utility obligates itself to exercise reasonable care toward the customer, and failure to exercise such care has the characteristics of both a breach of contract and a tort [Langley v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 655, 662, 262 P.2d 846] .

A utility may raise by way of affirmative defense that it had at all times followed its rules with respect to its action in discontinuing the utility service and that its rules were adopted in accordance with law [see Carpenter v. L.A. Gas & Elec. Corp. (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 369, 372, 106 P.2d 916] . Further, no electrical or gas corporation that reduces or discontinues service in accordance with any order of the commission issued pursuant to Pub. Util. Code § 2771 et seq. (governing priorities among customers) will be liable for any damages to any person or property resulting from such reduction or discontinuance [Pub. Util. Code § 2775].

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use in an action by a homeowner against a gas company where a leak in the gas company's pipes caused an explosion which injured plaintiff and damaged his or her house.

[3] Venue

In an action for personal injuries and property damages from a wrongful act or negligence, either the county where the injury occurs or the county where the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action is a proper county for the trial of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395].

[4] Jurisdiction

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const. art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)].

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case and must state whether the demand exceeds or does not exceed $10,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Gov. Code § 70613(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9), (10)].

[5] Specifying Amount of Damages

In an action to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages for anything other than personal injury or wrongful death (for example, property damage) must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

No claim for punitive damages may state an amount sought regardless of the nature of the case or whether it is a limited civil case [Civ. Code § 3295(e)].

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115], see Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.40 et seq., and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments .

[6] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use in an action for the wrongful death of a worker who died from asphyxiation caused by gas escaping from a gas company's lines. An action for wrongful death of a decedent may be brought by persons entitled by statute to a wrongful death cause of action, or by the personal representative of the decedent's estate on behalf of those entitled persons [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60].

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60, the decedent's surviving spouse, domestic partner, children, and issue of deceased children, or if the decedent leaves no surviving issue, the persons, including the surviving spouse or domestic partner, who would be entitled to take the decedent's property under intestate succession, may bring a wrongful death action without qualification. Under specified circumstances, others may bring a wrongful death action under Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60. For forms of allegations establishing that specific classes of persons are entitled to bring a wrongful death action, including allegations that are required of plaintiffs who are not the decedent's surviving spouse, domestic partner, children, or issue of deceased children, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions . If a plaintiff is a minor, a guardian ad litem must be appointed for the purposes of the action, unless the minor already has a guardian [see Code Civ. Proc. § 372]. For discussion and forms relating to appointment of a guardian ad litem generally, see Ch. 291, Guardians ad Litem .

The damages recovered in a wrongful death action may not include any damages recoverable in a survival action [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.61]. Damages for medical expenses incurred before death, for example, are recoverable in a survival action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.34 (survival action damages); Follansbee v. Benzenberg (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d

466, 473-474, 265 P.2d 183] . A survival action may be joined with a wrongful death action if both actions arise out of the same wrongful act or neglect [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.62(a)]. For further discussion and additional forms, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

[2] Use of Form

This form is a complaint for wrongful death of an adult killed by asphyxiation caused by a defective gas heater. The complaint is for use against a landlord in a situation in which a tenant was killed by the defective condition of the heater.

An action for wrongful death of a decedent may be brought by persons entitled by statute to a wrongful death cause of action, or by the personal representative of the decedent's estate on behalf of those entitled persons [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60]. Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60 permits the decedent's surviving spouse, domestic partner, children, and issue of deceased children, or, if there is no surviving issue of the decedent, the persons, including the surviving spouse or domestic partner, who would be entitled to take the decedent's property under intestate succession, to bring a wrongful death action without qualification, and permits others to bring action under specified circumstances. For forms of allegations establishing that specific classes of persons are entitled to bring a wrongful death action, including allegations that are required of plaintiffs who are not the decedent's surviving spouse, children, or issue of deceased children, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions . If a plaintiff is a minor, a guardian ad litem must be appointed for the purposes of the action, unless the minor already has a guardian [see Code Civ. Proc. § 372]. For discussion and forms relating to appointment of a guardian ad litem generally, see Ch. 291, Guardians ad Litem .

The damages recovered in a wrongful death action may not include any damages recoverable in a survival action [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.61]. Damages for medical expenses incurred before death, for example, are recoverable in a survival action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.34 (survival action damages); Follansbee v. Benzenberg (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d 466, 473-474, 265 P.2d 183] . A survival action may be joined with a wrongful death action if both actions arise out of the same wrongful act or neglect [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.62(a)]. For further discussion and additional forms, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

[3] Allegations

This complaint sets forth two counts as the basis for recovery for wrongful death. The first count alleges that the death was caused by the negligence of defendant and his or her agents. The second count is based on negligence per se and alleges that the defective heater that caused the death was maintained in violation of an ordinance, regulation, or statute [see Evid. Code § 669; Ewing v. Balan (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 619, 621-622, 336 P.2d 561] .

[4] Basis of Landlord's Liability

Civ. Code § 1714 provides that a person is liable for an injury occasioned to another by his or her want of ordinary care in the management of his or her property or person, except so far as the latter has willfully or by want of ordinary care brought the injury upon himself or herself. This rule has been applied by the Supreme Court to actions by a social guest against a tenant [Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 119, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] and by a court of appeal to an action by a tenant against a landlord not in possession [Brennan v. Cockrell Inv., Inc. (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 796, 800-802, 111 Cal. Rptr. 122 ; see Mark v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 170, 183, 101 Cal. Rptr. 908, 496 P.2d 1276 (dictum)]. The liability of landlords to their tenants is further discussed in Ch. 332, Landlord and Tenant: The Tenancy , and Ch. 334, Landlord and Tenant: Claims for Damages .

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use to recover for injuries suffered on defendant's premises.

[3] Basis of Premises Liability

The basis of the liability of the possessor of real property is Civ. Code § 1714, which provides that a person is liable for an injury occasioned to another by his or her want of ordinary care in the management of his or her property or person, except so far as the latter has, willfully or by want of ordinary care, brought the injury upon himself or herself [Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 119, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] . However, the status of the plaintiff as an invitee, licensee, or trespasser while not determinative as to duties of care, may in light of the facts giving rise to such status have some bearing on the question of liability [Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 119, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] .

Premises liability is discussed more extensively in Ch. 421, Premises Liability.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use in an action for damages based on strict liability in tort and negligence against a manufacturer, wholesaler, and retailer of gas appliances.

[3] Allegations

This complaint sets forth two counts as a basis of recovery. The first count is based on strict liability in tort and alleges that the injury was caused by a defect in the product. The second count is based on negligence and alleges that the negligence of the defendants in manufacturing, selling, servicing, and installing the product caused the damages. One reason to include a cause of action based on negligence is that the proof might show that negligent installation, rather than a defect in the product, caused the damage.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use in an action by a homeowner against an electric company where the electric company's wires fell and caused a fire in his or her house, which caused personal injuries and property damage.

[3] Venue

In an action for personal injuries and property damage from a wrongful act or negligence, either the county where the injury occurs or the county where the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action is a proper county for the trial of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395]. If venue is based on the situs of the wrongful act or negligence, then Paragraph 1 alleging the residence of the defendants is not needed.

[4] Specifying Amount of Damages

In an action to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages for anything other than personal injury or wrongful death (for example, property damage) must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115], see Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments .

[5] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified also, if the action is an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion of the effect that verifying a complaint has on the answer, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use in an action for the wrongful death of a worker who died from electrocution caused by a downed electric wire. An action for wrongful death may be brought by persons entitled by statute to bring a wrongful death cause of action, or by the personal representative of the decedent's estate on behalf of those entitled persons [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60]. Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60 permits decedent's surviving spouse, domestic partner, children, and issue of deceased children, or, if there is no surviving issue of the decedent, the persons, including the surviving spouse or domestic partner, who would be entitled to take the decedent's property under intestate succession, to bring a wrongful death action without qualification, and permits others to bring action under specified circumstances. For forms of allegations establishing that specific classes of persons are entitled to bring a wrongful death action, including allegations that are required of plaintiffs who are not the decedent's surviving spouse, domestic partner, children, or issue of deceased children, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions . If a plaintiff is a minor, a guardian ad litem must be appointed for the purposes of the action, unless the minor already has a guardian [see Code Civ. Proc. § 372]. For discussion and forms relating to appointment of a guardian ad litem generally, see Ch. 291, Guardians ad Litem .

The damages recovered in a wrongful death action may not include any damages recoverable in a survival action [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.61]. Damages for medical expenses incurred before death, for example, are recoverable in a survival action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.34 (survival action damages); Follansbee v. Benzenberg (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d 466, 473-474, 265 P.2d 183] . A survival action may be joined with a wrongful death action if both actions arise out of the same wrongful act or neglect [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.62(a)]. For further discussion and additional forms, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

[3] Allegations

This complaint contains a first count based on defendant's negligence in placement of the electric wires. The second count is based on defendant's violation of law that creates a presumption of negligence [see Evid. Code § 669].

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use in a wrongful death action against an electric company by the parents of a child who was killed by contact with a down live wire. An action for wrongful death of a decedent may be brought by persons entitled by statute to bring a wrongful death cause of action, or by the personal representative of the decedent's estate on behalf of those entitled persons [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60]. Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60(a) permits a decedent's surviving spouse, domestic partner, children, and issue of deceased children, or, if there is no surviving issue of the decedent, the persons, including the surviving spouse or domestic partner, who would be entitled to take the decedent's property under intestate succession, to bring action without qualification. Parents of the decedent may not bring a wrongful death action unless they would be entitled to succeed to the decedent's property under the laws of intestate succession, that is, if there is no surviving spouse, domestic partner, child, or issue of a deceased child [see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60(a); Prob. Code § 6402(b)].

The damages recovered in a wrongful death action may not include any damages recoverable in a survival action [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.61]. Damages for medical expenses incurred before death, for example, are recoverable in a survival action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.34 (survival action damages); Follansbee v. Benzenberg (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d 466, 473-474, 265 P.2d 183] . A survival action may be joined with a wrongful death action if both actions arise out of the same wrongful act or neglect [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.62(a)]. For further discussion and additional forms, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Verification, if desired. See § 277.150.]

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use in an action against an electrical contractor who breached a contract by installing defective wiring which caused a fire.

[3] Tortious Breach of Contract

The same act may be both a tort and a breach of contract. Even where there is a contractual relationship between the parties, a cause of action in tort may sometimes arise out of the negligent manner in which the contractual duty is performed or out of a failure to perform such duty [Zurich Ins. Co. v. Kings Indus., Inc. 1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 919, 923, 63 Cal. Rptr. 585] .

[4] Attorney's Fees

If the contract sued on provides for recovery of attorney's fees in an action to enforce the contract, the party determined by the court to be the prevailing party under the terms of Civ. Code § 1717 is entitled to reasonable attorney's fees as fixed by the court. Such fees are an item of the costs of suit, and are not an element of damages, so that they should not be alleged in the complaint, but instead be included as an item of cost in the prayer [see Civ. Code § 1717].

In an action seeking relief in addition to that based on contract, if the court awards noncontract-based damages against the party prevailing on the contract, the amounts awarded under Civ. Code § 1717 to that party are deducted from any damages awarded in favor of the party who did not prevail on the contract. If the amount awarded under Civ. Code §

1717 exceeds the amount of damages awarded the party not prevailing on the contract, judgment may be entered in favor of the party prevailing on the contract for the net amount [Civ. Code § 1717(c)].

For discussion of attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717.5 in certain contract actions based on a book account as defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 337a, see Ch. 8, Accounts Stated and Open Accounts , and Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

[2] Use of Form

This is a form of complaint for damages against an owner, manager, or operator of a master metered, multiunit residential structure, mobile home park, or permanent residential structure in a labor camp by a residential occupant, when the damages are a result of a termination of residential utility service to an occupied residential unit [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(f), 10009.1(f), 12822.1(f), 16481.1(f)].

The action may be brought by either a residential occupant or a representative of the residential occupants [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(f), 10009.1(f), 12822.1(f), 16481.1(f)]. However, for the purposes of Pub. Util. Code § 777.1, 10009.1, 12822.1, or 16481.1, "representative of the residential occupants" does not include a tenants' association [Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(l), 10009.1(l), 12822.1(l), 16481.1(l)]. If the action is brought by a representative of the residential occupants, the form should be modified to set forth appropriate allegations.

The form may also be modified for use in an action by a utility against an owner, manager, or operator of the premises for delinquent charges, reasonable costs related to restoration of the service, and reasonable attorneys fees related to enforcement, under Pub. Util. Code § 777.1(g), 10009.1(g), 12822.1(g), or 16481.1(g). For further discussion of this type of action, see § 277.55[5].

[3] Allegations

This complaint sets forth initial optional paragraphs that allege the identity, capacity, and residence of the plaintiff and defendant (Paragraphs 1, 2), and fictitiously named defendants (Paragraph 3). The complaint then alleges that:

- The defendant is either the owner, manager, or operator of a certain multiunit residential structure, mobilehome park, or permanent residential structure in a labor camp (as defined in Health & Safety Code § 17008) (Paragraph 4) [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(a), (f), 10009.1(a), (f), 12822.1(a), (f), 16481.1(a), (f)].

- The utility service was provided either by an electrical, gas, heat, or water corporation furnishing residential service, or by a municipal corporation, municipal utility district, or public utility district furnishing light, heat, water, or power service to residential occupants, and that the service was furnished through a master meter (Paragraph 5) [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(a), 10009.1(a), 12822.1(a), 16481.1(a)].

- The defendant is listed by the utility company as the customer of record (Paragraph 6) [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(a), 10009.1(a), 12822.1(a), 16481.1(a)].

- The defendant by an act or omission directed, permitted, or failed to prevent a termination of service while a residential unit receiving that service was occupied, and that the plaintiff is the residential occupant of the unit so affected (Paragraphs 7, 8) [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(f), 10009.1(f), 12822.1(f), 16481.1(f)].

- The plaintiff is entitled to actual damages related to the termination of service (Paragraphs 9, 10) [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(f)(2), 10009.1(f)(2), 12822.1(f)(2), 16481.1(f)(2)].

- The plaintiff has incurred reasonable costs and expenses related to restoration of service (Paragraph 11) [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(f)(1), 10009.1(f)(1), 12822.1(f)(1), 16481.1(f)(1)].

- The plaintiff is entitled to reasonable attorney's fees incurred in the enforcement of the applicable sections (Paragraph 12) [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(f)(3), 10009.1(f)(3), 12822.1(f)(3), 16481.1(f)(3)].

[4] Preemption of Punitive Damages or Tenant's Association Costs

Any statute or ordinance permitting punitive damages against any owner, manager, or operator on account of an involuntary termination of residential public utility service, or permitting recovery of costs associated with the formation, maintenance, and termination of a tenant's association, is preempted by the governing statutes [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777.1(k), 10009.1(k), 12822.1(k), 16481.1(k)].

[5] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified also, if the action is in the superior court and is not a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude a general denial except in a limited civil case, and will preclude a general denial even in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion of the effect that verifying a complaint has on the answer, see Ch. 26, Answers .

A gift is defined by statute as a transfer of personal property, made voluntarily and without consideration [Civ. Code § 1146]. It is also clear that real property may be the subject of a gift [see Gordon v. Barr (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 596, 601-603, 91 P.2d 101 ; *Andreotti v. Andreotti (1964) 224 Cal. PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 278.11 Gifts Causa Mortis or Inter Vivos

There are two types of gifts: a gift inter vivos or a gift causa mortis.

The statutes refer to a gift causa mortis as a "gift in view of impending death" [See Civ. Code § 1148; Prob. Code § 5702]. A gift causa mortis is a gift made in contemplation, fear, or peril of impending death, whether from illness or other cause, and with the intent that it will be revoked if the giver recovers from the illness or escapes from the peril [Prob. Code § 5702(a)]. Such a gift is, in effect, a will substitute [see § 278.14]. A reference in a statute to a gift in view of death means a gift in view of impending death [Prob. Code § 5702(b)].

An inter vivos gift is made under ordinary circumstances and is irrevocable [Civ. Code § 1148]. The only distinction between the gift inter vivos and the gift causa mortis is that the latter, being in its nature testamentary, is subject to the donor's revocation if he or she lives [Civ. Code § 1148; Prob. Code § 5702; Berl v. Rosenberg (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 125, 129-130, 336 P.2d 975] . In other respects, all the essential elements for making a gift must be met by both classes of gifts [Berl v. Rosenberg (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 125, 129-130, 336 P.2d 975] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

23-278 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 278.12

§ 278.12 Essential Elements

[1] Overview

The essentials of a valid completed gift are [Bank of America v. Cottrell (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 361, 363, 20 Cal. Rptr. 126 ; Connelly v. Bank of America (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 303, 307, 291 P.2d 501] :

- Competency of the donor to contract.
- A voluntary intent on the part of the donor to make a gift.
- Delivery, either actual or symbolic.
- Acceptance, actual or imputed.
- Complete divestment of all dominion and control by the donor.
- Lack of consideration for the gift.

[2] Intent

In ascertaining the validity of a gift, the intent with which delivery was made is an essential element. Intention is a question of fact to be determined by the trial court from all the evidence, and the circumstances of the transaction and the words and acts of the donor enter into the establishment of the fact [Matson v. Jones (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 826, 829, 77 Cal. Rptr. 717] . A person incapable of entertaining the necessary intent cannot make a gift. Thus, it was held that no gift had been made because of the lack of intention when the defendant was a serious and habitual alcoholic, had no memory of having signed a deed conveying real property, and stated that he must have been drunk when he signed the deed involved since he had no intention of giving the property to his wife [see Jones v. Jones (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 468, 472-473, 6 Cal. Rptr. 819] .

The donor's intent must be to give a present interest [Estate of Franco (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 374, 385, 122 Cal.

Rptr. 661, 123 Cal. Rptr. 458 , modified at 50 Cal. App. 3d 374, 123 Cal. Rptr. 458 ; Brown v. Meredith (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 762, 765, 34 Cal. Rptr. 153] . For example, when the decedent wrote a letter giving a sum of money to plaintiffs which was never sent but was found among her personal effects after her death six years after the date on the letter, the court ruled that there was no gift inter vivos or causa mortis since the decedent had not transferred the title immediately or relinquished control over the money or the letter [see In re F.P. Newport Corp. (S.D. Cal. 1961) 194 F. Supp. 757, 761] .

[3] Delivery

In order to make a gift, the donor's intention must be executed by a complete and unconditional delivery by the donor [Blonde v. Estate of Jenkins (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 682, 685-686, 281 P.2d 14] to the donee [Turnbull v. Thomsen (1959) 171 Cal. App. 2d 779, 784, 341 P.2d 69] or to a third party on behalf of the donee [Berl v. Rosenberg (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 125, 131, 336 P.2d 975] . If there is no delivery by the donor to the donee, the gift becomes merely an unexecuted and unenforceable promise to make a future gift [Blonde v. Estate of Jenkins (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 682, 686, 281 P.2d 14] . Thus, when the decedent told plaintiff that he was going to give her certain stocks and securities and was going to have them made over to her but instead retained the shares and never made any effort to have them made over to plaintiff, there was no valid gift, merely an unenforceable promise [Rolinson v. Rolinson (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 387, 390, 282 P.2d 98 ; Blonde v. Estate of Jenkins (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 682, 686, 281 P.2d 14] .

Delivery, either actual or symbolic, may be made to a third person on behalf of the donee, and if the donor parts with dominion and control, such a gift will be effective [Berl v. Rosenberg (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 125, 131, 336 P.2d 975] .

For example, when the deceased sent a written letter to his brokers directing that the securities owned by him and held by them should be given to the donee in joint tenancy with the deceased, a valid gift was created since the letter clearly indicated the donor's intent to make a gift, and the delivery of the letter to the brokers constituted a valid delivery of the securities [Berl v. Rosenberg (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 125, 133, 336 P.2d 975] .

[4] Acceptance

Acceptance by the donee is essential to a valid gift [Jones v. Jones (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 468, 472, 6 Cal. Rptr. 819 ; Marshall v. Marshall (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 475, 479, 295 P.2d 131] . Under California law, it is presumed that a gift beneficial to the donee is accepted by the donee [Kropp v. Sterling Sav. & L. Ass'n (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1046, 88 Cal. Rptr. 878] . The presumption, however, is disputable and is a question of fact for the trial court [Jones v. Jones (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 468, 472, 6 Cal. Rptr. 819] .

[5] Surrender of Dominion and Control

The surrender of dominion and control over the gift is essential for the completion of a valid gift [Rolinson v. Rolinson (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 387, 390, 282 P.2d 98] . For instance, there was no such surrender when a decedent gave the plaintiff his bankbook to hold but continued to make withdrawals and deposits in the account by requesting on several occasions that the bankbook be given to him and then returning it to plaintiff. It was determined that decedent had retained substantial dominion and control over the account [Estate of Alberts (1940) 38 Cal. App. 2d 42, 46-47, 100 P.2d 538] .

Once a gift inter vivos has been delivered and accepted, a donor is unable to revoke the gift [Civ. Code § 1148; Marshall v. Marshall (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 475, 478-480, 295 P.2d 131] . For example, when plaintiff had executed and recorded a deed granting real property to several donees without their knowledge, after which two of them learned of the conveyance and did not repudiate the gift, a completed gift had been made and the donor was unable to revoke the gift, notwithstanding the fact that the donees had only belatedly learned of the gift [*Marshall v. PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 278.14 Gifts Causa Mortis

[1] In General

A gift in view of death impending death is one that is made in contemplation, fear, or peril of impending death, whether from illness or other cause, and with the intent that it will be revoked if the giver recovers from the illness or escapes from the peril [Prob. Code § 5702(a)]. A reference in a statute to a gift in view of death means a gift in view of impending death [Prob. Code § 5702(b)]. A gift made during the last illness of the giver or under circumstances which would naturally impress the giver with an expectation of speedy death is presumed to be a gift in view of impending death [Prob. Code § 5703]. For example, it was inferable that decedent, an osteopathic surgeon, as a physician would know what ailed him and would know that death might soon occur. Hence, when he stated in several letters that he was a very sick man it was inferable that gifts made at that time were made in contemplation of death [Rosenberg v. Broy (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 591, 596, 12 Cal. Rptr. 103] .

When a donor makes a gift in view of impending death, the donor is, in effect, making the functional equivalent of a testamentary distribution of property. In other words, a gift in view of impending death is, as a practical matter, essentially a will substitute. The governing statutes therefore treat such gifts in a significantly different manner than other gifts with respect to their revocability [see Civ. Code § 1148 (ordinary rule of irrevocability inapplicable to gifts in view of impending death), Prob. Code § 5704; see also discussion in § 278.14[2]].

[2] Revocation

A gift in view of impending death is revoked by the giver's recovery from the illness, or escape from the peril, under the presence of which it was made, or by the death of the donee before the death of the giver [Prob. Code § 5704(a)]. The gift may be revoked by the giver at any time, or by the giver's will, if the will expresses an intention to revoke the gift [Prob. Code § 5704(b)]. Unlike the making of a gift, there are no essential elements or requirements that must be met to revoke a gift causa mortis [Rosenberg v. Broy (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 591, 596, 12 Cal. Rptr. 103] . Thus, when it was inferable from the circumstances that decedent had made gifts in contemplation of death, a telephone call to his brokers revoking a previous letter to sell his securities and distribute the proceeds among his relatives was sufficient to revoke the gift [Rosenberg v. Broy (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 591, 598, 12 Cal. Rptr. 103] .

Notwithstanding the provisions governing revocation, when the gift has been delivered to the donee, the rights of a purchaser or encumbrancer, acting before the revocation in good faith, for a valuable consideration, and without knowledge of the conditional nature of the gift, are not affected by the revocation [Prob. Code § 5704(d)].

[3] Effect of Will

A gift in view of death is not affected by a previous will of the giver [Prob. Code § 5704(c)].

§ 278.15 Proof of Completed Gift

The donee has the burden to prove a completed gift [Blonde v. Estate of Jenkins (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 682, 686, 281 P.2d 14] . In one situation, ample evidence proving a gift to donee was given when the donee showed that the donor had repeatedly refused payments on a note owed by the donee to her, had informed the donee that she did not want the donee to pay back the money, and had given a irrevocable letter of instruction to her attorney instructing that the note be given to the donee upon the donor's death [Bank of America v. Cottrell (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 361, 363-364, 20 Cal. Rptr. 126] . However, in another situation, plaintiff failed to show a gift had been made to him where evidence indicated that the plaintiff's father had given him permission to remain on and manage the family ranch, that plaintiff had made rent payments to his sister and brother, and that in several business transactions had treated the ranch as though it still belonged to his father [Andreotti v. Andreotti (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 533, 539-540, 36 Cal. Rptr. 709] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

23-278 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 278.16

§ 278.16 Types of Gifts

[1] Gifts With Reservations of Rights

A completed gift may be made despite the fact that the donor reserves the right to the income or interest from the property during his or her lifetime [Gordon v. Barr (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 596, 602, 91 P.2d 101 ; Connelly v. Bank of America (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 303, 306-307, 291 P.2d 501] . For instance, when the donor returned the donee's note evidencing a debt to the donor with the reservation that the installment payments be continued during the donor's lifetime, a valid gift had been made [Connelly v. Bank of America (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 303, 306-307, 291 P.2d 501] .

[2] Conditional Gifts

If a conditional gift is made and there has been no substantial performance of the conditions, then there is no binding enforceable obligation [Fritz v. Thompson (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 858, 862-863, 271 P.2d 205] . For instance, when decedent promised to give plaintiff $5,000 towards the cost of building a new house if the plans, site, and other conditions could be approved by himself and no substantial steps were taken to meet these conditions before his death, the gift failed because of the lack of substantial performance [Fritz v. Thompson (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 858, 862-863, 271 P.2d 205] .

[3] Oral Gifts

An oral gift is not valid unless the means of obtaining possession and control of the thing are given. Such a gift also is not valid if it is capable of delivery unless there is an actual or symbolical delivery of the thing to the donee [Civ. Code § 1147]. No particular language or terminology is necessary for the creation of an alleged oral gift; however, plaintiff must establish the oral gift by full, clear, and convincing evidence [Andreotti v. Andreotti (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 533, 539, 36 Cal. Rptr. 709 ; Gonzalez v. Riis (1959) 171 Cal. App. 2d 473, 476, 340 P.2d 1015] . Such evidence exists when the gift of a chose in action such as a debt is evidenced by writing. For example, when the donor told the donee that the donee would not have to make any further payments on a debt if the donor died and gave the donee the signed note evidencing the obligation, a valid oral gift of a chose in action had been made [Connelly v. Bank of America (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 303, 306, 291 P.2d 501] . Such evidence does not exist and an oral gift of real property will be foreclosed by the statute of frauds unless it is established that possession of the property is given to and taken by the donee who, in reliance on the oral gift, places valuable and permanent improvements upon the realty, makes substantial expenditures in connection with the property, or otherwise so acts in relation to the gift as to make it unjust to deprive him of the property by reason of an imperfect transfer [Andreotti v. Andreotti (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 533, 538, 36 Cal. Rptr. 709] .

[4] Gifts in Contemplation of Marriage

When either party to a contemplated marriage makes a gift of money or property to the other on the basis or assumption that the marriage will take place, in the event that the donee refuses to enter into the marriage as contemplated or that it is given up by mutual consent, the donor may recover the gift or that part of its value as may, under all of the circumstances of the case, be found by a court or jury to be just [Civ. Code § 1590]. Thus, when a donee accepts many expensive gifts from a donor that have been given in the expectation of marriage and then refuses to marry the donor, the donor is entitled to recover the gifts of real and personal property given donee [Shaw v. Shaw (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 159, 161-166, 38 Cal. Rptr. 520 ; Stienback v. Halsey (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 213, 219-220, 251 P.2d 1008] . Property that may be recovered in an action under Civ. Code § 1590 includes an automobile, silverware, cash advanced, and wedding rings, [see Stienback v. Halsey (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 213, 218-220, 251 P.2d 1008] , as well as real and personal property acquired with one party's own funds and placed jointly in the name of the party and the person to whom the party was engaged [Shaw v. Shaw (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 159, 164-165, 38 Cal. Rptr. 520] .

Property may be recovered in an action under Civ. Code § 1590 only if the parties mutually consent not to marry or the donee refuses to go through with the marriage as contemplated at the time the gifts were made. A donee of personal property is entitled to retain possession of the property when the marriage contract is breached by a donor without any fault on the part of the donee [Simonian v. Donoian (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 259, 262, 215 P.2d 119 (donor not permitted to recover engagement ring from donee when donor refuses to go through with marriage plans)]. In addition, an action to recover gifts made in contemplation of marriage may be maintained only by the parties to the contemplated marriage and not by other persons making gifts to one of the parties to the contemplated marriage [Simonian v. Donoian (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 259, 262, 215 P.2d 119 (no cause of action in parent giving diamond-set wristwatch to son's financee)].

§ 278.17 Relief Based on Rescission

While there is no explicit statutory authority, it appears that gifts may be rescinded and restitution of property made when there has been a mistake, fraud, or undue influence in the procurement of the gift [see Earl v. Saks & Co. (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 602, 609, 226 P.2d 340 ; Estate of Bliss (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 630, 639-640, 18 Cal. Rptr. 821 ; Stepanek v. Stepanek (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 760, 768, 14 Cal. Rptr. 793] . It also seems probable that a donor who successfully rescinds a gift could also obtain damages in keeping with the general principles for relief based on rescission which state that a claim for damages is not inconsistent with a claim for relief based on recission [see Civ. Code § 1692] and that an aggrieved party may be rewarded complete relief, including restitution of any benefits conferred by him or her as a result of the transaction as well as any consequential damages to which he or she is entitled [see Civ. Code § 1692].

§ 278.18 Restitution Because of Fraud or Mistake

A person is entitled to restitution from another to whom he or she has given a gift gratuitously and induced by fraud, misrepresentation, or mistake of fact [Earl v. Saks & Co. (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 602, 609, 226 P.2d 340 ; Stepanek v. Stepanek (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 760, 768, 14 Cal. Rptr. 793] . In one situation, the donee and the seller entered into a secret agreement by which the donee would pay part of the price of an expensive fur coat. They thereby deceived the donor into believing that the coat was being purchased entirely by him so that it could be given in its entirety as a gift. The donor was entitled to rescind the gift because of the fraud [Earl v. Saks & Co. (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 602, 609, 226 P.2d 340] .

§ 278.19 Restitution Because of Undue Influence

[1] Availability of Remedy

Restitution of a gift on the grounds of undue influence in its procurement is another form of relief available [see Estate of Franco (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 374, 122 Cal. Rptr. 661 , modified at 50 Cal. App. 3d 374, 123 Cal. Rptr. 458 ; Estate of Bliss (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 630, 18 Cal. Rptr. 821 ; McDonald v. Hewlett (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 680, 228 P.2d 83] . The three elements that give rise to a presumption of undue influence are [Estate of Bliss (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 630, 639-640, 18 Cal. Rptr. 821] :

- A confidential relationship.
- Undue profit by the gift.
- Active participation in the procurement of the gift.

[2] Rebuttal of Presumption of Undue Influence

The existence of a confidential relationship between the parties to a gift does not dictate the ultimate conclusion that a gift was obtained by undue influence. The presumption may be overcome by proof by the donee that the transaction was fair and free from undue influence [Church of Merciful Saviour v. Volunteers of America (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 851, 861, 8 Cal. Rptr. 48 ; Camperi v. Chiechi (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 485, 504, 286 P2d 399] . For example, in one situation a charitable organization was able to rebut a charge that it used fraud and undue influence to obtain real property when it showed that the donor clearly had a desire to give the land to the organization to be used for whatever purpose it thought best and that the donor had been informed that the organization never took restricted or conditional gifts [Church of Merciful Saviour v. Volunteers of America (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 851, 861-862, 8 Cal. Rptr. 48] .

In another situation, when evidence showed that the donor conceived the idea of giving real property to his daughter and conducted the transactions with the attorney without the guidance or knowledge of his daughter, and was unsolicited and unprompted by anyone, the presumption of undue influence was rebutted [Camperi v. Chiechi (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 485, 504, 286 P.2d 399] .

[3] Effect of Family Relationship

The solitary fact of family relationship will not by itself establish the existence of a fiduciary or confidential relationship raising a presumption of undue influence. Whether or not such a relation exists between members of the same family depends on all the facts and circumstances of the case, and unless one party actually dominates the other so that the other depends on him or her for advice and guidance, a confidential relation does not exist even though the parties are closely related by family ties [Peters v. Papoulacos (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 791, 794, 32 Cal. Rptr. 689] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

23-278 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 278.20

§ 278.20 Actions to Impose a Trust

[1] Nature of Remedy

In some actions involving the validity of a gift, a cause of action to impress a trust over the disputed property also has been sought [see Camperi v. Chiechi (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 485, 510, 286 P.2d 399 ; American Trust Co. v. Fitzmaurice (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 382, 387, 280 P.2d 545 ; Fritz v. Thompson (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 858, 864-865, 271 P.2d 205] . It would appear that the attempts involved in these three cases concerned the creation of either a resulting trust [see Civ. Code § 2223] or a constructive trust [see Civ. Code § 2224], but the distinctions between these two types of trusts do not appear to have been carefully made. For discussion of the distinction between resulting trusts and constructive trusts as well as complaints to create a resulting trust as well as forms of complaints to create a constructive trust, see Ch. 560, Trusts .

[2] Creation of a Trust

In order for one who owns property to make himself or herself a trustee of that property for another while retaining legal title, it is necessary that he or she use words or do acts which clearly denote the intention to relinquish his or her present interest in the property and to hold it for the benefit of another. In addition, there must be a specific property to be held in trust by the trustor, as the trustee, and an absolute parting by him or her with that beneficial interest which had been his or hers until the declaration of the trust [Fritz v. Thompson (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 858, 864, 271 P.2d 205] .

[3] Distinction Between Gift and Trust

The important difference between a gift and a voluntary trust is that in the case of a gift, the property itself passes to the donee. In the case of a trust, the actual, beneficial, or equitable title passes to the trust while the legal title either is transferred to a third person or may be retained by the person creating it to hold for the purpose of the trust [Estate of Alberts (1940) 38 Cal. App. 2d 42, 46, 100 P.2d 538] .

[4] Imperfect Gift Not Necessarily Creating Trust

Despite the fact that a claim of trust has often been raised in connection with a gift suit, frequently both claims will fail since, if the elements necessary for the creation of a gift are missing, then the elements necessary for creating a trust are also missing [see Gonzalez v. Riis (1959) 171 Cal. App. 2d 473, 476-477, 340 P.2d 1015 ; Fritz v. Thompson (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 858, 863, 271 P.2d 205 ; Estate of Alberts (1940) 38 Cal. App. 2d 42, 46, 100 P.2d 538] . Equity will not perfect an imperfect gift by enforcing a trust merely because of the imperfection since, to do so, would be to give effect to an intention never contemplated by the donor [Fritz v. Thompson (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 858, 863, 271 P.2d 205 ; Estate of Alberts (1940) 38 Cal. App. 2d 42, 46, 100 P.2d 538] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

23-278 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 278.21

§ 278.21 Uniform Transfers to Minors Act

[1] In General

The California Uniform Transfers to Minors Act (Prob. Code §§ 3900-3925) sets forth procedures that may be followed in making a gift of property to a minor. The Act does not, however, create the sole means by which a gift can be made to a minor [Prob. Code § 3925].

By making a transfer under the Act, the transferor incorporates in the disposition all the provisions of the Act [Prob. Code § 3911(b)]. All gifts made under the Act are irrevocable [Prob. Code §§ 3904, 3911(a)(3)]. The Act contains specific directions for the creation of a gift under the Act which depend on the type of property involved [see Prob. Code § 3909]. Under the Act, gifts to minors are cared for by a "custodian," who, like a trustee, manages the property [see Prob. Code § 3912], makes certain distributions for the benefit of the minor [see Prob. Code § 3914], and ultimately distributes the custodial property to the the minor, usually when the minor turns 18 [Prob. Code § 3920]. The Act contains a comprehensive set of rules which govern such matters as the rights, duties, and powers of the custodian [see Prob. Code §§ 3912-3915]; termination of the custodianship [see Prob. Code §§ 3918]; and certain specified rights of action which are discussed in § 278.21[2] -[4].

In addition to gifts, the Act covers transfers from estates, trusts, and guardianships [see Prob. Code § 3904]. Gifts made under the California Uniform Gifts to Minors Act prior to January 1, 1985, are governed by the current Act except insofar as the application of the current Act impairs constitutionally vested rights [Prob. Code § 3923(c)].

For forms related to the conveyance of property to a minor under the provisions of the Act, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 60A, Gifts.

[2] Removal of Custodian or Imposition of Bond Requirement

A transferor or his or her representative, an adult member of the minor's family, a guardian of the person of the minor, the conservator of the minor, or the minor if he or she has attained the age of 14, may bring an action to remove the custodian for cause and to designate a successor custodian or to require the custodian to post bond [Prob. Code § 3918(f)].

At least 15 days before the hearing on the petition, the petitioner must serve notice by mail or personal delivery on the minor, the minor's parent or parents, and the transferor [Prob. Code § 3918(g)].

[3] Accounting

A minor who has attained the age of 14, the minor's guardian of the person or legal representative, an adult member of the minor's family, a transferor, or a transferor's legal representative, may bring an action for an accounting by the custodian or the legal representative of the custodian [Prob. Code § 3919(a)]. In addition, a successor custodian may petition the court for an accounting by the predecessor custodian [Prob. Code § 3919(b)].

The court, in a proceeding under the Act, or in any other proceeding may require or permit the custodian or the custodian's legal representative to account [Prob. Code § 3919(c)]. If a custodian is removed under Prob. Code § 3918(f), the court must order [Prob. Code § 3919(d)]:

- An accounting.
- Delivery of the custodial property and records to the successor custodian.
- The execution of all instruments required for transfer of the custodial property [Prob. Code § 3919(d)].

The right of a party to petition for an accounting continues for one year after the filing of a final accounting by the custodian or the custodian's legal representative and delivery of the custodial property to the minor or the minor's estate [Prob. Code § 3919(e)].

[4] Claims Related to Custodial Property

Claims based on obligations, contracts, or torts related to the custodial property may be asserted against the custodial property in an action against the custodian in the custodial capacity [Prob. Code § 3917(a)]. In such actions, liability of both the minor and the custodian in a personal capacity are limited by the Act [Prob. Code § 3917(b), (c)]. A minor who has attained the age of 14, the minor's guardian of the person or legal representative, an adult member of the minor's family, a transferor or a transferor's legal representative, may petition the court for a determination of responsibility, as between the custodial property and the custodian personally, for claims against the custodial property unless the responsibility was adjudicated in a prior action under Prob. Code § 3917 to which the minor or the minor's legal representative was a party [Prob. Code § 3919(a)].

The California Uniform Transfers to Minors Act contains provisions relating to jurisdiction, choice of law, and venue [Prob. Code §§ 3902, 3921].

23-278 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 278.42

§ 278.42 Decisions

[1] Actions to Create a Trust

Distinction between gift and trust is that, in case of gift, the property passes to donee, whereas in a trust title passes to third person or may be retained by the settlor. Estate of Alberts (1940) 38 Cal. App. 2d 42, 46, 100 P.2d 538

No resulting or constructive trust created when executrix had not obligated herself to part with sum of money. Fritz v. Thompson (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 858, 864-865, 271 P.2d 205

Creation of trust requires use of words or acts that clearly indicate intention of settlor to relinquish his or her present interest, to hold it for the benefit of another, and to place specific property in the trust. Fritz v. Thompson (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 858, 864, 271 P.2d 205

Actions to impress a trust over imperfect gifts. Camperi v. Chiechi (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 485, 510, 286 P.2d 399 ; American Trust Co. v. Fitzmaurice (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 382, 387, 280 P.2d 545 ; Fritz v. Thompson (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 858, 864-865, 271 P.2d 205

Plaintiff has burden of proving constructive trust. Manti v. Gunari (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 442, 452-453, 85 Cal. Rptr. 366

Parol evidence admissible to show intention and realities of ownership over property which defendant urged was a gift and plaintiff urged was a trust. American Trust Co. v. Fitzmaurice (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 382, 387, 280 P.2d 545

Despite fact that donor had told plaintiff that the bankbook was a gift to her, by retaining the power to request the bankbook and to withdraw and deposit funds at will in account, donor does not create valid gift but a revocable trust. Estate of Alberts (1940) 38 Cal. App. 2d 42, 46, 100 P.2d 538

[2] Imperfect Gift Does Not Necessarily Create Trust

Equity will not perfect imperfect gift by enforcing trust because of imperfection since, to do so, would be to give effect to an intention never contemplated by donor. Fritz v. Thompson (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 858, 863, 271 P.2d 205 ; Estate of Alberts (1940) 38 Cal. App. 2d 42, 46, 100 P.2d 538

Frequently, if elements necessary for gift are missing, then elements necessary to create trust also are missing. Gonzalez v. Riis (1959) 171 Cal. App. 2d 473, 476-477, 340 P.2d 1015 ; Fritz v. Thompson (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 858, 863, 271 P.2d 205 ; Estate of Alberts (1940) 38 Cal. App. 2d 42, 46, 100 P.2d 538

[3] Essential Elements of Gifts

Essential elements for making a gift apply to both gift inter vivos and gift causa mortis. Berl v. Rosenberg (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 125, 129-130, 336 P.2d 975

Distinction between gift causa mortis and gift inter vivos is that former is revocable. Berl v. Rosenberg (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 125, 129-130, 336 P.2d 975

Real property may be the subject of a gift. Gordon v. Barr (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 596, 91 P.2d 101 ; Andreotti v. Andreotti (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 533, 538-540, 36 Cal. Rptr. 709

[b] Acceptance

No conscious acceptance was made when plaintiff could not remember the circumstances surrounding the delivery of a deed to her and was not aware of the contents of the piece of paper she put away for safekeeping. Jones v. Jones (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 468, 472-473, 6 Cal. Rptr. 819

Marshall (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 475, 479, 295 P.2d 131*

[c] Delivery

Gift was valid when deceased sent written letter to brokers directing that securities owned by him and held by them should be given to donee. Berl v. Rosenberg (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 125, 133, 336 P.2d 975

Rolinson (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 387, 390, 282 P.2d 98* ; Blonde v. Estate of Jenkins (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 682, 686, 281 P.2d 14

[d] Intent

Intent requires conveyance of present interest. Estate of Franco (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 374, 385, 122 Cal. Rptr. 661, 123 Cal. Rptr. 458 , modified at 50 Cal. App. 3d 374, 123 Cal. Rptr. 458 ; Brown v. Meredith (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 762, 765, 34 Cal. Rptr. 153

Letter found among deceased's effects does not constitute a gift causa mortis or inter vivos since no present interest is being conveyed. In re F.P. Newport Corp. (SD Cal. 1961) 194 F. Supp. 757, 761

[e] Surrender of Dominion and Control

Surrender of dominion and control over gift is essential for valid gift. Rolinson v. Rolinson (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 387, 390, 282 P.2d 98

Gift was incomplete when decedent gave plaintiff his bankbook but continued to make withdrawal and deposits in account at will; decedent had retained substantial dominion and control over account. Estate of Alberts (1940) 38 Cal. App. 2d 42, 46-47, 100 P.2d 538

First Nat'l Bank v. United States (SD Cal. 1969) 298 F. Supp. 1249, 1252-1253*

[5] Gifts Causa Mortis

[a] Making Gift Causa Mortis

Gift made during last illness of donor or under circumstances which would impress donor with expectation of death is presumed to be gift in view of death. Civ. Code § 1150

Gifts made by ailing decedent were inferably as gifts causa mortis since decedent, a physician, presumed to know extent and seriousness of his illness. Rosenberg v. Broy (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 591, 596, 12 Cal. Rptr. 103

Elements of gift causa mortis were present when decedent, who was about to enter hospital, gave package of money to donee stating he was to use money for decedent's bills, and, if decedent died, to keep the balance. Odone v. Marzocchi (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 431, 437, 211 P.2d 297

[b] Revocation of Gift Causa Mortis

No special requirements exist for revocation of gift causa mortis. Rosenberg v. Broy (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 591, 596, 12 Cal. Rptr. 103

[6] Gifts in General

Gifts first asserted after death of alleged donor are regarded with suspicion by the court because of great opportunities for fraud. Blonde v. Estate of Jenkins (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 682, 685, 281 P.2d 14

Suicide by donor does not invalidate a gift if all other essential elements are met. Berl v. Rosenberg (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 125, 130, 336 P.2d 975

Although property was purchased from community funds, evidence was sufficient to show valid gift when husband executed quitclaim deed to wife for his half-interest in property. Odone v. Marzocchi (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 431, 435-436, 211 P.2d 297

When one party executed a promissory note for second without any consideration which was to be presented to estate of first upon his death, gift was incomplete since second was not vested with an absolute, unconditional present interest in gift. Ogden v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 26, 27, 276 P.2d 146

Letter sent to third parties possessing securities of donor in the normal course of business which was sufficient to cause delivery of one-half interest in securities was gift to donee. Berl v. Rosenberg (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 125, 133, 336 P.2d 975

Testamentary disposition rather than present gift was created when decedent placed names of himself and sister in joint tenancy on shares of stock but retained dominion and control over shares and invested proceeds without consulting sister. Estate of Franco (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 374, 385, 122 Cal. Rptr. 661, 123 Cal. Rptr. 458 , modified at 50 Cal. App. 3d 374, 123 Cal. Rptr. 458 ; De Puy v. Sullivan (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 292, 295-296, 335 P.2d 750

Evidence of gift was ample when donee showed that donor had repeatedly refused payments on note owed by donee to her, had informed donee that she did not want the donee to repay money, and had given an irrevocable letter of instruction to her attorney instructing that the note be given to the donee upon the donor's death. Bank of America v. Cottrell (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 361, 363-364, 20 Cal. Rptr. 126

[b] Rescission Based on Undue Influence

Restitution based on rescission is available to recover gift obtained through undue influence. Estate of Bliss (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 630, 639-640, 18 Cal. Rptr. 821 ; McDonald v. Hewlett (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 680, 686, 228 P.2d 83

Three elements leading to presumption of undue influence are (1) confidential relationship, (2) undue profit by gift, and (3) active participation in the procurement of the gift. Estate of Bliss (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 630, 639-640, 18 Cal. Rptr. 821

[2] Use of Form

The form above may be used to obtain declaratory relief when a donee and a donor are contesting the validity of a gift. The complaint asks that the court declare the rights of the parties over the disputed property.

[3] Declaratory Relief

When an actual controversy exists as to the respective rights and duties of two or more persons under the terms of a written instrument or contract, any one or more of those persons may commence an action for declaratory relief [Code Civ. Proc. § 1060]. The action may be commenced by complaint or cross-complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 1060]. Any kind of written instrument may be the subject of an action for declaratory relief, except a will or trust [Code Civ. Proc. § 1060].

The plaintiff or cross-complainant may ask for a declaration of rights or duties, either alone or with other relief, and the court may make a binding declaration of these rights or duties, regardless of whether further relief is or could be claimed at the time [Code Civ. Proc. § 1060]. The court's declaration may be either affirmative or negative in form and effect, and the declaration, when granted, will have the force of a final judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 1060].

An action for declaratory relief, with exceptions not relevant here, is properly commenced in the superior court as a case of unlimited jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 1060; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 85.1, 86(a)(7)(A)].

For discussion of actions for declaratory relief, see Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief .

[4] Verification

Verification of this complaint is not required, but verification of the complaint requires that defendant file a verified answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 446(a)] and precludes a general denial [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30].

[2] Use of Form

The form above may be used by the representative of an estate of a donor to recover gifts from a donee which were procured by undue influence [see Estate of Bliss (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 630, 640-641, 18 Cal. Rptr. 821] .

- That plaintiff is the representative of the estate of the decedent (Paragraph 1).
- That decedent was elderly, ill, and incompetent to manage his or her property (Paragraph 5).
- That defendant donee was in a confidential relationship with decedent (Paragraph 6).
- That while under defendant's influence, decedent gave all of his or her money and property to defendant (Paragraph 8).
- That decedent's gifts were the result of undue influence (Paragraph 8).

[4] Decisions

Restitution based on rescission is available to recover gift obtained through undue influence. Estate of Bliss (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 630, 639-640, 18 Cal. Rptr. 821 al. Rptr. 821; McDonald v. Hewlett (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 680, 686, 228 P.2d 83

Three elements leading to presumption of undue influence are (1) confidential relationship, (2) undue profit by gift, and (3) active participation in the procurement of the gift. Estate of Bliss (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 630, 639-640, 18 Cal. Rptr. 821

Fact of family relationship is insufficient to prove confidential relationship. Peters v. Papoulacos (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 791, 794, 32 Cal. Rptr. 689

Nurse-patient relationship and unusual gift of $76,000, and donee's active participation in obtaining decedent's securities from safe deposit box led to presumption of undue influence. Estate of Bliss (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 630, 640-641, 18 Cal. Rptr. 821

Presumption of undue influence is rebuttable by donee. Church of Merciful Saviour v. Volunteers of America (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 851, 861, 8 Cal. Rptr. 48 ; Camperi v. Chiechi (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 485, 504, 286 P.2d 399 ; Pfingst v. Goetting (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 293, 297, 215 P.2d 93

[2] Use of Form

The form above is for use by a donor of a gift of money or property made in contemplation of marriage to recover the money or property from the donee when the marriage plans are terminated by the donee or by both parties [see Civ. Code § 1590].

Civ. Code § 1590 provides that a donor may recover gifts made in contemplation of marriage when the donee refuses to enter into the marriage as contemplated as well as when the parties mutually consent to give up their marriage plans. Refusal of the donee to enter into a marriage, which some courts have considered as a breach of a marriage contract [see, e.g., Simonian v. Donoian (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 259, 262, 215 P.2d 119] may be shown by any words or conduct which give rise to the inference that the donee does not intend to consummate the wedding as planned. Thus, there need not be a verbal or written refusal to marry. For instance, the cessation of intimate communications and visits without explanation is sufficient to show a refusal [Simonian v. Donoian (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 259, 261, 215 P.2d 119] .

§ 279.10 Governing Statutes

An action or cross action for judicial relief by a "good faith improver" is authorized and governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 871.1-871.7. The time within which the action must be commenced is prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 340(e). The right of a good faith improver to a setoff against damages claimed by the property owner for the withholding of the property is set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 741. Finally, Civ. Code § 1013.5 governs the right to remove improvements affixed to the land of another on the payment of related damages.

§ 279.11 "Good Faith Improver" and "Person" Defined

"Good faith improver," as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq., means a person who makes an improvement to land in good faith and under the erroneous belief, because of a mistake of law or fact, that he or she is the owner of the land [Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1(a); see Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 317, 325, 178 Cal. Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588 ; Powell v. Mayo (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 994, 997-998, 177 Cal. Rptr. 66] . The term also includes a successor in interest of a good faith improver [Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1(b)]. The definition is limited to a person who believes that he or she is the owner of the land, and does not include licensees, tenants, and conditional vendors of chattels [see Law Revision Commission Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1].

The word "person," as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq., includes a corporation and an unincorporated association, as well as a natural person [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 17 (first paragraph), 871.2; see also Law Revision Commission Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 871.2].

§ 279.12 Alternative Actions Distinguished

[1] Judicial Remedy Is Prohibited When Related Statutory Remedy Would Result in Substantial Justice

[a] In General

The court may not grant relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. if it determines that substantial justice to the parties under the circumstances of the particular case would result by the good faith improver's exercise of either of the following rights [Code Civ. Proc. § 871.4]:

- The right of setoff under Code Civ. Proc. § 741 [see [b], below].
- The right to remove the improvement under Civ. Code § 1013.5 [see [c], below].

In determining whether removal of the improvement would result in substantial justice to the parties under the circumstances of the particular case, the court must take into consideration any plans the owner of the land may have for the use or development of the land on which the improvement was made and the owner's need for the land on which the improvement was made in connection with the use or development of other property owned by the owner [Code Civ. Proc. § 871.4; see Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 317, 325, 178 Cal. Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588] .

[b] Right to Setoff

In an action for the recovery of property, when damages are claimed for withholding the property recovered, and improvements have been made on the property by the defendant or his or her predecessor as a good faith improver, the amount by which the improvements enhance the value of the land must be allowed as a setoff against the damages. For these purposes, "good faith improver" has the meaning given that term by Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 [Code Civ. Proc. § 741; see § 279.11].

[c] Right to Remove Improvements

[i] Basic Right and Related Limitations

When any person affixes improvements to the land of another, the person (or his or her successor in interest) has the right to remove the improvements, provided both of the following are satisfied [Civ. Code § 1013.5(a)]:

- The person must have affixed the improvements while acting in good faith and erroneously believing (because of a mistake either of law or fact) that he or she had a right to affix the improvements.

- The person (or his or her successor in interest) must pay the owner of the land, and any other person having an interest in the land who acquired the interest for value after the commencement of the work of improvement and in reliance on that work, as their interests appear, for all of their damages proximately resulting from the affixing and removal of the improvements.

This rule does not affect or qualify the law regarding the circumstances under which a court of equity will refuse to compel removal of an encroachment [Civ. Code § 1013.5(e); see Ch. 11, Adjoining Landowners].

For discussion and a complaint to remove an improvement mistakenly affixed to the land of another, see § 279.50.

[ii] Defendants; Lis Pendens; Costs

In any action brought to enforce the right to remove improvements under Civ. Code § 1013.5(a), the following requirements apply [Civ. Code § 1013.5(b)]:

- The owner of the land and encumbrancers of record must be named as defendants.

- A notice of pendency of the action must be recorded before trial.

- The owner of the land will be entitled to recover his or her costs of suit and a reasonable attorney's fee to be fixed by the court.

Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5 plainly provides that a party granted relief as a good faith improver must protect the landowner from any pecuniary loss incurred in litigating the matter, including attorneys' fees and costs "incurred in the action in which relief" as a good faith improver is sought. Therefore, the statute does not limit the landowner's recovery to losses incurred in litigating the cross-complaint of the party seeking relief as a good faith improver. Rather, the landowner must also be reimbursed for any expenses incurred in bringing the action that precipitated the cross-complaint [Tremper v. Quinones (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 944, 949, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 672] .

[iii] Interlocutory Judgment

If it appears to the court that the total amount of damages cannot readily be ascertained before the removal of the improvements, or that it is otherwise in the interests of justice, the court may order an interlocutory judgment authorizing the removal of the improvements, provided the plaintiff first pays into court the estimated total damages, as found by the court or as stipulated [Civ. Code § 1013.5(c)].

[iv] Protection of Lienholders

If the court finds that the holder of any lien on the property acquired his or her lien in good faith and for value after the commencement of the work of improvement and in reliance on that work, or that as a result of the making or affixing of the improvements there is any lien against the property under Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 3 (mechanics' liens), the final or interlocutory judgment authorizing removal cannot be given unless the holder of each lien consents to the removal of the improvements. This consent must be in writing and filed with the court [Civ. Code § 1013.5(d)].

[d] Comparison of Related Statutory Remedies

Unlike Code Civ. Proc. § 741 and Civ. Code § 1013.5, Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5 vests the court with broad equitable powers to fashion a remedy consistent with substantial justice to the parties [see §§ 279.16, 279.17]. However, unlike Civ. Code § 1013.5 but like Code Civ. Proc. § 741, relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. is available only to those improvers who acted under the good faith belief that they owned the land in question [see Civ. Code § 1013.5(a); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 741(a), 871.1(a); Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 317, 325, 178 Cal. Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588 ; Okuda v. Superior Court (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 135, 139, 192 Cal. Rptr. 388 ; Southern Pac. Transportation Co. v. Superior Court (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 433, 436-437, 129 Cal. Rptr. 912] .

[2] Adverse Possession and Easements by Prescription

An action under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. is to be distinguished from an action by an adverse possessor or user to secure title to the land or to an easement. The elements necessary to establish title by adverse possession are payment of the taxes levied and assessed on the land, and open and notorious use or possession for the prescribed period [see Code Civ. Proc. § 325]. The possession or use may have been intentional or, like the good faith improver statutes [see Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1(a)], by mistake, but it must have been continuous and uninterrupted, hostile to the true owner, and under a claim of title. A prescriptive easement requires establishment of the same elements except that payment of taxes is required only if the easement has been separately assessed [Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 317, 321-322, 178 Cal. Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588] .

When enacting the good faith improver statutes, the Legislature did not repeal or substantially modify the statutes governing adverse possession. Thus, there is nothing to indicate a legislative intent that the good faith improver statutes were intended to supplant or modify the adverse possession doctrine. Unlike the adverse possession doctrine, Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. are not predicated on length of occupancy. Insofar as the policy set forth in these statutes is predicated on mistake by the occupant, they reflect an intent to grant relief to the mistaken occupier, not to repudiate or reduce his or her rights under the adverse possession doctrine. While some of the equities reflected by Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. underlie California's rule protecting the mistaken adverse possession, the legislative recognition of those equities points to adherence to the mistake doctrine, first enunciated in Woodward v. Faris (1895) 109 Cal. 12, 16-17, 41 P. 781 and affirmed in Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 453, 459-461, 196 P.2d 900 , as it applies to the doctrine of adverse possession. Hence, the possession of an occupier who enters land mistakenly believing that he or she is the owner is adverse unless it is established by substantial evidence that he or she recognized the potential claim of the record owner and expressly or impliedly reflected an intent to claim the disputed land only if record title was determined in his or her favor [Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 317, 325-326, 178 Cal. Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588 (disapproving any implication to the contrary in Berry v. Sbragia (1978) 76 Cal. App. 3d 876, 880, 143 Cal. Rptr. 318)]. For further discussion of adverse possession and prescriptive easements, see Ch. 13, Adverse Possession .

§ 279.13 Limitations on Applicability of Judicial Remedy

[1] Encroachments

Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. do not affect the rules of law that determine the relief, if any, to be granted when a person constructs on his or her own land an improvement that encroaches on adjoining land [Code Civ. Proc. § 871.6]. Code Civ. Proc. § 871.6 was enacted because other provisions of law empower the courts to deal appropriately with encroachments; thus, there is no necessity for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. in encroachment cases [see Law Revision Commission Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 871.6]. For complete coverage of the remedies for encroachment, see Ch. 11, Adjoining Landowners, §§ 11.20 et seq. (discussion) and 11.70 et seq. (forms).

[2] Public Entities

Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. do not apply when (1) the improver is a public entity, or (2) the improvement is made to land owned or possessed by a public entity [Code Civ. Proc. § 871.7(a)]. The term "public entity," as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 871.7, includes the United States, a state, county, city and county, city, district, public authority, public agency, or any other political subdivision or a public corporation [Code Civ. Proc. § 871.7(a)].

In addition, Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. do not apply when the owner of the land on which the improvement is constructed has appropriated the land to a public use and could have acquired the land for that use by exercising the power of eminent domain [Code Civ. Proc. § 871.7(b)]. The purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 871.7 is to make sure that Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. would have no effect on the law relating to eminent domain, inverse condemnation, and encroachments on public lands [see Legislative Committee Comment (Assembly) to Code Civ. Proc. § 871.7].

§ 279.16 Equitable Jurisdiction of Court

Subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 871.4 [see § 279.12[1][a]], the court may effect an adjustment of the rights, equities, and interests of the good faith improver, the owner of the land, and other interested parties (including, but not limited to, lessees, lienholders, and encumbrancers) as is consistent with substantial justice to the parties under the circumstances of the particular case [Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5; see Powell v. Mayo (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 994, 998, 123 Cal. App. 3d 994, 177 Cal. Rptr. 66] . This provision vests the court with broad equitable jurisdiction to effect an adjustment of the rights, equities, and interests of the parties consistent with substantial justice [Okuda v. Superior Court (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 135, 139, 192 Cal. Rptr. 388 ; see Legislative Committee Comment (Assembly) to Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5].

The fact that the plaintiff might seek damages as well as equitable relief in such a case does not dilute the court's broad equitable jurisdiction under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5 [Okuda v. Superior Court (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 135, 140-141, 192 Cal. Rptr. 388] .

§ 279.17 Relief Available

[1] Discretion of Court

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5, discussed in § 279.16, the court has considerable discretion to select appropriate relief from the full range of equitable and legal remedies [Southern Pac. Transportation Co. v. Superior Court (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 433, 437, 129 Cal. Rptr. 912] . The relief granted must protect the owner of the land on which the improvement was constructed against any pecuniary loss, but avoid, insofar as possible, enriching him or her unjustly at the expense of the good faith improver [Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5; see Powell v. Mayo (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 994, 998, 177 Cal. Rptr. 66] .

[2] Possible Remedies

In commenting on Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5, discussed in § 279.16, the California Law Revision Commission provided several examples of appropriate remedies. For example, if the landowner desires the land as improved, the court might order, as the trial court did in Taliaferro v. Colasso (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 903, 294 P.2d 774 , that title be quieted in the owner on condition that he or she pay to the improver the value of the improvements or some lesser amount. On the other hand, when the landowner does not desire the land as improved and removal of the improvement is not economically possible, the court might order that title be quieted in the improver on the condition that he or she pay to the landowner the value of the unimproved land, or, in the alternative, that a judicial sale be made. It would also be appropriate for the court to credit the landowner with the value of the improver's use and occupation of the land and for the expenses the landowner has incurred in the action to resolve the matter. Under appropriate circumstances, the judgment might provide for deferred payments and for an equitable lien to secure the payments. The situation of the landowner, however, might require a completely different form of relief. The court should deny the improver any relief in a case where no remedy can be devised that can fully protect the landowner against pecuniary loss [8 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n. Reports 1373, 1383 (1967); for a more detailed discussion of alternatives available to the court in administering Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5, the foregoing source refers to Merryman, Improving the Lot of the Trespassing Improver, 11 Stan. L. Rev. 456, 483-489 (1959), reprinted in 8 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n. Reports 801, 848-854 (1967)].

It has further been pointed out that the legislative committee comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5 provides some insight into the kinds of relief contemplated by the statute's authors [Okuda v. Superior Court (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 135, 139, 192 Cal. Rptr. 388] . The legislative comment parallels to some extent the California Law Revision Commission's comment, above. The legislative committee comment, as quoted in Okuda, stated that, under the section, the judgment might permit the landowner to make installment payments and give the improver an equitable lien to secure the payments. On the other hand, when the landowner does not desire the land as improved and removal of the improvement is not economically possible, the court might order that title be quieted in the improver on the condition that he or she pay to the landowner not less than the value of the unimproved land for its highest and best use at the time of trial or, in the alternative, that a judicial sale be made and the landowner be paid not less than such amount [Okuda v. Superior Court (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 135, 139, 192 Cal. Rptr. 388 ; for full text, see Legislative Committee Comment (Assembly) to Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5].

§ 279.18 Drafting Considerations

[1] Complaint

By filing an action under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.3, a plaintiff invokes the equitable powers of the court. That is, the plaintiff invites the court to exercise its powers under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5 to "effect an adjustment of the rights, equities, and interests" of the parties as is consistent with substantial justice [see § 279.15]. Because of the broad powers of the courts and the wide range of judicial relief available, counsel for plaintiff should, in drafting the complaint, include in the prayer a request for the specific relief sought by the plaintiff, and in the body of the complaint allege the facts that would support the award of that relief [see § 279.40].

[2] Answer or Cross Complaint

The defendant may desire to do no more than merely deny the material allegations of the complaint or allege new matter constituting a defense that is not alleged in the complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]. But if he or she wishes to seek alternative affirmative relief, such as damages for trespass, counsel should prepare, serve, and file a cross complaint, because affirmative relief may not be claimed in the answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(c)].

§ 279.19 No Right to Jury Trial

There is no right to a jury trial in an action by a good faith improver under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. [Southern Pac. Transportation Co. v. Superior Court (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 433, 437-438, 129 Cal. Rptr. 912] . This is true even though the plaintiff may seek recovery of damages only. Because of the wide range of equitable and legal relief authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5, it would be an impossible task for a jury to determine the appropriate relief and to resolve the rights, equities, and interests of all the parties. Consequently, it is the function of the court and not the jury to be the trier of fact in a good faith improver action [Southern Pac. Transportation Co. v. Superior Court (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 433, 437-438, 129 Cal. Rptr. 912 ; quoted with approval in C & K Engineering Contractors v. Amber Steel Co. (1978) 23 Cal. 3d 1, 11, 151 Cal. Rptr. 323, 587 P.2d 1136] .

Chapter 279 GOOD FAITH IMPROVER OF REAL PROPERTY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

23-279 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 279.21

§ 279.21 Factors Considered

[1] Negligence of Good Faith Improver

The degree of negligence of the good faith improver should be taken into account by the court in determining whether the improver acted in good faith and in determining the relief, if any, that is consistent with substantial justice to the parties under the circumstances of the particular case [Code Civ. Proc. § 871.3(b); see Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 317, 325, 178 Cal. Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588 ; Powell v. Mayo (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 994, 998, 177 Cal. Rptr. 66] .

Code Civ. Proc. § 871.3(b), discussed above, has introduced a new element into the traditional concept of "good faith." In its traditional sense, good faith connotes a moral quality; it is equated with honesty of purpose, freedom from fraudulent intent, and faithfulness to duty or obligation. By requiring that the good faith improver's degree of negligence be taken into account, Code Civ. Proc. § 871.3(b) calls for a measure of care as well as honesty and, without evoking conventional choices between ordinary and gross negligence, the statute, by calling for consideration of the "degree" of negligence, invites consideration of varying intensities of negligence [Raab v. Casper (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 866, 872, 124 Cal. Rptr. 590] .

However, negligence on the part of the improver does not necessarily preclude all relief. The degree of negligence is merely a factor to be taken into account in determining whether the improver acted in good faith and in determining the relief that is consistent with substantial justice [Powell v. Mayo (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 994, 999, 177 Cal. Rptr. 66] .

[2] Expenses Incurred by Owner

In protecting the owner of the land against pecuniary loss, the court must take into consideration the expenses the owner of the land has incurred in the action in which relief under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 871.3-871.5 is sought, including, but not limited to, reasonable attorney's fees [Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5; see Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 317, 325, 178 Cal. Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588] .

[3] Owner's Plans Respecting Property

In determining the appropriate form of relief, the court must take into consideration any plans the owner of the land may have for the use or development of the land on which the improvement was made, as well as his or her need for the land on which the improvement was made in connection with the use or development of other property owned by him or her [Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5; see Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 317, 325, 178 Cal. Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588] .

[4] Continuation of Work of Improvement After Knowledge of Trespass

The good-faith improver legislation gives the improver something akin to a private power of eminent domain, and the greater the improver's investment, the greater his or her potential appeal to the court's conscience. Consequently, an improver should not be permitted to worsen the true owner's position after the latter has warned the improver of a possible trespass, and deliberate augmentation of an initial investment after a warning of trespass is, therefore, a legally significant factor for the trial court. In weighing the grant, denial, or apportionment of relief, a trial court should consider any interim warning, the character and relative cost of the improvements made before and after the warning, and the unitary or separable character of the improvements [Raab v. Casper (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 866, 874, 124 Cal. Rptr. 590] .

In commenting on Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1(a), discussed in § 279.11, the California Law Revision Commission noted that under this section a person is not a good faith improver as to any improvement made after he or she becomes aware of facts that preclude him or her from acting in good faith. It gave the following example: a person who builds a house on a lot owned by another may obtain relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. if he or she acted in good faith under the erroneous belief, because of a mistake of law or fact, that he or she was the owner of the land. However, if the same person makes an additional improvement after discovering that he or she is not the owner of the land, he or she would not be entitled to relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. with respect to the additional improvement [see Law Revision Commission Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1].

This comment was criticized by the court in Raab. The court stated that the law should recognize that a unitary improvement cannot be chopped in half with one half being entitled to statutory relief and the other not, and that despite the California Law Revision Commission's comment, it is not practical to fasten separate findings of good and bad faith on separate physical parts of an indivisible physical project. Rather, the improver's intransigence should be considered as part of the improver's degree of negligence in determining his or her good faith and in shaping the relief [Raab v. Casper (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 866, 872, 874, 124 Cal. Rptr. 590] .

23-279 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 279.32

§ 279.32 Decisions

[1] Good Faith Improver

"Good faith improver," as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq., is person who makes improvement to land in good faith and under erroneous belief, because of mistake of law or fact, that he or she is owner of that land. Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 317, 325, 178 Cal. Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588 ; Okuda v. Superior Court (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 135, 139, 192 Cal. Rptr. 388 ; Powell v. Mayo (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 994, 997-998, 177 Cal. Rptr. 66

[2] Selection of Appropriate Relief

In every case for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq., burden is on good faith improver to establish that he or she is entitled to relief under these sections; degree of negligence of good faith improver should be taken into account by court in determining whether improver acted in good faith and in determining relief, if any, that is consistent with substantial justice to parties under circumstances of particular case. Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 317, 325, 30 Cal. 3d 317, 178 Cal. Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588 ; Powell v. Mayo (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 994, 998, 177 Cal. Rptr. 66 ; Raab v. Casper (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 866, 872, 124 Cal. Rptr. 590

Relief granted to owner of land on which improvement was erroneously placed by good faith improver must (1) protect owner against any pecuniary loss, but (2) avoid, insofar as possible, enriching him or her unjustly at expense of good faith improver. Powell v. Mayo (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 994, 998, 177 Cal. Rptr. 66

Court has considerable discretion under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5 to select appropriate relief from full range of equitable and legal remedies. Southern Pac. Transportation Co. v. Superior Court (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 433, 437, 129 Cal. Rptr. 912

[3] Court as Trier of Fact

No right to jury trial in action by good faith improver under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq.; it is function of court and not jury to be trier of fact in good faith improver action. C & K Engineering Contractors v. Amber Steel Co. (1978) 23 Cal. 3d 1, 11, 151 Cal. Rptr. 323, 587 P.2d 1136 ; Southern Pac. Transportation Co. v. Superior Court (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 433, 437-438, 129 Cal. Rptr. 912

[4] Possession of Mistaken Occupier Adverse

Possession of occupier who enters land mistakenly believing that he or she is owner is adverse unless it is established by substantial evidence that he or she recognized potential claim of record owner and expressly or impliedly reflected intent to claim disputed land only if record title was determined in his or her favor. Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 317, 325-326, 178 Cal. Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588 (disapproving any implication to the contrary in Berry v. Sbragia (1978) 76 Cal. App. 3d 876, 880, 143 Cal. Rptr. 318)

Plaintiff alleges:

1. _____ [Capacity of plaintiff, if other than a natural person suing in an individual capacity, e.g., Plaintiff is, and at all times in mentioned in this complaint was, a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of California, with its principal place of business in _____ County, California].

with its principal place of business in _____ [city], _____ County, California].

3. [Specify names and interests in the land of any defendant lessees, lienholders, encumbrancers, and/or others, or state as follows: Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued in this complaint as DOES I-_____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by these fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. Plaintiff is informed and believes, and on that basis alleges, that each of the fictitiously named defendants claims some interest in the real property described in this complaint].

4. At all times mentioned in this complaint [, except as otherwise expressly specified], the following described real property, called "the property" in this complaint, was and is _____ [specify, e.g., an unimproved parcel, consisting of approximately 10 acres or a city lot] situated in [the City of _____,] _____ County, California: _____ [legal description].

5. _____ [Specify facts showing basis for belief that plaintiff owned the land, e.g.: On or about _____ (date), plaintiff, who had never been involved in any real estate transaction prior to that time, entered into a contract of sale whereby plaintiff purchased the property from defendant on the representation and in the belief that defendant was the owner of the property. A copy of the contract is attached to this complaint as Exhibit A and made a part of this complaint. At the time the contract was entered into, defendant showed plaintiff a copy of a grant deed by which the property had been conveyed to defendant some years before. Pursuant to the terms of the contract, plaintiff, on or about _____ (date), paid defendant the full purchase price of $_____, which was the fair market value of the property at the time, and defendant executed a grant deed that defendant then caused to be recorded in the office of the Recorder of _____ County, California. Immediately after execution of the contract and payment of the purchase price, plaintiff went into possession of the property].

6. _____ [Specify nature of improvement made on land, when it was made, and its cost, e.g., Immediately after taking possession of the property, plaintiff, between _____ (date), and _____ (date), had a single-family residence, called "the residence" in this complaint, constructed on the property at a total cost of $_____].

7. _____ [Specify discovery of true facts, e.g., In anticipation of the subsequent resale of the property, plaintiff, on or about _____ (date within one year of time this action is filed), obtained a title report on the property and for the first time learned that defendant corporation at the time of the purported sale was and is the owner of the property, and that defendant, by quitclaim deed, had conveyed the property to defendant corporation on or about _____ (date). A copy of this report is attached to this complaint as Exhibit B and made a part of this complaint].

8. _____ [Specify in this and subsequently numbered paragraphs any additional facts relative to the circumstances of the particular case, e.g., On or about _____ (date), plaintiff informed defendant in writing of the above discovery and requested defendant to cause defendant corporation to execute a grant deed of the property to plaintiff. A copy of this notice is attached to this complaint as Exhibit C and made a part of this complaint. However, defendant failed and refused, and continues to fail and refuse, to cause defendant corporation to execute the deed, or any deed of the property to plaintiff, and has advised plaintiff that defendant corporation plans to have plaintiff evicted from the property].

9. The current market value of the property without the residence is $_____, whereas the current market value of the property with the residence is $_____.

[10. As alleged in Paragraph 2, above, defendant is the sole shareholder in defendant corporation and there exists, and at all times mentioned in this complaint has existed, a unity of interest and ownership between defendant and defendant corporation such that any individuality and separateness between them have ceased, and defendant corporation is the alter ego of defendant.]

11. _____ [Specify infeasibility of removing improvement, e.g., Plaintiff owns no other property and has no present prospect for obtaining any property to which the residence could be economically removed].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

[SET FORTH any specific relief requested, e.g.,]

1. That it be declared that defendant corporation is the alter ego of defendant and that the grant deed executed by defendant was in law a grant deed executed by defendant corporation, or, in the alternative,

2. That defendant corporation be ordered to execute and deliver to plaintiff a sufficient conveyance of the property, or, in the alternative,

3. That title to the property be quieted in defendant corporation on the condition that defendant corporation reimburse plaintiff for the construction costs of the residence, or, in the alternative,

[CONTINUE]

4. That the court otherwise effect an adjustment of the rights, equities, and interests of the parties as is consistent with substantial justice to the parties under the circumstances of this case.

5. For costs of suit incurred in this complaint.

6. For other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a complaint for use by a person who made an improvement to land in good faith and under the erroneous belief, because of a mistake of law or fact, that he or she was the owner of the land [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 871.1(a), 871.3]. In a case with facts similar to those used for illustration in this complaint, counsel might join a separate cause of action against the individual defendant for damages for fraud together with this cause of action. For discussion of fraud claims and forms that may be adapted for this use, see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit . If plaintiff has satisfied the requirements necessary to establish title to the property by adverse possession [see § 279.12[2] (adverse possession and easements by prescription)], counsel may wish to join a separate cause of action to quiet title with the cause of action in this complaint, or to entirely substitute a quiet title action by adverse possession for this complaint. For discussion and forms for use in these actions, see Ch. 13, Adverse Possession .

With appropriate modifications, this form may be used as a cross complaint in a pending action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 871.3; § 279.14[2]].

For discussion of who may bring an action under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq., see §§ 279.13 and 279.14. For coverage of the equitable jurisidiction of the court in these matters, see § 279.16. Finally, for discussion of factors considered by the court when handling this type of case, see § 279.21.

[3] Allegations

The complaint in [1], above, alleges the following:

- The names and capacities and interests of plaintiff and defendant (Paragraph 1 and 2).

- The names and interests in the land of any defendant lessees, lienholders, encumbrancers, and/or others, or if neither these persons nor their interests are known, fictitious names (Paragraph 3) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5].

- A description and the location of the land (Paragraph 4) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 871.1, 871.5].

- Facts showing that the plaintiff, or plaintiff's predecessor in interest, because of a mistake of law or fact, erroneously believed that he or she owned the land (Paragraph 5) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1].

- That the plaintiff, or plaintiff's predecessor in interest, made an improvement to the land, the nature of the improvement, when the improvement was made, and the cost of the improvement (Paragraph 6) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 871.1, 871.5].

- That the land is owned by the defendant or one or more of the defendants (Paragraph 7) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5].

- Additional facts that may aid the court in adjusting the rights, equities, and interests of the parties (Paragraphs 8-11) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 871.5].

If the improvement was made by plaintiff's predecessor in interest, the manner in which plaintiff succeeded to that interest should also be alleged in this complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1(b)].

[4] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[5] Jurisdiction

An action for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. is treated as an unlimited civil case, regardless of the amount in controversy and regardless of whether a defendant cross-complains for relief under this chapter. Any other case in which a defendant cross-complains for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. will be treated as a limited civil case if the cross-complaint is defensive and the case otherwise satisfies the requirements, including the amount in controversy, of a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 871.3(a); see Code Civ. Proc. § 85]. When title or right to possession is to be tried, or permanent injunctive relief is sought, the case will be classified as an unlimited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 88].

[6] Venue

Subject to the power of the court to transfer actions and proceedings as provided in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 392-402, the superior court in the county where the subject real property, or some part of it, is situated is the proper court for the trial of an action for the recovery of real property, or of an estate or interest in the real property, or for the determination in any form of the right or interest in real property, and for injuries to the real property [Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(1)].

6. Based on his/her belief, and acting on the belief in good faith, plaintiff _____ [describe improvement, e.g., planted a row of 25 walnut trees along and within five feet of the supposed boundary line].

7. Plaintiff is now informed and believes and therefore alleges that the true boundary line between the respective properties of plaintiff and defendant _____ [name] is located as follows: _____ [describe], and that the previously mentioned _____ [e.g., trees, and each of them,] are situated on the defendant's land and property, constituting improvements of the property. Plaintiff placed the _____ [e.g., trees] on the defendant's land and property under the mistaken belief that the land belonged to plaintiff.

8. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff notified defendant _____ [name] that plaintiff desired to remove the _____ [e.g., trees] from the defendant's property and offered to pay compensation for any damage caused by the removal of the _____ [e.g., trees]. Defendant _____ [name] refused and still refuses to permit plaintiff to remove _____ [e.g., trees] from the defendant's property.

9. Plaintiff elects to remove the _____ [e.g., trees] from defendant _____'s [name] property under Civil Code Section 1013.5, and in so electing offers to pay defendant _____ [name] all damages proximately caused by the _____ [e.g., planting and removal of the trees], together with the defendant's costs of suit including a reasonable attorney's fee fixed by the court. Plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges that defendant _____ [name] will suffer _____ [either no damages or damages in the sum of no more than $_____] because of the _____ [e.g., planting of the trees on, and the removal of the trees from,] defendant's land and property.

[10. If any defendant is a lienholder for value of the improved property who acted in reliance on the improvements or has a mechanics' lien resulting from the improvements, allege: Defendant _____ (name) is a lienholder as to the property of defendant _____ (name) who acquired the lien _____ (in good faith and for value after the above-described improvements were made by plaintiff and in reliance on that or as a result of the making of the improvements, pursuant to Article XX, Section 15 of the California Constitution). This defendant has given his/her written consent to removal of the improvements by plaintiff. A copy of the consent is attached to, and made a part of, this complaint as Exhibit "A."]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant(s) [, and each of them,] as follows:

1. That plaintiff be permitted to enter on defendant _____'s [name] property and to remove the improvements from the property on payment of any and all damages and costs to defendant _____ [name].

2. For any other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff_____ [name]

[Verification, if desired. See § 11.70[1].]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a complaint for use in an action under Civ. Code § 1013.5 to remove improvements mistakenly made on the land of another landowner. Although this form assumes that the plaintiff and defendant are adjoining landowners, the statutory remedy is not limited to adjoining landowners, as discussed below.

A person who, acting in good faith and erroneously believing (due to a mistake of fact or law) that he or she has a right to do so, affixes improvements to the land of another, has a right to remove the improvements on payment of any damages proximately caused by the affixing and removal of the improvements [Civ. Code § 1013.5(a)]. If an action is brought to enforce that right, the owner of the land and encumbrancers of record must be named as defendants. Further, a notice of the pendency of the action must be recorded before trial [see Ch. 348, Lis Pendens (for forms)]. The owner of the land may recover his or her costs of suit and a reasonable attorney's fee fixed by the court [Civ. Code § 1013.5(b)].

If there is any issue as to whether the improvements were made on land belonging to plaintiff, plaintiff may wish to combine an action to quiet title with the form in [1], above [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 760.010-764.070]. For coverage of quiet title actions, see Ch. 482, Quieting Title .

If removal of the improvements would not afford the parties "substantial justice," an action may be brought for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 871.1 et seq. (action by good faith improver). For a complaint seeking this relief, see § 279.40.

For additional coverage of the right to remove improvements, see § 279.12[1][c].

[3] Allegations

The complaint in [1], above, alleges the following: (1) descriptions and ownership of respective adjoining properties (Paragraphs 1, 2, and 4); (2) that plaintiff made the improvements on defendant's land in the good faith belief, because of a mistake of fact, that he or she had a right to do so (Paragraphs 5-7); and (3) plaintiff's election to remove the improvements on payment of damages and costs to defendant (Paragraph 9) [see Civ. Code § 1013.5(a), (b)].

The complaint names the owner of the land on which the improvements were made and all encumbrancers as parties defendant (Paragraph 3) [see Civ. Code § 1013.5(b)]. If any encumbrancer is a lienholder who acquired his or her lien in good faith and for value after the commencement of the work of improvement and in reliance on that, or if he or she is a mechanics' lienholder under Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 3 as a result of making the improvements, the complaint should allege that the written consent of the lienholder was obtained (Optional Paragraph 10) [see Civ. Code § 1013.5(d)].

[4] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[5] Jurisdiction and Venue

An action under Civ. Code § 1013.5 is within the jurisdiction of the superior court and is not a limited civil case [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86]. When title or right to possession is to be tried, or permanent injunctive relief is sought, the case will be classified as an unlimited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 88].

For coverage of issues relating to venue, see § 279.40[6].

This chapter discusses the appointment of a guardian of a minor under the Probate Code and sets forth the procedures for appointment of a guardian.

This chapter considers when a guardianship is the appropriate proceeding in which to determine the custody of a child and discusses eligibility and preferences in selecting the guardian. The focus of this chapter is primarily on the use of a guardianship of the person as a way of obtaining the legal custody of a child, but guardians of the estate are discussed briefly. The chapter contains the following forms:

- A petition for appointment of guardian of minor [see Prob. Code § 1510] (Judicial Council Form GC-210) [see § 280.110].

- The Judicial Council's Confidential Guardian Screening Form (Judicial Council Form GC-212) [see § 280.110A].

- A petition for appointment of a guardian of the person (Judicial Council Form GC-210(CA) [see § 280.110B].

- The Judicial Council's Child Information Attachment to the guardianship petition (Judicial Council Form GC-210(P) [see § 280.110C].

- A form combining the consent of the proposed guardian, nomination of the guardian [see Prob. Code §§ 1500-1502], and waiver of notice [see Prob. Code § 1260] (Judicial Council Form GC-211) [see § 280.111].

- A declaration under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act [see Fam. Code § 3429] (Judicial Council Form MC-150) [see § 280.112].

- A form for an objection to a petition for appointment of a guardian [see § 280.113].

- A form for an order denying a petition for appointment for a guardian [see § 280.114].

- An order appointing a guardian of a minor [see Prob. Code § 1514] (Judicial Council Form GC-240) [see § 280.115].

- A "Duties of Guardian" form (Judicial Council Form GC-248) [see § 280.115A].

- Letters of guardianship [see Prob. Code §§ 2310, 2311] (Judicial Council Form GC-250) [see § 280.116].

Guardianship is governed principally by Division 4 of the Probate Code [Prob. Code § 1400 et seq.]. In addition, the general standards for determining the custody of a child in a family law proceeding [Fam. Code §§ 3020 et seq., 3040 et seq.] govern the court in a personal guardianship proceeding [see Prob. Code § 1514(b)].

Chapter 280 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP: APPOINTMENT OF GUARDIANS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Guardian of the Person

24-280 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 280.20

§ 280.20 Jurisdiction to Appoint Guardian

[1] General Jurisdiction

Generally the superior court has jurisdiction to appoint a guardian of the person of a minor [Prob. Code § 2200; see Fam. Code § 6500 (minor is person under age 18)].

[2] Juvenile Court Dependency Jurisdiction

Proceedings for the appointment of a guardian for a minor who has been adjudged a dependent child of the juvenile court [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 et seq.] must be conducted by the juvenile court. If the court finds that legal guardianship is the appropriate permanent plan for the minor [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(d)], the court must appoint a guardian and issue letters of guardianship [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(d); see Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.3 (continuing juvenile court jurisdiction over dependent child who has legal guardian)].

The provisions of the Probate Code relating to the establishment and termination of guardianships [see Prob. Code § 1500 et seq.] do not apply to a guardianship resulting from the selection and implementation of a permanent plan by the juvenile court for the care of the minor [Prob. Code § 1517; see Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(4)]. In that case, proceedings to establish guardianship are governed exclusively by applicable sections of the Welfare and Institutions Code and California Rules of Court [Prob. Code § 1517; see Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 (if child was declared dependent of juvenile court after 1988); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.501 et seq.]. If no specific provision of the Welfare and Institutions Code or the California Rules of Court applies, the provisions applicable to the administration of guardianship estates under Prob. Code § 2100 et seq. govern, as far as they apply in like situations [Prob. Code § 1517; see Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.4].

[3] Status Affecting Jurisdiction

[a] Custodial Claimant Outside California

The federal Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act (PKPA) [28 U.S.C. § 1738A] and California's Uniform Child Custody

Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act (UCCJEA) [Fam. Code § 3400 et seq.] apply to any proceeding in which the custody of a child is at issue, including a guardianship proceeding [Guardianship of Ariana K. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 690, 702, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 817 ; Adoption of Zachariah K. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1025, 1034, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 423 ; Guardianship of Donaldson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 477, 487-489, 223 Cal. Rptr. 707] . Those laws must be considered if a parent (or another person with a custodial right or claim) lives outside California [see In re Gloria F. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 576, 584, 260 Cal. Rptr. 706 (requirements apply whether or not actual jurisdictional conflict exists)]. A court has subject matter jurisdiction over guardianship proceedings when a petition is filed concerning a child whose home state is California or a child who has lived in California for six months before the petition is filed [Fam. Code §§ 3402(g), 3421(a)(1); Guardianship of Ariana K. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 690, 703, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 817] . Once the court has acquired subject matter jurisdiction, it retains the authority to consider subsequent custody and visitation disputes concerning the child [Guardianship of Ariana K. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 690, 703, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 817] .

For detailed discussion of the PKPA and the UCCJEA, see Ch. 394, Parent and Child . The Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction [42 U.S.C. § 11601 et seq.] does not deprive a California court of subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate a guardianship dispute [Guardianship of Ariana K. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 690, 706-707, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 817 (remedies established by Convention are in addition to remedies available under other laws)].

[b] Native American Child

In a case involving a Native American child, the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) [25 U.S.C. § 1901 et seq.] governs to the extent that California law is inconsistent with the ICWA [see Prob. Code § 2112; see also Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 7.1015 (Indian Child Welfare Act in guardianship and certain conservatorship proceedings)]. The ICWA is discussed in California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd Edition, Ch. 176, Indian Child Welfare Act (Matthew Bender 2d ed.).

[c] Married Minor

A guardian of the person cannot be appointed for a minor who is married or whose marriage has been dissolved, unless the marriage was adjudged a nullity [Prob. Code § 1515; Guardianship of Melissa W. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1300, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 42 ; see Ch. 25, Annulment (Nullity) of Marriage and Related Spousal Rights]. However, a conservator of the person may be appointed for a minor who is married or whose marriage has been dissolved, if the court determines that it is the least restrictive alternative [Prob. Code § 1800.3(a)(2), (b); see Prob. Code § 1801(a)]. For discussion of appointment of conservators, see Ch. 281, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Conservators .

§ 280.21 Determining Whether Guardianship Is Appropriate

[1] Necessary-or-Convenient Standard

A guardian of the person of a minor may be appointed whenever it appears to the court that a guardian is necessary or convenient [Prob. Code § 1514(a)]. Although this standard is facially broad, the actual authority of the probate court to appoint aguardian for a minor is limited by the constitutional right of parents to have custody of their children [see Stanley v. Illinois (1972) 405 U.S. 645, 649-659, 92 S. Ct. 1208, 31 L. Ed. 2d 551] . Moreover, a nonparent may not be awarded custody of a child over the opposition of a parent unless the court finds that parental custody is detrimental [see Fam. Code § 3041; see also Guardianship of Kentera (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 639, 642, 262 P.2d 317 ; Guardianship of Olivia J. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1153-1154, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 364 ; Guardianship of Z.C.W. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 524, 527, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 48] . In numerous other proceedings it is preferable to make custody determinations [see Ch. 394, Parent and Child], particularly juvenile court dependency jurisdiction in the case of neglected or abused children [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 et seq.]. For further discussion of the relationship of guardianship to other custody proceedings, see § 280.22.

[2] Burden of Proof

A court may not appoint a guardian over the objection of a natural parent, except on clear and convincing evidence that (1) being in the parent's custody would be detrimental to the child and (2) appointment the prospective guardian is in the child's best interest [Guardianship of Stephen G. (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1418, 1431, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 409 ; Guardianship of Jenna G. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 387, 394, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 47 ; cf. Guardianship of Simpson (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 914, 930-933, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 389] .

[3] Guardianship Is Not Preferred

Guardianship is not a preferred method of determining custody. For example, if a child has been relinquished to an agency for adoption, appointment of a guardian is neither necessary nor convenient unless the adoption agency is unfit to have temporary custody of the child, or it is improbable that the child will be adopted [San Diego County Dep't of Public Welfare v. Superior Court of San Diego County (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 1, 11-14, 101 Cal. Rptr. 541, 496 P.2d 453 ;

Guardianship of Henwood (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 639, 645, 320 P.2d 1] .

Guardianship proceedings as a means of providing a person responsible for the person and welfare of a child [see Prob. Code § 2351] generally should be begun only if no parent is otherwise filling that role. Guardianship is appropriate if the child's parents are dead [see Guardianship of Hall (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 508, 509, 19 Cal. Rptr. 426 ; Guardianship of Walsh (1950) 100 Cal. App. 2d 194, 195, 223 P.2d 322] , or to give legal validity to a de facto custodial arrangement (for example, if the parents have left the child to be cared for by a friend or relative) [see Guardianship of Pankey (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 919, 928-929, 113 Cal. Rptr. 858 ; Guardianship of Marino (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 952, 954, 106 Cal. Rptr. 655] .

Guardianship has been used as a means to provide consent for a minor to obtain medical treatment when the parents will not consent [see Guardianship of Phillip B. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 417-419, 188 Cal. Rptr. 781] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Guardian of the Person

24-280 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 280.22

§ 280.22 Relationship to Other Custody Proceedings

[1] Juvenile Court Dependency

Guardianship is not the proper proceeding for a nonparent to attempt to take custody of a child away from a parent whom the nonparent considers to be unfit. To remove a child from parental custody, there must first be sufficient facts of parental misconduct to bring the matter within the dependency jurisdiction of the juvenile court [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 et seq.]. There must also be clear and convincing evidence of one or more of the standards on which a child may be removed from the home under Welf. & Inst. Code § 361(c). A less stringent standard under the Family Code (made applicable to guardianships by Prob. Code § 1514(b)) may not be applied to remove a child from parental custody [see In re James T. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 58, 65-67, 235 Cal. Rptr. 127 ; see also Prob. Code § 1513(c) (allegations of parental unfitness must be referred to agency designated to investigate potential dependencies, and guardianship proceedings must be abated); § 280.64[4]].

The above rule may not be absolute, and there may be some circumstances under which a guardianship may be used to remove a child from parental custody. In one case, nonparent guardians were appointed [Guardianship of Phillip B. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 419-424, 426, 188 Cal. Rptr. 781] even though juvenile court jurisdiction had been previously denied on essentially the same facts [see In re Phillip B. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 796, 802-803, 156 Cal. Rptr. 48] . The case was highly publicized and involved parents who refused to authorize a life-extending operation for their child, who had Down's syndrome. Because the child was institutionalized rather than living with the parents, it is questionablewhether the case supports the proposition that a change of the actual physical custody from a parent to a nonparent can be accomplished through a guardianship without facts sufficient to bring the child under juvenile court dependency jurisdiction.

Once a child has been adjudged a dependent child of the juvenile court [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 360(d)], no other division of any superior court may hear proceedings regarding the child's custody [Welf. & Inst. Code § 304]. Therefore, a guardianship under the Probate Code may not be used to obtain custody of a child who is currently a dependent child of the juvenile court [see § 280.20[2]].

[2] Adoption

[a] Guardianship as Alternative to Adoption

Because guardianship does not terminate the parental rights of the birth parents [cf. Fam. Code § 8617], guardianship is an alternative to adoption if a parent is unable to have custody of a child, but consent to adoption is required and cannot be obtained [see Guardianship of Pankey (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 919, 930-935, 113 Cal. Rptr. 858] . Furthermore, unlike adoption [see Prob. Code § 6451], guardianship does not affect rights of intestate succession between a child and natural parents [Prob. Code § 6451(a)]. However, the security and permanence of adoption makes it a preferred arrangement to guardianship [Guardianship of Henwood (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 639, 645, 320 P.2d 1 ; see Jones T. v. Superior Court (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 240, 250-251, 264 Cal. Rptr. 4 ; see also [3], below].

[b] When Agency Has Legal Custody

If a child has been relinquished to an agency for adoptive placement, the agency has the legal custody of the child [Fam. Code § 8704(a)]. In such a case, adoption and guardianship provisions of the law cannot both operate to control the custody of the same child at the same time. However, guardianship proceedings may be begun as a challenge to the propriety of the adoption proceedings and to transfer custody from the agency to the guardian [San Diego County Dep't of Public Welfare v. Superior Court of San Diego County (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 1, 12-13, 101 Cal. Rptr. 541, 496 P.2d 453 ; Guardianship of Henwood (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 639, 644-646, 320 P.2d 1] . The adoption and guardianship proceedings must be consolidated [Fam. Code § 8714(e)].

If the child is in the custody of an adoption agency, the appointment of a guardian generally is neither necessary nor convenient unless the agency is unfit to have the temporary custody of the child, or it is improbable that the child will be adopted [see Guardianship of Henwood (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 639, 644-646, 320 P.2d 1] . However, there may be extraordinary factors altering the course of the normal agency procedure that would make a guardianship appropriate [see San Diego County Dep't of Public Welfare v. Superior Court of San Diego County (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 1, 12-13, 101 Cal. Rptr. 541, 496 P.2d 453 (birth mother relinquished child to agency that was investigating independent adoption petition of persons with whom child had always lived)].

[c] Guardianship Does Not Foreclose Adoption

The existence of a guardianship does not foreclose the possibility of adoption by someone other than the guardian [Guardianship of Minnicar (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 703, 710, 297 P.2d 105] . If the child is adopted, the guardianship terminates [Prob. Code § 1600(b); see Adoption of McDonnell (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 805, 813, 176 P.2d 778 (if adoption petition is granted, necessity for appointment of guardian disappears)].

It is not clear whether the appointment of a guardian terminates the right of a birth parent to relinquish the child to an adoption agency. Once a guardianship is established, the guardian has the right to custody of the child [see Prob. Code § 2351(a)]. The adoption statutes imply, but do not expressly provide, that a parent's right to relinquish the child to an agency depends on the parent having the right to custody [see Fam. Code § 8700(a); cf. Guardianship of Minnicar (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 703, 707, 297 P.2d 105 (mother relinquished child while child was in foster care; court did not address issue of whether mother without custody could validly relinquish child)]. The statutes do provide that adoption proceedings may not be begun by an agency that has the custody of an orphaned minor for whom a guardian of the person has been appointed under a testamentary nomination [see Fam. Code § 8705; see also § 280.45 (nomination)].

[3] Termination of Parental Rights

Because adoption is preferred to guardianship, a court is not required to consider appointing a guardian if grounds exist to terminate parental rights so that the child may be adopted [see Jones T. v. Superior Court (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 240, 250-251, 264 Cal. Rptr. 4] . It is possible to terminate parental rights (free a child from parental "custody and control") under Fam. Code § 7800 et seq. even if there is no adoption pending or proposed [see In re Marcel N. (1991)

235 Cal. App. 3d 1007, 1011-1013, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 240] . If the court declares a minor free from the custody and control of both parents, or of one parent if the other no longer has custody and control, the court must at the same time either appoint a guardian of the minor or refer the minor to a licensed adoption agency for adoptive placement [Fam. Code § 7893(a)]. After referral of the minor to an adoption agency, no petition for guardianship may be filed without the agency's consent [Fam. Code § 7893(b)(2)]. For further discussion of termination of parental rights, see Ch. 12A, Adoptions: Termination of Parental Rights .

[4] Dissolution of Marriage

A court has no jurisdiction to appoint a guardian of the person if a court inanother California county retains continuing jurisdiction over custody of a child based on a custody award in a proceeding for the dissolution of a marriage [Greene v. Superior Court (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 307, 310-312, 231 P.2d 821] . Thereafter, disputes between the parents over the custody of a minor are within the continuing, exclusive jurisdiction of the family law court that first determined the custody question [Greene v. Superior Court (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 307, 309-313, 231 P.2d 821] .

However, if a dissolution of marriage proceeding is properly before the court, a nonparent who has or claims custody of the child may apply to be joined as a party [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.154 (expressly applicable to proceedings for dissolution of marriage, nullity of marriage, or legal separation); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.10(c) (definition of "proceeding")]. Custody may then be awarded to the nonparent on a finding that parental custody would be detrimental to the child under Fam. Code § 3041, and according to the order of preference in Fam. Code § 3040 [see In re Marriage of Valle (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 837, 842-843 n.5, 126 Cal. Rptr. 38 ; Bookstein v. Bookstein (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 219, 221, 86 Cal. Rptr. 495 ; see also Stever v. Stever (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 166, 168-170, 56 P.2d 1229] . Alternatively, a nonparent may petition to be appointed guardian, and move to consolidate the guardianship and family law proceedings [see Guardianship of Paduano (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 346, 350, 351, 263 Cal. Rptr. 589 (consolidation of guardianship proceeding begun by nonparent with pending family law proceeding is appropriate if custody of minor child of marriage is object of both proceedings)].

§ 280.24 Annual Status Report

To the extent resources are available, courts must implement procedures to ensure that every guardian completes and returns to the court an annual status report [Prob. Code § 1513.2(a); for mandatory Judicial Council Form, see § 280.117]. The report must include information about the status of the guardianship, including the guardian's present address, the name and birth date of the child under guardianship, the name of the school in which the child is enrolled, and information about the person with whom the child is residing if the child is not in the guardian's home and why the child was moved [Prob. Code § 1513.2(b)]. It is a misdemeanor for a guardian to submit willfully any material information required by the form that the guardian knows to be false [Prob. Code 1513.2(a)].

At least one month before the date the guardian is required to return the status report, the clerk of the court must mail to the guardian a notice informing the guardian that he or she is required to complete and return the report to the court [Prob. Code § 1513.2(a)]. The clerk must enclose a blank status report form for the guardian to complete and return by mail [Prob. Code § 1513.2(a)]. If the guardian does not complete and return the status report, or if the court finds after the guardian has returned the report that further information is needed, the court must attempt to obtain this information from the guardian or other sources [Prob. Code § 1513.2(a)]. If the court is unable to obtain this information within 30 days after the date the status report is due, the court must either order the guardian to make himself or herself available to the court's investigator for purposes of investigation of the guardianship or to show cause why the guardian should not be removed [Prob. Code § 1513.2(a)].

The status report is confidential and may only be made available to persons who have been served in the proceedings or their attorneys [Prob. Code § 1513.2(c)].

§ 280.30 Necessary-and-Convenient Standard for Appointment

The superior court may appoint a guardian of the estate of a minor whenever the appointment appears to the court to be necessary and convenient [Prob. Code §§ 1514(a), 2200]. Although the statutory language may seem to be the same for appointment of a guardian of the estate as for a guardian of the person [see § 280.21], there are significantly different considerations. Because a parent is the natural guardian of a child [Odell v. Lutz (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 104, 106, 177 P.2d 628] , usually there is no need to appoint a guardian of the person of a minor who is in parental custody. In contrast, a parent has no natural right to control the property of a minor child [Fam. Code § 7502; see Emery v. Emery (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 421, 432, 289 P.2d 218] . Accordingly, a guardian of a minor's estate may be appointed in any case in which the minor owns property [see Guardianship of Kentera (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 639, 643, 262 P.2d 317] . Conversely, it is neither necessary nor proper to appoint a guardian of the estate of a minor who has noproperty [Guardianship of Minnicar (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 703, 706-707, 297 P.2d 105] .

§ 280.31 Alternatives to Guardian of the Estate

In some situations, a guardianship of the estate, and the attendant costs of appointment and administration, may be avoidable. The availability of alternatives may affect the court's finding as to the necessity of the appointment of a guardian of the estate. For example, a minor's parent may hold, in trust, property belonging to the minor if the minor's total estate does not exceed $5,000 [Prob. Code § 3400 et seq.]. A court may order any of several alternative dispositions of the money if a minor's sole asset is money [Prob. Code § 3410 et seq.].

If a minor's only asset is a cause of action, a guardian ad litem, appointed under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 372, 373, may pursue the action on the minor's behalf, without the need for appointment of a guardian of the minor's estate. If a minor is to receive money or property under a compromise or judgment terminating litigation, the court may order any of several alternative dispositions of the money, including but not limited to, appointment of a guardian of the estate [Prob. Code §§ 3600 et seq., 3610 et seq.].

For discussion of these alternatives, see Ch. 364, Minors: Claims and Property of Minors .

D. Considerations in Appointing Guardian

24-280 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 280.40

§ 280.40 Choosing Guardian of the Person

[1] Applicability of Family Code

In appointing a guardian of the person of a minor, the court is governed by the provisions of Chapter 1 [Fam. Code § 3020 et seq.] and Chapter 2 [Fam. Code § 3040 et seq.] of Division 8 of the Family Code, relating to the custody of a minor [Prob. Code § 1514(b)]. These standards are considered in detail in Ch. 223, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody . Because a guardianship is used to grant custody to a nonparent, the order of preference of Fam. Code § 3040 and the detriment test of Fam. Code § 3041 are particularly pertinent to guardianship proceedings [see [2], [3], below].

[2] Order of Preference Under Family Code

Fam. Code § 3040 sets forth the constitutionally compelled principle of parental preference in making a custody determination [see Stanley v. Illinois (1972) 405 U.S. 645, 649-659, 92 S. Ct. 1208, 31 L. Ed. 2d 551] . The statute provides that custody should be granted in the following order of preference according to the best interests of the child:

- To both parents jointly or to either parent [Fam. Code § 3040(a)(1)].

- If to neither parent, then to the person or persons in whose home the child has been living in a wholesome and stable environment [Fam. Code § 3040(a)(2)].

- To any other person or persons deemed by the court to be suitable and able to provide adequate and proper care and guidance for the child [Fam. Code § 3040(a)(3)].

If the court determines that custody should be granted to a nonparent, it must consider and give due weight to a parent's nomination of a guardian of the person of the child under the Probate Code [Fam. Code § 3043; see § 280.45]. It would appear that this rule requires the court to consider a parent's nomination for guardian even if the child currently has a different nonparent custodian who would otherwise have a preferential right to custody [cf. Guardianship of Chandler (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 606, 610, 339 P.2d 183 (it was within court's discretion to refuse to remove nonparent guardians, with whom child had been living for 13 months, and appoint father's nominee)].

[3] Detriment to Child

Before a court makes any order granting custody to a person or persons other than a parent, over a parent's objection, the court must find that being in the custody of a parent would be detrimental to the child, and that the grant to a nonparent is required to serve the best interest of the child [Fam. Code § 3041(a)]. Further, if a court finds that granting custody to a parent would be detrimental and granting custody to a nonparent would be in the child's best interests, the court may grant custody to the nonparent without further balancing the parent's constitutionally protected interest in an opportunity to form a relationship with the child [Adoption of Daniele G. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1408, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 341] . The detriment test focuses on the needs of the child rather than on the character of the parent; it does not require a finding that the parent is unfit [In re B.G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 694-698, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244] . Similarly, no allegation of serious abuse, neglect, or abandonment by the parent is necessary to sustain an allegation that parental custody is detrimental to the child [Guardianship of Olivia J. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1153-1154, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 364] . The detriment standard is considered in detail in Ch. 223, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody .

"Detriment to the child" includes the harm of removal from a stable placement of a child with a person who has assumed, on a day-to-day basis, the role of the child's parent, fulfilling both the child's physical needs and psychological needsfor care and affection, and who has assumed that role for a substantial period of time [Fam. Code § 3041(c)].

A finding that parental custody would be detrimental to the child must ordinarily be supported by clear and convincing evidence [Fam. Code § 3041(b)]. However, if the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the person to whom custody may be given is a person described in Fam. Code § 3041(c), this finding is deemed a finding that the custody is in the child's best interest and that parental custody would be detrimental to the child absent a showing by a preponderance of the evidence to the contrary [Fam. Code § 3041(d)].

In the case of an Indian child, before making an order granting custody to a nonparent over the objection of a parent, the court must apply the evidentiary standards specified in the Indian Child Welfare Act [25 U.S.C. § 1912(d), (e), (f)] and Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 224.6 and 361.7, and the placement preferences and standards specified in the Indian Child Welfare Act [25 U.S.C. § 1922] and Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.31 [Fam. Code § 3041(e)].

[4] Religious and Cultural Matching

It is desirable that the religious belief of a guardian of the person of a child be in harmony with that of the child's family. It is therefore a factor to be taken into account in appointing a guardian; however, it is not a decisive consideration. The weight to be given to this factor is essentially for the trial court's determination, taking into account all relevant facts touching on the family's religious beliefs and practices [Guardianship of Chandler (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 606, 611, 339 P.2d 183 ; see Guardianship of Walsh (1950) 100 Cal. App. 2d 194, 198-199, 223 P.2d 322] . The same standard applies to ethnic background and age [Guardianship of Minnicar (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 703, 709-710, 297 P.2d 105] .

Code § 1514(e)(1)*]. If the proposed ward is of sufficient age to form an intelligent preference as to the person to be appointed as guardian of the estate, the court must give consideration to that preference [*Prob. 24-280 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 280.45

§ 280.45 Nomination of Guardian

[1] Authority to Make Nomination

"Nomination" of a guardian refers to a designation of a person whom the nominator wishes to be appointed guardian of a child. The Probate Code recognizes two kinds of nominations. A parent may nominate a guardian of the person or estate, or both, of a minor child in either of the following cases:

- The other parent nominates, or consents in writing to the nomination of, the same guardian for the same child [Prob. Code § 1500(a)].

- At the time the petition for appointment of the guardian is filed, the other parent either is dead or lacks legal capacity to consent to the nomination, or the consent of the other parent would not be required for an adoption of the child [Prob. Code § 1500(b); see Ch. 12A, Adoptions: Termination of Parental Rights (when consent to adoption is required)].

A parent or any other person may nominate a guardian for property that a minorreceives from or by designation of the nominator (whether before, at the time of, or after the nomination). The right includes, but is not limited to, property that is received by the minor by gift, deed, trust, will, succession, insurance, or benefits of any kind [Prob. Code § 1501].

[2] Effect of Nomination

A person duly nominated must be considered by the court, but the court is not required to appoint the nominee [see Fam. Code § 3043; Prob. Code § 1514(c), (d)].

The court must consider and give due weight to the nomination of a guardian of the person of the child by a parent [Fam. Code § 3043; cf. In re Vanessa P. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1763, 1769-1770, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 760 (nominee is entitled to de facto parent status in juvenile court and standing to participate fully in proceedings as party)]. The right of nomination is structured so that a custody battle between one parent's nominee and the other parent is unlikely. Before a parental nomination is allowed, the other parent must agree, be deceased, be incompetent, or be subject to statutory standards allowing termination of parental rights [Prob. Code § 1500]. Under the Family Code, consideration of the nominee is required only if it is first determined that no parent is able to have custody or that parental custody would be detrimental to the child [see Fam. Code §§ 3040(a), 3043; see also § 280.40[2], [3]].

With regard to a parent's nominee for guardian of the estate, or a nominee with regard to property under Prob. Code § 1501, the statutory effect is somewhat more directive. The court must appoint the nominee unless it determines that the nominee is unsuitable [Prob. Code § 1514(d)].

[3] Manner of Making Nomination

A nomination of a guardian may be made in the petition for the appointment of the guardian, at the hearing on the petition, or in a writing signed either before or after the petition for the appointment of the guardian is filed [Prob. Code § 1502(a)]. Nominations commonly are made by will. Nominations also may be made in a trust instrument if the trust property might vest in a beneficiary during minority. The Judicial Council form to nominate a guardian is set forth in § 280.111. Use of the Judicial Council form is required [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 1.31].

[4] When Nomination Is Effective

The nomination of a guardian is effective when made, except that a written nomination may provide that the nomination becomes effective only on the occurrence of specified conditions stated in the writing. These conditions may include, but are not limited to, the subsequent legal incapacity or death of the nominator [Prob. Code § 1502(b)]. Unless the writing making the nomination expressly provides otherwise, a nomination remains effective notwithstanding the subsequent legal incapacity or death of the nominator [Prob. Code § 1502(c)].

The fact that a nomination is effective does not give the nominee the authority to act as guardian. It merely means that the person is to be treated as a nominee should the court be asked to appoint a guardian. Appointment and letters are still required to give the nominee the authority to act as guardian.

[5] Powers of Nominated Guardian

If the court appoints a nominee as guardian, the nominee may exercise authority more independently of court supervision than if the appointee is not a nominee. Unless the court for good cause determines otherwise, if the court appoints a parent's nominee for guardian of the minor's person, the guardian must be granted in the order of appointment, to the extent provided in the nomination, the same authority with respect to the person of the ward as a parent having legal custody of a child. The guardian may exercise this authority without notice or hearing, or without court authorization, instructions, approval, or confirmation, in the same manner as if the authority were exercised by a parent having legal custody of a child [Prob. Code § 2108(a)].

Except to the extent that the court for good cause determines otherwise, if a court appoints a nominee as guardian of the minor's estate or as guardian for property under Prob. Code § 1501 [see [1], above], the court must grant to the guardian in the order of appointment, to the extent provided in the nomination, the right to exercise any of the independent powers listed in Prob. Code § 2591 [Prob. Code § 2108(b); but see Prob. Code §§ 2593-2595 (withdrawal of powers; requirement that letters list powers; power to petition for instructions or confirmation notwithstanding independent powers)]. The guardian may exercise those powers without notice, hearing, or court authorization, instructions, approval, or confirmation, in the same manner as if the authority were granted by order of the court under Prob. Code § 2590 [Prob. Code § 2108(b)], which generally gives the court the power to grant independent powers to the guardian. In the case of a nominee with regard to property under Prob. Code § 1501, the additional authority is limited to the property covered by the nomination [Prob. Code § 2108(b)].

[6] Nomination of Director of Developmental Services

The Director of Developmental Services may be appointed guardian for a developmentally disabled minor on the nomination of the minor, or of a parent, relative, or friend, or of the minor's guardian when nominating a successor [Health & Safety Code § 416.5]. However, only the director may petition for appointment as guardian based on such a nomination [Health & Safety Code § 416.6; Guardianship of Smith (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 882, 892, 161 Cal. Rptr. 335 ; see generally Health & Safety Code § 416 et seq.]. For a further discussion of the Director of Developmental Services as guardian, and treatment of developmentally disabled persons generally, see Ch. 304, Insane and Other Incompetent Persons, § 304.70 et seq.

[7] Nomination Under Prior Law

A signed writing made before 1981 and "appointing" a person to serve as the guardian of the person, estate, or both, of a minor, or as a guardian of the property that a minor receives from or by designation of the person making the appointment, will be deemed to be a nomination of a guardian, if the requirements of Prob. Code § 1500 or 1501 are met [Prob. Code § 1489]. This provision applies whether or not the signed writing is a will or deed, as long as the person signing the writing, at the time the writing was signed, had sufficient capacity to form an intelligent preference [Prob. Code § 1489].

§ 280.46 Joint Guardians

[1] Appointment of Joint Guardians Generally

The court, in its discretion, may appoint two or more joint guardians of the person, estate, or both, each of whom must qualify in the same manner as a sole guardian [Prob. Code § 2105(a), (b)]. If there are two joint guardians, both must concur to exercise a power; if there are more than two, a majority must concur [Prob. Code § 2105(c)].

If one of the joint guardians dies or is removed or resigns, the powers and duties continue in the remaining joint guardians until further appointment is made by the court [Prob. Code § 2105(d)].

If one or more of the joint guardians is absent from the state and unable to act, otherwise unable to act, or legally disqualified from serving, the court may, by order made with or without notice, authorize the remaining joint guardians to act as to all matters embraced within its order [Prob. Code § 2105(e)].

[2] Custodial Parent With Terminal Condition

The Legislature has established a special joint guardianship by which a parent with a terminal health condition may make arrangements for the joint care, custody, and control of his or her children so as to minimize the emotional stress of, and disruption for, the children when the parent becomes incapacitated or dies. The purpose of the procedure is to avoid the need to provide a temporary guardian or place the children in foster care pending appointment of a guardian, which might be required otherwise [see Prob. Code § 2105(f)].

If a custodial parent has been diagnosed as having a terminal condition, as evidenced by a declaration executed by a licensed physician, the court may appoint the custodial parent and a person nominated by the custodial parent as joint guardians of a minor [Prob. Code § 2105(f)]. A custodial parent is one who either has been granted sole legal and physical custody of the child in another proceeding, or with whom the child resides if there is no operative custody order [Prob. Code § 1419.5]. A terminal condition is an incurable and irreversible condition that, without the administration of life-sustaining treatment, will, within reasonable medical judgment, result in death [Prob. Code § 2105(f)].

The appointment may not be made over the objection of a noncustodial parentunless there is a finding that granting custody to the noncustodial parent would be detrimental to the child [Prob. Code § 2105(f); see Fam. Code § 3041].

§ 280.62 Notice

[1] Basic Notice Requirements

Notice of the time and place of the hearing on the petition for appointment of a guardian, together with a copy of the petition, must be given at least 15 days before the hearing. The court may not shorten the time for giving this notice of hearing [Prob. Code § 1511(a)].

Notice must be served on the following persons [Prob. Code § 1511(b)]:

- The proposed ward, if he or she is at least 12 years old.
- Any person having legal custody of the proposed ward or serving as guardian of the estate of the proposed ward.
- The parents of the proposed ward.
- Any person nominated as a guardian for the proposed ward [see Prob. Code §§ 1500, 1501].

Notice to the above persons must be given in the manner provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 415.10 (personal service) or Code Civ. Proc. § 415.30 (service by mail), or in any manner authorized by the court [Prob. Code § 1511(b)]. The court's authority to order another manner of service applies if neither personal service nor service by mail, with reasonable diligence, can be given. If service is made by mail under Prob. Code § 1511(b), it must be made according to Code Civ. Proc. § 415.30 because Prob. Code § 1511(b) does not authorize the court to order any other service by mail [Guardianship of Debbie V. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 781, 783-788, 227 Cal. Rptr. 554] .

Notice also must be given to the following persons [Prob. Code § 1511(c)]:

- The spouse named in the petition.

- The relatives named in the petition (except that if the petition is for a guardian of the estate only, the court may dispense with notice to any one or more or all of the relatives).

- The person having care of the proposed ward, if other than the person having legal custody of the proposed ward.

Notice to the above persons must be given by mail sent to the addresses stated in the petition, or in any manner authorized by the court [Prob. Code § 1511(c)].

If the court determines that the notice required by Prob. Code § 1511, above, is insufficient in the particular circumstances, the court may require that further or additional notice, including a longer period of notice, be given [Prob. Code § 1202].

The requirement of notice to the parents is jurisdictional. An order of appointment made without notice, if a parent's address was known, is void and subject to be set aside at any time [Guardianship of Debbie V. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 781, 787-788, 227 Cal. Rptr. 554 ; Guardianship of Kerns (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 862, 869, 169 P.2d 975] .

If the case involves a petition for guardianship of the person, the petitioner must mail a notice of the hearing and a copy of the petition, at least 15 days before the hearing, to the local agency designated by the board of supervisors to investigate guardianships for the court [Prob. Code § 1516(a); see § 280.64].

The Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act [28 U.S.C. § 1738A(e)] and the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act [Fam. Code § 3408] also contain notice requirements that might have to be complied with. For further discussion, see Ch. 394, Parent and Child .

Notice in guardianship proceedings is further discussed in Ch. 284, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Notice .

[2] Notice to Particular Public Officials

[a] In General

Various statutes of the Probate Code require 15 days notice to particular public agencies in certain cases. Prob. Code § 1461(b) requires notice to the Director of Mental Health or the Director of Developmental Services if the ward is, or has been during the guardianship proceeding, a patient in, or on leave from, a state hospital [see Prob. Code §§ 1461(a), 1511(d)]. Prob. Code § 1542 requires notice to the Director of Social Services and to the local agency designated to investigate guardianships for the court if the petition proposes that a nonrelative guardian of the person be appointed [see Prob. Code § 1511(d)]. Prob. Code § 1461.5 requires that notice be given to the Department of Veterans Affairs if the estate consists, wholly or in part, of veteran's benefits [see Prob. Code § 1511(e)].

[b] When Proposed Ward Is Developmentally Disabled

If the proposed ward is developmentally disabled, the petitioner must mail orpersonally serve a notice of the hearing and a copy of the petition on the director of the regional center for the developmentally disabled at least 30 days before the day of the hearing in any case in which all of the following conditions exist [Prob. Code § 1461.4(a)]:

- The proposed ward has developmental disabilities.

- The proposed guardian is not the natural parent of the proposed ward.

- The proposed guardian is a provider of board and care, treatment, habilitation, or other services to persons with developmental disabilities or is a spouse or employee of a provider.

- The proposed guardian is not a public entity.

In these cases, the regional center must file a written report and recommendation with the court regarding the suitability of the petitioners to meet the needs of the proposed ward [Prob. Code § 1461.4(b)].

[3] When Notice Is Not Required

Notice need not be given to any person who joins in the petition [Prob. Code § 1201]. Further, a person may waive notice by a writing signed by the person or the person's attorney and filed in the proceeding [see § 280.111].

Unless the court orders otherwise, notice is not to be given to the parents or other relatives of a proposed ward who has been relinquished to a licensed adoption agency, or to the parents of a proposed ward who has been judicially declared free from parental custody and control [Prob. Code § 1511(f)].

Notice need not be given to any person if the court so orders on a determination that the person cannot with reasonable diligence be given the notice or that the giving of notice would be contrary to the interest of justice [Prob. Code § 1511(g)].

If the petition is for guardianship of the estate only, the court may dispense with notice to any one or more of the relatives required to be named in the petition under Prob. Code § 1511(c)(2) [Prob. Code § 1511(c)(2)]. However, the court may not dispense with notice to the minor's parents or to any other relative who has legal custody of the proposed ward, or to any relative nominated as guardian [see Prob. Code § 1511(b)].

The Judicial Council form for a petition for appointment of a guardian includes space for requesting that the court dispense with notice to persons listed in an attachment to the petition [see § 280.110[1], P 15].

[4] Notice of Request for Independent Powers

If the petition for appointment of a guardian of the estate includes a request for an order granting independent powers [see Prob. Code § 2590], the notice of hearing on the petition must so state and must list the specific power or powers requested [Prob. Code § 2592(b)].

[5] Proof of Notice

Before a guardian is appointed, proof must be made to the court that each person entitled to notice under Prob. Code § 1511 has been given the required notice, or that notice to a specified person cannot be given with reasonable diligence or would be contrary to the interests of justice [Prob. Code § 1511(h)]. If a person entitled to notice has waived it, the court must so find in its order [Prob. Code § 1260(b)].

§ 280.63 Appointment of Counsel for Proposed Ward

The court may appoint private legal counsel for a proposed ward who is not otherwise represented by counsel if the court determines that the appointment would be helpful to the resolution of the matter or is necessary to protect the proposed ward's interests [Prob. Code § 1470(a)]. Each attorney appointed or eligible for appointment by a court before January 1, 2008, including deputy public defenders, was required to certify to the court by April 1, 2008, that he or she satisfies the qualifications to be eligible for a new appointment on or after April 1, 2008. Beginning March 1, 2008, each counsel must certify that he or she is qualified before becoming eligible for an appointment. Beginning January 1, 2009, each appointed counsel must certify to the court before the end of March of each year that he or she has completed the continuing education required for the preceding calendar year [see Cal. Rule of Ct. Rule 7.1101, see also § 280.118 (Judicial Council Form GC-010, Certification of Attorney Concerning Qualifications For Court Appointment in Conservatorships/Guardianships)]. A report to the court by appointed counsel may not be withheld from the parties, and a judge's failure to allow the spouse of a conservatee to see the report violated the spouse's due process rights [Convervatorship of Schaeffer (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 159, 165, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547] .

If counsel is appointed, on conclusion of the matter the court must fix a reasonable sum for compensation and expenses of counsel. In the discretion of the court, the sum may include compensation for services rendered and expenses incurred before the date of the order appointing counsel [Prob. Code § 1470(b)].

The court must order the attorney's fees to be paid by a parent or the parents of the minor or from the minor's estate, or any combination of those sources, in any proportions the court deems just [Prob. Code § 1470(c)(2)]. If a ward or proposed ward is furnished legal counsel, then the court, on its own motion or that of a party, must determine whether a parent or parents of the ward or proposed ward, or the estate of the ward or proposed ward, is financially unable to pay all or a portion of the cost of appointed counsel [Prob. Code § 1470(c)(3)]. Any portion of the cost of counsel that the court finds the parents or parents or the estate of the ward or proposed ward is unable to pay, must be paid by the county [Prob. Code § 1470(c)(3)]. However, an order for parental payment may be made only after the parent or parents, as the case may be, had notice and the opportunity to be heard on whether the order would be just under the circumstances of the case [Prob. Code § 1470(d)]. For purposes of this rule, a nonparent, such as a grandparent, does not qualify as a parent and cannot be compelled to pay a minor's guardianship attorney's fees and costs [Guardianship of Elan E.

(2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 998, 1001, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Procedure for Appointment of Guardian

24-280 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 280.64

§ 280.64 Investigation of Case

[1] Requirement of Investigation

Unless waived by the court, a court investigator, probation officer, or domestic relations investigator may make an investigation and file with the court a report and recommendation concerning each proposed guardianship of the person or estate. If the proposed guardian is a relative, the investigation must be made by a court investigator; if the proposed guardian is a nonrelative, the investigation must be made by the county agency designated to investigate potential dependency [Prob. Code § 1513(a)]. The investigation required by the Probate Code is inapplicable to guardianships established in juvenile court for a dependent child [Prob. Code § 1513(f)]. For purposes of the requirements of Prob. Code § 1513, the term "relative" means a person who is a spouse, parent, step-parent, brother, sister, step-brother, step-sister, half-brother,half-sister, uncle, aunt, niece, nephew, first cousin, or any person denoted by the prefix "grand" or "great," or the spouse of any of those persons, even after the marriage has been terminated by death or dissolution [Prob. Code § 1513(g)].

[2] Report Requirements

The report for the guardianship of the person must include, but need not be limited to, an investigation and discussion of all of the following [Prob. Code § 1513(a)]:

- A social history of the guardian.

- A social history of the proposed ward, including, to the extent feasible, an assessment of any identified developmental, emotional, psychological, or educational needs of the proposed ward and the capability of the petitioner to meet those needs.

- The relationship of the proposed ward to the guardian, including the duration and character of the relationship, if applicable, the circumstances under which physical custody of the proposed ward was acquired by the guardian, and a statement of the proposed ward's attitude concerning the proposed guardianship, unless the statement of the attitude is affected by the proposed ward's developmental, physical, or emotional condition.

- The anticipated duration of the guardianship and the plans of both natural parents and the proposed guardian for the stable and permanent home for the child. The court may waive this requirement for cases involving relative guardians.

In an Indian child custody proceeding, the person making the investigation and report is required to consult with the Indian child's tribe and include any information provided by the tribe in the report [Prob. Code § 1513 (h)].

The report must be kept confidential and will be made available only to persons who have been served in the proceedings, or their attorneys. The clerk of the court must make provisions for the limitation of the report exclusively to persons entitled to receive it [Prob. Code § 1513(d)]. However, court may not a limit access to the report by the litigants and their attorneys [Tracy A. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 1309, 1317-1318, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 684 (court must furnish litigants and their attorneys with copy of report a sufficient time before hearing, and may not restrict them to merely viewing report in court and making notes of its contents)]. For discussion of the use of the report at trial, see § 280.65[5].

[3] Access to Minor's Records

For the purposes of writing the report, the person who makes the investigation and report must have access to the proposed ward's school records, probation records, and public and private social services records, and to an oral or written summary of the proposed ward's medical records and psychological records prepared by any physician, psychologist, or psychiatrist who made or who is maintaining those records. The physician, psychologist, or psychiatrist must be available to clarify information regarding these records pursuant to the investigator's responsibility to gather and provide information for the court [Prob. Code § 1513(e)].

A family law court must provide to a court hearing a guardianship proceeding, on that court's request, all available information the court deems necessary to make a determination regarding the best interest of the proposed ward. The family law court must also release this information to the guardianship investigator, as provided in Prob. Code § 1513(a) [Prob. Code § 1514.5; see Fam. Code § 3111(b)]. Any released information that is confidential under any other provision of law remains confidential. Confidential family law mediation and confidential dependency mediation records are exempt from the disclosure requirement. No shared records may be disclosed to any party in a case unless the party requests the agency or court that originates the record to release the record and the request is granted [Prob. Code § 1514.5].

The guardianship investigator may also inspect the proposed ward's juvenile court case file, if any [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(L)].

[4] Case of Alleged Parental Unfitness

If the investigation finds that any party to the proposed guardianship alleges that the minor's parent is unfit, so as to potentially bring the child within the dependency jurisdiction of the juvenile court under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, the case must be referred to the county agency designated to investigate potential dependencies. The guardianship proceedings may not be completed until a dependency investigation [see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 328, 329] is completed and a report is provided to the court in which the guardianship proceeding is pending [Prob. Code § 1513(c)].

It appears that if the investigation discloses grounds for dependency jurisdiction based on the conduct of custodial parents, the guardianship proceeding must be dismissed or abated once dependency proceedings are begun under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300. It has been held that a child may not be removed from parental custody in a proceeding such as a guardianship under any lesser standard of proof and without the procedural protections of the juvenile court dependency law [see In re James T. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 58, 65-67, 235 Cal. Rptr. 127] .

[5] Screening by Child Protective Services

In cases involving a petition for guardianship of the person, the local social services agency providing child protection services must screen the name of the guardian for prior referrals of neglect or abuse of minors. The results of this screening must be provided to the court [Prob. Code § 1516(a)]. This requirement is inapplicable to guardianships established in juvenile court for a dependent child [Prob. Code § 1516(b)].

[6] Additional Investigation in Nonrelative Guardianships

If the proposed guardian is a nonrelative, the investigation must be made by the county agency designated to investigate potential dependency [Prob. Code § 1513(a)]. The general rule that the court has discretion to waive the investigation [Prob. Code § 1513(a)] apparently is inapplicable to nonrelative guardianships. Prob. Code § 1543 (discussed below) eliminates the court's discretion to dispense with the investigation [Prob. Code § 1543(a); see 64 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 455, 461, 463 (1981)] . Prob. Code§ 1543 also appears to require a second investigation and report by a different agency [see 64 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 455, 456 n.2 (1981)] . A nonrelative guardianship is essentially one in which the petition requests that a private party who is not a relative of the proposed ward be appointed guardian of the person [see Prob. Code § 1540].

If the petition (as filed or as amended) states that an adoption petition has been filed, a report with respect to the suitability of the proposed guardian for guardianship must be filed with the court by the agency investigating the adoption [Prob. Code § 1543(a)]. This report should be of the same comprehensive nature as the suitability report that the adoption agency must file in the adoption proceeding [64 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 455, 461 (1981)] .

If no adoption petition has been filed, the local agency designated by the board of supervisors to provide public social services must file a report with the court with respect to the proposed guardian of the same character required to be made with regard to an applicant for a foster family home license [Prob. Code § 1543(a)]. This report is less comprehensive than the suitability study required if an adoption proceeding is also pending [64 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 455, 462-463 (1981)] .

The report filed with the court is confidential, and it will be made available only to the persons who have been served in the proceeding and the persons who have appeared in the proceeding, or to their attorneys [Prob. Code § 1453(b)]. For discussion of the use of the report at the hearing, see § 280.65[5].

[7] Assessment of Investigation Costs

Each year, the court or county must assess (1) the parent, parents, or other person charged with the support and maintenance of the proposed, ward and (2) the guardian, proposed guardian, or the proposed ward's estate, for court or county expenses for any investigation or review incurred pursuant to Prob. Code § 1513 [Prob. Code § 1513.1(a)]. A court may order reimbursement to the court or the county in the amount of the assessment, unless the court finds that all or any part of the assessment would impose a hardship on the ward or on his or her estate [Prob. Code § 1513.1(a)]. A county may waive any or all of an assessment against the guardianship on the basis of hardship [Prob. Code § 1513.1(a)]. There is a rebuttable presumption that the assessment would impose a hardship if the ward is receiving Medi-Cal benefits [Prob. Code § 1513.1(a)].

Chapter 280 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP: APPOINTMENT OF GUARDIANS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Procedure for Appointment of Guardian

24-280 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 280.65

§ 280.65 Conduct of Hearing

[1] Appearance of Petitioner

A local court rule may require the person named in the petition and seeking appointment as guardian to appear at the hearing.

[2] No Right to Jury Trial

There is no right to trial by jury at the hearing on a petition for appointment of a guardian [see Prob. Code § 1452].

[3] Objection to Petition

Any interested person may appear and make a response or objection in writing at or before a hearing [Prob. Code § 1043(a); see Prob. Code §§ 1040, 2100]. A form for use to object to the appointment is set forth in § 280.113. A form for use as a court order denying the appointment is set forth in § 280.114.

The meaning of "interested person" under the Probate Code may vary and must be determined according to the particular purpose of the proceeding and the matter involved [Prob. Code § 48(b)]. In a guardianship proceeding, anyone who is entitled to notice and opposes the proposed guardianship has standing to object. It is not necessary that the person should seek to be appointed guardian or otherwise seek custody [see Guardianship of Pankey (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 919, 926-927, 113 Cal. Rptr. 858] .

An interested person may also appear and respond orally at the hearing. The court, in its discretion, must either hear and determine the response or objection or grant a continuance for the purpose of allowing a response or objection to be made in writing [Prob. Code § 1043(b)]. A request for a continuance for the purpose of making a written response or objection is not itself considered as a response or objection. Nor is the failure to make a response or objection during the time allowed to be considered as a response or objection [Prob. Code § 1043(c)].

[4] Standard of Proof

All issues of fact in probate matters are required to be tried in conformity with the rules of practice in civil actions [Prob. Code § 1000]. The standard rules of evidence are applicable, and the burden of proof technically is on the petitioner as the person asserting the claim for relief [see Evid. Code § 500]. In reality, a person with a lower custodial preference under Fam. Code § 3040 [see § 280.40[2]] probably has the burden of proving that the court should reject the claim of the person with a higher preference.

If the contest is between a parent and a nonparent, a finding that parental custody would be detrimental to the child must be supported by clear and convincing evidence [Fam. Code § 3041(b); see Fam. Code § 3041(d) (exception when nonparent has assumed role of child's parent)]. In other cases, since no standard of proof applicable to guardianship proceedings is specified in the Probate Code, proof by a preponderance of the evidence should satisfy the petitioner's burden [see Evid. Code § 115].

In the case of an Indian child, before making an order granting custody to a nonparent over the objection of a parent, the court must apply the evidentiary standards specified in the Indian Child Welfare Act [25 U.S.C. § 1912(d), (e), (f)] and Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 224.6 and 361.7, and the placement preferences and standards specified in the Indian Child Welfare Act [25 U.S.C. § 1922] and Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.31 [Fam. Code § 3041(e)].

[5] Evidence

The court must read and consider the investigator's report before ruling on the petition for guardianship, and the report must be reflected in the minutes of the court. The person preparing the report may be called and examined by any party to the proceeding [Prob. Code § 1513(b)]. Due process requires that a party be given anopportunity to cross examine the investigator and to subpoena and examine persons whose hearsay statements are contained in the report, and be permitted to introduce rebuttal evidence [see Wheeler v. Wheeler (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 239, 242, 109 Cal. Rptr. 782 (involving custody investigation report in family law proceeding)].

Any additional report in the case of a nonrelative guardianship may also may be considered by the court. It may be received in evidence on stipulation of counsel for all such persons who are present at the hearing or, if the person is present but unrepresented, on consent of the person [Prob. Code § 1543(b)]. The statutory provision for "consideration" of the report without qualification, but "receipt" into evidence only on stipulation, is parallel to the statute regarding court-ordered reports in contested custody cases under the Family Code [see Fam. Code § 3111]. In this context, it seems reasonably clear that a stipulation is not required before the court may treat the report as evidence [see Forslund v. Forslund (1963) 225 Cal. App. 2d 476, 494-495, 37 Cal. Rptr. 489] . For further discussion, see Ch. 223, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody . In any case, due process requirements protect a party from improper reliance on the report [see Wheeler v. Wheeler (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 239, 242, 109 Cal. Rptr. 782] .

If the proposed ward is of sufficient age to form an intelligent preference as to the person to be appointed as guardian, the court must consider that preference [Prob. Code § 1514(e)(2)]. The proposed ward may testify as to other issues arising in the proceedings as long as the minor is capable of expressing himself or herself concerning the matter so as to be understood and is capable of understanding the duty of a witness to tell the truth [see Evid. Code §§ 700, 701(a)].

[6] Findings and Statement of Decision

Findings of fact in guardianship proceedings are governed by the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 632 [Guardianship of Brown (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 326, 332, 128 Cal. Rptr. 10, 546 P.2d 298 (decided prior to 1981 amendment of Code Civ. Proc. § 632); see Prob. Code §§ 1000, 2100; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1590]. Thus, the court is required to issue a statement of decision, explaining the factual and legal basis for its decision on each of the principal controverted issues if the petition was disputed and a proper request for the statement was made. The request must be made within 10 days after the court announces its tentative decision, unless the trial is concluded within one calendar day or in less than eight hours over more than one day, in which case the request must be made before submission of the matter for decision. The request must specify the controverted issues for which the party is requesting a statement of decision [Code Civ. Proc. § 632]. For further discussion and forms, see Ch. 529, Statement of Decision .

§ 280.66 Bond Requirement

One appointed as guardian of the person need not file a bond unless required by the court [Prob. Code § 2322]. A person appointed guardian of the estate generally must give a bond approved by the court before letters are issued [Prob. Code § 2320(a)]. The bond is conditioned on the guardian's faithful execution of the duties of the office according to law, for the benefit of the ward and persons interested in the guardianship estate [Prob. Code § 2320(b)].

A nominee under Prob. Code § 1500 or 1501 who is appointed guardian of the estate is not required to file a bond if the person making the nomination has waived it, unless it is required by the court [Prob. Code § 2324]. The court may also dispense with the bond requirement if it appears likely that, for the duration of the guardianship, all of the following will be true [Prob. Code §§ 2323, 2628(a)]:

- The net value of the estate, excluding the ward's residence, will be less than $15,000.
- The monthly income of the estate, excluding public benefit payments, will be less than $2,000.
- All income of the estate, if not retained, will be spent for the benefit of the ward.

Bonds in guardianship proceedings are considered further in Ch. 283, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Bonds.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Procedure for Appointment of Guardian

24-280 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 280.69

§ 280.69 Appeal

An order granting or denying a guardianship petition is appealable [Prob. Code § 1301(a)]. The appeal is taken from the order alone and not from the issuance of letters [see Guardianship of Donaldson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 477, 485, 223 Cal. Rptr. 707 (failure to issue letters does not foreclose appeal of order)].

An appeal generally will stay the operation and effect of the order [Prob. Code § 1310(a)]. In a proceeding for guardianship of the person, however, an appeal will not stay any provisions of the order that award, change, or otherwise affect the custody of the minor, although the trial court has discretion to stay the execution of those provisions pending the appeal, or for any other period it deems appropriate [Prob. Code § 1310(c); see Code Civ. Proc. § 917.7; Guardianship of Melissa W. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1298, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 42 (absent stay, court's order onguardianship petition is immediately effective and binding on parties)]. Further, the trial court, to prevent injury or loss to a person or property, may appoint a temporary guardian or direct the exercise of the powers of the guardian notwithstanding the appeal [Prob. Code § 1310(b)].

Additionally, in the absence of a writ or other order of the reviewing court providing otherwise, the provisions of any judgment or order allowing or eliminating restrictions against removal of the minor from the state are stayed by operation of law for a period of seven days from entry of judgment in a dependency proceeding, and 30 days from entry of judgment in other cases. The stay may be extended by order of the trial court [Prob. Code § 1310(c); see Code Civ. Proc. § 917.7].

In one case, a minor's grandparents, whose petition for guardianship was denied, were immediately bound by the trial court's judgment absent an applicable stay. Thus, when the grandparents flew the minor to the Bahamas where the minor was married, the court dismissed the grandparents' appeal because they had sabotaged the judgment being appealed and had made the issue moot [Guardianship of Melissa W. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1433, 1438-1439, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 577] .

An appeal does not stay the operation and effect of the judgment or order if the court requires an undertaking and the undertaking is not given, in any of the following cases [Prob. Code § 1310(d); see Code Civ. Proc. § 917.9]:

- The appellant is found to possess money or other property of the respondent;
- The appellant is required to perform an act for the respondent's benefit; or
- The judgment against the appellant is solely for costs awarded under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021 et seq.

An appeal also does not stay the operation and effect of a judgment for money or an order directing payment of money, unless one of the following applies [Prob. Code § 1310(e)]:

- A bond is posted as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 917.1; or
- The payment is to be made from a decedent's estate being administered under Prob. Code § 7000 et seq. or from the estate of a person who is subject to a guardianship or conservatorship of the estate under Prob. Code § 1400 et seq.

However, a court may require an undertaking as provided in Prob. Code § 1310(d), discussed above [Prob. Code § 1310(e)].

§ 280.72 Professional Fiduciaries Act

Guardians who meet the statutory definition of "professional fiduciary" are required to comply with the Professional Fiduciaries Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6500 et seq.; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6530(a), Prob. Code §§ 60.1, 2340]. In the context of guardians and conservators, a "professional fiduciary" is anyone who acts as a conservator or guardian for two or more persons at the same time who are not related to the professional fiduciary or to each other by blood, adoption, marriage, or registered domestic partnership [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6501(f); for discussion of the definition of "professional fiduciary" in the context of trustees, see Ch. 560, Trusts, § 560.74].

The following are specifically exempted from the licensing requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6501(f)(4), 6530(b)-(d)]:

- Trust companies [see Prob. Code § 83 (definition)].

- FDIC-insured institutions, or their holding companies, subsidiaries or affiliates.

- Any public agency, including the public guardian, public conservator, or other agency of the State of California, a county of California, or any regional center for persons with developmental disabilities as defined in Welf. & Inst. Code § 4620.

- Any person who is employed by a trust company, an FDIC-insured institution or its holding companies, subsidiaries or affiliates, or a public agency who is acting in the course and scope of that employment, and in the instance of a public officer of a public agency, acting in the course and scope of official duties.

- Any person whose sole activity as a professional fiduciary is as a broker-dealer, broker-dealer agent, investment adviser representative registered and regulated under the Corporate Securities Law of 1968 [Corp. Code § 25000 et seq.], the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 [15 U.S.C. 80b-1 et seq.], or the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [15 U.S.C. 78a et seq.], or involves serving as a trustee to a company regulated by the Securities and Exchange Commission under the Investment Company Act of 1940 [15

U.S.C. 80a-1 et seq.].

- Any licensed attorney.
- Any licensed certified public accountant;
- Any Internal Revenue Service agent acting within the scope of practice.

No person may act or hold himself or herself out to the public as a professional fiduciary unless he or she is licensed as a professional fiduciary under the Act [Prob. Code § 60.1(b)]. Persons previously required to register with the statewide registry under Prob. Code § 2850 et seq. (inoperative 7/1/2008, repealed eff. 1/1/2009), and persons required to file information with the clerk of thecourt under the former version of Prob. Code § 2340 et seq. (inoperative 7/1/2008; repealed eff. 1/1/2009) are required to obtain a professional fiduciary license. Additionally, as of July 1, 2008, no court may appoint a person to carry out the duties of a professional fiduciary unless he or she holds a valid, unexpired, unsuspended professional fiduciary license [Prob. Code § 2340]. (In other words, after July 1, 2008, professional fiduciaries may not be appointed in any new guardianship or conservatorship matters until they obtain a license under the Professional Fiduciaries Act. However, professional fiduciaries already appointed in specific matters prior to July 1, 2008, may continue to act in those matters until January 1, 2009, by which time they are required to be licensed under the Professional Fiduciaries Act.) For an allegation seeking removal of a conservator or guardian for failure to comply with the licensing requirements of the Professional Fiduciaries Act, see Ch. 290G, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Removal or Resignation of Guardians or Conservators, § 290G.37A.

For more detailed discussion of the licensing requirements of the Professional Fiduciaries Act and the qualifications of professional fiduciaries, see Ch. 281, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Conservators, § 281.66.

§ 280.73 Guardian's Subsequent Adoption of Minor

A proceeding to have a child declared free from the custody and control of one or both parents may be brought in the guardianship proceeding under Fam. Code § 7800 et seq., if all of the following requirements are satisfied [Prob. Code § 1516.5(a)]:

- Neither parent has legal custody of the child.
- The child has been in the guardian's physical custody for at least two years.
- The court finds that the child would benefit from being adopted by the guardian. In making this determination, the court must consider all factors relating to the child's best interest, including, but not limited to, the nature and extent of the relationship between the child and the birth parent, the child and the guardian (and the guardian's family members), and the child and any siblings or half-siblings.

The court must appoint a court investigator or other qualified professional to investigate each of these factors, and the investigator's or professional's findings on these issues must be included in the written report required by Fam. Code § 7851 [Prob. Code § 1516.5(b)].

The rights afforded a parent, including the rights to notice and counsel, provided by Fam. Code § 7800 et seq., apply in the proceeding [Prob. Code § 1516.5(c)].

These provisions do not apply if the child is a dependent of the juvenile court, or to any Indian child [Prob. Code § 1516.5(d)].

Despite challenges to the constitutionality of Prob. Code § 1516.5, the California Supreme Court has upheld the statute as facially constitutional and consistent with due process [Guardianship of Ann S. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1110, 1118, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 701, 202 P.3d 1089 ; In re Charlotte D. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1140, 1142-1143, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 724, 202 P.3d 1109]. A showing of current unfitness is not necessary when a court terminates parental rights under Prob. Code §

1516.5 based on the child's best interest, but parents may challenge the constitutionality of the statute as applied to them individually [In re Charlotte D. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1140, 1147, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 724, 202 P.3d 1109].

Prob. An "other person on behalf of the minor" under *Prob. After minor's grandparents' petition for guardianship was denied and grandparents flew minor to the Bahamas where she was married, appellate court dismissed grandparents' appeal of denial because they had sabotaged judgment being appealed and had made issue moot. Guardianship of Melissa W. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1433, 1438-1439, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 577

If court finds that granting custody to parent would be detrimental and granting custody to nonparent would be in child's best interests, court may grant custody to nonparent without further balancing parent's constitutionally protected interest in opportunity to form a relationship with child. Adoption of Daniele G. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1408,

105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 341

Trial court improperly granted guardianship petition because, although California was minors' "home state" under former Civ. Code § 5152(1)(a), Illinois had "significant connection" jurisdiction over minors under former Civ. Code § 5152(1)(b) (now see Fam. Code § 3403(b)), and California court knew of pending Illinois guardianship proceeding but failed to contact Illinois court as provided by former Civ. Code §§ 5155(3), 5168 (now see Fam. Code § 3400 et seq.). Guardianship of Donaldson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 477, 489-493, 223 Cal. Rptr. 707

In guardianship proceeding involving child with Down's syndrome, parents were not entitled to be present at pretrial psychological examination when their need for accurate report was adequately safeguarded through discovery, cross examination, and production of other expert testimony. Guardianship of Phillip B. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 418, 188 Cal. Rptr. 781

Before making award of custody to nonparent in guardianship proceeding, court is required to make finding that custody by parents would be detrimental to child and that custody by nonparents would be in child's best interest. Guardianship of Phillip B. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 419, 188 Cal. Rptr. 781

Guardianship was properly awarded to de facto parents without any requirement of full-time residency with child. Guardianship of Phillip B. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 420-421, 188 Cal. Rptr. 781

Guardianship was properly awarded to nonparents when parents of child with Down's syndrome had emotionally abandoned child by refusing to allow child's education, training, medical treatment for heart defect, and contact with couple with whom he had developed close relationship. Guardianship of Phillip B. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 421-424, 188 Cal. Rptr. 781

In guardianship proceeding, evidence of parents' past conduct was properly admitted since it indicated possible future conduct as it pertained to child's welfare. Guardianship of Phillip B. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 427, 188 Cal. Rptr. 781

Use of prohibition or mandate to review jurisdiction of superior court in guardianship proceeding. San Diego County Dep't of Public Welfare v. Superior Court of San Diego County (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 1, 9, 101 Cal. Rptr. 541, 496 P.2d 453

Right of person named in petition and filing objections to appeal from order appointing guardian even though not seeking to be named guardian. Guardianship of Pankey (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 919, 925-927, 113 Cal. Rptr. 858

Finding of unfitness is not necessary to deny parent custody under former Civ. Code § 4600 (now see Fam. Code § 3020 et seq.); finding that parental custody would be detrimental to child is necessary. In re B.G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244 (custody order under Juvenile Court Law); Guardianship of Marino (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 952, 958-961, 106 Cal. Rptr. 655

Guardian is not required to have same religious affiliation as parents of minor. Guardianship of Minnicar (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 703, 709, 710, 297 P.2d 105

Probate court has exclusive jurisdiction of guardianship proceedings and, after appointment of guardian, probate court has continuous jurisdiction over guardian and administration of ward's affairs. Guardianship of Tulley (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 698, 705, 146 Cal. Rptr. 266

Requirement that appointment of guardian be necessary or convenient is prerequisite to appointment despite nomination of guardian by minor. Guardianship of Kentera (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 639, 642-643, 262 P.2d 317

Former Prob. Code § 1407 (now see Prob. Code § 1514), which provided for parental preference in choice of guardian without distinguishing between guardians of person and of estate, did not preclude appointment of nonparent as guardian of minor's estate over parent's objections on basis that parental preference was primarily concerned with the appointment of a guardian of the person. Estate of Rosin (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 166, 170-171, 37 Cal. Rptr. 830

CAUTION:
This petition must be amended to reveal other custody proceedings within 10 days of the petitioner's learning of any proceeding affecting the custody of the proposed ward not disclosed in the original petition, including any adoption, juvenile court, marriage dissolution, domestic relations, or other similar proceeding [Prob. Code § 1512].

The form in [1], above, is an illustrative, filled-in reproduction of Cal. Judicial Council Form GC-210, for use in petitioning for the appointment of a guardian for a minor.

Use of the Judicial Council form is mandatory when the petitioner is seeking a guardianship of the estate or of the person and estate [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 1.31, 7.101; page 1 of form]. If the petitioner is seeking only a guardianship of the person, either this form or Judicial Council Form GC-210(P) [see § 280.110B] may be used [see page 1 of form]. This form should not be used for a temporary guardianship [see page 1 of form; see also Ch. 282, Guardianships: Temporary Guardians and Conservators, §§ 282.80, 282.80A (forms)]. The form illustrated here has been filled in to illustrate completion when the petitioner is seeking a guardian of both the person and of the estate.

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Jurisdiction and Venue

[a] In General

The superior court has jurisdiction of guardianship proceedings [Prob. Code § 2200]. If the proposed ward is a California resident, venue lies in the county in which the proposed ward resides or in such other county as may be in the best interests of the proposed ward [Prob. Code § 2201]. If the proposed ward is not a resident of California, venue on a petition for guardianship of the person or estate lies in the county where the proposed ward is temporarily living or such other county as may be in the best interests of the proposed ward. If the petition is for guardianship of the estate, venue may lie in any county in which the proposed ward has property [Prob. Code § 2202].

If proceedings for guardianship of the estate are begun in more than one county, the guardianship first granted, including a temporary guardianship, governs and extends to all of the ward's property within California, and the other proceeding must be dismissed [Prob. Code § 2203(a)]. Conflict between multiple proceedings for guardianship of the person are resolved in the same manner [Prob. Code § 2203(b)]. If a proceeding for guardianship of the person is begun in one county, and a proceeding for guardianship of the estate is begun in another county, the court first granting aguardianship may find that it is in the best interests of the ward that the guardianship of both the person and the estate be maintained in that county or in such other county as the court determines. Thereafter, the guardianship proceeding in the court of the county found by the court to be in the best interests of the ward will govern and extend to all of the ward's property in California, and the other proceeding must be dismissed [Prob. Code § 2203(c)].

Change of venue in guardianship proceedings is governed by Prob. Code §§ 2210-2217. For a discussion of change of venue and forms that may be adapted to guardianship proceedings, see Ch. 281, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Conservators .

[b] Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act

The jurisdiction of California courts to make a determination of child custody in a proceeding to appoint a guardian of the person for a minor is governed by the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act (Fam. Code § 3400 et seq.). For a discussion of that act, see Ch. 394, Parent and Child .

Every party in a child custody proceeding is required to disclose information relating to the child's custody in his or her first pleading or an attached affidavit (or declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) [Fam. Code § 3429; see Guardianship of Donaldson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 477, 489, 223 Cal. Rptr. 707] . For a discussion of the information required to be disclosed and a form of declaration in lieu of the required affidavit, see § 280.112.

If the jurisdiction asserted by the California court is consistent with the Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act [28 U.S.C. § 1738A], the child custody determination made by the court will be entitled to full faith and credit in sister-state courts and will be subject to modification by those courts only as provided by federal law [see 28 U.S.C. § 1738A]. For a discussion of that act, see Ch. 394, Parent and Child .

[4] Contents of Petition

[a] In General

The petition must request that a guardian of the person or estate, or both, of the minor be appointed (Paragraphs 1a, 1b), state that the appointment is necessary and convenient (Paragraph 8), and specify the name and address of the proposed guardian (Paragraphs 1a, 1b) and the name and date of birth of the proposed ward (Paragraph 2) [Prob. Code § 1510(b)].

[b] Bonds

The form provides space for requesting that no bond be required or stating the amount of bond to be fixed (Paragraph 1c). Unless required by the court, a bond need not be filed by one appointed as guardian of the person and, if the nominator waives bond, by a guardian nominated under Prob. Code § 1500 or 1501 [Prob. Code §§ 2322, 2324].

The form also includes space to request approval of deposits of property with a trust company or financial institution that may allow the amount of the bond to be reduced (Paragraph 1c). If the petitioner or proposed guardian makes these deposits before the appointment of a guardian, on the condition that withdrawal of the money, securities, or other property and any earnings thereon can be made only on the court's authorization, the court may exclude the money, securities, or other property in determining the amount of the required bond or may reduce the bond to be required in respect to the money, securities, or other property to an amount determined by the court to be reasonable [Prob. Code § 2328(a), (b)].

The petitioner or proposed guardian must obtain and file with the court a written receipt including the agreement of the bank, trust company, or insured savings and loan association that withdrawal from the account requires court authorization [Prob. Code § 2328(c)]. Accordingly, the form contains a statement that receipts will be filed (Paragraph 1c). For a discussion and forms relating to bonds, see Ch. 283, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Bonds .

[c] Independent Powers for Guardian of Estate

The form includes an entry that the petitioner may use to request any one or more of the powers listed in Prob. Code § 2591, relating to administration of estates, to be exercised without prior court approval pursuant to Prob. Code § 2590. The specific powers that are requested must be listed in the petition, and the form provides for the list as an attachment to the petition (Paragraphs 1c, 9) [Prob. Code § 2592]. For a discussion of the independent administration of estates and a list of Prob. Code § 2591 powers, see Ch. 288, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Independent Exercise of Powers .

[d] Additional Conditions for Care of Person and Estate

The form provides for a request for orders relating to the powers and duties of the proposed guardian of the person under Prob. Code §§ 2351-2358, which deal with the care, custody, control, education, and medical treatment of wards. The orders requested are to be listed in an attachment to the petition (Paragraph 1e). If a guardian is appointed, the court, with the guardian's consent, may impose conditions not otherwise obligatory providing for the care, treatment, education, and welfare of the ward or for the care and custody of the ward's property, or both. The performance of any conditions imposed by the court is a part of the duties of the guardian for the faithful performance of which the guardian and the sureties on the bond are responsible [Prob. Code §§ 2358, 2402]. The form does not provide any specific space for entering a request for additional conditions relating to the care and custody of the ward's property. It is suggested that the entry be made under the paragraph for requesting other orders that provides for the specific order requested to be set out in an attachment (Paragraph 1g).

For a further discussion of Prob. Code §§ 2351-2358, see Ch. 285, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Care of Ward or Conservatee .

[e] Nonprofit Charitable Corporation as Guardian

A petition for appointment of a nonprofit charitable corporation as guardian must include in the caption the name of a responsible corporate officer who will act for thecorporation for the purposes of Prob. Code § 1400 et seq. (Guardian-Conservatorship Law)]. If the officer so named ceases to act as the responsible corporate officer, the corporation must file notice with the court naming a successor and the date the successor will become the responsible corporate officer [Prob. Code § 2104].

[f] Guardianship Petition--Child Information Attachment

Judicial Council Form GC-210(CA) [see § 280.110C], the Judicial Council's child information attachment form, must be attached to this form.

[g] Professional Fiduciary

If the proposed guardian is a professional fiduciary within the meaning of the Professional Fiduciaries Act, the proposed guardian must complete the Professional Fiduciary Attachment to the Petition for Appointment of Guardian [see § 280.110D, Judicial Council Form GC-210(A-PF)/GC-310(A-PF)] (Paragraph 4d).

[5] Verification

The petition must be verified [Prob. Code § 1021(a)]. Except as otherwise specified, all petitions, reports, and objections or responses filed pursuant to Prob. Code § 1400 et seq. (Guardian-Conservatorship Law) must be verified [Prob. Code § 1021; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.103(b), (c)].

An affidavit or verified petition must be received as evidence if offered in any uncontested probate proceeding [Prob. Code § 1022].

[6] Notice of Hearing

[a] Required Period and Persons

Notice of the time and place of the hearing on the petition for appointment of a guardian, together with a copy of the petition, must be served at least 15 days before the hearing. The 15-day period cannot be shortened [Prob. Code § 1511(a)]. Notice must be served in the manner provided in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 415.10 (personal service) or 415.30 (service by mail) on the following persons [Prob. Code § 1511(b)]:

- The proposed ward if at least 12 years old.
- The person having legal custody of the proposed ward or serving as guardian of the estate of the proposed ward.
- The parents of the proposed ward.
- Any person nominated as guardian for the proposed ward under Prob. Code § 1500 or 1501.

In addition, notice must be served by mail sent to the addresses stated in the petition, or in any manner authorized by the court, to the following persons [Prob. Code § 1511(c)]:

- The spouse named in the petition.
- The relatives named in the petition (but if the petition is for a guardian of the estate only, the court may dispense with that notice).
- The person having care of the proposed ward if other than the person having legal custody of the proposed ward.

If the case involves a petition for guardianship of the person, the petitioner must mail a notice of the hearing and a copy of the petition, at least 15 days before the hearing, to the local agency designated by the board of supervisors to investigate guardianships for the court. The local social services agency providing child protection services must screen the name of the guardian for prior referrals of neglect or abuse of minors. The results of this screening must be provided to the court [Prob. Code § 1516].

If the proposed ward is a patient in or on leave from a state hospital under the jurisdiction of the Department of Mental Health or the Department of Developmental Services, the director of the appropriate department must be served notice by mail at his or her office in Sacramento [Prob. Code §§ 1461, 1511(d)].

If the petition is for a nonrelative guardianship [see Prob. Code § 1540], the petitioner must mail a notice of the hearing and a copy of the petition to the Director of Social Services at his or her office in Sacramento and to the local agency designated by the board of supervisors to investigate guardianships for the court [Prob. Code §§ 1511(d), 1542]. For a discussion of applicability of nonrelative guardianship provisions, see § 280.64. Notice must also be mailed to the Department of Veterans Affairs office having jurisdiction over the area in which the court is located, if the petition states that the proposed ward is receiving or is entitled to receive benefits from the Department of Veterans Affairs [Prob. Code §§ 1461.5, 1511(e)].

[b] Jurisdictional Notice to Parents

The requirement of notice to the parents is jurisdictional, and an order of appointment made without the notice when the parent's address was known is void and subject to be set aside at any time [Guardianship of Kerns (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 862, 869, 169 P.2d 975] .

[c] Additional Notice

If the court determines that the notice required by Prob. Code § 1511 is insufficient in the particular circumstances, the court may require that further or additional notice, including a longer period of notice, be given [Prob. Code § 1202].

[d] Notice of Request for Independent Powers

If the petition for appointment of a guardian includes a request for an order granting independent powers under Prob. Code § 2590 (administration of estates), the notice of hearing on the petition must so state and must list the specific power or powers requested [Prob. Code § 2592]. For a discussion and forms relating to the independent exercise in the administration of estates, see Ch. 288, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Independent Exercise of Powers .

[e] Notice Not to Be Given

Unless the court orders otherwise, notice is not to be given to the parents or other relatives of a proposed ward who has been relinquished to a licensed adoption agencyor to the parents of a proposed ward who has been judicially declared free from their custody and control [Prob. Code § 1511(f)].

[f] Notice Not Required

If the court so orders, notice need not be given to any person on a determination that the person cannot with reasonable diligence be given the notice or that giving notice would be contrary to the interest of justice [Prob. Code § 1511(g)].

In addition to the possibility of dispensing with notice under Prob. Code § 1511(g), if the petition is for guardianship of the estate only, the court may dispense with the giving of notice to any one or more of the relatives named in the petition [Prob. Code § 1511(c)].

This form includes space for requesting that the court dispense with notice to persons listed in an attachment to the petition (Paragraphs 1g, 15). For a form for an order dispensing with notice, see Ch. 284, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Notice .

[g] Form of Notice

Use of the form for notice prescribed by the Judicial Council is mandatory [Prob. Code § 1001(b)]. For a reproduction of that form, see Ch. 284, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Notice .

[h] Proof of Notice

Before the appointment of a guardian is made, proof must be made to the court that each person entitled to notice under Prob. Code § 1511 has received notice or that the court has dispensed with notice under Prob. Code § 1511(g) [Prob. Code § 1511(h)].

A finding by the court that notice has been waived by a party entitled to it also satisfies the requirement that proof of notice be made at the hearing and that the court find that notice was regularly given or waived. This finding should also be made in the order appointing the guardian so that the order will be conclusive on all persons when it becomes final [Prob. Code § 1260; see § 280.115].

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is an illustrated, filled-in reproduction of Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-105/GC-120, Declaration Under Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act. This form addresses informational requirements of the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act (UCCJEA) [Fam Code § 3400 et seq.] that are applicable in all proceedings in which legal or physical custody of a child is at issue, including guardianship proceedings [see Fam. Code § 3402(d)]. Under the UCCJEA, each party to the proceeding is required to provide specified information in its first pleading or in an attached affidavit [see Fam. Code § 3429; see also Prob. Code §§ 1510(f), 1512 (information regarding other proceedings)].

The Judicial Council has designated this form as optional [see Cal Rules of Court, Rules 1.30(b), 1.35], which means that it may be used by the parties to satisfy the preceding requirements and must be accepted for filing by all courts [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 1.35(a)]. However, the Rules of Court's Probate Rules provide that in actions to which the Probate Code applies, if the Judicial Council has adopted a form for a petition, order, or other document, that form must be used [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 7.101; see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 7.2 (application of probate rules)]; thus, it appears that in guardianship proceedings use of this form is in fact mandatory.

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

The caption on the form is designed for use in child custody proceedings incident to a marital dissolution, so the form should be modified by inserting the title of the guardianship action as it appears on the petition and other pleadings.

[3] Contents of Declaration

Every party in a custody proceeding, in his or her first pleading or in an affidavit attached to that pleading, must give information under oath as to the child's present address, the places the child has lived for the past five years, and the names and present addresses of the persons with whom the child lived during that period. However, if there are allegations of domestic violence or child abuse, any addresses of the party alleging abuse and of the child that are unknown to the other party are confidential and may not be disclosed in the pleading or affidavit [Fam. Code § 3429(a)]. Every party must also declare under oath in the pleading or affidavit whether [Fam. Code § 3429(a)]:

- He or she has participated, as a party, witness, or otherwise, in any other proceeding concerning custody of or visitation with the child and, if so,identify the court, the case number, and the date of the child custody determination, if any.

- He or she knows of any proceeding that could affect the current proceeding, including proceedings for enforcement and proceedings relating to domestic violence, protective orders, termination of parental rights, and adoptions and, if so, identify the court, the case number, and the nature of the proceeding [see also Prob. Code § 1510(f) (requirement for disclosure of other proceedings), Prob. Code § 1512 (amendment to disclose other proceedings)].

- He or she knows the names and addresses of any persons not a party to the proceeding who has physical custody of the child or claims rights of legal custody or physical custody of, or visitation with, the child and, if so, the names and addresses of those persons.

If the declaration as to any of these items is affirmative, the declarant must give additional information under oath as required by the court. The court may examine the parties under oath as to details of the information furnished and as to other matters pertinent to the court's jurisdiction and the disposition of the case [Fam. Code § 3429(c)]. A declaration under penalty of perjury may be used instead of an affidavit [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]. If the required information is not provided, the court, on motion of any party or its own motion, may stay the proceeding until the information is furnished [Fam. Code § 3429(b)].

[4] Continuing Duty to Inform Court of Proceedings

The party filing this declaration is under a continuing duty to inform the court of any proceeding in California or in any other state that could affect the proceeding in which the declaration is filed [Fam. Code § 3429(d)].

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use to object to a petition for the appointment of a guardian. Grounds for objection are discussed under [5], below.

The statutory form of pleading for opposing a petition under the Probate Code is a response or an objection, unless otherwise specified [see Prob. Code § 1043]. Apparently, the objection must be made in writing, even though provision is made in the Probate Code for oral objection at a hearing [see Prob. Code §§ 1021(a)(2), 1043(a), (b) (objections are required to be verified; interested person is permitted to appear and respond or to object in writing at or before hearing or orally at hearing)]. Counsel should consult local practice for the form and content of, and procedural matters related to, an objection.

[3] Contents of Objection

[a] In General

The department number and hearing date should appear immediately below the case number when required by local court rule [see, e.g., Los Angeles Co. Super Ct. Rules, Rule 10.10].

An objection should set forth the objector's standing to object (Paragraph 1), the substance and grounds of the objection (Paragraph 2), and the relief sought.

[b] Award to Nonparent

On a petition for guardianship of the person of a minor, before custody of the minor can be awarded to a nonparent, the court must find that being in the custody of a parent would be detrimental to the child and that the award to a nonparent is required in the best interests of the child [Fam. Code § 3041; Prob. Code § 1514(b); In re B.G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 698-699, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244 (applying former Civ. Code § 4600 in context of juvenile court proceedings); Guardianship of Oliva J. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1153-2013, 1154, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 364 ; Guardianship of Z.C.W. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 524, 527, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 48] . Accordingly, an objection to a petition for guardianship of the person should expressly state that the award of custody to a parent would be detrimental to the child and that the award to the nonparent is in the child's best interests. Further, if a court finds that granting custody to a parent would be detrimental and granting custody to a nonparent would be in the child's best interests, the court may grant custody to the nonparent without further balancing the parent's constitutionally protected interest in an opportunity to form a relationship with the child [Adoption of Daniele G. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1408, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 341] .

Even though former Prob. Code § 1409, providing that a parent who abandoned a minor lost the right to guardianship, was repealed by Stats. 1979, ch. 726, § 1, an appellate court has held that a parent's neglect or indifference toward a child has a bearing on the parent's fitness and may be considered by the court in determining custody. Moreover, it may be difficult to distinguish between facts that render a parent unfit and facts showing that parental custody would be detrimental to the minor [Guardianship of Pankey (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 919, 933-934, 113 Cal. Rptr. 858] . Therefore, statements of fact in an objection regarding abandonment should continue to be pertinent in determining whether a nonparent should be appointed guardian in preference to a parent.

[4] Standing to Object

Although the Probate Code does not specify who may object to a petition for the appointment of a guardian, anyone entitled to notice of the petition would seem to be a proper objector. The party objecting does not have to seek custody of the proposed ward [see Guardianship of Pankey (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 919, 926-927, 113 Cal. Rptr. 858] .

[5] Grounds for Objection

Neither the Probate Code generally nor the Guardianship-Conservatorship Law specifically sets forth grounds for objecting to a petition to appoint a guardian. Nevertheless, objection can apparently be made on a variety of substantive and procedural grounds, including the jurisdiction of the court, the necessity for a guardianship, and the suitability or fitness of the proposed guardian. It is also possible that, although no objection is made to the fact of guardianship or the proposed guardian, objection will be made to the powers to be granted the proposed guardian [see, e.g., Prob. Code § 2590 et seq. (scope and exercise of independent powers by guardian)].

_____ [signature]
Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use when the court denies a petition for appointment of a guardian [see Prob. Code § 1510]. The Judicial Council has not promulgated a form of order for use when the petition is denied. Therefore, counsel must draft an order.

[3] Contents

If it appears to the satisfaction of the court that notice has been regularly given or that the party entitled to notice has waived it, the court must so find in the order [Prob. Code § 1260(b)]. Except as otherwise provided in the Probate Code, an order made in a proceeding under the code need not recite the existence of facts or the performance of acts on which jurisdiction depends. The order need only contain the matters ordered [Prob. Code § 1047].

[4] Statement of Decision

A statement of decision explaining the factual and legal basis for its decision on each of the principal controverted issues must be prepared by the court when a proper request for the statement is made. The request must specify the controverted issues for which the party is requesting a statement of decision [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; see Prob. Code §§ 1000, 1002, 2100; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1590; see also Guardianship of Brown (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 326, 332, 128 Cal. Rptr. 10, 546 P.2d 298 (decided prior to 1981 amendment of Code Civ. Proc. § 632)]. [2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is an illustrative, filled-in reproduction of Cal. Judicial Council Form GC-240, for use in appointing a guardian.

Use of the Judicial Council form is mandatory [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 1.31, 7.101]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Contents of Order-Appearances

A local court rule may require the person or persons named in the petition and seeking appointment as guardian to appear at the hearing [see, e.g., Orange Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Div. VI, Rule 610.04], and the form provides space to indicate whether the petitioner, his or her attorney, and the attorney for the minor were personally present (Paragraphs 1c-1e).

[4] Statement of Decision

A statement of decision, explaining the factual and legal basis for its decision on each of the principal controverted issues, must be prepared by the court when a proper request for the statement is made. The request must specify the controverted issues for which the party is requesting a statement of decision [Code Civ. Proc. § 632; see Prob. Code §§ 1000, 1002, 2100; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1590; see also Guardianship of Brown (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 326, 332, 128 Cal. Rptr. 10, 546 P.2d 298 (decided prior to 1981 amendment of Code Civ. Proc. § 632)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 529, Statement of Decision .

[5] Notice

Before a guardian is appointed, proof must be made to the court that each person entitled to notice under Prob. Code § 1511 has been given notice as required or that notice cannot with reasonable diligence be given or would be contrary to the interest of justice (Paragraphs 2a, 2b, 8) [Prob. Code § 1511(g), (h)]. If it appears to the satisfaction of the court that notice has been regularly given or that the party entitled to notice has waived it, the court must so find in the order, and the order when it becomes final is conclusive on all persons (Paragraph 2a) [Prob. Code § 1260(b), (c)].

[6] Independent Powers

The petition for appointment of a guardian may include a request that the court exercise its discretion under Prob. Code § 2590 to grant the guardian any of the powers enumerated in Prob. Code § 2591, relating to the administration of the ward's estate, to be exercised without court supervision. A list of the specific powers granted by the court must be attached to the order (Paragraphs 4, 11) [Prob. Code § 2592]. For a discussion and forms relating to the independent exercise of powers and a list of the powers that may be granted, see Ch. 288, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Independent Exercise of Powers .

[7] Attorney's Fees of Appointed Counsel

If the court appointed private legal counsel for the proposed ward pursuant to Prob. Code § 1470(a), the court, on conclusion of the matter, must fix a reasonable sum for compensation and expenses of counsel, which may include, in the court's discretion, compensation for services rendered, and expenses incurred, before the date of the order appointing counsel (Paragraphs 5, 10) [Prob. Code § 1470(b)]. The court is to order the sum so fixed to be paid by a parent or the parents of the minor or from the minor's estate, or any combination of these sources, in such proportions as the court deems just, but payment by a parent or parents of the minor can be made only after the parent or parents, as the case may be, had notice and the opportunity to be heard on whether the order would be just under the circumstances of the case [Prob. Code § 1470(c), (d)]. If a ward or proposed ward is furnished legal counsel, then the court, on its own motion or that of a party, must determine whether a parent or parents of the ward or proposed ward or the estate of the ward or proposed ward is financially unable to pay all or a portion of the cost of appointed counsel [Prob. Code § 1470(c)(3)]. Any portion of the cost of counsel that the court finds the parents or parents or the estate of the ward or proposed ward is unable to pay, must be paid by the county [Prob. Code § 1470(c)(3)]. For purposes of this rule, a nonparent, such as a grandparent, does not qualify as a parent and cannot be compelled to pay a minor's guardianship attorney's fees and costs [Guardianship of Elan E. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 998, 1001, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528] .

[8] Court-Appointed Investigator

The court investigator, probation officer, or domestic relations investigator in the county in which the petition for appointment of a guardian is pending must make an investigation whenever requested to do so by the court [Prob. Code § 1513(a)]. The form includes space for the name of the court-appointed investigator, probation officer, or domestic relations investigator, although there does not appear to be any statutory requirement that the investigator be named in the order (Paragraph 6).

The court may order repayment to the county by the parent or parents or other person charged with the support of the minor, or from the estate of the proposed ward for the expense of the investigation and report. If a hearing is requested, an order for repayment of investigation and report expenses may be made only after a hearing on such notice as the court may require [Prob. Code § 1513; see also Prob. Code § 1454 (qualifications and appointment of court investigator)].

[9] Bonds

Unless required by the court, a bond is not necessary if a guardian of the person is appointed or if the guardian was nominated under Prob. Code § 1500 or 1501 and the nominator waived bond (Paragraph 9a) [Prob. Code §§ 2322, 2324]. If a bond will be necessary, the form provides space to enter the amount and to order that deposits of estate assets be made at a specified financial institution to reduce the amount of bond (Paragraphs 9b, 9c). The amount of the bond and reduction of the amount by depositing assets in a financial institution subject to court supervision of withdrawals are governed by Prob. Code §§ 2320, 2323, 2326-2328, and Code Civ. Proc.§§ 995.710-995.770. In addition, the court may provide that the guardian is not authorized to take possession of money or any other property without a specific court order (Paragraph 9d). For further discussion and forms relating to bonds, see Ch. 283, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Bonds .

[10] Additional Conditions for Care of the Person and Estate

When a guardian is appointed, the court, with the guardian's consent, may insert in the order of appointment conditions not otherwise obligatory providing for the care, treatment, education, and welfare of the ward, for the care and custody of the ward's property, or for both. The form provides for lists specifying any additional orders to be attached to the order (Paragraphs 12, 13). The performance of such conditions is a part of the duties of the guardian, for the faithful performance of which the guardian and the sureties on the bond are responsible [Prob. Code §§ 2358, 2402].

[11] Appointing Guardian Nominated by Parent

[a] Guardian of the Person

Except to the extent that the court for good cause determines otherwise, a guardian of the person nominated pursuant to Prob. Code § 1500 is to be granted, in the order of appointment, the same authority with respect to the person of the ward as that of a parent having legal custody of a child. The guardian may exercise that authority without court supervision in the same manner as if that authority were exercised by a parent having legal custody of a child [Prob. Code § 2108(a)]. The terms are to be set out in an attachment to the order (Paragraph 14).

[b] Guardian of the Estate

If the court appoints a guardian of the estate nominated pursuant to Prob. Code § 1500 or a guardian of property nominated pursuant to Prob. Code § 1500 or a guardian of property nominated in a will pursuant to Prob. Code § 1501, the order of appointment must grant the guardian the right to exercise any of the powers listed in Prob. Code § 2591, relating to the independent administration of estates, without court supervision in the same manner as if that authority were granted by order of the court under Prob. Code § 2590. The court can refuse to grant those powers for good cause. If the powers are granted, they are subject to Prob. Code §§ 2593-2595 (withdrawal of powers; letters are required to list powers; power to petition for instruction or confirmation notwithstanding independent powers). In the case of a guardian nominated under Prob. Code § 1501, any additional authority must be limited to the property covered by the nomination [Prob. Code § 2108(b)]. A list of specific powers granted is to be attached to the order (Paragraph 11). For a further discussion and forms relating to the independent administration of estates under Prob. Code §§ 2590-2595, see Ch. 288, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Independent Exercise of Powers .

[12] Appointment of Probate Referee

The guardian must file an inventory and appraisal of the estate within 90 days after appointment or within such further time as the court may allow for reasonable cause. The property described in the inventory must be appraised in the same manner as provided for the inventory and appraisal of estates of decedents, which requires the appointment of a probate referee to appraise any property other than currency, cash items, bank accounts and amounts on deposit with any financial institution, and the proceeds of life insurance policies and retirement plans payable on death in lump-sum amounts, all of which are to appraised by the guardian. The referee must also appraise any such items that the guardian believes to have a fair market value different from ostensible value or specified amount [Prob. Code §§ 2610, 8850-8902]. Accordingly, provision is made for appointment of a probate referee (Paragraph 15). For a discussion and forms relating to the inventory and appraisal of estates, see Ch. 286, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Inventory and Appraisal .

[13] Ineffectiveness of Appointment Until Letters Have Issued

The appointment of a guardian, the taking of the guardian's oath, and the filing of the guardian's bond, if required, must thereafter be evidenced by the issuance of letters by the clerk of the court [Prob. Code § 2310(a)]. The order appointing the guardian must state in capital letters on the first page of the order, in at least 12-point type, the following: "WARNING: THIS APPOINTMENT IS NOT EFFECTIVE UNTIL LETTERS HAVE ISSUED" [Prob. Code § 2310(b)].

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a reproduction of Cal. Judicial Council Form GC-250. It should be prepared by the attorney and issued by the clerk.

Use of the Judicial Council form is mandatory [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 1.31, 7.101]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. The appointment, taking of the oath, and filing of the bond, if any, are evidenced by letters of guardianship issued by the clerk of the court [Prob. Code § 2310]. The letters are to be in substantially the same form as letters of administration, except as otherwise required by the court making the appointment [Prob. Code § 2311].

[3] Contents of Letters

[a] Independent Powers

The petition for appointment of a guardian may include a request that the court exercise its discretion under Prob. Code § 2590 to grant the guardian any of the powers enumerated in Prob. Code § 2591, relating to the administration of the ward's estate, to be exercised without court supervision [Prob. Code § 2592]. If the court grants any such powers, the letters of guardianship must state the specific powers granted and the restrictions, conditions, or limitations, if any, prescribed in the order, and must refer to Article 11, Chapter 6, Division 4 of the Probate Code (Paragraph 2a) [Prob. Code §§ 2590-2595].

If the powers are subsequently withdrawn, restricted, conditioned, or limited, new letters must be issued accordingly [Prob. Code § 2594].

For a further discussion of the independent administration of estates under Prob. Code §§ 2590-2595 and a list of the powers enumerated in Prob. Code § 2591, see Ch. 288, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Independent Exercise of Powers .

[b] Additional Conditions

When a guardian is appointed, the court, with the guardian's consent, may insert in the order of appointment conditions not otherwise obligatory providing for the care, treatment, education, and welfare of the ward, for the care and custody of the property of the ward, or for both. Any such condition must be included in the letters of guardianship, and the performance of such conditions is a part of the duties of the guardian, for the faithful performance of which the guardian and the sureties on the bond are responsible (Paragraphs 2b, 2c) [Prob. Code §§ 2358, 2402]. In addition, the court may provide that the guardian is not authorized to take possession of money or any other property without a specific court order (Paragraph 3).

[4] Guardian Nominated by Parent

[a] Guardian of the Person

If the court appoints a guardian of the person nominated by the minor's parent under Prob. Code § 1500, and grants the guardian the same authority with respect to the person of the ward as a parent having legal custody of a child, exercisable without notice, hearing, or court authorization, instructions, approval, or confirmation, the letters must include the terms of the order granting that authority (Paragraph 2d) [Prob. Code § 2108].

[b] Guardian of the Estate

If the court appoints a guardian of the estate nominated under Prob. Code § 1500 by a parent or under Prob. Code § 1501 by a person from whom the minor receives property, and grants the guardian the right to exercise any of the powers listed in Prob. Code § 2591 without notice, hearing, or court authorization, instructions, approval, or confirmation, in the same manner as if that authority were granted by order of the court under Prob. Code § 2590, the letters must include the terms of the order granting that authority. In the case of a guardian nominated under Prob. Code § 1501, any such additional authority must be limited to the property covered by the nomination (Paragraph 2a) [Prob. Code § 2108]. If a person nominated under Prob. Code § 1501 is appointed solely as guardian of the property covered by the nomination, the letters must so indicate (Paragraph 2d) [Prob. Code § 1514(d)].

[5] Oath

A guardian must take an oath to perform the duties of the office according to law, and the oath must be attached to or endorsed on the letters of guardianship [Prob. Code § 2300].

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a reproduction of Cal. Judicial Council Form GC-251, for use by a guardian in providing an annual status report to the court [see Prob. Code § 1513.2].

Use of the Judicial Council form is mandatory [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 1.31, 7.101]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

At least one month before the date the guardian is required to return the status report, the clerk of the court must mail to the guardian a notice informing the guardian that he or she must complete and return the report to the court [Prob. Code § 1513.2(a)]. The clerk must enclose a blank status report form for each child under guardianship in the same case for the guardian to complete and return by mail [Prob. Code § 1513.2(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.1003(b) (clerk must fill in due date for report)].

[3] Contents of Report

Every guardian must complete and return to the court an annual status report [Prob. Code § 1513.2(a)]. The report must include information about the status of the guardianship, including the guardian's present address (Paragraph 1(b)), the name and birth date of the child under guardianship (Paragraph 2(a) and (b)), the name of the school in which the child is enrolled (Paragraph 3(a)), and information about the person with whom the child is residing if the child is not in the guardian's home and why the child was moved (Paragraph 2(c)-(e)) [Prob. Code § 1513.2(b)].

[4] Failure to Comply With Report Requirements

If the guardian does not complete and return the status report, or if the court finds after the guardian has returned the report that further information is needed, the court must attempt to obtain this information from the guardian or other sources [Prob. Code § 1513.2(a)]. If the court is unable to obtain this information within 30 days after the date the status report is due, the court must either order the guardian to make himself or herself available to the court's investigator for purposes of investigation of the guardianship or to show cause why the guardian should not be removed [Prob. Code § 1513.2(a)].

It is a misdemeanor for a guardian to submit willfully any material information required by the form that the guardian knows to be false [Prob. Code § 1513.2(a)].

[5] Confidentiality of Report

The status report is confidential and may only be made available to persons who have been served in the proceedings or their attorneys [Prob. Code § 1513.2(c)].

[3] Certification Requirement

Each attorney appointed or eligible for appointment by a court before January 1, 2008, including deputy public defenders, was required to certify to the court by April 1, 2008, that he or she satisfies the qualifications to be eligible for a new appointment on or after April 1, 2008. Beginning March 1, 2008, each counsel must certify that he or she is qualified before becoming eligible for an appointment. Beginning January 1, 2009, each appointed counsel must certify to the court before the end of March of each year that he or she has completed the continuing education required for the preceding calendar year [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.1101; see form GC-011 in [1], above].

[4] Qualifications for Private Counsel (Paragraph 3)

An attorney in private practice appointed by the court on or after January 1, 2008, must be an active member of the State Bar of California for at least three years immediately before the date of appointment, with no discipline imposed within the 12 months immediately preceding any date of availability for appointment after January 1, 2008 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.1101(b)]. Private counsel also must be covered by professional liability insurance satisfactory to the court, in the amount of at least $100,000 per claim and $300,000 per year.

Additionally, for an appointment to represent a minor in a guardianship [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.1101(b)]:

- Within the five years immediately before the date of first availability for appointment after January 1, 2008, the attorney must have represented at least three wards or proposed wards in probate guardianships, three children in juvenile court dependency or delinquency proceedings, or three children in custody proceedings under the Family Code; or

- At the time of appointment, must be qualified for appointments to represent children in juvenile dependency proceedings under Rule 5.660 and the court's local rules governing court-appointed juvenile court dependency counsel; or for appointments to represent children in custody proceedings under the Family Code under Rule 5.242, including the alternative experience requirements of Rule 5.242(g).

- Counsel must satisfy the continuing education requirements in addition to the education or training requirements.

For an appointment to represent a conservatee or a proposed conservatee [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.1101(b)]:

- Within the five years immediately before the date of first availability for appointment after January 1, 2008, the attorney must have represented at least three conservatees or proposed conservatees in either probate or LPS conservatorships; or

- Completed any three of the following five tasks:

  - Represented petitioners for the appointment of a conservator at commencement of three probate conservatorship proceedings, from initial contact with the petitioner through the hearing and issuance of Letters of Conservatorship.

  - Represented a petitioner, a conservatee or a proposed conservatee, or an interested third party in two contested probate or LPS conservatorship matters. A contested matter that qualifies under this item and also qualifies under the preceding criteria may be applied toward satisfaction of both criteria.

  - Represented a party for whom the court could appoint legal counsel in a total of three matters described in Prob. Code §§ 1470, 1471, 1954, 2356.5, 2357, 2620.2, 3140, or 3205.

  - Represented fiduciaries in three separate cases for settlement of a court-filed account and report, through filing, hearing, and settlement, in any combination of probate conservatorships or guardianships, decedent's estates, or trust proceedings under Division 9 of the Probate Code.

  - Prepared five wills or trusts, five durable powers of attorney for health care, and five durable powers of attorney for asset management.

Private counsel must also be covered by professional liability insurance satisfactory to the court in the amount of at least $100,000 per claim and $300,000 per year, unless exempted under Cal. Rules of Ct. Rule 7.1101(e)(2) [see 280.118 [6]].

[5] Qualifications of Deputy Public Defenders (Paragraph 4)

Beginning January 1, 2008, each county deputy public defender with direct responsibility for the performance of legal services in a particular case on the appointment of the county public defender under Prob. Code §§ 1470, 1471 must be an active member of the State Bar of California for at least three years immediately before the date of appointment and either satisfy the experience requirements for private counsel [see § 280.118[4]] or have a minimum of three years' experience representing minors in juvenile dependency or delinquency proceedings or patients in postcertification judicial proceedings or conservatorships under the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.1101(c)].

A deputy public defender must be covered by professional liability insurance satisfactory to the court in the amount of at least $100,000 per claim and $300,000 per year, or be covered for professional liability at an equivalent level by a self-insurance program for the professional employees of his or her county [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.1101(c)].

A deputy public defender who is not qualified under this rule may periodically substitute for a qualified deputy public defender with direct responsibility for the performance of legal services in a particular case. In that event, the county public defender or his or her designee, who may be the qualified supervisor, must certify to the court that the substitute deputy is working under the direct supervision of a deputy public defender who is qualified under this rule [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.1101(c)].

[6] Exemption for Small Courts (Paragraph 5)

The qualifications for an attorney appointed by a court in a guardianship or conservatorship may waived by a court with four or fewer authorized judges if it cannot find qualified counsel or for other grounds of hardship [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.1101(e)(1)]. A court may appoint counsel in private practice who does not satisfy the insurance requirements without a waiver if counsel demonstrates to the court they are adequately self-insured [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 7.1101(e)(2)]. However, it may not waive or disregard the self-insurance requirements applicable to deputy public defenders [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 7.1101(e)(3)]. A court waiving the qualifications of counsel must make express written findings showing the circumstances supporting the waiver and disclosing all alternatives considered, including appointment of qualified counsel from adjacent counties and other alternatives not selected [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 7.1101(e)(4)].

[7] Continuing Education

Beginning January 1, 2008, counsel appointed by the court must complete three hours of education each calendar year that qualifies for minimum continuing legal education credit for State Bar-certified specialists in estate planning, trust, and probate law [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.1101(f); see form GC-011 in [1], above]. A court may establish higher qualification or continuing education requirements, including insurance requirements; require initial education or training; and impose other requirements, including an application by private counsel [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.1101(g)].

Additionally, on or before January 1, 2010, a public conservator must also comply with the continuing education requirements that are established by the California State Association of Public Administrators, Public Guardians, and Public Conservators [Prob. Code § 1456.2].

§ 281.20 Legislative Purpose of Establishment of Conservatorship

It was the intent of the legislature in enacting Prob. Code § 1800 et seq., which covers the establishment of conservatorships, to do the following [Prob. Code § 1800]:

- Protect the rights of persons who are placed under conservatorship.

- Provide that an assessment of the needs of the person is performed to determine the appropriateness and extent of a conservatorship and to set goals for increasing the conservatee's functional abilities to whatever extent possible.

- Provide that the health and psychosocial needs of the proposed conservatee are met.

- Provide that community-based services are used to the greatest extent in order to allow the conservatee to remain as independent in the least restrictive setting as possible.

- Provide that the periodic review of the conservatorship by the court investigator must consider the best interest of the conservatee.

- Ensure that the conservatee's basic needs for physical health, food, clothing, and shelter are met.

- Provide for the proper management and protection of the conservatee's real and personal property.

Chapter 281 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP: APPOINTMENT OF CONSERVATORS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Considerations in Appointment of Conservator

24-281 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 281.21

§ 281.21 Grounds for Appointment

[1] Conservator of Person or Estate

A conservator of the person or estate, or both, may be appointed for an adult, and a conservator of the person may be appointed for a minor who is married or whose marriage has been dissolved [Prob. Code § 1800.3(a)]. A conservator of the person may be appointed for a person who is unable to provide properly for his or her own personal needs for physical health, food, clothing, or shelter [Prob. Code § 1801(a)].

A conservator of the estate may be appointed for a person who is substantially unable to manage his or her own financial resources or resist fraud or undue influence [Prob. Code § 1801(b); see Guardianship of Brown (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 326, 128 Cal. Rptr. 10, 546 P.2d 298 (incapacity due to stroke); Conservatorship of Harvey (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 646, 91 Cal. Rptr. 510, 477 P.2d 742 (mental incompetence, brain tumor); Estate of Stewart (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 211, 80 Cal. Rptr. 738 (heart attack); Guardianship of Mosier (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 164, 54 Cal. Rptr. 447 (old age, disease, weakness of mind)]. Substantial inability cannot be proved solely by isolated incidents of negligence or improvidence [Prob. Code § 1801(b)].

A conservator of the person and estate may be appointed for a person to whom both of the above conditions apply [Prob. Code § 1801(a)-(c)].

A conservator of the person or estate, or both, also may be appointed for a person who voluntarily requests and establishes good cause for the appointment [Prob. Code § 1802; see Conservationship of Gray (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 513, 90 Cal. Rptr. 776 (ill health and desire not to be burdened with business affairs); Hillman v. Stults (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 848, 70 Cal. Rptr. 295 (incarceration)].

No conservatorship of the person or of the estate may be granted unless the court makes an express finding that the granting of the conservatorship is the least restrictive alternative needed for the protection of the conservatee [Prob. Code § 1800.3(b)].

[2] Conservator of Estate for Absentee

A conservator of the estate may be appointed for a person who is an absentee [Prob. Code § 1803]. "Absentee" means either (1) a member of a uniformed service, covered by 37 U.S.C. §§ 551-559, who is determined by the secretary for that service or by an authorized delegate to be in missing status under those statutory provisions, or (2) an employee of the federal government or one of its agencies, covered by 5 U.S.C. §§ 5561-5568, who is determined by the head of the employing department or agency or by an authorized delegate to be in missing status under those statutory provisions [Prob. Code § 1403]. The uniformed services referred to are the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and Public Health Service [37 U.S.C. § 101(3)]. The agencies of the federal government covered by 5 U.S.C. §§ 5561-5568 include the Departments of the Army, the Navy, the Air Force, State, the Treasury, Defense, Justice, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce, Labor, Health and Human Services, Housing and Urban Development, Transportation, Energy, Education, Veterans' Affairs, and Homeland Security [see 5 U.S.C. §§ 101, 102, 105, 5561].

[3] Conservator of Person or Estate of Nonresident

A conservatorship of the person or estate may be established for a person who is not a resident of California. The current statutes regarding appointment of conservators do not place any specific limitations on the appointment of conservators for nonresidents [see Prob. Code § 1800.3 (court may appoint conservator if "the need therefor is established to the satisfaction of the court and the other requirements of this chapter are satisfied")]. Rather, they impose limitations on the circumstances under which a California conservator of the person or estate can exercise powers over the person or property of a nonresident conservatee. Specifically, a conservator of the person of a nonresident normally has the same powers and duties as a conservator of the personof a resident while the nonresident is in California [Prob. Code § 2107(a)]. Similarly, a conservator of the estate of a nonresident has the same powers and duties as a conservator of the estate of a resident with respect to the property of the nonresident within California. The responsibility of a conservator of the estate with regard to inventory, accounting, and disposal of the estate is confined to the property that comes into the hands of the guardian or conservator in California [Prob. Code § 2107(b)].

For several years prior to 2001, special rules applied to the establishment of a conservatorship of the person of a nonresident for whom a conservatorship had been established in another state. However, these rules became inoperative by their own terms on January 1, 2001, and were repealed in 2007 [see former Prob. Code § 1800.3(b), (c) (repealed by Stats. 2007 ch. 553 § 6, eff. 1/1/08)].

[4] Conservator of Estate of Missing Person

[a] Applicable Law

The Probate Code provides for the appointment of a conservator of the estate of a missing person [see Prob. Code §§ 1804, 1845-1849.5]. Except as otherwise provided in Prob. Code §§ 1845-1849.5, a conservator of an estate of a person who is missing is appointed as provided in Prob. Code §§ 1820-1830, the provisions governing the appointment of conservators generally [Prob. Code § 1845(a)]. The provisions of Prob. Code §§ 1845-1849.5 do not apply, however, when the proposed conservatee is an absentee as defined in Prob. Code § 1403 [Prob. Code § 1845(b)].

A petition may be filed under Prob. Code §§ 1845-1849.5 regardless of when the proposed conservatee became missing or how long the proposed conservatee has been missing [Prob. Code § 1849.5(a)]. If a trustee of the estate of a missing person was appointed pursuant to former Prob. Code § 262, the provisions of former Prob. Code § 260 et seq. continue to apply to the case unless, on a petition filed under Prob. Code §§ 1845-1849.5, the trustee is replaced by a conservator [Prob. Code § 1849.5(b)].

For discussion and forms relating to administration of the estate of a person missing and presumed dead, see Ch. 368, Missing Persons .

[b] Required Findings

A conservator of the estate of a missing person may be appointed only if the court finds all of the following [Prob. Code § 1849]:

- The proposed conservatee owns or is entitled to the possession of real or personal property situated in the state of California.
- The proposed conservatee remains missing, whereabouts unknown.
- The estate of the proposed conservatee requires attention, supervision, and care.

[5] Limited Conservatorship for Developmentally Disabled Adult

If an adult person is developmentally disabled, a limited conservator of the person or estate, or both, may be appointed [Prob. Code § 1801(d)]. However, limited conservatorships may be used only as necessary to promote and protect the well-being of the individual, must be designed to encourage the development of maximum self-reliance and independence of the individual, and must be ordered only to the extent necessitated by the individual's proved mental and adaptive limitations [Prob. Code § 1801(d)].

A "developmental disability" is a disability that originates before an individual attains age 18, continues, or can be expected to continue, indefinitely, and constitutes a substantial handicap for the individual [Prob. Code § 1420]. "Developmental disability" includes mental retardation, cerebral palsy, epilepsy, autism, and handicapping conditions found to be closely related to mental retardation or to require treatment similar to that required for mentally retarded individuals, but does not include other handicaps that are solely physical in nature [Prob. Code § 1420].

The conservatee of a limited conservator is not presumed to be incompetent and retains all legal and civil rights except those that have been designated as legal disabilities by court order and have been specifically granted to the limited conservator [Prob. Code § 1801(d)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Considerations in Appointment of Conservator

24-281 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 281.22

§ 281.22 Jurisdiction and Venue

[1] California Resident

A conservatorship proceeding for a resident of California is properly begun in the superior court in either the county where the proposed conservatee resides or any other county that may be in the best interests of the proposed conservatee [Prob. Code §§ 2200, 2201].

Thus, even though the place of residence is in dispute, the court may determine that venue is proper, thereby avoiding the need to litigate the issue of residence if continuance of the proceeding in the county where it was filed is in the best interests of the conservatee [see Guardianship-Conservatorship Law, 15 Cal. L.Revision Comm'n Reports 451, 661 (1980)].

[2] Nonresident of California

A proceeding to establish a conservatorship of the person for a nonresident of California is properly begun in the superior court in either the county where the proposed conservatee is temporarily living or such other county as may be in the best interests of the proposed conservatee [Prob. Code §§ 2200, 2202(a)]. Thus, for example, if a conservatorship of the person is necessary in California, the court of the county where the property of the conservatee is located may determine that venue is proper with respect to the person as well as the estate if it is in the best interests of the conservatee, even though the conservatee is not living in that county [see Guardianship-Conservatorship Law, 15 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 451, 662 (1980)].

A proceeding to appoint a conservator of the estate for a nonresident of California may be begun in the superior court in the county where the proposed conservatee is temporarily living, any county in which the proposed conservatee has property, or any other county that may be in the best interests of the proposed conservatee [Prob. Code §§ 2200, 2202(b)].

[3] Proceedings Begun in More Than One County

If proceedings for a conservatorship of the person or estate are begun in more than one county, the conservatorship first granted, including a temporary conservatorship, governs, and the other proceeding must be dismissed [Prob. Code § 2203(a), (b)]. The conservatorship of the estate first granted extends to all property of the conservatee within California [Prob. Code § 2203(a)].

If a proceeding for the conservatorship of the person is begun in one county and a proceeding for the conservatorship of the estate is begun in another, the court first granting the conservatorship, whether of the person or of the estate, may find that it is in the best interests of the conservatee that the conservatorship of both the person and the estate be maintained in the same county, whether that county or another, as determined by the court. The conservatorship proceeding in the court of the county found to be in the conservatee's best interests then governs and extends to all of the conservatee's property within California, and the other proceeding must be dismissed [Prob. Code § 2203(c)].

§ 281.30 Petition for Appointment of Conservator

A petition for the appointment of a conservator may be filed by the proposed conservatee, his or her spouse or domestic partner, a relative, any other interested person or friend, or by any interested state or local entity or agency or one of its officers or employees [Prob. Code § 1820(a); see § 281.100 (petition for appointment of conservator)].

A Domestic Partnership is formed when two persons who meet specific requirements complete and file a Declaration of Domestic Partnership with the Secretary of State. In order to file a valid declaration, the two parties must meet the following requirements:

- Both must have a common residence;
- Both agree to be jointly responsible for each other's basic living expenses incurred during the domestic partnership;
- Neither is married or a part of another domestic partnership;
- Neither is related by blood in a way that would prevent them from being married in the state of California;
- Both are over 18;
- Both are either of the same sex or one or both meet the eligibility criteria under Title II of the Social Security Act for old-age insurance benefits [42 U.S.C. § 1381]. Persons of opposite sexes may not form a valid domestic partnership unless at least one is 62 years of age;
- Both are capable of consenting to a domestic partnership;
- Neither has previously filed a Declaration of Domestic Partnership with the Secretary of State which has not been terminated; and

- Both must file the Declaration of Domestic Partnership with the Secretary of State [Fam. Code § 297].

A creditor of the proposed conservatee may not file a petition for the appointment of a conservator unless the creditor is also within the class of persons described above [Prob. Code § 1820(c)].

If the proposed conservatee is a minor, the petition may be filed during his or her minority so that the appointment of a conservator may be made effective immediately after the minor attains majority. An existing guardian of a minor may be appointed as conservator when the minor attains majority, whether or not the guardian's accounts have been settled [Prob. Code § 1820(b)]. C. Procedure for Appointment of Conservator

24-281 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 281.31

§ 281.31 Nomination of Conservator

[1] Nomination by Proposed Conservatee or by Relatives

If the proposed conservatee has sufficient capacity at the time to form an intelligent preference, he or she may nominate a conservator in the petition or in a writing signed either before or after the petition is filed [Prob. Code § 1810]. An individual may nominate, by a durable power of attorney, a conservator of the person or the estate or both, for consideration by the court if protective proceedings for the individual's person or estate are thereafter commenced [Prob. Code § 4126(a); see Prob. Code § 4124 (durable power of attorney)].

Subject to the provisions for preference in appointing a spouse as conservator [Prob. Code § 1813], the spouse or domestic partner [as defined by Family Code § 297 et seq.], or an adult child, parent, brother, or sister of the proposed conservatee may nominate a conservator in the petition or at the hearing on the petition [Prob. Code § 1811(a)]. Also subject to the provisions for preference in appointing a spouse as conservator [Prob. Code § 1813], the spouse or domestic partner [as defined by Prob. Code § 37; Fam. Code § 297 et seq.], or a parent of the proposed conservatee may nominate a conservator in a writing either before or after the petition is filed. The written nomination remains effective notwithstanding the subsequent legal incapacity or the death of the spouse or parent [Prob. Code § 1811(b)].

[2] Pre-1981 Nomination of Guardian

If an adult, in a writing before 1981, nominated a person to serve as his or her guardian in case such an appointment should become necessary, the nomination is deemed to be a nomination of a conservator. This rule applies whether or not the signed writing was executed in the same manner as a witnessed will, as long as the person signing the writing had at the time the writing was signed sufficient capacity to form an intelligent preference [Prob. Code § 1488].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Procedure for Appointment of Conservator

24-281 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 281.32

§ 281.32 Preference in Appointing Conservator

[1] Nominee of Proposed Conservatee

The court must appoint the nominee of the proposed conservatee as conservator unless the court finds that such an appointment is not in the best interests of the proposed conservatee [Prob. Code § 1810]. This preference is to be given to the most-recent written nomination executed in accordance with Prob. Code § 1810, whether or not the writing is a durable power of attorney [Prob. Code § 4305; see § 281.31].

A finding that a particular individual should be appointed as conservator necessarily includes a finding that the appointment is in the conservatee's best interests; no separate finding is required [Conservatorship of Ramirez (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 390, 400-401, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581] .

[2] Spouse of Absentee

The spouse of a proposed conservatee may not petition for the appointment of a conservator for that spouse or be appointed as conservator of the person or estate of the proposed conservatee unless the spouse alleges in the petition, and the court finds, that the spouse is not a party to any action or proceeding against the proposed conservatee for legal separation, dissolution of marriage, annulment, or adjudication of nullity of their marriage [Prob. Code § 1813(a)]. However, if the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that the appointment of the spouse, who is a party to an action or proceeding against the proposed conservatee for legal separation, dissolution, separation, annulment, adjudication of nullity of their marriage, or has obtained a judgment in any of these proceedings, is in the best interests of the proposed conservatee, the court may appoint the spouse. Before making this appointment, the court must appoint counsel to consult with and advise the conservatee, and to report to the court his or her findings concerning the suitability of appointing the spouse as conservator [Prob. Code § 1813(a)].

The spouse of a conservatee must disclose to the conservator or, if the spouse is the conservator, must disclose to the court, the filing of any action or proceeding against the conservatee for legal separation, dissolution of marriage, annulment,or adjudication of nullity of marriage, within 10 days of the filing of the action or proceeding. Disclosure is made by filing a notice with the court and serving the notice according to the notice procedures required for appointment of a conservator. The court may, on receipt of the notice, set the matter for hearing on an order to show cause why the appointment of the spouse as conservator, if the spouse is the conservator, should not be terminated and a new conservator appointed by the court [Prob. Code § 1813(b)].

[3] Domestic Partner of Conservatee

Under Prob. Code § 37, the term "domestic partner" as used in the Probate Code does not refer to simply any cohabitant, but rather is narrowly defined to mean one of two persons who has filed a Declaration of Domestic Partnership with the Secretary of State under Fam. Code § 297 et seq., provided that the domestic partnership has not been terminated [Prob. Code § 37(a); see Fam. Code § 299 (termination of domestic partnerships)]. For detailed discussion of the formation and termination of domestic partnerships, and the rights and obligations of domestic partners, under the California Domestic Partner Rights and Responsibilities Act of 2003 [Fam. Code §§ 297-299.3], see the General Introduction to Ch. 387, Nonmarital Cohabitation.

The domestic partner of a proposed conservatee may not petition for the appointment of a conservator for a domestic partner or be appointed as conservator of the person or estate of the proposed conservatee unless the domestic partner alleges in the petition, and the court finds, that the domestic partner has not terminated and is not intending to terminate the domestic partnership as provided in Fam. Code § 299. However, if the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that the appointment of a domestic partner who has terminated or is intending to terminate the domestic partnership is in the best interests of the proposed conservatee, the court may appoint the domestic partner [Prob. Code § 1813.1(a)(1)]. Before making this appointment, the court must appoint counsel to consult with and advise the conservatee, and to report to the court his or her findings concerning the suitability of appointing the domestic partner as conservator [Prob. Code § 1813.1(a)(2)].

The domestic partner of a conservatee must disclose to the conservator, or if the domestic partner is the conservator, must notify the court, of the termination of a domestic partnership as provided in Fam. Code § 299 within 10 days of its occurrence. The court, upon receipt of the notice, may set the matter for hearing on an order to show cause why the appointment of the domestic partner as conservator, if the domestic partner is the conservator, should not be terminated and a new conservator appointed by the court [Prob. Code § 1813.1(b)].

[4] Best Interests of Conservatee

Subject to the preference for the nominee of the proposed conservatee and the provisions concerning the appointment of the spouse of an absentee, the selection of a conservator is solely in the discretion of the court [Prob. Code § 1812(a)]. In making the selection, the court is to be guided by what appears to be in the best interests of the proposed conservatee [Prob. Code § 1812(a)]. A resident conservator is preferred unless there is some very strong reason for the appointment of a nonresident [see Guardianship of Brown (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 326, 336, 128 Cal. Rptr. 10 P.2d298; Guardianship of Mosier (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 164, 177, 54 Cal. Rptr. 447] .

Among persons equally qualified in the opinion of the court to be appointed as conservator, preference is to be given as follows [Prob. Code § 1812(b)]:

- First, to the spouse or domestic partner [as defined by Prob. Code § 37; Fam. Code § 297 et seq. [see [3], above] of the proposed conservatee or to the nominee of the spouse or domestic partner.

- Next, to an adult child of the proposed conservatee or to the nominee of the child.

- Next, to a parent of the proposed conservatee or to the nominee of the parent.

- Next, to a brother or sister of the proposed conservatee or to the nominee of the brother or sister.

- Last, to any other person or entity eligible for appointment as a conservator under the Probate Code or, if there is no such person or entity willing to act as a conservator, to a person or entity eligible under the Welfare and Institutions Code [see Prob. Code §§ 2920-2922 (public guardian as conservator); Welf. & Inst. Code § 7284 (State Department of Mental Health as conservator)].

The preference for any child, parent, brother, or sister is subordinate to the preference for any other child, parent, brother, or sister in the same class [Prob. Code § 1812(c)].

[5] Appointment of Counsel for Conservatee

A court may appoint private legal counsel for a conservatee or a proposed conservatee if the conservatee or proposed conservatee is not otherwise represented by legal counsel, and the appointment of legal counsel would be helpful to the resolution of the matter or it is necessary to protect the person's interests [Prob. Code § 1470(a)]. The court will fix a reasonable sum for compensation and expenses of counsel, which can include compensation for services rendered, and expenses incurred, before the date of the order appointing counsel [Prob. Code § 1470(b)]. The court will order compensation to be paid from the estate of the person if the conservatee or proposed conservatee is an adult, or from the parent, parents, or minor's estate or any combination thereof, if the conservatee or proposed conservatee is a minor [Prob. Code § 1470(b)].

A court will appoint the public defender or private counsel to represent a conservatee, proposed conservatee, or person alleged to lack legal capacity, if that person is unable to retain legal counsel and requests the appointment of counsel to assist in the following proceedings [Prob. Code § 1471(a)]:

- A proceeding to establish a conservatorship or to appoint a proposed conservator.
- A proceeding to terminate the conservatorship.
- A proceeding to remove the conservator.
- A proceeding for a court order affecting the legal capacity of the conservatee.
- A proceeding to obtain an order authorizing removal of a temporary conservatee from the temporary conservatee's place of residence.

If a conservatee or proposed conservatee does not plan to retain legal counsel and has not requested the court to appoint legal counsel, the court will appoint the public defender or private counsel to represent the person's interests in any proceeding listed above if, based on information contained in the court investigator's report or obtained from any other source, the court determines that the appointment would be helpful to the resolution of the matter or is necessary to protect the interests of the conservatee or proposed conservatee [Prob. Code § 1471(b)].

In any proceeding to establish a limited conservatorship, if the proposed limited conservatee has not retained legal counsel and does not plan to retain legal counsel, the court must immediately appoint the public defender or private counsel to represent the proposed limited conservatee [Prob. Code § 1471(c)]. The proposed limited conservatee must pay the cost for this legal service if able [Prob. Code § 1471(c)].

Every attorney appointed or eligible for appointment by a court under Prob. Code §§ 1470 and 1471 before January 1, 2008, including deputy public defenders, was required to certify to the court by April 1, 2008, that he or she satisfies the qualifications to be eligible for a new appointment on or after April 1, 2008. Beginning March 1, 2008, each counsel must certify that he or she is qualified before becoming eligible for an appointment. Beginning January 1, 2009, each appointed counsel must certify to the court before the end of March of each year that he or she has completed the continuing education required for the preceding calendar year [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.1101, see also § 280.118 (Judicial Council Form GC-010, Certification of Attorney Concerning Qualifications For Court Appointment in Conservatorships/Guardianships)].

The court, in its discretion, may appoint two or more joint conservators for the person or estate, or both, of a conservatee [Prob. Code § 2105(a)].

If joint conservators are appointed, each must qualify in the same manner as a sole conservator [Prob. Code § 2105(b)].

Subject to the exceptions below, if there are two conservators, both must concur to exercise a power. If there are more than two, a majority must concur to exercise a power [Prob. Code § 2105(c)]. If one of the joint conservators dies, is removed, or resigns, the powers and duties continue in the remaining joint conservators until further appointment is made by the court [*Prob. If joint conservators have been appointed and one or more is absent from the state and unable to act, otherwise unable to act, or legally disqualified from serving, the court, by order made with or without notice, may authorize the remaining joint conservators to act as to all matters embraced within its order [*Prob. In the case of a proceeding to establish a limited conservatorship for a person with developmental disabilities, within 30 days after the filing ofa petition for limited conservatorship, a proposed limited conservatee, with his or her consent, must be assessed at a regional center, as provided in Welf. & Inst. Code § 4620 et seq. The regional center must submit a written report of its findings and recommendations to the court [Prob. Code § 1827.5(a)].

In the case of a proceeding to establish a general conservatorship for a person with developmental disabilities, the regional center, with the consent of the proposed conservatee, may prepare an assessment as provided in Welf. & Inst. Code § 4620 et seq. If an assessment is prepared, the regional center must submit its findings and recommendations to the court [Prob. Code § 1827.5(b)].

[2] Report to Court

A report prepared in the case of a proceeding to establish either a limited conservatorship or a general conservatorship for a person with developmental disabilities must include a description of the specific areas, nature, and degree ofdisability of the proposed conservatee or limited conservatee. The findings and recommendations of the regional center are not binding on the court. In a proceeding in which the petitioner (1) is a provider of board and care, treatment, habilitation, or other services to developmentally disabled persons, or is a spouse or employee of a provider, (2) is not the natural parent of the proposed conservatee or limited conservatee, and (3) is not a public entity, the regional center must include a recommendation in its report concerning the suitability of the petitioners to meet the needs of the proposed conservatee or limited conservatee [*Prob. At least five days before the hearing on the petition, the regional center must mail a copy of the report assessing the proposed limited conservatee to each of the following [Prob. Code § 1827.5(d)]:

- The proposed limited conservatee.

- The attorney, if any, for the proposed limited conservatee.

- The attorney for the petitioner if the petitioner is not the proposed limited conservatee, or the petitioner if the petitioner does not have an attorney.

- Any other person, as the court may order.

The regional center's report assessing the proposed limited conservatee is confidential and will be made available only to the proposed limited conservatee and his or her attorney, the petitioner and the petitioner's attorney, and such other persons as thecourt orders to receive the report [Prob. Code § 1827.5(e)]. The report can be made available to persons other than those specified if the court, in its discretion, determines that the release of the report would serve the interests of the proposed conservatee. The clerk of the court must make provision for limiting disclosure of the report exclusively to persons who are entitled to it by statute [Prob. Code § 1827.5(e)].

- Personally interview the proposed conservatee.

- Interview the petitioner and the proposed conservator, if the proposed conservator is different from the petitioner.

- Determine whether the proposed conservatee is unable to attend the hearing, and if able, whether the proposed conservatee is willing to attend the hearing.

- Review the allegations of the petition as to why the appointment of the conservator is required and refer to the supplemental information form which addresses each of the categories specified in Prob. Code § 1821(a)(1)-(5) regarding the necessity for the conservatorship.

- Consider whether he or she believes the proposed conservatee suffers from any of the mental function deficits listed in Prob. Code § 811 that significantly impairs the proposed conservatee's ability to understand and appreciate the consequences of his or her actions in connection with any of the functions described in Prob. Code § 1801(b) and identify the observations that support that belief.

- Determine whether the proposed conservatee wishes to contest the establishment of the conservatorship.

- Determine whether the proposed conservatee objects to the proposed conservator or prefers another person to act as conservator.

- Determine whether the proposed conservatee wishes to be represented by legal counsel, and if so, whether the proposed conservatee has retained counsel, and if not, the name of an attorney the proposed conservatee wishes to retain; as well as whether the proposed conservatee wishes legal counsel to be appointed and whether the appointment of legal counsel would help to resolve the matter or is necessary to protect the proposed conservatee's interests.

- Determine whether the proposed conservatee is capable of completing an affidavit of voter registration.

Any investigation by a court investigator related to a temporary conservatorship also may be a part of the investigation for the general petition for conservatorship, but the court investigator must make a second visit to the proposed conservatee and the report must include the effect of the temporary conservatorship on the proposed conservatee [Prob. Code § 1826(q)].

For further discussion of temporary conservators, see Ch. 282, Temporary Guardians and Conservators .

[2] Investigator's Report

[a] Report Required

The court investigator must report to the court in writing at least five days before the hearing concerning all of the issues listed in [1], above, particularly regarding the issues of representation by counsel and the proposed conservatee's willingness to attend the hearing, whether he or she wishes to contest the establishment of the conservatorship and to object to the proposed conservator, or whether he or she prefers another person to act as conservator [Prob. Code § 1826(k)]. At least five days before the hearing, the investigator must mail copies of this report to the petitioner's attorney, if any, the proposed conservatee's attorney, if any, the proposed conservatee, the spouse, registered domestic partner, and relatives within the first degree of the proposed conservatee who are required to be named in the petition for appointment of the conservator, unless the court determines that the mailing will result in harm to the conservator, and any other persons as ordered by the court [Prob. Code § 1826(l)].

[b] Confidentiality of Report

The investigator's report is confidential and may be made available only to parties, persons to whom a copy of the report is required to be mailed [see Prob. Code § 1826(l), discussed in [a], above], persons given notice of the petition who have requested the report or who have appeared in the proceedings, their attorneys, and the court. The court has discretion at any other time to release the report, however, if it would serve the interests of the conservatee [Prob. Code

§ 1826(n)]. The court investigator also has discretion to release the report to the public conservator, interested public agencies, and the long-term-care ombudsman [Prob. Code § 1826(m)].

[3] When Investigation and Report Not Required

The investigation and report requirements do not apply to a proposed conservateewho has personally executed the petition for conservatorship or nominated his or her own conservator, if he or she attends the hearing [Prob. Code § 1826(o)]. If the proposed conservatee is a person who is missing and whose whereabouts are unknown, the court investigator is not required to perform the duties set out in Prob. Code § 1826 [Prob. Code § 1848(d)].

[4] Limited Investigation

If the court investigator has performed an investigation within the preceding six months and furnished a report to the court, the court may order, on good cause shown, that another investigation is not necessary or that a more limited investigation may be performed [Prob. Code § 1826(p)].

[5] Assessment of Investigation Costs

If the investigation is conducted by a court investigator, the court in which the conservatee's estate is located is required to assess the estate for the cost of the investigation [Prob. Code § 1851.5]. The court may order that it be reimbursed out of the conservatee's estate for the cost of the investigation unless the court finds that the assessment would pose a hardship to the estate [Prob. Code § 1851.5]. There is a rebuttable presumption that the assessment would impose a hardship if the conservatee is receiving Medi-Cal benefits [Prob. Code § 1851.5].

[6] Immunity of Investigator From Liability

The court investigator is a quasi-judicial officer entitled to absolute judicial immunity from liability for acts arising out of the conduct of the investigation pursuant to Prob. Code §§ 1454 and 1826. The investigator is immunized because he or she performs judicial functions that include gathering evidence about the proposed conservatee leading to the appointment of a conservator and imparting information to a conservatee who is unable to attend the appointment hearing that the judge would impart to the conservatee if he or she were able to attend the hearing [Fisher v. Pickens (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 708, 712, 714-715, 275 Cal. Rptr. 487] .

[1] General Requirements

[a] Time for Notice: Content

Notice of the time and place of the hearing on a petition for the appointment of a conservator must be given at least 15 days before the hearing. The notice must be accompanied by a copy of the petition. The court may not shorten the time for giving the notice of hearing on a petition for the appointment of a conservator [Prob. Code § 1822(a)]. For a form for giving notice, see Ch. 284, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Notice .

If the petition includes an application for an order granting the conservator independent powers under Prob. Code § 2590, the notice of hearing on the petition must include a statement that the petition includes an application for the grant of one or more independent powers and must list the specific powers requested [Prob. Code § 2592]. For a discussion of orders under Prob. Code § 2590, see Ch. 288, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Independent Exercise of Powers .

[b] Who Is Entitled to Notice

Notice must be mailed to the spouse or domestic partner [as defined by Prob. Code § 37; Fam. Code § 297 et seq.] and relatives of the proposed conservatee named in the petition at the addresses stated in the petition [Prob. Code § 1822(b)].

If the conservatee is or has been during the conservatorship proceeding a patient in or on leave from a state hospital under the jurisdiction of the State Departments of Mental Health or Developmental Services and notice is required by *Prob. If the petition states that the proposed conservatee is receiving or is entitled to receive benefits from the Department of Veterans Affairs, notice must also be mailed to the department [Prob. Code § 1822(d); see Prob. Code § 1461.5].

If the proposed conservatee is a person with developmental disabilities, at least 30 days before the day of the hearing on the petition, the petitioner must mail notice of the time and place of the hearing, together with a copy of the petition, to the regional center that is required to prepare an assessment pursuant to Prob. Code § 1827.5 [Prob. Code § 1822(e); see § 281.36].

If the petition states that the petitioner and the proposed conservator have no prior relationship with the proposed conservatee and are not nominated by a family member, friend, or other person with a relationship to the proposed conservatee, notice must be mailed to the public guardian of the county in which the petition is filed [Prob. Code § 1822(f)].

[2] Conservatorship for Absent or Missing Person

If the proposed conservatee is an absentee, notice of the time and place of the hearing and a copy of the petition also must be mailed to the persons and entities to whom notice of hearing is required under Prob. Code § 1822, to the appropriate uniformed service secretary or to the head of the federal department or agency concerned at least 15 days before the hearing. In addition to the persons and entities to whom notice of hearing is required under Prob. Code § 1822 [see [1][b], above], if the proposed conservatee is a missing person, whereabouts unknown, the following notice provisions apply [Prob. Code § 1847]:

- A copy of the petition for appointment of a conservator and a notice of the time and place of the hearing on the petition must be mailed at least 15 days before the hearing to the proposed conservatee at the last known address of the proposed conservatee.

- Notice of the time and place of the hearing must also be published pursuant to*Gov. Code § 6061* in a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the proposed conservatee was last known to reside if the proposed conservatee's last known address is in California.

- Pursuant to Prob. Code § 1202, the court may require that further or additional notice of the hearing be given.

D. Procedure for Hearing

24-281 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 281.50

§ 281.50 Conduct of Hearing in General; Jury Trial

The court must hear and determine the matter of the establishment of a conservatorship according to the law and procedure relating to the trial of civil actions, including trial by jury, if demanded by the proposed conservatee [Prob. Code § 1827].

Because the proposed conservatee's right to a jury trial is statutory rather than constitutional [see Conservatorship of Mary K. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 265, 271, 285 Cal. Rptr. 618 (Lanterman-Petris-Short Act conservatorship); Conservatorship of Maldonado (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 144, 147, 218 Cal. Rptr. 796 (Lanterman-Petris-Short Act conservatorship)], the proposed conservatee's personal waiver of a jury trial, made in court and on the record, is not required [Conservatorship of Mary K. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 265, 271, 285 Cal. Rptr. 618] . Counsel may validly waive the conservatee's right to a jury trial by oral consent in open court without a personal explicit waiver by the proposed conservatee [Conservatorship of Mary K. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 265, 271, 285 Cal. Rptr. 618 (proceeding to establish Lanterman-Petris-Short Act conservatorship in which counsel stated to court that he discussed waiver with his client and that she wished to waive jury trial, and proposed conservatee did not contend that counsel lacked actual authority to waive jury trial); see also Conservatorship of Tian L. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 103, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 382 (conservatee's due process rights were adequately protected under Lanterman-Petris-Short Act when conservatee received copy of petition for reestablishment of conservatorship and accompanying medical statement, conservatee was aware of proposed placement and disabilities, conservatee received at least two written notices of right to hearing and jury trial, and conservatee's attorney met with conservatee in person and signed an affidavit attesting to conservatee's agreement to reestablishment of conservatorship without a hearing)].

When a conservatee stipulates to the appointment of a conservator, the court is still required to consult with the conservatee on the record to instruct the conservatee on the consequences of the stipulation and to obtain his or her express consent to it [see Conservatorship of Christopher A (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 604, 613, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 427] . To allow a conservatee's attorney to waive the right to a hearing and agree to conservatorship without the express consent of the conservatee is contrary to the principles of due process [see Conservatorship of Christopher A (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 604, 613, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 427] .

The standard of proof for the appointment of a conservator is clear and convincing evidence [Prob. Code § 1801(e)]. The proposed conservatee, the spouse or domestic partner [as defined by Prob. Code § 37; Fam. Code § 297 et seq.] of the proposed conservatee, a relative of the proposed conservatee, and anyinterested person or friend of the proposed conservatee may appear at the hearing to support or oppose the petition [Prob. Code § 1829; see § 281.105 (objection to appointment of conservator)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Procedure for Hearing

24-281 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 281.51

§ 281.51 Attendance of Proposed Conservatee at Hearing

The proposed conservatee must be produced at the hearing unless he or she is out of the state when served and is not the petitioner, or is unable to attend the hearing because of medical inability [Prob. Code § 1825(a)(1), (2)]. Medical inability generally must be established by the affidavit or certificate of a licensed medical practitioner. If the proposed conservatee is an adherent of a religion whose tenets and practices call for reliance on prayer alone for healing and is under treatment by an accredited practitioner of that religion, medical inability may be established by the affidavit of the practitioner [Prob. Code § 1825(b)].

Emotional or psychological instability is not good cause for the absence of the proposed conservatee from the hearing unless, by reason of the inability, attendance at the hearing is likely to cause serious and immediate physiological damage to the proposed conservatee [Prob. Code § 1825(c)].

The proposed conservatee also is not required to be produced if the court investigator has reported to the court that the proposed conservatee has expressly communicated that he or she is not willing to attend the hearing, does not wish to contest the establishment of the conservatorship, and does not object to the proposed conservator or prefer that another person act as conservator, and the court orders that the proposed conservatee need not attend the hearing [Prob. Code § 1825(a)(3); see Conservatorship of Deidre B. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1306, 1309, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 825 (trial court did not err when it accepted stipulation of appellant's appointed counsel stating that appellant consented to reestablishment of conservatorship of her person and waived her right to a formal hearing)].

If the proposed conservatee is an absentee, his or her inability to attend the hearing is established by an official written report or record complying with Evid. Code § 1283, which requires any court in the state to receive an official written report or record made by an authorized federal government employee as evidence that a person is missing [Prob. Code § 1844].

If the proposed conservatee is a missing person, whereabouts unknown, the proposed conservatee is not required to be produced at the hearing pursuant to Prob. Code § 1825 [Prob. Code § 1848(c)].

D. Procedure for Hearing

24-281 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 281.52

§ 281.52 Informing Proposed Conservatee of Rights

[1] In General

Unless the conservatee is absent from the hearing and is not required to attend under the provisions of Prob. Code § 1825 [see § 281.51], and any showing required by Prob. Code § 1825 has been made, the court is required to inform the proposed conservatee, before the establishment of a conservatorship, of the nature and purpose of the proceeding; of the identity of the proposed conservator; of the nature and effect on the conservatee's basic rights of any order requested under Prob. Code § 1870 et seq., which concern the conservatee's capacity to bind or obligate the estate, to give informed consent for medical treatment, or to marry; and, in the case of an allegedly developmentally disabled adult, of the specific effects of each limitation requested in the order [Prob. Code § 1828(a)]. For discussion of orders under Prob. Code § 1870 et seq., see Ch. 285, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Care of Ward or Conservatee .

The court must also inform the proposed conservatee that the establishment of a conservatorship is a legal adjudication of the conservatee's inability to provide properly for his or her personal needs or to manage his or her own financial resources, or both, and must inform the proposed conservatee of the effect of an adjudication on his or her basic rights. In addition, the court must inform the proposed conservatee that he or she may be disqualified from voting if incapable of completing an affidavit of voter registration, and that he or she has the right to oppose the proceeding, to have the matter of the establishment of the conservatorship tried by jury, to be represented by counsel, and to have legal counsel appointed by the court if unable to retain legal counsel [Prob. Code § 1828(a)].

[2] Waiver of Advisement

The attorney for the proposed conservatee, by oral consent in open court, may validly waive the court's advisement of the rights and information discussed above without a personal explicit waiver by the proposed conservatee [Conservatorship of Mary K. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 265, 271, 272, 285 Cal. Rptr. 618 (proceeding to establish Lanterman-Petris-Short Act conservatorship in which proposed conservatee did not contend that her attorney was without actual authority to waive advisement and in which no evidence of incompetent counsel existed)]. Furthermore, the court is not required to voir dire the proposed conservatee to determine whether he or she understood those rights when his or her attorney waived advisement of them. Absent, for example, evidence of incompetence of counsel in waiving advisement, the waiver is valid without judicial voir dire [Conservatorship of Mary K. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 265, 271-272, 285 Cal. Rptr. 618] .

When a conservatee stipulates to the appointment of a conservator, the court is still required to consult with the conservatee on the record to instruct the conservatee on the consequences of the stipulation and to obtain his or her express consent to it [see Conservatorship of Christopher A (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 604, 613, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 427] .

§ 281.53 Consultation With Proposed Conservatee

After advising the proposed conservatee pursuant to Prob. Code § 1828 and before appointing a conservator, the court must consult the proposed conservatee to determine his or her opinion concerning the establishment of the conservatorship, the appointment of the proposed conservator, any order requested under Prob. Code § 1870 et seq., and, in the case of an allegedly developmentally disabled adult, each limitation requested in the order [Prob. Code § 1828(b)].

The governing statute does not require any record of the consultation with the proposed conservatee or that the consultation be made on an individual basis. A detailed explanation given to an assembled group of proposed conservatees of thenature of the conservatorship and the rights and disabilities attending its imposition, together with an admonition that they were entitled to present evidence and to testify on their own behalf and to have any questions answered by the court, has been held to substantially comply with the statute [Conservatorship of Forsythe (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1406, 1412-1413, 238 Cal. Rptr. 77 (Lanterman-Petris-Short Act conservatorship)]. Regardless of whether it is on the record or off the record, the consultation requirement does not encompass the right to an attorney, to confront witnesses, or to a jury trial [Conservatorship of Mary K. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 265, 270, 285 Cal. Rptr. 618 . (Lanterman-Petris-Short Act conservatorship)].

24-281 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 281.54

§ 281.54 Hearing on Petition for Appointment of Limited Conservatorship

At the hearing on a petition for the appointment of a limited conservator for an alleged developmentally disabled adult, the court must inquire into the nature and extent of the general intellectual functioning of the proposed conservatee, evaluate the extent of the impairment of his or her adaptive behavior, ascertain his or her capacity to care for himself or herself and his or her property, and inquire into the qualifications, abilities, and capabilities of the person seeking appointment as limited conservator [Prob. Code § 1828.5(a)].

If a report by the regional center has not been filed because the proposed limited conservatee withheld his or her consent to assessment [see § 281.36], the court is required to determine the reason for withholding consent [Prob. Code § 1828.5(a); see Prob. Code § 1827.5].

If the court finds that the proposed limited conservatee possesses the capacity to care for himself or herself and to manage his or her property as a reasonably prudent person, the court must dismiss the petition for the appointment of a limited conservator [Prob. Code § 1828.5(b)]. Otherwise, the court must appoint a conservator as follows:

- If the court finds that the proposed limited conservatee lacks the capacity to perform some, but not all, of the tasks necessary to provide properly for his or her own personal needs for physical health, food, clothing, or shelter, or to manage his or her own financial resources, the court must appoint a limited conservator for the person or the estate, or both, and must define the powers and duties of the limited conservator so as to permit the limited conservatee to care for himself or herself or to manage his or her financial resources commensurate with his or her ability to do so [Prob. Code § 1828.5(c), (e)].

- If the court finds that the proposed limited conservatee lacks the capacity to perform all of the tasks necessary to provide properly for his or her own personal needs for physical health, food, clothing, or shelter, or to manage his or her own financial resources, the court must appoint either a conservator or a limited conservator for the person or estate or both [Prob. Code § 1828.5(d)].

Before appointing a limited conservator, the court must inform the proposed limited conservatee of the nature and purpose of the limited conservatorship proceeding, that the appointment of a limited conservator will result in the transfer of certain rights set forth in the petition, and of the effect of that transfer. The court must also inform the proposed limited conservatee of the identity of the person who has been nominated as his or her limited conservator, that he or she has a right to oppose the proceeding, and that he or she has a right to have the matter tried by jury. After communicating this information to the proposed limited conservatee, and before appointing a limited conservator, the court must consult the person to determine his or her opinionconcerning the appointment [Prob. Code § 1828.5(f); see Prob. Code § 1828(b); see also §§ 281.52, 281.53].

The oath (or affirmation [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.6]) must be attached to or endorsed on the letters of conservatorship [*Prob. The conservator must also file a bond, if a bond is required [Prob. Code § 2300(b); see Ch. 283, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Bonds].

Before letters of conservatorship can be issued, the conservator (other than a trust company or a public conservator) must file with the court an acknowledgment of receipt of (1) a statement of duties and liabilities of the office of conservator, and (2) a copy of the conservatorship information required under Prob. Code § 1835 [see Prob. Code § 1834(a); §§ 281.61, 281.62].

The appointment, the taking of the oath (or affirmation [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.6]), and the filing of the bond if required, are evidenced by the issuance of letters of conservatorship by the clerk of the court [Prob. Code § 2310].

§ 281.61 Statement of Conservator's Duties

In the case of the appointment of a private conservator, a prerequisite to the issuance of letters is that the conservator file with the court, prior to the issuanceof letters, an acknowledgment of receipt of a statement of the duties and liabilities of the office of conservator [see Prob. Code § 1834(a); for an illustration of the form for the statement, see § 281.111]. Both the acknowledgment and the statement are drafted by the Judicial Council. The statement does not supersede the law on which it is based [Prob. Code § 1834(c)].

By local rule, the court may require the acknowledgment to include the conservator's birth date and driver's license number, if any, provided that the court ensures the confidentiality of this information [Prob. Code § 1834(b)].

§ 281.62 Handbook for Private Conservators

Before letters of conservatorship can be issued, the conservator must file with the court a Judicial Council form for acknowledgment of receipt of a handbook for conservators [Prob. Code § 1834(a); for an illustration of the form, see § 281.111].

Every superior court must provide all private conservators with written information concerning their rights, duties, limitations, and responsibilities under Prob. Code § 1400 et seq. [Prob. Code § 1835(a)]. The information is provided in a handbook for conservators that is drafted by the Judicial Council for statewide use, and also in a supplement to that handbook, prepared by each county superior court for local use [see Prob. Code §§ 1834(a), 1835(c); see also Prob. Code § 1835(b)(4) (provision of material to conservators on how to use community-based services to meet conservatees' needs)]. Each court may charge private conservators a fee to cover the court's costs of providing the handbook and the local supplement [Prob. Code § 1835(f)].

The information in the handbook and local supplement includes, but is not limited to, the following [Prob. Code § 1835(b)]:

- The rights, duties, limitations, and responsibilities of a conservator.
- The rights of a conservatee.
- How to assess the needs of the conservatee.
- How to use community-based services to meet the needs of the conservatee.
- How to ensure that the conservatee is provided with the least restrictive possible environment.
- The court procedures and processes relevant to conservatorships.

- The procedures for inventory and appraisals, and the filing of accounts.

The failure of any court to provide this information to a conservator does not relieve the conservator of any of the conservator's duties as required by Prob. Code § 1400 et seq. No court, or employee or agent of a court, is liable in either a personal or an official capacity for damages to the conservatee, the conservator, the conservatorship, or any other person or entity [Prob. Code § 1835(d)].

Except in the case of temporary conservatorships, a conservator of the estate is required to record a certified copy of the letters with the county recorder's office in each county in which the conservatee owns an interest in real property, including a security interest. The conservator must record the letters as soon as practicable after issuance, but no later than 90 days after he or she is appointed. A temporary conservator of the estate may, but need not, record the letters if he or she deems it appropriate [Prob. Code § 2313].

An appeal may be taken from an order granting or revoking letters of conservatorship, except letters of temporary conservatorship [Prob. Code § 1301(a); see Guardianship of Donaldson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 477, 485, 223 Cal. Rptr. 707 (appeal isfrom order, not from administrative act of issuance of letters, so that failure to actually issue letters does not foreclose appeal)].

An appeal generally will stay the operation and effect of the order [Prob. Code § 1310(a)]. Pending the appeal, however, the trial court may direct the exercise of the fiduciary's powers, or appoint a temporary conservator of the person or estate, or both, for the purpose of preventing injury or loss to a person or property [Prob. Code § 1310(b); see Gold v. Superior Court (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 275, 281-282, 90 Cal. Rptr. 161, 475 P.2d 193 ; see also Ch. 282, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Temporary Guardians and Conservators]. All acts of the conservator or temporary conservator pursuant to the directions of the court are valid, regardless of the result of the appeal [Prob. Code § 1310(b)]. Further, an appeal cannot stay the directions [Prob. Code § 1310(b)].

An appeal will not stay the operation and effect of the judgment or order if the court requires an undertaking and the undertaking is not given, in any of the following cases [Prob. Code § 1310(d); see Code Civ. Proc. § 917.9]:

- The appellant is found to possess money or other property of the respondent;
- The appellant is required to perform an act for the respondent's benefit; or
- The judgment against the appellant is solely for costs awarded under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021 et seq.

An appeal also will not stay the operation and effect of a judgment for moneyor an order directing payment of money, unless one of the following applies [Prob. Code § 1310(e)]:

- A bond is posted as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 917.1; or

- The payment is to be made from a decedent's estate being administered under Prob. Code § 7000 et seq. or from the estate of a person who is subject to a guardianship or conservatorship of the estate under Prob. Code § 1400 et seq.

However, a court may require an undertaking as provided in Prob. Code § 1310(d), discussed above [Prob. Code § 1310(e)].

If an order appointing a conservator is reversed on appeal for error, all lawful acts of the conservator performed after issuance of letters and prior to the reversal are as valid as though the order were affirmed [Prob. Code § 1311].

The appellate court must uphold the findings of the trial court if there is any substantial evidence that, together with all of the inferences to be reasonably drawn from it, tends to support the judgment [Guardianship of Walters (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 239, 245, 231 P.2d 473 ; Katz v. Superior Court (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 952, 980, 141 Cal. Rptr. 234 ; Guardianship of Mosier (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 164, 169, 54 Cal. Rptr. 447] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Qualification of Conservator

24-281 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 281.65

§ 281.65 Periodic Review of Conservatorship

[1] Nature of Review

The court must review every conservatorship at the expiration of six months after the initial appointment of the conservator [Prob. Code 1850(a)(1)], again one year after the appointment of the conservator, and annually thereafter [Prob. Code 1850(a)(2)]. At the review conducted one year after the appointment of the conservator, the court may set the next review in two years if the court determines that the conservator is acting in the best interests of the conservatee [Prob. Code § 1850(a)(2)]. In addition, the court, on its own motion or on request by any interested person, may take appropriate action, including ordering a review of the conservatorship and ordering the conservator to present an accounting of the assets of the estate [Prob. Code § 1850(b)]. These requirements do not apply to conservatorships for absentees or conservatorships of the estate for a nonresident when the conservatee is not present in California [Prob. Code § 1850].

The court must review each limited conservatorship for a developmentally disabled adult [see Prob. Code § 1801(d)] one year after the appointment of the conservator, and biennially thereafter [Prob. Code § 1850.5(a)]. In addition, the court, on its own motion or on request by any interested person, may take appropriate action, including ordering a review of the limited conservatorship [Prob. Code § 1850.5(b)].

The court investigator must visit the conservatee at the time the court review is required. This visit must be without prior notice to the conservatee, except as ordered by the court for necessity or to prevent harm to the conservatee [Prob. Code § 1851(a); for a form for an order appointing court investigator, see § 281.104]. The investigator also may personally visit the conservator and other persons, as necessary, to determine whether the conservator is acting in the best interests of the conservatee [Prob. Code § 1851(d)]. The investigator must inform the conservatee personally that the conservatee is under a conservatorship, and must give the conservatee the name of the conservator. The investigator must determine whether the conservatee wishes to petition the court for termination of the conservatorship, whether the conservator is acting in the best interests of the conservatee, and whether the conservatee is capable of completing an affidavit of voter registration. In determining whether the conservator is acting in the best interests of the conservatee, the court investigator's evaluation must include an examination of the conservatee's placement, the quality of care, and the conservatee's finances [Prob. Code § 1851(a)]. To the extent practicable, the investigator must review the accounting with a conservatee who has sufficient capacity [Prob. Code § 1851(a)]. If feasible, each court must coordinate investigations with the filing of accountings so that investigators can review accountings before visiting conservatee [Prob. Code § 1851.2]. If the court has made an order regarding the legal capacity of the conservatee under Prob. Code § 1870 et seq., the court investigator must determine whether the condition of the conservatee is such that the terms of the order should be modified or the order revoked [Prob. Code § 1851(a)]. On request of the court investigator, the conservator must make available to the court investigator during the investigation, for inspection and copying all books and records, including receipts and any expenditures, of the conservatorship [Prob. Code § 1850(a)].

The findings of the court investigator, including the facts on which the findings are based, must be certified in writing to the court not less than 15 days before the date of the review. A copy of the report must be mailed to the conservator and to the attorneysof record for the conservator and conservatee at the time it is certified to the court [Prob. Code § 1851(b)]. A copy of the report also must be mailed to the conservatee's spouse or registered domestic partner, the conservatee's relatives in the first degree, and if there are no such relatives, to the next closest relative, unless the court determines that the mailing will result in harm to the conservatee [Prob. Code § 1851(b)]. Confidential medical information and confidential information from the California Law Enforcement Telecommunications System must be in a separate attachment to the report and may not be provided in copies sent to the conservatee's spouse or registered domestic partner, and relatives [Prob. Code § 1851(b)].

In the case of a limited conservatee, the court investigator must make a recommendation regarding the continuation or termination of the limited conservatorship [Prob. Code § 1851(c)].

The investigator's report must be kept confidential. The report may be made available only to the parties, the persons to whom a copy of the report is required to be mailed [see Prob. Code § 1851(b), discussed above], persons given notice of the petition for appointment who have requested the report or who have appeared in the proceeding, their attorneys, and the court. The court has discretion at any other time to release the report if it would serve the interests of the conservatee. The clerk of the court is required to make provision for limiting disclosure of the report exclusively to persons entitled to it by statute [Prob. Code § 1851(e)].

[2] Assessment of Review Costs

If the investigation is conducted by a court investigator, the court in which the conservatee's estate is located is required to assess the estate for the cost of the investigation [Prob. Code § 1851.5]. The court may order that it be reimbursed out of the conservatee's estate for the cost of the investigation unless the court finds that the assessment would pose a hardship to the estate [Prob. Code § 1851.5]. There is a rebuttable presumption that the assessment would impose a hardship if the conservatee is receiving Medi-Cal benefits [Prob. Code § 1851.5].

Chapter 281 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP: APPOINTMENT OF CONSERVATORS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Qualification of Conservator

24-281 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 281.66

§ 281.66 Professional Fiduciaries Act

[1] Professional Fiduciary

Conservators who are professional fiduciaries are required to comply with the Professional Fiduciaries Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6500 et seq.; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6530(a), Prob. Code §§ 60.1, 2340]. In the context of conservators and guardians, a "professional fiduciary" is anyone who acts as a conservator or guardian for two or more persons at the same time who are not related to the professional fiduciary or to each other by blood, adoption, marriage, or registered domestic partnership [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6501(f); for discussion of the definition of "professional fiduciary" in the context of trustees, see Ch. 560, Trusts, § 560.74].

The following are specifically exempted from the licensing requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6501(f)(4), 6530(b)-(d)]:

- Trust companies [see Prob. Code § 83 (definition)].

- FDIC-insured institutions, or their holding companies, subsidiaries, or affiliates.

- Any public agency, including the public guardian, public conservator, or other agency of the State of California, a county of California, or any regional center for persons with developmental disabilities as defined in Welf. & Inst. Code § 4620.

- Any person who is employed by a trust company, an FDIC-insured institution or its holding companies, subsidiaries or affiliates, a public agency, who is acting in the course and scope of that employment, and in the instance of a public officer of a public agency, acting in the course and scope of official duties.

- Any person whose sole activity as a professional fiduciary is as a broker-dealer, broker-dealer agent, investment adviser representative registered and regulated under the Corporate Securities Law of 1968 [Corp. Code § 25000 et seq.], the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 [15 U.S.C. 80b-1 et seq.], or the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [15 U.S.C. 78a et seq.], or involves serving as a trustee to a company regulated by the Securities and Exchange Commission under the Investment Company Act of 1940 [15 U.S.C. 80a-1 et seq.].

- Any licensed attorney.
- Any licensed certified public accountant;
- Any Internal Revenue Service agent acting within the scope of practice.

[2] Licensing Requirements

No person may act or hold himself or herself out to the public as a professional fiduciary unless he or she is licensed as a professional fiduciary under the Act [Prob. Code § 60.1(b)]. Persons previously required to register with the statewide registry under Prob. Code § 2850 et seq. (inoperative 7/1/2008, repealed eff. 1/1/2009), and persons required to file information with the clerk of the court under the former version of Prob. Code § 2340 et seq. (inoperative 7/1/2008; repealed eff. 1/1/2009) are required to obtain a professional fiduciary license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6502]. Additionally, as of July 1, 2008, no court may appoint a person to carry out the duties of a professional fiduciary unless he or she holds a valid, unexpired, unsuspended professional fiduciary license [Prob. Code § 2340]. (In other words, after July 1, 2008, professional fiduciaries may not be appointed in any new conservatorship or guardianship matters until they obtain a license under the Professional Fiduciaries Act. However, professional fiduciaries already appointed in specific matters prior to July 1, 2008, may continue to act in those matters until January 1, 2009, by which time they are required to be licensed under the Professional Fiduciaries Act.) For an allegation seeking removal of a conservator or guardian for failure to comply with the licensing requirements of the Professional Fiduciaries Act, see Ch. 290G, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Removal or Resignation of Guardians or Conservators, § 290G.37A.

The Professional Fiduciaries Bureau is responsible for administering the licensing and regulatory program established under the Act, approving classes for prelicense andcontinuing education, and preparing and administering licensing exams [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6518; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6510, 6511 (creation of Bureau)]. Applications for a professional fiduciary license can be obtained online, through the California Department of Consumer Affairs, at http://www.fiduciary.ca.gov/. The Bureau may investigate an applicant's qualifications, and must approve applicants who meet the required qualifications [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6536].

[3] Qualifications for Licensure

Applicants must meet the following qualifications in order to obtain a professional fiduciary license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6533(a)-(k)]:

- Be at least 21 years old.

The Bureau must deny a license if the applicant [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6536(a)-(e)]:

- Has been convicted of a crime substantially related to the qualifications, functions, or duties of a fiduciary;

[4] License Renewal

A professional fiduciary license is valid for one year [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6541(a)]. To renew the license, a professional fiduciary must file a renewal application, continuing education compliance, and the renewal fee [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6561, 6538(b), 6541(b)]. Conduct that would result in a refusal of a license renewal is similar to the conduct that would result in a license denial, and includes the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6541(b)]:

- Conviction of a crime substantially related to the qualifications, functions, or duties of a fiduciary.

- Fraud or deceit in obtaining a license.

- Dishonesty, fraud, or gross negligence in performing the functions or duties of a professional fiduciary.

- Removal as a fiduciary by a court for breach of a fiduciary duty.

[5] Initial and Annual Statement

A professional fiduciary must keep complete and accurate records of client accounts, and must make them available for audit by the Bureau [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6560]. A professional fiduciary also must submit a statement, initially and annually thereafter [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6561(a)]. The annual statement must be filed with the Bureau 60 days prior to expiration of the fiduciary's license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6562], and must include the following information [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6561(a)]:

- The fiduciary's business address, phone, and fax number.

- Whether or not the fiduciary has been removed as conservator, guardian, trustee, or personal representative for cause.

- The case names, court locations, and case numbers for all matters in which the fiduciary has been appointed by the court.

- Whether the fiduciary has reassigned or settled a matter in which a complaint has been filed, along with the case number and a statement of the issues and facts pertaining to the allegations.

- Any licenses or professional certificates held.

- Any ownership or beneficial interests in any businesses or other enterprises held by the fiduciary or by a family member who receives or has received payment from a client of the fiduciary.

- Whether the fiduciary has ever filed for bankruptcy or held a controlling financial interest in a business that filed for bankruptcy.

- The name of any persons or entities that have an interest in the fiduciary's professional fiduciary business.

- Whether the fiduciary has been convicted of a crime.

[6] Suspension, Revocation, Denial, and Disciplinary Action

The Bureau has the authority to investigate the actions of any professional fiduciary [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6580(a)]. Sanctions may include administrative citations and fines, license suspension or probation, or license revocation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6580(b)]. A license may be suspended, revoked, or denied, or other disciplinary action may be imposed for one or more of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6584]:

- Conviction of any felony or misdemeanor, if the misdemeanor is substantially related to the functions and duties of a professional fiduciary.

- Failure to notify the bureau of a conviction [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6561(a)(10)].

- Fraud or misrepresentation in obtaining a license.

- Fraud, dishonesty, corruption, willful violation of duty, gross negligence or incompetence in practice, or unprofessional conduct in, or related to, the practice of a professional fiduciary.

- Failure to comply with, or to pay a monetary sanction imposed by a court for failure to provide timely reports.

- Failure to pay a civil penalty relating to the licensee's professional fiduciary duties.

- The revocation of, suspension of, or other disciplinary action against, any other professional license by the State of California or by another state; violation of Bus. Prof. Code § 6500 et seq., Probate Code § 4000 et seq., Probate Code § 4600 et seq., Probate Code § 5000 et seq., or any of the statutes, rules, or regulations pertaining to the duties or functions of a professional fiduciary.

The Bureau has adopted a Professional Fiduciaries Code of Ethics that is available on the bureau's Internet website and is provided to all applicants [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6520; www.fiduciary.ca.gov].

24-281 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 281.67

§ 281.67 Unwarranted Petitions

Unwarranted petitions, applications, or motions other than discovery motions after a conservatorship has been established, create an environment that may be harmful to the conservatee and are inconsistent with the goal of protecting the conservatee [Prob. Code § 1970(a)]. Therefore, if a person other than the conservatee files a petition for termination of the conservatorship, or instruction to the conservator, that is unmeritorious or intended to harass or annoy the conservator, and the person has previously filed pleadings in the conservatorship proceeding that were unmeritorious or intended to harass or annoy the conservator, the petition will be grounds for the court to determine the person a vexatious litigant [Prob. Code § 1970(b) (applies notwithstanding general criteria in Code Civ. Proc. § 391 for determining who is a vexatious litigant)].
